Board Seeking Keep Bids Within Limit

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education is negotiating with bidders on the Chicod School lunchroom project to keep the bids within the $350,000 budgeted for the construction.

All bids were over $350,000, school Superintendent Eddie West told board members at their monthly meeting Tuesday. West said he was "negotiating with contractors to effectuate possible project reductions."

As soon as this process is complete, he said, contracts will be awarded to the low bidders.

Base bids include:

•General contracting: R.L. Casey, $208,457; Eastern Construction, $208,386; Farrior & Sons, $217,217; C.A. Lewis, $214,985, and Trancon Group, Inc., $233,290.

•Plumbing: Kinston Plumbing and Heating, $87,300; Kipeco Piping, $83,452; Lenoir Plumbing and Heating, $113,094 and W.M. Wiggins, $98,317.

•Heating and air conditioning: Henry Baker Heating, $62,000; Blanton and Company, $62,573; Central Heating and Air, $86,600; Larmer Mechanical, $47,950; Pitt Mechanical, $60,640; Southern Piping, $54,000, and Kinston Plumbing and Heating, $58,000.

•Electrical: Darden Electric, $42,500; Ellen's Electrical, $39,883; Pitt Electric, $36,500; Stuart Shinn, $33,800; Watson Electrical, $35,951, and Wells Electrical, $44,490.

The Northeast School Transportation Area coordinator has recommended to the board that school bus traffic from the new Ayden Middle School be routed from Edgewood and Stokes streets in Ayden.

In a letter to Dr. West, coordinator Cato C. De Vane Jr. said "an approach (to the school bus parking lot) from Edgewood and Stokes streets ... seems to us to be feasible and we would recommend it."

Direct access to the parking lot from N.C. 11, also considered, would require "an additional median crossover along with turning lanes for north-bound and south-bound school bus traffic," the letter said.

ROSE HIGH GRADUATES ... stand in place after marching to their seats in Minges Coliseum Tuesday night. Approximately 350 seniors received diplomas as members of the 1983 graduating class. Heavy rainfall dampened the clothes, but not the enthusiasm of graduates, family members and friends.

Nicaraguan Diplomats In U.S. Pack To Depart

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a swiftly moving diplomatic drama marked by charges of assassination plots and spying, 21 Nicaraguan diplomats are obeying U.S. orders to close all six of their country's consulates and leave the country.

The State Department on Tuesday ordered the consulates shuttered and the diplomats and their families expelled in an unexpectedly severe and swift retaliation for the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats by Nicaragua on Monday.

"The Nicaraguan government's precipitate action in expelling U.S. officials, giving them an unreasonably short deadline for leaving the country, and then the public show staged (in Managua) on June 6, called in our opinion for a strong response," said Rush Taylor, a spokesman at the State Department.

"An important additional consideration was the Nicaraguan government's use of its consulates for intelligence operations," Taylor said.

Another official, speaking privately, said the consulates were "being used very actively" for intelligence gathering. He gave no details.

In Managua, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry distributed a note to reporters which said Nicaragua "denounces before the international community the latest act of hostility by the Reagan administration against Nicaragua."

The statement said the U.S. action brings Central America closer to war. "Now the United States comes with this response of closing the six consulates and expelling our diplomats, which strengthens the line of confrontation and the war in Central America," it said.

Word of the U.S. action was passed to Nicaraguan Ambassador Antonio Jarquin during a chilly 15-minute interview with James H. Michel, newly appointed acting assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

At the Nicaraguan Embassy, Minister-Counselor Manuel Cordero, the deputy chief of mission, told reporters that "so far the U.S. government hasn't challenged the proof" that three expelled American diplomats plotted for the CIA to try to kill foreign minister Miguel D'Escoto and to form terrorist squads.

However, the State Department says it "rejects the charges." And Linda Pfeifel, head of the political section at the U.S. Embassy in Managua and one of the three expelled Americans, called them absurd.

The officials heading the Nicaraguan consulates in New York, New Orleans, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco were given until 4 p.m. local time today to close their doors and leave the country.

The remaining officials and all dependents were told to be out by Friday.

Cordero said 50 to 60 Nicaraguans in all would have to leave. The action would leave open only Nicaragua's embassy here, its mission at the United Nations in New York City and honorary consuls in Santa Barbara, Calif. and in Puerto Rico.

Managua and Washington were already locked in a long-running diplomatic word battle that includes U.S. charges that Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government funnels Soviet arms to guerrillas in El Salvador and the counter charge that the Reagan administration is striving "to overthrow our government."

In Congress on Tuesday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 20-14 to ban U.S. undercover operations in Nicaragua and to instead openly help friendly governments in the area intercept arms bound for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Some committee members, however, are predicting that a compromise will be reached when the issues comes before the full House that would allow U.S. covert aid to continue. No action is expected until later this month.

Deluge Failed Deter Big Turnout For Rose Grads

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite the deluge of Greenville rain Tuesday night, the 1983 graduation of approximately 350 Rose High seniors was its usual festive event, with friends and parents heartily cheering the graduates. In all the past years that the ceremony was held in the open at Ficklen Stadium, it had become almost a tradition that graduation evening was a perfect, balmy day, so it was a stroke of fortune that this year's ceremony was scheduled as an indoor affair at Minges Coliseum.

This year, the top three graduates chosen as speakers were Stephanie Deans, Lizz Wang and Suzanne Wille.

Deans, referring to the school years behind the graduates, said "we have made that first year which has introduced and paved the way to the new beginning we are about to face and harking back to early dreams of career goals said, "before we could reach these goals, we would have to devote many hours of hard work prior to our commencement in 1983."

She listed three major goals for graduates: "First, achieving a desired position in the world of work, second, serving in the military to help our great nation retain its status of universal respect, and third, accepting the role of responsible parenthood."

Lisa Wang, making note of having to part from classmates, said, "We cannot help turning our head to catch a glimpse of our neighbor and realizing that this unity is only temporary, for tomorrow we will scatter like the rays of the sun to shine upon our own block of city pavement or patch of grassy field."

"All of us are heading in some direction, either toward a continuation of the old or to the beginning of a totally new experience. We must retain a sense of identity. We should feel neither limited nor intimidated by society or anything else. If we hold fast to our individual ideas and beliefs, nothing will be capable of measuring the height or breadth of our success and accomplishment."

Suzanne Wille avowed that the 1983 graduates "have surpassed all others, not only in academics and extracurricular activities, but also in athletics. Together we are leaving a multitude of laurels for upcoming classes to admire."

Suzanne quoted Alfred, Lord Tennyson: "We are a part of all that we have met," then added, "We are individual people, aware of ourselves and our world that awaits us."

"No mystery lingers in our minds or in the minds of those who are acquainted with us. We are one, we are many, we are unique, we are united, we are the class of 1983."

Lamont Brown gave the invocation and led the performance of the tassel ceremony. Esther Lynette Hammond presented the thought for the day, and Sidney Rogers Warner introduced the three student speakers.

Superintendent Delma Blinson, in his formal presentation of the graduating seniors, remarked that "there's no graduating class in the nation that I'd not be willing to compare with this class. They're the best educated seniors we've ever had."

Diplomas were awarded by Stephen (Jack) Wall, chairman of the Greenville Board of Education, and Rose High Principal Howard Hurt.

The traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" music was played by the Rose High Band conducted by Ben Ferguson, and Chris Love played a trumpet solo of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Pitt Deputy Pascasio Resigns In Wake Of Testimony On Braswell

Pitt Deputy Sheriff Lee Pascasio, who said during a court appearance last week that he "considered taking a warrant out" on Sheriff

Ralph Tyson because he believed the sheriff "had done a very wrong thing," resigned Monday.

Tyson confirmed today that Pascasio, an investigator with the department, submitted his resignation. Tyson would not say if he asked Pascasio to resign but he noted, "I feel like it was one of those things that was necessary."

Contacted at his home this morning, Pascasio said, "I knew it was a possibility that I would have to leave the sheriff's department. I did not want to." He added, "My concern is the best interest of the community."

An eight-year veteran with the sheriff's department, Pascasio made his statement about Tyson during the Billy Braswell murder trial last week in Superior Court.

Called to testify as a defense witness, Pascasio referred to Tyson during cross examination by the prosecutor for the state but he never told the court what he thought the sheriff had done wrong. Pascasio testified he was a friend of Braswell, a former Pitt County deputy who was convicted of first degree murder in the 1982 shooting of Braswell's wife, Lillie.

Following the trial, Pascasio said the incident he referred to regarding the warrant involved his testifying at Braswell's bond hearing last November. Recalling his disagreement with Tyson, Pascasio said he "felt at one point, the sheriff was applying pressure on me not to testify" at the hearing.

Pascasio said Tyson "was concerned" about the possibility that Braswell might commit suicide. Pascasio, who did appear at the bond hearing, said at the time, "it appeared to me the sheriff had done a very wrong thing" that "bordered on intimidation of a state witness."

Pascasio said Friday, "I had good intentions and the sheriff had good intentions, too," but Pascasio said it was "a time of dis-

RALEIGH — An expansion budget proposed by the leadership of the General Assembly would add some $8,544,961 to East Carolina University's funding for the coming biennium, Rep. Ed Warren said today.

He said the proposed new spending, which must be financed through a fund raising package, would add $6,918,379 for continued expansion of the medical school in 1983-84 and $7,504,098 in 1984-85.

Also included in the expansion spending proposals is $227,000 for the library, $478,000 for plant maintenance and $1,153,124 for basic support programs.

While work on the budget has not yet been completed, Warren said the annual budget with the proposed additions for ECU would be around $74 million.

Baptists Plan New TV Station To Serve Area

ACTS of Eastern North Carolina received the rights for television channel 14 in ceremonies this morning at Memorial Baptist Church, and plans to have a television broadcast station operational sometime next year.

Tommy Payne of Greenville, chairman of a 14-member board of directors who will operate the non-profit station, said the facility is the first church-owned television or radio station in the nation.

The station, according to Payne, will be affiliated with the American Christian Television Service (ACTS), a division of the radio and television commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The rights to channel 14 were received from Dr. Charles Franklin of Jacksonville, who at one time had planned to establish a commercial television station in Pitt County.

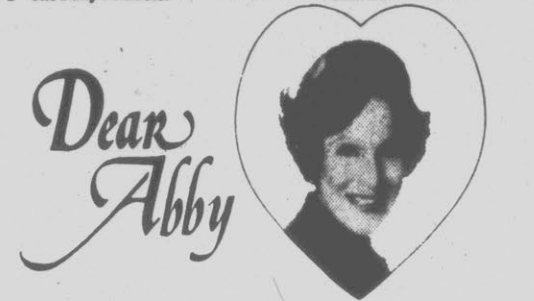

R.L. "Bob" Martin of Bethel, a member of the board of directors, said the cost of land, offices, transmitter and other facilities will be about $3.5 million, which he said, will be raised through contributions from individuals and churches. Annual operating costs have been estimated at $900,000.

The station has been licensed by the Federal Communications Commission for 5 million watts. The coverage area for channel 14 will be comparable to channels 7, 9 and 12, if a tower of comparable height is used.

Martin said programing will include lifestyle pro-

His Party Could Mar Parents' Anniversary

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a problem I've never seen in your column. I will be 50 years old in December, and my wife wants to give me a big party to celebrate the occasion. I would rather she didn't, because in September we're giving my parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and a little quick addition will explain why I don't want a big splash on my 50th birthday. My wife assures me that people are very broadminded today, and nobody will care if it becomes known that my mother was pregnant with me when she walked down the aisle. My wife then suggested that I "lose" a year and celebrate my 50th birthday next year in order to spare my parents embarrassment. What do you think?

PREMATURE IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR PREMATURE: If you're giving your parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in September, I suggest you celebrate your 50th birthday quietly in December.

DEAR ABBY: A reader named Sue asked you about the expression, "Mind your p's and q's." She wanted to know, "What do the 'p' and 'q' stand for?"

You supplied three possible theories, but neglected to mention the explanation one would most expect from an old newspaper hand like you.

An elderly printer once told me the expression goes back to the days when printed pages were set by hand, one letter at a time.

The printer's wooden "cupboard" from which he withdrew each piece of type was called a job case. It was compartmentalized into pigeonholes that kept the a's together, the b's together, etc.

The most popular job case, with an exception or two, arranged the pigeonholes in alphabetical order.

The bay containing the p's was the next-door neighbor of the one containing the q's. So it was easy to get the p's in the wrong bay, and vice versa. Such mistakes led to typographical errors, which were hard to detect because p's and q's are look-alikes.

Thus apprentice printers were constantly admonished, "Mind your p's and q's!"

ROBERT McMORRIS,
COLUMNIST, OMAHA WORLD HERALD

DEAR MR. McMORRIS: The theory proffered by the elderly printer seems more likely than any of those I submitted in my column.

Coincidentally, my source was the Morris Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins. Any relation, Mac?

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to "A Raging Fool," you wisely pointed out that children who witness violence at home grow up to believe that it is an acceptable way to deal with their anger and hostility.

That caused me to recall what the late Martin Luther King Jr. wrote in his book, "Why We Can't Wait" (Harper and Brothers, 1946).

"Man was born into barbarism when killing his fellow-man was a normal condition of existence. He became endowed with a conscience. And he has now reached the day when violence toward another human being must become as abhorrent as eating another's flesh."

National Awards Pilot Of Year and Officers Named

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Two dozen nurses in a Baltimore hospital have teamed up to help parents through tragedies that may occur during the perinatal period — miscarriages, deformity, retardation, premature birth or infant death.

The volunteers provide acute, emotional support to families whose expectations of joy over an impending birth are turned into heart-break.

The idea for the "round the clock crisis-intervention team in the maternal-child health departments at Sinai Hospital came from nurses Jeanne S. Ten Broeck and Ida R. Samet.

The two are among nurses named awardees in the first Foundation for Excellence in Nursing competition sponsored by RN Magazine.

They said they formed the unit because personal and family tragedy frequently visited the maternal-child health unit when experienced crisis-intervention nurses were not around.

The team also includes two ob-gyn social workers.

Each member of the team during an 18-hour training course is coached in current views about the grief and loss processes, therapeutic interviewing, crisis intervention and special needs of parents of premature or malformed infants.

The awards competition aims to find the most beneficial developments in the practice of nursing, said Bartlett R. Rhoades, publisher of RN. "The idea is to share them with all health-care providers in the nation," he said.

Nurses at the American Oncologic Hospital in Philadelphia won an award for an innovation that can eliminate the need for frequent hospitalization and save a patient $2,000 a month.

Carol McClarren and Nancy Fell developed the procedure for self-administration of a drug therapy for advanced breast cancer patients.

"Even better than saving the patient about $2,000 a month is the fact that we're giving the patients back control of their own lives," the Philadelphia nurses said.

Patient learning of self-care techniques is the key to success, the nurses said.

The patient is taught how to put a catheter in place so an infusion pump attached to it can deliver medicine directly to the body.

Nurses at Crozer-Chester Medical Center in Chester Pa., received an RN citation for a program to promote lasting deep-breathing habits among patients suffering chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

The program developed by Ellen K. Boyds and Sally Mowris involves patients in structured exercise that helps them form good breathing habits.

"Those completing the program report an increased sense of well-being, improved ability to cope with chronic illness, increased exercise tolerance and more effective breathing," Ms. Mowris said.

An award honoring outstanding achievement by a nursing service or agency went to people responsible for setting up a Mercy Hospital satellite clinic in San Diego, Calif. It operates out of the San Diego Square Downtown Senior Center.

Since opening in July 1981 the satellite clinic has provided the elderly with referral service for acute medical problems, management of sub-acute problems, and a program of preventive health maintenance through a nurse practitioner.

The award is shared by principal originators of the clinic, including nurse Janet L. Marlborough; Robert W. Brown, associate administrator of Mercy Hospital and Medical Center, and Mavoureen O'Connor, president of the San Diego Kind Corp., which operates the senior center.

All told, 162 entries were received in the competition.

"This gratifying response, plus the nature of the entries — all of them reflecting a profession that is deeply dedicated to the comfort of humankind — attest to the high value of this new medium of recognition and idea exchange," Rhoades said.

"Marvelous nursing techniques and programs to enhance patient care frequently remain unrecognized and unknown to the health-care community and the general public."

"We intend to publish free booklets describing the winning entries, and we plan to publish selected entries."

At Wit's End

Every year, in the name of fun, millions of Americans pack their entire homes in suitcases and head out for a good time.

Ignoring the advice of seasoned travelers who warn you to "pack light," you still see tote bags that double the body weight of the carrier, and little old ladies dragging along suitcases on wheels like they're on their way to building a pyramid.

It's amazing what some people think they cannot live without for two weeks. With some, it's shoes. God forbid someone should see you in Rome wearing a grey pair of shoes with a tan skirt.

I've seen back-packers carrying sawed-off lawn chairs, Boy Scouts "roughing it" with 35 cassettes for their stereos, and a lone hiker with a stove and a tent for five strapped to his back.

With my husband, it's a tripod for his camera which he has carried all around the world and used only on one occasion: to fish his hat out of the water when it blew off his head while he was riding in a canoe at Disneyland.

Most of us are over-prepared because we were taught at a young age to consider every contingency.

The year my first-born went to camp, we received three mimeographed sheets (single-spaced) from the counselor telling him what to bring. It was amazing to me that he functioned in a rather active society at home, yet he did not have enough clothes for camp. It took us two weeks and $400 to upgrade him to living in a godforsaken field in a mildewed tent with 20 other kids who looked and smelled like they had been raised by wolves.

Their main concern was dry feet and required no less than three pairs of shoes. You cannot know how astounded I was to discover he was not living in trenches.

I have learned long ago that wherever you are going throughout the world, the weather will be "unseasonable," so don't try to pack for it. It will be the first time in 200 years it has rained in the desert, snowed on the equator, had a drought in a rain forest, and reached 120 degrees in the Arctic.

I watched a family the other day at the airport clutching their "security blankets." The younger daughter carried a baton (that she would leave in an airport restroom in Kansas City), the older daughter lugged around a five-pound mound of hot rollers for her hair, the mother carried a bag containing an unfinished afghan and the father carried an attache case of newsletters and annual reports which would put his teeth to sleep in 10 minutes.

What fools! None of them had remembered to bring a coffee pot, cord, cup and coffee that was stuffed in my tote bag. They don't have coffee everywhere, you know.

Legend Will Continue

"Jack" (William Harrison) Dempsey was a dropout who left home still in his teens, drifting aimlessly to scrounge a living any way he could. Along the way he learned how to fight, in due course he became heavyweight champion of the world, a folk hero to multitudes of fans, and a wealthy man.

He was a "natural" in the ring, becoming wholly intent on the one purpose of being there: to destroy his opponent. He did that very well.

As has been frequently noted, he belonged to the "Golden Age" of sports which was marked by a score or so stars of the era ... as individuals and as team members; his star was among the brightest.

But something else happened along the way that endeared Dempsey to the public at large, something that perhaps boxing brought him, and perhaps was one other ingrained quality of first the boy and then the man: he was a gentleman with the instincts of sportsmanship, chivalry and courtesy.

If he criticized "the long count" in his second bout with a younger Gene Tunney, it was not heard by the public. And the story that after his second defeat to Tunney, the almost blinded Dempsey asked his trainer to lead him to the winner because "I want to shake his hand," was not told by the dethroned champion nor from a PR office, but did become part of the legend.

He escaped the crippling effect other fighters endured from too many blows to the head, and launched a second career, this time as a restaurateur. His personal warmth helped assure his success in that field, too.

Dempsey died last week at the age of 87, of natural causes; but the legend will live as long as boxing itself.

ECU Reorganizes

East Carolina University Tuesday announced plans for a reorganization of the teacher education program administrative structure.

The action was the result of criticism by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction of the lack of central authority over the university's teacher education programs.

The criticism affected the accreditation of the program. Chancellor John M. Howell said he anticipated the changes will be acceptable to the NCATE, which prefers more centralized control in the hands of the dean of education.

Since the teacher education accreditation problem arose, the administration has been at work on ways to solve it. The reorganization is the result and hopefully it will quickly lead to full restoration of the teacher education program's accreditation.

Overestimated

CORINTO, Nicaragua — President Reagan has made an unlikely attraction of this sleepy port town on Nicaragua's Pacific coast, but sightseers might be disappointed.

It's here, the Reagan administration suggested recently, that Soviet merchant ships are unloading military equipment — including tanks and "attack" helicopters — for use by Nicaragua's government and Salvadoran guerrillas. Such a major depot would normally be off-limits to outsiders — especially reporters.

But government officials in the capital, Managua, were only too happy to encourage an impromptu, unescorted visit here May 27, less than 24 hours after the White House released satellite photographs of Soviet ships in port taken May 26. Indeed, we walked right up to the gangplank of the Novovolynsk, the only Soviet vessel then in port and one featured in the State Department photographs.

That day, however, instead of T-55 tanks and other Soviet-made military hardware, the Novovolynsk was unloading fertilizer. According to records provided by port authorities upon request, fertilizer also came off two Soviet ships pictured at dockside in the widely published White House photographs. Moreover, had one of the Soviet ships been hiding weapons on board, it would have successfully evaded Salvadoran port officials at Acajutla, its last port of call before Corinto.

At Corinto, the only evidence of cargo with military applications were 67 East German-made, single-axle "field kitchens," allegedly destined for Nicaragua's agrarian reform program, and several all-purpose trucks of Sovietbloc origin. Ironically, port records indicated that the field kitchens had been delivered by a ship of Panamanian registry.

This isn't to suggest that Corinto hasn't received its share of arms shipments. Even Carlos Nunez Tellez, one of this country's nine-member directorate, conceded the point in an interview.

But a visit casts doubt on the validity of Reagan's latest anti-Nicaragua media blitz. In the rush to preserve congressional funding for its Central American program, the White House overestimated the ability of pictures to tell the whole story.

As is often true on American campuses, college course enrollments in Nicaragua can reflect the country's economic conditions. At the Managua-based Central American Institute of Business Administration, founded in the 1960s by Harvard Business School professors, interest in public project management has increased at the expense of entrepreneurial skills. "Our traditional (student) market in Nicaragua has diminished," said John Ickis, one of the school's American-born academic directors. "Someone interested in a private-sector career (in Nicaragua) doesn't see much opportunity."

Almost 15 months of life under strict government censorship has left Pedro Joaquin Chamorro embittered but occasionally triumphant. Chamorro says that official censors regularly cut almost 40 percent of the articles and graphics in La Prensa, the popular daily newspaper of which he is codirector. Chamorro's personal file of censored material contains mostly articles and photographs that might be deemed critical or embarrassing to Eastern-bloc countries.

On separate occasions, however, representatives of the Soviet and Czechoslovakian Embassies in Managua have approached Chamorro with the intent of purchasing the censored sections. "They wanted to know what was going on," said the amused 13-year-old editor.

A U.S. humanitarian group recently received from the Nicaraguan government an unusual request for "sports" equipment. Among the items in short supply here, according to an official needs list, are dominoes.

Backing Grows For Longer School Year

RALEIGH — Last fall, when Dick Spangler suggested that North Carolina expand its school year from 180 to 200 days, he caught a lot of people by surprise. Gov. Jim Hunt and Loretta Martin, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, had essentially the same reaction: Sounds good, but I haven't really given it much thought.

Spangler, chairman of the State Board of Education, is no longer alone in calling for a longer school year. The National Commission on Excellence in Education endorsed the idea in its blockbuster report and the National Task Force on Economic Growth supported a longer school year in the report it approved in its meeting at Research Triangle Park last month.

But the idea is not universally accepted. There was much criticism of Spangler's idea in North Carolina last fall. As Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh said at the task force meeting, "We should be giving greater emphasis to uninterrupted classrooms and a better use of time than to going to 200 days." Others note the monumental cost of adding another month to the school year and the difficulty of holding summer classes in buildings that aren't air conditioned.

Even among proponents of a longer school year, there are differences of opinion as to how that extra time should be used. And there are those, like Hunt, who argue that we should begin expanding the amount of teaching first by extending the school day, then the school year.

The momentum for the 200-day school year comes from those who look around and see Japanese. English, Russian and German children getting better educations. These people have taken the American idea of broad public education and done us one better. Japanese children, for example, go to school 240 days a year. If we're to compete internationally, we have to provide more school days, the argument goes.

Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander has a longer school year plan in motion. It will provide for the standard 180-day school year and then an optional four weeks of special classes. No child would be required to enroll for any of the extra days and parents could enroll their children for all or part of the extra session. He envisions students working in small classes of six or seven, beefing up their reading, or taking a special course in some field like computer programming or arts appreciation.

But Alexander's plan came under fire from Cal Frazier, education commissioner of Colorado. "If we're really serious about competing internationally," Frazier said, "we have to look at the Japanese and their 220 to 240 day schedule. We can't just provide this extra education for a select group. It must be for all kids." In Colorado, he said, businessmen have become so concerned about the education problem that they have begun lobbying for a longer school year.

Frazier agreed with Alexander, however, that the extra 20 days should be different in content from the first 180 days. He suggested special short courses and field trips.

Hunt, in endorsing a gradual climb to 200 days, differed from Alexander and Frazier. The extra time, he said, should go toward the improvement of basic skills. "We must do a far better job with those fundamental subjects. When we get to 200 days, we should be doing a better job with basics," he said.

Those who argued against the longer school year managed to water down the task force's proposal. The report says states should extend school years to a "suggested" 200 days.

Changes In The Situation

I was having lunch in one of my favorite restaurants the other day with a diplomatic correspondent from Foggy Bottom, when the Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs walked in.

"There's 'Too Tall Tommy' Enders," I said. "Don't talk to him," the diplomatic correspondent said to me.

"Why not?"

"He's soft on Castroism," was the reply.

"You've got to be kidding? Too Tall Tommy is one of the hardest of the hard-liners in the State Department."

"He isn't hard-line enough for the White House. They've just given him the boot, because he was looking for a diplomatic solution to the civil war in El Salvador."

"What the hell was he trying to do that for?"

"Beats me. I'm only telling you what I know. The story is that he had proposed a two-track policy towards Central America. One was to pursue our military objectives in the area and the other was to try and work out some sort of negotiation with the representatives of the guerrillas. The second track blew the minds of Reagan's Security Advisor William Clark and U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick."

"I should hope so," I said. "Why would you want to try to negotiate a settlement in El Salvador when you can have a great little war down there?"

"I've seen it happen to other State Department officials. They start out being hard-liners and then they read the cables from our ambassadors about the governments we're supporting, and suddenly they decide there has to be another option besides a military one. Too Tall's problem was that he stared reported on the realities of the situation, which is something the White House doesn't want to hear."

"Well, if you tell the president something he doesn't want to hear you deserve to be fired."

"I wouldn't be too harsh on Too Tall," my friend said. "In anybody's book but Bill Clark's and U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's, he'd still be considered a hard-liner on Central America. But if you so much as mention a peaceful solution as an alternative to the two of them, they go up the wall."

"What has the ambassador to the U.N. got to do with Central America?"

"A lot more than Secretary of State George Shultz. Mrs. Kirkpatrick is the only hard-liner in the administration that Clark and the president listen to. The rumor is that she really got ticked off when Too Tall went to Spain and asked the prime minister if he would use his good offices to ease tensions between the factions in the Central American area."

"How do you know this?"

"The White House leaked it to us."

"Too Tall should have known better. If we're going to stop Castro from exporting revolution it's going to have to be done with guns and not talk."

"It wasn't just Too Tall's lack of hard-lining that did him in. He was also working the Hill trying to get a consensus from Congress on what our policy should be there. He even talked to liberal Democrats and Republicans."

"Why would he do something stupid like that?"

"I guess he felt without congressional support, nothing could be done about El Salvador."

"Didn't he realize when you start talking to Congress on international affairs you're signing your own death warrant with this administration?"

"I know it and you know it, but poor Too Tall lost his moral compass. The man became confused between his role as a State Department diplomat and a member of the White House team."

"What will happen to Too Tall now?"

"The rumor is he's going to become our next ambassador to Spain."

"He's lucky. If he were in the U.S.-supported El Salvadoran government they would have taken him out and shot him."

Resignation Can Change The Image

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are times in the affairs of statesmen when replacement or resignation can do wonders for the image.

That seems to be happening now with Thomas O. Enders, out as assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

And it certainly was the case for William D. Ruckelshaus, who quit 10 years ago as deputy attorney general rather than obey President Richard M. Nixon's order to fire the Watergate special prosecutor. The reputation he earned with that resignation on principle is one of the reasons he was summoned back to Washington to take over the tarnished, troubled Environmental Protection Agency.

It was a return engagement; he ran the place from 1970 to 1973 before moving to the Justice Department.

In the Enders situation, a diplomat who was suspect among liberals and critics of President Reagan's Central America policy now is being cast as an advocate of negotiation and pragmatism who paid for those views with his job.

Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz insist that was not the case, but the view persists, fueled by the comments of officials who insist on anonymity.

Perhaps the most celebrated of those anonymous quotes came from an official who told The Washington Post that Central America policies can't be handled with tea and crumpets on the diplomatic circuit.

Until he was replaced in what Shultz insists was a routine rotation, nobody was suggesting that Enders represented a tea and crumpets approach to leftist insurgencies in Central America.

Indeed, to critics of administration policy, Enders seemed a hard-liner, because they didn't like the policy and also because they never forgot his background in Southeast Asia.

He served as deputy chief of mission in Cambodia from 1970 until 1974 and, according to a Senate Foreign Relations Committee report, made the final decisions on targets for American bombers. The 1973 committee report — the panel was controlled by Democrats then — also said Enders tried to conceal the embassy role in target selections.

When the president chose Enders for the Latin America post, critics saw it as a signal that the administration was looking for military answers in Central America.

But since his replacement by Langhorne A. Motley, who had been ambassador to Brazil, the gossip in Washington has been that Enders ran afoul of White House advisers over his emphasis on negotiated solutions.

That may be so, but Enders certainly did not play down the military side of the equation. In a speech just after his change in assignments, Enders said there could be no political solution so long as leftist guerrillas in El Salvador believe they can win through force of arms.

He said there could be no peace without negotiations, but no serious negotiations without military, political and economic measures as well.

Then there are those who reject any form of negotiation, because they believe that negotiations legitimize adversaries or taint doctrinal purity," Enders said. "And it is true that negotiation of anything other than unconditional surrender involves some form of compromise."

Enders didn't say who he was talking about, but he's almost certain to be asked when the Senate considers his nomination to be U.S. ambassador to Spain.

The Legislature Royall Retreats On Construction Office Proposal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A controversial proposal to transfer jurisdiction of the State Construction Office from one department to another has been withdrawn but its sponsor says the delay is only temporary.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, rescinded Tuesday his proposal to transfer the construction office and the Capital Building Authority from the Department of Administration to the Office of Management and Budget.

Royall's move came at the urging of Gov. Jim Hunt, who opposes it and spoke with Royall by telephone Monday.

But Royall said in an interview Tuesday that he hadn't changed his mind about the need for the change and that he planned to seek it again, probably during the 1984 short session.

"If I'm around (next year), this will come up again," said Royall. "My feelings haven't changed one bit."

Royall's proposal was in the form of an amendment to a lengthy separation of powers bill designed to clarify the authority and jurisdiction of the executive and legislative branches. The bill is in response to a state Supreme Court ruling that the borders between the two branches had become blurred.

Sen. William Staton, D-Lee, who sponsored the amendment on Royall's behalf, told the Judiciary I Committee that Royall wanted to withdraw it. Action on the move to withdraw was delayed until Thursday.

Royall says the building office and construction authority should be under the Office of Management and Budget because their activities affect the state budget.

He has said the "good businessmen" in the budget office are best able to make the building office more efficient and avoid cost overruns which he says have plagued state building projects in the past.

"There aren't any personalities involved in this," he said. "I just think this is the best way to handle it and I've been watching this closely since 1971."

In a news conference last week, Hunt said there hadn't been a cost overrun on a building office project in two years.

Jane Patterson, state secretary of administration who protested to Hunt when Royall's proposal was made public, said in an interview Tuesday she was "very pleased" Royall had withdrawn his amendment.

"Sen. Royall and I are both committed to a more efficient operation," said Mrs. Patterson.

After the Legislature appropriates funds for a proposed state construction project not related to the University of North Carolina system, the building office studies designers' plans to see if they meet state standards and later studies bids from contractors.

The Capital Building Authority makes the final decisions on designs and contractors but nearly always accepts the building office's recommendations, Mrs. Patterson said.

"We really don't care what they do with the Capital Building Authority, but the State Construction Office is an integral part of this department (of administration)," she said. "We are handling it well."

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary, confirmed the phone conversation between Royall and Hunt but added he didn't know what was said.

"The governor feels there is no need for the transfer and he wanted to know what prompted (Royall's) amendment and what his problems were with the present system," said Pearce.

In other legislative action:

Pollution Exemption

The state House overwhelmingly approved a bill to keep power companies from avoiding payment of an estimated $6 million in local property taxes, despite a lone opponent's plea for utilities.

Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, still smarting from being criticized by the media for his lone stand against the bill Monday, drew the vote of Rep. John Brown, R-Wilkes, before the bill won final House approval, 101-2.

"This bill before you represents the cancelling of incentives dangled before our industries and public utilities to create a better atmosphere for their workers in North Carolina," he said.

The bill would limit to textile companies a 1982 law giving industries a local tax exemption for equipment used to abate air pollution inside plants. It would also limit coverage to equipment used to remove cotton dust from the air, a move designed to help prevent brown lung disease among textile workers.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said power companies were applying the law to offset costly equipment to reduce radiation in nuclear generating plants. He said the state lost nearly $30 million to utilities as a result.

Nuke Compact

A bill to include North Carolina in an eight-state compact overseeing low-level radioactive waste was referred to a House subcommittee despite efforts to speed its enactment.

Robert Jansen, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt, told the House Judiciary I Committee that Mississippi, Virginia, Tennessee and South Carolina have enacted the compact bill. He urged the General Assembly to follow suit and take part in the first meeting in mid-July.

Opponents, however, expressed concern because South Carolina adopted an amendment that would terminate their membership if any other state violated the compact.

Chairman Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, sent the matter to a subcommittee to iron out any problems. The bill has passed the Senate.

House Insurance

Good drivers could have one speeding ticket a year without insurance penalties under a bill approved by the House Insurance Committee.

The bill would prevent drivers with clean records convicted of speeding 10 mph or less over the speed limit from being assessed insurance points.

It also would raise from $200 to $500 the amount of damage required before a driver is assessed two insurance points. Currently drivers with damages below $200 receive one point while those with damages above $200 are assessed two points. Under the bill anyone with less than $200 in damages would be assessed one point.

Chairman Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said the bill would result in reduced premiums paid to insurance companies. Those losses would be made up by charging all North Carolina drivers about $1.40, he said.

The committee also approved a bill to extend the cap on insurance rates from this July to July 1985, despite objections by Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin, that it might prevent insurers from making a profit.

The bill would affect only those not in the N.C. Reinsurance Facility, which pools high-risk drivers.

UNC

The Senate Rules Committee approved an amended version of a bill reducing the length of terms served by the 32-member University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

The bill would cut the length of the terms from eight to four years with a limit of three consecutive terms instead of two. It means that half the board, instead of one-fourth, will be re-elected each legislative session.

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, said the longer terms are needed to isolate the board from political influence. He said that UNC President William Friday may retire soon and it will be more necessary than ever to have a strong board.

Board member William Dees of Goldsboro said it takes at least two years for board members to become familiar with operations of the board and there is a great need for experienced members.

Dees said there are two states with 12-year terms, one with 10-year terms and several others with nine-year terms. He said the trend is toward longer terms.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, said the Senate needs to move quickly on the bill because nominations to the board are due soon.

Insurance

A bill that would bar rate deviations for land title insurance policies drew spirited debate before the Senate Insurance Committee before being sent to a subcommittee.

Under the bill, firms would have to file their land title policy rates with the state Department of Insurance and adhere to them. Sen. William Staton, D-Lee, said the change was needed because fierce competition for large customers had caused homeowners' policy rates to rise disproportionately.

John Jordan, insurance industry lobbyist, said some nationwide companies come into North Carolina and offer a cut rate to a top buyer "just to maintain a cash flow."

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said the bill merely would afford in-state companies protection from competition. Lawing, who's an auctioneer, said, "I'd like to add auctioneering to this if it would keep the big boys out."

Bill Pittman, another insurance lobbyist, said there was no attempt to restrict competitors but that "all we want to know is what they're charging. We don't care if they have 2,300 rates; we just want to know what they are."

Also sent to a subcommittee was a bill that would set uniform training standards for insurance agents.

Annexation

A bill that would rewrite North Carolina's annexation laws, approved by the Senate last week, drew praise before the House Judiciary II Committee and was sent to a subcommittee.

Chairman Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, saying the bill had been perused thoroughly by senators and a legislative study committee, ordered the subcommittee to have its report ready a week from Thursday. A one-hour public hearing will be next Tuesday.

The bill would tighten requirements for notifying affected landowners and homeowners of intentions to annex and of public hearings. It would make other changes designed to protect volunteer firefighters and others who would be affected.

The bill also would invalidate all local annexation legislation and would not allow property owners or residents to veto proposed annexations.

Betty M. Margison, leader of a property owners group from Orange County, urged that the bill be amended to guarantee that services such as water and sewer provided the annexed areas be of the same quality as existing services.

Exemptions

After lengthy debate, a divided Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would restore pre-1981 exemptions from claims levied by creditors.

Under the bill, a debtor could claim $500 in personal property, $1,000 in real property and life insurance benefits as free from creditors. Those were the exemptions allowed by law before 1981.

That year, however, they were expanded to include $7,500 in residence or $2,500 in any property; $2,500 in household belongings plus $500 for each dependent; $1,000 for one motor vehicle; and $500 for tools of trade.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said the new exemptions were so broad that it was impossible for many creditors to collect. Finance companies and small businesses were especially hurt by the 1981 exemptions, he said.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, disagreed, saying the expansions were long overdue and that to return to the 1981 levels would be "going back to the Dark Ages."

Gleaning

A bill that would offer farmers an income tax credit for permitting their fields to be gleaned won approval of the House Finance Committee.

Under the bill, growers could claim a credit of 10 percent of the market value of unharvested crops taken from fields by charitable organizations which then distribute the food to the poor.

Judge Confirms Probe Of Green

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge confirmed Tuesday that the Wake County grand jury will meet Monday to review tapes, transcripts, photographs and other evidence gathered by the State Bureau of Investigation in its probe of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey told jurors after their regular meeting Monday they would return for a special session next Monday. At the time, he refused to elaborate on the special session.

Tuesday Bailey said the two district attorneys working on the Green investigation, C. Colon Willoughby of Wake County and Mike Easley of Bladen County, have decided to present evidence to the jurors instead of a charge. It will be up to the grand jurors to decide if prosecution is warranted, Bailey said.

Bailey said a presentment, as the procedure is called, is generally used "when the district attorney is not willing to say flatly, 'There is a crime here.'"

Bailey said it has been 18 years since he has seen the procedure used.

Green's name came up during the Color investigation when a tape-recorded statement was played during a trial. In the statement, Howard Watts told an FBI agent that Color defendant Sandy White was "known to be a torch man for Jimmy Green."

Green has denied the allegations.

The probe by Easley and Willoughby also focuses on a $2,000 "campaign contribution" to Green from an FBI agent involved in the Color investigation. Green says agents were trying to entrap him and said he returned the money.

Green learned of the investigation last February, when the State Bureau of Investigation started looking into his phone records.

On March 7, Riley and Easley received copies of an SBI report, transcripts of tape-recorded conversations

Florida Honors Artist Christo

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Christo, the artist who draped 11 Biscayne Bay islands in pink, wore a pink shirt, was honored with a resolution on pink paper, and mingled with government officials sporting pink boutonnieres.

Gov. Bob Graham slipped Florida's Ambassador of the Arts medal around Christo's neck at a ceremony Tuesday to honor the artist.

"The 'Surrounded Islands' project will go down in history as one of the most extraordinary art projects ever developed," Secretary of State George Firestone said. "For a period of time, all the eyes in the world were on the state of Florida."

Firestone added that the two-week project, completed May 7, increased Dade County tourism between 10 percent and 20 percent.

Christo called "Surrounded Islands" the "most beautiful project I did," but told reporters he won't dress Florida islands again.

Routine Meet By Bethel Bd.

The Bethel Board of Commissioners agreed Tuesday night to require that all purchases for the town in the amount of $100 or over be approved by the board.

Commissioners also heard Ricky McGhee of the Mid-East Commission propose a budget amendment and present a financial statement on the community block grant program. McGhee asked that an amendment for relocation money and contingency funds be transferred to the rehabilitation and renovation of 14 houses.

Kenneth R. Whitrehurst was appointed superintendent of public works. The commissioners voted to adopt a minimum housing ordinance, which includes abandoned structures. The ordinance will be effective July 1.

The board members approved the expenditures of revenue sharing funds to pay sanitation salaries and supplies and police salaries.

agreement. He said Tyson "has never committed a crime to my knowledge. He's one of the most decent men I've known."

Asked about the incident Friday, Tyson said, "I didn't want to make any recommendation as far as bond (for Braswell) was concerned," either allowing bond or recommending that no bond be allowed for the former deputy.

Before joining the sheriff's department, Pascasio was associated with the Greenville Police Department.

New Teamster Leader Grilled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser, under intense questioning by a congressional committee, vowed to cleanse the union's corrupt image, but cautioned "there's no way I can be a policeman."

Presser acknowledged to the Senate Labor Committee on Tuesday that the nation's largest labor union has been plagued by corruption and allegations of organized crime influence for the past quarter-century.

But when questioned sharply on why the International Brotherhood of Teamsters isn't acting on its own to oust corrupt elements within union locals, Presser shot back: "I don't have the power to remove these people and neither do you."

Sens. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Don Nickles, R-Okla., pressed the Teamster leader for a commitment by international union leaders to move internally to oust Salvatore Provenzano, a union vice president, as head of Teamster Local 560 in Union City, N.J.

They were referring to the recent indictment of Provenzano, who was named with several others in an alleged scheme to defraud a union welfare fund.

Presser replied that "until this case is prosecuted, I can't just go into the union and say, 'Out!'"

The Teamster leader was holding a news conference today at the international headquarters of the union.

Presser, who testified under oath for nearly four hours to the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said he has sent union auditors to investigate some Teamster locals "where I suspect some hanky-panky is going on."

But he maintained that the bylaws of the Teamster constitution prevent him or other top leaders from simply entering a local and replacing a union official.

Hatch and others questioned Presser about a federal investigation into allegations that a Teamster local in Cleveland, which Presser has served as secretary-treasurer, kept "ghost" employees, who did no work, on the payroll.

Hatch noted that John A. Nardi Jr. last September pleaded guilty to accepting more than $109,000 between 1972-1978 from Local 507, though he did no work. John Climaco, Presser's attorney, said the Teamster leader could not comment on detail on the continuing investigation.

But Climaco did say that "it would be our position that John Nardi Jr. was not a ghost employee."

Methodist Colleges Asking More Funds

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the state's three Methodist-supported private colleges Tuesday asked church officials for $1.4 million for their 1984 budget.

The requests, representing a 31-percent increase over the current funding, came at the North Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church held at Methodist College.

N.C. Wesleyan College at Rocky Mount, Louisburg College and Methodist College need a raise of $277,700 from the state conference to retire debts in curbed for construction of new dormitories. The schools received bonds through the federal government to finance the construction projects.

The colleges also are requesting $892,250 for the College Sustaining Fund and $165,000 for campus ministries.

The budget requests will be debated and voted on by the more than 800 conference delegates, who represent eastern North Carolina churches, during the Thursday morning business session.

The conference also will vote on 53 other budget areas, including their ministers' retirement fund, ministers' moving expenses, administration monies and staff salaries for the Council on Ministries.

A total budget of almost $6 million has been submitted by the finance council.

In other action, a vote was delayed Tuesday on a resolution prohibiting homosexuals from entering the United Methodist ministry that was introduced by the Rev. Thomas G. Holtzclaw of Robbins.

The resolution calls for the church's nationwide General Conference, which governs 9.5 million United Methodists, to enact legislation prohibiting homosexuals from being appointed or ordained as ministers.

Name-Calling Has Yielded To Harmony

Two Persons Injured In Series Of 7 Accidents

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — To Presbyterian Yankees of about a century ago, Southerners were rebels and traitors. But to Dixie, the Northerners were tyrants and oppressors of regional rights and culture.

That was the bitter hostility in which Presbyterians of the nation broke apart in 1861 at the start of the Civil War — a split that will be officially healed Friday after 122 years.

The rapprochement, being readied today by assembled church representatives from across the country, has been slow and difficult in coming.

"It means the healing of a deep wound that has embarrassed Presbyterians for more than a century," said the Rev. Aubrey N. Brown of Richmond, Va.

Despite the political reconciliation between the North and the South, "people hold onto things of religious conviction longer than anything else," he said.

"They had to wait for the spirit to move them, and it finally has moved us," said Brown, 75, retired editor of Presbyterian Outlook.

A mood of gladness and nostalgia prevailed as delegates of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern), and of the United Presbyterian Church, went through final stages of their separate lives.

Much of the closing-out work dealt with financial and legal matters, preparatory to the shift Friday into a merged body, the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

The combined church will total about 3.2 million Presbyterians, making it the fourth-largest denomination among U.S. Protestants, behind Southern Baptists, United Methodists and National Baptists.

At simultaneous but separate worship services Tuesday night, held in adjacent halls at the Georgia World Congress Center, the vigorous hymn-singing of each assembly could be heard by the other.

"We have fought each other to the point there is no longer a moral position to draw on," the Rev. Irvin Eligan of Miami told the Southern throng, deploring the bickering of the past.

"What an indictment of the church," he said, adding that both sides shared in guilt for the division. "Insignificant differences were magnified into reasons other than defending the faith."

The Rev. James Costen of Atlanta, outgoing moderator of United Presbyterians, told its concurrent opening worship service that "we are standing on tiptoes... expecting great things in the name of Christ."

The long-ago Presbyterian split, perpetuated out of differences in custom and style rather than basic theology or the slavery issue that provoked it, occurred after an 1861 assembly declared loyalty to the federal government.

Most Southerners had boycotted that assembly in Philadelphia, and no church assembly could decide "to which government the allegiance of Presbyterians as citizens is due," Southerners declared.

They met in Augusta, Ga., on Dec. 4, 1861, setting up their separate denomination. Repeated reunion efforts have been rejected by Southerners, fearful that a national church would erode Southern warmth and closeness.

5 Hearings On Council Agenda

Five public hearings, including three on rezoning requests, are among the business items scheduled for consideration by the City Council at Thursday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The requests were submitted by: Ralph Tucker Jr. to rezone 72.71 acres, located south of Greenville Athletic Club and Oakmont Square, west of N.C. 43, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to office and institutional and R-6 (high density residential); William C. Shivers to rezone 1,057 acres, located north of secondary road 1421 and east of secondary road 1401 (Old River Road), from RA-20 to neighborhood commercial; and by Samuel Roberts, and others, to rezone 3.6 acres south of Mumford Road and Greenville Utilities property, north of city property, from industrial to R6-MH (residential-mobile home).

Hearings are scheduled on: a proposal to extend the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction in the area east of Greenville Boulevard, northeast, around Eaton Corp.; and on a request by Bobby Parker, pastor of Temple Free Will Baptist Church to amend the zoning ordinance to increase the size of informational signs for churches.

The council will also consider: appointments to boards and commissions; scheduling a hearing on a petition for satellite annexation by owners of Colonial Mobile Home Park; resolutions to sell property in the central business district and West Meadowbrook project area; adoption of a com-at $2,800 to the Blount car, $800 to the Styons car and $300 to the Dennis vehicle.

Lucille Chancey Cox, 51, of 1401 Broad St. was injured when struck by a car while she was crossing Dickinson Avenue, 60 feet west of the Columbia Avenue intersection about 5:09 p.m., investigators said.

Officers, who identified the driver of the car involved as Mary Pollard Lloyd of Route 8, Greenville, said the Lloyd car struck Ms. Cox, then collided with a utility pole and shrubs.

Police, who charged Ms. Cox with crossing other than in a cross walk, estimated damage at $500 to the Lloyd car and $300 to the pole and shrubs.

Robert Charles Carroll of 103 Christenbury Drive was charged with careless and reckless driving following investigation of a 5:45 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 300 feet east of the Cedar Lane intersection. Officers, who identified the drivers of the other cars involved as Nancy Grimes Mayo of Route 6, Washington, and Louis John Hallow of 107 Christenbury Drive, estimated damage at $100 to the Mayo car, $900 to the Hallow vehicle and $1,000 to the Carroll car.

Vehicles driven by Shelton Ward Farmer Jr. of Stokes, and James Herbert Flake of 1606 East Wright Road, collided about 4:30 p.m. at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road.

Police, who charged Farmer with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage to the Farmer truck at $300 and placed damage to the Flake car at $900.

Cars driven by Jeffrey Keough of 1212 Red Banks Road, and Julia Ann Moore of 1609 E. Sixth St. collided about 8:40 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Charles Street, causing $300 damage to the Keough car and $800 damage to the Moore vehicle.

A 7:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Charles streets involved cars driven by James Tracey Roscoe of 1716 Circle Drive and Ralph Jeffery Foster of Goldsboro.

Damage from the collision was set at $200 to the Roscoe vehicle and $700 to the Foster car.

Allan Don Sterbin of Route 1, Greenville, was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety after his car collided with a vehicle driven by William Russell Harvey of Charlotte.

Damage from the 11:25 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Lewis streets, was estimated at $500 to the Sterbin car and $300 to the Harvey auto.

munity development budget amendment; traffic board recommendations; grant resolutions;

Tax releases; a resolution declaring certain vehicles and equipment surplus to the city's needs; an ordinance establishing a capital reserve fund; amendments to the city's manual of fees; an ordinance adopting a supplement to the city code; adoption of a resolution encouraging Carolina Telephone to install equipment in police and fire-rescue department communication centers; a resolution supporting WUNC-FM Radio; a request by the Jaycees for July fireworks displays; and an amendment to the 1982-83 city budget.

Rescued From Storage Tank

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Rescue crews worked for more than an hour Tuesday to pull a Charlotte man out of a 75-foot gasoline-storage tank, police say.

The man, a Texaco Oil Co. employee, was taken to Charlotte Memorial Hospital for treatment. A hospital spokeswoman said the man asked the hospital not to release his identity or condition.

Weinberger 'Exaggerated'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study disputes Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's assertion that re- cord Pentagon budgets pro- posed by the administration will benefit the economy by producing more jobs.
 For every $1 billion spent on defense, 28,000 jobs are created while the same ap- propriation for public transit would employ 32,000 workers, according to the report released by the Council on Economic Priorities.
 The New York-based group, which in the past has criticized the defense build-up, contended that 71,000 jobs would be created if $1 billion were spent on education.
 In proposing the Pen- tagon's 1984 budget, Wein- berger said "the impact of defense spending on employment, when com- pared to other forms of spending, has favorable aspects."

Shultz Urges NATO Firmness

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, heading into a meeting of NATO foreign ministers, today criticized Soviet policies in several key areas and said the alliance must remain firm in its determination to deploy new nuclear weapons in Western Europe.

Shultz told a news conference "it must be made clear to everybody" that NATO will proceed with deployment of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to counter the "relentless" Soviet buildup of SS-20 missiles targeted at Western Europe.

On the Middle East, Shultz renewed his criticism of the Soviet decision to install SAM-5 missiles in Syria, to operate them with Soviet forces and to try to block implementation of the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

"I don't consider any of these three things to be constructive," Shultz said.

He also assailed the recent Soviet proposal to convert the Baltic area into a nuclear-free zone. He said the Soviets always are suggesting that "other people be nuclear-free but not themselves."

On another subject, Shultz said the United States has no intention of breaking diplomatic relations with Nicaragua despite heightening tensions between the two countries.

On Monday, Nicaragua ordered the expulsion of three American diplomats, accusing them of plotting attempts on the lives of Nicaraguan leaders. The United States retaliated Tuesday by expelling 21 Nicaraguan consular officials.

En route to Paris Tuesday, Shultz said he saw no concrete evidence the Soviet Union was moderating its policies despite recent expressions of interest in improving its ties with Washington.

After an extended period of angry U.S.-Soviet exchanges, President Reagan said last week he foresaw "better" relations with Moscow. In addition, former New York Gov. Averell Harriman, after a meeting with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, said he was authorized to say that Moscow's "most sincere and fervent desire" is to have "normal relations with the United States."

Shultz said he had conferred with Harriman by telephone and plans additional discussions next week. Despite Andropov's upbeat tone, Shultz seemed skeptical about any short-term improvement in U.S. ties with Moscow.

"I have to say you have to measure an attitude according to the substance," Shultz said. "I can't point to anything substantive at the moment." He stressed that he didn't want to say anything that could "prejudice forward movement" in relations.

Asked about the possibility of a superpower summit, Shultz repeated the administration position that such a meeting would not be desirable unless there was a prospect of a significant easing of tensions.

He indicated a summit could be precipitated by a breakthrough in either of the two sets of nuclear arms control talks the United States is holding with Moscow or in talks on limiting conventional forces in Europe. These meetings, he said, are a "form of preparation" for a summit.

On a related subject, Shultz said there had been some movement recently "on the positive side" in a U.N.-sponsored effort to negotiate the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan. He suggested, however, that predictions of a breakthrough were premature.

Shultz planned a series of bilateral meetings today. He also was to meet with the five-nation NATO group which has been working on achieving independence for the South Africa-administered territory of South-West Africa, commonly known as Namibia.

In the evening he will join the heads of delegation from Britain, France and West Germany for the traditional four-power dinner that precedes NATO foreign ministers' meetings.

At the NATO meeting, Shultz and his colleagues will review the status of the U.S. talks with the Soviets on limiting medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Shultz said he is hopeful the meeting will produce a strong reaffirmation of the NATO plan to deploy the missiles starting in December if there is no superpower arms limitation agreement before then.

He said he believes that such an endorsement is necessary to give the Soviets an incentive to negotiate seriously at the Geneva talks. Because of arms control and other pending issues affecting East-West relations, Shultz said this is "a time and a year of very special importance to the free world."

See First Step To Revaluation

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners have taken the first step toward a 1985 property revaluation for tax purposes.

Commissioners agreed at their June meeting to enter into a contract with Southern Appraisal of Wilmington, for $115,000, to study the 12,000 parcels of property registered in the county. Aerial photographs taken as part of a mapping process will be used in conjunction with the proposed evaluation.

A new delegation asked the board to consider zoning for rural areas. Margaret Mizelle, acting as spokesperson for a community located between Bear Grass and Williamston, cited the problem created by two chicken houses for approximately 20 nearby homes. She said the chicken houses had caused an odor and an increase in bugs, flies and rodents.

Photographs were shown of a large pile of chicken droppings outside the houses. Samples of bugs and flies were also shown to the board. Other factors cited included the noise of chicken loading trucks.

Mrs. Mizelle stated that four families have sued Perdue Inc., which she identified as owner of the chicken houses.

The complaint is similar to an earlier one near Hamilton with complaints being lodged against the location of commercial chicken houses built near residences. Commissioner Joe Griffin said some better system of control needed to be taken in the placement of such chicken houses. Commissioners asked the county attorney to look into the legal aspects of possible zoning restrictions.

The official budget request of Martin General Hospital was presented to the board for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The request is for $225,000 in county funds — $130,000 for the pension plan; $30,000 for waterproofing the building; $25,000 for correcting deficiencies noted in a recent inspection; $7,000 for various renovations and $33,000 for capital fund purchases.

No request was presented for funding the proposed new doctors' offices, although it is expected that if the project is carried out, it will be paid for from county funds during the upcoming fiscal year.

Commissioners gave their approval to a request to seek an increase of State Literary funds from $167,000 to $230,000. These are special funds for education to be repaid at 4 percent over a 10-year period.

Waste Facility Nearly Ready

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The new hazardous waste handling facility at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is expected to be completed this week, school officials say.

The university will begin using the facility immediately.

Donald Willhoit, director of UNC's health and safety office, said the building — estimated to cost $145,000 — will store various types of waste including chemical and radioactive wastes. The waste will come from the school's Physical Plant, research labs and North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

Planned First U. S. Birthday

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — In the midst of the merrymaking and mythmaking of the bicentennial of the American Revolution a few years ago, North Carolinians took note of a fellow Tar Heel who planned the nation's first big birthday party.

True, Joseph Roswell Hawley moved away to Connecticut at the age of 11, but once a Tar heel always a Tar Heel. Especially for one whose mother, Mary McLeod, was a Richmond County girl. The father, Francis Hawley, was a Connecticut Congregational missionary who served in both Carolinas.

"Fighting Joe", as the young man was to become known during the Civil War, was born at the village of Stewartville on Oct. 31, 1826.

Undoubtedly one reason for Hawley's obscurity in North Carolina history was his identity with abolitionist policies before the war and his high military rank in the Union Army during the Civil War.

His memories of human slavery in North Carolina made a lasting impression upon young Hawley, and from the time he began practicing law in Hartford in 1850 he was an ardent foe of slavery. Two years later he was a delegate to the Free-Soil National Convention and in 1857 he became the outspoken editor of the Hartford Evening Press.

When news of the firing on Fort Sumter reached Hartford, Joe Hawley rushed to the colors and was one of the first men to be enlisted in Connecticut. He rose rapidly in rank and by 1865 was a brigadier general. His assignment following the fall of Wilmington early that year was, ironically, to command a supply base within a hundred miles of his birthplace. He had returned as conqueror.

His war-won reputation led to Hawley's selection in 1866 as governor of Connecticut.

The following year his old paper was consolidated with the Hartford Courant and Hawley again became editor.

In 1868 he was chairman of the Republican National Convention and he was a delegate to the next three presidential nominating conventions of his party. His name was placed in nomination for president of the United States at the 1884 convention.

Congress in 1871 established the United States Centennial Commission for the purpose of planning a mammoth celebration five years later on the 100th anniversary of American independence. The 94 members representing every state and territory elected General Hawley as their president and he served throughout the life of the commission.

The centennial featured a huge exhibition of American and foreign arts and manufacturers in Fairmount Park, Pa.

When the centennial was officially opened on May 10, 1876, the loudest applause was for Joe Hawley, whose perspicacity had saved the observance from dissention and threats similar to those that have bedeviled the bicentennial. When the exposition closed Nov. 10, 6,740,500 people had paid admission.

Hawley served in the U.S. House from 1872 to 1875 and he was elected to another term in 1879. Two years later the Connecticut Legislature chose him U.S. Senator, which he held until March 3, 1905. Two weeks after his retirement he died and was buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery, in Connecticut.

Conceived In Tourism

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Five score and 18 years ago, this city's forefathers brought forth from the memory of its favorite son a new attraction, conceived in tourism and dedicated to the proposition that all men are potential sightseers.

By now, though, so many people have visited Abraham Lincoln's home that it needs major repairs, the director of the home site said Tuesday.

"If you're putting 400,000 to 500,000 people through the home each year, obviously it's going to suffer some structural damage," said Jim O'Toole of the U.S. Park Service.

O'Toole said Lincoln's home needs supports under weakening floorboards and around the wood-frame exterior, and controls to protect precious Lincoln-era antiques.

Architects are studying the situation and developing repair plans, said O'Toole, adding that he hoped work could begin by late 1984. He said no estimate of costs would be known until the architects complete their work.

The two-story home in a tree-shaded neighborhood six blocks from the Illinois Statehouse was the only house Lincoln ever owned. His family lived in the home until Lincoln left Springfield after his 1860 election as president.

Remote Chance Of 'No Money'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive director of the commission that devised the bailout plan for Social Security says there's still a remote chance the system could run out of cash in 1986 and 1987.

Assuming a deterioration in economic conditions by those years, a forthcoming report by Social Security's trustees projects the system would have only a month's worth of benefits, Robert J. Myers, executive director of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, says.

As part of the bailout, Congress agreed to increase payroll taxes in 1984 and 1988 but not in the intervening years, creating what Myers called "the thin ice in 1986 and 1987." Myers said there is only one chance of 10 or 20 that the system could run out of money in the short term.

Legislative Retirement System Included In Plan

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly is considering a plan to spend an additional $378 million over the next two years, primarily on highways and high technology training in community colleges and universities.

But the plan distributed Tuesday by budget leaders also would set aside money for a legislative retirement system to begin in 1985. The Legislature phased out a previous retirement system in the early 1970s.

The plan does not include money for a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise for state employees or teachers. Budget leaders said that would not be considered until the full Appropriations Committee meets later.

The spending package, which focuses on new or expanded programs, was given to House-Senate Appropriations subcommittees to be approved or rejected. Any adjustments will be made in the full Appropriations Committee, leaders said.

Meanwhile, House and Senate Finance Committee leaders are working to find ways to pay for the package. House Speaker Liston Ramsey met with several representatives late Tuesday in an attempt to complete a revenue-raising proposal.

No details of the package have been released but House leaders said it will be similar to Senate ideas they received last week. The Senate's goal is to raise $204 million a year but Ramsey said the House is looking for more money.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, Senate Finance Committee chairman, said all the Senate proposals include an increase in the $120 ceiling on the 2 percent sales tax on new cars to $300 and a sales tax on used cars. Some of the others call for raising the tax on alcoholic beverages and raising fees for drivers' licenses and automobile tags.

The spending package announced Tuesday includes a $26.6 million reserve for matching federal highway funds, $6 million more than the state needs to get all the federal money now available.

House Expansion Budget Committee Chairman Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said leaders hope other states will be unable to match federal funds and some of the leftover money will go to North Carolina.

The recommendations also include almost $40 million to continue the stepped-up highway resurfacing and construction plan begun by the last General Assembly.

One set of recommendations already is drawing criticism. State Superintendent Craig Phillips charged that the Legislature is overlooking the need of elementary and secondary schools in its education spending recommendations.

Those include:

- $2.6 million for a vocational skills program in grades 7 and 8, double the amount originally estimated for the program backed primarily by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.
- $4.4 million to increase instructional supplies and an equal amount to give some teachers a duty-free period each day.
- $7.6 million for community college equipment purchases, $4 million for new industry training and $3.2 million for high-tech training programs at four community colleges.
- $9 million for a computer science building at UNC-Chapel Hill and $9.7 million for an engineering building at UNC-Charlotte.
- There also is $19.6 million for increased community college enrollment, $23.6 million for upgrading predominantly black institutions in the UNC system and $4.8 million to provide a $100 per student increase in the state grant to private colleges.

Phillips said the plan lowers the percentage of state tax dollars for public education and includes only one of the state Board of Education's $51 million in spending requests — an increase in money for instructional supplies.

Phillips said the board wanted money for things like remedial classes, in-school suspension centers and reducing class size.

He calculated that the request includes an additional $100 for each private college student, $112 for each community college student, $790 for each UNC student and $7 for each public school student.

"It reflects a complete neglect of the elementary and secondary needs in North Carolina," Phillips said. "The people of North Carolina should not stand for it."

Watkins said Phillips is overlooking an additional $12 million for public school operations already approved by the Appropriations Committee. He said the university operations budget did not increase.

He said the university will be required to raise $8 million through a tuition increase. University officials say they have discussed raising tuition for out-of-state students by 16 percent to 18 percent and for in-state students by 12 percent.

Another part of the spending proposal would set aside $198,700 in 1984-85 for a legislative retirement system. Budget leaders would give no details about the proposal except to say it would require contributions from legislators.

"I don't think the people of North Carolina want us to serve for nothing," Watkins said.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, head of the expansion budget in the Senate, said North Carolina is one of the few states without a legislative retirement system.

"This is the cheapest operating General Assembly in all 50 states," he said.

Other items in the spending recommendations are $6 million for state aid to public libraries, $2 million for computer needs in the Office of State Budget and Management, $60 million for repairs to state buildings, $7.7 million for indigent defense and $10 million to convert McCain Hospital from a tuberculosis hospital to a prison hospital by November.

Rental Rehabilitation Demonstration Program

(Request For Proposals)

The City of Greenville through its Community Development Program is requesting proposals for a Rental Rehabilitation Program Demonstration. The area designated for this Demonstration Program encompasses those neighborhoods generally known as Higgs, Cherry View and Biltmore. Under the Demonstration, the City will provide 40% matching grants to help rehabilitate substandard rental properties. The rental units should be occupied by low income tenants. Qualifying tenants will be offered Section 8 Rental Assistance to avoid relocations. This Program is funded with $90,000 of Community Development Block Grant funds.

Proposals for assistance will be received by the Community Development Office until 5 P.M., June 17, 1983. For more information and a proposal package please contact Ms. Dorothy Daniels at the Community Development Office, City Hall, 201 West 5th Street, Greenville, N.C. or call 752-4137 ext. 268.

Shoplifting Leads To Probe In Food Stamps

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A three-county probe of shoplifting and fencing operations has led to indictments against store owners who allegedly bartered food stamps for money and drugs, investigators say.

The discovery of food stamp bartering brought federal officials into a local and state investigation that so far has netted about 85 arrests and 336 counts that include larceny, drug violations and food-stamp fraud.

Between 15 and 20 more suspects are still at large, said Greensboro police detective Joe Cline. Most, he says, are hiding.

The State Bureau of Investigation and police in Greensboro, Winston-Salem, High Point and Burlington began a combined investigation in December to root out the loosely knit shoplifting bands in the area. Many sold to Winston-Salem fences — store owners who knowingly bought stolen property for resale, Cline says.

Some of the fences would contact Greensboro shoplifters and "place orders" for designer jeans, small appliances and other merchandise, Cline says. Shoplifters would fill such orders by stealing the goods from stores in Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Burlington, High Point and Asheboro.

They would then deliver the merchandise to their Winston-Salem fences, who would sell the merchandise at a discount.

It was during interviews with shoplifters caught in the probe that authorities first heard of merchants who were illegally buying food stamps, police say.

"It sort of snowballed from there," Cline said.

A federal grand jury last week handed down 13 criminal indictments resulting from the probe. They charge 23 defendants with a total of 82 offenses.

Forty-five of the federal charges stem from alleged food stamp transactions or drug seizures made in Forsyth County. Twenty-one occurred in Alamance County, 16 in Guilford.

Almost half the charges — 37 — cite the fraudulent exchange of food stamps for cash. The cash amounted to only a fraction of face value, usually a third to a half.

Fifteen other counts charged suspects with trading methaqualone, marijuana, cocaine and heroin for food stamps. The remaining counts were for possession and distribution of those drugs.

Federal officials say they're arresting other suspects on additional charges separate from the grand jury indictments.

Return First Indictment In Dipscam Investigation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 78-year-old Arkansas man who says he is a physician was indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday on 13 charges of mail and telephone fraud involving phony colleges, licensing boards and health associations.

George Lyon of Benton, Ark., is the first person to be indicted on charges stemming from the FBI's "Dipscam" probe which involved the alleged sale of phony college degrees and licenses.

The FBI announced last month it had uncovered more than 30 "diploma mills" in 10 states in an investigation begun in August 1980. Purchasers could use the degrees to pass themselves off as medical and psychological counseling professionals.

Robert Pence, head of the FBI's North Carolina operations, said Tuesday he expects to take more cases to the grand jury.

There are "literally hundreds of degree holders" from Lyon's institutions, Pence said, with fewer than 10 living in North Carolina. They are being interviewed to determine what use they made of their degrees.

If a prosecution relating to a diploma mill results in a conviction, state or federal agencies employing those "graduates" would be notified, Pence said. Using a phony degree to get a federal job or a federal promotion is a violation of federal law.

In March the FBI seized boxes of documents in Lyon's offices. However, Lyon, who said he is a physician and teaches psychology, psychotherapy and hypnosis, has denied any wrongdoing.

Lyon was twice convicted of contempt of court for operating a college without a license, according to records of the Florida Board of Independent Colleges and Universities, a licensing agency of the Florida Department of Education.

Tuesday's indictment said Lyon provided licensing documents and set up medical associations, boards, societies and authorities in the health and psychological counseling fields. In those, his graduates could purchase memberships, certificates, letters and other authorizations to lend credence and credibility to the recently purchased degrees and bolster their appearances as professionals, the indictment stated.

Lyon promised to help graduates get licenses to practice medicine in Arkansas, Florida, Maryland and Arizona, the indictment alleges.

Lyon was charged with breaking federal law by sending or receiving letters and phone calls related to his alleged illegal scheme, all communications with FBI undercover agents, according to Pence.

Each offense carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine, Pence said.

More Alligators In Southeastern N. C.

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Extensive swamp clearing and the construction of homes in wetlands are leading to more encounters with alligators in parts of southeastern North Carolina, according to the regional enforcement supervisor of the state Wildlife Resources Commission.

"At Lake Waccamaw, an alligator is now a common sight," said John Kennedy. "No doubt, extensive land clearing in the Green Swamp is displacing some of these animals from their former habitat."

"Also, if people continue to build homes in swamps and other wetlands, they can expect to see alligators," he said. "As long as people leave the animals alone, there won't be any problems."

Alligators are especially active in the late spring and early summer, Kennedy said. The animals will often travel over land for up to a mile seeking a mate or a new home territory.

During the excursions, they may hole up in small ponds for a few days — sometimes near people — before moving on. At Lake Waccamaw in the heat of summer the alligators often leave the warmer waters of the canals and swamps to seek the cooler waters of the lake, occasionally crossing through backyards in the process.

"Problem" alligators are quite rare — and they are almost always created when someone tries to feed them.

"In some respects, alligators are similar to bears — when you start feeding them, you get real problems," he said. "Wild alligators aren't dangerous, but they quickly lose their fear of man when they're being fed and soon learn to expect that handout."

Opponents Hope To Amend Anti-Slavery Measure

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Opponents of a bill to make slave holding a felony in North Carolina vowed to introduce an amendment today to limit farmers' liability after a similar amendment was defeated 52-50 Tuesday.

"I think that vote is our best chance to turn things around," said Rep. Edith Lutz, D-Cleveland, who argued that "never was a farmer implicated by migrants for maltreatment."

Mrs. Lutz said farmers were just as concerned about slavery as everyone else.

"You do not have a good employee if he is being held in involuntary servitude," she told the House. "He won't give you a good day's work for a day's pay."

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, admitting the bill would probably be approved, said the wording regarding farmers did not make it clear they were innocent until proven guilty.

"The crew leaders will turn around and accuse you (the grower) the way this is written," he said.

Rep. Hugh Lee, D-

Richmond, said he had drawn up proposed amendments to say a grower must conspire with a crew boss to hold slaves before he would be liable.

But Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who chaired the Judiciary I Committee that studied the bill, said the present wording was "about as broad" as anyone wishing to protect farmers could want.

Before the bill was tentatively approved 81-22, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, introduced amendments to delete growers' liability for knowingly hiring slave holders and to remove a provision allowing the State Bureau of Investigation to initiate probes into slavery allegations. Those provisions have drawn the strongest objections from the N.C. Farm Bureau and the state Department of Agriculture.

Wright said holding employers responsible for crew leaders might result in landowners turning their backs on migrants to avoid any chance of an indictment.

"I wouldn't even go by the building and see what the situation was," he said, adding that such neglect would affect the quality of produce shipped out of North Carolina.

But Rep. Malcolm Fulcher, D-Carteret, who introduced the bill, said it would encourage farmers to ask questions about crew bosses before hiring them, and that growers who might violate the law should be weeded out.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, moved to table Wright's amendment, a motion approved by a slim 52-50 vote.

Wright based his argument against SBI involvement on the possibility that it might become a political weapon or stretch the agency's resources.

"Can you imagine the political implications if somebody with good political connections wants to harass somebody" by using the SBI, he asked. Wright said the SBI had power to initiate such actions only regarding destruction of state buildings.

But several members objected to placing buildings ahead of enslaved migrant workers.

"I don't believe there is any piece of property that is worth more than any individual's personal freedom," said Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson.

Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, noted that state laws also give the Justice Department jurisdiction in drug cases.

"It (the drug problem) is not confined to a county," he said. "It moves, as migrant workers move, from county to county."

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said SBI jurisdiction strengthened the bill and moved to table Wright's amendment. That motion was approved 54-50, ending debate on jurisdiction.

Rejects Bid To Bar Pot Tests

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday rejected a request by four present or former Fort Bragg soldiers to block the Army from using urinalysis tests for marijuana consumption.

U.S. District Judge E. Earl Britt denied a request for an injunction by the soldiers, who want the Army to stop using the tests as a basis for disciplinary action.

The four filed a class-action lawsuit in U.S. District Court in Fayetteville May 31 against Army officials, challenging the use of the urinalysis tests.

Britt said the plaintiffs had not demonstrated that they suffered irreparable harm and that they had not had their class action certified.

The four soldiers claim they do not smoke marijuana, but have been subjected to unfavorable evaluation reports, bars to re-enlistment, discharge from active duty and denial of promotions and training opportunities because of positive urinalysis tests.

Mark Waple, a Fayetteville attorney representing the four soldiers, said he will now move toward having the suit certified as a class action and will return to U.S. District Court again to request the injunction.

He said once it has been determined that the party plaintiffs are proper representatives of the class and that the class action is appropriate, the motion would be considered.

On Monday, an Army spokesman said nearly 17 percent of the Fort Bragg soldiers tested for marijuana use from January to April this year tested positive.

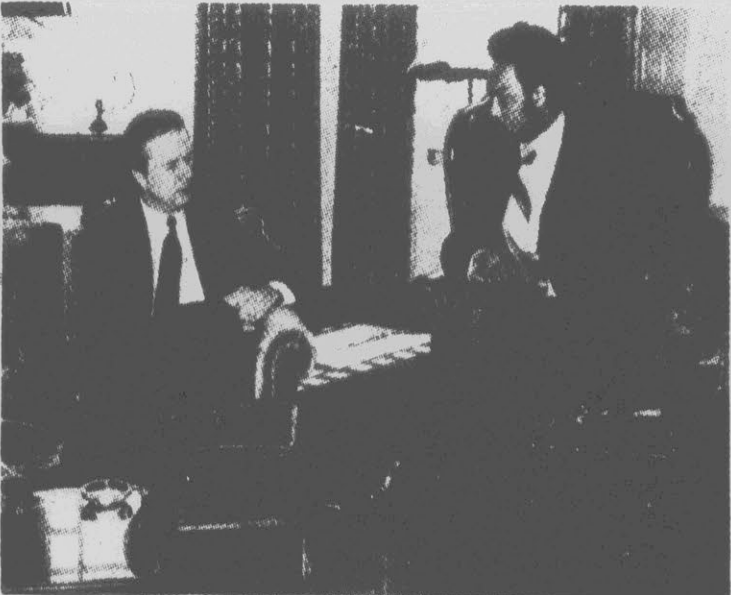

DEFENSE INCREASE
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Egyptian government has presented to Parliament its budget estimates for fiscal year 1983-84, with an increase of 25 percent in defense spending.

WHAT NORTH CAROLINA NEWSPAPERS SAY ABOUT VOTER REGISTRATION

GOV. HUNT, REV. JACKSON MEET — Governor Jim Hunt and the Rev. Jesse Jackson met in the Executive Mansion March 11 to discuss a number of mutual concerns, including voter registration. The Carolinian, 3-18-82

"He (Jesse Jackson) said Gov. Jim Hunt, an expected Senate candidate in 1984, had 'a limited future—unless we register.'"

Greensboro Daily News, 5-16-83

"We must register at least 200,000 black voters in North Carolina in the next two months." (Jesse Jackson)

News and Observer, 4-22-83

"Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. wants the State Board of Elections to boost minority voter registration in North Carolina . . ."

Muleback Tour Is Painful But Also Exhilarating

By JOHN DeMERS
GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (UPI) — The leather-faced cowboys have names like Bud and Bill. Their mules answer to the like of Gambler and Brandy.
Anyone who has ridden a mule to the bottom of the Grand Canyon and crossed the Colorado River to Phantom Ranch can assure you the trip is no sanitized tourist attraction.
It may be no sweat to the real cowboys and Indians who live and work in the canyon. But in anyone else's mouth, the strenuous two-day journey leaves the real dust of northern Arizona.
Sure-footed mules were lugging vacationers into the canyon long before it became a national park in 1919.

Those who venture down into the chasm are rewarded with the most spectacular views of all. Exploring the inner gorge gives you a greater appreciation of the grandeur of the canyon, which averages a mile deep and 4 to 18 miles across.
The mule journey from the South Rim to the Colorado River drops from an elevation of 7,000 feet to 2,400 feet on a steep, zigzagging trail that averages four feet wide.
During the nine-mile ride along Bright Angel Trail, there is a vast array of climatic zones, starting at the top in a cool forest of Ponderosa pines and ending in hot cactus desert.

Temperatures at the bottom average 20 to 30 degrees warmer than on the rim.
The wranglers who lead the mule trips claim a perfect Grand Canyon safety record — not a single tourist has toppled over the side on a mule. Even so, apprehension looms as the trip begins, especially when the wranglers explain the basic rule of the ride.
When the mule train stops, the mount must be facing over the edge — no matter how horrifying the view. If the mule starts a small avalanche which brouns on the mountainside, he is likely to jump straight back — into nothing but air.

Sitting high in the saddle and bouncing with the gait of the mule, riders gain confidence with every step. Soon you're able to take his eyes off the trail and enjoy the dramatic beauty of the inner canyon and the towering red buttes.
The mule train stops at Indian Gardens Campground for a box lunch. Then it's back in the saddle for the trek down to the Colorado River.
At last, in the desert heat of mid-afternoon, riders topple from the saddle at Phantom Ranch, on the north side of the river, beside Bright Angel Creek, parched and dust-covered.
The rustic cabins have heat, air conditioning, electric lights, bunk beds and a toilet. There's also a dormitory and a lodge where hearty meals — lugged down by mules — are served family-style. The wranglers claim it's the best food at the Grand Canyon.
After dinner there's a little light remaining for a walk. The path fades in shadow, but the cliff face above is red in the dusk. Both are dark by the time you get back to the lodge, which now doubles as a bar.
Travelers of many nationalities compare canyon experiences over beer or lemonade. There are groans at 9 when the joint shuts down, but groans are nothing new to Phantom Ranch.
The first thing you think when they wake you at 6 is: send in the helicopter. The ranch manager says that every day of his life somebody comes crying to him for emergency removal. He has to explain that emergency helicopter service is just what it says.
After breakfast riders climb aboard for the shorter, steeper trip up the South Kaibab Trail, which is as picturesque as the trip down Bright Angel. The mules work harder this time but you have it easier. Besides, you're a veteran, even if a sore one.
Riders arrive at the rim in early afternoon, exhausted but suddenly wishing the trip never had to end.

Two-day mule trips, including accommodations and meals, cost $145 for one person. The rate for two staying in the same cabin is $250, $362 for three, $474 for four and $586 for five.
Less expensive is a one-day trip to Plateau Point, which overlooks the Colorado River some 1,000 feet below. It costs $42 for the excursion and box lunch.
The requirements for mule-trippers are that they be physically fit, at least 12 years old and weigh no more than 200 pounds. Pregnant women are turned away, as are people with heart conditions.
Because of the popularity of the year-round mule adventures, reservations must be made far in advance, though there may be late cancellations.

Withholding Bill Still On Course

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both houses of Congress have voted by lopsided margins to repeal a law requiring the withholding of taxes from interest and dividends, but it still is scheduled to go into effect July 1.
The reason is that the House and Senate have not agreed on precisely how to kill the law, which was enacted last summer to reduce tax cheating and to cut the federal deficit.
The next move in the banked drive to repeal withholding will come in the Senate, probably next week. The Senate will consider a Finance Committee bill that would wipe out the law and impose some new measures aimed at collecting some of the $8 billion a year that is lost because of cheating on interest and dividends.

The cost of sending their children to private elementary and secondary schools. That would guarantee a long debate before the matter is settled.
In the meantime, banks and other financial institutions are continuing to gear up for the start of withholding, which many of them vigorously oppose. The Treasury Department estimates that most institutions have spent more than half the money it will cost them to begin withholding.

Attached to that same bill are President Reagan's Caribbean initiative, granting tax and trade concessions to help the economy of Central America and the Caribbean, and his enterprise-zone plan of tax benefits to lure businesses into blighted areas.
Those provisions are the subject of considerable controversy in the House, and there have been indications that the House would reject any bill containing them.
The law requiring withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividends for taxes will remain on the books until the House and Senate pass an identical bill repealing it and that bill is signed by Reagan.
There is considerable discussions of adding yet another matter of controversy to the repeal bill: Reagan's plan to grant tax credits to help parents offset

Cite Abuses In Limousine-Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government limousines are regularly giving 23 employees of the State and Defense departments rides to and from work in violation of federal law, according to the General Accounting Office.
Eleven State Department officials are given the use of chauffeur-driven limousines even though the secretary of state is the only department official entitled to the service, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, says.
Brooks, who requested the GAO study, said 12 Defense Department officials are also regularly transported in limousines between their homes and the Pentagon. Another 28 are driven occasionally, the report said.
Under law, only the secretary of defense and the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force are entitled to chauffeur-driven limousines, the report said.

Carlton Takes Strikeout Mark, For Now

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton was more concerned with beating the St. Louis Cardinals than with becoming baseball's all-time strikeout leader, say his Philadelphia Phillies teammates.

He got the record. He lost the game.

Carlton fanned six St. Louis batters Tuesday night to give him a total of 3,526 over his 17-year major league career. But that accomplishment was marred by George Hendrick's two-run homer in the first inning as the Cardinals edged the Phillies 2-1.

Meanwhile, Houston's Nolan Ryan, who returned from the disabled list to start Tuesday night against the San Francisco Giants, struck out three to move his strikeout total to 3,524 before leaving in the fifth inning.

Carlton, 6-6, and Ryan, 3-1, are likely to stay close throughout the season in the race to top a strikeout record set by Walter Johnson 55 years ago.

"This is going to seesaw back and forth," Ryan has said.

The 38-year-old Carlton, who stresses conditioning and mental preparation, has refused to talk to reporters for several years. On Tuesday night, he simply doffed his cap when the crowd gave him a standing ovation as he surpassed Ryan with his 3,521st victim, the Cardinals' Mike Ramsey.

Many of the 34,274 fans, the largest crowd at a Phillies game this season, had come just to see Carlton.

The Phillies lockerroom was subdued after the loss, which was Carlton's fourth straight. But the players were worried about their hitting, not about his pitching.

"He (Carlton) pitched well enough to win. We just didn't score enough runs for him," said Mike Schmidt, whose second-inning home run was one of only two hits the Phillies got against St. Louis pitcher Bob Forsch.

"It's a pleasure to play with him," teammate Pete Rose said of Carlton. "He's always going to do well. But he kept saying we should forget the strikeout record and win the game."

Carlton has a contract that runs through 1987, and he has said he intends to pitch 10 more years. By that time, he should have more than a strikeout record to his credit.

Carlton has won four Cy Young awards, and has won 20 or more games six times. He has tied Sandy Koufax for the modern-day National League record for most wins in a season, has struck out 100 or more batters in each of his 16 full seasons in the major leagues, and has come within nine games of becoming baseball's 16th 300-game winner.

"It's got to be a great moment for him," said Phillies Manager Pat Corrales after Tuesday night's game. "But he made a statement during the game — not in these exact words but something like it: 'To heck with the strikeout record, let's win it.'

"That's the type of guy he is. This is just another star on his cap."

Garvey's Future With NFLPA Still In The Air

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ed Garvey apparently is on his way out as executive director of the National Football League Players Association.

Garvey, who has held the job for 13 years, said Tuesday night, "If I do anything but stay with the union, it would be return to Wisconsin in some capacity."

The Boston Globe quoted sources as saying Garvey would resign at an NFLPA awards banquet in Chicago on Sunday to become a Wisconsin assistant attorney general.

"I want to and talk with the players and then decide what's in everyone's best interests," Garvey said in a telephone interview late Tuesday night. "I will have no comment until I meet with the board this week. The decision whether or not to leave is mine and mine alone."

The Globe reported that Garvey, who led the union in a 57-day strike last fall, will be temporarily replaced by NFLPA President Gene Upshaw, who has served in that post for the past three years.

"It is his (Garvey's) decision, whatever he decides to do," Upshaw said from his home in the San Francisco area. "The board is going to meet in Chicago this weekend. We've been mandated by the board of player reps to negotiate a new contract with him. We as the executive committee will make him an offer. It's up to him to accept or reject."

"Until he decides what he's going to do, I can't decide what I'm going to do. I've never done anything on a temporary basis. Whenever I get into something, it's for the long haul. Basically, it's his job. I intend to support him. I've done that for 12 years and I intend to continue to do that. If he decides he doesn't want to remain as executive director, I'd seriously consider the position."

Upshaw said he currently is meeting with United States Football League players in an effort to organize a union for them.

Garvey earns about $125,000 a year. Though he had been criticized by what appeared to be a minority of players, the Globe said Garvey's departure is motivated by family and personal reasons rather than by pressure from within the union. The NFLPA leader was instrumental in molding the once-passive union into a more militant organization and bringing the NFLPA into the AFL-CIO.

In 1982, he led the union's 1,600 members in their first in-season strike, which ended when the union signed a four-year, $1.3 billion agreement with NFL owners.

Rain Delays Area Play

Rain washed out play in all area baseball and softball games last night.

Pitt County's American Legion baseball game with Rocky Mount was washed out and has not yet been rescheduled. A game at Kinston, scheduled for this past Sunday and rained out, has tentatively been reset for Sunday, however.

Last night's action in the Greenville Little Leagues has been reset for Sunday at 2 p.m. with the Optimists meeting Sportworld at Guy Smith and the Moose taking on Carroll & Associates at Elm Street. Should today's games also be rained out, they would be reset for Sunday at 4 p.m. at their respective parks.

Last night's Prep League games have also been reset for Sunday at Jaycee Park. Hendrix & Dail meets First State Bank at 2 p.m., with Garriss-Evans and Shop-Eze Foodland playing at 4 p.m.

Recreation softball games will be rescheduled later in the season.

Current Record Holder
Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Steve Carlton tips his hat to the crowd after recording his 3,522 career strikeout to pass Houston's Nolan Ryan. The record-breaking strikeout came in the third inning of the Phillies game against the St. Louis Cardinals at Veteran Stadium Tuesday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Black Cat Let Brewers Know Their Fate

By The Associated Press
That old Baltimore black magic continues.

The Orioles, continuing their spell over Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, played longball in turning back the Brewers 6-4 Tuesday night, a victory made complete when a black cat streaked across the field late in the game.

"I didn't mind the black cat," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn. "It was the four homers that gave us trouble."

In other American League games, Detroit topped Boston 4-2; Cleveland nipped New York 2-1 in 10 innings; Kansas City trounced Minnesota 9-4; Texas ripped Seattle 10-0; Oakland beat Toronto 5-3; and Chicago outlasted California 12-11 in 10 innings.

Eddie Murray drilled a two-run homer and Gary Roenicke homered on Caldwell's next pitch to give Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Benny Ayala, a lifetime .500 hitter against Caldwell, made his first start of the season and belted a solo homer in the fourth. Rich Dauer, mired in a 5-for-53 slump but starting because of a .390 career average against Caldwell, added a solo homer in the seventh off reliever Bob Gibson.

The loss marked the eighth straight time the Orioles have beaten Caldwell, who's 5-5 this season.

Murray's homer was his eighth of the season and his sixth in his last 11 games. It came after Cal Ripken drew a two-out walk. Roenicke's sixth homer followed.

The homers by Ayala and Dauer were their second of the season.

Milwaukee, which took a 1-0 lead in the first on Cecil Cooper's run-scoring single and added a fourth-inning run on Ben Oglivie's single, cut the deficit to 5-4 in the seventh on Ned Yost's two-run homer.

"It looked like a one-sided game," Roenicke said. "And then you look up and they're one run behind."

But Tippy Martinez, in relief of Dennis Martinez, 4-9, pitched 1 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

"I like playing them and I guess I might get keyed up," said Murray, who has hit 17 homers against Milwaukee, the most he's hit against any team. "You know they're going to come out hammering, and it's just a matter of who's going to outlast who."

Rick Manning, acquired by the Brewers Monday in a trade with Cleveland, went 0-for-4 and had his 17-game hitting streak stopped.

White Sox 12, Angels 11
It was a wild night in California, where Chicago overcame an early deficit and then held off the Angels.

Battle Of Boston Back In Court

BOSTON (AP) — The battle for the management of the Boston Red Sox was back today in court with the three general partners in the American League club still squabbling over who commanded the team.

Haywood Sullivan and Mrs. Jean Yawkey were allied against Buddy LeRoux after their efforts Tuesday to get a temporary injunction to block LeRoux's attempt to gain control of the team stalled in Suffolk Superior Court.

Judge Andrew Linscott called for a recess until this morning after attorneys for LeRoux, his chief limited partner Rodgers Badgett, Mrs. Yawkey and Sullivan promised to maintain a status quo in the operation of the club until returning to court.

Linscott recessed the hearing after attorneys for LeRoux and Badgett argued that they were surprised by a copy of a bulky brief introduced as evidence by attorney Daniel Goldberg, spokesman for Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey.

Attorneys Allen Goodman, representing LeRoux, and John G. Fabiano, representing Badgett, complained that they had insufficient time to study the brief, which included a copy of the Red Sox' general partnership agreement and a dissertation on partnership law.

LeRoux and Badgett, a wealthy Kentucky coal magnate, reportedly control about 42 percent of the Red Sox through the single general partnership and limited partnerships. Neither appeared in court.

Sullivan and John Harington, representing the JRY Corp., owned by Mrs. Yawkey, showed up in court with a battery of attorneys nearly one-half hour after the scheduled start of the hearing on their request for a temporary injunction barring any change in the general partnership agreement.

Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey took legal action after LeRoux, a onetime Red Sox trainer, issued a statement and held a news conference, saying that the general partnership agreement had been amended after a majority vote of the 30 limited partner shares. That majority was based on 16 limited partner shares owned by LeRoux, Badgett and attorney Albert Curran.

LeRoux named himself managing general partner and replaced Sullivan as general manager with Dick O'Connell, who had been fired as executive vice president and general manager after the 1977 season when the new ownership was in the process of purchasing the club from the estate of Thomas A. Yawkey.

Mrs. Yawkey's husband was sole owner of the Red Sox for 43 years until his death in 1976.

LeRoux also said that Curran had resigned as the Red Sox' general counsel to avoid any possible conflict of interest. LeRoux named former Superior Court Judge Samuel Adams to replace Curran as general counsel.

Goldberg asked Judge Linscott for a preliminary injunction pending a full hearing on the petition to bar LeRoux's amendment to the general partnership agree-

Van Der Meer Clinics Set Here Next Month

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor two sessions of the Dennis Van der Meer Match Play Drill Clinics on July 1 and 2 at the River Birch Tennis Center.

The clinics are to be taught by Ludovik "Louie" Cap and his wife Helma, who are both world-traveled tennis instructors. Louie Cap began his tennis career as a member of the Czech Davis Cup team and later joined the Van der Meer Tennis University teaching staff. It was there that he met his wife, who was also on the staff.

Since then, the Caps have traveled world-wide with Van der Meer on teaching tours including visits to Japan, South America, the Middle East, Canada and Europe. They are now setting in Hilton Head, S.C., where he directs tennis clinics and summer day camps and she managed a pro shop and assists with the clinics. They are both certified national testers for the Professional Tennis Registry of the U.S., and organization of more than 2,200 tennis teaching pros worldwide.

Each of the two sessions will last six hours and registration is limited to 20 persons per session. There is a $50 registration fee per person, per session and individuals may sign up for either session.

Those participating should have intermediate or above tennis skills and abilities. Pre-registration is necessary and will be held through June 15. Those wishing to sign up should come by River Birch or call the center at 756-9343.

"Having the Van der Meer Match Play Drill Clinics come to Greenville is a great and unusual opportunity for the citizens and one I hope residents will take advantage of," Boyd Lee, Recreation and Parks Director said. "I am delighted that the Caps have accepted an invitation to come to Greenville and am proud to be able to offer a program like this through our department."

Cubs Ban Station

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, angry about a disc jockey's jabs, have temporarily banned the radio station that employs him from the club's press box, officials said.

The Cubs on Tuesday revoked press privileges for station WLUP-FM to force a meeting between the ballclub and the station management.

At issue is announcer Jonathon Brandmeier's repeated playing of a tape that pokes fun at Cubs Manager Lee Elia, who exploded in a tirade against Cub fans after a 4-3 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers on April 29.

Brandmeier plays Elia's outburst over a recording of the Cubs' song, "Hey, Hey, Holy Mackerel, No Doubt About It."

Cubs officials say it is excessive and demeaning for Brandmeier to continue playing the tape more than a month after Elia's tirade.

"Brandmeier isn't being malicious," said Jim DeCastro, executive vice president and general manager of WLUP. "Jonathon is a personality here and the things he does are somewhat controversial. I think what he did with the Cubs song was quite humorous and entertaining."

DeCastro added that "in my eyes, this has become a First Amendment issue. Telling us we can't come into the press box because they don't like what we are saying is like telling a newspaper reporter he can't get in because of a disagreement over something he wrote."

In an effort to defuse the situation, DeCastro said he "purged" the studio of the Elia tape before Brandmeier's shift Tuesday morning. But Brandmeier had a spare, which he played during his show.

Information director Bob Wirz at the New York offices of Major League Baseball reportedly told the Cubs Tuesday the club was within its rights in barring WLUP from the press box.

Vikes' Edwards Is All-Coastal

D.H. Conley's Darrell Edwards was the lone pick for his school on the All-Coastal Conference baseball team this year, as Havelock's champions dominated the team.

Havelock landed five players on the squad, selected by the league's coaches, while White Oak, the league's co-champ, had four. White Oak lost out in the playoff berth battle since it lost both of its games to Havelock during the regular season.

North Lenoir landed four on the team, while West Carteret had two.

Edwards, one of just four juniors selected, was a pitcher-first baseman for the Vikings, and tossed a perfect game against West Craven during the season. Two other Vikes made the honorable mention list, Steve Mills and Paul Hill.

Picked from Havelock were Tom Mullins, a junior designated hitter; Willie Pryor, a junior second baseman; Richard Carter, a sophomore pitcher-first baseman; Tom Young, a senior catcher; and D.J. Fleming, a junior shortstop.

White Oak's picks included Richard Sloan, a senior pitcher-third baseman; Israel Meadows, a senior catcher; Garry Appleton, a senior pitcher-third baseman; and Brant Banks, a junior outfielder. Kenny McAlister was named honorable mention.

From North Lenoir, those picked were Scott Whitley, a senior catcher; Kevin Lee, a senior shortstop-pitcher; Maurice Thorbes, a senior third baseman; and Lavette Kornegay, a senior second baseman. Darnell Thorbes was given honorable mention.

West Carteret's picks were Clint Sanford, a senior pitcher-outfielder, and David Perry, a senior outfielder. Lonnie Mister, K.D. Ferrell, Rodney Frazier and Jeff Patton were all given honorable mention.

West Craven, which failed to land a player on the all-conference first team, did place William White and Randy Elks on honorable mention.

K.C. Jones Is New Celtic Engineer

BOSTON (AP) — For four seasons, the reins were held by an outsider who carried on the Boston Celtics' winning tradition. Now they have been given to a member of the family who was present at the creation of the dynasty.

K.C. Jones, who played on eight consecutive National Basketball Association championship teams with the Celtics, was named Tuesday to replace Bill Fitch as head coach.

Jones, a brilliant defensive guard in his nine NBA seasons starting in 1958, is the fourth player from those title teams to ascend the throne that Red Auerbach, now general manager, left in 1966.

Being part of those clubs "is a great help" to Jones as coach "because he's lived it. He knows what it is and he can put it out and get other people to do it," Auerbach said.

"It gives me total confidence," Jones said of his success with Boston and elsewhere. "You have so many avenues to draw from with the success of all those years."

Jones, 51, agreed to a multi-year contract as Boston's ninth head coach and the sixth since Auerbach stepped down. Five of them —

Jones, Bill Russell, Tom Heinsohn, Tom Sanders and Dave Cowens — are former Celtic players.

Fitch took over the team in 1979 after nine years as head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"You can't talk about the last four years in anything but a positive way. Bill had a great record," Auerbach said.

Fitch's teams were 61-21, 62-22, 63-19 and 56-26. The Celtics won the NBA title in his second season but were eliminated in four straight games by Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Fitch resigned May 27, citing Harry Mangurian's announcement that he planned to sell the team as a key reason. Several days later, Fitch became head coach of the Houston Rockets.

"I thought Bill would be here forever," said Jones, a Celtics' assistant coach for the last 5½ seasons. "I never envisioned that I would become the coach of the Celtics."

"All along I had my eyes set on K.C.," said Auerbach, who added that he didn't interview anyone else for the job.

"I'm very happy to be home. This is a fantastic opportunity for me. I've been associated with the Celtics since I've been black, since 1958," Jones joked. "I'd just like, hopefully, to continue the association with Red."

Auerbach said he would play a more active role than he did with Fitch, who preferred to have extensive control over basketball strategy and practices.

"K.C., having played for me, has a different relationship," Auerbach said. "I'm around. I'm available. It's like a shot in the arm."

He also announced that assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers had agreed to a multi-year contract to stay with the club and that the Celtics would seek another assistant.

Jones was head coach of the Capital and Washington Bullets from 1973 to 1976, when he was fired. He led them to a 155-91 record, including a 60-22 mark in 1974-75 when they were beaten in the NBA finals by Golden State in four games.

Jones was an assistant coach with Los Angeles in 1971-72, when they won the NBA title. The next season he was head coach of San Diego in the American Basketball Association before spending the next three seasons with the Bullets.

With Russell, he was on two NCAA championship teams at the University of San Francisco. He also was a member of the U.S. Olympic basketball team that won the gold medal in 1956.

His appointment Tuesday "rates on top. This is here. This is now, and it's a dream fulfilled," he said.

Unlike Fitch, Jones is popular with the Celtics' players.

"When I become head coach then it would be dishonest to have a friendship with a player and then have to deal with all the players," he said. "It would be nice to be liked, but it's not important. If it is important, I'm in trouble."

"He thinks defensively, and the name of the game is good defense," said Auerbach. "He has compassion. He has knowledge and he can be pretty tough when he has to be."

Despite Boston's poor finish last season, Jones doesn't envision major changes.

"What happened to us in the playoffs is going to happen to anyone. When you lose (the first) two games at home that does a job on your confidence," he said. "It's difficult to come back."

"We have to make a few moves. A few people probably will not be back, but basically the nucleus of the ballclub will remain intact," said Auerbach.

Jones said that he was itchy for a head coaching job after being fired by the Bullets but that in the last few years he became more content with being an assistant.

'Bama Clings To Lead, Tops Michigan By 6-5

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Tröy Brauchle usually sits in the bullpen until the seventh or eighth inning, and sometimes even until the ninth when the plot has thickened.

"When I come to the ballpark I don't even loosen up," said the Alabama junior reliever. "I sit there and wait for the sign from the dugout to start throwing."

"After about 15 pitches, I'm ready to go to the mound."

Brauchle received that summons in a precarious situation Tuesday night when Alabama led Michigan 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth.

With two outs, runners at first and second, and the count at two balls and no strikes, Brauchle entered the do-or-die situation.

His first pitch to Chuck Froning was a ball for a 3-0 count. The next three were strikes with the last one hit to shortstop for the final out and Alabama's victory over Michigan that sent the Tide into the finals of the winner's bracket against Texas in the 37th annual College World Series.

Michigan meets Stanford and Oklahoma State meets Arizona State Wednesday night in the loser's bracket of the double-elimination event.

Alabama and Texas, both undefeated in tourney play, meet Thursday night.

Alabama, 45-9, has won its last 15 outings, including two games over national champion Miami, Fla., in the NCAA South Regional to earn a spot here.

Tim Meacham, 6-0, got the call for Alabama in the seventh to relieve starter Rick Browne, who had lost a 6-0 Alabama lead, yet with help from his friends boosted his record to 12-1.

Some of that help came from David Magadan, college baseball's leading hitter at .539, who set a college world series record for most consecutive hits in a series, including a three-for-four performance in the game. He tied a single-game hitting record with a five-for-five performance in Alabama's 6-5 victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

Magadan, a second round draft pick of the New York Mets in the major league free agent draft Monday, had hit safely in eight trips in two games before flying out to left.

Alabama struck for two runs in the first inning off a Bret Elbin homer and a Magadan single that scored Ted McClendon.

The Tide added another in the third and three runs in the fourth. Craig Shipley walked and went to third when Elbin singled. Magadan then singled, scoring Craig Shipley, and Elbin scored on Rob Skate's single. Magadan scored on Allan Stalling's single.

Michigan, 49-8, rallied for four runs off of five hits in the fourth. Casey Close's double scored Ken Hayward, who singled, and Close scored on a throwing error after Fred Erdmann's hit. Erdmann advanced on a wild pitch and a hit by Rich Bair and then scored on a single by Dale Sklar.

The Wolverines added a run in the sixth and seventh.

Dave Kopf, 9-1, took the loss for Michigan. He was relieved in the third.

Cards Drop Phillies; Braves Gain One

By The Associated Press
Walter Johnson's strikeout record stood for 55 years. But this season, it's being broken right and left.
First right-hander Nolan Ryan of the Houston Astros smashed the hallowed record of the "Big Train" when he zipped past the career 3,508-strikeout mark earlier this season.
And Tuesday night left-hander Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies moved past Ryan, although his historic achievement was spoiled by a 2-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.
"He pitched good enough to win. We just didn't score him enough runs," said Mike Schmidt, whose homer provided the Phillies with their only run of the night against Bob Forsch.

Carlton struck out six to boost his career total to 3,526 — two more than Ryan, who ironically pitched on the same night and fanned three in five innings during a 4-2 win over the San Francisco Giants. Ryan was making his first appearance since coming back from the disabled list.
Elsewhere in the National League, it was Atlanta 4, Los Angeles 1; Chicago 6, New York 1; Pittsburgh 3, Montreal 2 and San Diego 7, Cincinnati 3.
Carlton's night would have been perfect, except for a bad pitch to George Hendrick in the first inning. The St. Louis outfielder slugged it for a two-run homer and the Cardinals' eventual winning run.

"It was a breaking ball up to Hendrick," said Corrales. "He's a big strong guy and there it went. That was the ballgame."
Carlton, a four-time Cy Young Award winner, tied Ryan with his 3,521st career strikeout by throwing a called strike past Mike Ramsey in the second inning, and he broke the record one inning later when Lonnie Smith lunged at a fastball.
"It had to be somebody,"

Smith said. "I knew it was a fastball. I knew I was dead. He got me. He got me good."
Forsch, meanwhile, was more effective over the long haul, allowing just two hits. He struck out two and walked none, retiring 18 straight batters at one point.
Astros 4, Giants 2
Ryan, meanwhile, battled control problems in his shortened stint against the Giants, walking in a run in the second inning. Ryan allowed all three of San Francisco's hits in five innings while Frank LaCorte, 4-2, and Frank DiPino finished up with hitless relief.
Tony Scott's double keyed a two-run seventh that broke a 2-2 tie for the Astros.

reached second when Pedro Guerrero fielded a grounder at third and overthrew first. First baseman Greg Brock then overthrew home trying to nail Murphy, allowing Horner to reach third. Chambliss then hit the first pitch into right field to drive in Horner with the decisive run.
The Braves added two runs in the eighth on a homer by Claudell Washington, his second, after Brett Butler singled and moved to second on a sacrifice.
Cubs 6, Mets 1
Ryne Sandberg drove in two runs, including the tie-breaker in the seventh, to lead Chicago over New York for the Cubs' sixth straight victory.
The Mets tied it 1-1 in the top of the seventh on Rusty Staub's pinch single. But loser Jesse Orosco, 3-2, walked two batters in the bottom of the seventh before Sandberg singled to score Larry Bowa.

scored two more in the eighth, one of them unearned because of an error by Brian Giles.
Chuck Rainey, 6-4, was the winner with relief help from Bill Campbell over the last two innings.
Pirates 3, Expos 2
Lee Mazzilli and Johnny Ray hit run-scoring singles as Pittsburgh snapped a sixth-inning tie and went on to beat Montreal and break a six-game losing streak.

Terry Kennedy drove home the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly in the fifth inning to lead San Diego over Cincinnati.
Show, 7-2, gave up two of the Cincinnati runs on a homer by Johnny Bench en route to his third straight victory. Show walked three and struck out two. Mario Soto, 7-4, failed for the second time to gain his eighth victory.

"When he pitches, you expect to win at least 80 percent of the time," said Reds Manager Russ Nixon of Soto. "But you can't make him extra-terrestrial. He's still human."

Greenville Trio Strong in Triathlon

Robert Morrison of Greenville, along with Jamie Moul and Maureen Fox were among the top finishers in their age groups during the Youth Unlimited Triathlon held recently in High Point.

The triathlon consisted of a half-mile swim in Oak Hollow Lake; a 20-mile bike ride over a hilly loop course, and a 6.2 mile run over another hilly loop course.

Morrison finished the event in 2:03.08, tops among six Greenville-East Carolina entrants. He was in 54th place overall and finished third in the men's 40-44 age group.

Morrison was 190th after the swim, and moved up to 81st during the bike event.
Moul finished in 2:25.20 and was 194th overall, but tenth among women and fourth in the 25-29 age group. Fox' time of 2:28.18 was 212th overall and third in the 30-34 age group for women.

Robert Fox finished 64th overall in 2:05.13, while Ross Reaves crossed in 2:09.20 for 94th place. Buddy Waters was 152 in 2:17.30. None of them, however, placed in their age classes.

The winning time was 1:42.55 by Eric Clifton of Asheboro.

Ballesteros Sues Reynolds

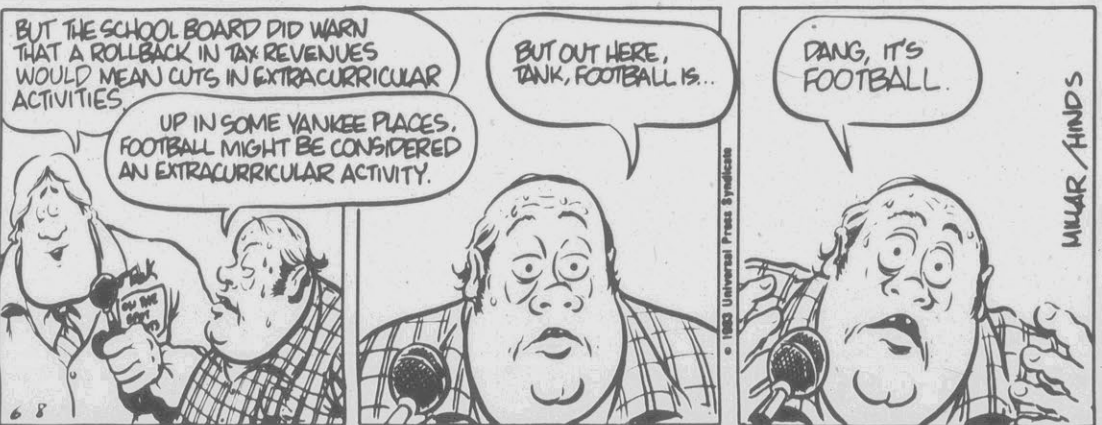

NEW YORK (AP) — Golfer Severiano Ballesteros filed a suit for unspecified damages Tuesday against the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., of Winston-Salem, N.C., charging it used his picture in advertisements without permission or payment.
Ballesteros charged in papers filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan that the firm used his likeness in ads for Vantage cigarettes between May 13 and June 3 in publications such as USA Today, The New York Times and Sports Illustrated.

He said it was done without his authorization or consent and without paying him.

The Spanish golfer, rated the best in the world last year and winner of the Masters Tournament in 1980 and 1983, said his civil rights were violated and asked that an injunction be granted against further use of his picture.

Atlanta took advantage of three seventh-inning throwing errors and scored the tie-breaking run on Chris Chambliss's sacrifice fly as the Braves beat Los Angeles.
With the Dodgers ahead 1-0, Dale Murphy opened the decisive seventh by reaching second base when Steve Sax threw wide of first for the first error.
Murphy then scored the tying run and Bob Horner

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: All sorts of benefits arise from your interest in entertainment. Romantic situations are favored today. Make decisions with others and put them into effect today.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get to work on details connected with financial affairs. Make out any reports that are necessary at work.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use the morning for exercise. Handle monetary affairs wisely, but relax at home tonight. Enjoy some television.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go after your goals in a quiet, confident manner for fine results. Show that you are friendly with everyone around you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure to add a fine dinner to your itinerary this evening. A good friend is instrumental to you today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get the approval of authority before you dash out with someone endearing and charming. Spend money wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Solve problems with those who are far from you. Express your finest ideas. Get the support of those in authority.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You now understand how best to deal with new allies. The romantic side of life should be more inspiring today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get into joint plans with others and show how to handle each individual item. Gain favor and respect of family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you do the work promised in connection with a project. A co-worker is helpful to you in this.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Know what it is that co-workers expect of you. Try to be very cooperative and increase production. Entertain tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Domestic affairs require your attention in the morning. Later, take time for much-needed recreation at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Clear up all unfinished work so you will be free to spend some time with your family. Show wisdom in decisions.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many fine ideas along practical lines, so be sure to plan for as fine an education as possible to insure success. Later in life, travel is favored. Give fine religious training and teach good manner. Watch diet.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Communist Town Built The Church

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
NOWA HUTA, Poland
(AP) — Known to the steel workers of Nowa Huta as "the pope's church," St. Mary's nestles among the drab concrete apartment blocks and billowing smokestacks of a town conceived as a model of proletarian communism.

The church, a modernistic structure resembling an ark, is the result of more than two decades of struggle pitting the church and workers on one side and the Communist government on the other.

"Nowa Huta was to be a socialist town, a town without God, which would obliterate religious tradition," said the Rev. Franciszek Skupien of St. Mary's.

"Instead, the town gave fresh blood to the faith in Krakow," said Skupien, quoting Pope John Paul II, who was Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow when the church was built, and led the political battle for it.

Krakow, a center of religious and ecclesiastical learning, is a citadel of rebellious Polish nationalism in a land governed by communists but spiritually dominated by the Roman Catholic Church. The government built Nowa Huta — which means "new steel works" — adjacent to Krakow to counter its "bourgeois tendencies."

Nowa Huta is a stronghold of Catholicism and also of the outlawed Solidarity labor union. Underground Solidarity cells are active in the city's giant Lenin Steel Mill, and one worker died in clashes May 1 between union supporters and police.

During his June 16-23 pilgrimage to Poland, John Paul will consecrate a second major church in Nowa Huta, to be named after Maksymilian Kolbe, a Polish priest who volunteered to take the place of a condemned fellow prisoner at the Nazi death camp in Auschwitz. Kolbe, one of 2,801 priests, monks and nuns killed during the Nazi occupation, was canonized by the pontiff last October.

The Kolbe church, like St. Mary's, was built by workers on their own time, in part with materials procured locally, in part with materials, like the red marble floor, provided by the Vatican.

The new church is largely finished, and was filled for Mass on a recent Sunday. Outside, young parishioners sold yellow and white papal banners from a table decorated with a poster bearing the pope's portrait and the words, "We are waiting."

In recent years, the government has allowed the Roman Catholic hierarchy to build scores of new churches all over Poland, but in the early days of communist rule, the authorities persecuted clergymen, placing the primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, under house arrest from 1953-56.

In the thaw which accompanied the rise of Nikita Khrushchev in the Soviet Union, the Polish government released Wyszynski and in 1957 gave permission for construction of major church in Nowa Huta to accommodate the workers moving there.

The workers erected a cross on the church site, but in 1960, the government changed its mind and ordered the cross dismantled. It was defended by the worshippers who braved tear gas and police clubs to prevent its removal.

"There were riots for two days, and people were beaten so severely that they later died of their injuries," said Skupien.

"The rioting shocked the authorities," said the priest. "The same people given new apartments and well-paid jobs were turning on their benefactors, fighting for their faith."

Wojtyla actively fought for the church.

"As archbishop, he would say Mass in the street right outside the steel works during the shift change," said one woman from Nowa Huta. "Thousands of workers would gather, tying up traffic and blocking transportation. Finally, the government gave in."

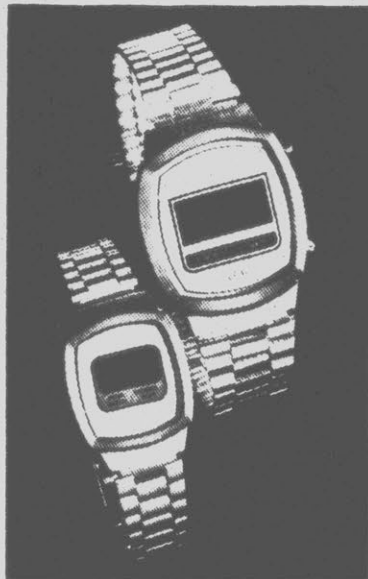

Permission to build the church, however, was not granted until 1967, and the structure was not finished until 1977.

A Bungalow Is Marooned In Asphalt

By BART ZIEGLER
Associated Press Writer
MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — The wood-frame bungalow sits marooned amid acres of asphalt and cars, the last rampart in a two-year legal battle between its owner and the nation's largest supermarket chain.

Bernice Hensley was the only homeowner on her block who refused to sell her property to Safeway Stores Inc. two years ago to make way for a supermarket. The other structures were leveled.

After her home of 57 years was surrounded by a fence, Mrs. Hensley took on the chain with a $10.5 million lawsuit. In an out-of-court settlement in February, she agreed to vacate the property in return for a reported $220,000.

"I've lived here most of my life," said Mrs. Hensley, 63, standing on her porch, which is now surrounded by the Safeway parking lot. "I'm sentimental. This is where my children were born."

Under terms of the settlement, she said, she must vacate the property by June 1.

"I'll move when I'm good and ready," she said. "I'll move in time before they sue me."

But she says she won't leave the house behind. Instead, Mrs. Hensley plans to tow the home away, but won't say where she plans to move.

The retired beauty shop owner said she lost almost 30 pounds since Safeway first asked to buy her land.

"My health is really gone," she said. "All I do is cry."

Her suit claimed Safeway "maliciously" erected an 8-foot fence around her house and in the process destroyed a tree that "holds great sentimental value."

The fence blocks most of the light and air from her home, she said.

Before they put up the fence, contractors cut away half of a two-car garage she had shared with a neighbor, Mrs. Hensley said.

The suit also claimed contractors who built the parking lot trespassed on her property with bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

Safeway bought 18 pieces of property, including several businesses and more than a dozen houses, and cleared 4 1-3 acres to make way for the store.

Mrs. Hensley's attorney, Lloyd Larkin of Tulsa, would not disclose the amount of the settlement but said it was several times the $45,000 that Safeway officials offered to buy the house.

Safeway representatives would not comment on terms of the agreement.

"The matter's been resolved," said Safeway spokesman Bruce Scott, of Tulsa. "It's appropriate to say the property will now be ours."

Mrs. Hensley said two years ago she would have accepted $50,000 for the two-bedroom home and the 4,600 square feet of land it occupies.

Both sides agreed Safeway's final offer of $45,000 was within $5,000 of Mrs. Hensley's asking price. Safeway officials said that offer was double what her neighbors accepted for similar houses.

Mike Todd, regional real estate director for Safeway, said Mrs. Hensley could move her house or she could leave it there and Safeway probably would knock it down.

"The house really is in shambles," Todd said. "It's kind of an eyesore."

Benzene Safety Given Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the federal job safety agency says "a high priority" will be given to tightening a regulation governing worker exposure to benzene, but he has not decided whether to issue an emergency temporary standard.

In a June 1 letter to a public health group, Thorne G. Auchter, head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said the agency agreed that benzene, known to cause leukemia, "has the capacity to pose a risk to workers."

Production Cutback Is Profitable

By ROBERT PAGE
United Press International
Farmers in Sumner County, Kansas, pride themselves on producing more wheat than nearly any other county in the United States. But when the 1983 harvest rolls around for Oran Sellers, he will have a lot less work for his combine.

Sellers entered 600 of his 950 acres in the federal government's payment-in-kind program. For Sellers, just as for all wheat farmers across the Midwest, this year's harvest is dominated by PIK.

"If my foresight was as good as my hindsight, I would have left my combine in the shed and not harvested any wheat at all," Sellers said recently. "I would have put 100 percent of my land in the program."

The U.S. Agriculture Department announced in March that one-third of American farmlands would lie idle because of PIK, a program in which farmers agreed to cut production in exchange for government-owned surplus crops. The idea is to cut the surpluses blamed for low prices.

Largely because of the cutbacks, winter wheat production this year is expected to drop about 10 percent, to 1.89 billion bushels. At the same time, experts expect a record yield of 40.2 bushels per acre.

The winter wheat harvest, behind schedule because of cool spring weather, started in late May in Texas, moving gradually north until ending in South Dakota around the end of July.

Wheat officials reported the stand, or plant population per acre, is good; problems with disease and insects are few; rainfall was healthy; and the color of the plants is a deep green, indicating a relatively well-fertilized crop.

But a bumper wheat crop could erase some gains the PIK program created, said Lee Streetman, a spokesman for the Oklahoma Farmers Union.

"They (farmers) are too damn productive," Streetman said. "It's awful to say you're being penalized for doing so good. They're producing more and enjoying it less. They're being so successful it's killing them."

Kansas, the nation's No. 1 wheat-producing state, is expecting 424 million bushels of winter wheat this year, Oklahoma 167.2 million, and Texas 141 million.

In Texas, where harvesting of some unusual varieties of wheat began in early April, a Texas A&M economist said PIK's effect on the 1983 harvest could be the salvation of a lot of American farmers.

"Last year nationwide we had 100,000 farmers go under," said Ron Knutson. "But this year we expect farm income will be up by 25 percent. That's going to mean the difference between surviving and not surviving for a lot of producers."

"At least 50 percent of those who would have gone under may very well survive."

Crop prices began to improve after PIK was first rumored last October, Knutson said, noting the price of wheat rose 17 percent between October and April.

Farmers and traders do not expect high prices when trucks start moving wheat from field to elevator.

"The USDA in their recent world wheat production forecast reported only a slight decline in 1983-84 world wheat production," said Rich Feltes, assistant vice president for research at Continental Grain, one of the major international grain trading companies.

"Despite the PIK-induced 12 million metric ton reduction in U.S. wheat production, acreage gains in Canada, Australia, Argentina, coupled with favorable Northern Hemisphere growing conditions, will almost entirely offset the decreased U.S. production," he said.

"With the world recession still in place, and the fact that 50 percent of world wheat trade takes place to the lesser-developed countries, which are still in severe financial straits, all this suggests the upside potential for wheat prices during 1983-84 is limited."

Emphasis Is On Physical Fitness Role

By JESSICA TREADWAY
PENFIELD, N.Y. (UPI)—
Betty Perkins says she gets her biggest kicks watching under-5's turning somersaults across the floor.

Mrs. Perkins, a 52-year-old grandmother, has coached Olympic and world champion divers for 25 years. She's traveled extensively behind the Iron Curtain, traded training strategies with Soviet athletes and served as consultant for sports centers in Japan.

She says it was all rewarding, but that he latest venture may be her most important.

Mrs. Perkins developed a program known as Fit by Five Inc., as an "alternative to nursery school" for children before they enter kindergarten.

"Instead of using pencils and paper to bring out coordination and keep them mentally alert, we teach them academic and social skills through physical activities," Mrs. Perkins explained.

Fitness "sets a pattern for life," said Mrs. Perkins, as she watched a group of youngsters hop, bend and giggle their way through "I'm a Little Teapot."

"The things that happen to them now are what they're going to remember, what's going to have the biggest effect on them all through their lives," she said.

"Young kids need something they can do well. If we expose them to just about every sport there is, they're bound to find something they can do — something — can n.s."

The Fit by Five idea is based on the Turnverein ("sound mind, sound body") concept of teaching gymnastics to German and Soviet children.

A 20-year study in the USSR showed youngsters aware of their bodies from an early age were more likely to be leaders throughout the school years, not only in sports but in music, art, mathematics and other disciplines requiring self-motivation and patience.

"Unless we give them an opportunity to explore, we have no idea what they're capable of," says Mrs. Perkins.

The first Fit-by-Fivers began tumbling through the program's gym in Penfield, a Rochester suburb, in 1969. The program shares quarters with Perkins Swim Club, where very young children learn the rudiments of coordination and fitness through water exercises.

Every day, dozens of youngsters try their hands at basic soccer, volleyball, track and even archery skills. Through the physical lessons, they learn about primary spatial and movement functions, such as the difference between horizontal and vertical or clockwise and counterclockwise.

"Let's find our places on the red circumference," one of the 16 Fit by Five teachers calls, as the children scramble to a circle outlined on the gym floor.

The Fit by Five program can either substitute for traditional nursery school or be used in conjunction with it, says Mrs. Perkins. She concedes that she is considered by some to be "bucking the system."

But parents give Fit by Five high marks. Most say their children are more relaxed, considerate and willing to learn than when they began the program.

Mrs. Perkins says an involvement in athletics makes children more self-confident and independent than their less active peers.

"We're affecting the very first experiences many of these kids will have in making decisions and problem-solving," she says.

Although Fit by Five stresses the development of coordination and discipline without emphasis on competition ("that's always there, anyway"), Mrs. Perkins says her international coaching experience has shown her America has a lot of catching up to do in worldwide athletics.

In the meantime, Mrs. Perkins says, she will continue her efforts to bring Fit by Five to pre-school children across the country. There already are two program centers in Baltimore, and she is negotiating to expand to other parts of the United States.

Report Sulfur In Polar 'Haze'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A haze that forms over the North Pole contains sulfur that may be a source of acid rain, which is widely blamed for environmental damage in the northern hemisphere, government scientists say.

The unexpectedly high levels of sulfur droplets, apparently originating from a Mexican volcano that erupted 13 months ago, were detected in March and April by scientists for the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration, officials say.

Airborne measurements of the haze, which collects each winter and early spring, were conducted by NOAA scientists.

Franchises Reduce Burial Cost

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Franchised funeral homes which could provide cut-rate funerals were born when entrepreneur Joe Marek saw Dr. James Reveley on a syndicated television talk show and said to himself, "there's a man I can use."

Reveley is a San Antonio dentist and mortician who has the gift of gab and an unflinching belief that consumers can show respect and dignity for their dead without the high cost of a fancy funeral.

Two years ago, Reveley appeared on the Phil Donahue Show to debate the president of the National Funeral Director's Association and a commissioner for the Federal Trade Commission on the mortuary practice of package pricing.

"When I got home, a guy (Marek) from Nashville called," Reveley said. "He was thinking of offering a franchise mortuary service and he needed a catalyst. I was it."

Marek said he had considered the idea for eight years, and Reveley was the man to make it work.

The two men formed United Dignity Inc., a franchise mortuary service that will provide lost-cost burials without the big, black hearse, a funeral procession or other rituals.

"It's called capitalism," Reveley said. "Just because 90 percent of the people in the U.S. want an earth burial doesn't mean they want a lavish display. We can take an average $2,500 cost and bring it down to $600 to $800."

Ground will be broken soon in Nashville for the first franchise.

Reveley, who has offered low-cost funerals in San Antonio for the past five years, said funeral directors fear the simpler, low-price franchise concept will cut profits that the industry has enjoyed for many years.

"Some of the marginal operators will go under," he said.

Not everybody has warmed to the idea, especially morticians' groups, which Reveley said have plenty to lose if it catches on.

The January issue of Mortuary Management Magazine featured an article, "There Could Be a McDonald's in Funeral Service..." It asked, "Will the new franchise homes be housed within urban and suburban shopping malls? Will our newest addition to the American way of death be an integral part of some well known fast food chain?"

Reveley has a $4.4 million lawsuit pending against the magazine, which did not name him, but referred to Reveley as a "would-be" dentist from Texas. The article also suggested that United Dignity would leave its franchise holders "high and dry" and move into "some other attractive venture somewhere else."

Said Marek: "We're very bitter about it. We felt the (funeral) industry took a real cheap shot by utilizing a major industry publication. If we are going to get beat, we want to get beat in the market place."

Ron Hast, a spokesman for the Los Angeles-based magazine, said, "We feel very strongly about what we printed. Our attorneys advised that the article was a good observation and conjecture of what could happen. We have followed up the article with a direct editorial comment in our May issue."

Hast said a growing number of Americans are interested in "immediate disposal" without services, and current mortuary practices can provide "any manner people choose for post-death care."

"All full-service establishments can provide that," he said. "You do not have to go to a budget facility to receive the best service and care. Most every funeral director is prepared to provide immediate disposition without services."

Reveley has been at odds with the funeral industry before. He has twice testified before a U.S. House subcommittee, which is reviewing FTC proposals for strict new mortuary regulations.

The rules, which Reveley supports, would require that funeral homes provide itemized price lists for services and merchandise, including caskets. The rule will not allow package pricing, which require consumers to pay for services they may consider unnecessary or unwanted.

Marek said franchise buildings will offer 1,700 to 2,200 square feet of space and viewing rooms will have revolving schedules for wakes and last visits. Instead of a hearse, the body will be transported, without a procession, in a custom-made station wagon.

"One full-time mortician can run the home," Marek said. "There will be no high-priced merchandise. If people want a real expensive casket or vault, we just won't be carrying it."

"We're still talking dignity and respect," Marek said. "But we'll turn people away if they want the big, high-priced funeral. We want to establish an image."

Turning A 'Negative' Into A 'Positive'

BACK ON THE BEAT — Harry Morgan, best known for his portrayal of the trustworthy Colonel Potter on "MASH", will be working the streets of Los Angeles as a homicide detective in the CBS television movie "Sparkling Cyanide". Based on an Agatha Christie story, it will be Morgan's first role since the final episode of "MASH". (AP Laserphoto)

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — How does NBC promote a louse?

Buffalo Bill Bittering, the central character in "Buffalo Bill," is such a despicable human being that test audiences hated him and hated his show. So NBC decided to turn a negative into a positive with a campaign selling Buffalo Bill as "the man you love to hate."

Ads promoting the series, starring Dabney Coleman, say: "You loved to hate him in 'Tootsie.' You loved to hate him in '9 to 5.' Would you rather watch reruns of 'The Gold Monkey' or get hit in the face with a pie?" The people say they'd prefer the pie, and take it on the chin.

As you can see in tonight's second episode, "Buffalo Bill," about a morally bankrupt talk-show host from Buffalo, N.Y., is a rollickingly funny comedy, particularly for fans of dark humor. It is definitely worth saving. As NBC's Brandon Tartikoff says, "This is a show people will talk about the next day. It's not another lovable sitcom from the makers of 'Diff'rent Strokes.'"

But NBC feared that it would be too unconventional and outrageous for viewers used to staring passively at the silliness of "Three's Company."

"This is an extremely fragile show," says Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "The research was very unfavorable. He's so outrageous that he took the audience quite by surprise."

NBC's guinea pigs called Bill lots of names — none of them nice. "Self-centered, cold, unfriendly, phony, stupid, oblivious to others." They also didn't like the other characters because they didn't stand up to Bill.

"Their first-blush reaction was not unexpected," says Tartikoff. "In all our conversations about the show, we kept referring to Archie Bunker. But Archie had a wife and daughter, whom he loved. This guy doesn't even pet his dog."

In one future episode, Bill's ugly daughter comes to Buffalo. "He tries to avoid her. He treats her like dirt," says Tartikoff.

When "All in the Family" first appeared in 1971, some people were scared away. It wasn't until after second and third helpings that audiences grew to understand what the character and show were about. As was the case with "All in the Family," test audiences were never indifferent to "Buffalo Bill."

"When the research is so unfavorable, with such high negatives, then you know the audience wasn't bored, that you touched some chords," says Tartikoff. "Howard Cosell and Barbara Walters are two personalities who test negatively, but audiences tune in to see them."

The network's vision of another "All in the Family" success centers around its ad campaign and its strategy of showing the 13 episodes of "Buffalo Bill" in the summer. If it clicks, Tartikoff says room for the series would be found on NBC's fall schedule. "You can always make room for a hit."

"Buffalo Bill" originally was scheduled as a spring series, but NBC reversed itself, feeling the show would never get off the ground against first-run programming on ABC and CBS. "This show needs multiple-episode samplings," says Tartikoff. "With such an outrageous, unscrupulous character, viewers might not come back. With reruns in the summertime, there's less competition."

Because sleazy Bill happens to be a TV personality, it might appear that third-rated NBC is making a vicious anti-television statement. Tartikoff, who commissioned executive producers Tom Patchett and Jay Tarses to do the series, says that's not the case.

"They wanted to do an anti-hero show with Dabney Coleman," says Tartikoff, adding that other situations considered were: an investigative TV reporter who nails people every week; an urban police chief who's a real social climber, and a big hospital medical director who's more interested in his real-estate holdings than his patients.

compelling force for us to take TV apart. It's just a convenient backdrop for this irascible character."

In tonight's episode, Bill throws a fit because his guest is deadly dull. He demands exciting interviews. His preferences? "A murderer, rapists and Freddy Silverman."

NBC To Offer 3 Miniseries

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — NBC announced it will feature three miniseries during the coming television season — "Kennedy," "Princess Daisy" and "Celebrity."

Martin Sheen will play John F. Kennedy, dramatizing the triumphs and tragedy of the assassinated president, with Geraldine Fitzgerald as Rose Kennedy and E.G. Marshall as Joe Kennedy.

Newcomer Merete Van Camp, a Danish actress, will star in the title role of "Princess Daisy," a four-hour miniseries based on the novel by Judith Krantz. Also in the cast are Lindsay Wagner, Claudia Cardinale, Stacy Keach and Robert Urich.

"Celebrity," based on Thomas Thompson's novel, is a six-hour miniseries about three childhood friends who agree to conceal a crime committed during their youthful days in Texas. No cast has been announced.

Lemmon Stars

In Film Version

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jack Lemmon will star in the film version of Bill C. Davis' "Mass Appeal," now in its second year of national touring after a full season on Broadway.

Oscar-winner Lemmon was signed by Operation Cork Productions, a new company founded by Joan Krock. "Mass Appeal" will be produced by Larry Turman and David Foster in association with Lemmon's Jalem Productions.

Playwright Davis has written the screen adaptation. Principal photography will begin this summer in Los Angeles.

Dunaway And O'Toole Co-Star

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Peter O'Toole and Faye Dunaway will co-star in "Supergirl," along with Helen Slater, a 19-year-old newcomer in the title role.

The Alexander Salkind production will be filmed in London with Warner Bros. distributing the romantic adventure film. The supporting cast includes Marc McClure, Peter Cook, Maureen Teefy and Brenda Vaccaro.

Jeannot Szwarc, who directed "Jaws II," will spend nine months directing and supervising visual effects for "Supergirl" for release in the summer of 1984.

G DVTJNCKNW GNJK CGFVC AW RCADVT JK WNFVVR.

Yesterday's Cryptquip - THE TIMID COMPUTER PROGRAMMER OUGHT TO DATE A PROFESSOR.
Today's Cryptquip clue: N equals U.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

LOSERS INTO WINNERS

cover, 88 pp., $8.95. Available from Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025 for $8.50 plus $.75 for postage and handling. It takes a newcomer in easy steps through the initial stages of bidding and the first steps in play. It has a novel method of evaluating distributional features, even though the end result doesn't differ greatly from standard methods.

Truscott, Bridge Editor of The New York Times, held the South cards in a recent social game. He became declarer in three hearts after a competitive auction. West led the ace of diamonds and, in response to his partner's signal, continued with a diamond. East won and led a third diamond. West discarded a low spade and declarer ruffed in dummy. Since West did not overcall immediately but only balanced, declarer felt sure that East held the king of clubs. So rather than lead toward the queen of clubs, declarer elected to try for a loser-on-loser play. He immediately led a spade to his king. West won the ace and returned a spade. Declarer won in hand, drew trumps in two rounds ending on the table, and led the ten of spades, discarding a club from his hand.

West won and shifted to a club, but declarer was in control. He captured the jack with the ace, crossed back to dummy with a trump and discarded his remaining club on the good nine of spades. He lost only two spade tricks and two diamonds.
