Syria Warns It 'Will Not Bow' If War Comes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) – Israel poured more troops and tanks into Lebanon on Saturday and warned Syria it was strong enough to take control in the event of war. Syria pulled back from the cease-fire line, but proclaimed it would not bow to "warlike threats."

A military communique issued in Damascus, the Syrian capital, announced that the military maneuvers inside Syria that prompted Israeli troops to go on alert "ended with success" Saturday. It said the Syrian armed forces had returned to "normal status."

Tensions have been building up over the past three days along the Syria-Israeli cease-fire line in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and in the central highlands.

The Israeli military command issued a communique in Tel Aviv reporting an Israeli soldier and a Palestinian guerrilla were killed and two Israeli soldiers were wounded in a clash Friday afternoon in the Bekaa Valley. The announcement, apparently held until relatives of the Israeli victims had been notified, said the soldiers were on patrol in Israeli-held territory along the cease-fire line with Syria when Palestinian guerrillas ambushed them, firing anti-tank rockets and rifles.

It said that when the soldiers returned the fire the guerrillas fled into Syrian-held territory.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens cautioned Syria that Israel could dictate the terms of any new war, and hours later Syrian Prime Minister Abdel-Raoef el-Kasm charged that the United States and Israel were "raining warlike threats" on his country.

"But we are not afraid and we will not bow," Kasm said in a speech at the inaugural session in Damascus of a nationwide conference of Syrian mayors. "Our armor has developed in quality and quantity and so has our morale."

He said he was "certain the Soviet Union supports us with all its means and we are also sure that the vast resources of the Arab world will be on our side" in case of a new war.

There were no firm estimates of the number of Israeli and Syrian troops in Lebanon, but both sides have been reinforcing their troops for several days. Last week, there were about 40,000 Syrians and 28,000 Israelis in Lebanon.

Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson saw truckloads of Syrian troops headed toward the Syrian border in the Bekaa, and AP correspondent Scheherezade Faramarzi reported from the Israeli side of the line that the Israeli army was moving up men and equipment.

Military sources in the Israeli-backed militia of Maj. Saad Haddad said about 500 Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers, buses and ammunition trucks crossed the border into Lebanon on Friday and Saturday.

In Tel Aviv, the state radio said Israel was increasing its security along major roads in eastern Lebanon because of an increase in attempted sabotage attacks in recent days.

The broadcast said the army had questioned dozens of local villagers about involvement in the attempts and it quoted Israeli officers as telling local Druse leaders that the army "would view seriously any attempt to aid terrorist groups."

In the past week, three Israeli soldiers have been killed and 17 wounded in sabotage attacks.

Before the Syrians announced an end to their "spring maneuvers", Arens went on Israel radio to say that Syrian brinksmanship would not force Israel to maintain a prolonged, costly state of alert.

"Fortunately, we are strong enough to make it impossible to dictate to us the extent, direction and nature of whatever hostilities the enemy might initiate," he said. "It is our course, we who determine how these actions will be conducted. We hope they won't be initiated."

The Reagan administration urged all sides to "exercise the utmost restraint so that the risk of conflict can be reduced." White House spokesman Larry Speakes indicated the United States holds the Soviets responsible for the increased tensions, citing Soviet arms shipments to Syria.

Meanwhile, Lebanese police said an Israeli-sponsored cease fire between warring Christian and Druse militias in the hills overlooking Beirut held through the day, following six hours of overnight artillery, tank and rocket duels that sent shells into the Christian part of the capital.

Local Schools Allow Paddling As Last Resort

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Although the maxim "spare the rod, spoil the child" is no longer the basis for keeping order in schools, many educators do not rule out the use of corporal punishment as a solution to extreme student problems.

Corporal punishment, the most common form of which is paddling, is allowed by Pitt County and Greenville school policy only in the form of blows to a child's buttocks with an appropriate instrument.

A report from the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth says corporal punishment is not being administered in North Carolina fairly and recommends a change in the state policy.

Based on national studies and a survey taken in Transylvania County by the U.S. Office of Civil Rights, the study found that "... boys are more likely to be punished than girls, blacks rather than whites, and poor children rather than children from middle and upper income families."

When questioned about the possibility of discrimination in corporal punishment, Pitt County educators said they did not feel the system is abused and that in most cases students are given the option of paddling or suspension.

"We don't care who you are, the same discipline applies to everyone," Bethel Elementary Principal Janie Manning said.

North Carolina law now allows teachers to use corporal punishment as long as it is "reasonable force in the exercise of lawful authority" to maintain classroom control. No local school board is allowed to ban the use of corporal punishment under this law.

Pitt County teachers and principals have to follow county guidelines in punishing students as well as state regulations, as does the Greenville school system. In part, the Pitt County policy reads: "Corporal punishment must be regarded as a last resort and may be employed only in cases where other means in seeking cooperation from the student may have failed. If it appears that reasonable corporal punishment is likely to become necessary, the teacher should confer with the principal ... This policy will not prevent a student from choosing among alternative forms of punishment presented by the teacher or principal."

Pitt County Superintendent Eddie West said that policy is in the process of being revised.

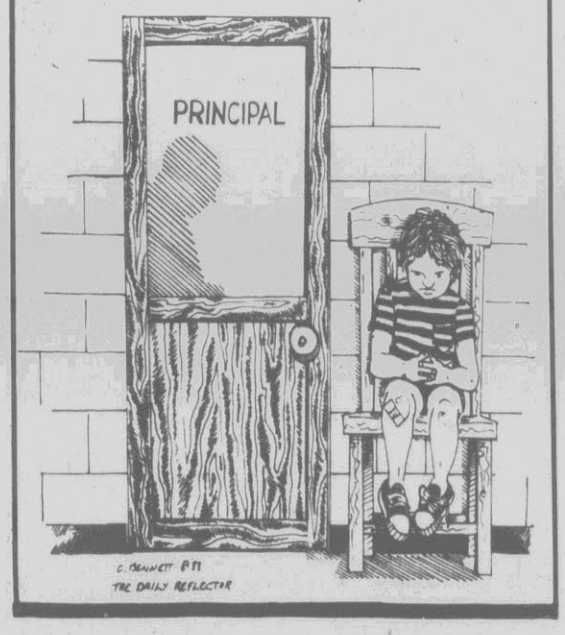

West said that, although corporal punishment is not the best answer in most cases, it is a "very effective disciplinary measure for some children."

"In each case, the principals view the students individually and then decide on the best course of action. In some cases the children are given a choice of punishment for their offenses," West said.

"I start out with the kids at the beginning of the year and tell them that our goal and purpose is for me to teach and for them to learn," North Pitt teacher Annette MacRae said. "If I call them down for talking, I tell them the problem is not so much that they are talking, but not learning. And for the most part they accept that as a reasonable approach and will cooperate."

If discussing, moving the student or going to stand by the disruptive party does not work, Ms. MacRae then has a personal conference with the individual, and if necessary with

NAACP Chairwoman Is Asked To Give Up Post

NEW YORK (AP) – The NAACP board of directors voted Saturday to ask board chairwoman Margaret Bush Wilson to resign for suspending executive director Benjamin L. Hooks, and drastically reduced her powers in case she refused.

Fifty of the 65 board members approved the action taken at an emergency meeting at the organization's national headquarters in Brooklyn. Fourteen members were absent, including Mrs. Wilson, and one member voted against the action.

The board members also formally reinstated Hooks, despite Mrs. Wilson's announcement Thursday that she had ended the suspension after eight days.

"I've never seen the board so unanimous in my life. There was no bickering, no fighting," said Nathaniel Colley of Sacramento, Calif., a member of the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Kremlin's Missile Threat Dismissed

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. (AP) — The United States, bolstered by its British and French allies, Saturday dismissed a Soviet threat to deploy nuclear missiles in eastern Europe.

"The effort to divide the allies is not working," a senior administration official declared. "The effort to threaten the allies tends to backfire."

The statement of unity came out of President Reagan's meetings with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain and President Francois Mitterrand of France at the seven-nation economic summit conference.

The senior official, briefing reporters on the condition he not be identified by name, said both allied leaders affirmed their support for U.S. arms control and weapons policy.

The Soviets had threatened in a statement on the eve of the summit to install missiles within the borders of their east European allies if new U.S. rockets were deployed, as scheduled under a NATO plan, to counter a missile buildup in the western part of the Soviet Union. Up to now, the Soviets have never deployed ground-based nuclear missiles outside their borders.

Earlier in the day, the administration accused the Soviet Union of seeking "effective military superiority and thus global hegemony" with the new threat.

The department's statement that instead of trying to maintain a monopoly on ground-based nuclear missiles in Europe, the Soviets should agree to a U.S. proposal to eliminate all such weapons from the continent.

U.S.-Soviet negotiations in Geneva to impose a ceiling on the two superpowers' missiles are at an impasse. One of the principal obstacles is a Soviet demand to have the British and French nuclear forces counted against any Soviet total, a demand the United States has rejected.

The senior U.S. official said Reagan and Mitterrand had "reaffirmed to each other the importance of strength of purpose."

At the president's separate meeting with Mrs. Thatcher, the official said, "they both expressed their determination to be strong and to be reasonable."

Mrs. Thatcher has played a quiet role in persuading Reagan to seek an interim agreement limiting U.S. and Soviet missiles instead of trying to reach an accord eliminating them entirely from Europe.

The U.S. reaction was a response to the Soviet statement that threatened to place missiles in the nations of the Warsaw Pact and increase the number of SS-20 missiles deployed in the European region of the Soviet Union if NATO goes ahead in December as scheduled.

Schools Seek More Monies

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners met Friday to hear budget requests from the city and county school systems for the coming fiscal year.

Pitt County school officials outlined a $6.73 million current expense budget for 1983-1984 – 1.87 percent higher than this year. Greenville City school officials proposed a budget 5.58 percent up from the present year, but including $431,350 or 21.24 percent more in county appropriations.

In presenting the county school's proposed budget Superintendent Eddie West said no pay increases were included. If the General Assembly approves a 5 percent across-the-board pay hike, West said the county system would need an additional $125,000. If a 5 percent pay hike and an experience increment raise is approved by the state, West said the proposed budget would increase $250,000.

The 1982-1983 county school budget ammounted to $6.62 million, while actual expenditures this year are estimated to total $6.39 million by the end of the fiscal year at midnight June 30.

West explained that personnel services account for 63 percent of the proposed budget, while support services amount to about 37 percent of the proposed expenditures for 1983-1984.

The superintendent said the only personnel changes in the budget include a request that the county pick up four teaching positions for the gifted and talented program and a maintenance trainee position.

Braswell's Wife Feared For Life

By ANGELA LINGERFELT and JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writers

Early testimony in the murder trial of former Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Billy Braswell portrays a simmering marital dispute that allegedly brought on periods of brooding by the deputy and veiled threats to his wife that "if he couldn't have her, no one else would."

Braswell is being tried in the September 1982 shooting death of his 39-year-old wife, Lillie.

A bevy of Braswell's former colleagues in the sheriff's department testified Friday, the first day of testimony, that Mrs. Braswell's body was found near a parked car at the intersection of Chinquapin Road and U.S. 264 Alternate, near Farmville. Several also testified that they later went to Farmville to the couple's home and found Braswell, seated in a chair with two bullet holes in his chest.

It was Sheriff Ralph Tyson, who had been Braswell's superior since 1969, who laid out the alleged motive for the slaying.

Tyson testified that Lillie Braswell visited him in his office at the Pitt County Courthouse on Sept. 22 and asked Tyson for an escort. She was afraid of her husband and wanted to move her possessions out of their home, the sheriff said. Tyson quoted Mrs. Braswell as saying she and Braswell had discussed their marital differences and were getting a divorce. She told him Braswell had said that if he "couldn't have her nobody else would," Tyson testified.

Tyson said Mrs. Braswell told him she had locked herself in her bedroom twice because she was afraid of her husband.

According to Tyson, Mrs. Braswell said her husband would stare at her for long periods of time, while tapping three letters on his knee. Tyson testified that, in a phone call two days after her visit to his office, Mrs. Braswell told him she had discovered the letters in Braswell's pocket and that they contained instructions to their son, Mike, and to Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley about disposing of their property.

Tyson said he assigned a deputy to watch Braswell and to report back if he saw problems. The sheriff said the deputy did not report back and that he "was satisfied that he (Braswell) was acting normally."

Deputy Sheriff Wayne Nobles, who had known Braswell for 13 years and also knew his wife, told the jury of four women and eight men he was one of the deputies who went to the shooting on the highway and then to Braswell's house.

Nobles, who testified with the aid of notes he said were made at the Braswells' house, said the wounded Braswell told him: "Please just leave me alone and let me die. I just want to die," and "I didn't mean to hurt her, but she just wouldn't listen," and "Don't let them blow this thing way up for Mike's sake." Nobles said he couldn't remember the chronological order of the statements attributed to Braswell.

Nobles said he went to the Braswell home with the chief deputy.

"Oakley and myself went under the carport area through the side door. The vehicle's driver-side door was open. I saw a Colt revolver, some papers and a tie that appeared to be torn and not intact. The door was ajar, but I knocked. I called his (Braswell's) name and knocked more, but there was no response. We opened the door and observed Billy reclined in a brown reclining chair. A small handgun was lying near the chair," Nobles said.

"He looked very pale and sweaty. We observed that he had apparently been injured, so I went back to my vehicle and obtained my first aid kit. I observed two piercing holes that appeared to be gunshot wounds in the chest area. The holes were close to one another," Nobles told the jury.

Billy Vandiford, a deputy for less than two years, said he entered the Braswell house with Oakley and Nobles. He

Pair Convicted Of Killing Marshals

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — The son of fugitive militant tax protester Gordon Kahl and another man were found guilty Saturday on two counts of second degree murder in the shootings of two U.S. marshals.

Yorie Kahl and Scott Faul were convicted in the February shooting deaths of the two marshals near Medina, N.D.

The jury found Joan Kahl, Gordon Kahl's wife, not guilty on two counts, and found a fourth defendent, David Broer, guilty on two of nine charges.

Earlier in the day U.S. District Judge Paul Benson had at least twice answered questions about the case from the jury of seven women and five men, Deputy U.S. Clerk Darlene Jose said.

The jurors began deliberations late Friday.

The jurors had to decide whether the four defendants were acting in self-defense or purposely helping Kahl escape arrest during the Feb. 13 shootout in which U.S. Marshal Kenneth Muir, 53, and Robert Cheshire Jr., 32, were killed.

Yorie Kahl, 23, and Faul, 29, of Harvey, N.D., each were charged with two counts of first-degree murder and several counts of assault. Mrs. Kahl, 56, had been charged with harboring a fugitive and conspiracy. Broer, 43, faced several counts of assault, harboring a fugitive and conspiracy.

During the three-week trial, defense lawyers contended that their clients were acting in self-defense after being stopped by three vehicles loaded with laughing men who pointed weapons and never identified themselves.

But in his closing remarks, Assistant U.S. Attorney Dennis Fisher called the defendants "willing participants" in the shooting, which also left Yorie Kahl and three officers wounded.

The discovery of a .45-caliber handgun Friday at a Fargo shopping mall has rekindled interest in the hunt for Gordon Kahl and raised speculation that he may still be in North Dakota.

U.S. Marshal Chuck Kupferer, head of a special task force in Jamestown, N.D., said the discovery of the gun does not necessarily mean Kahl is in the state. But he said it seems likely that Kahl had possession of the weapon sometime after the shootout.

The pistol is believed to have been worn by Yorie Kahl during the roadblock gunfight. The weapon was accepted as evidence Friday as defense lawyers completed their closing arguments.

Solution Recalled

DENVER (AP) — A Denver firm has issued a nationwide recall of four of its contact-lens preparations because of possible bacterial contamination and mislabeling.

Optikem International of Denver said Friday that the recalled products are made for use by wearers of hard contact lenses. They are Sereine Wetting and Soaking Solution, Sereine Wetting Solution, Sereine Cleaner and Sereine Soaking and Cleaning Solution.

The company asked consumers to stop using the four products and offered free replacements. The voluntary recall covers about 60,000 units of the products, company officials said.

The company chose to recall the products directly from consumers instead of only through wholesalers because "we think this recall will tell people we care enough to put our reputation on the line," said Sally Cook, a research chemist and president of Wilsa Inc., of Denver, Optikem's parent company.

Budget ...

West told commissioners that "it is imperative that we go the extra mile to insure fiscal responsibility."

Greenville school Superintendent Delma Blinson presented a proposal for an $11 million current expense budget which includes $3.30 million in local funds, some $431,350 more in local money than the city system received this year.

Blinson said the proposed budget was based on "maintaining the instructional programs at the currentl levels" and "not an expansion budget."

He noted that the budget included some $80,000 for a 4.8 percent salary step increment pay hike for school personnel (which has not been approved by the General Assembly at this time), as well as $30,000 more in county money for the city's exceptional children's program, and $269,000 in local funds to "keep from loosing 11 teachers," which have been funded by the state.

Blinson, who said the proposed budget is "a hold the line budget," said the city system has lost 42 teaching positions in the last three years because of the effects of a declining average daily membership on state teacher allocations.

Blinson also asked for $520,283 in capital outlay funds for the coming fiscal year. He said the money would fund about half the identified capital improvement needs of the city system.

Blinson told commissioners that the city school system's request could be cut by $56,000 if a "special allocation" of funds was made to finance a joint county-city school program for severely and profoundly handicapped children.

He told commissioners that the class could be established for $36,609 by putting the city and county programs together, and that if a "special allocation" could be made, the money would not affect the formula for distributing local funds to the school systems.

County current expense money, by law, has to be distributed on the basis of average daily membership in the two school systems as certified by the state.

Under the allocation formula for 1983-1984, the county will receive 70.077 percent of the local appropriation, while the city will receive 29.923 percent (based on a projected ADM in the Pitt County system of 11,309 students and 4,829 students in the city system).

Mark Owens, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education, and Greenville Board of Education Chairman Jack Wahl expressed appreciation to the board for their support of education over the years.

Wahl said "you gentlemen have made public education in Pitt County something every citizen can be proud of."

However, Wall said the city school system is "now approaching a crisis ... which must be addressed." He said the city school system is "not asking for additional programs or personnel," but rather asking that it be funded to "keep the programs we have now."

Wahl said, "We've been holding the line for several years. When you hold the line in public education, you're moving backward."

the parents. If that doesn't work, she said the next best solution, "for a what you might call a hard-core discipline case," is in-school suspension. "Very few students are this much of a problem," she said.

Ms. MacRae is not an advocate of corporal punishment and said "I have never used it to solve a problem." Instead, she supports learning discipline methods from programs such as the type offered by the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Greenville Superintendent Delma Blinson said he believed the current law on corporal punishment is a good law, "appropriate."

"I am in full agreement of the law and support procedures for administering corporal punishment. We have the law, and we have the procedures to protect it, which I feel is a good balance," Blinson said.

"I do not believe a teacher or principal should be prohibited from using corporal punishment when it is needed. I think that having a deterrent is more important than following through on corporal punishment, but there are times when its use is most appropriate."

Rose High School Principal Howard Hurt said his staff tries to avert the necessity for corporal punishment through communication.

"We have a drop-out prevention program and encourage our homeroom teachers to help out with discipline problems as well. We are having the homeroom teachers become more than just role takers. Rose High also has an in-school suspension and conference program.

"Most of the students respond to less stringent methods. In fact, we don't have that many problems at all ... 95 percent of the students aren't problems."

When paddling becomes necessary, Hurt said a set procedure is followed. The student always has a choice over paddling. "In fact, sometimes we have a parent request that a student be paddled," he said.

Bethel Elementary Principal Janie Manning said communication is the key in discipline. "Here at Bethel, we adopted a formalized program so that the students know what is a major offense and what is a minor offense and they know the punishments that go with the offenses," she said.

Peer counseling of the students by their classmates also helps in understanding the rules of discipline and correcting problems, Mrs. Manning said.

Major offenses include fighting, disrespect to teachers, defacement of property and extortion. Minor infractions include excessive talking, name calling, running in a restricted area, chewing gum, poor cafeteria conduct and temper tantrums. Lying and stealing come under both depending on the degree of the offense.

She said corporal punishment, along with suspension, is the very last measure but that if the problem gets so bad as to reach that point, the student is aware what will happen. "We try to avoid problems getting to this level at all costs. We spent two years providing staff training in discipline and human relations and if the methods are successful, the child won't end up being suspended or having to be paddled," Mrs. Manning said.

However, not as much paddling occurs because parents would rather have their child suspended than paddled. "It's a sort of trend," she said.

"The bottom line in all this discipline is a change of attitude. A lot of counseling is used to help the student understand why what they did was inappropriate and let them know how it affected more than just them."

said that he had also taken notes after he called for an ambulance to take Braswell to the hospital. Vandiford said Braswell was rational and the information he gave was voluntary.

The deputy said he had written in his notes that Oakley asked Braswell, "Where is the gun you shot yourself with?" and Braswell had replied, "I used two guns." However, with the jury out of the courtroom, Oakley testified that he had only asked Braswell where his gun was.

Earlier witnesses told the situation at the intersection where Mrs. Braswell's body was found.

Mary Susan Daughtry of Farmville, who was traveling to Farmville from Greenville on the morning of Sept. 27, told the jury that, near the intersection of Chinquapin and U.S. 264, she "saw something bright pink."

"I thought it was trash, but when I got closer I realized it was a woman's body," Ms. Daughtry said. "I also noticed a car — large, American, four-door — off the side of the road. I pulled my car in front of the vehicle. The lady was about four feet behind the vehicle lying face down toward a ditch. I glanced in the car and then ran over to her. I saw blood under the arm pit ... I realized she was dead."

Deputy James Satterwhitc, who arrived at the scene after being "flagged down by a subject in a red Fiat," testified he saw a body lying behind a blue Buick Regal. He said he examined the body, that of a woman, and concluded that she was dead.

"I did not recognize the woman because her face was down. I ran a license check and found that the owner was Lillie Stancil Braswell. I then placed a sheet over the body," Satterwhite said.

Milton Howard, who was traveling on 264-A toward Farmville, said he "saw two cars at the intersection on Chinquapin Road — a blue car and a silver car that looked like an unmarked police car ... the unmarked car pulled out. A white male with sunglasses was driving. He approached the intersection and stopped. Then he took off towards Farmville real fast as if in a hurry."

Howard said he also saw the body of he woman behind the car. Howard said he went to a house nearby to call the police, but a phone was not available. He said he then saw Ms. Daughtry's car stop near the intersection.

Michael Gordon Clark, who testified that he had known Braswell since 1961, said he passed the intersection on the way to Farmville and saw the Braswells. But "nothing looked unusual. They appeared as though they were talking," Clark said.

Lois James Parker, a Pitt County teacher, also passed the intersection and "noticed an unmarked county vehicle and a blue car. I continued down the road but something told me to turn around because I recognized the person in the car as Lillie Braswell. I came back slowly and I was planning to stop to see if she needed anything, but my attention was directed to their facial expressions. Lillie was looking straight ahead and never turned and looked at me. Braswell was talking very animatedly about something. She was sitting straight up looking ahead. He had his back against the door with his hand on the steering wheel."

The testimony will resume Tuesday at 9 a.m.

Next Step In Faster Circuits

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nothing travels faster than light, and modern lasers can produce the shortest pulses of light known to man.

Charles Stancampiano of the University of Rochester's Electrical Engineering Department is using laser beams lasting only 30 picoseconds, or trillionths of a second, to generate electrical signals in superconducting circuits. His ultimate goal: to find a way of using picosecond laser light as a source of information for future "supercomputers."

Plan Housing For Visitors

PITTSBURGH (AP) — With 15,000 to 20,000 Southern Baptists expected to attend their convention June 14-16, the city's hotel facilities are being strained to the limit, but extra help is coming from fellow Christians.

Congregations of other denominations and the local ministerial alliance are acting to find private housing for Southern Baptists who can't find hotel space.

Movie Premiere

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte rolled out the black-and-white checkered carpet Saturday night for movie star Burt Reynolds when he arrived for the world premiere of his new race movie "Stroker Ace."

More than a thousand fans gathered outside Ovens Auditorium before the premiere to greet Reynolds and his co-stars Loni Anderson, Jim Nabors, former professional football star Bubba Smith and state and local dignitaries.

The premiere was a sellout, with about 2,500 tickets sold at $50 apiece. The tickets entitled the buyers to attend a concert by the Charlie Daniels Band, the premiere and a champagne-and-hors d'oeuvres reception.

vice chairman of the board who presided at the meeting, said the board has "expressed a sincere desire ... for Mrs. Wilson to resign," although it does not have the power to impeach her.

He said the board had decreed that Mrs. Wilson "shall not act as spokesman for the NAACP at this time," that she cannot make expenditures without board approval or "interfere with the day-to-day operations of the organization."

A board member who asked not to be identified said this meant Mrs. Wilson would effectively be a figurehead until her term expires in January.

Mrs. Wilson learned of the board's vote against her when she returned to St. Louis from Chicago, where she had addressed a meeting of black fraternity and sorority leaders at about the same time as the board's meeting.

"That's very interesting," she told The Associated Press, "but I don't propose to comment on their action."

At the Chicago meeting Mrs. Wilson had referred to the controversy as an "internal matter" that would be resolved internally with "dignity and civility."

"I have some reason to be concerned how long I will hold that title, but some things are more important than titles," she said at the meeting.

While those present represented a clear majority of the 64-member board, Mrs. Wilson's supporters claimed it was an unconstitutional rump session. She had scheduled what she called an official meeting in Chicago on June 11.

Hooks smiled broadly when the meeting's outcome was announced. His wife Frances cried as she carried two dozen roses presented by 80 demonstrators who supported her husband.

"I am happy of course to have been vindicated," Hooks said. "I want to make it clear that I hold no animosities. I bear no grudges, revenge and what we call in the South 'getting back' is not part of my character. I intend to go forward. The association must go forward."

SCINTILLATING SOBEL

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For a while, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

If we were asked to vote for the best bridge player we have encountered, at least one of us would vote for the late Helen Sobel Smith. By today's standards her bidding might have left something to be desired (indeed, there were some even then who criticized it), but no one played or defended a hand better. Here's an example from the 1951 Spingold Team Championship, won by the Goren team.

After Helen opened one diamond and North made a takeout double, North-South arrived at a contract of two hearts. The same contract was reached by the Goren team in the other room, and eight tricks were duly made.

Helen made the normal lead of the king of diamonds and, after receiving an encouraging signal from East, continued with the ace and jack. Declarer did not want to waste one of dummy's trump honors by ruffing high, and there seemed to be no point to ruffing low, so he discarded a club from dummy. Goren signalled with the eight of clubs. Helen needed no more to come up with the winning defense.

At trick four she shifted to a low club. Goren won the king and returned a club to his partner's ace. Now Helen reverted to a fourth diamond, and declarer had no counter. He sluffed a spade from dummy. East cooperated with his partner's fine defense by ruffing with the ten!

The uppercut succeeded. Declarer had to overruff with the queen and, since West held the J-8-6 of trumps over declarer's 9-7-5, there was no way to prevent West from scoring a trump for the setting trick.

Now we know that bridge is a game full of male chauvinists. But ask any expert who encountered Helen over the green baize, and we are prepared to bet that they will tell you that there was no one better!

Let's Finance Sanitation Through Taxes

A tax on tea had much to do with the beginnings of this nation. Ever since people have been complaining about taxes and, at the same time, demanding government services.

No where do we see more direct benefit from the taxes we pay than at the local level where government furnishes police and fire protection, recreation and that most essential of all services, refuse collection.

In Greenville the refuse collection service has long been a source of pride with public works employees visiting most homes twice a week, often before anyone is up and about, to haul away the family garbage. Not only that but at most homes the crews pick up refuse from the rear of the property.

All that has much to do with why Greenville's residential areas are neat and clean — that along with a mania among homeowners to maintain beatiful lawns, flowers and shrubbery.

Apparently most people here want to keep it that way. The City Council held a public hearing last week on a proposal to charge a $3 monthly user fee from residences for refuse collection. There was also consideration of front yard only refuse pickup.

Those who appeared at the hearing were virtually unanimous in their sentiments that the rear yard garbage pickup should be maintained. They saw the $3 monthly user fee as nothing more than a tax and questioned why the service should not continue to be maintained from property taxes.

Former Councilman Frank Fuller said he had reservations about calling something that is basically a tax a fee. "It is a tax no matter what you call it," he said.

Other speakers were complimentary of the refuse collection provided here and Mayor Percy Cox said if the front yard service were recommended, "I think I woould have to leave town."

We agree with those protesting citizens. It is part of citizenship to recognize that government services we receive must be paid for. It makes little sense to bill monthly for the refuse collection when the money can be obtained through the already established tax machinery.

As for the rear yard collection, it has to be recognized that garbage collection is labor intensive, and perhaps the time will come when this service can no longer be afforded. Nevethless, Greenville has a reputation for having some of the most beautifully kept residential areas to be found anywhere. Garbage cans left on the front of residential property cannot do anything but detract.

Therefore, we should maintain the present refuse collection service as long as possible.

When A Fee Is A Tax, Let's Call It A Tax

Gene Wang — Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sentiment appears to be building in the General Assembly to provide the state with some additional revenues in order to finance badly needed budget items.

Legislative leaders have spent much of the last week analyzing those needs in an effort to determine how much additional money will be required, and thus how much money will have to be raised.

Those involved in the process are staying tight-lipped about their deliberations.

"I can't talk about it," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

Lt. Gov. James C. Green said last week inquiries about the budget package were "at least a week premature. Wait till the needs list is put together."

"There are just so many needs out there we can't meet," he said, but predicted "we're going to do a better job of meeting the top priority items than people think."

The Legislature's Joint Appropriations Committee completed work earlier this month on the money needed to continue state programs at their existing levels after paring $53 million from the $6.2 billion proposal submitted by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

The five budget subcommittees last week began reviewing budget requests for new programs and expansion of existing ones at the same time budget leaders started analyzing those requests in an attempt to work up a package.

"Every dad-blamed thing" is being looked at, said Senate Appropriations Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

Rep. Allen Adams, D-Wake, said the leaders are attempting to sort through the millions of dollars in budget requests in order to determine the most pressing needs.

"It's obviously going to take additional money," said Adams, the House Base Budget chairman.

Although specifics of the package are still being determined, at least one item is sure to be included — a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise for state employees and teachers.

In his budget, Hunt proposed about $100 million to lift a one-year pay freeze on state workers and teachers. He has since endorsed the 5 percent pay raise after Green and others argued lifting the freeze would not assure pay increases for all workers because of the way merit pay is awarded.

The pay raise plan will require an additional $38 million.

The leaders agree there are other needs that should be considered.

"You've got to pick out the ones you need the most to continue to progress," Green said, citing education, job training and one specific program — perinatal intensive care for critically ill newborn infants.

House Appropriations Chairman William Watkins, D-Granville, said there is a pressing need for $60 million for state building repairs and renovations that have been deferred for years.

Hunt has mentioned the need for an $8.5 million building and equipment to upgrade computer science programs at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. That need was highlighted by the recent decision of a multi-million dollar microelectronics research facility to locate in Texas instead of North Carolina and two other states that were considered.

Hunt has also called for increases in alcohol taxes in order to ensure the state will have enough money to meet federal matching requirements for highway construction, and budget leaders appear to support him on the need for additional money.

Once legislative leaders total the budget needs, it will be up to the House and Senate Finance Committees to raise the money.

No decisions on revenue raising proposals are being made by the budget leaders, but Hardison acknowledged they are being discussed. The talks have centered on measures that would tighten various tax loopholes.

"A lot of people are agreeing this is the thing to do rather than raise new taxes," he said.

Raising the money will be the responsibility of the House and Senate Finance committees, which consider changes in revenue laws.

House Finance Chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, and Senate Finance Co-Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, indicated they are prepared to try and raise the amount needed by the budget leaders.

Neither has been involved in the discussions so far, but Quinn indicated he has been kept aware of the matters brought up by budget leaders.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

Do you kown where Wyatt Brown's Cascade Laundry was, or Eureka Laundry, or J. Key Brown Druggist, or Harvey Coal Co. or State Bank and Trust Co.?

If so, you have been around Greenville for awhile.

A copy of the city directory for 1942-43 came to us recently. Those businesses and others were advertisers.

Perhaps you are familiar with City Plumbing Co., Coburn's Shoes, Inc. or The John Flanagan Buggy Co. Or how about Carter's Printery, J.B. Oakley & Son., Rainbow Cleaners & Laundry, Clark's Ice, Coal and Wood, Guaranty Bank and Trust Co., Proctor Hotel and Hotel Greenville. There was the Olde Towne Inn, Quinn Miller and Stroud and other businesses which existed in Greenville during those years of the darkest days of World War II.

Eureka Laundry advertised "Wash your duds in Eureka Suds." J. Key Brown said "You will make no mistake letting us fill your prescription ... neither will we."

State Bank and Trust Co. eventually became NCNB which erected new offices and the old State Bank building at Fifth and Evans was demolished.

Guaranty Bank, which was located in a columned building which still stands on the Evans Street Mall, moved to a new building now occupied by Greenville Utilities and subsequently became Wachovia Bank.

Proctor Hotel was the finest hotel in town and is now the Minges building at Third and Evans. Hotel Greenville, advertised it was "as good as the best" and had rates from $1.25. It was located over a department store on Dickinson Avenue. The building has been demolished.

Any Greenville history buff can tell you John Flanagan Buggy Co. once made buggies but became one of the nation's largest Ford automobile dealers. Its building at Cotanche and Fourth has been demolished.

Some of the businesses of that day are still here including Blount Harvey, Bissette's, Carolina Dairy Products, Smith Electric, S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, Tadlock Mutual and H.A. White & Son, along with our own Daily Reflector. Changing times, however, bring on different business requirements and many of the names which were so familiar to Greenville citizens of 1942 are no longer a part of the local scene.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Honduras Is Running Scared

PUERTO LEMPIRA, Honduras — Flying low over the impenetrable Montanas de Colon on the way to this suddenly-aroused village at the remote eastern tip of Honduras, signs multiplied of coming conflict here between the communist and non-communist worlds — Latin America's "central conflict" in the words of a Honduran political leader.

"Those mountains have never been mapped," our guide told us, gesturing toward the rugged panorama below. "No one knows where the real border (between Honduras and Marxist-controlled Nicaragua) is." That explains recent deployment of the Fifth Battalion of the minuscule Honduran army into those uninhabited border areas near this desolate stretch of seacoast.

Honduras is running scared. The communist world — Cuba, the Soviet Union, East Germany, Bulgaria — is pouring the stuff of war and propaganda into Central America. The U.S., belatedly awake to the "central crisis," is countering. But confidence that the U.S. will stay the course is not high here or in any other Central American state. Every utterance in the U.S. Congress gets avid attention. There is genuine fear of future sellout.

Near this fishing village a dangerously short dirt runway has been lengthened and widened by U.S. Navy Seabees. Ostensibly, the need for a decent runway is to accommodate C-130 transports that carry food and supplies to tens of thousands of Miskito Indians unrooted from ancestral villages just across the Nicaraguan border a few miles south of here. Fleeing Sandinista brutality, there are now under international refugee care in Honduras a few miles from Puerto Lempira. There ae no roads.

In reality, though nobody mentions it, the refurbished airstrip would be converted overnight to military uses if the Honduras-based anti-Sandinista forces are defeated and, in reprisal, Honduras is punished by Nicaragua. "We are not completely stupid," a Honduran military leader advised us back in the capital of Tegucigalpa. "If the anti-Sandinistas fail, we will be made to pay even if the U.S. stays with us."

Nicaragua is seeding the ground with dragon teeth. A Nicaraguan agent posing as a campesino recently was picked up in Puerto Lempira, where any stranger is conspicuous. He carried a radio receiver tuned to a transmitter in Nicaragua which sent him coded messages at designated times. He was ordered here to establish contacts, arrange drop points for future visits and perform other well-known tricks of the subversion-sabotage trade.

Hidden deep in the mountains we had flown over to get here is a suspected Marxist guerrilla headquarters on the Honduran side of the border. "We can't find it but we know it is down there," our guide said in the plane. Honduran military leaders told us that a complete set of anti-Honduran war plans developed by the Sandinistas has been "picked up." Part of the assignment of the Nicaraguan intelligence agent arrested here clearly was to probe the disposition of the Fifth Battalion, the first military force Honduras has ever had to deploy anywhere near this remote region.

Propaganda from radio transmitters at half a dozen places in Nicaragua juices across the border day and night. The Hondurans have no means to make an effective reply. The kept Sandinista press in Managua spews out threats against Honduras, quoting Honduran insurgents as saying late last month that "hundreds of U.S. military advisers and CIA agents operate inside" Honduras. The target of such threats is nervous congressmen in washington as much as fearful Hondurans.

Beyond propaganda, the Sandinista intelligence network has already been planted. On April 8, four insurgency groups set up a Unified Revolutionary Coordinating Board to win "the struggle in Honduras." Consequently, to protect U.S. diplomats in Tegucigalpa, security has been drastically tightened; the new U.S.-built radar station near the capital is under 24-hour guard.

Gen. Gustavo Alvarez, who commands Honduras' modest armed forces, privately makes no secret of his government's fear about the credibility of U.S. promises and the continuity of its policy. He flew secretly to Washington last week seeking reassurance, knowing that the circle is beginning to close on Honduras as it has on Nicaragua and El Salvador.

James J. Kilpatrick — Immigration: A Natural Civics Course

WASHINGTON — If the high school course that once was known as "Civics" still is being taught, a superlative textbook could be put together from the continuing struggle on Capitol Hill to enact an immigration bill. The battle has everything a teacher could ask.

At bottom is a constitutional provision: Congress has power "to establish a uniform rule of naturalization." Out of that power emerges the power to regulate immigration, a power that first was exercised — badly exercised — in the notorious Alien and Sedition Laws of 1798. It seems unbelievable today that Congress ever could have given a president the unfettered power to expel any alien he deemed "dangerous," but such was the law of that time. Students ought to know about such things.

That first immigration act lasted only a couple of years before it was wiped off the books. In 1875 Congress enacted a law barring the immigration of prostitutes and convicts. In 1882 exclusions were expanded for reasons involving disease, criminal records, moral turpitude and the prospect of subversion. That same year saw enactment of tbe Chinese Exclusion Act, a law that stayed on the books until 1943.

It wasn't until 1924 that Congress established fixed quotas based upon national origin. Those quotas remained gencrally in effect until the system was abolished in 1965. Meanwhile, in 1952, Congress enacted the basic Immigration and Naturalization Act that once again is the subject of intense debate on Capitol Hill.

Last week the Senate voted 76-18 for a comprehensive bill that would rewrite the basic law of 1952. The bill provides a model for the student who seeks to understand how our political system really works. The measure is a product of give-and-take, of trade-offs, of half-loaves that are seen as better than none.

The Senate approved a quite similar bill last year, but it died for want a favorable action in the House. Nadine Cohodas, writing in Congressional Quarterly, put a whole textbook in a paragraph: "The legislation died from a combination of ailments — opposition from Hispanics, organized labor, the business community and civil rights groups; an unenthusiastic House leadership; and lack of time."

A key provision of the 1982 proposal, slightly revised in the Senate's 1983 version, provided for sanctions against employers who "knowingly" employ aliens who are in the country illegally' To many of us, the provision makes sense. It is the lure of a job that draws thousands of Mexicans and other Hispanics to take the risks of illegal entry. But to spokesmen for Hispanics, the provision is intolerable; they see it as a path toward discrimination, as Congressman Tony Coelho said, against anyone who has "dark hair, dark eyes and dark skin."

Business groups, led by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, opposed the sanctions for different reasons. They were unwilling to impose additional responsibilities and paperwork upon employers. On the other hand, spokesmen for organized labor supported the provisions. They saw sanctions as a means to protect the jobs of American workers.

Last year's struggle in the House could teach the student of civics something about parliamentary procedure. At one point opponents had upward of 300 amendments prepared for purposes of delay. The story provides lessons in leadership. Key provisions of the bill, dealing with amnesty for aliens who have established residence illegally, demanded enthusiastic sponsorship. It wasn't there.

The bill's chief sponsor in the House, Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., contributed to the lessons at hand. The bill failed, he said, because of "the search for perfection." Labor wanted a bill that would perfectly protect workers, Hispanics wanted perfect language on sanctions, and others wanted perfect provisions for amnesty. If the same forces contend in the same way this year, the bill may fail again, but in the 98th Congress the proponents have one thing working for them: They yet have time to marshal votes for a bill, imperfect though it may be, that is thc best bill we are likely to get.

Intelligent people never cease to amaze me!! Particularly those educated professional and public figures. You applauded the Pitt County School Board for continued racism. You need to examine the facts!!!

The total student enrollment for the 1982-83 school year for that system is 5,652 blacks and 5,733 whites. LEA is 740.

To the editor:

It appalls me that the deficit spending dilemma is being reacted to on partisan group or personal interest bases. Considering the dire consequences of continued deficit spending we should realize that all of us must work together to overcome this common enemy. In times of crisis this should be the American Way. It need not be idealistic wishful thinking. It can be accomplished. Americans have sacrificed in time of war. We can do so now by battling the enemy: deficit spending.

Our leaders must come forward to set the example. Members of Congress should announce a cut in salary for themselves. Be it at the lowest percentage of one percent, still, it would be a step in the right direction. President Reagan could come forward and join this movement. In addition, our former presidents should also offer to take a cut in their pensions.

Federal and military retirees could forego their cost of living adjustments and pension increases. This is fair since most retirees who worked for private companies do not receive equivalent benefits though they paid taxes and some still continue paying taxes.

If we are to be pragmatic as to solving the problem of deficit spending, ne would think that eliminating wasteful expenditures, privileged indulgences and cutting spending is more of a solution than continuing deficit spending and raising taxes. There is a limit to what the middle class can endure as to taxes.

Our representatives should be committed to bringing down the deficit. They have it in their power to set the example and start the ball rolling. Let the trend and mood be set and we'll see how most of us, as patriotic Americans, will follow suit. We'd be the winners: the United States of America and its people.

To the editor:

I want to thank the Reflector and reporter Carol Tyer for your excellent coverage of the recent meeting of the Pitt County Action Coalition for Teens (A.C.T.). The group represented a good cross-section of Pitt County's agencies and professions and the clear impression was that a lot of people feel a need for better direction, coordination and use of the many talents and resources of our county.

I wish to correct one possible misunderstanding which might arise in reading the news story. I was quoted as saying "the schools, the churches, families and the government have done an excellent job of evading reality, and thus have been irresponsible in dealing with the problems of teen-agers." I believe that, but I also said that society in general has made it difficult, if not impossible, for the church, family or school to do the best job possible. And I emphasized that no one group, agency or class of people can be singled out and blamed.In fact, we need to avoid blaming and judging one another and try to exercise a spirit of loving concern and neighborliness and try to renew our sense of community.

Unfortunately, fears, prejudices and unrealistic expectations seem to dictate the behaviors of agencies, churches and families.

The thrust of "Let's Talk" is to create an atmosphere and spirit for open and honest discussion, at the level of our many local communities. Then, we may be able to see ways to help both parents and teen-agers communicate better and make informed, thoughtful decisions.

Never More Than 30 Minutes Beyond Neat

CARY — The sign on the front lawn says "For Sale" but it could just as easily say "Dorothea Dix Pick-Up." My house is "on the market" and I'm ready for the farm.

When you put your house up for sale, you enlist yourself as an agent of Mr. Clean. You're living in a fish bowl now and all traces of every move you make must quickly be erased. Wash your face and you've got to dry the water off the sink. Eat some wheaties and you must immediately clean the bowl - or at least put it in the dishwasher. Forget about throwing the couch pillows on the floor to watch TV.

The house must never get more than 30 minutes beyond neat. When the call comes that someone wants to see the house, you've got half an hour to undo all of life's little messes and convert your bungalow into a museum.

Well, isn't that silly? Yes, but when people look at a house, you can never tell what's going to turn them off. Sure, they should look at the layout of the rooms and the condition of the carpet and whether the yard has any privacy. But, even if the house has everything they want, a messy coffee table or a sink full of dishes might leave them with a negative image of the house.

You've got to start with a house cleaning driven by paranoia. Figure your potential buyers will look beyond the obvious to the baseboard behind the couch and the top shelf in the closet. They'll be checking for rust in the water, so clean out the toilet tank. They'll want to know if the heating system is clean, so they'll run their fingers along the dusty bindings of your hardcover books. Think of everything because one slip-up and they'll buy the house down the street and you'll face another week of keeping the house spotless.

Does anyone know how difficult it is for a reporter who works out of his house to keep his desk clean? My wife doesn't care that I get 15 press releases a day and that I need every one of those notes scratched on the back of a legislative calendar. I can't throw away Mom's unanswered letters or the latest report from the Governor's Crime Commission. Tidy that up and I'll lose something - like the Institute of Government explanation of a computer bill that disappeared last Thursday.

Of course now that you've run through the house cleaning every finger smudge off a white door, you've got to get out until the buyer has finished his visit. The real estate agent doesn't want you to say something stupid like, "The septic tank hardly ever overflows into the living room."

But the buyers don't always come, at least not on time. Saturday, we got the call at 1 p.m. An hour later, right on schedule, we'd re-scrubbed the entire house and we were out the door. No one showed. We waited on our neighbor's porch. The potato salad didn't get made. I didn't write the columns for this week. No one came - until 6:15 - just as we finished dinner. The kitchen smelled like fish. The people didn't buy the house.

Lawns are big in the suburbs. So I cut the grass every fifth or sixth day. Things are getting dry. It's getting hot and the fescue wants to go to sleep. But, I can't let the lawn get brown. So every morning I water the lawn and every other Sunday, I drop another $5 worth of fertilizer. Stay awake you little blades.

It'll all end some day. Somebody will buy our house and we'll have our equity to buy someone else's house. Being the prudent buyer I am, I'll check the tile caulking for grout, the faucets for water pressure and the porch for weak boards.

And if I find a single thing wrong, I won't buy your house.

Presidential Hot Line

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hot line doesn't go to Congress, but President Reagan's message did. It was one of reassurance — and it has been issued three times now in tandem with major decisions on administration weapons and arms control proposals.

Shortly before the House approved funds for the MX missile program on Tuesday, Reagan once again recommended steps in Moscow and Washington to reduce the risk of accidental nuclear conflict.

It wasn't billed as part of the effort to lobby the MX through Congress, but it meshed with Reagan's emphasis on arms reduction efforts as he sought to round up votes in favor of the new missile.

The president wants to improve the 20-year-old teleprinter hot line between Washington and Moscow. He seeks an exchange of military information, and an arrangement for international consultation in the event terrorists provoke a nuclear crisis. The administration has described the proposals as an effort in confidence building, and one that could further the process of negotiation for arms control.

"Extending the range of rapid communications between the United States and the Soviet Union would make an important contribution to stability," Reagan said.

His plan would scrap the 60-word-per-minute hot line installed after the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, replacing it with a system permitting nearly instant communications between Washington and Moscow. He also advocates high-speed communications lines between the State Department and the Soviet Embassy in Washington, and between the Foreign Ministry and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

He said that package would "add new dimensions to our communications efforts, allowing us to contact each other rapidly at political, military and diplomatic levels, improving our ability to contain crisis situations."

Reagan's proposals date back to Thanksgiving, and the speech in which he proposed the short-lived dense pack plan, which would have based the MX missiles in a bunch near Cheyenne, Wyo. Congress balked, and the current plan is to put the new weapons into existing missile silos in Wyoming and Nebraska.

In that nationally televised speech, Reagan coupled his request for a go-ahead on the MX with proposals similar to those he issued on Tuesday. He said the two superpowers should advise one another in advance about strategic missile tests and military exercises, and should have "a broad-ranging exchange of basic data about our nuclear forces..."

"The more one side knows about what the other side is doing, the less room there is for surprise and miscalculation," Reagan said then.

He said the hot line worked satisfactory, but that the administration would consider improving the system.

The Defense Department proposed those improvements on April 12, along with the other steps Reagan repeated on Tuesday. The administration told Congress about the plan, and the president said it would complement his arms reduction proposals.

That announcement came on the eve of a House debate on the nuclear weapons freeze the administration oppposes. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said there was no connection between the two. A freeze resolution since has passed the House, but with amendments imposing so many caveats that congressional opponents of the measure said they'd won. The president said it remained unacceptable to him. The Senate hasn't acted.

Weinberger said the administration had suggested the improvement in communications and the other measures during arms reduction negotiations in Geneva, but that Soviet negotiators wouldn't deal with them separately.

The strategic arms talks have been going on for years. Weinberger said the confidence-building communications links could be installed and operating within a matter of weeks.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Federal Highway Administration's controversial plan to permit tandem trailer trucks to use the Interstate highways has about equal numbers of supporters and detractors in the general population. However, the public, by almost a 2-to-1 ratio, opposes allowing these big trucks to use other federal highways.

In the latest Gallup survey, 45 percent of adult Americans favor laws prohibiting the big rigs from operating on their major state highways while 43 percent oppose such laws. For samples of the size used in this survey, the 2 percentage-point difference is considered insignificant.

Almost twice the proportion of respondents favor (57 percent) as opposed (32 percent) banning the vehicles from their states' other non-interstate roads.

In all, almost four respondents in 10, 38 percent, favor legislation that would make all roads in their states, interstates and non-interstates, off limits to tandem truck rigs.

The U.S. Department of Transportation recently announced a plan that would permit wider use of federal highways by the big trucks. This move, it's maintained, would greatly increase the efficiency and productivity of the trucking industry. It would help to offset the April tax increase of 5 cents per gallon on gasoline and diesel fuels.

Some state authorities, particularly those in the densely populated northeast region of the nation, have opposed the plan on the ground that permitting the big trucks to use their roads would create a major safety hazard.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole has said the Highway Administration would try to reconcile its views on the safety issue with those of state officials.

Men and women differ slightly in their views on the issue, with men narrowly opposed to state laws prohibiting big trucks to use the interstates while women favor these laws by a 47 percent to 37 percent vote.

The greatest regional difference is found between the views of westerners — in whose states the double-trailer rigs have long been permitted — and those living in other sections of the country. As shown in the table below, 53 percent of Westerners oppose restrictive laws while 38 percent favor such laws.

State laws banning tandem trailer trucks on roads other than interstates are heavily favored in all major population groups — with no significant regional differences found.

Following are the questions asked and the findings by key population groups:

"Would you favor or oppose a law in this state that would prohibit tandem truck rigs — that is, large trucks with two trailers attached — on major interstate highways?"

Ban Tandems On Interstates

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
NATIONAL	45%	43%	12%
Men	42	49	9
Women	47	37	16
East	49	37	14
Midwest	42	45	13
South	47	40	13
West	38	53	9

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,517 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifilly selected localities across the nation during the period April 29-May 2.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

By Either Name, It's Still The Same

Suppose you were in the market for a home in a romantic semitropical spot far from the hurly-burly of the workaday world and a silky-voiced real estate agent sought to entice you into buying a paradise on Smith Island. Then suppose a rival salesman sought to inveigle you into buying a pleasure dome on Bald Head Island. Everything else being equal, where would you buy? Why on Bald Head, of course. It sounds more romantic and it has more flair.

In this case, everything else would be equal. For Smith Island and Bald Head Island are two names for the same spot, an island in the Cape Fear River three miles off Southport. Smith Island is the name you'll find on the official maps, but to the natives of Southport, it's been Bald Head as long as most of them can remember.

That fact must be a source of pleasure to the island's developers, Walter R. Davis of North Carolina and Midland, Texas, and James Harrington, a former president of Pinehurst, who are also developing Kildare Farms near Raleigh and Southern Shores near Kitty Hawk. Faced with the task of selling lots on a place called Smith Island they likely would have been tempted to change its name. Fortunately, it was also known as Bald Head Island and relieved them of that problem.

Margaret Harper, whose husband, Jim, publishes the Southport Port Pilot and who is a descendant of Thomas Smith, a governor of South Carolina, after whom the island was named when he acquired it in 1690, said it got its more colorful appellation from a group of sand dunes in its southwestern section. The top of one of the dunes stood out prominently enough to assist mariners as they sailed up the Cape Fear River. They called it "Old Baldy," and it eventually gave its name to the entire Smith Island complex.

Mrs. Harper, who once ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor and who was state Democratic vice chairman during the administration of Gov. Bob Scott, recalled recently how Scott had battled vainly to have the state acquire the island and save it from developers such as Frank Sherrill, the cafeteria chain owner who acquired the island for about $15,000 during a depression tax sale. She said that Sherrill had once planned to level the island's dunes and fill in its marshes to a uniform level of eight feet and divide it into lots. She also recalled that Sherrill had cleared part of the island for a farming operation and had imported hogs to be raised on the island. Some of the hogs escaped and flourished to such an extent that folks conducted wild boar hunts on the island.

"Nobody liked that," Mrs. Harper said of Sherrill's plans for developing the island. She recalled that "many of us ... tried to persuade Bob Scott to have the state take over the entire island." This precipitated an epic battle between The Carolina Cape Fear Corp., headed by William R. Henderson of High Point, and the environmentalists, headed by Scott, who wanted the state to acquire the island and preserve it in its natural state.

While Scott tried in vain to raise the money for the state to buy the island, Henderson began its development. He hired golf architect George Cobb to design an 18-hole course which laces through the maritime forest past curving lagoons in the southeastern corner of the island. The environmentalists went to court in an effort to block Henderson's plans for a marina.

Carolina Cape Fear, which reportedly paid Sherrill $5 million for the island, encountered financial problems which forced it to sell to Builders' Investors, a firm that put the development pretty much on hold until it was acquired by the Bald Head Island Corp., headed by Davis and Harrington, in 1979.

Meanwhile, the state, the Army Corps of Engineers and the developers agreed to compromise their differences. The state would get 9,000 of the 12,000-acre island for use as a nature preserve. The corps would permit the developers to dredge a marina to serve as a gateway to development and would not require an environmental impact statement. The environmentaiists, represented by the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the Sierra Club, filed a suit in federal court two weeks later, contending the corps should have required the filing of an environmental impact statement. After more than a year of legal tussling, Judge John D. Larkin ruled that the engineers could file an "after-the-fact" impact statement on the marina and construction of the harbor could resume.

Mrs. Harper, who, along with her husband, has built a summer home on Bald Head Island, says she's happy now the state did not acquire the entire island. She pointed out that the 9,000 acres the state turned over to the Nature Conservancy contains most of the marshlands which the state contended must be preserved as a habitat for wildlife and that "the high ground is being developed in an eminently sound manner."

Although Henderson once said Carolina Cape Fear expected to build a bridge from the vicinity of Fort Fisher to Bald Head, Mrs. Harper said she hopes that will never come about. She will likely get her wish, because with the marshlands at the north of the island set aside as a waildlife refuge, the only feasible route for a bridge is apparently blocked.

Likely there won't be a bridge in Bald Head's future, but it is acquiring other appurtances. Residents who used to have to power their homes with their own generators were relieved a little over a year ago when Carolina Power and Light Co. extended electric service to the island. Presently the only commercial enterprise on the island is the eight-room Bald Head Inn, and it's the only place where island resicdents can buy staples such as bread and milk and the like. However, a shopping center in the vicinity of the abandoned lighthouse is planned, and may be in operation by next year. With the exception of construction and service vehicles, travel on the island is by light-weight vehicles, such as golf carts and bicycles.

Eliza

WASHINGTON — Nearly 20 years ago, a college professor developed a program to enable computers to chat with human beings. Joseph Weizenbaum of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology dubbed the program "Eliza," after the heroine in Bernard Shaw's play, "Pygmalion."

Like a latter-day Sigmund Freud, Eliza plied its partners with questions such as "How are you feeling?" and "What about your childhood?" That a machine could be made to converse with humans was startling enough, but Weizenbaum noticed that many of Eliza's "patients" preferred "her." to the real thing. At the same time, a group of psychologists suggested that Eliza could make therapy available to low-income Americans.

Weizenbaum was chilled by such enthusiasm. But he would later write: "The real contest is between those who think (the computer) can do anything and those who think there should be limits on what it ought to do."

Two decades later, the tug-of-war is well underway. Americans now live essentially computer-aided lives, with machines to assist in working, cooking, commuting and shopping. Within 10 years, according to Edward Feigenbaum and Pamela McCorduck, authors of "The Fifth Generation," computers will routinely aid Americans in thinking and reasoning as well.

Yanking from the opposite direction is, among other people, David Burnham, a New York Times reporter who believes that Americans are losing both privacy and autonomy to enormous machines which collect data about nearly every aspect of their lives.

The attention American citizens and policy-makers pay to each of these views may determine the quality of life for years to come.

"Fifth Generation's" Feigenbaum and McCorduck, who monitored the development of "reasoning machines" for the last 25 years, aren't intimidated by the prospect of machines that think for themselves. The authors contend that "expert" computers already tackle many problems more efficiently than the human brain. These machines are diagnosing health problems hospitals, determining drilling sites for oil exploration firms, and designing buildings for architects.

Computers that perform intellectual chores do more than process data. They can, in fact, draw conclusions. In an interview, the authors suggested that such "artificial intelligence" programs could help computers to replace the household handyman, the financial consultant, and the teacher. Neither McCorduck nor Feigenbaum fear that intellectual assistants would cause unwelcome changes in our lives.

Hope Hits Road For His 80th

FORT WORTH, Texas – Bob Hope was on the road to Fort Worth Saturday. America's ambassador of humor traveled to the city where he played one of his first vaudeville dates 55 years ago to celebrate his 80th birthday at the Cattle Kings Ball, one of the highlights of Fort Worth's society season.

Trooping in from both coasts to toast Hope as guest of honor were such show business friends as comedienne Phyllis Diller, singer Dorothy McGuire, actress Jane Withers and "Incredible Hulk" Lou Ferrigno.

The culmination of the huge party Saturday night in the Will Rogers Coliseum – usually the site of rodeos and livestock auctions – was the unveiling of a 10-layer cake bearing the famous ski-nosed Hope profile.

Flood Waters Threaten Prison

ANGOLA, La. – Guards on horseback kept a 24-vigil Saturday at sandbagged levees along the swollen Mississippi River, which was nearing a level capable of endangering Angola Prison's 4,000 convicts.

Plans were readied last week to evacuate the prisoners if the river, expected to crest Sunday at 60.3 feet, breached the levees. The levee, strengthened by sandbags, was expected to protect the prison as long as the river did not rise above the predicted crest, officials said.

Zinc Shortage Hurts Immunity

DETROIT – A shortage of zinc in the diet causes a "whole galaxy of very severe abnormalities" in the body's immune system and may be an important reason why the aged and the malnourished are more prone to disease, a scientist said Saturday. Both groups are likely to have zinc-deficient diets, the researcher said.

The deficiency inevitably accompanies malnutrition, and it appears in older people because of changes in their diet, said Dr. Robert Good, an immunologist and director of cancer research at the Oklahoma Medical Reserach Foundation. Foods that contain zinc include shellfish and meats, especially liver and other organ meats, he said.

'Hell Week' Costly To Cadets

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. – Air Force officials have confirmed that 136 Air Force Academy freshmen cadets were treated and 13 hospitalized last week following annual "hell week" activities to greet newcomers and to recognize those who are graduating.

Officials said most were suffering from dehydration, caused by a combination of rigorous exercise, 82-degree weather and a lunch of tacos and sour cream. It was the first time more than a handful had to be treated after the annual activity, part of "recognition week," which officials said the academy plans to continue.

The cadets hesitated to discuss the events leading to the collapses but a relative of one cadet said they occurred Wednesday, a day set aside for special exertion.

The relative said the day began at 6 a.m. with a two-hour pre-breakfast run with rifles. After breakfast came three more hours of running, climbing and jumping on the obstacle course. Then came lunch and another three hours of physical training. By the afternoon, some cadets began to fall, and more became ill at dinner.

Walesa Requests Time Off

GDANSK, Poland – Lech Walesa, leader of the outlawed Solidarity union, has asked the Lenin Shipyard for time off during Pope John Paul II's visit to Poland June 16-23, informed sources said Saturday.

Police interrogated Walesa for three hours Saturday, but he said he still refused to answer questions about his jailed advisers. It was the second day he had been questioned, and he was summoned for a third time on Monday.

Klan Speaker Shouted Down

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. – About 100 robed Ku Klux Klan members marched 10 blocks Saturday while an equal number of demonstrators hounded them from sidewalks and lawns. No violence was reported. The counterdemonstrators all but drowned out a speech by Klan leader Bill Wilkinson.

The march by a Klan chapter from nearby Hapeville was allowed by a federal judge, who imposed a 40-minute limit on the rally. Immediately after the rally the Klansmen took off their robes, boarded a bus and a truck and left.

The city council had refused three times to grant the Klan a parade permit and the American Civil Liberties Union went to court for the Klan and won them the right to march.

Thousands Crowd Rock Show

DEVORE, Calif. – About 55,000 rock fans crowded around the mammoth stage of the US Festival Saturday in smoggy heat listening to the "Divinyls," the first band to perform in the three-day rock 'n' roll-computer show.

About a quarter million tickets were sold for the Memorial Day concert put on by computer whiz-kid Steve Wozniak, who predicted the second annual show will take another multimillion dollar bite out of his Apple Computer fortune.

Peace Talks Open In Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama – Central American peace negotiations involving nine Latin American nations opened Saturday with a sense of urgency because of an apparent tough new policy line in Washington.

Foreign ministers from Mexico, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela, who make up the Contadora group, will hold three days of talks with their counterparts from the Central American nations of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

The Contadora group, named after the Panamanian island where the ministers first met in January, has been trying to bring peace to Central America, both to avoid a U.S. intervention and a spread of the violence to their own lands.

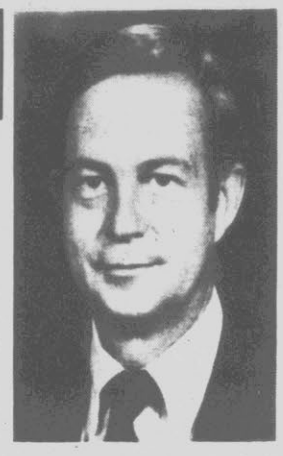

Governor Skips Graduation

AMHERST, Mass. – Campus police escorted former Gov. Edward J. King from the University of Massachusetts graduation Saturday after a man phoned police and said "I am going to kill Ed King."

The ceremony, at which King was to have received an honorary degree, began several minutes late but was held without further incident. University President David Knapp awarded bachelor's degrees to 4,109 seniors.

Some seniors had vowed to turn their backs to King when he received his degree because they opposed his successful campaign to raise the drinking age to 20 and other policies of his administration.

Hundreds Evacuated

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) – Hydrochloric acid leaked from a parked tanker truck Saturday, releasing a white cloud of gas and forcing hundreds of people to evacuate residential areas of downtown Fairbanks for five hours, officials said.

Bob Cavanaugh, director of Civil Defense, said the evacuation was a precaution taken under a "worst-case scenario." He said there never was imminent danger, and no injuries were reported.

Authorities worked to transfer the acid to another truck, but said it could take a good part of the day to complete the task. They were assisted by several national experts who happened to be in Fairbanks for a seminar on toxic materials.

Together, Town Erases Potholes

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) – Just when you thought there had been a festival honoring just about everything – from cowchips to chitlins – the city of Conway comes up with a pothole celebration.

High school students, city police and firefighters, judges and bankers joined forces Saturday and rid their city streets of 585 annoying potholes.

About 80 townspeople turned out for the first annual citywide Pothole Festival, the brainchild of high school student Mary Parler.

"I'm having a good time," she said, pausing after helping to fill a pothole. "It's making something that would be a painstaking job into something kind of fun."

Mayor Ike Long was enthusiastic about the project, especially since the state highway department had notified the city it could not afford to repair the flaws in Conway's streets.

"I wish I could have thought of it," said Long. "I would have liked to have gotten credit for it.

"With the economy in such a pinch, the highway department had to cut down on its budget and can't afford all this," Long said. "We just took it into our own hands and did it ourselves. And I think it's a real good thing."

City administrator Bill Graham said it costs the state more than $200 to fill a single pothole. The cost of asphalt has risen from $28 to $65 a ton in the last 10 years, he added.

The city provided a truck and the gasoline and the highway department sent five trucks and the asphalt.

Major Storms Forecast

BY SUSAN POSTLEWAITE
Associated Press Writer

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Warm Pacific Ocean winds that caused a drought in Australia and torrential rains in Peru may meddle next with the summer hurricanes in the Atlantic.

The hurricane season, responsible for fierce storms with winds that can reach 150 mph or more, officially starts Wednesday and continues through Nov. 30.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center say the big monster storms will be delayed until mid-August or September because of the return of the El Nino phenomena, the occasional unusual warming of the sea.

The forecasters said El Ninos have been warmer and more whimsical than ever this year.

The phenomenon adds unusual strength to the upper atmosphere jet stream and "blows the tops off" storms before they can become hurricanes, National Hurricane Center forecaster Gil Clark said.

The dramatic reduction in the southeastern trade winds that cause El Ninos happens every 10 to 15 years. El Nino, Spanish for child, is is named for the Christ child because it usually comes in late December.

El Ninos surprised meteorologists by starting in September last year, bringing the most severe temperature fluctuations of the century for the "the warmest event ever recorded," Clark said.

El Ninos have been blamed for droughts this year in Australia and Southeast Asia, the flooding that caused mudslides in Ecuador and Peru, less than normal monsoon rains in India and the heavy storms in California and across the southern United States.

Scientists are beginning to believe the periodic warm currents are linked to a huge shift in barometric pressure in the Southern Hemisphere known as the southern oscillation. The event usually lasts 12 to 18 months.

El Ninos form when the surface winds over the ocean drop dramatically, allowing the water to warm rapidly. The heat from the ocean rises, adding strength to the jet stream. "The jet stream begins to increase and blows the top off these developing tropical storms," Clark said.

Ordinarily during hurricane season, the jet stream diminishes to almost nothing.

If the pattern holds, El Ninos will last a few more months and "by September, things will be back to normal," Clark said.

Clark said the short season would have no effect on the severity of storms at the height of hurricane season in September and October or the development of small tropical storms earlier in the season.

"It does look like there will be less than the total average number of storms, but you still have a chance of major storms later on. We do know that we've seen in the past you can have some very serious storms after El Nino," he said.

During the last major El Nino in 1973-74 hurricanes didn't develop until August. The season brought six storms, including three hurricanes. They all developed from August through October.

Storm Names

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Alicia, Barry, Chantal and Dean may be remembered in years to come. Or perhaps Erin, Felix, Gabrielle and Hugo will be the storms to talk about.

They are the names heading the list of the 1983 Atlantic hurricane season, which begins Wednesday.

For several hundred years, West Indies hurricanes were named after the saint's day on which the storm hit, such as Hurricane Santa Ana, which struck Puerto Rico in 1825.

During World War II, forecasters began using women's names. In 1979, they changed to an alternating male-female list.

Wrong Court Starts Probe

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) – Officials have discovered that the probe of the murder of a U.S. military adviser was started by the wrong court, and have transferred it to another jurisdiction, a court official said Saturday.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger III, the deputy commander of U.S. military advisers, in El Salvador was gunned down last Wednesday evening as he waited in his car to pick up a girlfriend.

The Popular Liberation Forces, largest of five leftist rebel groups, claimed responsibility and called the killing a warning of bloodshed to come if the Reagan administration increases U.S. involvement in the civil war here.

The case originally was assigned to San Salvador's 6th Penal Court, which started to conduct the equivalent of a grand jury investigation. But it has been transferred to the 2nd Penal Court in Santa Tecla, seven miles west of the capital. Santa Tecla court clerk Edgardo Ventura said in a telephone interview Saturday.

He said that in the confusion following the murder, the case was assigned to the 6th Penal Court because Schaufelberger's body was brought to the capital, where an autopsy was performed and a justice of the peace conducted the equivalent of a coroner's inquiry.

Apparently, the justice of the peace sent his report to the 6th penal court. But Ventura said the mistake was discovered, and the case transferred to the 2nd Penal Court, in whose jurisdiction Schaufelberger was murdered.

Ventura said the Santa Tecla court took up where the San Salvador court left off. He said the National Police also is investigating the case, and that the results would be given to the court for indictments.

Statements by witnesses, and the preliminary investigation, showed Schaufelberger was killed by a gunman who leaned out of a passing car and pumped three .22-caliber Magnum, hollow-point bullets into the naval officer's head. The officer had been sitting in his car near the Central American University campus.

Schaufelberger's woman friend, Consuelo Escalante, a 34-year-old Salvadoran, witnessed the shooting from a distance and was questioned by police.

Both Salvadoran and American authorities opened investigations, but after the leftist claim of responsibility, U.S. officials said they doubted the probes will lead to much.

Rebels Set Off Bombs In Lima

LIMA, Peru (UPI) – Leftist rebels bombed 10 Lima electric towers and set off scores of bombs near the U.S. Embassy and other capital targets in a nighttime onslaught President Fernando Belaunder Terry Saturday called "undeclared war."

Parts of the capital were blacked out for 90 minutes but there were no reports of casualties. Police said thay arrested 20 suspected rebels soon after the dynamiting began late Friday.

During the blackout, the guerrillas set off a series of dynamite and incendiary bombs near the U.S. Embassy, the presidential palace, the Sheraton Hotel, several banks, the Bayer Chemical industrial complex and other locations throughout the city.

Police also said they discovered a makeshift bazooka-style device pointed at the presidential palace and a similar one near the U.S. Embassy, apparently for launching other explosives at the two buildings.

"What happened last night are clear acts of treason and sabotage against the nation," Belaunde said in a brief news conference early Saturday.

Salt Lake City Cuts New River To Avert Flooding

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A busy city street was turned into a makeshift canal Saturday to help drain a dangerously swollen reservoir, while rising temperatures turned mountain snowpack into floods that lapped at homes, forced evacuations and closed roads.

Cities in the northern half of the state reported isolated flooding and officials feared the water could rise as temperatures reached the low 90s in the area, where most of Utah's 1.5 million residents live.

In Bountiful, just north of Salt Lake City, about 200 residents of nursing homes were evacuated because of flooding.

Floods closed some mountain roads throughout northern and central Utah, and a state road near the Sundance ski resort at Provo Canyon was choked off by rising water that threatened several cabins.

The flooding began early last week as the record mountain snowpack, held firm by unseasonable cold, withered under temperatures that suddenly pushed into the 80s and 90s.

"Some moderating temperatures would help us," said Dave Lovell, Salt Lake County planning administrator. "The high temperatures are bringing it down all at once."

But the forecast was for continued hot weather through Sunday.

In Salt Lake City, water up to 5 feet deep rolled along a 6-foot-high sandbag-and-plastic dike along 1300 South Street to the Jordan River to keep rapidly filling Mountain Dell Reservoir from overflowing.

City and county crews and volunteers worked overnight to build the 2-mile-long dike on the four-lane highway. Water was released from Mountain Dell about 5 a.m. and kept flowing at 50-cubic-foot increments, said John Hiskey, aide to Mayor Ted Wilson.

The sudden pressure pushed runoff "with a percolating effect" through Sugarhouse Park upstream and runoff seeped into basements in several nearby homes, Hiskey said.

And before the dike was completed, knee-deep runoff covered a four-block area where flows from three creeks converged, said Al Haines, city administrative officer.

Runoff was cut off when the dike was completed and city officials were inspecting damage to several homes and businesses in the area.

Terry Holzworth, Salt Lake County flood control director, said the flow through the makeshift canal eventually would reach 390 cubic feet of water per second.

The road near Pinecrest in Emigration Canyon, 6 miles from the canyon mouth in Salt Lake County, remained closed Saturday as crews cut small channels across the highway to facilitate runoff. There was a brief evacuation there on Friday because of a mudslide.

NEW RIVER ... Water flows through the instersection of 13th Street and Main in Salt Lake City Saturday as a local resident shoots photographs of the rising water. The makeshift canal was made to control heavy runoff from the mountains. (AP Laserphoto)

Nimitz Suits Filed

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Parents of eight crewmembers who died in a 1981 jet crash and fire aboard the aircraft carrier Nimitz and one survivor sued the government on the disaster's second anniverary, claiming the ship was not seaworthy.

The suits were filed two years to the date that a Navy EA-6B Prowler counter-intelligence jet crashed on the Nimitz's flight deck, killing 14 and injuring 45.

The crash during nighttime landing exercises 80 miles off the coast of Jacksonville, Fla., was the worst accident on a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

The families and one survivor claimed federal jurisdiction under the Public Vessels Act and the Admiralty Act and contended the U.S. government "consented to be sued under circumstances such as those described" in the nine sister suits.

The suits charged that the Nimitz's deck-mounted optical-landing light system was not operating during the nighttime carrier landings. The suits further charged that continued nighttime landings with an imperfect lighting system amounted to negligence by the Navy and caused the crash of the jet loaded with radar-jamming equipment.

Explosives Manufacturer Is Charged In Fatal Blast

BENTON, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities issued a nationwide warrant Saturday for the owner of a bait farm that allegedly fronted an illegal explosives factory where 11 workers were killed in a series of earthshaking blasts, the sheriff said.

Polk County Sheriff Frank Payne said Dan Lee Webb was charged Saturday with the manufacture and possession of illegal explosives.

Webb's wife, Linda Sue Webb, who was in their home next door to the 40-by-65 foot metal barn that was shredded by the blast, has told officials she thinks her husband is in the New York or New Jersey area, Payne said.

"I'd say the likelihood is now that he is aware of what happened here. And he may be on his way here," Payne said.

Seven bodies had been identified by Saturday, said Dr. William Bass, an anthropologist from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. He said it probably will be "a couple of weeks" before all 11 are identified.

As federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents searched through the charred wreckage at the isolated hillside farm in this southeastern Tennessee town of 1,000 people, families and friends of the dead gathered quietly outside the small Polk County sheriff's office three miles from the blast site.

Rose High Holds Annual Awards Day Ceremony

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dozens of seniors and a trio of juniors were recognized Friday afternoon at the annual Awards Day ceremony held at J.R. Rose High School. As in past years Leota Tyson, a 1915 Greenville High School graduate, held the young graduates' attention with her off-the-cuff comments along with bits of advise.

"You're a mighty good looking bunch of young folks," she said, "and I take it for granted most of you are good boys and girls."

She added she missed the ceremony last year "because I was foolish enough to walk in my sleep and break an arm, but I was careful this year so that I'd be sure not to break anything so that I could be here with you. At 86, you don't always know what you might be doing a year from now, but I plan to be back here again next year."

Interludes of musical entertainment were provided with members of the Greenville Chamber Players directed by Candace Dixon playing Mozart's "Menuetto" for the processional and recessional; and Betty Topper conducting the Choral Rampants in singing Rodgers & Hammerstein's "Climb Every Mountain." The welcome was given by senior class president Sidney Rogers Warner, with class vice president Lynnette Hammond presenting a brief thought for the day.

The Woman's Club Good Citizenship Award was presented to Angela Marie Michel and the Civitan's Good Citizenship Award went to Raymond Allen Hair Jr.

In the Distinguished Service Awards category, Stephanie Renee Deans earned the Lonnie Barnhill Award and Lisa Lynn Wang was the Keech Award recipient.

An award given for the first time this year was the Danny Wood Memorial Scholarship, presented by Cheryl Adams to Annie Ruth Gaynor.

Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard®

Compare the interest rate you pay on other credit cards with Wachovia's new Prime-Plus rate.

Wachovia is introducing a new approach to credit card interest rates that lets you save on finance charges, and makes the Wachovia MasterCard the one card you'll want to have.

Here's how it works. After July 1, 1983, all new and existing MasterCard customers will be able to benefit from a new floating interest rate based on Wachovia's prime rate plus 5%. The rate can vary monthly but under present law cannot exceed an 18% annual percentage rate. So this Prime-Plus rate can mean a substantial savings from the rates charged by most other financial institutions.

For example, if the new Prime-Plus MasterCard rate had been applied for the month of May, interest-paying MasterCard customers would have been eligible to be charged just 15% annual percentage rate (APR) instead of the 18% in effect for a number of years.

Even if the prime rate should go up, the interest you pay will not exceed the current 18% APR ceiling.

Like many other bank cards, the Wachovia MasterCard is available for an annual fee of $18. But unlike other banks, Wachovia's approach lets you enjoy the benefits of a favorable prime rate environment, while still enjoying the protection of an interest rate ceiling.

The chart will show you how the new Prime-Plus rate structure can offset all or part of the fee.

Why Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard is the one bank credit card to carry.

If Your Balance Subject To Finance Charges Is:	And The Prime Rate Is:
	12%	10%*	8%
	You Would Be Charged This Prime-Plus Rate:
	17% APR	15% APR	13% APR
	Your Annual Savings Would Be:
$ 250	$ 2.50	$ 7.50	$ 12.50
$ 500	5.00	15.00	25.00
$1000	10.00	30.00	50.00
$2500	25.00	75.00	125.00

*The Wachovia MasterCard prime rate that would have been in effect for May, 1983.

Comparison based on the 18% APR ceiling currently permitted by North Carolina law and commonly charged for revolving credit by North Carolina financial institutions. Other states may have different regulations and even higher rates may be charged. For illustrative purposes, the chart assumes a constant prime rate and a fixed balance subject to finance charges. The prime lending rate is set by Wachovia from time to time as its interest rate basis for commercial borrowers. This rate may vary with economic conditions.

You can save even more by consolidating all your bank cards and charge accounts into your Wachovia MasterCard. If you now have a Wachovia MasterCard, ask your Personal Banker℠ about using Prime-Plus MasterCard to reduce or pay off those more expensive cards and accounts. And start saving money on interest.

If you're not now a Wachovia customer, stop by any Wachovia office and ask a Personal Banker about the new Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard. Or call toll-free 1-800-672-0111 for an application.

Bill Puts Chiefs, Sheriffs At Odds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sheriffs who want their own training and education standards are presenting their case to the Legislature, but municipal police chiefs say it should be dismissed for lack of evidence.

A bill sponsored by Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, would establish a North Carolina Sheriffs' Education and Training Standards Commission.

The commission would decide on minimum educational and training standards for employment as a sheriff, deputy, dispatcher or other department employee. The group would certify schools, programs, courses and teachers of the prospective employees.

Bill supporters, including the N.C. Sheriffs Association and the state attorney general's office, say sheriffs and their helpers have different jobs than police and need different training.

"They're really unique among law enforcement officers in this state," said Wicker. "They have duties that no other officers have and they need special training — not just to serve the sheriffs, but to serve the people."

But during hearings last week before the House Law Enforcement Committee, representatives of city police chiefs said what's good for them is sufficient for sheriffs and deputies.

"There are plenty of ways to provide training for sheriffs within the existing structure," said Buck Roney, representing the N.C. Association of Chiefs of Police. "They shouldn't be treated differently."

John Boles, chief of Cary police and member of the N.C. Police Executives Association, said the N.C. Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission provides law enforcement instruction that meets the needs of police and sheriffs.

"There's no reason to think that anything will be solved by breaking one agency away from others," said Boles.

Howard Kramer, executive director of the sheriffs' association, told the committee the standards commission's "generic" course is adequate for police officers who do only law enforcement. But sheriffs and deputies, he said, have additional duties the commission doesn't deal with.

Kramer said those tasks include:

— Jail maintenance. The sheriff is responsible for upkeep and administration of the county jail and must transport inmates.

— Court security. Deputies serve as courtroom baliffs and maintain order while keeping an eye on criminals who might plot escape while on trial.

— Handling of civil and criminal papers. Sheriffs and deputies must serve subpoenas, summonses and other documents — and doing so improperly could jeopardize a case, said Angela Maletto, lobbyist for the sheriff's association.

"These are things that require specialized training. Police officers aren't in a position to know what the sheriffs want and need," she said in an interview Friday.

In The State

Unemployment Rate Drops

RALEIGH – The unemployment rate for North Carolina dropped a full percentage point in April compared to March, with 94 of the state's 100 counties showing decreased unemployment.

The state Employment Security Commission said the jobless rate increased in four counties and remained unchanged in two counties. The statewide total unemployment rate was 8.7 percent in April, down from 9.7 percent in March. The national unadjusted rate was 10 percent in April, down from 10.8 percent in March.

In April, 43 counties recorded double-digit unemployment. In the same month a year ago, 39 counties had jobless rates of 10 percent or more.

Pitt County recorded an 8.8 percent unemployment rate for April. Other area counties and their rates included Greene, 11.1 perent; Beaufort, 11.6 percent, and Martin, 15 percent.

Swain County had the highest unemployment rate, 25.1 percent.

School May Be Excused

WINSTON-SALEM – Legislation that would allow the North Carolina School of the Arts to avoid repaying $3.24 million in federal grants is now halfway through Congress, says U.S. Rep. Steven L. Neal, D-N.C.

Neal said the House may vote this week on the bill, which would let the school lease its Stevens Center to First Stevens Limited Partnership, a money-making group. The school was given federal money to develop the Roger L. Stevens Center for Performing Arts.

Green Probe Speeding Up

RALEIGH – District attorneys for Wake and Columbus counties said Saturday they expect to speed up the state's investigation of Lt. Gov. James C. Green.

The state is examining evidence from the FBI's undercover corruption probe in Columbus and Bladen counties. Green, who comes from the Bladen County seat of Elizabethtown, has said an undercover FBI agent tried to entrap him with a $2,000 campaign contribution.

But Green, a likely gubernatorial candidate next year, denied the contribution. He has said the state's probe is "harassing and without merit."

AIDS Found In Prisons

RALEIGH – The state prison system's top health official said Saturday he doubts North Carolina prisons will have an outbreak of AIDS although one inmate has died from the disease and two others are suspected of contracting it.

Dennis Lassiter said the two Cases at Central Prison did not originate there. One inmate who died of AIDS did come from Central Prison and was thought at first to have succumbed to pneumonia when he died April 6.

AIDS is an acronym for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. The disease breaks down the body's immune system, leaving it vulnerable to diseases. AIDS was first diagnosed two years ago among male homosexuals, and has since been traced to hemophiliacs, intravenous drug users, Haitians and heterosexual partners of AIDS victims.

The two inmates at Central prison are in isolation at prison hospital. Doctors have begun testing the prison's blood supply.

Piedmont Jet Lands Safely

CHARLOTTE – A Piedmont Airlines jetliner had to make an emergency landing Friday after one engine failed on takeoff from Douglas International Airport. The plane landed safely and no passengers or crew were injured.

The Boeing 727-200 airliner with 141 passengers bound for Dallas-Fort Worth "was on takeoff roll" when one of the three rear-mounted engines failed, said Wayne Tucker, Charlotte manager for Piedmont. The engine was on the right side of the fuselage.

Black Judge Takes Oath

ASHEVILLE – Robert Louis Harrell of Asheville was sworn in Friday as the first black District Court judge in western North Carolina history.

Senior Resident Superior Court Judge Robert D. Lewis administered the oath of office to Harrell, who was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to succeed District Court Judge James O. Israel. Attorney G.K. Butterfield of Wilson, president of the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers, said Harrell's appointment as the 11th black judge in the state, heralded "a new day in this state and in Buncombe County."

Caution Given On Bee Stings

DURHAM – A Duke University Medical Center physician says people should learn how to avoid and treat allergic reactions to bee and other insect stings, which killed nine North Carolinians in a recent 2½-year period.

Dr. Rebecca Buckley said nearly 100 people nationwide die each year from severe allergic reactions to insect stings. She said 62 percent of the fatalities from insect stings are from a swelling of the throat which obstructs breathing.

Probe Ordered In Greensboro

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Justice Department is under a court directive to investigate possible government misconduct in the attack by Ku Klux Klan members and Nazis on communist demonstrators in Greensboro, N.C.

Friday's order by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell stems from a lawsuit by several victims, or their families, in the 1979 violence. The suit had sought a Justice Department probe of possible involvement in the attack by undercover agents for the FBI agents or the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Among the charges made by the victims were that FBI Director William Webster and former Justice Department officials should have known beforehand about the impending violence. The Justice Department has denied any such liability and Smith advised the victims' lawyers in July 1982 that they had not supplied sufficient information to warrant the preliminary inquiry. The plaintiffs' lawyers then asked Gesell to order Attorney General William French Smith to petition for a special prosecutor in the case.

Gesell said there was sufficient information under the Ethics in Government Act to trigger a preliminary investigation to determine whether a special prosecutor is needed.

The Ethics in Government Act provides for a court-appointed special prosecutor, when requested by the attorney general, to investigate government officials for possible criminal wrongdoing.

Attorney Daniel Sheehan said he was happy about the order, but "we are extremely skeptical about the objectivity and honesty" of an investigation undertaken by Smith. Sheehan is the attorney for the Greensboro Civil Rights Litigation Fund, which filed the suit.

"This is the first time in history a judge has ever ordered the attorney general or the Justice Department to undertake a specific criminal investigation of any charges," Sheehan said. "Yet he didn't go so far as to insist that an independent counsel or special prosecutor be appointed to supervise this investigation."

Justice Department spokesman Thomas DeCair declined comment.

Tobacco Co-Op Cutting Prices To Help Sales

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. has decided to lower prices for stored tobacco to reduce a backlog caused by the slowest sales for this time of year in a decade.

But Fred G. Bond, Stabilization's general manager, told the cooperative's 37th annual meeting Friday that a lower midyear price schedule for tobacco held under loan would be released to exporters and manufacturers on Monday.

The action, timed to occur before the opening of July markets for the 1983 crop, is designed to lure buyers away from foreign leaf, Bond said in an interview.

Base prices on the 1976 through 1982 crops held by the cooperative will be cut 3 percent to 17 percent from January rates, depending on the grade, Bond said. The 1975 crop will be offered at special bid.

"It is a departure from what we have been doing over the years," said Bond, who has been with Stabilization for 30 of its 37 years.

Speakers at the meeting told farmers that several factors make this year different:

— With 260 million pounds of 1982 leaf under loan — a record percentage for an annual crop — Stabilization has a debt of more than $1.3 billion, a 60 percent increase from last year. Interest on the current debt is $226,000 a day.

— By this time last year Stabilization had sold 46 million pounds of its old tobacco. Only 17 million pounds have been sold this year.

— Because of changes in the federal tobacco program passed by Congress last summer, growers pay a "no-net cost" fee to cover the cooperative's losses. This gives Stabilization more incentive to move inventories and keep losses from interest payments at a minimum. Growers will pay $7 per 100 pounds this year in no-net fees.

Stabilization, which is controlled by growers, guarantees farmers a minimum price on crops by acquiring tobacco on the auction floor that fails to bring at least one cent above price-support levels set by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

The cooperative loans the farmer the support price for tobacco, then sells it later to repay the loan.

Support levels, tied by law to rising production costs, have risen steadily each year, making foreign leaf more competitive. The result was a record amount of tobacco going to the cooperative last year.

Graham Says Helms Was Right

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham says Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was right to use politics in a series of letters urging federal officials to resolve a dispute over imported "scrap" tobacco.

"I think he should have written those letters, if there's a problem with scrap tobacco," said Graham, a Democrat.

Asked if he thought it was proper for Helms to cite politics in his letters to Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, Graham said, "Absolutely."

Helms is urging the U.S. Customs Service to reverse two rulings that allow imported stemmed and machine-threshed tobacco to qualify for lower tariffs than unprocessed leaf.

He and some North Carolina agricultural leaders contend that cigarette manufacturers and tobacco importers are hurting domestic growers by shredding quality foreign leaf and importing it at low tariffs. Helms says another ruling by the Customs Bureau is imminent.

Several times last year, Helms wrote to Regan saying that Helms and the state Republican Party could be hurt in the 1984 elections if no action is taken on the ruling.

Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, who is expected to challenge Helms next year for his Senate seat, had no public response to Helms' letters, said Hunt aide Brent Hackney.

"The governor is concerned with scrap tobacco, and in that respect, he would be in agreement with Sen. Helms," Hackney said. "But he has no comment on the exchange of letters. We don't have a dog in whatever fights are going on between Helms and the Reagan administration."

Helms said he was only trying to expedite a ruling by writing the letters in order to help farmers.

In 1980, when President Carter was campaigning for re-election, Helms said the Democrats were using the issue as a "political ploy."

In a campaign visit to Winston-Salem, Carter promised to try to close the tariff loophole, but he was later defeated by Ronald Reagan.

Wilderness Projects Urged

ROUGEMONT, N.C. (AP) — Congress should make about 65,781 more acres of national forest land in North Carolina into wilderness areas, a task force of environmental, forestry, sporting and governmental officials says.

On Friday, the group left a two-day meeting at Quail Roost Conference Center with a consensus — but no ironclad agreement — on the wilderness areas. But they remained unresolved on the future of four other tracts totalig 42,700 acres in the state's two western national forests.

The Wilderness Task Force has been charged with reaching an agreement on a proposed N.C. Wilderness Act that would be recommended to Gov. Jim Hunt and the state's congressional delegation.

If it passes Congress, the act would add tracts to the 31,377 acres of existing wilderness areas, where roads, motor vehicles and lumbering are banned.

Although current federal rules would allow oil and gas exploration, no leases for those purposes have been granted in North Carolina.

Fabi Heads Indy Field

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The formula for Sunday's Indianapolis 500, with record-setting rookie Teo Fabi at the head of the fastest field ever, may be the most volatile in the 67-year history of the world's richest auto race.

The 5-foot-5 Fabi, 27-year-old veteran of the sports car circuit, surprised the racing world by driving a Cosworth-powered March to one- and four-lap qualifying records last weekend, turning a single lap at 208.049 mph and averaging 207.395 for the sizzling run.

But the Italian is not the favorite in a field that includes five former winners and is expected to be one of the most competitive ever at Indy.

No one driver has dominated the month of practice and time trials leading up to this year's race. A record 10 starters qualified at more than 200 mph.

But Rick Mears, the 1979 champion and former Speedway record-holder who will start his Penske PC-11 from the outside of the front row next to the March-Cosworth of veteran Mike Mosley, would appear to have a slight edge on the basis of starting position and experience.

"You have to think Rick will be the man to beat," says three-time Indy winner Al Unser, who also is Mears' teammate. "He's up front, experienced and he's won here before.

"But I think I've got a real good shot, too, and so do about six or seven other guys."

Mears, who went into last year's race as a heavy favorite but lost to two-time winner Gordon Johncock by sixteen-hundredths of a second in the closest and most dramatic finish in Indy history, doesn't care if he's favored or not.

"The only thing I worry about is running my race," Mears said. "Whether you call me a favorite or not, I still have to go out there and perform. All I have to think about is taking what the car and circumstances on the race track will give me. You can't force things out there in a 500-mile race."

But history shows you can't count out Fabi, even though he is a rookie here and the last first-year Indy starter to win was Graham Hill in 1966. In the past eight years, the pole-winner has won four times and never finished worse than third.

A 30 percent chance of showers is forecast for Sunday morning, with temperatures in the mid 70s. The race is to begin at 11 a.m. EDT.

The start at Indianapolis, with 11 rows of three-wide starters trying to funnel at speeds approaching 190 mph into what is basically a two-lane first turn, is considered by many the most dangerous single moment in a very dangerous sport.

It is heightened by the electric tension of the huge crowd and the knowledge that over the years, including the 1982 race, the start has produced some of the worst moments in an event that has taken the lives of 33 drivers.

Kevin Cogan, who was starting his second Indy race a year ago, ignited a melee last May that began even before the field crossed the starting line. It's still uncertain if a part in the rear of his Penske racer broke, as he insists, or if he simply lost control in the excitement of the moment, as some veteran drivers claim. But Cogan's car, starting in the middle of the front row, suddenly darted right, hitting the rear of a car driven by four-time winner A.J. Foyt.

Cogan's car then veered back across the track and into the path of 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti. The collision took both of them out of the race. With cars diving in every direction trying to get past the accident, Dale Whittington ran over the top of the car driven by Roger Mears, Rick's older brother, and eliminated both the Indy rookies from the race.

"The start of the race here always gets so much attention because everybody remembers what has happened in the past and are always talking about it," explains second-year starter Chip Ganassi, who finished 15th. "The thing everybody should remember is that the first two laps just don't mean that much in a 500-mile race. You can't win the race on the first lap, but you can lose it."

There has been a heightened fear of tragedy in recent years as speed has outstripped skill. And a series of crashes during practice this year, with five drivers spending time in the hospital, has brought those fears to the surface.

Fabi, a veteran road racer, is one of six rookies in this year's race, and 19 starters — more than half the field, which established a record qualifying average of 198.406 — had never raced on this historic 2½-mile oval before 1980.

"There isn't any margin for error at the speeds we run out there," Johncock said. "In the race the overall speeds are slower than in qualifying, but the quick guys will still get in some laps around 200 if the cars are comfortable."

Mears set a race record last year with a single lap clocked at 200.535. But despite such sizzling laps speeds and the fact that the average speed of last year's starting field (197.704) was second only to this year's, Johncock's winning average of 162.029 was a bit shy of the record of 162.962 set by the late Mark Donohue in 1972.

There were no serious injuries in the 1982 race, although two-time Indy starter Gordon Smiley was killed in a terrifying crash while warming up for a qualification run two weeks prior to the race. In fact, there have been no fatalities resulting from the race since 1973, when Swede Savage suffered fatal injuries in a flaming crash.

"The cars are much safer today than they were back in those days," said Mears, who walked away unscathed from a crash at 190 mph during testing at Michigan International Speedway last month. "There's less chance of fire because of the crashworthy fuel cells and the cars are made with space-age materials that can withstand tremendous impact. But the idea still is to keep the car between the walls."

The sentimental favorite of most of the crowd of 350,000-400,000 that will spread across the sprawling Speedway grounds Sunday is Foyt, who has dedicated his record 26th Indy start to his father and longtime crew chief, A.J. "Tony" Foyt. The elder Foyt died of cancer eight days ago, only hours after his 48-year-old son qualified.

Dale Earnhardt Ends Frustrations By Capturing Mello Yello 300

HARRISBURG (AP) — After two years of frustration in the NASCAR Mello Yello 300 Late Model Sportsman race, Dale Earnhardt was a little more than worried that the third time might not be any more charming than those before.

However, Earnhardt's worry eased considerably after he made up a one-lap deficit to win Saturday's $125,375 event at the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Earnhardt lost a lap earlier and had to battle mechanical adversity as well as stiff competition.

"You're darn right I was worried about making up that lap I got down early, but I was hoping if I cuaght the cautions right that I could do it," he said.

Earnhardt, who had finished second each of the past two years, led a contingent of five drivers who regularly compete in the Winston Cup Grand National circuit across the finish line.

"I understand some of those other guys are unhappy about us Grand National drivers running with 'em," he said. "They'll have to remember I cut my eye teeth on this circuit. That's how I got started. We don't mind 'em running the GMs with us. Why should they worry about us?"

Earnhardt, driving a Pontiac, took the lead on lap 136 and stretched the margin to 3 seconds by race's end.

While Earnhardt pulled steadily away, the race for second place between Neil Bonnett, Bill Elliott and Harry Gant intensified. With four laps to go, Bonnett took advantage of Gant's high angle in the second turn to take over second place and Elliott, driving Darrell Waltrip's car, slipped underneath for third.

"That was fortunate that those three were racing together," said Earnhardt, adding that their competition prevented them from forming a draft which might have reduced his lead.

Bonnett said Earnhardt was running at the end like he was at the beginning before his car started missing, while Elliott said that the last set of tires put on his car did not give him the handling capabilities to catch Earnhardt.

"I think we would have given Dale a run for his money if I could have had our first set of tires on at the last," Elliott said.

Bonnett led much of the early portions while Earnhardt and Gant each fell a lap behind. Earnhardt had a tire go flat on lap 51, requiring a pit stop under the green flag. Gant dropped a lap when he pitted just before a caution period.

Earnhardt made up his lap during a 10-car accident on lap 79, which caused sheet metal damage to several cars but resulted in no injuries.

Gant got back on the lead lap during a caution period on lap 98 and by lap 118 had moved into the lead. But he began having tire problems and gradually fell off the pace.

Earnhardt, who won $9,100, was one of six drivers who shared in 19 lead changes. He averaged 117.724 mph, far below the race record of 131.243 mph set by Waltrip in 1979. He led four times for a total of 83 laps.

Bobby Allison finished fifth, one lap down, the same deficit as Jack Ingram, the highest finishing non-regular on the Grand National circuit, and Joe Ruttman and Tommy Houston, who started in the 41st position in the 42-car field. Davey Allison, Bobby Allison's son, finished in ninth place, two laps behind, while Joe Kelly was 10th.

Pole sitter Morgan Shepherd dropped out of the race on lap 53 when a shock mount broke on the rear end. Shepherd had consistently run in the top six positions until then.

A record crowd of 75,000 watched the race under clear skies and temperatures near 80 degrees.

Tar Heels Ousted From Regional Field

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Dave Just's RBI-single in the bottom of the ninth inning capped a four-run rally and Delaware took a 6-5 victory over host North Carolina Saturday in NCAA East Regional baseball action.

Just's hit sent pinch-runner Craig Burris home and knocked the Tar Heels out of contention for a trip to next week's College World Series at Omaha, Neb. Delaware, 36-15, plays again on Sunday, when it will meet the loser of Saturday night's James Madison-Citadel game.

Trailing 5-2, Jeff Trout opened the rally by drawing a walk from North Carolina starter Brad Powell, 6-4. After Mike Stanek struck out, Tom Skrable singled and Lex Bleckley reached on an error to load the bases. Mark Ringie singled Trout home and knocked out Powell.

Reliever Chris Mench walked Andy Cichocki to force Skrable in. Mike Lloyd, running for Bleckley, scored the tying run on Warren Post's sacrifice fly to right field. Mench was replaced by Tim Kirk, who surrendered Just's game-winning rap to right field. Burris was running for Ringie.

North Carolina, which finished at 42-10, scored an apparent insurance run in the top of the ninth when Glenn Liacouras singled and reached second on Walt Weiss' sacrifice bunt. Weiss also reached when the throw to get Liacouras was late. Drex Roberts moved Weiss to second on another bunt but forced Liacouras at third.

Jeff Hubbard smacked a one-hopper to Skrable who threw to Bleckley to force Roberts, but the return throw to first was wide and Weiss scored.

The Tar Heels spotted Delaware a second-inning run before tying the score in the second, adding two more in the fourth and a single run in the fifth on Pete Kumiega's 12th home run.

Stanek cut the deficit to 5-2 in the seventh on his school-record 16th home run.

Gatlin Prep Athlete Of Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When it all came down to looking at the records, there really wasn't much disagreement.

Gatlin, who will probably have to build a new trophy case just to house the honors that have continued to pile in on him during his senior season at Conley, becomes the second straight Viking to be selected for the two-year-old award.

Mike Long, who is also a senior at Conley this year, was selected as a junior last season. Long was a state champion in wrestling last year, but was unable to retain his championship in this year's competition.

Gatlin opened his senior season with the credentials to be the top prep player in North Carolina — and the most sought-after by the collegiate ranks. Indeed, he was recruited by over 200 schools, but opted to make an early decision to get the pressure off him during the 1982-83 campaign.

So in November, he announced that he would attend the University of Maryland and play under Coach Lefty Driesell, come the fall of 1984.

That left him free to play for the Vikings without having to worry about the constant jangle of the telephone, visits by coaches and the like. The recruiting war ended early for him and left him free to play basketball.

And play he did. Scoring over 30 points on a number of occasions, Gatlin was never held to less than 17 points during the season. On most occasions, he scored in the 20's, and finished the year with just over a 25.0 average.

Scoring wasn't all he did, however.

As Conley's point guard, he dished out a number of assists each game and in some cases had to tone down his abilities to conform with those of his teammates. Many times, his passes — although pin-point — caught breaking players unaware.

He also rebounded well, averaging 9.8 during his final year, despite being a backcourt man generally. He could hit from about everywhere — inside and outside.

But while he led Conley to the Coastal Conference title for the second straight year, he was unable to guide his team out of the districts and his season ended there, except for a couple of post-season out-of-state games.

When the season was over, he was picked as one of 25 all-American players by McDonald's, and played in both the McDonald's All-Star game in Atlanta, and the Capital Classic in Washington, doing well in each of those games.

In addition to being the leading scorer for his team, he was also the leading scorer in both his conference and the Pitt-Martin-Greene area. He was named to the News & Observer's All-East Team and to the Associated Press' All-State team. He was also named to the Parade Magazine and Converse All-American teams.

And all that was capped off when the AP designated him as the 1982-83 Player of the Year in North Carolina.

But honors like that weren't unexpected. During the previous summer, he attended both Five-Star and the BC camps, making the all-star team at the both. He was presented with the Sportsmanship award at Five Star.

He can claim all-conference honors, too, in two conferences. He was all-conference in the Eastern Carolina Conference in 1979-80 as a sophomore, before Conley was transfered by the state into the Coastal, where he made the all-conference team twice more, being a unanimous selection as a senior and named as captain of that all-league team.

"As a player, he's one of the most coachable I've ever had, along with being the most talented," Conley basketball coach Shelley Marsh said. "He's an ideal coach's player in that while he may not always agree with you, he'll follow your instuctions.

"As for being a human being, he's an outstanding young man. He's very outgoing and friendly, and has been a good ambassador for us. We've received letters from a number of people he's been in contact with, all praising him. He's an unselfish person and a sensitive person, both on and off the court."

As an example, Marsh said that at the Capital Classic, Keith overheard one of the youthful managers of his team telling another that he would "love to have one of those jerseys," referring to the uniforms Keith and his teammates wore.

After the game, Gatlin presented his jersey to a delighted boy who certainly will be following Keith's career in the D.C. area.

Others considered for the award were Edward Frazier of Rose; Greg Briley of North Pitt; Andrew Edwards of Farmville Central; Tyrone Gay of Ayden-Grifton; and Chris Harris of Greenville Christian Academy.

Frazier is an outstanding sprinter and was a top receiver on the Rose football team this past year. In last year's National Junior Olympics, he was second in his age class in the 400-meter and ran a leg on the winning 4x100 and 4x400 meter teams. This summer, he has been selected to run in the Golden West meet in California, and to try out for the Junior National Team.

Edwards, who played basketball, football and track for Farmville Central, received his school's highest award for an athlete, the Dickie Newton Award.

Gay, another three-sport star, played basketball, baseball and football. His pitching helped lead A-G to three straight Eastern Carolina Conference titles.

Harris, the only junior considered, played three years of soccer and two years of baseball and basketball for GCA, making all-conference in soccer and basketball. He was the team's MVP in baseball.

The Female High School Athlete of the Year will be announced next week.

Bean's Double Bogey Costs Lead Share

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Andy Bean, with a share of the lead, double bogeyed the final hole and staked David Graham to a 2-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Memorial Tournament.

"Just one of those things," Bean said.

"I made too many mistakes. And when you make mistakes on this golf course, it will cost you."

It cost him the lead, but, he said, not necessarily the tournament.

"If I can play a good round Sunday, particularly if I can get off to a good start, I should be able to put some pressure on David," he said, looking ahead to the final 18 holes.

"Usually, if I'm playing good and putting good, I can be hard to catch." And, he insisted, he's still doing both.

Graham, who came from two shots off the pace with a solid 69, said his 1980 victory in this tournament could give him a small advantage.

"It's helpful because you've won on the golf course, know you can win on the golf course. But," he said, "you still have to go out and play."

Bean, the second round leader, shared the top spot when he and Graham went to the 18th tee. But Bean drove into a fairway bunker and had to play his second shot with the ball well below the level of his feet, a stance that produces a tendency to hit to the right.

Bean did just that, hitting a shot that sent the soggy gallery scurrying.

Shortly after the national television cameras ended their coverage for the day, he chipped down and then 3-putted, missing from 4 feet on his second putt in a drizzling rain and providing Graham with a 2-shot cushion going into Sunday's scheduled final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Graham, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion and the 1980 winner of this tournament, finished three rounds over Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course with a 208 total, eight shots under par.

Bean's double bogey completed a 74 and left him in a tie for second at 210 with Scott Hoch. Hoch had a 70 under the gray, threatening skies that produced occasional drizzle and light showers.

Ben Crenshaw, with a 73, and Peter Jacobsen, who matched par 72, were another shot back at 211.

Tom Watson had to rally from a series of double bogeys to remain in contention at 212, four under par and only four off the pace with 18 holes to go.

Watson had consecutive double bogeys on the second and third holes, but birdied three of the last four holes and managed to get in with a round of par 72.

He was tied with Hale Irwin, Jack Renner, Jim Thorpe and Calvin Peete. Peete, a winner last week in Atlanta, had a 69. Fought, Irwin and Thorpe had 70s and Renner 71.

Lanny Wadkins, who has taken two titles and leads the Tour in money-winnings this year, slipped to a 75 and was at 214. Defending champion Ray Floyd struggled to a 41 over the back nine, went to a 76 and was at 217. Nicklaus, the host and founder of the tournament, as well as the course designer, got in with a 70 and was at 218, two over par.

Bean, who held a 2-shot lead at the turn, shrugged off the fat 40 he compiled over the back nine.

"Just one of those things," said Bean, who has won at least once in each of the last six seasons.

"The putts I was making the first couple of days were lipping out today, like that one (the 4-footer) on the last hole."

Graham, a winner in Houston three weeks ago, had five birdies and two bogeys, caught Bean with a 12-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole but pointed to a hard-won par-5 on the 15th hole as the key to his round.

"If there was a turning point in the third round, that was it," said Graham, a native Australian who now lives in Dallas.

Sheehan Unhappy With Her Round

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — After compiling three impressive rounds, Patty Sheehan's 3-under-par 69 Saturday in the $150,000 Corning Classic and a one shot lead should have had her walking on a cloud.

But Corning has been the only detour on her rocket ride to the heights of the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

"I'd be lying if I said it didn't bother me," she said after bogeys on two of the last three holes hurt what had been a sizzling round and left her with a 54-hole total of 209. "I don't mind losing if I shoot 67, but if I blow it Sunday like I did the last two years, I might commit suicide."

In 1981, Sheehan was en route to the LPGA Rookie of the Year Award, but lost her chance to make Corning her first victory by bogeying the 17th hole which Kathy Hite, the eventual winner, birdied.

Last year Sheehan fell back into a playoff with Sandra Spuzich with a double bogey-6 on the 17th hole and a bogey on the 18th, and Spuzich won the playoff.

Hite, whose 6-under-par 66 tied the record on the 6,286-yard Corning Country Club layout left her hoping for a repeat of 1981, said she was "excited about tomorrow" after rolling in her ninth birdie of the round with a 12-foot putt on No. 18.

But she wanted no encore of Friday's 76, which cost her the lead for the entire third round, which she finished with a 210 total.

"I wanted to shoot a course record. Last night was an anxious night and I just hope I can feel calm and relaxed about tomorrow," she said.

Midpoint leader Kathy Young shot an even-par 72 for sole possession of third place at 211, while Australian Jane Lock — who nearly matched Hite with a sparkling 67 — and Cindy Hill remained in the hunt, three shots off the pace at 212.

Sandra Haynie and rookie Lauren Howe were paired at 213, while JoAnne Carner, Sarah LeVeque, Cathy Mant and Sue Ertl were bunched at 215.

Sheehan, 26, who won $225,000 last year as a tour sophomore, is looking for her fifth LPGA title and represents the only consistent winner among the leaders. Hite's only championship was at Corning, while the $22,500 first prize would be a novelty for Young, Hill and Lock.

Playing head-to-head with Young, Sheehan pulled into a tie for the lead with a birdie 3 on the fourth hole.

Both women parred the next four holes and birdied No. 9 to go 6 under, but on the back nine Young fell back when she began a string of three straight bogeys on the 10th hole.

Meanwhile, Sheehan birdied Nos. 10 and 14, lost a stroke with a bogey on the 16th hole, got it back on the 17th and then bogeyed No. 18.

Hite, 34, also had a roller coaster round, while tying the tournament record held by six other women, including Sheehan, and setting a record with nine birdies in one round. Hite missed her chance to set the record at 65 or lower because of bogeys on the first, seventh and 10th holes.

The Corning tournament is the first event in a triple crown which carries the greatest purse offered in women's golf. The winner here would collect $450,000 in addition to the winner's share here by winning either the West Virginia Classic next week or the McDonald's Classic at Malvern, Pa., July 14-17. And $1.35 million by winning all three titles.

Third baseman Murphy had three hits in four times at bat as the Bulldogs raised their record to 34-8. David Mills, 7-2, took the victory after scattering eight hits, walking three and striking out none.

Roger Williams, 6-3, took the loss as North Carolina fell to 42-9.

The Bulldogs were leading 2-1 when they scored three runs, all unearned, in the seventh inning. Murphy scored when Williams walked two batters and reliever Tim Kirk walked another to force the run.

North Carolina launched a threat in the bottom of the ninth, scoring two runs on singles by pinch hitter Tim McGee, left fielder Jim Thrift and catcher B.J. Surhoff.

Citadel reliever Rich Collins came on and walked first baseman Pete Kumiega to load the bases, but got the final out of the inning by retiring outfielder Glenn Iliacouras on a popup.

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Randy Foster scattered 11 hits and struck out six as James Madison took a 5-2 victory over The Citadel Saturday night in the NCAA East Regional baseball tournament.

The Dukes, 36-11, will meet the winner of Sunday afternoon's Citadel-Delaware contest at 7 p.m. If James Madison loses the Sunday night game, they'll play again at noon Monday.

Foster went the distance in raising his record to 4-1.

The Citadel fell to 34-9 as Bill Sullivan, who also went the distance, fell to 7-2.

After taking a 2-0 lead in the third inning, James Madison doubled its edge in the fifth. Jim Knicely doubled to left-center field, reached third on Tony Marant's infield hit and scored on Jeff Kidd's sacrifice fly to right. Marant moved to second on Dennis Knight's single and scored on a throwing error after Steve Cullers hit into a fielder's choice.

Mike Reeves, who led off the third inning with his 10th homer, scored the final James Madison run in the eighth when he walked, moved to second on Jeff Urban's bunt and came home when Tom Estepp's bunt attempt resulted in another throwing error.

Fabi...

Two of the old guard, who have dominated racing at the Speedway in the past 20 years, will not be on the grid. Three-time winner Johnny Rutherford will miss his 20th start and his first since 1966 because he is recuperating from a broken foot and ankle and other injuries suffered in a crash during practice here this month. Bobby Unser, another three-time champion, missed last year's race while acting as team manager for Josele Garza and officially announced his retirement from racing last November after briefly accepting the ride later taken by Rutherford.

The Unser family, however, will be well represented, with brother Al starting on the inside of row three and rookie Al Unser Jr., 21, in the middle of the second row. They are the first father and son to drive in the same 500.

"I'm not worried about the kid," Bobby Unser said of Al Jr., last year's Can-Am champion. "He's a racer."

In addition to Fabi and the younger Unser, other rookies are veteran Formula I racer Derek Daly of Ireland, Pat Bedard, Steve Chassey and Chris Kneifel.

"Fabi and Daly are good, experienced racers and all of them (the rookies) got in pretty strong," said Roger McCluskey, competition director for the U.S. Auto Club, which sanctions Indy. "I think that speaks well for them."

For the first time at Indianapolis, there will be television cameras on board a pair of the open-wheel racers. Mears and the elder Unser both have the 10-pound cameras on their yellow Penske racers.

The race, scheduled to begin at noon EDT, will be televised by ABC on a delayed basis, beginning at 9 p.m. EDT, and will be blacked out in the Indianapolis area.

Mullins, King Lead N.C. Hall Inductees

SOUTHERN PINES (UPI) — Billiard player Luther "Wimpy" Lassiter, basketball star Jeff Mullins, former baseball manager Clyde King and two others will be inducted into the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame, the hall's directors announced Saturday.

Joining Lassiter, Mullins and King at the induction ceremonies this fall will be Dr. Lenox Baker and New York Giants baseball standout Carroll "Whitey" Lockman. Special recognition also will be given North Carolina State University's 1983 NCAA national champion basketball team, Executive Director Bob Wills said.

Lassiter, from Elizabeth City, ranks with Willie Masconi and Minnesota Fats as the world's best-known billiard players. He still competes in various tournaments nationwide.

Mullins first gained fame at Duke University, then played 10 years with the National Basketball Association's San Francisco Warriors. The former NBA all-star now is a private businessman and television sports broadcaster.

A Goldsboro native, King managed the San Francisco Giants, Atlanta Braves and New York Yankees as well as six minor league teams.

Lockman played 14 seasons on several teams, primarily the New York Giants, and was a coach with the Chicago Cubs for two seasons. His lifetime batting average was .279.

Dr. Baker's career of nearly five decades includes countless operations on sports figures, including Babe Ruth. He now is retired and lives in Durham.

Junior Johnson Named To Racing Hall Of Fame

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Drivers Duke Nalon, Junior Johnson, Glen "Fireball" Roberts and Rodger Ward, as well as engine-builder Fred Offenhauser, Saturday were named to the American Auto Racing Writers and Broadcasters Association Hall of Fame.

Nalon, who will drive the pace car in Sunday's Indianapolis 500, was the only driver elected among 10 nominees in the 1921-1941 category. He made his mark in Indy-cars, sprint cars and Midgets, winning the pole position at Indianapolis in 1949 and 1951.

The other three drivers all were recognized for their achievements during the period from 1946-1965.

Johnson, now one of the leading car owners and crew chiefs on the NASCAR Grand National circuit, ranks seventh on the all-time Grand National victory list with 50.

Roberts, who died in 1964 of pneumonia five weeks after suffering critical burns during a race in Charlotte, N.C., earned 32 Grand National victories — 21 of them on superspeedways — and was one of the most popular drivers of his time.

Ward won the Indy 500 in 1959 and 1962 and ranks sixth on the all-time Indy-car victory list with 26. He is a two-time national driving champion and, from 1959 through 1964, never finished worse than fourth at Indianapolis. Ward retired after the 1966 Indy race.

Offenhauser, an accomplished engineer, is credited with developing the Offenhauser engine , which dominated championship (Indy-car) racing from the 1930s through the mid '70s.

The AARWBA Hall of Fame was started in 1972 and now has 57 members.

Toronto Bats Come To Life, Top Bosox

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto's dormant bats came back to life and three relievers scattered six hits over 7 1-3 innings Saturday as the Blue Jays rallied for a 9-5 victory over Boston Red Sox.

A loss would have put Toronto three games behind the American League East Division-leading Red Sox heading into Sunday's doubleheader between the clubs.

"We sure didn't want to lose today and we sure didn't want to be swept," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "Five losses in a row to these guys would have been hard to swallow. Now we can come out of the doubleheader one game ahead, and that's how we're looking at it."

The Blue Jays fell behind 4-0 in the second inning, but Cox said there was no panic in the dugout.

"We knew we still had a lot of time," he said. "We've come from behind like this several times this season."

Lloyd Moseby doubled to snap a 5-5 tie in the sixth inning and later scored on Barry Bonnell's sacrifice fly, while Rance Mulliniks drove in three runs with three hits, including a homer.

"Mulliniks has a great day almost every time he plays," said Cox.

"It just wasn't our day," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "We lose (starting pitcher Mike) Brown with a pulled groin, a couple of freak plays prevent us from scoring some more runs, you name it."

Brown suffered the injury in the second inning when he raced off the mound to field a grounder.

Roy Lee Jackson, 4-1, the third Toronto pitcher, went 2 1-3 innings and gave up one run on three hits. Joey McLaughlin surrendered one hit in 2 2-3 innings to earn his fourth save.

With the score tied 5-5 in the sixth, Ernie Whitt and Moseby cracked consecutive doubles off Boston reliever Luis Aponte, 3-3. Moseby went to third on Mulliniks' sacrifice and scored on Bonnell's sacrifice fly.

The Blue Jays added a run in the seventh on doubles by Dave Collins and Willie Upshaw and made it 9-5 in the eighth on an RBI single by Mulliniks.

Boston, which blew an early 4-0 lead, tied the game 5-5 in the fifth. Wade Boggs, who had three hits, singled with two out and came around on a walk to Carl Yastrzemski and Dave Stapleton's single.

The Red Sox jumped on Luis Leal for three runs in the first inning and another in the second, but the Blue Jays stormed back to take a 5-4 lead with one run in the third and four in the fourth.

Mulliniks belted his second home run of the season off reliever Mark Clear leading off the third inning and Upshaw slammed his ninth to start the fourth. One out later, Clear walked Whitt and Moseby before Mulliniks drilled a single to score Whitt.

Bonnell's double chased Clear and brought Moseby home with the tying run. Mulliniks put Toronto ahead 5-4 when he scored on Alfredo Griffin's groundout.

Boston's Jerry Remy opened the game with a single and moved to second on Jim Rice's one-out single. With two out, Boggs tripled for a 2-0 lead and scored on Yastrzemski's single. Jeff Newman's second home run of the season gave the Red Sox a 4-0 lead in the second inning.

Detroit 6
Minnesota 1

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's Lance Parrish was honored Saturday as the American League's best hitting catcher of 1982, but his backup turned out to be a hitting hero in the Tigers' 6-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Bill Fahey, making his first appearance since rejoining the team May 16 after a 20-day rehabilitation stint with Detroit's Evansville farm team in the American Association, collected three hits, including a double, and drove in the Tigers' final run with a seventh-inning single.

Fahey downplayed his contribution to the Tigers' fourth straight victory.

"I'm just glad we won the game," he said, "Nobody ever hit 1.000 and I'm not going to, either. Check my average in about two weeks. I just think about winning. If I hit .150 and we're winning, everybody will be happy, and if you hit .300 and don't win, it doesn't mean anything."

Fahey preferred to talk about his batterymate, Milt Wilcox, who stopped Minnesota on four hits, including a second-inning homer by Gary Gaetti.

"He made one mistake to Gaetti when he got the ball inside, but the rest of the time he was down with his pitches and ahead of the hitters," Fahey said. "They hit some long balls to center field, but Milt was keeping the ball away and using the whole ballpark."

Wilcox's only detractor was Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner.

"I don't think he threw that well. We're just not swinging the bats," Gardner said.

Chet Lemon's fourth homer of the year ignited a three run sixth inning as the Tigers broke a 1-1 tie off Minnesota starter Al Williams, 2-6.

Lemon's high fly ball dropped into the stands just inside the left-field foul pole to snap a 1-1 tie. The Tigers added two more runs in the inning on a single by Rick Leach, Tom Brookens' double, a walk and a two-run single by Lou Whitaker.

Detroit tacked on two more runs in the seventh on RBI singles by Brookens and Fahey.

Wilcox, 5-5, allowed only two baserunners after the second inning. The Detroit right-hander struck out seven and walked one as he pitched his sixth complete game to tie Toronto's Dave Stieb for the American League lead.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on Gaetti's seventh homer but the Tigers tied the game with an unearned run in the fifth. Fahey blooped a double down the left-field line, took third on a passed ball and scored on Kirk Gibson's forceout.

Tigers shortstop Alan Trammell, who walked, was struck on the thumb by the relay to first and had to leave the game for X-rays.

Chicago 8
Texas 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Tom Paciorek wants to put the "play me or trade me" incident behind him and do all he can to help Manager Tony LaRussa and the Chicago White Sox.

Paciorek had the most productive day of his career Saturday when he drove in five runs to lead the White Sox to an 8-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Paciorek slugged a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the sixth inning, then doubled to drive in three more runs in the seventh inning.

"I want to put the entire incident behind me," said Paciorek of his flare up with LaRussa. "Tony has been more than fair with me. At times you say things you don't mean out of frustration.

"I regret everything I said," Paciorek said. "It was totally out of my character, and all I can do now is look toward the future. All I want is an opportunity to play. If I'm playing good, I think I should play. If I'm playing bad, I shouldn't play."

Paciorek even got an extra at bat Saturday. Ordinarily, after he had put the Sox ahead 4-2 with his homer, he would come out of the game for Mike Squires, a better fielding first baseman. But LaRussa didn't make that move until after the seventh inning.

"He was swinging the bat good, and I wanted him to get one more at bat," said LaRussa, who kiddingly added, "I hope he has a better day tomorrow if he's in the lineup."

Harold Baines, who homered in the first inning, walked to open the sixth before Paciorek tagged loser Charlie Hough, 2-5, for his fourth home run of the season and a 4-2 lead.

Dotson, 5-5, was nicked for two runs in the first on singles by Wayne Tolleson, Buddy Bell and Pete O'Brien and a sacrifice fly by Larry Biittner. He did not allow another hit until George Wright singled in the seventh and gave way to Dick Tidrow with none out in the inning.

Baines hit his third homer in the bottom of the first and the Sox tied it in the fifth on a pair of walks and a looping double by Jerry Dybzinski.

Billy Sample drew a walk to open the Texas seventh and went to third on Wright's single. Tidrow, gaining his fourth save, relieved Dotson and got out of the inning after Sample scored on a sacrifice fly by pinch hitter Bill Stein.

That made it 4-3, but the White Sox wrapped it up with four runs in the seventh in handing the Rangers their sixth setback in the last seven games.

Drug Program Checked By Leader, Not User

DALLAS (AP) — Defensive end Harvey Martin is evaluating a National Football League-sponsored drug rehabilitation program because he is a Dallas Cowboys leader and not because he needs treatment, Coach Tom Landry says.

"I felt pretty good about it and felt it was an excellent decision to go with him, and I still do," Landry told The Associated Press Friday. "I was the one who asked him to go. If we ever have the occasion to help somebody else, we have a player who can say I did it. Obviously he was reluctant to go."

Landry said he was "pretty confident" Martin was not involved with drugs.

Martin's name surfaced earlier this year during testimony in the trial of an accused cocaine dealer. Martin denied any involvement with drugs at the time.

Landry told The Dallas Morning News Martin was concerned about the publicity the trip would generate, "but after I convinced him it would be in the best interest of the team, he said he would do it."

Martin has been at the Hazelden Foundation in Center City, Minn., since Wednesday and plans to return on Tuesday, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

A woman who answered the phone at the clinic Friday night said federal regulations prohibit her from saying whether any person is or is not in the clinic. She also refused to accept any message for Martin to return calls. Martin's phone number in Dallas is unlisted.

"I chose Harvey because he's been a great leader," Landry told the Times Herald. "... Believe me, I don't want it so sound like we sent Harvey up there to dry out. That just isn't so. He went up there because I asked him to go. He went because he wanted to help the team."

Landry said Martin's mission is the second in the Cowboys three-step off-season drug education program. The first was hiring a team security director.

Landry told the Times Herald that coach Neill Armstrong and another player will visit Hazelden next month to evaluate the program, but he would not name the player.

He said it was difficult to evaluate whether there is a drug problem among Cowboys players.

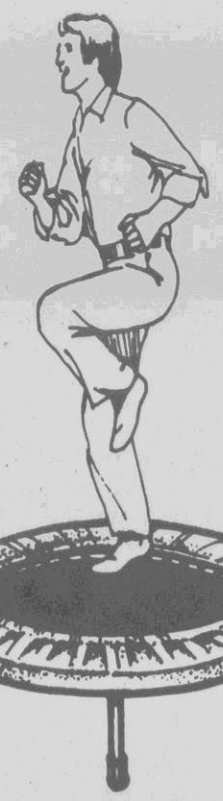

"We are in an area that is very difficult; rumors are every place. I've never been able to tell if somebody is on drugs. You can tell if they are on alcohol, but I've never been able to evaluate if a player is on drugs," he told The News.

Slumping Chambliss Lifts Atlanta, 6-4

ATLANTA (AP) — Chris Chambliss doesn't care much for pinch hitting, but the Atlanta first baseman delivered in that role Saturday with a two-run single that gave the Braves a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"I don't like coming off the bench, but I seem to do well when I do," said Chambliss, who has been struggling with the bat and was hitting only .227 when he broke a 4-4 deadlock with two out in the sixth inning.

"I don't believe in slumps. I'm just not hitting," Chambliss said. "But I'll just keep swinging until it happens."

Chambliss said he saw the situation developing in the sixth and it gave him a chance to warm up in the dugout.

The Braves then had to survive a ninth-inning scare when Scot Thompson had a pinch single and Bill Buckner, who homered earlier, nailed a blast to right that Terry Harper caught at the wall.

"It scared me a little," Atlanta reliever Steve Bedrosian said of Buckner's long fly. "I gave him too good a pitch. I can't do that."

Chambliss' tie-breaking hit off reliever Bill Campbell came after Dale Murphy singled and Bob Horner doubled him to third with none out against loser Mike Proly, 1-2. Campbell struck out Bob Watson, walked Glenn Hubbard intentionally and got Bruce Benedict to hit into a forceout at the plate before Chambliss, batting for winning pitcher Donnie Moore, 1-0, delivered.

The Braves tied the game at 4-4 in the fifth when Benedict doubled and scored on a single by Rafael Ramirez. Buckner's first homer of the season gave the Cubs a 4-3 lead in the fifth.

The Braves erased a 3-0 deficit by scoring three runs off Steve Trout in the fourth. After retiring the first 10 batters, Trout walked Jerry Royster and Terry Harper before Atlanta had three consecutive run-scoring hits — a single by Murphy, a double by Horner and a single by Watson.

The Cubs opened the scoring in the second inning against Pete Falcone when Leon Durham tripled and scored on Keith Moreland's sacrifice fly. They added two more in the third on Durham's single with the bases loaded.

Los Angeles 5
San Francisco 0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unlike San Francisco's Bill Laskey, who proclaimed Friday night "I hate the Dodgers," Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela says he doesn't hate the Giants. He just wants to beat them.

That was understandable since the Dodgers left-hander had lost six straight to the Giants. On Saturday, Valenzuela hurled a two-hitter to defeat San Francisco 5-0 for his first victory over the Giants since 1981. It also was his second straight shutout and his fourth in 1983 to lead the National League.

"I think everything is going fine," Valenzuela said, when asked if he had finally hit a groove. "I was having trouble with my control, so I made an adjustment in my follow-through. And my control is much better.

"Before the Giants were taking my pitches, especially my screwball. Today they weren't. They must have known my control was better because they were very aggressive at the plate."

The two-hitter was the second for Valenzuela, 6-2, in his career, and he now has allowed just two earned runs in 28 innings.

The victory snapped the Giants' four-game winning streak. They had won seven straight in Los Angeles dating back to last year.

Bill Russell singled home two runs to highlight the Dodgers' four-run second inning aginst loser Andy McGaffigan, 2-5.

Greg Brock and Rick Monday started the inning with walks. After Steve Yeager sacrificed, Russell singled through the middle for a 2-0 lead. Valenzuela and Steve Sax followed with singles to account for the third run and, after Ken Landreaux walked to fill the bases, Dusty Baker's grounder scored Valenzuela.

After the Dodgers' four-run second, they were held hitless by relievers Renie Martin and Jim Barr until the eighth when they added a run off Greg Minton on singles by Ken Landreaux and Dusty Baker and Brock's sacrifice fly.

Valenzuela held the Giants hitless over the final six innings to post his third successive victory. The Dodgers' million-dollar pitcher walked two and struck out five.

San Francisco's only hits were Johnnie LeMaster's leadoff double in the first inning and a double by relief pitcher Martin in the third.

"He (Scurry) has a good breaking ball. It's hard to bunt," Redus said. "It was breaking so sharply that it was hard to get a bat on it. Davey had a hard time trying to bunt."

Redus was picked off base in the first inning by Pirate starter Rick Rhoden and he was thrown out trying to steal second base in the third. He didn't hesitate to try to steal third base in the eighth inning off the left-handed Scurry.

"He has that long leg kick," Redus said. "I figured if I got a good jump, there was no way he was going to be able to throw me out."

Cincinnati starter Joe Price went seven innings, reliever Ben Hayes pitched 11-3 for his first decision, and Bill Scherrer retired the last two batters for his second save.

The victory denied Pittsburgh's Chuck Tanner his 1,000th victory as a manager. The next Pittsburgh victory will make Tanner the 35th manager to reach the 1,000 mark.

After rain delayed the start of the game three hours and 46 minutes, the Pirates took a 2-0 lead in the second. Dave Parker doubled and scored on Dale Berra's soft two-out double that Redus misjudged in left field. Rhoden then singled up the middle to score Berra.

Wayne Krenchicki doubled in the third inning, advanced on Dann Bilardello's single and scored when Redus hit into a force play at second base to cut the Pirate lead to 2-1.

The Reds scored twice with two out in the bottom of the fourth to take a 3-1 lead. Dan Driessen singled to start the rally, and Ron Oester walked. Driessen took third on a wild pitch by Rhoden and scored on Paul Householder's line-drive single to center. Krenchicki then singled to drive home Oester with the go-ahead run.

Bill Madlock doubled and scored on Jim Morrison's single to tie the game 3-3 in the sixth.

Redus stole third base and home plate in the eighth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Redus, whose average had slid to .248 at game time, beat out an infield hit to start the eighth against reliever Rod Scurry, 2-2. He took second on Scurry's wild pitch, easily stole third and stole home on a botched suicide squeeze play.

"I wasn't swinging the bat well, so I was just trying to get on base and get something going," Redus said.

Redus was on third base after his fourteenth stolen base, and Dave Concepcion was at bat with one out when the Reds decided to try the suicide squeeze.

Redus broke for home on a 2-1 pitch, but Concepcion failed to execute the bunt.

"I thought I was out, until I saw the ball roll away," Redus said.

Pirate catcher Tony Pena was unable to handle Scurry's low delivery to Concepcion. The ball hit the dirt, Pena grabbed it and lunged toward Redus too late. The rookie crossed home plate standing up.

1933 Survivors To Attend All Star Game

NEW YORK (AP) — Fourteen of the 15 surviving members of the 1933 All-Star Game squads have accepted invitations to participate in ceremonies connected with golden anniversary of baseball's All-Star Game, the commissioner's office announced Saturday.

Chicago's Comiskey Park, site of the inaugural game, also will host the July 6 All-Star Game, with the Old Timers All-Star Game set for July 5.

Bill Terry, former New York Giants' first baseman, is the only member of the 1933 squad who has yet to accept an invitation. According to the commissioner's office, an illness in his family could prevent Terry from appearing.

Unseeded Horvath Ousts Navratilova

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova suffered her first loss of the year when unseeded, 17-year-old Kathy Horvath dumped the defending champion 6-4, 0-6, 6-3 Saturday in the fourth round at the French Open tennis championship.

Horvath, of Largo, Fla., overcame a stiff wind and high tension on center court at Roland Garros stadium to stop the top-seeded woman and her winning streak of 39 straight matches.

Meanwhile, John McEnroe was slapped with a $3,000 fine for misbehaving during a first-round match with Ben Testerman last week. The New Yorker was in a quiet, subdued mood later Saturday when he beat Drew Gitlin 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 in a third-round match and advanced to the final 16.

Also advancing were defending champion Mats Wilander, No. 4 Guillermo Vilas and Americans Tracy Austin, Eliot Teltscher and Jimmy Arias, the Italian Open winner.

Navratilova, last beaten by Chris Evert Lloyd in the final of the Australian Open in December, blamed her defeat on wrong tactics in the windy conditions.

"I should have driven my backhand," she said. "I played too many sliced backhands, and they didn't carry in the wind.

"I'm certainly not happy about it, but I knew I had to lose sooner or later," said Navratilova, who was beaten only three times last year and lost only four sets in her 39-match streak.

"Losing today certainly has not set a tone for the rest of the year, though. It isn't a disaster for me. The pressure is off now," she said.

Horvath, ice-cool on court, repeatedly raced to the net and met Navratilova's shots with volleys. Her double-grip backhand volley never once failed in the match.

"I beat Martina, I beat Martina," she shouted in a telephone call to her parents in Florida after the victory.

Horvath won four games in a row after trailing 2-4 in the first set. She was hopelessly outplayed in the second, but in the third she steeled her nerves and matched everything Navratilova could offer.

"I recovered my confidence in the third and felt I should go for it," said Horvath, who considered giving up tennis last year and didn't play for four months.

She broke service for 5-3 and served for the match in an electric atmosphere, the excitable French fans cheering every point she won.

She wasted her first match point by netting a weak forehand and on her next match point she drove deep to Navratilova's forehand. The defending champion was caught by surprise and returned the ball out of court.

"She played well, but it was as well as I allowed her," Navratilova said. "I knew she has been playing better lately. People told me her forehand was better than her backhand, but I found out today her backhand is nothing to sneeze at."

In other matches, Austin advanced by beating Kathy Jordan 6-3, 6-1; Britain's Jo Durie beat No. 12 Kathy Rinaldi 6-3, 5-7, 6-1; and Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia defeated Catherine Tanvier of France 6-3, 6-3.

Meanwhile, McEnroe, the No. 2 seed, hit shots of blinding brilliance in the last two sets of his match against Gitlin. He behaved faultlessly and gave only a puzzled look when he got a questionable line call.

McEnroe's fines were announced by Marshall Happer, administrator of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council after an inquiry that involved videotapes and testimony from witnesses.

He was fined $1,500 for physical abuse — kicking a press photographer's camera — and $1,500 for verbal abuse of linesmen.

The fines brought the total penalties against McEnroe in the last year to $5,750. If he collects more fines in this event and exceeds the limit of $7,500, McEnroe would be automatically suspended from Grand Prix tournaments for six weeks — a ban that would mean missing Wimbledon.

McEnroe is seeded to play No. 1 Jimmy Connors in the final. The men's title has not been won by an American since Tony Trabert claimed it 28 years ago.

Sweden's Wilander, the No. 5 seed, was his usual cool self despite kidnapping threats and beat France's Dominique Bedel 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Threats were made to a Swedish newspaper that a Swedish player in Paris would be kidnapped as hostage for an Armenian being held in Sweden on narcotics charges.

Horvath Enjoys Role Of Spoiler

PARIS (AP) — Kathy Horvath did what no other tennis player could do so far this year — beat Martina Navratilova.

"I feel great," Horvath said Saturday after advancing to the quarterfinals of the $1.3 million French Open. "Martina's the best player in the world. This was the first time she lost this year and she only lost three times last year. I'm glad to be one of the ones to beat her."

The unseeded 17-year-old, who seriously considered quitting tennis last year because of a bad back, scored the biggest upset at this clay court tournament with a 6-4, 0-6, 6-3 victory over top-seeded Navratilova before 12,000 fans at Roland Garros stadium.

Horvath's astonishing victory snapped Navratilova's 39-match winning streak, in which she had lost only four sets.

"I can see the headlines now," Navratilova, 26, the defending champion, joked after the 1-hour, 45-minute match. "It's much more interesting when I get beat by someone like Kathy rather than someone like Chris (Evert Lloyd)."

Lloyd, the No. 2 seed at the French Open who plays her fourth-round match Sunday, was the last player to defeat Navratilova. That was in the title match of the Australian Open in December.

The triumph over Navratilova was Horvath's biggest career victory since she first entered the world rankings at the age of 14 in 1980 at slot No. 1,979.

Horvath, who has lived in Largo, Fla., the past two years, took a lengthy break from tennis last year after she developed a lower-back disc problem related to growth and stress while playing at Wimbledon.

She didn't touch a racket for four months and seriously thought about giving up tennis. But after consulting doctors and exercising daily to stretch her muscles, Horvath began playing again last October.

"Kathy decided she'd give it another try," a spokeswoman for the women's tennis circuit said. "Her long break has made her hungry to win."

Horvath has won only one of 12 tournaments she's played in this year with a win-loss match record of 22-11.

She made it to the final of the German Open on May 16, defeating higher- ranked players such as Andrea Jaeger, Bettina Bunge and Bonnie Gadusek before falling to Lloyd in the title match.

But Horvath was the crowd favorite in Germany. Her mother is German-born while her father, an engineer for IBM, was born in Hungary. An only child, she was born in Chicago and learned German as her first language. She didn't speak English until she started school at the age of 5.

"I think I'm playing better these days because I have a lot of confidence," the 5-foot-6, 125-pound teen-ager said. "I've always had the shots but never had enough confidence."

An honors high school student, Horvath earned $49,828 last year. So far this year her winnings amount to $40,375.

By comparison, Navratilova won $1.4 million last year.

Horvath, who often travels with her poodle, Gigi, says she has no plans to play Wimbledon this year and she is cautious about her chances of winning it all here.

"It's going to be difficult," she said. "But it's possible now that I've beaten Martina, who has won here before. I know I'm capable of it."

Moe, Scheer Sign New Denver Pacts

DENVER (AP) — Denver Nuggets Coach Doug Moe and General Manager Carl Scheer both have been given new contracts by the National Basketball Association club's owner, Red McCombs.

Moe, who coached the Nuggets into the playoffs in the just-concluded season, received a one-year extension on his contract, good for the 1984-85 season.

Moe, joking that he'd like a 10-year contract extension, said McComb's offer Friday was "a pretty good deal.

"I'm through thinking about it now. It was a lot of uncertainty; that's the best way to put it. you like to feel the organization has some faith in you," Moe said.

McCombs said Scheere will continue on as president and general manger of the club and would also be vice chairman of the board for development. The owner said that at some time in the future, another general manager would be hired and Scheer will focus on his administrative duties under his new title.

"Carl will have what I call an open-ended continuing agreement with the Nuggets. He will have some additional duties that he doesn't have now, because I plan to expand my interests in sports-related activities," McCombs said.

Field Is Set For World 600

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Some went fast and some went slow during qualifications for Sunday's World 600 race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, but those that went too slow Friday headed for home.

Ten drivers qualified to boost the field for NASCAR's longest race to 41, including one provisional starter.

One who won't be going home is Phil Duffie of Augusta, Ga. He was Friday's fastest qualifier at 161.252 mph, far better than the 156.854 he reached in Thursday's trials.

It was a pleasant change for Duffie, who twice last year qualified one spot too slow to make the field for races at Charlotte.

"I just quit being so cheap and bought a new set of tires, that's all I did," Duffie said. "I was hoping I didn't have to buy them, but I felt I had to to make the race. If I had a sponsor, maybe I wouldn't have to worry about tires."

By qualifying so late, Duffie is 31st in the starting grid, but his average speed ranked 11th among all starters. His best finish in six Winston Cup starts is a 16th at Atlanta last year.

Tires were also important to Jimmy Means, 10th in the Winston Cup point standings and the 36th starter after qualifying at 159.025 mph.

"I just ran as fast as I thought it could stick," Means said. "If we can get it in the race, normally we do a good job, but we've had tough luck getting in. To be real competitive you need good tires all day long, and we don't have that. I have to rely on scuffed tires and get by as best we can."

Lake Speed was the second fastest qualifier Friday at 161.175 mph, while Canadian Trevor Boys was the only other driver to top 160, landing the 33rd spot at 160.891.

Connie Saylor was the last driver bumped from the field, giving him first-hand experience at Duffie's past fate. It will be the first World 600 he's missed since 1977.

"I felt like I was going to make the field," said Saylor, who has a job in the tire business. "We ran 21 hundredths faster than yesterday and that was the fastest we ran all week. Now, we go to the house. I guess I'll spend some time with my kids, because I have to go to California Monday for my job."

Eastern Wayne Ends Rose Hopes, 7-5

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Just as they did a year ago, Eastern Wayne's Warriors halted Rose High School's bid in the state playoffs, gaining a 7-5 baseball victory over the Rampants Friday night.

The victory boosted the Warriors into the Eastern finals against the winner of last night's game between Lee County and Richmond County. The winner of that game then faces the western champ in a best-of-three series for the state title.

It was just a year ago that Eastern Wayne downed Rose, 4-2, handing the Rampants their only loss of the 1982 campaign. That game was in the Eastern finals, and Robbie Pelletier came on in relief to take the victory.

Last night, it was Pelletier from the start, and while he gave up eight hits, the fact that he only walked two and struck out six played a big role in the win.

Rose opened the game with Mike Kinley on the mound — making his second 4-A playoff start. But just as he was against Garner earlier in the week, he was ineffective, giving up two hits, walking two and hitting another in facing only seven batters. Kenny Kirkland came on in relief, and eventually took the loss, giving up seven hits, walking six — two of them intentionally — and striking out eight.

Of the nine hits given up to the Warriors, four of them went for extra bases. That, plus the walks, played the key role in the difference. Rose's equal number of hits included only one extra base hit.

The Rampants were never in the lead, always having to struggle back to tie or try to tie. That, too, played a role in the game. Still, they never gave up, and had the chance to tie or win in the final frame — and came close to it. A long fly ball to center field by pinchhitter Bill Owens was caught right against the fence. A few more feet and it would have been 7-7 with none out.

"I thought the guys showed a lot of guts tonight," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "In fact, all year long, I didn't think we played that bad tonight, we just didn't get any breaks.

"Eastern Wayne has a good team, there's no doubt about that. They returned a lot of people off their team from last year and it showed."

Vincent said he felt Kirkland did a good job in coming on in relief, but it just wasn't enough to give the Rampants the win.

"I'm really proud of them this year. They gave as good an effort as you could ever hope for over the course of the season."

Rose never led in the game, although the Rampants did tie it up on two occasions.

Eastern grabbed the lead in the first inning, chasing Kinley after only two-thirds of an inning. Bill Herrett led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second. A wild pitch put him on third with one out, but a foul fly gave Rose a chance to get out of the frame undamaged.

However, Jeff Ginn laced a line drive down the third base line that just touched down fair before scooting off into foul territory. Herrett easily scored and Ginn pulled up at second with the first of four Warrior doubles. He then scored on a single by Mike Sullivan that just fell in front of Jeff Wilson. A walk and a hit batsman loaded the bases for the Warriors before Kirkland came on to fan the eighth batter of the inning.

Kinley helped to make up for some of the damage with a two-run single in the bottom of the frame. Rudy Stalls reached on an infield hit and with one away, Randy Warren singled up the middle. Both runners stole up a base and scored on Kinley's looper into center.

On the play, center fielder Marcillius Baker charged hard and tried to make a diving catch of the ball, apparently doing so. However, umpire Charles Coburn ruled "no catch." Coburn said afterwards that Baker brought his glove down on the ball and tried to slip his other hand underneath but failed to come up with it.

Eric Woodworth was hit by a pitch, putting runners on first and second, but a strikeout ended the threat.

Eastern moved back out in front in the top of the second. Pelletier led off with a walk and was sacrificed up. Anthony Russo then singled in courtesy runner Robbie Strickland for a 3-2 lead.

The Rampants tied it up again, 3-3, in the third. With one away, Warren beat out an infield hit up the middle and stole second. Kirkland then got another infield hit on a slow hopper to short, moving Warren to third. Courtesy runner Bill Johnson stole second and Warren dashed home on the play. An error on the play allowed Johnson to go on to third, but a strikeout and a ground ball ended the threat again before Rose could take the lead.

The Warriors moved ahead again for good in the fourth. With one away, Herrett reached on an hit to deep short and stole second. He moved to third on an out and scored easily on Steve Sides' double to left center. Ginn was intentionally walked. After a passed ball let both move up, Kirkland tried to pick Ginn off second, but threw the ball into centerfield. Sides scored easily on the play, and Ginn took third, then was thrown out trying to go home when the ball was over thrown at third. Kirkland, however, chased it down in time to peg the ball to Curtis Evans at home for the tag.

However, it was then 5-3 in favor of the Warriors and Rose never caught up again.

The Rampants did close it to 5-4 with a run in the bottom of the inning. With two away, Bobby Buie walked and scored on a double by Stalls to left.

Eastern added two insurance runs in the fifth, closing out its scoring. Sullivan hit a grounder into left, and the ball took a bad hop away from Wilson, allowing the batter to turn a single into a double. Gary Frederick walked and both Sullivan and courtesy runner Strickland scored when Myron Gardner doubled to right. Garnder tried to stretch it into a triple, but was thrown out.

Eastern left a man in scoring position again in the inning, and did so again in the sixth and seventh, but scored no more.

Rose got its final run in the seventh and came within feet of tying it up. Buie led off with a single and Stalls walked. That brought on Gardner in relief to put out the fire.

Warren tried to keep it going, but his grounder got Stalls at second. Kirkland then singled to score Buie to make it 7-5, but another fielder's choice ended it all.

Sides, Sullivan and Gardner each had two hits to lead the Warriors, while Kirkland had three to pace Rose. Stalls and Warren each had two hits for Rose.

Kirkland hit safely in every game played by the Rampants this year — 20 of them.

Rose finishes the season with an 18-2 record, while Eastern goes to 18-4.

The Rampant record over the past four season is now 81-11 (17-5, 22-3, 24-1, and 18-2), but the big prize continues to elude them.

"We should be better next year," Vincent said. "Even so, I think we did a lot better than people thought we would this year."

Roanoke's Wallace Is State Shot Put Champ

EAST SPENCER (AP) — Delton Hall's record-setting time of 46.41 in the 400-meter dash sparked Greensboro Grimsley to a team victory Friday in the N.C. High School Athletic Association track and field meet at North Rowan.

Hall, a senior football star who has signed with Clemson, bettered the mark of 47.30 recorded by Chris Brooks of Raleigh Broughton in 1982. Hall also finished third in the 200-meter dash and ran a leg on Grimsley's second-place 1,600-meter relay team.

Hal got plenty of help in leading Grimsley to the victory, most notably from Reuben Davi and Allen Ford. Davis won the discus with a toss of 165 feet, 1 inch and Ford finised third in the 1,600 and secod in the 3,200.

Grimsley finished with 48 points. Second-place Jacksonville had 36 and Chalotte Myers Park followed with 30. Raleigh Broghton was fourth with 28 points and Wilson Fike and Lee County tied for fifth with 20 points each.

Roanoke High School's Donie Wallace took first plce in one event and place in another to lead Pitt-Martin-Greene area qualifiers. Wllace won the shot put with a toss of 58 feet 10 inches, and finished fourth in the discus with a throw of 156 feet, 4 inches. William Waugh of Rose High was fifth in the shot with a heave of 54 feet, 11 inches.

Two other state records were set in addition to Hall's mark in the 400, and one other mark was tied.

Craig Warren of South Lenoir used an outstanding kick in the 3,200 to come from fouth place in the final 100 meters and barely overtake Ford at the tape in the night's most exciting race.

Warren's time of 9:14.20 easily broke the old mark of 9:19.7 set by Raleigh Broughton's Mark Shea in 1982.

Warren, who finished second in the 3,200 in last year's state meet, got his first place in record fashion this year, but he had to come from well behind to do it.

Izel Jenkins of Wilson Fike established a record in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles with a time of 37.33 seconds (breaking 37.69 by John Boghans of Salisbury in 1982).

Nash Beats Lady Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Northern Nash took advantage of six Williamston errors to forge a 4-2 softball victory Friday in the third round of the State 4-A,3-A playoffs.

The win advances the Lady Knights into the fourth round, while the year ends for Williamston with a 15-4 record.

Ironically, Williamston gained the third round with a victory over Rose High School, the Big East Champ, before losing to that same conference's runner-up, a two-time loser to Rose.

Northern got one in the top of the first, but Williamston countered that with one of its own in the bottom of the frame. Northern then went back up with one in the second and added two more in the fourth for a 4-1 lead. The Lady Tigers were able to come up with one more in the sixth.

Lynn Mills, Wanda Price and Regina Rodgers each had two hits to pace the Williamston attack, which outhit the Knights, 10-3. One of Mills' hits was a triple.

No one had more than one hit for Northern.

Saving America's Wetlands Phase II — In a recent Supreme Court decision, Justice Harry Blackmun noted: "The protection of migratory birds has long been recognized as a national interest of very nearly the first magnitude.

That protection has been under the continued siege of civilization with the annual loss of some 458,000 acres of wetland habitat.

At its recent annual convention in Williamsburg, Va., Ducks Unlimited announced its intention to help stem the loss of productive wetland habitat with the second of a two-phase program. The thrust of Phase II will be to restore, replenish and maintain areas in the United States most critical to breeding North American waterfowl.

"It is a unique approach for two reasons," said DU President Robert Eberhardt. "First, for the past 46 years, Ducks Unlimited has concentrated its conservation efforts in Canada where some 75 percent of the continent's waterfowl breed. DU's move into the U.S. came because its officers and professional biologists decided that the resource could wait no longer.

"Second, no other private conservation organization has the resources or expertise of Ducks Unlimited. DU has been in the wetlands conservation business since 1937. It has saved millions of wetland acres and untold numbers of wildlife from needless destruction."

Phase I, which was announced last month, entails an agreement with NASA to inventory and monitor wetlands in the U.S. and Canada with information supplied by Landsat 4, the most sophisticated communication satellite in the world.

Once mapped, the lands will be studied by Ducks Unlimited and officials of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and state agencies to determine the areas of highest potential productivity for waterfowl and wildlife.

DU will concentrate its efforts in Montana, the Dakotas, Minnesota and Alaska because those states are responsible for raising more than 85 percent of the nation's waterfowl.

Wetlands in the United States have been disappearing at an alarming rate since man first began to tame the land for his own welfare. The Soil Conservation Service has estimated that of the original 127 million acres of wetlands in the United States, 82 million remain. And those are going fast.

The work in the U.S. will result in Ducks Unlimited's scope becoming truly continent-wide. Since 1974, Ducks Unlimited has been involved with wetland projects in Mexico, providing haven for wintering waterfowl.

Ducks Unlimited raised $34.7 million last year and boasts 455,000 members. With such considerable resources, DU's entry into U.S. wetland habitat restoration will, indeed, make substantial inroads into saving one of our national interests.

Flounder Tournament — The third annual Harkers Island Fishing Center's Flounder Tournament will be held June 10-12 out of Grayon's Marina on Harkers Island.

Registration for the three-day tournament is $25 per boat. Prizes will be based on total length of fish caught, with a special prize for the largest fish.

For further information call (919) 728-3907 or write Grayson Motel and Marina, P.O. Box 275, Harkers Island, N.C. 28531.

Fishing Report — Fishing has improved over the past week on the coast and inland waters. The report from Ocracoke Island shows good numbers of grey trout running slightly larger in size than last spring. A few flounder are also being caught while fishing for the trout.

Puppy drum in the 12-20 pound class caught at Ocracoke, Hatteras Inlet and Portsmouth Island. Further north at Nags Head jumbo bluefish and a few drum have been reported.

Off Morehead City a few King Mackeral have been caught. Close to shore spot, bluefish and small trout have been sporadic.

Inland, the report has been improving. Glenn Nichols and Gerald Pollard, both from Greenville, report good catches of white perch and bream on the Tar River before the high water conditions developed.

Bass fishing has improved all over eastern Carolina. Favored lures are spinner baits, devils horse topwater lure and a purple plastic worm.

For anyone planning to fish the Chesapeake Bay for those giant grey trout, the fish are in. Boats are averaging 15-20 fish per boat, mainly at night. Live sea bass and spot are favored baits.

Orioles Lift Altobelli With Win

By The Associated Press

Joe Altobelli can stop worrying about his Baltimore Orioles ... and Kansas City Manager Dick Howser can start worrying about Larry Gura.

The weight of a long losing streak was finally lifted off Altobelli's shoulders when the Orioles stopped a seven-game spin Friday night with a 7-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

In the process, the Orioles handed Gura his sixth straight loss, giving Howser something to concern himself with.

"Let's face it, he's getting behind too many hitters," said Howser of Gura, who had started the season with four straight victories. "He thinks it's something in his mechanics, especially tonight. He's throwing the ball good and he feels good. It's nothing physical."

In other American League action, New York beat Oakland 4-2; Boston blanked Toronto 2-0; Detroit took a doubleheader from Minnesota 7-4 and 2-1; California nipped Cleveland 5-4; Seattle beat Milaukee 7-5 and Chicago tripped Texas 3-2.

The Orioles won for the first time since May 19 and posted only their second victory in the last 12 games.

"I'm going to forget all about last week," said Altobelli. "I'm just going to relish this one for a while and then start thinking about tomorrow's lineup. But it is nice to win."

Eddie Murray and Gary Roenicke hit home runs for the Orioles and Storm Davis, 3-1, struck out five and walked two in six innings before giving way to Tippy Martinez, who recorded his fifth save.

"We just got into a rut there for a while," said Roenicke, who's punished the Royals for 11 of his 67 career homers. "This is a big, big win. Maybe we can go on from here."

Yankees 4, A's 2

Graig Nettles brought New York from behind with a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Ron Guidry continued his domination of Oakland as the Yankees beat the A's in a game that saw Yankee slugger Dave Winfield ejected following a bench-clearing beanball brawl.

Oakland's Mike Norris, 4-5, whose inside pitches triggered the first-inning melee, held the Yankees to one run and two scratch hits until the seventh, when Nettles hit his game-winning shot.

Guidry, 6-3, surrendered both Oakland runs in the first inning and then settled down to defeat the A's for the 13th time in 15 decisions, although he needed help from Rich Gossage with one out in the eighth. Guidry allowed five hits overall.

"I don't have many runs batted in (four homers, 14 RBI) but I've been hitting the ball awfully hard with men in scoring position," said Nettles. "Guys have been making great plays off me. Maybe all the great plays I've made over the years are starting to come back and haunt me."

Red Sox 2, Blue Jays 0

John Tudor allowed just one hit — Dave Collins' single in the fourth inning — and Glenn Hoffman drove in Boston's winning run as the Red Sox beat the Blue Jays.

Tudor, 3-2, retired the first 10 Toronto batters before Collins stroked a one-out single to left in the fourth. Tudor, making his 10th start of the season, finished the game with eight strikeouts and two walks, retiring 17 of the last 18 batters.

Toronto starter Jim Clancy, 4-3, gave up only six hits, but one was Hoffman's RBI single in the third inning and the other Jim Rice's homer in the ninth.

Tigers 7-2, Twins 4-1

John Wockenfuss homered and Chet Lemon knocked in three runs as Detroit snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak in the first game of their twi-night doubleheader.

Larry Herndon's bases-loaded single with two outs in the 12th inning lifted the Tigers to victory in the second game. Rick Lysander, 1-3, was tagged with the loss in both games.

"I wouldn't care if I only had one hit a week if it would win a game every time," said Herndon, who went 2-for-9 in the doubleheader, dropping his batting average to .277. "I'm not worried about my batting average. I'm sure the hits will start falling in again."

Angels 5, Indians 4

Bob Boone's single sent home Daryl Sconiers from third with the winning run in the 12th inning to give California its victory over Cleveland, the Indians' fifth straight loss.

Sconiers lead off the inning with a single off Dan Spillner, 1-3. One out later, Ellis Valentine singled Sconiers to third and Boone followed with his

Says League Doesn't Want Laker Win

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Is it possible that the National Basketball Association doesn't want the Los Angeles Lakers to repeat as league champions? At least one member of the team feels that way.

"I'm convinced the league just doesn't want us to win it again," said a member of the club, who requested anonymity for obvious reasons, Thursday night after the Lakers dropped a 103-93 decision to the Philadelphia 76ers.

The Lakers were angry about more than just the 2-0 deficit they now face in the best-of-seven NBA championship series. A look at the statistics revealed why they were upset.

Los Angeles set two NBA playoff records in Game 2 — fewest free throws attempted in a game, 5, and fewest free throws made in a game, 3.

The Lakers, who are attempting to become the first NBA team to win consecutive championships since the Boston Celtics accomplished the feat in 1967-68 and 1968-69, now face an extremely difficult task.

Only five teams in NBA history have ever rebounded from losing the first two games to win a seven-game series.

It's happened twice in a championship series. Philadelphia was the victim the last time; the 76ers beat Portland in the first two games in 1977, but then lost four straight to the Trail Blazers.

The Lakers can only figure that things will get better now that they're home for two games. Game 3 is scheduled Sunday at 3:30 p.m. EDT with the fourth game slated Tuesday night at 9 p.m. EDT.

While the Lakers were upset about the officiating, they gave the 76ers credit for beating them.

"We have to be concerned," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson after Game 2. "We played well tonight and they beat us. I'm shocked and disappointed at the same time."

"It would be easy tonight to talk about the officiating to take the monkey off our back," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley. "But the reality is, we just have to go home and win two. We will ... we will "

Moses Malone led the 76ers with 24 points and 12 rebounds in Game 2, but he sat out 17 minutes.

He was on the bench during a good portion of the fourth quarter with five fouls, but Philadelphia did what it had to do to win, holding the Lakers to 12 points in the first 10:50 of the period.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar put in 10 of his team-leading 23 points in the final period but he was the only Los Angeles starter to score in the quarter. The Lakers committed eight turnovers in the last 12 minutes.

The 76ers continued to get key contributions from reserves. In Game 1 last Sunday, won by Philadelphia 113-107, guard Clint Richardson scored 15 points, 10 of them in the third quarter. In Game 2, forward Bobby Jones and center Earl Cureton played key roles down the stretch.

Cureton, replacing Malone in the fourth quarter, forced two turnovers on errant passes into Abdul-Jabbar and threw in a hook shot as well, extending a Philadelphia lead of four points at the time to six points.

"It was a great opportunity," said Cureton, who played only because backup Philadelphia pivot man Clemon Johnson was ill. "I think I aggravate him (Abdul-Jabbar) a little more. I front him, reach around him."

Jones had 14 points, five rebounds and three blocked shots in 28 minutes.

"Two miles, two more miles we got to go," said Malone. "It's going down. We figure we go to L.A., get one out there, come back here (to Philadelphia) and we got a good chance to end it."

The 76ers are in their fourth championship series in the last seven years. But they're looking for their first NBA crown since 1967.

Celtics Coach Leaving

BOSTON (AP) — Basketball coaches normally leave their jobs because they lose too many games. Bill Fitch says he left his because of the impending loss of his team's owner.

In his four years as the Boston Celtics' eighth head coach, Fitch led the National Basketball Association team to victories in 74 percent of their regular-season games with a 242-86 record. They won three division titles and one NBA championship.

That success and the promise of more wasn't enough to keep Fitch content after Harry Mangurian announced Tuesday that he would sell the team because of problems with his landlords at Boston Garden. The expected departure of General Manager Red Auerbach in the next few years contributed to his announcement Friday that he was resigning, Fitch said.

"Harry's become one of my very best friends. I hate to see a guy like that leaving the NBA," Fitch said at a news conference where he dropped his bombshell. "With Red's days numbered I felt it was a good time for me to make" the decision to step down.

The Celtics were 56-26 this season but were eliminated in the second round of the playoffs in four straight games by Milwaukee. That unleashed a spate of "what's wrong with the Celtics?" newspaper stories.

"I didn't have a lot of fun winning 56," said Fitch, who had three years left on his contract. "We won 56 ballgames and that bothers me a little bit because people say it's a disastrous season because you lost four games to Milwaukee."

In only his second season with the Celtics, Fitch led them to their 14th NBA title, a league record. His Boston teams had records of 61-21, 62-20 and 63-19 in the first three seasons.

"Sometimes, being in Boston, too much is expected, and he produced. He produced very well," said Auerbach.

Fitch, 49, said he wouldn't have resigned had Mangurian not decided to sell the club. Mangurian didn't think that was the only reason.

Referring to media criticism that intensified with the losses to the Bucks, Mangurian said, "he probably felt unless he won a championship every year, he wouldn't feel comfortable or get his just recognition."

Some Celtics grumbled about Fitch's hard practices and coaching methods, but he discounted reports of dissension among players and between them and him.

Auerbach, however, said, "after a while, they (Fitch's players) know his weaknesses and he knows their weaknesses. They know when to dog it and when to play hard."

Immediately after Fitch stunned a packed news conference with the second shock to rock the Celtics in four days, the guessing game about a successor began.

Assistant Coach K.C. Jones, who coached the Capital and Washington Bullets for three years, said he was interested in returning to a head coaching job but would wait to hear from, rather than contact, Auerbach.

Former Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn recently turned down an offer to coach the Houston Rockets. Two college coaches — Georgia's Hugh Durham and Indiana's Bobby Knight — were considered in the search that led to Fitch's appointment in 1979.

With the NBA draft scheduled for June 28, Auerbach began thinking Friday about possible replacements.

"I hope whoever replaces him (Fitch) realizes we have a veteran team and comes in and doesn't try to make a whole lot of changes," said Boston center Rick Robey.

Fitch's future was as uncertain as that of the Celtics although he and Mangurian indicated he would like to coach next season. Fitch was born and went to college in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. One of five coaching vacancies is in the Midwest with the Chicago Bulls. The others are with Houston, San Diego, Boston and the New Jersey Nets.

"The timing now is best for me if I'm going to do something except walk the beach next year," Fitch said. "I have enough stored away that I can live on what I have for the rest of my life — providing I died tomorrow."

After the final loss to Milwaukee on May 2, speculation arose about whether Fitch should remain as coach. Within days, Auerbach gave him a vote of confidence by saying he could stay if he wanted.

Fitch said Friday that Mangurian's decision to sell the club was the "back breaker" that convinced him to quit.

Upon taking over the Celtics, Fitch immediately reversed the fortunes of the club that had been 29-53 the previous year. Next to Philadelphia's Billy Cunningham, he was the NBA's winningest coach during the past four years.

He began coaching in the NBA in 1970 with the Cleveland Cavaliers in their first season. They were 15-67 that season but improved to compile a 304-434 regular season mark in Fitch's nine years.

Mangurian said he tried unsuccessfully to change Fitch's mind during a two-hour telephone conversation Thursday night in which he learned of the resignation plans.

"He's become a very close friend of mine and he started off by telling me he was going to come down and spend some time on my farm and so forth," Mangurian said. "Then I finally realized what he was talking about and I said, 'wait a minute. Are you sure you know what you want to do?' And he said he did.

"He felt it was time."

Orioles ...

Luis Sanchez, 5-1, hurled 5 2-3 innings of three-hit relief to record the victory.

Mariners 7, Brewers 5

Henderson's third double capped a four-run ninth inning and made a winner out of 43-year-old Gaylord Perry, 3-6. The right-hander survived a shaky first inning to earn his 310th career victory and his first triumph against Milwaukee since June 5, 1977.

Trailing 4-3, the Mariners overcame Milwaukee by scoring four times in the ninth, with three of the runs unearned.

White Sox 3, Rangers 2

Ron Kittle's two-run homer and a run-scoring single by Harold Baines carried Chicago over Texas behind LaMarr Hoyt's six-hitter.

Kittle blasted his ninth homer in the second inning off loser Frank Tanana, 1-1, after Tom Paciorek had singled. Baines then hit his RBI single with two out in the third after Tony Bernazard had doubled, giving the White Sox a 3-0 lead and their eventual winning run.

Lakers Flee Hotel Fire

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A fire in a stairwell at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel forced some members of the Los Angeles Lakers and other guests to leave their rooms early Friday but the hotel was not evacuated, authorities said.

Fire officials there were no injuries or serious damage reported. The fire set off an alarm, however, and an undetermined number of guests left their rooms for a short time. Lakers' center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was one of the players who was awakened by the alarm as was Ralph Sampson, the highly touted University of Virginia center. The Lakers stayed at the hotel while playing two of their NBA championship games against the 76ers.

Cards Slip By Astros In 18th

By The Associated Press

Lonnie Smith had a single in the eighth inning and didn't get another hit for 10 innings.

"I came in hitting and wasn't hitting against until we left," Smith said. "At least we finally left."

Smith, the St. Louis left fielder, doubled with one out in the 18th inning Friday night and scored the winning run on a double by Keith Hernandez, rallying the Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros in a game that lasted four hours and 26 minutes.

The victory kept St. Louis one game ahead of Montreal in the National League East. The Expos won their fifth straight, beating Philadelphia 7-4.

"I was lucky," said reliever Jeff Lahti, who got the win. "I only pitched three innings of this marathon. I feel like we played a doubleheader, but we got only one win."

Hernandez finished off the Cardinals' belated rally by scoring on Willie McGee's single off Bob Knepper, who got the loss despite pitching six innings of four-hit relief.

In the rest of the league, San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 6-3, Cincinnati blanked Pittsburgh 9-0, Chicago defeated Atlanta 8-6 and San Diego beat New York 4-0.

The Astros wasted leadoff doubles by Alan Ashby in the 15th and Knepper in 17th before finally losing for only the fourth time in 10 extra-inning games this season.

Astros Manager Bob Lillis said he was pleased by Knepper's performance. "He showed a lot of heart going out there and pitching like that," Lillis said.

St. Louis threatened to win the game in the eighth when they loaded the bases with one out on singles by Ken Oberkfell and Smith and an intentional walk to George Hendrick. But Astros reliever Frank DiPino struck out McGee and Darrell Porter in succession to preserve the tie.

Expos 7, Phillies 4

It not only was Mike Vail's first at-bat as an Expo. It was his first swing, and it was a home run that helped Montreal make a loser of Steve Carlton. Carlton left his second straight game, this one after five innings, with back spasms.

Phillies Manager Pat Corrales said cold weather had tightened Carlton's back. "We'll ice it tonight and the next two days, and usually it will take care of itself," Corrales said.

Vail's homer, a two-run shot, came in the first inning, and the Expos added another run before the inning was over on doubles by Al Oliver and Tim Wallach. They scored another run in the sixth and got two more in the eighth to help Scott Sanderson break a personal four-game losing streak.

Giants 6, Dodgers 3

Atlee Hammaker, the league's ERA leader, scattered nine hits through 8 2-3 innings, getting last-out relief help from Gary Lavelle to beat the Dodgers. Hammaker's ERA stood at 1.34 after yielding a run in the fourth and two more in the sixth. Lavelle earned his seventh save.

Despite the loss, the Dodgers retained a 2½-game lead over the Braves in the NL West.

Milt May and Joel Youngblood homered for the Giants, who have won four in a row. May's homer was a three-run shot in the second inning off Bob Welch, and Youngblood hit a two-run homer to cap San Francisco's three-run sixth inning.

San Francisco's Duane Kuiper sustained a broken collarbone in a second-inning collision with Mike Marshall of the Dodgers. He was carried from the field on a stretcher and immediately placed on the 15-day disabled list.

Reds 9, Pirates 0

Mario Soto pitched a five-hitter for his second shutout of the season, striking out eight and winning his fourth straight game. The outing also was Soto's fourth straight in which he has gone the distance.

Soto, now 7-2, got all the support he needed from Eddie Milner, who drove in three runs. Two of Milner's RBI came on a double in the fifth inning that broke a scoreless tie and started a seven-run Cincinnati rally.

Cubs 8, Braves 6

Jody Davis hit two home runs, the first of which broke a 6-6 sixth-inning tie and boosted Chicago over Atlanta. Davis' other homer, his sixth of the year, came in the eighth inning.

Warren Brusstar, 1-1, picked up the victory with 3 2-3 innings of relief, and Lee Smith finished up for his fifth save.

Chicago scored three runs in the fifth to erase a 6-3 Atlanta lead. Bill Buckner, who had three RBI, started the rally with a run-scoring single. Leon Durham doubled in a run, and Ron Cey had a sacrifice fly.

Padres 4, Mets 0

Eric Show, back in the San Diego rotation after eight days' absence, pitched a two-hitter, and the Padres started a four-run rally in the seventh inning against Tom Seaver to beat the Mets.

Show, 6-2, did not give up a hit until the sixth inning when Seaver singled with one out. Seaver, 3-4, no-hit the Padres until Terry Kennedy singled with two out in the sixth.

Alan Wiggins started San Diego's rally with a bases-loaded single that drove in two runs. Another run scored on an error by third baseman Hubie Brooks, and Kennedy's sacrifice fly capped the San Diego scoring.

Hanley Stable

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Driver Rick Hanley, injured in a crash during qualifying for Saturday's Mello Yello 300 NASCAR Late Model Sportsman race, was listed in serious but stable condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital Saturday.

Hanley, 18, from West Point, Va., suffered a broken right ankle and broken bones above the ankle in both legs. He also had a broken right arm, a slight concussion and was suspected to have injured his clavicle.

Tests showed that he suffered no internal injuries nor a broken neck, as was suspected Friday afternoon.

Hagler KO's Scypion In Fourth Round

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — He's the best, the undisputed world middleweight boxing champion, but Marvelous Marvin Hagler says he's considering early retirement.

"I think I'm getting better with every fight, but what is there left for me?" Hagler said Friday night after another easy title defense.

Hagler, only 28, shattered the dreams of another young hopeful by knocking out Wilford Scypion at 2:47 of the fourth round before a near-capacity crowd of 13,100 at the Civic Center.

Then, on Home Box Office television, and later at a news conference, he suprised the boxing world by announcing he was considering retirement.

"I was thinking about retiring with this fight here, but I'm going to give it a lot of thought," he said. "I'm going to take some time off and talk it over with my family.

"I want to do what's best for me. I feel as though I can beat everybody out there, but I don't want to be a stepping stone for anybody."

Hagler proved once again that he is the king as he made Scypion his seventh knockout victim in a row since he destroyed Alan Minter in less than three rounds for the championship Sept. 27, 1980, in London.

The champion outclassed Scypion, now 26-4, from the start before putting away the 24-year-old challenger from Port Arthur, Texas, with a series of lefts and rights.

"I don't know exactly what I used, but basically it was a straight right hand and a left hook," Hagler said after his 48th kayo in a 57-2-2 record since turning pro a decade ago.

"I landed some pretty good punches, lefts and rights, and crumpled him," the champion said. "That's the way I wanted him, down at my feet. He's got a big mouth and that's where he deserved to be."

Hagler later was more charitable in talking about Scypion, calling him aggressive and tough. However, the champ figured he was in command from the opening bell.

"They still try to fight me like Vito Antuofermo (then champion) did in our first fight which was called a draw," Hagler said. "They think all they have to do is put pressure on me, come right at me. Well, Antuofermo got away from me the first time, but not the second. And none of these guys have got away from me since."

"I froze right from the start," Scypion said. "I thought I could handle him inside, but then he went outside and surprised me. I didn't think he would be that strong outside. Then, after I got inside on him in the fourth round, he threw a combination and I fell right into it.

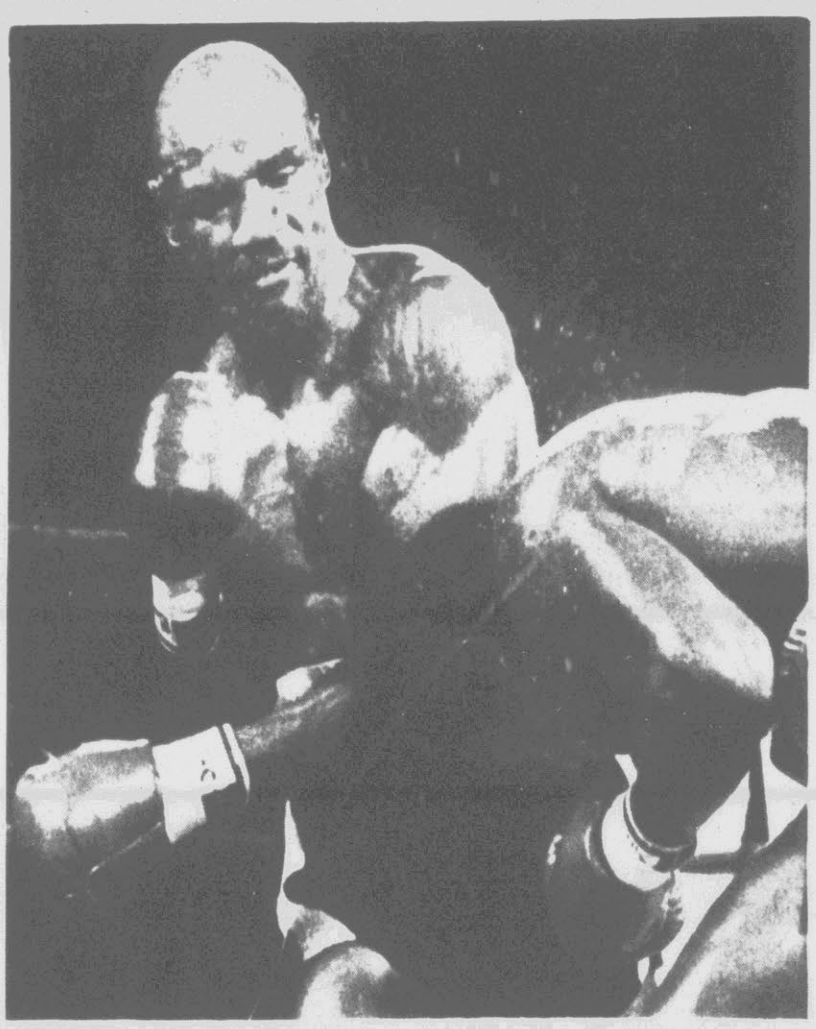

"I knew I was down and I think I could have continued, but maybe I was up all the way when the count reached. But, hey, I got beat by the best, didn't I?"

Hagler had been expected to make his next title defense against Argentine Juan Roldan, the World Boxing Association's No. 1 contender, in Rocky Marciano Stadium in late July or August in Brockton, Mass., his hometown.

However, Hagler, who earned $1.25 million for his early wipeout of Scypion, left that up in the air. Roldan, although boasting a 49-2-2 record, didn't help himself, either, as he plodded to a 10-round decision over Teddy Mann of Vineland, N.J., just before Hagler became the first fighter to put a world championship on the line in Rhode Island.

The title bout originally was to be sanctioned by the World Boxing Council. However, when the WBC and WBA agreed on a 12-round limit, instead of 15, Hagler rejected the two groups, picking the U.S. Boxing Association International for official sanction.

The WBC and WBA were not paid the usual sanction fees, even though both recognize Hagler as champion. Their next move is not clear, but as the undisputed champion, with no outstanding challenger on the horizon, Hagler appears able to call his own shots.

Cougars, Pack To Meet Again

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Houston, which fell to North Carolina State in the NCAA basketball championship game this year, will get another crack at the Wolfpack on Nov. 19 in the fifth annual Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

Dr. Edward S. Steitz, acting chairman of the classic committee, announced Friday that North Carolina State had accepted an invitation to the game, which is considered the official opener of the college basketball season. Houston accepted an invitation April 4.

The Wolfpack will be the third defending national champion to play in the game. North Carolina, which won the NCAA tournament in 1982, opened its 1982-83 season in the Tip-Off Classic by losing to St. John's in overtime, 78-74.

North Carolina State won the championship game this year, 54-52, on a lay-in at the buzzer by forward Lorenzo Charles. Charles and center Cozell McQueen are the Wolfpack's only returning starters.

Houston lost forward Clyde Drexler, a junior who decided to turn pro, but still has center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon.

McEnroe Is Subject Of Inquiry Over Incident

PARIS (AP) — John McEnroe, struggling to hold his temper and capture his first Grand Slam singles title on clay, is the subject of an official inquiry at the French Open Tennis Championships, while defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden has been placed under heavy police protection because of a kidnap threat.

Both McEnroe, seeded second in this $1.3 million tournament, and Wilander, the 18-year-old Swede who is seeded fifth were scheduled to play on Saturday.

Meanwhile, Marshall Happer, administrator of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council (MIPTC), was investigating allegations that McEnroe used obscene language and kicked a photographer's camera in his first-round match. The incidents were widely reported, but the umpire and supervisor at the match said they did not see or hear the incidents.

Happer clearly took the reports seriously.

"If we establish that the press reports are true, then action will be taken," Happer said. "We will not put up with obscenities on the court."

McEnroe has been involved in lively scenes in both of his matches thus far — against Ben Testerman in the first round and Alberto Tous of Spain in the second. Happer, who arrived in Paris Thursday night, said he had discussed both matches but the inquiry was centered on the McEnroe-Testerman affair.

He said video tapes were being studied and reports collected from witnesses. Happer added that the findings might be made known Saturday.

Five supervisors, appointed by the Pro Council, are in attendance at the championships. They have the power to impose fines on players up to $5,000. If a player exceeds $7,500 in a 12-month period, he is automatically suspended from Volvo Grand Prix tournaments for 21 days.

McEnroe was fined $350 after the Testerman match for "ball abuse." If he collected heavy fines between now and the end of the French Open, he could be in danger of suspension before Wimbledon, which begins June 20.

McEnroe and Jimmy Connors are seeded to meet in the final. If that happens, the winner would be the first American to win the men's title on the slow clay courts of Roland Garros since Tony Trabert in 1955.

Connors reached the round-of-16 Thursday by defeating Hans Gildemeister of Chile 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1.

Police were keeping an eye on Wilander and the other Swedish players following kidnap threats made to a Swedish newspaper. The threat was that one of them would be seized as hostage for an alleged Armenian terrorist held on narcotics charges.

Chris Evert Lloyd, a four-time winner of the title here who is seeded to meet Navratilova in the final, defeated her old rival, Evonne Goolagong of Australia, 6-2, 6-2 Friday and reached the round-of-16.

Among others capturing third-round matches Friday were 1981 French Open winner Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, third-seeded Andrea Jaeger and two 17 year olds, Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and Kathy Horvath of Largo, Fla.

In the men's singles, third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and France's top hope, Yannick Noah, also advanced with victories. Lendl defeated Chile's Hans Gildemeister 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1, while Noah stopped Pat Dupre 7-5, 7-6, 6-2.

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Pitcher Mike Cherry fanned eight batters and second baseman Tim Jones went 3-4, knocking in four runs as The Citadel buried Delaware 14-5 in the NCAA East Regional baseball tournament Friday.

Delaware led 4-2 until The Citadel scored three runs in the seventh, sparked by left fielder Ken Vickery's two-run single. Delaware tied the game in the bottom of the seventh, but The Citadel exploded for four runs in the eighth and five in the ninth.

Right fielder Brad Johnson began the scoring streak with a one-run double in the eighth followed by a two-run double in the ninth, finishing the game 2-2 with three RBI. Center fielder Lee Glaze for The Citadel had four runs and two RBI.

The only home run of the game came off the bat ot Delaware's second baseman Jeff Trout, the nation's leading collegiate hitter. Trout went 2-3 and improved his batting average to .537.

Morton Steps In From Pro Ranks

DENVER (AP) — Years of apprenticeship, as assistants in charge of special teams or the defensive line, are normally required of a coach before he attains the title of head coach. A person can't know all there is to know about the game and about handling athletes without that background, it is said.

So much for one of sport's most revered theories.

Craig Morton, who had never coached in any capacity at any level, jumped in as the Denver Gold head coach Friday night, and his team snapped a five-game losing streak with a 21-19 United States Football League victory over the Birmingham Stallions.

Quarterback Fred Mortensen ran for touchdowns of 3 and 5 yards and strong safety David Dumars returned an interception 78 yards for another score as the Gold raised its season record to 5-8. The loss ended Birmingham's five-game winning streak and left the Stallions at 7-6.

"It felt strange out there at the start of the game," said Morton, the former Denver Broncos quarterback who was named head coach of the Gold on Tuesday. "But I became more adjusted to coaching about midway through the first period."

Dumars' interception came six minutes after Mortensen's second TD and helped Denver to a 21-13 advantage late in the third quarter. Dumars stepped in front of a Bob Lane pass and was untouched as he returned the theft for the clinching TD.

Birmingham rallied to make it close. Lane engineered a 75-yard, 14-play drive capped by his 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Darryl Mason. The two-point conversion attempt failed when running back John Skibinski, taking a short pass from Lane, was stopped short of the goal line by cornerback David Martin.

The Stallions threatened once more, but Martin picked off Lane's long pass near the goal line and the Gold ran out the clock.

On Sunday, Philadelphia tries to become the first USFL team to clinch one of the four playoff berths when it visits Boston. New Jersey is at Washington and Los Angeles at Oakland in other Sunday action.

The Philadelphia Stars have won 10 straight games and will got after their 12th victory in 13 contests on national television (ABC). With six games to play, a triumph would give the Stars the Atlantic Division crown. Boston, 7-5, is hoping to keep alive its chances of making the July 9-10 opening round of the playoffs.

Philadelphia has the stingiest defense in the league and its offense is led by Kelvin Bryant.

North Carolina....11
William & Mary.....0

Right-hander Scott Bankhead pitched a four-hitter and Jeff Hubbard collected two hits and four RBI Friday as North Carolina pounded William & Mary 11-0 in the NCAA East Regional baseball tournament.

The Tar Heels, 42-8, were scheduled to meet The Citadel Saturday at 11 a.m.

Bankhead, 9-0, fanned 11 Indians and walked four. He pitched out of jams in the first and third innings and later retired 10 of the last 11 batters he faced.

North Carolina got all the runs it needed in the first inning when Drex Roberts doubled, stole third and scored on Hubbard's sacrifice fly.

The Tar Heels added two more runs in the fourth without a base hit. Pete Kumiega and Mike Jedziniak drew consecutive walks and moved over on Todd Wilkinson's sacrifice. After Jim Thrift struck out, Kumiega scored on an infield error which allowed Glenn Liacouras to reach first. Liacouras and Jedziniak executed the double steal and produced the second run for a 3-0 lead.

In the fifth, consecutive doubles by Roberts, Hubbard and B.J. Surhoff produced two runs. Surhoff came around on Jedziniak's single and doubled North Carolina's edge.

Delaware 12
South Carolina....11

Tom Skrable's one-out, bases-empty home run in the top of 11th inning gave Delaware a 12-11 victory over South Carolina Friday in the NCAA East Regional baseball tournament, eliminating the Gamecocks.

Skrable's blast bounced off the scoreboard in left-center field and came off Gamecock reliever Robby Coker. It ruined South Carolina's bid to make a return trip to the College World Series, scheduled to start next week in Omaha, Neb.

Coker had set down eight straight Delaware batters before the home run, which dropped his record to 0-2.

Chris Curtis, who came on in relief in the sixth inning, got the victory and raised his record to 3-1. In 5 2-3 innings of work, Coker surrendered one hit and retired the last 14 Gamecock batters he faced. He struck out two and issued no walks.

South Carolina, which finished at 35-13, scored five runs in the first inning, the big hit a two-run double by Chris Boyle. The Gamecocks held an 11-6 lead after six innings before the Blue Hens rallied.

James Madison ...13
William & Mary.....8

Tony Marant scored on a fielder's choice to break an 8-8 tie and Mike Reeves added a two-run double in the eighth inning as James Madison outlasted William & Mary 13-8 Friday in NCAA East Regional baseball action.

The victory boosted the Dukes to 35-11. They were to face the winner of Saturday's North Carolina-The Citadel game at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. William & Mary was knocked out the tournament with a 24-16 mark.

James Madison spotted the Indians a first-inning run before coasting to an 8-1 edge after four innings. But William & Mary rallied for seven runs in the top of the seventh with the help of a two-run home run by Jeff Wolf. The Dukes also committed three errors to fuel the rally.

Marant reached on second baseman John O'Keefe's error. Jeff Kidd followed with a single and Dennis Knight, who had a two-run homer in the fourth inning, walked to load the bases. Steve Cullers hit the grounder that sent Marant home but also forced Knight at second.

Reeves doubled to the 400-foot sign in center field to score Kidd and Cullers. Reeves came home on Jeff Urban's triple and Urban went in on Tom Estepp's single.

Schlichter Recalls Events Leading To Confession

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Baltimore Colts backup quarterback Art Schlichter, describing himself as "on a path to total self-destruction," says he has accepted his gambling problem and is ready to turn his life around.

Schlichter, in his first public comments since the federal government and the National Football League launched investigations into his gambling activities, also said he has been a compulsive gambler and that his gambling has made him into "a compulsive liar."

The quarterback was recently suspended indefinitely by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle because of his gambling. Schlichter will not play in the 1983 season and a review of his situation will be made prior to the 1984 season.

Schlichter's comments were published Friday by The (Dayton) Journal-Herald. The newspaper said the former Ohio State star's remarks came in an April 25 discussion with Ritter Collett, Journal-Herald sports editor and author of a book on Schlichter entitled "Straight Arrow."

Publication of Schlichter's comments were withheld until after cases against three Baltimore men were disposed of this week in U.S. District Court in Columbus.

"I have not only been a compulsive gambler for too long now, it made me a compulsive liar," the 23-year-old Bloomingburg, Ohio, native said. "I've been a living lie, with lies compounding lies. Thank God, this part of it is in the open now and I can stop being a living lie."

Schlichter said no one knew how deeply obsessed he was becoming with gambling before he left Ohio State in 1982.

"People at school considered me a loner, and I got to be that," he said. "I couldn't let anyone get close to me."

He said his girlfriend during his last three years at Ohio State, Maria Ciminello, used to accompany him to a Columbus harness-racing track but never knew he was betting.

"I didn't feel I could talk to anyone in the whole world about gambling and what it was doing to me," he said.

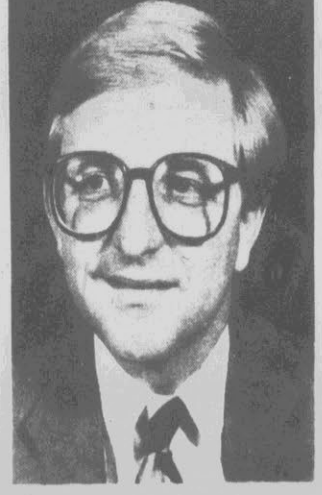

Schlichter's gambling activities became public last month, after he told FBI agents that he had lost $389,000 to Baltimore gamblers from January to mid-March of this year. Three Baltimore men pleaded guilty in a plea baragin agreement earlier this week as a result of the federal investigation prompted by Schlichter.

His attorney, John Chester of Columbus, has said Schlichter is undergoing treatment outside Ohio for compulsive gambling. A Columbus television station says Schlichter is undergoing treatment in a hospital in Amityville, N.Y.

Gasoline Prices Rising As Autos Hit The Roads

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline prices are inching higher with the approach of summer, but few analysts expect a repeat of the dime-a-gallon surge of the past two months.

"It appears that any price increases will be moderate this summer," says Trilby Lundberg, editor of the Lundberg Letter, which follows the American gasoline market.

The national average price at the pump rose from $1.12 a gallon in March to $1.22 in May, according to the Lundberg Letter's survey of 17,000 service stations. Half the gain was due to a nickel-a-gallon rise in the federal gasoline tax.

The upward trend has slowed in recent days, however. The direction of prices this summer will depend mainly on whether consumer demand is revived by an improving economy, says Ted Eck, chief economist at Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

"If people hop in their cars and go a lot, (prices) could go up two or three cents," Eck says. "If demand is not so great, prices may stay about the same."

Because the United States is the world's largest oil market, with gasoline the biggest-selling oil product, the outlook for gasoline prices and its effect on summer driving is a crucial factor for refiners and gasoline dealers and for thousands of vacation spots.

Allan Wilbur, director of public relations at the American Automobile Association in Washington, D.C., says his group believes the improving condition of the national economy — coupled with the effects of a 10 percent cut in income tax rates scheduled for July 1 — may prompt more car travel.

The AAA's barometer of summer travel plans is projecting a 1 percent increase in miles traveled by the end of the Labor Day weekend, Wilbur says.

Futures Prices Drop As Pork Stages Rally

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Livestock futures prices continued falling while frozen pork bellies staged a late rally Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

"The markets have been in a disastrous disposition all week and we followed through on it," said Phil Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc.

Stanley said the bearish disposition of many traders seemed to pressure the market, as the number of heavyweight cattle appears to be light, a factor that ordinarily would support prices. He noted that prices paid for live animals on cash markets were steady Friday, although the price of dressed beef was slightly lower.

Live hog futures fell despite slightly higher prices on cash markets. Stanley said pressure coming from heavy runs of live hogs to market earlier in the week continued to push prices lower Friday.

Pork bellies were "in a grossly oversold situation," and the price on cash markets, 55 cents a pound, was "almost a silly price," said Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express.

Grocers could feature bacon, which is made from pork bellies, at bargain prices and still make their profit, he said. But retailers are unwilling to make commitments to buy until they are convinced that the labor situation with Wilson Foods, the nation's largest fresh pork processor, is cleared up, as union action could interrupt the supply, he added.

In late trading, though, pork bellies recovered from early losses as traders with short positions, or agreements to deliver, bought contracts to avoid holding those positions over the three-day weekend.

Live cattle settled .32 cent to .62 cent lower with the contract for delivery in June at 65.40 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .65 cent to .80 cent lower with August at 63.55 cents a pound; live hogs were .35 cent lower to .08 cent higher with June at 47.40 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .70 cent to 1.50 cents higher with July at 60.85 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices were mostly lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Trading was very light, as Monday holidays generally discourage traders from opening new contract positions to carry over the three-day weekend.

Soybeans continued sliding, largely as the result of technical factors such as trends on price charts, said Leslie Herren, a grain analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

However, Ms. Herren said, the decline came despite new estimates that say the soybean crop in the Rio Grande du Sol region of Brazil could be reduced by 2 million metric tons this year because of extremely wet conditions.

Oats were under pressure by a report that European soybeans were being imported to the United States, sources at the floor said.

Wheat settled 2¾ cents to 5½ cents lower with the contract for delivery in July at $3.47¼ a bushel; corn was 3½ cents lower to ¼ cent higher with July at $3.02¼ a bushel; oats were 3¾ cents lower to 5 cents higher with July at $1.58½ a bushel; and soybeans were 2 cents to 3½ cents lower with July at $6.10½ a bushel.

Silver jumped late in the session with much of the buying coming from traders who were offsetting short positions prior to the three-day weekend, said Jack Boyd, vice president for commodity research in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc.

Boyd noted that traders are concerned that political tension in the Mideast could prompt a rally in the metals prices.

Note: Except for the Sentra, Rabbit and Mazda, all cars are similarly equipped, including air conditioning, power steering and brakes, tinted glass, AM radio and other common options. Costs include variable expenses (gas at $1.55 per gallon, diesel at $1.45, oil, maintenance and tires); fixed expenses (insurance, depreciation, financing, taxes and license) and are based on a three-year 60,000-mile retention cycle. Hefty repair bills could, of course, change any of these numbers. Expensive foreign cars can be especially costly to repair.
Last is first.
There is a lot more to paying for a car than just buying one from your favorite dealer.
Take this survey published by one of the most respected business magazines.
They found that while the Rabbit Diesel wasn't the cheapest car to buy, it was the cheapest car to own of those surveyed.
What's the difference?
Well, they took the cost of a new car, and then added fuel costs, and maintenance costs, and insurance costs, and depreciation costs, and discovered the Rabbit costs less.
And all those other cars cost more.
Of course this is nothing new to anyone who has ever owned a Volkswagen.
They already know the thrill of finishing last.

Toughlovers Say

Parents Must Love Responsibly

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Toughlove means what it says — TOUGH LOVE.

It's an organization and a philosophy that acknowledges that it's tough but necessary for parents to love and accept their adolescent children as they are and themselves as they are and at the same time not be soft on unacceptable behavior. Letting children take the consequences of their own actions — not stepping in to protect them — and taking a stand for a peaceful home life is tough — so tough that it's virtually impossible to do without the support of other people who're wearing the same moccasins, June and Otto Dykstra, founders of the Greenville area chapter of Toughlove, learned from experience.

The local chapter is affiliated with the national Toughlove organization founded and led by Phyllis and David York of Sellersville, Pa. The Yorks are family counselors who, despite their life's work, had difficulty in dealing with the adolescent behavior of their own children. Out of their own professional knowledge and personal experience they developed the Toughlove philosophy and a way to share it with others.

T.L.C. Didn't Work

"Tender loving care had worked very well with our older three children," Dykstra, a statistician for Burroughs Wellcome Company here, said. "But our youngest child would have none of it. This child, now a teenager, took a special kind of love that we were several years in recognizing we had to provide. He's now doing very, very well, but this happened only after we fully accepted that we could not wish away or pretend to accept his behavior and when we began to let him take the consequences of his own actions. We had to let him know exactly where we stood and how strongly we were taking that stand before his behavior did improve."

About the time the Dykstras began to feel that their personal crisis was abating, Mrs. Dykstra read about Toughlove in either the Dear Abby or the Ann Landers column, she can't remember which. She called the Community Service Foundation in Sellersville and requested that further information be mailed to her. "As I read the material I received, it struck me that this was a way Otto and I could express our gratitude for the support we'd had in dealing with our family crisis from our friends and the Greenville community," she said. "It would be a way for us to help other people and at the same time gain support for ourselves in whatever's ahead."

"First we visited a Toughlove group in Raleigh," her husband said. "Then we started meeting each Tuesday night — first with only one or two other couples. Four couples from Raleigh generously drove all the way here to assist us in conducting our first meeting. Now about 10 persons attend on a regular basis and many more have been at one time or another and are welcome back whenever they wish."

Sharing Optional

"The old-timers at the meeting begin by telling what's been going on with them during the previous week," Dykstra said. "By the time it's the newcomer's turn to share, they can get a feel for what's happening and make a choice as to whether they'd like to tell about what's going on with them and their children. They have the opportunity to open up, but no pressure to do so."

"The openness that these meetings foster is one of the parents' most powerful tools," Mrs. Dystra said. "These people realize that they have no need to feel ashamed and hide out. Difficult children lose a powerful weapon when their parents no longer have to hide what's going on at home. 'Your neighbors aren't raising your children — you are,' we tell other parents. 'Don't let what they may think hold you up from making the choices you need to make to be responsible yourself for yourself and let your child be responsible for himself or herself.'"

JUNE AND OTTO DYKSTRA

TOUGHLOVE

A SELF-HELP
PROGRAM FOR PARENTS TROUBLED BY TEENAGE BEHAVIOR

Power Reclaimable

"A mighty message of Toughlove," Otto Dykstra said, "is that parents can get back their power simply by claiming it. The child is the one who's making the poor choices — not the parents — and the parents have no need to feel guilty if they are in good faith doing the best they can."

"We stress confidentiality always. And we make it clear that the purpose of the meetings are not to change any children or their behavior, but to help change the parents' reactions to that behavior. We don't have all the answers. In fact, we don't know we have any. We simply help people look at their situations as unemotionally as possible, but we've learned it's impossible to think straight when one is emotionally upset. We can be objective about someone else's children a lot better than we can about our own, you know."

"Most parents learn in our meetings and by reading the Toughlove manual," June Dykstra said, "that they've been giving their power away. They learn that the crisis at home will end only when they stop denying its existence, stop crisis-supporting behavior, give the problem back to the person who created it."

Taking a stand, the Toughlove manual asserts, means finding your bottom line and setting a structure — deciding which behaviors you're willing to put up with and which you're not, giving back the crisis (letting the teenager have his own consequences, even if it's court action, fines to be paid, etc.).

Gene and Glennis Jones say Toughlove has turned things around in their home. They were being divided and manipulated, they say, by the behavior of their daughter. Then Glennis happened onto a copy of the Toughlove manual in the Public Defender's office where she works. "It was a Godsend," she said. "I realized that my husband's tough stand had been right all along and that I had to make changes in my own behavior and the way I related to my daughter. The results were almost immediate, they say once they started pulling together. They eagerly attended the first meeting called by the Dykstras and have been continuing to support themselves and others toughlovingly ever since.

Support Is Interdependence

"It looks like," Mrs. Jones said, "that the crisis at our house is over. But we still feel the need to continue in Toughlove. We've learned how valuable it it is to share yourself with others as well as to receive. The manual calls it interdependence and we've learned how valuable this is within the family and within any group of people interested in each other's well-being."

Joe and Patsy Hunt say learning the Toughlove philosophy and applying it brought parenting to a happy medium for them. "I'd been too strict," Patsy said, "and Joe had been too lenient. The children were able to use our disparity to take control. Bottom-lining, we found, was a scary thing that actually seemed to bring things to a head with our son. We were glad for the support of other parents during that time and glad we stuck to what we believe to be the way to be the most responsible and help him to be the most responsible person he can be."

"Toughlove was what got me out of a rut and helped me break a lot of old patterns," Joe Hunt added. "I wouldn't take anything for it. I'll definitely continue to participate in Toughlove as a way of helping myself and relating to other parents with similar concerns." Only those persons willing to admit they have problems in dealing with their teenagers' behavior that could be benefitted by Toughlove knowledge and support are invited to the Toughlove meetings that are held every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church here. These persons are welcome, the six Toughlovers interviewed said.

Mini-Fellowship: Chance For Med Re-Education

By GEORGETTE F. HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

Dr. Charles O. Boyette of Belhaven called it a chance to get "re-educated." Dr. Thomas W. Kitchen of Jacksonville found the academic environment "pleasant and challenging and a great way to learn."

The physicians were referring to a program at East Carolina University School of Medicine known as a "mini-fellowship," a new form of continuing medical education that is receiving excellent reviews during its six-month pilot study.

The mini-fellowship offers physicians in eastern North Carolina the opportunity to custom-design a course of study here at the medical center. They can select one or more areas for training and arrange the schedule to cover a few days or several weeks. While local doctors are training in Greenville, medical school faculty and senior residents may volunteer to cover their hometown practices to assure continuity of care for their patients.

The program represents one of the ways the school's Office of Continuing Medical Education is trying to make educational experiences "more accessible, available and meaningful for community physicians," said Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, senior associate dean and executive director of the Eastern Area Health Education Center.

"Most phsicians, consciously or unconsciously, are programmed to stay current in their specialities," said Monroe, who also serves as CME director. "They don't attend CME programs just to get credit. They attend because they really want to learn inforamtion that will help them provide better care for their patients.

"Traditionally, CME has been a 'listening and learning' experience for physicians — they listen to someone talk and show slides. Today we're looking at better ways to communicate new knowledge and provide actual hands-on experience for them."

So far the mini-fellowship appears to show great promise as a flexible individual progam that can meet a variety of needs. Boyette, for example, spent three days at the medical school concentrating on new diagnostic and therapeutic techniqaues in high-risk obstetrics

"It was the most beneficial CME program I've attended," Boyette said. "A conference or lecture is fine, but this gave me the opportunity to go right into the institution and see how things are done, who does what, how the department is run, and who the faculty physicians are.

"We had a patient in Belhaven we were not prepared to treat and referred her to ECU's high-risk program. Now she is back in my care, and I'm able to do a better job because of what I learned with the faculty and what I learned about the referral process." In addition to making rounds at Pitt Memorial Hospial and seeing patients in the School of Medicine's Outpatient Center, Boyette attended grand rounds and conferences in the Family Medicine Department and became acquainted iwth many of the faculty members.

"The excellent feature about the program is that the Family Medicine Department was able to provide a faculty member and/or senior resident to cover my practice, so I, as a solo practitioner, didn't have to worry about my patients or my office staff," he said.

Kitchen, a family physician from Jacksonville who spent a week at the medical center, agrees with Boyette's evaluation. He decided he wanted to acquire skills in three areas: intubation, pulmonary function testing and fiber-optic sigmoidoscopy.

"I designed my program to develop specific skills, not just general review," he said. "I couldn't learn to do intubation or the other skills from a lecture. I had to be able to do them myself in a supervised situation where I could learn right from wrong. That's the advantage of the mini-fellowship."

The program, supported in part by funds from the Weyerhaeuser Company, represents the collaborative efforts of the CME office, the family medicine department, and Drs. F.M. Simmons Patterson and Rose Pulley, faculty members who coordinate requests and schedules. However, it is the dedication of faculty in all the clinical departments that makes the program a success, said Dr. James G. Jones, chairman of family medicine.

"This is an excellent way for the clinical departments to really give support to practicing physicians in the region, and we take this obligation very seriously. But the program is also a big help to all our faculty because they get to know the practicing physicians better and get valuable experiences when they visit their rural practices," Jones said.

Jones predicts six or eight family physicians a year will soon participate in the mini-fellowship and that their training will affect thousands of lives when they return to practice.

Couple Marries On Saturday

MRS. JOSEPH ANTHONY NELSON

WINTERVILLE — Catherine Claire Dews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kirwin Dews Sr. of Winterville, and Joseph Anthony Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Arthur Nelson Sr. of Bethel, were married Saturday at 3 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed at the Winterville Baptist Church by the Rev. Richard T. Davis and Father William Frost. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Richard Lambert and Tammy Jean Stocks, both of Winterville, was soloist. Bill Frazier played the trumpet.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The Sasson original was fashioned with an open portrait neckline outlined in a double ruffle of organza banded in satin cording. The short, Renaissance sleeves were trimmed in the cord. The modified fitted waistline was enhanced by a tucked belt of white satin. The full circular skirt extended to an attached chapel length train. She wore a chapel length illusion veil edged in cord and the veil was attached to a Juliet cap trimmed in white satin with pearl appliques and miniature silk flowers interspersed in a tuffle pour.

Sister of the bride, Madge Dews Thompson of Johannesburg, South Africa, was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Alexine Dews DeCuzzi of Winterville, sister of the bride, Jacqui Nelson Ragland of Bethel, sister of the bridegroom, Carol Anne Jennison and Marianne Padgett of Atlanta, Ga., cousins of the bride, Paula Hunsucker of Washington, Peggy Talenski Gawronski of Chapel Hill, Elizabeth Kelly of Mocksville and Beth Newsome of Wilmington.

Kristi Elizabeth Dews, niece of the bride, and Stephanie Aaron Ragland, niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls. Honorary bridesmaids were Kathy Harris Nelson, Paula Diana Severt, Susan Elizabeth Jones and Judy Lynn Allen. Kathryn Anne Worthington presided at the guest register.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsmen were James A. Jr., Jeffrey A. and Jordan A. Nelson, brothers of the bridegroom of Bethel, Kenneth K. At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A psychologist once said that everyone has a dirt threshold, a boiling point that will drive him or her to dig out from under all the mess.

A 59-year-old widow in Albertson, N.Y., obviously found hers when she not only burned down her home because it was dirty, but tried to stop the firemen from putting out the fire.

So did city officials in Charleston, S.C., when they required horses carrying visitors on carriage tours throughout the historic district to wear diapers.

I haven't found mine yet.

How could I? It's been years since I've seen my threshold. And I think I know why. It's because I'm first generation immaculate. I was raised in a home that I dubbed Our Lady of Perpetual Dusting. Everyone knows cleanliness skips a generation.

I used to watch my mother. She was the kind who washed out a measuring cup with soap and water after she had used it only to measure WATER!

Whenever she had't used her good dishes, say in a year or so, she's wash them again before setting the table. There was never any gum stuck in the bottom of her waste cans. I was impressed by that. And she was the only person I knew who ironed dish towels.

The only hope for me of surviving in this environment was my mother's love for boxes. Amid all this organized sparkle and alphabetized spices was a closet full of old boxes and ribbons that would have taken the sight out of a good eye.

It must have been her threshold of cleanliness where you can just take so much Lysol and you freak out.

No box was too flimey or too worn to be added to mother's collection. Sometimes, she'd snatch a box away from us before we got the gift out of the tissue. You never knew what you were getting. Just when you thought you were getting a rectal thermometer for your birthday, you opened the lid and voila, a new pen-and-pencil set.

Reviving Paneling

Homeowners are often faced with the problem of reviving old or dark wood paneling, especially when it was put up in the first place to cover damaged or uneven walls.

One option as to wallpaper over the paneling, says Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension home furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University.

First, fill the grooves and knots with a spackling compound. Apply the compound with a putty knife, smoothing it level with the surface of the paneling with a putty knife or damp rag.

After allowing it to dry for 12 to 24 hours, apply more spackling if the first application has shrunken. Roughen the paneling with sandpaper and apply a coat of wallpaper sizing to help ensure good adhesion.

If the wallpaper is thin, a heavy duty lining paper can be put up first. Heavy vinal can be applied directly to the wall.

Our Secret
If you don't tell them, they'll never know that the diamonds in your magnificent, new ring or pendant were removed from an old, worn-out dinner ring. They'll certainly think you spent twice as much as you did, and you will really deserve all those admiring glances for being so clever.

TIME FOR BRUNCH

Ham Omelet & Cheddar Buns
Strawberry & Pineapple Bowl
Benne Wafers & Coffee

CHEDDAR BUNS

Made with yeast, but no kneading necessary.

- 1 envelope dry yeast
- ½ cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
- 2 ounces coarsely grated extra-sharp cheddar (about ½ cup)
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 large egg
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 2¼ cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, sprinkle yeast over warm water; let stand 5 minutes to dissolve. Stir in cheese, sugar, salt, egg, butter and 1 cup of the flour. With the mixer on low speed, beat until cheese is well distributed — about 2 minutes. With a wooden spoon, gradually stir in remaining flour to form a dough; mix well. Fill 12 greased muffin-pan cups (each 3 inches across top and 1½ inches deep) about half full of dough; cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled — about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown — about 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot. Makes 12.

ROQUEFORT SPREAD

Seedless green grapes as well as crackers may be topped with this.

- 8 ounces cream cheese, cut up
- 8 ounces Roquefort cheese, cut up
- 4 tablespoons butter, cut up
- 2 tablespoons brandy

In a food processor, with the metal blade, process the cream cheese until soft and fluffy. Through the feed tube, with the processor on, gradually add the Roquefort, butter and brandy; process until blended. Makes 2 cups (generous). Keep stored, tightly covered, in the refrigerator. Allow flavors to blend for 3 to 5 days before serving.

The honor attendant carried a bouquet of flowers like that of the bride with mauve ribbon streamers tied with baby's breath. The bridesmaids carried ivory lace fans with mauve roses, baby's breath, baker's fern and ivy tied with mauve ribbons.

Best man was 2nd Lt. Glenn Gerichten of Jacksonville. Ushers were David Rood of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, John Thomas, brother of the bride, and Chuck Harper, both of Richmond, and John Skonier of Burlington. Ring bearer was Stephen Spencer of Richmond.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

We have lived with one another's attitudes toward neatness. She considers dust a drug never to be inhaled. I consider dust God's way of measuring time.

According to the psychologists, I should have one area where spit and polish prevail...some part of my life that is clutter-free. I don't.

I remember the story about the girl back East who worked at a bank three months and every night her desk was clean as a whistle. It did not go unnoticed. Others were told to emulate her and that's when they discovered that every night she was tossing away everything on her desk right into the wastebasket.

Neatness breeds that kind of pressure.

Miss Arnold Weds Mr. Wilson

AYDEN — Donna Kay Arnold and Thomas Kelvin Wilson were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. David Ricks performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Ms. Rubelle H. Arnold and Earl S. Arnold and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Lee Wilson, all of Ayden.

The organist was CoraBob Turnage of Ayden and several of Elvis Presley's selections were played by Scott Reel, nephew of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her family and escorted by her father. She wore a formal white gown of sheer chiffon knit with lace over taffeta with an empire waistline. The gown was designed with a Queen Anne neckline, lace appliques and pearl accents. The sheer lace bishop sleeves were fitted and the skirt formed a chapel length train. A matching chapel length veil trimmed in lace was held in place by a caplet accented with pearls. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of dusty rose and rubrum lilies, pink roses and white sweetheart roses with touches of baby's breath trimmed with lace and sprigs of ivy.

Debbie Beddard of Greenville was her cousin's maid of honor and wore a formal gown in a rose color with a sheer high neck and a flounced bodice creating a capelet effect. She carried a single long-stemmed rose with rose satin streamers. The bridesmaids were Barbara J. Whaley of Mebane, Tricia Carter of Ayden and Barbara M. Whaley of Mebane. They wore dresses identical to that of the maid of honor and carried a single long-stemmed pink rose with matching streamers.

Christie Whaley, cousin of the bride, was miniature bride and wore a formal white gown similar to that of the bride and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies. The flower girl was Karin Hunt, cousin of the bride, who wore a suede rore formal gown with a stand-up neckline. She carried a long-stemmed rose with suede rose streamers.

Tony Wilson, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Stevie and Donovan Arnold, brothers of the bride, and Stewart Beamon, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, all of Ayden.

Shannon Whaley of Mebane, cousin of the bride, was the miniature bridegroom. Jerry Wilson, nephew of the bridegroom, was the ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow.

The mother of the bride wore a rose polyester dress with a sheer stand-up neckline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a two-piece lavender and white dress with a matching jacket. The mothers and grandmothers were remembered with corsages of pink silk rose.

Patty Bowen of Ayden presided at the guest register.

The wedding was directed by Mary Alice Davenport of Ayden.

Immediately following the ceremony, the mother of the bride entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. The cake was served by Barbara Holland of Ayden. Evon DiGregorio of Raleigh poured punch. Ruth Carter, cousin of the bride, and Jo Ellen Reel, sister of the bridegroom, said the goodbyes.

After the rehearsal, the parents of the bridegroom entertained in the church fellowship hall.

SEWING AID

Few people would list white vinegar as a sewing aid, but it can come in handy when lengthening a hem.

To remove the old crease, try a solution of two parts water and one part white vinegar, suggests Dr. Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist-in-charge, North Carolina State University.

Test the solution for colorfastness on an unseen part of the garment. If the fabric does not bleed or change color, go ahead and apply the solution to the crease line with a cotton ball.

Isaac Asimov is a writer known to millions of readers. He has written over 260 books on subjects as varied as the Bible, Shakespeare and mathematics. He is best known for his science fiction, and in particular "The Foundation Trilogy" which was awarded a Hugo as the best all-time science fiction series.

"Foundation's Edge," published over 30 years after completion of the trilogy, is a continuation of the complex story of a universe far distant in time and space.

"The Foundation Trilogy" is an example of intellectual science fiction. Asimov's interests in computers, mathematics, psychology, history and technology are central, and his characters and conflicts are set within a narrative that is both complex and believable. The one-e-dimensional comic-strip hero battling ogres and monsters on Mars has never been a part of Asimov's fiction, and "Foundation's Edge" demonstrates that Asimov still is committed to using serious ideas in a popular form.

"The Foundation Trilogy" told the story of several hundred years of galactic history, chronicling the decline, fall and the beginning of the resurrection of the Galactic Empire. The plot defies summary. "Foundation's Edge" continues the story, and that is the novel's strength and weakness.

Although Asimov provides a prologue to his novel, two pages are insufficient to provide a reader with the background necessary to appreciate the references and allusions to the trilogy sprinkled throughout "Foundation's Edge." To fully enjoy Asimov's complex story it is necessary to read the early novels, for this fourth volume in the series is as much a real part of Asimov's self-contained universe as any of the first three.

Even without prior knowledge of the Galactic Empire, however, a reader will find "Foundation's Edge" worth the effort. It is an entertaining and unusual story, primarily because Asimov builds tensions without resorting to villains.

Mankind, spead across the universe on thousands of planets, is at a crossroads and must choose among three paths of development — psychological, industrial, and environmental. Each is possible, and each is good. What the choice is how is and how it is made are the heart of "Foundation's Edge," and I have no desire to spoil a good read, one that suggests lessons for us here on earth today.

"Foundation's Edge" is a good book, a welcome friend for those who know the earlier novels and a new acquaintance for those who don't. I suggest readers begin with "The Foundation Trilogy" and then read "Foundation's Edge." That way the pleasure keeps building.

Book News

By MARGARET CLARK

Ed McBain's novels of crime and detection have won national and international acclaim. And the author not only has a new novel of the famed 87th Precinct series out this month, but also the third novel in his new series starring Matthew Hope, a young up-and-coming attorney in the Florida Gulf Coast.

In "Ice," McBain revives (for the 36th time) the detective division of the 87th Precinct. His successful police formula doesn't waver here — a few crimes are highlighted in the routine round of bizarre, tragic, touching and funny incidents that crowd police work.

Detective Steve Carella and his partner Meyer confront some particularly chilling cases: the double homicide of a musical comedy dancer and a drug dealer, a shasher who mutilates women, and a jewelry dealer found murdered with a fortune in diamonds on his person.

"Ice" should satisfy McBain's many readers who revel in police procedure and protocol. And as in other McBain novels, there's never a dull moment.

In "Beauty and the Beast," McBain places more emphasis on portrayal of human conflict rather than the frenetic action-packed pace of the 87th Precinct stories.

It all begins when Florida attorney Matthew Hope sees a gorgeous woman on a topless beach and the next day is asked by the same young Frenchwoman, Michelle Harper, now horribly beaten up, to have her husband, George, arrested for assault. The next day she's found burned to death on Whisper Key Beach, and her husband is arrested for her murder.

When Hope is asked to defend George Harper for the murder of his wife, he is confronted with a deepening mystery surrounding the murder, centering on a group of unsavory characters and corrupt relationships among Michelle's wild set of friends.

Here McBain supplies lots of good scenery, offbeat characters, and complicated motivations. It's a thoroughly good read.

Public Grand Opening Today

GRAND OPENING TODAY — From 3 to 5 p.m. today, the grand opening of the Faison Williams Home will be held, and is open to the public. Built by the Honorable Isham Faison in 1853 at a cost of $1,000, the two story house has long halls, galleries and a wing. During the Civil War General Terry's staff of the Union Army made the home his headquarters, confining the family to the southeast corner of the home. Four Williams brothers — Louis, I.R. Marshall, and Virginus, who grew up in the home in the early 1900s, all served in World War I. Today's public opening marks restoration of the home following severe damage by a fire in March 1981. Faison is 60 miles from Greenville, 7 miles south of Mount Olive. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

RockBill Keeps Fans Updated

Rock music fans, primarily the younger generation, will find much to please them in this small format (8½ x 5½ inches) monthly magazine.

The May issue, for example, carries a substantial article on the group Ultravox, with members commenting on their controversial album "Rage In Eden," as well as revealing facts on their newest effort, "Quartet." George Martin, the album's producer and an ex-producer for the Beatles, calls Ultravox "the most musical band I've come across in a long time."

An interview with Nick Lowe shows the performer is "not totally wrapped up in the music business. It's sort of a hobby which I get paid for. . . I don't have any great artistic motives, or be . . . What a stupid word that is." Lowe, who has recently released his new album, "The Abominable Showman" is not particularly fond of the tedious process of cutting a record in a studio, nor of making videos. Of videos he comments: "Absolute chore. A joyless task it is. It has to be done, unfortunately." Tours are a different matter, something he likes. "It's a terrific way to earn a living because it's not really very hard work."

The May cover story deals with a group not yet very well known in the U.S. — Fun Boy Three. Terry Hall, Lynval Golding and Neville Staples are based in Camden Town — "London's next high rent frontier . . . a mixture of working people, artists and pubs that seem to rile the investment wise and the fashion conscious." The particular setting, insight asides on British customs and attitudes, and references to Jamacian influences tell as much about segments of today's British society as it does about the three performers — an interesting form of reportage.

Other articles in the issue deal with Bryan Adams, Marianne Faithful, a look at The World of Roxy Music, "The Quintessential Maurice White" and an intriguing tale of unusual influence in "The Strange Case of Thomas Dolby."

The style of writing in these articles, as well as in the shorter columns, is, predictably, breezy, intimate and tied to the immediate world of performers and their music.

Rockbill is akin in context and tone to the popular movie magazines, i.e., Photoplay, of times past. It serves the purpose of keeping rock music fans abreast of the latest developments in rock music and gives insights, though on a limited scale, into the lives and circumstances of the people who make today's most popular form of music.

Family Carrying On Crazy Horse Project Of Late Sculptor

CARRYING ON AT CRAZY HORSE . . . Following the death of sculptor Korczak Ziolkowski last October, his widow, Ruth, center, and six of her children, along with others, will be carrying on the years-long work of completing the gigantic Crazy Horse monument being carved into a mountainside in South Dakota.

CRAZY HORSE, S.D. — An ambitious four-phase program will be launched this summer when weather permits resumption of work on the Crazy Horse mountain carving now in progress in the southern Black Hills of South Dakota.

Based on sculptor Korczak Ziolkowski's carefully drawn plans, the program includes: (1) extensive measurement of the entire 600-foot high mountain, (2) removal of tons of dangerous loose rock from above work areas, (3) extending the new outline painted on the mountain, and (4) continuing to block out the 22-story high horse's head, a project which will require several more years.

Mrs. Ziolkowski outlined the plans to the Executive Committee of the Crazy Horse Memorial Foundation, which uannimously endorsed the work program. As planned, she has assumed directorsip of the Crazy Horse project following the death of her husband last October at the age of 74. She and her large family are dedicted to carrying on Korczak Ziolkowski's work.

Realizing at the outset that Crazy Horse was an undertaking much larger than could be encompassed in one man's lifetime, Ziolkowski — with the assistance of his wife, Ruth — drw up three books of blueprint-like measurements for the gigantic mountain carving.

Outlining the work plans for the coming season, Mrs. Ziolowksi said, "All we ask is one year to prove ourselves, to show the public the work on the mountain and at the visitor center is going on as Korczak planned. This past winter we built a new 200-seat theater, added a new wing on the Indian Arts and Crafts Gallery, remodeled the souvenir shop and made other improvements. This spring we are continuing the major expansion of the parking lot which was started last fall.

"We are not going to carve the mountain overnight," she added. "Korczak cautioned us to go slowly sw we do it right. Limited finances and weather will continue to be major obstacles. But, as he did, we are going to make steady progress on the mountain and on the educational and cultural aspects of Korczak's humanitarian dream for Crazy Horse."

This summer, the work force will include sons Adam, 31, Csimir, 29 — both of whom worked beside their father on the mountain most of their lives — daughter Monique, 22, son-in-law, Mike Caruso, 30, plus two additiona men who worked with Korczak previously.

Commenting on the work to block out the 219-foot high horse's head, Mrs. Ziolowski said "it will take many more years, but we hope each year to be able to bring its rough form out against the skyline more and more. Korczak made enormous progress on the horse's head, but it's important to rmember he spent 12 years on it and took off approximately four-million tons of rock just from the horse's head.

"Several hundred thousand more tons of rock have yet to be removed," she added, "and because we are so much closer to the finish surface, the blasts cannot be as large as they have been. It will all take time."

Adopt-A-Horse Fees Reduced

Office Of Public Affairs
Bureau Of Land Management
U.S. Department Of The Interior

The fee for obtaining a wild horse through the national Adopt-A-Horse program has been lowrered by $75, according to the Intrior Department's Bureau of Land Management (BLM). People in North Carolina may adopt a wild horse for the reduced fee of $210, or a burro for $130, at the Southeastern Adoption Center located near Cross Plains, Tennessee.

"We are reducing the fee in response to public comments we received on our new adoption regulations," BLM Eastern States Director G. Curtis Jones, Jr. said. "By lowering the fee, we hope to increase the number of wild horses adopted, reduce the cost of the program to the government, and still discourage persons who might adopt merely for purposes of commercial gain."

More than 160 residents of North Carolia have adopted 271 horses and burros since the nation-wide Adopt-A-Horse program began in 1976. BLM opened the Cross Plains facility — the first of its kind in the East — in July 1979, in order to make it more convenient for Easterners to participate in the adoption program.

Randall Carr, who operates the Cross Plains center under contract to BLM, said there are dozens of horses currently at the center to choose from, but added that he expects demand for the animals to jump with the reduction in fee. Since opening the center, more than 4,000 animals has found new homes through Carr's facility, which is located about 28 miles north of Nashville off Route I-65.

The regulations lowering the fee also require potential adopters to submit a nonrefundable $25 advance payment with their applications. The advance payment will be applied toward the adoption fee when the applicant picks up an animal. According to Jones, the advance payment is being imposed in order to create a more reliable applicant list. In the past year, he said, less than one applicant in ten actually adopted an animal.

Adopters who paid the $290 fee for a wild horse in Cross Plains will soon receive a $75 refund from BLM. "That money could go a long way toward adopting another animal," said Jones, who hopes many past adopters will reinvest their refund in another horse, or perhaps their first burro.

BLM runs the adoption program as a means of reducing wild horse and burro herds that crowd overgrazed public lands in the West. Since 1976, more than 42,000 horses and burros have been placed with adopters in every state but Delaware and Hawaii. Wild horses can be gentled and trained for riding, farming, and other non-commercial purposes for which domestic horses are used. Burros usually are adopted simply as pets, but also can be used as pack animals.

Adopters, who may pick up as many as four wild horses or burros in a year, must have adequate facilities for their care. For the first year following the adoption, each animal remains the property of the U.S. Government. After that, if the animal has been cared for humanely, the adopter may apply to receive title from BLM.

Information on the adoption program and application forms may be obtained by contacting: Office of Public Affairs, BLM Eastern States Office, 350 South Pickett Street, Alexandria, Virginia, 22304, telephone (703) 235-2480; or by contacting Randall or Paula Carr at (615) 654-2180.

Restored Classic Southern Home

VIEWING THE EXTERIOR . . . The restored splendor of historic Kenanville's top attraction, Liberty Hall, is viewed by three Greenville visitors – Mark Tripp, LaRona Murray, and June Taylor. Built in 1800, restoration was completed in the spring of 1968 with the house and grounds opened to the public.

METICULOUS CARE . . . is given to the grounds as well as to the maintenance of the house and other buildings. Here, Norwood West of Warsaw works on one of the flower beds located in the spacious grounds of Liberty Hall.

Liberty Hall, An Eastern Carolina Historic Showplace

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Liberty Hall, an impressive plantation home, is another North Carolina architectual gem that has been restored and preserved as an important part of eastern North Carolina's cultural heritage.

Unlike the majority of the state's gracious plantation homes, Liberty Hall has a town location - in Kenansville, county seat of Duplin County – instead of being situated in a rural setting.

For a number of years in this century – 1920 until his death in 1964, Colonel Owen Hill Kenan used the house as a storage place for his art collection. Three of the colonel's great nephews, Tom, Owen, and James, inherited the property from him, and they in turn sold their interests to Frank Hawkins Kenan of Durham. Late in 1964 Frank Kenan and his wife, Harriet Dubose Kenan, deeded Liberty Hall to the Duplin County Board of Education.

An agency – the Liberty Hall Restoration Commission was formed to provide guidelines for authentic restoration work of the house and 12 acres of grounds. A Kenan descendant, Thomas S. Kenan III headed the commission. In addition to deeding the property to a Duplin County public agency, the Kenan family contributed substantial funds – $400,000 plus, for use in restoration work.

Though in relatively good condition, the main house and accessory buildings had deteriorated and required extensive reworking and in some instances, replacement. Restoration got underway in the summer of 1965, and in May, 1968 the major phase of restoration work was completed, with Liberty Hall opened to the public in a gala celebration held to mark the occasion.

A Major Attraction

Today, 15 years later, Liberty Hall is a major eastern North Carolina historic attraction, a place of keen interest to history buffs, to those interested in exceptional pieces of period furnishings, and to all who love the serenity of open space and the beauty of finely constructed buildings. And its history is an integral part of Duplin County's history.

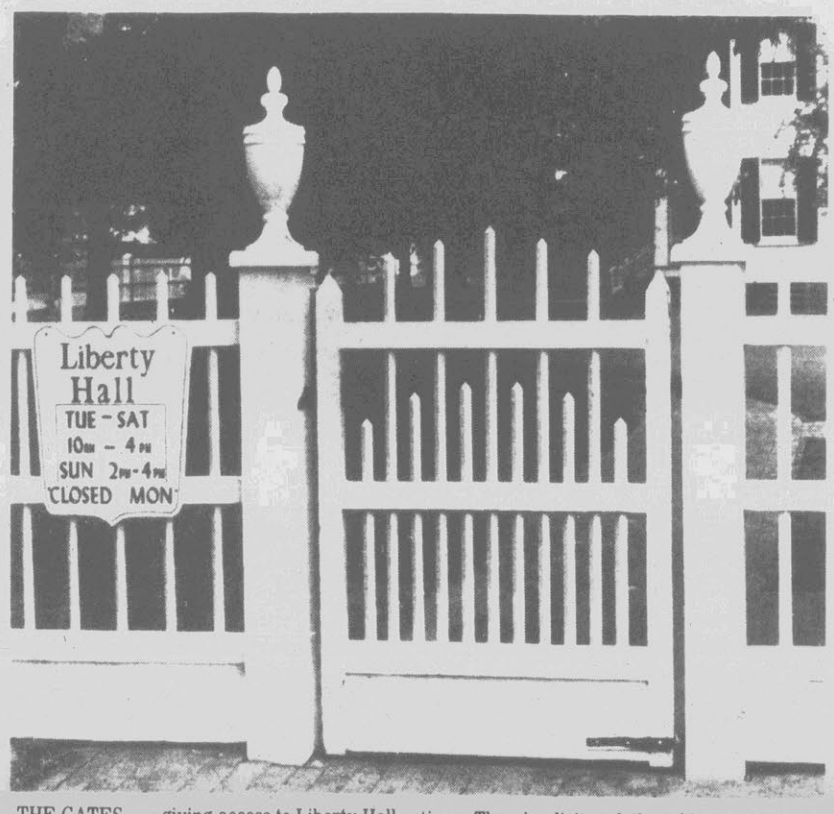

Liberty Hall was built in 1800 by Thomas S. Kenan, son of Revolutionary war hero General James Kenan. Several pieces in the house are from the first Kenan plantation house which was located at nearby Turkey Branch.

One of the happiest events in the history of Liberty Hall was the 1901 wedding of Mary Lily Kenan to Henry Morrison Flagler, an extremely wealthy man from Palm Springs, Florida. Reporters from New York and other large American cities were not permitted to see the wedding which was restricted to family members and close friends. An orchestra was brought in from New York, and the groom arrived by train at the town of Magnolia, 20 miles from Liberty Hall. The train was equipped with special ramps for unloading his horses and carriages used for the journey to Kenansville. The newly wedded couple, after a wedding party, returned by carriage to Magnolia to board the groom's private train for the trip to the Flagler summer estate on Long Island. This chapter in Liberty Hall's history is like a southern fairy tale come true for a lovely belle.

Not Just A Museum

At the time Liberty Hall was restored, hope was expressed that care would be taken that it would not be just another another museum of the past. Nothing, of course, can take the place of a house being an active family home, but Liberty Hall succeeds better than most in giving a feel of continuance even in the absence of the family long associated with the house. Young trees are growing which will eventually take the place of ancient trees when age takes its toll of these giants. Caretakers on the ground cultivating flowers in due season add a nice workmen's touch, and visitors seem more like family friends calling than mere curiosity seekers. The leisurely life styles of the entire 19th century is accentuated by outbuildings necessary for the running of a large household.

The past and the present are pleasantly combined at Liberty Hall in a town that is rich in other fine historic homes, churches and public buildings. Kenansville is also the site of one of North Carolina's history-based outdoor dramas, "The Liberty Cart" which will open for the 1983 season within a few weeks.

THE GATES . . . giving access to Liberty Hall are copies of authentic 18th century gates, which were considered a good design at the time. The simplicity of the white gates and fences are complimentary to the grounds and building.

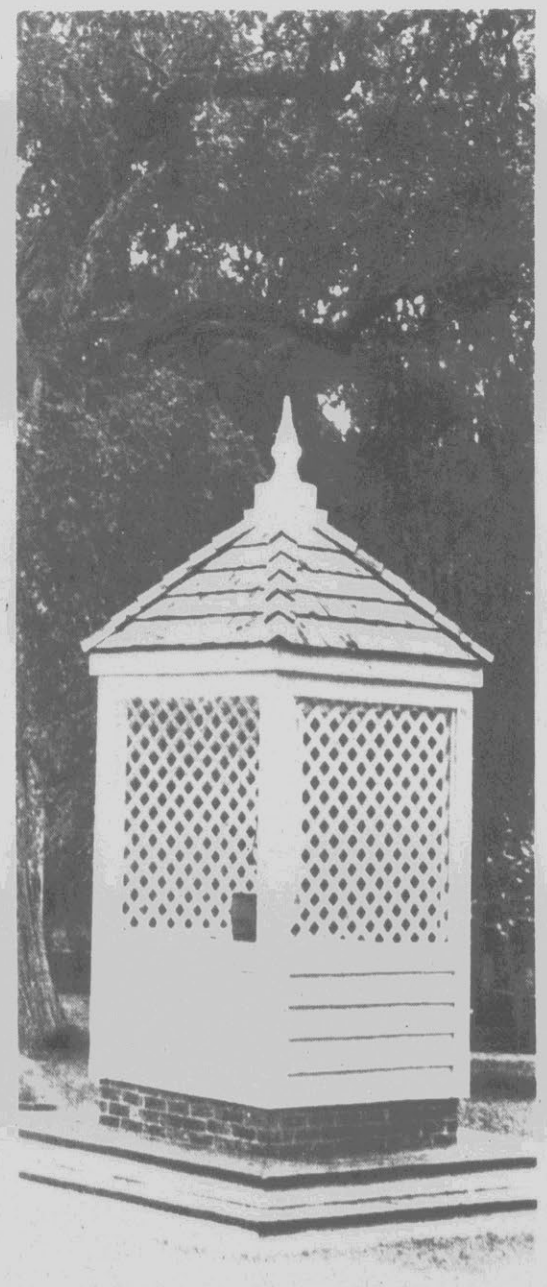

Hours for visiting Liberty Hall are from 10 to 4 Tuesday through Saturday, and from 2-4 Sunday, closed Monday. A nominal fee is charged to tour the house. From Greenville to Kenansville is just over 60 miles. Take N.C. 11 to Kinston, Deep Run, Pink Hill, and Kornegay.

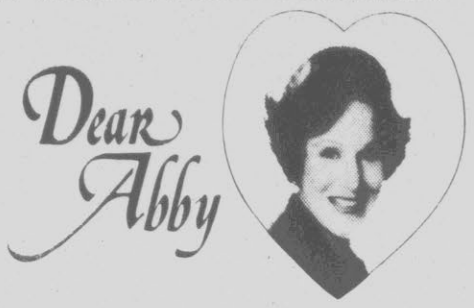

NUMEROUS OUTBUILDINGS . . . on the grounds include this row consisting of, from left, a storage barn, a sheltered washstand, a two section privy, and at the far end, rest rooms for visitors. Other buildings on the ground include an overseers house, a carriage house, a large gazebo and other storage buildings. Hand-fashioned cypress shingles are used on Liberty Hall buildings.

YOUNG TREES . . . in the backyard area behind work buildings give an ambience of continuing growth and natural changes. A low split-rail fence is an authentic touch in dividing areas of the yard.

Aging Mother's Plea Causes Daughter's Heart to Break

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How does one answer the senile elderly nursing home patient who asks, "Why am I here?"

My mother, who is in her late 80s, has been in a small, comfortable nursing facility for almost five years. She is in fairly good physical health, but her mind has been failing for 10 to 15 years.

There are days when she doesn't know me, and nights when she gets up at 2 a.m. to prowl the nursing home searching for her husband who has been dead for five years, but in her more lucid moments, she asks, "Why am I living here with strangers?"

She says she is a "prisoner" and wants to live where she has more freedom. But in order for her to be "free," a still-productive member of the family with other responsibilities would then become the prisoner.

How can I answer my mother? This is the heartbreak of my life.

GETTING OLD MYSELF

DEAR GETTING OLD: An increasing number of people are experiencing the same kind of heartache.

The fact that your mother is confused most of the time indicates that she needs around-the-clock care and attention, and unless you can provide this in your own home, she is much better off in a private nursing facility. (Be glad you can afford it.)

In her more lucid moments, take her in your arms, tell her you love her, and explain honestly that she is where she is because of your concern for her safety.

I know it must be painful to send your mother who has nursed you, fed you and sacrificed for you to "live with strangers," but believe me, in your case, it is the most sensible solution for all concerned, so don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: Last night my 17-year-old daughter came home from a date at 1:15 a.m. She invited her date in and they went to the family room to watch TV.

Knowing she was home for the night, I dropped off to sleep. At 3:30 a.m. I awakened. I went downstairs to turn off the lights and found my daughter and her date sleeping with the TV still on! I woke them up and told them it was 3:30, then I went back to bed, thinking the boy would leave. At 4 a.m. he was still there, so I called my daughter out of the room and sternly told her it was time her date went home. At 4:30, he still had not left, so I went downstairs and calmly said, "I think it's time you went home, young man." I stood right there until he left (a matter of seconds).

Afterward I grounded my daughter for the weekend. Now she is angry with me. She says I "embarrassed" her, and because of me the boy will probably never ask her out again.

Was I wrong? What would you have done, Abby?

MIDWEST MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You were not wrong. I would have done exactly what you did. Only I'd have done it sooner.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 34-year-old divorced woman, raising five children alone. My problem is my 15-year-old daughter. She skips school, lies, smokes and runs away. My other children are well-behaved and abide by my rules, which are not too strict. I've been to counselors, social workers, priests, etc., but nothing seems to help.

I don't know where else to turn. I love this child, but she refuses to cooperate, and I don't want her attitude to rub off on the younger ones. Where can I send her to make her behave?

END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: You can't send a 15-year-old incorrigible child anywhere to "make her behave."

First, to find out whether her anti-social behavior is caused by a medical or emotional disorder, she needs to be examined. If she's healthy and normal, try love.

Let her know that you love her and want to be her friend. Open your arms and your heart, and make her feel secure, worthwhile and loved. Control your anger and disappointment. Be calm and forgiving.

Wipe the slate clean and give your daughter a chance to be her best self. Every child needs love, but those who defy authority and break their mothers' hearts need it even more.

Georgia Offers Scholarships To Keep Doctors

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A new program giving medical scholarships to students who will return to Georgia and practice begins this summer, aimed at providing adequate medical care to 75 Georgia counties where few doctors have located.

The program has a twist — it's open only to students in osteopathy, a relatively new field of medicine which recognizes all accepted methods of treatment, but emphasizes the interdependence of body systems and the importance of the musculoskeletal system.

The General Assembly, after lobbying from the Georgia Osteopathic Medical Association, appropriated $60,000 to be distributed this academic year to students attending osteopathic colleges and agreeing to provide primary medicine in underserved areas.

Georgia has no schools awarding the D.O. — doctor of osteopathic medicine — degree, so students attending five out-of-state schools are eligible for up to $10,000 each, depending on financial need.

Dr. David A. Rearick, a Cobb County osteopathic physician who is chairman of the GOMA's Public Information and Education Committee, said the idea was born of concern on the part of his colleagues.

"It's just a desire ... to get funding for students who want to pursue osteopathic medicine as a career, and get them to come back and practice in the state of Georgia," Rearick said, noting that 75 of Georgia's 159 counties have been designated medically underserved by the state.

Sixty-eight counties have fewer than five primary care doctors, and 13 have no physician at all, he said.

"The desire is to support primary care medicine," he said. "We were very fortunate to get the bill passed."

Osteopathic students are more likely to become primary care providers, Rearick said. Figures released by the American Osteopathic Association show that while 45 percent of M.D.s are in primary care, 90 percent of D.O.s are.

Scholarship competition is open to Georgia students already accepted at one of the five designated schools. There are 16 osteopathic colleges nationwide, but several are state-supported institutions requiring residency there for attendance, Rearick said. The program goes into effect July 1, so students in school this fall will be eligible.

The scholarships are awarded by a committee of several representatives from the Osteopathic Medical Association, with amounts determined by financial need.

For each year a student receives scholarship money, he must practice a year in an underserved area of Georgia, according to the terms of the awards. If he does not, he has to pay the money back, Rearick said.

In terms of medical school tuition, $60,000 is not going to help a multitude of medical students — possibly as few as six, under the rules of the awards. But when you consider those 13 counties with no doctors at all, Rearick said, the program could have significant impact.

Also, those areas are turning out to be good places to set up a practice, he said, noting that competition is less intense.

"The medically underserved areas are where a lot of doctors are going to be heading. It's important to bring students back to the state, where they're needed the most," he said.

The underserved areas are mostly rural, but some urban downtown areas across the state are also lacking in medical care, and students wanting to practice there are also eligible for financial help, Rearick said.

For Some, Poverty War Has Been Fought, Lost

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Every night at two emergency shelters in this Sun Belt city, 500 homeless people bathe in a loaned National Guard shower, then go to sleep on borrowed cots. Every day they survive on donated food.

They sell their blood to buy booze and cigarettes, and sometimes search for jobs that aren't there.

For them, the war on poverty and despair has been fought and lost in the streets and unemployment lines.

Every city in America has homeless people. They are hurriedly passed in the daylight and avoided in the dark. The label "homeless" means sleeping on the ground or the hard concrete of a sidewalk; being dirty with no place to get clean; being sick with no insurance or money to buy medicine; having no place to lay your sleepy child's head; having no kitchen or food to cook in it, and having no front door to lock.

The National Conference of Mayors estimates the number of homeless in the United States is 2 million. The federal government doesn't have any exact figures. The National Coalition for the Homeless, a year-old federation of individuals, agencies and organizations representing 40 cities and headquartered in New York, puts the homeless at between 500,000 and 2 million citizens.

— St. Louis, the Rev. Larry Rice, head of the New Life Evangelistic Center, estimates 20,000 people are without homes;

— Denver, the Salvation Army's Gerald Koch believes at least 1,000 are homeless;

— San Francisco, Brad Paul of the Central City Shelter Network puts that city's homeless at between 8,000 and 10,000;

— Cleveland, the Federation for Community Planning estimates 800 to 1,000 are homeless;

— New York City, charity officials believe the number of homeless in the nation's largest city could run as high as 36,000.

Social workers in Phoenix say that about 30 percent of that city's homeless are hardcore alcoholics, another 25 percent are chronically mentally ill with no place to go. The rest appear to be men, women, and even entire families, just down on their luck.

"The information coming to us is that the homeless population is not the standard stereotype of the single, urban-based person," says Amy Haus, an editor of the Coalition for the Homeless newsletter.

"We are seeing a lot more families, and getting increasing reports of problems in rural areas. It's hard to get a handle on the problem because nobody is keeping statistics."

The U.S. Census Bureau, the ultimate national record keeper, says it won't have homeless statistics compiled until at least December.

"We are tabulating our information gathered from the 1980 census questionnaires on a priority basis, and that is a lower priority," says spokeswoman Arlene Saluter. "The only numbers we have now are from the 1970 census, and I'm afraid those are out of date."

Congress held hearings on the growing national problem last December and authorized $100 million to help feed and shelter the homeless when it passed its emergency jobs bill in March.

Rep. Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn., is cosponsor of a measure in the House of Representatives allocating another $100 million in 1984. His bill also would appropriate $760 million to help prevent mortgage foreclosures against people who've lost their jobs.

Round-Clock Work Yields Church In Short Time

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

REEDLEY, Calif. (AP) — A commercial church construction project normally takes three to four months. Jehovah's Witnesses in Reedley recently built their church in two days.

The church has 248 maroon upholstered theater seats, gray carpet on a sloped floor, brick on two exterior walls and landscaping supported by 300 tons of topsoil.

The Reedley church's English and Spanish congregations got the idea for quick construction from a Colorado group that has built 150 such halls.

Francis Newby, a tile contractor and building committee member, was convinced it was a good idea when he saw one built quickly last August in Stockton.

The Reedley group started to plan before Christmas by sending questionnaires to 102 congregations from Bakersfield to Modesto asking what kind of tradespeople were church members.

The round-the-clock project involved 400 construction workers, attracted about 3,000 participants and curiosity seekers and produced a 5,000-square-foot Kingdom Hall, Newby said.

Lane Jenkins of San Francisco, a former Boston Patriot football player, offered to set up a chicken and ribs barbecue.

A Dutch architect who saw the project in progress on television came to the construction site because he wanted to see how it worked.

Newby estimates it would have cost $2 million if the two congregations had had to buy the three-acre lot and have a church built the normal way.

The volunteer labor was worth about $500,000, and building supplies cost $95,000, not including donated materials, he said.

The church paid overtime for three Fresno County building inspectors who normally would have the weekend off.

"The church people were excellent, very cooperative. Everything met the code requirements," said Richard Melton, director of the county Resources and Development Department. "They were exceptionally well organized in order to do this."

Occasional showers posed a problem laying concrete. Newby said cement was poured and cured with people holding vinyl sheets over the strips to keep the rain out.

Walls went up in 15 minutes, followed by electrical wiring, sheet rock, insulation, trusses, siding, brickwork, roof sheeting, roof tile and landscaping.

Wood trim was painted before installation to cut down on interior work time.

"The young ones, children up to the older ones, they all had a hand in it," Newby said. "There was a job for everyone if they wanted to work. We'd hand them a paintbrush or have them pick up trash."

Q. A neighbor told me that a saucer of beer could be used as a trap for slugs. Is this true? I have always had trouble with slugs eating my strawberries. (D.M., Margarettsville)

A. You can partially control slugs if you place shallow dishes of beer in the vicinity of infested plants. Some species will crawl into the beer and drown. Adding flour will make the beer a stickier, more effective trap.

Q. Are yellow tomatoes less acidic and less nutricious than red tomatoes? (L.P., Jamestown)

A. Actually, some yellow tomatoes are more acidic than red varieties. Often when seed catalogues describe a tomato as a "low acid" variety, they mean that the variety has a higher sugar content and therefore tastes less acid or acidic. Also, tomato acidity can vary with the amount of sunlight the plant receives, the location of the fruit on the plant, and the degree of ripeness. However, all tomato varieties grown in North Carolina are acidic enough for canning. There is no significant nutritional difference between ripe tomatoes of either yellow or red varieties. Though the nutritional value of the tomato is not particularly high, they rank first in total contribution of 10 vitamins and minerals to the U.S. diet because they are so heavily consumed.

Q. Does poison oak or poison ivy have five leaflets? (I.M., Statesville)

A. Neither. Virginia creeper, a harmless member of the grape family, has leaves divided into five leaflets and is sometimes mistaken for poison ivy. Poison ivy has threee leaflets, but the plant can be a master of disguises. The three leaflets can have edges that are smooth, toothed or lobed. The leaflets may range in size from two to seven inches long and up to three inches wide. Even the plants vary, ranging from small plants to trailing shrubs to large, erect shrubs to woody vines. Poison ivy flowers from May to late June. The small, yellowish flowers grow in clusters in the leaf axils. Waxy, white berries are present from August to November. Poison oak looks much like poison ivy. It also has leaves divided into three leaflets and white berries. The chance of getting poison ivy or poison oak is highest in the spring when the leaf tissue is tender and easily bruised.

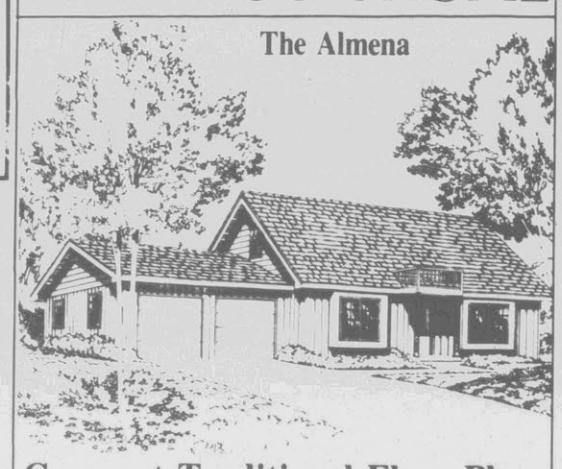

Q. How short should fescue be cut? (O.J., Charlotte)

A. Fescue should be kept about two or three inches high.

Let One Room Serve For More To Solve Problems With Space

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Having less space and wanting to do more with it seem to be characteristics of today's homes and homeowners.

Few individuals, for example, have separate guest rooms. Yet, entertaining at home and having overnight guests are as popular as — or more popular than — they ever have been. The solution to the space dilemma is to make one room or area do the work of several.

"People are discovering the concept of multipurpose rooms that function as a den or office one day and can be turned into temporary guest rooms another," says one home furnishings authority.

"We see more people planning for multipurpose rooms by purchasing furniture such as sleep sofas, armoires and wall units that can accommodate both personal possessions and guests' belongings," adds Harley F. Shuford Jr., president of Century Furniture Co.

Shuford said the furniture industry was more aware of the need for furniture do perform several functions. As a result, building more shelf or drawer storage into common furniture pieces such as tables, chests and desks has become a priority.

Those shopping for new furniture will find many pieces offer extras in the way of storage or convertibility. For example, small portable bunching tables instead of a large cocktail table easily lift or roll out of the way when a convertible sofa is opened into a bed. Besides adding extra shelves to side tables, manufacturers have also produced more chests which incorporate closed storage in a piece suitable for use next to a sofa.

Some householders are lucky enough to have a separate — albeit small — room which can be adapted for the use of guests. Often, the room serves as a study or home office as well. The difficulty in furnishing it is to make the small space function successfully for both day-to-day use and guests.

A room designed by Garcia McMaster and Biddle in a recent New York City decorator showhouse offered many useful ideas. The small 9-by-16-foot room, which the New York design firm converted into a bedroom-study, is a good example of ways to expand small space and get the most use out of it.

They started by mirroring one wall, then painting the rest of the room in a pale neutral beige. Next, a single bed was placed in the center of the room and backed with a custom-made desk which also served as a headboard. A chest at the bed's foot held a concealed television set. A few large accessories completed the room in which the bed functioned as both lounge seating and a sleep surface.

The monotone color scheme, use of space expanding mirrors, simplicity of design, the elimination of fussy accessories, and the use of dual purpose furniture are ways by which anyone can make the most of available space, according to the designers.

Not everyone suffers from lack of space. In Texas, spacious, separate guest rooms are typical in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, says Gerald Tomlin, a Dallas designer.

Another client has lunch served daily to guests who may drop in unannounced, even when she is not at home. When she is in, she is always attended by at least one sleepover guest.

Tomlin's less well-to-do clients often outfit a room that serves as a home office or media room so it can accommodate sleep-overs.

He says the amount of space allotted is less important than making a visitor feel comfortable and welcome, noting "It is the little thoughtful things that show them they are welcome."

These thoughtful gestures include:

—Lacking air conditioning, provide a small electric fan in summer. In winter, a comforter or knitted throw will take the chill off.

—Provide enough hangers for skirts, pants and jackets.

—Put out a notepad and pen or pencil and provide a large wastepaper basket for the guest's use.

—Extra pillows, current magazines, newspapers and several paperback books are also thoughtful gestures.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

How large is your home? If it's a single-family, detached house and was built last year, it's about 1,520 square feet, down from almost 1,900 square feet in 1978. And its probable cost of $70,000 was more than five times what it would have been just five years ago.

If current trends continue, says M. Leanne Lachman, president of Real Estate Research Corp., American homes will shrink even more in the years ahead. By 1990, she believes, taking into consideration both houses and condominiums, 1,200 square feet will have to suffice.

Architect Herman York, on the other hand, thinks the overall sizes of houses in the next seven years will stay pretty much as they are. "But," he adds, "there will be some changes in the way the space is distributed. Bedrooms may be smaller, but bathrooms will stay about the same, while living areas will get a bit larger. There will be more of what already is taking place — the flowing into each other of living rooms and dining rooms to make one big room."

Architects and builders are offering a variety of designs today to make houses seem larger than they are. Sloping ceilings make rooms with little floor space seem larger. Skylights, windows above eye level and light-colored walls accentuate this effect. "We take rooms that historically have been shut off as caverns, the kitchen and breakfast rooms, and try to open them up," says Barry Berkus of Santa Barbara, Calif., whose company designs living spaces as small as 650 square feet.

Sir Lawrie Barratt, who has brought downsized concepts over from Britain, is offering one-bedroom condominiums with a mere 494 square feet in the San Francisco Bay area. In the Philadelphia suburb of Treddyffrin Township, builder Arthur Stein has marketed 1,100 square-foot townhouses which have accounted for more than half the sales in a project where other houses are considerably larger.

Appliance manufacturers are also adapting. Combination appliances are more common, with one manufacturer offering a 4-cubic-foot refrigerator, microwave oven and two-burner cooktop all in one unit.

The trend away from bigness may continue even if conditions change and homes become more affordable, says Ms. Lachman. Most American households, she thinks, don't need that much space. "The baby boom generation," she says, "has not followed its parents' example of marrying young, buying a home in the suburbs and starting a family. The declining birth rate means fewer people per household and, in turn, a reduced demand for household space."

Many areas of the country, seeing the move toward smaller houses, are adopting new zoning restrictions that require a minimum square footage. It's usually somewhere in the neighborhod of 1,000 square feet, although the more affluent places, which often have two-acre land minimums, will sometimes specify that the habitable area inside the house must be at least 2,000 square feet.

One of the problems is that builders make less money on smaller houses and therefore are more reluctant to build them. Many, however, have come to the conclusion it's a lot better to build and sell numerous smaller houses than build and don't sell a lesser number of larger homes.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — Whenever I have had to sand a painted surface or one likely to clog the sandpaper in the past, I have used flint, since it is cheap and can be thrown away when it gets too clogged. However, I have just bought a power sander and intend to use it for all my sanding. Is there any sandpaper that works best with a power sander when doing the kind of sanding I just mentioned?

A. — While you did not specify which type of power sander you have, the chances are that you should use aluminum oxide paper for tough tasks. It not only is effective, but it lasts longer than other abrasives.

Q. — I plan to build a cabinet for my home workshop. I have some quarter-inch plywood left over from a previous project. Is it all right to use that for the cabinet?

A. — No, not alone. You will need some solid wood or perhaps heavier plywood for the frame, to which you can attach the quarter-inch plywood.

Q. — I soon will be working with armored cable, the kind that has the wires inside it. How is this cable cut?

A. — With a hacksaw. You have to work very carefully to avoid cutting into the insulation covering around the wire. When you use the hacksaw, hold it at an angle while cutting across the cable, which generally is known as BX cable.

Q. — When I cut inch-and-a-quarter holes in solid wood can I use a brace? I do not have an electric drill.

A. — If you do much drilling, you should have an electric drill, which makes the work a lot easier. But in the absence of it, a brace will do very well for 1¼-inch holes. You can buy a so-called spade bit for that size hole or an expansive bit, which includes 1¼-inch holes among its adjustable sizes.

Q. — In making shelves, I was told to use boards. I looked it up in the dictionary, but the definition was not precise enough. Exactly what does "board" mean to somebody working in a lumber yard?

A. — The word is used loosely, but it actually means a piece of wood that is less than 2 inches thick and more than 3 inches wide. For shelves, for instance, you might require boards which are 1 inch by 10 inches. You must remember, however, that these are the dimensions before the wood is finished at the mill. A 1-by-10 board is really only three-fourths of an inch by 9¼ inches.

Q. — What is the purpose of sanding between coats of varnish? If the first coat is smooth and without imperfections, it seems it would be better to apply the second coat without disturbing it.

A. — For one thing, tiny imperfections are sometimes difficult to spot with the naked eye, although after some experience you will be able to run your fingers over the finish and determine whether it is smooth. For another, the second coat will adhere a bit better if the first coat is slightly sanded. And for still another, if you are using glossy varnish, the second coat does not cling as well on a glossy surface.

Q. — You recently told how to remove hardened candle wax from the top of a dining room table. You said to place an ice cube on the wax until it softens a bit, then scrape it off with a dull knife, holding the blade as horizontal as possible to prevent scratching the wood. I have found a "tool" that is very helpful and non-abrasive for removing the wax. Here it is. (Enclosed was a plastic price tag sometimes used in a supermarket or grocery store giving the price per pound of the food article plus the cost of a single item.)

A. — Many thanks.

Farm Becomes Living 'School'

RED WING, Colo. (AP) — The day begins at first light here on the Malachite Small Farm School, spreading dawn from peak to peak of the surrounding Sangre de Cristo Mountains.

The sound of children's feet and voices as they awaken, the distant call of cattle, the bleating of a newborn lamb, the song of a bird, all play an easy counterpoint to the relentless, howling wind.

It is the dream of the Mace family to transform 400 acres of land on the Huerfano River valley floor into a self-sustaining farm school to "teach people to be more in touch with their surroundings."

"For us to thrive and blossom as humans, we have to become more responsible for our actions, to eat the kind of food we should, to live closer to the earth," explains Gayle Mace, serving fresh bread and homemade yogurt to her two youngsters in the spacious kitchen of a 100-year-old adobe farmhouse.

About 75 people, from summer students to seasonal helpers, spend time each year at the Malachite Farm.

There is no classroom at the farm school. Instead, students — and employees — learn how to mend fences, weld their own tools, churn butter, grow herbs, tend the barnyard animals, harvest honey and gather hay with an old-fashioned hayloader hitched to Belgian draft horses.

Kent Mace, 28, says he doesn't believe in tractors because "there's no love for the earth if it's under your tractor wheels."

The family follows an idealistic, spiritual bent, but no formal religion is imposed on those who come to the Malachite farm.

"Mine is a real, spiritual interest, but I believe the less said, the better," Mace says. "The best thing you can do is provide an environment where a person can grow, to provide them with love, appreciation, good food and something to do."

To a skeptic, these notions border on fantasy. But in this tranquil, orderly environment, they have found a home.

Inmates' Suits Are Jamming Dockets For Federal Courts

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — With complaints ranging from unsatisfactory haircuts to poor medical attention and beatings by guards, prison inmates are jamming the federal courts with civil rights lawsuits.

Court officials see no end to the escalating litigation, which accounts for almost 10 percent of all civil suits filed in the United States last year even though inmates comprise less than two-tenths of 1 percent of the population.

More than 1,000 such suits are pending in the Middle District of Florida, which next to the Eastern District of Virginia had more inmate civil rights suits filed in 1982 than any other district in the country, officials say.

About 800 are in the Jacksonville division, home of a vast prison complex including 1,200-inmate Florida State Prison and Union Correctional Institution, the state's largest facility with 2,600 prisoners.

Some suits date back more than a decade. Almost 200 have been filed this year in Jacksonville alone.

"We received a dead rat in the mail the other day. He (the inmate) thought that his cell was rodent-infested and this was supposed to be proof," said one of two full-time staff attorneys assigned by the court clerk to process the avalanche of inmate lawsuits in Jacksonville.

The clerk didn't want his name used for fear that he would be named as a defendant in a lawsuit.

Most often the defendants are prison guards, wardens and Corrections Department officials, although top state officials are sometimes named.

One of the nation's leading litigants is Clovis Carl Green Jr., who as an inmate in Missouri, filed more than 500 cases in his own behalf from 1972 to 1979, court documents show.

Frank Elijah Smith II, an inmate at Florida State Prison, claimed in a suit filed March 24 that he was a victim of "barber malpractice" because he was not given the grooming to which he was accustomed. Smith did not specify damages.

Rufus E. Hampton, another FSP inmate, claimed he fell and cut his eye and was not given proper medical attention. He seeks $500 million.

Others claimed inhumane treatment, that they were forced to shave against their religion, that their mail was withheld, or that they were placed in a cell not fit to live in. One claimed there was a conspiracy to kill him to prevent him from filing lawsuits.

Some inmates are suing because they claim they have been denied access to the courts. The staff attorney in the Jacksonville court said that could reflect a problem as simple as being denied enough paper on which to write their petitions.

More than 10,000 habeas corpus petitions were filed across the country last year by prisoners claiming they were being held illegally, said Wendy Jennis, staff attorney with the clerk's division of the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts in Washington.

There were 18,000 civil rights suits filed by inmates in 1982, compared to 223,581 civil suits filed last year in the country, she said.

"It's continuing to escalate really, and I'm not sure of what the answer to it is," said U.S. District Judge Howell W. Melton, the chief judge in the Jacksonville division.

Melton said there is no way to estimate how much it costs to handle the lawsuits. "It's a tremendous expense," he said.

"It's a difficult thing to determine," said Ron Lauve of the General Accounting Office in Washington.

The GAO has undertaken a study of the problem to determine what can be done.

"We're several months away from a report," Lauve said.

There are several explanations for the increase in inmate suits. Florida's prison population, now about 26,000, doubled in the last decade. Some officials speculate that the inmates have little else to do but file lawsuits.

"The inmates have gotten more expertise in filing them," Melton said, adding there's no doubt some inmates abuse the system.

As a result, he said, "that abuses the rights of others that have a right to be heard.

"Many people have grievances that really don't rise to a constitutional level," the judge said. "Many of these are legitimate grievances. There are so many things that really could be negotiated on a local level."

Several states have experimented with trying to settle inmate complaints before they reach the courts. Virginia has the only system that has been certified by the federal courts, Ms. Jennis said.

For the past year, The Florida Bar has operated an Inmate Grievance Procedure Pilot Project, in which volunteer lawyers act as factfinders to arbitrate inmate grievances in three state prisons.

The Corrections Department is considering whether to continue or expand the program.

Charles Bethel, an attorney with the Center for Community Justice in Washington, told The Bar earlier this year that there is no solid evidence than an inmate grievance project affects the amount of litigation.

The Florida Bar Journal noted in its April issue that some inmates were unaware an outside arbitrator would hear their complaints. Others distrust the system, and some are determined to file lawsuits to begin with, the Journal noted.

Statue Of Liberty, After 97 Years, Is In Need Of Dress

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A century after she crossed the Atlantic in 85 wooden packing crates; 59 years after she was declared a national monument; six years after Vietnam veterans occupied her overnight; three years after Iranian students chained themselves to her base; two years after a man clambered onto her crown to launch his campaign for mayor, one year after French feminists demanded she be returned because the ERA had failed, the Statue of Liberty needs a new dress.

Small wonder.

Miss Liberty has held up her torch since Grover Cleveland was president. Now, 15 presidents later, she's in danger of dropping it.

All that snow, sleet and sun, all that acid rain and pollution, have corroded her insides and weakened her skin. The arm that holds the torch may have to be amputated and rebuilt; the foundation, the elevator and the 171-step spiral staircase need repairs.

Already, pieces of the torch and hand are washing up on nearby beaches. Climbing the stairs all the way to the torch is too dangerous; tourists now are stopped at the crown.

Without repairs, the entire statue soon could be declared off limits to the 1.8 million visitors who annually board boats at the tip of Manhattan and chug across New York Harbor to Liberty Island.

Unthinkable.

And so, in a Park Avenue office building, a government-appointed commission is trying to raise $230 million to restore the statue and her crumbling harbor-mate, Ellis Island.

At the helm are two fund-raising experts: Lee Iacocca, chairman of the board of Chrysler Corp., and J. Paul Bergmoser, a former Chrysler president and a 30-year veteran of the Ford Motor Co., who put aside his golf clubs and retirement to organize the campaign.

Plans of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission call for the campaign to be beamed into the nation's living rooms during prime television time via Liberty Centennial Moments, made-for-TV movies, documentaries and entertainment specials.

The hoopla will begin in earnest early next year, and will continue through 1986, the statue's 100th birthday.

The actual repairs, which may require periodic closings of the statue over the course of a year, are to be finished by July 4, 1986, and celebrated with tall ships in New York Harbor, parades and fireworks.

The 100th birthday of Ellis Island, the 27½-acre "Isle of Tears" through which 17 million immigrants entered the United States, will be celebrated in 1992 with the opening of its refurbished buildings and a new museum.

While the campaign is still in its infancy, Bergmoser says donations already are pouring in, as the result of a test mailing of 40,000. He won't disclose the total, but he says children are at the forefront.

That campaign a century ago got off to a sluggish start. It picked up after Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of The World, lambasted New York's millionaires for their tight-fistedness, pointing out that failure to provide Liberty with a landing place would be "an irrevocable disgrace."

This time around, Pulitzer would be proud. Among the proceeds so far: $43 from a cookie, candy and cupcake sale at Sharpsville Prairie Elementary School in Tipton, Ind.; $113.30 from a Valentine's Day refreshment sale at Dwight D. Eisenhower Middle School in Freehold, N.J., and $200 from a balloon, toy and greeting card sale at Gales Ferry School in New London, Conn.

"Dear Statue of Liberty," wrote a West Salem, Ore., first-grader named Greg: "We know that you're breaking. I sent 14 cents."

But it will take more than pennies to get the job done. Frederic Auguste Bartholdi's famous sculpture, "Liberty Enlightening the World," stands 151 feet and wears 200,000 pounds of hand-hammered copper. Her foundation, engineered by Alexandre Eiffel of Tower fame, consists of 2,000 iron bars weighing 35,000 pounds.

Over time, the copper sheets have thinned and the iron bars have corroded. The statue, which cost $400,000 to build, will cost $39 million to restore.

Repairs to Ellis Island will cost three times as much. The island was vacated by the government in 1954 and turned over to the National Park Service in 1965. A few buildings were cleaned up before being opened to the public in 1976, but many more have been deteriorating.

The federal government won't be helping to foot the bill. "President Reagan thinks people will get more knowledge of what this is all about if the money is raised by the people, and I agree," says Bergmoser, a Republican.

He hopes to raise $30 million from private citizens, $55 million from small corporations, $45 million from foundations and the rest, $100 million, from big corporate givers.

CRYPTOQUIP 5-28

LNA, MIUWDPBZUA NDU SL GPMU—LUUFL WBIFUZ GMLSIULL.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: TWO POTATOES ENDED SPAT—NOW SEE EYE TO EYE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals E.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Firemen Monitor Blood

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Ask the chief what makes a firefighter keep chasing flames, and he'll tell you the job gets in your blood. Chief Ray Jacks wants to make sure his crew's blood doesn't boil.

Crew members lined up recently, rolled up their sleeves, stretched out their arms and watched while a registered nurse and an emergency medical technician measured their blood pressure.

Most of the 77 tested were fine, but Jacks said two had levels high enough to require bed rest or medical attention. Each week, the EMT checks others with slightly high or borderline blood pressure. Jacks said in a recent telephone interview. He said he hoped to establish a routine program of checking all firefighters.

Heart attacks, the chief said, are the No. 1 killer of firefighters. According to statistics from the International Association of Fire Fighters, heart attacks are responsible for almost half of the deaths in the line of duty. The association says there are 58 deaths per 100,000 firefighters compared to 23 for police officers.

"If you find the high blood pressure and treat it, you prevent heart attack, strokes, diseases like that," said Sue Love, a registered nurse with Professional Home Health Care of Pine Bluff, who administered the tests.

"I think it is very necessary," Jacks said of the checkups. His two sons, both doctors, encouraged the testing. "I talked it over with my staff, and they all agreed," he said. He didn't know of any other routine testing programs in Arkansas fire departments.

"I couldn't believe it," Lunsford said by telephone recently. "I had her check it again. My high side was in good shape, but my low pressure was up. I'm working on it."

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Every spring I get sewing fever. I envision Meg and Zachary in dozens of charming creations designed to dazzle the eye of the beholder. I make lists of our wardrobe needs. I ride the fabric store circuit with the zeal of an itinerant evangelist. I really do intend to convert my numerous purchases into objects of beauty.

Unfortunately, only after I get these purchases home do I begin to envision the backache, the strained eyes, and the undulating seams emblematic of my sewing efforts. So the sewing machine, like the ironing board, retains its status as quasi-functional art, always either in full view or draped with the casulties of Meg's excessively exuberant play but rarely in use for more than five minutes at a time. The fabric is stuffed into drawers and closets, under beds, and behind my typewriter.

One would think that this glut of material would eventually serve to deter me from my spring pursuits, but it does not. I just know that someday I'll use it, if not for my children then for my grandchildren, providing that it doesn't dry-rot first.

Although I rarely get the urge to refine my talents as a seamstress, I do occasionally attempt to expand them. This spring, for instance, I decided to take a smocking course. Phillip merely rolled his eyes at the prospect of taking care of the children for three consecutive Monday night while I learned to make rows of smocking closely resembling the Tennessee roads, hairpin curves, potholes and all.

Not at all daunted by the dubious quality of my needlework, I made the rounds of all the smocking shops seeking inspiration. I found just that. Within the space of two hours, I had purchased enough material to deprive us of food for several weeks.

Phillip groaned when informed over dinner of my purchases. "You must have spent a fortune on patterns alone," he complained.

He jabbed at his Kraft's macaroni and cheese. "Four dollars for a picture of the top back of a sundress is not expensive; it's ridiculous. And the idea of smocking playclothes for Meg is even more ludicrous."

I decided that from there on out I would be more circumspect in discussing my expenditures. "But everything was so cute," I tried to explain. "I just couldn't resist. You should have seen the baby clothes. They made me want another little girl."

Meg, who had been taking all this in and who obviously doesn't learn from experience, looked around hopefully. "Are you talking about having another child?"

"Only theoretically," I assured her.

"But," she hesitated, "in the way of sex, couldn't it be arranged?"

Proclamation Is Challenged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another lawsuit has been filed challenging President Reagan's proclamation of 1983 as the "Year of the Bible," claiming violation of the First Amendment's prohibition of the establishment of religion.

Reagan's proclamation came in response to a joint House-Senate resolution asking him to do so.

The volcanic cloud caused by the 1982 eruptions of Mexico's El Chichon was the largest observed in the Northern Hemisphere in seven decades. To find its equal, one would have to go back to the 1912 eruption of Katmai in Alaska.

ARE YOU LIVING WITH A THIEF?

Eleven million Americans are. Even worse, five million of them don't know it. Because they've got diabetes, which steals your energy and can even take years from your life. With its complications, diabetes is the third leading cause of death by disease in the country.

Sometimes there are warning signs such as excessive thirst, chronic fatigue, itchy skin and changes in weight. But more often there are no noticeable symptoms. So if you're over 40 and overweight, or if you have a relative with diabetes, consult your doctor. And make sure you watch DIABETES: UPDATE '83 on Cable Health Network. It's an eight-hour informathon with a toll-free number (1-800-232-4242) with doctors standing by to answer your questions. And information that could save your life.

DIABETES: UPDATE '83 is produced in cooperation with the American Diabetes Association.

Former champs ready for Indy

ABC Sports will present coverage of the Indianapolis "500," the greatest auto race in the world, Sunday, May 29 (9 p.m.-midnight). 1983 marks the 13th year the network has broadcast the race, with last year's coverage winning four Emmy Awards. Sportscaster Jim McKay will again anchor the reporting from "The Old Brickyard," with commentators Jackie Stewart (a three-time World Driving Champion), Sam Posey (a past competitor), Bill Fleming and Chris Economaki.

Last year, in the closest race in Indy history, Gordon Johncock held off Rick Mears to win by just .16 of a second. Johncock averaged 162.019 miles per hour in the second fastest Indy ever, a shade slower than Mark Donohue's record setting 162.962 in 1972. The exciting finish overshadowed the starting line collision that knocked four drivers out of the race, including former champion Mario Andretti and Kevin Cogan, the second fastest qualifier, and forced the start to be postponed by nearly an hour.

There were 93 entrants for the 1983 race, lured by the prestige that goes with a win at Indy and prize money which last year topped the $2 million mark for the first time. However, when the race starts the field will have been cut to 33. A crowd of more than 300,000 racing fans is expected at storied Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the 67th running of the race.

A.J. Foyt, Al Unser, Johnny Rutherford and Johncock, with 12 wins at Indy among them, head the list of six former Indy champions entered this year.

Foyt, the only four-time winner (1961, 1964, 1967, 1977) in history, has been in the starting line-up for 25 consecutive years. Rutherford won in 1974, 1976 and 1980, while Unser wore the crown in 1970, 1971 and 1978.

For the 13th consecutive year ABC will present exclusive coverage of the "Indianapolis 500." Last year's exciting race, won by Gordon Johncock, also won four Emmy awards for ABC. Jim McKay heads the broadcast team for the Sunday, May 29 race.

Football cost Renko teeth

"One of the guys on the other team told me, 'I'm going to knock your teeth down your throat!,'" said Haig. "Well, as a center, you don't have a lot of protection for your face with one hand on the ball. And sure enough, after one play, he slugged me under the face mask — and my teeth were on the ground below."

A Bet Pays Off

"I was a radio disc jockey at the time, playing baseball with some buddies who were also D.J.'s, when the name of a top agent came up," said Eubanks. "My friend bet me five dollars I couldn't get this guy to give me the time of day, so I walked over, introduced myself and asked if he'd represent me.

"He said O.K. Three days later I won the bet — and the job of hosting a new game show called 'The Newlywed Game.'"

Know Thyself

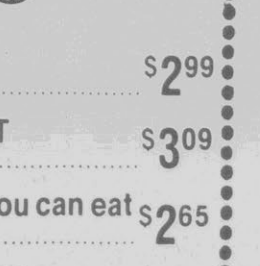

Mr. T, star of "The A-Team," said, "I never allow myself to get into those uptight situations where some drunk might want to challenge you...I know who I am, and I don't have to prove it to anyone, anytime."

Soaps get keepsakes

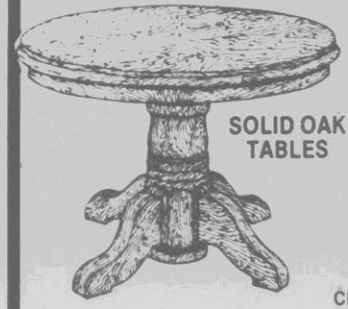

By Nancy M. Reichardt

If you're a fan of "Days of Our Lives" or "The Young and the Restless," you'll be happy to know that there's a new line of official keepsakes available for both of these popular shows from the merchandising company "Puppytracks."

"Puppytracks" is the brain child of Andrea Hall-Lovell (whom you will remember as Samantha Evans on "DOOL" until her character was "killed off" last summer. In fact, it was her character's demise that prompted Andrea (who is the twin sister of Deidre Hall who portrays Marlena Evans-Brady on "DOOL") to venture into the field of merchandising. After many months of hard work and negotiations with Corday Productions and Columbia Industries Inc., Andrea was granted a license to market her line of keepsakes.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I watched the miniseries "The Thorn Birds" and was interested in the two main characters, Meggie (Rachel Ward) and Father Ralph (Richard Chamberlain). I would like as much information on them as you can give me. FRANTIC FAN, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO A FRANTIC FAN IN FAYETTEVILLE: Richard Chamberlain was born March 31, 1935 in Beverly Hills, California. He is one of America's most accomplished actors on stage and screen. Chamberlain, whose performance in the highly rated "Shogun" garnered him a Golden Globe from Hollywood's Foreign Press Association, at first wanted to become an artist. Participation in college theatrical productions, however, led him to change professional direction, although he continues to maintain his skill as a painter and has, in addition, taken to making his own stained-glass windows. Richard served a stint with the U.S. Army in Korea, where he earned his sergeant's stripes. A bachelor, he maintains homes in Los Angeles, New York and Hawaii, and divides his time among them. Athletic, he keeps fit for more strenuous roles by horseback riding, surfing, and playing tennis. I suggest you write to him in c/o ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067. They will forward his fan mail. Rachel Ward captured one of the most sought-after roles in recent Hollywood history when she was signed to play the fiery Meggie Cleary in "The Thorn Birds." She made her acting debut in a low-budget feature, "Night School," and followed with another small feature, "Three Blind Mice." It was late in 1980, though, when Burt Reynolds cast her in "Sharkey's Machine," that her acting career took off. The role of the high-priced prostitute won her a series of rave reviews, and she followed almost immediately with a starring part in "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid," starring Steve Martin. Shortly after completing that film, she was tested with Richard Chamberlain for "The Thorn Birds." The eldest of three children born to Peter and Claire Ward, the dark-eyed beauty grew up on her family's farmland near the village of Chipping-Norton, England, a two-hour drive from London. Along with the highly coveted role of Meggie, Rachel also won co-star Byron Brown (Luke), who portrayed her husband. Byron, one of Australia's best-known actors, fell in love while filming and they were recently married at her family's estate in England. I suggest you write to them in c/o ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

DEAR MICHELE: Please tell me the name and address of Flo, who was on the series "Alice," and then starred in her own series, "Flo." SUSAN ROSE, CHAPEL HILL, N.C.

TO SUSAN IN CHAPEL HILL: Polly Holliday starred as the ebullient Flo, a real charmer who made "Kiss my grits," part of our national lingo. Although she is no longer connected with a series, fans may write to her in c/o her agent, Richard Dickens & Co., 5550 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 306, Los Angeles, Ca., 90036.

DEAR MICHELE: I am one of Eddie Murphy's most avid fans. Could you please tell me where I can write to him? T.H., DURHAM, N.C.

TO T.H. IN DURHAM: Rumor has it that Murphy may not return to "Saturday Night Live" next season, what with the recent success of his feature film "48 Hours." At any rate, I suggest you write to him in c/o the show, NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y., 10020. The network will forward his correspondence.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o The Greenville Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 30, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

'Tumbleweed Theater' revives singing cowboys

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Back in the early days of TV, a staple of Saturday morning programming was the singing cowboy show. These shows were usually hosted by a grizzled character who called himself something like "Sheriff John." He sang, told jokes and showed vintage Western films where the bad guys wore black hats and good always triumphed over evil.

But life — and television — got more complex. The singing-cowboy shows said "Happy trails" and sauntered off into the sunset.

The Nashville Network has now revived the idea with "Tumbleweed Theater," a fun, nostalgic show airing Saturday afternoons. It's hosted by the Riders in the Sky, a trio who are cult favorites on the country music circuit.

They wear outlandish cowboy garb, sing classic and original cowboy songs and engage in banter. At times, they seem like the Marx Brothers in spurs.

"The films have a timeless quality — they're not dated. That romantic image of the West is just as true now as it was 40 years ago and as it will be 50 years from now," he says.

The films of "Tumbleweed Theater" range from the best-known singing cowboys, such as Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, to those starring long-forgotten performers like Dorothy Page ("The Singing Cowgirl") and Smith Ballew (a Texas Big Band leader).

Riders in the Sky

Autry created the demand for singing cowboy films in the 1930s. Soon every studio had its own singing cowboy. The films died in the late '40s, due to a combination of prosperity, a growing sophistication among the American public and the advent of TV.

"The films were born during the Depression," says Green. "It was a time when people were aching to escape daily life. So they'd go the movies where they'd spend an hour on the range — a place full of songs and happiness.

A reminder: Many film and TV stars who have diabetes or who have it in their families will appear on Cable Health Network's "Informathon," "Diabetes Update '83," airing Saturday, June 2. They include Stuart Damon, Dana Hill, Gloria Loring, Frank Bonner and Gary Owens.

Role For Kyra

In addition to playing Julia on "Another World," Kyra Sedgwick will make her Off-Broadway debut in "Time Was" at the St. Clements Theatre in early June, as a high-schooler named Moxie. Ironically, Kyra will miss her own high school graduation as a result of playing Moxie, but she'll still make the class party after the show.

PBS will air film on Vets

On Monday, May 30 (Memorial Day), PBS' "Frontline" airs the documentary "Vietnam Memorial." The film follows the five-day experiences of veterans, their friends and their families who gathered in Washington, D.C., in November 1982 for the dedication of the Vietnam Memorial. (Please check local listings for exact times.)

Planned by the veterans themselves, the salute was an intense and emotional event which reflected the conflict and pain many still feel about America's Vietnam War.

The mother of a medical corpsman killed in battle tells veterans she encounters, "We're very proud of you and want you to know... always will be. It has nothing to do with politics at all. You went where you were sent, you didn't ask to go, you did your job — and a grateful nation is finally coming together. And I say 'Amen' to that."

There is joy and weeping as veterans embrace, seeing each other for the first time since the war ended.

As the dedication ceremony ends, the crowd approaches the memorial. Parents, friends and survivors are looking for the one name among the thousands who died in the war. In some of the film's most poignant moments, they quietly touch the name engraved in stone — and then each other.

Despite their marital problems Pam and Bobby Ewing (Victoria Principal and Patrick Duffy) spend some time together at the Oil Baron's Ball. This episode of "Dallas" is rebroadcast Friday, June 3 on CBS.

'Mustang Sally'

Leann Hunley, who plays cunning Anna Brady on "Day of Our Lives," has been nicknamed "Mustang Sally" by her fellow cast members after being featured in a commercial driving a car with the license plate "SALLY." She's also been swamped with mail from viewers wondering how they can meet her.

Scheduled Guests

Celebrity couples scheduled to appear on "Tattletales" during the week of May 30th include: Country-western singer Bill Anderson and wife Becky, actress/singer Barbi Benton and husband George Gradow and television personality Peter Marshall and singer Jennifer Green.

How do 'Hollywood' people really live?

By Elaina Thompson

At least a couple of times of year, I get overwhelmed with how "Hollywood" people live.

So here's a personal update on celebrities many people think of as residents of "Hollywood." A few actually live there. But anybody in the business — movies and television, that is — who can drive to work, even from what's left of the storm-devastated beaches of Malibu to the stately mansions of Pasadena, is fair game for our count.

There are a few gaudy, extravaganza showplaces with mandatory private screening rooms, etc. Nothing though, to match the gaudy opulence of Norma Desmond's 1920's pseudo-castle in "Sunset Boulevard" or the chaste elegance of the late Mary Pickford's Pickfair, the gathering place of the world's elite in its day.

Most of today's television stars said their first criterion in choosing a house was comfort. Those with children added a sub-head: "It has to be a good place for kids to grow up in."

As to style?

Sharon Gless of CBS' "Cagney & Lacey" says hers is "pretty much Cape Cod, with some hand-me-down furniture from my grandparents but I wouldn't call the stuff antiques."

Most of these house-proud owners had to do massive and costly stripping and refinishing to bring out the basic structural beauties they sensed when they bought their houses.

Tim Conway says his high-ceilinged manse reflects the way he feels about home, and how he wants his six children to accept his values as his, while not rejecting those of his former wife, who lives down the street. The children have open doors at both parent's places. But four live at Tim's Tudor spread.

Lou Rawls, another single father, admits to being house proud, and hopes his son and daughter will share his values. But, if not, it's their option.

Ted Knight, for the last two seasons the star of "Too Close for Comfort," and his wife also opted for a Tudor.

Cullen To Star

Kathleen Cullen, who plays tragic heiress Amanda Spaulding on "Guiding Light," has landed a starring role in a film for HBO called "Impressions."

In a radical departure from her wealthy TV character, Kathleen's film role is that of a young woman who lives in a trailer park with her deaf son.

The movie begins shooting for four weeks on June 13 in Houston, Texas.

Fox favors 'Family Ties'

By Peter Meade

If Richie Cunningham of "Happy Days" represents a typical teen-ager of the '50s and early '60s, I cast my vote for Alex Keaton of NBC's "Family Ties" as Teen-ager of the '80s.

Michael J. Fox, who plays the enterprising young entrepreneur each Monday night, is already two years past his teen years, but he doesn't think that is a problem when playing Keaton.

"When you're older and playing a younger character you have to erase some of your worldliness," says Fox. "But with Alex, it's the opposite. I almost have to stretch, because I don't consider myself a political animal."

But certain aspects of Keaton's have crept into Fox's lifestyle. "I must admit that I have started wearing his clothes," says Fox. "I like his button-down shirts and the ties."

He also relates the closeness of the Keaton family to his own. He has found his TV parents, Michael Gross and Meredith Baxter Birney, to be fine surrogates while he is away from his Canadian homestead.

"Michael is such a technician," says Fox. "But he always rings through as a human. When the series first started I didn't have a car, so Meredith used to pick me up and drop me off. Every morning when I'd see that white Mercedes I knew it couldn't be a bad day."

But that didn't mean it wouldn't be a busy day. The cast works Monday through Thursday on run-throughs before taping the show on Friday. Fox admits he was a little leery about working on a comedy show, when first approached about the series last February, but the feeling didn't last long.

"I didn't want to do a sitcom," he explains. "I had my reasons: I was petrified. But I loved the script and had to give it a try."

He's found the transition to comedy work a lot easier working with "sisters" Justine Bateman and Tina Yothers.

"Justine has been a big help," says Fox, "and although Tina's only 10 years old, she cracks us up with her malaprops. Even if she doesn't understand a line she gives it a try anyway. She was supposed to say 'Communication is a two-way street' and she says 'Talking is a paved road,' and everything just stops."

Happy Day crew will come back

By Ruth Thompson

If you want to talk about empty nests, talk to Marion Ross. The lovely redhead, known to us as the matriarch of ABC's "Happy Days," has faced the syndrome lately from two angles: on-screen and off.

She's proud of her real-life "young'uns": her son, who is "a real adult, now, and off on his own," and her college-age daughter. She says, sincerely, that you have to let offspring grow up and grow away.

So why the whoop and holler that she has "Great news. The kids are coming home for fall"? It's not her own Jim and Ellen she's talking about, but Erin Moran (Joanie Cunningham) and Scott Baio (Chachi Arcola). Ms. Ross may accidentally have spilled the beans a couple of days before ABC announced that while "Joanie Loves Chachi," which spun off from "Happy Days" into a separate series, would air into the summer, it was canceled and the characters would revert to the parent show.

So, call it good luck for Erin and Scott that they have old jobs welcoming them back. Call it good sense, too, that their strong, young characters are back to beef up a veteran series heading into its 11th season as a "family show."

And maybe one reason that Marion — a single parent and working mother when her Jim and Ellen were growing up — feels so good about the return of Erin and Scott into "Happy Days" is that they, too, are working professionals. Nobody is pulling them back from better breaks. Their roles now can keep growing within a successful frame.

Past champs vie for title

Ray Floyd, defending champion, and an outstanding amateur and professional field that includes many of the top names in American golf, are expected to participate in the eighth annual Memorial Tournament in Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio. CBS Sports will broadcast the final round of the tournament on Sunday, May 29 (check local listings for exact time).

Highlighting the field in the tournament, which will carry a minimum purse of $400,000, are all the past champions of the Memorial, including, in addition to Floyd, Keith Fergus (1981), David Graham (1980), Tom Watson (1979), Jim Simons (1978), tournament host Jack Nicklaus (1977) and Roger Maltbie (1976).

Two of golf's most popular players, Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, are also expected to take on the challenging 7,116-yard-long Memorial course at Muirfield. Palmer, who has 61 PGA Tour victories to his credit, will be playing in his sixth Memorial while Trevino, who is third on the all-time career money list, will be making his fifth appearance.

Gary Player, who has won 120 tournaments around the world, heads the Memorial's foreign delegation that also includes Bob Shearer, winner of the 1982 Australian Order of Merit; Nick Price, winner of the South African Order of Merit; Peter Oosterhuis, four-time winner of the British Order of Merit; Canadian Jim Nelford, and Bruce Devlin of Australia.

The Memorial Tournament is dedicated each year to the memory of a person, living or dead, who has played golf with conspicuous honor. The 1983 honoree will be Tommy Armour, a great player, teacher and author. As chosen by the Captain's Club, a group of distinguished golfing statesmen who serve as an international advisory board, previous honorees were Robert T. Jones Jr., Walter Hagen, Francis Ouimet, Gene Sarazen, Byron Nelson, Harry Vardon and Glenna Collett Vare.

Defending champion Floyd grew up in Ft. Bragg, N.C., the son of an Army man who now is co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Golf Club in Fayetteville. Although he was exposed to golf at an early age, Floyd chose to pursue baseball until he won the National Jaycees Golf title in 1960. He turned pro the following year, joined the Tour in 1963 and won the St. Petersburg Open as a rookie. At age 20 and six months, he was the third youngest ever to win on the Tour.

There have been numerous highlights to his career, but the most notable probably was the 1976 Masters Tournament. He won by eight strokes, and his total of 17-under-par equaled the tournament record set by Nicklaus in 1965.

Celebrating Brahms

To celebrate the 150th anniversary of the birth of Johannes Brahms, PBS is presenting the composer's first symphony on "The Giulini Concerts II" on Wednesday, June 1. (Air dates may vary; please check local listings.)

Videotaped at Los Angeles' Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, the Los Angeles Philharmonic will feature its Music Director, Carlo Maria Giulini.

Also on the program is Beethoven's "Piano Concerto, No. 2" with guest pianist Murray Perahia. The concert will be simulcast in stereo over many radio stations throughout the country.

The series is made possible by a grant from the Getty Oil Co. and is a co-production of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Association and Polytel Music Productions.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

How I would love to be on "The Love Boat" currently enroute to Hong Kong, Japan and The People's Republic of China. Twenty-seven of Hollywood's most popular stars are on the passenger list filming for the new season. The list includes LINDA EVANS, LEE MAJORS, JOHN FORSYTHE, MARIETTE HARTLEY, GENE KELLY, LEE HORSLEY, GEORGE KENNEDY, RITA MORENO, BEN MURPHY, DONNA REED, TONY DANZA, and PAMELA HENSLEY — to name a few. Incidentally, the ladies were cautioned not to wear revealing clothes or bright colors while in the People's Republic of China.

A new feud of "immense proportions" could be brewing. BIG BOB DIGULIO, LARRY HOLMES' bodyguard, has it in for "The A-Team's" MR. T. BOB claims MR. T. is a "phony — is all show and no substance and has a big mouth." So far there has been no reply from MR. T. — but knowing his 'B.A.' (bad attitude) and the fact that he is not the strong silent type — I feel sure BIG BOB will be hearing from him.

After a seven-year retirement "Dirty Harry" is returning to the big screen. CLINT EASTWOOD, starring in the role, is also producing and directing "Sudden Impact" filming in San Francisco.

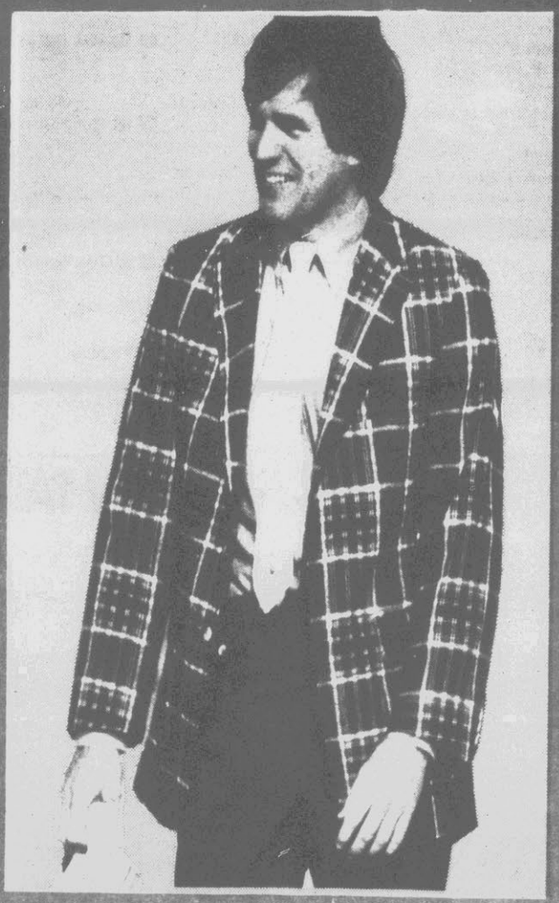

RICARDO MONTALBAN, "Fantasy Island's" Mr. Roarke, will be looking up to more than a plane when the series begins it's seventh season this fall. His new assistant and confidant, British actor CHRISTOPHER HEWETT, is well over six feet tall. He has filled Tattoo's (HERVE VILLECHAIZE) shoes and then some. Producer ARTHUR ROWE describes CHRISTOPHER's character, Lawrence, as "intelligent, sophisticated and very much his own man."

ALEXANDER COHEN, whose specialty is producing 'super' specials ("Night of 100 Stars" and "Parade of Stars") is busily preparing an entertainment extravaganza for NBC's fall schedule. Talent, beauty and just plain luck will be spotlighted on the special titled "The Best of Everything." The program, to be hosted by prominent entertainers, will feature those among us who are celebrated for their contributions to the quality of life in America — whether it be in athletics, beauty or entertainment and will feature a look at some of the people who have been lucky enough to have won over $3 million in state lotteries around the country.

The Beauty of Hand Weaving

The appeal of a Corbin sport coat is enhanced by characteristics found only in hand-woven fabrics. Subtle weaving and color variations are features which cannot be found in machine-woven fabrics. Corbin madras is actually pit-loomed and dyed. You'll also be pleased with Corbin's quality and precise fit. This distinctive, one-of-a-kind addition to your wardrobe is one we know you will enjoy.

Support the designation of the Medical Center as the LEO W. JENKINS MEDICAL CENTER

Sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees

The Greenville Jaycees are collecting a petition to name the Medical Center the Leo W. Jenkins Medical Center. This petition is to be submitted to the Pitt County Hospital Board of Trustees, the East Carolina University Board of Trustees and the Pitt County Commissioners.

If you agree that Dr. Jenkins' long and tireless efforts on behalf of the Medical Center and Eastern North Carolina merit naming the medical center after him, please read the following petition, sign the postage-free card below and mail it to us.

RESOLUTION OF DESIGNATION OF THE LEO W. JENKINS MEDICAL CENTER

WHEREAS, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins had a unique vision and foresight that the medical facilities and services available to the people of eastern North Carolina were not reasonably available and could be met only through the development of a broad based medical care and medical referral center for the eastern region; and,

WHEREAS, Dr. Jenkins had a keen awareness that the development of such a medical center could be best accomplished through the establishment of a School of Medicine at East Carolina University wherein the programs of medical education, training and scientific research would become available as part of a joint team effort with the staff and medical professionals of Pitt County Memorial Hospital in its development as a teaching hospital in conjunction with the staff and faculty of the School of Medicine; and,

WHEREAS, the long years of dedicated, loyal and unselfish and tireless work of Dr. Jenkins during his eighteen years of service as President and Chancellor of East Carolina University became a dominant force in the realization of a four-year school of medicine which is now a vital segment of a great medical complex for the delivery of medical care to the people of eastern North Carolina and for medical education and scientific research:

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the members of the Board of Directors of Pitt County Memorial Hospital that the area herein set forth below be designated The Leo W. Jenkins Medical Center which boundaries are specifically described as follows:

Bounded on the North by Highway N.C. 43
Bounded on the East by Moye Boulevard
Bounded on the South by Stantonsburg Road

Resolved this _____day of_____, 1983.

Yes! I feel that the Medical Center should be designated the LEO W. JENKINS MEDICAL CENTER.
Please count my name and signature as supporting the resolution of designation of the Leo W. Jenkins Medical Center.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — For the forthcoming remake of the film Breathless, Orion Pictures needed 1 minute and 40 seconds of Elvis Presley's song "Suspicious Minds" on the soundtrack. The Presley estate and RCA Records wanted over $40,000 for the rights. So Orion executives brought back the original members of Elvis's backup band to play the needed arrangement and are auditioning a host of Elvis imitators to sing the words. Total cost: $7,500.... Al Pacino and Robert Loggia, who play rival Cuban drug kings in Miami in Scarface, asked for — and got — extra security protection when the movie did location shooting in the volatile Florida city.... Cheers funnyman Ted Danson has been tapped to do a complete turnaround during the series's hiatus. He'll star in Something About Amelia, a TV movie about incest between a father and his 13-year-old daughter.... Roger Moore, recently honored by the Dallas Film Festival, picked his two favorite movies on which to give a Saturday seminar. Neither was one of his seven mega-hit James Bond epics. In fact, both were virtually unseen in America: 1980's ffolkes and 1976's Shout at the Devil....It sounds like Streisand: Hello, deli!

"Jane Fonda meets Chicken Delight," but Richard Harris's ex-wife, Ann Turkel, and her current boyfriend, body builder Hans Buhringer, are going on the road with their exercise salons. A truck, completely outfitted with a minigym and an instructor, drives up to Hollywood clients' homes three times a week for private workouts. The cost is $750 a month, and Rod and Alana Stewart have already signed up. —Robert Windeler

Romance is rosy for The Thorn Birds lovebirds, Ward and Brown.

NEW YORK — Rachel Ward, newly married to her co-star in The Thorn Birds, Australian actor Bryan Brown, explains why such steam emanated from their love scenes: "What happened onscreen was happening off." The niece of the Earl of Dudley and daughter of a rich Oxfordshire landowner, Rachel says, "A fortuneteller told me about Bryan before we met, so when I saw him, I knew right away that he was the one."...Close friends of Yoko Ono worry that she's getting more eccentric. John Lennon's widow says she'll wed her interior designer-companion Sam Habitoy, "only when John agrees."...Barbra Streisand was recently seen ordering not one, not two, but precisely one and a half bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches. (The restaurant charged her for just one. Barb's a big tipper.)...As a compulsive writer, he could no doubt appreciate the sentiment. In the audience of Broadway's You Can't Take It With You, playwright Neil Simon laughed loudly as one character explained her family to her beau this way: "My mother writes plays because eight years ago a typewriter was delivered here by mistake."...When asked if she's still seeking an old-fashioned millionaire, Eartha Kitt replied, "No, dahling, you're forgetting inflation. Now I'm looking for a billionaire." —Anita Summer

WASHINGTON — Walking by the Washington Monument may remind Senator Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) of his days facing Wilt Chamberlain, but that's as close to the game as the former pro basketball great now gets. Bradley "never has the opportunity" to play anymore, says press aide Leslie Devlin. But some tricks he learned in his 10 years on the road with the New York Knicks have helped him survive Senate filibusters. To the amazement of his colleagues, he can prop his long legs up on a wooden chair on the Senate floor and nod off in the wee hours between votes. Bradley says that before joining the Senate, the only people who knew about his catnap ability were "my wife and [Knick roommate] Dave DeBusschere."...Ronald Reagan received more than $35 million in Government funds to finance his 1980 Presidential campaign. Yet, again this year, the President — along with 75 percent of Americans — did not check off the $1 contribution box for Presidential campaigns on his Federal tax return. A spokesperson won't say whether the President opposes the voluntary tax but does comment that he "likes to make his own contributions."...If you visit the Capitol these days, you may get a chance to, literally, rub shoulders with your favorite Senator. Usually thousands of Capitol Hill workers and tourists fight for the few public elevators, while 100 Senators get to ride comfortably in Senators Only elevators. But ever since Senator Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) recently got bad press for pushing a man off the Senators Only elevator, he and other Senators are going out of their way to share the exclusive elevators with us commoners. —Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

JOHNNY MATHIS

Do you think you have star quality? —E.W., Waterbury, Conn.

Whatever that is, I haven't got it. In fact, I can't think of any special qualities I have. Truth is, I never wanted to cultivate any. I try not to inject too much of myself into the music. All I ever wanted to do was sing so that anyone who listened to me would be aware of my music — not my personality. I've been criticized for that throughout my career. In show business, many people want to sing, dance and act well; others want to be superstars. I'm one of those who just wants to sing well.

LIZA MINNELLI

What do you do for fun? —N.L., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

What I enjoy most is getting together with friends. I have so little opportunity to do this that when I get a chance, it's a big event. My friends aren't exclusively entertainers; they're from all walks of life. And it doesn't matter if I meet them for breakfast, lunch or dinner, at my house or theirs, or at a restaurant. The important thing is to get away from the scene and catch up on what's going on. I like films and plays, too — I adore every aspect of the business — but it's all the better to see them with close friends.

KEITH RICHARDS GATHERS SOME MOSS

Michael Putland/Retna Ltd

They were the original punk rockers — a rowdy bunch of ruffians who got busted for drugs, bounced out of hotels and arrested for relieving themselves in public — and none of the Rolling Stones had a more raffish reputation than lead guitarist-songwriter Keith Richards. He was a 10-year heroin addict, a flamboyant dresser allegedly fond of earrings, eye makeup and snakeskin boots, and the father of two illegitimate children. But in the course of two decades together and two dozen gold albums, not including collections of greatest hits (another record is due out in August), the Stones have evolved from rock's scruffy bad boys into its wealthy, respectable good old boys, and Richards has changed along with them. At 39, he is finally getting some satisfaction in his personal life, unhooked from heroin and soon to be hitched for the first time to supermodel-turned-actress Patti Hansen. When FAMILY WEEKLY*'s Mary Ellin Bruns visited him recently in his New York City hotel room, Richards was dressed simply in a yellow cotton dress shirt and jeans. He was gracious and articulate as he talked about his tough reputation and his tender feelings for Hansen, his family and Mick Jagger.*

Lynn Goldsmith/LGI

Richards: They're very easy guys to get along with. We can have really bitter fights and nobody ends up saying, "I'm leaving the group." It's chemical, I guess. There's a little formula that has enabled us to withstand all of the negative periods. Also, the basic honesty of the Stones' image and of our music means that we've never had to pretend to be something we're not. We don't have to have any pressure put on us: "You can't do this. Think of your image." So it has allowed us to be outrageous at times and to let our steam off. It's an amazing little combination, and after 20 years I still like 'em. We did try, in fact, to clean the act up at the very beginning. Our manager bought us these houndstooth check suits. That lasted about three weeks.

Q: Ed Sullivan also tried to clean up your image by changing the lyrics of one of your songs from "Let's spend the night together" to "Let's spend some time together."

Richards: Yeah, that was Ed. The only words we used to hear backstage at The Ed Sullivan Show were, "What about the Bible Belt? Remember the Bible Belt." I was wondering what this Bible Belt was. Was it some kind of thing you wore?

Q: Did you guys get a kick out of your rough image, or was it annoying?

Richards: Bill [Wyman, the bass player] was sometimes a little annoyed. He's very fastidious about cleanliness and personal hygiene. Generally as a group we played up to it: "You want to see how dirty and unkempt I can be? I'll show you." Because there was no way that you were going to be able to defy that image or break it. We're really nice guys sometimes. But people perceive that you probably could be very mean and tough in a dark alley at night, and therefore you kind of end up being halfway like that.

Richards: I feel it's far more dangerous to cross the road, that I'm far more likely to end up squashed in the middle of the road than to be done in by a fan. I think it's a terrible thing. John was a great guy. I knew him pretty well, and the fact that he was just starting to come out of hibernation and that it should happen then is just really rubbing it in. Nobody deserves that.

Q: What topics are easiest to write about in your songs?

Richards: Well, basically the ones the Stones are well known for, you know, horrible male-chauvinist-pig type songs, or at least expressing a certain amount of that attitude.

Q: Do you agree with that attitude?

Richards: Just because we express it, we're not necessarily expressing it as our point of view. Not everything you say is to be taken literally as your belief, because what you're actually doing is bringing to the attention of people who listen to the song the fact that this is a point of view that exists. But don't necessarily take it to be my opinion set in concrete.

Q: I heard that "Satisfaction" came to you when you were out driving.

Richards: No, actually I was in the London Hilton. For some reason, I just woke up in the middle of the night with this: "Da da dadada dadadada — I can't get no satisfaction. Oh, that's really dumb, but I'll just put it down on tape and see what it sounds like in the morning." Then I went straight back to sleep again. I wish they were all that easy.

Q: What do you think has made you and Mick Jagger so compatible?

Richards: We've known each other since we were 4 or 5 years old. As far back as I can remember, I can remember Mick, and so we feel very natural with each other.

Q: You were fated to end up together.

Richards: It seems so. Now I can't get rid of him!

Q: Do you ever argue?

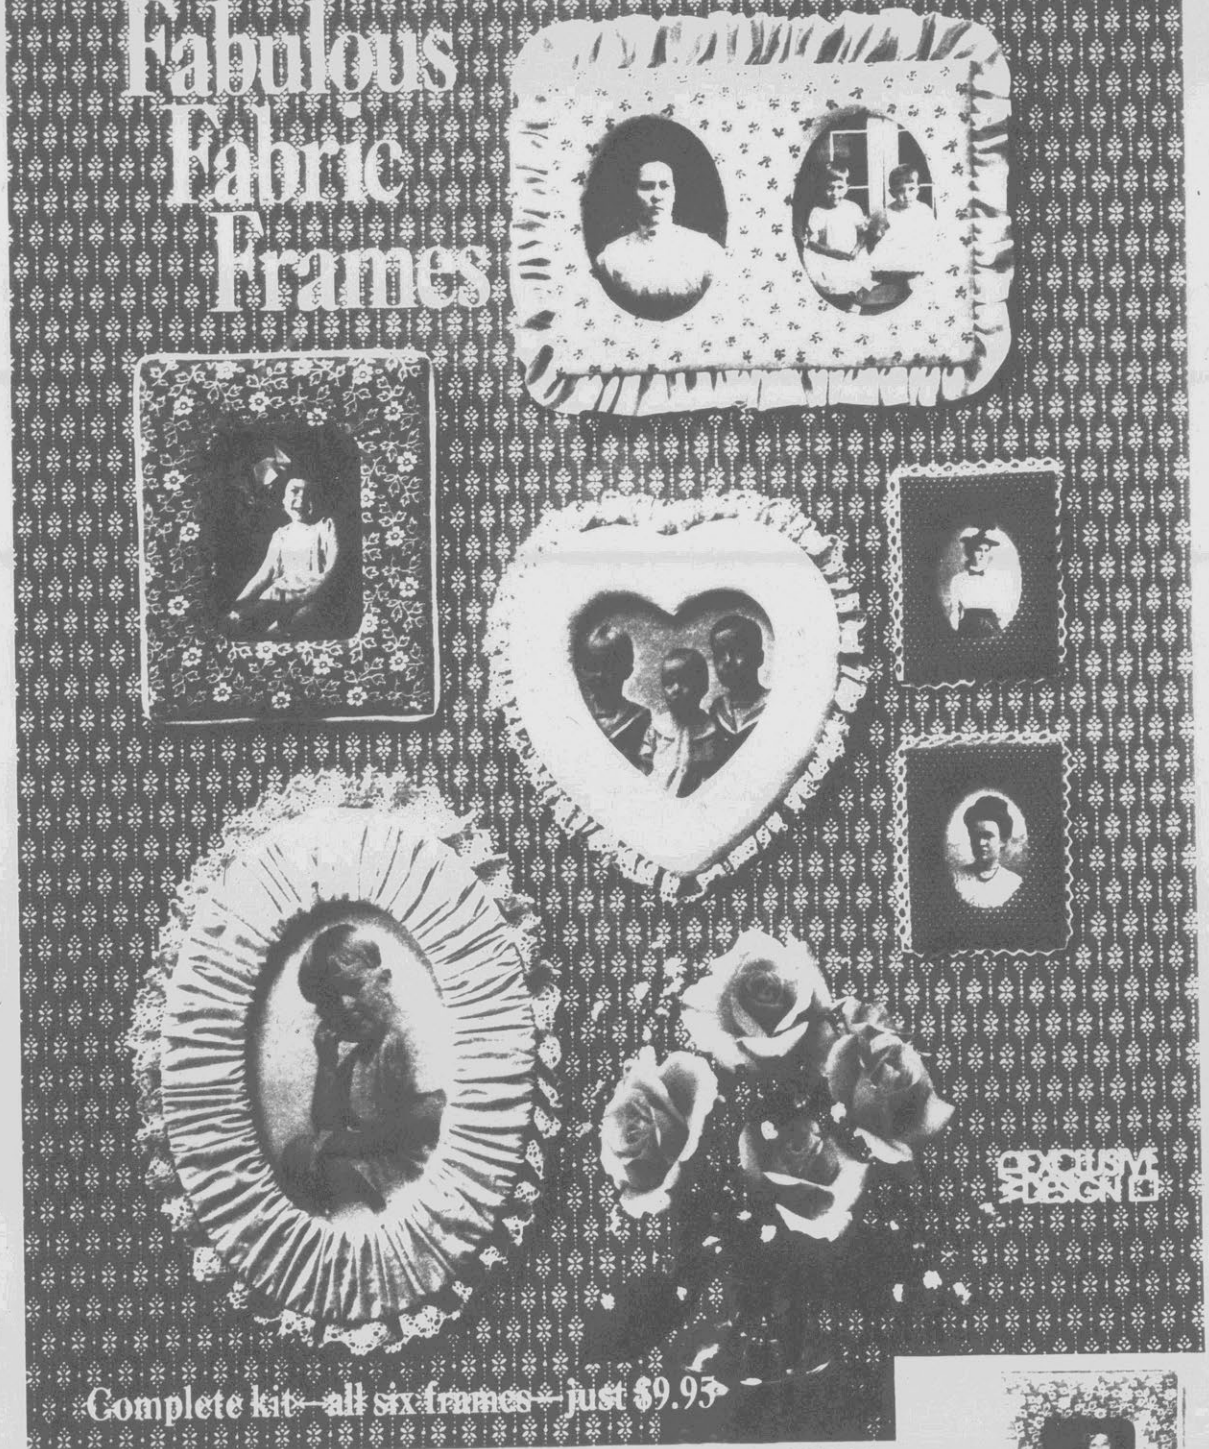

Richards: Yeah, probably as only people who have known each other as long as we have can. I'm an only child. He's probably the closest thing I have to a brother, and we all know that brothers have the worst arguments. I've got two kids of my own, and I've seen how they carry on. Yeah, we argue a lot. We argue about silly, trivial things. We get very stubborn, but that's because we know that we can argue with each other without it threatening the structure of the band or the future of the band.

Q: What sort of person is your mother?

Richards: She's very youthful for her age, and she has a great sense of humor. A real nice Mum, you know?

Q: I heard you and your dad got together for the first time in 20 years last summer. Was it nice?

Richards: Fantastic! Great old bloke. We had a great time together.

Q: How did you and Patti Hansen meet?
Richards: Somebody fixed us up, I have a feeling. I'm not going to point any fingers. Maybe it wasn't just one person. Maybe it was a conspiracy. We didn't stand a chance.

Q: Are you excited about getting married?
Richards: Yeah. After all, for me it's a real novelty. I'm only going to do it once, and if this ain't the once, nothing is as far as I'm concerned.

Q: What made you decide to do it?
Richards: Hey, you can ask any guy that and you'll get a million different answers. I was drunk, I don't know. It was another one of those things, just something that had to be done. I'm amazed I put it off so long. I think I've held out really well.

Richards: It's impossible to pin down. I'm too scared to try to find out. I don't really want to know. As long as it works, I'm satisfied. I think sometimes we lose things when we know exactly how they work. When you know how movies are made, they're not half as great as when you're just sitting watching. As long as it works, it doesn't matter. I don't think it's really that important to know why it does. Anyway, I'm lazy.

Q: People have said that recently life has been happier for you.
Richards: Oh yeah, for me — especially in retrospect — it was absolutely no fun being the world's most famous junkie. I mean at the time, being a junkie, nothing bothered me. It didn't bother me at all. But in retrospect, the hassles and the pain, the constant pressure of going through that for such a long time, it was such a relief when eventually, even with my dull brain, I realized that it was time to move on and stop this. And in that respect, of course, life has changed enormously for the better for me. Now I've got time for other things besides waiting for The Man.

Q: Do you have any plans for retirement?
Richards: No, I wouldn't know how to make plans, I wouldn't know how to go about winding down the Stones. None of us would. What a horrible thought.

Q: Mick Jagger has been quoted as saying, "Rock 'n' roll is a spent force. . . . It's merely recycling itself, and everything is a rehash of something else." Do you agree?
Richards: Rock 'n' roll has always been a rehash of what's gone before. That's its strength — that you can still find new variations. After all, it's a very, very tight musical structure. It's the infinite variations within that very tight structure that become interesting. Today there are a lot of kids trying to sound like we did when we first started. We were trying to sound like the guys we were listening to. All you do is pass it on. And that is ultimately the great achievement of any musician, whether you're very successful, mediocre or not successful at all, you've done your bit to pass it on. FW

TEMPT SUMMER PALATES WITH THIS CLASSIC

By Marilyn Hansen

Classic dishes become classic because of their visual appeal, flavor and texture — all of which makes them a pleasure to eat. Vitello Tonnato, meaning Veal with Tuna Sauce in Italian, is certainly such a dish. It is a classic preparation of veal, using tuna along with anchovies, vegetables, wine and chicken broth for savory simmering. The meat is then chilled and a deliciously flavored, beguiling sauce is made from the unique broth. Our suggestion is that you try varying this classic by using boneless chicken breasts as a moderately priced and convenient alternative to veal.

VITELLO TONNATO

3 to 4 lbs. boned and rolled leg of veal roast or 5 lbs. whole chicken breasts, boned and split
¼ cup olive oil
1 large onion, sliced
1 can (3 oz.) flat anchovy fillets, drained
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and chunked
¾ cup dry white wine
2 cups chicken broth
2 cloves garlic, partially crushed
4 stalks celery with leaves, broken
1 carrot
Few sprigs parsley
1 teaspoon salt, or to taste
¼ teaspoon whole black peppercorns
2 cups mayonnaise, preferably homemade
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Garnish:

4 cups cold, cooked white rice
Bunch of parsley or watercress
Red radish roses
¼ cup capers

1. Pat roast (or breasts) dry with paper towels. In a Dutch oven, heat oil until hot but not smoking. Brown roast over moderately high heat on all sides. For chicken breasts, remove skin and brown in the same manner.

2. Add onion, anchovies, tuna, wine, broth, garlic, celery, carrot, parsley, salt and peppercorns. Bring to boil, cover, reduce heat and simmer about 2½ to 3 hours, turning veal once. For chicken breasts, simmer 20 to 25 minutes, until fork-tender.

3. Gently lift meat to a large bowl and pour hot stock over it; refrigerate overnight, or until thoroughly chilled. (For stainless or porcelain-on-enamel pots, you may refrigerate meat right in it.) For chicken breasts, place in a shallow glass or stainless pan, cover with the hot stock and refrigerate overnight.

4. Next day, lift meat out of broth and refrigerate alone. Strain broth and discard vegetables.

5. In food processor, using plastic mixing blade, or in blender, place mayonnaise, 1 cup of strained stock and lemon juice. Process just until smooth. You want a sauce just a bit thicker than heavy cream, thick enough to coat the meat slices. Taste sauce, add more salt and ground black pepper, if desired.

6. Carefully slice veal into thin slices. Leave breasts whole for individual servings.

7. Spread a thick layer of cold rice over a large serving platter. Make an orderly, attractive arrangement of veal slices or chicken breasts on top. Pour sauce over meat. Sprinkle with capers, place a big bunch of parsley at one end of the platter and garnish with radish roses. Serve remaining sauce in a sauceboat.

Makes 8 servings

ASPARAGUS GRIBICHE

3 lbs. fresh asparagus
¾ cup olive oil
¼ cup white wine or tarragon vinegar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon coarse salt, or to taste
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup finely chopped gherkins
1 hard-cooked egg, finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped stuffed green olives

1. Snap or cut off tough ends of asparagus. Group in 6 bunches and tie with cord.

2. Heat large pot of water to boiling and add asparagus. Return to boiling and boil 2 to 3 minutes, just until crisp-tender (timing will depend on thickness of asparagus stalks).

3. Drain asparagus and immediately plunge into ice water to stop the cooking process. Drain and remove cord.

4. If serving right away, arrange asparagus attractively on a serving platter. Otherwise, arrange in flat glass dish; cover and refrigerate.

5. Combine olive oil, wine vinegar, dry mustard, salt and pepper; beat until blended. Add gherkins, egg and olives; stir to mix. Pour dressing over asparagus.

Makes 8 servings

LACE COOKIES

3 tablespoons unsalted butter or margarine
1 cup packed light brown sugar
4 tablespoons flour
1 egg, beaten
1 cup ground unblanched almonds
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ teaspoon almond extract

1. Using electric mixer, cream butter with sugar until light. Gradually beat in flour, egg, almonds and the extracts. Beat until smoothly blended.

2. Drop dough by teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheet, with 3 inches between each to allow for spreading.

3. Bake in preheated 375° oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until crisp. Watch carefully so you do not overbake. Immediately remove cookies from cookie sheet and cool. If cookies get too hard, place in warm oven for ½ minute to soften a little, making it easier to remove from cookie sheet.

Makes about 3 dozen

WHEN YOU CAN'T KEEP YOUR COOL

COPING WITH PARENT BURNOUT

By Stephani Cook

Dr. Joseph Procaccini

We've all heard about job burnout, but what happens when you begin to feel frazzled and exhausted as a parent? You can change jobs, but you can hardly change your kids. To find out more about parent burnout and how to handle it, FAMILY WEEKLY spoke to Dr. Joseph Procaccini, director of the Institute of Private Education at Loyola College in Baltimore and co-author, with Mark W. Kiefaber, of the recent book Parent Burnout (Doubleday).

Q: Dr. Procaccini, what is parent burnout?

A: Parent burnout occurs when parents run out of physical and emotional energy. The first symptom may be a feeling of being drained, and then there is a tendency to be irritable, especially with the children. If burnout continues, parents will feel trapped in the give-give-give syndrome with kids who take-take-take. They get discouraged about the future, about having energy to meet demands. The next stage brings a real paranoia. If you can't find the scissors or the children track in mud, you may feel the kids are out to get you, although you know rationally that they are just being careless.

The final stage is what we call chronic disenchantment. This stage involves a lot of anguish: Something has to give. At this point there may be a desire for a drastic change in life style, anything from a divorce to a career change to a household move.

Q: How does burnout occur?

A: Parents who burn out have, in a sense, been "on fire." They have taken as a model for parenting a mythological ideal of the perfect parent, which could have been transmitted through their own parents or gleaned from the media — like Little House on the Prairie. Most people know that these role models are not practical examples, but such expectations nevertheless become part of the subconscious value system.

Q: What is the greatest cause of parent burnout?

A: The burning up of energy that is used in trying to manage anger — the anger resulting from the frustration or guilt that occurs when these unrealistically high expectations for parenting (and for children's behavior) can't be met.

Q: Can this happen to any parent?

A: The prime candidate is a person having what we call the Style C technique of parenting. C stands for the Controller, who has a rigid script of what is expected, with little room for change. If there is faltering on either side, this leads to the anger. Controller parents are future oriented and they use all their energy trying to force reality into this plan they have devised. Parent burnout occurs at a much higher rate for these parents.

The Style D parent is the Developer, whose expectations of himself and of the children are flexible. These parents expect the unexpected, recognizing that growth only takes place with change and that change is something to look forward to, not to stifle.

Q: So how do you cope with parent burnout?

A: We have a three-part program to help avoid burnout in the first place and then to deal with it when it occurs: Parent burnout can be reversed if you follow a system we call the ABC's: changing attitude, changing behavior and learning to cope.

In changing attitude, you must realize that, first, the world is not perfect and parents are not perfect and can't expect to be; and, second, that being a good parent means taking care of yourself. This means a certain amount of selfishness and control over where and how you expend your energy.

In changing behavior, parents have to try to build activities into their schedules that give them energy, realizing that it is they who control these choices (not kids) and that they can't be good parents without keeping the two in balance. You must do an "energy audit" and give yourself personal time — for exercise, music, a hot bath. Overcoming those very barriers to the personal time you have created is in itself part of the behavioral change.

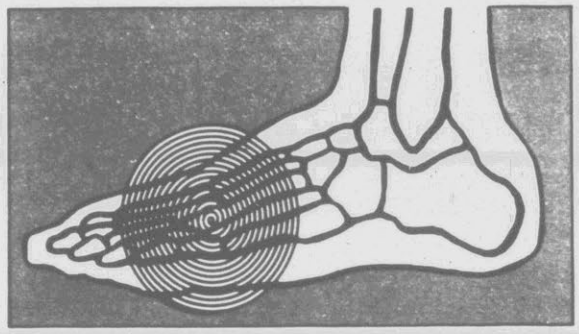

Learning to cope forces you to address the fundamental dilemma of being a parent: How do you control children's behavior and still allow for growth? Nobody has a formula for this, and the parents who are most successful are those who are willing to be flexible . . . and are able to communicate, as well as listen (listening to kids is exhausting). Communication is the critical skill. FW

THE MIRACLE OF GERMANY STOPPED MY FOOT PAIN!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted — see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom formed foot support called Flexible Featherspring.® When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them — even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

MADE FOR YOUR FEET ALONE

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

NO RISK OFFER

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet, Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today. No salesman will call.

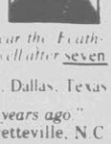

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super—neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years, already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is better. As a retired physician, this result is amazing.

Dr. C.O.C., Tucson, Arizona

I was extremely skeptical when I placed my order, and was expecting to be disappointed. Much to my surprise, I found almost immediate relief from knee and leg pains and corns on my right foot which were a source of continuing pain and irritation have ceased to trouble me.

J.C.J., Meridian, Miss.

At the present time, I still wear the Featherspring and indeed they perform well after seven years of use.

G.M.G., Dallas, Texas

DON'T HIDE IT, REVIVE IT!

By Nancy Sweid

Paper, fabric and wood items all take well to stenciling with acrylic paint.

Somewhere stashed away in the back of your closet is an old tablecloth that's too good to throw out but too drab to display. Revive it with stenciling, an inexpensive and attractive way to decorate anything from notepaper to furniture.

The beginner can easily decorate wooden key chains, greeting cards, stationery and other small items. An experienced stenciler can brighten up the whole house. Make plain sheets suddenly pretty, or add a designer touch to tablecloths and napkins. Unpainted wooden boards and boxes become matching sets of kitchen accessories. You can even stencil a kitchen stool or a table and chairs.

If you feel particularly artistic, try quilting a stenciled fabric, then placing it in a hoop frame for an unusual wall hanging.

All you need for stenciling are the stencil, paint, brushes and/or foam applicators. Acrylic paint works well on all materials. Best of all, stenciled fabric can be made laundry-proof.

Detailed instructions for making your own stencils and foam applicators, along with illustrations and photos, are included in the booklet "Stenciling — An Ancient Art" (#366). For your copy send $1.75 plus 25 cents for postage and handling to:

VACATIONS WITH A TWIST

The other five weeks, he chases tornadoes.

In this grueling game of wits, a wrong turn can be fatal. But pushing his Volkswagen Rabbit unmercifully, he maneuvers into position to photograph that rare moment when the storm is at its height. Hoadley, who has been eyeing storms for 24 years now, relies on instinct and on a complicated, accurate system he devised to predict where a tornado will occur.

Hoadley's current chase, which ends the middle of next month, centers on the flatlands from Texas to Iowa, known as Tornado Alley. Invariably, Hoadley says, he meets a few of the other half-dozen or so dedicated chasers. The Dairy Queen is the chasers' favorite pit stop: "We'll meet at the vortex," their slogan.

"There is a vast beauty and majesty on the plains," Hoadley, 42, told us, "and in closing with and confronting a great storm. It is a realm of nature many people have not experienced — and should. It extends the spirit in a way that is not easily forgotten."

DOCTORS' GRIPES

Doctors, believe it or not, don't feel the same about all of their patients. And, according to a recent survey, doctors seem to respond negatively to those whose personal characteristics differ from their own.

Dr. David Klein of Michigan State University surveyed 1,000 Michigan family physicians and found that the patient ills that most irritate doctors are "psychiatric conditions, drunkenness, drug abuse, obesity, musculoskeletal pain, chronic back pain, headaches and sexually related conditions."

The adjectives most frequently used to describe undesirable patients are: "dirty, smelly, aggressive, angry, noncompliant, lazy, Medicaid, welfare."

"Doctors most dislike those medical conditions for which they can't offer sure cures because those threaten their sense of omnipotence," Klein told us. "Also, as a group, doctors adhere to the Protestant ethic and react negatively to patients and illnesses that threaten or challenge their faith in that value system."

LIQUOR IS QUICKER

When it comes to young men, booze and sex, it's not what you drink, but what you think you drink that seems to make the difference. So concludes a recent study at the University of Wisconsin.

Seventy-two college-age men were surveyed about their levels of "sexual guilt."

Then, half were told they were being given vodka and tonic to drink but were actually given only tonic, and half were told they were drinking only tonic when it was actually vodka. Next, the men were all shown erotic slides.

Conclusion: The young men who erroneously believed they had drunk alcohol were "willing" both to look at sexually explicit material longer and to become more sexually aroused. This was not true of the men who unknowingly had consumed alcohol. Concludes researcher Dr. Vincent Adesso: "For men with high sex guilt, the mere thought that they were drunk enabled them to overcome their inhibitions about sex by attributing their otherwise unacceptable behavior to drinking."

YES, BUT DAN RATHER STILL LOOKS BETTER IN A SWEATER

He isn't quite ready to make small talk with the weatherman, but Japanese scientists have designed a robot that can read the news almost perfectly.

The new robot is half humanoid, half computer, and can imitate human hand movements, a real breakthrough, reports Robotics World. The robot's computer has been programmed with a dictionary, which allows it to scan written words and check for them in its banks. As a result, the robot can instantly deliver a sentence with the proper inflections.

Scientists don't expect the robots to appear soon on our TV screen, but they do foresee them used soon as radio newspersons and telephone-information operators.

SERVICE THAT SUITS THE RICH

Imagine setting out on your Caribbean vacation and discovering — horrors! — that you've forgotten to buy some really knockout outfits. Talk about a bummer! If only you had joined the Dale Alan Gold Club!

You see, Dale Alan, a South Florida-based men's wear chain, has introduced a pricey card club for those guys who want to shop when they want and who enjoy being pampered. First, you buy a special credit card — made of solid 17-karat gold — for $10,000. This entitles you to $12,000 worth of clothes. Then, say you suddenly realize at 2 A.M. that you must have a new suit for a trip the next day. Well, says Paul Shweky, the chain's general manager, you simply dial the private Gold Club number and rout Mr. Shweky or another poor store manager out of bed. He in turn wakes up a tailor, and within the hour you can be trying on clothes at any of the chain's 11 stores. You will also be served champagne while selecting.

Now if only the card could bring you a pizza at 2 A.M.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Hair is different. 2. Arm is moved. 3. Hood stripe is missing. 4. Hose is shorter. 5. Watering can is different. 6. License plate is missing.

Junior Whirl®

by Hal Kaufman

- HAL'S PALS! Dear Hal: To save energy, I would like to replace the agitator in my washing machine with a live octopus. Where can I get more information on this? Dear Pal: Try a manual of arms.

- Word Play! Form five six-letter words from these three-letter word components: FOR SON ACT PAR AGE PET HEM ANT IMP CAR. Ex.: FOR plus AGE is FORAGE.

Forage, parson, carpet are possibilities

- Sum Fun! Think of a number. Add the next consecutive number. Add nine. Divide by two. Subtract the original number. Add six. Answer is below.

Answer is eleven

- Riddle-Me This! How did the farmer transport his cows? In a moo-ving van. What did the grave robbers wear on their feet? Ghoul-oshes.

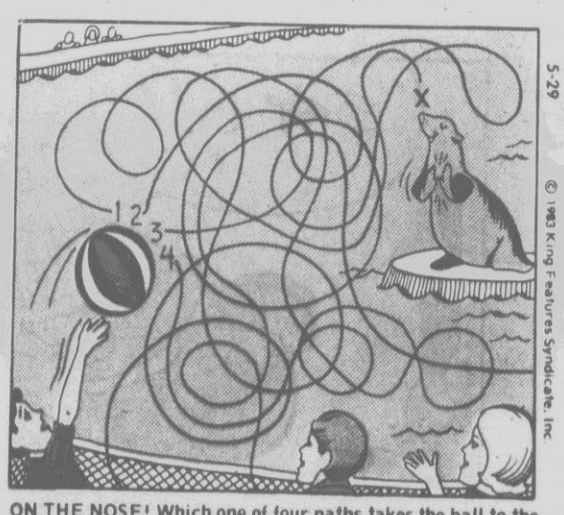

MYSTERY BARRELS

Five of the barrels above contain cider and one contains vinegar. If two of the barrels containing cider total 33 gallons, and three of the remaining barrels containing cider total 66 gallons, which of the six barrels contains vinegar?

Hint: Once you've found the barrels involved in the first amount, finding the barrels involved in the second amount is simply a matter of elimination.

SPELLBINDER

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE NEXT PORT OF CALL IS THE MISTY ISLES. WILL ALETA FORGIVE PRINCE VALIANT FOR HAVING FLED HER ILL HUMOR? VAL NURSES THE BITE OF CONSCIENCE. HE RECALLS HORRIT'S PROPHECY -- THAT HE WOULD NEVER KNOW CONTENTMENT -- AND SHIVERS IN THE FOG THAT HAS SWADDLED THE SHIP FOR DAYS.

NOT EVEN A VIKING SUNSTONE CAN FIND THE DAYSTAR IN THE SKY. AT NIGHT THE FIRMAMENT IS BLACK. NAVIGATION IS IMPOSSIBLE.

"WE MAY BE FLOATING IN THE BATHS OF TRAJAN FOR ALL I KNOW," THE CAPTAIN TELLS VAL. "WHAT SAY WE SACRIFICE YOUR DAUGHTERS TO APPEASE NEPTUNE?" THE TWINS EARN A REPRIEVE AS THE VESSEL SUDDENLY SKIMS INTO SUNLIGHT. "LAND, HO!" CRIES THE WATCH.

VAL SCOURS THE ISLAND FOR BADLY NEEDED SUPPLIES. THE NATIVES HE QUERIES ARE AMIABLE BUT ODDLY LISTLESS. "WATER?" YAWNS ONE. "PERHAPS TONIGHT IT WILL RAIN." "NEVER PUT OFF FOR A DAY," ADVISES ANOTHER, RUBBING HIS EYES, "WHAT CAN WAIT A YEAR."

WITH EFFORT A THIRD MAN MANAGES A SMILE. "WELCOME TO THE ISLE OF SLOTH," HE SAYS LAZILY. "I AM TORPOR, THE HIGH PRIEST."

TORPOR OFFERS TO SHOW PRINCE VALIANT THE ISLAND. "BUT YOU MUST CARRY ME." THE TOUR PROCEEDS ACCORDINGLY. "HERE IS THE TEMPLE OF SLOTH, OUR MOST SACRED SHRINE," SAYS TORPOR AS THEY COME UPON WHAT SEEMS TO BE A RUIN. "IT HAS TAKEN CENTURIES FOR MY PEOPLE TO BUILD. A FITTING MONUMENT, DO YOU NOT AGREE?"
