Court Denies Tax Breaks For Goldsboro School

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, in an embarrassing setback for the Reagan administration, ruled today that the federal government may deny tax breaks to schools that practice racial discrimination.

By an 8-1 vote, the court decided that the Internal Revenue Service may withhold tax-exempt status for such schools even if the racial policies are dictated by sincerely held religious beliefs.

The administration, touching off a political uproar, had sought to revoke the 13-year-old IRS policy on grounds that Congress did not specifically authorize the agency to ban tax breaks for schools that discriminate.

The decision is also a defeat for Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., and Goldsboro Christian Schools in

Bob Jones bars interracial dating and interracial marriage of its students. Fewer than a dozen of its 6,300 students were

It began admitting black married students in 1971 and single blacks in 1975.

Goldsboro refuses to enroll blacks.

"History buttresses logic to make clear that to warrant exemption under (federal tax law) an institution must fall within a category specified ... and must demonstrably serve and be in harmony with the public interest," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for the court.

"The institution's purpose must not be so at odds with the common community conscience as to undermine any public benefit that might otherwise be conferred," he said.

The Reagan administration had originally supported the IRS policy denying tax exemptions to schools that practice racial discrimination, as had the Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations before.

But the Reagan administration reversed the policy in appeal in the case because, the Justice Department said, the administration itself intended to lift the ban on tax exemption for Bob Jones and Goldsboro.

Justice Department lawyers said the IRS policy was not justified without explicit authorization from Congress.

The Supreme Court had agreed in October 1981 to review a ruling by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which upheld

The administration's change in policy touched off a storm of protest from civil rights groups. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the government was explicitly condoning racial discrimination.

Reacting to that uproar, the administration asked Congress to give the IRS specific authority to bar tax breaks for schools that discriminate

President Reagan said his aim was to try and rein in a

Congress has not taken any action on the proposal, but some members claim Congress has already approved the IRS policy implicitly.

Speaking for the court today, Burger agreed that the actions of Congress since 1970 leave no doubt that the IRS. reached the correct conclusion in exercising its authority

"The correctness of the (IRS) commissioner's conclusion that a racial discriminatory private school is not 'charitable' within the common law concepts reflected in the code is wholly consistent with what Congress, the executive (branch) and the courts had repeatedly declared before 1970." Burger

The chief justice conceded that "denial of tax benefits will inevitably have a substantial impact on the operation of private religious schools."

Biggest Jump In Nine Months

Consumer Prices Rise Again

By SALLY JACOBSEN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) -Rising gasoline and housing costs sent consumer prices up 0.6 percent last month, the biggest jump in nine months, the government said today.

For the first four months of 1983, however, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of just 2.1 percent. Many economists say inflation for all of 1983 could match - or better - last year's 3.9 percent and one analyst called the April increase "a temporary blip.

Largely responsible for the April rise, the Labor Department said in today's report, was a 4 percent rise in gasoline prices, the result of the federal government's nickel-a-gallon tax hike April 1 and a general firming-up of retail prices.

Gasoline prices, down generally for the last two years, had tumbled a full 1 percent in March. At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes noted the impact of gasoline prices on the April data and said any cause for major con-

The jump, he said, "does not represent a long-term upward shift in inflation."

Also responsible for last month's increase in the Consumer Price Index was a 0.5 percent gain in housing

Food prices were up, too, but the 0.5 percent rise was off from March's 0.6 percent hike. Fresh fruit and vegetable costs, reflecting the scarcities brought on by unusually cold and wet conditions in much of the country, rose 1 percent, down from the whopping 4.4 percent increase of the previous month. In the last two prices have risen 17.7 per-

Medical care costs matched their 0.5 percent increase of March, well below the pace such prices had set in the preceding months. Even so, those costs have soared 9.9 percent in the last 12 months.

Consumer prices overall have risen a modest 3.9 percent in the last year.

If April's 0.6 percent seasonally adjusted increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

Consumer prices rose a tiny 0.1 percent in March after falling 0.2 percent in February and rising 0.2 percent in January. Inflation last rose at a 0.6 percent clip in July.

In advance of today's report, Ted Gibson, an economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, said the anticipated April jump in rary blip in the index.

"We don't think it's a fundamental upward shift in the rate of inflation." he

The bright inflation news has been widely attributed to the serious recession, from which the economy is rebounding, and the worldwide oil glut, which has produced a 14.1 percent drop in the record gasoline prices of two years ago

Youth Groups Form New Coalition For Teen-Agers

"Let's Talk," coordinator Patricia Byrd sentatives of Pitt County youth-serving agencies and other groups during an organizational and planning meeting Monday of Pitt County Action Coalition For Teens (A.C.T.).

The luncheon meeting was held at the First Presbyterian Church, where several local professionals commented on the gravity of the choices and responsibilities that teen-agers face and need guidance on from their parents, teachers, ministers and other friends.

Dr. Joseph Russo, an adolescent gynecology and obstetrics specialist with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, talked about the tremendous cost of teen-age pregnancy psychologically, biologically and socially. He said older teen-agers are apparently becoming more responsible about protecting themselves from pregnancy, bringing about a decrease of pregnancy nationwide in the 17-20 year-old range. However, he said, pregnancies in the 14-17 age group have shown a slight increase and pregnancies under 14 are way up. The younger teen-ager is the one at greatest risk, he said. She hasn't stopped growing physically. Then, suddenly, her body is called upon to support not only its own growth, but that of a baby, too.

It's the girls who don't feel good about themselves as persons who become pregnant as young teen-agers, he said, and many girls stop maturing emotionally, he said, when they experience an unplanned, unwanted pregnancy, whether the pregnancy results in delivery or abortion. Thus, you see women who are emotionally unable to cope at 35 with grown children who've had to suffer the consequences of being raised in an environment that has not supported them emotionally, physically or financially as every child should be entitled, he pointed

Electric Rate Hike Starts June

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission, at a noon meeting Monday, decided to move ahead with plans to begin tracking a 10.8 percent wholesale electric rate increase to retail customers on June 1.

Commissioners approved the rate hike - which will increase the cost of power to the average residential customer and to large industrial users by about 6 percent a month, and charges for small general service or co customers by about 7 percent - at a meeting April 12. GUC Director Charles Horne said the increase from North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency was necessary to pay the power agency's share of repairs needed at the Brunswick nuclear power station which is owned jointly by the power agency and Carolina Power & Light Co. Horne also told commissioners at the time that another rate increase, of approximately 8 percent, is expected about Oct.

Monday, Horne told commission members that because GUC would end the fiscal year with about $2 million more in retained earnings than had earlier been estimated, the rate hike could be postponed until October. However, the director noted that if the rate increase planned for June 1 was put into effect as planned, a rate increase in October might not be needed The commission is scheduled to meet with the City Council tonight to discuss 1983-1984 budget matters.

The indictments and 12 arrests were based on an 11-month investigation into the financial records and business transactions of people working in two major South Carolina-based drug smuggling operations, U.S. Attorney Henry Dargan McMaster said Monday.

Backyard Service Still Favored comes up annually around thing that is essentially a tax

Mayor Percy Cox told the gathering at the outset of Monday night's public hearing on refuse collection fees that "we are here to listen tonight" and listen they did as a host of local citizens expressed their views.

One point appeared to be made as the issue of garbage collection was discussed avoid changing the method of pick-up from the present backyard to a frontyard

The City Council, according to Cox, will give further consideration at a workshop to the feasibility of securing additional revenues through the establishment of a collection fee for garbage budget time. City Manager Gail Meeks, in explaining the need for revenues, said the new city budget will call for no new positions and no raises for current employees and if revenue sharing is not implemented, there will be no capital outlay money.

She said the council has reviewed a proposal to establish a collection fee of $3 per month per household, and a container refuse collection fee of $12 per month per container for business. commercial, institutional, churches, charitable, governmental or any other non-residential establishments serviced by containers

According to Mrs. Meeks, the fees would generate approximately $496,800 annually in additional revenue and would be equivalent to about 6.7 cents on the city tax. rate. Capital improvements would benefit from the additional funds, she said. Mrs. Meeks said the city's sanitation division, which administers garbage collections, had a budget of over $909,000 in 1982-83 and represents the lion's share of the total public works financial package

She said the fee could be placed on monthly utility bills, a system she said is in use in some other cities, and a penalty clause could be written into the ordinance to cover fees that are not paid.

Mrs. Meeks said the collection charge would be considered a user fee rather than a tax and each household unit would be assessed under the proposal. Dr. Frank Fuller, a former member of the council, said he was aware of the

Richard Littlefield of Sanata Drive said a collection assessment is another way of getting around a tax increase. He said in essence it would amount to a raise in taxes and not benefit him as a deduction on his federal of Lake Ellsworth, opposed the collection fee and asked why the council was not conducting a hearing on cutting back garbage service to once a week. Martin said there are too many luxury items in the budget and excesses that "could be trimmed before you start assessing necessities like garbage collection.'

Ed Stallings told the board that he was not in favor of a user fee but if it was necessary, it would be the better of two evils. He urged the council not to "put anything else on real property" or change the method of collection. Another former council member, John Howard, said that the question boils down to whether the board wants a user fee or a tax. He said the

Ideal For Many

All eastern North Carolina, as well as Greenville, is fortunate in the site-selection of Cypress Glen Retirement Community.

There is more to it than the "magnet" effect, drawing people into the Greenville area, or the obvious financial benefits the city will enjoy.

The 100-acre tract on which the community will be built offers potential homes for a large number of retirees. Those homes will be designed to suit the specific needs of the people for whom they are intended.

The proposed facility represents the fulfillment of a very real need in providing a gathering-point for retirees who have so much in common: a perspective on the art of living and prospects of enjoying their final years in the company of their peers. To many, the latter is important.

While it is fair to say association with varied age-groupings is stimulating, the preference for many lies in a day-to-day relationship with people of their own age-grouping ... whether it's teens-with-teens, young singles, young couples, the middle-years grouping and finally the elders.

So we see in the retirement community the promise of a setting that poses an ideal for a great many individuals.

Even at this early date it is easy to visualize scores of people looking forward to the day when the Cypress Glen Retirement Community is a going concern.

A Key To Ourselves

Modern telescopes and the ability to observe the universe from outside the Earth's atmosphere are giving astonomers their greatest opportunity to determine how our sun and solar system were formed.

Recently stars, much like our sun in its early stages, have been observed forming by the Infrared Astronomical Satellite which is a joint project of the United States, The Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

The star-forming process has been photographed by the telescope at Palomar Observatory.

Scientists can observe times past in the universe and they can identify objects in all phases of development. Startling new discoveries are being made every day now that we can move beyond the Earth's atmosphere. In the years ahead, we will learn much more about the universe, and as a result, much about ourselves.

Reagan And O'Neill Spar Again

WASHINGTON — Two workaday truck drivers, Frank Greco of New Jersey and Jerry Bliss of Michigan, testified in March before the Senate Labor Committee. Partly because of their sobering testimony, the committee last week voted unanimously to try again on a Labor-Management Racketeering Act. The idea is to do a little something to protect the working stiff.

The pending bill is sorely needed. Over the past 30 years, and especially since 1974, industrial pension funds have mounted into billions of dollars. Most such funds are honestly administered, usually by joint labor-management trustees, but examples abound of collusion and abuse. During the 97th Congress, the Senate twice passed a bill intended to address the problem, but the bill died in an indifferent House. Now the principal sponsors, Orrin Hatch of Utah and Sam Nunn of Georgia, are pressing for action on a schedule that will leave the House no excuse for

The bill would make it a felony, punishable by up to five years in prison, for officials of either labor or management to abuse the trust reposed in them. Other provisions would increase penalties for buying and selling labor peace. Under this bill, an official convicted of corrupt conduct would be suspended from office the moment a guilty verdict were returned; he could not continue to influence pension decisions while his conviction languished on appeal. Corruption on the waterfront, centered in the International Longshoremen's Association, sparked the interest of Senate investigators 30 years ago, but nothing much happened until the Justice Department cracked down in 1975. As a result of the department's work, more than a hundred high-level union officials and shipping compnay executives were convicted on charges of extortion, kickbacks, obstruction of justice and income tax evasion. Meanwhile, abuses within the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund were inviting congressional attention. The Employees Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) in 1974 had created new oceans of pension money, and the sharks were swarming in.

Local 478 in Union, N.J., educated the Senate committee in certain facts of life. His local is a part of the Teamsters Joint Council 73, which also includes locals 945 and 863. Four officers of Local 945 were convicted for almost two years while their convictions were being appealed. Two officers of Local 863 were indicted last July for "ripping off the health and welfare fund.

Another New Jersey union, Local 560, was dominated by Anthony Provenzano, who stayed in office for three years while his conviction for extortion was under appeal. After serving a seven-year sentence, he returned to his union office only to be convicted of murder. He was replaced by his daughter as secretary-

In Detroit, Jerry Bliss managed to win a hard-fought election as secretarytreasurer of Teamsters Local 337. In retaliation, union bosses at the international level stripped him of responsibilities and reduced the salary for the office frim $5,700 a month to $500 a month. Locals 299 in Detroit and 406 in Grand Rapids fell under the influence of a couple of characters convicted of

As Bliss remarked in his testimony, the crooks "would have had far different and shorter union careers" if the pending bill have been in effect at the time of their convictions. The bill would get the bad apples out of the barrel before extended damage could be done

It is hard to understand the unwillingness of the House to act on this legislation. Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, has endorsed it. Such Senate liberals as Kennedy of Massachusetts have urged its adoption. The only persons who would benefit by defeat of the bill are the criminal manipulators who have their hands on ERISA trusts. Millions of wage-earners, both union and non-union, would be given small measure of protection against abuse of their money. This may not be a perfect bill, but it is a good bill. Let's get it on the books.

CIA Pinpoints Ills Of Nepotism

WASHINGTON — For good reason or bad, "Kiddiegate" has entered its second month — longer than Washington's latest controversy over political nepotism need have lasted.

But the ongoing saga about hiring practices at the United States Information Agency (USIA) may yet prove worth its weight in news print, if only as instruction for those who take such favoritism seriously and those who don't: Nepotism isn't easily avoided.

USIA Director Charlie Wick has been an easy target. The brain behind Snow White and the Three Stooges has done some silly things in his term, from producing "Let Poland Be"

Poland" to humming the Marseillaise loudly for France's ambassador at a Washington reception. Wick's appointment of nearly a dozen Reaganaut scions to USIA posts only confirms a leadership style that has undermined the agency's status before congressional appropriations panels as much as any concern for the national debt.

On average, the appointments which prompted an inquiry by Sen. Edward Zorinsky (D-Neb.) are no worse than the placement of less fashionable folk in similar positions. Of course, Caspar Weinberger Jr., 36, who, before his resignation last Monday was allegedly boasting CIA connections at the Cannes Film Festival, is said by a former USIA supervisor to have skills that "have not been properly applied." (Ironically, one agency offical had seen fit to hand young Weinberger a $4,000 "merit" pay raise on his $50,000-plus salary.) Similar euphemisms have been applied to Daniel Wattenberg, 23, son of neo-conservative columnist and Reagan appointee Ben Wattenberg; according to USIA, the younger wattenberg, a candidate for a cultural affairs post in Paris, has 'studied French' in college and "has experience as a writer and an editorial research assistant.'

AYet Barbara Haig, who works for USIA oat, is trained as a paralegal and described by intimates to be as determined a worker as her father, Al. And 23-year-old Monica (daughter of national security adviser William) Clark, appointed as assistant to the public affairs tfficer in Bonn, is at least "bilingual in German."

The mixed bag of talent underscores Zorinsky's zealousness in asking the General Accounting Office to investigate. To be sure, the USIA admits that Ronald Reagan's appointments to the 7,700-employee agency (62) are more than twice those of Jimmy Carter (26). Yet when the Senate can confirm much larger percentages of political hacks to ambassadorial posts (despite the vehement complaints of career Foreign Service types), Zorinsky's concern about USIA defies logic for good breeding defies criticism. While the Californian routinely asserts an interest in bringing "professionalism" to USIA, his old preferences only make his agency appear to be a dumping ground for incompetents, has-beens and the homeless. That, in turn, helps reinforce a common perception that the USIA is mismanaged, propagandistic and unnecessary

Yet if there's any buzzword understood by public- and private-sector workers alike, it's "connections." Journalists, businessmen and especially first-time jobseekers can't deny it.

Nor can members of Congress: Only two years ago, "Roll Call," Capitol Hill's weekly newspaper, found that at least 27 House employees were relatives of congressmen, including three Powerful committee chairmen; the revelation came despite the fact that Congress must endure the nepotism restriction that other federal agencies do

Put bluntly, what field is immune to the influence of friends and family on hiring? To inveigh against the USIA chief too harshly is to ignore the cheesy practice elsewhere. None are acceptable, but as Watergate apologist Victor Lasky might have said, "It didn't start with Kiddiegate.

But what happens down the line if mortgage rates rise, bringing with them the monthly payments of all those variable-rate home loans that are now being urged on buyers?

Since America's priority was to get out of the terrible economic fix in which the economy was mired, this is but one of several issues that probably haven't been dealt with as thoroughly as they might have been.

They solved the immediate problem, but did they create difficulties for the

There are restraints on the heights to which variable interest loans can rise, but any rise at all can upset budgets. Just ask the savings banks, some of whom went under because of a rise in the cost of money

In fact, a rise of just 2 percentage household budget, an impact of more than $70 a month on a $50,000 mortgage payable over 20 years.

In theory, this should cause relatively little trouble, because by then the borrower's pay raises will cover the added expense. But maybe not. Rising interest rates generally are accompanied by higher prices. And rising prices and interest rates often if not always lead to recession and layoffs.

At the moment, interest rates show little sign of any major increase, but there are reasons for this. The economy is operating far below its capacity, and producers have been able to finance their businesses internally.

But as the economy expands, producers may be forced to borrow in order to expand facilities. Will the credit pool be sufficient to accommodate this expansion? Or, diluted by the need to finance government debts, will it be insufficient? And if it is insufficient, will rates take off again?

The employment question is far from being hypothetical. Over the past few years many thousands of workers have lost their jobs to efficiency programs and cannot expect them back. Their numbers include both blue-collar and white.

The overwhelming thrust of management during the past few years has been to raise productivity through efficiencies, and that thrust has a long way to go. In general, it means producing more with less, including manpower.

Scholars who have studied the situation maintain there is a good side to it. That is, more efficient production means greater profits to be spread throughout the economy, even among those who aren't working. But that, of course, doesn't solve the social problem of unemployment. The potential problem with IRAs is strictly hypothetical, but if the past is a criterion you may be sure that many of those who put money away for retirement will be tempted by economic stress to tap it sooner than that.

Great enthusiasm greeted the introduction of IRAs. People felt they needed a haven from income taxes, and so they were willing to tie up their money far into the future, until their retirement years, in fact.

But, the question arises, what will their mood be in a severe downturn, when the immediate need for money becomes more pressing than a comfortable retirement off in the future?

Bill Would Protect Working Stiff

WASHINGTON (AP) - After a brief lull, President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. have resumed their roles as symbols of the opposite ends of political argument in the nation's capital.

This time, though, O'Neill, D-Mass., is increasingly seeing himself as a sort of a one-man "truth squad" when it comes to Reagan.

O'Neill comes by the role easily. He talks of firmself as the leader of the Democratic Party, "until such time as my party has a presidential nominee. He feels a particular responsibility as the constitutional officer of the only branch of the national government still under Democratic control.

But more to the point, O'Neill feels he is the guardian of the liberal tradition of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the New Deal, a tradition that Reagan and his conservative allies have tried to dismantle as being the root of skyrocketing budget deficits. And, O'Neill thinks reporters are letting Reagan get away with too much. Following Reagan's nationally broadcast news conference last week, O'Neill grumped that the White House press corps was "playing softball and throwing slow pitches." He added that Reagan

"was fouling them off." O'Neill, though, has resumed his game of hardball.

For the first two years of Reagan's presidency, O'Neill could do little more than watch as Reagan's troops on Capitol Hill rolled to a series of victories.

Last fall's congressional elections changed the picture a bit by increasing the Democratic majority in the House and allowing O'Neill to tighten his grip on the chamber.

Strength For Today

Some people throw happiness away with both hands. They have love, opportunity, good health — the makings of a happy life. But because they lack self-control, or have a jealous spirit, or nurse a grudge, or love money too much, they cast all chances of happiness away in exchange for some bauble, some tinseled toy not worth the hav-

It very often happens that married couples, because they greatly dislike some little failing in each other, destroy the possibility of deep and abiding happiness. People who have been friends for years sometimes disagree over some petty matter and henceforth are strangers to each other. Jealousy has shoved many persons off the road to happy, purposeful living, and has kept on pushing them until they were over the precipice.

Why do we cast away our treasure so recklessly? It's easy to throw happiness away, but happiness thrown away is as hard to pick up as spilled water.

Teachers Getting Grants

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -The North Carolina Humanities Committee is donating $62,000 to help 45 eighth-grade teachers take a refresher course in history before they begin teaching a required course next year, an official said Monday

The State Board of Education last year decided to make North Carolina history a required course after it had been discontinued for 12 years. But the state later cut funding for in-service training in half, leaving no way to retrain its 1,000 history teachers in the field.

Alice Barkley, spokesman for the committee, said her organization has contracted with the National Humanities Faculty to conduct a twoweek institute for teachers at Wake Forest University.

John Ellington, in charge of social studies for the Department of Public Instruction, said all North Carolina history teachers need a refresher course and that the department welcomed the financial assistance.

He said most of the teachers had been teaching North Carolina history as a part of U.S. history but were not teaching it as a separate

Avenging Son Goes To Prison

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - A frustrated man who waited four years for the state to execute the killer of his parents, then set up the murder of the Death Row inmate, was sentenced to prison by a judge who said he "understood" the crime but could not condone it

"People cannot take the law into their own hands," said Circuit Judge James Morris, sentencing Richard "Tony" Cimo to eight years in prison.

Cimo had first denied any knowledge of the prison bombing in September that killed 24-year-old Rudolph Tyner, but pleaded guilty Monday to conspiracy to murder, threatening to kill by means of an explosive and failure to report his knowledge of a felony

Donald "Pee Wee" Gaskins, a convicted mass murderer, has been sentenced to death after being found guilty in March of getting a booby-trapped intercom placed in Tyner's cell at the Central Correctional Institution and detonating the explosives. Two other men face trial in the case and a third has pleaded guilty

Friends and co-workers testified that Cimo, a 36-year-old bricklayer and father of two, became distraught after his mother and stepfather, Myrtie and Bill Moon, were shot to death at their Murrells Inlet grocery store in 1978.

Tyner was arrested and found guilty, but the conviction was reversed because of prosecution error and a new trial was ordered, disturbing and frustrating Cimo, witnesses said. Tyner, who was again convicted and sentenced to death, also boasted about the murder in prison, according to other

Solicitor Jim Dunn of Horry County said that while Cimo tried to work within the legal system. Tyner was grinning at him during the murder trial

"I loved my father and mother very much," Cimo told the judge at his sentencing. He said he was able to handle the pressure until he heard that Tyner's first conviction had been reversed

'That hurt me bad after all that hard work," he said. "We just wanted to get it over with. People in the prison told me how my mother was begging on her knees before he shot

'Tony Cimo is a tragic figure," said Deputy Solicitor Richard Harpootlian. "He's even more tragic now.

Before pronouncing sentence, Morris said, "I do not sympathize or condone what you did, but I understand it. The wheels of justice do turn slowly. There are others such as yourself who would like to see them move more swiftly.

The slow pace ensures that no mistakes are made and that justice is served, the judge said.

"We cannot have people taking the law into their own hands and exacting punishment," Morris added. "I don't think you are a hardened criminal and need to be put away for a long time. But in order to deter others, I am going to incarcerate

Cimo, who is free on $10,000 bond, was ordered to report to prison June 23. Charges against him of murder and accessory before the fact of murder were dropped earlier, said Harpootlian, so the judge would have some leeway in

Cimo had testified at Gaskins' trial that he talked about killing Tyner but never sent Gaskin explosives and was surprised when he heard that Tyner was dead. However, much of the evidence against Gaskins came from tapes that he kept of the arrangements with Cimo

Of the other men charged in the case, prison inmate Jack Martin, 42, pleaded guilty in April to conspiracy to commit a felony and was sentenced to three years in prison. James Donald Cooper, of Murrells Inlet, and prison inmate Gerald McCormick, 47, face charges of conspiracy to commit murder and will probably be tried later this week, said Harpootlian

The air force's command intelligence officer, Flight Lt. Brett Biddington, left for Bendigo, 100 miles northwest of Melbourne, to "find out whether there is a rational explanation" for the UFOs.

Biddington already has interviewed several people who had reported seeing the UFOs and was eager to have a close look at some photographs taken by an amateur photographer and Bendigo's radio announcer, Mike Evans.

Evans's negatives will be submitted for scientific analysis, possibly in the United States, Biddington said.

House Panel Hears How Stolen Cards Are Used

WASHINGTON (AP) -Credit card fraud is a "very lucrative business," com plete with training seminars designed to increase the profits from stolen or counterfeit cards, a criminal contends.

Hidden behind a black hood and cape, with his voice disguised, "Mr. Witness" told a House Banking subcommittee how he had earned a living through credit card scams.

"I wouldn't say I was super, but I existed," the man said Monday. "I went from hot dogs to caviar.'

On a good day, he said, he was able to charge $5,000 in cash and merchandise to stolen or counterfeit credit cards

The witness said schools were set up to educate street workers about the finer art of credit card fraud. Instruction focused on how to speak, how to dress and how to deal with sales clerks.

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY

"You wouldn't expect someone to use a gold American Express card wearing blue jeans and sneakers, said the man, who was arrested 20-25 times and has since become a police informant. When the course is completed, he said, "the diploma is the green.'

Contending that credit card fraud is a quick way to earn "easy money," he added, "If you get caught, what will they do to you? Slap you on the wrist?"

The witness was allowed to testify in disguise before the House Banking consumer affairs and coinage subcommittee because he feared for his life, according to the panel's chairman, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-III.

Security was tight in the hearing room. Observers had to pass through metal detectors before they were allowed to enter, and plainclothes and uniformed law enforcement officials stood guard while the man testified.

The penalty for betraying a fraudulent credit card operation is death, the witness said. He said one person who was in the management level of his organization was killed after he "spun away and made his own deal. ... He cut somebody out of a large sum of money. He like stole from the industry.

The witness said Annunzio's estimate that $1 billion was lost last year to credit card fraud was "very conservative.

the refuse fee. Howard warned the board not to let capital improvements go down the drain, saying equipment has to be kept up. He added, "Do what you have to do" to meet the revenue needs.

Richard Duncan of East Rock Springs Road said that possibly a combination of user fees and taxes would provide the needed funds and he cited the possibility of charging a fee for rescue services. Duncan also said he would prefer to see a charge for actual users of recreational facilities, noting that some residents use them more than others and he would rather see fees raised on things people are using.

Duncan was one of the few who indicated he would go along with frontyard collection services. He acknowledged that the method would 'not be as pretty but maybe we can't afford the beauty' of having backyard service.

Martin said a fifth of the city's budget or about 10 cents out of the 49 cents tax rate is tied up in parks and recreation. He recalled that Mrs. Meeks said only $32,000 is generated by the local recreation programs. Martin

R.S. Pollard Jr. said that each time city officials visit other towns to see their situations, "you come back and tax us to death." In January, the department changed the way it measures homeownership costs by calculating how much homeowners would charge if they rented their homes

Charles King, a former mayor here, said he was satisfied with the way the service is provided here now. He said the garbage pick-up is the finest thing in town.

Edith Webber also commended the city for its garbage and trash collection

Jim Scott, representing Peoples Baptist Temple, expressed opposition to any increase in charges but he asked that if it is implemented, non-profit organizations be exempt.

A.C. Jackson of Tryon Drive said he had seen the garbage collection method shift from front to back yards over the years. He said he is opposed to any collection charge, contending it would start at $3 but probably go up next year.

Albert Smith, who manages Oakmont Square Apartments, said he had been at Oakmont for 13 years and "all of a sudden we have to bear this burden." Mrs. Meeks assured Smith that the owners of the complex would not be charged for the dumpsters it now has since it is a residential development. She said the residents of each apartment who pay individual utility bills would be assessed the collection fee, not the Oakmont Square owners.

Rhea Markello, president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, urged the council to 'give serious study and consideration" to the recommendations contained in the report submitted to the city by the mayor's advisory committee in 1981 "before making a final decision on ways to obtain additional revenue.

Durward Harris Jr. of Harris Supermarkets cited the annual costs the grocery firm pays for its dumpsters and said that if residents are allowed to take care of their own garbage disposal, the Harris containers will be filled even more rapidly than they are now. Harris said his firm has a lot of unsolicited help in filling up the dumpsters.

Cox noted that the council has not discussed allowing citizens to handle their own garbage in lieu of paying a fee. He said it was only one possibility that could be discussed that 12- to 15-year-olds are in the high-risk group for getting into trouble with the law. She said her office stands ready to work with the community to prevent this kind of waste of persons and funds.

"Booze is still our biggest drug problem," Dr. Jack Allison, director of emergency services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, told the group. He also addressed teen-age pregnancy and said that use of alcohol, smoking and eating junk food greatly endanger teen-age mothers and their babies.

Jesse Harris, Greenville Community Relations officer, talked about the financial difficulties encountered by teen-agers who start families. He pointed out that a monthly AFDC payment for a woman with one child is $165 and the "cost of renting the average dump" in which to live in Greenville is $150.

Bill Byrd, professor of community health in the ECU School of Allied Hatlh and Social Work, said he believes the schools, the church, families, and the government have "done an excellent job of evading reality," and thus have been irresponsible in dealing with the problems of teen-agers. He called on the group to take a detached realistic look at what needs to be done to assist teeangers in becoming responsible citizens. 'Let's Talk," Patricia Byrd said, is to be a campaign for responsible parenthoods to be conducted during October. It will be planned throughout the summer, with input from the community welcome. She said that the planning is made possible by a seed grant from the Governor's Advocacy Council for Children and Youth. A goal of "Let's Talk," she said is to "raise community awareness of some of the causes and consequences of adolescent problems and needs, to enhance parent-child communication, and to secure a mandate and direction from the community about where energy and resources to address families' needs should go.

Price Is Right For Reds

The Associated Press For the Cincinnati Reds, the Price is right - again.

Cincinnati left-hander Joe Price, thrust into the starting rotation by early-season injuries, then sidelined May 1 with an elbow injury, returned to action for the first time in three weeks Monday night and went right at the St. Louis batters, throwing hard for six innings to help the Reds edge the sagging Cardinals 2-1.

Elsewhere in the National League it was New York 4, San Francisco 3; Montreal 3, San Diego 1; Atlanta 6, Pittsburgh 3; Los Angeles 2, Philadelphia 0, and Houston 3, Chicago 2.

Little Time Allowed To Enjoy 23-20 Victory

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) You can't blame the Birmingham Stallions for feeling slightly cheated despite a five-game winning streak.

Scott Norwood's 46-yard field goal at 4:32 of overtime Monday night boosted the Stallions to a 23-20 victory over Michigan and left both teams tied with 7-5 records in the United States Football League's Central Division, one game behind the Chicago

The problem is, the Stallions had to be right back out on the practice field today, getting ready for a game Friday night with the Denver Gold.

"We've got to wake up tomorrow and think about Denver right away," said quarterback Bobby Lane, who tossed a pair of secondquarter touchdown passes to stake the Stallions to a 17-7 halftime lead. "But I think we've laid down a solid base for Denver with this game. This is the chance you wait for and we made the most of it.

Birmingham Coach Rollie Dotsch said the dramatic victory seemed to bring his team together.

"Our players believe now," Dotsch said. "We may or may not get to the playoffs this year, but we're laying down an awfully good foundation.'

A crowd of 20,042 was on hand for the game in the 80,000-seat Silverdome - far fewer than the 32,862 who witnessed last week's victory over the New Jersey Generals, but slightly ahead of the Panthers' average of 19,582 attendance.

The Stallions almost won on a freak play moments before the end of regulation. Michigan's Fred Logan intercepted a pass intended for Ron Frederick on the Birmingham 1-yard line, rolled into the end zone and lost the ball attempting to spike it. Darryl Mason fell on the ball and one official Viola, 2-2, allowed eight hits and struck out seven. He had snapped a personal eightgame losing streak last week in beating Oakland 16-5, though he wasn't able to finish the game. Nonetheless, that effort made his job against Baltimore a little easier.

"Winning that first game last week took all the pressure off me," he said. "It was a heavy load off my shoulders. Now, if I can do something about those home runs."

Viola, who allowed a tworun homer by Cal Ripken and a solo shot by Gary Roenicke, has now given up 12 homers in 53 2-3 innings this season.

Minnesota displayed plenty of long-ball power, too, starting in the fifth inning. Brunansky - who knocked in five runs - hit a two-run homer, Engle followed with another homer and Ward socked a three-run job in the fifth inning.

Ward, who also doubled and singled, smacked a solo homer and Brunansky added a three-run shot in a ninth as Baltimore lost its fourth straight game.

Kunkel Battles Cancer, Prepares To Watch Son After Retirement

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) - Two cancer operations couldn't make American League umpire Bill Kunkel retire. But the presence of another Kunkel in the league could.

If Kunkel's his oldest son Jeff plays in the AL, Kunkel has said that he will retire rather than umpire in Jeff's games. And Jeff Kunkel is rated a likely first-round choice in the major-league draft on June 6. The Rider College shortstop said he will forego his senior year at the school if he is selected high in the draft.

Baseball scouts say Jeff could be anywhere from the second to the sixth player selected in the draft. The Texas Rangers, an American League team with the third pick, and the Chicago Cubs, a National League team with the sixth, are reportedly the most interested in a shortstop who can hit.

Jeff Kunkel's credentials go beyond his .400 average, school record 57 hits and 40 runs scored, and six homers this season. He has the determination to succeed that was planted in him as a toddler and which blossomed during his father's two-year battle with cancer.

A lot of scouts have asked me if I really want to play baseball, and I tell them that the one thing in my life that I want is to play and follow in my father's footsteps," Jeff said. 'My dedication to do so is even more since my father's fight with cancer. It's an obsession with me to do well and follow

You hear about cancer all the time, but it never really hits home until it happens in your family. We are a close family anyway. In my younger years, Dad constantly helped me to develop the proper fundamentals. He kept telling me over and over that you must have the 'Big W.

'That's the 'Big Want.' You must have this along with heart and desire to succeed. The 'Big W' got bigger after Dad

Scouts have noticed the change in Jeff since his father was first stricken with rectal cancer during a series in Minnesota

John Hagemann, a Baltimore scout who has been watching Jeff since his junior year in high school, said, "He wasn't ready for professional baseball as a high school senior, as some kids are. But each year since then, he has improved tremendously. The biggest change has been in the past year.

However, not many people outside the family know that Jeff had to fight his own battle, several years before his father's began, to get his chance in baseball. During his junior year at Middletown South High School, he incurred a severe leg fracture trying to break up a double play. He was in a cast for four months and doctors told him he might never

Only a long period of rehabilitation, including exercises that sometimes brought him to tears, got him back on the field. Watching him go through that difficult period was what made Bill Kunkel think that his son had a chance to make it.

Jeff returned his senior year to win area and state honors as a shortstop with wide range and a strong arm, but his first game as a freshman at Rider almost made him wish he had stuck to his alternate position, pitcher, like his father. In that first game, he had five balls hit to him at short and he made

He hasn't done that poorly in a full season since then. He made the All-Jersey College team every year at Rider and has been an All-East Coast Conference first team selection

Last summer, he was with the Kenai Peninsula Oilers of the tough Alaska Collegiate League, which has produced many major leaguers. He led that league in homers although it has big parks with top college pitching.

Oddly, Bill Kunkel's second cancer operation in February has given him the oppurtunity to watch Jeff play at Rider, which he never had when he was umpiring. Bill returns to work at Yankee Stadium this weekend, but he will be home on draft day to offer Jeff advice - just as he has been advising him since Jeff was barely old enough to hold a bat.

The elder Kunkel, who was a relief pitcher with Kansas City in 1961 and 1962 and with the New York Yankees in 1963, didn't teach Jeff how to hit.

"I don't think he could," Jeff laughed. "I was home. I lifted weights to gain strength, and the coaching at Rider was

Blues' Producer Turning To Baseball

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball season won't end with the World Series. "Bay City Blues," coming to NBC next fall from the producer of "Hill Street Blues," is about the major league dreams of a minor league baseball town.

Steven Bochco, the Emmy-winner who revitalized the tired cop-on-the-beat TV theme, will look for more of life's absurdities - real and imagined - this time with baseball as the backdrop.

Can you see the bickering Hill and Renko as a double-play combination? Wild-eyed Belker as team mascot? Pompous Howard Hunter as team owner'

The Class AA Bay City Bluebirds — and the working-class California town supporting and feeding off the ball club — will find their own identities as the Tuesday-night series develops.

But you can be sure that Bochco and the writers he recruited from "Hill Street" and "M-A-S-H" will create characters with more dimension than their baseball cards.

'I've always been a big baseball fan," says Bochco. "Last July, I went to an old-timers' game at Dodger Stadium. There were old guys with big guts hanging over their belts, but they could still hit the ball. It struck me that this game defines our culture. We worship ballplayers and the game itself. But underneath the game is a wonderfully complex and fearful

"Guys going up, guys desperately trying to hang on - and they're all affected by the random nature of the game. There's some real interesting dynamics inside and outside, too, with the working-class town struggling with a difficult

"But it's not actually a show about baseball," adds Bochco. "It's primarily a show about people."

Bochco is aware that sports series have not fared well Programs like the quickly canceled "Ball Four" appeal to male viewers, and it's the women who control the dial in "Our characters will have mass appeal because people can laugh at them and will, most importantly, be able to identify with their situations and feelings," he says. "People get involved in 'Hill Street,' even though their only contact with the law might be a jaywalking ticket. The most pertinent stuff we do is the human stuff.'

The cast for "Bay City Blues" has not been set, but Bochco is assembling a large ensemble of relative unknowns to play the parts of athletes, wives, management, baseball hangers-on, townspeople and, don't forget, the team mascot, 'The Bluebird of Happiness.'

"I promise you the cast won't be star-studded," says Bochco. "They'll all be rookies, journeymen and old faces seen in new ways. Like in 'Hill Street,' we'll be telling multiple stories with some degree of continuation to those

'Bay City Blues" will not be "Hill Street Blues" in spikes, but Bochco did invite comparisons because of the new show's

"The obvious difference is the subject matter," he says. "You don't do a baseball show with the same amount of heat as a cop show. We're not going to have chases, shootouts and people being killed. The two shows will be populated by different groups of characters with very different priorities in Production on "Bay City Blues" was stalled when Bochco. and his production studio, MTM, couldn't establish a license fee with NBC. After compromise, the parties agreed to a per-episode payment over $850,000 - more than "Hill Street" got in its third season.

"We needed it to build the stadium, fill it with bodies (reportedly 500 extras) and carry a very large cast," says

Bochco and Michael Kozoll were able to make "Hill Street Blues" their way because, in order to entice them to the network, then-NBC president Fred Silverman had to offer a creative blank check

'The freedom issue hasn't even come up this time," says

YOUR DAILY from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you can expect delays so tackle duties of a career nature early in the day. Study a civic matter carefully before making any judgment on its faults. Be logical. ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure you don't vent your ire on a higher-up or you could soon regret it. Don't quibble over a pressing bill. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some new enterprises may seem to be profitable, but they will need further study before making definite plans. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have promised to keep your end of a bargain, and now want to get out of it, but it's to your best interest to carry through. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) An old friend could be annoying now, but you could have brought this on yourself. Strive for increased harmony.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) It is wise to handle regular duties instead of seeking pleasure. Work diligently to gain your goals. Use care in motion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to engage in creative work. Show others that you have much talent. Sidestep a well-known troublemaker. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your environment and make plans to make it more comfortable for you. Arrive on time for appointments. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Much care in motion is advised to avoid possible accident. Express happiness with close ties in the evening. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You want to improve your financial position, so take time to study the situation before investing. Be wise

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may think you're not getting ahead as fast as you should, but doing anything rash at this time would be foolhardy. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact those involved in mutual plans you have and put them in operation in a most intelligent fashion. Use common sense. PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't rely so much on friends now and get busy on own duties. Make sure you don't lose your temper with anyone IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will want to solve difficult problems and will do remarkably

More Attacks Set In South Africa

African National Congress members to stay in Mozambique despite the South African jet strike against suspected ANC bases that killed six and wounded 40, Information Minister Jose Luis Cabaco said today.

The ANC warned of more guerrilla action against South Africa in statement telexed from Lusaka, Zambia, to The Associated Press in Johannesburg. "The only way we can truly honor these victims of aggression is by intensifying our offensive within South Africa," the statement said.

Cabaco traveled with foreign journalists to the sites of Monday's air strike by South African air force jets. The raid on the outskirts of Maputo was in retaliation for an ANC car bombing that killed 18 people and wounded 216 in Pretoria South Africa, last week

The minister stood in front of one of the houses strafed and rocketed by the South African jets and shouted, "Does this look like the ANC?" The six sites included a jam factory, where three workers died, and a day-care center, where a 6-year-old child was killed.

At the day-care center, a 23-year-old woman described the

"We were inside, changing the clothes of children for them to come out and play. Then we heard such a noise. We thought it was thunder. We felt something hitting the wall and saw smoke. Then we took the children and ran.

blown out and gates smashed.

Cabaco said Mozambique would continue to allow ANC members and any other genuine refugees to enter the

"It is a principle of our constitution," Cabaco said. But he added ANC members would never be allowed to carry arms against South Africa. Asked what would happen to those who did so, he replied, "They would certainly be arrested."

"Our sovereignty has been attacked by a neighboring country," Cabaco said late Monday night.

Cabaco made it clear that despite Monday's raid he did not consider his Marxist government to be headed for an active war against the more powerful military of the white-minority government of South Africa.

Asked whether Mozambican officials would be willing to confer with South African officials to seek peaceful solutions, he replied, "Certainly Mozambique's news agency, AIM, and South African officials said seven jets swooped over the city Monday morning, warned the Maputo airport tower an attack was about to begin, then unleashed a barrage of rockets and machine-gun fire.

Accounts of casualties differed. Mozambique said six died and 40 suffered wounds, seven critically. It said the fighters had struck at a residential neighborhood and that the casualties were nearly all Mozambican.

South Africa said scores could have been killed, considering intelligence reports that 350 or more ANC members might have been inside six targeted buildings and compounds.

Cabaco said the jets swooped onto their targets from over the Indian Ocean, which would place the sun behind them and hide their dives until the last moment. He said the jets caught people on their way to work.

In South Africa, spokesmen for the ruling National Party, along with its right-wing critics, strongly supported the Opposition groups that usually challenge the Nationalists on apartheid, or race-separation, issues, backed the raid but said it could increase tensions in the region.

Charge Is Filed In Bailey Death

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A recently dis-charged U.S. Army soldier was been charged with murdering a Belk-Tyler department store executive earlier this year, police said Monday. Police Chief Danny Dixon said Richard Dale Johnson, 36, formerly of Fort Bragg, was being sought on a murder warrant.

Johnson is accused of killing Luther Anderson Bailey, 56, of Nashville, N.C. He was executive vice president of Belk-Tyler, a 15-store chain based in Rocky Mount.

Bailey's body was found in a motel room in Fayetteville at about 10:18 a.m. Feb. 11. He was nude and had been beaten on the head and strangled, authorities said.

His wallet was missing and jewelry had been stripped from his body.

Bailey's car was found three days later in a parking lot on Fort Bragg grounds.

Detectives said Bailey had been in Fayetteville for a court appearance involving an automobile accident in late 1982.

Bailey was not married and lived with his mother in Nashville.

Police declined to reveal details of the investigation.

would get at least two trump each, and West still had four. When Tommy led his last club, West was forced to ruff low. Dummy overruffed with the nine. The jack of diamonds was returned and Tommy ruffed in hand with the king!

West could do no better than overruff with the ace and return a trump. But there was no deflecting Tommy from his appointed task. He played low from dummy, won the ten in hand and the doubled contract was home for a top score.

The Eighth Wonder of the World

In 1852, engineer John Roebling got the idea for a suspension bridge from Manhattan to Brooklyn in New York City. His dream took shape in 1870 when construction on the bridge began. But that same year, Roebling died from injuries he received in a construction accident, and his son Washington took over. In 1872, the younger Roebling was paralyzed by a stroke, but he spent the next 11 years directing operations from a house in Brooklyn Heights that overlooked the construction site. The bridge took 13 years to complete and cost more than $15 million and the lives of 25 workmen. Today New York City celebrates the 100th anniversary of the Brooklyn Bridge, "The Eighth Wonder of the World.
