Tornadoes Range Over Eastern Counties

By The Associated Press

A tornado Monday afternoon ripped the roof off a Catholic Church north of Ahoskie, destroyed a home beside the church, and overturned several mobile homes.

Meanwhile, a second tornado near Plymouth in Washington County overturned a railroad car and several mobile homes, injuring at least five people, and knocked out power lines.

The tornadoes were spawned by a line of severe thunderstorms that hit eastern North Carolina as a cold front moved across the state.

"It looked like you waded up the trailers in your hand and chunked them into the woods," Pasquotank County Sheriff D.M. Sawyer said. "Damages will go over a couple hundred thousand dollars. You can stand in one place and come up with that."

Radio station WRCS in Ahoskie reported the tornado and high winds destroyed a trailer and an office building. In addition, about 30 to 35 other buildings were heavily or partially damaged. Trees were lying in roadways and traffic along U.S. 13 and N.C. 561 was brought to a halt. The station said trees, boards and other debris were driven into the sides of homes as if they were nailed in.

Reports indicated the tornado cut a half-mile strip about two miles long northeast of the Ahoskie city limits.

The Hertford County Sheriff's Department later reported about 15 buildings were damaged by the storm and that none was destroyed. A spokesman said there was damage to the Ahoskie High School, which is adjacent to St. Charles Catholic church. The roof of the church was reportedly torn off.

A mobile home was also blown from its foundation and wrapped around a tree, the spokesman said, adding that damage had been estimated at $100,000. One person was slightly injured, he said.

In the tornado west of Plymouth, 7-year-old Edroe Arnold was seriously hurt when the house trailer he was in overturned because of the high winds. Four other people were also reported injured.

"Most of the injuries were small cuts or bruises," said Keith Sykes, a spokesman for Washington County Memorial Hospital. "We were very fortunate."

Sykes said the injured child was transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville, about one hour away. He said the child suffered head injuries and was having difficulty breathing.

A spokesman for Pitt County Memorial Hospital said the boy was listed in guarded condition Tuesday morning.

The Washington County Sheriff's Department said power in much of Plymouth and a five-mile radius had been lost. Power had not been totally restored as of 10 p.m.

A spokesman said much of the damage included trees falling through houses and roofs being ripped off homes. According to a dispatcher for the Plymouth police department, approximately 25 homes were damaged in the storm.

"It picked up a boxcar off the railroad track and turned it over," Plymouth police Chief F.M. Woodley said. "West of here, the storm ripped up a few houses. East of here, it destroyed a barn."

Authorities also said a tornado touched down at Jamesville in eastern Martin County, knocking over some tobacco barns. There were no further reports on that storm.

Marble-size hail and high winds were reported at Williamston, knocking down some power lines and tree limbs. A funnel cloud was reported in Pitt County, although authorities in both areas said there were no reports of injuries or damages.

The cold front that caused the severe storms had moved off the coast by early today and fair skies returned to the state.

Retirement Community Site Dedicated Monday

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

As strong gusts of wind whipped through the crowd Monday, former Sen. Robert Morgan stood on a platform to help dedicate the 100-acre site of the future Cypress Glen Retirement Community.

"It is desirable today that we have a more relaxed and carefree environment in which to live. It is quite fitting that we try to provide these circumstances for a relaxed environment for old people, too," Morgan said.

The tract of land, located on the corner of Fourth and Hickory streets, was given by Jarvis United Methodist Church. The $6.3 million facility will include 125 rooms, apartments and homes for the elderly.

"Americans have long been dedicated to the caring of the elderly and we have made great strides. We've provided many programs through the government, but there is still a void. There's still a role for us to play," Morgan continued.

The facility, which is planned as one of the most comfortable and innovative in the South, will be constructed in two stages. Phase one is planned to start during the next year.

Other speakers at the ceremony included Dr. Leo Jenkins, chairman of the Cypress Glen Development Committee; Ernest Messer, assistant secretary for the state Department of Human Resources; Bishop William R. Cannon of the United Methodist Church and the Rev. James Bailey of Jarvis United Methodist Church.

"It's a sad society that neglects the aged," Bishop Cannon said as he explained the reverence and respect that the Chinese show the elderly of their society.

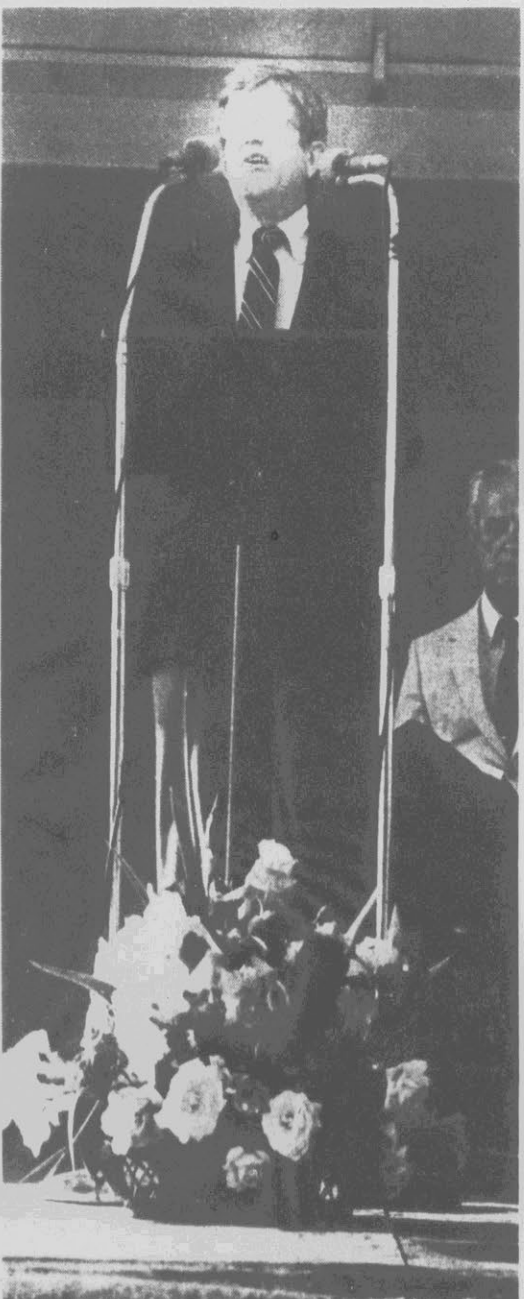

Messer told the audience that Cypress Glen was one of the best types of facilities for old people because it will allow for exercise, nutrition programs and other activities.

"People who stay involved in activities live longer, stay healthier and are happier," Messer said.

Bailey told the crowd he was grateful for the site because of its location "near the Tar River and the many beautiful cypress trees."

The ceremony concluded with a song by Jarvis' choir and music by the East Carolina University band.

Microelectronics Firm Is Planning Locate In Texas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. will locate its multimillion-dollar computer research facility in Texas instead of North Carolina, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt said today.

Brent Hackney said MCC president Bobby Inman called Donald Beilman, president of Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, and gave him the news this morning.

"We feel mighty good about being in the last four," Hackney said. "I think it will send out a pretty strong signal to people across the country."

He said Hunt was discouraged, however, that the state was unable to offer some of the things offered by other sites in competition for the facility.

The consortium of 11 companies plans a $100 million-a-year budget and expects to employ about 400 scientists and engineers. It is led by Inman, former deputy director of the CIA.

The consortium has scheduled four research programs, lasting from six to 10 years. They include packaging of integrated circuits, computer-aided design and computer-aided manufacturing, computer software, and advanced computer design.

The company's goal is to develop proprietary computer and semiconductor technologies into prototypes that can be made into profitable products.

Each sponsoring company will contribute to one of the four programs for a minimum of four years. Once a prototype is developed, the sponsors are licensed and have a three-year lead to get the product to market. After three years, the technology will be licensed to anyone.

In addition to Austin, Texas, and Research Triangle Park, N.C., finalists for the facility were Atlanta and San Diego. San Diego was reportedly offering cut-rate housing and Texas offering land and a building, Hackney said.

Research Triangle Park offered no cash incentives other than the limited amount of tax-free industrial revenue bond financing available to any company in the state, said J. Paul Exxex, special assistant to Hunt. Inman said special offers would have little impact on his decision. He said the most important factor would be strength of university research and education in computer science and electrical engineering at each location.

Soviet Accepts Grain Sale Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said today the Soviet Union has accepted a U.S. offer to negotiate a new long-term grain sales agreement.

"President Reagan has continued to reaffirm our intention to be a reliable supplier" of grain to the Soviets, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said in a statement.

"The Soviet Union's willingness to sit down and negotiate a new LTA is a strong indication that his message is being heard," said Block, who made the announcement jointly with U.S. Trade Representative William E. Brock. "We're getting the pieces put back together again."

Reagan offered on April 22 to work toward such an agreement, ending a 16-month ban on negotiations triggered by foreign policy disagreements with the Soviets, particularly over their intervention in Poland.

Reagan said then that the offer was "consistent with United States agricultural policy," but administration officials said that the Polish situation had not changed appreciably.

The move came partly as a result of pressure from farm interests for Reagan to do something to build U.S. export markets and to shore up sagging grain prices.

Pitt County Spared As Storms Rolled Through

A cold front that marched through eastern North Carolina Monday, leaving tornado damage in its wake, spared Pitt County although severe thunderstorms with high winds rattled residents.

A funnel-shaped cloud was reported to the sheriff's office at about 4 p.m. between Snow Hill and Farmville heading east, but no damage or injuries were reported.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said schools were notified of the report and deputies were dispatched to the area but officers spotted no tornado.

High winds did rock the county, with gusts up to 50 mph monitored at the Pitt-Greenville Airport between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Only .17 inch of rain, however, fell during the storms, according to the Greenville Utilities Weather Station. The temperature reached a high of 80 degrees Fahrenheit Monday but fell into the 50s by sunset.

Greenville Utilities reported only minor damage from the winds. "We had a tree limb (down) here and there, nothing serious and certainly nothing unusual," said Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's electrical department.

Around the county, local police and utility departments this morning reported no injuries and minimal damage from the storm system.

The cold front that caused the severe storms had moved off the coast by early today and fair skies returned to the state.

Parents Win Battle To Bring Baby Home

By DRUSIE MENAKER
Associated Press Writer
TEANECK, N.J. (AP) —
Maria Bitting says her terminally ill daughter is "a little pioneer" whose struggles against bureaucracy may inspire other families who want to bring their children home to die.

Afflicted by a rare form of muscular dystrophy, 5-month-old Suzanne Bitting
time Sunday after her

TER...Maria Bitting holds her terminally ill five-month-old daughter, day home from the hospital since her birth. (AP Laserphoto)

parents fought to ensure that her treatment at home would be covered by Medicaid insurance that dying babies get automatically while hospitalized.

"We missed a lot of her life, and that wasn't fair," said Mrs. Bitting. "It is bad enough to face her death, but to have to go through the terrible injustice of not having her home is unfair."

To other parents of dying children, Mrs. Bitting offered advice: "If you love your child enough, fight to get her home."

"I wanted her to be home to be part of the family,"
said her husband, Barry.
"We know her illness and we have cried a lot. But we brought her home."

Suzanne, who weighs just over nine pounds, nestled in a pink blanket and wore a delicate eyelet bonnet as she took her first sniffs of fresh air from the Bittings' front porch. Two high school bands greeted the infant, and the family's modest brown frame house was decorated in pink bunting, balloons and a hand-lettered sign reading,
"Welcome Home, Suzanne."

When she was born Dec.
17, doctors did not expect her to survive and they think she will not reach her first birthday. But after Suzanne began to breathe on her own after major surgery Feb. 17, the Bittings pledged that Suzanne would leave St.
Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson.

With the help of Rep.
Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., and after an April 29 call from U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, the Bittings got government approval for

Medicaid coverage of Suzanne's home treatment.

The waiver was granted under the "Katie Beckett" exception, written into law after President Reagan interceded to allow a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, couple to receive Medicaid payments for the home care of their 3-year-old brain-damaged daughter. Before that,
Medicaid was reserved
strictly for hospital care.

The family now regards the Medicaid coverage as backup protection. Since the waiver was granted, the couple's insurance company,
the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, has agreed to reimburse them for home care expenses.

"Because of the way you fought, and the determination you showed, other children and other parents may not have this problem,"
Torricelli told the Bittings.
He said home care for Suzanne would cost $10,500 a month, compared to $16,500 at the hospital.

The Bittings "did the most important thing — they didn't take no for an answer," said Torricelli, as he nervously held Suzanne.

Nurses will be in attendance for 16 hours a day but Mrs. Bitting will take over for the 4 p.m. to midnight shift. Bitting will wear a beeper at his job at Pfister Chemical in Ridgefield, so he can be alerted in case of an emergency.

Suzanne's physician, Dr.
John Sutter, made a house call Sunday but said his tiny patient should get along fine at home without his constant attendance.

slip 2 stitches, one at a time
from the left to the right
needle, slipping them knitwise; then, insert the top of the left needle into the fronts of these 2 stitches and knit them together from this position.

Dear Abby

Woman With Tumor Still Finds Promise

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40 years old, have a wonderful husband and a 14-year-old son. I have an inoperable brain tumor the size of a baseball. I've been through six weeks of radiation, but I have absolutely no complaints.

The tumor has been a blessing because of the relationships it has mended, and for making individuals face their mortality seriously. This poem (enclosed) has helped me more than I can say.

It could help others, too. I don't know who wrote it, but I have had it for many years. I hope you will print it so the author will come forward and get credit. Thank you.
MARTI IN AURORA, COLO.

DEAR MARTI: It is indeed a lovely poem, and I agree, the author should be properly credited:

"Today, upon a bus, I saw a lovely maid with golden hair,
"I envied her, she seemed so gay, and I wished I were as fair.

"When suddenly she rose to leave, I saw her hobble down the aisle; she had one foot, and used a crutch, but as she passed, she had a smile.

"Oh, God forgive me when I whine; I have two feet, the world is mine.

"And when I stopped to buy some sweets,
"The lad who sold them had such charm. I talked with him, he said to me, 'It's nice to talk to men like you. You see,' he said, 'I'm blind.'

"Oh, God forgive me when I whine; I have two eyes, the world is mine.

"Then, as I passed along the way, I saw a child with eyes of blue. He stood and watched the others play; it seemed he knew not what to do. I stopped for a moment; and then I said, 'Why don't you join the others, dear?' He looked ahead without a word, and then I knew he could not hear.

"Oh, God forgive me when I whine; I have two ears, the world is mine.

"With feet to take me where I'd go,
"With eyes to see the sunsets glow,
"With ears to hear what I would know,
"I'm blessed indeed.
"The world is mine.
"Oh, God forgive me if I whine."

THE CARDINAL FLOWER...is a great attracter of hummingbirds. This easily cultivated perennial has been chosen by the Garden Club of North Carolina and the N.C. Botanical Garden as the "wild flower of the year" to be promoted for domestic use.

Cardinal Flower Is State's Flower Of Year

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Garden Club of North Carolina has named the cardinal flower "the N.C. Wild Flower of the Year."

The project to promote the use of this bright red beauty for use in private gardens is being coordinated with the North Carolina Botanical Garden in Chapel Hill through local garden clubs.

Greenville Garden Club member Mrs. R.M. Helms of Greenville is the local coordinator and Plant and See Nursery was provided seed by the Botanical Garden and now has ready-to-plant plants available at a cost of $1.20 a dozen.

Botanical Garden staff member Harry Phillips said, it has long been a goal of the Botanical Garden to assist in the introduction of native North Carolina plants to the nursery industry. By demonstrating that wild plants can be successfully produced on a large scale commercially, we can accomplish three important objectives.

"First, we can relieve the pressure exerted on our natural areas by the overcollection of wild flowers by some nurseries and private individuals. Then we can suggest a source of new and attractive plant material for use by the home gardener. And we can demonstrate that horticulturally produced wild flowers have a better chance of survival in general cultivation and thus are a better buy for the consumer."

Cardinal Flower (Lobelia cardinalis) is a hardy perennial which can attain a height of from three to six feet. It features a stalk of beautiful scarlet flowers, considered by many to be the most vivid red of any flower. It is effectively displayed singly or in mass.

Hummingbirds are greatly attracted to cardinal flowers and are likely to visit them daily during the flowering time — late July to mid-September.

"The plant is easily cultivated," Phillips said, preferring a half-day's exposure to full sun or a filtered sunlight situation and a good garden soil with plenty of humus. An ideal location for a stand of cardinal flower is on the edge of a spring, stream or pond or at the base of a leaking faucet or frequently overflowing birdbath. However, it can be grown in any regular bed or border as long as it is kept well-watered through dry periods. Further propagation from basal offshoots can be expected if the evergreen foliage from the offshoots which develop in the fall are not covered with mulch or fallen leaves during the winter and can take advantage of winter sunlight for active growth in all but the coldest temperatures.

Some of the fruiting stems can be cut off after flowers to encourage vigorous offshoots and others can be allowed to mature their seed so as to allow self-seeding around the original plants or saving of seed for future seedling beds or growing pots. According to Botanical Garden experience, 90 percent or greater germination can be expected.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Bet you never figured me for a "quilter," did you?

My image brings to mind such phrases as "Connect-a-dot," "Paint-by-number" and "Drop pouch in boiling water."

Well, you're wrong.

I have always been in awe of anything that a two-year-old cannot dismantle in 10 minutes.

Right now, there is a battle raging between the "purist" quilters and the style-makers as to whether or not antique quilts should be dissected and made as wearing apparel or left in their original state on beds and walls.

I'm with the purists.

If anyone approached one of my quilts with a pair of scissors and a pattern for a vest, I would personally charge them with assault with a deadly weapon. Would Betsy Ross let you make underwear out of her flag?

Only people who have done handicraft really know what goes into it. When I was expecting my third child, I decided to cross-stitch quilts for twin beds. For nine months, I did nothing but grow and sew. Dishes sat in the sink. Beds became nests. Laundry spilled out of the hampers. Food was eaten straight from the wrapper. The grass grew. Newspapers collected. Snow came and melted. The inside of the oven corroded and grew smaller. Children tried desperately (without success) to make contact with "Mommy."

When the nurse said, "Would you like to see your new son?" she patiently held the baby while I finished up the tree on the last square.

A finished quilt represents my personal marathon — my Miss America victory — my Nobel prize. It's an achievement that ranks right up there with writing your name legibly on the Christmas cards all the way to the names beginning with W.

I read where Bonnie Lehman, editor of the Quilter's Newsletter magazine, was enraged when a leading designer cut up antique quilts for skirts and jackets for his collection. "vests, pillows indeed!" she said. "Quilts are made to be used on beds where primal events in life took place — conception, birth, illness, death."

I'm finishing up a celebrity quilt where each square carries a sketch/drawing/bit of wisdom/signature of someone whom I admire. Art Buchwald's square says it all: "Whoever sleeps under this quilt better have a good reason."

That's what quilts are all about.

MORE TO SMILE ABOUT...Mrs. Maureen McVicker is shown in the photograph on the left before she had an operation to help her regain her smile which was changed by a paralysis. The

Woman Learning To Smile Again Following Paralysis

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After two operations and months of therapy, Maureen McVicker is gradually recovering something she lost 7½ years ago — her smile.

Mrs. McVicker was physically unable to smile after the left side of her face was paralyzed during the removal of a brain tumor. But doctors re-animated her face by grafting a muscle that controls chewing to an area under her left cheekbone.

"It won't ever be perfect, I know. But it's getting there," said Mrs. McVicker, 34, who underwent a 4½-hour operation Feb. 10 as a followup to surgery last August.

"You have to practice. You have to get the strength back into muscles that you haven't used in 7½ years. It's like lifting weights to build the muscles back up. They're a little out of shape," she added in a recent interview.

The left side of Mrs. McVicker's face drooped uncontrollably after her facial nerve was severed during the removal of the tumor.

But with the muscle graft, she can simulate a smile by clenching her teeth. She strengthens the muscle by chewing on a cork and practicing in front of a mirror.

"Not everyone gets an opportunity to recreate a face," said Mrs. McVicker, a former bank clerk with five children. "It's almost like a sculptor taking clay and making a whole new face. It's recreating an image. It's like a totally different person."

Her husband, William, said the transformation has been more than physical.

"It's a miracle what the doctor has done. You can see the difference. It's going to help her go out and be with people," McVicker said.

The two operations were performed by Dr. Mark May, an ear, nose and throat specialist at Pittsburgh's Eye and Ear Hospital who has done 45 similar operations since 1976.

"Generally, the concept is to substitute a muscle system that has its own blood supply and nerve supply for one that's dead," said May. The surgery helps people psychologically as well as physically, the doctor said.

"With a facial paralysis, people change their whole personality. They withdraw," said May. "Before the operation, they have no opportunity to move the face. Their face is dead. Their personality is dead. Some of these people conduct their lives as if they had died."

"Making their face move restores their personality and literally restores their life," he added.

Mrs. McVicker didn't like going out in public or having her picture taken. But now she feels more outgoing.

"I am less self-conscious. I'm more secure with myself," she said. "I have absolutely no regrets. Even if it didn't work, I wouldn't have any regrets. I feel you have to try. I'm a mountain climber."

"I have a sign that sits by my phone at home that reads: 'Please be patient with me. God isn't finished with me yet.' And that's the way I feel."

AFTER-SCHOOL SNACK

Wheat Germ Muffins & Milk

WHEAT GERM MUFFINS

Best served warm from the oven.

- 1 cup unbleached flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 1 large egg
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup salad (not olive) oil
- 1 cup milk

In a small bowl stir together flour, baking powder and salt; stir in wheat germ. In a medium bowl, with a beater, beat egg until foamy; add sugar, oil and milk; beat until blended. Add flour mixture, with a spoon stir only until flour mixture is moistened. Fill buttered muffin fin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity) two-thirds full. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center of a muffin comes out clean — 15 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and remove. Serve at once. Makes 12. Adapted from "Peter Rabbit's Natural Foods Cookbook" by Arnold Dobrin and illustrated by Beatrix Potter (Frederick Warne).

The bat-eared fox of Africa has a keen sense of hearing that helps it find its food — termites, grubs and other insects above or below ground. Scientists believe the foxes also lose body heat through their unusually large ears, helping them to stay cool in hot weather.

A Key Spice Of Olden Days

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Those who season their food with cumin might be interested to know that in medieval Germany a bride and groom used to carry seeds of the spice to ensure faithfulness.

In other parts of Europe, a soldier going off to war would take along a loaf of bread spiced with cumin, baked by his sweetheart, or they would drink a farewell glass of wine spiked with the seeds.

Whatever the inspiration, cumin has been popular in many lands since biblical times, both as a seasoning and a medicine.

Americans like it so well that U.S. cumin consumption has soared 106 percent in the past decade.

The Roman naturalist Pliny called it the best of condiments and some Romans made cumin into a paste and spread it on bread.

By the Middle Ages cumin had become one of the most popular spices in Europe and soon it spread to India, North Africa and the Middle East, where it became an ingredient in many of their classic dishes, from couscous to curry.

Latin Americans have long used cumin in rice and bean dishes, and eventually it became a key ingredient for chili con carne. Today it is contained in both chili and curry powders.

The cumin plant is a member of the parsley family, which grows less than 6 inches high. The slightly bitter seed is used to season fish and meat dishes, especially stews. It is also popular in breads.

Cumin originated in Egypt and along the shores of the Mediterranean. But, since it adapts to both warm and cool climates, it is now grown in countries all over the world.

Iran has long been a prime exporter of the spice. So has India, which is the world's chief producer and also the largest consumer.

Cooks in Peru use cumin with a liberal hand, as in this recipe for Chanchito Adobado, or spicy pork.

2½ pounds boneless pork shoulder, cut in 1½-inch cubes

¼ cup white vinegar
1 tablespoon ground cumin
1 tablespoon ground turmeric

1½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon garlic powder

1½ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup orange juice
Water, as needed
1 tablespoon instant minced onion

1 tablespoon flour
Place pork in bowl. Combine vinegar, cumin, turmeric, salt, garlic powder and black pepper. Pour over meat. Cover bowl and refrigerate 1 hour. Strain pork, reserving marinade. Pat pork cubes dry with paper towel. In large skillet, heat vegetable oil. Add pork and brown on all sides. Add orange juice, ½ cup water, onion and reserved marinade; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, till pork is tender; about 30 minutes. Combine flour with 2 tablespoons water. Blend into pork mixture. Cook and stir till thickened, about 2 minutes. Serve over rice if desired. Yields 4 servings. Good with chilled Rose wine.

Insurance Costs

Greenville Utilities directors voted Tuesday night to change from Blue Cross-Blue Shield to American Mutual for health insurance coverage on utilities employees.

The move was made for one major reason — cost of the health insurance plan. The change signals a move to a co-insurance plan which it is anticipated will curb the increasing costs of insurance. Under the co-insurance plan the employees will pay 20 percent of all in-hospital costs up to $3,000. After that the policy will pay 100 percent of hospital costs. There will be an improvement in the group life insurance plan. The estimated annual premium for American Mutual will be $343,187 while Blue Cross' would be $386,909. It is anticipated that the city will move to a similar plan for its employees.

Figures for cost increases in the health plan are staggering. Premium costs have increased 361 percent for individual coverage since 1975 and 349 percent for family coverage.

It becomes obvious why governments and the private sector are struggling to hold down the major increases in premiums for health insurance and also why major efforts are under way to hold down rising medical costs.

The awesome rises in costs must be brought under control or not even the best financed health insurance programs will be affordable. Greenville Utilities has made a move in that direction.

Scaling Back

We don't know whether life has changed in the Dare County community of Southern Shores recently, but the average annual income surely has.

Following the 1980 census Southern Shores was listed as having the highest average per capita income at $30,347. It was the highest figure for North Carolina. Revised figures have since been released, however, and Southern Shores per capita income fell to $13,521, still a respectable figure for the retirement community. The highest per capita income honors now go to Biltmore Forest near Asheville, where the figure is $16,088.

Meantime a lot of citizens of Southern Shores probably are scaling back on their planned purchases.

RALEIGH — In early civilizations, it was considered shameful to bring the equivalent of a lawsuit before a king or a judge. Two citizens were supposed to be capable of settling their disputes privately, maybe with the aid of counselors. Bringing the case to a judge meant you'd failed in your role as a good citizen.

Today, no such shame exists. In fact, says Justice James Exum of the N.C. Supreme Court, the modern battle cry has become "Sue 'em." America is experiencing a "litigation explosion" where increasing numbers of people go to court to settle their differences but only the lawyers win.

Speaking to the N.C. Editorial Writers' Conference, Exum said two factors are contributing to a rapid increase in the number of lawsuits filed. First, the citizenry has lost "the spirit of moderation." Second, lawyers have forgotten that their first duty is to make peace among parties. Instead, they think of suing.

"Many citizens have forgotten some of the moral precepts of their Judaic-Christian background. They've forgotten the spirit of moderation... petty disputes get blown out of all proportion... and the citizen demands his day in court," Exum said.

Lawyers, who should be learning the role of peacemaker in law school, may not be performing that duty in their professional lives. Lawyers have a responsibility to advise their clients on what is right but some advise on little more than what is winnable.

What's wrong with litigation? As Exum noted, suing someone is better than punching them in the nose. Better litigation than violence.

but litigation is violent, he said. "It's verbal, not physical." Parties to a lawsuit are adversaries. They set out to belittle and denigrate one another's case. "In the end, you've created a new bitterness and a wider gulf than existed to bring on the dispute in the first place... True, they're not fighting but it has not brought on a true peace.

"Once a settlement is entered, you have a winner and a loser and no real reconciliation of the problems that began the dispute to begin with." And, if money's been awarded, even your winner is likely to be unhappy.

"The money judgment may turn out to have not been worth the trouble. Increasingly, the answer is that you can't sue and win. Too often, litigation works only to the economic advantage of the attorney." In the knock-down, drag-out of a lawsuit, legal fees are heavy.

So, when the average citizen sues, his case is likely to cost him a lot of time and money. He's likely to find himself more emotionally involved in the controversy and, when it's over, if he wins, he's not likely to get much satisfaction. Doesn't sound very encouraging.

Strength For Today

Many people misunderstand the declaration by Jesus, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." They assume that it was said in praise of poverty or melancholy.

But the word "ppor" used here indicates not those who are poor by circumstance but those who are poor by choice. It really means, therefore, blessed are those who renounce — who give up their own selfish plans and desires that others may live a fuller life.

And who can deny that these people are blessed? Others are

WASHINGTON — Lawyers for Howard University were in court the other day, defending the predominantly black institution from a charge of racial discrimination. The charge came from a white woman, an assistant professor of French, who had been awarded $25,300 on her complaint that she had been fired because of her race and replaced by a black instructor with lesser qualifications. Howard asked that the judgment be set aside.

The university had denied the charge, but only more or less. Counsel argued instead that Howard has a right to discriminate against whites; Howard is not required to follow a "color-blind" rule because of the "legally recognized unique status of black colleges." While the plaintiff's evidence might have been sufficient to prove discrimination against a black teacher in a white institution, the reverse was not true.

And the main reason for this, said Howard's brief, is that because of past discrimination against blacks in higher education, "for years to come" there will be more whites than blacks with advanced academic degrees.

In the same week that Howard was arguing for inequality, other news was developing. William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, made a speech in which he termed racial quotas "morally wrong" and said the department no longer would defend them. The department asked a federal appeals court to set aside a recent order of a lower court requiring Detroit's police department to make one-to-one promotions, black and white, to the rank of police lieutenant. The Justice Department contends that such a quota system "impermissibly infringes on the equal protection rights of non-black police sergeants," and obviously it does.

One more related incident: In Charlottesville, black students demonstrated to protest the relatively small number of black students and teachers on the historic grounds of the University of Virginia. The university has 977 black undergraduates, about 9 percent of the 11,104 total.

Isn't it about time, I am minded to ask, that our courts, our public institutions and our statutes be shed of this whole business of racial quotas and affirmative action?

In the years immediately following the Supreme Court's decision in Brown vs. Board of Education, doubtless a case could be made for the draconian measures subsequently imposed to wipe out state-sanctioned segregation "root and branch." But the Brown decision was almost 30 years ago. For how many "years to come" must these unfair and artificial devices be continued?

I have lived in Virginia for 40 years; I know the university, and I know that the decent and honorable men in charge of its affairs have tried earnestly to attract more qualified black students. It is a frustrating task. Once graduated from high school, young people cannot be compelled to enroll at a particular college; they are free to choose, and if they choose not to attend the university — for whatever reason — that is their choice. No state barriers stand in their way.

We have reached a point where "equal protection of the laws" has become, again, a mockery. Where once the law discriminated against black, the law now discriminates against whites. In George Orwell's fable of the animal farm, all the animals supposedly were equal, but some were more equal than others. Do we yield to fable? Or do we adhere to the ancient moral position that two wrongs cannot make a right?

If proportionately fewer blacks than whites today are seeking master's degrees, whose fault is this? If black high school graduates voluntarily choose to attend predominantly black institutions of higher learning, who is to deny them that right? A whole generation after the Brown case, we continue to bus little children past their own neighborhood schools for one reason only: the color of their skin. It is absurd.

The hope and prayer of the Brown court was that its landmark decision would lead to a society governed by a color-blind Constitution. As long as the courts continue to sanction racial quotas and affirmative action, the hope is vain and the prayer must go unanswered. Wholly innocent white young people are being attainted for the sins of their fathers. That strikes me as truly "immoral," and unlawful to boot.

To the editor:

On the night of May 4 I attended the Third Annual Greenville All-City Orchestra Concert in Wright Auditorium. All week I expected to see the newspaper flooded with letters praising the students and the directors for this fine concert. Not finding any, I decided to write in support of their outstanding performance.

The Elementary Beginning and Advanced Orchestras were under the direction of Mrs. Jo Ann Moore. She has done a superb job in training these youngsters. They were quite professional in their attitude and adept in their performance.

The Greenville Middle School String Orchestra was conducted by Miss Amanda Kartchner. They were smaller in number, but much advanced in their abilities.

The Greenville Chamber Players, who are the honor students in the orchestra, were directed by Mrs. Candace Dixon. It was amazing to me that these young people are only in high school. They played with such skill and style.

Finally, when the Greenville All-City Symphony Orchestra played their first selection, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," I was almost moved to stand up. They were as fine an orchestra as I have heard.

These young people have progressed from as little as six months of actual classroom instruction for the beginners to years of study in our city schools' orchestra program. It would be a crime to see this fine program, along with art, general music, band and physical education, lost to budget cuts.

I urge the County Commissioners to rescue these vital programs for the sake of these fine young musicians and those to come. We must continue with excellence in our schools and provide our young people with this wonderful opportunity for achievement.

To the editor:

On May 4 the Greenville City Schools presented a marvelous string program in Wright Auditorium at ECU under the direction of JoAnn Moore and Mamie Dixon. The children involved ranged from 60 fourth grade beginner string players to the full high school orchestra with winds, percussion, and brass in addition to the strings.

It was exciting to see the progress made by the students as the program moved from the Beginner Orchestra to the Advanced Fifth and Sixth Grade Orchestra to the Middle School Orchestra to the Greenville Chamber Players and finally to the full high school orchestra made up of seventh through 12th graders. This city is so fortunate to have such a fine program being built by such capable directors.

The County Commissioners have wisely allotted money for this program in the past, as well as for all of the arts, and will undoubtedly have the wisdom to see that it continues in the future. Dr. Blinson and all of the school principals are to be commended for their obvious support of music in the schools. And the students, who worked so hard to accomplish so much, are to be praised by all and should be proud of what they have done. Congratulations!

Lawsuits Are An In-Thing Today

What are Exum's alternatives. He cites two: state sponsored volunteer mediation centers and the Christian Counsel Service.

Mediation centers are springing up around the state with the one in Orange County most famous. There, cases are diverted from criminal and civil courts to a volunteer mediator who tries to work out a compromise. In the end, it is hoped, the two parties both have a settlement they can live with, neither has legal fees and the state hasn't had to provide a courtroom. The Christian service works in very much the same way with Christianity serving as the basis of the mediation.

Americans may never find litigation as shameful as ancient man did, but Exum simply hopes we'll discover how unfruitful it is.

Business Confidence Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — Small business is thinking big again.

After a recession that sapped confidence and caused thousands of failures, a record-high percentage of companies expect better conditions, the National Federation of Independent Business said today.

Its April survey revealed among other things a surge in plans to increase employment, an increase in plans to spend on plant and equipment and the likelihood of price stability well into summer.

"There appears to be no pressures on prices from the small-business sector," the survey's authors reported.

The findings, based on 2,176 of the federation's more than 500,000 members, showed a substantial increase in the number of companies willing to borrow at today's rates, and an increase also in plans to build inventories.

Professors William Dunkelberg of Purdue University and Johnathan Scott of Southern Methodist University, who analyzed the results, commented that "the order books, empty six months ago, are filling up."

The results appear to have significance for the economy in general rather than for just the small-business sector, said the professors, who maintain that their findings accurately forecast changes in real gross national product.

The January survey predicted a first-quarter GNP increase that was close to the actual 3.1 percent gain. The April survey, said Dunkelberg, anticipates an even stronger growth for the second quarter.

Although interest rates remained relatively high in the first quarter — 13.5 percent on short-term loans — only 18 percent of all companies felt that financing problems are their main problem. Last year the figure stood at 37 percent.

Thirty percent of respondents plan to make capital outlays in the next 12 months, the highest second-quarter figure since 1979.

Senate Debate Turns To Turkey

Finally, Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the ranking Democratic on the Senate Budget Committee, took a morning off from floor debate — to go turkey hunting. His absence prompted some floor debate on turkeys in general — and legislative ones in particular.

Two senators have announced they will not run again in 1984 — Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va. — and the two were discussing their decisions recently in an exchange on the Senate floor.

Both agreed they were glad they had made the decision.

Baker told Randolph: "Someone asked me the other day, 'Are you sorry you have announced that your not going to run?' I said, 'No. Not only am I not sorry, but I'm now actively engaged in negotiations to try to gain time off for good behavior.'"

Freshman Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va., missed a vote on the House floor the other day and entered a statement in the Congressional Record to explain his absence: he was stuck in an elevator in the Longworth House Office Building.

"The door refused to open and there was no physical way to make it to the floor of the House. Others trapped with me say that such problems are a frequent occurrence... and I hope the proper officials will look into it."

Wise said he was trapped with Rep. Tom Vanergriff, D-Texas, and some staff members. Vandergriff "might still be on the thing for all I know," Wise said.

The 23 freshman Republican members of the House are more conservative than the chamber's GOP membership as a whole, according to a survey by the Fund for a Conservative Majority.

It said it based its conclusions on a number of votes this year.

N. C. Building Activity Jumps

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Building activity authorized in 44 of North Carolina's largest cities jumped 88.1 percent in January, the second month in a row that construction activity showed across-the-board increases.

Estimated value of the 2,568 units, $98,905,092, was up 103.2 percent compared to $48,680,634 recorded for 1,365 units in January 1982. Compared to December, total activity increased 6.7 percent and value gained 43.5 percent.

"It was the second consecutive month for such across-the-board growth, which hadn't been seen in North Carolina previously in 21 months," Labor Commissioner John Brooks said.

Authorizations for multi-family units were up 308.4 percent compared to January 1982, with permits for single-family homes up 173.3 percent. Nonresidential construction increased 58.9 percent, and additions and alterations gained 30.7 percent.

There were 535 multi-family units compared to 131 in January 1982 for a value of $10,986,077. Those units were up from December's 433 with a value of $7,661,112.

A total of 727 permits for single-family homes were issued, compared to 266 in January 1982. Value at $31,788,868 increased 168.3 percent from $11,848,582. The number of permits rose 14.8 percent from December with value up 20.7 percent.

In value of authorized construction, Greensboro led with $19,289,351. Superintendent of inspections Jack

ABC Permits Are Suspended

The State ABC Board has ordered permits suspended for two Ayden firms and one Greenville business for violations of ABC regulations.

However, the board, at a meeting May 6 in Raleigh, deferred the suspensions on condition the firms pay a fine and no further violations occur.

Permits issued to Billy Earl Odham, trading as Odham's Grocery on Snow Hill Street in Ayden, was suspended for 30 days (suspended for one year upon payment of $250 fine and no further violations) on charges of "the permittee possessed gambling devices upon his licensed premises on Jan. 28 ..."

Permits issued to Earl Steven Arnold Jr. for A&B Grocery on North Lee Street in Ayden were suspended for 30 days (suspended for one year upon payment of $250 fine and no further violations) on charges that "the permittee did possess gambling devices upon his licensed premises on Jan. 27 ..."

Permits issued to Hafco Inc. for the Stop Shop, 213 E. Fifth St., Greenville, were suspended for 30 days (suspended for one year upon payment of $250 fine and no further violations), on charges "that the permittee's employee ... knowingly sold malt beverages to ... a minor" on Feb. 5.

Two Dead In A Shootout

ICARD, N.C. (AP) — Two men are dead and another is in stable condition in Grace Hospital following a shootout at Burke County trailer park Sunday night.

The Burke County Sheriff's Department said Miles Franklin Lowman, 47, owner of Lowman Trailer Park was shot and killed in front of his home at about 10:52 last night. Also killed was Steve Wayne Poore, 35, of Hildebran. Poore died during surgery at Valdes General Hospital at 12:35 a.m. Monday, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Listed in stable and satisfactory condition at Grace Hospital is Ricky Lee Towery, 20, of Icard. Towery was shot in the face and leg with a .22-caliber weapon.

Sheriff's department officials said Poore and two companions drove into the driveway of Lowman's residence late Sunday night. The two persons with Poore entered a residence and then reported hearing someone talking outside. They opened the door to the trailer, and said they saw Poore fire a weapon at Lowman. Towery then went inside a residence and got a shotgun and went to Poore's vehicle. As Towery approached the vehicle Poore fired at him, and Towery returned fire with the shotgun.

Deputies reported that Lowman and Poore were lying in the driveway to the Lowman residence when they arrived, and Towery was inside a trailer.

E. Wade said the figure was due to a $14 million permit for an addition to Moses Cone Hospital.

Raleigh was second with $18.6 million and Charlotte was third at $17.29 million. Winston-Salem was fourth for the month at $5.6 million and High Point was fifth at $4.7 million.

Fayetteville reported authorized building valued at more than $3 million, while Cary, Chapel Hill, Durham and Statesville each exceeded $2 million.

Recognize Mrs. Brame For Blood Service Role

Nancy Brame of Greenville was recognized recently by the Pitt County Blood Services Committee as the recipient of the annual Ott Alford Achievement Award for contributions to the area blood program.

The award was presented during the fifth annual awards and recognition luncheon, co-hosted by the Pitt County Red Cross and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Volunteers, sponsors and donors who played roles in the blood program during 1982 were cited.

Mrs. Brame was recognized for her service as a volunteer nurse with bloodmobiles, her participation as a pheresis donor, and her role in helping to procure decorative items for the new Red Cross Blood Center. She is the wife of Dr. Robert Brame of the East Carolina University medical school.

The Alford award is presented in honor of the late blood services committee chairman who was instrumental in initiating the annual activities to recognize contributions to the area blood program.

Dr. Mary Raab, hemotologist-oncologist with the medical school, presented the award. She spoke to the group about the role blood transfusions play in the treatment of advanced cancer patients.

Barry Gaskins, director of information with the Pitt County Community Schools, was the recipient of a newly established award that will be given annually to an outstanding member of the blood committee. Gaskins was cited for his contributions to the committee, specifically for his involvement in working with the county high schools in their blood donor programs.

Also recognized were the services provided by representatives of the various high schools, ECU, Pitt Community College, local businesses, the Service League, nurses and members of the committee.

Mike Colombo, committee chairman, presided during the luncheon gathering and Dick Carney, administrator of the blood center, introduced several of the award recipients.

Three New Leaf Varieties Set

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three new blue-cured tobacco varieties developed at North Carolina State University will be available for the 1984 crop.

One variety, NC 22NF, is the first non-flowering tobacco ever released. The variety must be topped to assure marketable quality, and shows moderate resistance to black shank and low resistance to Granville wilt. It is susceptible to root knot and mosaic.

Varieties NC 567 and NC 50 have multiple disease resistance. Both are resistant to black shank. Granville wilt and root knot. NC 567 also has resistance to fusarium wilt and is the first commercial variety to have resistance to cyst nematode.

Claim Opposite Effect In Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — The result of covert U.S. support for guerrillas fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua has been "entirely opposite" from the effect intended by the Reagan administration, the Democratic majority of the House Intelligence Committee says.

Rather than undermining the Sandinista government, the U.S. effort has strengthened international support for the Sandinistas, the Democrats said in a report released Monday.

They also said U.S. aid has failed to stop the Sandinistas from helping to train and arm leftist rebels in nearby El Salvador, according to The Washington Post.

The Reagan administration has said halting the arms flow to El Salvador was the purpose for aiding the Nicaraguan rebels. The intelligence committee's five Republicans issued a dissent to the Democrats' report, stating their conclusion that the covert operation has been successful in deterring arms shipments, the newspaper said.

Cutting off aid to the rebels would hand a "legislatively engineered victory" to the Sandinistas, the Republicans said.

"The Sandinista Nicaraguan government marks the first foothold of Marxism on the mainland in our Western Hemisphere," the Republicans said. "With only a modicum of help from the United States democracy can flourish in Central America."

The nine Democrats — in the document which the newspaper described as an "unprecedented report about an ongoing CIA covert operation" — agreed with the administration's contention that the Sandinistas have helped give the Salvadoran rebels logistical support, training and arms, the Post said.

But the administration has "allowed the spotlight of international opprobrium to shift from Sandinista attempts to subvert a neighboring government to a U.S. attempt to subvert that of Nicaragua," the Democrats said.

Last week, the committee voted to terminate the covert operation and substitute assistance to "friendly countries" like El Salvador and Honduras to try to stop the arms flow to Salvadoran rebels. The report released Monday accompanied the legislation to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is scheduled to consider it Wednesday.

The report also reveals that last spring the panel secretly voted to limit U.S. covert assistance to stopping the arms flow to El Salvador, rather than to overthrow the Nicaraguan government. The same language, contained in the so-called Boland amendment, was attached to the defense appropriations bill in December.

Government Planning To Sell Industry Rockets

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To encourage private enterprise in space, the government is going to allow commercial companies to buy Delta, Atlas and Titan rockets and launch them from existing pads in Florida and California.

The move, announced Monday by President Reagan, comes as the government phases out use of such unmanned rockets in favor of the space shuttle, a manned rocketplane capable of flying repeatedly into space.

Several industrial firms have proposed setting up their own space transportation systems by purchasing the rockets and using the launch facilities. They include Martin-Marietta, which builds the Titan II; General Dynamics, maker of the Atlas-Centaur, and Space Services, Inc., which wants to buy Atlas-Centurs.

A Delta currently costs about $30 million, an Atlas-Centaur about $45 million.

Selling the rockets "would add to the general economic vitality of the United States and provide the United States with a more robust space launch capability," the White House announcement of the plan said.

The new policy applies not only to existing rockets, but also any other unmanned rockets that might be developed for commercial applications.

Users would operate under tight government restrictions to assure safety and to preclude launching of weapons aboard the boosters. The government, meanwhile, would have first claim on rockets and facilities for national security and critical missions.

The announcement said that allowing private participation would "offer a domestic backup for the shuttle at essentially no cost to the U.S. government."

"The private sector would assume all costs of (rocket) production now borne by the U.S. government," it said. "There would also be a market for U.S. government facilities and equipment that would otherwise be underutilized or no longer required."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force maintain extensive launch facilities at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

NASA does not see such enterprise as competition for its current effort to sell space on the shuttle. It feels the shuttle offers cheaper transportation and has additional features that include servicing and repair of satellites for those who need them. The agency also feels there will be enough customers for the shuttle, private launchers and the European Space Agency's unmanned Ariane rocket.

NASA also is considering transferring management of the shuttle to a private company later in this decade, after it is fully developed.

Details will be worked out by an interagency group headed by the State Department and NASA and will include the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Communications Commission.

Inlet Dredging Funds Possible

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A replica of a 16th century English sailing vessel is being built for the 400th anniversary of the first English voyage to North Carolina, but without federal assistance the ship isn't going anywhere.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says it will make a decision next month on a request to dredge Shallowbag Bay at a cost of $1 million. The Corp's share will be $600,000, with $400,000 to be provided by state and local governments.

The 65-foot, 50-ton Queen Elizabeth II is being built in the coastal town of Manteo on Roanoke Island, where a similar vessel landed in 1584 as the British tried to establish their first North American colony.

Construction of the ship is part of a huge celebration North Carolina plans for the landing's 400th anniversary in 1984. President Reagan and Gov. Jim Hunt have invited members of the British royal family. They are expected to respond by December.

James L. Wells, chief of the Corps of Engineers' dredging section based in Wilmington, said the Corps probably will dredge Shallowbag Bay to make it 12 feet deep. Presently, the depth ranges from seven to 10 feet. The ship's keel will be eight feet under water, Wells said.

"Right now we're still checking it out," Wells said in a telephone interview. "We'll have to see if we're going to have enough money. But I'm sure we'll do it if the need is that great."

The state already is using about $120,000 of a federal highway grant to dig a canal around a new bridge linking Manteo with a nearby peninsula where much of the celebration will take place.

Charles Wade Jr. of Winston-Salem, who heads the shipbuilding project, said the state's 400th anniversary committee was promised four years ago the corps would dredge the bay so the ship could sail from Manteo to deeper water in the Pamlico Sound.

From there, it can reach other ports and the Atlantic Ocean.

Wade, a retired R.J. Reynolds executive, said the boat wouldn't be realistic if built small enough to avoid the dredging.

"You want to make it as authentic as possible," he said in a telephone interview. "It may be the most authentic replica of a British ship that's ever been (made) in the United States. There never was any thought of altering the design in any way."

Some local residents, especially fishermen, have said any dredging in the area should be done in the Oregon Inlet, a vital passageway between the sound and the ocean.

But others say money spent on the dredging, ship and other 400th anniversary preparations will be more than made up as tourists flock to the area for the three-year celebration.

"We're talking about 300,000 cubic yards, which really isn't that big a deal," said Wells. "And there's so much shoaling in that channel that you'd probably have to dredge it anyway."

If the project goes forward, another $400,000 will be needed to dispose of the sand and other refuse. However, that will be paid for by state and local government, said Jim Greenhill, assistant state highway administrator.

Hunt Missing Funds In The 'Hitler Diary' Scam

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Stern magazine is trying to trace the $3.7 million it paid for the fraudulent Hitler diaries, and employees say the financial loss to the popular newsweekly may cost them their jobs.

"Everyone here is asking what happened to the money," said Stern news editor Guenther Schoenfeld said in a telephone interview Monday.

Stern journalists issued a statement saying the magazine might have to cut back its staff in an attempt to recover from the financial blow.

Peter Beck of the Hamburg prosecutor's office said investigators were waiting to interrogate fired Stern reporter Gerd Heidemann and Konrad Kujau, the Nazi-souvenir dealer who sold him the books, until they examined documents taken from the two men's homes.

"This is a case like any other for us, despite the overwhelming public interest," Beck told The Associated Press. "We will follow our normal procedure."

Kujau surrendered to authorities on Saturday at the Austrian-German border and is being held in investigative custody, which allows authorities to keep him in jail for three months without allowing bail or filing charges.

Beck said there were "no grounds" to hold Heidemann in investigative custody as well as Kujau. Both men deny the allegations of fraud, claiming each assured the other that experts had authenticated the diaries.

Schoenfeld told The Associated Press that his magazine gave Heidemann the equivalent of $3.7 million, and the reporter has said he gave all the money to Kujau in several installments.

But Kujau said through his attorney during the weekend that he got only about $1 million from Heidemann and kept about $125,000 for himself.

The West German Federal Archives has termed the 62 handwritten diaries "obvious fakes" made with postwar materials and plagiarized from a 1962 history book.

But Kujau said former Nazi Party archivist August Priesack and University of Stuttgart historian Eberhard Jaeckel had authenticated the diaries before he peddled them to Stern.

Priesack said Monday that a collector named Fritz Stiefel had come to him with one 160-page volume to examine for authenticity before deciding whether to buy the journals from Kujau.

"I was very impressed," Priesack said, adding that he believed the book was rescued from a burning Nazi plane that crashed in East Germany after fleeing encircled Berlin in April, 1945.

Jaeckel said he advised Stiefel not to buy the diaries because they contained "at most just five pages of historical interest."

In his statement, Kujau

acknowledged that he served as Heidemann's middleman in acquiring the diaries, but said he did not forge them. He said he got the journals from a man in East Germany identified only as Mirdorf, and believed they were genuine.

Kujau said in the statement that Heidemann had also taken delivery of some of the 62 volumes directly from Mirdorf. But Schoenfeld said Stern officials had never heard of Mirdorf.

"That name never turned up when Heidemann was questioned," he said.

Will Dive Again To Study Sunken Ship

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The chief diver of a team hired by a consortium says he plans to dive again on the wreck of the coal ship Marine Electric despite being threatened by men he says were armed with automatic weapons.

Jeremiah Shastid, a driver from Waldorf, Md., said Monday he believes a boat crew of armed men who threatened the divers Sunday may have planned to loot the ship.

A Coast Guard helicopter searched the area surrounding the wreck site 30 miles east of Chincoteague, Va., for the unidentified vessel, which the divers said resembled a clam boat.

"We are continuing our investigation. I'm not at liberty to say any more," a Coast Guard spokesman said Monday night.

Shastid said he would talk today with an agent of the U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau of the Treasury Department about the incident. He said the boat carrying the armed men was marked "Sarah Conway" out of Berlin, Md.

In a telephone interview Monday from Chincoteague, Shastid said "I think somebody was trying to get what they could out of there. There are a lot of things of value down there," such as the ship's safe.

Shastid, a former Marine, said he and a partner, David Landenburg, 26, had dived on the wreck about 1 p.m. Sunday while Shastid's brother, Roy, stayed in their boat.

4 Collisions On Monday

An estimated $3,500 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:04 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 50 feet west of the Rocksprings Road intersection, involving a car driven by Louise Annette Hall of Route 1, Conway, and a truck operated by Glenn Vincent Dembroski of 300 E. 12th St.

Damage from the collision was set at $500 to the car and $700 to the truck.

Cars driven by Betty Ann Magill of Goldsboro and Adron Earl Wilson of Route 2, Grimesland, collided about 1:16 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Magill car and $500 damage to the Wilson auto.

A 4:55 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 25 feet east of the Cherry Court Drive intersection, involved vehicles driven by Ronald Duane Grace Jr. of 205 N. Oak St. and Michael Carlyle Poe of 207A 13th St.

Damage was set at $200 to the Grace car and $500 to the Poe truck.

Cars driven by Jerry Lee Weeks of Route 1, Smithfield, and Cheryl Marie Stanton of Dunkirk, N.Y., collided about 12:05 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Maxwell Street, causing $200 damage to the Weeks car and $300 damage to the Stanton car.

Heavy Fighting In Nicaragua Reported

By FILADELFO ALEMAN
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavy fighting between rebels and government troops was reported in northeastern Nicaragua, and conflicting reports of the combat included a rebel claim that 400 government soldiers have been killed since Friday.

The unconfirmed report of the heavy government casualties came in a Honduran television interview from "somewhere in Nicaragua" with rebel commander Steadman Fagoth Muller. He said 900 rebels and an estimated 2,500 troops of the leftist Sandinista government continued fighting Monday near Bawisa, a large plain about 250 miles northeast of Managua.

Fagoth Muller, who heads a federation of Nicaraguan Indian tribes known as the Misurasata, said rebel casualties since Friday were limited to eight dead and 17 wounded. He also said the government had lost seven Soviet-made tanks.

Despite earlier reports that Sandinista forces had routed the rebels, government sources acknowledged Monday that fighting continued in Zelaya province. But the sources denied Fagoth Muller's claims of heavy government casualties.

Defense Ministry spokesman Captain Roberto

Sanchez told The Associated Press that only two government soldiers had died in the Zelaya fighting. He said eight men were wounded and 10 rebels killed.

"They're fleeing and being pursued by the army," Sanchez said of the rebels. Earlier Monday, however, sources reported continued fighting in a widespread region of Zelaya.

Interior Minister Tomas Borge told reporters Sunday he expected a new offensive by rebels along the Honduran border in June. The rebels launched heavy attacks along the border April 30, but withdrew to resupply in Honduras May 5, according to Nicaraguan officials.

The Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force whose rebels are fighting inside Nicaragua include a large number of men from the National Guard of the late Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza. Somoza's regime was toppled by Sandinista-led guerrillas in July 1979.

The Democratic Force is also believed to include many Indians who fled Nicaragua because of reported attempts by the Sandinistas to infringe on their lifestyle and uproot them from villages.

In other action, the Defense Ministry reported Monday that government troops killed eight rebels in fighting Friday with Costa Rica-based exiles in southern Nicaragua.

The rebels fighting in the south are mostly disenchanted Sandinistas. They are led by Eden Pastora, a hero of the war to overthrow Somoza who served as deputy defense minister before breaking with the Sandinistas.

In an interview with a Costa Rican television station also reportedly filmed "somewhere in Nicaragua," Pastora complained of a shortage of rifles to arm Nicaraguan peasants he claimed are ready to fight under him.

but without federal assistance the ship isn't going anywhere.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says it will make a decision next month on a request to dredge Shallowbag Bay at a cost of $1 million. The Corps' share will be $600,000, with $400,000 to be provided by state and local governments.

The 65-foot, 50-ton Queen Elizabeth II is being built in the coastal town of Manteo on Roanoke Island, where a similar vessel landed in 1584 as the British tried to establish their first North American colony.

Construction of the ship is part of a huge celebration North Carolina plans for the landing's 400th anniversary in 1984. President Reagan and Gov. Jim Hunt have invited members of the British royal family. They are expected to respond by December.

James L. Wells, chief of the Corps of Engineers' dredging section based in Wilmington, said the Corps probably will dredge Shallowbag Bay to make it 12 feet deep. Presently, the depth ranges from seven to 10 feet. The ship's keel will be eight feet under water, Wells said.

"Right now we're still checking it out," Wells said in a telephone interview. "We'll have to see if we're going to have enough money. But I'm sure we'll do it if the need is that great."

The state already is using about $120,000 of a federal highway grant to dig a canal

around a new bridge linking Manteo with a nearby peninsula where much of the celebration will take place.

Charles Wade Jr. of Winston-Salem, who heads the shipbuilding project, said the state's 400th anniversary committee was promised four years ago the corps would dredge the bay so the ship could sail from Manteo to deeper water in the Pamlico Sound.

From there, it can reach other ports and the Atlantic Ocean.

Wade, a retired R.J. Reynolds executive, said the boat wouldn't be realistic if built small enough to avoid the dredging.

"You want to make it as authentic as possible," he said in a telephone interview. "It may be the most authentic replica of a British ship that's ever been (made) in the United States. There never was any thought of altering the design in any way."

Some local residents, especially fishermen, have said any dredging in the area should be done in the Oregon Inlet, a vital passageway between the sound and the ocean.

But others say money spent on the dredging, ship and other 400th anniversary preparations will be more than made up as tourists flock to the area for the three-year celebration.

"We're talking about 300,000 cubic yards, which really isn't that big a deal," said Wells. "And there's so much shoaling in that channel that you'd probably have to dredge it anyway."

If the project goes forward, another $400,000 will be needed to dispose of the sand and other refuse. However, that will be paid for by state and local government, said Jim Greenhill, assistant state highway administrator.

Hunt Missing Funds In The 'Hitler Diary' Scam

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Stern magazine is trying to trace the $3.7 million it paid for the fraudulent Hitler diaries, and employees say the financial loss to the popular newsweekly may cost them their jobs.

"Everyone here is asking what happened to the money," said Stern news editor Guenther Schoenfeld said in a telephone interview Monday.

Stern journalists issued a statement saying the magazine might have to cut back its staff in an attempt to recover from the financial blow.

Peter Beck of the Hamburg prosecutor's office said investigators were waiting to interrogate fired Stern reporter Gerd Heidemann and Konrad Kujau, the Nazi-souvenir dealer who sold him the books, until they examined documents taken from the two men's homes.

"This is a case like any other for us, despite the overwhelming public interest," Beck told The Associated Press. "We will follow our normal procedure."

Kujau surrendered to authorities on Saturday at the Austrian-German border and is being held in investigative custody, which allows authorities to keep him in jail for three months without allowing bail or filing charges.

Beck said there were "no grounds" to hold Heidemann in investigative custody as well as Kujau. Both men deny the allegations of fraud, claiming each assured the other that experts had authenticated the diaries.

Schoenfeld told The Associated Press that his magazine gave Heidemann the equivalent of $3.7 million, and the reporter has said he gave all the money to Kujau in several installments.

But Kujau said through his attorney during the weekend that he got only about $1 million from Heidemann and kept about $125,000 for himself.

The West German Federal Archives has termed the 62 handwritten diaries "obvious fakes" made with postwar materials and plagiarized from a 1962 history book.

But Kujau said former Nazi Party archivist August Priesack and University of Stuttgart historian Eberhard Jaeckel had authenticated the diaries before he peddled them to Stern.

Priesack said Monday that a collector named Fritz Stiefel had come to him with one 160-page volume to examine for authenticity before deciding whether to buy the journals from Kujau.

"I was very impressed," Priesack said, adding that he believed the book was rescued from a burning Nazi plane that crashed in East Germany after fleeing encircled Berlin in April, 1945. Jaeckel said he advised Stiefel not to buy the diaries because they contained "at most just five pages of historical interest."

In his statement, Kujau

acknowledged that he served as Heidemann's middleman in acquiring the diaries, but said he did not forge them. He said he got the journals from a man in East Germany identified only as Mirdorf and believed they were genuine.

Kujau said in the statement that Heidemann had also taken delivery of some of the 62 volumes directly from Mirdorf. But Schoenfeld said Stern officials had never heard of Mirdorf.

"That name never turned up when Heidemann was questioned," he said.

Will Dive Again To Study Sunken Ship

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The chief diver of a team hired by a consortium says he plans to dive again on the wreck of the coal ship Marine Electric despite being threatened by men he says were armed with automatic weapons.

Jeremiah Shastid, a driver from Waldorf, Md., said Monday he believes a boat crew of armed men who threatened the divers Sunday may have planned to loot the ship.

A Coast Guard helicopter searched the area surrounding the wreck site 30 miles east of Chincoteague, Va., for the unidentified vessel, which the divers said resembled a clam boat.

"We are continuing our investigation. I'm not at liberty to say any more," a Coast Guard spokesman said Monday night.

Shastid said he would talk today with an agent of the U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau of the Treasury Department about the incident. He said the boat carrying the armed men was marked "Sarah Conway" out of Berlin, Md.

In a telephone interview Monday from Chincoteague, Shastid said "I think somebody was trying to get what they could out of there. There are a lot of things of value down there," such as the ship's safe.

Shastid, a former Marine, said he and a partner, David Landenburg, 26, had dived on the wreck about 1 p.m. Sunday while Shastid's brother, Roy, stayed in their boat.

4 Collisions On Monday

An estimated $3,500 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:04 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 50 feet west of the Rocksprings Road intersection, involving a car driven by Louise Annette Hall of Route 1, Conway, and a truck operated by Glenn Vincent Dembroski of 300 E. 12th St.

Damage from the collision was set at $500 to the car and $700 to the truck.

Cars driven by Betty Ann Magill of Goldsboro and Adron Earl Wilson of Route 2, Grimesland, collided about 1:16 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Magill car and $500 damage to the Wilson auto.

A 4:55 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 25 feet east of the Cherry Court Drive intersection, involved vehicles driven by Ronald Duane Grace Jr. of 205 N. Oak St. and Michael Carlyle Poe of 207A 13th St.

Damage was set at $200 to the Grace car and $500 to the Poe truck.

Cars driven by Jerry Lee Weeks of Route 1, Smithfield, and Cheryl Marie Stanton of Dunkirk, N.Y., collided about 12:05 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Maxwell Street, causing $200 damage to the Weeks car and $300 damage to the Stanton car.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Monday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 28. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 28 percent of your hot water needs.

Honor Pupils Are Listed

The following students at Greenville Christian Academy made the "all A" honor roll and the principal's list for the fifth marking period:

All A's: Becky Bland, Tim Bland, Georgia Boseman, Sharon Dixon, Heather Gray, Tracie Hardee, Neil Harrington, Kerry House, Tammy Huggins, Sandy Johnston, Kevin Joyner, Alisa McLawhorn, Kristi Overton, Denise Robinson, Troy Stox, Kathy Vernelson.

Speeding Up Claims Role

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To encourage private enterprise in space, the government is going to allow commercial companies to buy Delta, Atlas and Titan rockets and launch them from existing pads in Florida and California.

The move, announced Monday by President Reagan, comes as the government phases out use of such unmanned rockets in favor of the space shuttle, a manned rocketplane capable of flying repeatedly into space.

Several industrial firms have proposed setting up their own space transportation systems by purchasing the rockets and using the launch facilities. They include Martin-Marietta, which builds the Titan II; General Dynamics, maker of the Atlas-Centaur, and Space Services, Inc., which wants to buy Atlas-Centaur.

A Delta currently costs about $30 million, an Atlas-Centaur about $45 million.

Selling the rockets "would add to the general economic vitality of the United States and provide the United States with a more robust space launch capability," the White House announcement of the plan said.

The new policy applies not only to existing rockets, but also any other unmanned rockets that might be developed for commercial applications.

Users would operate under tight government restrictions to assure safety and to preclude launching of weapons aboard the boosters. The government, meanwhile, would have first claim on rockets and facilities for national security and critical missions.

The announcement said that allowing private participation would "offer a domestic backup for the shuttle at essentially no cost to the U.S. government."

Heavy Fighting In Nicaragua Reported

By FILADELFO ALEMAN
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavy fighting between rebels and government troops was reported in northeastern Nicaragua, and conflicting reports of the combat included a rebel claim that 400 government soldiers have been killed since Friday.

The unconfirmed report of the heavy government casualties came in a Honduran television interview from "somewhere in Nicaragua" with rebel commander Steadman Fagoth Muller. He said 900 rebels and an estimated 2,500 troops of the leftist Sandinista government continued fighting Monday near Bawisa, a large plain about 250 miles northeast of Managua.

Fagoth Muller, who heads a federation of Nicaraguan Indian tribes known as the Misurasata, said rebel casualties since Friday were limited to eight dead and 17 wounded. He also said the government had lost seven Soviet-made tanks.

Despite earlier reports that Sandinista forces had routed the rebels, government sources acknowledged Monday that fighting continued in Zelaya province. But the sources denied Fagoth Muller's claims of heavy government casualties.

Defense Ministry spokesman Captain Roberto

Sanchez told The Associated Press that only two government soldiers had died in the Zelaya fighting. He said eight men were wounded and 10 rebels killed.

"They're fleeing and being pursued by the army," Sanchez said of the rebels. Earlier Monday, however, sources reported continued fighting in a widespread region of Zelaya.

Interior Minister Tomas Borge told reporters Sunday he expected a new offensive by rebels along the Honduran border in June. The rebels launched heavy attacks along the border April 30, but withdrew to resupply in Honduras May 5, according to Nicaraguan officials.

The Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force whose rebels are fighting inside Nicaragua include a large number of men from the National Guard of the late Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza. Somoza's regime was toppled by Sandinista-led guerrillas in July 1979.

The Democratic Force is also believed to include many Indians who fled Nicaragua because of reported attempts by the Sandinistas to infringe on their lifestyle and uproot them from villages.

In other action, the Defense Ministry reported Monday that government troops killed eight rebels in fighting Friday with Costa Rica-based exiles in southern Nicaragua.

The rebels fighting in the south are mostly disenfranchised Sandinistas. They are led by Eden Pastora, a hero of the war to overthrow Somoza who served as deputy defense minister before breaking with the Sandinistas.

In an interview with a Costa Rican television station also reportedly filmed "somewhere in Nicaragua," Pastora complained of a shortage of rifles to arm Nicaraguan peasants he claimed are ready to fight under him.

Indy Win Eluded Mears

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — One of the very few people on hand who didn't feel the excitement in the closing laps of last year's Indianapolis 500 was Rick Mears, who was too intent on catching Gordon Johncock to realize he was part of the closest finish in Indy history.

Mears, the 1979 winner and the record-setting pole-position starter in 1982, steadily cut into Johncock's lead down the stretch, pulled virtually even going into the final lap and then lost the world's richest drag race to the finish line by just .16 second.

"It feels good being part of it, but it didn't feel so good because I was the wrong part," said Mears, who Monday continued to string together laps over 200 mph as he prepared for the rain-delayed qualifications for the May 29 Indy renewal.

But Johncock again stole the spotlight, this time from Mears and Bobby Rahal, both of whom were actually faster during the day's practice session.

Johncock, a two-time Indy winner, had been struggling, along with teammate Johnny Rutherford, a three-time winner, to get into the running for the pole position. Now, with five more days to come up with speed because of the weekend rainout of the first two days of time trials, Johncock has apparently found some answers, turning two laps over 200 late in the day.

He came up with a 200.222, making him the 15th driver this month to top the magic number, then followed that with a 200.311. Mears, who is at team owner Roger Penske's Michigan International Speedway today to run a 500-mile test, had a top lap of 201.342 and Rahal was clocked at 202.429.

Rutherford, however, continued to struggle, getting his virtually identical Patrick Wildcat IX up only to 189.354.

In all, 38 cars made it onto the 2 1/2-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway oval, and 16 of them got above 190, including the one drive by Pete Halsmer, who hit a 197.498 fast lap, then slammed into the first-turn wall the next time around. Halsmer, 39, a two-time starter at Indianapolis, was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he was reported in satisfactory condition with a partially collapsed left lung, a puncture wound in his lower left leg and two bruised heels.

Halsmer became the third driver to wind up in the hospital since practice opened here May 7. Bob Harkey remains in fair condition with multiple injuries, while John Paul Jr. is recovering from a fractured ankle.

Rookie Jim Buick's car also hit the wall Monday, but he escaped injury. His car suffered severe damage to the right side and rear after making contact with the fourth-turn wall.

Among the other fast drivers Monday was 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti, who managed to get his new Lola up to 198.982. Geoff Brabham, a two-time Indy starter and the replacement for the injured Paul, climbed into a new Penske PC-10 and hit 197.976. And Bill Whittington, brother of this month's speed leader, Don Whittington, got his new March up to 198.150.

The excitement of the closing duel with Johncock last May, witnessed by 350,000 standing, screaming spectators, was lost on Mears "because I had my hands full and I was so busy doing whatever I had to do to try to catch him and to keep from crashing the car besides.

"I wasn't even thinking about that (excitement) end of it, all I was thinking about was to get him at the finish line. So I couldn't really feel that excitement.

"Afterwards ... I look at the race now on TV, and every time I look at it I swear that one of these times it's going to change ... I'm going to win. But I never have yet.

"To me it wasn't really exciting, because we lost. Even watching it, during, afterward or whatever. It tends to upset you if you lose; we're not out there to run second. So I was upset about that, initially, although it's nobody's fault but our own. We were definitely the quickest ones on the race track but we didn't get the job done.

"Gordy (his crew chief Jim) McGhee and those guys got the job done. They made the right moves and they pulled it off. So, really, it wasn't exciting. I mean, I was tickled to death and very thankful that I finished second, because it could have been a lot worse. And I was very fortunate to be able to finish second, but still that's not what we're out there for," said Mears.

Pirates Sign Top Prospects Despite Recruiting Problems

By The Associated Press
East Carolina football coach Ed Emory says that despite two major problems, his Pirates will recruit their fair share of high school athletes.

Emory says one problem is the shadow of Atlantic Coast Conference football and the other problem is ACC basketball.

"When does the ACC play basketball? In December, January and February," Emory said. "That's the height of recruiting season."

"Suppose we have a kid scheduled to visit our place, but at the last minute N.C. State calls him up and says 'Hey, we play Virginia tonight. You want to come over and see Ralph (Sampson)?' What do you think that kid is going to do?"

Despite the problems and the loss of six of eight assistants during the prime recruiting season, Emory has put together an impressive list of recruits.

East Carolina signed four of the state's top 25 players — more than any ACC school except North Carolina, which got nine. The Pirates also were successful in getting top players from South Carolina, Virginia and New York as well as some six junior college prospects.

"If we made a mistake on some of these guys, then a lot of other schools did, too, because we signed a couple of people that everybody wanted," Emory said.

Emory's coaching days at Clemson, Wake Forest and Georgia Tech have given him a reputation as a persistent recruiter. His approach is quite simple.

"Persistence has got to be the No. 1 thing in a recruiter," Emory said. "You have to overcome (a recruit's) resistance with your persistence. You've got to knock on a bunch of doors. A lot of those are shut but you've got to keep trying to get them open."

That philosophy was hard to practice after the six assistants left. Two assistants took jobs in the United States Football League, while another took a job at Temple. Emory had to fill the recruiting holes himself, grabbing players like running back Terry Paige of Whiteville, tight end John Williamson of Laurinburg and linebacker Vinson Smith of Statesville.

Paige was considered the best running back in North Carolina, while Smith's name appeared on many all-America lists.

Also helping East Carolina's recruiting was the turmoil at N.C. State and Clemson. A Wolfpack coaching change and the massive Tiger probation helped enhance Emory's standing in eastern North Carolina.

Another problem has nothing to do with nearby schools. East Carolina needs money to recruit and with an average home attendance of 21,792 in a 35,000-seat arena, money is hard to come by.

"I have an assistant whom I send to the New York area the entire month of May to check out players," Emory said. "But he won't be staying at the Marriott. He'll be staying with some East Carolina supporters who live up there."

YOGI SAYS

NEW YORK (AP) — Add this to the sayings of Yogi Berra, a member of the baseball Hall of Fame and currently a New York Yankee coach:

"I never blamed myself when I wasn't hitting. I just blamed the bat. If it kept up, I changed the bat."

"After all, if I knew it wasn't my fault that I wasn't hitting, how could I get mad at myself?"

Home Run 'Ices Cake'

By The Associated Press

Wayne Gross hit a home run in the top of the ninth inning to give the Oakland A's a 7-0 lead over the Minnesota Twins. What appeared to be just icing on the cake turned out to be the ingredient the A's needed to hold off a six-run rally in the bottom of the ninth that included four home runs.

"They sure did a job on that 7-0 lead," said catcher Bob Kearney, whose three-run homer off Minnesota's Brad Havens in the second inning started the scoring. "I haven't seen that in a long time, if ever. What are those guys eating over there?"

In other American League games, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 in 11 innings, the Texas Rangers downed the Cleveland Indians 3-1 and the New York Yankees blanked the Detroit Tigers 7-0. Chicago and Baltimore were rained out, while Boston, California, Kansas City and Seattle were not scheduled.

Oakland's Mike Norris and Matt Keough blanked the Twins on five hits until the ninth, when Dave Beard took over and was greeted by consecutive home runs by pinch hitter Dave Engle and Bobby Mitchell. Gary Gaetti hit a two-run, two-out shot with John Castino aboard via a walk and, after Beard walked Tom Brunansky, pinch hitter Mickey Hatcher greeted Tom Burgmeier with the fourth home run of the inning to make it 7-6. Lenny Faedo singled, but Engle, batting for the second time in the inning, struck out to end the game.

It was the 27th time in major league history a team hit four home runs in one inning — including four outbursts of five homers in an inning — and the first time any AL team has done it in the ninth. The two pinch-hit homers tied a single-game major league record and it was the eighth time the feat was accomplished in the same inning.

"I can't remember any club hitting four home runs in the bottom of ninth," said Oakland Manager Steve Boros. "Maybe I pushed it out of my mind. That's what I'm going to try and do with this one."

"I've never seen it in a big league game," added Twins Manager Billy Gardner.

Blue Jays 2, Brewers 1

Barry Bonnell scored the winning run from third base when Milwaukee catcher Ted Simmons dropped a throw at the plate in the 11th inning as Toronto won for the eighth time in 10 games and moved into a second-place tie with Boston in the AL East, one-half game behind Baltimore. Dave Stieb, 7-2, became the first seven-game winner in the majors by scattering nine hits through 10 innings and Randy Moffitt pitched the 11th for his fourth save.

Loser Bob McClure, 1-6, carried a five-hitter into the Toronto 11th when Bonnell blooped a double to short center with one out. An intentional walk to Cliff Johnson and a walk to Jesse Barfield loaded the bases. Mickey Klutts hit a grounder to shortstop Robin Yount in a drawn-in infield, but Simmons' dropped Yount's throw to the plate as Bonnell scored the winning run.

The Blue Jays took a 1-0 lead with an unearned run in the fourth. After a single by Bonnell, Barfield was safe when McClure fumbled his slow roller for an error. Klutts grounded to third baseman Paul Molitor, who stepped on the bag to force Bonnell but threw past first base for another error as Barfield scored.

Miami, Wichita St. Top At-Large Bids

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Defending champion Miami, Fla., and 1982 runner-up Wichita State were among six at-large teams selected Monday for the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship.

Miami will take a 56-17 record into the 37th annual tournament, while Wichita State is 53-13.

Also selected at-large by the NCAA Division I Baseball Committee were Pan American, 57-15; South Carolina, 33-11; Tulane, 44-15; and Arizona State, 39-21.

The committee also named four regional hosts: Florida State, 54-16-1 and the Metro Conference champion, in the South; North Carolina, 41-8 and the Atlantic Coast winner, in the East; Stanford, 37-15 and the Pacific 10 South winner, in the West I; and Arizona State in the West II.

Maine will host the Northeast regional if it wins the ECAC No. 1 automatic berth. East Coast champion Delaware, 33-13, will be the host if Maine does not win.

Michigan will host the Midwest regional if it clinches the Big 10 title next weekend.

Other regional hosts and the remaining six at-large berths will be determined at a later date along with regional pairings.

Automatic qualifiers already decided are: ECAC No. 2, New York Tech, 24-8; ECAC No. 3, William and Mary, 24-14; Missouri Valley, Indiana State, 37-12-1; Ohio Valley, Morehead State, 26-15; Southern, Citadel, 32-8; Southwestern, Grambling, 30-10; Sun Belt, South Alabama, 40-24; and Atlantic 10, Temple, 27-8.

Regional play must begin by May 27. The College World Series will feature the eight regional champions June 3-12 in Omaha, Neb.

Chargers Host Power Lifting

LITTLEFIELD — The inaugural Ayden-Grifton Invitational Power Lifting Championships will be held at 5 p.m. on Wednesday at the high school.

Teams participating will be North Pitt, Farmville Central and Ayden-Grifton.

Competitors will participate in the bench press and dead lift. Awards will be made in first through third in six weight classes.

The Brewers tied it in their half of the fourth. Simmons doubled with two out and walks to Ben Oglivie and Gorman Thomas loaded the bases. Roy Howell singled to score Simmons, but left fielder Bonnell threw out Oglivie at the plate.

"I don't feel like I pitched that well," said Stieb, who walked eight batters, two intentionally. "I was rushing my fastball, using my legs too much instead of my body, and I didn't feel like I had good rhythm. But from the fourth inning on I was throwing better."

Rangers 3, Indians 1

Larry Parrish hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning following Buddy Bell's double and Rick Honeycutt handcuffed Cleveland on five hits as Texas tied idle California for the lead in the AL West. Honeycutt, 5-2, lowered his earned run average to 1.33. He recorded 14 ground ball outs and didn't allow a fly ball out of the infield for 7 2/3 innings as he matched his 1982 victory total.

Yankees 7, Tigers 0

Ron Guidry pitched a three-hitter and Ken Griffey collected three hits and scored three times. Griffey singled off Dan Petry with one out in the first inning and scored when left fielder Larry Herndon lost Steve Kemp's drive in the lights for a two-base error. He tripled in the third and scored on Dave Winfield's grounder and the Yankees made it 3-0 on four walks in the sixth. Steve Kemp's two-run triple highlighted a four-run ninth.

Rampant Golfers, Hobgood Qualify

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's golfers, along with Farmville Central's Gary Hobgood, qualified yesterday for the State High School Golf Tournament, to be held next week in Chapel Hill.

The Rampants finished in a tie for second place in the sectionals, held at Rock Creek Country Club in Jacksonville, while Hobgood finished tied for second in the individual standings. The top two teams and top three individuals from other teams qualify for the state.

Jacksonville won the team championship, finishing the day with a 305 total. Rose and Hayelock finished tied for second with 328 totals. Eastern Wayne was fourth with a 329, followed by Farmville Central at 332. East Bladen was sixth at 337 and Hoggard seventh at 349.

Jacksonville's Steven West won the individual title with a two-under par 70, while Rose's Craig Davies, Hobgood and Topsail Island's John Freeman were tied for second with two-over 74's. Kevin Marshburn of Richlands was fifth with a 75.

Since West and Davies qualified with their teams, Hobgood, Freeman and Marshburn qualified as individuals.

Other Rose scorers included John Jordan with a 79, Chris Evans with an 87 and Jordy Smith with an 88.

Farmville's other individuals, besides Hobgood, included Alan Wooten, 84; Mel Williams, 85, and Scott Lewis, 89.

Ayden-Grifton's Marc Davis had an 89, while Warren Agee no-carded.

The state tournament will be held next Monday and Tuesday at Chapel Hill.

ACC Resumes Spring Meeting

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — After taking Monday off, Atlantic Coast Conference faculty representatives and athletic directors were to resume private meetings today.

The agenda is expected to include voting on rule recommendations made by the basketball coaches and the possible relocation of the league's baseball tournament from Chapel Hill to Durham.

Those results were to be announced at a public business meeting Wednesday.

Gaining Yards
New Jersey Generals' running back Herschel Walker runs through a couple of Michigan Panther defenders for an eight-yard gain in first half USFL action Monday night at the Pontiac Silverdome. (AP Laserphoto)

Herschel Ran, But Lacy Ran Better For Panthers

By The Associated Press
New Jersey's Herschel Walker and a five-game winning streak by the Michigan Panthers brought out the crowds at the Pontiac Silverdome.
They got what they wanted — a good show by Walker ... and a better show by their own Ken Lacy.
"I think Lacy got tired of hearing that 'Come see (Herschel) Walker run' stuff," Michigan Coach Jim Stanley said following Monday night's 31-24 victory over the Generals in one of three United States Football League games. "I think he wanted them to come see Lacy run."

While Walker ran for 87 yards — and caught passes for 105 more — it was Lacy who generally won the hearts of the 32,862 Panther fans, chalking up 156 yards and a touchdown as Michigan came back from a 17-3 halftime deficit with an explosive third quarter.
"I thought we showed some real class and poise, coming back the way we did," said Stanley.
In the other USFL games, the Boston Breakers beat the Denver Gold 17-9 and the Oakland Invaders tripped the Washington Redskins 34-27. John Williams also made the crowd sit up and take notice with a fine second-half performance, scoring two of the three TDs in the Panthers' rally to help them extend their current winning streak to six.

"It was very intense out there in the third quarter," said Williams, who finished with 79 yards on 16 carries. "I had tears in my eyes when I was out there. It just awed me that our winning streak was on the line and we were battling back. We've got a great bunch of guys here."
Walker, meanwhile, moved back into the USFL rushing lead with 1,138 yards, 17 ahead of Philadelphia's Kelvin Bryant. Walker also caught three passes for 105 yards.

Youth Baseball

Babe Ruth League
Everette's 14
Coca-Cola 9
Everette's Pest Control outlasted Coca-Cola last night, 14-9, in the Babe Ruth League. It was the first win of the year for Everette's, while Coke was going down to its second defeat.
Coke started the scoring with four runs in the first inning, but Everette's came back with four of its own in the bottom of the frame. Coke added a fifth run in the second, but Everette's scored five times in the second to take a 9-5 edge.
Coke rallied for two in the third and got another in the fourth to close to 9-8 before Everette's locked it up with three in the fifth.
Lee Lewis led off the fifth, reaching on an error. Alex Smith was hit by a pitch and the two runners each stole up a base, then stole again, with Lewis scoring. With one out, Curtis Perkins singled in Smith, but was thrown out when Derek Leyden reached on a fielder's choice. Leyden advanced on a balk and scored on George Saad's single for a 12-8 edge.
Everette's added two more in the sixth, while Coke got one in the seventh.
Robbie Erhmann led the Everette's hitting with three, while Tom Rosche, Perkins and Saad each had two hits. No one had more than one for Coke.

Little League
Union Carbide 16
Jaycees 7
Union Carbide rolled to a 16-7 victory over the Jaycees yesterday in the North State Little League.
The Jaycees pushed over three runs in the top of the first, then added three more in the second for a 6-0 lead.
Union Carbide came back to score three times in the second frame, then exploded for nine in the third to put the game away.
Paul Powers led off the big third with a solo homer run and Jeff Bennett followed with another. Martin Anderson walked and Abram Lang singled, both moving up on an error. Andra Hopkins was hit by a pitch, loading the bases, and a single by Brian Poust brought in both Anderson and Lang. Bill Turcotte reached on a fielder's choice that re-loaded the bases, and Mike Fletcher singled in Hopkins and Poust. Jonathan Powers reached on a two-base error, scoring Turcotte, and Paul Powers sacrificed in Fletcher. Bennett then grounded out, scoring Jonathan Powers with the final run of the frame.

Union Carbide added three more in the fourth and one in the fifth. Turcotte hit a three-run homer in the fourth. The other Jaycee run came in the fifth.
Turcotte led the UC hitting with three, while Fletcher, Lang and Poust each had two. Carlester Crumpler and Bobby Threewits each had two hits for the Jaycees.

Wellcome 10
Pepsi-Cola 6
Wellcome scored in every inning but one as it rolled to a 10-6 Tar Heel Little League victory over Pepsi-Cola yesterday.
Wellcome pushed over three runs in the top of the first to take the lead, then added two more in the second. Pepsi rallied for five runs in the bottom of the inning and tied it at 5-5, and both teams added a run in the third for a 6-6 deadlock.
It was the last time, however, as Wellcome shut the door on Pepsi the rest of the way.
Wellcome then pushed ahead for good in the fourth, scoring once. Chris Brown reached on a fielder's choice as did Adam Nobles. A wild pitch moved Brown to third and he scored on an error on the play.
Wellcome picked up three more in the sixth for insurance.
Rip Perkins, Blake Stallings and Judd Crumpler each had two hits for Wellcome. Bill Blizzard and Shawn Lyles picked up a pair each for Pepsi.

Strike Leader Emslie Is Returned To Umpiring

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Emslie, who led minor-league umpires supporting the major-league umpires' strike in 1979 and was twice fired by the International League, will be back in uniform Friday night.
And it is expected that he'll get a major-league tryout umpiring in spring training.
Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, initiated the rehiring of Emslie, the International League Umpire of the Year each of the past four seasons, with several phone calls last week to IL President Harold Cooper in Columbus, Ohio.
As a result of Cooper's action last Friday, the Major League Umpires Association will withdraw an unfair labor practice complaint filed with the National Labor Relations Board charging the American and National leagues with discrimination against Emslie, said Richie Phillips, chief counsel to the union. Phillips said he expected the complaint would be withdrawn by Wednesday.
"There has been a great deal of hostility between the umpires' association and the two major league presidents over the fact that Bill Emslie has been discriminated against," Phillips said. "There have been other factors, too, but this is the most significant one."
"What we have now is a situation where the major leagues have sent a signal to our association showing their willingness to retreat from their prior course of action and we have responded. This should signal a wind-down in hostilities."

Emslie was fired after the 1981 season, was rehired as part of the collective bargaining agreement reached 13 months ago between the union and the majors, then was fired again after the 1982 season. His salary and expenses last season were paid by the major leagues.
Phillips said Emslie was not being given a fair chance to prove himself capable of managing in the majors because of his outspoken support of the striking big-league umpires. "I think he has a great chance to become a major-league umpire if he's dealt with fairly," said Phillips.
MacPhail said the AL and NL had no part in the dismissals of Emslie. "It's not our responsibility who the International League hires and fires," he said.
"The last time an agreement was made (between the umpires and the major leagues after the 1981 season) we asked the International League to rehire him for 1982 and the American and National leagues paid his salary for that year only. We weren't going to do it any longer. Based on that, the International League let him go."

MacPhail also said the major leagues asked the IL to rehire Emslie without asking the umpires' association to drop its NLRB charges.
Cooper said he dismissed Emslie "because of a policy I've had; if the major leagues are not interested in my umpires, then I release them. I keep them four or five years. I don't know anything about the strike. The strike had nothing to do with his release. I'll keep him around as long as the major leagues are interested."
MacPhail, when asked whether Emslie could eventually reach the major leagues, said, "Sure, he has a chance. We have no prejudices against Bill Emslie." And when asked why Emslie hadn't been brought up in view of his four-time selection as IL Umpire of the Year by players, managers and general managers, MacPhail responded: "We scout our own umpires, just as clubs scout players. Different people have different opinions."

Lakers Must Be Taken Seriously

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Despite being the National Basketball Association's defending champions and having the league's second-best record during the 1982-83 regular season, the Los Angeles Lakers have been rather lightly regarded in this year's playoffs.
But even their detractors must be taking the Lakers seriously now.
Los Angeles, coming off two consecutive victories over the Spurs in San Antonio, can earn a berth in the NBA final with another triumph Wednesday night at the Forum. The Lakers lead the best-of-seven Western Conference series against the Spurs 3-1.
Laker guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson Earvin has predicted that the Lakers will need just one more game to put San Antonio away.
"They're going to be tough, but we'll take them Wednesday night," he said. "We're a great team. We keep proving that."
The Lakers, wounded by injuries to reserve front-liners James Worthy and Bob McAdoo late in the regular season, seem to be gaining momentum as the playoffs progress. After losing the second game of the series to San Antonio at the Forum, they bounced back with the two impressive victories on the road.
And they've won three games in the series in a variety of ways — excellent play by center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the outside shooting of Norm Nixon, the scoring, rebounding and assists by Johnson, and some fine defensive work by practically the entire team.
Another bright spot has been the return of McAdoo, who was a question mark heading into the playoffs because of a lingering toe injury. He has played well during the series, including a 14-point performance in last Sunday's 129-121 victory.
So, although rookie Worthy is out with a broken leg, the Lakers again have the two reserves who played a key role in their drive to the NBA crown last year — McAdoo and Michael Cooper.
Too, the Lakers are feeling confident.
"We are the defending league champions and we come to play every night," said Johnson.
"I know we can take them," Abdul-Jabbar said of Game 5 against the Spurs. "They'll come ready, but we'll try to win it quick."

Farmville Winners
Joe Jenkins and Billy Clark III took first place in the Farmville Golf and Country Club's Member-Guest Tournament this past weekend. The two tied with Johnny Briley and Jim Hillard after 36 holes and won on the fourth hole of a sudden-death playoff. From left to right are Briley, Hillard, Clark and Jenkins.

Strawberry Hits Homer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Darryl Strawberry is batting only .138, but the New York Mets think he's anything but a below-average prospect.
The 21-year-old rookie outfielder belted his first major league home run, a two-run shot, as the New York Mets blasted the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-4 Monday night before only 1,970, the smallest crowd in Three Rivers Stadium history. The only other National League game Monday, San Francisco at Philadelphia, was rained out and rescheduled for Sept. 1.
Another New York rookie, 19-year-old shortstop Jose Oquendo, had two hits and drove in three runs. That brought a smile to the face of Mets Manager George Bamberger, who hasn't had much to smile about this season.
"I can't say enough about the way these kids are playing," Bamberger said, referring to Oquendo, Strawberry and second baseman Brian Giles. "They're doing a great job. When the big boys (George Foster and Dave Kingman) start hitting some home runs, which they haven't been doing, we'll be all right."
Strawberry was just 1-for-5, but his fifth-inning homer off rookie Lee Tunnell rocketed well over the 375-foot sign in left-center field.

"What you guys say him do, he's going to do a lot of," Bamberger said of Strawberry, who was recalled from Tidewater of the International League only a few weeks ago. "He's really swinging the bat good. He looks like he's ready to make his move. He's putting it together."
Strawberry said that he's been hitting the ball well since he's been in the major leagues, "but I've been hitting it right at people. I've been facing good pitching and it's been tough on me. But I'm starting to get more aware of things. I wasn't doing that before and if I keep it up, I know I'm going to have success."
Another rookie having success is Oquendo, the first player in Mets' history to be born after the club was formed in 1962. A switch-hitter in the minors, Oquendo has been batting almost strictly right-handed in the major leagues and has driven in five runs in his last two games.

"If I keep hitting like this, I'm going to forget about batting left-handed," Oquendo said.
The Pirates' Jim Bibby, 1-4, would just as soon forget about his last two starts, when he hasn't lasted past the second inning. Bibby, 38, is attempting a comeback from a shoulder injury that forced him to miss the 1982 season.
"He has his velocity," Tanner said. "Even the umpire (Dick Stello) said he hasn't seen Bibby throw the ball as hard. He's just not getting the ball down."
The Mets, who split the four-game series with the Pirates, knocked Bibby out of the game with a four-run second inning that included a two-run single by winning pitcher Ed Lynch, 2-1.

New York built the lead to 7-1 in the fifth and added four more runs in the sixth on a two-run single by Oquendo and a two-run double by Hubie Brooks, who drove in three runs.
The crowd was the smallest since Three Rivers opened in 1970, and broke the previous low of 2,348 for a Pirates-St. Louis Cardinals game on Oct. 3, 1981.

Islanders Go For Final Win Tonight

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Bourne would like it but he isn't placing any special emphasis on it. Neither is Billy Smith, though he'd certainly love to display it in his home.

Duane Sutter hasn't even considered the possibility, Denis Potvin and Ken Morrow are campaigning for each other and Mike Bossy, Bryan

Trottier and Butch Goring already have one apiece — not that they'd be disinterested in another, mind you.

What all these New York Islanders covet — aside from a fourth consecutive Stanley Cup, of course — is the Conn Smythe Trophy, awarded annually to the Most Valuable Player of the National Hockey League playoffs.

The past three springs, as the Islanders stormed to the championship, one of them won the Smythe. Now they start on the threshold of Cup No. 4, holding a 3-0 lead over the Edmonton Oilers heading into tonight's fourth — and possibly last — game. Capturing a fourth consecutive Stanley Cup would equal the run of the 1976-79 Montreal

Canadiens and would be one short of Montreal's 1956-60 string.

There are perhaps a dozen Islander candidates for the playoff MVP, which Trottier won in 1980, Goring in '81 and Bossy last year.

"I think every kid in Canada dreams about winning the Cup and being the hero," said Bourne, the speedy left wing who leads the Islanders in scoring in these playoffs. Bourne scored the decisive goal in the last two games of the finals. "Everyone has been talking to me about the Smythe and, sure, it'd be great to win it."

"But when I look around in this locker room, I look at Smitty, who has been the difference for us. I look at Boss, who scored the winning goal against Boston in every game (of the Wales Conference championship series). I look at all the other guys. There are so many possibilities and every one is deserving."

Smith has backstopped the Islanders to the top of the hockey world and has been magnificent in the finals. He earned more headlines in Edmonton for his slashes on Glenn Anderson and Wayne Gretzky than for his goaltending acrobatics. But, regardless of his style, he must rate as one of the favorites in the Smythe race.

"I would like to win it," Smith said of the Smythe. "That trophy is up in the air. But down inside I really don't care as long as we win the Cup. All I really want is the Cup."

Potvin and Morrow have been the stars of a stellar defense which has thrown the vaunted Oilers' attack into neutral and held the highest scoring team in NHL history (424 regular-season goals, a record) to four goals in three games.

"I think the way Ken has played is an indication of the way our defense has played," said Potvin, who has recaptured the form that made him the dominant defenseman in the game in the late 1970s. "He is a classic defensive defenseman but he once in a while he pinches in and he knows what to do with the puck. He's scored some very big goals for us and has stopped the other team so many times."

Morrow, who has gone from an Olympic gold medal with the 1980 United States team at Lake Placid to the threshold of a fourth straight Stanley Cup, lauded the play of Potvin.

"Denis has been everywhere, on defense in our zone and on offense in the Oilers' zone," said Morrow. "He's playing as well as I've ever seen."

And the Islanders are performing at peak efficiency following a disappointing regular season. They're playing better in these finals than anyone imagined they could against as dangerous and hot a team as the Oilers were entering the series.

"At crucial moments, we haven't been able to pass by the little hurdles," said Oilers

Coach Glen Sather. "We just haven't been able to climb them."

They now face the biggest obstacle of all: attempting to become only the third NHL team (Toronto vs. Detroit in 1942 and the Islanders against Pittsburgh in 1975) to overcome a 0-3 deficit.

"This hockey team has never quit. The Islanders will have to earn it. We're not giving them a thing."

Odds Against Bucks In Eastern NBA Series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks are really bucking the odds.

The Bucks trail the Philadelphia 76ers 3-1 going into the fifth game of their best-of-seven National Basketball Association Eastern Conference playoff final.

The fifth game is here Wednesday night, with Game 6, if necessary, in Milwaukee Friday and Game 7, with the same proviso, in Philadelphia Sunday.

No team in NBA history has ever come back from a 3-0 deficit — the spot the Bucks were in before their homecourt victory Sunday — to take a best-of-seven series. Only four teams ever have been able to wipe out 3-1 deficits, and only five rallied to win after falling behind 2-0.

Nobody realizes the magnitude of the effort facing Milwaukee better than Coach Don Nelson.

"We're still in a big hole," Nelson said in the glow of Sunday's triumph. "We can't fool anybody about that."

Rookie Paul Pressey suggests the door isn't yet shut on Milwaukee, "but we're going to have to play over our heads to push it all the way open."

With a victory Wednesday night, the Sixers would get into the championship round for the fourth time in seven years.

And there's an extra incentive, said General Manager Pat Williams, because "we don't want to go back to Milwaukee Friday and then have to hustle back to probably open the final round Sunday."

"That would be a mess," Williams said.

"We don't want to go out there (Milwaukee) for Game 6. It isn't a pleasant thought."

The Eastern winner faces the survivor of the Western final between the San Antonio Spurs and Los Angeles Lakers. The Lakers lead 3-1 with the fifth game at home Wednesday night.

The Sixers had won seven straight, including a semifinal sweep over the New York Knicks, before Sunday's loss, and Williams was disappointed that they didn't make it eight straight.

"The game (Sunday) was there to be had. The Bucks were flat," Williams said. "All the talk conceded it to the Sixers. From the owner to the players they said we were better."

Sixers' Coach Billy chose to credit the Bucks.

"They beat us the way we beat them. Now, we have to get ready to end it Wednesday," he said.

There also was a lot written and spoken about the quick disappearing act the Philadelphia players made after Sunday's game.

Only two players, Clint Richardson and Maurice Cheeks, were in the locker room when the media entered.

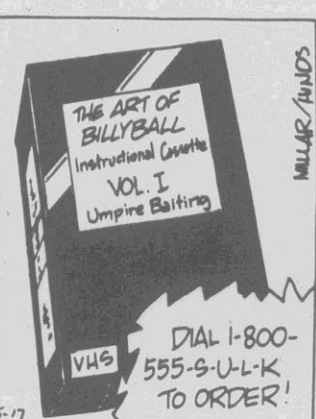

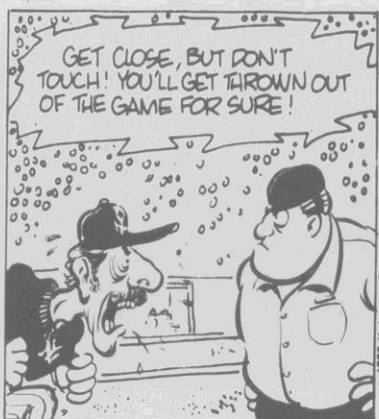

Williams tried to place that in prospective.

"It was a unique situation. Our guys have answered questions forever. But they don't dress in the arena at Milwaukee. They come in warmup suits and go across the street to the hotel to shower and dress."

"I think they waited 10 minutes in their wet suits (uniforms) and then left. It won't happen again."

Says Refs Keyed Titles

(AP) — Referees in the Atlantic Coast Conference have forsaken literal interpretation of the rules for an interpretation that takes into account the spirit of the rule.

That style, says ACC supervisor of officials Fred Barakat, has led to two national basketball championships in two years.

Barakat, 43, said the success achieved in his two years as supervisor is the result of being more consistent in the application of the rules. He constantly updates his officials on rule interpretation and emphasis, something he says had previously hurt ACC teams in post-season play where rules interpretation was more liberal.

"We've tried to interpret rules realistically, rather than literally," he said. "ACC officials had a reputation for taking the rules literally. Even slight contact by a hand on a wrist was a foul because that's what the rules said. Now, they look at the spirit and intent of the contact — what, if any, advantage was gained. In the spirit of that, we had two national championships in two years."

And, Barakat says the new approach is popular among coaches.

"That's the way they want it," he said. "Coaches will accept anything as long as they (the referees) do it every time."

As a basketball coach for 20 years, Barakat occasionally yelled at referees. But at this week's ACC meeting, he's shouting their praises.

"We have perhaps the best group of officials in the United States," said Barakat, who has supervised officials for the past two years. And he has statistics to prove his point.

His evidence includes such facts as:

— Fourteen of the 43-member staff earned National Collegiate Athletic Association Tournament appearances this year.

— Of the two three-man crews and one alternate chosen for the national finals, three were regular ACC officials and two others worked many conference games.

— The three men chosen to work the final game — The ACC's Joe Forte, Paul Housman and Hank Nichols — became the first crew to work a title game in which a team from the same conference participated.

"We just had an unbelievable year," Barakat said. "Everyone said the experimentation (with the rules) was going to hurt, but it helped us. I think. They have to have the ability to adjust and change with the game."

ACC officials are under constant scrutiny by league officials. If performance wanes, so will their association with the league.

"We'll be dropping approximately 10 officials this year," Barakat said. "Some because of their performance this year or over a period of years, some because they didn't show the necessary potential."

ACC officials are under constant scrutiny by league officials. If performance wanes, so will their association with the league.

"We could go as high as $300 per game next year, plus the per diem for trips over 200 miles could go from $60 to $78," Barakat said.

for a physical reason or just because they have poor judgment."

In his first year, 15 officials got the axe and 12 new people were added to the staff.

Although ACC officials were once the nation's highest paid among colleges, they slipped last year when the Big 10 Conference upped its rate to $300 per game compared to the ACC's $200 rate.

"We could go as high as $300 per game next year, plus the per diem for trips over 200 miles could go from $60 to $78," Barakat said.

Some players at the bridge club never learn. No matter how many times Trump Coup Tommy brings home seemingly impossible contracts when trumps break badly, they insist on doubling him every time they hold a trump stack. They can't fathom why, at moments of great adversity, Tommy becomes a technical genius. This was the latest example.

For once, Tommy's bidding was heartily endorsed by everyone who was kibitzing. Those who could see the West hand winced noticeably when that worthy elected to double on the strength of his five trumps to the king. They felt that a concession of the contract would have been better advised.

Tommy needed no clue other than the double to find the winning line. When dummy came down, he decided that West had to have all five missing trumps for his double. The play became a matter of routine.

Tommy won the first trick in dummy and immediately ruffed a club. He crossed to the king of spades and ruffed another club. There followed the ace-king of diamonds and the ace of spades, on which dummy's fourth club was discarded. West was now down to five trumps and the queen of clubs.

Declarer led a spade, and West sluffed his club, still confident that he was going to score two trump tricks. He soon found out differently. Tommy ruffed a spade in dummy and ruffed a club with the ace of hearts as West undertrumped helplessly and led another spade.

West realized that he could not afford to ruff high, so he trumped with the five. Dummy overruffed with the six. The last club was led, and declarer ruffed with the jack. West overruffed with the king, but he was trapped. His last two cards were the 9-7 of trumps, while dummy sat over him with the Q-8. No matter which trump he chose to return, the remaining tricks were won on the table, and the slam was home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Pay close attention to details today. Work through problems with tact. Attack big projects this afternoon. Continue with important project that means much to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can make those creative ideas of yours work out well. Don't commit yourself to heavy expenditures.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Stop feeling you're being slighted and carry through with home matters agreeably. The future looks brighter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Forget that secret anxiety and contact those in business who can assist you. Get approval of those in authority.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't listen to a friend's advice on money matters. If you must discuss something, do so with family.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have a personal wish that someone in authority can interfere with, so avoid this person for now. Socialize tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some dealings with a new contact can work out well. Confide in one who admires you and gain any assistance you might need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A close tie could deter your progress, so rely more on your friends at this time. Retire early; you need your rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You find a partner will not agree to a plan for your advancement made by an advisor. Socialize this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't let annoying little jobs keep you from accomplishing a good deal in the outside world. Heed friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't let some desire for amusement get in the way of planning a new campaign for success. Study your environment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your deals with others and find ways of becoming more successful in them. Make loved one happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to suggestions given by the influential. Your surroundings are not right, so get busy and change them.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will handle big projects very well and the influential will soon notice this amazing ability and provide backing. Do not stifle self-expression. This child should have the finest education. Don't neglect ethical training.

EMERYVILLE, Calif. (AP) — "Professor" Bill Steed always champions the underfrog. That's why he started Croaker College more than 10 years ago.

Steed, who dubbed himself a prof while running a learn-while-you-sleep business, took on the task of training frogs to jump when he took his sleep learning gear along to Calaveras County one year for the annual frog jumping contest, a throwback to Mark Twain's tale, "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County."

"I could motivate people. Why not motivate frogs, too?" the 65-year-old frog trainer asked.

A 6-week course at Croaker

College, located in Emeryville, Calif., will set you back $150. But for that princely sum, Steed says, your greenish charge gets a room, all the flies it can eat, plus calisthenics, massage, swimming and 240 hours of psychological training, much of it using the sleep learning technique.

The college, which issues a diploma and a WJ — will jump — degree, has trained such amphibious athletes as Dolly Do, belonging to Dolly Parton; Sue, Johnny Cash's frog; Tonight, who belonged to Johnny Carson; and Jelly Bean, President Reagan's frog.

Steed's first big victory came when he guided Arkie, the frog of then-Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, to first place at Angels Camp in 1970.

And now he's expanding to toads.

"Hey, they're even lower than frogs," he chuckled. "A

'Cats' Leads The Pack In Tony Nominations

has Tony nominations for the book and lyrics of one — "Cats," the British-made hit musical that leads the pack in Tony nominations for the 1982-83 season.

Based on Eliot's cat poetry and other writings, all set to Andrew Lloyd Webber's music, "Cats" got 11 nominations for Broadway's top honor when all the candidates were announced Monday.

Its closest competitor, with nine nominations: "My One and Only," a lighthearted top-hat musical wrapped around old George Gershwin standards. However, that show isn't in the running in the best-score category. Its music, heard on Broadway years ago in other shows, was ruled ineligible.

As in the last two seasons, England also continued to fare well on Broadway in drama, with the Royal Shakespeare Company's Edwardian version of "All's Well That Ends Well" getting the most nominations for a play — seven.

David Hare's "Plenty," another British import, got four, as did a pair of Yank entries, Marsha Norman's somber, Pulitzer Prize-winning "night, Mother," and Neil Simon's boyhood-memories comedy, "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

But the prolific Simon got blanked in the best-play competition. The nominations in that category went to "Plenty," "Mother," "Lanford Wilson's "Angels Fall" and Harvey Fierstein's "Torch Song Trilogy."

In the best-musical category, the nominees were "Cats," "My One and Only," "Merlin," a musical with magic, and "Blues in the Night," a revue that folded after a short run early in the season.

The best-revival nominees: "All's Well," "A View From the Bridge," "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial" and "On Your Toes."

It wasn't much of a season for new musicals. The nominees in various categories included two fast flops, each sharply panned — "A Doll's Life" and "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

Nor was it a much of a season, save at the box office, for superstar ex-mates Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. Their highly publicized, critically booed "Private Lives" revival didn't get one nomination.

But three-time Tony awardee Tommy Tune, and England's Nunn, who won a Tony last season as co-director of "Nicholas Nickleby," were all smiles.

Tune got three nominations for his performing in, and (with Thommie Walsh) co-direction and co-choreography of "My One and Only" — which recently triumphed on Broadway after earlier tryout torment in Boston.

And Nunn was twice nominated — as director of "Cats" and of "All's Well That Ends Well."

Besides Tune, his directorial rivals for Tony honors in the musical field are Michael Kahn of "Show Boat" and Ivan Reitman of "Merlin." In dramatic direction, the other contenders are Marshall W. Mason of "Angels Fall" and Gene Saks of "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

Double nominations for acting occurred in two plays — Kathy Bates and Anne Pitoniak as daughter and mother in "night, Mother," and Matthew Broderick and Zeljko Ivanek as brothers in "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

Miss Bates and Miss Pitoniak were nominated in the category of best-actress, drama, along with with Kate Nelligan of "Plenty" and two-time Tony winner Jessica Tandy of "Foxfire." The male competitors: Jeffrey De Munn of "K-2," Harvey Fierstein of "Torch Song Trilogy," Edward Herrmann of "Plenty" and Tony Lo Bianco of the revival of Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge."

Broderick and Ivanek will compete for supporting-actor Tonys with George N. Martin of "Plenty" and Stephen Moore of "All's Well." The supporting-actress competitors are Elizabeth Franz of "Memoirs," Roxanne Hart of "Passion," Judith Ivey of "Steaming" and Margaret Tyzack of "All's Well."

In the musical field, Tune is up for best-actor honors, as is Michael V. Smart of the "Porgy and Bess" revival, George Hearn of "A Doll's Life" and Al Green of "Your Arms Too Short to Box With God," a gospel-show revival.

The best-actress, musical, contenders: Russian ballerina Natalia Makarova,

"On Your Toes," Lonette McKee; "Show Boat," Chita Rivera, "Merlin," and Twigg, the former English model and now co-star of "My One and Only."

The last show also led to a featured-actor nomination for veteran tap-dancer Charles "Honi" Coles. His competition: Lara Teeter of "On Your Toes" and Harry Groener and Stephen Hanan, both of "Cats."

Another "Cats" player, Betty Buckley, got a featured-actress nomination, as did Karla Burns of "Show Boat," Christine Andreas of "On Your Toes" and Denny

Dillon of "My One and Only."

The nominations were made Monday by a 14-member panel of critics and others chosen by the New York League of Theatres and Producers. The panelists had to make four choices in each of 19 categories.

Twenty-four plays and 11 musicals were eligible this season, with Sunday the last day of eligibility. The nominations now will be mailed to about 660 theater professionals and critics for final voting.

The results will be announced Sunday, June 5, during CBS' live telecast of the 37th annual Tony awards show.

The award is named for the late Antoinette Perry, a leading force in the American Theatre Wing in World War II.

Andy Griffith Is Hospitalized

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actor Andy Griffith has been hospitalized with a viral infection of the nerves, but is in good condition, a St. Joseph Medical Center spokeswoman said Monday.

Griffith, 56, entered the hospital on Saturday and expects to remain there "for a few more days," said spokeswoman Rhoda Weiss.

"He's in good condition," she said.

The North Carolina native then will rest at his Los Angeles home, she said.

Ms. Weiss said Griffith was hospitalized "for Guillain-Barre syndrome. It's a viral infection of the nerves."

Medical dictionaries say the disease causes temporary paralysis that starts at the feet and moves upward through the rest of the body.

The disease forced Griffith to bow out of the filming of the CBS miniseries "Chiefs," co-starring Charlton Heston and scheduled to begin production next week in South Carolina, she said.

ACTOR ON THE RUN — Actor Al Pacino runs down a street on Miami Beach during filming for the movie "Scarface". In the movie, Pacino plays the role of a Mariel refugee who becomes a major drug dealer after coming to Miami from Cuba. Much of the film was shot in Los Angeles after Miami's Cuban community complained that the film gave them a bad name. (AP Laserphoto)

N. C. House Approves Unemployment Insurance

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill aimed at keeping North Carolina's unemployment insurance fund among the nation's most solvent easily cleared the state House on Monday night.

But action bogged down on a bill making it illegal for a person to use deadly force in resisting an unlawful arrest unless the officer was using "excessive or unreasonable" force. A vote on the bill was delayed until today.

The unemployment fund bill, approved 90-4 and sent to the Senate, temporarily would increase the amount employers contribute and decrease the amount of benefits jobless workers receive during recessions or times when the fund is dangerously low.

But it includes a "trigger" mechanism that reduces employer contributions and raises worker benefits to current levels when the fund is in good health.

Federal officials say North Carolina's fund is the third most solvent in the nation but predict the state will have to borrow $146 million in 1984-85 unless changes are made.

That's because the state is paying out about $10 million a week in benefits and collecting $15 million a month from employers. The fund contains about $315 million compared to more than $500 million at the same time last year.

Meanwhile, lengthy debate delayed for one day consideration of a bill introduced by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, and aimed at offering more protection for law enforcement officers.

The vote was delayed after Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, questioned whether the bill would accomplish that goal.

Hackney said his bill was designed to tell people that, "if you want to fight a battle whether it (the arrest) was lawful, do it in court."

But Rep. Annie B. Kennedy, D-Forsyth, told several stories about police abuse.

"Law enforcement officers have the power of their position, they have ammunition," she said. "But if you take this away from our citizens, what protection will any of us have..."

Hackney said the bill would not affect such situations and people abused by officers could file civil lawsuits.

"The bill just says North Carolina is going to be civilized," said Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly. "I can't understand all the commotion over this bill."

In other legislative action: Alcohol

The House voted 99-2 to send to the Senate a bill making it illegal to sell alcoholic beverages to minors, even if the salesman believed the customer was old enough.

Existing laws make such sales illegal only when the salesman knew the customer was too young to buy beer, wine or liquor.

The bill also changes the way people arrested under the law are dealt with in court. Existing law presumes that the salesmen are guilty unless they can prove they were given false identification showing the customer was old enough to buy alcoholic beverages.

The bill would presume the salesmen are innocent and allow them to prove they were shown false identification as proof of their innocence.

Senate

The Senate voted 42-1 to tentatively approve a bill allowing Burke County to buy equipment for burning its waste and generating energy for Broughton Hospital at the same time. The bill establishes the N.C. Energy Development Authority to get the project started.

The Senate postponed action until Tuesday on a bill that would raise the interest rate limit on credit card purchases from 18 percent to 21 percent. The bill affects primarily credit cards issued by merchants.

Mentally Retarded

A bill putting a 15-month freeze on adding intermediate care beds for the mentally retarded easily won House approval and went to the Senate.

Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, said there are 218,000 mentally retarded people in North Carolina who automatically are qualified for the beds. She said it costs an average of $99 a day to care for them at the facilities. The bill is shared by the county, state and federal governments.

But Ms. Fenner said not all the mentally retarded should be placed under such intensive care. She said the state needs to take time to develop criteria for admission to the facilities and determine the number of beds needed in the state.

Road Blocks

The House returned to the Highway Safety Committee a bill requiring warning signs be placed near points where Highway Patrol troopers are checking licenses.

Supporters said the signs were needed to warn large trucks of the need to slow down. But opponents said the signs would alert criminals to the license check and give them an opportunity to elude law enforcement officials.

Drugs

The House also voted to send to the Judiciary III Committee a bill making it a felony to embezzle drugs and to go from doctor to doctor to obtain large quantities of the same drugs.

Rep. Barney P. Woodard, D-Johnston, said there are more than 50,000 people authorized to handle controlled substances in the state and 15 special law enforcement officers to police them.

He said existing misdemeanor penalties for embezzling the drugs aren't enough to discourage the practice.

Solar House Built By College For Sale

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — About 100 students at Cleveland Technical College will be auctioning off their class project Saturday to benefit the school.

The project, a three-bedroom solar house, has been two years in the making.

"It makes me feel sort of like a pioneer," said Joe Collum, 20, a former Cleveland Tech student who helped build the house. "This solar stuff — I feel like that's what's going to be used in houses of the future."

Students in light construction class did the carpentry. Plumbing students installed the pipes. Electrical students wired. Fashion science students picked the carpets.

Agricultural science students landscaped the acre of property it sits on. Environmental science students worked on various energy conservation projects in the house. Bricklaying students laid the special wall that stores heat from the greenhouse.

The heat is released into the rest of the house after the sun has gone down, reducing the need for costly electrical heating and cooling. In addition, solar panels on the roof collect the sun's rays.

Gene Cox, chairman of Cleveland Tech's allied services department, said the house was an educational experience.
