Guerrillas Ambushed Israeli Near Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Guerrillas killed two Israeli soldiers and wounded three others in an ambush 10 miles southeast of Beirut, the Israeli military command said today. The PLO, meanwhile, denied there had been an attempt to assassinate PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

The Israeli military command said a guerrilla squad in a vehicle attacked two Israeli military vehicles with bazookas and small-arms fire Sunday on a road south of Bhamdoun. It said the guerrillas escaped.

A group called the Lebanese National Resistance Front — believed to be composed of Palestine Liberation Organization allies — later claimed responsibility for the attack in a statement broadcast by leftist Beirut radio stations.

The deaths bring to five the number of Israeli soldiers killed in the last week of stepped-up guerrilla assaults on Israeli troops in Lebanon.

A PLO spokesman and the official PLO news agency, Wafa, denied a report by the right-wing Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station that there had been an attempt on Arafat's life.

The radio, attributing its report to "special information" said Arafat had escaped unharmed from an assassination attempt at 2:30 a.m. today in the Bekaa Valley just west of the Syrian border, but that one of his bodyguards was killed.

PLO officials in Damascus and newspapers in Beirut reported Arafat went to Tripoli on Sunday and stayed in the coastal city overnight for a meeting today with guerrillas.

"It's nonsense. It is a baseless report," said Abu Ziad, a PLO spokesman in Damascus, of the purported attack.

Wafa also denied what it called "this malicious report," calling it "completely devoid of truth."

Other Israeli soldiers traded fire with Syrian troops Sunday across the cease-fire line in the Bekaa Valley, and one Lebanese was reported killed and another wounded when a shell fell on their home near the front line.

Both Israel and Syria had been increasing their forces in the area over the weekend, but Israeli officials, Western diplomatic sources and Lebanese news reports all indicated today that the build-up was subsiding.

In Beirut, helicopters and amphibious vehicles carried ashore a new unit of 1,200 U.S. Marines on Sunday to replace American troops stationed in Lebanon since Feb. 15. And in southern Lebanon, a 23-year-old private from Fiji serving with a United Nations peacekeeping force was killed in a shootout which U.N. officials said was between U.N. soldiers and Israeli-backed militiamen.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, made a rare public appearance Sunday in predominantly Moslem West Beirut and defended the U.S.-sponsored troop withdrawal accord with Israel.

"I shall abandon not one iota of Lebanon or of Lebanon's dignity," said Gemayel. "The recent agreement that Lebanon has signed was inescapable to achieve liberation."

The president was cheered by a crowd of about 30,000 when he pledged to end Syrian, Palestinian and Israeli control of outlying sections of Lebanon.

Likely Choice As Ambassador To El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald E. Thomas, U.S. ambassador to Guyana and a retired Navy admiral, is the top candidate to replace Deane Hinton as American ambassador to embattled El Salvador, a Reagan administration source says.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes declined to confirm Sunday that Hinton would be replaced, telling reporters, "We have no announcement to make."

But a well-placed official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, confirmed that Hinton is on his way out and that three or four candidates are being considered to be his successor.

Another source, who also insisted on anonymity, said Sunday night that Thomas was the "leading candidate." He also said that while the final decision had not been made, it would be made by President Reagan "fairly shortly."

Hinton has been in the El Salvador post while the U.S. backed-government's war with leftist guerrillas has wound on inconclusively.

Thomas, 53, retired from the Navy in 1981 and has served in his present post since last year.

If Hinton is replaced as expected, it would follow Friday's announcement that Thomas O. Enders was being relieved of his duties as assistant secretary of state for Latin America. Enders will become the new U.S. ambassador to Spain.

Sources said Reagan was persuaded to approve the changes by National Security Adviser William Clark and others who seek to toughen

U.S. policy toward the Salvadoran civil war.

The officials said Sunday that Clark, along with U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick and others, convinced Reagan to replace Enders and Hinton by emphasizing that Reagan ought to have his "own people" in the posts.

One U.S. official, speaking on condition that he not be identified by name, insisted that policy differences played no role in the shake-up of the Latin American diplomatic staff while indicating that there were concerns over the execution of that policy.

Third Formal Session Of Summit Session Is Begun

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Reagan and the five leaders of key industrialized democracies today returned to their summit talks on the problems that are troubling the world's economy.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz gave a thumbs-up sign as he entered the Williamsburg Inn for the third formal set of discussions, which had been marred on Sunday by a dispute, which they ultimately resolved, over a statement on arms control in Europe.

In the last day of their Memorial Day weekend talks, the leaders and their aides crowded around a large oval conference table in this historic town.

The leaders, representing Canada, France, Italy, Japan, West Germany and the United States, were joined in the discussions by their foreign and finance ministers. Also attending the sessions was the head of the European Common Market.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher left late Sunday to return to the campaign in the June 9

British parliamentary elections. Foreign Minister Francis Pym and Geoffrey Howe, chancellor of the exchequer, attended in her place.

The foreign leaders already have registered their concern about the high interest rates in the United States they fear are delaying their own recovery from the long recession.

They urged Reagan to try to lower the giant U.S. budget deficits, which they contend are keeping the interest rates high.

In addition to interest rates, the leaders discussed high unemployment, trade barriers and the international debt crisis.

Leaving their aides behind, the seven world leaders met alone Sunday in the House of Burgesses, where George Washington, Patrick Henry and other members of Virginia's colonial legislature once sat.

Joining Reagan were Mrs. Thatcher, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, French President Francois Mitterrand, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and Gaston Thorn, president of the European Economic Community.

At the end of their talks today, they were expected to issue a statement that would likely restate their intentions to cooperate on ensuring a strong recovery.

Indeed, a draft statement circulating among foreign officials gave renewed support for achieving "non-inflationary growth of income and employment." It also urged greater stability in the exchange markets. The dollar has recently risen in value in comparison with other major currencies.

A Damper On Final Day Of Weekend Holiday

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Clouds and rain put a damper on the end of the Memorial Day weekend, although local swimming pools and stores geared up for a big day today.

The weather was warm and clear during the holiday weekend, but became cloudy with the threat of rain Monday. According to Greenville Utilities, the high temperature Friday was 75 and the low 54. Temperatures Saturday ranged from a high of 80 to a low of 50, and Sunday's temperatures were between 55 and 85. The only rainfall during the holiday weekend was .23 inches reported Friday.

Memorial Day is a state holiday, and federal, state and municipal offices were closed today. The Greenville City Schools were closed in observance of the holiday, while Pitt County Schools held classes today.

Greenville Banks, manager of Belk Tyler in Greenville, said that Memorial Day is one of the bigger sale days of the first six months of the year. He said that Belk Tyler store is having a sale on swimsuits, sportswear and other summer clothes today.

"One thing that makes Memorial Day so big (in sales) is that schools are out and city and county offices are closed," Banks said. "The people that didn't go to the beach will come out and shop."

"It looks like the weather is with us today too," he said. "(The cloudy weather) will discourage people from going outside."

Ruth Mayo of Bostic-Sugg Furniture Co. Inc. said that more people than usual were in the store for their Memorial Day sale.

A survey of area stores showed that most grocery and convenience stores were open.

If people weren't shopping today, they were relaxing. The swimming pool at Brook Valley Country Club opened for the season Friday and was open today at 11 a.m.

Ann Griffin at Lake Ellsworth said that the pool was open this weekend and would open today at 3:30 p.m. "There wasn't a very big crowd this weekend," she said. "Almost everybody went to the beach."

Other swimming pools in the area were open this weekend.

Both the Greenville Police Department and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department said that they had a quiet weekend, other than routine calls.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

It's "fun and games" time anytime when you have this bright and colorful game cube in your home! The six-sided cube allows you to play six different games and to show off your needlepoint skills at the same time. Or, if you prefer, you can simply make one to six separate boards and keep them easily stored away.

This "Learn-a-Stitch" cube features mostly long stitches for quick work. It is worked on 7-mesh plastic canvas with your choice of a variety of yarns. While only two of the sides can be clearly seen, each is totally different from the others. The instruction leaflet includes a description of each of the games in addition to the charts and diagrams needed to make the game cube.

To obtain directions for making the Needlepoint Game Cube, designed by Bonnie Egli for readers of this column, send your request for leaflet No. NL-05293 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-05293 by sending a check or money order for $15.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, needle, six sheets of plastic canvas, yarn in 12 colors and the full instructions.

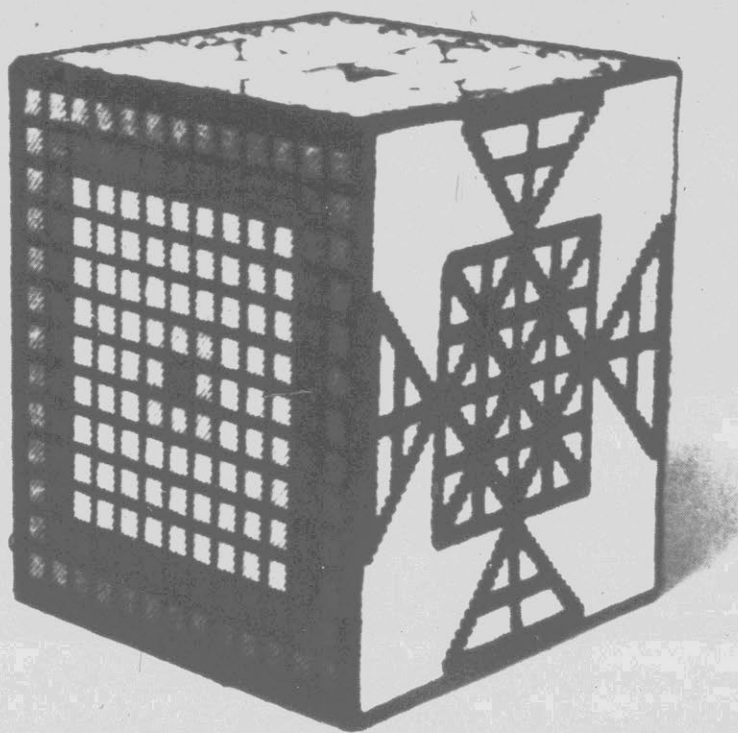

While the directions on Leaflet NL-05293, featured today, are for making the game cube or game boards, the pattern stitches might give you good ideas for other items you could make from plastic canvas.

Any one of the six designs would make a stunning tote bag, for example. Some of them could be easily adapted to create covers for phone books, photo albums, wastebaskets or any of a number of other items. Or, you could adapt the designs to traditional cotton needlepoint, canvas for striking pillows.

I would suggest that you keep a collection of pattern leaflets in a loose leaf notebook, perhaps with samples of the stitches used, for reference whenever you might want to design something unique for yourself or for gifts.

You can create interesting matching sets by selecting difference sizes of canvas. For example, you could cover a wastebasket and a phone book using 7-mesh canvas and then use the same designs on 10-mesh canvas for smaller items such as covers for memo, address or appointment books or small boxes for paper clips, stamps or rubber bands.

Several of the alternate items I have mentioned would need to be made in rectangular rather than square shapes, so you would have to adapt some of these designs somewhat.

You can chart your complete final project on graph paper, if you like to know exactly how something is going to turn out before you start it. For me, however, it is more interesting to just start in the center with a geometric design and work out to the edges in all directions and decide as I go how I want to make the adaptation.

If you are going to work any design from the center out, I strongly suggest that you do not cut your canvas to its final shape before starting. It is easy to be just one or two threads off when you are using many pattern stitches and you might have to do a great deal of ripping. By not cutting it in advance, you have some margin of error.

To test for the amount of yarn needed, cut strands into 30-inch lengths and see how many repeats of a pattern you get from one strand. Then figure the approximate number of repeats you will need in each color. Divide the total number needed by the number made with one strand to give you the number for total yards. By cutting slightly shorter than one yard, I am automatically allowing for a little extra, which is vital to avoid running short of yarn.

Victims Of Mysterious Eyelid Ailment Search For Treatment

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

A plucky widow in Beaumont, Texas, has turned her personal nightmare — eyelids that clamp shut — into a crusade joined by others similarly stricken by a mystery ailment, benign essential blepharospasm.

Doctors, including Roswell Eldridge, a neuro-geneticist at the National Institutes of Health, applaud Mattie Lou Koster, claiming her crusade may help get to the bottom of the strange disorder that robs people of control over their eyelids.

There is no known cause and no cure for the condition that struck Mrs. Koster a dozen years ago. Sometimes drugs help a little. Sometimes facial muscle surgery helps. But there are no detours around the misery.

The spasms that drew her eyelids closed got so bad and were so long-lasting that Mrs. Koster had to spend two-thirds of her time flat on her back in a room with no light.

"I told God, 'Use this,'" she said. "I told him it must be happening for some purpose."

After an operation she improved enough to be able to drive a few miles.

In 1981 Mrs. Koster set up the Benign Essential Blepharospasm Research Foundation to make doctors and the public aware of the ailment about which little is known.

Her crusade has led to other sufferers. So many people are responding, in fact, that doctors no longer call the disease rare.

It is one of the orphan diseases, however, with not enough victims to make it worth any drug company investing in research for treatment.

"We will get to the bottom of this," the widow of a Mobile Oil Co. worker said, noting the crusade has been joined by doctors interested in learning more about people with blepharospasm.

"We call ourselves blefros, and put out the 'Blefros Newsletter.'" Foundation business is conducted by volunteers out of Mrs. Koster's home. Chapters similarly operate on volunteer-power out of homes of victims.

Mrs. Koster hopes money that comes in — crumpled dollar bills and larger ones — will fund research.

A trouble, she said, is that not even the Institutes of Health is into an attack on the "blefro" problem.

"When it first happened I was told by a doctor at Baylor University no cause is known, no cure, and it's going to get worse," Mrs. Koster, 70, said, recalling the outlook when she was stricken.

Her eyelids first snapped shut when she was driving from Houston to Beaumont.

"I pulled over. It felt like a minute went by and I couldn't open my eyes. Then I could."

Marjorie Rasmussen, 54, of Pleasant Hill, Calif., had a different introduction.

"I noticed when I came out of work, when the sun was facing me, I couldn't bear the light," Mrs. Rasmussen said.

She managed a plant shop and worked under "grow lights."

"Let me tell you one thing we all have in common is sensitivity to light," Mrs. Rasmussen said. Another sign of approaching trouble.

she said, is frequent blinking. In first meetings with other sufferers, Mrs. Rasmussen said she cried.

The people similarly afflicted got together as a result of Mrs. Rasmussen setting up a chapter of the foundation. Her husband, Del, and other volunteers do most of the work these days, using the Rasmussen home as a base.

"I just cried the first time I saw others have this," Mrs. Rasmussen said. "I didn't think anyone could be as miserable as me."

Mrs. Rasmussen's condition advanced.

"My eyes were blinking, closing, blurring," she said. "I got new glasses and that didn't help. Then one day, on the way to work, my eyes just closed."

"When I got the lids opened they hurt and my eyes were swollen and I couldn't read the customers' tapes."

She no longer could work. "Soon I couldn't read or watch television. Some people's eyes are closed for days at a time.

"We have located 50 people around California who have it. Most of them have the same stories. They have been to countless doctors who don't know what it is," Mrs. Rasmussen has breathing difficulty now. Spasms are striking her chest.

These days the food field is full of talented and energetic young people. Some of them I meet in person.

One of them, Lori Tannenbaum, I met by phone. Lori, nearing her mid-20s, has divided her time between the West Coast and New England. She grew up in California, but went to Vermont's Middlebury College.

During her college years she spent some time in Paris studying political science and attending a small neighborhood cooking class run by a French woman for her compatriots.

When I commented the two subjects were an interesting combination, Lori told me she had been cooking since she was 8, and pastry-making was her passion. After graduation from Middlebury she worked with a chef in a restaurant. Nowadays, she is bakery advisor to a chain of small grocery stores in California. She specializes in developing products without additives, and she is learning about the retail food business. She likes to be out front, meeting customers as well as advising behind the scenes.

"What do you do for recreation?" I asked. "I'm working for my pilot's license," she announced. Her father has a plane, so it's easy for her to get in flying time.

At the Paris cooking class, Lori acquired a chocolate recipe she particularly liked. Back home, she worked it out — in true American fashion — so it could be made more quickly than the original. Here's her recipe.

LORITANNENBAUM'S CHOCOLATE COOKIES

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup cornstarch
1/2 cup cocoa
1 cup butter, at room temperature
2-3/4 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
1/4 cup coarsely chopped walnuts or toasted filberts
Confectioners' sugar

On wax paper stir together flour, cornstarch and cocoa.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at medium speed, cream butter, sugar and vanilla; beat in egg until blended. At low speed beat in flour mixture until blended. Stir in nuts.

On wax paper lightly dusted with confectioners' sugar, divide dough in half; shape each half into two 5- by 1 1/2-inch rolls. Wrap each roll in saran. Refrigerate until firm — overnight if necessary. Or freeze until firm.

With a very sharp non-serrated knife, cut (do not "saw") into 1/4-inch slices. Place 2 inches apart on lightly buttered cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until set — 10 to 12 minutes. With a wide spatula remove to wire racks to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container.

Makes about 3 dozen.

Peace Of Mind Is Living Will's Legacy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for mentioning the Living Will in your column again.

I read about it in your column five years ago and obtained two — one for myself and one for my wife. We were both 65 and in good health. We're 70 now and hope to have many good years ahead of us, but one never knows.

I am enclosing a copy of the column I clipped. Please give it another run. I am sure there are thousands of people who will benefit from it as we have.

C & L IN EL PASO

DEAR C & L: Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for the most wonderful present I have ever received. Because of an item in your column last year, I sent for the Living Will. Now I have peace of mind, knowing that if my husband or I should ever become terminally ill, our loved ones will never have to watch us die slow and agonizing deaths as some we have witnessed.

I saw my handsome 6-foot, 200-pound father waste away to an 88-pound skeleton after fighting a two-year battle with cancer. The doctors told us it was hopeless, yet they kept that poor dear man alive month after month with transfusions, tubes, needles and drugs, while he prayed to God to take him.

Abby, you would do millions of readers a priceless service by acquainting them with the Living Will as you did me.

GRATEFUL IN JOLIET, ILL.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thank you for giving me this opportunity to publicize the Living Will again. It reads as follows:

LIVING WILL

"To my family, my physician, my clergyman, my lawyer: If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own welfare and if there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental disability, I request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures, as I fear the indignity of deterioration, dependence and hopeless pain more than death itself. I ask that drugs be mercifully administered to me for terminal suffering even if they hasten the moment of death. You who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow this mandate. This statement is made to relieve you of responsibility and to mitigate any feelings of guilt.

Kansas City's Latest Claim Is Doctor's Low Sodium Sauce

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

The late restaurateur Arthur Bryant established the reputation of Kansas City, Mo., as a barbecue center for the United States.

Child psychiatrist Richard Davis is helping maintain it.

The Kansas City doctor's first tomato-based barbecue sauce caught on so well locally that people driving through the city buy it by the case. Airline passengers who've tasted it on TWA and US Air flights ask where they can buy it.

At this writing the original sauce and two new varieties, low sodium and hot and spicy, are sold in stores in 15 states and by direct mail from the manufacturer. Negotiations are underway for distribution west of the Rockies. Davis said in a recent telephone interview.

One taste tells you why they are popular. Even the low-sodium sauce, whose ingredients include potassium chloride, a table salt substitute, is delicious.

"Our regular label has less than half the sodium content of most national brands," Davis said.

He added he has also been experimenting with sugar-free sauces but so far hasn't been able to make an acceptable product.

"People cook with barbecue sauce and some sugar substitutes turn bitter when heated," he said.

Salt substitutes tend to impart a metallic flavor to food. Davis has avoided that problem with his low sodium sauce — perhaps because the spices or other ingredients mask the usual aftertaste.

The tomato-based sauces are sweetened with high fructose corn syrup and molasses instead of sucrose, or table sugar, and contain no artificial colors, flavorings or thickeners.

What began as a one-product company and a secondary activity for a busy doctor is growing rapidly into a family-owned food business.

"We're going to test-market some new kinds of mayonnaise this summer, some exciting flavors," he added.

The "we" consists of sons Richard II, 28, and Charles, 25. The older son recently left his law practice in Wisconsin to become president and chief executive officer of K.C. Masterpiece Products, Inc. Charles, who is in the restaurant business, has become the company's food broker in the Twin Cities area of Minnesota.

The elder Davis said his primary interest is still his medical practice.

"If there's any conflict, my patients always come first."

A free folder published by Davis' company contains 14 recipes, 13 of them for indoor use. The 14th is a pork tenderloin recipe that took first prize in the professional division of a 1980 outdoor barbecue contest sponsored by the American Royal Livestock, Horse Show and Rodeo, in Kansas City.

The grilled chicken breast recipe may be cooked indoors or out.

1 cup barbecue sauce
2 large cloves garlic, minced
1/4 cup lemon juice
12 very thin lemon slices, seeded
6 whole, boned, skinned chicken breasts

Mix barbecue sauce, garlic and lemon juice. Fold each chicken breast lengthwise over 1 lemon slice. Fasten with skewer or wooden food pick if necessary. Place breasts in a single layer in a shallow baking dish and cover with sauce mixture. Cover the dish and refrigerate overnight.

When ready to cook, drain and save sauce mixture. Brush with the sauce and grill over slow coals outdoors or place several inches below the heat source of an indoor broiler. Cook 10 to 15 minutes on the first side. Turn, baste and grill about 10 minutes more, brushing with sauce occasionally. Chicken is done when the juices are no longer pink. Decorate with remaining lemon slices. Makes 6 servings.

Editors: For a free copy of the recipe folder, send a self-addressed, stamped business size envelope to: K.C. Masterpiece Products, Inc., 101 West 18th St., North Kansas City, Mo. 64116. A mail order price list for the sauces is available from the same address.

SHOWERS OF IDEAS

Since, these days, most brides have more than one shower, theme showers are possible. This makes it less likely that gifts will be duplicated from shower to shower.

Among traditional shower themes are kitchen, bedroom, lingerie, bathroom. But there are many others which give plenty of leeway for gift-giving.

For example, how about a book and record shower? Besides books and records, gifts could include photo albums, record cleaners, blank recording tape, bookmarks, "books" of matches, or a promise to "record" the wedding ceremony on tape.

A home-office shower is another theme that lends itself to interesting and useful gifts for that area where letters are sent, bills are paid, etc. How about giving: file folders, a calculator, a telephone book, a pencil sharpener, a batch of return-address labels?

Holiday Grows

A funny thing happened to Memorial Day.

It originally was adopted as a national holiday to honor the dead in the Civil War. Later, the dead of the Spanish-American War were included; then the dead of two world wars, and the Korean War. These days, America's dead in southeast Asia are included in private prayers and public ceremonies.

In the beginning, May 30 was designated as Memorial Day. For most states, that date still holds, and in many it is a legal holiday. Others mark their Memorial Day in April, some on May 10.

Those who have read about Memorial Day are aware the occasion was instigated by some Southern women who chose May 30 as a day for decorating graves of soldiers who fell fighting for the Union and the Confederacy. A Virginia woman, Cassandra Oliver Moncure, is thought to have been the one person largely responsible.

At any rate, it was a noble concept, and one well worth keeping alive. We suspect many citizens will offer a private prayer or will give a thoughtful "thank you" for those who made the supreme sacrifice.

It's probably asking for too much to suggest all 50 states unite in one day of remembrance. It's far more likely the respective legislators are preoccupied with more immediate problems than getting together for the observance of one national holiday.

Caution Needed

Back in 1971 North Carolina began an aid program to private colleges and universities based on the premise that students trained in the private schools absorbed some of the burden from public institutions.

The thinking was sound, but now the level of aid has grown until the state is paying $850 per year for each North Carolina undergraduate attending the private institutions.

Not only that but an additional $100 per student is being proposed by legislative leaders for the 1983-85 biennium.

This is a liberal increase at a time when state funds for higher education are tight and the demand for space in the public institutions is no longer so heavy.

Our legislators should think awhile before they approve such a major increase. There are many state-supported programs which will not see increased appropriations of this magnitude during the coming biennium.

High Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) — When leaders of the major industrial democracies get together in the old Virginia state capitol at Williamsburg this weekend, much of their attention will focus on the role of the American dollar in world finance.

It's not a subject you would expect to raise in most dinner table discussions. But it has become a central issue in U.S.-European economic relations and a touchy topic for the seven nations in the Williamsburg summit conference.

The Europeans have complained frequently that the dollar is "overvalued," and the French, in particular, have urged the Reagan administration to intervene more frequently in the exchange markets to narrow the gap in currency values.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the "dollar debate."

Q. What is meant by an overvalued dollar?

A. From the Europeans' perspective, the rate at which U.S. dollars trade for other currencies is too high. The French, for example, are dismayed that a dollar will fetch about 7.4 francs, compared with a rate of 4.5 francs to the dollar 2½ years ago. The increase in the dollar's value has hurt France in two important ways: by drawing investment capital away from France to the United States, and by greatly increasing the cost of French imports. About one-third of France's imports, including all its crude oil purchases, are billed in dollars.

Q. Is the dollar really too strong?

A. In the view of the Reagan administration, no. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said recently that a weaker dollar would help the U.S. trade position by making U.S. exports less expensive while tempering the growth of U.S. imports. Even so, the administration contends that no exchange rate is "incorrect" so long as it is determined by the market forces of supply and demand.

Q. What do the Europeans want the United States to do about the strong dollar?

A. For one thing, they would like the U.S. Treasury to intervene more frequently in the exchange market. The idea would be for the Treasury to help limit the dollar's rise in value by selling dollars on the open market. That had been a common practice in past U.S. administrations. But the Reagan administration has said it will intervene only in emergencies, such as when Reagan was shot in March 1981. Also, the Europeans want the administration to bring down U.S. interest rates, which at current levels are a key reason for the dollar's high value.

Q. If this is such an important issue in U.S.-European relations, why doesn't the Reagan administration go along with the suggestion of intervening more often?

A. The administration insists that intervention ignores the fundamental reasons for the dollar's strength and the declining value of the French franc and other European currencies. As Treasury Secretary Donald Regan explained this past weekend, the administration believes the French must correct weaknesses in their own economy before currency values can be brought more into balance. While the U.S. economy — and to a lesser extent, the economies of West Germany and Great Britain — are recovering from recession, France is going in the other direction. That has made the U.S. market a favorite "safe haven" for investors.

Q. What does the United States gain from a strong dollar?

A. The main benefit is an attraction of foreign capital. That money from abroad is, for example, helping the Treasury sell billions of dollars in securities to finance the federal budget deficit without pushing interest rates higher. Without the extra demand for securities, rates would be forced higher. That unusual "shield" against higher interest rates is, at least for the moment, helping to keep the American economy on track toward recovery from recession.

RALEIGH — Crime victims and witnesses are expected to fully cooperate with law enforcement and court officials. But, oftentimes, those same officials won't cooperate with victims and witnesses. A lot of legislators have done a lot of talking about this problem but the first major piece of legislation aimed at correcting it is only now moving through the state House.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, is sponsor of the Victims' and Witnesses' Bill of Rights. The bill was approved by a House Judiciary committee earlier this month but was sent to the Appropriations committee where the $375,000 needed to enact the bill will have to be found.

The bill creates a new job in each of the state's prosecutorial districts. A witness coordinator would be responsible for coordinating activities of the police, district attorney and judge to assure that the rights of the victim or witnesses are protected.

"The intent of this article is to ensure that all victims and witnesses of crime are treated with dignity, respect, courtesy and sensitivity; and that the rights extended in this article to victims and witnesses of crime are honored and protected ... no less vigorously than are the rights of criminal defendants," the bill says.

The problem is that victims and witnesses are often treated like dirt. Lancaster's bill directly confronts some of the most common problems.

Under the bill, victims would be guaranteed the right to immediate medical assistance. Hard as it is to believe, Lancaster said there are instances when a law enforcement officer will not allow a victim to get medical treatment until he has finished his investigation.

"Some law enforcement people are not very sensitive to people in pain. They feel it's their job to investigate," Lancaster said.

Police would be required to offer the witnesses protection from retaliation by the people they will testify against. Intimidation is a growing problem, Lancaster said, especially in drug cases.

Evidence is often stored away until a case is completed. That means the TV stolen from your den may not get returned for months or years, even though police have recovered it. The bill would require steps to assure the return of evidence within 10 days.

The witness coordinator would have a number of duties aimed at making life easier for the witness. He'd contact the witnesses' employer, to explain the situation and ask the employer's cooperation. Also, he'd be responsible for keeping the witness informed of the course of investigation and the prosecution. There have been many complaints that witnesses and victims aren't given any information by the police, that they're treated like pests when they try to find out if anything's happening with their case.

Some witnesses and victims find out, after the fact, that a defendant has either been tried or that he copped a plea. The coordinator would be responsible for informing them of the case's disposition. And, if they are to appear in court, the coordinator would keep them informed as to the trial date. Often, a case will be called and all the witnesses will appear. But, the district attorney decides to try another case and the witness has given up a day's work for nothing.

When a case was going to court, the assistant would be responsible for finding a safe place for the witness to sit. In many courthouses, the witness must spend the day sitting in the same room with the defendant's friends and families.

We should know in late June if the assembly is serious about helping victims and witnesses.

A Pitch By The Bank

"Mr. Robert Parrish, Magna Cum Laude, will please step forward ... I now present you with your Bachelor of Arts degree."

"Thank you, sir."
(Applause from graduating class of Millard Fillmore University.)

"Mr. Parrish, may I have a word with you?"

"I don't believe I know you."

"I'm from the First National Thomas Jefferson Bank. According to our records you borrowed $25,890 to complete your education at 17 percent interest. We were wondering when you were going to start paying us back."

"I haven't even taken off my robe yet. Can't we talk about this tomorrow?"

"We don't know where we'll find you tomorrow. That's why the bank is now sending our people to graduations. We thought we could work out a schedule of payments. Do you have a job, Mr. Parrish?"

"No, I don't have a job."

"What kind of a position were you planning to look for?"

"I'm going to be a social worker."

"Are you trying to tell me that you believe you can pay back $25,890 plus 17 percent interest on a social worker's salary?"

"That's what I studied for. I always wanted to do something to help my fellow men and women."

"The bank considers it out of the question. It would take you 20 years to pay back your student loan."

"But the country needs social workers."

There are a lot of people out there hurting and in trouble. I know the pay is lousy but there are other things in life besides making a lot of money."

"I am sure there is a need for your profession. But why not let the people who don't owe student loans pursue it?"

"What do you want me to do?"

"Join a large corporation. I'm certain with your scholastic record you could be earning $75,000 a year in no time."

"I don't want to work for a large corporation. If I did I would have gone to business school."

"If you knew you were going to be a social worker why did you apply for a student loan?"

"Because I couldn't afford to go to college without one. No one asked me when I applied for the money what I intended to be when I graduated."

"We assumed that you would go into something that paid well, so you could honor your loan. It was your duty to level with us, so we would know from the start you were a bad risk."

"Well, it's to late now. I spent the money on my education and I'm going to devote my life to social work. I'll pay you back when I can."

"I think you ought to know, Mr. Parrish, that student loans are guaranteed by the U.S. government and they are taking a very harsh view of people who are not making good on them."

"What you're saying is the government is only interested in students who are going to make enough money to pay back their loans? What happens to the kids who want to be teachers and nurses, or work in the inner cities? America needs them, too."

"Possibly, but that isn't our concern, is it? We loaned you the money in good faith. If I go back to the bank and tell them that you're going into social work, we'll have to report it to Washington, and the next thing you know, you will be dealing with the FBI. Please, for your sake, reconsider what you want to do for a living. I understand, if you play your cards right, you can rise very fast in the telephone company."

"No dice. The bank is stuck with a social worker whether you people like it or not."

"If that's your last work, Mr. Parrish, you'll have to excuse me. I see a graduate over there who owes us $24,000 and wants to become a church minister. That's the last straw."

Myths Abound, Even In Business

NEW YORK (AP) — Myths are all about us these days, some so widely believed that they might never be dispelled.

The belief, for example, that Social Security is an insurance program that dispenses benefits on the basis of contributions, or that Uncle Sam has lots of cash to spend, although he's never had a nickel the taxpayers didn't give him.

Those are large-size myths, but there are also millions of small ones that survive despite the evidence, such as the notion that when pulled the little red plastic ribbon will really open the package of peanut butter crackers.

In the economic realm, there is the minor but fascinating myth that small businesses have their origins in the wise counsel and wads of money offered by venture capitalists who know a good thing when they see it.

In truth, venture capitalists, or high-risk investors, have little to do with founding small companies, less even than banks, which have a conservative image, and less than government, which has been accused of not caring.

Analyzing answers to a survey of 1,805 small companies, William Dunkelberg and Arnold Cooper of Purdue University found that venture capital was involved in new companies to an almost insignificant degree — less than 0.5 percent.

Where did the money come from? You guessed it, from personal savings. Forty-seven percent of the companies were begun with founders' funds, often supplemented with cash from friends and relatives.

The professors concede that their survey included few high-technology companies, which venture capital firms like, but the finding still represents something of a surprise to those who accept the myth.

Lenders such as banks and insurance companies were the major financing source of 28 percent of the companies, a percentage at least 56 times greater than the percentage financed by venture capital firms.

You have heard many myths about housing prices, including the major one that they had collapsed. The prices of individual houses in certain areas and in some price categories might have collapsed, but not the averages.

They fell in Detroit, for example, because of the deep economic problems of that city and the industrial area around it. The National Association of Realtors found median resale prices in that city were only $46,800 in the first quarter, compared with the national figure of $68,300.

But low doesn't necessarily mean worst in all instances, despite a common assumption that it does.

Prices fell in many cities, including Boston, Chicago, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Tampa, Fla. But of all the losers, who do you suppose lost the least? Detroit, of course; just six-tenths of 1 percent.

In contrast, resale prices in Boston, which is surrounded by booming high-technology companies, fell the most, 2.7 percent, in the past year.

Large cities are also the subject of another myth, they believe that people have rediscovered them and are moving there in droves, renovating older structures and living a cosmopolitan lifestyle. Some truth; much myth.

As Americans Demographics journal puts it, the eyeball appearance is at odds with the statistical evidence. People are leaving in vast numbers.

"When the nation's top 20 cities are ranked by population density, all of the 10 with the highest densities are less populous today than in 1970, with an average decline of 14 percent," says Jane Newitt, a contributing editor.

The appearance of renewed concentration may have been a result of the baby boom of two decades earlier, which produced a flood of young college graduates who flocked to cities in search of work and cultural opportunities.

Now, she suggest, the baby-bust generation is coming of age, and even the eyeball appearance of a renewed interest in inner-city living may vanish.

Telecommunication Net One Of Largest In State

By GEORGETTE F. HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

What is known in Pitt County as the "computer consortium" between East Carolina University, its school of medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital has resulted in the development of one of the largest telecommunications networks in North Carolina.

It's a state-of-the-art system that every second handles three transactions that may range from registering a patient in a specialty clinic to posting a charge on a patient's account. It's a system that keeps track of 100,000 patient records. And it's a system that prints out 400,000 pages of paper every month in patient bills and general ledger reports.

What gives life to this sophisticated network of data processing is a cable only one-half inch in diameter that links the medical school and hospital with a Univac computer located on the university's main campus. Called a broadband cable, this narrow piece of computer technology improves patient care at the health science campus by making record-keeping faster, more efficient and less expensive.

The ECU-Pitt Memorial consortium is the first broadband system in North Carolina to be designed, maintained and operated by the staffs who use it, says Dr. Glenn Crowe, director of computing and information systems at ECU.

Crowe says when the system is fully installed, the consortium will be the second largest network for data processing in the state. The largest is PIN, the Police Information Network that links law enforcement agencies across North Carolina.

"This is truly a wonderful state-of-the-art system for the three institutions," said Crowe. "We custom designed it to meet our needs, and it is doing a great job."

"We are already getting calls from other hospitals and medical schools and even some state agencies that are interested in using our system as a model. That's quite a compliment."

The broadband cable makes it possible to implement one patient data base for the medical center, a step that eliminates numerous duplications on patient records and hours of staff time. It can also be credited with improving the quality of patient care, according to John Ennis, Pitt Memorial's director of computer services.

"We now have a very sophisticated communication system that links the nursing stations with other ancillary departments throughout the hospital, including medical records, billing and radiology," said Ennis.

"For example, a request for a laboratory test can be made from a terminal at the nursing station, and it prints out in the lab in five to 10 seconds. Requests can also be made for changes to a patient's diet, for discharge information and for other patient information that is located on the patient's computer records."

"Before nursing station communications were established, all patient information was handwritten on forms and included in a chart that had to follow the patient around all over the hospital to be updated. Now patient information is updated immediately, and staff in various locations can use the computer to enter new information, check on medications, allergies or other data that may be needed to plan treatment."

Ennis said Pitt Memorial will be using 125 terminals and 20 printers when all the nursing stations are added to the system by the end of this month. "Pitt Memorial will have the third largest hospital computer system in the state when all departments are added to the network," he said.

"Duke University has the largest, and Charlotte Memorial Hospital comes in second. But Pitt Memorial is the first to use broadband and one of only 10 in the state that has computer terminals at nursing stations."

The central patient information system is also efficient and convenient for school of medicine physicians and staff. Now when a patient visits the school's Family Practice Center or Outpatient Center, all information is entered on the computer where it can be easily retrieved if the patient is admitted to the hospital or referred to other physicians on the faculty. ECU also has the first medical school to implement an on-line patient billing system.

Both Ennis and Crowe emphasized the entire computer network is designed for maximum security to protect patient confidentiality on medical records and bills.

What makes the ECU system special are the benefits offered by broadband cable, the same type of cable that cable television companies use to transmit their programming. The consortium, like other large data processing systems in the state, previously used telephone lines to connect remote users with the mainframe computer.

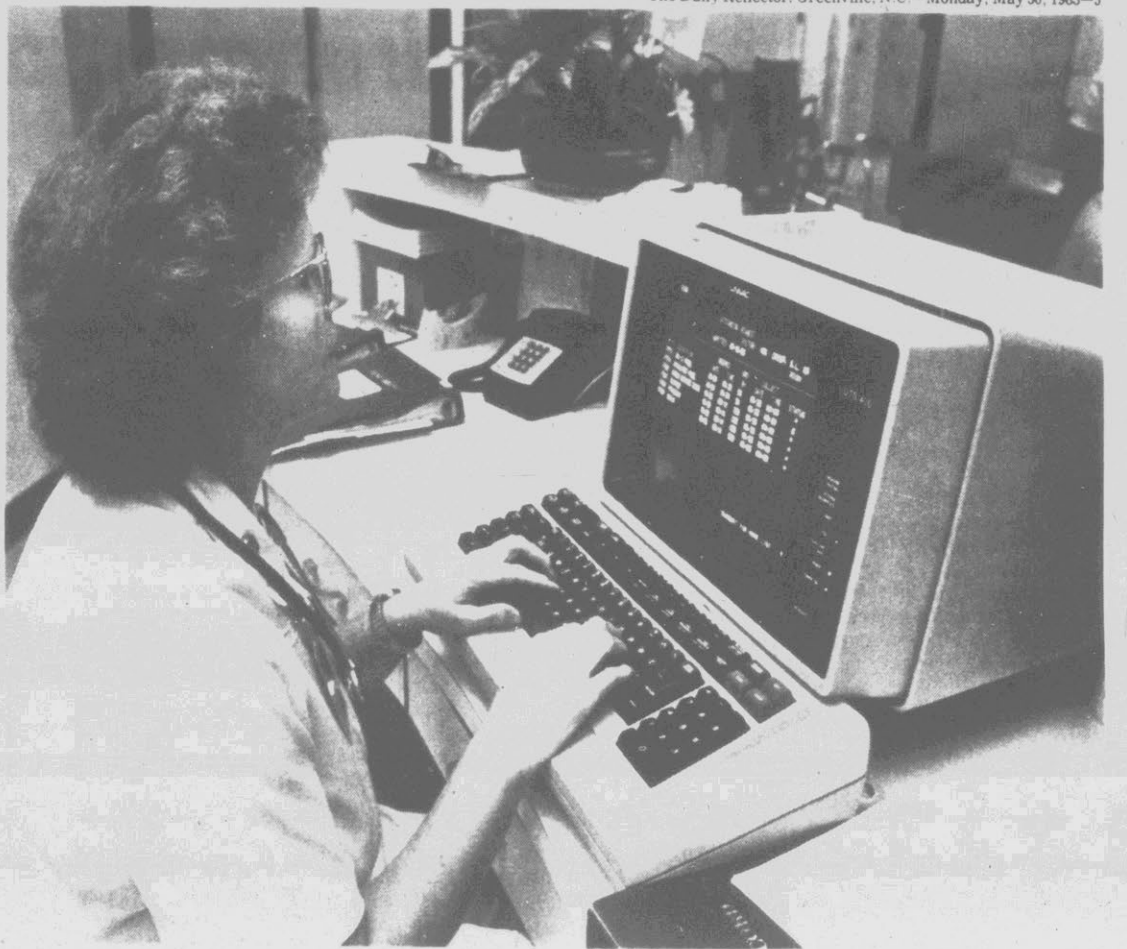

But the problem with that system, Crowe said, is that telephone lines cannot transmit a signal as clearly. Telephone lines also have a slower response time and higher operating costs.

In contrast, broadband cable offers excellent signal quality and twice the speed of telephone lines. For example, Crowe said the response time for the hospital's billing department went from 6.2 seconds to 3.6 seconds, a substantial and very noticeable difference for data processors who work in front of terminals all day.

The medical school's business office recently joined the network, and medical investigators in the Brody Building will soon have the option of using broadband cable to connect them with a research computer on ECU's main campus.

Other areas that may one day be added to the system include security, housekeeping and energy management. The cable will also make it possible for hospital, medical school and university users to see each other eye-to-eye when they are talking on the telephone.

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Police say an unidentified person in a light blue pickup truck or car drove through parts of High Point late Friday night and Saturday morning and hit 12 cars, apparently on purpose.

Damage to the cars was estimated at $4,700, High Point police said. "The cars were parked on both sides of the streets and it looks like he was hitting them intentionally," said Capt. Larry R. "Either he was ticked off at somebody in the neighborhood, or mad at the city," Pendry said. "Or it could have been he was just drunk out of his mind and didn't know he was playing pinball with the curbs."

Farm Scene

By ROGER COBB
Agricultural Extension Agent

Corn production in Pitt County has been slowed by the cool, wet soils of early spring. Planting was delayed by several weeks as much as a month in some areas.

Many farmers want to know about the yield potential of their late-planted corn. A rule of thumb has always been "you lose one-two bushels per day every day planting is delayed past April 15." This rule of thumb applies to a normal year but judge for yourself if this has been a normal year. Also, for every two days of delayed planting, maturity will be postponed one day.

Every year brings several corn problems and this one is no different. One of the first problems that began to show up was purpling of corn shortly after it emerged. The purpling is usually associated with a phosphorus deficiency but phosphorus usually isn't the problem. Cold weather has been the cause of most of the purpling this year. A carryover of Dinitroaniline herbicide (examples: Treflan, Balan, Prowl, Surflan) can also cause purpling in corn. This isn't too likely this year because of the large amounts of rainfall we received over the winter months.

A few fields have been turning up with sulfur deficiencies. The upper leaves are usually paler than the lower leaves but can be pale all over the plant. There after develops a striping between the veins.

Sulfur comes from the breakdown of organic matter in the soil from factory and auto emissions and from certain fertilizers. Often sulfur deficiencies develop on a sandy soil with a relatively low organic matter content. The only way to determine a sulfur deficiency for sure is to take a tissue analysis. Correcting the problem is usually simple and relatively inexpensive.

Weeds will begin to emerge in corn fields. Sicklepod, cocklebur, morningglories and other broadleaf weeds can be controlled with a postdirected layby herbicide application when the corn reaches 15-20 inches tall. Cultivation can also be used but should be done very shallow. Corn puts down a lot of roots in a hurry and any deep cultivation will destroy roots and hurt yields.

Final applications of nitrogen can be made along with a postdirected herbicide application to reduce the application cost. The total amount of nitrogen used depends on soil type, initial nitrogen applied and expected yields.

Environmental Improvement Predicted

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Gloomy predictions that by the year 2000 the world will be hopelessly polluted, crowded and lacking critical resources are "dead wrong," a team of more than a dozen scientists said Sunday.

In a voluminous report on global trends in population, the environment and the energy supply, the scientists concluded that "if present trends continue, the world in 2000 will be less crowded, less polluted, more stable ecologically, and less vulnerable to resource-supply disruption than the world we live in now."

"We're not saying things are good, we're saying they're getting better," said Julian Simon of the University of Illinois, who along with Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute in New York directed the team that prepared the report.

The report, released at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, was prepared in response to a study commissioned by President Carter, the Global 2000 report which was released in 1980. That study "received extraordinarily wide circulation, and it has influenced crucial governmental policies," Simon said. "But it is dead wrong."

"Sometimes temporary problems arise," Simon said, but "the solutions usually leave us better off than if the problems had never arisen."

The report takes a strong stand against government efforts to protect the environment or regulate natural resources.

The government should take no action to control the production or distribution of oil, Simon and Kahn said in a summary of the report. The government should not "take steps to make the public more 'aware' of issues concerning resources, environment and population." The scientists said there should be no funding for new governmental agencies to support research.

Global 2000, prepared under the direction of the Council on Environmental Quality and the State Department, painted a bleak picture of life in the next two decades. It said the world in 2000 will be more polluted, more crowded, less stable and more vulnerable to disruptions in the supply of natural resources than the world of today.

The Global 2000 report concluded: "Barring any revolutionary advances in technology, life for most people on earth will be more precarious in 2000 than it is now — unless the nations of the world act decisively to alter current trends."

The new report, called Global 2000 Revised, found a bright future everywhere it looked. Among its conclusions:

— Life expectancy has been rising throughout the world, a sign of scientific and economic success. The birth rate in less-developed countries has been falling.

— Though there are still many hungry people, the food supply has been improving.

— Nuclear power is probably cheaper than coal or oil, and will cause the loss of many fewer lives than coal or oil.

— Threats of air and water pollution have been "vastly overblown."

— There will be no serious shortage of land for agriculture, there is no cause for worry about the disappearance of world forests, and there is no evidence for the imminent extinction of many species of plants and animals.

— The climate shows no signs of unusual or threatening changes. "Our conclusions are reassuring, though not grounds for complacency," Simon and Kahn wrote in their summary of the report. "Global problems due to physical conditions ... are always possible, but are likely to be less pressing in the future than in the past."

In an effort to explain why the new report differs so greatly from its predecessor, Simon and Kahn emphasized that the new report was prepared by scientists outside the government and that it was financed by private funds.

"We believe that the staffs of governments and their agencies are ill-equipped to produce sound assessments of long-run future trends concerning resources," Simon and Kahn wrote.

Textbook Is Modified

TOKYO (AP) — The Education Ministry, accused last year of toning down textbook accounts of Japan's wartime actions, has approved use of the word "invasion" to describe Japan's offensives in Asia before and during World War II, an author said today.

Kosuke Yazawa, a professor at Senshu University and author of one of seven junior high school history books being revised this year, said the ministry approved use of the word "invasion" in five parts of the textbook.

China, South Korea and other Asian nations protested last year when it was learned that the ministry, which controls textbook wording, had replaced "invasion" with "advance."

The Tokyo government, faced with a diplomatic row, agreed to review the controversial passages, including sections which critics said covered up the massacre of Chinese civilians at Nanking and the suppression of independence movements in Korea, a Japanese colony from 1910 to 1945.

Last November, then-Education Minister Heiji Ogawa announced new criteria for screening textbook accounts of historical events involving Japan and its Asian neighbors. He said the new policy was aimed at promoting international understanding and cooperation.

Child Restraint Law Is Paying Off; Five Saved

By JAMES GOGGK
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina's child restraint law saved at least five toddlers' lives in traffic accidents in the six months it was in force last year, according to a highway safety researcher.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death for children under the age of 2, according to Dr. B.J. Campbell, director of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

Very young children are more easily propelled than adults on impact in a car crash, state Highway Patrol officials say. And parents often allow children to stand or lay on a car seat unrestrained since they often don't fit in conventional seatbelts.

From July 1 to the end of 1982, seven children under the age of two were killed in North Carolina traffic accidents, Campbell said. Those seven were out of about 1,000 children in accidents who weren't properly restrained, he said.

During the same period, out of 800 other accidents in which the children were using restraints, there were no deaths, Campbell said.

"We interpret those statistics that the law saved at least five children," he said.

"There are about 160,000 children in North Carolina who should be restrained under the law," Campbell said. "Every week, about 80 of them are in a traffic accident."

According to Campbell, between ten and 30 children under the age of two die each year in North Carolina traffic accidents.

"Properly used child safety seats can prevent the great majority of deaths and injuries," Campbell said.

The child restraint law, which went into effect last July 1, requires that infants up to age 1 be secured in child safety seats while riding in a car. Children between ages 1 and 2 must be secured in either child safety seats or seat belts.

Hit New Low In Crowding Cells

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

North Carolina officials say the opening of two new prisons and the speedy paroles of non-violent criminals have closed the gap between inmate population and prison capacity to perhaps the lowest level in a decade.

"Right now things are better for us than they have been in a long time," said Correction Secretary James Woodard.

In March, Department of Correction statistics show there were 17,480 inmates in prisons built to hold 14,800 people. That means the prisons were filled 18.2 percent over capacity.

Last week, there were 16,731 inmates in 83 prisons built to hold 15,961 people. That's 5 percent over capacity.

"The last time there was actually a matching population and capacity was at the end of 1972 and the start of 1973," said Ken Parker, who gathers statistics on prison admissions for the Correction Department.

Woodard said good time allotments for prisoners who behave well have been increased from 12 to 15 days a month under the Fair Sentencing Act, the state Paroles Commission has shortened the amount of time it takes to reconsider parole cases and nonviolent criminals with no prison infractions have been given "meritorious" time.

The state dedicated Eastern Correctional Center in Greene County on April 18 and Southern Correctional Center in Montgomery County on May 20. Both are medium-custody units and hold 480 prisoners each.

Woodard says the gap could be closed even more.

The state, which has more prisons than any other state, has let bids on a second phase of construction at the new Central Prison in Raleigh. The next building will hold 190 more inmates.

The General Assembly is considering funding for converting McCain Hospital, a tuberculosis facility in Hoke County, into a prison hospital with spaces for 300 sick inmates.

Dorothea Dix Hospital, a mental facility in Raleigh, is expected to share room for about 500 youthful and female inmates in the near future.

"The prospect of additional capacity increases and perhaps further decline in the (prison) population ... mean in the foreseeable future we could have a meeting of the two," Woodard said. "The $110 million project now is paying off."

The $110 million is how much the state has spent on prison construction and renovation since Gov. Jim Hunt took office in 1977, said Gary Pearce, spokesman for Hunt.

"There has been a tremendous amount of progress," Pearce said.

But Woodard said it won't be easy for the state to maintain the progress. He said prison admissions for the first three months of this year are up by 10 percent, most of them for misdemeanors.

BLEACHING DISCOLORED TEETH

Discolored teeth can be restored to their original color. The discoloration may be caused by the death of the nerve, the use of certain antibiotics (tetracycline discoloration) or, overfluoridated water. For whatever reason your tooth or teeth may be discolored, there is absolutely no reason to go through life hiding your smile. Such discolorations can be corrected by a simple process known as bleaching.

Bleaching agents are applied within the tooth to remove the stains that are in the dentin. Techniques employing concentrated oxidizing agents have been successful in most cases. This process is used for internal tooth discoloration and not for the removal of surface stains that may be polished off the enamel.

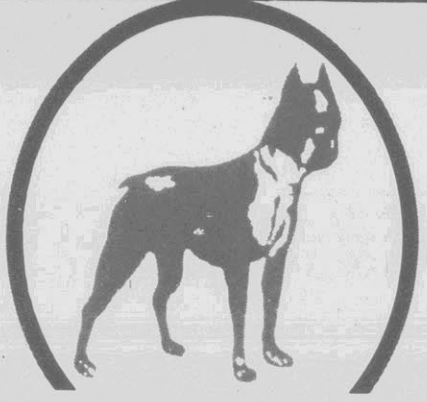

The bleaching process is usually successful but sometimes the discoloration may reappear after a few years and then another bleaching will be required. The process is quite harmless.

Of course, a more permanent cure for a discolored, or deformed tooth is an artificial crown or jacket (sometimes known as a cap.)

Guests Announced For Program

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Chief Glenn Cannon of the police department and Jim Parker of the recreation and parks department.

Cannon will discuss his department's proposed budget for 1983-84 and Parker will talk about the city's swimming pool programs.

"City Hall Notes" is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

New Laboratory Is Proposed

RALEIGH — A bill to construct and equip a new metrology (weights and measures) laboratory for the N.C. Department of Agriculture has been introduced in the General Assembly by Sen. Vernon White.

The bill would appropriate $573,000 for construction of the lab building in 1983-84 and $157,650 for equipment in 1984-85.

Davis Smith, director of the agriculture department's Consumer Standards Division said the margin of error for determining extremely accurate measurements, including mass, volume, temperature and length, is too great for National Bureau of Standards certification. Such certification is vital in demonstrating or documenting the laboratory's ability to transfer the state's standards of mass (weight) to industry and commerce.

Smith said the existing lab, built in the early 1950's, cannot be renovated because of the inability to control vibration, humidity and temperature. The present facility was built as a truck weighing and gauging facility and was not designed as a precision laboratory.

Epilepsy Donation Presented

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi presented a donation to the Coastal Plains Chapter of the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina recently. Mrs. Jeannie Clark and Jo Perrin presented the donation of Cathy Jessen, president.

This is the first time a donation of this type has been presented to the chapter during its five years in existence. The money will be used for literature, for conferences and for travel to other counties.

Demo Telethon Being Tallied

Don Ensley of Greenville, district co-chairman of the Democratic Party fund-raising telethon this weekend, said today he had no idea if the local effort was a success.

"I have no idea yet how much money was raised," Ensley said. "It will probably take two or three days to get the information."

However, Ensley said some $20 million was raised nationally.

He said it "cost between $5 million and $6 million nationally to buy the time" on television, and "I don't know what it cost to produce."

Ensley said he would consider the telethon a success if it raised $10 million more than needed to cover expenses.

Pitt Democratic Party Chairman Kathryn Lewis said she felt response to the fund raising effort locally was "very good," but said she had no figures on which to base her projection. "If it raised $20 million, I'm extremely pleased."

Betty Spier of Bethel, said the telethon "served a very definite purpose" by "promoting the ideals for which the Democratic Party stands and making people aware of the current needs and direction of the party."

Mrs. Spier said the prospect of having future telethons to raise money will depend on how successful the weekend television fund-raiser was.

Five Collisions In Greenville Saturday

An estimated $6,700 damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8:35 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets, involving a car driven by Jimi Deaver of Wilson Acres and a motorcycle operated by Raymond Harold Johnson of 1404 Eden Place.

Police, who said Johnson was injured in the mishap, estimated damage at $1,500 to the car and $2,500 to the motorcycle.

An estimated $900 damage resulted to a car driven by Encarnacion Aguilar Portal of Robersonville, when the vehicle ran off the road at the intersection of Fifth Street and Cemetery Road about 6 p.m. and collided with a utility pole, investigators reported.

Charles Wayne Cox of Route 2, Ayden, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident following investigation of a 10:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets.

Officers said the Cox car collided with a vehicle driven by Allan Samuel Handeman of 207 Harvey Drive, causing $700 damage to the Handeman car.

A passenger in a truck driven by Carmen Wilson Goodman of 547 Crestline Boulevard, was reported injured in a 1:10 p.m. collision on Evans Street, 25 feet north of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Investigators said the Goodman truck collided with a car operated by Debra Kay Page of 2700 Jefferson Drive, causing $300 damage to the Goodman vehicle and $400 damage to the Page car.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 9 a.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Maxwell Street.

Drivers of the vehicles were identified as Geraldine Teel of Route 4, Greenville and Timothy Charles Dunn of Raleigh.

Computer Workshops Planned

The computer workshops sponsored by the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, announced earlier as scheduled to be held in Durham, will instead be held at various sites in the eight school districts within North Carolina.

In District I, which encompasses Pitt and other counties in northeastern North Carolina, the workshops will be held at J.H. Rose High School and at the John A. Holmes High School in Edenton.

In addition to the names of teacher instructor and teacher student personnel from Pitt, Greene, Beaufort and Martin Counties listed in an article on Thursday, another teacher, Jewel M. Tugwell of North Greene Elementary School will attend as a pupil.

State Board Issues Licenses

Several Greenville residents were among those who obtaining licenses recently from the State Board of Examiners of Plumbing and Heating Contractors.

The board said that J.C. Clark II, Harry L. Sloan, Thomas H. Tice Jr. and Linwood McLawhorn were granted licenses to engage in the business of plumbing contracting.

Sloan also obtained a license in heating contracting as did Wesley R. Banks.

Thomas Ellingson and Jack E. Horrell, both of Snow Hill, received licenses in air conditioning contracting.

Vehicles Collide At Intersection

A truck driven by Jack Russell Bryant of 215 South Meade St., and a car operated by Sandra Jo Roberts of 408 Highland Ave., collided about 4:16 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of Tenth and Hamilton Streets.

Police set damage from the collision at $500 to each of the two vehicles.

Treatment Plant Bids To Be Considered

The Board of Commissioners of the Greenville Utilities Commission will meet at noon Tuesday to review bids and award construction contracts for the new waste water treatment plant.

Commission approval of the bids will be subject to final approval by the Environmental Protection Agency and the State's Department of Environmental Management.

Apparent low bids at the bid opening on May 18 totaled some $10.2 million.

Add Time On Allotments

By The Associated Press
The deadline for comments on proposed rules for changing the ownership of some flue-cured and burley tobacco allotments and quotas has been extended 30 days until June 22, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

Some people have complained that they learned of the April 22 proposal only recently, said Everett-Rank, administrator of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Rank announced last week that the deadline is being extended because of the number of requests and because of the extent of the proposal's effects. The proposal would provide rules for carrying out a provision in the No Net Cost Tobacco Act of 1982.

Under the act, groups — but not individuals — that are not significantly involved in the management or use of land for farming are required to sell their allotments and quotas before Dec. 1 or forfeit them after that.

Third To Die Of 'Wrong' Gas

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — A third hospital patient has died after breathing argon gas that officials say mistakenly was pumped into the oxygen system at Fort McClellan's Noble Army Hospital.

Charlotte Huddleston, 27, was pronounced dead of cardiac arrest Sunday night at Northeast Alabama Medical Center where she had been transferred after slipping into a coma Wednesday, a spokeswoman said.

An army sergeant and a premature infant died early Wednesday from inhaling the argon, a gas normally used in welding, officials said. Hospital officials said an argon tank that resembled oxygen containers mistakenly was hooked into an oxygen system.

Enforcement Of Civil Rights Laws Debated

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division defended the Reagan administration's civil rights record in a debate with two black leaders, claiming that the government is prosecuting more than 100 discrimination cases.

NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks and former National Urban League President Vernon Jordan debated with Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Both Jordan and Hooks

Tainted Soil In The Low Spots

DALLAS (AP) — A nuclear company employee has told authorities he was allowed to take radiation-contaminated soil from the plant's grounds and used it to fill low spots on his property, a newspaper reported.

Michael A. Jaschek said in a deposition for the state attorney general's office he took the least-tainted soil found in tests at Gulf Nuclear Inc., a Houston-area firm, and had it hauled to his home in an uncovered truck. The Dallas Morning News said Sunday.

David Lacker, chief of the Texas Health Department's Bureau of Radiation Control, said the disposal represents "a potential hazard" to the public. Gulf Nuclear removed most of the tainted soil three weeks ago and has agreed to remove the rest, Lacker said.

CONFERENCE BEGINS
BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Interparliamentary Union today opens a six-day conference which will be the first meeting of the organization in a Soviet bloc country.

charged that the Reagan administration is insensitive to the needs of minorities, and Hooks said that by opposing affirmative action as "reverse discrimination" the administration was acting as if "white males are the minority."

Calling this "stupid," Hooks said it defied the nation's "long and glorious history of compensating people for certain disadvantages."

But Reynolds insisted the administration has a "remarkably good" record, saying the Justice Department is prosecuting more than 100 cases of employment discrimination against individual blacks and women.

"This is the administration that has brought more criminal prosecutions against police brutality, against Ku Klux Klan activities, against racial violence, against involuntary servitude than any other administration in the history of the civil rights division," Reynolds said.

Reynolds also said that Reagan did not, as many believed, favor tax-exempt status for schools that practice racial discrimination. He said the administration opposed the Supreme Court's ruling on the issue last week because it granted the Internal Revenue Service "full and unfettered" authority to determine which institutions are in the public interest.

In an 8-1 vote, the Supreme Court ruled that the government can deny tax breaks to schools that discriminate on the basis of race.

Jordan called for Reynolds' resignation as head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, saying the administration had harmed blacks by trying to water down the 1965 Voting Rights Act by firing three members of the Civil Rights Commission last week and not appointing a single black federal judge.

It was Hooks' first public appearance since the chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Margaret Bush Wilson, suspended him May 18.

Mrs. Wilson revoked Hooks' suspension last Thursday. On Saturday, the NAACP board curtailed Mrs. Wilson's duties to the point where her powers are largely ceremonial, ending a long conflict over control of the civil right organization.

The NAACP board also voted 50-1 to ask Mrs. Wilson to resign, but she said Sunday in Alton, Ill., that she will not step down.

"I have no plans to resign," Mrs. Wilson said before a speech at a fundraiser for the local NAACP chapter.

In her speech, she said, "There are those who suggest this is a power struggle. But this is about professionalism, effective administration, organized discipline and intelligent board responsibility."

Net collections in the 99 participating counties during the month amounted to $20,619,599, Lynch said.

Feel Strain Of A Long Session

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As a general rule, the longer the legislative session, the shorter the lawmakers' tempers.

The 1983 General Assembly is preparing to enter its sixth month and the signs of unrest, particularly between the House and Senate, are everywhere. Lawmakers involved in the disputes usually say they are aimed at preserving the "integrity" or "authority" of their certain group.

House and Senate members trying to resolve differences on Gov. Jim Hunt's bill to fight drunken driving adjourned Thursday after a bitter session during which the senators threatened to walk out. Reportedly the two sides couldn't agree on the purpose of the meeting much less the points in the bill.

The bill has been in the Legislature since Jan. 12 and the spat may force Hunt, who is becoming anxious about the bill's passage, to intervene.

Gary Pearce, a spokesman to Hunt, told The News and Observer of Raleigh that the delay, "is an embarrassment to everybody involved. It has gone on too long."

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, Senate chairman of the conference committee, said the senators went to the meeting to work while House members went "to posture."

Then a tug of war between two of the General Assembly's most powerful members turned into a kind of free-for-all Friday, when the House asked the Senate to return a bill allowing local governments to spend property tax revenues for industrial recruitment.

The House approved the bill Thursday but Rep. John Varner, D-Davidson, moved that it be recalled so he could propose an amendment. The Senate, at the urging of Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, rejected that request.

In retaliation, Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, asked that House approval of all Senate bills Friday be rescinded. Despite some protests, Adams' proposal drew overwhelming approval.

Hardison accused Adams of "playing childish games." Adams said he took action "to protect the integrity of the House."

Apparently Adams and Hardison had tried unsuccessfully to reach an agreement earlier on handling the bill.

"It's a common courtesy to put off action on a bill when somebody wants to do some checking," said Hardison. "It's done all the time."

But Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, said it was the Senate that had violated rules of legislative etiquette by declining to return the bill.

Not everyone went along with the action.

"Two wrongs do not make a right," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford. "I agree that for them (the Senate) not to send back the bill is immature, but (Adams' proposal) is not the way to respond."

But Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said the House should "fight fire with fire."

"I don't understand such shenanigans," said Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford.

A third major battle could be brewing over how to shorten future legislative sessions. Both senators and representatives say they're worried that North Carolina soon will have a professional, full-time legislature.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey wants to begin the 1985 session several weeks late, a measure that's been approved by the House and is waiting for Senate committee action.

Ramsey argues that the major task of the session — writing a two-year budget and finding ways to raise the money for it — can't be done until May or June so there's no use getting to Raleigh so early.

But Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has another plan, which the Senate has approved and is waiting for House committee action. It would permit a short organizational meeting in January and have the Legislature adjourn to return several weeks later.

Green's plan would depend on committees operating between sessions, something Ramsey has strongly opposed.

Says Power Not In Weaponry

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — J. William Fulbright, the former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, says nuclear weapons alone cannot provide the "key to war and peace."

"The building of more weapons, especially nuclear weapons, is not what we need," the Arkansas Democrat told 1,000 graduates Sunday at the University of Scranton.

Fulbright, 78, received an honorary doctorate of humane letters during the commencement.

In last 14 years, Scranton has received 40 foreign students through the federal scholarship program that bears Fulbright's name.

Fulbright, elaborating on his opposition to a nuclear weapons buildup, said, "The key to war and peace is not our capacity for violence, but in our intentions, not in the systems we deploy, but in our perceptions of each other."

"There is nothing that Russia or the United States can do to eliminate the capacity of each to destroy the other. What they can do is try and influence each other's intentions so that they will not wish to destroy each other," he said.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area yesterday, computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was .64. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 64 percent of your hot water needs.

ERUPTION

REYKAJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Grimsvöten volcano erupted and sent tons of volcanic ash crashing down onto the Vatnajökull glacier, and blasts of steam soaring 1,600 feet into the air Sunday, observers said.

Sneva's Luck Holds Out For Indy Win

Fuel Holds Out At Brickyard For First Victory In 10 Tries

Unser's Narrowly Miss Denying Sneva Crown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There was one lap to go. 2.5 tantalizing miles to the checkered flag that would signal his victory in the Indianapolis 500, when Tom Sneva saw the fuel light on his control panel suddenly stop blinking and stay on permanently.

It might as well have been a siren going off in his crash helmet.

For 10 years, Sneva had been trying to win auto racing's most glamorous event. Each time, though, something seemed to block his way.

But after dispensing with this year's obstacle — rookie Al Unser Jr., who was trying to give his father, three-time Indy champ Al Sr., a birthday present by running interference for him — Sneva wasn't about to let a fuel warning deter him.

"I thought we had enough (fuel) to go the distance," said Sneva. "That's what the guys in the pits kept telling me. Until it goes on solid, you're OK. It was on (solid) the last lap, but you have to go with it."

So he simply ignored the light, floored the accelerator and cruised to his first Indy title after three frustrating second-place finishes.

Sneva's average speed of 162.117 mph in his March-Cosworth was the second fastest time in Indy history and pushed him past the finish line 11.1 seconds ahead of Al Unser Sr., who was celebrating his 44th birthday and searching for a record-tying fourth Indy crown.

The Unseers, father and son, made it exceedingly difficult for Sneva, a former junior high school principal. For 16 frustrating laps, Sneva battled both of them, challenging the elder for the lead in a duel that was complicated by the younger Unser, who tried to play buffer for his dad.

Sneva used every ounce of his last supply of fuel, which he took on with 30 laps to go when Mike Mosley's crash — the last of only four all day — put the race under its final yellow flag. Actually, Sneva was lucky to stay in the chase at that point, barely avoiding Mosley's spinout.

But he made it and headed for his final pit stop, spending 27.9 seconds in there, loading up, while the senior Unser was in more briefly, using just 11.4 seconds.

That gap in pit time was caused by Unser's decision not to change tires, a choice the veteran later regretted. The strategy looked good at the time though because his quick exit from the pits enabled Unser to move into the lead with less than 75 miles to go.

It was then that the younger Unser entered the picture. He was running about five laps behind the leaders but found himself racing with the leaders, his dad and Sneva. The 21-year-old, one of six rookies in the race, became a blocking back for his father, positioning himself in front of Sneva and refusing to yield position.

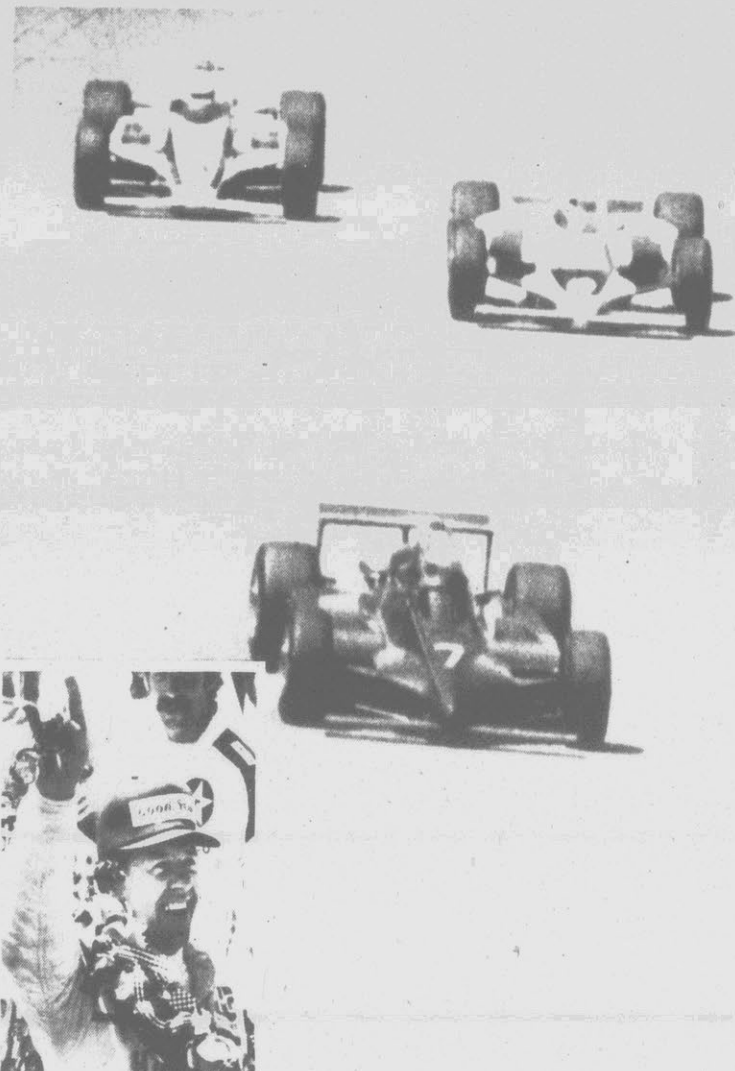

For 16 laps they raced that way — Unser Sr. leading the way, Unser Jr. behind him and Sneva looking for room to move. Every time Sneva tried to step in front of "Little Al," there was no place to go.

Unser Jr. made no secret of his motives.

"I was trying to help Dad win the race," he said. "That's what I was trying to do. If I could help Dad with the race, I was going to."

He went a bit too far, illegally passing two cars under the yellow, a violation that cost him a two-lap penalty.

For his part, Sneva was annoyed at the tactics. "I know this is racing and a driver must take what he can," he said. "But the rule states specifically that a driver should not pass under the yellow. I could understand it if Al was competing for the victory. But he was well behind and had no chance."

Sneva Moves Ahead, Wins

cars to become the winner of the Indianapolis 500 Sunday. Sneva (inset) celebrates his first trip to the winner's circle. (AP Laserphotos)

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — As far as Tom Sneva is concerned, one Al Unser was enough and two was almost too many.

Everytime Sneva looked around in Sunday's Indianapolis 500, it seemed, he saw an Al Unser. If not Al Unser, 44, the three-time Indy winner, then his son, Al Unser Jr., 21.

When he saw them together, both ahead of him, 25 laps from his first Indy victory, he confessed: "I was getting a bit nervous out there. They made me work for it. I wasn't sure what was going to happen, when I was going to be able to get by them or not."

From the 175th lap through the 191st of the 200-lap race, Sneva fought to overtake the two Unseers — the first father and son to drive against each other in Indy's 67-year history.

Family ties, as far as Sneva was concerned, were going a bit far.

Al Sr. was leading the race. Sneva was second. But Al Jr., running 10th five laps behind, was in between, blocking Sneva's path.

"Each time Sneva tried to pass, Al Jr. cut him off."

"I could understand it if Al Jr. was competing for the victory," a miffed Sneva said later, after he had beaten Al Sr. to the checkered flag by 11.1 seconds. "But he was well behind and had no chance."

The way Al Jr. saw it, if he had no chance, he might as well help out his father.

"I was trying to help my dad win the race," said the baby-faced Unser, who would go on to finish 10th in his first Indy. "I tried to do the job as best I could. I was hoping Dad would stay in front. I was doing my all to keep him (Sneva) behind me."

It worked for a while.

"Young Al's machine was working well and he was taking up a lot of track," Sneva said.

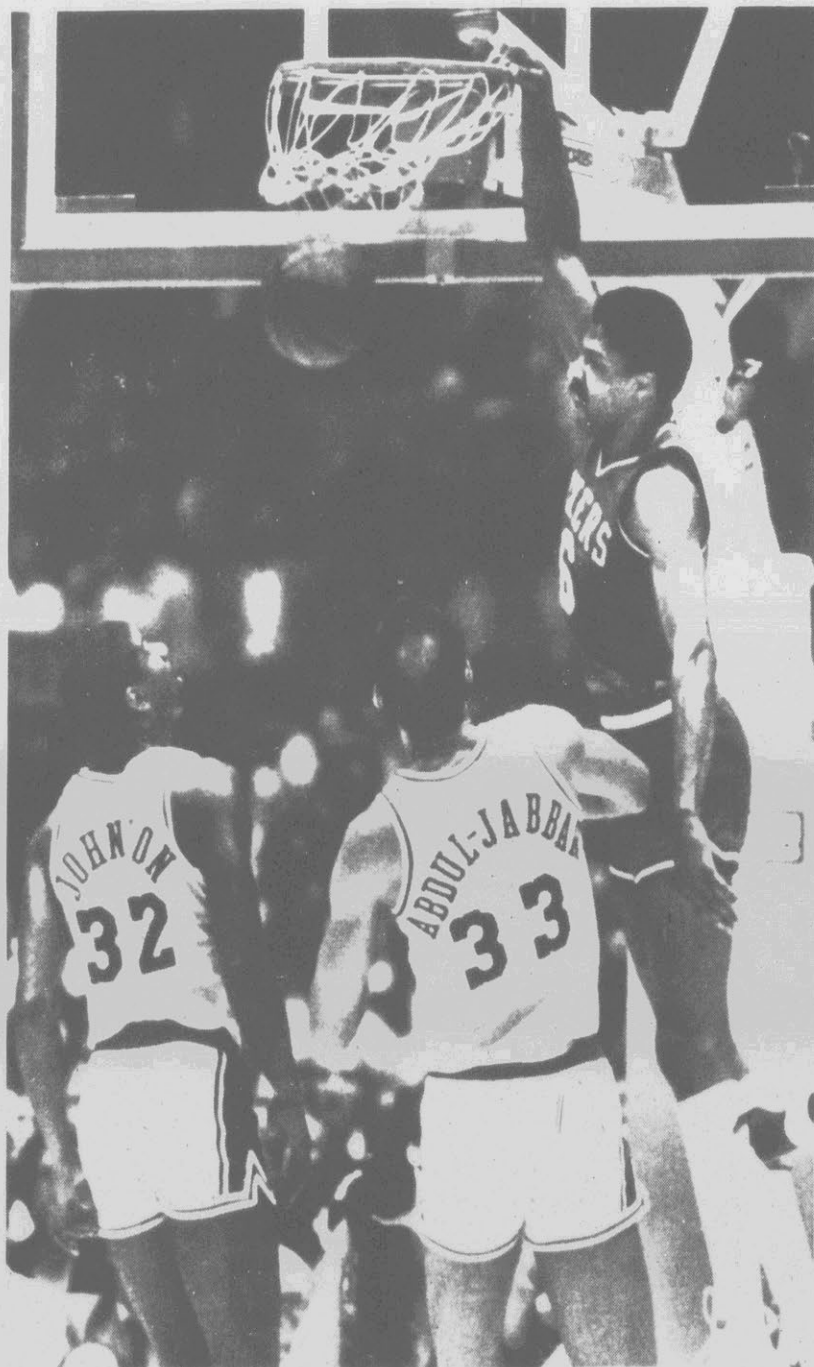

Up front, Al Sr. knew what was happening.

"I could see it in my mirror," he said.

Unser was adamant, however, that he and his son had not planned their race-ending strategy. "I will never do that."

Whoever mapped the plan, the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club said Al Jr. got too ambitious by illegally passing both his father and Sneva at one point under a yellow caution light. Al Jr. was penalized two laps for the infractions.

Over The Trees

Philadelphia's Julius Erving slams home a 76ers' field goal over Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul Jabbar

in the 76ers' 11-94 comeback victory over the Lakers Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Sixers Make It Three Straight

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers don't seem satisfied with the prospect of merely erasing their image as a team that can't win a championship. They want to stamp themselves as the most dominant playoff team in National Basketball Association history.

The powerful 76ers, taking command in the final quarter, rolled to a 111-94 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers Sunday to build their NBA championship series advantage to 3-0.

And the 76ers seem intent on burying the defending league champion Lakers in the fourth game of the best-of-seven series.

"We want Los Angeles in four," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham after the victory at the Forum. "We want people to remember this team."

Philadelphia, which last won an NBA title 16 years ago and lost to the Lakers in the finals last year and in 1980, has breezed through this year's playoffs with 11 victories and just one loss.

Another win over the Lakers in Tuesday night's Game 4 at the Forum would make the 76ers the first team in the league's 37-year history to go through the playoffs with just one defeat. Only the 1982 Lakers and the 1971 Milwaukee Bucks made it through the playoffs with as few as two losses.

Philadelphia's Julius Erving, whose otherwise outstanding NBA career has been blemished by the lack of a championship, said, "We're more determined than ever and more capable of winning our next game, and that's what I think we're going to do."

Moses Malone scored 28 points and pulled down 19 rebounds and Erving had 21 points and 12 rebounds for the 76ers, who rattled off a 14-0 string to take command after trailing 76-72 early in the final quarter.

Andrew Toney also scored 21 points in the victory and Bobby Jones came off the bench to add 17.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 23 points and 15 rebounds. Jamaal Wilkes added 20 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 18 points and 13 assists.

Malone said: "Their backs are against the wall and we want to keep them there. We want to fly back to Philly and have the fans waiting for us at the airport."

Lakers Coach Pat Riley said his players have to forget about their three losses.

"Even though we are down 3-0, this is not our death bed," he said. "We can't look back ... we have to play for the next game."

"You have a dream and you never give it up. We have to continue to believe in ourselves," the Laker coach added. "I'll never, ever concede anything, especially a championship."

The Lakers, who beat the 76ers 4-2 in last year's finals, are just one loss away from becoming the 14th straight league champion that has failed to successfully defend its title. The last club to repeat as champion was the 1969 Boston Celtics.

The odds are heavily stacked against the Lakers. No team in NBA history has ever come back to win a best-of-seven series after losing the first three games.

"I don't have to tell you it's an uphill climb," said the Lakers' Johnson. "I just don't want it to end 4-0."

Stars' Title Bid Delayed By Pass

By The Associated Press

Because Boston wide receiver Frank Lockett stayed put, the Philadelphia Stars will have to wait at least another week before clinching a United States Football League playoff spot.

The Stars, 11-2, saw their eight-game winning streak snapped when Lockett caught a tipped pass on the game's final play Sunday, lifting the Breakers to a 21-17 victory. Boston, 8-5, is second to Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

"It was a great catch, wasn't it?" said Lockett, a substitute who grabbed quarterback Johnnie Walton's 14-yard pass after it was deflected by teammate Charlie Smith, the intended receiver. "One of their defensive backs pushed me over there, and I just stayed there because I thought the play was dead."

Then the ball came fluttering off Smith's hand and into Lockett's arms.

"I wasn't able to get but one hand on it," said Smith. "You can tell when a ball is going to fall straight to the ground. I knew it was in the air. I looked around for it, and there was Frank."

Elsewhere in the USFL Sunday, it was New Jersey 32, Washington 29, and Oakland 20, Los Angeles 10.

Monday's games feature Tampa Bay at Michigan and Arizona at Chicago.

Boston began its winning 65-yard march trailing 17-13 with 1:50 to play. Walton threw on all 12 plays, completing seven passes. On fourth-and-10 at the Philadelphia 14 with four seconds to go, he and Lockett — by way of Smith — connected for the decisive TD.

When much of the crowd of 15,668 raced onto the field to celebrate, preventing Boston from attempting the extra point, the officials awarded Boston a two-point conversion.

The Breakers held Kelvin Bryant to 47 yards, his lowest output of the season, on 21 carries.

While Bryant was stymied, New Jersey's Herschel Walker had an 83-yard run on the first play from scrimmage — the longest touchdown run in the USFL's brief history — and 194 yards rushing, another league mark, while quarterback Jeff Knappe of the Generals passed for his first two touchdowns as a pro. But it took a 50-yard field goal by Dave Betz as time ran out to win the game.

Mike Hohensee passed for two TDs for the Federals, 1-12 and losers of nine straight.

Oakland's Raymond Chester fell on his own fumble in the end zone for a touchdown. Fred Besana threw a pass from the LA 38 that Chester caught at the 5. He fell and fumbled on the 2, but recovered the ball in the end zone to give Oakland a 14-7 lead in the third quarter. The teams are 6-7 and tied for first in the Pacific Division.

Oakland also scored on Jack Holmes' 3-yard run and two field goals by Kevin Shea. Wilbert Haslip's 1-yard run and Vince Abbott's field goal accounted for the Express' points.

Woy Must Prove Malice

ATLANTA (AP) — Sports agent Bucky Woy's lawyers must prove Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner acted with malice when he said in 1979 that Woy was responsible for the death of Braves General Manager Bill Lucas, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge Horace Ward put the burden of proof on Woy when he ruled Saturday that the agent was a public figure during a period of heated negotiations over third baseman Bob Horner's contract which preceded Lucas' death on May 5, 1979.

The ruling Saturday followed six days of testimony in Woy's $17 million defamation of character suit against Turner. The trial in Atlanta is scheduled to resume Tuesday after a Memorial Day recess.

Woy sued Turner after the Braves owner told a reporter that Woy was "guilty of manslaughter" in Lucas' death.

The 43-year-old Lucas was negotiating Horner's contract with Woy when he died, after an aneurysm in his neck caused a brain hemorrhage and cardiac arrest.

Woy said Turner's statements about him hurt his reputation. Turner's lawyers have said Turner was simply stating his opinion.

Giants Exceed Goal On Long Road Trip

By The Associated Press
They are a weary band of vagabonds returning home, finally.
Winding up their longest road trip in 15 years, the San Francisco Giants can take a great deal of satisfaction in exceeding even the expectations of their very demanding manager, Frank Robinson.
At the outset of this 16-game, five-city junket, Robinson said he would be satisfied to win between seven and 10 games. By winning three of four in Los Angeles, including a 6-4 decision Sunday, the Giants came home with 11 victories.

"To wind up the trip winning three of four in the park of the first-place club, that is really something," Robinson said.
The losing series dropped the Dodgers to within 1½ games of the Atlanta Braves, who beat Chicago 6-2 on Sunday.
In other NL games, Philadelphia defeated Montreal 5-2, New York edged San Diego 3-2 and Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 8-5.

On top of the loss, the Dodgers learned that relief ace Steve Howe, who had not given up an earned run this season, would have to re-enter a drug and alcohol treatment program. He was placed on the 21-day disabled list.
The Giants won Sunday's game on a two-out, bases-loaded single by Max Venable in the ninth inning. The victim was reliever Dave Stewart, who lost for the first time in five decisions.
Darrell Evans started the rally with a single and was sacrificed to second. Stewart then walked Jack Clark intentionally and, after fanning Jeff Leonard, Stewart walked Champ Summers to fill the bases for Venable.

Evans and Clark both homered for the Giants, who won for the eighth time in their last nine games at Dodger Stadium.
Braves 6, Cubs 2
Bob Horner hit a two-run double to spark a four-run first inning as Atlanta won for the seventh time in 10 games, all without a homer. In fact, the power-hitting Braves have gone homerless for 13 games.
Rick Camp, 4-4, scattered six hits before leaving with two out in the seventh to beat Dick Ruthven, 2-3.
Bill Buckner homered for the Cubs, who have lost two in a row and three of their past five.
Cardinals 7, Astros 3
Jamie Quirk rapped his second homer in three years and drove in four runs to lead the Cardinals to their fifth victory in six games, while the Astros have lost three of four.

Quirk's three-run homer capped St. Louis' four-run fifth inning.
Dave LaPoint, 4-1, allowed six hits and struck out five in seven innings, and Bruce Sutter shut the door on the Astros. Mike Scott, 0-3, was the loser.
Phillies 5, Expos 2
Bo Diaz and Mike Schmidt each homered, and right-hander Larry Christenson pitched Philadelphia to its second straight victory after losing six in a row. Diaz's homer, No. 5, was a two-run shot in Philadelphia's three-run sixth inning, and Schmidt hit No. 9 in the seventh.
Christenson, 2-4, pitched 6 2/3 innings, giving up eight hits after waiting out a one hour 22 minute rain delay at the game's start. Bill Gullickson, 4-6, was the loser as the Expos dropped their second straight after winning five in a row.
Mets 3, Padres 2
The Mets averted a three-game sweep in San Diego with some unexpected power hitting from Mookie Wilson and a tiebreaking single by Hubie Brooks in the sixth inning. Wilson's two-run homer, his second of the year, forged a 2-2 tie, and Brooks' single scored Bob Bailor, who had singled, stolen second and taken third on catcher Terry Kennedy's throwing error.

Ed Lynch, 3-2, scattered seven hits over eight innings to beat Tim Lollar, who has not won for San Diego since opening day, and Jesse Orosco pitched the ninth for his third save.
Pirates 8, Reds 5
Pittsburgh erased a 5-4 Cincinnati lead with two runs in the seventh inning, then scored three more in the eighth to give Chuck Tanner the 1,000th victory of his major league managerial career. Bill Madlock singled home the tying run and later scored the go-ahead run on a bunt by Richie Hebner.
The victory moved Tanner into 35th on the all-time win list. Only four other active managers — Ralph Houk of Boston, Dick Williams of San Diego, Sparky Anderson of Detroit and Billy Martin of the New York Yankees — have reached the 1,000-victory plateau.
Tony Pena went 4-for-4 with two RBI and a triple for the Pirates.

safely. Bailor later scored the winning run, as the Mets won the game 3-2 Sunday in San Diego. (AP Laserphoto)

Homers For Winning Run Jackson Slumps In May

By The Associated Press
Contrary to the way it's supposed to be, the days have been growing longer and longer for Mr. October.
But with one swing Sunday, Reggie Jackson may have started to hit his way out of a horrendous slump.
Jackson was hitless in 21 at-bats and 8-for-83, sporting an embarrassing .176 average when he stepped to the plate in the ninth inning of a tie game in Cleveland Stadium with one out and a runner on first. As usual, he relished the spotlight and slammed his seventh home run of the season to give the California Angels a 6-4 triumph over the Indians.

"I feel better," Jackson said. "At least I felt today that I could offer at the ball. The guys were very happy for me. They've been pulling for me, and that's the thing that's been keeping me going. My teammates have been fantastic, picking me up and patting me on the back. Everybody's been very supportive. My timing has been off, as it usually is when you struggle. I've been asking God for help and contentment."

Baltimore Orioles 4-0, the New York Yankees shut out the Oakland A's 5-0, the Seattle Mariners downed the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4, the Chicago White Sox trounced the Texas Rangers 8-2 and the Detroit Tigers edged the Minnesota Twins 7-6.
Jackson's homer boosted his average to .182. Despite his snail-like start, the Angels have been rolling merrily along, and Sunday's victory was their seventh in a row.
Rod Carew opened the ninth with his third single of the game — he is hitting .453 — and was forced by Juan Beniquez before Jackson connected. Fred Lynn also homered for California.
Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 1
At Toronto, Lloyd Moseby hit a solo homer in the second inning and a two-run shot in the fifth and Jim Gott held Boston to three singles as the Blue Jays climbed into a tie with the Red Sox atop the American League East. Boston's Dennis Eckersley, who missed three starts with tendinitis in his shoulder, gave up six runs and 10 hits in five innings.

Bonnett Takes 2nd World 600

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Neil Bonnett knows some things that go around once may come around again, particularly on a race track. It came around to him as a second consecutive World 600 victory.
A crowd of 137,000 watched as Bonnett sold off Richard Petty Sunday at Charlotte Motor Speedway's 1.5-mile tri-oval to capture the $488,010 event, his 12th career victory on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit.
However, Bonnett's one-second victory and $50,405 earnings came after a four-car accident on lap 341 that squelched the victory hopes of then-leaders Bobby Allison and Bill Elliott.
Allison, who was able to continue, further complicated his victory chances by passing the pace car during the ensuing caution period. Allison, who still managed to maintain his Winston Cup points lead and take the earnings lead from Darrell Waltrip, was black-flagged by NASCAR officials and placed at the end of the pack.
That combination of events put Petty into the lead, but he didn't stay there long. Shortly after racing resumed, Bonnett passed Petty and then held off NASCAR's leading career winner for the last 53 laps.
Allison regrouped to take third place, followed by Waltrip and Dale Earnhardt. Lake Speed, pole-sitter Buddy Baker, Kyle Petty, Morgan Shepherd and Dave Marcis rounded out the top 10.
"Some of the guys up front had bad luck and we won," Bonnett said in victory circle. "I've been in the same shape myself. Maybe we just got one of them back."
It didn't come easily as Waltrip's day turned sour on lap 147 when Gant tried to squeeze between he and Earnhardt. Gant's car struck Waltrip, sending him into a slide which ended on the infield grass, costing him a lap.

The race began under cloudy skies and forecasts of thunderstorms, but ended with a temperature of 72 degrees and intermittent sunshine. Bonnett averaged 140.707 mph as the race was slowed by five caution periods covering 28 laps.

Third Time In Corning Classic Is Charm For Victorious Sheehan

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Twice before, Patty Sheehan played in the Corning Classic, and both times were disasters. So she felt compelled to return, in order to master the place that had given her her worst experiences on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.
The third time was the charm for the 26-year-old Middlebury, Vt., native Sunday as she put together a nearly flawless, 9-under-par 63 to win the $150,000 Corning Classic by eight strokes over Cindy Hill.
"Patty's round was absolutely fabulous," said Hill, who turned on the pressure with a 68 on the final round and a 72-hole total of 280 — good enough to match the previous tournament record set last year by Sheehan and Sandra Spuzich, but hardly in sight of Sheehan's four-day total of 272, 16-under-par.
LPGA Hall of Famer Sandra Haynie, who finished third at 281, also fired a 68, while Kathy Young and Kathy Hite, who tied for fourth with cumulative scores of 282, shot 1-under 71 and par 72, respectively.

JoAnne Carner and Valerie Skinner, who started the day in a deadlock, ended that way after 71s which left each at 286 after four days on the 6,286-yard Corning Country Club layout.
Sheehan, the 1981 LPGA rookie of the year, had been snakebit at Corning since the start, losing two years ago to Hite because of a bogey on the 17th hole on the final round and then losing to Spuzich last year after a double-bogey 6 on No. 17 and a bogey 5 on No. 18.
But she made sure of the $22,500 first prize this year.
"I was going for the flag all day," she said. "There was no way I was going to play it safe. When I hit my shot to the 16th green (for the eighth of nine birdies), and I was just four feet from the pin, I knew that no matter how badly I played on 17 and 18, I couldn't lose," she said.
The victory vaulted Sheehan from 11th on the money list to fourth with $84,692 and put her in line for the richest bonanza ever offered in women's golf — the $1.35 million promised the winner of the Corning, West Virginia and McDonald's classics.

Sheehan, who won her fifth tournament, could pull in $450,000 over the regular purses by winning either the Wheeling, W.Va., event this week or the July 14-17 finale of the triple bonus at Malvern, Pa., but would need to win both to collect the big prize.
Royals 4, Orioles 0
At Kansas City, rookie Pat Sheridan smacked his second home run of the season in support of the seven-hit pitching of Paul Splittorff and Dan Quisenberry as the Royals handed Dennis Martinez his ninth setback in 12 decisions this season. Hal Mcrae and U.L. Washington also had RBI hits.
The outing by the 35-year-old Splittorff was a big boost for the Royals since ace right-hander Dennis Leonard underwent knee surgery Sunday.
Yankees 5, A's 0

Singles by Richie Zisk, Pat Putnam and Dave Henderson, a walk, Todd Cruz's squeeze bunt, Julio Cruz's sacrifice fly and Steve Henderson's grounder accounted for the other runs in the inning. Cecil Cooper homered for Milwaukee.
Mariners 6, Brewers 4
Ricky Nelson's tie-breaking homer off Don Sutton triggered a five-run Seattle sixth inning and fellow rookie Matt Young scattered six hits through 7 2/3 innings for his fourth consecutive triumph and the Mariners' third in a row in Milwaukee.
Singles by Richie Zisk, Pat Putnam and Dave Henderson, a walk, Todd Cruz's squeeze bunt, Julio Cruz's sacrifice fly and Steve Henderson's grounder accounted for the other runs in the inning. Cecil Cooper homered for Milwaukee.

Triple Play Leads Coke

Coca-Cola turned a triple play in the bottom of the sixth after scoring a pair of insurance runs in the top half of the frame for a 10-7 win over the Optimists in Greenville North State Little League baseball Sunday.
Coke first baseman Todd Taylor snared a line drive for the first out, touched the bag for the second and fired to shortstop Walter Gatlin for the third to end the Optimists' hopes for a rally.
Kevin Jordan led Coca-Cola with three hits in as many at bats, while Taylor went 2-2 and Gatlin 2-3. Nelson Galloway had two singles in three trips to the plate for the Optimists.
After Mike Smith reached first on a fielder's choice in the top of the sixth, a pair of wild pitches allowed him to move to third. Jordan drew a base on balls, and a single by Taylor drove in Smith. Jordan later scored on a wild pitch for the final margin.

Sellout Crowd At US Festival Turned Into A Zoo

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
DEVORE, Calif. (AP) — A sellout crowd of 300,000 partying to the roar of heavy metal rock turned the US Festival into a "zoo" that left one man bludgeoned to death over a drug deal, and the festival's promoter said he was "worried" by the huge crowd.

James Dean Estell, of Pomona, Calif., died Sunday at San Bernardino Community Hospital, about 12 hours after he was bludgeoned in a parking lot at Glen Helen Regional Park.

said San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell.

"He was struck in the back of the head with a pipe or tire iron, we believe over a narcotics deal that burned out."

Tidwell said.

Steve Wozniak, the Apple computer designer who reportedly put $16 million into the festival, hoped to attract 200,000 people daily, but said

Sunday he feared long lines at concessions, toilets and other facilities.

"I'm worried, I don't like it," he said.

Thousands of the revelers, who paid up to $25 for each day of the festival, stayed overnight at the park. David Bowie, Stevie Nicks and The Pretenders were to perform today.

Estell, 23, apparently was beaten in a dispute as he was selling the hallucinogen PCP, or "Angel Dust," Tidwell said.

David Michael Planton, 22, also known as David Morgan, was booked for investigation of murder and held without bail at the county jail, Tidwell said. Authorities said Planton lives in Orange County.

A 17-year-old girl who was with Planton also was held at Juvenile Hall for investigation of murder. Her name wasn't released because of her age.

The arrests came shortly after the 3:30 a.m. beating, based on information from witnesses, Tidwell said. The violence wasn't surprising, he said, given the size of the crowd and numerous drug transactions.

"You could have a thousand cops in there and you couldn't control the narcotics," he said.

Tidwell said his deputies were concentrating their patrols outside the 54-acre amphitheater about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, which was covered by a sea of humanity.

He said the crowd was "an absolute zoo to us and it drives us up a wall," but added, "There could be riots and there haven't been. The mood is very good."

The concert bill, including Van Halen, Judas Priest and Ozzy Osbourne, drew a crowd that was overwhelmingly teen-age and male.

Many came bare-chested. Packed like sardines in front of the stage, several passed out after hours in the hot sun and were carried off by friends and medics.

Band after flamboyant band mounted the stage and filled the open-air bowl with sounds driven by 400,000 watts of booming guitars.

The Scorpions drew a huge roar for launching their twilight show by hiring five jets that flew overhead with a vapor trail and what sounded like a sonic boom. The crowd cheered even louder for an elaborate laser light display to the sound of Wagnerian-style orchestra music.

Vince Neil, of Motley Crue, a popular Los Angeles group, said the record turnout proved "heavy metal is not a cult following."

Authorities reported 89 arrests since Thursday. Most came Saturday when the three-day rockfest began with a New Wave program that drew 165,000, according to festival organizers, and 140,000 according to Tidwell.

Deputies made 22 arrests Sunday and 55 percent of the weekend total were for such offenses as assaults, drug sales and conspiracy to counterfeit tickets.

By Sunday, 1,287 people had sought medical attention at eight first-aid centers and a field hospital. But medical coordinator Dean Grose said only eight people required hospitalization out of 45 major injury cases, including fractures, drug overdoses and heat exposure.

Getting there was the biggest problem for most festival-goers. Until mid-afternoon Sunday, traffic was bumper-to-bumper on local roads and jammed on nearby freeways.

Wozniak, 31, predicted he'll lose $3 million to $5 million on the festival, which continues Saturday with a country music program.

The first US Festival last Labor Day weekend drew about 200,000 on its most crowded day. Wozniak lost a reported $5 million or more.

He said Sunday he doesn't plan a third festival without "outside input." He didn't elaborate, but most observers believe he meant other investors.

Thousands Of Fans Turned Out For Reynolds' Film Premiere

By ELISSA McCARRY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A sellout crowd of 2,500 people turned out at Ovens Auditorium Saturday night to welcome Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson to the premiere of the race movie "Stroker Ace."

A crowd of about 1,000 more fans gathered outside the auditorium to see Reynolds, Ms. Anderson, Jim Nabors and Bubba Smith, as well as state and local dignitaries.

The stars walked from their limousines to the auditorium on a black-and-white checkered carpet reminiscent of racing's checkered victory flag.

The crowd cheered wildly as the bearded Reynolds, wearing a dark suit and tinted sunglasses, and Ms. Anderson, wearing a white dress, arrived for the premiere. Auditorium workers released hundreds of brightly colored balloons into the air when Reynolds and Ms. Anderson appeared.

The $50 premiere tickets entailed the 2,500 buyers to attend a concert by the Charlie Daniels Band, the premiere and a champagne-and-hors d'oeuvres reception.

"Stroker Ace" was filmed in part at the Charlotte Motor Speedway last year. It is the story of the misadventures of race-car driver Stroker Ace, played by Reynolds, who is sponsored in the film by a chicken restaurant.

In honor of the premiere, the front entrance of Ovens Auditorium was decorated Saturday night with a huge poster featuring a scene from the movie. Inside the building, the staircases were festooned with strings of black and white balloons and the walls were covered with black-and-white checkered flags.

Yellow-and-white striped tents were set up for the outdoor reception to be held after the premiere.

The crowd, which included women with babies in strollers, teen-agers in T-shirts and shorts and men in business suits, waited about two hours to catch a glimpse of the stars. Most had cameras to capture the excitement on film, and most didn't seem to mind the wait.

They cheered each time a limousine rolled up, straining to see who would get out.

"I wouldn't miss a chance to see Burt Reynolds in person," said Marianne Rich of Charlotte. "I'm going to get a picture of him if I can get close enough."

"I'm here to see Loni," said one man, who asked not to be identified.

"My wife might kill me if she knew I was here," he joked.

STRAIGHT — Dudley Moore, familiar to many filmgoers for his tipsy piano renditions in the movies "10" and "Arthur", says he'll be playing it straight at a Carnegie Hall recital next week. He and two classical soloists are to perform a Beethoven concerto with the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra. (AP Laserphoto)

Museum Models Get Criticism

LONDON (AP) — Officials at Madame Tussaud's wax museum expressed good intentions, but the museum's updated, life-sized models of Princess Diana and Prince Charles have drawn widespread criticism.

"Diabolical!" exclaimed the Sunday Mirror, echoing complaints from spectators at Saturday's unveiling who described the wax Diana too thin and too hard.

A museum spokesman said the new version of the 21-year-old princess was needed.

The bidding has proceeded:

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner is a passed hand, his jump in no trump cannot show more than 11-12 points. You have a dead minimum opener, which is balanced to boot. Pass. There is no reason why you should want to advertise a five-card spade suit by bidding again.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ1054 ♥Q85 ♦9 ♦K86
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—In terms of high cards, this hand is equivalent to the previous one. But here you have a second suit and a singleton, so this hand is considerably better. Unbalanced hands tend to play better at a suit contract, so probe for your best spot with a rebid of three clubs. Indeed, if partner rebids three spades, we wouldn't criticize a bold push to game.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—On this auction, your partner almost surely has a six-card heart suit. Therefore, there is no point to rebidding your spades — you are unlikely to have a better fit and you could have a worse one. Since you have a weak hand and tolerance for partner's suit, you should pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AK8752 ♥983 ♦6 ♦K106
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Since partner should have a six-card suit on this auction, you have located a fit. There is no need to rebid your spade suit — you cannot play in two suits. We would jump to four hearts. With the singleton diamond upgraded to 3 points, three hearts is a distinct underbid.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦8 ♥Q108 ♦AQJ852 ♦K96
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—We are inclined to prefer a raise to two hearts over a rebid of two diamonds. Even though you have a six-card suit, your most likely game is in hearts. Therefore, you should make the most encouraging rebid possible, which is a raise of partner's suit. Had your hearts been weaker, two diamonds would have been the correct rebid.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦8 ♥J108 ♦AQJ82 ♦AK94
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—In view of partner's response, your hand has improved considerably, so you should plan to bid out your shape. Start with a rebid of two clubs now, then raise hearts at your next turn. That normally shows a 5-4-3-1 pattern and a better-than-minimum opening bid, or a somewhat stronger but more balanced hand. With a minimum you would raise to two hearts at your second turn.

Jobs in the 21st Century

It's graduation time. But the employment picture for the class of 1983 is not a rosy one for everyone picking up a diploma. Grads must now think of the future beyond the year 2000. In the next century, the number of jobs in manufacturing, construction, agriculture, and many other traditional areas will decline. On the other hand, businesses are expected to need 3.5 million computer programmers and 2 million experts in robot maintenance. Job seekers who aren't mechanically inclined will find jobs in the service industries that are expected to make up 86 percent of the work force. And there will be many new jobs with esoteric titles like bionic-implant technician, hazardous waste engineer, and energy auditor.

DO YOU KNOW—What share of the U.S. work force currently works in agriculture?

Democrats Charge Telethon Lines Were Jammed

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
BIRRBANK, Calif. (AP) — Republican leaders denied any organized attempt to jam phone lines at a nationally televised Democratic Party fund-raiser, saying heckling calls were a spontaneous outpouring of support for President Reagan's policies.

"It is easy to accuse others of wrongdoing when seeking a scapegoat for your own failures," Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, said Sunday.

Democratic party leaders estimated between $16 and $20 million in pledges were phoned in during the 17-hour NBC network telecast, but party spokesman Bob Neuman charged that "a concerted organized jamming campaign" blocked many callers.

"It is clear that it has cost us," Neuman said.

The Democratic National Committee is considering suing the Republicans, alleging violation of civil rights or interruption of business relationships, committee chairman Charles Manatt said.

At times during the early hours of the telethon Saturday night, up to 10 hostile calls came in for every bona fide pledge, Neuman said.

About 250,000 pledges were received, averaging $85 each, said party spokesman Terry Michael. He cautioned that those estimates were subject to refinement and a sorting out of bogus calls.

"Despite the well-organized Republican conspiracy to try and jam the phone lines, it appears we'll double our projections (in contributions)," Manatt said Sunday.

He charged that "jammer" calls were instigated by a Republican cablegram to party faithful urging them to express support for Reagan.

"It's quite obvious from the format they're using," Manatt said Sunday. "They take our telephone operators' time all the way through, then at the end they say, 'No I'm not going to make a pledge. I support President Reagan.'"

In a statement released in Washington, Fahrenkopf countered that the GOP "and its actions will stand up to an examination of its credibility."

"All calls to the telethon were apparently the spontaneous (response) of American citizens to the nature and quality of the material broadcast," he said. "There were no dirty tricks or violations of the letter or spirit of the law. ... Chairman Manatt's charges are serious, are not taken lightly by the Republican Party and are absolutely denied."

Manatt called the telethon the "largest political fund-raiser in the history of America," which cost almost $6 million to stage.

Neuman said many hostile callers appeared to be part of an organized anti-abortion campaign, accusing operators of being "baby killers," although the program made no references to abortion.

Other hostile callers merely swore at the operators, he said.

The variety show-style telethon called "Celebrate America" was broadcast live from NBC's Burbank studios to the East Coast and tape-delayed during the same hours on the West Coast. It ended at 3 p.m. EDT Sunday.

When the lines became jammed with negative calls, telethon hosts Leslie Uggams and Daniel J. Travanti urged prospective donors to keep trying and gave an address for people to mail contributions.

The show, tailored to blame Republicans for America's ills, featured vignettes and interviews with unemployed Americans, plus plugs by Democratic leaders and performances by numerous Hollywood entertainers.

Among the performers were Jack Lemmon, Ed Asner, Jane Fonda, Stephen Stills, Ben Vereen, Willie Nelson, Candice Bergen, Eddie Albert, John Forsythe, Norm Crosby, Eddie Albert, and Helen Reddy.

Also featured were taped appearances by several politicians, including the six announced contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Debate Over Moo, Brew

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — State lawmakers are involved in a "moo versus brew" debate that's being milked for a lot of public attention while the issue of Wisconsin's official beverage is decided.

Milwaukee is the home of the American League's Brewers and the city long has been famous for its breweries.

Still, for all its acclaim, beer is running a poor second to milk which appears to be the beverage of choice for legislators drafting legislation designating an official beverage for the Dairy State.

State Rep. Steven Brist, a Democrat whose northwest Wisconsin district contains nearly three times as many cows as constituents, has shown his appreciation to dairy farmers by proposing that milk be designated Wisconsin's official drink.

But a Republican colleague, Rep. Jeff Neubauer, of Racine, touched off the debate and a brief flurry of negative responses by making a "friendly suggestion" that beer at least get equal billing.

"The milk and beer produced by our farmers and master brewers help build a strong, cheerful society," Neubauer said. "Milk builds the powerful minds and bodies of our youth. Beer tempers the emotions of our hard-working adults."

An Assembly committee recently endorsed Brist's bill.

Learn Early In Nutrition

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Some researchers in Michigan are prepared to serve up a course designed to teach young junk food addicts the value of good nutrition.

Daniel V. McCallum, with the Foundation for Behavioral Research in Augusta, Mich., said 7-year-olds who took a course on nutrition developed by the foundation learned to pick baked potatoes over french fries and tuna fish over hot dogs.

McCallum's study was one of dozens of research projects presented during the weekend at the annual convention of the Association for Behavior Analysis.

"It's amazing what these kids would go home with," McCallum said about how the pupils' choice of food changed from the beginning of the 120-lesson nutrition education program to the end.

The class was taught over three years to kindergarten children in Kalamazoo, Mich. They learned that fruits, vegetables and grains are good to eat, but only some meat and dairy products are good, McCallum said. Sugar, salt and fat are "harmful parts" that should be avoided when possible, the children were taught.

By the end of the year, the pupils were sophisticated enough to pick frozen vegetables over canned and steamed corn over boiled. More than half picked fresh orange slices over commercially prepared cakes when offered both in classroom tests, McCallum said.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Youths fighting police in Londonderry hurled more than 350 gasoline bombs early Sunday, police reported.
