Billy Braswell Draws Life-In-Prison Sentence

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Billy Braswell, now 41, has made a career out of law enforcement. As a military policeman, then as an officer in Farmville and, for 13 years, as a sheriff's deputy in Pitt County, law has been his life.

On Sept. 27, 1982, by Braswell's own admission, he shot his wife, Lillie, and left her body beside a car parked along busy U.S. 264-Alternate near Farmville.

A Pitt County Superior Court jury listened to testimony for more than a week and, late Friday, found the veteran officer guilty of murder in the first degree.

Judge James Llewellyn, before the verdict was known, reflected that "there is only one being that knows exactly what happened." He then added, "Vengeance is the Lord's, and not anybody's in this court."

Braswell, his face reflecting none of the emotion that testimony indicated has flowed through his body in the last year or so, was sentenced to life in prison for the fatal shooting of his wife — a shooting testimony blamed on an impending marital split-up.

After court was adjourned, Braswell was taken to Central Prison in Raleigh to begin his sentence. An appeal to the state Supreme Court is automatic.

The jury of eight men and four women returned its verdict about 4:15 p.m. Friday after deliberating 3½ hours. They left the courtroom at 10:35 a.m.; asked that physical evidence introduced in the trial be brought to the jury room about 11:25, and broke for lunch at 12:20 p.m. Before returning to the jury room at 2:30, the jury foreman asked that Judge Llewellyn once again explain the possible verdicts in the case: first or second degree murder, manslaughter or innocent.

When the jury had been excused after returning the guilty verdict, the judge said he was satisfied with the outcome. "Hopefully a just result has been rendered," he said.

Throughout the trial the state contended that Braswell had shot his wife Lillie, 39, four times following an argument: left her body lying on the ground near the intersection of U.S. 264A and the Chinquapin Road; drove to his Farmville home where he shot himself one time outside the house with one pistol, then went inside and shot himself with another revolver.

The defense, which the jury chose not to believe, said Braswell's wife shot him following the argument out of fear for her life, he in turn shot her, then went home and shot himself.

Hail, Rain Strike Area

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Thunderstorms rolled across much of eastern North Carolina Saturday, bringing heavy rain and some hail to Pitt County and electrical storms to Greene and Beaufort counties.

Ayden was hit by the brunt of the storm in early evening as hail, high winds and heavy rain caused electricity outages and crop damage. One tree was blown over telephone lines, according to Ayden Police Chief Thomas D. Burney.

"We had two crews out at 6 p.m. and they were still working on getting the lights back on at 9 p.m.," he said.

Burney said no accidents were reported as a result of the storm, but that he "felt sure" some tobacco farmers' crops may have been damaged by the hail.

Greenville suffered minor power outages. "There were a few flying fuses, but no poles were down and no major circuits were damaged," a Greenville Utilities spokesman said.

"In rains like this most people just stay inside, thankfully," a Greenville police officer said. "We didn't have any accidents this time, but we usually don't in heavy downpours. It's just when it drizzles or rains enough to loosen the dirt and oil on the road that we have a lot of accidents."

The Snow Hill Police Department reported minor electrical outages but other than that, and some "heavy rains, and a severe electrical storm, we had no problems," a spokesman said.

The storm passed through Farmville and Bethel with much the same force as it did through Greenville, Ayden and Snow Hill, but no problems were reported, according to the police departments.

Other parts of eastern North Carolina were hit by the thunderstorm Saturday evening, the most severe of which carried half-inch hail and 58 mph winds into New Hanover County, according to the National Weather Service.

In addition to the hail reported at Castle Hayne and the 58 mph winds at the Wrightsville Beach Coast Guard station, winds up to 45 mph were logged at the Wilmington Airport.

A tornado watch was issued for Pender County after residents reported a tornado landing near Cowpen, about eight miles west of Wilmington.

Marble-sized hail was reported near Rosewood in Wayne County while heavy thunderstorms were reported in Moore, Lee, Sampson, Carteret, Duplin, and Jones counties.

The Highway Patrol reported that trees and power lines were downed about three miles east of Mount Olive.

Along the coast, a small craft advisory was posted for southwest winds at 15 to 25 mph with higher gusts near the thunderstorms.

Those storms moved through the state's western and central portions Friday and early Saturday, with some mountain areas receiving an inch of rainfall. Saturday's temperatures ranged in the 80s over most areas.

Gunman Believed To Be Fugitive Slain

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A medical examiner said Saturday he had tentatively identified a gunman killed in a shootout with police as fugitive tax protester Gordon Kahl.

Dr. Fahmy Malak said there is a "great probability" that the man is Kahl, but that he can't make positive identification until he gets dental records Monday.

However, Malak said he made a tentative identification based on Kahl's general description, scars from surgery Kahl underwent, an old bullet fragment in the left hip, and a verbal description of Kahl's dental work given by a daughter of Kahl.

He would not further identify the daughter or say where she lives.

The body believed to be Kahl and a fatally wounded sheriff were found Friday night inside a munitions filled concrete house that exploded and burned after police tossed in tear gas.

The couple who owned the house outside the northeastern Arkansas town of Walnut Ridge, also tax protesters, were arrested outside the house before the shooting started. They were charged Saturday with capital murder of the dead sheriff. Capital murder in Arkansas may be punished by execution or life imprisonment without parole.

Kahl, 63, a retired North Dakota farmer, was wanted for the shooting deaths four months ago of two U.S. marshals near Medina, N.D. He was a member of a militant, survivalist, anti-tax group called Posse Comitatus and was on probation for a 1977 conviction for failure to file federal income tax forms.

Kahl fled after the shooting and an extensive manhunt was launched. U.S. Attorney Rodney Webb of Fargo, N.D., said he understood that Kahl had lived in Arkansas from July 1981 to July 1982.

Begin Planned Beirut Attack Months Ahead

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel Radio said Saturday that Prime Minister Menachem Begin planned the invasion of west Beirut last June, despite Begin's statements that the sweep was a reaction to the assassination of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel in September.

The radio report also said Begin told then-Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. about a planned assault on west Beirut and he was "understanding." It said Haig clashed with other Washington officials on the issue and that this was a factor in his resignation on June 25.

Begin decided to go ahead with plans to send Israeli soldiers into west Beirut after he met with Haig in Washington shortly before Haig's resignation, the radio said.

Israel Radio did not give a source for the report by diplomatic correspondent Shimon Schiffer, who is known to have close access to top Israeli officials. Attempts to reach Haig for comment were unsuccessful, his telephone number is unlisted.

Other news accounts Saturday of the invasion of Lebanon that began June 6, 1982, and the thrust into west Beirut more than three months later, also suggested the attack on the Moslem sector of the capital had been planned in advance.

At the time of the invasion, Begin said he wanted to eradicate the Palestine Liberation Organization bases in southern Lebanon and secure

Ticks, Mosquitoes Are Out In Full Force Now

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Those pesky pests of spring and summer, the mosquito and tick, are out in abundance this year and could cause health problems with both humans and pets, say local health professionals.

Those diseases transmitted by mosquitos and ticks that are causing concern among doctors and veterinarians include encephalitis and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. Both diseases are transmitted through insect bites, with encephalitis infecting both horses and humans.

Local veterinarian Dail McLawhorn said the reason vets are concerned with spotted fever is that dogs can carry the ticks into the home where they have the opportunity to attach themselves to people.

"The ticks are as bad or worse than we've ever seen this year, but when we have a mild winter, we usually see more ticks and mosquitos," Dr. McLawhorn said.

The increase in the mosquito and tick population also has entomologists from the North Carolina Department of Human Resources a bit worried, according to Pitt County Environmental Health Director Willie Pate. "They have been talking about the possibility of an increased number of encephalitis cases this year due to the damp weather we've been having," Pate said.

Unfortunately, however, there is not much that can be done to get rid of the pests, according to Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent Sam Uzzell.

"We can do what we can, but I'm not sure how much we can keep the numbers down with as much low land and swamp land as we have around here," Uzzell said.

But a temporary reprieve from dive-bombing mosquitos, Uzzell said, can be gained by eliminating breeding areas around your home. "Anything that holds water is a prime spot for mosquito breeding such as old tin cans, buckets, old car tires, bird baths, gutters and old spouts. Standing water is the biggest problem, because mosquitos don't travel very far from their homes," he said.

Uzzell said there is not much that can be done about the tick population, either. "Of course there are always a lot of ticks in this area. North Carolina is the leading state for Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever," he said.

The best thing anyone can do to combat ticks, Uzzell said, is to check themselves and their children every time they have been outside. "As far as trying to spray for them, it's just a waste of time. If you're going to have a party or something, the spray will take care of mosquitos and ticks for a couple of hours, but won't have any lasting effect. They will come right back," he said.

However, commercial bug bombs do effectively eliminate the pests in the house if used regularly, Uzzell said.

"If you do begin to feel sick and think you may have been bitten by a mosquito or tick recently, by all means go to the doctor," Uzzell advised.

Dr. Richard Marx, infectious disease specialist and assistant medical professor at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, listed the following symptoms of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever: early stages — fever can be fairly high, severe headache, muscle aches and photophobia (light hurts your eyes); later stages (three or

Fifth Street's Trees Give More Beauty Than Problems

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Water oaks and willow oaks that line both sides of the street, their branches reaching across the road until they meet to form a living arch, make East Fifth Street one of Greenville's more scenic spots.

But the stately trees, while adding beauty to the town, have caused problems for the Greenville Department of Public Works and motorists.

Cars have been hit by falling limbs. Fifth Street cannot be widened without removing the trees. The roots of the trees have pushed curbing and gutters out of line.

With all that, why not just cut down the trees and remove the problem?

"Some of the older citizens of Greenville said those trees on Fifth Street have been growing as long as they can remember," public works director Mayo Allen responded. "I am proud of those trees, and the citizens of Greenville love them."

So, instead of removing the trees, the city has initiated a policy of caring for the trees, even to the extent of replacing those that have to be removed because of disease or other ailments.

Terry Oglethorpe, superintendent of the right of way and traffic control division for the Public Works Department, said the oaks were planted sometime between 1907 and 1910.

The oaks are now at their prime age," he said. "They can live 200-300 years."

Allen, who stressed that he loved the rows of trees on both sides of the street, said that the main problem with the trees was their close proximity to the roadway.

"Any time you put a tree next to the street there is a problem with the roots," Allen said. "We have to habitually replace the curb and gutter when the money is available. This is very expensive.

"I am glad when people put out trees, but I discourage them from setting trees so closely to the curb line," Allen said.

The trees have had other difficulties besides their proximity to the road.

Oglethorpe said that the type of trees planted along Fifth Street, water oaks and willow oaks, thrive best in moist soil. "That location (along Fifth Street) is not ideal for that type of tree," the horticulturalist said. He also said that the trees have

Home Energy Needs Decline By 29 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — American homeowners by the millions have turned down their thermostats, installed insulation, and bought more energy efficient appliances — all leading to a dramatic 20 percent drop in residential energy use in just a decade, according to a new study released Saturday.

"American homes are not the energy sieves they were ten years ago," said the study by the Cambridge Energy Research Associates, a private research firm based in Massachusetts.

A decade ago, 85 percent of the population lived at a cozy 70 degrees or above in the winter, but by 1981 that figure had dropped to 45 percent, said the study, released in Washington.

"Most of the fall in average energy consumption has been due to the conscious efforts of consumers caught between the rock of rising energy costs and the hard place of slower income growth," the report said.

The biggest drop in home energy use occurred after the second oil shock in 1979 when the real price of natural gas and electricity joined oil in skyrocketing. From 1979 to 1981, energy use dropped 9 percent, going from an average of 130 million British thermal units per household to 118 million in just two years.

The report found that more Americans are using wood stoves, portable electric heaters, and kerosene heaters to heat just parts of the home.

This has been accompanied by a major shift in the type fuel being used. Heating oil use dropped precipitously from 25 percent of U.S. homes in 1970 to 13 percent today while electricity rose from 15 to 25 percent. Wood became the primary heating fuel in 2.5 million American homes — 10 percent of the total. Natural gas, the country's most popular home heating fuel, held its own, at 55 percent of homes.

The report predicted that energy use in the residential sector — unlike the industrial sector — would continue to decline even as the country moved out of its economic slump.

"Consumers will simply be unable to afford the heating practices of a bygone era," as electricity and natural gas prices continue to rise, the study said.

In addition, economic recovery will mean that more new, energy-efficient homes will be built, adding more momentum to the conservation effort.

The appliances that are going into new and old homes are also much more efficient than a decade ago, the study found. Refrigerators are 31 percent more energy efficient; freezers, 42 percent; clothes washers, 32 percent; and dishwashers, 31 percent.

The study, written by Stephen Meyers and Lee Schipper, two scientists at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, said residential energy use should continue to decline gradually for the rest of the decade.

"Conservation has taken hold in the U.S. residential sector," the two men wrote. "Considering the future of energy prices, it is safe to say that most of the gains are here to stay."

Remains Of GIs Return

HONOLULU (AP) — More than 10 years after the end of the Vietnam War, the remains of nine U.S. servicemen killed in Southeast Asia were brought home Saturday to full military honors.

The names of the nine have not been disclosed, said Marine Maj. Rick Stepien, a spokesman for the commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific.

Following the ceremony at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu, the remains were taken to the Army's Central Identification Laboratory, where positive identification will be made before the bodies are released to relatives, Stepien said.

The remains were turned over by Vietnam on Thursday to a U.S. delegation led by Lt. Col. Joe Harvey, commander of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Honolulu.

The Hanoi government also provided the mission with what the Pentagon described as "identification-type information" on three other U.S. servicemen listed as missing in action.

According to the Pentagon, the Vietnamese government has returned the remains of 79 Americans since 1973.

Nearly 2,500 U.S. servicemen who fought in Southeast Asia remain unaccounted for, the Defense Department said.

More Rain Dashes Hope For Flood Relief In Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A rainy Saturday dashed beleaguered Utahns' hopes for relief from week-long flooding and mudslides that have forced 1,600 to leave their homes, closed canyons and turned streets into canals.

In Salt Lake City, flood control workers faced a new enemy as silt and debris clogged conduits. That prompted officials to extend a sandbag-and-plastic canal along busy downtown State Street by nine blocks to combat flooding from City Creek. Water spilled out in an area several blocks west of the Mormon Church's Tabernacle Square.

John Hiskey, aide to Mayor Ted Wilson, said water had seeped into the basements of some nearby homes and city officials were going door to door to assess damage.

"The erosion factor out of City Creek has been extreme," Hiskey said. "We have such high silt and rock content that it's been clogging drains."

An autopsy was performed Saturday on the body of a man found earlier in the day, floating face down in 3 feet of water in the basement of a Salt Lake City home.

Thirty miles north, in Ogden, the Utah Highway Patrol closed a bridge near Interstate 15 over the swollen Weber River after water spilled over it early Saturday, slightly injuring two men who tried to drive across the span.

Highway Patrol dispatcher Debbie Birch said authorities initially believed the 31st Street bridge had collapsed about 12:30 a.m., but found during an inspection in daylight that runoff had simply washed away parts of the roadway.

In Davis County, citizens and officials kept a wary eye on the Wasatch Mountain canyons, where mudslides still threatened to break loose. Mudslides and flash floods destroyed eight homes and damaged 355 others in the county last week.

"We have people monitoring the slide areas," said Mel Miles, a spokesman for the county. "But all we can do is watch, wait and see. The situation in the majority of our canyons is still very hazardous, and people living at the canyon mouths should be prepared to evacuate at a moment's notice."

About 100 families were allowed to go home Saturday in Farmington, following a brief evacuation ordered when movement was detected in a mudslide that had forced up to 500 people from their homes earlier in the week.

In Bountiful, workers began cleaning up about 1,800 gallons of mineral oil, containing PCBs, that was swept Tuesday from a Bountiful Power & Light Co. substation along Stone Creek into a nearby basement. PCBs — polychlorinated biphenyls — have been linked to cancer in animals and to ailments of the skin and nervous system in humans. The chemical is used as a coolant and insulator in electrical equipment.

Miles said Davis County health officials were taking blood samples from the home's residents and others who might have been exposed, "but we don't expect any health problems."

More rain also fell Saturday in northern Utah, where half an inch was recorded at scattered locations. More than an inch was recorded in Coalville, east of Salt Lake City.

Odd Weather May Help Corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent cloud of strange weather that brought a warmer-than-normal winter and a wetter-than-usual spring to much of the country may have a silver lining for corn, researchers say.

Looking back into history at the impact of similar weather phenomenon, scientists at the University of Illinois at Urbana say the changes in Pacific Ocean temperatures that have been influencing the world's weather are linked to bumper farm crops.

Dr. Paul Handler and his wife, Dr. Ellen Handler, looked at corn production and the occurrences of so-called "El Nino" events going back 112 years.

"This research suggests that in years in which an El Nino event causes surface temperatures in the tropical Pacific to become warmer than normal, there is a higher probability of an above-average corn crop in the United States," said the report in the June 10 issue of Science magazine.

Handler said in a telephone interview that last year's record corn crop probably can be attributed to the weather change, which began early last year. And if the pattern follows past experience, the corn crop this season also could be good despite a wet spring delaying planting, he added.

El Nino, a Spanish term pronounced "el nin-yo," is a reference to the Christ Child because the phenomenon usually starts at about Christmastime off the west coast of South America.

During the event, which occurs unexpectedly every few years, the winds and current patterns of the Pacific change. Instead of warm water pushing west, it sloshes back to the east and causes atmospheric changes.

Atmospheric scientists say the jet stream in the upper atmosphere gets stronger and strays from its normal path during an El Nino, and more heat and moisture are tranferred from the ocean to the air.

El Nino events usually last only a year or two, and the current one is showing signs of abating, experts say.

"The current weather conditions are virtually a rerun of the 1972-73 El Nino, although this one is much stronger," Handler said. "1972 had a record corn yield, although 1973 yields were down due to excessive rain and late planting."

Handler took corn production data from the U.S. Agriculture Department and compared them with the presence or absence of El Nino conditions, principally South Pacific sea surface temperatures, from 1868 to 1979.

Driver Injured In Wreck

Vehicles driven by Linda McLawhorn Stancill of Route 9, Greenville, and Alton Russell Barrett of 517 Longmeadow Road collided at the intersection of Elm Street and East 14th Street Saturday, according to police reports.

Ms. Stancill was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital following the accident where she was treated and released. Damages to the Stancill vehicle were estimated at $2,000 and $1,000 to Barrett's car. No charges were made.

Mercia Miller Chesson of 102 E. Baywood Lane was charged with a safe movement violation Saturday after a car she was operating and a vehicle driven by Phillip Glenn Lambert of Greenville collided on Greenville Boulevard in front of the McDonald's parking lot.

Damages to the Chesson vehicle were estimated at $5,000 and $600 to the Lambert car.

After months of preparation, 76 prisoners in the German POW camp Stalag Luft III crawled through a tunnel to freedom March 24, 1944, during one of the most daring mass escapes of World War II. All but three were recaptured within days and 50 were shot by the Germans, contrary to the Geneva Convention.

FBI Issues Nationwide Alert In Agents' Deaths

ANGE CITY, Fla. (UPI) — A nationwide alert was out Saturday for Clarence Eugene Robinson, a notorious triple murder suspect who shot and seriously wounded two FBI agents and then slipped through a massive police dragnet.

The 38-year-old Robinson, who has vowed not to be taken alive, has successfully dodged authorities for nearly six years. He is wanted in the fatal shooting of a policeman, and is suspected of killing two of his former buddies who could have testified against him in a robbery case.

"Gene is always the brains behind the punks," said Tim Robinson, an agent with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. "He's become a dadgummed legend in his own time, that's the bad part."

FBI agents Thomas J. Sobolewski, 40, and Dennis G. Wicklein, 42, were in Orange City on an unrelated case Friday when they apparently recognized Robinson as he stepped out of a restaurant about 8:25 a.m. with a newspaper in his hand, FBI spokesman Doug Jones said. The paper concealed a gun.

"As one of the agents reached for his I.D. he (Robinson) shot him in the stomach," said restaurant owner Don Kitchens. "Then the other agent started tussling with him and he shot him ... then one of the agents walked into the restaurant and fell on the floor."

The agents were reported in serious but stable condition Saturday, following surgery for the bullet wounds.

The suspect fled in a white car and within 30 minutes police had sealed off a 300 square mile area of central Florida.

Robinson has been a fugitive since Dec. 29, 1977, when he allegedly participated in an armed robbery in Longwood, Fla.

Jack Edwards, DGA president, presented a silver tray to Mrs. Sherrill Duncan in recognition of her service as director, officer and chairperson. Mrs. Duncan has resigned from the board of directors. Incoming president Reid Hooper presented a mounted gavel to Edwards in recognition of his service as association president for the past two years.

In addition to Hooper, officers for 1983-84 include: Don Edwards, vice president; Herb Wilkerson Jr., treasurer, and Dave Mosier, who was re-elected executive director.

Wilkerson and Bud Wheless were elected to the DGA board and will serve this year with Edwards, Morris Brody, Charles A. Forbes, Anne I. Guerrant, Tom Haines, Douglas P. Hill, Helen M. Pope, Baxter Powell, William H. Taft Jr., John S. Shannonhouse, and Frank M. Wooten Jr.

Campaign Progressing

The Greenville Jaycees' campaign to document public support for the naming of the medical complex here for Dr. Leo W. Jenkins is gaining momentum, campaign co-chairman Joel Johnson said.

The Jaycees announced three weeks ago that they would spearhead a drive to enlist admirers of Dr. Jenkins, former chancellor of East Carolina University, in a move to name the medical center consisting of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Brody Medical Science Building, Eastern Area Health Education Center, and a radiation therapy center now under construction for Dr. Jenkins. The petition cites Jenkins' leadership in the drive for a four-year medical school for ECU.

The Farmville Jaycees and the Greenville Martinsborough Lions Club have endorsed the project, Johnson said, adding that he expects endorsements to be forthcoming from other clubs. Johnson said he and other Jaycees are available to speak to any club considering endorsement.

When they are completed, the petitions will be submitted to the Pitt County Hospital Board of Trustees, the East Carolina University Board of Trustees and the Pitt County Commissioners.

Edmisten Formally Joins 1984 Race For Governor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten became the third Democratic candidate for governor Friday, saying North Carolinians need a leader to get them more jobs and a better education.

He said he is uniquely qualified to be that leader because, "The requirements of my office have made me familiar with the daily operations of every facet of state and local government."

Edmisten made the announcement on the steps of the Capitol at noon before flying with campaign associates to Boone, his hometown, to make a similar speech.

Those who already have announced their candidacy for governor in 1984 are former Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg and Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox.

Other Democrats considered likely candidates are Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth and former state Rep. Tom Gilmore.

Edmisten stressed jobs and education in his speech but also promised to work to preserve the environment, assure equal opportunities for all and fight crime with whatever resources are needed.

"When all who are capable of working are working, the quality of life in our great state will improve," Edmisten said. "I will devote myself to achieving that end."

In an interview after his speech, Edmisten said he would work to generate more jobs in tourism and make sure industry is more evenly spread across the state. He said the state needs more incentives to attract industry, including repeal of the manufacturers' inventory tax.

RUFUS EDMISTEN

"I think we can enhance teaching by giving them (teachers) the things that make life a little more meaningful," Edmisten said after the speech, adding that he would like to see teachers get duty-free lunch periods.

Edmisten said he is "not thrilled" with the idea of longer school days because it already is difficult for some children to pay attention all day. He also said he can't see extending the length of the school year because some parents need their children at home during the summer.

Both ideas have been discussed by the state Board of Education.

The noon rally attracted about 400 people, most of them wearing Edmisten stickers and hats and waving tiny state and national flags. The side of the Capitol was draped with red, white and blue bunting and campaign workers released helium balloons after Edmisten's speech.

Man Holds Police At Bay In Beaufort

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Police say an apparent illegal alien kept them from boarding his boat on the Beaufort waterfront with threats he had enough explosives on board to blow up the whole world.

The standoff Friday forced the evacuation of about 500 residents, but police later discovered the man had only a one-pint jar loaded with four pounds of black powder on board.

The man, identified by police as Samuel McDonald, held authorities at bay for over four hours before surrendering, Carteret County Deputy Sheriff Ritchie Davis said.

No shots were fired and there were no injuries, police said.

McDonald also had two pistols on the 40-foot, wooden-hull boat that was moored off the waterfront, Beaufort Police Chief Marvin Knox said.

Had McDonald set off the powder it "would have rattled windows," Knox said. "We were told he had more powder and we figured the blast area would cover about 1,000-feet."

McDonald was arrested and charged with assault, assault with a deadly weapon and obstructing an officer in the line of duty, Knox said.

A woman with McDonald, identified only by her first name, Gram, was aboard the craft but wasn't arrested, although authorities planned to seek a warrant against her for obstructing an officer in the line of duty, Knox said.

The incident began about 3 p.m. when authorities tried to serve two warrants on McDonald for simple assault and one for assault with a deadly weapon. Davis said McDonald refused to allow police to board the boat and serve the warrants.

"He claimed he had black powder on the bottom of the boat and threatened to blow up his boat and the whole world," Davis said.

Police then began to negotiate with the man. Finally, McDonald agreed to talk to Carteret County Sheriff Ralph Thomas and a news reporter, Lockwood Phillips, editor of the Carteret County News-Times. McDonald surrendered around 7 p.m., Davis said.

McDonald and the woman claim to be from Saudi Arabia, Davis said, adding that neither are American citizens nor do they have proper immigration papers.

Waste Water Treatment Plant To Be An Asset

Bids were formally awarded for Greenville's new waste water treatment plant Monday and the much needed facility should be under construction this year.

It will be built at a cost of $9.2 million and will stand on a 50-acre tract of land east of the Eastern bypass.

From the standpoint of local rate payers the best part of it is that the plant will be financed with $7.86 million in federal funds and $1.3 million in state funding. The local share of the cost will be about $1 million which Greenville Utilities already has on hand. Thus revenue bonds approved by local voters for construction of the facility will not have to be issued.

Construction of the plant appeared to be some years away only a few months ago as the amount of federal money for such construction was shrinking. Greenville was moved up the priority list, however, and approval of the funding was forthcoming.

The new plant will replace an outmoded facility which now operates in East Greenville near Greenwood Cemetery. The new facility will have a capacity of 10.5 million gallons of waste water per day and will provide additional treatment capacity for local growth.

Utilities Director Charles Horne described bidding by contractors as active and the total of the bids was below the $10.4 million which had been estimated.

Local rate payers will be getting a true bargain in the waste water treatment plant and, at the same time, we will be providing for Greenville's growth.

Barbecue, Catfish Appeal To Leaders Of Democracies

There have been plenty of arguments about what barbecue from what section of North Carolina is the best.

We have often joined in with gusto.

There comes a rallying 'round time, however and in this case it is when a Lexington restauranteer serves barbecue to the heads of states of the western world nations.

Wayne Monk of Lexington served the barbecue at Williamsburg last week to the hungry leaders of the democracies who were engaged in summit conference there.

Did they like it? Monk says the plates were piled high and they came back clean. "They had enough on their plates to feed five or six people," he said.

Included were barbecue, barbecued beef and chicken, fried Mississippi catfish and the usual side dishes.

Such meals regularly disappear in North Carolina and the summit meeting proves that world leaders enjoy North Carolina delicacies just like everybody else.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Jim Holmes, who discovered eastern North Carolina-type collards in the Azores on a training flight, has now found them elsewhere.

Holmes took a flight to West Reaynham near Norwich in England.

In the officers mess he found a vegetable called stringed cabbage was being served. It was, of course, collards which, Holmes said, were quite tasty.

The stringed cabbage had less seasoning than those prepared around here and Holmes reported he had to ask for vinegar.

"They looked at me a little strange when I asked for a double order," he chuckled.

He could have, but didn't, explain to them that he came from the home of the Ayden Collard Festival.

The age of the talking computer is very rapidly overtaking us. Even now there are numbers one can call for weather or financial information which is given by a computer voice.

Someday we will operate computers by voice command rather than a keyboard. We will tell the computer, or robot, what we want and a pleasing voice will thank us and get on with the task.

Amateur radio operators in the area are already talking to their computer in the form of a relay station in New Bern. The station has a computer controller which operators can call for various services. The amateurs can obtain the time of day, for instance, or they can interface with a phone line. If a wife wishes to call her husband she can dial the repeater number. It answers in its computer voice, a special code is programmed and the repeater station calls the amateur.

The computer will speak to you with a human voice and tell you what function has been performed.

Of course, access to the station is not so simple. Amateurs must pass strict exams and a code test.

You say simply using the telephone is easier? Well, one amateur told us, "It's not nearly as much fun."

One office jokester, noting the possibility of talking robots, commented to us, "I hope they come along soon. You can order one to clean up your desk."

No computerized robot can be that intelligent.

Political Sweeteners Curb Reagan's Action

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Although the political sweeteners President Reagan promised to the arms-control bloc unquestionably saved the MX missile for him, they represent an arms-control club over his head that threatens his freedom of action.

That became clear even before the climactic MX votes last week in both the Senate and the House. Hyper-emotionalized liberal Democrats zeroed in on their own majority leader and whip, Reps. Jim Wright and Tom Foley, charging virtual party treason for having accepted Reagan's arms-control concessionss reason for voting "yes" on the MX.

The juiciest target was Foley, a straight talker who deals from the top of the deck. Foley electrified his colleagues at dinner with the president in the State Dining Room the evening of May 23 with an eloquent appeal to support Reagan and the MX. Within hours he was accused by colleagues of using "nauseating" rhetoric, of saying "complimentary things" about Reagan and of "stabbing his party in the back."

That gives some idea of the passion that the arms-control bloc, led by the liberal Democrats, is ready to expend to force changes in the administration's policies as payment for congressional support of the MX. At that dinner, with some 50 House members invited by the president, Foley's sin seemed innocent enough. All he did was ask his colleagues to send the president a signal that bipartisanship still lived and to accept Reagan's offer of arms-control concessions even if it meant having a modicum of "trust" in Ronald Reagan.

The president's first payoff, expected to be announced by the White House within the next few days, has now been decided by National Security Adviser William P. Clark and his top MX strategist, consultant Tom Reed: Keep the Scowcroft Commission, headed by retired Air Force Gen. Brent Scowcroft, in harness indefinitely. Although Reagan found Scowcroft morose at the mere prospect of continuing the commission, he cannot say no; neither can other members of the blue-ribbon commission.

The purpose is to use the commission as a congressional pacifier, following its success in last week's MX votes. Some White House advisers, for example, see Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as far from committed to the Midgetman missile, despite Reagan's own professed enthusiasm. Thus one of the commission's new mandates will be to keep the heat on the Pentagon in developing the single-warhead Midgetman as a follow-on for the giant MX.

But that will be easy compared to formulating new arms-control positions for negotiations with the Soviet Union — the big-ticket payoff to the arms control bloc. The National Security Council will meet soon, possibly late this week, to approve a drastically different U.S. negotiating policy for strategic arms reduction (START). Here, too, Weinberger is certain to demand restraints on concessions to arms controllers.

But how much restraint will the Pentagon insist on? And how great are the concessions that the arms controllers really want? The answer in both cases is: very much and very great. That defines the agonizing choices facing the president.

For weeks before the May 24 vote permitting MX testing, Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill had planned to follow it immediately with a vote to authorize actual MX money for the fiscal year starting next Oct. 1. But when liberal arms-control activists smelled defeat coming on the first vote, they quietly pressured O'Neill to delay the second vote until mid-June in hopes of using the Memorial Day recess to whip up a new round of anti-MX, pro-freeze frenzy.

That strategy will not work for the next round of MX voting. But the arms-control bloc has the luxury of literally endless runs on the new missile stretching far into the future. Money to test and build it will be needed, along with annual congressional authorizations, years into the future.

In short, the club is going to remain over Reagan's head, no matter how many concessions he makes to the arms controllers. That unpleasant fact is likely to affect his arms control policies far beyond last week's MX triumph.

State Health Plan Is In The Black

Paul T. O'Connor

RALEIGH — The state's health plan for teachers and state employees has certainly gotten plenty of bad press over the past two years. First the Legislature took an inordinate amount of time deciding how the program would work and who would run it. Then, the people who got the contract, EDS Federal, fell way behind in processing employee health claims.

Finally, there's some good news about the health plan. And House leaders who pushed it from the beginning have taken the time to crow about their success.

Preliminary figures show that the state plan — which is actually a self-insurance plan administered by EDS — will finish the year $22 million under budget. That announcement came on the heels, six months ago, of projections that the plan would overspend by $11 million.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said the savings was vindication for those who proposed self-insurance for the state. He said EDS was diligently checking claims to assure that they qualified for payment. Other cost-containment procedures such as second opinions and ambulatory surgery also helped save money, he said.

Even with the savings, however, the health plan is no small concern for the state. Next year, the plan is expected to cost $150 million. But that's better than the $172 million cost that some analysts had projected.

Whatever happened to Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's proposal to limit campaign spending? You'll remember that some people thought Green was simply seeking publicity when he sponsored the bill in March.

Green sent the bill to the Senate Election Laws Committee where chairman Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, sat on it.

Asked about the bill, Green said he didn't even know where it was. Informed that he'd sent it to Mrs. Woodard's committee, he walked over to her and asked her why it hadn't moved. She said she'd been waiting for someone to come speak on its behalf.

Sen. Jim Edwards, D-Caldwell, sponsor of the bill, said he was trying to find a time for Green to come address the committee. Green said he thought Edwards should do the speaking.

Green, who's angry about the assembly's slow pace, has moved to speed things up. Now, he's only giving senators two seconds to vote on bills. He used to give them five. The time savings may be all for naught, however. One Monday night, floor action had to be stopped twice as senators asked that their votes be changed.

Unisex Insurance Bills Draw Little Action

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — It is remarkable, when you come to think about it, how little attention has been paid to the unisex insurance bills now pending in the House and Senate. These bills would affect every man, woman and teen-ager in the country; they would add greatly to the costs of state and local retirement funds; they would hit women drivers with stunning increases in the cost of their automobile liability insurance; they would effectively transfer the regulation of insurance rates from the states to the federal government.

Yet except for the feminist magazines and the trade of the insurance industry, few elements of the media have locked onto the story. Hearings have been held on the companion bills, S 373 and H.R. 100, and the measures will soon go to markup in committee.

The purpose of the legislation is deceptively simple: The bills would prohibit insurance companies from charging different rates for men and women. That is all there is to it, but the consequences would be immense and most of the burden would fall upon women.

Insurance companies historically have taken gender into account in fixing premiums. As a class, women tend to live about 7.6 years longer than men. As a class, women are safer drives than men, and thus are involved in fewer accidents. Manifestly, some men live longer than some women, and some women are terrible drivers, but facts are facts and rates have been fixed accordingly.

Testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee provided data on what the unisex bills would mean for single women in the area of automobile liability insurance. In Alabama, the annual premium would increase by at least $63 and could increase by $332. In New Jersey, the range of increases would run from $137 to $674. In Texas, some companies would charge only $9 more; others would have to charge $308 more.

The unisex principle has been embodied in state laws in Michigan, Massachusetts, North Carolina and Hawaii. The experience in Michigan, as described in the Senate hearings, must have thoroughly unsettled women drivers. State Farm raised its rates for women by as much as 160 percent, Allstate by as much as 242 percent, and Citizens Insurance by as much as 327 percent. Meanwhile, rates for men dropped by 8 percent to 58 percent.

Pension funds in recent years have provided a substantial fringe benefit for employees in medium and large establishments. While some plans provide identical benefits for males and females, many other pension programs are predicated on the longer life spans of women. Thus women (or their employers) either pay more into the fund during their working years, or receive smaller monthly benefits when they retire. The pending bills would prohibit this actuarial practice.

The Supreme Court soon will have its say on the matter. On March 28 the court heard argument in Arizona vs Norris, in which a state employee, Nathalie Norris, challenges one of the options offered by the state in its pension program. Counsel for the state told the court that an order demanding retroactive equality in benefit payments could "bankrupt a lot" of pension plans.

The same point was made in testimony before the Senate committee. Insurance companies are required to keep certain reserves. The American Legislative Exchange Council, in a recent publication, summed up the consequences in a sentence: "Because sex-neutral legislation would require the companies to increase the cash surrender value of women's insurance policies, and decrease the premiums charged to men, the amount they will have to hold in reserve will greatly increase."

The Reagan administration has not taken a firm position on the pending bills. On May 5, Labor Secretary Ray Donovan said he wanted to give the bills "much further study," but surely little study is required to perceive the political advantage in opposing the whole proposition. A small relative handful of militant feminists may want to pay more for their insurance in the holy name of equality, but it is a fair guess that this soad-the-women legislation would have small appeal elsewhere.

Donald Davis Rhyme

WASHINGTON (UPI) — That old school rhyme about the three "R's" is about to be expanded. Now there is a fourth "R" — to reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic. You can add Reagan.

President Reagan has latched onto education and it will be a centerpiece in the future months of the administration, particularly as a campaign issue should the president seek re-election.

The issue emerged, explosively, when the National Comission on Excellence in Education wrapped up a lengthy study of the nation's public school system, the teachers providing instruction, the quality of their information and the student who eventually is produced by the 12 years of study. Their report was almost a blanket condemnation and was the political equivalent of gold on the ground.

Reagan hailed the report and pollsters and presidential aides quickly saw the potential as an issue. "This is a dormant, sleeping giant of an issue," said one presidential adviser.

Democrats were not left at the starting gate on the issue. Former Vice President Walter Mondale has called for an expansion of some $11 billion in federal aid to education.

Reagan contends that the vast sums already spent on education by the federal government failed to produce the outstanding students desired.

The president had been preaching for some time about the value of vocational educational training and urging students to jump onto the computer bandwagon. Then, a week ago, he changed direction sharply and criticized some of the same items which were condemened in the commission's report. In the process, he attacked the National Education Association.

Although he did not say so in his speech to the graduating class at Seton Hall University in New Jersey, Reagan left the impression that the NEA had been sitting by idly while the public school system went down the drain. He called for merit pay for teachers, an idea pollsters say is popular, but an issue that is staunchly opposed by the NEA.

The NEA rebelled and issued a sharp challenge, pointing out that Reagan has never said the federal government would provide more money to localities to help support the changes for which he called. Reagan snapped back with a letter, made public, claiming the NEA was again off base and now negotiations are under way for a meeting between Reagan and NEA President William McGuire.

Reagan has not abandoned his 1980 call for abolishment of the Department of Education, but has pushed it onto a back burner. But he continues to fight for his plan of giving tax credits for parents who pay private school tuitions; prayer in public schools; and tax breaks for parents saving to send their children to college.

In all, it adds up to a late-blooming issue of the sort that Reagan likes — it is basic that Americans want their children to have good education and there are enough failing grades on education's report card for the past decade to provide stable ground for attacks by the administration.

And, too, as Reagan knows well, talk is cheap. He can criticize, appoint study commissions and continue to use education as a political issue without ever having to actually solve the problem.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Recently I found myself in a first-time situation which should not have existed. However, I am to blame for not checking out references.

I have always dealt with reputable business firms and reliable people but this time one person was honest enough to say that he was up to his neck in work and that it would be some time before he could even consider getting around to me. This I appreciated. Another gentleman came to my home promptly, quoted me a price for the papering to be done and set up a time to do this work. I had seen some of his work, which is very good, but as of this writing I have never heard from him again. So, in this day and age, who is reliable?

I then acquired the services of a young man through an ad in the paper, who claimed to be a professional, to wallpaper my bathroom. The unfinished job was unbelievable. There were bubbles and wrinkles galore in the paper, designs in the paper were unmatched, a torn section of the paper was left hanging and my tile was broken on the corner of the recessed area around the tub.

I telephoned this so-called paper hanger at his home on four different occasions, leaving a message for him to please contact me, but to date he has not had the courtesy to call. Perhaps I should say he did not have the nerve to call as he knew what a mess he had made.

This incident has been reported, through proper channels, as a consumer complaint. I have learned a valuable lesson, though my loss was only the wallpaper and aggravation, and I sincerely hope that the writing of this article will perhaps save someone else from a similar experience.

If you do not know a person, please talk to someone who knows that person's work.

To the editor:

I recently read with interest an article in the News and Observer about a man in Raleigh who decided to show his Christian faith by building a large cross in his front yard. His neighbors were disturbed. It would devaluate everyone's property. The cross still stands.

I heard about a man in New Hampshire who kept pigs in the backyard of his lovely home. His neighbors were disturbed. It would devaluate everyone's property. The man moved his pigs to suit his neighbors — to his front yard!

I've seen a small house built beside a log cabin. The cabin owner was disturbed. His property was going to be devaluated. He erected an ugly, rusty, tin fence to hide the small house from his view.

I'm so happy that I live in a neighborhood where there are large, medium and small homes. Some people have horses, some goats, some dogs, cats and ducks. No one has built a cross yet, but I'm sure it wouldn't be noticed, because everone is very busy minding his own business!

My mother used to ask my sister and me this question when we fought, "How do you think countries can get along if you two sisters can't?" I think this applies to neighbors, too.

Leo Jenkins and friends are pushing a well-financed campaign to raise a monument to him by having the ECU Medical School and other facilities named after him.

The Jenkins name is already stamped on one school at ECU; his sculptured larger-than-life-sized head stands on campus; he was recently given an unearned degree, and he is asking the voters to make him governor. Doesn't he have a sense of modesty — or shame — to help him see he has won enough hurrahs? Will he want even more?

A suggestion: For a change, let's honor the citizens of this region of the state and name the medical complex the East Carolina Medical Center.

Major Tax Changes Are Unlikely This Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Legislative leaders are sorting through stacks of revenue proposals in an effort to put together a package that will provide about $238 million needed to complete work on the proposed state budget.

Key lawmakers from the House and Senate are meeting separately to discuss various proposals, but the leaders of the committees that will work out the package agree it won't include any increases in income or sales taxes.

"I would say any major tax increase is not likely at this time and that would rule both of them out," said House Finance Chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus.

"The governor doesn't want it, I don't want it, the speaker doesn't want it," he said when asked about the possibility of a sales tax increase being endorsed by the leadership.

Senate Finance Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said a number of proposed revenue packages are being studied, but none include increases in sales or income taxes.

"I'm opposed to any increase in the sales tax and I don't think it (the package) requires any increase in income taxes," he said.

The General Assembly's Appropriations Committee is responsible for preparing the state budget, but the Finance committees handle revenue measures that provide money for the budget.

Last month, budget leaders acknowledged additional money will be needed to meet pressing needs in the proposed $6.2 billion state budget for 1983-84 and turned to the Finance leaders for help.

House Appropriations leaders have assembled a package that will require $238.4 million in additional funds, but they have provided few details on what it includes.

The Senate has not announced its package, but leaders have said it involves about the same amount of money.

Although details have not been released, the spending items being considered include $38 million in additional funds in order to provide teachers and state employees with a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise; money to continue a $23 million construction program at black university campuses; and funds to start $60 million in needed, but long-delayed repairs to state buildings.

A major portion of the package is $62.7 million to ensure the state has enough money to meet federal matching requirements for highway construction.

"We have to provide funds to match federal funds and bring in $300 million" for highways, Quinn said.

Gov. Jim Hunt has called for an increase in taxes on alcoholic beverages to get about $50 million for road projects, but Quinn and Rauch both seemed cool to the idea.

The Senate already has a bill raising alcohol taxes, Quinn said, but admitted House leaders are looking at the idea.

Rauch said alcohol tax increases are included in some proposed packages that have been discussed, but not in others.

"The problem is it or is it not counterproductive?" he asked, pointing out substantial increases could reduce sales and cancel anticipated revenue increases.

Because the governor and legislative leaders are opposed to any increases in sales or income taxes, the major source of additional revenues appears to be loopholes in existing tax laws.

Hunt has cited a $120 ceiling on sales taxes on new cars, boats and airplanes and the employee withholding tax payment schedule for small businesses as two areas that might be considered.

The sales tax on cars, boats and planes is now 2 percent but there is a limit of $120, so the tax remains the same for items costing $6,000 or more. One proposal said to be under discussion would raise the ceiling to $300, but would tax only the difference between the cost of a new car the value of a trade-in. It would provide about $62 million.

Another proposal would impose sales taxes on the sale of used cars by individuals, which would bring in an estimated $51 million.

Employee withholding taxes are now paid monthly by businesses with more than $3,000 a month in total withholding and quarterly by other businesses. Requiring most of those smaller businesses to pay monthly would bring in about $60 million in revenues, but would provide only a one-time revenue gain.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The U.S. public is evenly divided on the controversial issue of whether severely handicapped or deformed infants should be kept alive or allowed to die.

In the latest Gallup survey, 43 percent of respondents say that if they had to make the decision, they would ask the doctors not to keep a badly deformed baby alive, while 40 percent take the opposite position.

While the nation as a whole is divided on this issue, sharp differences are found on the basis of race, religion, education and marital status.

— Persons with a college background lean heavily, 54 percent to 33 percent, toward letting a newborn child die if born with a serious deformity.

— Blacks are 2-to-1 of the opinion the baby should be kept alive.

— Catholics are somewhat more likely to favor keeping the baby alive than are Protestants.

— Married persons and women are more in favor of keeping the baby alive than single persons and men.

The issue is now in federal court. On one side, federal law prohibits the withholding of medical treatment for deformed infants, and requires hospitals to post notices warning employees that such a practice is illegal. On the other side, many in the medical profession contend that the new government rules could lead to overtreatment of handicapped infants, merely prolonging the process of dying.

The rules, which took effect March 22, resulted from the death last year of a Bloomington, Ind., infant "Baby Doe" afflicted with Down's Syndrome and other medical complications requiring surgery. The infant died when the parents, doctors and a state court permitted food and treatment to be withheld.

Here is the question and the key findings:

"When a badly deformed baby who could live only a few years was born in a Midwest city, the parents asked the doctors not to keep the baby alive. Would you take the same position as the parents did, or not?"

Appeal Remains

WASHINGTON — Though he's been out of public office since 1976, Henry Kissinger still commands an impressive following. Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters, Gerald Ford, Lady Bird Johnson, George Shultz and Helmut Schmidt, among 300 others, gathered last week in New York to mark Kissinger's 60th birthday as if it were the Royal Jubilee.

While the invitions were done by Cartier, the draw was mostly personality: Nearly everyone who has met Kissinger finds him to be charming, intelligent, humorous and sophisticated. Those who know him well, like many at the party, also know that Kissinger can be eunning, manipulative, duplicitous and power-hungry. Yet they love him anyway.

The full range of Kissinger's personality and achievement is the subject of a new book, four years in the making, due to hit bookstores this week. Written by former New York Times reporter Seymour M. Hersh, "The Price of Power: Kissinger in the Nixon White House," uncovers how deceptively Kissinger executed his foreign policy responsibilities while misleading the press to his personal advantage.

This 700-page eye-opener, however, will probably do little to alter Kissinger's friendship with media heavies, much less affect his public standing. (The former secretary of state finished near the top of George Gallup's "most admired" polls during the last 10 years.) For Kissinger learned early on in his Washington career that a smooth combination of access, flattery and humility "an shield a controversial personality from an otherwise hostile press corps.

A big part of Hersh's work was to debunk the formidable mythology — bolstered by the many public statements and news reports of the day (and, later, the memoirs of the key players) — to determine what Kissinger was really thinking. Kissinger's memoirs, Hersh believes, don't offer many clues. So misleading is the first volume, "White House Years," that it fully deserves the nickname once suggested by Garry Trudeau in his Doonesbury comic strip: Whitewash Years.

While most Americans have come to regard the Nixon years as a time when government officials routinely lied tothe public, few realize how ably Kissinger convinced key reporters and editors of his own integrity. In fact, New York Times editors at least once killed a story that conflicted with Kissinger's word.

Indeed, Kissinger wooed the press masterfully. Though recognized at the White House as a true-blue hawk, he wore the dove's cloak during the evening hours with the more liberal Georgetown set, rife with influential journalists, ever skeptical of Nixon's policies. Kissinger regularly told friends, Hersh reports, that he was working hard to temper Nixon's war plans.

Kissinger was also selective in his interviews, telling reporters enough for a front-page story, but frequently less than the whole truth. Juet before the 1972 elections, for example, Kissinger repeatedly told reporters that peace was at hand though neither the North nor South Vietnamese had agreed to final terms.

Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid all the excitement over Wall Street's mighty bull market, scarcely anyone seemed to notice that the leading market averages actually dropped in the month just ended.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.1 percent, and Standard & Poor's composite index of 500 stocks 1.2 percent. For each, it was the first monthly decline since last summer.

To those who study market history, this was no big surprise. Whether by coincidence or not, May has earned a reputation as a star-crossed month for stock owners.

Yale Hirsch, who compiles the annual Stock Trader's Almanac, found that in the 18 Mays from 1965 through 1982, the Dow Jones industrials had losses 14 times, for an average drop of 1.9 percent. That record is by far the poorest for any month on the calendar.

Of course, nothing is automatic about ups and downs in the market. People don't dutifully buy or sell stocks because some past pattern says they ought to. In fact, if a May drop were a certainty, all but the slowest-witted of traders would have been selling in April.

Presumably, then, it took some real economic worries to rein in the market's runaway advance. One proximate problem was a rise in open-market interest rates, prompted by several weeks in a row of disappointingly large increases in the money supply.

The monetary statistics squelched hopes that the Federal Reserve could come forward with a reduction in its discount rate — the charge it sets on loans to private financial institutions. That rate has stood at 8.5 percent since last December.

By the perverse logic that so often prevails on Wall Street, the blue-chip averages were turning downward just as politicians, economists and possibly even the long-skeptical consumer were embracing the belief that the economy's recovery from the recession was for real.

Reagan Had New Role At Economic Summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — For President Reagan, attending his third economic summit conference, taking over the role of moderator and chairman for the first time made a big difference.

But, after three dinners, two lunches and three formal meetings with the other summit participants, Reagan said, no one left persuaded of some view they didn't hold before arriving in Williamsburg, Va., for the conference.

Reagan and his aides talked with great excitement before the meetings last weekend about the changes Reagan would make. He would hold an "unstructured" summit, without a strict, minute-by-minute agenda for the discussions.

He hoped that this would encourage a freer flow of conversation.

"The summits that I've been to before, each head of state would make a statement and that would be it then. Whether they agreed, disagreed or not, they had made their statement," the president said in an interview with a group of eight reporters just before leaving Williamsburg.

At this summit, however, "everyone could express their views and so forth and then we kept going and discussing to see what we could all agree on as a consensus," he said.

But did that mean he was able to persuade anyone "to some view that they didn't have" before the start of the meetings?

"Not really," the president acknowledged.

However, according to the president, discussions continued until agreements were reached.

"We stayed until we'd worked out what we all felt was a way to go on the particular subject," he said. "There was no vote taken. There wasn't any case in which five said ... to two, 'you're out-voted and this is what we're going to say.' Before we settled on it, all seven were in agreement."

Individual passes for each event open to reporters were printed and handed out, with the recipients' names checked against a master list. This way, someone covering a photo session at the start of a Reagan meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand, for example, could not use the pass for that event to sneak into a photo session involving Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

It was not rare by the end of Reagan's five-day visit to Williamsburg to see reporters, photographers and technicians with more than a dozen individual credentials draped from two-foot key chains around their necks.

McDonald-Hoey Race In 1936 Ended In A Challenge

Following one of the bitterest first-primary campaigns in North Carolina history, backers of Dr. Ralph McDonald contended that the former Salem College psychology professor had been robbed of a plurality by election fraud.

Shelby attorney Clyde R. Hoey emerged from that 1936 election battle with a lead of only 4,484 votes over McDonald in a four-man race. However, Hoey went on to swamp McDonald in the run-off by better than 50,000 votes.

The McDonald claims that the Gardner-Ehringhaus-Hoey machine had stolen the election with fraudulent absentee ballots in several western North Carolina counties may have been the product of frustration because they had expected to emerge from that first primary with an overwhelming lead, if not a clear majority. However, they never offered evidence to back their allegations of widespread absentee ballot shenanigans.

The McDonald leaders' hopes for a clear-cut victory in the first primary were based on straw votes taken by a group of afternoon newspapers which showed their man with a wide lead that just fell short of a clear majority of Hoey, A.H. "Sandy" Graham and John A. McRae.

The outcome of these straw votes sent the Hoey forces "into a panic, first, and then into a rage," wrote News and Observer reporter Charles L. Parker in an analysis written at the end of the second primary. Parker said Hoey leaders "realized that a political something had sprung up in this state that was rolling like a snowball downhill and that time already was gone for any hope it would wreck itself on its own mistakes."

Parker recalled that McDonald had been in the public eye for about two years when his outspoken opposition to the newly enacted sales tax caused him to soar "from the obscurity of his Salem College classroom to the front page prominence before he ever came to Raleigh to the Legislature ..."

McDonald, an Illinois native who held degrees from Hendrix College and Duke University, was head of the department of psychology and education at Salem College in Winston-Salem when he resigned his faculty post to fling himself into politics as a foe of the sales tax. After serving in the 1935 General Assembly, McDonald plunged into the race for the Democratic nomination for governor at the age of 33.

In his announcement speech, which was broadcast from Winston-Salem over a statewide radio network, McDonald borrowed a page from Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who was then president, by calling for "a New Deal in North Carolina." He outlined an 11-point program in which he proposed to eliminate the sales tax and to increase spending on the public schools by soaking the rich who, he charged, were not paying their fair share of taxes.

He also called for reducing the charge for state auto tags to $5, enactment of state social security laws, a new set of appointive state officials, cooperation with the New Deal farm program, a state law guaranteeing the right of labor to organize, a statewide liquor referendum and a balanced state budget.

In his analysis, Parker noted that McDonald was a colorful campaigner, that he was "hop-skipping all over the state, filling the air with ridicule of Clyde Hoey, associating him permanently in the minds of thousands with a sand fiddler, laughing at Hoey and snarling at the Gardner-Ehringhaus-Hoey machine." By contrast, he said Hoey "stirred up less razzle-dazzle," and "I'd go home from a Hoey meeting feeling like I'd been in church."

Most of the state's political leaders opted for Hoey and, at the end, McDonald's campaign contributions dried up. Parker wrote that this caused the campaign staffs to become "in fact volunteer staffs. There is not enough money for stamps, then, and stamps are necessary, but eating can wait ... Regular salaries just do not exist.

"There is money for radio time and travel and advertising only — and not enough of that. Radio time can amount to $10 a minute. Blocked out of a large portion of the Piedmont and West by a hostile press, McDonald insists on blanketing that area with radio. He arranges for time that even his best money-raisers can't pay for. Schedules are canceled, hookups curtailed. When the doctor speaks at Thomasville Thursday night, he thinks he is on a statewide hookup. Actually, he has only Greensboro and Charlotte. The money cannot be raised for the others.

"There isn't enough money for the last scheduled hookup winding up the the campaign in Winston-Salem on election eve. The hat is passed at the (Winston-Salem) Journal and Sentinel for enough to get him on WSJS ..."

At a meeting of key campaign workers near the close of the campaign, McDonald assured them that, "With a fair count I can be elected by 50,000 majority. What I want to know is can we get it?" Some of his supporters felt he didn't.

Braswell ...

After Braswell was sentenced, Assistant Attorney General Don Stephens, who prosecuted the case for the state, said: "The jury said it all. The people of Pitt County have spoken."

District Attorney Tom Haigwood had no comment.

Braswell was represented by three lawyers: Milton Williamson, Cherry Stokes and Tom Greer.

Williamson, saying he was "very disappointed" with the outcome, said, "I had hoped to get a conviction of a lesser offense, or a not guilty verdict."

In effect, Braswell "has received a death sentence," Williamson continued. "I don't expect him to live in prison more than a few years at the very most," because he is a former law enforcement officer.

Williamson said "the question to be decided on appeal" is whether or not a defendant, charged with a capital crime but tried as a non-capital offense, "is entitled to 14 challenges (in the selection of a jury) rather than six challenges as we were allowed in this case." Llewellyn told prospective jurors as the jury selection process began on May 24 that the state would not seek the death penalty.

Stokes said in his opinion "it was a well investigated case ... a well tried case," on the part of both the prosecution and the defense. He said "the Pitt County Sheriff's Department has nothing to be ashamed of."

During his closing arguments to the jury, Stephens suggested that Deputy Sheriff Lee Pascasio was "the author of the Braswell defense," and that the deputy, who testified for the defense, had created the story while Braswell was unconscious, to help protect his friend and fellow officer.

At another point in his closing statement, standing and pointing to Pascasio seated at the side of the courtroom, Stephens told the jury, "that man in the corner is unworthy of belief. His motives are not honorable."

Following the trial, Pascasio said, "I've never lied about a single thing ... never told a single lie from the witness stand or off the stand," about the case. He said he only told the court what Braswell had told him as a friend in conversations at the hospital.

"I never would consider such a thing," as Stephens suggested.

"I've always done the very best job that I could," he said. "I'm certainly not perfect. But I've been, to the best of my ability, everything a peace officer should stand for. What was said from the witness stand, or off, is the truth."

According to Pascasio, a deputy for eight years, what Stephens said "was a tactic ... a strategy on the part of the state. I feel they could have prosecuted the case without the type of strategy that was executed."

Pascasio characterized Stephens' comments about him in court as "cheap."

"I would expect more from a representative of the Attorney General's office. I would expect more from a rookie police officer ... I've never denied Billy (Braswell) was my friend," Pascasio said.

He added, "I was not surprised at the verdict. The jury was a reasonable, fair body."

During the time when Pascasio was being cross examined by Stephens on Thursday, the deputy said he "considered taking a warrant out on the sheriff (Ralph Tyson)" because "I believed the sheriff had done a very wrong thing." But Piscasio never told the court what he thought Tyson had done wrong.

Friday, Pascasio said that the incident involved his testifying at Braswell's bond hearing last November.

"The sheriff has never committed a crime to my knowledge," Pascasio said. "He's one of the most decent men I've ever know."

But he said sometime, under pressure, such as was involved with the Braswell case, "We can disagree ... we can perceive each other differently. I felt at one point, the sheriff was applying pressure on me not to testify in Billy's bond hearing," on Nov. 11. "I felt he was entitled to bond," and "was determined to take the stand."

Tyson, the deputy explained, "was concerned" about the possibility that Braswell might commit suicide.

"I had good intentions and the sheriff had good intentions, too," but it was "a time of disagreement."

Pascasio, who did testify at the bond hearing, said at the time, "it appeared to me the sheriff had done a very wrong thing," and felt "it bordered on intimidation of a state witness."

Commenting on the incident, Tyson said Friday, "I didn't want to make any recomendation as far as bond (for Braswell) was concerned," either allowing bond or recommending that no bond be allowed.

Begin ...

Israel's northern border.

But Schiffer said Begin told Haig in Washington in June that he was convinced "Israel must finish the job and arrive at the elimination of the PLO in west Beirut."

Gemayel's Christian Phalangist militia controlled the eastern part of Beirut and Israel Radio quoted Haig as saying he felt it would be better if the militia carried out an attack on the Moslem-populated western sector.

But, according to Schiffer, Begin said the Christians would need the help of Israeli soldiers and Haig "showed understanding."

Haig said he told Begin to keep their conversation secret because the Reagan administration was "extremely divided" on Israel's conduct in Lebanon, Schiffer said.

Schiffer said Haig had clashed with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger over an Israeli move into Lebanon and that this was among Haig's reasons for quitting.

No official explanation was given for Haig's resignation, but he was known to have been in conflict with such administration officials as U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick and national security adviser William P. Clark.

Schiffer said that on the basis of his talk with Haig, Begin decided to go ahead with an invasion of west Beirut by Christian militiamen backed by the Israeli army. But he said the plan did not work out.

According to Schiffer, then-Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and Begin met several times with Gemayel during the following months and pressured him to launch an invasion. The correspondent said Begin promised "to help you with all our strength," but Gemayel twice put off such an operation.

The daily newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth said Gemayel was reluctant to attack the Moslem sector of Beirut because he wanted Moslem support for the September presidential election. Although the Moslem-Christian power-sharing agreement in Lebanon mandates that the president be a Christian, Gemayel was known to have wanted a wide base of support.

Another newspaper, Maariv, said the question of whether to invade west Beirut strained relations among Cabinet members almost to the breaking point.

Gemayel won the election, but was killed by a bomb on Sept. 14 before he took office. On Sept. 15, Israeli troops captured west Beirut and a day later Christian militiamen killed hundreds of Palestinians in two refugee camps controlled by Israeli troops, prompting a torrent of outrage against the Jewish state. Sharon was forced to resign over the massacre.

The official Israeli account of the period that the army had no advance plans to enter west Beirut because the bulk of the PLO guerrilla force left Beirut at the end of August. The government said the army went in only because Gemayel's assassination raised the threat of civil war.

But Schiffer said that after the PLO evacuation, Gemayel agreed with Sharon to conduct a joint invasion of the Moslem sector after the election and clean up the remnants of the PLO.

The radio quoted Gemayel as saying that "it was necessary to create conditions that will compel the Palestinians to leave Lebanon. Every effort must be made to evacuate the refugees from the camps south of Beirut and turn the camps into parks."

Trees...

But the largest obstacle the trees face is disease. "Those oaks are very susceptible to heart rot," Oglethorpe said. "The trees we have taken down have been hollow. One of the trees just toppled right over."

"Before we bring a tree down it must interfere with progress or be dead or diseased," Allen said. "Our horticulturalist looks at the tree and determines that it is diseased."

Allen said that every time a tree in the city right of way is cut down, two or three new trees are set out near the same location.

Perhaps two dozen trees have been removed in recent years, but Fifth Street today has more trees than ever. In the fall of 1982, after reaching an agreement with former East Carolina Chancellor Thomas Brewer, the city planted 22 trees on the ECU property running beside Fifth Street.

The trees that are being planted by the city were purchased with funds generated by the dead trees. City Manager Gail Meeks said trees that are removed are offered for sale. "The money generated from the sale of the wood is used to replace the diseased trees," she said.

A mixture of trees suitable to the climate and soil of eastern North Carolina is being planted. They include northern red oak, southern red oak, water oak, black gum, sugar maple, bradford pears and pin oak.

Gunman ...

Malak said the man believed to be Kahl had been shot once in the side of the head ear with a 41 caliber handgun.

"The probability is great the sheriff shot him," Malak said. "To be sure we have to match the bullet with the sheriff's gun ..." Kahl was dead before the house burned, Malak said.

Malak said Sheriff Gene Matthews, 37, died from loss of blood.

Matthews was shot twice, Malak said, once from a rifle fired from more than 3 feet away. That bullet entered between the flaps of his bullet proof vest. The other shot, from a shotgun, struck Matthews in the back but was stopped by the vest.

"I think the sheriff shot Kahl and Kahl shot the sheriff," said FBI agent Ray McElhaney of Little Rock.

"Mr. Kahl, as far as we know, is deceased," James Blasingame, head of the FBI in Arkansas, said Friday night. Also at the scene Friday night, Tom Kupferer, U.S. marshal in North Dakota who was at the shooting, said, "We have no reason to doubt it."

Matthews died about 9 p.m. CDT Friday at a hospital in Walnut Ridge, three hours after he was shot.

Leonard Ginter, 63, and his wife Norma, 60, owners of the house and members of Posse Comitatus, were arrested and jailed. Prosecution was authorized under the federal harboring statute, FBI agent Daniel Kelly said. Bond was not set.

Ticks ...

four days after bitten) rash usually beginning on the ankles and wrists, progressing toward the trunk of the body and also involving the palms and soles of the feet. By this time the person bitten becomes very, very ill.

"If Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever is treated early with an antibiotic, it is very treatable, very reverseable," Marx said. He added that the disease has a 7 percent mortality rate.

There are several forms of encephalitis, with the most common form being St. Louis. Most people who contact the St. Louis strain will only get a headache and a fever and never know they have it. The kind that is deadly to horses, and has 50 percent mortality rate in humans, is Equine Encephalitis. Three Pitt County residents were infected with the disease last year and one died, according to Dr. Marx.

The symptoms are fever and headache, photophobia, eventual depression of mental status, coma in later stages and even seizures.

"Many of them will go into death if they reach the coma stage," Dr. Marx said. "The doctors just support them and hope their body systems will over come the disease."

Pets can be temporarily paralyzed if a tick lodges itself anywhere along the head or spine, McLawhorn said. "As soon as you pull the tick out the dog is all right though," he said.

Horses that get encephalitis become uncoordinated and begin to act wildly because their brains and nervous systems are affected, McLawhorn said. "They can then go into blind staggers, fall down and begin to struggle," he said.

Reagan Criticizes Bill Urging Domestic Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday criticized as a "cruel hoax" legislation aimed at encouraging foreign automakers to establish U.S. plants, saying the measure would increase car prices and cost Americans their jobs.

In his weekly radio address, Reagan cited the so-called domestic content bill as an example of "quick fixes and protectionism" that could jeopardize the progress made by leaders of the seven major industrialized democracies during their summit meeting in Williamsburg, Va., a week ago.

The legislation, which passed the House last year and died in the Senate, is again before the House Energy and Commerce Committee, whose chairman, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., is a major backer who has said he hopes to get the bill to the House floor this summer.

The measure would require any automaker selling more than 100,000 cars and light trucks in this country to produce an increasing percentage of each vehicle in U.S. plants. Cars with the largest total sales would be required to contain at least 90 percent American-made parts.

"Well, it's a cruel hoax," Reagan said. "New cars would be more expensive. More jobs would be destroyed than protected. We would buy less from our trading partners. They would buy less from us. And the world economic pie would shrink. Recrimination and retaliation would increase."

It was the strongest statement Reagan has made about the legislation, which has the backing of the United Auto Workers but is opposed by the "Big Three" U.S. manufacturers as well as the makers of most imported cars.

Although he did not say what he would do if the bill reaches his desk, the president said he is prepared "to defend with presidential vetoes" the summit's call for limiting budget deficits that could threaten economic recovery.

"We must keep going forward and not undo the progress that we've made," Reagan said in his five-minute speech from Camp David, the presidential retreat atop Catoctin Mountain in Maryland. "I sincerely hope the Congress will work with us, but let there be no misunderstanding of my position: Hardworking families are already overtaxed ..... We don't need tax increases; we need spending restraint.

"That's why the Williamsburg communique makes an explicit call, one I'm prepared to defend with presidential vetoes. We will tackle budget deficits, and we will do it by limiting the growth of government expenditures."

Police Shootings Cost $3 Million

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A jury has sent a $3 million "message" to the city of Richmond that police shootings — like two that prompted a lawsuit from the families of two dead black men — must stop, say lawyers who tried the case.

A four-month civil rights trial ended Friday with a U.S. District Court jury awarding $1.5 million each to the families of Michael Guillory and Johnny Roman, who were shot to death in separate incidents.

"This litigation has never really been about money. It's been about reform," said John Scott, a lawyer for the families.

Scott said the city has been so resistant to change that "the only thing left was for a jury to send a message in terms of dollars. And I believe the jury sent a message."

About 25 witnesses testified that they were beaten, harassed and abused by police officers, and several black officers supported the allegations.

Richmond is a city of 75,000 people on the northeastern shore of San Francisco Bay.

Guillory, 21, died in police crossfire Jan. 8, 1982, in his father's home. The officer who started the shooting said he fired when Guillory pulled something shiny from his pocket. It turned out to be a neck chain and a plastic bag of marijuana.

Police said they shot Roman, 25, as he lay in bed Oct. 9, 1980. Officers, attempting to arrest Roman for investigation of burglary, said they fired only after Roman pointed a shotgun at them. The family testified there was no shotgun in the house.

New Jersey Officials Took Two Years To Study Dioxin Warning

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Government officials received specific information two years ago that significant levels of deadly dioxin might be present at an abandoned herbicide plant in Newark — but just recently responded.

State officials defend the delay, saying improved technology in detecting dioxins and an increased public awareness of the chemical's threat only recently put dioxin at the top of their list of toxic perils that warranted response.

But they concede there was credible information from several sources at least two years ago that there might be dioxin contamination at the Newark site, and perhaps at other sites in New Jersey.

That information included a general alert from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and specific information such as health problems at the site, accidents at the plant and, in 1981, a warning from a former operator at the site that dioxin was present.

But interviews with several state officials indicate that what ultimately alerted their attention was the contamination of the tiny Missouri town of Times Beach.

Dioxin has been linked to several forms of health problems, including cancers, birth defects and liver and kidney ailments.

Robert Hughey, commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Protection, said that after the dioxin contamination at Times Beach was discovered, his department set up a task force to test for possible dioxin contamination in New Jersey.

He also said better testing methods developed after Times Beach made it easier to detect dioxin, and that the state had been focusing on "known" problem sites that immediately threatened human health.

Hughey said Friday by telephone that the Newark site was ranked as the No. 1 site for testing among the suspected sites in the state because of information about it, including inquiries in 1981 from The Associated Press.

In July 1981, G. William Mitchell, a former owner of the site, told the AP that the herbicide factory was contaminated with significant quantities of dioxin. The AP took Mitchell's warning to the DEP, speaking to at least seven department supervisors and inspectors, and to the federal EPA and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. None would confirm a problem extisted in Newark.

Last fall, the DEP began evaluating possible dioxin sites in the state, several of them detailed in an EPA booklet published in 1980.

Mitchell, a previous owner of the site as chairman of the board of ChemicaLand Corp., reached the AP in 1981 seeking news coverage of the contamination. He called the AP on Saturday but would not discuss the case, except to remind the AP of its interview two years ago.

Investigators Rule Out Sabotage In Plane Fire

By JOE KAY
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — A federal investigator said Saturday that the fire that engulfed an Air Canada flight and killed 23 people probably wasn't set and that the probe is focusing on the possibility that the plane's electrical system was involved.

Donald Engen, of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the FBI had made a preliminary examination of the plane and that the tests "did not develop any evidence of sabotage or foul play."

Air Canada spokesman David Pember confirmed Saturday that the plane that caught fire and was forced to make an emergency landing Thursday was the same one that lost a tail cone during a flight over the Atlantic Ocean in 1979. In that incident, the jet landed safely in Boston with four minor injuries reported.

"Both incidents are not related whatsover," Pember said.

Engen said investigators weren't yet sure how the fire began but are concentrating on the earlier assumption that it started in a rear lavatory.

A circuit breaker for the lavatory's electrical system tripped during the flight and pilot Donald Cameron tried unsuccessfully to reset it, Engen said.

Cameron entered the note into the flight log, but Engen said he didn't know whether it occurred just before the fire was discovered or earlier in the flight.

Engen pointed out that the circuit breaker could have been tripped either by a short circuit or by a fire interfering with the electrical system. But he stressed that the cause of the fire remains undetermined.

Air Canada Flight 797 caught fire en route from Dallas to Toronto Thursday night and the DC-9 made an emergency landing at Greater Cincinnati Airport in northern Kentucky.

The fire spewed smoke and toxic fumes into the aircraft. Of the 46 people aboard, 23 passengers perished.

Engen had conceded Friday it was possible that the fire was started by a lighted cigarette discarded in a lavatory waste container. But on Saturday he said further investigation has made that possibility appear more remote.

Air Canada officials declined to make the crew available to reporters again Saturday, saying they were still unwinding from the incident.

"These guys have had very little sleep," Pember said. "They've been through an incredible ordeal."

Sixteen passengers were hospitalized because of smoke inhalation, but all but two had been released by Saturday.

A physician who helped remove 23 bodies from the fiery jet said another half minute could have meant survival for many victims, whose bodies had "the cherry red color" that indicates carbon monoxide poisoning.

"They were so close," said Dr. James Schrand, one of several physicians who removed bodies from the burned fuselage.

"The closest body was about six feet back from an exit," he said.

"That's how close they were to getting out. Whether one person became bogged down, we don't know," Schrand said. "One person blocks an exit, and others can't get around that person. Just 30 seconds to a minute or so more, maybe more would have been able to get out."

The cause of death of the victims was not immediately known. Some bodies were charred beyond recognition by flames that whipped through the craft after it landed.

Schrand said there were obvious signs of carbon monoxide poisoning in some of the victims. "There was the cherry red color of the body that goes with carbon monoxide poisoning," he said. "The blood is saturated with carbon monoxide."

"Anyone who got out alive, got out in those first 30 seconds," said Jack Barry, assistant airport operations chief. Barry said he believes most victims died after the plane landed and the plane's fuel may have contributed to the fire.

Experienced Volunteer Helps Remove Bodies

CINCINNATI (AP) — A volunteer who helped remove 23 bodies from a fire-gutted Air Canada jet is no stranger to disasters — he supervised the cleanup of the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire that killed 165 people six years ago.

"Every one is bad," construction worker James Lanagan said. "You just have to put your mind somewhere else. It's sad to say, but you do, really."

Lanagan, 36, of Cincinnati, said he has worked with heavy equipment at 28 fires, building explosions and airplane crashes since 1963.

Lanagan voluntarily went to the Greater Cincinnati International Airport in northern Kentucky when he got word Thursday that an Air Canada flight was on fire. Twenty-three passengers of the 46 people aboard the DC-9 died in the smoke and flames.

"The hardest part was getting the bodies out," Lanagan said. "Bodies that have burned are dead weight. They weren't just sitting in there; some were trapped under seats, some were in the aisles. They weren't piled up. They had been trying to get out in an orderly fashion.

"Most of the stuff (interior furnishings) was melted and was melted around the bodies. A lot of the bodies were crunched under the seats and stuff. It was quite an effort to get some of them out."

However, Lanagan said the operation was easier than at the Beverly Hills club in nearby Southgate, Ky., which burned May 28, 1977. Workers had to carefully dismantle the nightclub's remains because they didn't know if there were more bodies hidden, he said.

"This was a cut-and-dried thing," he said of the remains on the plane. "You know where they (the bodies) all are. In something like Beverly Hills, they're scattered all over the place."

Lanagan said his first disaster volunteer work was at the Indiana State Fairgrounds in Indianapolis in 1963. He operated a crane that cleared rubble from a deadly explosion at the coliseum.

"We were fortunate to save some lives then, which isn't always the case," he said.

Since then, Lanagan has attended workshops on rescue work and makes his services available to emergency officials when accidents occur.

Lanagan brought in equipment to remove a small plane that crashed into a suburban Montgomery bookstore in December, killing four FBI agents and two others.

No heavy equipment was needed to remove bodies from the Air Canada flight, Lanagan said.

From Wire Reports

A Dutch KLM DC-10 airliner with 87 passengers aboard slid off a runway in Panama City and a private cargo jet made an emergency landing in Norfolk, Va., Saturday. No injuries were reported in either case.

Authorities in Panama said the KLM jet was trying to land in a downpour when it left the runway. The plane came to a halt in a muddy field.

The airliner's right engine and landing gear were damaged, officials at Omar Torrijos International airport said.

The number of crew members on flight 775 was not immediately available, but authorities reported 87 passengers on board.

The three-engine jet came to a halt in a rain-soaked field after the early morning accident, but was still blocking runway No. 3, the airport officials said.

Officials said the airport continued normal operations using a second landing strip.

In Virginia officials said a panel light that apparently inaccurately indicated a fire on the freight plane prompted the pilot to make the emergency landing.

The Boeing 727, owned by Emory World Wide air freight, landed safely at Norfolk International Airport at 8:47 a.m. after radioing the control tower that it had a fire in its wheel well, said Cameron Connor, area supervisor of the Federal Aviation Administration.

The plane, which originated in Richmond and had been bound for Norfolk anyway, had three crew members aboard, Connor said.

After the plane landed, there was no sign of fire damage, Connor said.

"It appears it may have been a faulty indicator light. Their procedure is to drop the gear and then the light went out, indicating that the fire went out or that there was a faulty connection in the indicator," he said.

Cranston Bought Voice Lessons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential hopeful Alan Cranston paid nearly $4,000 to a voice coach from funds set aside for his expenses as a senator, according to an article in the current issue of The New Republic.

The article said Cranston, a California Democrat, has the largest of many unnofficial accounts drawn from surplus Senate campaign funds and used by senators to help pay for their expenses. He transferred $66,000 of leftover campaign contributions into the account in 1981 and 1982.

The magazine said funds from the account were used not only for the voice coach, but for Cranston's wife's travel and lodging, and the services of speechwriters and other activities "related to his fledgling presidential campaign."

The expenditures were made before Cranston became a candidate for his party's presidential nomination, but while he was exploring the possibility.

Cranston, who is spending the Senate's Memorial Day recess in California, issued this statement through his Senate office:

"My unofficial office account is not a private personal checking account, nor have we attempted to keep it secret. The account enables my Senate office to use non-government funds for necessary Senate business expenditures that might give the appearance of being political.

"My staff sought and received advice from the Senate Ethics Committee and the Internal Revenue Service on how to operate the account. The account is structured and used only for purposes consistent with that advice and only in ways consistent with Senate rules and the law of the land.

"In light of the innuendoes in the current New Republic article, I have invited both the Senate Ethics Committee and the Internal Revenue Service to examine and audit the account."

Britain's Politicial Division May Bring Second Term For Thatcher

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Despite near-record unemployment, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher appears headed for victory in this week's election. She would become the first Conservative leader since 1900 to win successive terms in office.

Not since the opposition Labor Party swept Winston Churchill from power in 1945 and set up the welfare state has the division between Britain's two major parties been so great.

"The choice facing the nation is between two totally different ways of life," Mrs. Thatcher, 57, said in opening her campaign for the balloting June 9. "What a prize we have to fight for — no less than a chance to banish from our land the dark, divisive clouds of Marxist socialism."

Or as Labor Party leader Michael Foot, 69, put it: "The Tories (Conservatives) promise more of the same dogmatic, monetarist economics, devil-take-the-hindmost social policies, care and compassion thrown out of the window in reckless pursuit of the money test."

Amid the insult-trading, shopping center walkabouts and saturation television coverage that go with Britain's four-week election campaigns, the choice has been presented as capitalism vs. socialism.

Few seriously doubt the message from opinion polls that Mrs. Thatcher will win. Oddsmakers rate her the heavy favorite.

If the left-dominated Labor Party goes down badly, Britain's 42.5 million voters will signal that Labor's radical socialism and unilateral nuclear disarmament are not for them.

"The losers of this battle are not going to be able to dust themselves off and walk away; their entire philosophy will have been rejected," said commentator Brian Walden.

Between the giants lies the election's wild card, the 20-month-old centrist alliance between the Social Democratic and Liberal Parties.

The alliance hopes to break the two-party axis that has dominated British politics for 60 years by winning enough seats to hold the balance of power in the new House of Commons — or at least live to fight another day.

In the current 635-member House, the Conservatives hold 334 seats, the Laborites 239, the Social Democrats 29 and the Liberals 13, with the remainder in the hands of minor parties or independents.

In this election the Commons' membership is being increased to 650 to account for electoral boundary changes.

The Conservative platform promises more of the tough Thatcher economic medicine that cut annual inflation to a 15-year low of 4 percent, but almost trebled unemployment to a current near-record 3.17 million people, or 13.3 percent.

With that comes another term of Mrs. Thatcher's foreign policy, which pledges to deploy U.S. cruise nuclear missiles in Britain this year and spend billions updating the nation's own nuclear arsenal.

After losing power in 1979, the Labor Party has adopted the most left-wing platform of its 83-year history — little to the taste of party moderates headed by deputy leader Denis Healey.

It pledges an immediate 11-billion-pound ($17.7 billion) spending boost — which would more than double the current low 8-billion-pound ($12.9 billion) deficit — to create 2.5 million jobs in five years. This would be backed up by monetary exchange controls and more state intervention, including taking over banks if they don't cooperate.

In pledges that enrage the Tories, Labor promises unilateral nuclear disarmament and withdrawal from the 10-nation European Common Market, which Britain joined in 1973.

Soviet Union Expels Second U.S. Diplomat

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Saturday the KGB secret police picked up a U.S. diplomat who was "caught red-handed" spying and the government ordered him expelled.

The diplomat, Louis Thomas, the attache of the administration section of the embassy's security division, is the second U.S. diplomat ordered out of the Soviet Union this year after being accused of espionage.

"Louis Thomas was caught red-handed during a spy action in Moscow on June 2," the Soviet news agency Tass said. "In the course of the investigation, the evidence was obtained which fully exposes this American diplomat as a person engaged in intelligence activities which are incompatible with his official status."

Tass did not say what Thomas was doing when he was caught.

Embassy spokesman Frank Tonini confirmed Thomas had been ordered expelled, but said he could not comment on the Soviets' espionage accusation. "He is preparing to leave some time next week," the embassy spokesman said.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department confirmed Thomas was being expelled, but would not give details.

State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty would not comment on whether the Soviets were retaliating for U.S. expulsions of Soviet diplomats earlier this year. She said personal information about Thomas, including his hometown and age, was confidential, and would not comment on the nature of his duties in Moscow.

Tonini said Thomas was due to complete the normal two-year duty in Moscow this summer and was to be transferred to an unspecified new post. He had served in the embassy for 22 months.

Thomas, according to a U.S. Embassy staff directory, was married to Elizabeth K. Thomas and lived in an apartment at the embassy compound.

Repeated attempts to reach Thomas by telephone were unsuccessful. The embassy switchboard operator reported the line was "out of order."

On March 7, the Soviets announced that Richard Osborne, a first secretary at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, had been caught with a "portable intelligence special-purpose apparatus for the transmission of espionage information via the U.S. Marisat communications satellite."

The state-run Soviet press also reported that he possessed notes written on paper designed to dissolve in water.

Peace Activists Stage Massive Rally Against War In Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Tens of thousands of Israelis rallied Saturday in Tel Aviv to protest the war in Lebanon as the conflict approached its first anniversary.

Organized by Peace Now, Israel's largest anti-war movement, the rally drew a crowd estimated by reporters at 50,000 to the Kings of Israel Square after a march through the center of the city. Organizers claimed that 150,000 people were present.

A few hundred demonstrators had hiked 75 miles from Israel's northern border with Lebanon to Tel Aviv to call attention to the rally. But the crowd was much smaller than several anti-war demonstrations last year that drew up to 400,000 protesters when the opposition Labor Party joined Peace Now in calling for peace.

"This rally urges the government to put an immediate end to its military steps in Lebanon and to pull out of Lebanon without any further considerations," said Amiram Goldbloom, one of the organizers.

Surrounded by police patrols, including officers on horseback, the demonstrators carried placards with such slogans as "Get Out of the Lebanon Mud!" and "500 dead, thousands wounded, hundreds of grieving families, and this is not the end — and for what?"

One demonstrator, Yoav Becher, said he had just returned from reserve duty in Lebanon, where he served as a tank company commander. "I realized that my stay there caused me agony and guilt feelings every day and every hour," he said.

Israel signed a troop-withdrawal agreement with Lebanon last month, but implementation has been blocked by Syria's refusal to remove its forces from eastern Lebanon.

Israel invaded Lebanon last June 6 to drive Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas out of southern Lebanon. It subsequently forced the evacuation of some 10,000 PLO guerrillas from their stronghold in west Beirut. "The only direction now is the road home," Shlomo Ben-Ami, head of the history department at Tel Aviv University, told the cheering crowd.

Shuli Hartman, an activist in the Peace Now movement, said: "They're cleaning the (bomb) shelters in our northern villages, there's no new order in Lebanon, and there can b be no military solution to the Palestinian problem."

Most of the speakers accused the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin of leading the people astray over the aims of the war.

"This government went under a wrong assumption, which it passed on to us, that all our problems can be solved by force," said Moshe Anderthal, a reserve soldier like many Peace Now members.

Arafat Supporters, Rebels Clash

RAYAK, Lebanon (AP) — PLO rebels and supporters of guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat battled with artillery and mortars Saturday in the Bekaa Valley. Police said eight people were killed and 17 wounded in the first sizable fighting since a mutiny against Arafat began May 7.

The one-hour battle apparently was over a supply route in the Bekaa, and it marked a serious escalation of tension between loyalists of Arafat's own Fatah faction and the mutineers led by Fatah Col. Saeed Mousa.

Arafat visited Romania and Algeria on Saturday, apparently trying to drum up outside support against the mutiny — the first formidable challenge to his leadership in 15 years as chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The official Palestinian news agency, WAFA, said Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov had sent a personal message supporting Arafat's "legitimate leadership" of the PLO.

According to police and radio reports, the fighting erupted near the Roman ruins town of Baalbek, in villages about seven miles from the Syrian border and 40 miles east of Beirut.

Residents of Baalbek who were reached by telephone said they heard the thud of explosions and gunfire for about an hour at midmorning. Police said four of eight people killed in the fighting were Lebanese whose car was trapped in a cross-fire.

Christian-owned radio stations that oppose the PLO presence in the Bekaa, where guerrillas are entrenched on the Syrian side of the cease-fire line with the Israeli army, said 40 people were wounded, including 10 Arafat partisans.

But spokesmen for the mutineers and Fatah, the largest PLO faction, played down the seriousness of the fighting. Both accused the other side of provoking bloodshed.

Jihad Saleh, a spokesman for the rebels in Damascus, Syria, said "artillery fire was opened against our positions at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT)," but that the rebels were ordered not to return the fire.

Saleh claimed some Fatah regulars approached the rebels' position but "did not fire a single shot" and instead defected.

Khalil Al-Wazir, Arafat's military commander who is known by the code name Abu Jihad, took reporters into the Bekaa from Syria. He said the fighting broke out about 10:30 a.m. when the rebels tried to block the main highway to Baalbek.

"Friendly forces in the area, Syrians and Palestinians, intervened to reopen the highway and end the clash," said Abu Jihad.

Rebels Use Honduran Staging Area For Attack In Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An estimated 1,500 rebels fighting against the leftist Sandinista government have launched another attack from bases in Honduras and intense fighting continued Saturday in northern Nicaragua, military sources said.

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry claimed in a note of protest sent to Honduras late Friday said Honduran troops pounded Nicaraguan military positions with mortar fire to provide cover for rebels crossing the border Thursday.

"This is the third large-scale invasion the counter-revolutionaries have launched, but this time with the open support of the Honduran army," the sources said, asking not to be identified for security reasons.

"We believe there are more than 1,500 invaders, who penetrated since Thursday and have caused large-scale damage, especially in the towns of Teotecacinte and El Provenir," the sources, who have access to battle reports, said.

There was no immediate response from the Honduran government, or reports of casualties.

Government spokesmen have repeatedly accused the United States and Honduras of secretly training and arming rebels as part of an "undeclared war" to topple the leftist Sandinista government.

The sources said intense fighting continued Saturday in the towns of El Escambray, Fila los Coyotes, el Corozo and El Porvenir, in Nueva Segovia province, near the Honduran border.

Many residents of Teotecacinte and El Porvenir had to flee to Jalapa, 181 miles north of the capital, because of the fighting, the sources said.

However, the reports could not be immediately verified by reporters. The area is remote and difficult to get to.

Government officials claim the rebels made unsuccessful large-scale attacks April 30 and May 5 in an attempt to seize Jalapa, Nueva Segovia's largest city.

Goverment Takes Key Mountain

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Thousands of troops backed by bombers and helicopter gunships drove leftist rebels from a key mountain outpost Saturday after five days of fighting, military sources said.

The sources said there were heavy casualties on both sides.

A Defense Department communique said the army recaptured Mount Cacahuatique, 105 miles north of the capital and the site of a U.S.-installed radio antenna that is a vital link in the military's communications network.

The fighting raged in the northeastern Morazan province as U.S. presidential envoy Richard Stone met with government leaders before departing for Costa Rica, his second stop on a 10-day tour of the region.

Stone has been sent by President Reagan to find ways of bringing peace to Central America. In a statement for reporters at Ilopango air force base, Stone said he was convinced the U.S.-backed government here is "strongly committed to the achievement of peace and democracy."

The military sources, who have access to battle reports but who asked not to be named, said air force Dragonfly fighter-bombers and Huey helicopters strafed and bombed Mount Cacahuatique all morning while 2,000 infantrymen battled to the summit.

Bomb Kills Ditchdigger

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — A part-time soldier in the Ulster Defense Regiment was killed near Dungannon, County Tyrone, when a booby-trap bomb exploded under the ditchdigger he was operating, police announced Saturday.

The man, identified by police as Andrew Stinson, 37, was using the machine in a field at Boland Point near Dungannon when the explosive went off. No group claimed immediately claimed responsibility for the blast.

Baker Suppers Medical Aid

CONCORD, N.H. — The conflicts in Central America should be settled at conference tables in Washington and Moscow, not in the streets and jungles south of the border, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said Saturday.

Baker said he supports using American military trainers and doctors in Central America, but not troops, and the only way to solve the problems there "is to deal directly with the Soviets."

The Tennessee Republican was in New Hampshire to promote the expected re-election bid of U.S. Sen. Gordon Humphrey.

Jeep Successors Goes Bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new vehicle designed to replace the familiar military Jeep has shown "serious problems" in operational tests but the Army expects them to be corrected by the time it reaches the troops next year, an Army spokesman said Saturday.

Art Volpe, spokesman for the Army's Tank-Automotive Command in Warren, Mich., said the supplier, AM General Corp. of Toledo, Ohio, will have to pay for any necessary corrections "out of their own pockets."

Court Overturns Death Penalty

WASHINGTON — The highest court in the Air Force has ruled the military system for imposing the death penalty for premeditated murder is unconstitutional, the Air Force's judge advocate general said Saturday.

The court ruled 6-1 the code's capital punishment provisions for murder are unconstitutional because they do not contain safeguards against arbitrariness like those required in civilian death penalty cases. The decision places the Air Force court in conflict with its Army and Navy-Marine counterparts, which have upheld the same 33-year-old statute.

The ruling invalidated the death sentence of Airman Robert Gay, a 30-year-old security policeman, for murdering his supervisor and another security policeman at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M., in August 1981.

Suspects Arrested In Shooting

LOS ANGELES — A team of 50 detectives climaxed 35 non-stop hours of police work Saturday with the arrest of four persons suspected in the fatal shooting of an award-winning police officer.

Motorcycle officer Paul Verna, 35, was shot in the back as he walked to his cycle after handing out a routine traffic ticket Thursday. Police said his assailants grabbed the service revolver from the dying officer and fled. But Verna had written down the name of the woman driver on the citation receipt and it was found on his body.

Two Inmates Win Death Stays

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Federal judges have issued stays of execution for two convicted murderers who had been scheduled to die Tuesday in Florida's electric chair.

Wardell Riley, convicted in 1976 of murdering his employer in an argument over $30, and Paul William Scott, convicted in 1979 of beating a man to death during a robbery in Boca Raton, had been scheduled for execution at 7 a.m. Tuesday in Florida State Prison near Starke.

Only one of the 55 death warrants Gov. Bob Graham has signed since taking office has been carried out. John Spenkelink was electrocuted in May 1979.

Davis Crosby Faces Sentence

DALLAS — Rock musician David Crosby, who dozed and snored in court while a judge found him guilty of cocaine possession and carrying a loaded pistol into a nightclub, will be sentenced July 15.

Crosby, 41, on probation for a misdemeanor conviction in California for reckless driving, faces a maximum prison term of 30 years and fines of $15,000. Police said they found Crosby in his backstage dressing room April 13 free-basing cocaine — inhaling vapors from a heated mixture of cocaine and ether.

Crowd Smaller

DEVORE, Calif. (AP) — The US Festival went country — and small-scale — Saturday as a peaceful crowd drifted into Glen Helen Regional Park for a bill featuring Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings and Alabama.

The audience for the final day of this year's festival was noticeably older and quieter than the huge and unruly mob that thronged to the three-day rock event over the Memorial Day weekend, when two people died and 135 were arrested.

African Leaders To Seek Means Of Saving OAU

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — African leaders assemble here this week in another attempt — some say it could be the last — to bind up the wounds of a continent beset by political strife, starvation and debt.

At stake is the future of the 20-year-old Organization of African Unity, the world's largest regional grouping.

The planned six days of private discussions, starting Monday, could produce an answer to a persistent question: Can 50 military and civilian governments, representing a diverse population of some 450 million, speak with one voice on the issues that affect Africa?

"The summit will take place as planned," President Daniel arap Moi of Kenya, the current OAU chairman, said. In the circumstances, that would be a kind of triumph.

North African conflicts led to boycotts that torpedoed two attempts to convene an OAU summit in Libya last year.

One issue was whether President Hissene Habre would represent Chad instead of his defeated rival, Goukouni Oueddei. The other was whether the Sahara Arab Democratic Republic, proclaimed by the Polisario Front, would attend as the OAU's 51st member.

Both disputes will come up again in Addis Ababa, where the OAU was formed in 1963 with 32 founding members as the continent shed colonial rule.

The OAU has dispensed with the usual preparatory foreign ministers' meeting in order to avoid pre-summit wrangles.

A spokesman for Goukouni said in Paris recently that his government-in-exile would come to the meeting. Sudan has accused the Libyan leader, Col. Moammar Khadafy, of planning to send troops into Chad again to back Goukouni against Habre in that north-central African nation's on-again, off-again civil war.

A spokesman for the Polisario Front said in Paris that the guerrilla movement would seek to sit in the summit. That raised the prospect of a repeat of a Moroccan-led boycott that blocked last year's planned summits.

The Libyan-backed Polisario Front has been fighting for eight years from havens in Algeria and Mauritania to wrest control of the former Spanish Sahara from Morocco.

Another issue is who would succeed Moi as OAU chairman. If the 1983 summit had been held in Guinea, as intended, it would have been President Sekou Toure, in accordance with the custom that the host country's leader assume the chairmanship.

At week's end, Libyan diplomats were still campaigning to postpone the conference here and hold it later in Libya, which would make Khadafy the next chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government.

Addis Ababa, the home of the OAU Secretariat, was chosen as a compromise site after the failure last August and November to convene summits in Tripoli, Libya.

Some of Africa's most influential leaders are raising more far-raching issues. President Julius Nyerere, a socialist theoretician who has turned Tanzania into a military power in East Africa, has said the OAU needs to "re-examine our present constitution and our present Secretariat structure."

The OAU has been paralyzed by the disputed ruling of Secretary-General Edem Kodjo of Togo in February 1982 to admit the Sahara Arab Democratic Republic, and by the subsequent failures to achieve the 34-member quorum required for summits.

The paralysis has slowed OAU work on non-political development projects in farming, economics and culture and has exacerbated the organization's debt problem. By some estimates, OAU members owe more than $30 million in dues going back to its founding two decades ago.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said recently of this scheduled summit, "We cannot afford to fail a third time. It will be the end of the OAU."

Foreign Minister Butros Ghali of Egypt has said the Addis Ababa meeting is "the last chance" for the OAU's survival. The collapse of the OAU, he added, would mean Africa's return to "rival, feuding groups and blocs."

Speeches are certain to invoke the spirit of the 1960s, when colonial Africa was becoming independent under such pan-African visionaries as Ghana's Kwame Nkrumah, now dead, and Senegal's Leopold Senghor, retired.

"We must honor those illustrious visionaries," the Nairobi Daily Nation said in a recent editorial. But East Africa's largest-circulation newspaper added: "The continent was able to feed itself better in the 1950s. African governments have neglected the development of agriculture.... Governments are being overthrown because of the lack of food.

Fight For Jobs May Focus Next On High Schools

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Unemployment among new high school graduates could be sharply reduced if North Carolina uses its $68 million share of the Job Training Partnership Act wisely, state legislators have been told.

Kenny Smith, president of Jobs for America's Graduates Inc. of Washington, D.C., told members of the Joint Appropriations Committee last week that up to 40 percent of the money could be used to get jobs for teen-agers before they become unemployment statistics.

"We are front-loading every June our employment lines with new graduates," he said, adding that many have no skills, no work experience and end up on welfare rolls when they don't qualify for unemployment benefits. "It doesn't make sense to wait for them to be unemployed to spend money."

Larry Weatherford, regional administrator of the Employment and Training Administration in the U.S. Labor Department, told the group the federal block funds should be more flexible and less abused than those under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

"We can't afford to train at the expense we had under CETA," he said, adding that only 25 to 30 percent of CETA funds were used to train people, while 70 percent of the new funds will go to training.

Smith, formerly on the governor's staff in Delaware, said a job-placement program for high school seniors was 85 percent successful in its first year.

He said participants were twice as likely to get a job and earned an average of $1,000 more than seniors outside the program. Blacks and poor readers were 217 times more likely to find jobs if they were in the program, Smith said.

The program provides advisors who remove barriers to employment like poor attitudes or lack of confidence, teach job-seeking skills and visit every business to find jobs that often don't appear in classified ads, Smith said.

"We target anyone likely to become unemployed before they become unemployed," he said. Advisors keep track of participants for nine months, encouraging them to seek raises, promotions or better jobs. If advisors are unable to find jobs for 60 percent of their 30-40 charges, they are fired, Smith added.

In 1979, the door-to-door approach unearthed 4,000 Delaware jobs that "did not show up on any computer," Smith said. Since then, similar programs have been started in Virginia, Arizona, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri, Tennessee and Massachusetts — all with similar results.

"In Memphis, Tenn., 2 percent of the class of 1982 had jobs," Smith said. "Twenty-one percent in our program had jobs. And those in our program were 10 times more likely to have a full-time job."

Smith admitted that most of the jobs are low paying service positions. But he said that means few of the jobs will displace other workers and he pointed out that the more people need jobs, the more the program seems to help.

While the program costs about $1,300 per placement, Smith said most of the money goes to the staff and that it ends up paying for itself.

"Young people are paying back in (income) taxes more than went into it," he said.

Weatherford said some of the JTPA funds are already earmarked for relocating displaced workers and train older employees, but that about 40 percent could go to high school training programs.

A council selected earlier by Gov. Jim Hunt will begin deciding on what to do with the money this week, Weatherford said. Federal law requires that 78 cents of every dollar go to local agencies that administer the money.

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, was enthusiastic about the proposal.

"The success of your program is probably an indictment of a lot of what we're doing now," he told Smith.

But Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, was wary.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Now that Phillip and I are contemplating a pilgrimage to the shores of our beloved Carolina, I can no longer ignore the issue of bathing suits. Envisioning the return of the Victorian era complete with a donkey cart to ferry me to the water while shielding me from public view may be comforting, but it does absolutely nothing to solve the problem at hand.

That problem is gravitational pull. My weight has not changed appreciably since my wedding day, but gravity has redistributed it with a vengeance. For some reason, this redistribution stops at my knees. I would have preferred very large feet. It would be far easier to buy new shoes than to find a decent bathing suit in a fashion world obsessed by symmetry.

A friend of mine who shares my problem declares that her yellow Speedo is the only solution. But I cannot bring myself to believe that. Old-fashioned though my views may be, I still feel that when one walks down the beach, one should be competing for the sun, not with it.

The only alternative to something that molds itself to my own curves is a bathing suit with a skirt that might at least soften the visual blow to anyone who happens to glance in my direction. That was no problem, a saleslady told me. Skirts are in this year. She quickly pulled from the rack a snappy little stretchy number with a plunging neckline, vaulting leg lines and a two-inch-wide ruffle floating where the skin left off.

"You'd look like a daisy in this," she said.

"I'd look like a hearthbroom in that."

We then progressed to the more matronly cotton suits. The one I tried on was nice from the waist down. Unfortunately, I could have stuffed all my beach gear and a small infant in the top.

That evening, morose at the prospect of viewing myself in the looking glass, I struggled into my old bathing suit to see if it could be salvaged for one more season. Phillip, inspired by my example, did likewise. He was fine as long as he held his Charles Atlas pose, but gravity, that old villain, and a lack of adequate lung capacity, eventually let him down, too.

"Do you think you could take out this waistband a little?" he gasped.

I made a quick appraisal of the situation. "Not so that the zipper would meet."

"Then what do you suggest?"

I looked in the mirror and sighed. "How about body turbans?"

Inmate Wins Suit Over Force

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Central Prison inmate who filed suit saying prison guards needlessly used fire hoses, tear gas and clubs to subdue him has been awarded $32,500 in damages by a federal court jury. Both sides said the judgment in favor of Charles J. Slakan could prompt a change in correction policies.

The jury assessed punitive damages of $10,000 from Amos E. Reed, former secretary of corrections; $7,000 from Ralph D. Edwards, former director of the Division of Prisons, and $9,000 from Sam P. Garrison, former warden of Central Prison. Each man must also pay Slakan $500 in compensatory damages.

The U.S. District Court jury also ordered Michael W. Walters, acting supervisor of the cell block that housed Slakan, to pay $3,500 damages. Tracy L. Porter, a prison guard, was ordered to pay $1,500 in damages.

Slakan, 31, charged in a civil suit that guards used excessive force against him after he tried to grab a cup of coffee from a guard passing his cell on Aug. 3, 1979.

Broken Bones Led To Death

WINSTON-SALEM — The broken legs an 80-year-old patient suffered in a Kernersville nursing home caused her fatal heart attack, a state medical examiner says.

Dr. Robert Thompson said tissue analysis from the autopsy of Claudia Norton shows she had fat deposits in her lungs. Thompson said bone marrow contains fat that can spread to other parts of the body when a bone is broken.

Mrs. Norton's left thigh was broken in three places and her right shin was broken once while she was a patient at a Kernersville center.

Bell Rate Proposal Rejected

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Utilities Commission has rejected Southern Bell Co.'s proposal to offer measured rate service, which charges customers for each local call, but ordered a test of the plan in nine cities.

Bell was ordered to test the plan for one year. Bell has 90 days to file a plan with the commission.

Bell had proposed the measured-rate option as an alternative to the more expensive system now used. That system is expected to become more costly because of federal deregulation of the telephone industry.

Havelock Mayor Charged

HAVELOCK — The mayor of Havelock has been charged with operating a motor vehicle while his license was revoked after he violated stipulations of limited driving privileges. Police Lt. Kevin McKenzie said Eugene Paden Smith, 54, was charged with driving a vehicle while his operators license is revoked, a criminal offense.

Smith lost his driving privileges in February in Carteret County District Court. He was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol in December 1982 and after conviction was ordered to give up his operators license for six months, a clerk in Carteret court said.

Smith's court date was set for Monday in Craven County District Court.

Sweetner Undergoes Testing

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — A sweet compound that is 50 times sweeter than sugar, but has no aftertaste, is being developed at Research Triangle Institute.

Dr. Ed Cook, director of Bioorganic Sciences at RTI, says the new compound tastes like sugar and and has not produced cancer or genetic changes in preliminary tests with mice.

Cook says more extensive testing will be needed before people could consume the product in large quantities. RTI began producing and testing artificial sweeteners in 1980 after cyclamates had been banned and saccharin came under attack.

Hospitals Have Low Average

RALEIGH — North Carolina hospitals rank third in the nation for the lowest average cost of a semi-private room, according to figures released by the North Carolina Hospital Association.

A survey by the Health Insurance Association of America says the average cost nationwide for a semi-private room is $183.87 a day, with North Carolina's average room rate at $125.51 a day.

The highest priced rooms in the country are in the District of Columbia, where the average semi-private room costs $250.07. Only South Carolina at $120.76 and Mississippi at $100.10 have lower average rates than North Carolina.

Senate OKs Lethal Injection Option

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A heavily debated bill to let condemned inmates choose between death in the gas chamber and by lethal injection has won approval of the state Senate.

Passed 34-9 Friday and sent to the House, the bill is described by supporters as letting inmates decide which method of execution would be less painful for them. They'd have until five days before their death to decide.

Opposition was voiced by Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax. He quoted Dr. Page Hudson, state medical examiner, as saying that execution in the gas chamber is far preferable to "deplorable" injection of poisonous sodium penthothal.

"I don't want to be cast in the role of a cold-blooded executioner," said Allsbrook, who said the issue had concerned him as deeply as any this session.

"You take these things seriously, try to find the right answer, and sometimes you're still groping."

Sen. Wanda Hunt, D-Moore, also spoke against the bill, saying questions about collapsing veins and other medical complications stemming from lethal injections hadn't been answered.

Sen. William Staton, D-Lee, withdrew an amendment he had proposed Wednesday to allow prisoners now on death row the choice of gas inhalation or lethal injection.

Staton said he had become convinced the amendment would give current death row inmates additional grounds for appeal, needlessly delaying their executions.

"I don't want to deny any inmate (legitimate) appeals, but they can be endless," said Staton.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said he thought the amendment would have precisely the effect Staton sought to avoid.

"Don't you think you're giving the 31 inmates now on death row another reason to appeal (by denying them the choice)?" asked Soles.

"That's very definitely a possibility," said Staton. But he said he still thought there would be a greater risk by including the amendment.

An amended bill to bring North Carolina into compliance with federal standards for truck weights was approved by the Senate Transportation Committee and sent to the Ways and Means Committee.

The compromise was supported by lobbyists for truckers as well as the N.C. Department of Transportation as necessary to keep North Carolina from losing federal interstate highway funds for noncompliance.

"I'm not saying there's one trucker in the state who won't be harmed," said Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston. "Some will be harmed severely. But given the constraints ... the bill is one we all can live with."

Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, said that despite changes in the bill, laws regarding state highways would remain virtually unchanged for another 10 years. Compliance with new standards for interstate driving, however, will be required sooner.

Under the bill, no weight supported by a single axle may exceed 20,000 pounds and the tandem-axle weight of a vehicle can't exceed 34,000 pounds. Currently, two-axle trucks may be as heavy as 38,000 pounds in North Carolina.

The bill grants the state transportation department the authority to designate certain roads for light traffic and further restrict truck weights there.

Gov. Jim Hunt's Safe Roads Act, a comprehensive program to fight drunken driving, was ratified formally by both houses after receiving near-unanimous approval Thursday.

Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, praised sponsor Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and other lawmakers who shepherded the bill through the Legislature.

"I just wanted the people of North Carolina to know that the ones who worked on this bill in committee ... have earned every penny (of their salaries)," said Ms. Gray.

The House Law Enforcement Committee approved a bill that would toughen a 1981 law banning dangerous weapons at parades, demonstrations and other public gatherings.

A subcommittee appointed to rewrite the bill as well as the 1981 law reported that it had failed to come up with anything better than the original bill sponsored by Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson.

Under the 1981 law, an exception was made for rifles or shotguns carried in racks in pickup truck cabs. Some lawmakers said hunters who have their guns in such racks might be charged if they happen to drive past a public function.

Locks' bill would remove the exemption.

Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, said the law applies to participants in a gathering or to people affiliated with or watching it. He said law enforcement officers and the courts could be trusted to act reasonably and not victimize unwitting passersby.

The Senate approved 39-1 a bill that would let sheriffs have their own training and education standards and set up a commission to create and enforce them.

The bill, also being considered by the House Law Enforcement Committee, has drawn criticism from police chiefs who say sheriffs should have the same standards as other law officers.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said sheriffs and deputies must perform a number of duties their counterparts on police forces don't have.

Asked whether he feared that the independent commission would lower standards for sheriffs, Rand replied, "It's my understanding they'll make them tougher."

Sheriff Convicted

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Brunswick County Sheriff Herman Strong resigned from office Friday afternoon after a federal court jury found him guilty of five charges of conspiring to smuggle drugs.

County Coroner Tommy Gilbert will serve as temporary sheriff until the executive committee of the Brunswick County Democratic Party selects a nominee to replace Strong.

Strong faces up to 25 years in prison and a $75,000 fine. U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt deferred sentencing until July 18 and allowed Strong to remain out of jail on a $25,000 bond. Both concessions were made on the condition that he resign before he left the courthouse in Wilmington Friday. Britt asked court personnel to help Strong prepare his resignation letter.

County Commission Chairman Franky Thomas said the verdict of guilty shocked him. "But I guess justice was served," Thomas said. "It's time for Brunswick County to get things going on the straight and narrow path again."

The charges against Strong related to five drug operations from the fall of 1979 to April 1980. Numerous admitted smugglers testified that the sheriff provided security for their activities. Former county commissioner Steve Jackson Varnam testified he gave Strong at least $25,000 in cash for protection.

State Approves Change In Rules For Farm Labor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers who employ 11 or more farm workers will be required to provide in-field handwashing and drinking water facilities under rules approved Friday by the state Department of Labor.

The standards, which take effect July 1, have been the subject of intense debate for nearly two years.

Under the new standard, farmers are responsible for providing clean drinking water and single drinking cups at all times within 200 yards of the employees. They also must provide separate handwashing facilities, including soap and towels, for every 25 workers.

Joseph T. Hughes, a lobbyist for the N.C. Farmworkers Network, said Friday the new standards are not as stringent as the organization had hoped, but they are "a step forward."

But one of the chief opponents of the measure — Gaylerd Davis, chairman of the N.C. Apple Growers Association — said he is still opposed to the standards and would not be surprised if "some legal action were taken against it."

Farmers prevented the department from imposing emergency in-field sanitation rules last year after a group of growers obtained a court order forbidding them. That ruling does not affect the permanent rules issued Friday.

House Approves Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some hazardous wastes in less concentrated forms could be buried in North Carolina under a bill approved 66-36 by the state House and sent to the Senate.

The bill Friday survived attempts to delay the final vote and harsh criticism by opponents who called it a "regulatory nightmare."

It bans certain wastes from landfills and sets up a procedure for establishing concentration thresholds above which other hazardous wastes cannot be buried. It also would allow the state to begin enacting hazardous waste laws that are more stringent than federal laws.

Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard®

Compare the interest rate you pay on other credit cards with Wachovia's new Prime-Plus rate.

Wachovia is introducing a new approach to credit card interest rates that lets you save on finance charges, and makes the Wachovia MasterCard the one card you'll want to have.

Here's how it works. After July 1, 1983, all Wachovia MasterCard customers will be able to benefit from a new floating interest rate, which can vary monthly,* based on Wachovia's prime rate plus 5%, but under current law will not exceed 18% annual percentage rate (APR).

For example, if the new Prime-Plus MasterCard rate had been applied for the month of June, MasterCard customers would have been eligible to be charged just 15½% APR. So the Prime-Plus rate can mean a substantial savings from the rates charged by most other financial institutions.

Like many other bank cards, the Wachovia MasterCard is available for an annual fee of $18. This chart shows you how the new Prime-Plus rate structure can offset all or part of the fee.

Why Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard is the one bank credit card to carry.

If Your Balance Subject To Finance Charges Is:	And The Prime Rate Is: 12%	10½%*	8%
	You Would Be Charged This Prime Plus Rate: 17% APR	15½% APR	13% APR
	Your Annual Savings Would Be:
$ 250	$ 2.50	$ 6.25	$ 12.50
$ 500	5.00	12.50	25.00
$1000	10.00	25.00	50.00
$2500	25.00	62.50	125.00

*The Wachovia MasterCard prime rate that would have been in effect for June, 1983.

Comparison based on the 18% APR ceiling currently permitted by North Carolina law and commonly charged for revolving credit by North Carolina financial institutions. Other states may have different regulations and even higher rates may be charged. For illustrative purposes, the chart assumes a constant prime rate and a fixed balance subject to finance charge. The prime lending rate is set by Wachovia from time to time as its interest rate basis for commercial borrowers. The rate may vary with economic conditions.

And you can save even more by consolidating all your bank cards and charge accounts into your Wachovia MasterCard. Your Personal Banker℠ can show you how.

See a Personal Banker about the new Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard. Or call toll-free 1-800-672-0111 for an application.

Lloyd Wins French Open For Fifth Time

Again The Champion
Chris Evert Lloyd is all smiles Saturday when raising up the French Open clay court tennis tournament cup after she defeated Mima Jausovec of Yougslavia, 6-1, 6-2, to win the title for a record-tying fifth time. It was her 15th title win in Grand Slam events. (AP laserphoto)

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd moved neatly and methodically to a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Mima Jausovec Saturday, winning the French Open tennis title for a record-tying fifth time and reaching the halfway mark of a special Grand Slam prize of $1 million.

The men's title will be decided Sunday when Yannick Noah, seeking to become the first Frenchman since 1946 to capture the French Open, takes on 18-year-old Mats Wilander of Sweden, who is defending the title he won last year. The final will be televised live by NBC.

Lloyd, who won a first prize of around $70,000, equaled the record of Margaret Smith Court of Australia. Lloyd has also won Wimbledon three times, the U.S. Open six times and the Australian Open once.

The 15 Grand Slam titles she has won since 1973 are way behind Court, who won 24, and Helen Wills Moody, who won 18.

"I guess this was my fastest and easiest Grand Slam final," Lloyd said of her 65-minute match on the slow, red clay of center court at Roland Garros stadium in roasting sunshine before 16,500 fans.

The International Tennis Federation later issued a statement about the confused situation of the Grand Slam.

According to the statement, Lloyd is three-quarters of the way toward the Grand Slam, having won the U.S. and Australian Opens last year. If she wins Wimbledon next month, that will be recognized by the ITF as a Grand Slam, even though it began halfway through the year.

But she is only halfway toward the $1 million bonus since this was offered by the ITF last Sept. 15 after the U.S. Open. To win this, Lloyd has to win both the Wimbledon and U.S. Open titles this year.

"I will let other people work this out," Lloyd said. "I'm not going to worry about it. I'm just going on to try to win Wimbledon."

The term Grand Slam was first coined by New York Times writer Allison Danzig in 1938 when Don Budge became the first player to win all four major titles in the same year.

The feat was duplicated by Maureen Connolly, Margaret Court and twice by Rod Laver.

While the ITF will recognize four consecutive titles, a number of tennis observers, including the U.S. Tennis Writers Association, say they will continue to recognize a Grand Slam as being won in the same calendar year.

Once again Lloyd was queen of Roland Garros, where the ball bounces slowly and most rallies are fought from the baseline.

But she and the 26-year-old Jausovec, an experienced clay-court player, mixed their shots, varied the pace and drew each other to the net with drop shots.

Lloyd, 28, did it more skillfully and consistently than her opponent. They have now played each other 14 times and Lloyd has won every time.

"I think Chris played her best today," the Yugoslavian player said. "She only missed two or three shots in the whole match, and it is difficult to play against that kind of form.

"She has played better with each match of this tournament."

A Swedish pair, Anders Jarryd and Hans Simonsson, won the men's doubles title, beating Mark Edmondson of Australia and Sherwood Stewart of the United States 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 in the final.

Bjorn Borg, who won the French Open singles title six times before retiring two months ago, said in an interview earlier: "I feel very proud of how the young Swedish players are doing, because I think my own success has had something to do with it."

In the men's singles, these red clay courts have again been the Americans' graveyard. Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe both were tumbled out of the singles in the quarterfinals. No American has won the singles title since Tony Trabert in 1955.

Lloyd was asked why she has won the French title so often and American men could not win here at all.

"It's because I come from Florida, which is clay-court territory," she explained. "Most of our leading men, including Connors and McEnroe, were brought up on cement."

Borg said there was no reason why Americans should not win in Paris.

"I think the problem is they are not as patient as they should be on this slow surface," Borg said.

"There are some good American clay-court players, but compared with Europeans, who grew up on this kind of surface, they are not good enough to win big ones like this.

"You have to be very patient on these courts and sometimes you have to wait a long time for the right opportunity to attack. American players don't make the right approach shots."

Women's Singles
Finals

Men's Doubles
Finals
Anders Jarryd and Hans Simonsson, Sweden, No. 8, def. Mark Edmondson, Australia, and Sherwood Stewart, U.S., 7-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles
Finals

Couples Scrambles Into Lead Tie

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Fred Couples stayed in the hunt with a remarkable scrambling game — saving par seven times — then birdied the final hole to tie Scott Simpson for the third round lead Saturday in the $400,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

"I bogeyed the third, then saved par with long putts (15 and 20 feet)," Couples said. "I could have gone three over par in a hurry, but I came back and birdied four of the next five holes. That was the key to the round.

"And, of course, the birdie at 18 was the hightlight."

Couples, 23, stroked an 8-iron inside of six feet on the 18th and dropped the putt that enabled him to complete three rounds over the difficult, 7,173-yard Congressional Country Club course in 210, six under par.

Simpson, who led by four strokes at the turn, had to make a scrambling par from deep rough on the side of a hill on the 18th to retain a share of the top spot. Simpson, who had made only one bogey in two rounds, had three this cloudy, muggy day and shot a 74.

Tze-Chung Chen, a 24-year-old tour rookie from Taiwan who prefers to be known as T.C., was a single stroke back at 211. He closed up with a 69.

Tom Kite, often the most steady of all the tour players, was within in a single stroke of the lead before he finished bogey-bogey-bogey.

That sent Kite, who had the Tour's low stroke average the last two seasons, reeling four strokes off the pace going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize. He had a fat 76 and was fourth at 214.

George Burns, with a 74, was the only other man under par for 54 holes. He was at 215.

The group at par 216 included Craig Stadler, the winner of this title the last two seasons, And Bean, South African Nick Price and John Mahaffey. Stadler closed up with a 69. Price shot 70. Mahaffey and Bean matched par 72.

Couples, now in his third year of PGA Tour activity, put himself in position to make a run at his first title by some spectacular scrambling.

He missed eight greens, but saved par on seven of them. He had a dozen one-putts, including 15 and 20 footers for par. Over one stretch, he one-putted seven greens in a row.

"If I'm on the practice tee hitting balls, I can't see myself, don't know what I'm doing," he said. "If I'm putting, I figure I'm working on something that may pay off.

"I'd rather make a 10-footer than hit a drive 260 yards down the middle. It's all putting is mainly the way I figure it."

After making bogey from a bunker on the third, he saved par on the next two holes with the long, 15-20 foot putts.

He birdied the sixth after a sand wedge shot came to rest inside of 18 inches from the flag. He missed the green and saved par on the seventh, then birdied the next three in a row, starting with a 35-foot putt on the eighth.

He got pitches close on the ninth and 10th, both par-5s, scrambled out of trouble on four more holes, then got a share of the lead on the 18th.

Simpson stretched his 36-hole lead by playing the front side in par, but lost four strokes to Couples on the back. Couples played that side in 34, while Simpson required 38 strokes. He bogeyed the 12th after missing the green, 3-putted the 14th and had to work hard for par on the last.

Another Frazier Pounds Joe Bugner

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Marvis Frazier beat Joe Bugner Saturday, just like his father, former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, did 10 years ago and talk began immediately about young Frazier challenging heavyweight champion Larry Holmes.

Promotoer Bob Arum said a match between Holmes, the 33-year-old World Boxing Council champion with a 43-0 record, and the 22-year-old Frazier, who now is 10-0, was more than just talk.

"Holmes told me in my office he wants to fight," said Arum. "All the financing is in place, but nothing has been signed."

Arum said a tentative date for the fight was September 23 in Atlantic City.

Asked about fighting Holmes, Frazier said, "You have to ask Pop."

The 33-year-old Bugner was doubtful that Frazier is ready for the big time yet.

"Marvis, with a lot more coaching and experience, could be a very good cruiserweight (195-pound limit). The heavyweight division might be too much for him. My opinion is he has to do something to avoid those right hands and the jabs. I think Larry Holmes, who has one of the best left jabs in the business, would cut him up."

Bugner landed some jabs and some right uppercuts, but he was never in the fight against Frazier, although he outweighed Frazier by 37¼ pounds.

Frazier, using pressure similar to that applied by his father when he fought, but not hitting nearly as hard as his father did, scored a unanimous 10-round decision. Joe Frazier's victory over Bugner July 2, 1973, in London was a 12-round decision.

"Joe Frazier was a superior fighter to his son, " said Bugner, sitting next to Marvis at a post-fight press conference. "When we talk about that man, we're talking about a legend in his own time."

It was a big afternoon for the Frazier family. Marvis' 20-year-old brother, Hector, who fights as Joe Frazier, Jr., ran his record to 4-0 with four knockouts by stopping Tony Rivera after five rounds. Frazier weighed 139¼ and Rivera 141.

Then Marvis' cousin, Rodney Frazier, 206¼, stopped Josh Bryant, 217, in the second round.

Judge Charles Spina saw the fight as a surprisingly close one, scoring it 6-4 for Frazier. Judge Harold Lederman scored it 8-2, Frazier, and judge Richard F. Murry saw it 10-0 for the winner.

The AP favored Frazier 9-1.

"The 10 years seem just like yesterday," Bugner had said before the fight.

The result was the same as 10 years ago — a Frazier winning — but a young Bugner gave Joe Frazier a tougher fight than an aging and heavy Bugner gave Marvis Frazier.

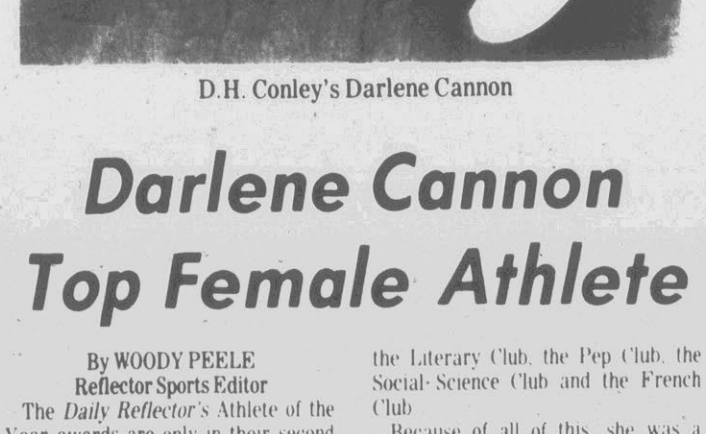
Bugner was never off his feet — he was knocked down in the 10th round 10 years ago — but he took a severe body pounding and was marked about both eyes.

The 6-foot-4 Bugner, weighing 237¾, enjoyed a reach advantage over the 6-foot Frazier, who weighed 200½. It did him no good as Frazier was too fast and was in much better physical condition.

Frazier, now 10-0 with six knockouts, began working the body extremely well in the fourth round. And he had Bugner wincing from savage body blows in the fifth and sixth rounds. Frazier didn't ignore the head, either, scoring with several clean left hooks and overhand rights.

Bugner kept backing up throughout the fight, trying to catch Frazier with uppercuts as he moved in. Even with he landed, Bugner was not particularly effective. The best round for the English citizen who was born in Hungary and lives in California was the third when he snapped Frazier's head back with three strong jabs.

The loss in the nationally televised fight snapped a four-bout winning streak for Bugner, who returned to boxing in earnest last year after having had only one fight between 1977 and 1982. His record now is 56-9-1.



D.H. Conley's Darlene Cannon

Darlene Cannon Top Female Athlete

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The Daily Reflector's Athlete of the Year awards are only in their second year, and already D.H. Conley High School is threatening to put a lock on the award.

Last year, Conley wrestler Mike Long was named the Male Prep Athlete of the Year, and this year, basketball star Keith Gatlin followed in his footsteps, garnering the 1983 award.

Now, Darlene Cannon, another star Conley athlete, has been selected as the Female Prep Athlete of the Year. Last year's winner was Rose Lang of Farmville Central.

Last week, Cannon was picked as her own school's Female Athlete of the Year, and that surprised few. A star in volleyball, basketball and softball, she was recently picked to play in the girls' all-star basketball game in Greensboro this summer. She is the first Pitt County girl ever selected for the game.

But not only is Darlene an outstanding athlete, she carries her work over into the classroom. She currently ranks seventh in a class of 228, and carries a 5.33 average in a six-point college prepatory program at the school.

She is a member of the National Honor Society and Mu Alpha Theta, and will attend the University of North Carolina next fall, where she is planning to continue her career in basketball.

As a freshman, Darlene lettered in volleyball, basketball and softball, starting in the latter sport and seeing much action in the other two as a reserve.

Then, as a sophomore, she became a starter in all three sports. She was chosen to the all-conference team in volleyball.

She continued to start in all three as a junior, and was all-conference in both basketball and softball, gaining honorable mention in volleyball.

Then, in this, her final year at Conley, she again started in all three. She was voted co-captain of the volleyball team by her teammates, and made the all-conference team for the second time in three years. She was also again chosen to the all-conference softball team.

But it was in basketball that she accomplished the most. As point guard, she led the team to second place in the 3-A State championships, averaging 12.4 points a game, along with eight assists. She was chosen as the team's most valuable player, and again was all-conference.

Athletics do not take up all of her time either. In addition to her academic achievements, she is also active in the Literary Club, the Pep Club, the Social Science Club and the French Club.

Because of all of this, she was a nominee from Conley for the Morehead Scholarships at North Carolina.

"Darlene is a very personable young lady who works hard and always strives for the best," basketball coach Joy James said.

"She has certainly contributed a great deal to D.H. Conley both in the classroom and on the court. As one of her coaches, I can truly say she will be long remembered as one of the best in women's athletics at Conley."

Others considered for the award were Francis Barnhill of Rose, Linda Brown of Ayden-Grifton, Linda Harrell of North Pitt, Michelle Medlin of Farmville Central and Kathy Vernelson of Greenville Christian Academy.

Barnhill, chosen as her school's Female Athlete of the Year, was a close runner-up for the award. For three years, she played volleyball, basketball and softball for Rose, and added track during her senior year. In basketball, she was all-conference, MVP, and all-East honorable mention as a junior, and all-conference, all-East second team, and MVP as a senior. She was all-conference in both of her final years at Rose in softball. In volleyball, she was the MVP as a junior, and was unbeaten during the regular season in the shot put in track as a senior.

Brown, also a three-sport athlete, played volleyball, basketball and softball. She was all-conference two years, and MVP as a junior. In basketball, she was all-conference as a senior, honorable mention as a junior, and received all-tournament honors in the tri-county and ECC both junior and senior years. She also has won the team's Best Defensive, Most Dedicated and Most Valuable Player awards. In softball, Brown was MVP once and twice all-conference.

Harrell played volleyball and basketball for three years at North Pitt and four years of softball. She was all-conference in basketball in 1982-83, and active in a number of non-athletic programs at the school.

Medlin lettered three years in volleyball at Farmville and two years in softball. She twice was all-conference in the former and won the Team Before Self award in the sport.

Vernelson, the only junior considered, lettered three years in basketball and made all-conference all three years. Each year, she has been named her team's Most Valuable Player. She played softball one year.

Arnoux' Ferrari Claims Detroit Pole

DETROIT (AP) — Rene Arnoux of France Saturday wheeled a turbocharged Ferrari to the pole position for the second annual Detroit Grand Prix Formula One auto race.

Arnoux, who was well back in the field after the opening session of qualifying on a rain-drenched track Friday, led a charge to the top four spots for Sunday's race by turbocharged cars.

He ran only seven laps around the 2.56-mile circuit through the streets of downtown Detroit, posting a fast clocking of 1 minute, 44.734 seconds. That translates to 83.869 mph, surpassing last year's pole speed of 82.700 by then-teammate Alain Prost of France when both were in Renaults.

"For me, it (the pole) is very important. In the first corner, it is always very busy," Arnoux said. "When the car is in the first position it means you're okay. When you're in the middle (of the field), you lose time to the leader and it's very hard to pass here."

"This track is very difficult," he added. "It's a pity to use Formula One (racers) here because it's very difficult to use full power. It's very slow."

Arnoux and several other drivers said they likely will start the race with half-full gas tanks and make a pit stop — a strategy virtually unheard of in Formula One racing until early this season.

The track was nearly completely dry Saturday afternoon when the second and final hour of qualifying began. The difference in speeds from Friday, because of the dry track, were so dramatic that even Formula One rookie Carrado Fabi of Italy, who was the slowest of 27 entries and failed to make the 24-car race field, was more than 13 seconds faster than the provisional pole time turned in Friday by Keke Rosberg.

Former world champion Nelson Piquet, who failed to make this race a year ago because of an engine problem, took the other front row spot in a Brabham racer powered by a BMW turbo. The Brazilian's best lap averaged 83.710 mph.

Patrick Tambay of France put the other turbocharged Ferrari in the third spot at 82.874, followed by Elio de Angelis of Italy in a turbo-Lotus at 82.666.

The first non-turbocharged qualifier was Marc Surer of Switzerland, whose Cosworth-powered Arrows racer came in at 82.289 mph.

American-born Eddie Cheever was seventh in one of the heralded turbo-Renaults at 81.837, while Danny Sullivan of the United States and the Tyrrell team wound up 16th at 80.847.

Rosberg, the defending world champion, ran 13 laps Saturday but his best lap — 81.538 mph — was only good for the 12th spot on the grid. He will start the race just ahead of current world championship point leader Prost, who had a best lap of 81.442 in his Renault turbo.

"The main problem (with the Renaults) was our qualifying tires," explained Prost, who goes into Sunday's race four points ahead of Piquet and five ahead of Tambay. "We tested this morning (in practice) with race tires and were two seconds faster (than in qualifying). But that means we'll be stronger in the race."

Two-time world champion Niki Lauda of Austria, driving a Cosworth-powered McLaren, was 18th at 80.592, while defending Detroit champion John Watson of Northern Ireland placed the other McLaren 21st at 80.402.

Watson, who came from 17th to win the race a year ago and set a Formula One record earlier this year by winning the Long Beach Grand Prix after starting 22nd, has been dubbed the "street fighter" by the Detroit media.

"I'm going to have to be some kind of street fighter to win again," Watson said. "I've never experienced a lack of (tire) grip so much — it was ridiculous. I was all over the track."

Asked about his penchant for winning from so far back, he said, "You just don't expect to win races from back there, so you don't lose any sleep. And starting up front you're much more tense, much more keyed up. In the back, you're relaxed because you don't really expect to do that well from there."

The other two who failed to make the race were Mauro Baldi of Italy and the Arrows team and Johnny Cecotto of Venezuela in a Theodore.

The race, which will run 61 laps (156.16 miles) or two hours, whichever comes first, is scheduled to start at noon EDT. It will be televised live in the United States by CBS, as well as being fed live to 34 other countries.

Briton Captures Marathon Event

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Hugh Jones of Britain, running his first race in a year, overtook American leader Paul Cummings in a dramatic finish Saturday and held on to win the Stockholm Marathon.

Cummings, who suffered from cramps and was forced to slow down with just three miles left, eventually finished third behind Agapius Masong of Tanzania.

Jones, sidelined with an injury after winning last year's London Marathon, was timed in 2 hours, 11 minutes and 37 seconds.

It was the fastest time ever in this race, almost two minutes faster than American Bill Rodgers' winning time of 2:13:26 set two years ago.

And Jones' great comeback probably earned him a berth on the British team in the World Track and Field Championships in Helsinki later this summer.

"Yes, I'm ready for the World Championships, but I haven't been selected yet," he said after finishing the 26-mile race at the Olympic Stadium.

Masong, a 20-year-old student at Ranger Junior College in Ranger, Texas, finished in 2:11:54. Masong ran his first marathon in Houston only five months ago, clocking 2:13:07.

Cummings' time was 2:12:39. A Brigham Young graduate who still lives in Provo, Utah, Cummings took the lead at the 15½-mile mark and at one point held a 1-minute, 12-second lead ahead of Jones and Masong.

But 13 was not a lucky starting number for the American this time.

"I felt very good until three miles from the finish," Cummings said. "Suddenly my hamstring snapped and I couldn't run any faster because of cramps. I had to stop once."

Jones, ranked fourth in the world last season, said he heard Cummings had cramps up near the finish.

"I thought he (Cummings) had won it. When I heard he was cramping up it was just a matter of increasing the speed a little bit," Jones said.

"But I didn't feel safe until about a kilometer (0.62 miles) from the finish. Before that I didn't know where Masong was, but when I looked back I saw him behind."

It was the fifth victory in 10 marathon races for Jones, a 27-year-old university student now living in London.

Domingo Tibaduiza, a Colombian veteran who is coaching at the University of Nevada-Reno, finished fourth in 2:12:46. Kjell-Erik Stahl of Sweden, the defending champion, clocked 2:12:49 for fifth. Oivind Dahl of Norway was sixth in 2:13:51.

A field of 13,000 runners entered the world's third biggest marathon race, including former world heavyweight boxing champions Floyd Patterson of the United States and Ingemar Johansson of Sweden.

Little League

Coca-Cola 8
Jaycees 3

Coca-Cola handed the Jaycees their seventh straight defeat in the North State Little League yesterday, gaining a 8-3 triumph.

Coke grabbed the lead in the contest in the first inning, scoring twice in the top of the frame. The Jaycees came back with one in their half of the frame, only to see Coke put it away in the second.

With two away in the second, Derrick Hines reached on an error and Andy Miller singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Walter Gatlin's single. Gatlin took second on an error, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Mike Smith's single for a 5-1 lead.

Coke picked up one in the fourth and two more in the fifth to finish off its scoring. The Jaycees scored twice more in the sixth.

Miller and Gatlin each had three hits and Smith had two for the Coke nine. Bobby Threewits had two to pace the Jaycees.

Optimists 9
Kiwanis 7

Nelson Galloway cracked a solo home run to help the Optimists gain a 9-7 North State Little League victory over the Kiwanis yesterday.

The Optimists moved ahead in the first inning, scoring three times. They came back with two in the second, and then added three in the third to put the game out of reach.

Kendall Hardee led off the third with a single and Milton Carraway walked. Both moved up when Terrence Smith reached on a fielder's choice. Park Williams singled in Hardee and Carraway, but Smith was thrown out. Heath Clark then reached on an error, scoring Williams.

The Kiwanis rallied for two in the fourth and scored five times in the fifth before Galloway closed out the Optimist scoring with a homer in the bottom of the fifth.

Galloway and Hardee each had two hits for the Optimists, while Pat Joyner had three and Jamie Hale had two for the Kiwanis.

True Value 4

Wellcome stayed close to front-running First Federal in the Tar Heel Little League with a 6-4 win over True Value Hardware yesterday.

True Value took the initial lead in the game, scoring twice in the top of the first, but Wellcome came back with three in the bottom of the frame, then scored a fourth run in the second. It remained that way until the fifth when True Value rallied for two to tie it at 4-4.

In the bottom of the fourth, however, Wellcome scored twice more to claim the win. With one down, Adam Nobles doubled and Jared Dancy singled. An error then let Nobles score. Josh Potter followed with a single, scoring Dancy.

Blake Stallings and Dancy led the Wellcome hitting with two, while Richie May and Eric Daniels each had a pair for True Value.

Exchange 7
Moose 4

Duane Williams tossed five innings, limiting the Moose to three hits as Exchange gained a 7-4 victory in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

Williams got help from Daryl Moore in the sixth, but got the victory in the contest.

The Exchange got one run in the first inning, but Moose tied it up with one in the second. Exchange went back out with three in the third, 4-1. Moose came back with one in the bottom of the third, but Exchange wrapped it up with two more in the fifth.

Jennie Stondram led off the fifth with a walk for Exchange and Moore also drew a walk. Duain Williams singled in both of them after they had advanced on a wild pitch.

The other Exchange run scored in the sixth, and the Moose got two more in the bottom of the fifth.

Williams had three hits to lead Exchange, while Chris Christopher had two of the three Moose hits.

Prep League

Shop-Eze 6
1st State Bank.....4

Shop-Eze Foodland ended a three-game losing streak with a 6-4 victory over First State Bank yesterday in the Greenville Prep League.

Shop-eze picked up three runs in the first and added two in the second.

In the second, Bobby Weisenberger was hit by a pitch and Dallas McPherson reached on a fielder's choice. Billy Carr reached on an error, allowing both runners to score.

Shop-eze got its other run in the sixth, while the Bankers scored once in the fifth, twice in the sixth and once in the seventh.

Hendrix & Dail 3
Garris-Evans.....2

Chris Bender won a pitching duel with Mark Holloman as Hendrix & Dail inched past Garris-Evans, 3-2, in the Prep League yesterday.

Each pitcher gave up five hits, but Bender was able to pull out the victory, striking out the final two batters he faced.

Hendrix & Dail took the lead with one in the first, then added the two fateful runs in the third.

Brian Pierce led off the third with a walk and stole second. With one away, Bender singled, scoring Pierce. Bender then stole second and third, scoring on a passed ball.

Garris-Evans got one each in the sixth and seventh innings.

Babe Ruth League

Brown & Wood 6
Pepsi-Cola.....3

Brown & Wood got only two hits off Pepsi-Cola pitching, but it was enough to pull out a 6-3 victory Saturday in the Babe Ruth League.

Brown & Wood took the lead in t;he first inning, scoring three runs, helped along by a triple by Kelly Barnhill.

But it was in the third that the fourth — and winning — run came across. Barnhill reached on an error and Patrick Kanteske walked, moving to second on an error. Chris Meeks then hit a sacrifice fly to score Barnhill.

B&W added two more in the sixth. Pepsi got one in the fourth and two in the six.

Pepsi got only three hits off Meeks, who went the distance for B&W. No one on either team had more than one hit.

Harper Sparks Braves To 6-4 Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Terry Harper, a last-minute starter, drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning Saturday as the Atlanta Braves reeled off their fifth victory in a row by downing the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4.

Harper, who had been struggling at the plate recently, said he knew his effort wouldn't move him into the starting lineup.

"I was just trying to put something in their mind that the next time they need somebody, it'll be me," Harper said.Harper found out he was playing shortly before game time when Manager Joe Torre told him right-fielder Claudell Washington would be out with a toothache.

"I've been kind of struggling," Harper said. "It feels good to have a good game and burst out of it. That might be my first hits against those guys."

Harper took extra batting practice at Pittsburgh earlier this week. "I knew I was coming around, but when you're struggling, you just don't know when," he said. "I'm glad Joe stuck with me."

The Braves are unbeaten in six games against St. Louis, which beat them in last year's National League playoffs.

Atlanta broke a 3-3 tie against Joaquin Andujar, 3-8, with two away in the sixth when Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss walked and Harper singled to left. Horner crossing the plate just before Chambliss was thrown out at third to end the inning.

Atlanta added two runs in the seventh on Glenn Hubbard's double which came after Rafael Ramirez was hit by a pitch and Brett Butler walked. Donnie Moore, 2-0, was the winner in relief and Terry Forster picked his eighth save, getting Keith Hernandez to ground into a game-ending double play with the tying runs aboard.

George Hendrick pulled the Cards into a 3-3 tie in the fifth with his ninth homer of the season following a walk to Lonnie Smith. Harper's homer, his third of the year, came in the second following singles by Horner and Chambliss.

St. Louis opened the scoring in the first inning on singles by Ken Oberkfell, Smith and Willie McGee and closed it in the eighth on Tommy Herr's sacrifice fly.

CHICAGO (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins swapped stories with former Chicago Cubs teammates before an Old Timers' Day game Saturday, then went out and pitched the 280th victory of his career.

"It's a lucky throw of the dice that I'm still playing. After all, I am pushing 40," Jenkins after defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2.

"I've never gone two months with only one win in my career," added Jenkins, who rolled a couple of sevens. It was his seventh start in search of his second victory of the season and he also struck out a season-high seven batters.

Jenkins, who has had trouble with hamstring pulls this year, admitted he started thinking about his age and his legs during his winless streak.

"After all, they say the legs go first and I've had problems with my legs. But I have to thank my lucky stars that I am gifted with a good arm. I've never had a sore arm and I've always been able to go to the post every three or four days."

Jenkins, whose goal is to reach 300 victories, hopes he's over the hump for the time being."Over my career I've always been a second-half pitcher and we haven't reached that yet," he said. "I hope to rack up a few more wins before the break."

Jenkins aided his own cause by driving in a run with the first of his two singles and added: "I'm never going to get cheated hitting. I always come out swinging."

Jody Davis homered, Ryne Sandberg stole home and Larry Bowa scored on a balk for other Chicago runs as the Cubs stretched their winning streak to four games, their longest of the sason. The Pirates lost their fifth in a row for the second time this year.

Jenkins, 2-3, who drove in the first run of the game, allowed five hits and walked two before departing in the seventh inning.

Jenkins' two-out single scored Keith Moreland in the second inning. Then, with two away in the third inning, Sandberg, who had singled and moved to third on a balk and a fly ball, and Jay Johnstone, who had been hit by a pitch by loser Jim Bibby, 2-6, worked a double steal.

The Pirates tied it in the fourth with a walk to Bill Madlock, a single by Jason Thompson, an infield out and a two-run single by Mike Easler. Davis broke the tie in the bottom of the fourth when he led off with his seventh homer. Bowa then singled, went to third on a single by Mel Hall and scored when reliever Manny Sarmiento was charged with a balk.

The Cubs added a run in the seventh when Sandberg singled, stole second and scored on a single by Moreland.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Darrell Evans, the National League Player of the Month for May, was in a mini-slump when he came to the plate for the San Francisco Giants in the bottom of the eighth inning Saturday.

The game was tied 2-2 and leadoff batter Max Venable opened the inning with a single off Montreal Expos relief ace Jeff Reardon, 2-4. Evans promptly sent a 2-2 pitch into the right field stands, giving the Giants a 4-2 victory, snapping a 1-for-14 slump, and taking the National League home run lead with 13.

"I sat back thinking Reardon might throw a breaking ball, but I got good reaction on a fastball," Evans said of the blow which gave him seven game-winning RBI. "It was a quick swing more than a big swing."

Evans received a standing ovation for his dramatic homer, and emerged from the dugout to acknowledge the cheering fans.

"That's the first time since I've been with the Giants that an ovation brought me out of the dugout," Evans noted. "It's a great feeling."

Reardon said he thought he threw "a good inside fastball," but all he got for it was his third game-losing homer in eight days. Previously, the Phillies' Mike Schmidt and the Padres' Steve Garvey connected off him.

The Giants opened the scoring against Steve Rogers in the second on singles by Jack Clark, Tom O'Malley and Joel Youngblood rookie Brad Wellman's RBI grounder to Rogers.

Giants' starter Fred Breining limited the Expos to a two-out single by Rogers in the third and retired 10 in a row before Montreal tied it in the seventh on a walk and singles by Al Oliver and Gary Carter.

The Giants made it 2-1 in the bottom of the seventh on Wellman's two-out single and Milt May's double off left-fielder Tim Raines' glove. The Expos tied it again in the eighth on singles by pinch-hitter Terry Crowley and Raines off Breining and Dawson's double off Lavelle.

As PGA Tour Commissioner

Is Beman On Way Out?

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman's job could be on the line this week when discontented players sit down with the tour's policy board, the first such meeting in the tour's history.

Asked if his job was in jeopardy, Beman, the chief executive officer for the pro golf tour, replied: "Not if the facts and merit are taken into consideration. If they aren't, then I might not want it (the job) anyway."

Beman, who has held the position 10 years, did not deny he is under pressure from some of the game's leading players.

"They think they have my neck in a noose and they're trying to tighten it," he said while on a visit to the Kemper Open in suburban Washington, D.C.

The issues are clouded, complicated and range from the marketing of socks to the sale of television rights. The principal point of contention, however, appears to involve a breakdown in communications between the tour's administration and the players.

The closed-door meeting between the tour's policy board, the policy-making and governing body for the tour, and the touring players represents an attempt to solve the problem.

The meeting, scheduled Thursday at the Westchester Country Club in Harrison, N.Y., comes at a time when long-simmering dissatisfaction by some of players, including Tom Kite, Tom Watson, and Jack Nicklaus, apparently has reached a boiling point.

"There is an awful lot of discontent," said Kite, one of the game's leading performers and a former member of the policy board.

Beman, who reports to the policy board, said, "The full board will be at the Westchester meeting and they can take any action they desire.

"To a charge of failing to communicate with the players, I'll plead guilty," he said. "If the charge is that I have exceeded my authority, that is not true. That did not happen."

The board is made up of 10 members — four players, elected by their peers; three officers of the PGA, the organization representing the nation's club professionals and teaching pros; and three independent directors.

Del deWindt, of Lyndhurst, Ohio, chairman of the board of Eaton Corp., is chairman of the tour's policy board and will chair the meeting of the players and the board.

Prior to the meeting, players will be given a document entitled "Annual Report to the Membership," which is similar to a corporation's annual stockholder's report and is the first to be made available to the players.

The report contains a detailed summary of the operations, goals, priorities and financial status of the organization. An eight-page financial statement by an independent auditing firm is attached.

The report is responsive, at least in part, to a private meeting of about 12 leading players at Nicklaus's villa at Muirfield Village during the Memorial Tournament May 26-29. Arnold Palmer and Watson were among the players at the meeting.

"Arnold and I are getting too old to get in a fight — if there is going to be a fight," Nicklaus said.

He said the issues "should not be debated in the press."

"It hasn't been good for any sport in the past, and it wouldn't be good for this sport now. But we are concerned with the direction the tour is taking, some of the things that are happening," Nicklaus said.

"Some of the good players compiled a list of questions for Deane. We want to be able to get the answers to some things."

These questions, he said, involve "everything related to the PGA tour, the basic business of the tour."

Among other things, the questions involve the tour's new marketing branch, and the construction and operation of the Tournament Players Clubs, courses owned and operated by the tour. These include the tour's home course at Sawgrass in Ponte Vedra, Fla., and new courses near Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Denver.

The marketing division and the tour's move into golf course ownership and operation are innovations made under Beman's stewardship.

Both areas are covered, in some detail, by the report to be distributed to the players. The report also covers subjects such as the players' retirement fund, television revenues, expenses, income, headquarters operations and plans for the future, including avenues designed to lessen the tour's reliance on the sale of television rights.

Most of the rumblings of discontent have come from recognized leading players. The rank and file of the tour's membership has been less vocal.

"The tour basically is healthy," said Steve Melnyk. "Healthier than it's ever been."

Jim Colbert, a player-director, said, "Beman has taken a lot of heat for policies set by the board. He is at the head. He's visible. The board set the policies and he has to make them work.

"The board is 150 percent behind him."

Kite, however, said, "The board is responsive to the players."

Four Men To Miss

LONDON (AP) — Four of the 20 leading men's players in the world will be missing from the Wimbledon tennis championships opening at the All-England club on June 20.

Among the omissions from the entry list announced Saturday is 27-year-old Australian Peter McNamara, who won last year's men's doubles title with countryman Paul McNamee.

McNamee will be partnered by America's Brian Gottfried in this year's event.

Also missing will be Spain's Jose Higueras, Eliot Teltscher of the United States and France's Yannick Noah, who competes in the final of the French Open in Paris Sunday against Sweden's Mats Wilander.

Zisk Paces Mariner Victory Over Yankees; Red Sox, Angels Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Richie Zisk is no stranger to injury. His baseball career has survived six knee operations, beginning at age 13, and this year he spent three weeks on the bench with a pulled rib cage.

"The frustration of being injured is not something I like to cope with," Zisk said after leading the Seattle Mariners to a 5-4 victory Saturday over the New York Yankees with two solo home runs and an RBI single.

"I love the game of baseball, but time catches up with you," Zisk said, adding he didn't relish the idea of coping with another knee injury. "I'm one behind (pro hockey's) Bobby Orr and five behind (pro football's) E.J. Holub, and I don't intend to catch up with either one of them."

Zisk said he was not 100 per cent recovered yet from the rib cage injury, "but it's no longer an excuse to keep me out of the lineup."

The victory was the second in two days over the Yankees, who have lost three in a row. "We've hit the ball hard the past three days, and we've got nothing to show for it," said Manager Billy Martin. "We're leaving too many men on base, we're not moving runners over, we're not sacrificing right and we're not scoring runs."

The Yankees stranded seven against the Mariners Saturday and four on Friday night, when Matt Young blanked them 5-0 on two hits.

"We have to go out and battle tomorrow," Yankees right fielder Oscar Gamble said.

Zisk homered to open Seattle's two-run second inning against left-hander Bob Shirley, 2-4, and led off the ninth against reliever George Frazier with what proved to be the Mariners' decisive run — his second homer of the game, fifth of the year and the 200th of his major-league career.

Following Zisk's second-inning homer, Al Cowens singled, continued to second when Gamble allowed the ball to skip through his legs for an error, was bunted to third and scored on a single up the middle by Domingo Ramos.

Graig Nettles hit his fifth homer for New York in the bottom of the second off Jim Beattie, 4-3, but the Mariners made it 3-1 in the third. Steve Henderson made it to second when third baseman Nettles allowed his grounder to scoot through his legs and, two outs later, Zisk singled to left.

The Mariners added a run in the eighth when Manny Castillo doubled, was sacrificed to third and scored on a suicide squeeze by Jamie Allen. Willie Randolph's single and Butch Wynegar's RBI double in the bottom of the eighth chased Beattie.

Ed VandeBerg came on, put down that threat but gave up pinch-hitter Don Baylor's two-out, two-run homer in the ninth. Bill Caudill took over and notched his 12th save.

But Boston's designated hitter had an explanation after pounding two homers and two singles and driving in four runs to lead the Red Sox to an 8-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

"This morning I was just so darned down because my father-in-law died," said Armas. "I just came out and tried to do my best."

"When Armas is hitting," said Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk, "he can win ballgames by himself."

Dennis Eckersley, 4-2, scattered eight hits, struck out five and walked three in six innings. Luis Aponte pitched the final three innings for his third save, yielding Randy Bush's third homer in the eighth inning and Gary Gaetti's double-play grounder that produced a run in the ninth.

The Red Sox took a 2-0 lead against Frank Viola, 2-3, with two outs in the first inning on a walk to Jery Remy and Armas' homer before Dave Engle hit an RBI double for the Twins in the second inning.

Wade Boggs and Armas hit RBI singles in Boston's two-run third and Armas hammered his second homer of the game and 10th of the year in the fifth inning.

The Twins scored three times in the fifth on John Castino's two-run single and Kent Hrbek's run-scoring double.

Boston added three runs in the eighth inning off Twins' relievers Rick Lysander, Ron Davis and Len Whitehouse on Reid Nichols' RBI single, a sacrifice fly by Dave Stapleton and a run-scoring double by Glenn Hoffman.

California 8
Milwaukee 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tim Foli followed Bob Boone's two-run single with a three-run homer in the sixth inning Saturday to catapult Tommy John and the California Angels to an 8-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Angels overcame a 3-2 deficit with their big burst. A single by Ron Jackson, a walk to Bobby Grich and a bunt single by Ellis Valentine loaded the bases, chasing Jerry Augustine, 2-1. Boone's single to left off Jim Slaton put California on top, then Foli made it 7-3 with his second homer of the year, a shot over the wall in left.

The Angels, who finished with 15 hits, added an eighth-inning run off Jamie Easterly on singles by Boone, Juan Beniquez and Foli.

John, 5-2, who scattered nine hits en route to his fifth complete game of the year, was touched for two runs in the first inning when Robin Yount was safe on an error by Foli at short and Cecil Cooper hit his 10th homer, a line drive into the right-field bleachers.

The Angels got a run back in the second inning on Fred Lynn's 11th homer, the Brewers made it 3-1 in the fourth on Cooper's double and a single by Gorman Thomas, and California closed within as run in the fifth on a double by Beniquez, a single by Reggie Jackson and a sacrifice fly by Doug DeCinces.

Pickup Truck Race Is Today

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Fleming of Danville, Va., took the pole position for Sunday's All-American Pickup Truck 200 race by averaging 126.161 mph during Saturday's qualifications at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Other qualifiers Saturday included Randy Baker of Charlotte at 124.445 mph in a Chevrolet; Doug West, Salisbury, Md., 123.772, Chevrolet; George Pultz, Stuartsville, N.J., 122.040, Dodge; and Steve Sigurdson of Charlotte, clocked at 114.807 in a Ford.

Ballad Of Doctor J Hasn't Hit Charts Yet

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Richard Iacovelli admits he didn't spot Julius Erving's basketball prowess when they both attended the University of Massachusetts. Now Iacovelli sings that it's a secret weapon better than the MX missile.

But Iacovelli's "Ballad of Doctor J," a single, has not been a hit in Philadelphia, where Erving and the Philadelphia 76ers reign as the National Basketball Association champions.

"He's long. He's tall. They double teamed him ever since he could crawl," Iacovelli sings in his verse.

"He don't miss much, if he misses at all.

"He's Doctor J, and he plays basketball."

Copies were sent to Erving. "He probably got a kick out of it," Iacovelli says.

Iacovelli, who says he wrote the song after watching Erving on television, says he and his producer also sent the record to Erving's agent and the 76ers office.

None wanted to help promote it, says Jeffrey Bauman, owner of the Ra Records recording studio in rural Wendell, 30 miles north of here. Its business is from local artists.

"It's a novelty with a short span," Bauman says, speculating about distributors' reasons for refusing push Iacovelli's first record.

Bauman estimates he spent about $5,000 to make 1,000 copies of the single in January and pay a promoter to peddle it.

About 300 copies have been sold, many in the Connecticut Valley, where Erving played at UMass in Amherst. Radio station WRSI-FM of Greenfield plays it frequently.

Several Philadelphia radio stations did receive the record, Bauman says, but he hasn't received word on its performance. There already were a few singles about the 76ers when Iacovelli's ballad was recorded in January.

The rest of the Erving ballad:

"You better take a message to the Pentagon, the secret weapon's in Philadelphia."

The verse follows, and then:

"Now everybody' heard about Mr. Larry Bird.

"And Magic Johnson's elixirs.

"But (wait a minute), what about the man with 11-inch hands? He put the "six" in the 76ers.

"I'm talking about soul with pure control. It's enough to scare the Ayatollah.

"If he heads for the rim, you better get away from him. And the referee, he better be an air traffic controller."

Erving, 33, left UMass to join the American Basketball Association in the early 1970s. He earned his first NBA title ring in last week's championship.

Iacovelli, 34, a second string basketball player at Hopedale High School in the 1960s, was a pre-med student at UMass. He goes by the name "Doc." In his spare time he writes music and coordinates coffee house performances of other singers.

He earns a living as a social service worker in Northampton.

Sullivan In N-S Victory

PINEHURST (AP) — Bryan Sullivan became the youngest player to ever win the men's North and South Amateur Golf Tournament, defeating Michael Taylor 8 and 7 Saturday at Pinehurst Country Club.

Sullivan, 18, of Kitty Hawk, took command of the 36-hole match early, going 8 up after 18 holes. That lead stretched to 10 up in the second round before Taylor, 18, of Gastonia, closed the margin slightly.

CFA Sets Up Own Television Plan

DALLAS (AP) — Some 70 games could be televised this fall under the College Football Association's contingency plan for the 1983 season, with a maximum of four appearances by a school the only restriction.

The 10-point plan was made public Saturday and will be voted on Sunday when the CFA winds up its seventh annual meeting. The CFA, which consists of 60 major football schools but without the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences, would sell its package to one or more networks if a stay is lifted on a court ruling that overturned the NCAA's $281 million TV package.

Under the CFA plan, if two networks are involved — the NCAA package was sold to ABC and CBS — each will have 14 exposures, either seven national and seven regional or eight national and six regional, and each will show 35 games. If other than two networks are involved, the number of exposures and games would be negotiated.

There would be no guaranteed appearances for participating universities — each CFA member would have the option to participate or not — and a school could appear four times on the same network.

The plan features network programming of two afternoon games each Saturday, plus other traditional college game days. Any games not selected by the networks — which would have the right of first refusal — could be shown live or otherwise at the universities' discretion after 7 p.m. in the Eastern and Central time zones and after 6 p.m. in the Mountain and Pacific time zones.

The networks would pay a financial guarantee to each participating university, the amount to be determined after network contracts are made. The schools' contribution to the NCAA — currently three-quarters of 1 percent — will be agreed upon by the participating schools.

If the plan is approved Sunday, a commitment form would be distributed shortly to CFA members. It would give the CFA the authoritiy to act as the university's agent in making network contracts for 1983.

Last month, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver upheld a lower court decision that gave colleges the right to market their own football games and threw out the NCAA package, saying it violated antitrust laws.

The NCAA petitioned for a rehearing, keeping the stay in effect until that decision is made.

In other action Saturday, head football coaches and athletic directors representing CFA schools showed little interest in a Division I-A national championship playoff and expressed support for the new NCAA coaching limitations of one head coach, nine full-time assistants, an unlimited number of graduate assistants (provided they are working toward a graduate degree) and one volunteer coach.

However, CFA faculty representatives proposed eliminating the volunteer coach and limiting graduate assistants to five.

All three groups supported the current rule governing freshman eligibility, but Joe Paterno of Penn State, chairman of the coaches' group, said the scholarship limits of 30 per year and 95 overall would not be adequate if the NCAA rules freshmen ineligible.

The athletic directors said they would draft legislation for next January's NCAA convention to allow schools to provide paid legal counsel to players concerning agents and relations with professional teams.

Carter Wins 6th Shot Put Title

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist University's Michael Carter won his sixth national collegiate shot put title in six attempts and Einar Vilhjalmsson of Texas, whose father owns the only medal Iceland has won in the Olympic Games, won the javelin throw in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships Saturday.

Carter, the 1980 and 1981 outdoor shot put champion and winner of the 1980, 1981 and 1983 indoor crowns, regained the outdoor title from Dean Crouser of Oregon with a heave of 68 feet, 7 inches.

Carter, a standout middle guard on SMU's football team, had missed the entire 1982 track and field season with a football injury.

This was his first meeting against Crouser in the shot. The husky Oregon senior won the shot put and discus titles last year and the discus championship this season. He was trying to become the second to capture two straight NCAA weight doubles.

The only one to do it was Randy Matson of Texas A&M in 1966 and 1967.

But Crouser couldn't match Carter's throw, nor the best of John Brenner of UCLA, who finished second at 67-9¾. Crouser settled for third at 67-5½.

The red-haired Vilhjalmsson, a left-hander, hurled the javelin 293 feet, 1 inch, only one inch short of the meet record he set in Thursday's qualifying.

Vilhjalmsson's winning throw came on his final attempt in the four-hour competition that was plagued by sporadic rain, lightning and thunder in Robertson Stadium at the University of Houston.

However, by the time the javelin ended — and four other field events had started — the sun was shining brightly.

A total of 19 finals was scheduled on the final program of the week-long meet.

Vilhjalmsson, the fifth-place finisher in last year's NCAA meet, took the lead for good this time on his third try at 278-6, after changing javelins.

Steve Stockton of Northwestern (La.) State, the leader through the first two throws, wound up second at 271-10. Roald Bradstock of Southern Methodist was third at 264-7.

Vilhjalmsson, from Reykjavik, Iceland, had been throwing consistently in the 270-280 range this season, before reaching the 290 mark in the collegiate championships.

"I knew I could throw that far," he said.

He said his record effort in the qualifying would give the other javelin throwers "something to think about" in the final.

"There'll be some pressure on me, too," added Vilhjalmsson, a pre-med student. "But I will try and come out and relax."

Michigan Nips Maine Nine, 6-5

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Junior Chris Sabo hit a three-run homer and Michigan stopped an eighth inning rally to escape with a 6-5 victory over Maine in a first-round game of the 37th Annual College World Series.

Maine, 29-15, scored on a second inning homer from Brad Colton, who led the three-run eighth inning rally with a double. Kevin Beriner homered in the fifth for the Black Bears.

Michigan, 49-7, struck for two in the seventh when Larkin doubled and Watter singled and scored off a Sabo shot to deep right field.

Maine threatened in the eighth when Colton doubled off the right field wall to score. Jeff Paul Tom Vandestine's single scored Colton to make it 6-4 and Peter Bushway singled to score Vandestine.

Michigan reliever Tim Karazim came in the eighth to replace Rich Stoll and finish the game and earn his eighth save.

Ohio State To Appeal Ruling On Quarterback

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University may know within several weeks whether quarterback Mike Tomczak will be eligible to play football next season.

Tomczak was suspended Friday for violating NCAA player rules by appearing in a clothing advertisement in Columbus Monthly magazine.

The NCAA forbids the use of an athlete's name or photograph in promotions or advertisements of commercial products. Tomczak said the $40 modeling fee he received for plugging Jean-Paul Germain clothing for the Lazarus department store was donated to the Leukemia Society.

OSU Athletic Director Hugh Hindman says the university will appeal Tomczak's ineligibility penalty.

"Our case is that he did not go into this venture for financial gain," Hindman said. "Secondly, he was not identified, nor was Ohio State identified in the advertisement. Michael thought he was all right by refusing the financial gain."

Hindman said he didn't know why Tomczak didn't seek approval or inform the athletic department before appearing in the advertisement.

Tom Yeager, director of legislative services for the NCAA, said the association normally rules on such an appeal "within a week or two" after the appeal is filed.

He said eligibility usually is restored if it can be proved that the athlete didn't intentionally violate NCAA rules, that he didn't benefit financially from the venture and if the advertisement's circulation is stopped. A Lazarus official said the store has stopped the ad.

"Our basic case is that he did not get in it for financial gain," Hindman said. "He was not identified in the ad. Ohio State was not identified in the ad. But it's obvious he's in the ad. You can't avoid that fact."

The 6-foot-1 Tomczak started at quarterback for the Buckeyes at the beginning of last season, but after completing only 37 percent of passes in the first four games, he lost the No. 1 assignment in the fifth game, a 6-0 loss to Wisconsin.

The following week he regained his starting role at Illinois and completed 58 percent of his passes for more than 1,300 yards in the final seven games.

Parkin Spoils Holtgrieve Bid To Win In Britain

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — British Walker Cup player Philip Parkin, a business major at Texas A&M University, won the 36-hole final of the British Amateur Golf Championship 5 and 4 and spoiled Jim Holtgrieve's bid of becoming the 15th American since World War II to win the title.

The 35-year-old Holtgrieve, a steel dealer from St. Louis, was unable to take advantage of his experience and never displayed his best form on the Turnberry links in the bright Scottish sunshine that had followed one of the wettest weeks in the championship's history.

Holtgieve blamed both his putting and his driving for his failure to turn the day into his first victory in a national final.

"I made far too many mistakes to put Philip under any kind of real pressure," said Holtgrieve. "In matchplay you need to start well and I started badly both in the morning and in the afternoon round.

"It was a great disappointment for me because I've been playing well all week and I had been looking forward to doing the same today. But I had a sleepless night last night and I must have been too keyed up."

Holtgrieve, the 1981 U.S. mid-amateur champion, was 2-down to Parkin — the English youth champion and a member of last week's beaten British and Irish Walker Cup team at Hoylake — after the first 18 holes.

It could have been worse but for an improbable birdie on the 18th when the American chipped in from behind the green to put himself in with a chance of recovering in the afternoon.

But two bogey 5s at the first two holes after lunch virtually sealed the victory for the Welshman, who also has also been a regular visitor to Florida in recent years for coaching from tour professionals Gil Morgan and Larry Nelson.

Parkin, who plans to remain an amateur until after the 1985 Walker Cup, went 6-up after the sixth hole in the afternoon.

Holtgrieve won the seventh and ninth holes to cut the deficit to four holes, but Parkin holed a vital eight-foot put on the 10th green for a half and then won the 12th with a par to go back to 5-up.

Two holes later, he became only the second Briton to win this event with the American Walker Cup team in the field.

Holtgrieve originally had intented to fly home after Hoylake and not enter the championship at all, but he said his wife Chris changed his mind. He was generous in defeat.

"Philip has an excellent golf game and a good head on his shoulders. He conducts himself very well and should go a long way."

"At the beginning of the week I did not expect to go this far because I felt worn out having given my all at the Walker Cup," said Holtgrieve. "But the strange thing is that nearly every time I feel like that I play well and get into the final."

"I just wish I could have given Philip a better game."

Jim Robinson Leads 2nd Day

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Jim Robinson of North Hollywood led the second day qualifying session at Riverside International Raceway Saturday as the field was filled for Sunday's $225,000 Nascar 400.

The race is sponsored by Budweiser.

Robinson averaged 112.142 mph in a 1981 Olds to nail down the 21st starting berth in the 37-car field. His speed around the 2.6-mile road course was nearly 4 mph slower than the record 116.421 average turned in Friday by pole winner Darrell Waltrip in his Pepsi Challenger Chevrolet.

Waltrip, the winner in 1980-81, will start in the number one position alongside last year's winner, Tim Richmond, who also broke the old track record Friday with a speed of 115.925 mph. Two other former winners, Richard Petty in a Pontiac and Bobby Allison in a Buick are also in the field, starting 8th and 10th.

The race, which gets underway at 1 p.m. Sunday following the Warner Hodgdon 200 Grand American race, is the 13th stop on the 1983 Winston Cup Grand National Circuit.

Allison, the 1971, 1973 and 1979 Budweiser 400 winner, currently leads the Winston Cup point standings by 185 points over Petty who is looking for the 198th victory of his career. Waltrip, the defending Winston Cup Champion, currently is 6th in points with a total of 1658.

Legion Claims Third Straight Victory

SNOW HILL — Darrell Edwards held Snow Hill to six hits and only one run over seven innings and helped Pitt County's Post 39 American Legion baseball team to a 4-1 victory over Snow Hill Friday night.

The victory was the third straight for the Pitt County team, while Snow Hill was opening its Area I East season with a loss.

Edwards, who tossed for D.H. Conley during the high school season, struck out 11 batters over his seven innings and walked just two. The lone run against him came in his final inning.

Kenny Kirkland then came on to toss the final two innings, striking out four and walking none. He allowed no hits.

Losing pitcher Bobby Carraway fanned 12, but he also walked eight and gave up nine hits, tossing 181 pitches during the evening.

Pitt jumped into the lead with a pair of runs in the second inning. Greg Briley led off with a walk and Rudy Stalls, who was one-for-nine in his first two games, slapped a double into left center to put runners at second and third. Then, after two were out, Edwards helped his own cause with a single, driving in both runners.

Pitt threatened again in the third, having one man thrown out at the plate on a bases loaded infield grounder to third. Two walks and a single had filled the sacks before Snow Hill got out of the inning.

Pitt added a third run in the fourth. Randy Warren singled and stole second. After Mont Carter walked, Carraway struck out the next two. But Briley spoiled his attempt to end this threat, getting a single that scored Warren for a 3-0 lead.

After leaving another man in scoring position in the fifth, Pitt closed out its scoring in the sixth with one more. Doug Coley singled and reached second on an error on Kirkland's infield grounder. The misplay allowed Coley to go to third, and he scored from there when Briley grounded into a double play.

Carraway bore down after that, however, and did not allow Pitt another baserunner the rest of the evening.

Snow Hill, meanwhile, was keeping the Pitt defense awake with a few threats of its own. In the first, Post 94 left runners at second and third on a walk and a double by Wade Corbett. Two singles put a man in scoring position in the second. A walk and a wild pitch moved a man into scoring position in the sixth before Snow Hill finally broke the ice in the seventh.

Anthony Russo led off the seventh with a single and took second on a passed ball. Greg Frederick then singled to drive Russo in. Frederick moved up on another passed ball, but died at second on two strikeouts and a pop-up.

A walk and a passed ball that opened the eighth gave Snow Hill its final threat. After that, Kirkland retired five straight before Richie Chase reached on an error that would have ended the game. But a strikeout one batter later accomplished that.

Stalls, in breaking out of his slump, banged out three hits, while Warren and Coley added two each for Pitt. Frederick had two hits to pace Snow Hill.

Pitt County travels to Kinston on Sunday for a 2 p.m. game for its next outing, while Snow Hill is at Wayne County at 8 p.m. Monday night in its next.

Many Uses For Cage Camps

By DAN LOHWASSER
UPI Sports Writer

This month thousands of youngsters will converge on college campuses for the annual summer rite of the basketball camp, a tradition in the Carolinas that is also a lucrative supplement to coaches' paychecks and a key recruiting tool.

North Carolina chief assistant coach Bill Guthridge, a central figure in running Dean Smith's highly successful camps, said the Tar Heels got their first look at James Worthy as a 7th grader at a camp when the NBA's first-round draft pick was a youngster. Worthy returned to camp and eventually led the Tar Heels to the NCAA championship.

The Atlanta Hawks Tom McMillen got away to Maryland, but his talents were spotted for the first time as a 9th-grader during a summer camp in Chapel Hill, Guthridge said.

Virtually all colleges, big and small, stage camps, but Smith's is the acknowledged grandstand play.

"You're talking about the nirvana of basketball camps," said South Carolina assistant Ray Jones, whose past experience includes running Duke's camp during the Bill Foster-era in nearby Durham.

The Tar Heel coaches, who are reportedly paid well by Smith for their summer services, are expecting a legion of 1,200 youngsters at $265 a head during three week-long camps this summer. Gyms in two counties will be rented for the eligible 10 to 18-year-olds.

That comes out to $318,000, and it's invitation-only. The simple one-page applications that announce the camps with little fanfare are mailed only to members of the Rams Club, the school's fundraising group. All three sessions have been sold out since March.

"It's not as lucrative as most people think it is," said Guthridge. He said the camp employs about 150 people in an instructional capacity, and expenses must be paid for facilities, buses, and lodging in Granville Towers (a private highrise dormitory). The information sheet does say "all you can eat."

"We'll have a ratio of about five campers to each counselor," said Guthridge. "It's designed to help young people especially in our state and friends and family of Rams Club members. Most of the kids are young. Most are 12 to 14 years old."

The staff is made up of "almost all of our former players," Guthridge said, with Smith maintaining a high profile among the masses. The Tar Heels also bring in area high school coaches to make up the staff. A highlight is an annual scrimmage between Tar Heel players while the campers watch from the stands.

North Carolina State's Jim Valvano got into the camp business in a big way as soon as he arrived four years ago. His camp is announced with a three-page foldout color brochure. Valvano is expected to draw about 750 for three sessions. It's open to the general public at a cost of $190 a week for boarding students. Checks are payable to "JTV Enterprises, Inc.," and there are "no refunds."

The specialty is the same among the camps. Fundamentals get the most emphasis. The Valvano brochure offers expert instruction on the "triple threat position," "jab step," "pump fakes," and "posting up."

South Carolina's Bill Foster moved from a successful camp at Duke to a successful operation at South Carolina with relative ease. He's expecting 185 to 200 kids per session for two sessions. He also co-operates the "Pocono All-Star Camp" in Pennsylvania with retired Temple University Coach Harry Litwack.

"It's amazing but there is a great correlation between winning and the success of a camp," said Jones, who came with Foster from Duke. "All of a sudden you're a great clinician when you have more wins than losses."

The all-star camps, where the teams concentrate on playing games rather than fundamentals, are Meccas for coaches on the recruiting trail. But the regular college camps still offers potential prospects a chance to see the campus and get to know the coaches outside the limitations imposed on such contact by the NCAA.

"Some college camps cater to the prospects," said Jones. "We don't use it as a recruiting tool. If we had the greatest player in America he'd have to go through the same routine as the regular camper. We don't think it's fair to the everyday kids if a good player gets special attention."

He said when the South Carolina staff isn't at its own camp this summer, it's members will be at a long list of all-star camps, which are not generally sponsored by active coaches.

Jones said basketball camps are a national pastime, but it's a lot bigger proposition in the Carolinas and Atlantic Coast Conference area in general.

"Other areas it's probably not as big as on the East Coast," Jones said. "The two biggest camps out of this area are in Kentucky, Indiana and Iowa."

But virtually everyone in the college basketball business gets a piece of the camp action. Small Davidson College, for instance, expects 600 campers at $185 a head in three sessions.

Hayesville Wins Baseball Title

HAYESVILLE — Hayesville High School rallied in the sixth inning for two runs and nipped Jamesville, 9-8, Friday, winning the State 1-A Baseball Championship. Despite the fact that Jamesville outhit the Yellowjackets, 12-6, the Bullets couldn't pull it off.

Hayesville won the opening game of the best-of-three series on Thursday, 9-1, and the Friday win gave the Yellowjackets a sweep of the series.

Jamesville had taken the lead in the first inning with three runs, and both teams added a pair of scores in the third for a 5-2 Bullet lead. Jamesville upped that to 7-2 with two in the fourth, then saw Hayesville rally for five in the top of the fifth, knotting the score.

Jamesville went back out on top with one in the bottom of the frame, 8-7, but was unable to hold on.

Ken Sult led off the sixth with a single for the 'Jackets, and Scott Massey was intentionally walked, putting the potential game winning run on base. Mike Parker followed later with a single that brought in both runners, giving Hayesville the lead and they held on through the next inning and a half to take the championship.

Parker led the Hayesville hitting with two. Richie Ange, Rex Bell and Kevin Perry each had two hits for Jamesville. One of Bell's hits was a solo home run.

Jamesville finishes the season at 20-4, while Hayesville ends up with an 18-3 record.

Aussies Take Sail Race

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — Two youthful Autralians who got off to an embarrassing start easily won the Worrell 1000 Florida-to-Virginia catamaran race.

They easily won the last leg of the Florida-to-Virginia catamaran race Friday at Virginia Beach, and with it won the entire 12-day event. It was the second time they have done so.

Both men, sunburned and drinking beer, smiled as they mingled with the crowd of 500 cheering fans that greeted them.

Dryland said after the finish that he was "rather tired but very happy." The team grabbed the lead from the first checkpoint at Ft. Pierce, Fla., and never let go.

The Australians got off to a slow start 12 days ago when Waterhouse tried to jump on the end of the boat as the race opened in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Instead of hitting the boat, he hit the water and had to swim about 40 yards to catch up.

Waterhouse, zinc paste on his face to guard against further sunburning, also cradled a large can of Australian beer, and said the only trouble the team had was during a sudden squall Wednesday night.

"We had a bit of trouble like most of the other boats," Waterhouse said smiling. "But we made it through."

When the Aussies' 16-foot, twin-hulled Hobie Cat catamaran was spotted on the horizon at about 5:30 p.m., the 500 people gathered at the Virginia Beach oceanfront finish line started applauding.

The race, which started May 23, was plagued with less difficulty than in previous years. The only team to drop out this year was Team Studebaker, whose sailors decided at Isle of Palms, S.C., that they could not make up the time or the points.

The race this year, unlike previous years, was scored by points with the lowest cumulative score winning. The winner of each heat got three quarters of a point; the last-place team got ten points.

A total of 515 players took part in American League games in 1982, a major-league record.

Erving, Stars In Exhibition

GREENSBORO (AP) — Julius Erving of the champion Philadelphia 76ers will lead a group of National Basketball Association stars in an exhibition game June 29 against some former North Carolina players now in the NBA.

The game was announced Friday by Neill McGeachy, one of the game's sponsors.

The University of North Carolina-NBA team includes Bobby Jones, also of the 76ers, as well as Bob McAdoo, Mike O'Koren, Phil Ford, Walter Davis, Dudley Bradley, Al Wood and Rich Yonakor.

Joining Erving on the NBA team will be teammate Mark Iavaroni; Buck Williams and Gastonia native Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, both of the New Jersey Nets; Nate "Tiny" Archibald of the Boston Celtics; and John Lucas of the Washington Bullets. Another player is expected to be added to the team next week.

Former Wake Forest coach Bones McKinney will guide the UNC stars while the NBA stars will be coached by Winston-Salem State's Clarence "Big House" Gaines.

The game, called the Stroh's Basketball Challenge, is sponsored by Sugar Creek Enterprises Inc. and ProServ Inc., and is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Greensboro Coliseum, following a slam-dunk contest.

Tar Heel Fishermen Are Happy Lot — North Carolina fishermen, by and large, are a happy lot. This is not a casual streamside observation but is the result of a comprehensive study conducted by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. In fact, the recent angler-opinion mail survey measured anglers' attitudes on a host of subjects related to fisheries.

"The mail survey was designed to measure how anglers felt about North Carolina fishing and out fisheries programs," said Scott Van Horn, a Wildlife Commission fisheries biologist who conducted the survey." The names and addresses of over 4,000 license-holding North Carolina fishermen were selected from the 1981 license records. All of these fishermen were sent survey forms which included questions on how often they fished, whether they considered the fishing good in North Carolina and changes they would like to see in fisheries programs.

"Over 2,300 completed forms were returned. Information from this survey will be used to develop new fisheries programs and to emphasize existing programs that anglers may not be aware of."

The survey showed that nost North Carolina anglers are serious fishermen. In fact, over 45 percent fo the anglers surveyed fished more than 20 times a year, and almost 60 percent fished from a boat. Large reservoirs totaling 1,000 acres or more are the most popular fishing spots in the state, and warmwater streams and rivers run a close second.

In popularity, the largemouth bass is clearly the Tar Heel angler's first love. Crappie rated a strong second, and bream were third. About 30 percent of the anglers surveyed, however, fish for anything that bites.

"This information will play an important role in developing new fisheries programs," said Van Horn. "We're not surprised to find that the largemouth bass is our most popular game fish, and we certainly will continue to place a strong emphasis on programs that will improve bass fishing. The widespread popularity of crappie fishing, however, indicates a need for more intensive management of this species. Programs that could improve crappie fishing include habitat-improvement projects, like placing artificial reefs and brushpiles in small lakes and reservoirs as crappie cover. The survey also showed that the inland striped bass program is very popular. In fact, half of the anglers surveyed had fished for striped bass in reservoirs at least once in 1980. We expect the popularity of this program to continue with the stocking of stripers in the large Piedmont reservoirs."

Tar Heel fishermen are also concerned about environmental problems. Over 46 percent feel that fluctuating water levels in reservoirs are a major limitation to good fishing. Approximately 36 percent are concerned about water polution, and 35 percent feel that over-fishing is a problem.

Despite occasional grumblings after ill-fated days afloat, anglers generally feel that fishing is pretty good in the Tar Heel State. In fact, 42 percent of the anglers surveyed considered fishing very good or good here, 45 percent rated the fishing fair and only 13 percent considered it poor. Anglers are also generally pleased with the wildlife commision's fisheries programs. Approximately 50 percent said they were very satisfied or satisfied with the commission's fisheries programs, and 40 percent were neutral because they had no exposure to these fisheries programs.

Environmental Education Workshops Slated — Teachers and leaders of youth groups who are interested in outdoor education should plan to attend one of the outdoor environmental-education workshops being offered this summer by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. The workshops are being held in conjunction with the Outdoors North Carolina programs of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. Workshop leaders include personnel from the wildlife commission, N.C. Forest Service, other natural-resource agencies and private conservation organizations.

Participants will receive three continuing-education credits from N.C. State University for attending one of these workshops," said Rick Estes, wildlife commission coordinator for the workshops. "These workshops are also supported by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction. Activities will include field investigations in forestry, wildlife and soil and water conservation. The program will also stress working these topics into the classroom at all grade levels."

The registration fee for each workshop is $10, and the dates and locations are as follows:

•Tuttle State Forest between Morganton and Lenoir, July 11-15

For more information, or to register for a workshop, write Rick Estes — Division of Conservation Education, N.C. Wildlife Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, 27611, or call (919) 733-7123.

Take A Hike — May is Trails Month in North Carolina. To celebrate the event, consider taking a hike as part of this year's observance of the Outdoors in North Carolina celebration. This program is sponsored by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"To celebrate Trails Month, scheduled hikes will take place on May 22 at 2 p.m. at many of the state parks throughout North Carolina," said Kay Scott, trails coordinator for the N.C. Division of State Parks. "These hikes are open to everyone and offer an excellant opportunity to get some exercise and to learn more about nature and the outdoors."

Information on hikes may be obtained from individual state parks or from the N.C. Division of State Parks, Kay Scott — Trails Coordinator, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, 27611.

Local News — Charles Young of Greenville took top honors in last weekend's Marlin Tournament held out of Swansboro. His winning blue marlin weighed in at 131½ pounds and was caught on whole mullet.

Young was fishing aboard the Carolina Sally, skippered by Billy Clifton of Grimesland. Also fishing with Clifton were Benji Doughtie and Derek Dunn both from Greenville.

Leave 'Em In The Wild

Wildlife officers K.J. Dunn and John Waters have warned hunters and others out in the wild to leave young animals alone.

"There will be occasions when people find young animals or birds which appear to be lost or abandoned," they said. "There is a strong tendency to pick these animals up, take them home and try to care for them. This is a mistake for several reasons.

"First, most small animals such as fawn deer, found in the wild, have not been abandoned. Mother is usually nearby and will rejoin baby after danger has passed. Even a young bird which falls out of the nest will often be fed by the mother.

"Second, few people know how or are prepared to care for baby animals, and third, it is unlawful to possess most wild animals without first obtaining a permit from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission."

Therefore, the officers said, unless the animal is obviously injured and in need of immediate medical attention, "the best proceedure is to leave it alone."

Little League

Sportsworld 1
Union Carbide 0

It turned into a pitching duel between Sportsworld's Jamie Brewington and Union Carbide's Paul Powers when the two teams met in the North State Little League Friday.

When it was over, Brewington and Sportsworld had come away with a 1-0 victory.

Brewington allowed four hits, struck out ten and walked four. Powers, in taking the loss, gave up five hits, walked one and struck out nine.

The lone run came in the fourth inning. With one away, Brewington singled and stole second. He then scored when Tye Fickling reached on a two-base error with two away.

Brewington had two of the five Sportsworld hits, while no one had more than one for Union Carbide.

Pepsi-Cola..... 15
Carroll & Assoc.... 12

Chris Fuqua hit two home runs as Pepsi-Cola snapped an eight-game losing skid Friday with a 15-12 victory over Carroll & Associates in the Tar Heel Little League.

Carroll & Associates took the lead in the first, scoring four times, but Pepsi came back with eight in its half of the frame. Fuqua highlighted that with a three-run homer. In the second, Pepsi added four mroe for a 12-4 edge.

What proved the difference, however, came in the third when only one run was scored. Sean Lyles led off with a walk and stole second. He was sacrificed to third by Robert Jenkins, then scored on a wild pitch to up the lead to 13-4.

C&A rallied for six runs in the fourth, while Pepsi scored two more in its half of the frame as Fuqua had his second homer — a solo shot. C&A added two in the sixth.

Babe Ruth League

Everette's 12
Coca-Cola 10

Everette's Pest Control came up with two runs in the top of the ninth and gained a 12-10 Babe Ruth League victory over Coca-Cola Friday night.

Everette's gained the initial lead with one in the top of the second, but Coke came back with three in the bottom of the inning. Everette's tied it up with two in the third, and both teams scored single runs in the fourth.

Everette's went back out with three in the sixth, but Coke scored five times in the bottom of the inning to move ahead, 9-7. Everette's scored three in the seventh to take a 10-9 lead, but Coke tied it up with one in its half of the frame.

Finally, in the ninth, Everette's scored two unanswered runs. Tom Rosche led off with a single and stole second. Curtis Perkins singled and also stole up. A passed ball scored Rosche and George Saad sacrificed over Perkins with the final run.

Rosche led the Everette's hitting with four, while Perkins had three and Tim West added two. Coke was led by Michael Garris and Clay Young with three each, while Fletcher Phillips had two.

Wachovia Bank 7
Brown & Wood 3

Wachovia Bank scored four runs in the third inning and came away with a 7-3 Babe Ruth League victory over Brown & Wood Friday night.

Wachovia scored once in the first and after Brown & Wood scored twice in the top of the second, tied it up with one in the bottom of the frame.

Then, in the third, Wachovia put it away. Mike Sasser led off with a walk and moved up on a passed ball. James Matthews reached on an error, but was thrown out trying to stretch it to second base. Tim Bland walked and stole second and Larke Weatherington singled in both runners. Anthony Coward reached on an error, allowing Weatherington to score. Coward stole both second and third and scored on another error.

Wachovia added one in the fourth while B&W got its final run in the seventh.

Winterville LL

Pizza Inn 9
Thompson Ins. 0

WINTERVILLE — Bronswell Patrick hurled a no-hitter at Thompson Insurance Friday night in the Winterville Little League as Pizza Inn gained a 9-0 triumph.

Patrick, who struck out 16 in the game, put Pizza Inn into the lead in the first frame with a solo home run. Pizza Inn added two more in the third as both Patrick and Joe Delouch homered. Six more runs crossed in the fourth.

Stacey Hodges, Delouch, Patrick and Scott Hudson each had two hits to lead Pizza Inn's hitting.

Edwards Auto..... 31
Sunshine GC..... 0

WINTERVILLE — Edwards Auto got a two-hitter from Brian Bullock as it romped to a 31-0 victory over Sunshine Garden Center Friday in the Winterville Little League.

Bullock struck out 11 on the way to the shutout victory.

Edwards scored 20 runs in the first inning to put the game well out of reach, adding five in the second and six in the third. Andy Tetterton homered in the third.

Kevin Vines and Ronald Wilder each had four hits to pace the Edwards attack.

Borg Does Not Miss Playing

PARIS (AP) — "I don't miss playing tennis one bit," said Bjorn Borg.

The retired star is working as a television commentator at the French Open, the event he won six times.

"I am enjoying watching the tennis," Borg said. "I am enjoying my new job. But I have no desire to be down there joining in.

"That's how I feel now. Some time in the next year or two it may be different. In fact I know that sometime I am going to feel the itch to play again," he said. "But I won't come back. I will not want the hard work of training for it."

Borg, 27 this Monday, played his last tournament at Monte Carlo in April.

As a commentator, his first big job was on the French Open semifinals Friday. He watched Mats Wilander, an 18-year-old Swede, advance to the final, where he will defend his title against France's Yannick Noah.

"There are so many good young Swedish players now," Borg said. "It was not the case when I was playing. I feel very proud seeing their successes now, because I think I had a little bit to do with it."

Besides Wilander, Swedish players who have made a good impression in the current tournament are Henrik Sundstrom, 19, Joachim Nystrom, 20, Magnus Tideman, 20, Thomas Hostedt, 19, and Anders Jarryd, 22.

Borg reached the quarterfinals of the French Open when he was 16 before losing, but never lost again at Roland Garros stadium. He won the title in 1974, 1975, and from 1978 to 1981 straight.

But when he was asked to name his greatest memory of Roland Garros, he thought for a few seconds and replied: "Meeting Mariana here in 1976."

GOLF WORLD SERIES

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The World Series of Golf, scheduled to be played on the Firestone Country Club Course Aug. 25-28, will have a larger starting field this year and a larger purse.

Every winner of a PGA tour event, starting with last year's World Series and running through this summer's Greater Hartford Open, will be eligible.

Murphy Sparks Atlanta Victory

By The Associated Press

Dale Murphy was on the ball for the Atlanta Braves, both at the plate and in the field.

The Atlanta outfielder not only knocked in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly Friday night, but also turned in the game's defensive gem with a diving catch that preserved a 5-3 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I wouldn't call it exceptional, but there is a lot of chance involved when you dive," Murphy said after his extraordinary catch in the seventh inning with two out and the bases loaded.

St. Louis had put two runners on base to chase Rick Camp and Steve Bedrosian fanned the next two batters before issuing a walk to load the bases. Tom Herr then blooped a ball to center and Murphy left his feet and managed to catch the ball in the webbing of his glove.

"There was not much danger of that ball getting by me," Murphy said. "If it had fallen in, two runs would have scored, and if I had missed it two runs would have scored."

In other National League action, it was Chicago 9, Pittsburgh 3; Cincinnati 3, Houston 1; San Diego 8, Philadelphia 5; Montreal 9, San Francisco 2 and New York 5, Los Angeles 2.

Murphy's sacrifice fly came in the first inning after Claudell Washington doubled and Glenn Hubbard sacrificed. Murphy had an RBI single in the third when the Braves scored their other four runs. Bob Horner had an RBI double, Terry Harper drove in a run with an infield grounder and Chris Chambliss singled in the final run.

It was Atlanta's fifth victory in a row over the Cardinals, who swept the Braves in the National League playoffs last season.

Cubs 9, Pirates 3

Larry Bowa hit a bases-loaded triple and Bill Buckner slugged a three-run homer in an eight-run seventh inning to lead Chicago over Pittsburgh.

The Cubs entered the seventh trailing 3-0, but loaded the bases against Pittsburgh starter Larry McWilliams. Reliever Rod Scurry, 2-3, walked Jody Davis, scoring Ron Cey. Bowa then cleared the bases and raced home when Pirate shortstop Dale Berra overthrew the plate for a 5-3 Chicago lead.

One out later, Mel Hall walked and Ryne Sandberg beat out a single off Kent Tekulve before Buckner hit his fifth homer of the season. The eight runs were the most by the Cubs in a single inning this season.

Dick Ruthven, 3-4, benefited from the outburst.

"I knew I hit it good," said Bowa of his triple. "At first I thought it would be a sacrifice and pull us within one (run). I fouled off four straight curves before I got the fastball."

Reds 3, Astros 1

Dann Bilardello stroked three hits, including a pair of doubles, and drove in two runs and Joe Price pitched a four-hitter as Cincinnati beat Houston.

Bilardello doubled in the second and fourth innings, driving in a run each time, to help Price record his third straight victory. Price, 4-2, struck out six and walked four en route to his third complete game.

"That's the first time I've faced any kind of knuckleball pitcher," Bilardello said of loser Joe Niekro, 3-5. "Before the game I asked Ted (Kluszewski, Reds batting instructor) how you hit a knuckleball. He said you just try to hit it back up the middle."

Padres 8, Phillies 5

Pinch-hitter Kurt Bevacqua keyed a three-run eighth inning with a one-out, bases-loaded single, leading San Diego over Philadelphia.

After Ed Farmer, 0-3, loaded the bases, Bevacqua singled home the tie-breaking off reliever Tug McGraw. Six-to Lezcano followed with a sacrifice fly to make it 7-5 and Luis Salazar came in to score the final run of the inning when right fielder Pete Rose's throw got by catcher Bo Diaz for an error on the Phillies' backstop.

Gary Lucas, 2-3, worked the final 1 2-3 innings to get credit for the victory.

Expos 9, Giants 2

Al Oliver and Warren Cromartie drove in three runs apiece, and Andre Dawson had two RBI, leading Montreal over San Francisco.

Bill Gullickson, 5-6, went the distance, yielding eight hits, striking out seven and walking only one for the victory.

The first five Montreal runs were off Giants starter Mike Krukow, 3-3. Oliver had a two-run double in the first inning, Andre Dawson homered in the third, and Cromartie hit a two-run homer in the sixth.

Mets 5, Dodgers 2

Bob Bailor, who didn't enter the game until the sixth inning, singled twice, drove in two runs and stole two bases to support the seven-hit pitching of Ed Lynch and Doug Sisk as New York snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating Los Angeles.

The victory enabled Frank Howard to make a successful debut as the Mets' new manager. It was announced prior to the game that George Bamberger was stepping down and that Howard would take over the reins.

The Dodgers helped the Mets with three errors as only two of the New York runs were earned.

"Five runs, 12 hits and no errors makes for a good combination," Howard said. "It makes me look awfully smart."

Texas Rolls Past Dukes; Ok. State Tops Stanford

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Texas center fielder Mike Trent tried to hide after tying a College World Series record Friday night and Longhorn pitcher Calvin Schiraldi said two of his three pitches weren't working in his five-hit shutout in first-round play of the NCAA baseball championships here.

The top-ranked Texans ripped first-time CWS entrant James Madison 12-0 to advance to Monday's 7:10 p.m. CDT winners bracket semifinal against No. 3-ranked Oklahoma State, a 3-1 victor over second-ranked Stanford in Friday night's other first-round game.

James Madison and Stanford play Sunday at 5:10 p.m. in an elimination game.

Trent scored four runs on three bunt singles and a walk to tie 13 others for the single game scoring record in CWS action. He came close to breaking the record in an eight-run eighth when he raced home from first on a ground-rule double by Bryan Burrows. The umpires made him return to third base.

"I didn't see the ball Bryan hit. I went on and scored and hid in the dugout until they called me back," said Trent. "I was hoping they wouldn't see."

Schiraldi, 13-3, struck out five but claimed his forkball didn't work and that his fastball had no zip.

"My fastball wasn't overpowering and my slider kept me in the game all night," Schiraldi said. "I wasn't thinking about a shutout, I just wanted to have a good outing after that one I had during the regionals (eight walks in a loss to Mississippi State)."

The 62-14 Longhorns then sent 13 batters to the plate in an eight-run eighth. Trent, Jeff Hearron and Steve Labay picked up their third hits of the game in the big inning.

"After we fell behind 4-0, I just wanted to stay away from the big inning — but we didn't," said James Madison Coach Brad Babcock. "We never made a threat."

The loss dropped James Madison, 37-12, into Sunday's losers bracket contest at 5:10 p.m. CDT against Stanford, 40-16-1.

In the nightcap, Oklahoma State, 47-14, used an unlikely home run hitter in its power-hitting lineup to down Stanford.

Leadoff hitter Tim Knapp lined a shot over the right field fence with Gary Green on first to give Oklahoma State a 2-1 lead in the fifth inning.

"As far as I'm concerned, my main priority is to get on base so the guys behind me have somebody to hit in," said Knapp, who also doubled in the game.

Freshman designated hitter Peter Incaviglia added an insurance run with his 22nd homer of the season for Oklahoma State in the seventh inning.

The Cowboys came into the tournament with more home runs (86) than any club in the eight-team field. Second with 79 was Stanford, who also picked up its lone run off Oklahoma State pitchers Dennis Livingston and Gary Kanwisher with Eric Hardgrave's solo shot in the second inning.

Trio Fires Goose-Eggs At American Loop Foes

By The Associated Press

Matt Young, Jerry Koosman and Ken Forsch were firing blanks — but each had a big gun backing him up.

Young, a rookie left-hander for the Seattle Mariners, held New York hitless for 5 2-3 innings Friday night and finished with a two-hit, 5-0 victory over the Yankees. His big gun was Ricky Nelson, another rookie, who slugged a three-run homer.

Koosman, a 40-year-old, 15-season veteran, twirled a three-hitter for Chicago and rookie Ron Kittle hit his 13th home run of the season as the White Sox defeated Kansas City 2-0.

And Forsch, a 36-year-old, 12-season major-leaguer, scattered six hits and rode Fred Lynn's decisive homer to a 3-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston beat Minnesota 6-3, Detroit demolished Texas 12-1 and Baltimore trimmed Toronto 3-2. Oakland's game at Cleveland was rained out.

When Young took the mound in Yankee Stadium for the first time, he began thinking about the Yankees — Ruth, DiMaggio, Mantle ...

"It's an awesome place," he said. "I just stood out there and looked at the double and triple decks, wondering who hit the ball where. This place has such a great sense of tradition."

Nobody hit the ball anywhere safely of him until Ken Griffey doubled to left in the sixth inning. The only other New York hit was Lou Piniella's seventh-inning single.

Meanwhile, Nelson hit the ball where Ruth, DiMaggio and all the other greats hit it — over the wall in the third inning off Jay Howell.

"I didnt know it was out until I rounded second base," Nelson said. "I didn't really think I hit it that well."

Nelson made the jump from Class A ball last year. "I was excited to get called up so soon," he said. "Kent Hrbek (of Minnesota) did it last year and I'm hoping I can do it this year."

White Sox 2, Royals 0

Koosman is no kid — and he says he's smart enough not to act like one. "I lift weights in the winter and don't try to keep up with the young guys," he said after pitching his first complete game of the season and 31st shutout of his career in his third start this season. He's 4-0 this year.

"I enjoy the starting rotation more than the bullpen and

Tough Tackle

USFL Roundup

Big Play Wins For Gold, 24-12

DENVER (AP) — One of the first observations Craig Morton made after becoming a head coach in the United States Football League was the inordinate amount of blitzing done by defenses in an apparent attempt to cover up weaknesses.

Teams blitz to create confusion on the part of the opposition, or to make a big play that stops a drive or swings the momentum. But if the blitz fails, it can trigger a big play by the offense.

It was on such a play that the Denver Gold put away the Washington Federals Friday night.

Larry Canada burst 24 yards up the middle for his second touchdown of the final quarter as the Gold rolled past the Federals 24-12.

"The last play that we scored on they tried to blitz," said Morton. "Our offensive line picked it up and split the middle, and Larry made a great run."

Canada finished with 115 yards on 16 carries, becoming the first Denver Gold running back to top 100 yards in a game.

"I was surprised to hear I'd gotten 100," said the 225-pound Canada. "I just do my job, and it isn't to run for 100-yard games."

Morton, now 2-0 as a coach, said he was "happy we're winning. We accomplished an awful lot tonight. Our defense keeps on playing well, and we moved the ball well on offense. We just had a little trouble."

By "trouble" Morton meant dropped balls by his receivers. Fred Mortensen and Craig Penrose, who shared the quarterback duties for Denver, were victimized by at least a half dozen dropped balls.

"Do they allow stickum in this league?" asked Morton. "We need a couple of cases ... no, a couple of barrels. Our receivers had a tough time, but that happens."

The Gold converted two Washington turnovers into 10 points en route to a 17-6 lead midway through the final quarter. The second turnover, a fumble by receiver Jeff Postell, gave Denver possession at the Federal 16, and Canada scored three plays later.

The victory raised Denver's record to 6-8 and moved the Gold within a half game of first place in the Pacific Division. Washington suffered its 10th straight loss and fell to 1-13.

"I can never complain about our guys' effort," said losing Coach Ray Jauch. "Our quarterback got hurt and our wide receivers were decimated, but we kept battling."

Quarterback Mike Hohensee went down with a knee injury in the first half, and Kim McQuilken played the second half, completing 22 of 28 passes. "Kim moved the ball well, but we could not get it in the end zone," said Jauch. The extent of Hohensee's injury wasn't immediately known.

In Saturday's only game, the Oakland Invaders are hoping that Herschel Walker's presence with the New Jersey Generals will help lift their sagging attendance. Oakland has drawn under 30,000 in its last four home games.

But there's more at stake than that — Oakland, 6-7, was trying to hold on to at least a share of the lead in the division, where all four teams are under .500.

Walker was coming off a league record 194 yards rushing against Washington last week as the Generals improved their record to 4-9. But it still took a 50-yard field goal by Dave Betz in the final second to subdue the Federals.

"It'll be fun to see a great back like Walker," says Oakland Coach John Ralston. "I expect we'll have a great crowd, maybe the largest since the home opener."

Sunday's feature game will pit the Michigan Panthers, who have won seven of their last eight games, against the Philadelphia Stars, who will be trying for the second straight game to clinch the Atlantic Division title.

The Stars, 11-2, were denied the title last week when the Boston Breakers scored on a last-second deflected pass to beat the Stars 21-17.

Michigan, 8-5, routed Tampa Bay 43-7 and is a game behind the Bandits and the Chicago Blitz in the tight Central Division race.

Tampa Bay, meanwhile, will be trying to bounce back as it hosts the Birmingham Stallions. Birmingham, 7-6, is two games out of first and could make the race a four-way struggle by winning.

Tampa may get some action from Jimmy Jordan, who replaced the injured John Reaves, then was injured himself after three good games. Mike Kelley has quarterbacked the last two games for the Bandits.

In the third Sunday game, the Arizona Wranglers, 4-9, will visit the 6-7 Los Angeles Express, who are tied with Oakland for first in the Pacific.

On Monday night, the Chicago Blitz, 9-4, visit Boston, 8-5.

A BIG WINNER

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Ralph Raymond of Worcester just may be the winningest manager of all time, no matter what the sport.

He manages the Raybesto Brakettes of Stratford, Conn., who have won 11 national women's softball championships in 15 attempts.

Bush Beats Sundown To Set New Women's Mark

HOUSTON (AP) — Michele Bush ran to beat sundown in the finals of the women's 1500 meters at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

She won.

Bush, a UCLA senior, is a devout member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, which does not permit her to participate in non-religious activities from sundown Friday to sundown Saturday each week.

Bush, whose race started at 8:10 p.m. Friday, barely beat sundown at 8:17 p.m. but ran away from the field to establish an NCAA meet record four minutes, 14.48 seconds that gave the Bruins a big boost in their bid to repeat their national women's championship.

Buoyed by Bush's record, UCLA took the team lead by a 57-47 margin over second place Florida State. Stanford was third followed by Nebraska with 43 23 and Tennessee, 38.

"I've told her for three weeks she could win it," UCLA women's coach Scott Chisam said. "She's not noted for her kick but she fooled the three people she went around to win the race."

Bush's record was one of nine meet records broken in Friday night's finals. Florida State's 1,600 meter victory also establishd a collegiate record.

Southern Methodist took a narrow 47-46 lead in team points over Alabama in the men's division with an unexpected 48.88 victory by Sven Nylander in the 400 meter hurdles.

Texas-El Paso was in third place with 40 12 points followed by Oregon and meet favorite Washington State, 40 each, Tennessee, 36, Brigham Young, 35, and Indiana 27.

Dean Crouser of Oregon, the defending champion in the shot put and discus, broke his own meet record with a toss of 216 feet, two inches to win the discus.

Crouser was to go against SMU's Michael Cater in Saturday night's shot put finals. Carter is unbeaten in the shot put this season.

In other meet record men's performances, Oregon's Joaquin Cruz won the 800 meters in 1:44.91, SMU's Robert Weir took the hammer throw in 244-2 and Arkansas' Michael Conley established a long jump record despite finishing second in the event.

Ralph Spry of Missssippi won the long jump with a wind-aided 27-5 14 and Conley placed second with a record-breaking jump with the wind in legal range.

Other women's meet records were: Sanford's Alison Wiley, 9:03.51 in the 3000 meter run; Judi Brown of Michigan State, 56.44 in the 400 meter hurdles; Carold Cady, Stanford, 56-0 in the shot put and Florida State's team of Randy Givens, Ovrill Dwyer-own, Angela Wright and Marita Payne with a 3:28.46 in the 1,600 meter relay.

Tennessee's Willie Gault anchored the Vols to a 39.22 victory in the men's 400 meter relay Friday and was to try to add titles in the 110 meter hurdles and 100 meter dash Saturday night.

St. Louis Blues Turned Over To Hockey League

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Ralston Purina Co. has decided to let the National Hockey League do whatever it wants with the St. Louis Blues, except force the company to operate the team.

The company Friday "tendered" the Blues to the NHL to operate, sell, or "otherwise dispose of" in whatever manner the league desires. Ralston Purina said it will not operate the franchise next season.

The league's Board of Governors May 18 rejected the sale of the Blues to a Saskatoon, Saskatchewan group which planned to move the team tot Canada in time for next season.

Ralston Purina responded to that decision by filing suit against the NHL, seeking $60 million in damages. A company spokesman said the lawsuit is not affected by Friday's actions.

The Board of Governors is scheduled to meet Tuesday in Montreal and a decision about the future of the Blues could come at that meeting. No league officials would comment on the situation Friday.

Harold Ballard, the owner and president of the Toronto Maple Leafs, suggested last week the NHL buy the team for $11 million and operate it until a buyer could be found who would agree to keep the team in St. Louis.

Other options that have been discussed include the merger of the Blues with another team or disbanding the team and holding a dispersal draft of the St. Louis players.

In a news release, the company said the Blues' franchise was tendered to the league because the NHL "has demonstrated it effectively controls the franchise by improper rejection of the company's attempt to sell the team."

"Under the circumstances, the company believes it is in the best interest of all concerned for the NHL to find a permanent solution by either operating, selling, liquidating, or otherwise disposing of the franchise."

Trio Fires...

I've progressed with each start," he said, "but I'm still not where I want to be. A pitcher strives to get all his pitches over. I guess that's perfection but that's where I want to be."

Kittle's homer came in the fifth inning. By then, Koosman had the only run he needed, thanks to Greg Luzinski's 1,000th career RBI on a first-inning single which followed Carlton Fisk's single and a walk to Harold Baines.

Angels 3, Brewers 1

Forsch hadn't won a game in six weeks — his longest dry spell in 10 years — before stifling Milwaukee. "The main thing on my mind was not to get discouraged and not give in to anything," he said.

He toyed with the Brewers' sluggers, nibbling on the corners of the plate all night. "You can't come in with anything with that lineup because it's too awesome," Forsch said. "You've got to rely on them swinging at some bad pitches."

Lynn's 10th homer of the year came off Don Sutton in the second inning, then the Angels added two runs in the eighth on Reggie Jackson's single.

Red Sox 6, Twins 3

Dennis Boyd of Boston wasn't as stingy with the hits and runs as Young, Koosman and Forsch, but he pitched well in his first start of the season. It gave the kid nicknamed "Oil Can" his first major-league win.

"This is just the kind of thing I wanted to do, pitch under pressure and show I could respond," said Boyd, recalled last Tuesday from the Red Sox' Pawtucket farm team in the International League. He scattered seven Minnesota hits and allowed two runs before being relieved in the seventh inning.

"He's won everywhere he's been," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "Now all he needs is experience."

Tigers 12, Rangers 1

Enos Cabell went 4-for-6, driving in three runs with three doubles, to pace Detroit's 18-hit Detroit assault against the Rangers.

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 2

John Shelby of Baltimore took a 3-2 pitch for ball four in the bottom of the ninth inning, a bases-loaded walk by Joey McLaughlin that gave the Orioles their victory over Toronto.

Rick Dempsey and Aurelio Rodriguez singled and, with runners on first and third, Al Bumbry was walked intentionally before Shelby drew his game-winning pass.

Bamberger's Had Enough Of The Mets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When New York Mets general manager Frank Cashen asked George Bamberger to come out of retirement in 1981, the veteran manager "just couldn't say no."

This week, as the National League club struggled with the worst record in baseball, Bamberger called up Cashen and finally said no.

Bamberger, who managed Milwaukee to winning records in the late 1970s and retired in 1980 after heart bypass surgery, announced just before Friday night's game against the Dodgers that he was going back into retirement.

The Mets downed Los Angeles 5-2 to give newly appointed manager Frank Howard — who was New York's first-base coach — his first victory and raise New York's record to 17-30.

Speaking softly in the Mets locker room, Bamberger said he had not been the manager he wanted to be, nor used to be.

"I thought I was going to do a better job than I've done here," he said. "A manager has to suffer and I don't want to suffer."

Bamberger, 57, said his heart wasn't the reason for stepping down, but that preserving his health was a factor.

"I feel physically fine," he said. "Everybody knows I've had a heart problem ... that has nothing to do with it. But I don't want another one.

"Every night we played poorly, I slept, and I figured out I slept because I was physically tired."

Cashen said the resignation left him with "very, very mixed emotions."

He said Bamberger had asked in May to be relieved of the job, but had stayed on. Cashen said Bamberger called him Thursday with the final decision.

"He said 'Frank, I made up my mind, I've gotta get out.'" Cashen said.

"I think he just got to a point where he doesn't need all this anymore," said Cashen.

Howard, 47, who posted a 41-69 record while managing the San Diego Padres during the strike-shortened 1981 season, said he had spent the last 10 days trying to convince Bamberger to "hang tough and make a decision at the end of the year." But, he agreed with Bamberger that the worries of managing are "bound to eat at you."

Bamberger was managing the Mets on a one-year contract reportedly calling for more than $400,000, making him the second highest-paid manager in baseball behind Billy Martin of the New York Yankees.

He managed the Milwaukee Brewers to a third place finish with a 93-69 record in 1978, and in 1979 the Brewers finished in second with a 95-66 record.

He missed part of the 1980 season for the surgery, and then retired after the season to his home in Tampa, Fla.

But he was coaxed out of retirement before the 1982 season by Cashen, who was general manager of the Baltimore Orioles when Bamberger served as pitching coach. He replaced Joe Torre, who went on to lead the Atlanta Braves to first place in the National League West.

But under Bamberger the Mets could only manage a 67-95 record last year.

He called the year "a season filled with disappointment and frustration."

On Friday, Bamberger was optimistic about the team.

"This is going to be a great organization in a couple of years," he said, "but it's going to have to struggle at it. I don't want to go through the trouble."

Howard was one of baseball's most feared sluggers during a 15-year career with the Los Angeles Dodgers, Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers. He had a lifetime average of .273 with 382 home runs and 1,119 runs batted in.

He served as a coach under Bamberger in Milwaukee before taking the managerial job in San Diego, then became a coach with the Mets last year when Bamberger was hired.

Howard said the Mets needed better production from some of its veteran players, adding: "There's no question we've got some holes to fill. I'd be lying to you if I said otherwise."

Waltrip Races To Bud 400 Pole

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Defending Winston Cup Grand National Champion Darrell Waltrip set a track record Friday of 116.421 mph to take the pole position for Sunday's Budweiser 400 klilometer stock car race at Riverside International Raceway.

Waltrip's Chevrolet was the last of three cars to break the 114.995 mph record he set in November 1982. The others were Tim Richmond, 115.925 in a Pontiac, and Tery Labonte, 115.003 in a Chevrolet.

Riverside is a 2.62-mile track with nine turns and this is the only Grand National road race.

It was the second pole position this year for the 36-year-old Franklin, Tenn., resident.

Qualifying was delayed briefly when a Buick driven by Mark Perry of Sylmar, Calif., crashed into the wall in turn No. 6. Perry was not injured.

Only the first 20 grid positions were filled Friday. Final qualifying will be held Saturday.

"I can't believe the little change in tires and paving could make that much difference, but they did," Waltrip said.

Portions of the track in the eighth turn were repaved last week.

Waltrip, who began his two-lap qualifying run about 4:15 p.m., said, "It was an ideal time to run... not hot but perfect conditions."

Asked about his engine after the qualifying run, he said, "I wouldn't even want to drive this one around the track one more lap."

Richmond replied after his crew told him his time, "You're kidding. It didn't feel that fast. We've had an oiling problem all day and we'd had only two laps on the track and they weren't fast. We ran them just to see how much smoke we could blow out."

ACCOUNT EXECUTIVE

Robert Bradley Troutman has become an account executive with Wheat, First Securities, according to James W.A. Black, branch manager in Greenville.

Troutman, who is from West Jefferson, was formerly associated with McDaniel Lewis & Co., a stock brokerage firm in Greensboro. A 1981 graduate of N.C. State University, he will reside in Winterville.

The Greenville office is one of 16 in North Carolina.

STOCK DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Hampton Industries Inc. announced the declaration of a 10 percent stock dividend on common shares payable July 15 to all stockholders of record on June 23.

The company said cash will be paid in lieu of fractional shares based on the last sale of common stock on the American Stock Exchange on the record date.

Prepshirt Inc. of Greenville is a division of Hampton Industries.

NEW POSITION

Hallow Window and Door Co., Greenville, announced the association of Tommie Little with the firm, effective June 1.

The company said Little will have total marketing responsibility as general sales manager and will coordinate sales activity now being promoted in Greenville, Jacksonville, Wilmington, and the Tidewarter area. The firm said it has marketing plans for Virginia, the Carolinas, and northern Georgia.

Little has been involved in the construction and developing business for the past 20 years, specializing in sales and marketing.

PCE MEETING SET

The Coastal Plains Chapter of Professional Construction Estimators will have its monthly meeting Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at Willow Springs Country Club in Wilson.

NAREA CERTIFICATION

The National Association of Real Estate Appraisers announced the certification of Steve J. Evans, president-owner of Steve Evans & Associates, a real estate, insurance and investments firm located at 130 E. Greenville Blvd.

Evans is a member of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors and the state and national Realtors associations. He is a graduate of the Realtors Institute, where he earned his G.R.I. designation.

MANAGEMENT SESSION

Tommy J. Williams, manager of the BarclaysAmerican/Financial branch office in Greenville, attended the BarclaysAmerican national management meeting recently in Charlotte.

The corporation, a division of BarclaysAmericanCorp., said its managers from all areas of the United States were present to review divisional and corporate management strategies.

AGENTS' SCHOOL

Robert Edwards, who represents Home Security Life Insurance Co. in Greenville through its New Bern district office, recently attended a school for new agents at the company's Durham offices.

A combination life insurance company, Home Security Life has policyholders in 27 districts in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The firm said it has $3.3 billion of life insurance in force and $237.1 million in assets.

REVENUES DECREASED

Stewart Sandwiches Inc. reported revenues for the nine months ended March 25 of $35,402,557, a decrease of 9.8 percent compared with the same period a year ago. Net income for the period was $21,073 compared with $340,231 in 1982.

Operations in the third quarter resulted in revenues of $10,491,949 and a net loss for the quarter of $180,231, the company reported.

Stewart has an office in Greenville.

SALES INCREASED

Jack Eckerd Corp. reported that its sales for the third quarter were $590.6 million, up 12.6 percent from sales of $524.3 million last year. Net earnings were $16.5 million, up 9.4 percent over $15.1 million a year earlier.

Sales for the nine-month period ended April 30 were $1.749 billion, an increase of 10.7 percent over $1.58 billion the previous year. Net earnings decreased 1.2 percent from $57.9 million to $57.2 million.

Eckerd Drug Co., the principal subsidiary, had record sales in the third quarter of $519.7 million, up from $464.6 million last year. Nine month totals were $1.505 billion compared with $1.377 billion a year earlier.

NEW FIRM OPENS

Creative Marketing Concepts, a new Washington, N.C. based consulting firm, opened Wednesday, according to owner R. Blount Modlin Jr., who said the business plans to open offices in Greenville in early 1984.

Modlin said the firm will offer consulting services in all phases of advertising, marketing and public relations, primarily media planning, selection and testing.

He said the business offers over five years experience in the selection and use of all advertising media.

BANKS TO MERGE

The merger of City National Bank of Charlotte into Branch Banking and Trust Co. becomes effective Monday, BB&T announced.

Branch Banking was established in Wilson in 1872 and still maintains its home office there. City National Bank was formed in Charlotte in 1920 and operated five offices there prior to the merger.

As of March 31, BB&T had total resources of approximately $1.41 billion while City National had $76,987,000 in total assets. The merger brings BB&T's total offices to 123 in 64 North Carolina cities and towns.

RECORD VOLUME

Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. reported $115,180,000 in volume of new life insurance written by its agents during May, an all-time company record.

Sherrill G. Hall, vice president-marketing, said May marked the first month in the 76-year history of the company in which submitted new business has exceeded the $100 million mark.

He said the company's previous record volume month was $87,259,000 reported for April 1978.

MORE PRODUCTION

Conner Homes Corp., with home offices and manufacturing facilities in Newport, announced plans to increase the production of manufactured homes at the Newport complex.

Wallace J. Conner, president, said the additional production will be achieved by starting a second shift operation in the company's original plant. He said the move will provide two shifts operating in both plants, working six days a week. The newest shift, he said, will initially provide 90 new jobs and increase production approximately 25 percent.

FIGURES ROSE

Heilig-Meyers Co., in its annual report to stockholders, said that net earnings for the year ended March 31 increased by 20 percent to $6,807,000 from $5,671,000 last year.

Hyman Meyers, board chairman, said that revenues for the year increased by 8.5 percent to $114.6 million compared to $105.5 million the previous year.

Meyers said that during the year, dividends were increased to 46 cents per share compared to 35 cents a year earlier.

Loss Of Job Leads To Career Change

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

George Hood is an old hand at unemployment and out of that experience he has assisted many in becoming employed.

The Raleigh man was the organizer of the 40-Plus support group for unemployed persons in Raleigh and has been instrumental in helping groups other places get started. If there is sufficient interest, Mental Health Association executive director Brenda Gray has expressed the hope of bringing him to Greenville to help a 40-Plus group get started here.

Hood was a 49-year-old personnel manager of a once prosperous international machinery-manufacturing firm in 1970 when his company went bankrupt. "I loved my job," he said, "and did it well. I loved the company. When it folded, I was shocked, I was angered, I was grieved.

"Gradually, though, I got into consulting work and began making a sufficient living — not as good as before, but sufficient — in my own consulting business. With a very supportive and gainfully employed wife, I was making it very well. Then one of my clients asked me to go to work full-time as the personnel manager of a large convenience store chain. I accepted for the security I thought it would provide. Six months later, the company reorganized and I was out again. Again, I was shocked, I was angered, I was grieved. By then I was older and I found myself depressed and unable to think for myself.

"Seeing my despair, a very good friend urged me to go to Washington, D.C., and find out all I could about the 40-Plus group there. I did and when I got back he urged me to start a Raleigh group."

His first step, he said, was to contact News and Observer columnist Dennis Rogers. The result of the Rogers' column on him and his intention was that 68 persons called and expressed interest in being part of the group. Most of them turned out for the first meeting.

"Ninety percent of the people who attend 40-Plus for any length of time get a job," he said. The group meets each Monday at 10 a.m. They aren't there to commiserate. They're there to look at what they need to do to get jobs and how they can assist each other. They learn about writing resumes and good self-presentation letters. They learn it takes selling themselves to get a job. They exchange information about what might be available in each other's fields. They back each other in the development of the positive mental attitude that is so necessary to convince an employer one is worth hiring. And they learn how to preare themselves for job interviews.

"Most of the 40-Plus groups around the country are only for professionals more than 40 years old," Hood said. "Ours in Raleigh is for everybody of all ages. We found when we started that a sewing machine operator or truck driver laid off is just as much in need of a job as anyone else. And age makes no difference either. Our policy has given us a good mix of people who can really assist one another."

He urges job hunters to look at themselves and their backgrounds realistically and know what their selling points are. "In a resume," he said, "you need to emphasize the things that will help you get the job. It's not the place for a true confessional."

Older seekers probably shouldn't list dates, he said. And a Ph.D. seeking a selling job probably should forget he or she has that degree.

"Overqualification scares employers," he said. "Once the job looks like it's yours, you can tell the prospective employer what you need to in order to feel you're being totally honest.

"The serious job seeker should treat the seeking itself like a job," he said. "It takes commitment. I've known people who spent 40 hours a week looking for a job. It paid off. Before long they had one. Those who became negative can give you all kinds of good reasons why they didn't succeed."

Forty-Plus is his volunteer activity. Hood also has an employment consulting business which, he said, in no way interferes with or feeds on 40-Plus. He does some personal counseling, but most of his time is spent leading job workshops around the state. He was in Greenville recently at the invitation of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County.

Cattle Prices Stage Recovery As Hogs, Frozen Pork Decline

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Cattle futures prices were higher and prices for hogs and frozen pork bellies were lower Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Live hog prices continued to collapse under pressure from uncertainty about the future of Wilson Foods Corp., the nation's largest processor of fresh pork, sources said.

The possibility that employ-ees of Wilson might vote to strike kept hogs under pressure throughout the session, said Robert Kuhn, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Merrill Lynch Futures, Inc.

It was announced after the close of trading that the employees had voted overwhelmingly to strike.

In addition, he said, wet weather over the weekend could prompt additional marketing of live hogs as farmers will be unable to perform field work.

Pork bellies also were under pressure.

Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shear-son American Express, said demand appears to be weak because grocers are reluctant to feature pork specials in the meat case while supply channels are in such an uncertain status.

Cattle futures were stronger throughout the session with cash prices on wholesale markets remaining firm, indicating good demand from grocers, said Kuhn.

Feeder cattle also were higher as ample rains in cattle regions have provided plenty of grass in pastures for cattle to feed on, Kuhn said.

Live cattle settled unchanged to .45 cent higher with the contract for delivery in June at 67.17 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .35 cent to .70 cent higher with August at 65.35 cents a pound; live hogs were unchanged to .50 cent lower with June at 46.95 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .05 cent higher to 1.42 cents lower with July at 59.60 cents a pound.

Wheat futures prices were lower, corn mixed and soybeans higher on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat prices came under pressure as the harvest of winter wheat in Texas started, said Richard Loewy, a grain analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities, Inc.

Continued cool, wet weather in the Midwest supported corn prices for delivery in the fall, Loewy said, as the final planting will be delayed.

But corn for delivery in July was under pressure despite limited cash sales because the cash price is nearing the level at which grain in the farmer held reserve will be eligible for release to the market, he added.

Wheat settled ½ cent to 2¾ cents lower with the contract for delivery in July at $3.46 a bushel; corn was ½ cent lower to 1 cent higher with July at $3.07¼ a bushel; oats were un-changed to 1 cent higher with July at $1.52¾ a bushel; and soybeans were 1¾ cents to 2½ cents higher with July at $6.18 a bushel.

Precious metals prices were narrowly mixed in quiet trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Silver halted a steep slide that saw the price drop $1 an ounce in midweek while gold was about unchanged.

Fear that the Federal Reserve might tighten interest rates continued to dominate the metals markets, said Len Al-pert, a metals analyst in New York with ContiCommodity Services, Inc.

Alpert noted, though, that the Federal Reserve's measure of the nation's basic money supply declined $400 million in the week elded May 25th, which was within the range expected by analysts.

He also said two broader measures of the money supply, known as M2 and M3, have remained within the growth targets set by the Fed even though growth of M1 has exceeded the targets in previous weeks.

The markets sharp reaction to M1 growth may have been overdone, he said.

But the increase in the Federal Funds rate, the interest charged for loans between member institutions of the fed, indicated earlier this week that the Fed had tightened, he said.

"Traders have been accustomed to seeing the Fed funds rate at or below the discount rate," Alpert said. The discount rate is, that charged for loans from the Fed and currently is 8½ percent while the Fed funds rate was over 9 percent earlier in the week.

Gold settled 20 cents to 40 cents higher with the contract for delivery in June at $412.40 a troy ounce; silver settled 2.8 cents to 3.4 cents higher with June at $11.947 a troy ounce.

Banks Funding College Loans

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina banks are funding educational loans for North Carolina students through College Foundation Inc., the central lender for North Carolina.

The North Carolina State Education Assistance Authority will provide the guarantee for loans under the North Carolina Insured Student Loan Program and North Carolina Plus Loan program.

Fed Saying 'No' To Tight Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board, pressed by the Reagan administration and Wall Street bankers to get tough with the nation's money supply, is responding directly in word and apparently in deed — No.

The gist of Fed Vice Chairman Preston Martin's comments last week before Congress was: Things are in hand, the economy is reviving, inflation is down, there's no need to panic.

A number of private analysts outside Wall Street agree.

They say they have seen no indication of new overt or behind-the-scenes money-control measures from the Federal Reserve. And they say that taking such measures could send interest rates climbing, thereby weakening the still-young recovery from the long recession.

The main recent complaint of Fed critics concerns the rapid growth in the amount of money held in cash and checking accounts — sometimes known as the basic money supply, or M1.

If the Federal Reserve allows monetary growth to keep spurting ahead, those critics contend, an oversupply will inevitably lead to a new surge in prices — erasing the inflation improvement the nation gained in the recession.

One of them, Lawrence Roos, former president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank, wrote in April that "some damage to the economic landscape has already occurred."

Because the Fed has allowed relatively rapid money growth over the past nine months, "some acceleration of inflation appears unavoidable for 1984," said Roos, who now works with the investment company Bear, Stearns & Co.

The M1 figure for the week ended May 25 declined slightly, the Federal Reserve said Friday, easing the pressure at least temporarily. But the issue is not one of a week or two.

Walter Wriston, chairman of the huge Citicorp, even made it a point to lead a group of businessmen to the White House earlier this year to ask the president to lobby the Federal Reserve to slow things down.

However, the Fed governors and their defenders have been holding their ground — though conceding that action may indeed have to be taken eventually.

Martin told Congress on Wednesday that growth in M1 apparently has been distorted by federal authorization of new types of accounts for depositors in banks and other financial institutions — a contention that Roos doesn't accept.

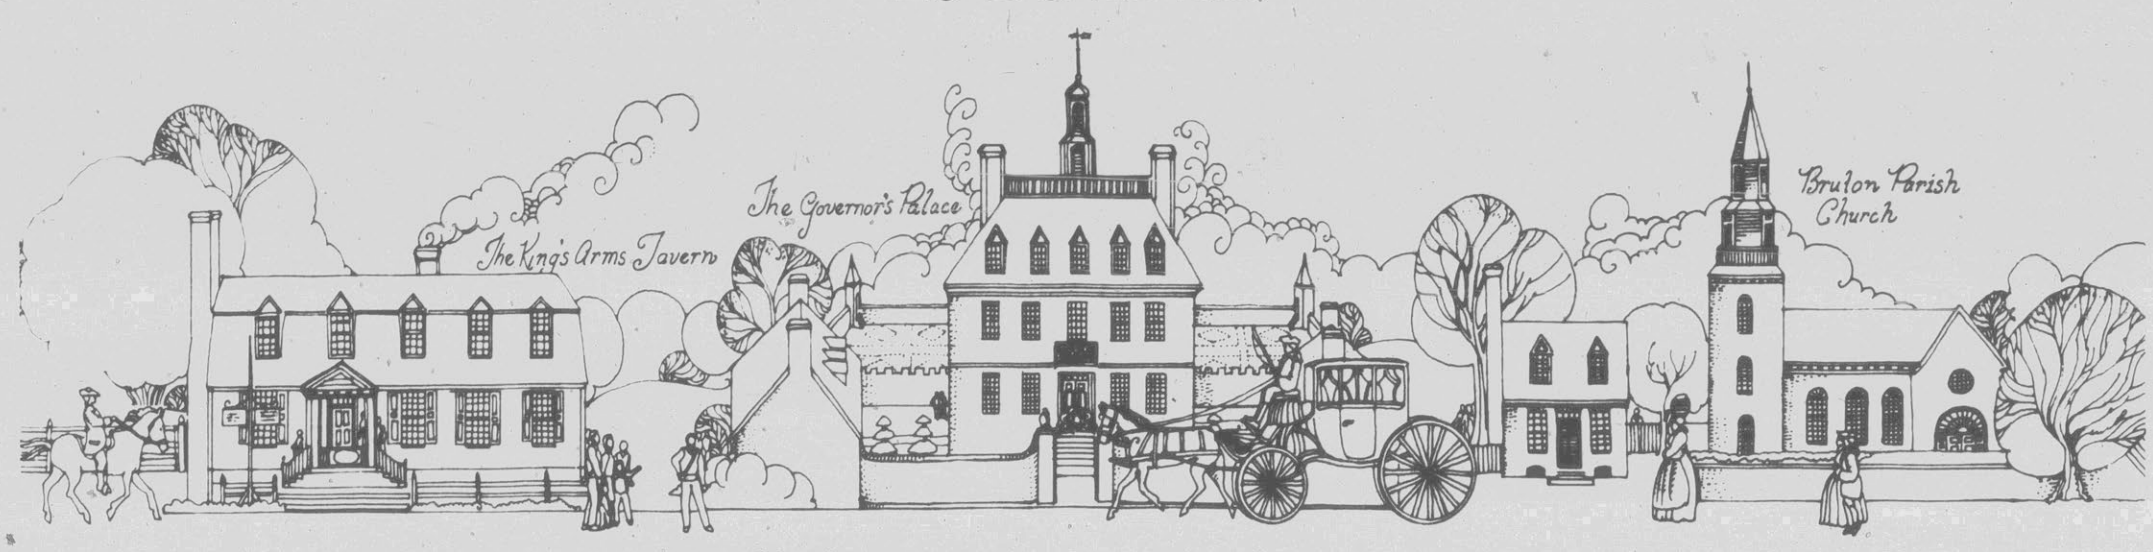
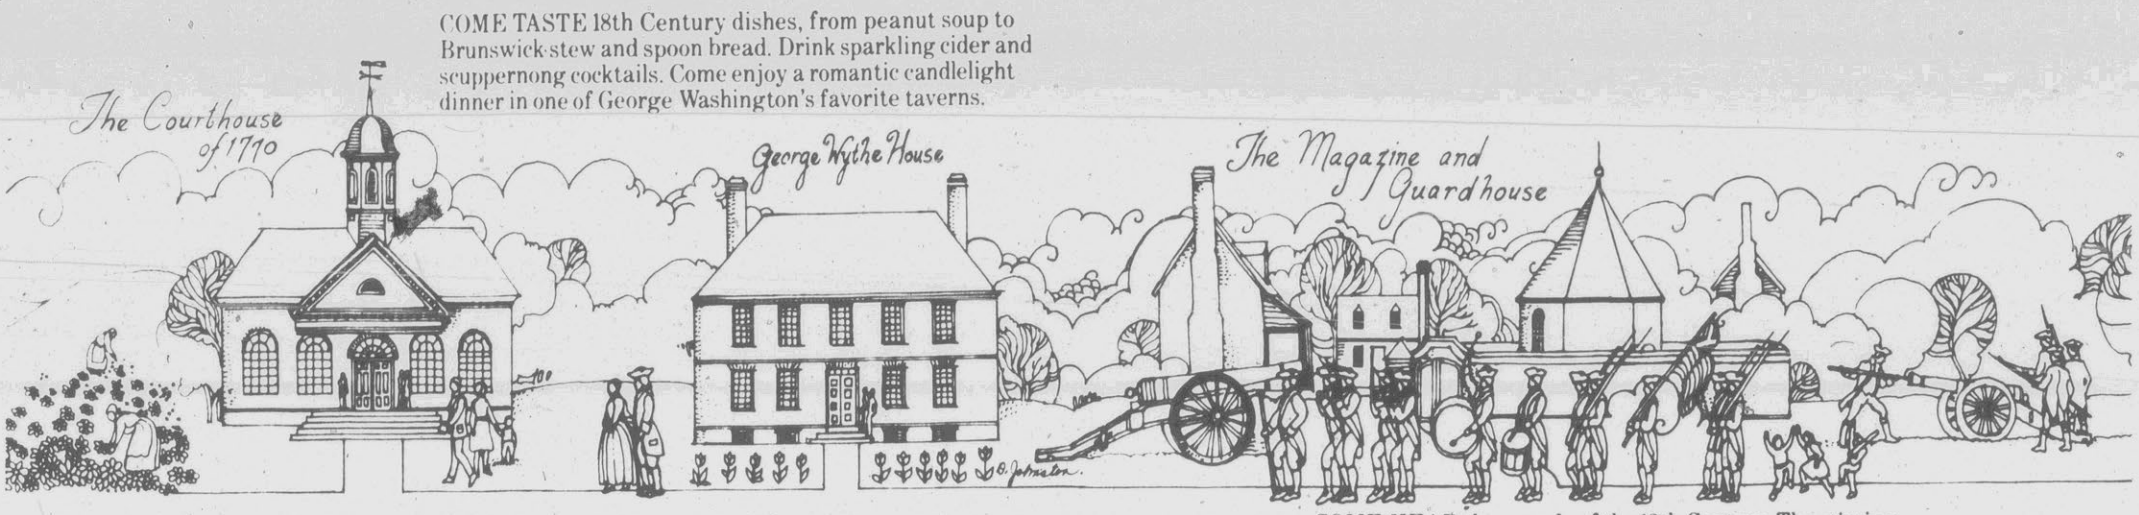
In 18th Century America life was different. It still is.



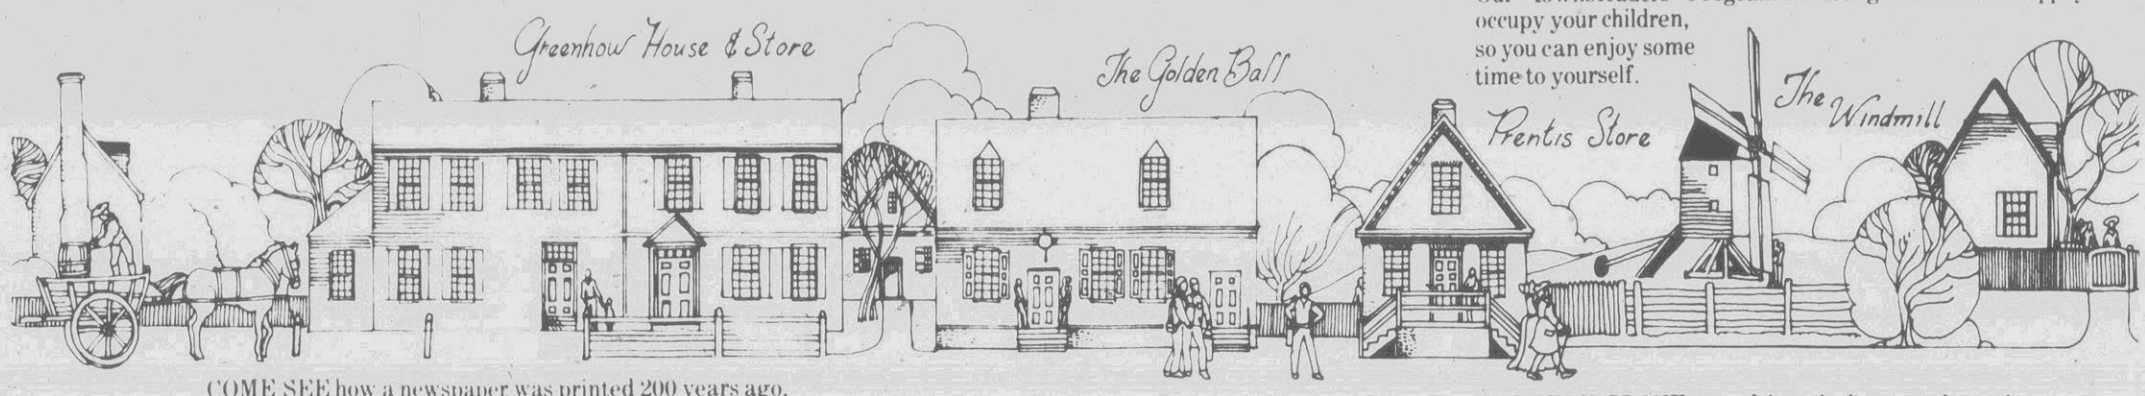
COME TASTE 18th Century dishes, from peanut soup to Brunswick stew and spoon bread. Drink sparkling cider and scuppernong cocktails. Come enjoy a romantic candlelight dinner in one of George Washington's favorite taverns.



COME HEAR the sounds of the 18th Century. The stirring Fife and Drum Corps parading down Duke of Gloucester Street. The gentle flourishes of a harpsichord. The crack of a flintlock musket. The ring of the blacksmith's hammer.

COME SMELL the aromas of an 18th Century kitchen with dishes being cooked on an open hearth. Come smell the Shrewsbury, oatmeal and gingerbread cakes as they come out of the brick oven at the Raleigh Tavern bakery.

COME TOUCH a friendly lamb and other barnyard animals. Our "Townsteaders" Program for Young Visitors will happily occupy your children, so you can enjoy some time to yourself.



COME SEE how a newspaper was printed 200 years ago, when only 100 copies could be printed a day. Come see candles, baskets, boots, and musical instruments being made.

If you've been searching for a different way to spend your vacation, travel to a different time—to Colonial Williamsburg, the historic Capital city of 18th Century Virginia.

Here, on 170 acres, are more than 500 restored and reconstructed homes, shops, taverns and government buildings. Eighty-eight of these are the original structures.

Hundreds of costumed townspeople re-create the daily life of this gracious 18th Century city. Come visit with them as they bring the past to life. As they make furniture by hand, weave fabrics, print books. See what it was like to be a gunsmith, a wheelwright, a blacksmith.

Come shop for 18th Century wares.

Come eat foods typical of the 18th Century. Colonial Williamsburg has 9 different restaurants.

Come drink and make merry in our 18th Century taverns.

Come walk in the paths of history. Great leaders met here. Great events were shaped here. And, appropriately, the 1983 International Economic Summit was held here.

How do you get to the 18th Century? Colonial Williamsburg is 45 minutes from Richmond or Norfolk, and 2½ hours from Washington, D.C.

Accommodations include the 5-Star Williamsburg Inn, the Williamsburg Lodge and the modern Motor House.

For reservations and information call toll-free 1-800-446-8956 (1-800-582-8976 in Virginia).

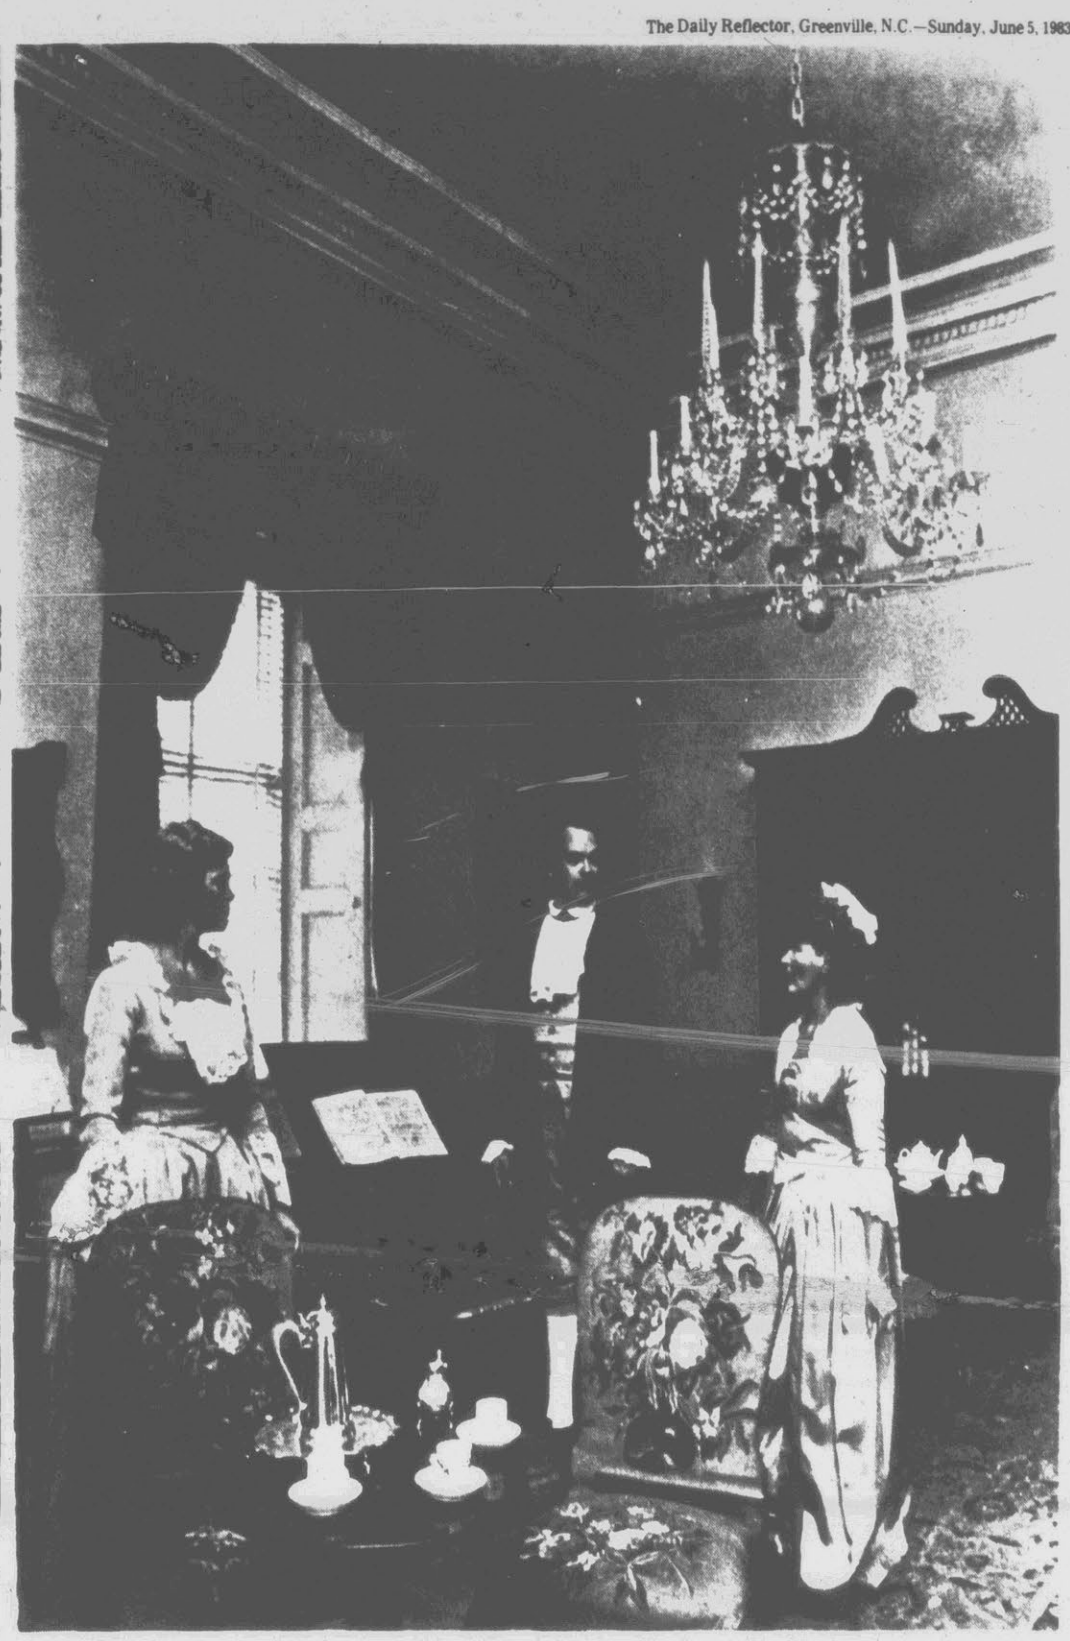
Holding hands in the Green Garden, Lord and Lady Tryon relax before the guests arrive. This garden is one of 10 in the Palace complex. The Tryons were an active couple traveling the cart roads to all the settlements. The Moravians were enthralled by Margaret Wake Tryon's performance on their organ - the first in the Province.



"They say she rules the roost" one of her contemporaries said of Margaret Wake Tryon played by Mary Hubbell. The Cherokee Indians named William Tryon, Great Wolf. Tryon is played by Steven Oien and the maid, Polly Partridge by Joan Tyson. The room is the parlor of the Tryon Palace.

The Rising Splendor

Tryon Palace in New Bern was the Royal Government Province House, colonial and first state capital of North Carolina. It has been restored and surrounding it are 10 English gardens.

Kermit Hunter, author of the outdoor dramas — Unto These Hills and Horn In The West — has written an indoor play staged within the Palace among the 18th century furnishings. The drama in nine scenes travels from room to room telling the story of a day — June 28, 1771.

Guests have been invited — William Tryon is departing with his wife, Margaret Wake, and his daughter, Margaret for New York where he will become Governor of that Crown Province.

Just a month ago, in May, 1771, crowds greeted Tryon, joyously, as he returned victorious from quelling an uprising of North Carolina settlers at Alamance. In these days of the colonial administration of William Tryon and the few years following, a new nation was born. Here are the beginnings.

Kermit Hunter's drama sequences give the guests — the audience — a look into the personal lives of a few individuals who played significant, and some not so significant, roles in North Carolina becoming a State.

It will play daily, except Mondays and Tuesdays, through August 21, 1983.

Roses blooming in the planting garden lure Mary Cornell played by Jenny Houtz of Elizabeth City. Mary lures Isaac Edwards, secretary to the governor. Gary Carter, Rocky Mount, is Edwards.

Statues of America, Asia, Europe and Africa grace the entry hall to the Palace. Here Irish maid Polly Partridge receives some education from her mistress and also probably a lesson in dusting. Margaret Wake Tryon was well known for her attention to neatness and cleanliness.

directed by Nancy Blades

Young Margaret Tryon frets over leaving her new home in North Carolina. She was only four when she accompanied her parents from London in 1764. A carefully protected child she had no one of her age or social class to play with. Brandy DeNayer of New Bern is one of two girls to play the 11-year old Margaret.

As the storm gathers over the Palace, the Sergeant-of-the-Guard is advised by John Hawks, architect and builder of the Palace, to hurry if he is to protect the Royal colors. Shown at the 18th century style flagstaff as Sergeant Henry Billings is Peter Norton. Hawks is played by Mark Bristol. Both are from New Bern.

Performance schedule:

Tryon Palace is open to the public from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1:30 to 4 p.m., Sunday. It is closed on Mondays, except for Monday, July 4.

The Kermit Hunter drama tours play on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays on the hour in the mornings and beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the afternoons on the half hour. On Sundays the drama tours start on the hour, 2, 3 and 4 p.m.

(Note: Traditional hostess tours are held between drama tours and these tours only are scheduled on Tuesdays.

Polly Partridge, a Palace maid, chastises Nell Nugent, the cook, played by drama director Nancy Blades. Was it the dust on the statue or the long glance William Tryon gave Polly that ended up Nell's problem? The Hunter drama stays within the Palace walls. The photographer did not have the same restrictions.

On The Young Side

Guest columnist for this week is rising junior Clay Deanhardt. He has been chosen as the new columnist for "On The Young Side" for the 1983-85 school years.

Friday, May 27, was Awards Day here at Rose High School. This is the day that seniors and some juniors are recognized and presented with various scholarships and awards from different organizations. It is a formal occasion and is attended by all school members.

Many special awards were presented to the graduating seniors from the school and organizations. Among these were: scholarship medals for maintaining a 4.0 throughout secondary school to Lisa Lynn Wang and Carlie Suzanne Wille; the Woman's Club Good Citizenship Award to Angela Marie Michel; and the Civitan's Good Citizenship Award to Raymond Allen Hair Jr. Two distinguished service awards were also presented: the Lonnie Barnhill Award to Stephanie Renee Deans and the Keech Award to Lisa Lynn Wang.

Other awards were: the East Carolina University Panhellenic Council Award and the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Award to Angela Marie Michel; the League of Women Voters Participation in Government Award to Timothy Mitchell Shank and an honorable mention to Raymond Hair Jr.; the U.S. Army Reserve Spirit of Victory: National Scholar/Athlete Awards to Angelas Michel and Gregory Joseph Davis; and the Daily Reflector Scholastic Journalist Award to Lisa Wang.

Departmental awards were given to students who showed outstanding ability in the subject indicated and in related areas. This year's choices are as follows: English medal — Lisa Wang; journalism medals — Lisa Wang, Stephanie Deans and Paula Green; yearbook medals — Sheila Craft, Karen Dunlap, Jewel Hardy and Samuel Wynne; drama medal — Jonathan Pringle; Robert D. Whitehurst Speech Award — Brenda Stanton; mathematics medals — Alan Dickens and Steve Worley; and the national science medal — Lisa Wang.

Other department awards included: social science — Angela Michel; the Woodmen of the World history trophy — Rena Meteye; Spanish — Elizabeth Kraczon; French — Traci Pennington; business — Pennie Elks; home economics — Lynnette King, Pamela Nobles, Muriel Best and La Sonya Austin; drafting — Henry Cayton; carpentry — Rodney Hooks, Kenneth Manning and Curtis Evans; masonry — Kevin Williams and Ellis Branch; media center — Beverly Allen, Brian Dillard and Molly James; Art — Robert Hursey III, John Little and Neil Kopping; health occuaption — Becky Dunn and Judy Benson; guidance — Brian Averette; orchestra — Stephen Bath and Timothy Shank; band — Bruce Thompson, Celeste Pickett, Delano Williams, Chris Love, Regina Hathaway and Myra Fleming.

Rose High maintains a tradition of academic excellence and this standard has been shown in the 73 scholarships awarded to or declined by students. Due to lace of space and the fact that most scholarships have been announced before, only a few will be mentioned here.

Gregory Davis was a John Motley Morehead Scholarship finalist and receives a scholarship for full tutition to UNC-CH. The George Foster Hankins Scholarship to Wake Forest University was accepted by Alan Dickens.

Lisa Wang received or turned down a total of seven scholarships, accepting, along with others, the prestigious National Merit Scholarship. Angela Michel was awarded five scholarships, accepting the N.C. Scholarship to Wake Forest University and one other. Stephanie Deans accepted three scholarships to be used at A&T.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday Afternoon

Barbara Jane Werdal and Dwayne Eric Tomlinson, both of Greenville, were married in Our Redeemer Lutheran Church Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. R. Graham Nahouse performed the double ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Obert T. Werdal of Greenville, the bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Fonseca of Ahoskie and Mr. and Mrs. M. Wayne Tomlinson of Lakewood, Ohio, are parents of the bridegroom.

Krzysztof Gawlik was organist and guitarist were Ran Northrup and Terry Taylor. Leslie Suzanne Howell sang "One Hand, One Heart," "Longer" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Cindy Dian Nicholson of Kinston was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Julianne Moore Babson, Leslie Suzanne Howell, Wanda Pinkston Werdal and Lynda Stine Werdal, sisters-in-law of the bride, all of Greenville and Lynn Marie Tomlinson of Lakewood, Ohio, sister of the bridegroom.

Ushers were Larry Duane Hinsley, Joel Kent Babson, Charles Brinson Dees, James Albert and David George Werdal, brothers of the bride, all of Greenville, and Arthur Charles Fonseca III of Ahoskie, brother of the bridegroom. The best man was Charles Curtis Ebbs of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with silk Venise lace. The fitted bodice was enhanced with a sheer yoke of illusion bordered in a bertha collar of chantilly lace edged in Brussels lace. Appliques of Brussels lace fashioned the sheer bishop sleeves which were finished in organza cuffs overlaid in silk Venise lace with button closures. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train featured an inserted panel of satin appliqued with silk Venise lace. A flounced hemline of chantilly lace complemented the gown. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in Brussels lace attached to caplet overlaid in matching lace. A face blusher accented the veil and she carried a formal cascade of phalaenposis orchids, pink sweetheart roses with baby's breath and English ivy tied with a white satin bow.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of petal pink taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring a ruffle of taffeta outlining the off-shoulder bodice and scooped back. Short cap sleeves complemented the gown and a sash of taffeta encircled the modified waistline from which fell the gathered skirt. The bridesmaids wore identical dresses and they each carried a classic bouquet of rainbow spring flowers, baby's breath tied with azalea pink bows. They wore baby's breath in their hair.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of blue lustreglo styled with a high neckline. The mother of the bridgeroom selected a formal gown of lilac designed with a V-neckline. Both wore corsages of white orchids. The grandmothers were remembered with white orchid corsages.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride graduated from Rose High School and East Carolina University. The bridegroom also graduated from Rose High School and is a senior at ECU.

A wedding dinner was given by the bride's parents honoring the bridal couple at the Ramada Inn. A rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Fonseca at Parkers and a bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Merv Hancock at her home.

Along with the awards presentation, SGA president Tim Shank made his farewell address to the school and his class and then proceeded to swear in Charles Derek Dickens as the new SGA president. Dickens swore in the remaining SGA and class officers.

As part of the year-end preparations, many clubs are beginning to elect officers for the new school year. The National Honor Society officers are: Alayna Tinkham, president, Bruce Thompson, vice president, Marjorie Jones, secretary, and Catherine Tingelstad, treasurer.

Minh Tahai, a 16-year-old Vietnamese, fixed the Rubik's Cube in a record 22.95 seconds, according to the 21st edition of the "Guinness Book of World Records."

NEW VOLUMES

NEW YORK (AP) — Two new volumes have been added to The Library of America series.

They are "Nathaniel Hawthorne: Novels" and "Herman Melville: Redburn, White-Jacket, Moby-Dick."

The library says its aim is to fill "the need for authoritative and widely available editions of the collected works of America's major authors."

Yates-O'Brien Vows Solemnized Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Kim O'Brien and Grayline Jeffery Yates, both of Greenville, took place here Saturday evening at seven o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Graham Smith, grandfather of the bridegroom of North Wilkesboro.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Sue O'Brien of Route 3, Kinston, and the late Carroll P. O'Brien. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Blanton Yates of Winston-Salem.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother. Julie Pearson of Charlotte was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Ann Young of Cary and Lynda Yeglinski of Raleigh. Honorary attendants were Sandy Anderson and Lisa Hamby of North Wilkesboro, Michele Comer of Winston-Salem and Betsy Deitwiler of Jacksonville. Flower girls included Jennifer Smith of North Wilkesboro and Sarah Kahn of Phoenix, Ariz.

Scott Qualls of Cary was best man and ushers were Jonathan Yates of Winston-Salem, brother of the bridegroom, and Lloyd Eure of Elizabeth City.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Sylvia McCreie, organist, and Kenneth Cobb, who sang "Ava Maria," "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with scalloped silk Venise lace. A sheer yoke of illusion accented with silk Venise and beaded schiffli lace enhanced the fitted bodice. Scalloped silk Venise lace encircled the waistline and the sheer bishop sleeves were fashioned with matching lace appliques and finished in cuffs of organza overlaid in lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented with a flounced hemline of chantillly lace bordered in silk Venise lace. She wore a double tiered fingertip veil of illusion edged in silk Venise lace and carried a bouquet of silk white daisies, pink baby roses and lily of the valley.

The mother of the bride wore a cotillion blue lustreglo and chantilly lace gown styled with a scooped neckline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of rose lustreglo with an empire bodice. Both wore a corsage of white double carnations.

The attendants were identically dressed in formal gowns of suede rose lustreglo designed with high necklines encircled with ruffled chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was enhanced with a sheer yoke of point d'esprit bordered in ruffled chantilly lace from which fell a bertha collar of crystal pleated chiffon. They each carried a bouquet of plum stephanotis on a white lace fan.

MRS. GRAYLINE JEFFERY YATES

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and the bridegroom attended ECU and is working on a degree in computer science. Both are employed at the university.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall and guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nelson of Winston-Salem and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deitwiler of Jacksonville.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a silver epergne of silk pink roses, plum stephanotis and baby's breath with silver candelabra holding lighted tapers. Cake was cut by Mrs. B.E. Wellborn of North Wilkesboro, aunt of the bridegroom. Assisting in serving were Mrs. R.E. Patterson of Worthington, Ohio, Mrs. Joe Hamby of North Wilkesboro and Mrs. Earl Lovette of Kinston.

After the reception, a wedding party was held for the bridal couple at the bridegroom's fraternity house. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom. The bridal and her attendants were honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday at the Golden Dragon Restaurant given by Mrs. George Pearson of High Point and Julie Pearson of Charlotte.

Women Of Year Named By Chapter

She was honored at the ESA State Convention at the Mission Valley Inn in Raleigh. A member of Alpha Omega for 12 yuears, she has held the offices of president, vice president, treasurer and parliamentarian. She has served on the state scholarship board, was co-chairman of the state finance committee and will be serving this year with Barbara Woods as co-editor of the ESA state newsletter "The Tar Heel Prints." She also won this year's state award as the individual with the most philanthropic hours served. She is married to Stan Zicherman and they have two children.

Attending the state convention from Alpha Omega were Mr. and Mrs. Zicherman, Barbara and Jim Woods, Cheryl and Berry Adams, Linda and Woody Peele and Betty Williams.

Ms. Williams will be serving as chaplain of the state council. She and Ms. Adams will be serving on the state scholarship board.

ESA awards scholarships to persons specializing in special education. Recipients of scholarships this year are Ms. Adams, special education teacher at Wahl-Coates School, and Pam Garris, teacher at Farmville Middle School.

The chapter will host the December state council meeting.

The first annual Danny Woods Memorial Scholarship presented by the women went to Annie Ruth Gaynor, a 1983 graduate of Rose. She will attend Pitt Community College. The presentation was made by Ms. Adams at the school's award day.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If there's a group of writers I admire more in this world than authors of romance novels, I don't know who it is.

Ever since the days of Kathleen Norris and Faith Baldwin, I've been hypnotized by writers who can describe passion without sounding clumsy or awkward. We used to call the books "pulps" and I read them by the hour.

Before you scoff, have you ever tried to sit down and write a love scene? The Krantzes and the Sheldons make it look easy.

I'm not making excuses for myself, mind you, but one of the reasons I have not made it big in romance novels is that for the past six years, I have been using a dictionary with the S's missing. Sex I have committed to memory. The spelling, that is. But surely you can see how limiting it is not to be able to use words like: sensuous, surrender, seduction, satan, savage, suave, scintillate, smother, shackle, shiver, shudder, sizzle, sinewy, slink, sorceress, spurn, stimulate and sweat. All the good emotions begin with S, leaving me with very little to go on.

Most of the sucessful (sp?) writers of these novels are housewives who either have the greatest imagination in the world or who took a chance on going blind when they were 12.

I have a friend whom I was amazed to discover has been writing steemy (sp?) novels for years. I couldn't believe it when I found out. She was a homeroom mother, read the Bible, and listened to Paul Harvey. Her stories could cut your heating bill in half.

One day I gave her one of my attempts at writing a romantic story for her to critique.

"Whatya think?" I asked.

"You have to set a mood with your first sentence," she advised. "Somehow, 'Hillary never had the underwear for an affair' doesn't do it.

"Your heroine is out of step with the times. She's not in control. And describing her skin as 'sparkling as a freshly scrubbed tub' doesn't create the illusion you're looking for. And it's more sensuous to describe the hero as celibate and not 'on his driver's license under sex he wrote no previous experience.' It needs work."

My friend doesn't realize 'selibate' (sp?) was beyond my reach.

SAFFRON RICE

Vermicelli is added in Armenian fashion.

- $10\frac{3}{4}$-ounce can condensed chicken broth
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup vermicelli, broken into 2-inch lengths
- 1 cup long-grain rice
- $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon pulverized saffron threads
- Salt to taste

Into a 1-quart measuring cup, pour broth; add enough water to make $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups. In a 2-quart saucepan, melt butter; cook vermicelli, stirring often, until golden brown. Stir in rice, broth mixture, saffron and salt. Simmer, covered, until broth is absorbed and rice is tender — about 30 minutes. Add a little more water if necessary. Makes 6 servings.

Engagement Announced

BEVERLY ANN GODWIN...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram R. Godwin Sr. of Route 1, Camden, who announce her engagement to Sgt. Gregory T. Sharpe, son of Mrs. Barbara B. Sharpe of Route 4, Greenville, and the late Jerry Sharpe Jr. The wedding is planned for July 9.

MRS. CARL DOUGLAS DARDEN

Double Ring Ceremony Held

Evelyn Maudelle Barousse and Carl Douglas Darden, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at one o'clock in a double ring ceremony.

The ceremony was performed in the First Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Richard Gammon. A program of music was presented by Dr. Robert Irwin, oganist. Susie Pair sang and played the guitar.

Sandra Adams of Dallas, Tex., sister of the bride, was honor attendant and Jeremy Darden of Newton Grove, nephew of the bridegroom, was best man. Gerald Darden of Newton Grove and Elmer Britt of Greenville were ushers.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph Carson of Dallas, Tex. and Mrs. Earl Darden of Newton Grove is mother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore an off-white linen dress with puff sleeves with organza embroidered insert. The neck of the bodice had three rows of tucks and the border of the skirt had the organza embroidered insert with tuck detail She carried a nosegay of yellow and white roses.

A reception followed and was held at the church. Gail Darden and Marie Britt assisted in serving. Carolyn Powell and Linda McGehee coordinated the event.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C.

The bride graduated from Bethany Nazarene College in Bethany, Okla. and attended North Texas State University and Southern Methodist University. She is a real estate broker with Duffus Realty in Greenville. The bridegroom is president of Darden Realty in Greenville.

Dear Abby

Couple Treasures Friends' Memories, Not Their Gifts

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last year you ran an invitation to an anniversary party asking guests to please write a little piece recalling a fond memory of the honorees rather than bring a gift. We hope to celebrate our golden wedding anniversary this summer and we honestly do not want any gifts!

Please run it soon before our children go hog wild! Thank you, and God bless you.

MRS. A.G. IN BINGHAMTON, N.Y.

DEAR MRS. G.: I'm glad you asked. Every day my mail brings me requests for this item. I have had to mimeograph it to meet the demand.

I am not complaining. The many responses I have received from grateful readers who have used this invitation more than compensate for the work involved:

"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: About 10 years ago, when I was a newlywed, after noticing how much my husband admired ladies with large breasts, I went to a plastic surgeon and had mine enlarged (silicone implants).

About a year later my breasts started to harden. Today they are as hard as rocks, and I am divorced and lonely. I am so embarrassed because of my breasts that I avoid any relationship that might lead to intimacy.

Abby, can this situation be corrected? If so, please tell me how.

WANTS TO LOVE AGAIN

DEAR WANTS: Go back to the plastic surgeon who performed the operation and see what he has to say. If you cannot return to the original doctor (or do not want to), consult with a board-certified plastic surgeon and get his opinion.

Your original implants may have to be replaced, but my experts say your present situation can be corrected.

DEAR ABBY: You asked your readers to tell you the difference between a lady and a tramp. I'm not sure I know what a lady is, but I do know that a tramp is not the same as a bum. Not in England, anyway.

In 1932, Al Jolson starred in a film titled, "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum." When it was shown in England, the title was changed to, "Hallelujah, I'm a Tramp."

The reason: In England a "bum" is slang for "derriere," which is French for "tuchis," which is Yiddish for "fanny," which is slang for backside.

Couple Marries Saturday Afternoon

CHARLOTTE — Patricia Ann Stavrakas and Charles Andrew Hodson, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in Our Lady of the Assumption Catholic Church here. Father Joseph Kelleher officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Xenophon Stavrakas of Charlotte. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ruby Hodson of Britt, Iowa, and the late Ralph Hodson.

A program of wedding music was presented by Harcourt Waller, organist, and Jim Counts, trumpeter. Soloist was Ann Hager.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory slipper satin. The fitted satin bodice was accented with a sheer round yoke trimmed in bands of satin with bows. The dropped V-waistline was accented by a gathered full circle skirt ending in a chapel length train. The long fitted satin sleeves extended to calla points trimmed with tulle and narrow bands of satin. She wore a shoulder length veil attached by an ivory satin bow and beaded pearl Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and ivy.

Maid of honor was Katina Marie Stavrakas of Moorestown, N.J., sister of the bride. Mary Leona Brasher of Waxhaw, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Each attendant wore a formal length, full circle, yellow slipper satin skirt and ivory silk blouse. The blouse featured bishop sleeves, embroidered bodice and covered buttons. Each carried a nosegay of yellow sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

John Hodson of Topeka, Kans., served his brother as best man. Ushers were Hubert W. Burden and Greg Iams, both of Greenville and groomsman was Kenneth Michael Stavrakas of Charlotte.

The mother of the bride selected an aqua crepe dress with cap sleeves and flowers appliqued at the shoulder. The bridegroom's mother chose a lavender and pink long sleeved dress with tie belt and pleated collar. Both mothers wore gardenia corsages.

A rehearsal dinner, given by the mother of the bridegroom, was held at the Steak and Ale Restaurant.

The bride is a graduate of UNC-Greensboro and East Carolina University. She is employed by the ECU School of Medicine Developmental Evaluation Clinic as a pediatric physical therapist. The bridegroom is a graduate of Iowa State University and is employed as an assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology, East Carolina University School of Medicine.

After a wedding trip to New York City, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday Afternoon

MRS. MICHAEL LEE NOBLES

Sandra Bobbitt Jackson and Michael Lee Nobles were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in St. James United Methodist Church. The Rev. Dewey Tyson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Cletas Jackson of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Lee Nobles of Winterville.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in re-embroidered chantilly lace beaded with pearls. Matching lace enhanced the empire bodice which encircled the waistline. Appliques of chantilly lace fashioned the full bishop sleeves which were finished in matching lace cuffs. The modified A-line skirt featured panels of chantilly lace and a crystal pleated flounce. The attached cathedral length train was accentuated with cascading tiers of crystal pleating in re-embroidered chantilly lace. Her fingertip length veil of illusion with pencil edging was held in place with a caplet overlaid in chantilly lace. She carried an arm bouquet of silk alstromeria, ginster, larkspurs, lilies and agapanthus accented with greenery and satin ribbons.

Serving as matron of honor was Brenda Jackson Warren, sister of the bride. Mary Keehln Simmons of Tarboro served as maid of honor. They wore tea length gowns of fushia taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring a ruffle of taffeta outlining the off-shoulder bodice and deep scooped back. Short cap sleeves complemented the gown. A sash of taffeta encircled the modified waistline, from which fell the gathered skirt. They carried a hand cluster of pink gerberas accented with purple statice and greenery tied with satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Angela Parrott of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, Amy Cline of Concord, Kristy Merritt, Kelly Jordan and Patti Dawson, all of Greenville. They wore dresses and carried hand clusters identical to the matron and maid of honor.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Charlie Nobles of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, John Graham of Winston-Salem; Wesley Deal, Joey Fornes, Mike Campbell and Eddie Bunch, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length gown of striped chiffon in shades of royal blue, fushia and lavender. The mother of the bridegroom wore a tea length gown of pearl blue chiffon with cummerbund waist and three-quarter length sleeves.

The bride is the granddaughter of Geneva Jackson of Winterville. The bridegroom is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs W.D. Salmon of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Todd Pair, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer." Trumpeter was Bill Frazier and Mrs. Bill Cain was organist. Mrs. E.T. Vinson directed the wedding.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Brook Valley Country Club. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Deal.

Mrs. Helen Lawrence, cousin of the bride, served the wedding cake. Dee Ann Frazier and Janet Loftin poured punch.

Friday evening, friends and the parents of the bridegroom entertained with a rehearsal dinner at Archie's Restaurant. Afterwards, a dance given by family and friends of the bridal couple was held at the American Legion Building.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Wade Jordan, Mrs. Jack Dawson and Mrs. Walter Williams at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

The bridal couple was entertained with several other parties in their honor.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Junior College in Raleigh and East Carolina University, where she received a B.S. in special education. The bridegroom attended ECU and is manager of Archie's Restaurant.

After a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia, the couple will reside in Simpson.

Shirley Brown And Joe Nipper Are Married

GRIFTON -- Shirley Elaine Murphy Brown of Greenville and Joe Nipper of Raleigh were united in marriage Saturday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Murphy. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James L. Nipper of Vicksburg, Miss.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Neill Grimes. A musical program was presented by organist Mrs. Troy Jackson and soloist Mrs. John Gray. Selections included "Evergreen" and "Just You and I."

The bride was given in marriage by her son, Cliff Brown. She wore a formal length gown of ivory lustreglo designed with an open neckline, miniature rolled shoulder straps and a fitted bodice with a flared accordian pleated skirt. The cape overlay of French chantilly lace complemented the sleeveless gown. A tie sash of ivory lustreglo encircled the waistline. She wore a halo of ivory silk flowers with a double tier of ivory illusion. She carried an arm bouquet of silk long-stemmed pink roses with sprigs of greenery accented with a pink ribbon bow and streamers.

MRS. JOE NIPPER

Matron of honor was Mrs. Ronald Hardison of Grifton, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Martha Nipper of Birmingham, Ala., sister of the bridegroom and Kay Rackley of Greenville. Each attendant wore a tea length striped pink gown of open weave cotton styled with an open neckline bordered in a ruffle and accented with pink satin ribbon and white lace. Each carried an arm bouquet of three pink carnations accented with sprigs of greenery and pink ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Gary Knight of Glendale Heights, Ill., and Dan Roberts of Birmingham, Ala. Ring bearer was Jason Brown of Greenville, son of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of pink chiffon designed with a double bertha collar and long sleeves with fitted cuffs. She wore a corsage of two pink carnations. The mother of the bridegroom selected a street length dress of textured champagne knit featuring a high neckline encircled with self fabric cording. She wore a corsage like that of the mother of the bride.

After the ceremony, a reception given at the home of the parents of the bride in Grifton. The bride, the bridegroom and their parents were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Troy Jackson. Cheryl Barnes of Raleigh, Mrs. John Talton of Selma and Mrs. Rick Gaddy of Grifton were servers.

The bride is a graduate of Lenoir Community College and is a respiratory therapist at Rex Hospital in Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of Auburn University and is employed as assistant manager of housekeeping at Rex Hospital.

CARMEL CHILI

1 pound ground beef
4 large scallions, chopped medium-fine
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
16-ounce can stewed tomatoes
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 cup red wine
2 tablespoons chili powder (or more)
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon cumin
Salt and pepper to taste
16-ounce can dark kidney beans, undrained

In a 4-or 5-quart saucepot, cook beef, scallions and garlic, stirring occasionally, until beef loses its red color. Skim off excess fat. Stir in tomatoes, tomato sauce, wine, chili powder, oregano, cumin and salt and pepper. Bring to a boil; simmer until consistency is like a very thick soup — about 45 minutes. Stir in beans, cook 15 minutes longer. Makes 6½ cups.

Rowe-Ritchie Vows Solemnized Saturday

Janis Gayle Ritchie and Alton Floyd Rowe III were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James H. Bailey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ritchie of Asheville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.F. Rowe Jr. of Ayden.

Music was presented by Mark Gansor, organist, and Henry Wong of Williamston sang "The Wedding Song," "Give Thanks" and Remember" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore an empire white gown of qiana with an oval neckline accented with Venise lace with long sleeves edged in matching lace. The dress had a watteau train. She wore a fingertip veil of silk illusion edged in matching lace attached to a Camelot cap of lace sprinkled with seed pearls. Her bouquet was a silk cascade of white stephanotis, roses and linium accented by pink rosebuds and white baby's breath with white lace and silver streamers.

MRS. ALTON FLOYD ROWE III

The matron of honor was Kaye Carney of Denver, Colo., sister of the bride. She wore a formal gown of lavender voile with a Victorian neckline trimmed with seed pearls featuring a yoke of white lace. The long sleeves and skirt were adorned with a lace flounce. She carried a long-stemmed hot pink rose accented with lavender baby's breath and fern with matching ribbon and streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Jeane Murphy of Asheville, sister of the bride, Cindy Carney of Denver, Colo., niece of the bride, and Mary Lee Rowe of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom. Junior bridesmaid was Kristy Carney of Denver, Colo., niece of the bride. They wore dresses identical to that of the honor attendant and carried identical flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Bill Taylor of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, Dr. Lloyd Harrison of Lewisville and Albert K. Harrison of Greensboro, uncles of the bridegroom, and Robert Carney of Denver, Colo., and Hugh Murphy of Asheville, brothers-in-law of the bride.

Mrs. Barbara Britt presided at the bridal register.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of turquoise chiffon. The mother of the bridegroom wore a street length aqua dress. The grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Lloyd Harrison of Greensboro, wore a street length pink dress. They wore corsages of white daisies.

A reception given by the parents of the bride was held in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and works for the Employment Security Commission. The bridegroom graduated from Pitt Community College and is a draftsman at Greenville Utilities Commission.

TV And Radio Therapy With Dr. Sonya Friedman

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Without leaving your living room, you can fatten up with Julia Child, flatten down with Jane Fonda and, now, get your psyche in shape with an assortment of radio and television shrinks.

One of the most prominent of the media healers is Dr. Sonya Friedman, a psychologist who has a one-hour talk show on the USA Cable Network and a two-hour radio program on Detroit's WXYZ. Mrs. Friedman dispenses friendly advice and chit-chat with a personal style, she says, that combines "Joyce Brothers, Ann Landers and Joan Rivers."

"I do my Joan Rivers act when a person takes a problem too seriously," she says. "What I try to do is put the problem in perspective. I've been on for five years. To many people, I'm Aunt Sonya, or the old-time country doctor. People call back and tell me whether my advice worked or not."

Turning TV's easy chair into a psychiatrist's couch has its public benefits. Viewers can be comforted by knowing that others are experiencing similar problems and concerns, and it can remove some of the stigma attached to therapy.

But there's also a down side. Some viewers may get the impression that pyschological problems can be solved between commercials. Another concern is that people's neuroses are being exploited for ratings, and that this form of show-and-tell is appealing to America's baser instincts.

"I have a responsibility not to play to those prurient interests," says Mrs. Friedman, whose book "Men Are Just Desserts" (Warner Books) has just been published. "We all have below-the-surface voyeuristic tendencies. It's a fine line, and I have to walk it very carefully.

"A lot of what I do is ask people to solve their problems themselves," she says. On serious problems, she advises callers to contact psychological referral agencies to get more extensive help.

She gave the example of a potential suicide who called her show. She stayed with him on the line, while her producer notified the police. "There's a big difference between helping someone and acting as a savior," she says. "Some of these shows try to take over people's lives."

Mrs. Friedman says the public's curiosity in these shows is similar to its obsession with daytime and prime-time soap operas. "When we watch others' problems, there's a certain sense of coming away unscathed," she says. "We can get immersed in the risks of life without having to take chances ourselves."

And she says there are checks on her public advice that don't exist in private practice. "In private, a doctor can browbeat, abuse and cast a person aside psychologically. On radio, my other colleagues, including my supervising therapist, are listening. If I make an error, it's there for thousands of people to monitor."

Mrs. Friedman also sees her own therapist. "I go to see him for a head check every once in a while. I want to know if I've been making sense. Was my advice good? Was it reasonable?"

Despite the best intentions, the need for ratings on TV and radio is always lurking in the background. Is Mrs. Friedman ever tempted to titillate to build ratings?

"There's no question that there's a pressure, but I've built my practice on a reputation of being credible, professional and careful," she says. "I won't jeopardize my career, even if it means I would lose my radio and TV jobs."

Her radio producer, at first, insisted that she cut off callers after 2½ minutes to keep the show moving. Mrs. Friedman says she felt a 10-minute limit would allow more thoughtful advice and discourse. They compromised on five minutes.

"I'm not naive. I know that this work is a marriage," Mrs. Friedman says. "Their goal is ratings, and I'm being used for that. But, as long as it's within reasonable parameters, I don't mind."

Former College Classmates Help In Running City

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — They began on the lower rungs and climbed the ladder of bureaucracy. Once they were college classmates.

They are Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson and Patsy Mink, chairwoman of the nine-member city-county council.

Each is 55. Each is married. Each is dedicated to her elected tasks and responsibilities in running one of America's major city-county governments.

And they are the first women to win their respective positions in the state of Hawaii's short history.

Between them they hold the top jobs in the city and county of Honolulu, encompassing the entire island of Oahu. About 762,000 of the state's approximately 925,000 residents live on the island.

"What it takes to succeed," Mrs. Mink says, "is a total commitment to the issue at hand. You can't go into it in a half-hearted way."

"I don't think anyone is successful without working hard at it," Mrs. Anderson says. "I started out at the bottom, in personnel, and worked my way up."

Mrs. Anderson won the 1980 Democratic primary over three-time mayor Frank F. Fasi. She swept the general election with 69 percent of the vote cast.

Mrs. Mink's political history reaches back to when Hawaii was a territory.

She served both as a territorial representative and territorial senator before winning a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives in 1964. She served six terms in the House and in 1976 lost a Democratic primary bid for the U.S. Senate to Spark Matsunaga.

She served in the State Department and as president of Americans for Democratic Action before deciding to jump into county politics.

Now she says "local government is where the action is."

She was elected to the City Council last November with 79 percent of the vote, and in January was elected to chair the council.

Mrs. Mink dismisses any notion that being a woman is a handicap in politics.

"The difficulties are the same for both sexes when they run for elected office," she says. "I haven't found it to be anything but a myth that there are difficulties unique to women.

"I would have hoped there would be more women in Congress, and holding governorships," she says. "It's been a long and difficult road, but certainly on the local level we've made astounding progress."

Since taking office, Mrs. Anderson has appointed six women to cabinet level posts out of a total of 24 positions.

Mrs. Anderson once was Hawaii's director of finance, managing an annual budget of more than $1.5 billion.

"I was in the bureaucracy, and I think perhaps I came along (as a mayoral candidate) when the community was looking for someone who was no nonsense," she says.

War Canoe Carving Taught In University

LAIE, Hawaii (AP) — Learning how to carve a Polynesian war canoe is not a requirement for passing general education classes at Brigham Young University-Hawaii, but the ancient skill can be learned there from one of the world's few remaining master teachers.

Barney Christi, 62, New Zealand-born Maori and master carver, has been teaching students this nearly "lost" art for six years, giving them guidance instruction in basic carving techniques, the proper manner of sharpening their tools and safety precautions necessary for the skill.

"Uncle Barney," as he is called by his students and co-workers at the Polynesian Cultural Center where the class is held, first began learning this unique skill 40 years ago, as a young man in the New Zealand village of Nu haka.

Two Maori master carvers, John and Pine Taiapa, chose eight young men as apprentices. For two and one-half years they built a local church, which now serves as a community recreation hall in Nu haka.

In addition to learning basic construction skills, the team spent tedious hours carving the traditional tuku tuku and pukakaho panels that line the interior walls. These artistic panels, which tell stories about the Maori culture, serve secondarily as insulation.

The symbolic messages in the panels had been kept secret for so long among the Maori elite that when they died much of the meaning was lost forever.

As Christi said of the experience, "It was more than just a construction project. It became an art school where we learned to do scroll painting and make tuku tuku panels and pukakaho panels with pampas grass. It is quite an artistic process to take the sheaf of the pampas grass, match them perfectly end to end and make a panel."

Ten years ago, the Polynesian Cultural Center in Laie, adjacent to the BYU campus here, asked Christi to come to Hawaii to help preserve and teach the art of carving to visitors, students and professionals. Each semester he instructs 10 to 12 students from the BYU-Hawaii Art Department, and lectures and demonstrates to tourists and Center visitors. He conducted a special seminar one summer for a group of 15 carvers from the mainland.

According to Christi, the students may be required to spend the entire semester learning one design such as the "wae wae pakura," a pattern that represents the footprint of a swamp hen. Students usually begin by carving this design onto a small piece of totara wood or some other light-grained wood available in Hawaii. Another pattern that is often used is the "pakati haehae" or "lines and notches."

These three-sided figures are quite complicated and it is necessary for the artist "to go through precise stages to arrive at the final product," Christi says. "If a stage is done incorrectly usually the whole design must be re-carved."

Besides the totara wood, Christi has worked with wood from the kauri tree. Because this tree grows over 100 feet high it was the wood of preference for Maori canoe builders.

Christi says a Maori canoe can take two years to build, but if it's constructed properly it will never tip over.

The Maori "wahkairo" or wood carving is also representational, said Christi, and tells a story or history. Many buildings in each village are adorned with these carvings, each representing a certain phase of some ancestor's life.

Students may register for Christi's class for more than one semester, as they advance in skill and try new projects such as bowls, weapons, or tikis.

While teaching at BYU-Hawaii, Christi has carved hundreds of pieces, including a replica of a Maori war canoe, buildings, weapons and many decorative pieces that have been given to visitors and dignitaries around the world.

Although many students have been exposed to Christi's Maori art, Christi is relying on his two sons, Angus, 22, and Douglas, 19, to carry on the cultural tradition.

Cowboy Art

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Art critics refer to it as "Western American Realism." But to the millions of admirers of the paintings, drawings and sculpture that depict life in the West as it was and as it is today, it's simply called "Cowboy Art."

Cowboy Art has long been recognized as typifying the American spirit, but like the cowpunchers and broncbusters themselves, Western artists did not have a real home until the creation of the Cowboy Artists of America Museum. Located 60 miles west of San Antonio, the museum is unique in offering a single group of artists a permanent showcase for their work.

The museum houses a standing collection of works from the early great artists Frederic Remington and Charles M. Russell as well as modern painters and sculptors.

Whitewater Rafting Trip Planned

A July Fourth white water rafting trip on the French Broad River near Hot Springs is being offered by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. A deposit of $30 will pay for and reserve a place on the raft trip, which will be limited to a certain number of individuals. Anyone 10 years old or older is eligible to take the trip.

Plans are to arrive at Hot Springs on Saturday, July 2, spend the evening either camping out or at a local motel. The group will meet at the Nanthahala Outdoor Center's French Broad Outpost at 8:30 a.m. Sunday for the whitewater raft trip.

Experienced guides accompany each trip, and there is an option to request a raft with or without a guide. The excursion is an all-day one and includes a picnic lunch.

Those interested in joining the trip or wanting more details are to call Bill Twine at 752-4137, extension 201.

For an audition appointment, interested persons may call the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra at 704/332-6136.

Literature On Indians

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — American Indian literature is coming into its own in this country, according to an award-winning University of Rochester professor.

Successful writers, poets and novelists, many of them native Americans, are building a rich heritage of oral-traditional narratives and songs of many Indian groups, says Professor Jarold W. Ramsey, former president of the Association for the Study of American Indian Literatures.

Ramsey, whose poetry has won several prizes, is the first winner of the Walker Award for excellence in Western American literature criticism for his essay on a Nez Perce Indian narrative.

A Long And Adventurous Life

A Review

From Hell to the Himalayas. By Colonel C.F. Hodgson. Westville, South Africa, King & Wilks (Pty) Ltd. 206 pages, illustrated, indexed. U.S. $20, surface mail, $27 airmail.

Adventure stories, especially colorful true-life stories, are among the best possible reading pleasures. The life story of Colonel C.F. Hodgson, from the days of his youth at the beginning of World War I on through service in rebellious Ireland, a brief tour in the Middle East, a long sojourn in India, and finally, a civilian career with the 1820 Settlers Association in South Africa, has only one major flaw — it all ends too soon. Another 200 pages would have been most welcome, would have given the author an opportunity to fully develop some exciting events in his life that are merely sketched in before he dashes off to a new adventure.

What is remarkable about "From Hell to the Himalayas" is the vivacity, the freshness of recall, the satisfying aura of immediacy Colonel Hodgson brings to his memoirs long years after the events took place. And it's all the more remarkable considering the fact this is his first book — written at the age of 86.

From the evidence, it seems that British writers have a natural instinct, a particular talent in transforming personel chronicles into literature that transcends biography. Hodgson's writing is in the tradition of British men of letters such as Sir Richard Burton and T.E. (Lawrence of Arabia) Lawrence. "From Hell to the Himalayas" is the most exciting travel-military account I have read since Francis Charles Yeats-Brown's fabulous "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" published over 50 years ago. It's reassuring to have Hodgson's book to confirm that the grand tradition of British travel-adventure writing still lives on.

The early chapters on Hodgson's experiences in the dirt, mud, blood and body lice conditions of World War I have been often told by others before, and thus his horrifying experiences, though calmly told, have a familiar ring.

What is refreshingly new in Hodgson's account is a moral attitude that today seems incredibly naive. While on a second brief behind-the-lines rest from the trenches, Hodgson recalls .... "I was once billeted with another mother and daughter in the same area of Belgium. This daughter was also about seventeen and very pretty. She seemed very anxious to bring my early morning tea, much to old Murphy's (his aide) disgust. He used to waylay her at my bedroom door and take the tray, as at the previous billet. However, on one occasion, she managed to give Murphy the slip and appeared with the tray at my bedside ... Suddenly, without warning, she hopped into bed with me. I was abolutely terrified, jumped out of bed and ran like a scalded cat! ..."

On being evacuated to England shortly before the armistice because of a field injury, Hodgson married the girl who was for long years to be his constant companion — Florence May McConnell. Since he was a tender youth of only 22, his mother strongly disapproved of not being consulted prior to his "committing the offense." The British Army at that time did not recognize the marriage of an officer under the age of 30, so the young couple were offically considered "living in sin" and had to get by, Bohemian style, on a single officer's pay. This policy eventually was amended.

The best of "From Hell to the Himalayas" is contained in the chapters on Hodgson's years in India. Here we are treated to superb writing about life in that teeming, seductive continent of a country. All the pomp and ritual of colonial government and military forces in India while under British rule, the relations the author experienced with Indians, the incredible range of customs, religions, superstitions and the sweep of the land itself come to life with understanding, affection and delightful touches of humor ...

"A certain Colonel Gough of a Gurkha regiment was training a newly formed parachute regiment in their duties. When it came to the day when they were going to make their first jump the senior Gurkha officer turned to Colonel Gough and said, 'Please Sir, the first jump we make, may we have parachutes?'" ... and, "an example of his wry humor ... "The coming of cooler weather was the signal for the 'fishing fleet' to set sail from England. This consisted of large numbers of young women, daughters and relations of officers who used to come out each year in search of husbands."

A number of the men Hodgson associated with during his Indian years became noted military leaders in World War II. It's rather sad to realize many of these men have passed from the scene before Colonel Hodgson got around to writing this book. They would have enjoyed his memoirs immensely.

Readers, young and old, who relish a topnotch adventure story liberally laced with history, intelligent humor, and an obvious boundless zest for life will thoroughly enjoy "From Hell to the Himalayas." It's the kind of book you know you will read again, one that you will tell your friends about, urge them to read

Jerry Raynor

(Orders for "From Hell to the Himalayas" may be sent direct to the author: Colonel C.F. Hodgson, 608 Musgrave Heights, Musgrave Road, Durban 4001, Republic of South Africa, with the check made payable to Hodgson.)

Zulu Art Wins Acclaim

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

RORKE'S DRIFT, South Africa (AP) — In a remote valley rich with the lore of fallen Zulu warriors, a black art colony has revived old traditions with a modern touch. It has earned world acclaim.

The Rorke's Drift art center was established in 1962 with Swedish Lutheran Church aid "to nurture the unique artistic heritage of Africa," a white bishop said at the founding.

The center's strength is that the 120 potters and weavers design their own work, never following the patterns or color schemes of others. Each intricate textile pattern, pottery glazing design and tapestry tale is unique. A single small vase can take a day or more, tapestries months.

"The aim is not only to give employment, but to create a cultural dignity and pride. They all must make their own designs, they are artists rather than craftsmen," said Pbincess Ngcobo, acting treasurer of the center.

She said that since 1975 the non-profit center has been run by blacks who live and work in the cluster of a dozen buildings, without outside aid. The settlement, nestled against a green hillside, is 20 miles from the nearest paved road and 120 miles north of the Indian Ocean port of Durban. Yet, commercial and private buyers come in a steady flow to the sales shop.

The compound includes the stone house of the first Swedish missionary to South Africa, Otto Witt, who arrived in Zululand in the 1870s. The house, now a post office and small gallery, formed part of the barricade in the bloody victory of 140 British soldiers over 4,000 Zulu warriors who attacked the garrison at the settlement in January 1879.

Earlier the same day, the Zulus earned their greatest victory, wiping out 850 British soldiers at Isandhlwana 20 miles away.

The British Crown awarded 11 Victoria Crosses to the Rorke's Drift defenders, the highest number ever for a single action. Now visitors are guided by a 76-year-old Zulu who says his grandfather died in the attack. The site includes separate graveyards for British and Zulu dead.

Miss Ngcobo said the setting is appropriate for blacks to rediscover the artistic traditions of the Zulus, still ruled by a white-minority government.

"They have really benefited spiritually. You can see they have grown in dignity and self-confidence," she said in an interview.

Rorke's Drift artwork has generated international respect, with exhibitions held in Scandinavia, the Netherlands, Italy, England and the United States. The tapestries are especially prized.

The artwork from the pottery, weaving and textiles workshops have generated steady income to pay the center's salaries and operating costs of more than $70,000 a year.

For many years the income from the workshops subsidized the Rorke's Drift Fine Arts School. After emerging as South Africa's premier black art school, the Fine Arts School was forced to close this year because of lack of funds and staff for the 40 students. Graduates include highly regarded graphic artists such as Sidney Moema and sculptors like Zondi Chipa.

Miss Ngcogo, at Rorke's Drift since 1977, said attempts were being made to find money and staff to reopen the Fine Arts School. She conceded there had been tension between the art school and the crafts workshops because the fine arts students tended to regard the weavers and potters as something less than artists.

Malin Lundbohm, a Swedish textile artist who is the only white at the center, said similar splits often occur in the Western art world — "artists must be drawing and painting."

Mrs. Lundbohm was at the center with her husband from 1968 to 1975, the last of three Swedish couples since 1962, and she returned in 1981 for another two-year stay. She said modern Swedish techniques had influenced the methods of the African artists, but the designs, colors and patterns were their own.

Miss Ngcobo said the majority of the black artists have been at the center for 15 to 20 years, and very few new artists are accepted. She added, "It's not a school where you learn and go, but where you learn and stay."

Artists are paid for each work they produce, depending on quality and time spent. Prices are set by the supervisors in each workshop.

Formal education is not required at Rorke's Drift. Some artists do not read or write, and many do not speak English.

"Anybody, disregarding basic education, has an opportunity to express himself in modern material," Mrs. Lundbohm said.

Chemical dyes are used for textiles rather than rare natural dyes. Carpets are in modern and bold colors, but woven on traditional looms in fine karakul wool.

The pottery workshop uses modern glazes and kilns, although foot-driven kickwheels are used rather than electric wheels. Distinctive pottery styles have emerged, primarily scenes of daily life etched in black on unglazed clay and blue etched on glazed desert sand-colored surfaces.

Tapestries often depict village life — water-carriers, women at cooking fires and warriors who endured the manhood ritual of "washing of the spears" in the blood of battle a century ago.

Eyeballing The Fish

By JIM TYLER
Natural Resources & Community Development

EMERALD ISLE — Our first SCUBA dive of the 1983 season was also our first dive on the new artificial reef three and one-half miles offshore Emerald Isle in Carteret County.

Before we went out we spent some time in Swansboro and heard fish stories about what anglers had already caught off the reef since construction began in February. One fishing trip resulted in 800 pounds of fish, another in more than 200 pounds. Local enthusiasm is perhaps the best news to hear from those involved with artificial reefs.

Our boat climbed six to eight feet ocean swells to get out there. Weather had been unusually windy for several days and we thought visibility on the bottom would not be clear — maybe we would be able to see our hands probing ahead of our faces — really a lot to look forward to!

When you start a dive and cannot see the bottom you wiggle down into a space without dimensions that seems to go on forever. It is like looking up at a night sky — it is nice yet eerie not to know where the barrier is up there and you could go no further.

This is so even if you know the water depth, you never know, without instrumentation, as you go down, how deep you have gone. We followed the anchor line down, watchful of numerous small white jellyfish looking somewhat like stars in a twilight sky. Then, about halfway down the 50 foot water column, the shapes of automobile tires began to come into focus.

The only disappointment of the dive was to view the 40-foot long garbage green-boxes transported to the site by U.S. Marine Corps helicopters. Besides the novel mode of transportation, we thought the boxes, standing eight feet high, would be tall enough to be excellent fish attractors. Most of them, however, had somehow come apart and were laid out like foldout cardboard boxes.

The whole array of fishlife was there, from small schooling bait fish to medium-sized black bass to large amberjack, clustered around this oasis in the sand bottom.

Another season of studying fishes eyeball to eyeball had started.

Marine Band Opens Sunday In The Park

MARINE BAND PERFORMS TODAY — The Wing Band of the 2d Marine Air Wing of the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, opens the 1983 Sunday in the Park series of summer concert. The concert, which begins at 7 p.m. and is open to the public without charge, is to be held at the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth streets. This is the 11th season of the Sunday concerts, coordinated by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department with funding by the City of Greenville.

Farmville Youth Workshop Set

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Community Arts Council is sponsoring a Youth Theater Workshop from July 25 through Aug. 5, with Don Roebock leading the workshop. Group 1 of the workshop, to be comprised of rising sixth through ninth graders, will be held evenings from 7 to 9:30. Group II, for rising second through fifth graders, will be held afternoons from 1 to 3:30.

All sessions will be conducted in the Arts Council Theater on Main Street.

The program of activities in week one will be to explore physical and emotional aspects of acting, with week two to be devoted to rehearsal and acting techniques. The program will culminate with a show and tell production to be staged in the theater.

A minimum of 20 participants for each group is needed, and cost of the workshop is $10.

For information and applications, interested persons are to write to: Youth Theater Workshop, Farmville Community Arts Council, P.O. Box 305, Farmville, N.C., 27828. Application forms can also be picked up at the Farmville Public Library. Deadline for application is June 30.

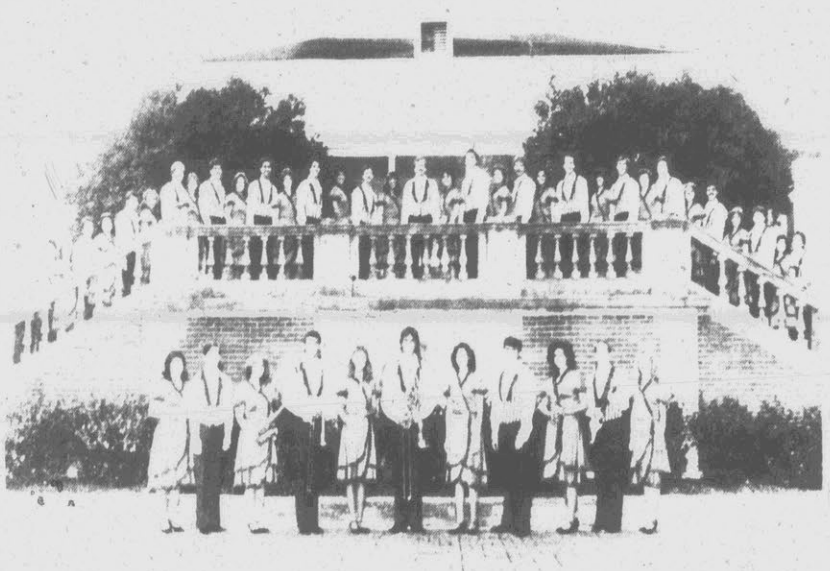
Auburn Singers To Give Concert In Farmville



THE AUBURN UNIVERSITY SINGERS ... will perform at 8 p.m. Thursday in the auditorium at Farmville Central High School. Tickets are priced at $3 for adults and $1 for students. The event is sponsored by the Farmville Community Arts Council.

FARMVILLE — The Auburn University Singers will be in performance at 8 p.m. Thursday in the auditorium at Farmville Central High School. Tickets for the concert are priced at $3 for adults and $1 for students and are available in advance from the Arts Council, Farmville Furniture Co. and Charles Joyner Clothier.

The concert is part of the summer tour of the singers and is sponsored by the Farmville Community Arts Council.

For their 1983 program, the Auburn University Singers will present several medleys of songs based on themes — a group of songs about Alabama, another about the different states, a collection of dance songs from the 1920s to date titled "American Dance-A-Rama," as well as songs from "Annie" and several individual old favorites.

The Auburn University Singers has performed for television specials, at civic club conventions, for campus events, and in concerts while on tour. In past years, the group has toured in friendship appearances in Guatemala, Roumania, and Russia. The group has appeared in programs in Opryland, Washington, D.C. and New York City, and with celebrities such as Roy Clark and the Oak Ridge Boys.

Nine Bands Scheduled For The Old Country

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. — The summer 1983 concert lineup at Busch Gardens, The Old Country in Williamsburg, has been announced, with nine groups scheduled to perform between June 12 and Sept. 3.

The concerts range in price from $2 to $4 in addition to the general admission price to Busch Gardens. They will be staged at the new Royal Palace Concert Theater, a 5,200-seat amphitheater in the France section. Show time for all concerts will be at 2 and 5 p.m., except for the Bryson/Bofill concerts to be held at 5 and 8 p.m.

The schedule of dates and bands is:

- June 12 — A Flock of Seagulls.
- June 19 — Pablo Cruise.
- June 26 — John Schneider.
- July 1 — Merle Haggard.
- July 4 — Peabo Bryson/Angela Bofill.
- July 22 — Little River Band.
- July 29 — Melissa Manchester.
- Aug. 5 — Tom Jones.

Performed In New York

NEW YORK — Sandra Lee Allen, formerly of Farmville and now president of Artistic Ventures in New York, was a performer at S.N.A.F.U.. for Lewis and Maggie Freedman on June 1 at 21st Street and Avenue of the Americas.

Performing under the name Chrysallis, she was accompanied by Phillip "Oleo Strut" Platania on guitar and Andrew Herbst on piano. The program included selections from her soon-to-be-published book, "Metamorphosis: Biography of a Butterfly."

Benefit Music Concert

On Wednesday, Greenville area musicians will present the fourth annual Blues and Jazz Benefit for WVSP, the public service radio station located at 90.9 on the FM radio dial.

The benefit concert will be held in the main room of The Attic, with music to begin at 9 p.m.

Four bands, all from the eastern North Carolina area, are donating their time to the benefit. The four are: Proteus, a jazz-oriented group; Jazz Blues, which plays soul and jazz; The Rutabaga Brothers and Lemon Sisters, whose specialties are swing, soul and rhythm and blues, and The Lightning Wells Blues Band, which plays Chicago-style blues and rhythm and blues.

Radio station WVSP has been instrumental in providing jazz, blues, soul, raggae and classical music to northern rural areas around Warrenton, extending as far south as Greenville and north to Petersburg, Va.

WVSP, which stands for "Voice Serving People," also provides a forum for vital information to rural residents in its area. Programs range from information on food stamp laws to prison and justice forums.

Funding for the station comes from listener contributions and from benefits such as the Wednesday evening music fest at The Attic.

NO VACATION

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — For the 200 aspiring teenage artists who gather for two weeks each year at the Oklahoma Summer Arts Institute, summer camp is no vacation.

Selected from a nationwide audition, the students, ages 14-18, encounter an intense curriculum in painting, dance, ballet, writing, music, acting and other artistic fields under the guidance of respected professionals at Quartz Mountain in Lone Wolf, Okla.

"There are a lot of upset stomachs, a lot of tears, and complaints of aching backs and bloody toes," said one sympathetic counselor. "But if you want a career in the arts, then you have to learn about hard work."

Children's Reading Program

Adventures A to Z is the theme of Sheppard Memorial Library's 1983 Summer Reading Progrom for children of all ages. Registration will be at at the Main Library, East Branch, Carver Branch or the Bookmobile.

The program begins June 6 and continues through Aug. 12. Readers who sign up before June 15 will be eligible to win a special kick-off prize. Each participant will receive a personal reading record, a bookmark, decal and game sheets. Those who complete reading assignments will earn club badges and certificates signed by Gov. Jim Hunt. A special read-to-me category is designed for preschoolers.

Among reading adventure activities planned for several age groups include story hours, movies, puppet shows, booktalks, and a Friends of the Library Club. The final highlight of the season's activities will be a picnic for all summer readers where certificates and special awards will be presented.

Brochures describing all programs, dates and times are available at the library. For more information, call 752-4177.

Joint Project Show On View

FAYETTEVILLE — "Knowing Your Community" is the title of an exhibition now on view at the Arsenal House Gallery, 822 Arsenal Ave., Fayetteville.

Sponsored by the Arts Council of Fayetteville/Cumberland County, the show is the work of students and adults involved in a community awareness project which has been supported by a grant from the Grassroots Arts Fund of the North Carolina Arts Council.

MEMORIAL ART — Artwork commemorting historic events is an interesting part of the American art scene, found in parks, cemeteries, and on plaques embedded in the walls of buildings. This example, located in Tarboro's Town Common, is in memory of those who died in the sinking of the U.S.S. Maine in the Havana, Cuba, harbor February 15, 1898. The metal used for the bas relief plaque was recovered from the ill-fated vessel. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Book News

By JULIE HICKS

In "Guest of the Revolution," Kathryn Koob has written the story of her unusual incarceration in Iran as one of the two women of 52 Americans held hostage during the terrifying days of the United States Embassy take-over from November 1979 to January 1981.

As Koob writes, "This is not a definitive account of what happened to the 52 Americans. Rather it is my recollection of how I handled the situation during days 'on the job' that ranged from a little tougher than normal to downright terrifying. Each of the 52 of us was treated differently, and this only tells my story ..."

When the embassy was seized on the morning of Nov. 4, 1979, Koob explains that she was safe — for the time being — in the headquarters of the Iran-American Society, a center for cultural exchange, in Tehran. Refusing the opportunity to flee, she chose instead to keep communications open between Iran and the State Department in Washington for the next 30 hours. The next day she was kidnapped and driven to the embassy compound amid crowds of angry Iranians shouting vicious, anti-American slogans. Once there, she was accused of being a spy, subjected to body searches, repeated interrogations and warned to keep silent.

The bizarre and unstable circumstances of her captivity generated a fear of the unknown, a fear that never left during the seemingly endless days as a prisoner. Her existence was marked by constant anxiety. At times she was treated with solicitous regard only to be subjected later to intimidating hints of execution and trial.

How did she survive and endure those weeks of no contact with the other hostages, the months without mail or news, the blanket-covered windows, the blindfolds, the angry chants of the mobs outside, the uncertainties of her fate in the hands of the young and zealous students? Koob maintains that her faith in God and the sustaining element of her family proved equal to her needs.

She states: "My message is nothing new, nothing new at all. Just that age-old story of trust, faith, and reliance on the promise of God. God would and did take care of me."

BRASWELL...On Trial For Murder

The Defendant, Billy Braswell

The Judge
James D. Llewellyn presiding

Prosecuting Attorney
Don Stephens

Former Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Billy R. Braswell, 41, began his battle to defeat a first degree murder charge Friday, May 27, as testimony began at the Pitt County Courthouse.

"She fired first, and I just started firing back," Braswell said of the Sept. 27, 1982, encounter on Chinquapin Road and U.S 264 Alternate that left his wife of 25 years, Lillie Mae Stancil Braswell, dead with four gunshot wounds in her body.

Since the trial began, the defense, under the direction of Milton Williamson, assisted by Cherry Stokes and Tom Greer, had attempted to prove that Braswell "did not kill his wife in a premeditated state, that she shot him first," and that Braswell is "innocent of any crime," Williamson said.

Leading the defense, Assistant North Carolina Attorney General Don Stephens, who is being assisted by Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood, presented to the court a tape made by Braswell on which Braswell asked his son Mike to forgive him and bury him by his wife.

"I know I have taken most of your world away by now, but I know you'll make it," Braswell said on the tape. He then went on to advise his son about financial and ecclesiastical matters.

Stephens also presented letters written by Braswell and addressed to Pitt County Chief Deputy Brooks Oakely, his brother Jimmy and his son concerning his marital difficulties and directions for the disposal of family property.

Under oath, Braswell said that he did write a letter and record a tape, but did so "to relieve frustration."

"I just got down ... depressed over the problems Lillie and I were having. I just had given up," Braswell said.

According to Braswell he and his wife were having a discussion about their marital problems in his stopped car on the side of Chinquapin Road. Braswell said he was holding his wife's hand when she pulled away and fired a pistol at him. Braswell said he did not know where the gun came from. After the shooting Braswell said his wife fell out of the car, where he left her. Under cross-examination, Braswell said he didn't help his wife, because "I didn't want to."

Asked by Williamson if he remembered shooting his wife, Braswell said, "I knew I did, but I don't remember hearing the shots." Braswell then testified that he drove to his home, 204 Green St., Farmville, sat in the driveway thinking, then picked his pistol up and "just shot myself." Braswell said he left that gun lying in the seat of the car and, taking the gun he said his wife shot him with, went into his house. The injured Braswell was later found by Pitt County Deputies Oakley, Billy Vandiford and Wayne Nobles. Nobles testified that Braswell was in a brown reclining chair, with a small handgun near him, when officers arrived at the Braswell home.

Nobles said the wounded Braswell told him, "Please just leave me alone, and let me die ... I didn't mean to hurt her, but she just wouldn't listen."

Other testimony included witnesses that saw Braswell and his wife talking at the intersection and who found Mrs. Braswell's body. "I thought it was trash, but when I got closer, I realized it was a woman's body," one witness said.

Cross Examination

Eight men and four women were selected to hear testimony in the Braswell murder trial which began May 27 at the Pitt County Courthouse. Three alternates were also selected to replace one or more of the jurors if any were unable to perform their duties througout the entire trial. At the left, a single juror listens intently to cross examination by prosecuting attorney Don Stephens, above far left.

Q. Can I water my tomatoes and melons by burying a tile (or plastic jug or coffee can, etc.) with a hole in the bottom and watering in it? (B.T., Barber)

A. There is nothing wrong with this method of watering. It makes efficient use of water and keeps the foliage dry. For large plantings, however, many containers are needed and installing them can be quite a project.

Q. What exactly are floral preservatives? (L.L., Charlotte)

A. Floral preservatives are formulations added to the water of floral arrangements to prolong the life of cut flowers. Floral preservatives usually contain sugar, fungicides and bacteriacides. There are several brands on the market and they are usually available from a local florist.

Q. I think my strawberries have spider mites. How can I tell for sure and how can I control them? (D.G., Greensboro)

A. Spider mites are tiny insect-like animals that remove green tissue from plants leaving them yellowish. To detect if your plants have spider mites, press the underside of a leaf on a white piece of paper. Tiny red specks will indicate an abundance of spider mites. Control them with a miticide such as Kelthane or Plictran according to instructions on the label.

Q. The only tomato transplants I could find were tall and leggy. Will I have to dig deep holes to plant them in? (L.I., Smithfield)

A. Planting leggy tomato plants in normal type holes could leave up to a foot of bare stem above ground. Ideally, the bare stem should be underground. Planting the tomatoes in deep holes would help the plants develop a deep root system. However, trench planting is an easier method of setting out leggy tomato plants. To trench plant a tomato plant, dig a horizontal trench rather than a hole for each plant. Next, remove all of the leaves from the plant except for a top leaf cluster (usually four or five leaves). Then lay the plant on its side in the trench and cover the root system and bare stem up to the top leaf cluster with two to three inches of soil. If the plant is going to be staked, go ahead and put the stake in the ground at planting while the location of the buried stem is fresh in mind. This may avoid damaging the stem later by driving a stake through it.

Q. How can I tell if nematodes are present in my soil? (R.W., Rural Ha..)

A. To determine if damaging nematodes are present in the soil before planting, collect about one quart of soil in a plastic bag as a representative soil sample from the areas to be planted and take it to your county extension office. Check with your county extension agent for more details on the procedures, forms and fees.

Q. How can I start caladiums indoors? (P.T., Burnsville)

A. Plant the bulbs in small pots in a soil medium high in organic matter. Water the bulbs thoroughly. Cover the pots with black plastic and place them in a sunny window. This heats the soil. A soil temperature of 70 degrees is best for promoting root development. Once shoots sprout, remove the plastic because the shoots will not tolerate the heat. If you lack the time and space to start your own caladiums, consider buying them from a grower.

Q. Should I go ahead and set out bedding plants? (I.G., Franklinton)

A. Don't be impatient to set out tender bedding plants. They should not be set out until late April in the Piedmont, mid-April along the coast and around May 10 in the mountains. April can be a cold, rainy, windy month, and the young plants will not grow until conditions are favorable.

Q. We are having a house built. The architect is trying to talk us out of putting gutters on the house. We feel they are necessary, but he doesn't think so and says they detract from the appearance of the house. Can you tell us the advantages and disadvantages of having gutters on a house?

A. The advantages are that they catch the rain coming off the house and prevent it from going into the soil next to the foundation or crawl space, which often can cause problems, especially if there isn't excellent drainage; that they ease the problem of getting in and out of the front door during a heavy rainstorm; and they prevent water from being blown against the house when it is both rainy and windy. The disadvantages are the one your architect mentioned, as well as their cost and the fact they must be cleaned periodically. If your architect can assure you that you will have no drainage problems if the house is built without gutters but with wide overhangs, you might follow his advice. Should it later turn oud the gutters are necessary, they can be added to the house with little more expense than if added on originally.

Q. Our two teen-age boys want us to put up a hoop for basketball practice. We have decided to attach it to a pipe set in concrete. One of the boys says the basket should be 9 feet off the ground, the other says 10. Who is correct? Also, how big should the backboard be and will be plywood be alright for it?

A. It should be 10 feet from the ground to the top of the hoop, which is the metal part of it. The backboard can be somewhere in the area of 55 inches by 35 inches. Plywood will do well, but it should be three-fourths of an inch thick and be of the exterior grade.

Q. We have been getting plumbing noises that I have deduced are caused by loose hanging pipes in the basement. I know there are pipes hangers for holding such pipes firm, but I know little about them. Is there a special kind I should get?

A. There are so many different kinds that it would take half of this page to name them and explain their uses. Your best bet is to find which pipes need support, what they can be attached to and whether they are horizontal or vertical. Write down this data and take it to the hardware store, home center or plumbing supply dealer. Show the data to the dealer after you have convinced yourself he or she knows something about the subject and ask for advice. One thing you should check yourself is to be sure that anything metal that is sold to you is of the same material as the pipes in your house.

Q. In a recent story on hacksaws, you did not mention how to use one to remove screws that have damaged slots. I removed most of the screws from a piece of old wooden furniture, but two of them came out part way and would not come out any further. What is your advice?

A. Try hacksawing into the slot so that a screwdriver blade can take hold. If that doesn't work, saw across the screwhead at a 90-degree angle. A screwdriver bit set in a hand brace will provide more turning force to the action, which should be counterclockwise.

Affordability Of Homes Increases

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Anybody shopping the real estate market will quickly tell you that handsome, roomy houses aren't going cheap these days. But homes are, by some measures, more affordable than at any time in the last couple of years.

And just what does "affordable" mean? In essence, the statistics say that the typical family in this country is in a better position to buy the typical house than at any time since late 1980.

The National Association of Realtors has come up with what it calls the "housing affordability index," and calculated it back to 1977. At its lowest level, in May of 1982, this index stood at 65.2. As of March of this year, it was up to 81.8. The higher the number, the more "affordable" housing is.

To put these abstract numbers into dollars-and-cents terms, assume that your income is at the exact middle — the median — of the national scale, and that you wish to buy a home priced at the median of all houses on the market.

The median income as of February this year was about $24,000 — some $6,000 short of what was considered necessary to support the purchase of a median-priced existing home ($68,000).

What's most important about those figures, real estate experts contend, is that the gap is narrowing. With the right combination of economic recovery, falling mortgage interest rates and stable prices, they say, it could continue to shrink in the months ahead.

Whether that benign blend of events will actually occur remains a big question, of course. Along with countless potential home buyers, lots of people who make their livings as home builders, sellers and lenders are anxiously awaiting the answer.

Mortgage rates, perhaps the key variable in the equation, now stand at roughly 13 percent, down about five percentage points from their peak levels during the worst of the interest-rate crunch. Though that has been enough of a drop to encourage a pickup in home sales lately, analyst Nicholas Tetrick at Standard & Poor's Corp. maintains that it is not sufficient to sustain a lasting recovery.

"Never before has the industry attempted a recovery with mortgage rates at this level," he said in a recent report. "In fact, much lower levels of mortgage rates have CREATED housing recessions in the past."

On the other hand, New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust argues, "the past several years have conditioned many prospective buyers to high housing costs. Few, if any, expect a return any time soon to the comparatively low housing costs of the 1960s and 1970s.

The bank concludes, "Changing attitudes about housing costs, improved affordability for many, and pent-up demand argue for a miniboom in housing production for some time to come.

"Obviously, the investment motive for home ownership, which had a lot to do with making the 1970s a roaring boom time for housing, has been blunted as inflation has come down and real estate values have stopped soaring. But shelter needs are large, and financing those needs is becoming less difficult."

When, one might wonder, will the best, the truly right, time to buy a house come along? If there ever is such a perfect moment, veterans of the game attest, it is rarely perceived as such at the time.

In 1977, says John T. Reed, editor of the Real Estate Investing Letter, the Realtors' affordability index stood at 120.6. The median family income was $16,010, and it took only $13,279 to afford the median-priced existing home, at $42,900.

"How good we had it then," observes Reed, "and how much we complained about high prices and high interest rates."

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you intend to build a house that might be classified as out of the ordinary or offbeat, you have to check local building codes to determine whether it fits community standards.

Especially if you plan on building the house of old newspapers, bottles, cans and other discarded materials!

Such structures have been known as "garbage housing" ever since Martin Pawley's book with that title. Forrest Wilson, a professor of architecture at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., has looked into the matter and says some persons actually have built or are building such houses, which loosely might be called shelters.

"All it takes," says Wilson, "is some Yankee ingenuity, plus a little innovation and the confidence you can do it. A person doesn't have to be an architect to build a house of such materials. In fact, if you are an architect, you probably won't want to do it."

In addition to paper, bottles and cans, materials such as rubber tires, stones and old automobile parts are being used. As Wilson points out, auto windows often work better than the windows in conventional homes.

While housing costs rise and help the trend gain momentum, it's not the major reason why some people choose to build houes from recycled products. It's mainly because they want to stamp their creative imprint on their surroundings.

If you get away from high density areas, you are likely to have less trouble with building codes, which is why the recommendation is given to check the regulations before you start. If you find the restrictions won't hamper your work, you should begin your construction education by reading books on the subject. Several have been published and more are on the way.

Your next step — or one that can be taken while doing the reading — is to gather as many materials as possible and begin experimenting. One way to do this is to build something smaller than a house, such as a backyard tool house. After constructing the frame, you can set bottles and tin cans in the mortar and use old newspaper as insulation. While walls made of bricks and cans filled with water or beer can provide excellent insulation, Wilson prefers other uses for liquids, especially the beer.

Prepare for negative comments from your friends who may not be able to see any beauty in a house of cans and bottles. But Wilson says you can build a good-looking house out of bottles. He says light shining through a wall of bottles can be very attractive, while cans can be so cleverly arranged that they form a new architectural style.

How much will such a house cost? There's no real way to tell, since most owners provide their own labor. One man spent less than $600 for his house, which was made principally of cans, but that was the cost without any fixtures. Even if you build a garbage house in an area which has no restrictive building codes, you still must be careful about not violating electrical and plumbing codes. Some communities which don't care too much about the kind of house you build are very touchy about who wires the place and puts in the plumbing fixtures.

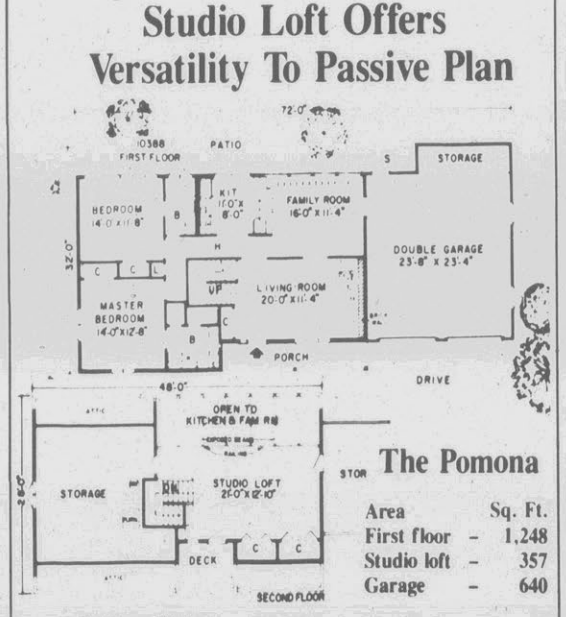
Studio Loft Offers Versatility To Passive Plan



The Pomona

Area	Sq. Ft.
First floor	1,248
Studio loft	357
Garage	640

By Jerry Bishop

Sun wall water tubes and clay tile floors, in the Pomona, gather and store solar heat generated during the day through many southern glass doors, windows and skylights. Located on the lower level are a more formal living room with wood stove, kitchen area which extends through an eating bar to the family room, two bedrooms and two full baths. Laundry facilities are tucked into the master bedroom bath area. The second unfolds into a large storage area which also houses the hot water heater and furnace, and studio loft with its own private deck. Closet space is ample here. Northern skylights add their illumination. The loft overlooks the family room from a balcony. This openness of design allows for maximum air circulation. A double garage, plentious in storage, concludes the plan.

Here's The Whole Truth About Your Dirty Roof

It's not dirt but black fungus that's turning your roof into an eyesore!... $38.95 Per Square

How black fungus can quickly blacken a white roof
Black fungus is actually a form of concentrated algae growth. Thriving in warm humid southern climates, this fungus grows and speads much the same way common mildew does in shower stalls. The end result is unsightly black streaks and stains on your roof.

Zinc granules make the big difference.
The porous granules which chemically destroy fungus spores are incorporated into each Celotex fungus resistant shingle. This fungicide is slowly released and washed across the face of the shingle by rain, providing a continuous fungus inhibiting action.

Self sealing and U.L. rated for wind resistance.
Intermittent bands of adhesive are applied across the face of each shingle. When installed on the roof, the warmth of the sun activates this adhesive, bonding the shingles. The result is a sealed down roof that can withstand winds of great force without damage.

The Celotex fungus resistant shingle "limited" warranty.
Celotex FRS fungus resistant fiberglass asphalt shingles carry a 20-year limited warranty both as to fungus resistance and life of these durable fiberglass, self sealing shingles. (Refer to actual manufacturer's warranty for complete details).

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JUNE 5, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A beautiful day for meditation and studying a philosophy of life under which to operate in the days ahead. Take time to make plans that could give you more abundance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over with loved one how to have better relations and more happiness in the future. Exercise your good judgment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to be more sensible where practical plans are concerned to gain your most cherished aims. Be logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan what to do for those who have done you favors and show your appreciation. Plan time for personal pleasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Engage in a new kind of recreation that will bring you more pleasure today. Strive for increased happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact friends and discuss important plans you have in mind. Be more precise in handling your personal affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A new approach at new ideas will make them work more successfully for you. Allow time for recreational activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make those changes in your environment that will be helpful to your welfare. Take no risks with your reputation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to analyze what you most want to achieve in the future and make plans to carry through successfully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study every facet of your life and then gain advice from advisers you trust. Express happiness with closest tie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Attend to regular routines early in the day so you'll have more time for recreation later. Be more cheerful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Taking part in public affairs can prove most satisfying and interesting today. Make this a worthwhile day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your hunches are accurate now, so be sure to follow them. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have an uncanny knack for coming up with the truth in any given situation but could be harsh in judgment unless taught early in life to have more compassion for others. Politics would be a good field here.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find a better way to communicate with your loved one for more happiness. Don't be afraid to use your talents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make that contract with a partner that can bring more profits for the future. Current events are favorable for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Put more effort into your particular talent for greater success. Gain the cooperation of a fellow worker. Relax this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans for the evening early on in the day. Get your business affairs in order after those plans are made.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Come to a better understanding with your family today. Make sure you have enough collateral if seeking credit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study ways and means for increasing production for greater career success. Keep active for more happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find better modes of expression so that you can increase revenue. Study your property and see where repairs are needed.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be a positive thinker who decides on a career early in life. Slant the education along such lines for greatest success. Religious training is recommended early in order to remain on the right path. Stress sports and music.

NOTICE OF SERVICE OF PROCESS BY PUBLICATION

TO: Robert A. Johnson, the above named defendant

Take notice that a pleading seeking relief against you has been filed in the above entitled action. The nature of the relief being sought is as follows: Judgment for money loaned on or about January 20, 1983 under the terms of a Promissory Note of that date in the principal amount of $6,953.83, together with interest at the rate of 15.78% per annum, the principal amount of said promissory note, and accrued interest being payable April 20, 1983, which is now delinquent and past due.

You are required to make defense to such pleadings not later than July 9, 1983, and upon your failure to do so, the party seeking service against you will apply to the Court for the relief sought.

This the 25th day of May, 1983.

Here Today... Sold Tomorrow!

There's one thing about putting our sign in front of your home. It changes from "For Sale" to "Sold" almost before you know it.

That's because 25000 affiliated sales associates work together covering 9000 communities throughout the United States and Canada. That's a lot of "Sold" signs.

One of the most important advantages we offer is the exclusive Homes For Living magazine. With more than one and a half million copies published each month, it covers the residential real estate market city by city, with pictures, prices and descriptions.

When we picture your home in this magazine, it's available immediately to home buyers here in town. And it's available to those 25,000 sales associates so they can act fast when someone from their town is planning to move here. That way you reach the out of town buyers who account for one third of all home sales.

So if you want to sell or buy a home anywhere at all, remember, with us it's here today and sold tomorrow.

Call us today.

CRYPTOQUIP 6-4

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: POPULAR NEW SPEAKER ON LECTURE CIRCUIT WAS ALL TALK.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: O equals N.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Ten of ◇.

The late Howard Schenken was known as the expert's expert. Not so much for sheer brilliancy, though he made enough of those plays for any three experts, but because of the clarity of his analysis over the table. This hand, from the 1941 team championships, is one of our particular favorites.

East's preemptive opening bid is typical of duplicate tactics at favorable vulnerability. Schenken decided that his hand might produce no tricks at a no trump contract, so he removed to four hearts.

West led the ten of diamonds, and there would have been no problem had Schenken been able to afford to duck this trick. But since it was likely that East held a seven-card diamond suit, a duck would have exposed South to an immediate diamond ruff. Therefore, declarer rose with the ace of diamonds.

Most players would now yield to the temptation to lead trumps immediately, to get them out as soon as possible. As the cards lie, that would have led to defeat. West would win the queen of trumps with the king, return a diamond and score his ten of trumps by ruffing a diamond.

Schenken allowed for the possibility that trumps were 3-0 and that East had opened on a six-card suit. He cashed the ace-king of spades and entered his hand with a spade ruff to lead a trump from his hand! West could rise with a trump honor and lead diamonds, but declarer could now ruff the third diamond with the queen of trumps. Whether or not West overruffed, a trump lead toward the jack would limit him to two trump tricks!

MISSION'S END

Family Copes With Parents' Twin Handicap

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — When Julie Hayes enters Duke University in the fall, she hopes to be a pre-med major and eventually to become a pediatrician in a special field.

"Whatever I do, it will probably be connected to work with deaf people," the Lexington Senior High School student said in an interview at her parents' home.

Miss Hayes, 17, has a very personal interest in working with the deaf — both of her parents are deaf and mute.

John and Janice Hayes also have a 15-year-old son named Jason. They have never heard their childrens' voices, sung them a lullaby or read them a story.

During an interview in which the teen-agers acted as translators with sign language, Mrs. Hayes said she is glad her daughter has the chance to go to college, something she had wanted to do herself until she changed her mind, got married and started a family.

John and Janice Hayes met at the North Carolina School for the Deaf in Morganton, where both spent 14 years before graduating. Hayes, a native of Elkin, N.C., learned to make furniture at the school. The family moved to Lexington about 16 years ago, when he took a job at Burlington Furniture's Philpott plant.

The teen-agers said they learned to communicate with their parents through their grandparents. Their maternal grandmother was pregnant when she contracted German measles, resulting in her daughter's deafness. Hayes also has been deaf since birth.

"I always thought you were supposed to talk and sign at the same time when I was young," said Miss Hayes. "It just got to be second nature, really."

The two children had to take a lot of responsibility. They had to call to make their own doctor and dental appointments, for instance, because of their parents' handicap.

The youngest Hayes said he also learned that most people do not understand much about the deaf. He said he cringes when he hears someone described as "deaf and dumb," because it implies that a deaf-mute must be ignorant as well.

"A lot of people don't understand," said Miss Hayes. "A lot of people couldn't believe my father worked. But I think people understand more now — they seem to be a little more aware. Some of my friends even know sign language and they can communicate with my parents when they come over. That helps. It makes them feel less isolated."

The isolation also is eased through an old teletype machine connected to a telephone that allows the Hayes to communicate with their friends. A caption machine on top of their television allows them to watch some programs.

The family also goes to many sporting events, especially the football games in which Jason plays. Hayes, an avid bicyclist, attends nearly all of his son's games, even practice sessions. Although they cannot cheer along with their daughter, the Hayes are among the proudest of the team's fans.

Pollution Phone Bringing In Tips

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's Department of Natural Resources is getting hundreds of calls each month on its new telephone hotline set up to encourage citizens to blow the whistle on polluters.

"We're getting about 15 calls a day, and a lot of them have very good information," said Robert Lawrence, who runs the 24-hour hotline service.

"We've received the first notification of several hazardous waste discharges from it."

Among those was a gas chemical leak at a Shell Oil plant in New Orleans for which the company was fined the maximum $50,000.

The department proposed the toll-free number after an anonymous caller reported that the Placid oil refinery in Baton Rouge was secretly dumping phenol into the Mississippi River.

Placid was later fined $625,000 for that and other violations by the state, and is now facing federal charges.

In both cases, the companies were criticized particularly for not reporting the violations as required by law.

Lawrence said most of the calls come from Baton Rouge, New Orleans and the industrial corridor stretching along the Mississippi River between them.

The area is an environmentalist's nightmare.

For almost 90 miles, the Mississippi is lined with oil refineries and chemical plants that are permitted to dump wastewater into the river, from which New Orleans draws its drinking water.

Limits are set on the concentrations of hazardous chemicals that can be present in that wastewater, but the large number of plants makes it hard to detect violations.

Environmental inspectors are routinely forced to give advance notice before entering some plants, and the department has been forced to seek court orders to visit some sites.

"Louisiana is one of the few states to have this service," said DNR Secretary Frank Simoneaux, who praised its ability to turn citizens' complaints into action.

Stays Aloof In Sanctuary Role

NEW YORK (AP) — The Lutheran Council of the U.S.A., a cooperative agency for various branches of Lutheranism, has declined to commend actions by some congregations that are giving sanctuary to illegal refugees from Central America. Instead, the council advised member denominations to set their own policies on the matter.

"Act Of Love" To Rebroadcast

IN THE SPOTLIGHT; WITH LOVE — Ron Howard (r.) portrays a Polish-American construction worker who honors the request of his critically injured brother, played by Mickey Roarke, to end his suffering in "Act of Love," a world premiere presentation on NBC "Monday Night at the Movies" Monday, June 6.

NBC's 'Other' Mr. T Announces New Shows

By Peter Meade

When people think of NBC's Mr. T — they usually think of the gold-laden growler on "The A-Team."

However, there are two Mr. T's at NBC. The other dresses quite conventionally and he's more powerful than his "A-Team" namesake. He's Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

Tartikoff recently announced the No. 3 network's 1983-1984 prime-time schedule. It includes nine new series and six returning shows moved to new time slots. Most of his message was punctuated with references to demographics, TV Q scores and the omnipotent Neilsen ratings. He added, "with new shows emphasizing fresh ideas... (it) builds on the momentum we established last season."

Even with the supposed momentum, NBC remained behind ABC and CBS last season. As for "fresh ideas," here are examples. A one-hour drama "about a large family struggling to maintain their working ranch in Texas." The hunchos at 30 Rockefeller Plaza have never watched "Dallas"? Or a half-hour comedy about a ghost who is only visible to one member of a family? Never saw "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" or "Topper," Brandon? And an animal who can talk and is smarter than most people. It sounds like "Mr. Ed." These "fresh" ideas, from "The Yellow Rose," "Jennifer Slept Here" and "Mr. Smith," represent a third of NBC's new roster.

Brandon Tartikoff

For the "Hill Street Blues" fans, set aside Tuesday nights at 10 p.m. Steven Bochco, executive producer of "Hill Street," has the "Bay City Blues," a California minor league baseball team. "The Yellow Rose" features an impressive cast: David (Remember "Casablanca"?) Soul; first-time series regulars Cybill (What happened to her movie career?) Shepherd and Selleck-esque Sam Elliot; Susan Anspach, Edward Albert Jr. and crusty TV veterans Noah Beery and Ken Curtis.

On Friday nights, there's "An Officer and a Gentleman" clone "For Love and Honor." Besides the recruits' tribulations there will be a romance between a sergeant (Cliff Potts) and a woman officer (Shelley Smith). Sounds like Furillo and Davenport, or how about "From Here to Eternity"?

P.S. Don't worry: "Hill Street Blues," "Cheers," "Family Ties" and "St. Elsewhere" were renewed despite the marginal ratings. That must prove demographics, TV Q's and the Neilsens don't always determine everything.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please give me some information on Jamie Lee Curtis of "Prom Night"? KELLY PERRYMAN, LEXINGTON, N.C.

TO KELLY IN LEXTINGTON: Your favorite "Scream Queen," Jamie Lee Curtis, catapulted to stardom via the "Halloween" flicks. She's developed a cult following of her own and is no longer simply another offspring of famous parents — actor Tony Curtis and actress Janet Leigh. Born November 22, 1958 in Los Angeles, Jamie Lee possesses boundless but well-directed energy, she says, "I want to try everything once — and again if I like it." Jamie graduated from the prestigious Choate Rosemary Hall in Connecticut and attended the University of the Pacific in Stockton, California, for six months before a Universal executive spotted her on an audition and signed her up to a seven-year contract. Jamie loves outdoor activities and working out with weights. She also plays the guitar and writes songs, paints in oils, is an avid shutterbug, and reads voraciously, especially dramatic literature.

DEAR MICHELE: Could you please tell me who plays Bruce Nelson on "CHiPs"? Also, how old is he and where could I write to him? CINDY BARNES, WILSON, N.C.

TO CINDY IN IN WILSON: Handsome Bruce Penhall portrays Bruce Nelson on "CHiPs." Born May 10, 1957, in Balboa, California, he is a frequent color commentator for speedway events for CBS Sports, ESPN, etc. Although "CHiPs" has been canceled, I suggest you write to Bruce in c/o NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Avenue, Burbank, Ca., 91523.

DEAR MICHELE: I watched "Tucker's Witch" almost every time it came on, and I'm impressed with the acting ability of Catherine Hicks. Would you please give me some information on her and an address where I could possibly write to her? ALAN OVERTON, WILSON, N.C.

TO ALAN IN WILSON: Ms. Hicks is a native of Scottsdale, Arizona. She is a graduate from the University of Notre Dame with a B.A. in English, and completed two years of post graduate work at the Cornell Conservatory Theater. While at Cornell she won the starring role of Maggie in the college production of Arthur Miller's play "After the Fall." That bit of casting proved to be prophetic as Hicks was later cast in the television bio pic "Marilyn: The Untold Story." Her college research into the life of Monroe helped her win the much coveted role. A former cast member of the "Ryan's Hope" daytime series (she starred as Dr. Faith Coleridge), Catherine left to appear for several months on Broadway in "Tribute," with Jack Lemmon. In 1979, she won a regular role on "The Bad News Bears" and also starred in the miniseries "Jacqueline Susann's Valley of the Dolls '1981.'" She has also appeared in the TV movies "To Race the Wind" and "Happy Endings." Her feature film credits include "Whose Little Girl Are You?" and "Death Valley." Although the series has been canceled you may write to Catherine in c/o CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca., 90036.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

GLORIA LORING, star of "Days of Our Lives," has given notice that she will be leaving the daytime series in November to pursue other casting offers. Could it be that husband, ALAN THICKE, now secure in 90 markets with his new 90-minute late night show, has made her an offer she can't refuse?

Boys will be boys — but when the boy is the size of LOU FERRIGNO — that can be dangerous. The word from Rome, where LOU is starring in "The Return of Hercules," is that he puts so much muscle in his stunts — stuntmen are refusing to work with him. Poor LOU — he doesn't realize his own 'incredible' strength.

HAL LINDEN, our favoritie police captain Barney Miller, has been named National Performing Arts Father of the Year by the National Father's Day Committee. The father of four children (three girls and a boy) HAL is currently the host of "FYI," the informational series for young people on ABC.

"Ripley's Believe It or Not" has turned into a family affair since JACK PALANCE took daughter HOLLY as his co-host. JACK is currently in Japan filming several episodes for the new season with scheduled stops in Hong Kong and Hawaii. Meanwhile, HOLLY filming in England, will be traveling to Mexico City next.

Tying The Knot

Art often imitates life, but for actress DeAnna Robbins, the reverse is true. In "The Young and the Restless," Miss Robbins portrays Cindy Lake, who was recently proposed to by Paul Williams (actor Doug Davidson). In real life, Miss Robbins recently married Chester Lietsinger, an industrial electrician she met over two years ago.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

FIRING A CANNON — My husband and I are having a little argument about who played Mike Cannon in the detective series "Cannon." — Mrs. E.Y., Plaquermine, La.

First of all, the character's name was Frank Cannon and he was played by William Conrad. Did one of you say Robert Conrad?

William Conrad

Joan Collins

SIMILAR BEARDS — Could you please inform me if Robert Foxworth and Richard Crenna are related? Their appearance and acting are similar. — J.A.G., Alta Loma, Texas

No relationship between the two bearded gentlemen, although they are both good actors. And yes, both of them shave from time to time.

MAIL CALL — I know I have read an address for Burt Reynolds in your column, but at the time I didn't think I would need it so I didn't keep it. But I would like it now. — M.A.B., Guyman, Okla.

Burt spends most of his non-working time in Florida, but the address I have printed is a Los Angeles office: Burt Reynolds Productions Inc., 8730 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90069, Suite 201.

DYNASTY PICTURES — I would like pictures of some of the people in "Dynasty," particularly Joan Collins. Where can I write to her and to them? — F.K., Fall River, Wis.

Detroit hosts Grand Prix

The 1983 Detroit Grand Prix — the 181.3-mile Formula I Grand Prix race that twists through the streets of downtown Detroit, Mich., featuring a host of the world's top drivers — will be presented by CBS Sports, Sunday, June 5 (noon-2 p.m.).

This race is the second Grand Prix event to be held in Detroit and is the seventh of 17 scheduled Formula I races on the 1983 schedule. The 2.5-mile course, comprised of 20 turns that vary from decreasing-radius hairpins to gradual curves, runs along the Detroit River and past several Detroit landmarks. Improvements made in the course this year are expected to add approximately 10 miles an hour to the average lap speed. John Watson won last year's inaugural race with an average speed of 78.2 m.p.h.

Compared with most other forms of automobile racing, Formula I Grand Prix checkered flags are shared most equally between car and driver. The machines — considered by many to be the Thoroughbreds of four-wheeled vehicles — are extremely fine-tuned single seat racers, not far in design, some spectators feel, from "Star Wars" fighter ships. Built to accelerate from 0 to 100 m.p.h. in less than 10 seconds, they can exceed 160 m.p.h. on the straightaways, running on normal high-octane gasoline.

But the nature of Formula I driving, with its variety and complexity of turns through narrow streets, places much more emphasis on the skills of the driver. In Grand Prix racing it's more often the driver with the most coordination, cunning and sharpest reflexes — as opposed to the heaviest foot — that wins the race. Decelerating from a 100 m.p.h. straight into a hairpin turn while downshifting from sixth to fourth gear, with only one hand on the steering wheel, requires a bit more dexterity than a 55 m.p.h. jaunt down the interstate.

ANATOMY OF A MURMUR

WHY WE LOVE GOSSIP

BY SAM KEEN

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send your question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

CRYSTAL GAYLE

When are you going to cut your hair?—G.D., Boise, Idaho

When it hits my ankles. I don't think I have that far to go. I wear it up a lot, mainly because when I don't it gets caught in things. Sometimes I go through a door, shut it behind me and take a step or two forward, only to get pulled back. Believe me, that hurts! I might decide to cut it if it gets caught in an elevator door. But, of course, if that happens I might not have anything left to cut off.

FRANK SINATRA

What's your most vivid memory from your early days in show business? —S.L., Fort Myers, Fla.

Perhaps when I was headlining at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City. I remember one particular Saturday when we did 11 shows. The shows weren't the problem, but time for eating was. We were always onstage. I'd choke down one bite of a hamburger before the curtain went up again. I also remember my first paycheck. I was a singing waiter at the Rustic Cabin, a long-gone roadhouse not far from my birthplace, Hoboken, N.J.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — Neil Simon says there will be no Chapter Three in his life for quite a while — if ever. He says that since second wife Marsha Mason moved out of his Bel-Air house, "I cancelled every project; for the first time in 20 years I am not writing. I just don't feel like writing. I am starting life over." Simon adds that it would be "too painful" to write about his life right now and reminds us that he didn't tackle the death of his first wife and meeting Marsha (the basis for his play and movie Chapter Two) until three years after the fact.... Dynasty filmed three different outcomes for the fire that trapped Joan Collins and Linda Evans in April's season-ending cliff-hanger. Because of prefilming contract negotiations with the stars, in the various versions one, two or none of the principals emerge safely. Collins has signed on for four more years and no problems are anticipated with Evans's renewal, so sleep peacefully, Dynasty fans — Alexis and Krystle will both probably emerge unscathed. With hairdos still perfect, we're sure.... 1950's sexpot Mamie Van Doren, now 50, has kept her looks and figure but seems to have lost her appeal and name value. Now living in nearby Newport Beach, Van Doren runs an antique shop and gives occasional seminars on "human sexuality." But a nightclub act she was working up has been dropped by a local Santa Ana spot due to lack of interest. (Van Doren's show will go on, however, in Columbus, Ohio.) "I don't really like working too close to home anyway," says the former Joan Lucille Olander of Rowena, S.D., who retired from movies in 1967 with a top salary of $250,000 a year. "I appreciate getting old. I feel very lucky to have my health. I don't regret anything."...

Marsha and Neil: Simon says no sequel.

Van Doren in her heyday.

Candice Bergen is writing the story of her early life as the late Edgar Bergen's daughter. The book, Notes from Charlie's Sister, should be released in August. Charlie, of course, being Edgar's dummy, Charlie McCarthy.

—Robert Windeler

NEW YORK — If Christopher Reeve used to cringe from picking up a check as if it were Kryptonite, he says it's because, "All through drama school I lived on $25 a week, so stinginess was a necessity. But now I don't worry about saving. There's no point in being a rich 65-year-old." Plus, no doubt, earning a reported $3 million for Superman III makes counting pennies a little less imperative.... Tom Wopat, star of The Dukes of Hazzard, and Randi Brooks, co-star of Wizards and Warriors, are TV's newest live-ins. They met when Randi appeared on Dukes.... When Mario M. Cuomo was a practicing lawyer and law professor, his father nearly burst with pride. That pride deflated when he heard that his son wanted to enter politics. Consoled Cuomo, now Governor of New York, "Papa, that's the way to become a judge."... Princess Caroline, daughter of the late Princess Grace, is trying to turn a longtime dream of her mother's into reality — by forming a Monaco ballet company.... At a recent awards dinner, Bob Hope announced that Secretary of the Interior James Watt had just named Howard Cosell's tongue "a national monument."

—Anita Summer

WASHINGTON — Joan Rivers and Elizabeth Taylor have more in common than the comedienne's caustic jokes about Liz's weight — they also share the same plastic surgeon, Dr. Frank Kamer of Beverly Hills. While Rivers unabashedly jokes about her own nose job and eye tucks, Taylor's publicist, Chen Sam, denies that the 51-year-old movie star has had a face-lift. But Liz authority Kitty Kelley, who wrote the best-selling unauthorized bio Elizabeth Taylor: The Last Star, says that since splitting from Senator John Warner (R-Va.), Liz has put on a happy face — figuratively and literally.... Department of Energy employees are breathing easier since the recent hiring of Steve Stockman, 33, as a staff assistant. D.O.E., remember, was one of the early targets of the Reagan Administration and budgetmeister David Stockman, Steve's older brother. Now it seems the department has been granted a reprieve. Steve, a lawyer and former career counselor who has been seeking international energy trade experience, says, "David and I talked over strategies and places to move to and areas to get involved in." Steve adds that his brother "confirmed" the choice of D.O.E.... Hours before Chinese tennis star Hu Na was granted political asylum in the U.S., President Reagan was on the phone telling one concerned conservative leader, "I'd adopt her before I'd send her back."

WHY WE LOVE GOSSIP

HEARD THE LATEST? WELL, GOSSIP MAY BE GOOD FOR YOU. ANYWAY, I HEARD THAT RICHARD BURTON AND ELIZABETH TAYLOR HILTON WILDING TODD FISHER BURTON BURTON WARNER . . .

BY SAM KEEN

The sexual revolution is over. But in case you missed it, don't worry — the gossip revolution is just getting into full swing.

In the minds of moralists, sex and gossip have always been linked in dubious embrace. Fornication and false witness against one's neighbors were considered deadly sins.

Then, a generation ago, sex came out of the closet. In the first rush of heady exploration, all kinds of sexuality became permissible, if not positively required. Then, quick as a one-night stand, it was over and we had the new impotence, the new celibacy, the new commitment and the new-fashioned pleasures of monogamy. With a little help from herpes, sex stopped breathing hard and settled in for the long jog home.

Lately psychologists — the moralists of our secular culture who, like moralists of all ages, busy themselves with revising the list of virtues and vices — have discovered gossip and are singing the praises of what was yesterday considered a failing of hags and busybodies. Dr. Frederic Flach, adjunct professor of psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College, considers gossip a strong social force that keeps us sane by allowing us to confide in others, share stories, ideas and happenings. It is a kind of anti-stress outlet.

Drs. John Sabini and Maury Silver take a more serious tone in their recent book, Moralities of Everyday Life (Oxford University Press). Gossip, they claim, has a positive moral function in human community. It allows us to try out our ethical judgments by applying them to others. When I find myself condemning the neighborhood lush, I discover that my values include orderliness, moderation and sobriety. Gossip helps us bring abstract moral principles down to earth.

In addition, gossip acts as an informal small-claims court in which we can redress minor injuries without having to go through the formalities of stating a case against a person who has injured or insulted us. For instance, a few years ago a well-respected psychologist plagiarized pages from my writings and presented the ideas and words as his own in his best-selling book. It was not worth my time or the effort to sue, so I balanced the scale by repeating the story. Gossip was my revenge. It brought his reputation down a peg, and thus the cause of justice was served. If my satisfaction was petty, so was his crime and punishment.

THE GOSSIP EXPLOSION: VICARIOUS LIVING AND CELLULOID HEROES

In baptizing gossip, psychologists have been making a virtue out of necessity — since we are in the middle of an explosion of loose talk and trivial information. Gossip has become big business. People, Us, National Enquirer and a gaggle of other publications spew out tidbits about the famous and infamous. We are titillated with intimations of immorality when Prince Andrew and Koo Stark either do or do not have clandestine meetings. And we are edified to learn that, through it all, Queen Elizabeth reads her horoscope every morning, dines on leftover roast beef and wanders around the palace turning off lights to save electricity. Weekly, Burt Reynolds and Warren Beatty play "show and tell" with the press and reveal their most recent comings and goings. All who have become famous — the good, the bad and the indifferent — have become fodder for the public's insatiable appetite for consuming gossip. As fame has become our substitute for immortality, notoriety has replaced earned worthiness.

But this class of celebrities created by the media are like the Greek gods, existing only so long as we attend to them and grant them fame by our attention. Our celluloid heroes and heroines fade into oblivion if we do not talk about them. Thus, getting oneself gossiped about has become an art and profession. Press agents plant "items" in the ears of editors and columnists and manufacture stories about the pseudo-doings of their clients. The media weave a myth around the famous, without which Brooke Shields would be just another pretty but bland teenager, and Jackie Onassis would be an ex-First Lady with no recent claim to fame who, like Farrah Fawcett, should return to the minors and go quietly into obscurity.

Consuming gossip about celebrities allows us to participate vicariously in their (supposedly) glamorous lives. We can imagine for a moment that we are whisked away from our ordinary Mondays and share the excitement of the beautiful people. The more details we know about their foibles and failures, the closer we can feel to them.

Celebrity gossip has a strange way of at once elevating the famous and bringing them down to size. We glorify Marilyn Monroe, turn her into the sex goddess we would desire to be or to possess, and then we revel in the stories that show she was ordinary, confused and no sexier than you or I. The rule of celebrity gossip is: What goes up must come down. When we create heroes through whom we can vicariously live out our fantasies of glamorous living without hardship, we will inevitably find ways to knock our creations off the pedestal, show their weakness, folly and commonness.

But enough of celebrity gossip and the doings of the "great." For the most part, bread-and-butter gossip is about the woman next door or the sales manager. How are we to think about small-scale, garden-variety gossip?

A CELEBRATION OF ORDINARY GOSSIP

Let's begin with a definition. According to Webster, in ordinary usage a gossip is "a person who habitually retells facts, rumors or behind-the-scenes information, especially of an intimate or personal nature." We usually think of gossip as idle talk, chitchat, trivial talk. It involves secrets and clandestine information and is usually carried on behind the backs of those concerned. Gossip isn't about big or "important" things. It concerns the intimate world, the hidden flaws and splendid secrets of ordinary people.

Traditionally, gossip was said to be a characteristically feminine vice . As the old joke had it: "What are the three fastest means of communication? Telegraph, telephone and tell a woman." In the dogmatic anti-sexist climate of the moment, we may expect some social scientist to do a study and announce that tradition has it all wrong and that men are as gabby, garrulous and gossipy as women. It is only that they talk about office politics rather than domestic affairs.

I suspect, however, that the traditional wisdom on this matter is accurate, and that it tells us something about the neglected virtues of gossip. The first evidence is my own unscientific experience. In talking with people about gossip, I have found that women understand it better than men, are more expert and knowledgeable about the stuff of which it is made.

I bring as further evidence the theories of Carol Gilligan, Ph.D., an associate professor of education at Harvard University, who has shown that men and women specialize in different modes of moral reasoning and problem solving. According to Gilligan, "Morality for a woman is being responsible to — being responsive to — oneself and others; as opposed to doing one's duty, fulfilling one's obligations." For men morality is a matter of rights and rules.

Sam Keen, Ph.D., is a consulting editor for Psychology Today magazine and author of the new book The Passionate Life: Stages of Loving (Harper & Row) but for women it has to do with relationships and taking care of people.

Now, for better and for worse, gossip is the communication network that keeps a community informed about the health or morbidity of relationships. Since the beginning of time, or at least the Industrial Revolution, men have specialized in the extroverted world of things, ideas, politics and machines, while women have been the natural psychologists, sociologists and communications experts — the people experts. To use modern jargon, women were the community "networkers" who tended the grapevine that monitored the unofficial moral happenings — i.e., who was doing what to whom and when and why. And as often as not, this knowledge was used to care for the needy or abused.

In small towns where I have lived, from Boaz, Ala., to Methow, Wash., the gossip network would inform the community about who needed help. When Jim and Mary were fighting and neglecting their son who had taken to stealing, the neighboring rancher just happened to find a job for the boy. The gossip hotline has always provided the information used by the caretakers as well as the malicious.

It would go a long way toward redeeming gossip if we gave it a more dignified name — "oral history," for example. In my neighborhood the most marvelous gossip is a vintage woman who has been there forever. For many decades she has kept up with all the news that is unfit to print. She is the nearest thing we have to a living archive, a memory bank in which the communal lore and history are stored. The official reason why my house came equipped with a strongroom with metal door and barred windows is that a previous owner had a lot of photographic equipment; the unofficial explanation is that he was dealing dope and kept getting ripped off.

This brings us to another of the virtues of gossip — entertainment. The gossips of a community are the unsung and unpaid storytellers, bards without guitars or portfolios. They entertain and lighten our days with trivial tales and weave the chaotic events of our lives into a coherent narrative. It is hard to gauge how much delight gossip adds to our lives unless we harken back to the primal time before the average American family watched TV 40-odd hours a week. In the good old days, we rolled our own entertainment and manufactured our own vicarious dramas.

Of course, we were always voyeurs. Human beings love to peek into other people's bedrooms, check out their dirty linen and ferret out hypocrisy. But at least in the pre-media days, we mostly limited ourselves to the modest presumption of sticking our noses in the business of our actual neighbors. There is something much more human about rejoicing in the gossip that a terrible marriage has come to an O. Henry-type ending (the wife fell in love with and ran away with the husband's sister) than in the subtrivial gossip about the characters in Dallas.

Another of the unsung virtues of gossip is that it serves as a pin to puncture the pompous and as a magnifying glass to reveal hypocrisy. Gossips, like philosophers, specialize in the separation of appearance and reality. If Mr. Anderson preaches the virtues of honesty but cheats on his income tax, or swears fidelity but keeps a mistress in a distant city, his duplicity will be known and his hypocrisy held up to ridicule by the unofficial jury of gossips. So long as there are wagging tongues and investigative reporters, our sins will find us out.

Gossip also serves as a distant early-warning system that gives us information that may protect us. For instance, physicians are notoriously lax in disciplining their own ranks or criticizing one another publicly. So if you want to know which surgeons to avoid and which to trust, tap into the network of hospital gossip. Any nurse can tell you what the grapevine says about which doctors drink excessively, are lax in procedures and abuse patients.

VICIOUS GOSSIP

There is an unsavory and sinister side to gossip. At worst it is a form of unscrupulous character assassination, an indictment in a kangaroo court in which the accused is never allowed to confront the accuser or conduct a defense. Malicious gossip is a cheap shot, a weapon of the cowardly. It allows vindictive people to take their vengeance by destroying the reputation of an enemy they lack the courage to confront or fight in the open.

The more closed and tyrannical a society, the more that gossip functions as a trial without jury and as an instrument of illegitimate power. Malicious gossip is a double-jawed trap because it mangles those it catches even when they struggle to get free of false accusations. Politicians are well versed in the use of the double-edged weapon of smear tactics. One of Lyndon Johnson's favorite stories was about a politician who was in a neck-and-neck race with a rival and had to come up with some trick to turn the election. In a moment of inspiration he told his campaign manager, "I've got it. We will accuse him of having sexual relations with pigs." The campaign manager turned white and replied, "We can't do that. It isn't true."

"I know it," the politician replied, "but I want to hear him deny it."

A great deal of gossip contains a malicious strain. Notice when you repeat the story that the minister's wife was once picked up for shoplifting, how passing this secret makes you feel superior and puts her down. Gossip is frequently an attempt to raise our self-esteem by lowering the estimate we and others have of another person.

Such covert power games always backfire because the very sense of powerlessness we are trying to compensate for by passing malicious gossip is made worse by the guilt and shame that results from the knowledge that we have resorted to unworthy means. Self-esteem cannot be increased by decreasing the esteem of others. Jacqueline Orlando, Ph.D., a psychologist in Gainesville, Fla., says, "The amount of malicious gossip people repeat is an accurate index of their sense of powerlessness. If you find yourself slipping into this kind of gossip, it is best to stop and honestly face your own fears."

AN ETHIC FOR GOSSIPS

Should we or shouldn't we? Are there guidelines that separate creative from destructive gossip? Is there in our verbal intercourse anything parallel to the ethic that guides us in matters sexual?

We should begin any discussion of the ethics of gossip by remembering that a good reputation is a right protected by law. Should you defame your neighbor's character by passing false information accusing him or her of having a loathsome disease, committing a crime or being unchaste, you may be sued. If, however, your neighbor is found guilty of seducing minors or poaching deer out of season, you have a legal right to gossip about his justly earned bad reputation. Whether you should or not is a matter governed by ethics but not law. Ethics concerns what is good, better and best, not what is merely legal. No one can stop you from passing malicious gossip so long as it is accurate, but the question is what it does to your psyche and to the community when you make a habit of filling the grapevine with vindictive talk.

The most important thing is to examine our motives to see whether we intend to do another person good or ill, to demean or enhance, to treat him as a thing to be used for our satisfaction or a "thou" whom we respect.

When, as a child, I came home with some neighborhood gossip, my mother would always ask, "Is it true? Is it helpful?" Gossip brings us an enormous amount of information about other people, which we may use in a self-serving or a careful manner. We may react to a report that our neighbor was drunk and abusive by condemning and feeling superior to him and repeating the gossip, or by seeing his conduct as a cry for help and an occasion for offering a sympathetic ear. Likewise, when we are offered an item of malicious gossip, we are presented with an opportunity to test our moral courage. We may confront the self-appointed prosecutor and become the defender of the accused's reputation.

One of my best informants about the world of gossip is a woman who is a practicing Zen Buddhist. "In Buddhism," she explained to me, "we have a precept of Right Speech. So I make a rule that I do not pass along any item of gossip that I would not be willing to say to the person's face. I also do not repeat anything that seems to judge or merely blame a person. Gossip should increase our understanding about why a person acts in a particular way, and therefore increase our compassion for that person."

The powerless and the vindictive specialize in malicious gossip. The generous and compassionate circulate stories that enhance the reputation of others. To reckon the full creative power of gossip, remember the last time you heard on the grapevine the echo of a complimentary story about yourself that one person told to another behind your back. We all like to be talked about so long as what is said makes light of our vices and celebrates our virtues. In gossip, as in lovemaking, the things that matter most are humor and kindness. FW

HOW FAR IS TOO FAR? GOSSIP GUIDELINES FROM EMINENT EARS

For the latest word on the rules of the gossip game, we turned to some celebrated celebrity watchers. Here's what they revealed:

Dick Cavett, talk-show host: "I don't know where the idea would come from that the public has a right to know anything about anybody other than what someone chooses to show them. The public's right to know anything private about anybody does not exist."

Liz Smith, gossip columnist: "It changes, depending on circumstances. I might not write something about somebody, then I might turn around and write it about someone else. I think politicians pretty much are fair game, because they appear before us as these paragons of virtue. If somebody takes drugs recreationally, I don't want to write that. But if it's somebody who's in a position of power in the Government or something, it would be different. I generally don't write that people are gay unless they say they are. I don't write that husbands and wives are playing around unless their behavior is so flagrant it seems to have some pertinence. I would not go down a chimney into somebody's bedroom. I think people do have a right to privacy."

Iain Calder, editor in chief, National Enquirer: "I think the truth is the single most important factor in any story. Individual rights obviously have to be taken into consideration, but the public's right also has to be taken into consideration. The first thing you've got to decide is whether it's true, and you've got to decide if your reader is interested in that particular story and then if it is offensive to run the story. The jury in this is the readership. I think a celebrity's wishes come second to whether the public should know or not. If a married man who's a star is going out with another girl, this would be of interest to his fans."

James Seymore, senior editor, People: "Any question about the right to privacy often has to be balanced not necessarily with the public's right to know, but with the right to know the truth. We do not print information that is libelous or that we cannot confirm. But we're not going to give away the pages of the magazine for it to become a promotional organ of these people. We seldom withhold information because we think it might be damaging to the individual."

Q: Do you ever feel a conflict of interest because of a friendship with a celebrity?

Cavett: "Yes. I remember having to say, 'I'm sure you and I would both rather not have to talk about this, but since it would be artificial of us to pretend it isn't known, what about this or that?'"

Smith: "Constantly. It's very tough. It's very hard to live in New York City and to be invited to everything that's happening in show business and all the parties and then write about these people dispassionately. But if I have a real story, I call them up and try to convince them that it's in their best interest to let me write it instead of somebody else."

Calder: "Oh, that doesn't come up because the Enquirer is stuck in Lantana, Fla."

Seymore: "Occasionally. We don't live the sort of giddy, glamorous life that people might imagine. Personally, I don't want to move in those circles and I don't want the people who are reporting for me to be moving in those circles. But if there is a conflict of interest like that, we try to assign someone else to do the story."

Q: Do you think today's gossip columnists lack the power Hedda Hopper and Louella Parsons had?

Cavett: "They clearly do, because society's changed so much that the things that were considered naughty and ruinous in those days are almost everyday practice now. It's amazing to me that those two old bags ever had any power at all."

Smith: "That's absolutely right, and the reason is because morals have changed. You can't have power in a world in which people are no longer shocked by children born out of wedlock and young people living together. It's very hard for the gossip columnist to shame people."

Calder: "Sure. You have television, so people have more sources of information."

Seymore: "Yeah. Things that were just outrageous in the 40's are routine now, and the public is more sophisticated." —Mary Ellin Bruns

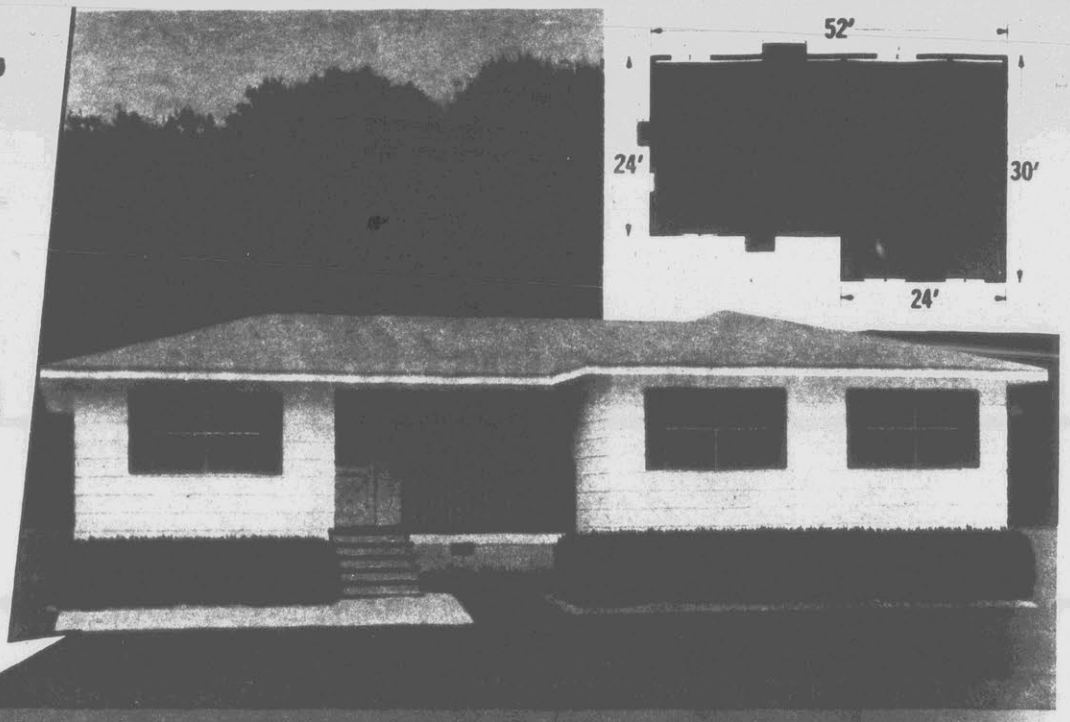
You may not believe it, but . . .

It's a FACT!



. . . Jim Walter financing can save you as much as $58,000 on a $35,000 home . . . and WE CAN PROVE IT!

FINANCING EXAMPLE
	Other Financing (After Down Payment)	JIM WALTER (With No Down Payment)
CASH PRICE (Example)	$35,000.00	$35,000.00
Annual Percentage Rate	13%	10%
Number of Payments	360	240
Monthly Payment	$387.17	$337.70
Total Cost	$139,381.20	$81,048.00

Believe it or not, you CAN save as much as $58,000 on a new home, built on your property and financed by Jim Walter. What's more, your home will be paid for in 20, rather than 30 years, and your monthly payment to Jim Walter will be less . . . MUCH LESS! It sounds unbelievable, but it's TRUE! It's a FACT and we can prove it! While most other home financing is 13% or more, Jim Walter's annual percentage rate is still only 10%. For comparison, your monthly payment on a $35,000, 30-year mortgage at 13% would be $387.17. The monthly payment for a home with this cash price, built and financed by Jim Walter, would be only $337.70 . . . almost $50.00 less. That's fifty of your hard-earned dollars, and for only 240, not 360 monthly payments. Based on this comparison, the TOTAL SAVINGS on your mortgage will actually be MORE THAN $58,000. IT'S A FACT!!!

Jim Walter can build your choice of beautiful homes with two, three or four bedrooms and one or two baths, from a selection of more than 20 models. Financing can be arranged in a matter of days, rather than weeks, and there will be no "points" or closing costs to increase what you will pay.

NO DOWN PAYMENT FOR QUALIFIED PROPERTY OWNERS

Jim Walter can begin construction almost immediately, almost anywhere that you own property. We'll complete the outside and, if you like, stop right there so that you can finish the interior at enormous savings. Or, we'll finish the inside, up to 90% complete. You tell us how much or how little you want to do. Remember, however, the more inside work you do for yourself, or with friends, the more money you'll save at today's labor costs.

Call, send the coupon, or visit the display park nearest you to get all the facts. We want you to know exact costs and what your monthly payment will be before construction even begins. We want to explain the many money-saving methods you can use to keep costs within your budget. When you have all the facts, we truly believe you'll choose Jim Walter. Then, together we'll build on your property to give you more home for less money than you might have imagined.

TRAVELER'S GUIDE TO GOOD HEALTH

Jim Shelcik

By Claudia Riemer

The last souvenir of your vacation shouldn't be a travel-related illness. What follows could help prevent some of these ailments — from jet lag to traveler's diarrhea — from occurring in the first place, or at least prepare you to cope with them when they can't be prevented.

Traveler's diarrhea: Characterized by the sudden onset of diarrhea and often accompanied by abdominal cramps, nausea, vomiting and sometimes by fever, this illness results from a virus, bacteria or an intestinal parasite. All enter the body through contaminated food and water, and symptoms last from one to two days to a week. There's a chance you'll contract this if you're traveling in a foreign country, especially in tropical and subtropical areas, because water purity may not be regulated.

After the onset of diarrhea, such prescription drugs as Lomotil and Immodium will help bind you and stop the cramps. But in some cases, these drugs could prolong the infection. Pepto Bismol is also useful in both preventing and treating traveler's diarrhea, but it must be consumed several times a day to be effective. A study at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston has found that two antimicrobials — trimethoprim and sulfamethoxazole in combination, or trimethoprim alone — reduce the severity and duration of certain forms of traveler's diarrhea to 30 hours, provided that the medication is taken promptly after the onset of the illness. Your doctor can prescribe one of these medications before your trip so you can take a supply with you if you think you'll need it.

If you develop diarrhea but haven't brought medication, see a doctor. Never take nonprescription drugs purchased in a foreign country.

One serious complication of prolonged traveler's diarrhea is dehydration and loss of electrolytes (salts). A treatment recommended by Dr. Theodore C. Doege of the American Medical Association is to alternate drinking a glass of 8 ounces of fruit juice, ½ teaspoon honey or corn syrup and a pinch of salt, and a glass of 8 ounces of boiled or carbonated water and ¼ teaspoon baking soda. Repeat until you quench your thirst.

Parasites: Contaminated food and water can also transmit other diseases. Parasitic infections result from poorly prepared meats, fish and shellfish. Bacteria such as staphylococcus, a toxin produced when food remains unrefrigerated for too long, often causes food poisoning. And gastrointestinal disease and hepatitis are spread by food or utensils washed in contaminated water.

Though you can contract all of these problems dining out in this country, they occur more frequently in other countries. Salads, unpeeled fruits, raw vegetables and dairy products (in warmer climes, such as the Caribbean) can be the source of these ailments, so avoid them if you're uncertain about how they were cleaned or prepared. Avoid drinking water (even for brushing teeth) and ice if you doubt the water's purity.

Insects also transmit diseases, such as spotted fever and encephalitis. Mosquitoes carry dengue, haemorrhagic fever and, of course, malaria. When taking a trip to areas where these prevail, consult your doctor about any necessary vaccines. When visiting tropical areas, wear protective clothing, and use insect repellent to prevent diseases transmitted by insects.

Jet lag and motion sickness: Less serious problems, such as jet lag and motion sickness, can still cause much discomfort. Dr. Charles F. Ehret, co-author of Overcoming Jet Lag (Berkeley Press), has found a way to acclimate your body clock to correspond to the time of your destination and thereby reduce or eliminate jet lag. You simply introduce "time cues" — including a change in diet and mealtime order — into your daily routine two to four days before your trip.

You don't have to suffer with motion sickness — caused by the body's inability to adapt to movement — either. Symptoms, including nausea, vomiting, headaches and fatigue, can be eliminated by an antihysmatic — Dramamine, for example. A skin patch called Scopolomine, placed behind the ear four hours before your journey, will also prevent motion sickness. This is only available by prescription.

A final note: If you have any ongoing medical problems, be sure to take along extra amounts of the medication you're using. FW

WORKING

ARE ON-THE-JOB HONESTY TESTS THE BEST POLICY?

By Tobie Sullivan

"If you found a zipper money bag belonging to the Third National Bank, would you open the bag to see what was in it?"

Your answer to this question — along with 157 others on the pencil-and-paper honesty test from which it comes — may determine your chances of landing an increasing number of jobs. This and similar psychological tests have been used to screen over three million applicants for positions in retailing, banking, government, data processing, health care, manufacturing, security work and other occupations in which temptation lurks in the form of merchandise or money.

"We're talking about 75 percent of the job classifications in this country," says Richard P. Reinertsen, vice president of sales at Reid Psychological Systems, the Chicago-based publisher of the Reid Report, the oldest contender in the rapidly growing field of honesty testing.

As on-the-job crime rates soar, businesses rely on these pre-employment screening tools to do what an interview can't. A Congressional committee estimates the cost of white-collar crime at $44 billion annually, 10 times as much as all robberies and burglaries combined; one expert predicts that internal theft in the United States will reach $53.7 billion in 1983. Retail employees alone account for yearly losses of almost $6.5 billion.

Starting with the Reid Report in 1950, written honesty tests were developed as a more attractive — and more accessible — replacement for the lie detector, or polygraph. Depending on volume ordered, honesty tests cost as little as $10 each, compared with $30 to $75 for polygraphy. Most tests can be completed in under an hour, and if responses are called in rather than mailed, scored almost immediately. London House Management Consultants, a Park Ridge, Ill., company that publishes the Personnel Selection Inventory (P.S.I.), provides computer-analyzed results over the telephone in minutes; a written report follows within 24 hours. More significant than speed or savings, however, is the fact that psychological tests are legal, whereas polygraphy is restricted or banned in over 15 states.

Tobie Sullivan is a freelancer who writes for a variety of publications.

Unlike the polygraph, which measures the subject's reactions to factual questions about prior events, the honesty test attempts to assess attitudes and predict actions. Its premise is that dishonest people assume others are equally dishonest and, therefore, answer accordingly. Thus, only a potential bribe taker would respond positively to "Do you think the average policeman would accept money to overlook a traffic violation?" Such people supposedly admit wrongdoing and advocate leniency for thieves. And because most individuals regard themselves as typical, they are unlikely — or unable — to cheat. Despite the incentive to appear reformed in hopes of parole, for example, prison inmates notoriously perform poorly on honesty tests.

Along with trustworthiness, the P.S.I. measures tendencies toward drug abuse and violence. Although employers may ignore the latter categories, all three allegedly are valid predictors of on-the-job behavior. In contrast to most other testing companies, which grade applicants as either recommended or not recommended, London House issues scores based on a probability scale; each client sets its own cutoff level. According to Samuel J. Maurice, executive vice president of London House, rejection rates vary from 5 percent to 40 percent of all applicants.

How reliable are the tests? Because test publishers protect their products by keeping scoring keys secret, psychologists are hampered in their evaluation efforts. Studies do demonstrate a correlation between high dishonesty scores and admissions of theft, but most relevant research has been conducted by psychologists employed by the publishers and is deemed less than objective.

"I don't recommend honesty tests because I don't think they work," says Virginia Boehm, an industrial psychologist and partner in Assessment and Development Associates, a consulting firm in Cleveland. "Industrial research is necessary for credibility, but I haven't seen any."

Others object to the invasion of privacy that any psychological test entails. Although honesty tests are considered less offensive than polygraphy, which involves being strapped to a machine, they do oblige job seekers to testify against themselves; even the refusal to answer a sensitive question, such as whether one would inform on a co-worker, may be held against a person. "The expectation is that the applicant will say negative things about himself, but there's something wrong in judging by what you might do rather than by what you've done," says Norma Rollins, a privacy specialist with the New York Civil Liberties Union. "And as with any test, the results could find their way into your records."

But during a time of double-digit unemployment, few can afford to reject a prospective job. Employers are entitled to make the tests mandatory, and state and Federal agencies have dismissed all legal challenges by ruling that honesty tests do not discriminate on the basis of race, sex or age. One worker refused to take a version of the Reid Report designed for current employees and was subsequently fired. He lost his 1981 appeal to the Texas Employment Commission. "I don't like to say there's no legal recourse," maintains Trudy Hayden, former director of the American Civil Liberties Union's privacy project. "No statutes deal directly with this, and few unions have taken a specific position, but unions do have grievance procedures. Still, most people confronted with honesty tests in a rotten employment market have no choice but to take them."

Even less is known about the psychological-testing industry than about the tests themselves. The half-dozen companies in this highly competitive field are privately held and totally unregulated; the American Psychological Association is not empowered to evaluate or sanction tests. Yet the clients who use them apparently are satisfied that honesty tests are a necessary evil — and that they work. Conventional background checks, after all, often are insufficient. "There are two sides to the coin," London House's Maurice reminds detractors. "Most employers make hiring decisions for subjective reasons. An interview is a poor selection device because an interviewer may be swayed by preconceived notions or by someone's appearance. We recommend using our test in the context of the total selection process, and we instruct users on its limitations. It's an aid, not a crutch."

Civil libertarians nevertheless insist that an experienced interviewer, a solid reference check and a probation period can yield the same results without assaulting the dignity of the job applicant. But until more workers become more honest, it seems that the honesty test is here to stay. FW

WHEN YOU'RE ITCHING TO BUY. . .

By Merrie Spaeth

Summertime means flea markets, auctions and roadside sales. For tips on how to be a savvy collector, FAMILY WEEKLY spoke with Terry Kovel, co-author with her husband, Ralph, of 40 books on antiques and collectibles, including their recent The Kovels' Collectors' Sourcebook (Crown).

Q: Mrs. Kovel, are collectibles good investments?
A: That's like asking if stocks are good investments — some collectibles are. For example, if you bought carnival glass mugs about 10 years ago — they would have cost you $10 apiece — you could sell them today for more money than you would have made on interest with the money in the bank. But collectibles tie up your money, and you also have hidden costs, like insurance, for antiques.

Q: Should collectors try to buy the oldest collectibles?
A: No. Rather, buy the best or buy at the top of the period you collect. If you can't afford the top, buy from another period. Also, buy what interests you, because the key to successful collecting of things that hold their value is to learn about them. That's why it's best to concentrate on a limited area — don't collect "china," collect a narrow field, like American 19th-century pottery made in New Jersey. And try to be among the first to start collecting something, before it is already popular.

Q: What's hot now?
A: All sorts of things. Advertising memorabilia have gone crazy. So have cartoon and celebrity items, like Little Orphan Annie, Hopalong Cassidy and Charlie Chaplin. I just heard of a Shirley Temple cup — not a mug, they're about $35 — that went for $700 at auction. Things that have a lot of handwork, like quilts, are big sellers.

And here's a hot prediction. Look for the Ohio pottery designed by Eva Zeisel. We think this is really going to hit big.

Q: What are some general cautions to avoid getting fleeced?
A: First, don't buy something that needs repair unless you can fix it yourself. In general, I think antique dealers are wonderful and reputable, but they do tend to be overly optimistic. They'll always tell you something can be repaired, but they don't say at what cost. And the smallest thing can dramatically change the value of an item. A hairline crack reduces the value of a glass vase by two-thirds.

Second, get a written receipt for an expensive item, describing its age and condition. If you later learn it's a fake, the majority of dealers will take it back.

And that reminds me to add that we prefer local auctioneers. If you're dealing with someone who leaves town the next day, you have no right of return. FW

DON'T BE FOOLED BY GRID TYPES

An article on insect lamps in the June 1982 issue of Consumer Reports indicates that insects entering grid-type lamps are free to fly right out again unless they are electrocuted by touching 2 grid wires simultaneously! Grids in many lamps are fairly widely spaced and hundreds of the most bothersome gnats and insects are free to buzz about and "bug" you. Grid-type lamps also tend to clog up with insect remnants which must be removed every few days. Clogging also tends to short-circuit grid lamps.

THE SECRET OF THE MARK VII

Its powerful 75 watt Angstrom Black Light, recommended by the U.S. Dep't. of Agriculture as the best light for attracting phototropic insects, has a wide wave length . . . enough to attract insects from over a full acre. All light sensitive, pesky, flying insects, large and small, are destroyed once they come in contact with the lamp. The Mark VII has UL listed parts made in the U.S.A., is 100% safe for children, pets, birds, and beneficial day-working insects, and is environmentally accepted.

The Mark VII uses the same proven effective principles used at many stadiums, race tracks, restaurants, dairy barns, swimming pools, etc. More than 200,000 have been sold in the U.S.A. and thousands more in insect infested sub-tropical countries in the West Indies, Mexico, Panama, India, Malaysia, etc. Its attractive, non-conducting molded plastic body is impervious to the elements and should give years of trouble-free service. Extra bulbs are available at low cost.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

STEPHEN BARRY REAPS ROYALTIES WITH ROYAL SERVICE

With Prince Charles in Australia.

They say no man is a hero to his valet, but surely Britain's Prince Charles is one in the eyes of his former manservant, Stephen Barry, 34, now making a king's ransom with Royal Service (Macmillan), his recently published, best-selling memoir. Even before publication, Barry's book about his 12 years with H.R.H. commanded a princely, six-figure sum for a magazine excerpt. Though Barry has been criticized for disloyalty, gossip-hungry readers won't find too much spice in this tasteful reminiscence, whose juicier bits include a discussion of Prince Charles's eating habits (he loathes chocolate pudding and loves cold-fish dishes). FAMILY WEEKLY*'s Mary Ellin Bruns spoke to Barry about the private world of Britain's royals and the public's fascination with them.*

Bruns: Was there anything that disappointed you about Buckingham Palace?
Barry: Well, to an extent. I went there thinking, "It's every night champagne, caviar and gold plates." It's not that at all. I was amazed how modestly they live in private, how they can't stand waste. They don't starve, but they certainly don't have course after course like Queen Victoria did.

Q: Did you ever see Charles let down his guard?
Barry: Sure. If he'd been out for the day to do something, he'd come back and say, "Guess what happened?" Something fell down or something went wrong. He saw the funny side of things, as long as nobody was hurt. I never forgot he was the Prince. But I didn't go around on all fours all day long bowing and groveling.

Q: Why do you think the Prince waited so long to get married?
Barry: Two reasons: A, he had quite a lot of fun as a bachelor. And B, it's a job for life. You just can't leave her in five years and marry somebody else. Now he's enjoying the wild oats he has left to sow with the Princess, and he's having quite a good time with her.

Q: Does the Prince have any faults?
Barry: Of course he does. He's got a temper. Inefficiencies annoy him.

Q: Your book is so discreet.
Barry: Sadly, the truth is sometimes duller than fiction.

Q: Did you leave a lot out?
Barry: I honestly didn't. The thing is, Joan Collins didn't live in the palace. It wasn't like Dynasty.

Q: You didn't stumble on some embarrassing incident?
Barry: No, no, no. You hardly can at the palace. I mean, you say to a maid in the parlor, "Have you seen the Prince?" "Oh, he's just gone into the bathroom."

Q: Where do you think the press should draw the line in covering the royals?
Barry: Sadly, the Prince knows they need each other. I think decency should be the line. For instance, when the Princess was pregnant last June in the Bahamas, I think the photographs of her looking pregnant [in a bikini] were a terrific invasion of privacy.

Q: Why do you think people love gossip about the royal family?
Barry: People want them to be royal and yet they like the human flaws in them. Prince Andrew running around with Koo Stark is a very human thing for a man to be doing.

Q: What is the difference between the royals and the rest of us?
Barry: They're exactly the same as we are. Except they live in palaces and they've got their own yachts.

Q: If they do a movie version of the book, who should play you?
Barry: Dudley Moore.

Q: Do you agree that no man is a hero to his valet?
Barry: Yes, because other people who've still got valets treat them like dirt. The Prince certainly didn't. I saw him in every stage of his day. I was with him when he was fed up and I saw him when he was very happy, but I didn't come to the decision, "I'd like to murder you." They were extremely happy years. I can't think how my life would have been as interesting had I not been lucky enough to do it. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ

WILL HUMOR GET MORE THAN LAUGHS FOR CHARITIES?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How funny a joke seems to you depends on where you are sitting.

2. What's humorous to an extroverted person is often not funny to an introverted personality.

3. Men tend to see the humorous side of a bad situation, while women rarely see anything funny in adversity.

4. It's smart to tell a funny story before asking for a charitable donation.

ANSWERS

1. True. Undergraduates at Plymouth State College (New Hampshire) rated tape-recorded jokes while seated either next to or in front of another person and found jokes more humorous when seated next to someone.

2. True Differences in personality types studied at the University of London revealed that extroverts enjoy more aggressive humor than introverts, who prefer cognitive styles of humor such as puns and jokes based on incongruity.

3. False. A team of Southern Illinois University behavioral scientists tested male and female students on the extent each tries to be funny in various situations. They found that females tend to see the humorous side of things as stress and distress increase, while men tend to become more serious.

4. True. In studies at Texas A & M University, undergraduates were asked to donate money to a needy cause after they listened to either a humorous or a nonhumorous tape-recording. Students who heard the humorous tape contributed significantly more money than did the others. The investigators concluded that this is one of many responses likely to be affected by an exposure to humor. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

NASA

FAR OUT

You may not notice it, but next week (June 13th, to be exact) our hearty Pioneer 10 spacecraft will take a giant leap for mankind when it flies out beyond all the known planets and leaves our solar system behind.

Already soaring along for 11 years, it will pass our last planet, some 2.8 billion miles from the sun, and could continue in space for billions of years. It is hoped that Pioneer can pinpoint a possible dark-star companion to the sun — perhaps even a 10th planet. And a message is being carried aboard, aimed at intelligent life elsewhere.

A plaque, designed by astronomer Carl Sagan, outlines the solar system, diagrams a few basic science principles and features drawings of a man and woman au naturel. But NASA's Peter Waller informs us that a brouhaha has arisen over the drawings — something about the female's physique not being as detailed as the male's. Well, if this provokes all kinds of sex-role hassles among the little green men and women out there, we won't be around to hear about it. Pioneer's first contact outside our solar system will be with the nearest star to us, called Ross 248. And that will be in the year 34,593— give or take a millennium.

HOW ABOUT A HAND FOR VIDEO-GAME JUNKIES?

Pity the poor video-game enthusiast. He has no special uniform to identify him as the athlete he is — no customized helmet like a football player, no high-top sneakers like the basketball player, no tacky shirt like the bowler. Well, in this case, necessity was the invention of Mother.

Mrs. Carmel Delaney of New Orleans noticed that her 13-year-old son, Bob, was developing blisters and calluses on his hand from spirited attacks with his video-game joystick. "When he told me that his friends sometimes used socks to protect their hands," she says, "I came up with the idea of the glove." The "glove" is the Video Pro Glove with open fingertips, a soft leather palm, stretchy nylon on the back of the hand and Velcro fasteners.

At first, Mrs. Delaney admits, her son was embarrassed to wear it, but now the glove is the item at New Orleans arcades. So far several thousand of the $7 gloves have been sold at specialty stores and convenience stores, and Delaney sees it as the first in a projected line of video-game accessories. For more information, contact Video Pro Enterprises Inc., P.O. Box 23663, New Orleans, La. 70183.

FINANCIAL GLOOM FOR FATHERS OF GROOMS

June is always the most popular month for weddings, and with Father's Day just around the corner, what could be more timely than some good news for you fathers of the brides across America?

No one is exactly sure how it came about, but the "rule" is that the bride's family traditionally picks up the majority of the wedding bills. But many folks think it's time for a change. According to a recent Merit Report poll, 61 percent of those surveyed say that, in the case of young people getting married for the first time, the groom's family should pay equally for the wedding, while 23 percent say it should remain the burden of the bride's family. Three percent think the groom's family should pick up most of the tab, and 13 percent had no opinion — and, probably, no daughters.

BUT HOW'S THEIR COFFEE?

A special breed of computers for small businesses probably will eliminate secretaries and clerks by 1992. That's the informed opinion of International Resource Development Inc., a market-research firm in Norwalk, Conn. "Those who earn their living by handling the scheduling, billing or bookkeeping functions of a small business may want to sabotage the efforts of their superiors to obtain a vertical microcomputer system," states an analysis by the company. "Otherwise they may find themselves out in the cold."

The report continues bleakly: "Small businesses may eventually find themselves consisting only of a superelite managerial and professional group and an 'underclass' that performs menial tasks. Secretaries and clerks will slowly but steadily lose their means of livelihood, with many forced down to the underclass."

"THIS IS ONLY A TEST"

In 1981 some wise-guy students at the University of Florida thought they could avoid guaranteed bombing out on exams for which they weren't prepared. Three times during final-exam week, the main testing hall had to be cleared because of bogus bomb threats, and the tests were postponed.

Kimble Mead

But the next year, the university struck back with an even more ingenious solution. No, they didn't make their students sweat it out under threat of being blown to smithereens. They just insisted that the kids pick up everything and move it to a specially created alternative test site within five minutes. Well that's no fun, and once the word spread, the bomb threats dropped to one the next year, with no fallout at this year's exams.

Please accept my application for membership in the Military Book Club and send me the book(s)—up to 3 choices—whose number(s) I have printed in the boxes at right. Bill me the total of the prices indicated plus shipping and handling. I understand that I need buy only 4 more books at regular low Club prices during the first 2 years of my membership to complete my commitment. My membership will be subject to the terms and conditions presented in this ad. Also send me Charlie Company and a Vietnam map.

No-risk guarantee: If not delighted after examining my selections, I may return the books within 10 days at Club expense. My membership will be cancelled and I will owe nothing. Charlie Company and the map are mine to keep in any case.

How the Club works:

Choose up to 3 books from those shown above.

You'll receive your choices at the prices indicated (plus shipping and handling) and your free book and map after your application for membership is accepted. We reserve the right to reject any application. However, once accepted as a member, if you are not satisfied, return the books within 10 days at Club expense. Your membership will be cancelled and you'll owe nothing. The free book and map are yours to keep in any case. About every 4 weeks (14 times a year), you'll receive, free, the Club's magazine describing the coming Selection(s) and Alternates. In addition, up to 4 times a year you may receive offers of special selections, always at discounts off publishers' prices. If you want the featured Selection(s), do nothing; it will be shipped to you automatically. If you want an Alternate, or no book at all, indicate your preference on the order form and return it by the date specified. That date allows you 10 days to decide. If you receive an unwanted selection because you had less than 10 days, return it at Club expense and owe nothing. Once you've purchased just 4 books during your first 2 years of membership, you may continue to enjoy Club benefits or resign at any time. There is a shipping and handling charge on all books shipped. The Military Book Club offers its own complete hardbound editions, sometimes altered in size to fit special presses, saving you even more.

Club editions save you up to 30% off the publishers' list prices quoted above.

- TSAR-STUTTERED! What did the Tsar put on his baked potato? Tsar cream. What did the Tsar put on his hot dog? Tsar-kraut. What was the Tsar's favorite soda? Tsarsa-parilla. What was the Tsar's favorite Chinese dish? Chicken Tsar mein. Any to add?

- Sum Numbers! 1. What is the only number that contains as many letters as its value? 2. What two numbers contain half as many letters as their value?

1 Four 2 Six and twelve

- Well Versed? Hey, diddle! The cat and the fiddle, the cow jumped over the moon; the little dish laughed to see such sport and the dog ran away with the spoon. What's wrong?

Dish and dog are switched

- Tongue Twists! Say fast: "Shut the shutter, Sis," shouted Shawn. Touring Turks took the 2:22 through train to Turin.

NAME THAT FLOWER

The name of a familiar flower is the solution of this poser. A clue to each of the five letters in its name is found in the following rhyme:

My first is in pork,
but not in ham.
My second's in oyster,
but not in clam.
My third is in pond,
but not in lake.
My fourth is in hand,
but not in shake.
My fifth is in eye,
but not in wink.
My whole is a flower
that's red, white and pink.
What flower am I?

The flower is a peony

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

. . . . . .

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

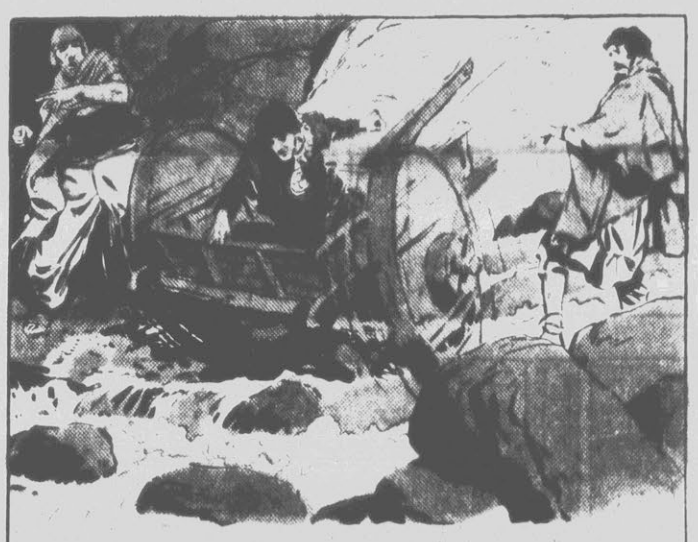
Our Story: TORPOR RHAPSODIZES ABOUT THE ISLE OF SLOTH WHERE NATURE IS SO BOUNTIFUL THAT MEN NEED NEVER WORK. VAL FEELS A STRANGE SLUGGISHNESS STEAL OVER HIM. HE SETS TORPOR DOWN AND RELAXES. ORCHARDS CROWN THE HILLTOP AND VAL LANGUIDLY SAMPLES THEIR FRUIT. "OH, DID I FORGET TO TELL YOU," TORPOR ASKS MALEVOLENTLY....

"...THAT THE LONGER ONE STAYS HERE THE LAZIER ONE BECOMES? ALL OF US HERE WERE ONCE SHIPWRECKED OR CASTAWAYS OR VISITORS LIKE YOU."

ANGRILY VAL STRUGGLES TO HIS FEET. THE VERY AIR SEEMS HEAVY. HE MUST GET OFF THE ISLAND ON HIS OWN, FOR ANY SEARCH PARTY FROM THE SHIP WILL SUFFER THE SAME FATE. VAL'S EYELIDS DROOP AS IF HUNG WITH LEAD. YET HE SPIES AN OLD CART UNUSED FOR DECADES.



"I'LL NOT, OF COURSE, LIFT A FINGER TO STOP YOU," TORPOR LAUGHS. VAL'S FEEBLE MUSCLES ARE NOURISHED BY FURY. HE STARTS THE CART ROLLING AND WITH A DESPERATE HEAVE PULLS HIMSELF ABOARD. AS IT PICKS UP SPEED EVEN THE LAZIEST INHABITANTS JUMP TO SAFETY.

THE CART HURTLES DOWN THE HILLSIDE AND SPLASHES INTO A RIVER THAT SOON CASCADES WITH ITS LETHARGIC CARGO INTO THE SEA.
