Lower Interest Brings Crush To Ohio Banks

NO. 104

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Ohio banks opened their doors today to a crush of would-be homebuyers, including many who had been in line since last week to cash in on a limited offer of state-funded, low-interest mortgage loans.

At 8 a.m. a cheer went up from the crowd at Buckeye Federal Savings & Loan Association, where a line of 112 people stretched halfway around the building.

We did it," said Trish Hendrickson, who with her husband, Mark, was first to arrive at the building at 10:30 a.m. Friday. As the guard unlocked the door, the couple hugged and kissed.

'Thank you Jesus," Hendrickson said.

Three applicants at a time were admitted the building where bank officials accepted payment on closing costs and filled out forms.

Under State Issue 1, which voters approved last November, lending institutions will dole out $300 million in mortgage money at 9.98 percent interest rates, more than two points below the 12 percent average nationwide. The money will be issued on a strictly enforced first-come, first-served basis.

The hopeful homebuyers began lining up outside banks and savings and loans as early as Wednesday. A total of 449 banks statewide are participating in the program.

In the Cleveland area, some people waiting outside banks began devising ways to hold their places so they could take

A teacher named Ken, who declined to give his last name because he was taking today off from work, arrived about 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Home Federal Savings & Loan of Lakewood, just west of Cleveland.

Ken said he took out a deck of cards and began passing them out with numbers on each card. Makeshift rules posted at the savings and loan entrance said that if someone left his spot, he had to leave his card with someone else there.

At AmeriTrust downtown, Marie Meehan held spot No. 12 in "People will stand in line for the World Series or a rock concert," she said. "So why not for a house? "This will be nothing if I get my house," said Wilma Townsend, who along with her husband, James, has been camped outside First Investment Co. in Columbus since 7:30 a.m. Saturday

"There's only so much money available," she said. "My husband is bringing the hibachi. We plan to eat here, sleep here and use the bathroom here if that's what it takes.'

Steve Broussard, who waited ahead of the Townsends, said the only reason he began his wait at 5 p.m. Friday was greed.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

Around the turn of the century, legend has it, Chicken a la King was concocted by a chef at a beach hotel outside New York City. Its popularity spread.

By the time the 1920s rolled around, Chicken a la King was considered one of the most festive of dishes. And it became even more elegant when the toast points it was originally served with were replaced by puff-paste patty shells

Although Chicken a la King isn't come on much these days, it's still an utterly delicious dish. Here's a version of it recently concocted in my kitchen.

CHICKEN A LA KING

- 5 tablespoons butter 2 to 3 tablespoons flour 2 cup clear fat-free
- chicken broth 1 cup heavy cream 14 pound mushrooms, thinly sliced (114 to 112 cups)
- 1 large (5-ounce) green pepper, seeded, quartered and cut into thin strips
- 3 cups diced (34 inch) cooked chicken 4-ounce jar pimiento drained and diced
- Salt, pepper and paprika to taste

10-ounce package (6) frozen patty shells, baked

In a 212-quart saucepan, over low heat. melt 2 tablespoons of the butter; stir in the flour. Off heat, gradually stir in chicken broth and cream, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Reserve this sauce

In a 10-inch skillet, melt the remaining 3 tablespoons butter; add mushrooms and pepper; cook briskly, stirring often, until pepper is wilted and mushroom liquid has evaporated. Stir into the reserved sauce with chicken. pimiento, salt, pepper and paprika. Heat through. (Makes about 4^{1} ₂ cups.) serve in the warm patty shells.

Makes 6 servings.

For a super summer project, knit and crochet full wardrobes for your favorite youngster's teen doll. When you find out how much fun they are to make, you'll probably want to make extras to donate to your charity bazaars.

In addition to the outfits shown, there are directions for a ski suit, poncho, skirt, tam and more.

To obtain directions for making a full doll wardrobe, send your request for Leaflet No. D-05223 with $1 and a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope to Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Or you may order Kit No. K-05223 by sending a check or money order for $8 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and a variety of yarns sufficient for making at least seven outfits.

While I have featured a number of needlepoint purses worked on plastic canvas and quite a few crochet purses, the knit ones have been few and far between. One of my staff members, Margaret Brainard, is a talented designer and since Margaret's first love is knitting, she created her own design for a knitted clutch purse. The same principles also would apply to crocheting. To give the purse the necessary stiffness, she used an inner lining of 10-mesh plastic canvas (the 7-mesh is selected, make a sample swatch of the pattern stitch you plan to use. From this, you can determine your gauge - the number of stitches required for each inch of knitted fabric. When you find your gauge, multiply that figure by 10. This should give you a piece of knitted fabric 10 inches wide.

If the stitch you have chosen has a very tight weave with little elasticity — as will be the case with many crochet stitches - you might need to make it the full 10 1/2inch width, but most knitted pieces will stretch casily.

This is a great time to experiment with fancy pattern stitches as there are no increased or decreases to be concerned with and the complete piece is relatively small

With pattern stitches, you will be concerned with the "multiple of stitches" - that is the number of stitches required for each repeat of the pattern. To see how this works, let's take an example.

Suppose your gauge is 5 stitches per inch. This multiplied by 10 gives you 50, Jesse Helms, the two Tar Heels who have become the major tobacco spokesmen in Congress, have reached agreement — along with industry representatives from the tobacco-producing states — on a plan they say that the introduced in the near future.

The Ross palms package is not a panacea for the flue-cured tobacco induse out so far it does represent the one thing that has been misting in previous tobacco-related proposals—it has unity of support and unity of purpose. The plan has one overriding purpose: to try to save some degree of the tobacco program that has evolved over the last half-century.

With the backing of some growers, critics of the program have repeatedly attacked the lease transfer program as being feudalistic and unfairly weighted in ever of allotment holders at the expense of growers. Those outside the industry have been critical of the government's involvement in the program at all, citing its financial support of tobacco while providing money for anti-tobacco campaigns.

The plan developed last week will not answer all those criticisms, but it does go a long way. Briefly, price supports would be frozen for two years at the 1982 level — this just about everyone can accept — and the 7-cent a pound assessment for allotment holders would be eliminated. Then come the major provisions of the proposal: in 1984, allotment holders who lease their quota would have to sign agreements with growers basing their lease rates on a percentage of the net proceeds — the take-home check at the warehouse — realized on the sale of the tobacco; and in 1986, all transfer of quota would be abolished.

Any problem with the proposal probably will come with the provision for lease payments. Presumably, there will be no maximum on the lease percentage that allotment holders can seek. Thus, quota will go to those farmers with the best track record, because the owner's income will depend upon the grower's ability, not just how much cash he can afford. This will not necessarily be advantageous for the small farmer.

It also will create a burden — at least for the first year — for the retired allotment holder who has depended upon his or her cash lease money to see him through the year. For such people, with no other income available, it could be a long time between January — when cash leases have been paid — to July, when the auction markets open. In that first year, that would mean the 1983 quota money would have to last for 18 months. That could be disastrous, when you realize that for many of the elderly allotment holders that income is less than $10,000 a year.

No one knows at this point at what rate tobacco quota would be leased under the proposed program. One of the traditional sharing arrangements between grower and quota owner has been for the grower to get one-fourth, or some other percentage, of the gross. The Helms-Rose agreement draws upon that background, but it probably is safe to assume that the quota owner's share will be less under the proposed plan than it has been under the existing lease-transfer program.

This probably will seem grossly unfair to those who have lived through the uncertain years of unsupported tobacco to finally see a program that guaranteed them an income only to lose it, and it is. Ideally, a grandfather clause could be inserted to protect the first-generation members of the tobacco program. On a practical basis, there is little chance of such a provision if the quota program is to be retained at all. A little, perhaps, is better than none at all.

Excellence Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — Excellence is in siyle again, and to some extent it might even be back in practice, too.

An entrepreneur is asked to explain the almost instant success of his new venture and he replies: "It's simple. Our policy is to pursue excellence."

An autoworker in Tennessee explains the thrill of having learned to seek excellence on the assembly line and relates that it gives him great personal satisfaction

A literary agent searches for a writer to produce a book on excellence, any aspect of it, he says, "because excellence is selling these days — just look at the bestseller list."

Not so oddly, it seems to have been the decline of excellence from many human endeavors — the production of automobiles and the operation of public transportation, for example — that brought so much attention to it.

At the very time production excellence seems to have deteriorated, buyer expectations about quality were rising, according to Armand Feigenbaum, author of "Total Quality Control," a pre-eminent work in the field.

"User expectation for quality performance has grown at a far greater rate, creating a quality gap that continues to widen for many products and services," says Feigenbaum, president of General Systems Co.

Wall Street's automotive analysts repeatedly refer to the gap in explaining the inroads made by Japanese vehicles into the American market, under the noses of domestic companies whose product quality was perceived to be deteriorating.

According to Feigenbaum, whose reputation is almost legendary in parts of the industrial world, studies show that buyers now "rate quality equal to or more important than price in making purchase decisions."

He declines, however, to accept the widespread notion that quality or excellence travels solely under a Japanese passport.

True, he points out, Japanese videorecorders and calculators are of high reliability, but they travel to the U.S. market in reliable American commercial aircraft. The American refrigerator also demonstrates U.S. excellence, as does the telephone and telecommunications, and U.S. farm equipment, he says.

In fact, some argue, the United States taught excellence to much of the industrial world and continues to demonstrate that excellence every time a rocket is sent into space.

But for whatever reason, U.S. excellence seemed to have declined, and the productivity figures documented it. The specifics are still a matter of dispute — whether it was a decline in management efficiency or a slackening of quality and quantity by production personnel — but the consequences were there.

Gains in productivity, or the efficiency of production — of which quality is a major factor — began declining in the

NCAE Faces Problems Of Good Will

The North Carolina Association of Educators has the potential to be the strongest lobbying group in the state. NCAE has 50,000 members spread out in every corner of the state.

Teachers are known to vote in big percentages and to work hard in political campaigns. The personal respect they have in their neighborhoods gives them even more political sway. And, the money the NCAE's political action committee, PACE, raised in the last election, was ummatched by any other state PAC.

So why is it that NCAE is held in such low regard at the General Assembly? Why do even pro-education legislators, NCAE's political bedfellows, privately tell you they are fed up with NCAE?

In recent interviews with legislators, two answers were given most often. First, NCAE is perceived to support the special interests of teachers rather than the general goal of better education. Second, the methods NCAE uses just turn people off. (Point two will be the subject of a future column.)

Several innovative ideas are being bandied about these days for improving education in North Carolina. One would give the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools more time to decide if a teacher deserves tenure. Another would create a master teacher program designed to give the best teachers a better career path. Another would pay hard-to-find math and science teachers larger salaries than other teachers.

NCAE opposes all three. And, at the Legislature, the feeling is fairly widespread that they oppose these changes because they will make teachers more accountable to their bosses.

"They support, and what they work for, is mediocrity in education," one former legislator said while visiting the General Assembly recently. "The teachers who really support NCAE are the ones who don't do their jobs. NCAE can't be leaders and they can't get out front ... because they have such a large bulk of their members who are mediocre and they must be protected."

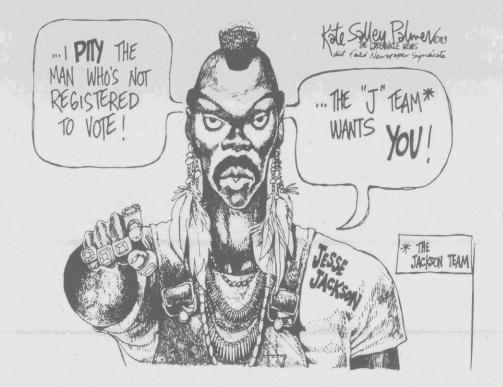

Whether that person's views are correct or not, they are widely held. And that means a public relations problem for NCAE.

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, the only active teacher in the assembly and a member of NCAE, said, "The comment I hear from other legislators is that all teachers want is an increase in salary. That's all teacher talk about." Rep. Maggie Keesee-Forrester, R-Guilford, a former teacher and NCAE member, said "The perception is that teachers are negative; that if they don't like things coming forth, they ought to offer us some alternatives."

Loretta Martin, NCAE president, confirms that many legislators see her group in this light. "We always end up on the side where it looks like we don't want good things to happen in education," she said. "We do want quality things to happen in eduction. We do want what's right for the kids."

But NCAE feels the best thing the state can do for education is raise teacher's salaries so good people will be attracted to the profession and good teachers will stay with it. After base salaries are competitive with those in other professions, then we can start adding master teacher programs, the NCAE line goes.

The recent national reports on the quality of our schools is putting added pressure on the Legislature to make moves to improve public education. As the public begins to focus more on some of the new ideas, those which NCAE opposes, the organization stands to have its influence weakened even further. Unfortunately for NCAE, the organization is being seen as the source of, not the solution to, the public education problem.

To the editor:

There was a real treat for residents of Greenville last Friday and Saturday nights at Wright Auditorium, where "Struttin' Southern" was presented by the Greenville Service League.

While all the talent was great, the frosting on the cake was the superb voice of Carolyn Ipock! How fortunate we are to have such professional talent in our midst!

Where can we hear more of this outstanding voice? How wonderful if there could be "An Evening with Carolyn Ipock" at some future date. I, for one, would be willing to help sponsor such an evening.

Greenbacks Pave Way To White House

A young man asked me an interesting question the other day.

"Is it true that anyone born in the United States can grow up and be president of the United States?"

"Yes son," I replied. "Providing he can raise enough money to run in the primaries."

"You need lots of money?"

"You need lots of money just to run for Congress. But you need millions of dollars to even try for the Rose Garden."

"How do you get the money?" he asked.
"Well, first you meet in hotel suites with lobbyists and corporate dining rooms with cheif executives, and golf clubs with labor leaders, and they ask you questions and you tell them what they want to hear, and hope they'll give you the money so you can become president of the United States."

"Do they give you ALL the money?"
"No, each one is only allowed to give a thousand dollars for himself, and a thousand dollars for his wife. But so many guys are splitting up these days, that you can't count on the thousand from the wife."

"If each person can only give a thousand dollars, doesn't the person who wants to be president have to see a lot of people?"

"You're not meeting in hotel suites, and corporate board rooms and golf courses to get a thousand dollars. You're talking to people who will make a lot of telephone calls to other people who have a thousand dollars. And you're hoping he or she can get those people to make calls to their friends and so on."

"What does the person who makes the calls say to his friends?"

"What's your name?"
"Archie Daniloff, sir."

"Well, what you hope for is that one of thepeople you talk to will call up a friend and say, 'A small group of us met with Archie Daniloff last night and he thinks the way we do.'''

"How do they know I think the way they do?"

"Because you told them the night before. Suppose you met with the sulfur burning coal guys. Before the meeting your political manager would brief you on where you stand on coal, so your position squares with their's."

"Suppose I felt dif

"Suppose I felt different than they did?"

"Then you shouldn't meet with them in the first place, because you can't waste valuable time trying to get money from people you don't agree with. You've got just so much time to raise the dough, and if you agree to meet with the coal people you have the choice of either telling them that you support their position, or at least making them think you do."

"When do I talk to the voters?"

"Much later, after you've raised the money from the political action committees. They're becoming more and more important, because they cannot only give you money from their kitties, but they can also put out the word to their supporters to send you checks on their own. PAC money is now becoming the infant formula of politics."

"After I get the money from the PAC people do I talk about the things I believe

"No, you still have to wait until you do a large direct mail advertising campaign asking for funds."

"How do I do that?"

"You take the money you raised from the fat cats and political action committees and turn it over to a direct mail house, who specializes in political fund raising."

"What do I say in the letter?"

"You say you are the best qualified person to be president of the United States. But you can't do it without the support of the little people who are are tired of special interest groups and all the big guys who want to buy your vote. That's why you're appealing by mail to them. You can't restore the American dream without their contribution, no matter how small it might be. The mailing could cost you $2 million, but with any luck you'll get back $5 million, which will then make you eligible for matching funds from the government to get your campaign underway."

Logistics Questions Raised In Nicaragua

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Although the effort to terminate "covert" American aid to anti-Sandinista guerrillas in neighboring Nicaragua is stalled for now, it has cost the Contras no momentum and raised excruciating questions for the future.

Uncertain about continuing U.S. support, logistical supply lines slowed to a crawl two months ago. "The debate in Congress put a dead spot in the pipeline," an official intimately involved in the Contras' anti-Sandinista insurgency told

That revealed how significant a player American ambivalence has become in the harsh, thickly-forested guerrilla country across the long, undefended Honduran-Nicaraguan border. The unannounced plan of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN) had been the overthrow of the Sandinistas by September — at the latest. Despite the surprising successes of the FDN's claimed 10,000 insurgents now operating in small units deep in Sandinista territory, that goal was forced by by congressional liberals trying to end the covert aid program altogether.

The FDN's overall military commander, rotating between the field and a safe house here, has devised a strategy that counts on a short war. "We do not think about a long war," Emilio Echeverie told us. "We will win this war, between September and December."

But if the Congress vetoes U.S. assistance, covert or otherwise, what then? "Our momentum is excellent today," said Echeverie, a highly impressive former military engineer. "A cutoff would hurt us but it would not be devastating." One reason: Echeverie's insurgents have already captured 2,500 weapons, including mortars, in their attacks on Sandinista military units.

In fact, however, a congressional veto switching Reagan administration policy might cripple the FDN. That's because a 180-degree switch would have dramatic political impact in Nicaragua — particularly in Managua, the Sandinista stronghold which must turn against the Sandinistas if the FDN insurgency is to succeed. The outpouring of anti-Sandinista emotion in Nicaragua since the FDN took the field would be bitterly affected if the U.S. forsook the guerrillas.

The fiction that the objective of the FDN was ever anything less than the overthrow of the Sandinistas serves diplomacy and, back in the U.S, congressional politics. Their objective was never simply cutting the arms flow to Marxist rebels in El Salvador. That was clearly understood — but not advertised — by the Reagan administration when the CIA first sought congressional approval to finance its clandestine help to the Contras.

Indeed, one cause of delay in the Reagan administration's moves against the Sandinistas was its initial selection of Eden Pastora as the natural future leader of a post-Sandinist Nicaragua. Pastora is the celebrated "Commander Zero" who accused the Sandinistas of betraying their revolution and fled to exile. Pastora now has his own anti-Sandinista guerrillas in the extreme Nicaraguan south along the Costa Rican border.

As an original anti-Somoza leader, Pastora was viewed in Washington to be politically safer with American liberals as the chief guerrilla leader — and potentially as heir apparent in Managua. while he was "pure." a small percentage of the FDN's forces had been involved with Somoza's National Guard.

The dispute over Pastora was finally resolved in favor of the FDN but the delay frustrated its leadership. If the U.S. objective had ever been limited to cutting arms supplies to El Salvador, the dispute would never have occurred.

That raises the question of future intentions of Congress as the real significance of the operation seeps under sensitive liberal skins. But the question may not be as fateful as it once seemed.

Explosion Damages City Hall LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP)

An explosion rocked the Lincolnton City Hall 15 minutes before police shift change this morning, causing minor damage but no injuries, police said.

Authorities speculated that a bomb caused the blast, which occurred at 4:30 a.m.

Officer Danny Hallman said he received a call about a loud explosion on government street.

'I went to the back of the parking lot to make sure everything was okay at City Hall. I stopped and observed drapes hanging out of the upstairs windows. Glass was broken across the parking lot. Bricks where the trash cans had been at the rear of the police department had been blown away from the wall. The trash cans looked like aluminum foil balled

Report Critical Of New Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) The health and safety of the nation's 1.3 million nursing home residents are threatened by Reagan administration budget-cutting and attempts to relax inspection standards, consumer advocate Ralph Nader says.

"Reagan administration health care officials contend that the nursing home industry of the 1980s has so improved since the 'dark days' of the late 60s and early 70s when rampant Medicaid fraud and resident abuse prompted stricter government regulation, that regular federal surveillance is no longer necessary," said the report, which was released Sunday

"All evidence points to the contrary," the report said. 'On any given day, according to government statistics, 77 percent of the nation's nursing homes fall below minimal federal health and safety requirements.'

The 93-page report, entitled "Leaving Them Defenseless: Reagan's Drive to Destroy Nursing Home Law and Order," was prepared by Kathleen Hughes of Nader's Center for Study of Responsive Law in Washington,

Water's Odor, Taste Corrected

Odor, and taste problems with the city's water supply "should be on the decline now" and at the most last only "a few more days," Wadie Lewis, superintendent of the Greenville Utilities Commission's water system, said this

Lewis said a "number of inquiries" were received last week about odor and taste problems with the water.

He said the odor and taste were caused by algae in the water drawn from the Tar River. A "carbon feed system" designed to correct the odor and taste problem malfunctioned, he saw allowing the odd smell and taste to enter the distribution system he explained.

Lewis said corrections were made to the carbon feed system late Friday, but said there still be an unusual odor and taste until the water in the system is replaced.

He noted that there is no health hazard from the unusual taste and odor.

Reagan Jokes At Age Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, gently poking fun at himself, is openly tackling the "age issue" that Democrats hope will hurt him if he decides to run for

Reagan, who turned 72 last February, is the oldest U.S. president in history. If he ran for a second term and won, he would be 78 within weeks of leaving office in 1989

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., in Buffalo, N.Y., for a college commencement address at Canisius College last Saturday, suggested Reagan was too old to run again.

"My personal opinion — he couldn't win," the 70-year-old O'Neill said of Reagan. "The man will be 74 (on Feb. 6, 1985, shortly after the next inauguration). My political instincts are that it would be kind of foolish."

O'Neill made similar comments to reporters last month, saying he couldn't imagine why someone as old as Reagan would want to put himself through a bruising and possibly losing campaign when he could enjoy life as an ex-president.

Yet Reagan, who looks younger than his years, seems to go out of his way to confront the age issue.

In a recent talk to business executives, the president urged support for the MX intercontinental ballistic missile and modernization of U.S. strategic forces

"We've begun retiring our Titan ICBMs because of their old age," Reagan said. Then he paused for a second or two, and cracked: "Don't think what I'm thinking. The audience roared with laughter. For years, Reagan has denied rumors that he has dyed his hair dark or has had a face-lift. Joking at the White House News Photographers dinner recently, Reagan playfully asked, "Is it true that young Gary Hart is having the wrinkles airbrushed in?'

Hart, a senator from Colorado, is at 45 the youngest of the candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination. At a birthday party last Friday for entertainer Bob Hope, who turned 80, Reagan basked in the fact he wasn't the oldest person on stage. "Bob, can I call you pops?" Reagan asked. 'I love it when he calls me kid.'

David Gergen, White House director of communications, acknowledged that age was an issue for Reagan in 1980. 'Now that he's proven that he's fully capable of handling the job, and indeed is more capable than many of his predecessors, I don't think it's much of an issue anymore.' Gergen said. However, partially because of the age issue, White House aides were angry recently when The Washington Post described Reagan's interview with six reporters as "rambling and sometimes confusing" and said the president "at times appeared to have difficulty concentrating on the questions and his answers to them

Speaking anonymously, a high-level White House aide said the story, had it been a continuing theme in the press, would have been damaging. "I think it's a footnote now," he said.

In a commencement address last Saturday at Seton Hall University, Reagan called attention to the fact that his own college graduation was more than a half century ago.

"Something I've noticed in attending graduations over the years is the way time has a habit of catching up with you," said Reagan.

"First you start to notice that you're older than the students," he said. "And next, you begin to realize that you're older than most of the faculty. But today marks a new first

"I'm even senior to the Jubilarians who are gathered here today," he said. "They graduated in 1933. I'm class of '32.

"To you members of the class of '83, I'm sure that seems like a long, long time ago and you're right," Reagan declared.

Reagan has never been one to hide his age. Shortly before the crucial New Hampshire presidential primary in 1980, his staff publicly presented him with a birthday cake on his 69th Handicapped met last week to establish goals for 1983-84.

Some of the goals discussed were: to sponsor the handicapped awards banquet honoring outstanding employers of the community; to co-sponsor the East Carolina University Handicapped Awareness Week; to provide voting registration and assistance to the handicapped of the area; and to work toward getting parking spaces designated for the handicapped throughout the city and county.

The group also plans to visit at least one other similar committee in the state to share information.

Floods Cut Off 11,000 From Homes

Associated Press Writer Rivers swollen by up to 15 inches of rain rose toward record highs in Texas and Mississippi today, cutting off more than 11,000 people from their homes, as violent weather continued in the

The large system of thunderstorms that rolled across successive salvoes of tornadoes, hail and heavy rain pushed eastward today, but not before killing 33 people and leaving behind damage expected to exceed hundreds of millions of dollars.

Tornadoes have been blamed for 11 deaths in Texas since Friday, includMineral Wells when a twister churned through a trailer park, killing one woman and injuring another.

More than 100 Texans have been injured and about 1,000 families left homeless most in a six-county area surrounding Houston - by tornadoes since Friday.

Jacinto River in southeast Texas by this morning. The river was pouring 4 feet over a dam at Lake Houston, about 35 miles northeast of Houston. The river level was measured at 48.48 feet, just below a record of 49.07 feet reached in 1979.

Harris County Civil De fense Director John Caswell said about 1,500 families had been evacuated in Harris and Montgomery counties by early today, but many others were refusing to leave.

"If they wait too long, then it becomes necessary to rescue them," Caswell said. 'Some won't leave until it's a life or death situation.'

Tornadoes and floods have caused about $75 million in damage in Montgomery County, Texas, northwest of Houston, destroying or damaging about 2,000 homes and 200 businesses. County Judge Jimmy Edwards said.

Authorities in adjacent counties were still adding up the damage today, but predicted it would surpass the destruction caused in 1961 by Hurricane Carla, which left 34 people dead and $400 million in damage.

Except for some thunderstorms reported in north Texas and southern Oklahoma, most of the violent weather had moved out of the country, Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. said early today. 'The front that caused all the trouble in the South has crossed the Atlantic Coast and the only storm activity around now has weakened from what we saw during the weekend," Crowther said. Still, winds reaching 50 mph were reported in the Dallas suburb of Plano early today, and hail the size of pingpong balls also pummeled several nearby areas, the Weather Service said.

Funnel clouds were spotted west of Fort Worth and a trailer house was demolished when "a tornado or high winds" blew through an area west of Cleburne about 2:30

Red Cross Fund Is Empty floods, tornadoes, earthquakes, hurricanes and other natural disasters between now and ATLANTA (AP) - The American Red Cross said today its disaster relief fund is empty. and the organization has launched a fundraising drive to keep it operating between now and the end of June. The Red Cross has spent more than $33 million for relief to more than 1 million disaster victims in the first 10 months of its fiscal year, leaving its disaster fund, disaster reserves and donation bank empty, officials

"The Red Cross does not intend to close its doors or shut down the services the American people have come to depend on us for," said Richard F. Schubert, president of the organi-

Organization officials, in Atlanta for their national convention, said they have set a goal of raising $12 million for relief to victims of the end of the fiscal year.

Current projections show a deficit of more than $3 million by July 1 even if additional catastrophes do not occur - which is unlikely, Schubert said.

The Red Cross spends 70 percent of its budget on direct relief to disaster victims, with another 10 percent going to mass feeding programs, he said. Twenty percent goes to administrative costs, including travel and support expenses for volunteers and staff members on relief missions.

Schubert said the organization will "do whatever it takes in terms of borrowing resources from here, there and everywhere' to maintain services if its goal is not met

SCALE INSECTS ON SHRUBS insects (the small, rounded knot on this branch) are common pests of trees, shrubs and flowers according to Sam Uzzell, Pitt

Police Clash With Anti-Klan Demonstrators

FARMINGTON, Conn. After four carloads of Ku Klux Klan members peacefully came and went at a shopping mall, a group of anti-Klan demonstrators showed up and clashed with police, authorities said.

Three anti-Klan demonstrators were arrested and three West Hartford police officers suffered minor injuries in the scuffle, police Officer Dennis Covini

With clubs and dogs, helmeted officers countered the surging protesters Sunday and chased them across a parking lot and off the mall grounds.

Mall officials had asked some of the protesters to leave when they identified themselves and began distributing anti-Klan literature.

The Klan opponents "became so disruptive that we asked the police to disperse the crowds and remove the group as trespassers,' said Peter Hollis, a vice president for the Taubman Co. of Troy, Mich., which operates Westfarms Mall.

"We warned them in court that something like this would happen, and it did," Hollis said, blaming a judge's ruling for the demonstrations

In handing down a decision in March that granted the National Organization for Women limited access to the Hartford area's largest shopping center, Superior Court Judge Arthur L. Spada likened the modern-day shopping mall to the traditional New England town green.

A mall is a meeting and gathering spot, and even though the Westfarms Mall is privately owned and subsidized, it is a public place, Spada said.

Scale insects are very common pests of trees, shrubs, flowers, other ornamentals and fruit trees. There are many different species of these plant-feeding insects, and most of these are rather difficult to control. In dealing with scale insects one must be aware of the proper time of year and stage of development of the scale insect.

Scale insects are small insects and are classified as soft scales or hard scales. Soft scales have a firm, rounded body. Hard scales are covered with a waxy protective scale which gives them protection from weather, pesticides and other

The females are wingless and are mostly responsible for plant injury. After hatching from eggs laid beneath the body, scale insects have a brief mobile crawler stage. These crawlers are very tiny six-legged, soft-bodied insects that move around until they insert their mouthparts in the leaf. the bark or the stem of plants. After feeding has begun, the scales molt twice, lose legs and antennae and remain in the same spot the rest of their lives.

The males have an elongated body after the second molt and after a fourth molt have one pair of wings, legs and antennae but no mouth parts. They look like small gnats but have a stylelike process at the end of the abdomen.

The damage caused by scale insects can vary from a discoloration of the leaves to death of the plant, loss of limbs or sections of a plant and general decline. For example, on camellia, scale insects on the undersides of the leaves will cause discolorations on the upper surface and some leaf dropping. On silver, red and swamp maples, "gloomy scale" will cauise the death of the limbs throughout the crown.

In addition to these symptoms, scale insects can cause a black sooty substance to accumulate on the leaves. This condition, called "sooty mold," occurs when scale insects (also aphids and whiteflies) such plant sap and excrete honey dew, a sugary by-product. Honey dew will fall onto lower leaves and a fungus will grow in it. This condition can be alleviated by controlling the scales.

Scale insects are normally controlled in two ways: spraying when the crawlers are present and spraying with a dormant soil spray when the plant is dormant.

In both cases, the entire plant must be thoroughly covered with spray. Pruning away the most severely affected branches may help reduce scale populations.

Some of the insecticides used in insect control are malathion, diazinon and "summer oil" or "Volck oil." Oil sprays should be used with caution because some plants are sensitive to them and heavy rates of oil may injure foilage as

A spray properly times to coincide with the crawler stage will be very effective. It may be helpful to place a clear plastic bag over an infested twig (in the shade) and look for the prescence of crawlers on the inside of the bag. You might then assume that crawlers are also present on leaves, limbs and twigs of the plant. Two or three sprays will reduce the populations to a manageable level

Pope Urges Recognition

MILAN, Italy (AP) -Pope John Paul II told a gathering of 2,000 industrialists that they should recognize labor unions as a 'dynamic factor' in society.

Of Unions

John Paul flew back to the Vatican Sunday evening after a three-day visit to Milan northern Ita est city and the nation's industrial center. The visit included a first-ever papal visit to a performance at the famed La Scala opera house.

On Sunday, the pope told industrialists gathered at Milan's International Trade Fair Center that the church encourages recognition of the "dignity and capacity of workers." In that regard, the pope said: "The labor union comes into play as a dynamic factor of the social organization.'

Next month, the pontiff is scheduled to visit his native Poland, where the independent trade union Solidarity has been outlawed after struggles with that country's Communist government.

John Paul met workers of the Magneti Marelli industrial group on the outskirts of Milan Saturday. The pope, who worked in a stone quarry in Germany during World War II, said he knew firsthand the problems of being a worker.

About 300,000 people endured heavy rain Sunday to attend a papal Mass in a suburban neighborhood.

John Paul celebrated Mass on a platform which vandals had firebombed early Saturday and which was quickly repaired. The pope made no mention of the incident during the service.

Before leaving, the pope gently joked with the crowd. as someone shouted "return

"I cannot return because I have not left," the 63-yearold pontiff responded.

More than 150,000 people, many of them youths, had given him an enthusiastic welcome at a Grand Prix track in Monza on Saturday In his address there, he reaffirmed his strong stand against abortion and urged youths to build a new society free of drug abuse, terrorism and dictatorships.

(Continued from Page 3) which is the number of stitches you will need. But your pattern stitch is a multiple of 6 stitches, meaning you must work on a number of stitches evenly divisible by six. Fifty just doesn't fit the bill. A multiple of six can be worked on 48 or 54 stitches, however, and my choice would be to take the smaller of these two numbers and, if necessary, add a stitch or two to be worked plain at

That's all the figuring you need do. Now, just merrily knit along until your piece is just slightly shorter than the plastic canvas sheet. Bind

Now, cover your canvas with a "slipcover" made of fabric that will serve as your lining. Shape it just like a pillow case, slip the canvas inside it and whip the open edges of fabric together. Now, whip the knitted fabric to one side of the lining and fold it up so that the caston edge of the knitted piece is within 2 to 2 1/2 inches of the top. Fold down the top edge for the flap of the purse. Scw the two side edges together.

leaving the flaw free. Fasten with a covered snap or pieces of Velcro or make a button loop and sew on a button and you will be ready to step out with a new purse to match the sweater, coat, suit or dress you have knitted!

To create a sharp fold in the canvas, follow these steps. Complete the purse except for the flap fastener. Lav it on a padded ironing board and cover it with a couple of thicknesses of toweling. Use a steam iron on a cool setting and press down on the piece. Repeat as necessary to create the fold line in the plastic inner lining. Take care not to let too much heat get to it or the plastic canvas could disintegrate. Start with cool setting and very gradually increase the heat.

In a couple of weeks, I will be giving you a neat picot edging to use on the flap, plus some suggested pattern stitches.

Postal Service Expects To Ask Another Hike

Service expects to complete the current fiscal year with its second straight surplus, the cost of sending letters could go up

Postmaster William F. Bolger said the agency projects a surplus of $100 million for the 1983 fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The predicted surplus would come just a year after the Postal Service showed a $802 million surplus during 1982. "But we will need some new income sometime around the late spring of 1984," Bolger said in an interview. Bolger would not say how much he would seek to increase the price of first-class mail — now 20 cents a letter — or when the rate case would be filed. The independent Post Rate Commission, which must approve any increases in mail rates, takes about a year to rule on such requests.

'We have to file well in advance of when we need the rates," he said. "We won't raise rates until we have to. It's in everyone's best interest to keep rates as low as we can for as long as we can," he said.

When the the price of stamps for first-class letters was raised to 20 cents in 1981, the Postal Service predicted that another increase would be needed in November 1983.

But a lowering of the inflation rate eliminated the need to pay cost-of-living raises to 700,000 employees this year, Bolger said. The agency has saved $250 million this year, he

At one point, the Postal Service had projected it would run a deficit of $260 million to $280 million this fiscal year. "It's been a far better year than we thought we were going to

"I'd like nothing better than to hold the next rate increase for four years or five years, but I'm not sure of that," he said.

Court Exempts Veterans Units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that veterans' organizations may lobby without losing their tax-exempt status, even though the same treatment is denied other charitable and educational groups.

"Our country has a longstanding policy of compensating veterans for their past contributions by providing them numerous advantages," said Justice William J. Rehnquist for a unanimous court.

The 9-0 decision overturned a ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court said last year that veterans' groups are not entitled to special status while other charitable organizations that engage in lobbying are denied tax exemp-

The carbon dioxide level was raised to normal by having the students breathe into paper bags, Turner said.

Robert English, administrative assistant at the hospital, said the students started coming in about 9:45 p.m. Saturday and had left by 12:30 a.m. Sunday. They then were allowed to begin their trips home.

"They found nothing to indicate any kind of food poisoning," English said. They think it was hysteria. There wasn't anything found like there was any food getting (President Ronald) Reagan elected.'

Herb Lee of Greenville said, "I think there has been, all along, two factions in the North Carolina Republican Party, the so called moderates and the conservatives. The moderate faction controlled at one time and the conservatives then controlled and now the moderates want to get back in.

Lee, a member of the party's state executive committee, said the majority of the GOP delegation Saturday "seemed to feel that at a time when Jesse Helms' reelection is coming up and being so vital and with (Gov. James) Hunt making a push to defeat him, it would not look well if Flaherty was defeated.' Lee said that Boger is known for being adept at precinct organization while Flaherty is "good at keeping people at peace with one another." He said Boger would have made a good leader but Flaherty is "a good man.'

"When it was all over, everyone said it would be better to stick together," Lee said

Hal McKinney, vice chairman of the First District GOP and treasurer of the Pitt organization, said he was "delighted with the way every thing went." He said the "delegates, after a spirited campaign, got together and indicated they will work together.'

McKinney said that speeches at the convention appealed to the sense of party unity. He said the activities marked the first convention in some time where there was active debate "and I think everyone enjoyed it. Everyone left with a feeling of unity.

Dedication was a key to the appearance of John Linton of Winterville at the Raleigh activities as he got up Saturday morning at 2:30 a.m. to drive from New York down to Raleigh. Linton, who attended a class reunion in New York, said he made it to Raleigh in time for the election and he observed, "everyone got together after it was over and indicated they will work together to defeat the Democrats."

Randy Doub, a local attorney who supported Boger's candiacy, said he hopes "everything is unified but the (National) Congressional Club's grip is a lot tighter than I realized.

Doub said he hopes the party can "broaden its base and the people in power can welcome those back in who are moderate and even liberal Republicans."

Boger, a former state senator, and George Little of Southern Pines halted a roll-call vote three-fourths of the way through Saturday and conceded the election to Flaherty. Flaherty had received backing from the Congressional Club in his re-election bid.

Both Boger and Little called for unity in the GOP party. They had billed the election as a battle for grass-roots party members trying to regain control of the GOP from Congressional change of shoes at halftime proved significant as ... Philadelphia 76ers beat the Los Angeles Lakers in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

Club supporters. Boger said he hoped Flaherty took note of "what happened and will stay a step or two away from the Congressional Club."

Richardson, having made the switch to ease his aching feet, scored 10 points in the third period when the 76ers rallied and went on to beat the defending champion Lakers, 113-107.

The Lakers, who beat Philadelphia in the finals twice in the last three years, get a chance to even the best-of-seven series in the second game here

Moses Malone scored 27 points and grabbed 18 rebounds, while Andrew Toney contributed 25 points and Julius Erving 20, but Richardson appeared to receive most of the accolades.

Richardson, a 6 foot, 3 guard from Seattle, was scoreless in the first half and was 0 for 3 from the field. He had a valid excuse — a badly bruised bone in the small toe of his right foot.

"It was killing me during the first half when I wore low shoes. I put on high shoes at halftime and they were more comfortable," he explained.

Lakers, who hadn't lost the opener of a seven-game playoff in their previous nine. Richardson shot 7 for 12 and added a free throw for 15 points.

He went on to make it uncomfortable for the

The Sixers, who trailed at halftime, 57-54, broke the game open in the third quarter with an 8-0 spurt 18 foot jumper to start the rally.

The Lakers, who are trying to become the first team to repeat as NBA champions since the Boston Celtics of 1968-69, kept coming back. They sliced the lead to 70-66, but Richardson hit a 17-foot jumper. L.A. edged to within three at 74-71, and Richardson swished an 18-foot jumper, stole a pass and drove for layup, widening the 76ers' lead to 78-71. The Lakers got to 80-75, and the man in the high shoes hit another long jumper.

"Clint Richardson played fantastic," said 76ers' coach Billy Cunningham.

Los Angeles' Earvin "Magic Johnson, who had 19 points, nine rebounds and nine assists, said of Richardson, "Philadelphia is a better team when Clint is on the floor.'

'That's a nice compliment," said Richardson. 'But I only play within the team structure. Whoever has the shot takes it.

'I was just more aggressive in the second half I got some good passes."

Malone said he was happy with the victory because he felt the 76ers didn't play to their capability and still won.

We have to get everything down pat to win again The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 20 and took down just four rebounds, said his team ws

We didn't have as much gas as we'd like," said

The Lakers played Friday night (eliminating San Antonio in the Western final), traveled most of Saturday, and played Sunday. "That put more pressure on us. We couldn't sustain anything. I feel very confident we'll come back." said Jabbar. "We had no time to practice, just a brunch and a chalk talk." Magic Johnson said the Lakers weren't as prepared as they wanted to be.

Cunningham alluded to the Lakers' travel difficulties, but he said he got big performances from everybody who played?

"Even though the Lakers just finished a rough series with San Antonio and had to hustle to get to Philadelphia, they came out and played great ball from start to finish. We're going to have our hands full Thursday, but we'll be ready

So will Los Angeles, predicted Coach Pat Riley, who said, "We will do better Thursday when we have a chance to sit down and prepare a little bit

The Lakers are hopeful that Bob McAdoo, who has an injured thigh, will be able to play Thursday. Norm Nixon, who led the Lakers with 26 points, bruised his left shoulder, but X-rays showed no break, and he is expected to play.

The 76ers' Bobby Jones is suffering from a sore throat, and tired quickly, but also is expected to play

Dodgers Thump Seaver, 5-0

By The Associated Press

It was billed as The Showdown. But the Los Angeles Dodgers played "Fernando Hideaway" and Tom Terrific might just as well have stayed home.

Fernando Valenzuela of the Dodgers was scheduled to start Sunday against Tom Seaver and the New York Mets - until Saturday night's rainout played games with the teams' starting rotations.

Tom Lasorda, the Dodgers' manager, opted to go with Saturday night's scheduled starter, Bob Welch, and hold Valenzuela for tonight's game in Philadelphia. Mets Manager George Bamberger chose to bounce Ed Lynch and stick

It was no contest. Welch stymied the Mets on a twohitter — Seaver's single in the fifth inning and Danny Heep's double in the ninth - and the Dodgers breezed to a 5-0 victory, raking Seaver for three home runs, a two-run shot by Mike Marshall and two solos by Steve Yeager.

Elsewhere Sunday in the National League, Cincinnati edged Chicago 4-3, Montreal blanked San Francisco 2-0 and Atlanta defeated St. Louis 7-5 in 11 innings. Two games were rained out: San Diego at Philadelphia and Houston at Pittsburgh arm and pitched a good, strong game," Bamberger said. "I think we would've had more than two hits off Valenzuela." Then the Mets' manager paused for a moment and added: "I think. I don't know. They made the right choice.

Welch, working on a nohitter with two out in the fifth inning, chose to try and slip a low-inside fastball past Seaver. He chose wrong. Seaver lined the 2-1 pitch cleanly into left field.

"Tom is a pretty good fastball hitter." Welch said. 'From the middle of the plate in, he's a very good hitter.

The hit didn't faze Welch, Welch has a good, strong though. "I just had to chuck it game," he said. "It was very difficult. I had good stuff, but it jumped all over the place. Usually that doesn't happen." Meanwhile, the homers were jumping off the Dodgers' bats. In the second inning, Seaver did what a lot of other pitchers have done. He walked rookie Greg Brock. "With Greg leading the league in walks, I see some strikes," said Marshall, who sent a fat one on a line over the right-center field fence.

Yeager, replacing injured catcher Mike Scioscia, hit his fifth and sixth homers in the third and eighth innings, the most he's hit in one season since 1979.

Reds 4, Cubs 3 way," said San Francisco Mario Soto's biggest enemy in Chicago wasn't any of the Manager Frank Robinson. "But we gave them two runs, Cubs, even though Jay so the worst it should have Johnstone hit a two-run homer been was 0-0. and Leon Durham a solo shot. The biggest enemy was the Bruce Sutter, St. Louis' reweather. Rain delayed the lief ace, was victimized by his start of the game for 46 minutes and delayed it for 23 own infield as the Braves completed a three-game minutes in the third inning. 'It was a very tough game. First you warm up, then you have to sit down, then you warm up, then you sit down again," Soto said. "I told (pitching coach) Bill Fischer I didn't think I could finish in the sixth or seventh. But then I figured as long as I have a lead, I'll stay in. If they're going to beat me, they have to do it against me. Soto struck out 10 Cubs and limited them to four hits. Rookie Gary Redus had a double and a homer and scored twice to lead the Reds

Fabi Faces 'Dangerous Moment' On Poll Of Indianapolis 500

What has been called the most dangerous moment in auto racing - the start of the Indianapolis 500 — will be in the hands of a rookie driver.

veteran road racer, but this is his first year of competing at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The diminutive Fabi established one-and four-lap speed records on the 212-mile oval in time trials over the weekend and became only the Teo Fabi of Italy is a second rookie in the race's 67 years to win the pole position. And, being a sensible man, he says, "I'm glad I'm on the pole. The start of the race is not so dangerous if you're out

It is the role of the man on the inside of the first three-car row to set the pace for the start of the race. Chief Steward Tom Binford says all he really has to do is "increase his speed at a smooth and steady pace so that the field can stay in order.'

Binford always recommends the pole car get the field up to about 120 by the time the green flag falls.

That was one of the apparent problems last May when Rick Mears, who was on the pole then, brought the field what several drivers felt was too slow a speed. There was choas at the green flag as the front row neared the flagstand. Second-year starter Kevin Cogan, in the middle of the front row, suddenly shot to the right, bounced off the rear of outside starter A.J. Foyt's car and skidded back across the track right in front of the rest of the oncoming field Mario Andretti, coming from the second row, smashed Cogan's car in the side, ending the race day for both drivers. In the melee behind them, with drivers searching in the dust and flying parts for an escape route, Dale Whittington came all the way across the track and took out the car driven by fellow Indy rookie Roger Mears, Rick's older brother. The red light came on, stopping the action. Nobody was injured and there still is debate whether it was inexperience or a mechanical problem in Cogan's car that started the incident. But it was just another in a long list of lessons at Indianapolis on how not to start a race. Actually, the 1982 accident was unusual, since it started in the front row and took place

before the start-finish line. Normally, trouble begins in the middle or back rows of the 11-row field, where there often is a dangerous mixture of relatively inexperienced and very fast drivers. And the big trouble spots are generally just past the start-finish line. where everybody is jockeying for position, and the slightly-banked first turn, where 33 cars traveling at between 180 and 200 mph try to squeeze through a racing area really only 1½ lanes

"I'd like to talk to Fabi sometime this week," said Rick Mears, who has won the pole twice here and will start the 67th Indy 500 on the outside of the front row next to another veteran, Mike Mosley.

"He's plenty good enough, Mears added. "He can handle it. It's his perogative to start any way he wants to. That's what he worked so hard for But this place can be difficult sometimes "The idea is to keep things smooth and easy at the start. The speed doesn't matter as long as you're not getting that fast-slow, fast-slow action back in the rows behind you. That's when trouble begins. Defending champion Gordon missed the Cogan-Andretti collision last year, said, "I relate Fabi to what Bobby Rahal was like as a rookie here last year. He's 27 years old and has driven all kinds of cars - Formula One, Can-Am and other kinds. He's a good, solid capable driver and I think he'll handle things very well. One Indy rookie does not have all that background.

fistful of sedan and Super Vee races in his background. He'll start from the middle of the sixth row - the epicenter of field and probably the most dangerous single spot on the grid, but he says his maturity will be a help.

"It's an advantage here to be 41 years old. If I were 31 or 21, I'm sure I'd be very edgy and nervous about it all, Bedard said. Fabi, who is just trying to stay calm in the face of all the attention and the talk about the danger of the start, says "If I was a veteran (here), I'd be worried about the rookies, too. But I'm not worried about me. I'll do my best and the rest of them will just have to do their best behind me.

Walker Regrets Signing With Generals, According To Dooley

ATLANTA (AP) — It seems longer, but it was only three months ago that Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker signed the most lucrative contract in professional football

Vince Dooley, however, is convinced that if the three-time All-America tailback at Georgia had to do it over again, he would remain in school

"I am confident, that right now, if he could do it over, he'd take every dime and give it back and come back to Georgia," said the Georgia coach and athletic director, who was the featured speaker Sunday at the Georgia Associated Press' annual meeting.

"I have truly never seen an individual who loved college like he did. He just got into a trap and couldn't get out," said

Walker, who helped Georgia to a 33-3 record, one national title and three consecutive Southeastern Conference titles in his three years with the Bulldogs, signed Feb. 23 for a reported $5 million over three years with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

"I've talked to Herschel a couple of times on the telephone since he left," Dooley said in an interview before the meeting Sunday. "The first time was about three weeks after he left, and he was still trying to make the adjustment. 'He was having a harder time than he expected, and I think he was a little homesick. But he's a really disciplined athlete and is now making the adjustment very well," he said. 'But it was obvious to me, that if he could do it over again, he'd be back at Georgia for his senior year," Dooley said.

Walker will be coming back to Georgia, but it won't be to "He's coming back this summer to work on getting his degree, which he said he would do," Dooley said.

As for replacing Walker at tailback, "there's no one individual who can do that. We're looking at a group of people. It will depend on the situation. We don't have anyone with the strength and endurance of Herschel to play a whole ball game," Dooley said. Melvin Simmons, who played wide receiver the last two years, will be the starter when Georgia opens its 1983 season at home against UCLA, with Tron Jackson, Keith Montgomery and fullback Barry Young also seeing action at tailback, he

Another starter in the opener will be No. 2 quarterback Todd Williams, a sophomore who saw limited action behind John Lastinger last year when the Bulldogs went 11-1.

Lastinger underwent knee ligament surgery recently, and Dooley doesn't expect the senior back for the opener.

"It's a slow healing process, and he won't be ready for the first ball game," Dooley said. "At this time, Todd Williams will start. Lastinger might be ready later in the season, maybe after three or four games.

Funseth Walks Away With Win In First Senior Event

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) -Rod Funseth made just one bogey during the inaugural $150,000 Hall of Fame tournament for PGA seniors, matched the lowest score in the history of the tour and won the tournament by nine shots to collect a $25,000 prize.

The Napa, Calif., native fired a seven-under-par 65 Sunday after earlier rounds of 66 and 67 on the 6,606-yard Pinehurst Country Club No. 2 course. His 198 total was 18 strokes under par, matching the lowest 54-hole score ever Miller Barber also shares the record on three consecutive rounds of 66 in the 1982 Suntree Classic at Melbourne, Fla.

Funseth, who recently shared $100,000 with Roberto DeVicenzo for winning the Legends of Golf Tournament in Austin, Texas, made his only bogey on the first hole "I hit a poor second shot and was worried, but after that I played really well," said the 50-year-old Funseth.

Second was Charlie Sifford. whose 69 in the final round won him $15,000. He posted a 54-hole score of 207, 9 under Don January was third at 209 on rounds of 72, 68 and 69. Barber and Billy Casper tied for fourth at 210. Dan Sikes, who started the final round in a tie with Sifford, slipped to one-over-par 73 to finish sixth.

BBC Scoring Success With Early Morning TV

By EDITH M. LEDERER Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - Almost four months after the launch of early morning TV, the British Broadcasting Corp. has captured more than 80 percent of the bacon and eggs audience. Its star-studded rival, TV-AM, is struggling to avert a multimillion dollar failure. Nearly 2 million Britons are tuning in to morning television every day - less than half the audience the two shows eventually hope to attract. But TV executives agree that breakfast TV is here to stay.

The publicly financed BBC first off the mark Jan. 17 with "Breakfast Time," has called the breezy, relaxed show a success, saving it is sistently high ratings.

The commercial network TV-AM, which launched "Good Morning Britain" on Feb. 1, has never captured 35 percent of the audience with its polished, intellectual show that many viewers say they find too hard to digest over tea and toast.

In an attempt to increase ratings and avert financial collapse, TV-AM fired chief executive Peter Jay, a former British ambassador to Washington, and its two top anchorwomen. They relegated TV personality David Frost to special interviews.

The network intrigues rivaled any soap opera and captured banner headlines in Britain's tabloids. But the publicity and changes haven't improved the show's disastrous ratings.

After the dismissal of Anna Ford, the Barbara Walters of British television, and top anchorwoman Angela Rippon, the tabloid Standard commented in a front-page

"In the few short weeks since TV-AM went on the air the back-room intrigue and back-stabbing has proved far more fascinating than what has actually been seen on screen.'

Britain's audience measurement agency, BARB, reported that for the week ending April 24, the BBC picked up 100,000 viewers and had a total weekday audience of 1.6 million. TV-AM had 300,000 viewers

With TV-AM losing an estimated 750,000 pounds ($1.2 million) a month and its bankers refusing to extend new credit there was speculation the station might close. It was originally hoping for the equivalent of $32 million in advertising revenue in its first year

Chairman Lord Marsh announced recently that bankers and stockholders had reached an agreement securing TV-AM's financial future, but he gave no de-

But there is still speculation in the British press that TV-AM won't make it and reports of rivals who lost out on the initial franchise dusting off their presentations to jump in if "Good Morning Britain" goes under.

Before the debut of breakfast TV, skeptics said the British wouldn't give up their morning radio or newspaper to watch the "telly," as television is called here. Not as many have switched as the breakfast TV rivals

The BBC initially said it was aiming for an audience of 2 million while TV-AM was hoping for 2.5 million viewers. So far, the total weekday audience is hovering around 2 million

Cash-Needy Demos Ask $10 Million In Telethon

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) In what's billed as their largest fund-raiser ever. cash-needy Democrats are spending $5 million on a 1712-hour telethon intended to help kick the wealthier Republicans out of the White House.

The Democratic Party hopes to raise from $8 million to $10 million from initial viewers and even more when the program goes into syndicated reruns, said Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown, telethon chairman.

This will be the biggest fund-raiser the Democratic Party ever put on," Brown

The celebrity-studded, live NBC-TV telecast, "Celebrate America," is scheduled for Memorial Day weekend. It is to begin on the East Coast at 9:30 p.m. EDT and continue until 3 p.m. the next day, with only one interruption for late night news. The program will be tape-delayed for broadcast in the same time slot on the West Coast three hours later.

'The problem we have with our party is we can't reach our people except through television. We just can't compete." Brown said. "We have a lot of people out there who just don't know how or where to give. By displaying a toll-free. call-in pledge number, the Democratic National Committee wants the telethon to more than double the party's donor list and make up some of the difference between the

The telethon's lineup of about 100 entertainers is being developed by the Pasadena, Calif., production company of Russ Reid. Among many signed up so far are Paul Newman, Jack Lemmon, Mary Tyler Moore, John Forsythe, Kris Kristofferson, Sally Kellerman, Dennis Weaver, Helen Reddy. Woody Herman, Hal Linden, Rita Moreno, Carmen McRae, Bea Arthur and Jean Stapleton, said Ron Holder, assistant to talent producer Bob Precht.

The program is the first telethon produced by the Democrats since a series of four from 1972 to 1975. Those brought in $18 million combined, but that was to pay off party debts, not bolster campaign coffers as this year's is intended to do, Brown said.

Factory Becomes Arts Center

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) In a dockside factory where the U.S. Navy once built torpedoes to sink German and Japanese warships, Dan Meyer gently fashions rare woods, wire and ivory into harpsichords whose only target is the hearts of music lovers.

Symbols of the 65-year-old building's transformation from Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station to the newly renovated Torpedo Factory Art Center, where Meyer and 175 other artists work their craft, lie just a few feet apart

That is the distance between Meyer's bright, airy studio and a green, 21-foot torpedo, built under the same roof in September 1944, which occupies a place of honor in the center's main concourse

The freshly painted and polished Mark 14 torpedo, one of nearly 10,000 produced at the factory during World War II, was returned to its home by a squad of Navy Seabees last week. It was mounted in time for festivities last weekend marking the opening of the remodeled art center

After a year's construction at a cost of $4.3 million, borne entirely by the city of Alexandria, the new Torpedo Factory promises to enhance its reputation as a major tourist attraction in this colonial-era suburb of Washington.

houses 85 working studios and four cooperative galleries on more than 71,000 square feet of floor space in a three-story building that takes up most of a city block. The architects have preserved the flavor of the original factory, leaving pipes, ductwork and railings exposed in rich blues against the glass and oyster-white walls of the studios.

Meyer shares his first-floor studio with a violin bow maker who was lured here from Atlanta by Washington's National Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of its string players.

Elsewhere are painters, sculptors, print makers, potters, jewelers, a stained glass designer, artisans in fibers and glass etching. There are more than 400 applicants a year for space in the building.

The Torpedo Factory has come a long way since it was built in 1918. When the Navy halted torpedo production in 1946, the building became a government warehouse for storage of records, dinosaur bones and mummies from the Smithsonian Institution and documents from the Nuremberg war trials.

EPA May Order Exhaust Checks ornaments 10 Chinese wax

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) High carbon monoxide levels in downtown Durham and Raleigh may lead the Environmental Protection Agency to require auto exhaust inspection programs for the two cities. 'The potential is there,' said Tom Devine, director of the EPA's regional air and waste management division in Atlanta. Devine said his agency is reviewing apparent carbon monoxide violations in Durham and Even if Raleigh and Durham are ordered to have the program, it wouldn't start for several years because of regulatory procedures.

A Classic Race

This weekend marks the running of the 1983 Indianapolis 500, the best-known auto race in the world. Back in 1911, auto enthusiasts looked forward to the first running of the Indy 500 as eagerly as they do today. That year, the field of 44 cars featured the world's greatest drivers-David Bruce-Brown, Bob Burman, Ray Harroun, and Arthur Chevrolet. The first race was marred by accidents that took one life and caused at least six serious injuries. Ray Harroun's Marmon racer took the checkered flag and the $10,000 first prize with a blistering average speed of 74.59 miles per hour. Of course, life was slower in those days. Last year, Gordon Johncock had to average 162.029 miles per hour to win.

TELIAVIV, Israel (AP) - The government delayed issuing back-to-work orders against 8,500 striking Israeli public health doctors today to give them time to voluntarily return from their resort hideouts, Israel Radio reported.

.The doctors struck Sunday, crippling Israel's public health system. They fled to resort hotels to escape back-to-work orders, which the Cabinet had told the Health Ministry to issue today. But Assistant Health Ministry spokesman Eli Yosef said the orders had not been issued.

He gave no explanation for the delay, but Israel Radio said the Health Ministry wanted to give the doctors time to return to hospitals and clinics without coercing them.

Failure to comply with back-to-work orders is a criminal offense, punishable by two years in-prison and a $5,800 fine.

Many clinics and hospitals struggled with exhausted staffs today because the large majority of Israeli doctors work for the public health system and have joined the walkout. Many facilities were treating only emergency cases and some reported having only 10 percent of their professional staff on 'Medical services in this hospital will collapse sometime on Monday unless the doctors on duty are releived." said Dr. Yitzhak Moor, deputy director of Beilinson Hospital outside

For the last 212 months the doctors have conducted slowdowns and opened private practices to press their demands for more pay and a shorter work week. But Sunday was the first time they walked off the job en masse.

The situation is very difficult when we have to go underground." a doctor who declined to be identified told Israel Radio. He said he had fled with his wife and children and was "somewhere in the country." Asked when he would return, he said: "God knows."

As the convoys cruised out of Tel Aviv and other towns. Parliament debated the doctors' demands and authorities sealed the frontier with Egypt in case the refugee physicians tried to sneak over the border. But the Interior Ministry lifted the border restrictions after a few hours. Dr. Ram Yishai, head of the Doctor's Union, said the doctors had resigned and therefore could not be issued back-to-work orders. But Health Minister Eliezer Shostak said on Israel Radio that the Cabinet might order the doctors drafted into the army to force them to work.

Shostak appealed over the radio to the doctors to return to work, saving they had "made a very bad mistake."

Finance Minister Yoram Aridor has threatened to resign from the Cabinet if it agrees to the doctors' demands, Israeli newspapers said.

He claimed the treasury must spend $450 million to meet the doctors' requests, and has budgeted only $91 million. Newspapers said Shostak favored an increase in doctors' salaries totaling $136 million.

Public hospitals reported about 10 percent of the doctors reported to work. At Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital, 20 doctors reported to work out of the 200 normally there. At the city's Sheba facility, there were seven doctors for each 1,000 patients, hospital spokesmen said.

The strike was one of the most dramatic labor disruptions this country has known. President Chaim Herzog called it "a Greek tragedy." The nation's two chief rabbis joined him in pleading with the physicians to quit the protest.

Health authorities have not established that the doctors' action caused any avoidable hospital deaths since the protests

In the first stage of protest, doctors charged patients $20 a visit, rather than accept national health funds for payment. When that effort failed, they staged walkouts in rotating shifts and operated makeshift clinics in wedding halls, hotel rooms and rented public buildings.

Finance Minister Aridor rejected the doctors' demands. fearing they would tempt other public sectors to strike for pay hikes and crush his attempts to cut government spending. The doctors and the treasury have disclosed conflicting salary figures. The doctors say they gross between $600 and 1.120 a month, while the treasury says the figures are much

The doctors are demanding $925 to $1,750 a month and the treasury is offering $650-1,187. The doctors want the work week cut to 36 hours from the present 45, while the treasury offered to cut it to 42.

South Africa Bombs Bases

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - South African warplanes attacked African National Congress bases in Mozambique's capital today to retaliate for what the government called the 'cowardly car-bomb attack' that killed 17 people in Pre-

The raid on Maputo came three days after the carbombing that also wounded more than 200 in the South African capital, the worst terrorist blast in the country's history. The government blamed it on the ANC, the exiled black nationalist group fighting to overthrow South Africa's white-minority government.

Defense Minister Magnus Malan, in a statement released through the South African Press Association, said the planes also hit a Mozambican air force missile site he claimed provided defense for the ANC bases.

A South African civil aviation source, who declined to be named, said the raiders flattened an office block, blew up an ammunition de-pot and forced the Maputo airport to close:

A Western diplomat in Maputo could provide few details of the attack, but said in a telephone interview that witnesses had seen three jets and a cloud of smoke in an area called "Liberdad."

The Mozambican news agency AIM said the raid occurred at 5:20 a.m. (11:20 p.m. EST Sunday), south of the capital. But it provided no further details and Malan's statement did not provide any casualty figures. Malan said targets in-

ANC's "Transvaal machinery," which he claimed directs guerrilla attacks in Transvaal province. He said the planes also hit an ANC sabotage command post, a center where guerrillas train to use explosives, a logistical center and a supply center.

"Although the retaliatory attack could never compensate for the cowardly car-bomb attack in a busy central area of Pretoria, it will at least demonstrate to the world and South Africa's enemies that South Africa is ready to act where and when necessary." Malan's statement said.

In recent years the ANC has claimed responsibility for dozens of attacks on military bases, power plants, police stations and government offices in South Africa. But in most cases, few civilians have been killed or injured.

So far the ANC has declined to claim responsibility for the Pretoria blast, but said the attack was justified and fell within the group's guidelines because many of the casualties were military

The raid on Maputo came as no surprise, because Malan had vowed Friday night, hours after the carbombing, that his forces would retaliate.

In the past few years, South Africa has raided several targets in Mozambique, Lesotho and Angola to avenge past guerrilla actions. Last December, South African commandos rajded Maseru, Lesotho's capital, and killed 42 people.

> ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1-As South, vulnerable,

♦95 ♥83 ♦QJ107652 ♠K3 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 NT Pass 2 O Pass Pass ?

What action do you take? A.-North's raise to three diamonds shows maximum no trump and either four diamonds to an honor or A-K-x. Since your side has a known source of tricks, it seems that three no trump should be a good shot.

Q.2 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♦Q1076 ♥AJ763 ♦KJ ♦K6

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 1 7 Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now? A. - You could jump to three no trump, but that would be a lazy action. If partner has good three-card heart support, the hand might play better in that strain. You can check on partner's heart holding by bidding two spades. Since that is a reverse, it is forcing. It also guarantees a hand where the first-bid suit is longer than the second. Since partner knows you must have at least five hearts he will surely raise hearts at his next turn if he holds three to an honor.

Q.3-Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♦A985 ♥A76 ○KQ83 ♠J2 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 1 Pass Pass What do you bid now?

A. - You certainly want to be in game, but which game? If you could be sure that partner has four spad you could play in that stra . But there is a possibility that partner has five hear s and only three spades. Y can cater to both possibilities jumping to four hearts. P ner will correct to spaces with four cards in the suit or pass with five hearts and only three-card support for your suit.

Q.4-As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♦85 ♥97 ♦ AQ9 ♦ KQJ1054 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 2 Pass

Pass ? What do you bid now A .- In terms of point count. your hand is probably only worth a rebid of two no trump. But that doesn't take into account the playing strength of the club suit. At the table, we would jump to three no trump. The un forgivable sin is to rebid three clubs. That shows a long club suit and subminimum two-over-one ♦ KJ762 ♥ A965 ♦ QJ63 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 Pass 3 Pass 4 Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.-Partner has started a cue-bidding sequence, and it has done nothing to improve your hand - indeed, you have some duplication of values. Still, you have nothing to be ashamed of, and since you can cooperate with partner's slam efforts below the level of game; you should do so. Cue-bid four

Q.6-Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ◆Q7632 ♥874 ♦A94 ◆63 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 2 NT Pass Pass

What do you bid now? A.-You were a whit too weak for a positive response at your first turn. Now. however, you are too good for a simple preference of three hearts. Our choice is a jump to four hearts.

MX Missile May Face Do-Or-Die Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) The MX missile, whose decade of development has been dogged by controversy over whether it is needed and how to base it, faces likely do-or-die decisions in Congress this week.

The House was beginning debate today on a resolution that would free $625 million for engineering and flighttesting of the MX. The money was appropriated last December but temporarily frozen because of uncertainly as to how the intercontinental missile would be Immediately after the vote on the resolution Tuesday, the House plans to take up the section of the 1984 defense authorization bill that includes more than $4.5 billion in procurement and development money for the MX. More than $5 billion already has been spent on the program.

The MX, whose future was in doubt a few months ago after Congress rejected a "dense pack," closely spaced basing method, was given

In a carefully drawn compromise, the bipartisan panel called for deploying 100 of the 10-warhead weapons in existing Minuteman silos while beginning research on a more politically poular small, mobile missile for the 1990s.

The commission also called for new strategic arms control initiatives with the Soviet Union.

President Reagan has said production and deployment of the MX — a weapon he has vital to modernize the U.S. land-based missile force and induce the Soviets to agree to significant arms reductions at the negotiating table in Geneva.

Congressional critics questioned Reagan's desire for arms control, but he apparently picked up some votes from wavering congressmen by giving them written and personal assurances of his commit-in the defense program, MX advocates are optimistic they will be able to eke out a victory and keep the weapon from being scrapped.

Opponents, who say the missile is not needed and also could heighten chances of a nuclear war, also predict a close vote.

"Congress is likely to pass the MX with conditions," former CIA Director Stansfield Turner predicted Sunday on NBC's "Meet the But Turner, who opposes the MX, said such ble ... It's time for Congress to say to the president we want a deterrent strategy, not a war-fighting strategy and the MX only fits into a war-fighting strategy.' Brent Scowcroft, a retired general who headed the MX commission, said on the same interview show that the MX program "should go forward on its merits." Leaders of the Republican-run Senate also hope to obtain a floor vote on the MX resolution, along with a House-passed

The Senate also is expected to confirm President Reagan's nomination of former Sen. Richard Stone of Florida as a special envoy to Central America.
