Flood Victims Told Worst Yet To Come

By The Associated Press

Although northern Utah residents have begun the soggy job of cleaning up after massive mudslides and floods caused an estimated $200 million in damage, officials warned people near Salt Lake City to "be prepared," because the worst is yet to come.

Meanwhile, the threat of dangerous flooding subsided slightly Thursday in Colorado, but rivers threatened to spill over their banks today in the western and northeastern parts of the state. Federal officials said water levels are "probably the worst ... in 40 years" in Nevada.

Hydrologists from the National Weather Service called a news conference Thursday in Washington to warn residents of other Western states, notably California, Nevada, New Mexico and Nebraska, to be ready for similar flooding from a record snowpack that is up to three times the normal depth for this time of year in the Sierra Nevada.

Federal officials in Nevada braced for what they believe may be the highest water levels on Lake Mead since Hoover Dam was completed on the Colorado River nearly a half-century ago. On Thursday, the lake was just nine feet below the dam's massive spillways, which have only carried water once in a 1941 test.

Snowpack in the Wasatch Mountains to the east worries Salt Lake County officials, Holzworth said. At Brighton, a ski resort community about 25 miles southeast of Salt Lake City, 32 inches of snow has yet to melt.

"It's normally dry up there this time of year," said Terry Holzworth, flood control director in Salt Lake County. "If it heats up, the flooding could be down on us in a hurry."

"I don't want to scare anyone, but we need to be prepared, very prepared," Holzworth said.

Safety Awards Presented By Labor Commissioner

Commissioner of Labor John C. Brooks said Thursday that the occupational and illness rate in North Carolina declined in 1981 and that this rate is 15 percent better than the national rate.

Brooks spoke at a Safety Awards Banquet sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Inc. and the North Carolina Department of Labor.

"Our rate dropped from 7.3 to 7.1 injury and illness cases per 100 workers. That means that roughly 3,500 fewer North Carolinians were hurt on the job in 1981 as compared to 1980," Brooks said.

Brooks added that "the real challenge lies ahead of us. As the recession ends and our economy picks up, our production will start speeding up, and new, inexperienced workers will be hired. Historically, this is the time when accident rates have shot up."

Other speakers at the banquet were Gene Parker, special projects chairman at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce; John Corey, a technician at Procter & Gamble and Dr. Jon Tingelstad, executive vice chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The 1982 Safety Awards were presented to:

Jury Begins Pondering Case Of Billy Braswell

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Pitt County Superior Court jury began deliberations late this morning to decide the guilt or innocence of Billy Braswell after Judge James Llewellyn told the eight men and four women that they could return one of four verdicts: guilty of first degree murder, guilty of second degree murder, guilty of voluntary manslaughter or innocent.

Braswell, 41, a former Pitt County Deputy Sheriff, has been on trial on murder charges in connection with the Sept. 27, 1982, shooting death of his wife, Lillie.

Jury selection in the trial began May 24, and testimony in the case, which began May 27, ended at noon Thursday.

Closing statements by the state and by the defense took most of Thursday afternoon.

The jurors retired today at 10:35 a.m. to begin their deliberations. They included one of the alternates, Jerry Clark, who took over a seat on the panel this morning when regular juror Garland Tood was late in reporting to the courtroom.

If convicted of first degree murder, Braswell would receive a mandatory life sentence, while a verdict of guilty of second degree murder could bring a prison term of 50 years or life, although under the state's Fair Sentencing Law, the presumptive sentence would be 15 years.

If convicted of voluntary manslaughter, Braswell could receive a maximum prison sentence of 20 years, while the presumptive sentence would be 6 years.

In an opening statement to the jury, prosecutor Don Stephens, an assistant state attorney general, said evidence for the state would show that Braswell shot his wife four times, returned to his home and shot himself once in the chest outside his home, then went inside and shot himself again with another gun.

When testimony for the defense began Tuesday, attorney Milton Williamson, in his opening statement to the jury, said Braswell "did not kill his wife in a premeditated state," rather that "she shot him."

December, the seasonally adjusted civilian rate has dropped gradually by 0.7 percentage point. Today's figures show that over that period of time, the total number of Americans with jobs has swelled by more than 500,000, to 99.6 million from 99.1 million.

When the Bureau of Labor Statistics combined the civilian labor force figures with those for the approximately 1.66 million military personnel stationed in the United States, the overall unemployment rate also fell slightly, to 10 percent from 10.1 percent.

"The labor market continued to improve in May," Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said in remarks prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

New Mayor For Farmville Named

FARMVILLE "It was a total surprise to me," new Farmville Mayor John Turner Walston said of former Mayor Rusty Duke's resignation this week and his subsequent election by his fellow Farmville commissioners.

Walston said, "I feel very honored that the rest of the board members have that much confidence in me." He was sworn in by Town Clerk Margie Tripp during the workshop meeting at which Duke's resignation was tendered. He said he has not made up his mind as to whether he will seek reelection, but "will do my very best" during the remaining six months of this term.

The budget is the prime issue now confronting the board, the new mayor said. He said a public hearing will be held at the regular town board meeting next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. and adoption may follow. "Every department of the town," he said, "is requesting increases to meet wage and other expenses."

Walston said the tax base for the town is down from about $110 million to about $108 million and expenses are up. Nevertheless, he said, the board is preparing a budget that will include no departure from the 44 cents per thousand ad valorem rate that has been in place for the past two years.

It was earlier announced that a fifth commissioner for the town would be chosen Thursday night. However, according to a report from the town office, this was not done and no announcement as to when it will be done was made.

Fund-By-Fund Look At City Budget By Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

City Manager Gail Meeks and the City Council took a fund-by-fund look at the recommended 1983-84 budget package for Greenville Thursday during a workshop and discussed the need for additional revenues.

Mrs. Meeks reviewed with the board major changes in the new budget compared with 1982-83 and went over projected revenues in depth. The city officials also discussed the impact that some of the state shared revenues will have on the financial situation here.

The city manager earlier submitted a recommended city government budget totaling $13,253,160, or $462,162 less than 1982-83, for council consideration.

Mrs. Meeks said in her budget message that property tax revenues have been projected using the current tax rate of 49 cents per $100 assessed valuation. She mentioned Thursday the low 2.8 percent increase in property tax valuations this year and how it compares with higher figures in previous years.

The manager discussed revenue sharing and the impact it will have on the new budget if the federal program is not re-enacted by Congress. She said the city would not be able to buy any capital equipment if the funds are not renewed.

The council expressed concern during the workshop that in order to balance the upcoming budget, money from the city's fund balance will have to be used. Mrs. Meeks has proposed that $122,455 be appropriated from the account.

The board compared operating expenses from last year and Mrs. Meeks said a small $125,000 increase mostly reflected lease purchases for capital equipment.

Concern was expressed regarding the contingency fund and the necessity of reducing the fund to some $20,000 in order to balance the budget. Normally, the city maintains between $50,000 to $100,000 in the account but Mrs. Meeks said the first street drainage repair work consumed the funds. She said the work represented a cost of $125,000 to the city, not including about $40,000 spent by Greenville Utilities Commission to replace electric, sewer and gas lines that were damaged when the street collapsed. GUC did not bill the city for the work it completed, she said.

The council also talked about the supply and materials account, which funds services extended to local citizens, such as rescue, recreation, street patching and general maintenance, and drainage improvements. Council members said they want the account to have adequate funds to maintain the services.

The board members said they were concerned that the police department's information

U.S. Schools Are Defended Against Critics

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

"I dare any of the critics of public schools to spend just one day in the front of a classroom — any grade," Mary Ann Leveridge, president of the National PTA, said.

"That's the only way to see how hard it is to teach school. I'll just bet they couldn't even keep order."

Mrs. Leveridge, a Texas farm lady, mother of five and grandmother of eight, claims to know what's right and wrong with schools, based on eight years in national posts with the PTA, including the last two as president. Her expertise also comes from being a member of the Texas State Board of Education.

She gives the schools passing grades. She refuses to compare them to schools in Japan or Germany, as critics have done.

She said American schools try to give all comers a chance to reach their potential.

"The child at the bottom of the totem pole is no less important than the one at the top. And that's one tremendous difference between our public schools and those in other countries."

Down on the farm in East Bernard, Mrs. Leveridge specializes in small crops for the family.

"Before I caught the plane," she said at the start of the interview, "I picked 4 gallons of strawberries."

During the last year, Mrs. Leveridge, also a ham radio operator and wife of an attorney, spent 279 days on the road, visiting schools in 44 states.

Practicing what she preaches about gaining experience in the teacher's slot, she and another Texas matron recently tried to take charge of a kindergarten for a day.

"Two of us couldn't take the teacher's place," she said.

"We'd get 'em seated and all ready to settle down reading. They kept wanting to go to the bathroom. One by one. It was very frustrating. Teaching is very hard work. So is keeping order in the classroom."

Mrs. Leveridge said she's had it with critics of American schools. She knows there are good and poor teachers. But she also wants people to know how hard it is to be a teacher.

"I think the great majority of teachers are hardworking, dedicated, competent and caring."

Criticism of public schools is one result of five recent major reports that said discipline and course requirements are not rigid enough and that the quality of teachers and teaching, in general, could be improved.

Several of the reports held up Japanese schools as models for American schools. In Japan the school day is longer, discipline is firmer, and course offerings are meat and potatoes types, with practically no pushover subjects.

Mrs. Leveridge said the Japanese sort out their children early and that, as a result of pressure in school and stress from not making it to a certain school by a certain age, the suicide rate is very high among young Japanese.

"I don't think we want to put any more stress on our young people," she said.

The reports flunking the nation's public schools were commissioned by august bodies ranging from the U.S. Department of Education to the New York Stock Exchange and the Twentieth Century Fund.

"Most of the recommendations are wonderful," Mrs. Leveridge said. "What would be new would be if large numbers of people got behind the recommendations."

"Reform of the type recommended already is underway in a number of states, the result of a movement at least five years old."

A Texas report on excellence in education resulted in the legislature upgrading teacher certification and curriculum. Talk now is of lengthening the school day or year.

"We require four years of English, three years of science, three years of math, and encourage teaching of foreign languages," she said. "We have requirements for regular art and music, too."

"But it is really tough to upgrade standards when teachers are paid what they are, or if they are not certified to teach the subjects assigned."

"True. There is a shortage of science and math teachers. There should be twice as many certified ones. But many math teachers make from $12,000 to $13,000 a year. Outside jobs they can take start at $25,000 or $30,000."

"The value of college is coming into question even among some with masters in engineering who can't find jobs just now," she said.

"We have a plumber back home who makes more than a lawyer does. I think that is typical. And yet there continues to be a shortage of plumbers."

BEAN SALAD
STUFFED TOMATOES
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 teaspoons white wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
Cracked pepper to taste
1 and 2-3rd cups (about) cooked or canned Great Northern or other small white beans
8 medium-small (about 2 pounds) tomatoes
1/4 cup finely chopped red onion
2 tablespoons minced parsley

In a medium bowl, whisk together oil, vinegar, salt and pepper; fold in beans; marinate at least 1 hour.

If necessary, shave bottom of tomatoes so they will stand straight; cut a thin slice from the top of each; scoop out seeds and pulp to make shells; turn upside down to drain.

Fold onion and parsley into bean mixture. Stuff tomatoes with bean mixture, using about 1/4 cup for each.

Makes 8 small servings.

NOTE: When we made this salad we found that the small white beans (drained) from a 16-ounce can were sufficient for this recipe.

Dirty Laundry Doesn't Wash With Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Guess what my husband brought me for Mother's Day? His mother's dirty laundry for me to do! He certainly lacks imagination, because that's what I get for Christmas, Easter and every Sunday.

LESS THAN THRILLED IN TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: The Saturday before Mother's Day my husband handed me a $20 bill and said, "Honey, please buy yourself something for Mother's Day. I never know what to get you."

He never knows what to get his own mother for Mother's Day, either, but a week ago, he handed me a $50 bill and asked me to buy his mother a Mother's Day gift.

So, what's the difference between a wife and a mother? USED TO IT IN JERSEY

DEAR USED TO IT: I'd say the difference was $30.

DEAR ABBY: It's nothing new when daughters disappoint their mothers, but how's this for a switch? I invited my mother to have dinner with me on Mother's Day and she accepted. (Mom's divorced.)

The Friday before Mother's Day she called me and said, "I hope you won't be angry, but my 'boyfriend' invited me to fly to Las Vegas with him for the weekend, so I won't be able to keep our dinner date on Sunday."

Care to comment? DENVER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: What's to say? I hope your mother hit a jackpot.

DEAR ABBY: I had the most wonderful Mother's Day I've ever had. Instead of having all my children and grandchildren to my house for the usual Sunday dinner, they bought me a corsage and took me to a fancy restaurant. I didn't have to cook or clean up and I felt like queen for a day.

MARYLAND MAMMA

DEAR ABBY: Mother's Day is no joy to me. My only son lives in the same city, but all year long I am ignored. Then on Mother's Day he sends me a plant with a card saying he "loves" me. This is love?

SAD IN SAN DIEGO

"We are a diverse nation. Why not let people aim for diverse occupations. We need carpenters, wood workers." In American schools, Mrs. Leveridge said, children learn to get along with and respect differences. "I believe our diversity is one reason our schools are good," she said. "What is unique about our school system, compared to any anywhere in the world, is that we try to help all. The handicapped, for example. In Texas that is 12 percent of the children. "We count pregnant girls as handicapped. I think that part of it is bizarre."

BURLINGAME GAME PLAYER

DEAR ABBY: Whoever said, "A son is a son 'til he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all of her life," hit the nail on the head.

Ever since my son married, he has gone to his wife's mother to spend Mother's Day with his in-laws.

My daughter is also married, but she saves every Mother's Day for me. Mother's Day to me is bittersweet.

HALF-HAPPY IN CHERRY HILL, N.Y.

DEAR HALF: How do you think the mother of your son-in-law feels?

DEAR ABBY: After every Mother's Day, someone writes to Dear Abby to say that his wife complained because he didn't give her something for Mother's Day. He insists that she isn't his mother, so he shouldn't have to give her anything. I say he didn't give birth to her either, but he probably gives her a birthday present! And what about Christmas? Shouldn't all gifts be given to the Lord? It's his birthday we honor.

As for Mother's Day, the husband is more responsible for his wife being a mother than her children are! Besides, we should wish all mothers a happy Mother's Day, whether it's our mother or not, for it is their day to be honored.

Southern Cooking Lives On In Edna Lewis

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — When Edna Lewis was growing up in the tiny farming community of Freetown, Va., the aromas of Southern cooking came from a detached kitchen behind her family's log and clapboard house.

Bread baked three times daily, sweet peas in cream sauce, her mama's locally famous fried chicken and fresh Virginia ham lured family members from their work in the fields. Pies made from homemade applesauce were stacked and cut three layers thick for dessert.

As a young girl more than 50 years ago, she helped prepare meals on a wood-burning cookstove for her parents, brothers, sisters and visiting kin.

Today, stainless steel ovens have replaced the old cookstove, and electrical appliances fill the shelves of Ms. Lewis' kitchen at the Fearrington House Restaurant.

But the aromas of her youth linger in her cooking and the memories remain.

"In the South you didn't have to be rich," said the 67-year-old Ms. Lewis. "There was always something good to eat."

In Freetown — so named because it was settled by freed slaves, including Ms. Lewis' grandfather — the year was broken up by special events calling for family feasts.

Some of those rituals were hog butchering, the cutting of ice in winter, Christmas and the gathering of spring's first green vegetables.

A morning-after-hog-butchering breakfast included black raspberries and cream, eggs sunny-side up, oven-cooked bacon, fried sweetbreads and biscuits with wild strawberry preserves.

Until she turned 16, Ms. Lewis' older sisters and cousins helped with the cooking, while the younger children gathered berries, picked corn and cut wood.

"But you saw what was going on (in the kitchen)," she said. "I guess it was inevitable that you'd end up cooking."

But when she left her family at the age of 19 on a train bound for New York, Ms. Lewis didn't know she'd end up chef at one of the city's most popular restaurants.

"I guess I was naive...thought I'd go there and make a lot of money," she said.

Ten years and several odd jobs after her arrival in New York, Ms. Lewis joined antique dealer John Nicholson in opening Cafe Nicholson.

The restaurant on 58th Street in midtown Manhattan became a favorite gathering place of many notables, including Truman Capote, William Faulkner, Eleanor Roosevelt and Tennessee Williams, who lived across the street.

"I used to go in the mornings to start my work and he (Williams) would come by and we'd have coffee together...I used to go out with him and some friends when 'Streetcar' was playing," Ms. Lewis said.

As chef at Cafe Nicholson from 1949-53, the Virginia native mastered such continental cuisine as filet mignon with bernaise sauce, oysters on the half shell and bitter-rich chocolate soufflé.

A food critic for the old Herald-Tribune newspaper in New York wrote that her soufflés were "as light as a dandelion in a high wind," Ms. Lewis said.

"I made thousands of them," she said. "They all came out right and people were floored."

After she left Cafe Nicholson, Ms. Lewis found herself still cooking — but on her own terms. Offers came from several popular restaurants, but Ms. Lewis turned them down.

"I only wanted to cook for restaurants that let me use butter," she said, adding that many of the restaurants "cut corners" by using margarine and canned products.

So Ms. Lewis became her own boss, cooking for wealthy New York families at parties, wedding receptions and other special occasions.

She also prepared dishes for Dean and Deluca, "the most exotic food shop in New York," conducted Southern cooking classes at the New York Cooking Center, and lectured on African culture at the American Museum of Natural History's African Hall.

Invitations to be a "guest chef" have taken her to the annual Food Festival in New York and to a cooking seminar in San Francisco, where she prepared an American lunch for the great chefs of France.

Last fall, Fearrington House owners R.B. and Jenny Fitch went to New York to "court" this self-taught chef and succeeded, explained hostess Nancy Duffner.

"She's probably the foremost authority on Southern cooking," Ms. Duffner said.

Ms. Lewis flew to North Carolina in January to look over the pre-revolutionary mansion located in a rural setting midway between Chapel Hill and Pittsboro that reminded her of her birthplace.

"When I came we made up a menu that changes with the season," she said. "We had game in the winter and now we have fish."

Ms. Lewis, insisting on the freshest ingredients, has fresh red snapper, shrimp and crab brought in from Southport and trout caught from the western North Carolina mountain streams.

An herb garden and vegetable garden behind the restaurant supply chervil for lentil salad, dill for cold cucumber soup and asparagus spears, sautéed in butter to complement roast chicken with wild rice.

"If you have butter and fresh herbs and wine then you're set," Ms. Lewis said.

She stresses those fresh ingredients in her second cookbook, "The Taste of Country Cooking," which was published in 1970 and is still going strong. The book contains family recipes and features stories of how food was a way of life when she was a young girl.

Ms. Lewis' first book, "The Edna Lewis Cookbook," written in 1971, contained recipes she used for New York diners. The book will have its second printing this fall. Another effort is in the works, but Ms. Lewis is unsure what focus it will take.

She has compiled a menu to be published this fall in Food and Wine magazine.

Installation Takes Place

FALLS CHURCH, Va. — Deborah Watkins was installed as Worthy Advisor of the Ruth Givens McCarl Assembly No. 4, International Order of the Rainbow for Girls, Kemper Lodge No. 64 here.

She is great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur R. Walls of Ayden. Her installation took place Tuesday afternoon. She was also awarded the Grand Cross of Colors, a Rainbow honor.

Her sister, Valerie, was installed as Hope and was voted the award for being the most friendly girl in her assembly. The sisters were initiated into the order at the National Masonic Temple in Alexandria, Va. two and a half years ago.

A reception and dance in Deborah's honor followed the installation. Music was presented by Sound Wave.

Mali's Jenne-jeno was recently discovered to be West Africa's oldest city. It flourished hundreds of years before cities were thought to exist in that part of the continent. New excavations reveal it grew from a small group of round mud huts around 250 B.C. into a cosmopolitan center of perhaps 10,000 people by A.D. 800, according to National Geographic. By about A.D. 1400 it was mysteriously abandoned.

A Healthy Affair

That summit meeting at Williamsburg could only be a healthy thing for leaders of the industrialized nations.

It provided the leaders an opportunity to compare notes, air their own problems, blow off a little steam about the rest of the world, and attain a consensus as to what it might take to get their train on the track.

There were few public promises, only an expression of intent and hope.

A minority of the world's people were represented at the gathering, yet the futures and aspirations of ever so many more millions of people are tied to the economic health of the handful of governments breaking bread at a little town garbed in the image of colonial America.

The setting was conducive to a spirit of unity ... they were so few, and all pitted against forces dwarfing the powers of any one among them.

Post summit criticisms and recriminations and complaints were largely cut off by a period of baring "strong feelings" within the confines of the gathering. It helped purge minds and hearts of any need to verbalize disappointments and dismay among their respective electorates or to the world at large.

Newsmen at the scene must have been frustrated by the lack of sensational developments. There simply were none.

They did appear to have gathered an impression that President Reagan earned high marks among his peers in the role of steering discussion, and debate along the most constructive course — no small achievement when dealing with a table full of people, each accustomed to the role of political prima donna.

It is quite probable the Williamsburg Summit will never rate mention in future history textbooks; but on the whole, we suspect its affect on the course of events will prove to be something that is seen and appreciated, rather than gossiped about and speculated upon.

Big Brother And You

For years California has fought smog from motor vehicles. It must have won the battle, for now it's concentrating on the smog sent up by smokers' cigarettes.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors has now voted 10-1 to require employers to segregate smokers from non-smokers, or ban smoking altogether. The penalty would be $500 a day in fines for employers that don't comply.

The ordinance now awaits only the signature of San Francisco's former smoking mayor, Anne Feinstein. She says she favors the ordinance, but not the additional expense for two more health inspectors to help enforce it.

The only supervisor to vote against the ordinance was Nancy G. Walker, who said the government had no business controlling smoking and said the ordinance could not be enforced anyhow.

We agree with Ms. Walker. Government, in so many ways, has become the big brother envisioned in the book "1984," and such regulations as this one in San Francisco certainly fit that category.

Minimum Prices

WASHINGTON — We don't know about your house, but a glance around ours confirms that we're die-hard bargain hunters. We wear off price suits and favor discount tennis balls. Our cameras and tape recorders were also bought on the cheap.

If you're like us, you shop at discount houses whenever possible. For years, discounters have meant the difference between going in debt and going without.

But if William Baxter, antitrust chief at the Reagan Justice Department, prevails, our favorite cut-rate stores may go the way of the Wells Fargo wagon. Baxter has successfully petitioned the Supreme Court to review a case which, if overturned, could prohibit discounters from knocking down the price on consumer goods of all kinds.

The former Stanford University antitrust professor probably knows the law. Since 1911, the Supreme Court has punished manufacturers who forced distributors to forego discounting and stick with the "suggested retail price." The High Court has considered such "resale price maintenance" anti-competitive — because it concentrates power over the marketplace in a few hands — and therefore in violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

Yet precedent hasn't prevented Baxter from petitioning the court to overturn an otherwise cut-and-dried case (Monsanto v. Spray-Rite Corp., in which a lower court penalized a herbicide manufacturer for halting supplies to a discounter). In a friend-of-the-court brief filed May 13, Baxter asked the nine justices to legalize minimum prices on the grounds that the practice could enhance competition.

Baxter argues that a set minimum price would force distributors to work harder for a customer's business. "Resale price maintenance can ... enable distributors to provide costly promotional, warranty and other ... services and thereby increase the attractiveness of the product," the brief argued.

With real incomes on hold, many Americans might scratch their heads at the timing — not to mention the logic — of Baxter's assault on discounters. Recession has boosted demand for bargains, not only enabling chains such as K-Mart to report a seven-fold increase in sales last quarter but spawning a new class of "off-price" retail outlets which offer name brands at up to 70 percent discount.

Not surprisingly, Baxter's ideas didn't just pop into his head. The assistant attorney general has for years favored producer-set prices for distributors, regardless of the effects. Baxter made the same argument on behalf of Levi Strauss, the jeans-maker, when the Federal Trade Commission successfully sued the company in 1978 for demanding a minimum price for its products.

Baxter, however, remains committed to higher prices and bigger margins for business — an odd objective for an administration trying to hold down inflation (and a politically dangerous one while Americans are devoted to stores like Crazy Eddie's and the Pep Boys).

While the Supreme Court will hear oral arguments on Monsanto next fall, congressmen are already making known their objections to Baxter's reasoning.

The most persuasive voice against price maintenance, however, may turn out to be that of a former radio commentator, who in 1975 warned his listeners to beware of such practices. "In an age when advertising has effectively pre-sold so many brand-names, is the retailer really providing any extra useful service to the consumer for that higher margin?"

Today, the skeptical commentator is Baxter's boss. His name is Ronald Reagan.

Whatever one law accomplishes, another law can undo.

That, at least, has long been the General Assembly's attitude about laws regarding the sale, by local governments, of government property. North Carolina has these laws to assure that the disposal of surplus property is done in the open, free from favoritism. But, that law sometimes gets in peoples' way, so the General Assembly has a knack for coming along and exempting certain purchases through local bills.

The law that requires public bidding for surplus property sales are always under fire. Since 1979, the assembly has passed 23 local bills affecting 25 cities, according to the Institute of Government's "Weekly Summary." These allow local governments to dispose of property by private sale, at a price other than market value, in a contract signed before the local government even buys it, or with restrictions on its future use.

This year, at least 10 bills considered would grant to local governments the authority to sell or lease real property for free.

Why are local governments having the laws changed? Why not stick with the public advertisement and public bidding process? The Institute of Government says local governments have changed their attitude on the sale of surplus property.

"Except in unusual situations, local units were thought to have little interest in the identity of the purchaser of public property, or in the nature of the use to which the property might be put," the institute's report says.

Those days are gone now, however. Local governments "have become interested in using surplus property disposal as a means for accomplishing various economic and community development objectives." An example: The city of Raleigh is developing the land between the new Radisson Hotel and the Civic Center. The city got legislation passed in 1981 which removed the requirement for public bidding on the land and then sold it to the developer who presented what the council thought was the best project for the area.

Three major bills on public property disposal have attracted widespread attention this session.

Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, sponsored legislation that has already been enacted. The bill gives local governments across the state the right to dispose of minor articles — valued at less than $500 — without any public notice or public bidding. The local governing board is given the further authority to allow their staffs to conduct these sales.

A local bill for McDowell County was made into a statewide bill by the House but then turned back into a local bill by the Senate. It gives McDowell County the right to sell real estate with restrictive covenants attached. If the new owner did not use the land for the purpose described in the covenant, the government could instigate proceedings to take the land back.

And, finally, the attorney general's Select Committee on Historic Preservation has sponsored a bill that would give local units the right to sell, without public bidding, historic properties to non-profit groups who promise to preserve the property.

These bills are most likely to be used in downtown development projects such as that around the Raleigh Civic Center. That exemption drew much criticism from those who say these no-bid deals facilitate development but they also eliminate the protections of public bidding.

Population Growth Is Major Problem

WASHINGTON — We live in a world whose future is clouded by two great dangers. One of these is talked about incessantly and even now is being debated in Congress. It is the possibility of a war waged with nuclear weapons. The other, because it lacks the drama of Armageddon, rarely makes headlines. It is the continuing explosion of population in the less developed nations.

The latest issue of Intercom, published by the Population Reference Bureau, offers some new projections of worldwide population. The figures ought to be of profound concern to our legislators, but because the figures have to do with conditions that future 20, 30 or 40 years in the future, no one is likely to get greatly aroused about them right now.

Consider the elements that should concern us. The world's population is now estimated at 4.6 billion people. The 5 billion mark probably will be reached within five years. The world birthrate is now 29 births per 1,000 population; the death rate is 11 per 1,000. This gives us an annual increase of 1.8 percent.

This rate of increase has varied little in the past decade. It may not sound like much, but a growth rate of 1.8 means that 84 million people, equal to a country the size of Nigeria, will be added in 1983 alone. If this growth were spread evenly around the world, in rich and poor nations alike, there might be no occasion for alarm. The disturbing fact is that the greatest growth is taking place in the countries least able to feed and house their people.

The bureau reports: "The less developed countries, which account for 75 percent of the world's population, are growing at just over 2 percent annually, compared to 0.6 percent for the more developed countries. These uneven rates mean that the less developed countries will constitute 79 percent of the world by the year 2000 and 83 percent by 2020."

The industrialized nations of the Western world have their population problems in hand. In these more developed regions women are having fewer than two children during their reproductive lifetimes — less than the replacement level of 2.1 per family. In Kenya, by contrast, women have an average of eight children during their reproductive lifetimes. At these rates Kenya's population of 18.6 million will double over the next 17 years.

The highest growth rates are in Africa, which now has about 11 percent of the world's population. This is expected to grow to 18 percent by 2020. Over the past 10 years India has added 100 million people. Indonesia has grown from 100 million in the early 1960s to an estimated 155 million today. Bangladesh and Pakistan are nearing the 100 million mark. Mexico and Nigeria will reach that level by 2000.

In one sense, the data just published by the Population Reference Bureau are not new. Roughly the same projections were made three years ago by a presidential study group known as Global 2000. The warnings that were sounded then are as serious today. Within another generation, masses of humanity will have exhausted their own land in a desperate effort to feed themselves. "Barring revolutionary advances in technology," said the Global 2000 report, "life for most people on earth will be more precarious in 2000 than it is now."

How will these masses of human beings be fed, clothed and housed? The brutal prospect is that many of them will not need to be fed: They will have died of starvation. It is only the high rate of infant mortality that prevents the situation from getting out of hand today. But the pressure on the more developed nations will increase inexorably. Our own problems with illegal immigration can be expected to grow with every passing year.

I do not pretend to know all the answers. One obvious answer lies in the development, distribution and use of some form of contraceptive that is safe, simple and reliable — but many African nations place a high value on large families. Another answer lies in economic aid that will foster modern agricultural technology abroad. My only thought is that our children and grandchildren will constitute an ever-shrinking minority in the years ahead. For their sake, if for no other, we ought to study the population projections and think about the future now.

Strength For Today

Many years ago the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria was buried in a church in Vienna where the bodies of other members of the Hapsburg line rested. As the body of the emperor reached the church door, a voice cried from within, "Who is there?" The reply was, "His serene majesty, the emperor of Austria."

Through the door came back the words, "I know him not."

A second attempt was made to gain admission for the emperor. Again the keeper of the gate denied knowing any such person.

Finally, the leader of the funeral procession said, "A sinful man, poor, humble brother Francis Joseph wishes to come here and abide."

Only then did the doors open and admit the emperor to his resting place.

This, of course, was a scenario designed to fill the hearts of those who beheld it with proper sense of their own sinful state and humility. Jesus said of himself, "I am meek and lowly of heart." Only the humble attain greatness.

Cuomo Gains Favor As Keynote Speaker

NEW YORK — First-year Gov. Mario Cuomo is becoming the runaway choice to deliver the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention 13 months hence, climaxing the startling domination of the party's drab landscape by one luminescent newcomer.

Cuomo most certainly will not be, as none other than Richard M. Nixon has been suggesting, a late contestant for the 1984 presidential nomination. But besides becoming the most likely keynoter, he has blossomed as the party tastemaker, a possible kingmaker and (despite his own protests that he never would do it) a most desirable vice presidential prospect.

Undeniably, Cuomo is the party's hottest property today, and superior platform style is not the only reason. What makes him a political blend that combines Walter F. Mondale's undiluted support of liberal special interest groups with John F. Glenn's evocation of traditional values.

"I would say that Mario regards himself as not merely equal to anybody else in the party but actually their superior," one pro-Cuomo Democratic insider here told us. That was affirmed to us during two hours of talking politics with him over dinner in a midtown Manhattan restaurant last week.

Cuomo knows Mondale well and regards him as an incomplete politician who strings issues and constituencies together without a connective theme. He scarcely knows Glenn at all (a one-on-one meeting has been talked about for weeks but not yet scheduled); he is fascinated with the old astronaut's popular appeal, but feels Glenn badly needs close, personal identification with one or two issues.

Nevertheless, Cuomo believes the field is closed with no likelihood for important new runners and that the nominee probably will be either Mondale or Glenn. That is an important judgment considering the fact that his closest associates cannot conceive of the governor in definitely riding out the presidential contest in impotent neutrality, leaving his state's other prominent Democrats to make their own choices (as his predecessor, Hugh Carey, did in 1980). Indeed, Cuomo defied conventional wisdom in keeping New York's Democratic barons neutral, at least until the state's presidential candidate forums in September.

Thus, the governor, who carried the Carter-Mondale standard against the 1980 Kennedy tide, has amply repaid Mondale for failure to support an underdog Cuomo in last year's primary for governor. Bronx leader Stanley Friedman, Queens leader Donald Manes and many lesser lights were eager to join the former vice president's bandwagon when it was in full throttle several weeks ago, but were dissuaded by pleas from their newly-elected governor to stay neutral.

Cuomo's own aides doubt he can keep

New York neutral beyond September, but knowledgeable Democrats here believe Mondale's recent slump in the polls offers the governor new room to maneuver. What's more, Cuomo's new notoriety — phantasmagorically pumped up by Nixon's comments that he would be President Reagan's toughest opponent — makes his endorsement with impact far beyond this state's borders.

Cuomo's inclination to be kingmaker but not king was obvious from the day he was elected. Timothy J. Russert was hired away from Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan's staff to become the governor's counselor not because of expertise in Albany (zero) but because of media and political contracts in Washington (excellent). But when the Communications Workers-Union's political operative here, Jan Pierce, began publicly boosting Cuomo for president, he was quickly silenced.

Life As It's Lived

The Secret Is: A Tuna Surprise

By GAIL MICHAELS
For one who has a deep aversion to spending more than 15 consecutive minutes in the kitchen, planning a menu can be a genuine ordeal.

I really do wish that I liked to cook. For that matter, I wish that I liked to dust, iron, do windows, clean fish, garden and/or polish silver. I wish that the whirr of the vacuum cleaner thrilled me into rapturous diligence.

But it just wasn't meant to be. I have had to learn to accept the fact that not only am I not a domestic animal, but I don't even resemble one.

Unfortunately, my acceptance of my deficiencies does not solve the problem of dinner. Whether I like to cook or not, my family still gets hungry on a regular basis and they look to me for some semblance of nourishment. They expect a weekly menu more varied than scrambled eggs and hot dogs, but the children don't want anything green (even if it's meant to be that way) or obscured by tomato, cheese or white sauce or gravy.

Phillip can't abide TV dinners. And he doesn't want a salad because he eats them almost every day for lunch. I would like Shrimp Newburg, but generally for such an elaborate repast, the cook must get started at least half an hour before dinnertime.

In the face of such difficulties, a lousy cook has to be resourceful. I am a master at making up excuses. I keep telling Phillip that my schedule precludes any adventures in cooking. On Monday, for instance, I pick Meg up from art lesson at 5:30 and take her straight to soccer practice. On Tuesday, I bring her home from choir practice and must have her fed and ready for Brownies an hour later.

Phillip remains unconvinced. He keeps asking about the other five days.

On the other five days I am overcome by the sheer monotony of catering to the incessant activity of four digestive tracts. I stand and stare into the pantry patiently awaiting inspiration. But all too often visions of salad bars stocked with Chinese noodles and black olives obscure the labels on the cans, and the imagined aroma of a fisherman's platter weakens me still further. I start plotting a way to get Phillip to take us out to eat.

The children are my allies. They resigned themselves quite early in their lives to the inferiority of my cuisine to McDonald's. But Phillip has declared that taking them to restaurants is like

"No," he told them last Friday. "It's late, I'm tired and the restaurants will all be crowded. I'd rather eat here."

The children groaned. I started toward the kitchen with a sigh. "If that's the way you want it, I'll take the tuna-noodle surprise out of the freezer and open a can of spinach."

The gags were quite audible.

"I've changed my mind," Phillip said. "Let's go out. It works every time."

ushering the Visigoths into Rome. He is loathe to threaten the foundations of civilization more than once or twice a month.

So I have to count on the failure of their eager, pleading faces to sway his resolve.

Arrest Deigado For Perjury

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Delsina Mae Deigado, who was acquitted May 19 on first-degree murder charges in the Dec. 6 slaying of her husband, was arrested Thursday and charged with committing perjury during her trial.

She had been accused of murdering Marine Sgt. Jorge R. Delgado, 23, of Miami.

Mrs. Delgado, 26, of Charleston, W. Va., appeared at the Onslow County magistrate's office and was released on $30,000 bond. She was accompanied by Attorneys Edward G. Bailey and Mark Raynor, who defended her in the murder trial which resulted in her acquittal.

First appearance is scheduled for Friday morning in Onslow County District Court.

Woman Died In Burning House

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Carrie Mae Covington Simon, 67, of Albemarle, died Thursday morning in a house fire, authorities said.

Braswell Case...

Witnesses during the 3½ days of testimony described how Mrs. Braswell, a 39-year-old bank teller, was found dead near the intersection of U.S. 264A and the Chiquapin Road near Farmville, with four bullets in her body, and how Braswell was found later at his Farmville home with two bullet wounds in his chest.

They had been married in June 1958, when Braswell was 17 and his wife 16.

Witnesses for the state said Braswell, before being taken to a hospital for treatment, was asked: "Where is the gun you shot yourself with?" and Braswell replied, "I used two guns."

One pistol, which had been fired six times, and which experts said fired bullets found in Mrs. Braswell's body, was found in Braswell's car parked at his home. A second pistol, which had been fired one time, was found inside the house.

Other witnesses told of a letter written by Braswell to his 21-year-old son, Mike. The letter, found in Mrs. Braswell's pocketbook on the day she died, suggested Braswell had intended to kill his wife, then commit suicide, the state contended.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Mrs. Braswell had come to him on Sept. 22, saying she and Braswell were getting a divorce, saying she was afraid of her husband and that she was asking for an escort.

Testifying in his own defense Wednesday, Braswell said he had been sitting in his car talking and holding his wife's hand when she "pulled away," started making "a crying sound," then pulled a pistol and shot him.

Braswell said he knew he then shot his wife but "I don't remember hearing the shots." He said he drove home, sat in the driveway thinking, then picked up his pistol and "just shot myself."

He testified that he then picked up the pistol his wife used to shoot him with and took it into the house, leaving the other revolver in his car.

Deputy Sheriff Lee Pascasio, who said he was a friend of Braswell, testified Wednesday about several conversations he had with Braswell, both before and after Braswell's wife died.

Thursday morning, Pascasio told of a conversation he had with Braswell about 1:50 a.m. on Oct. 6, and said he had made a tape recording of the meeting without Braswell's knowledge. He read a transcript made from the recording, which closely paralleled Braswell's account of the shooting to the jury Tuesday.

The deputy said Tyson, on Sept. 20, had talked to him about Braswell and mentioned that Braswell might be thinking of committing suicide. "As far as I was concerned," Pascasio said, "Billy was very stable."

Pascasio continued by saying the last time he talked with Braswell before the shooting was on Sept. 26, and said Braswell at that time also "appeared to me to be very stable ... very determined" to overcome his problems.

In the early morning hours of Oct. 2, Pascasio said, he was told by Braswell that "he wanted to set the record straight," that he wanted to recover and that he "wanted to prove to Mike he didn't murder his mother." He told me he had not committed a crime," Pascasio said.

Pascasio said that it was during a conversation about 11 p.m. Oct. 3 that he was first told by Braswell that his wife shot first.

Pascasio said his only interest in the Braswell case "is giving you the truth about this thing."

In his cross examination of Pascasio, Stephens asked: "Officer, you are the author of the Billy Braswell defense, are you not?"

Pascasio replied, "I wouldn't dare have done anything like that. I've done it right down the middle ... been honest."

During closing statements to the jury during the afternoon, District Attorney Tom Haigwood Thursday said, "I wish we could bring Lillie Braswell up out of the cold grave ... sit her here and let you hear what she would have to say."

Haigwood continued by saying Braswell "finally, this time ... thought she (Mrs. Braswell) was going to leave him for good," and might lose his job because of the separation.

Braswell, Haigwood said, wrote letters saying that he wanted himself and his wife buried side by side and what he wanted done with the property. "If that's not cold, calculated, deliberate, I don't know that any exists," Haigwood said.

"You folks ought to find him guilty of murder in the first degree," the DA told the jury.

Defense attorney Tom Greer reminded the jury that "the highest aim of every legal contest is the ascertainment of the truth. I submit to you that Braswell is worthy of belief ... that Lillie Braswell shot first."

Cherry Stokes, another of Braswell's lawyers, told the jury: "That's your job ... determine where the truth really lies."

Stokes suggested that Mrs. Braswell, for days before her death, was told by friends that "he's going to kill you. She was frightened," the attorney said, so she took the pistol from the house because she "wanted protection."

He said that as Mrs. Braswell sat in the car and talked to her husband that day, "she started getting scared ... started pulling away."

"The thing she didn't know," Stokes said, is "she didn't have any reason to be scared of him."

"At that precise second, Lillie Braswell thought he was going to kill her right then," so "she shot him. She fired in the mistaken belief that he was going to kill her," Stokes suggested.

"He reacted like he had been trained. That is what I believe happened."

"Her fear turned to unreasoning terror. If she had left that gun in the car (her car), she'd be alive today."

"Every witness who testified for the defense is capable of belief," attorney Milton Williamson told the jurors in the defense's final statement.

Williamson suggested that if the attorneys for the state really believe that Pascasio had committed perjury, they ought to "try him and convict him." The only thing Pascasio did, he suggested, is ask the state "not to shuffle the investigation."

"We are urging you to give every piece of evidence consideration. I say and contend we have shown a reasonable doubt" as to Braswell's guilt, Williamson said. "I say Mrs. Braswell shot first" and Braswell "should be found not guilty."

Stephens, in the state's final statement, said, "I speak for the state of North Carolina ... the people of Pitt County, and for a lady who can't speak for herself."

He said the jury should believe that Braswell used two guns to shoot himself, and that the reason Braswell testified that he remembered his wife's eyes at the time of the shooting is "because she was looking down the barrel of a gun and about to die."

Stephens said Pascasio "shouldn't" have been involved in the investigation, "because it's an SBI investigation" and, referring to the transcript of the tape recording the deputy made on a conversation with Braswell in the hospital, suggested to the jury that "in these writings we have the author of the Braswell defense."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

KINGDOM WITHIN A KINGDOM

LANDOWNERS WERE THE MEN OF WEALTH AND AUTHORITY IN THE DAILY LIFE OF THE TYPICAL BIBLICAL VILLAGE. THEIR DOMAIN COULD BE CALLED A KINGDOM WITHIN A KINGDOM. THEY SET THE RULES OF BEHAVIOR IN THEIR OWN COMMUNITY AND USUALLY INTERPRETED THE LAWS IN A MANNER WHICH WOULD BENEFIT THEM. AS CAN BE SURMISED, THERE WERE HONORABLE MEN AND THERE WERE VILLAINOUS MEN AMONG THIS CLASS OF AFFLUENT CITIZENRY. THE BEST OF THEM MADE SURE THE POOR WERE ALWAYS FED AND CARED FOR. BOAZ, (THE BOOK OF RUTH) WAS THIS TYPE OF GENEROUS LANDOWNER. AT THE OTHER END OF THE SCALE WE FIND THE TYPE OF RICH MAN OF WHOM JESUS SPOKE SO DISDAINFULLY, TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE NEEDY AND HAGGLING OVER THEIR MEAGER WAGES WHILE CHEATING THEM IN THE BARGAIN. HOWEVER--HONORABLE OR VILLAINOUS--THE WEALTHY MEN OF THE VILLAGES INFLUENCED THE LIFE OF EVERY INHABITANT WHO CAME UNDER THEIR JURISDICTION.

DeCinces' Homers Power Angels, 9-8

By The Associated Press

Doug DeCinces is starting his "second-half" surge a little early this season.

A player who usually produces big power numbers after the All-Star game, the California third baseman continued his hot start with two home runs Thursday night to lead the Angels to a 9-8 victory over the New York Yankees.

"I'm a second-half player," emphasized DeCinces, whose night's work boosted his season total to a American League-leading 13 home runs.

DeCinces hit 30 homers last season, but 21 of them came in the second half.

"I just tried to pick up my stroke right where I left off the second half of the season," DeCinces said. "I've always hit better in the second half. I'm not used to hitting so many home runs in the first half."

DeCinces belted a solo homer in the fourth inning and added a decisive two-run shot in the seventh which gave the Angels a 9-7 lead.

The 32-year-old third baseman acknowledges that he's becoming more of a slugger at this point in his career. "I always had power," he said. "I averaged over 20 home runs all the time I've been sound. I went from 20 to 30 (last year) because I've been able to drive the ball better to right field. I used to be a dead pull hitter. Now I can hit to all fields."

DeCinces' first home run of the night was to left, his second was an opposite-field drive to right. He also hit a long out to Yankee Stadium's "Death Valley" area in left center.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 1

Cliff Johnson drove in three runs and Luis Leal pitched seven tough innings to lead Toronto over Detroit.

Johnson put ahead to stay 2-1 with a run-scoring double in the fourth inning and added a two-run homer to highlight a three-run eighth. Leal, 5-3, scattered seven hits and struck out six over the first seven innings to get credit for the victory.

"I have a little bit of ability," said Johnson, who raised his batting average to .261. "I also have some luck. I'm just here to do what I can to help these guys win a ballgame or two.

"Hitting's not easy in any park. It's not an easy art. You can be hitting in your own back yard and if you're not hitting, it's tough."

Brewers 6, A's 1

Cecil Cooper and Robin Yount belted two-run homers and Paul Molitor hit a solo homer to back Mike Caldwell's six-hitter in Milwaukee's victory over Oakland.

Caldwell, 5-4, retired 11 successive batters over one span as the Brewers won their third game in their last four and handed the A's their seventh defeat in their last eight games.

The Brewers played their first game under Manager Harvey Kuenn exactly one year earlier — Caldwell was the winning pitcher in that game, too — and they promptly went on a hot streak that carried them to the American League pennant.

"It seems to be a tradition of our club to struggle for awhile and then get hot in June," Molitor said. "Hopefully, that format will repeat and we'll start to make up some ground."

Indians 3, Mariners 1

Rick Sutcliffe scattered six hits and Miguel Dilone stole two bases and scored twice as Cleveland defeated Seattle. Sutcliffe, 6-2, struck out seven and walked two in pitching his third complete game of the year.

The Indians scored in the first when Dilone hit an infield single, stole second and came in on Mike Hargrove's single.

The Mariners tied it in the third on Steve Henderson's second homer of the year, but the Indians scored their winning run in the bottom of the inning when Dilone walked, stole second and scored on Manny Trillo's single.

"Tonight I didn't have the good fastball and the slider, so I had to throw a lot of changeups, more than I've thrown all year," Sutcliffe said. "I can take more pride in a game like tonight's than in a game where I really had it."

White Sox 6, Royals 3

Rookie Chris Nyman and Harold Baines each hit two-run homers to power Chicago over Kansas City.

Nyman's first major-league home run keyed a three-run rally in the seventh that sent the White Sox ahead 4-3. Nyman's blow, following Ron Kittle's single, tied the game at 3-3.

Vance Law then doubled, setting up Jerry Dybzinski's game winning single that made a loser of Larry Gura, 4-7, who dropped his seventh straight game.

Reliever Juan Agosto earned the victory in his first appearance this season. He was elevated from Denver in the American Association on Wednesday.

Warren's Homer Starts Pitt Victory Romp, 13-5

By JIMMY DuPREE

Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Randy Warren stepped to the plate as the first batter of the night for Pitt County and promptly gave his team the lead with a home run to the opposite field as Pitt downed Wayne County 13-5 in American Legion baseball.

Bill Owens came on in relief of Mike Kinley in the fourth inning and recorded the win as Wayne County suffered its first defeat in four league games. Owens scattered four hits and gave up two runs while striking out three. Paul Hill came on in the eighth to close the door, as he gave up just one hit and struck out four.

Warren added a single later in the game, and Greg Briley and Curtis Evans slapped a pair of hits each to lead Pitt County to its second win in as many outings.

"We got off to another big start," said Pitt County Coach Bill Davis, whose team is now 2-0. "I think we swung the bats better tonight than we did (Tuesday)."

"Some of the guys need to get their timing down, still. Some had a layoff between the end of the high school season and the start of practice. They're seeing a lot of left-handed pitchers, but that's good for them. It makes it a good brand of baseball."

After Warren's round-tripper, Mont Carter walked,

Doug Coley reached on an error and Kenny Kirkland beat out an infield single to load the bases. Greg Briley ripped a double to left to drive in two more runs, and Kirkland later scored on a passed ball.

Three walks by Kinley loaded the bases for Wayne County in the top of the second. Pitcher Glenn Fortner attempted to execute the squeeze, but Briley charged the ball and fired to Evans for the put-out at home. Pitt got out of the inning as Rudy Stalls chased down a pop fly to right.

Wayne finally got on the board in the third as Kinley again loaded the bases with walks to Stan Mozingo, Do Vol Lim and Don Pate. A single by Ralph Britt drove in Mozingo and Lim, and Pate scored on a fielder's choice by Ben Gibson.

Kinley was pulled after walking Fortner to lead off the fourth, and Owens loaded the bases on an infield single by Jensen Evans and an error on a pop fly by Scott Edwards. Owens struck out Lim and got Don Pate to pop out to leave the bases filled again.

After two out in the bottom half of the fourth, Warren walked and scored on a double by Carter. A single by Coley drove home Carter for a 6-3 Pitt lead.

Pitt County added two more in the fifth. Kirkland opened with a base on balls, and Briley followed with an infield single. Wayne turned a double play to dampen Pitt's spirits, but Joey Kennedy ripped a homer to left for an 8-3 advantage.

Lim led off the seventh with a double for Wayne County, and he scored on a double by back-up catcher Brad Reeves. An error on a pop fly by Jeff Hayes allowed Reeves to score the final Wayne County run of the night.

A double by Owens in the seventh drove in Rudy Stalls and Kennedy for a 10-3 margin, and Pitt added three more in the eighth.

"Like I said before, pitching is our big question mark," Davis said. "We're pretty young, but I think we're going to be all right."

"Kinley had a little trouble, but he's going to come around. When he gets behind, he gets down on himself. It's just a matter of time before he gets over it."

Pitt County travels to Snow Hill tonight for an 8 p.m. game at Greene Central High School and to Kinston Sunday for a 2 p.m. game at Lenoir Community College.

HAYESVILLE — Hayesville High School romped to a 9-1 victory over Jamesville yesterday in the first round of the State I-A finals.

Scott Massey, who hurled the victory, moving his record to 10-0 on the season, capped the first inning off with a grand-slam home run, putting Hayesville into the lead for good. Ken Sult followed that up in the second inning with a three-run round-tripper, and Hayesville suddenly had a 7-4 lead.

Jamesville's only run had come in the top of the second as Kevin Perry doubled and scored on an error.

Hayesville added single runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Rusty Holiday took the loss for Jamesville, his first after 11 wins.

Jamesville is now 20-3, and seeks to bounce back today in game two of the best-of-three series for the I-A championship.

NSCU Co-Ed In Record Run

HOUSTON, TEX. (AP) — For North Carolina State fans, it was Houston and a national championship all over again this week. Only the sport was track, not basketball.

Betty Springs Wednesday night won the 10,000-meter race at the NCAA Track and Field National Championships with a collegiate record time of 33:01.02. Her time also set a school and stadium record.

Springs, who was the first female NCAA national champion in cross country, also had another parallel with the Wolfpack basketball team.

She missed last year's track season and the fall cross country campaign because of surgery on her foot. She had surgery last June in Houston, and, like Derek Whittenburg, came back to capture the national championship.

She said it took a sprint in the last seconds of the race to ensure her victory and the collegiate record.

"I was running third with a quarter-mile to go, but I couldn't see the leader and was afraid she'd get away from me," said Ms. Springs in a telephone interview. "So I sprinted the last 330 yards." She finished ahead of Brigham Young's Carey May by three seconds.

"Betty ran her last 400 meters in 66 seconds, which is extremely fast," said assistant coach Rollie Geiger. "Houston, Texas, in 60 percent humidity is nowhere to run a 10,000 fast, but that's just what Betty did. It was the most competitive 10,000 I've ever seen for women."

"It was a very tough race," said Ms. Springs. "Different people led all during the race. They were trying to run the kick out of everybody else. The first national championship was great, but I came a long way back (from the surgery) to win this one."

Ms. Springs and the other 12 members of the Wolfpack team have been receiving a lot of attention from Houston residents who haven't forgotten the NCAA basketball championship game.

"But they haven't given us as hard a time as we've given them," said Ms. Springs. "We've been wearing our State basketball national championship tee-shirts everywhere. We even practice in them."

Gambling, Drug Talks Opened By Agencies

By The Associated Press

Cleveland Indians and Los Angeles Dodgers players became the first major leaguers lectured by government agencies on the dangers of bribery, illegal betting and illicit drugs.

The FBI and the Drug Enforcement Administration met with members of those teams Thursday.

"It was just an educational, informational meeting about the pitfalls about getting involved with gamblers," said Indians' player representative Mike Hargrove, who admitted "obviously, drugs can be a problem for anybody, but you could sit two pound of cocaine in front of me, and I wouldn't know it from Comet."

"It's not an investigation or anything. I think it makes you aware. A lot of times your read about it happening, like with the (Art) Schlichter deal, but this sort of thing brings it home, a very real possibility that this could happen."

"It was not that specific. It was more of a deal just to make people aware that you might be approached."

A similar program was conducted with every team in the National Basketball Association in November, 1982, according to FBI Director William H. Webster and Acting DEA Administrator Francis M. Mullen.

FBI spokesman Lane Bonner said the bureau and the DEA already are at work scheduling similar sessions this fall with teams of the National Football League.

Today, the Milwaukee Brewers and the Montreal Expos were scheduled for such sessions, with the Boston Red Sox set for Monday, the Oakland A's on Tuesday, the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday and the Philadelphia Phillies on June 9.

Hargrove, who said he was unaware of any drug or gambling problems on the Indians, said athletes shouldn't be regarded as special.

"It makes you more of a target but guys in sports are people, too. Just like the guy who goes to work at Ford," he said. "We're just people. There's a lot of good ones, and there's some bad ones."

The reactions from the Dodgers were mixed. "It was informative but nothing new," said outfielder Rick Monday. "These were things we heard a long time ago."

Added pitcher Jerry Reuss: "It was very informative. It's good to find out not only what this stuff can do to your body, but how you can get involved in so many situations."

Last month, the National Football League indefinitely suspended Baltimore Colts quarterback Schlichter after it became known he ran up about $389,000 in some reports said it was double that amount in gambling debts.

Four men have been indicted as a result of Schlichter's cooperation with the FBI. Schlichter has not been charged, and federal sources have described him as a victim of the gamblers rather than a target of the investigation.

Last Sunday, Los Angeles Dodger relief pitcher Steve Howe said he was re-entering a drug rehabilitation program because of continuing problems. When Howe first entered a drug program, he said he had sniffed cocaine in the clubhouse between innings of baseball games, although not during games he was pitching in.

Under the informational program, agents provide lectures and answer questions in one-to-two-hour sessions with each team.

Bonner said agents describe cases in which athletes lost their careers after becoming "caught up in such activity. He said they describe the techniques used by crime figures to corrupt players.

New York Yankee manager Billy Martin points to his eyes as he argues with umpire Derry Cousins in the sixth inning of Thursday's game with the California Angels at Yankee Stadium. Cousins had called the Angels' Ron Jackson safe at second base in an inning that saw the Angels score six times to tie the score. Earlier this season, Martin was suspended for kicking dirt on Cousins. (AP Laserphoto)

Catcher Signed By ECU Baseball

East Carolina University head baseball coach Hal Baird announced yesterday the signing of Jimmy Riley of Chesapeake, Va., as the third grand in aid player inked by the Pirates.

Riley, a catcher, played at Deep Creek High School, twice being named All-Southeastern district A 485 hitter his senior year. Riley has been selected to play in the Virginia High School All-Star game in Charlottesville, July 17.

Academically, Riley is a member of the National Honor Society and carries a 3.5 average.

"We are thrilled that Jimmy has decided to sign with us," said Baird. "We were anxious to sign a top-line catcher this year and Jimmy certainly fits the bill. Jimmy is known as an outstanding defensive catcher with an extremely strong arm. I would expect him to make immediate contributions to our club next season, and, of course, we are very happy to get a fine player that is also such a fine academic student."

Earlier signees include Mike Christopher of Dinwiddie High, Dinwiddie, Va., and Steve Sides of Eastern Wayne High in Goldsboro.

Five Represent ECU In Youth Triathlon

Five East Carolina University representatives will compete in the Youth Unlimited Triathlon in High Point Saturday.

The five include Robert Morrison, professor of chemistry, Ross Reeves, a graduate student, Maureen Fox, administrative assistant in the department of Surgery (Transplantation), Jamie Moul, assistant director of Intramural Recreational Services, and Robert Fox, assistant director of Intramural Recreational Services.

This will be the first triathlon for Moul. The others have all participated in the Wilmington Triathlon, which includes a one-mile swim, a 42-mile bike ride and a ten-mile run. The High Point event will include a half-mile swim, 20-mile bike ride and a six-mile run.

Fox, who has finished four triathlons, and Morrison, who has competed twice before, both train throughout the year. Morrison has competed in ten marathons and a number of other runs of various distances. Fox has run 12 marathons and over 80 other road races. A typical day of triathlon training includes a 20-mile bike ride in the morning, a 5-10 mile run at noon, and a mile-mile or more swim, followed by another 5-10 mile bike ride and a 24 mile run.

Saturdays, a run of over ten miles is followed by a 15-20 mile bike ride, with a 50-70 mile bike ride on Sundays.

Falcone, Chambliss Pace Atlanta Win

By The Associated Press
When Pete Falcone is on, he gets the batters out. When Chris Chambliss is on, he gets the ball out.

They were both on Thursday night.

Falcone, who has spent his seven big-league seasons in St. Louis, New York and now Atlanta, bouncing between bullpens and starting rotations, silenced St. Louis' bats on four hits for 7 1-3 innings and Chambliss drove in five runs, four with a grand slam, as the Atlanta Braves mauled the Cardinals 8-1.

Elsewhere in the National League it was San Diego 4, Philadelphia 1; Chicago 3, Pittsburgh 1; Montreal 11, San Francisco 4, and Los Angeles 5, New York 4 in 14 innings. Houston and Cincinnati did not play.

"He really manhandled his former ballclub," Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said of Falcone, acquired by the Braves after the 1982 season in the free-agent re-entry draft. "He was super. If he has good stuff, he gets 'em out — and he had good stuff tonight. He also earned himself another start."

"I pitched the best I could possibly pitch," Falcone, 31, said following his third start of the season. As for his fourth, he doesn't seem to mind when — or if — it comes.

"I'm flexible," he said. "The bullpen is fun. I don't mind being a reliever. I'll accept whatever they want me to do."

When Terry Forster took over with one out in the eighth inning, the Braves' fans gave the departing Falcone a standing ovation. "I haven't heard one of those in a 1-0-n-g time," he said. Forster was credited with his seventh save, even though he lost the shutout in the ninth inning on two-out singles by Willie McGee, Darrell Porter and Ozzie Smith.

By then the game was a lock for the Braves, thanks in part to Chambliss. He hit an RBI single off loser Bob Forsch in a three-run sixth inning, then wrecked the Cardinals' strategy in the eighth with his seventh homer of the season and fifth career grand slam.

Hits by Claudell Washington and Dale Murphy off Jim Kaat put runners on second and third with nobody out, bringing up Bob Horner, who had homered in the second inning.

The Cards walked Horner intentionally to load the bases.

"They took a chance, and it didn't work out," Horner said.

Chambliss sent Kaat's next pitch over the right-center field fence.

"It was a hanging breaking ball," Chambliss said. "Jim doesn't usually hang them, but he hung that one. He's a good friend of mine. I'll see him tomorrow and we'll be kidding about it."

Padres 4, Phillies 1

San Diego pitcher Dave Dravecky's concerns were (a) making it as a major-leaguer, and (b) making it past the sixth inning against the Phillies. He did both in style, becoming the NL's first eight-game winner with a seven-hitter for his sixth complete game. "I'm in so much awe just playing in the big leagues," he said.

The Phils, putting runners on in each of the first seven innings, managed to score only on Gary Matthews' homer in the sixth. "I was just hoping I was going to be around in the ninth," said Dravecky, "but the last three innings I felt much stronger."

Gene Richards had a two-run, bases-loaded single with two out in the sixth inning, breaking a 1-1 tie. And Kevin McReynolds, in his major-league debut, homered in the seventh.

Cubs 3, Pirates 2

Ryne Sandberg was pivotal in the Cubs' victory — in more than one way.

In the second inning, the Chicago second baseman was the middleman in the team's first triple play in 11 years, on a Rick Rhoden grounder to Ron Cey at third base. And in the eighth, he sent a Rhoden offering over the wall for a game-winning two-run homer.

"It was exciting and a lot of fun," Sandberg said. "I've hit homers before but I've never been in on a triple play."

Expos 11, Giants 4

Andre Dawson sparked Montreal' highest score of the season with three runs batted in. He had an RBI single in a four-run fifth inning and a two-run homer in the seventh inning, and Jim Wohlford added a two-run single in a three-run ninth as the Expos raked four San Francisco pitchers for 15 hits.

Charlie Lea limited the Giants to one hit through four innings and owned a 5-0 lead, but Tom O'Malley opened the fifth with a homer and before the inning was over they had three more runs and Lea was gone. Ray Burris was the winner in relief as the Expos moved within two games of the first-place Cards in the East.

Dodgers 5, Mets 4

Candy Maldonado, batting for former Mets pitcher Pat Zachry with two away in the 14th inning, ripped a single down the third-base line to give the Dodgers their fourth consecutive victory and keep them 2½ games ahead of the second-place Braves in the West.

Former Dodger Mark Bradley's first major-league homer, a pinch-hit shot in the ninth against Fernando Valenzuela, pulled the Mets into a 4-4 tie.

Noah In Men's Finale

PARIS (AP) — Yannick Noah battered fellow Frenchman Christophe Roger-Vasselin 6-3, 6-0, 6-0 today and gained the men's singles final at the French Open Tennis Championships.

Noah was only the fourth French player to reach the men's final. The last Frenchman to win it was Marcel Bernard in 1946.

The second semifinal was between defending champion Mats Wilander of Sweden and Jose Higuera of Spain.

Some 13,000 fans watched the all-French semifinal on the sun-baked center court of Roland Garros stadium.

They saw a match that began as a highly entertaining duel and developed into a rout.

Instead of playing from their baselines, like most Europeans on this slow clay surface, the two Frenchmen both attacked and went to the net.

They raced about the court retrieving and volleying, and there was little between them for the first few games.

Once Noah had broken service to 4-2, however, he steadily got on top.

Noah finished off the first two sets with service aces down the center line — a sight seldom seen on the slow clay.

Roger-Vasselin wilted in the sun. In the third set, he had almost nothing left. He double-faulted three times in one game and picked up only five points in the first five games of the set.

Roger-Vasselin, 26 and ranked 130th in the world, scored the upset of the tournament by knocking out top seeded Jimmy Connors in the quarterfinals. He said he had had no time to himself since.

"People have been calling all the time," he said. "All these journalists and radio and television people. I have had two very tough days."

"Next time, I will know how to say 'No.'"

PARIS (AP) — Mats Wilander is polishing his reputation as the prodigy of tennis.

The 18-year-old Swede, a relative unknown only a year ago, meets Spain's Jose Higuera today to battle for a place in Sunday's final and the $94,000 winner's purse at the French Open Tennis Championships.

The other men's semifinal Friday on the clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium will be decided by two Frenchmen when Yannick Noah, seeded sixth, meets unseeded Christophe Roger-Vasselin, a 25-year-old who has never won a tournament.

The odds are that Wilander, the highest ranked player left in the tournament and one of the world's finest clay court artists, will take his second straight title in Paris.

Last year's French Open marked the birth of a clay courts star. Wilander, then way down the rankings, toppled four of the world's top players to win the French title and become the youngest Grand Slam singles champion in history.

He also warmed the hearts of French fans last year when he refused to accept a match point that had been awarded him in his semifinal. Wilander had thought an "out" call on his opponent's passing shot was wrong.

Since then the blond, blue-eyed son of a factory worker from Vaxjo has continued to stun the world of tennis. He has won three tournaments this year, all on clay, a slow surface that taxes stamina and patience.

"I think I'm capable of winning the tournament again this year," Wilander said going into his match against Higuera. "But it was pretty tough last year and it's not going to be any easier this year."

Wilander, the world's fifth-ranked player, and Higuera, a 30-year-old ranked seventh, have won one split in their two previous encounters.

History Repeats

Chicago Cubs' Ryne Sandberg leaps over Pittsburgh Pirates' Adalberto Ortiz after relaying to first to complete a triple play during the second inning at Chicago Thursday. The Pirates' Rick Rhoden hit to Cubs' third baseman Ron Cey, who threw to Sandberg, who threw to first baseman Bill Buckner. Dale Berra was out at third. The Cubs won the game 3-2, and their last triple play was also against Pittsburgh 11 years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

First Federal 2

Wellcome 1

In the battle for first place in the Tar Heel Little League, First Federal squeezed out a 2-1 victory over Wellcome yesterday to take a game and a half lead over the losers.

First Federal is now 8-2 on the year, while Wellcome drops to 6-3.

Both of the First Federal runs came over in the third inning. Drew Johnson led off with a walk and Frankie Pugh singled. Richard Dyer reached on an error, loading the bases. John Bolen reached on a fielder's choice which got Johnson at the plate. A walk to Lee Watson, however, forced home Pugh, and Richard Lewis reached on an error, allowing Dyer to score for a 2-0 lead.

Wellcome came back with one in the fourth as Judd Crumpler singled, moved up on a wild pitch and scored on an error.

Michael Cox had two hits to lead First Federal, while Crumpler had two for Wellcome.

Lions 15

Jaycees 13

The Lions, after losing nine straight games, came up with two runs in the seventh inning yesterday and handed the Jaycees a 15-13 North State Little League upset.

The Lions took the lead with two runs in the top of the first, but the Jaycees came back with three in their half of the frame, then added two in the second and one in the third. The Lions scored five times in the fourth, only to see the Jaycees come back with six to hold a 13-7 edge. But in the fifth, the Lions rallied for six runs and tied it up at 13-13.

It stayed that way until the seventh, when the Lions pushed over the two that gave them their first win of the year. Marty Measamer walked and moved up on two wild pitches. Pierre Nelson also walked and stole second. Another wild pitch scored Measamer and put Nelson on third, and he scored on a single by Mike Harris.

Harris and Measamer each had three hits for the Lions, while Nelson had two. Neal Creech and Bobby Threewits each had two for the Jaycees.

Holds Four-Stroke Lead In Kemper Burns In The Swing Of Things

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — For the past five months, big George Burns has been, by his own admission, a golfer in search of a swing. He may have found it.

Burns, for whom great things were predicted when he joined the pro tour eight years ago, shot a 64 Thursday to tie the course record at the 7,172-yard, par 72 Congressional Country Club and take a four-stroke lead over Tom Kite and Scott Simpson.

"I've tried to change my swing which seems to be a never ending battle for me," said Burns whose round tied the 8-under-par round of Tommy Jacobs in the 1964 U.S. Open here.

Burns' had a hole-in-one on the 211-yard par 3 No. 16 on which he used a two iron.

"I've been working on a new swing since January," he said. "In essence, I'm trying to eliminate a lot of the wild shots I've hit by getting rid of some of the faults I had in my swing."

Burns, who last won at the Bing Crosby in 1980, is having a terrible year, accumulating only $35,805 in prize money. His best finish was third place at Doral but he has not made the cut in seven of the 15 events he has entered and has had one withdrawal. Since Doral, he has missed the cut four times, withdrawn and finished tied for 75th tied for 49th, and tied for 13th.

He said his "moss" could be attributed to his seeking a new swing along with lower back problems and, lately, a stress fracture of his right foot — a result of jogging to keep down his weight.

"I wasn't thinking about winning when I came here," he said. "I just wanted a good round and go on to the Westchester Classic, which is near my home. It really is nice to shoot a 64 on this course because I was struggling."

"I'm working on my golf swing to make it for five or six years," he said. "I'm not trying for an instant success with it. I hope it began today."

Kite was more than pleased with his 68 which put him and Simpson one stroke ahead of Andy Bean and Tze-Chung Chen, a tour rookie from Taipei, Taiwan.

"I haven't played this well since San Diego (Feb. 17-20)," said Kite. "Since then I have been struggling. These kinds of rounds are real pleasing to me because it shows I'm working hard. I'm grinding out there and I'm not giving up."

"I had opportunities to make bogeys out there and I didn't. I like rounds like that. I got the absolutely max out of my round and there aren't too many rounds you can say that about."

In fifth place at 70 is Tom Jenkins, a 42-year pro whose only four victory was in Philadelphia in 1975.

Fourteen players were under par 71, including Jerry Pate, who didn't hit a golf ball for 62 days until May 13 because of a shoulder injury. A total of 20 players broke par.

At even par were another 14, including Craig Stadler, who has won the Kemper the past two years.

"Seventy-two isn't too bad a score," said Stadler. "That's how I started last year."

The Recreation and Parks Department summer program schedule is ready. Brochures may be picked up at any Recreation and Parks facility. For more information, call 752-037, Ext. 202.

Silverthorne Wins Putt-Putt

Jimmy Silverthorne jumped to a four stroke lead after one round and then held on to win the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at Greenville Putt and Games.

Silverthorne finished with a two under par 20, two shots ahead of Ron Newton and David Sillanpaa. Newton picked up two strokes and Sillanpaa, four, in the hectic final round.

State's Revenue Rises Again In May; Hunt Happy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials said they were encouraged about the economic recovery Thursday by preliminary figures showing state tax revenues in May were 9.35 percent higher than in May 1982.

"We are really on target in terms of the recovery," Gov. Jim Hunt said after learning of the figures. "It is a little better than we expected in this year."

Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch, at a late afternoon news conference, said tax collections for May were $272.6 million compared with $249.3 million in May 1982.

He said revenues for the fiscal year to date are 6.95 percent higher than for the first 11 months of the 1981-82 fiscal year. Revenues so far this year are $3 billion compared to $2.86 billion for the same period last year.

"I consider those figures very encouraging," Lynch said, adding that tax revenues have increased steadily since Dec. 31, 1982.

There were larger monthly increases in January, 15.7 percent, and March, 13.6 percent. But Lynch noted there were factors that distorted those figures, such as early payment of corporate taxes. He said May revenues traditionally contain few distortions.

"It is really good news," said John A. Williams, Hunt's executive assistant and state budget officer. "It certainly bears out the forecast we made."

Hunt originally predicted that revenues would grow 8.9 percent for the 1982-83 fiscal year but revised that to 6 percent when preparing his 1983-85 budget. Williams said there is hope now that revenues will have risen by 7 percent by the end of June.

The 1983-85 budget is based on predictions that revenues will grow 8.8 percent. The Legislature has chosen to go along with its analysts' less optimistic predictions that tax collections will grow by about 7.2 percent.

Hunt agreed that the statistics show the Legislature can rely on the full amount of revenues he predicted for 1983-84.

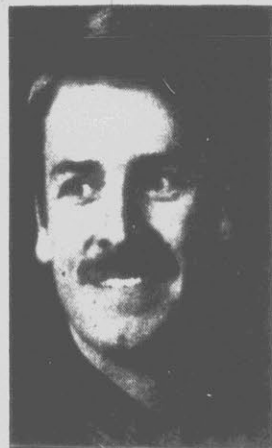

When the economy began to slump last summer, Hunt ordered almost all state departments to cut spending by 6 percent in an effort to avoid a shortfall.

Williams said the latest revenue figures indicate the state would have faced a $75 million to $90 million shortfall if it had not reduced spending.

"We hope we have more than covered the shortfall," he said.

As a result of its successful first year, the pilot program, Computerized Accounting Objectives I at Rose High was observed by neighboring high school, college and university classes. He has represented this state conducting workshops and seminar for the Kent and Seattle school districts in Washington State.

He is under contract with Houghton Mifflin Publishing Co. to write sample material for possible publication of a textbook on Computerized Accounting Occupations. He also has been contracted by Houghton Mifflin to serve as a guest speaker at seminars and has done so in Georgia and Maryland.

A Fallen Hero

Shortly after midnight on June 5, 1968 — 15 years ago this weekend — presidential hopeful Robert Kennedy, left the Embassy Room of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles where he had been addressing his followers after having won the California Democratic primary. As he was about to leave the building through the hotel kitchen at 12:20, a 34-year-old Jordanian refugee stepped toward him and fired a revolver at point blank range. Kennedy and five others were wounded. They were taken to Good Samaritan Hospital, where the Senator underwent a 3 hour and 40 minute operation to remove a .22 caliber bullet from his brain. At 1:44 a.m. on June 6, Bobby Kennedy died at the age of 42.

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

We are indebted to the sprightly British magazine, Popular Bridge Monthly, for this hand. It cropped up in the annual Brighton Spring Foursomes.

Four hearts was the contract at both tables. South had considerable playing strength, so he issued a game invitation by asking for help in diamonds. Since North had a key diamond honor as well as a maximum raise to two hearts, he was glad to oblige.

At both tables, the lead was the jack of spades. One declarer saw that he could pick up trumps on a 4-0 break if East held all the trumps, so he won the ace of spades in hand and led a trump to the queen. Unfortunately it was West, who had the four trumps, so declarer ended up conceding two diamonds and a club in addition to a trump — down one.

At the other table the declarer was Terence Reese, one of the world's great player-writers. He too won the ace of spades in hand, but at trick two he led the queen of clubs! Watch what difference that made. East won and continued with spades. Reese, again won in spades and now he led a trump to the queen. When it developed that West held all the trumps, Reese had a second line of play available. He ruffed a club, crossed to the king of spades to ruff another club, then back to the ace of diamonds for a third club ruff. The end result was that he scored six trumps, three hearts, and the ace of diamonds to make his contract!

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — OUR COMMON REACTION TO TRASHMAN'S TALL TALES: "RUBBISH!"
Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals L.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Found Elimination 'Notes' In Luggage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A policeman testified Thursday that a man arrested in April on a stolen credit card charge appeared to be a crime organizer whose notebook referred to eliminating federal officials and crimes in other states.

Virgil Vase Keels, who has been in the Wake County jail since his arrest, is being investigated by the U.S. Secret Service and the FBI, said Raleigh policeman W.O. Smith.

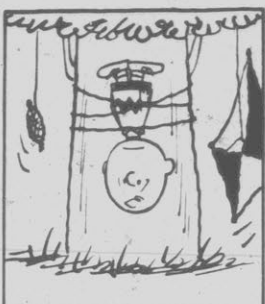

Smith testified he found the notebook during a routine check of Keels' luggage after Keels was arrested April 19 at a motel on credit card charges.

Smith said the stenographer-type pad, with Keels' name on it, included entries as though part of a log.

"It went into a lot of stuff about some kind of movement or organization that was attempting to raise money or finances for eliminating certain people," Smith testified. Included in the "elimination" list were Chief Justice Warren Burger and President Reagan's top three aides, he said.
