Panel Okays Additional Taxes

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. AP
The state House Finance Committee today approved a plan to raise $242 million by levying additional taxes on tractor-trailer trucks, video games, alcoholic beverages and new and used cars.

The committee approved the plan about 4 minutes after receiving it from House leaders. House Finance Committee Chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, said the bill would go to the floor for a vote Friday and could receive final House consideration Monday night. The committee voted 34-11 to approve the package, with most of the objections coming from Republicans who are heavily outnumbered in the House.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who led a subcommittee that compiled the package, said it would raise $131.8 million in recurring tax revenues and $73.1 million in one-time windfalls. The package also would generate $37.1 million a year in Highway Fund revenues.

The total value of the package, $242 million, slightly exceeds budget needs of $232.4 million established by the Appropriations Committee leaders.

That includes money for giving state employees and teachers a 5 percent across the board salary increase, spending money to match federal highway funds and making capital improvements in the university system.

Here are the items included in the tax package:

Raising the 2 percent sales tax ceiling on new cars, boats and airplanes from $120 to $300 and charging the sales tax on used cars and trade-ins to generate $62.3 million in 1983-84.

Eliminating the $200 interest exclusion on state income taxes to raise $7 million.

Apply the sales tax to homes, cottages and condominium rentals to raise $4 million.

Raise the auto license fee from $16 to $20 and increase the title transfer fee from $4 to $10 to generate $19.7 million.

Raise the tax on beer and wine by 10 percent and on liquor by 8 percent, increase the tax on liquor for mixed beverages from $10 to $15, raise the initial mixed drink permit fee from $300 to $750 and the renewal fee from $250 to $500 to generate $12.6 million for the state.

Increase the minimum franchise tax on corporations from $10 to $25 to raise $400,000.

Restructure the merchant's sales tax discount to generate $7.4 million.

Apply the sales tax to computer programs to raise $1 million.

Levy a $40 per machine license tax on video games and install counters to record the number of games played on the machine for consideration in levying future taxes. The change would raise $1.2 million.

Levy a weight-distance tax of 2 cents per mile on

Arms Negotiators Launch New Round Geneva Talks

GENEVA, Switzerland AP—Soviet and U.S. negotiators met today for the first full session in the new round of Strategic Arms Reduction Talks as the Americans awaited Moscow's reaction to President Reagan's signals of greater U.S. flexibility.

"I haven't read it yet," the acting Soviet chief delegate, Alexei A. Obukhov, unsimilingly told a reporter when asked whether he felt Reagan's announcement in Washington was a constructive move in the year-old talks.

The modifications of the U.S. plan, which omit a rigid ceiling on the number of long-range missiles and stress a count of warheads rather than missiles in any balanced reduction, was presented by Reagan as a "new opportunity not to be lost" by Soviet leaders.

Brushing aside further questions, Obukhov briskly led his team into the U.S. arms control office building where he was awaited upstairs by the American chief negotiator, Edward L. Rowley.

On Wednesday, while Reagan read out his statement in the Rose garden of the White House, the two chief delegates had a two-hour and 40-minute meeting, described by Rowley as "businesslike and serious."

The chief Soviet negotiator, Victor I. Karpov, was absent. Obukhov said Karpov was ill, and Soviet sources said he was expected back late this week. Rowley said he hoped Karpov's illness was "temporary" but added he had known Obukhov for some time and that he was confident they would be able to move ahead rather briskly.

Reagan's new proposal emphasizes Soviet and U.S. nuclear warhead arsenals, instead of missiles, and gives U.S. negotiators more flexibility in reaching an accord.

The change is designed to move the United States and the Soviet Union away from building multi-warhead missiles and toward small, single-warhead missiles that would be less threatening.

The plan calls for raising the proposed ceiling on the number of land-based and submarine-based missiles each side could have. The existing U.S. proposal would set a ceiling of 850 long-range missiles on each side. It also calls for a one-third cutback in warheads, leaving each side with 5,000.

Under the new plan, the missile ceiling would be increased to an undisclosed number, somewhere from the 850 the United States has proposed to the 1,450 missile ceiling the Soviet Union has indicated it would accept. At the same time, their warhead limit would remain at 5,000.

The Soviets have argued that the American proposals do not take into account the different structures of the two powers' arsenals, as 70 percent of Moscow's strategic potential is land-based while the United States relies primarily on submarine-launched missiles and heavy bombers.

They assert that an accord based on the American concept would force the Soviet Union to scrap more than 90 percent of its intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Charged In Arson Cases

WASHINGTON, N.C. Kenneth Ray Ross, a Highway Patrol sergeant stationed in Pitt County, was arrested Wednesday on arson and conspiracy charges in connection with the burning of two mobile homes in Beaufort County on Oct. 6, 1982.

Ross was taken into custody at Highway Patrol Troop A headquarters in Greenville about 11 a.m. by Beaufort County sheriff's officers and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Charged with two counts of arson and one count of conspiracy to commit arson, Ross was released on $10,000 bond pending a hearing in Beaufort County Superior Court June 26. The Route 1 Greenville man could be sentenced to 20 years in prison on each charge if found guilty.

A member of the Highway Patrol for 19 years, Ross was indicted by a Beaufort County grand jury May 31. However, the indictments were sealed by court order until Wednesday. Patrol officials this morning said Ross has been suspended from duty without pay pending an investigation by the patrol's internal affairs section.

Ross, a Pitt County native, was transferred to Greenville in 1975 as a trooper and promoted to sergeant in November 1981.

The charges against Ross resulted from an investigation of fires which destroyed two mobile homes on the Route 1 Washington farm of Harvey Henry Dixon by the Beaufort County Sheriff's Department and the SBI. The trailers were located in a wooded area just east of the Pitt Beaufort County line off U.S. 254.

Three other Pitt County residents also face charges in connection with the case, according to Sheriff Nelson Sheppard. He said Jesse Ray Davis, 23, of 502 Douglas Ave., Greenville; Nellie Peterson, 26, of Route 1, Winterville; and Jasper Earl Grimes, 35, of Winterville, were taken into custody after a grand jury indicted them on two counts of arson each on March 21.

The conspiracy charge against Ross alleges that on Sept. 30, 1982, he conspired with Grimes to commit arson against Dixon. The arson charges allege Ross set fire to and aided the burning of the two house trailers.

Consul Changes Mind; Requests Asylum In U. S.

NEW ORLEANS, AP—Nicaragua's consul general in New Orleans ordered out of the United States, along with 20 other Nicaraguan diplomats, asked instead for political asylum and will be allowed to stay while his request is reviewed.

Augustin Altaro, commented only briefly Wednesday on his decision to try to remain in the United States.

It has been a very difficult day for me, he said, as he emerged from the office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, and walked to a car in which he was driven away.

Asked when he had decided to apply for political asylum, Altaro said, "Last night after talking to my family."

It was an abrupt reversal from his comments of the previous night, when he had said, "We are going back to our country. We are happy to go."

The State Department responding to the expulsion of three American diplomats from Nicaragua had ordered 21 Nicaraguans and their families out of the United States. Altaro's deadline for leaving was 4 p.m.

The State Department's order closed the New Orleans consulate and five other offices it said had been used for spying.

Edwin Chauvin Jr., district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in New Orleans, said Altaro will be permitted to remain in the country while his application is reviewed. There was no prediction how long the process would take.

Educators Gather For School Crisis Talks With President

HOPKINS, Minn. AP—Educators gathered to talk with President Reagan about solving the crisis in the nation's schools were told by Minnesota's governor today that the federal government will have to help foot the reform bill.

When we are talking about education we should put our money where our mouth is, Gov. Rudy Perpich, a Democrat, said at the start of a day-long forum at the Hopkins Eisenhower Community Center.

The participants are to discuss the recommendations of the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

The president himself was flying later today to Minneapolis to join in the discussion in this suburb outside the Twin Cities. His appearance is the latest in a flurry of White House education activities, including a lunch the president held Wednesday for leaders of four national school groups.

The public education leaders have been at loggerheads with the Reagan administration over the president's push for tax breaks for private education and his efforts in past years to cut aid to public schools. But they are optimistic that Reagan's personal interest will lead to more federal dollars for schools.

Perpich, greeting Education Secretary T.H. Bell and other educators, outlined steps he has taken in his six months in office to boost state support and prod schools to offer more courses in math, science, foreign languages and computers.

Teachers must be paid and paid well, they are key to the quality of education, the governor said.

He added, "I don't believe that states should have total responsibility to support education by themselves. The federal government must provide financial support and a clear national policy."

The president also will attend an evening fund-raiser in Minneapolis for Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., before flying home.

Next Tuesday, he plans to visit a high school in Tennessee and will address a Parent Teachers Association convention in New Mexico on Wednesday.

On Wednesday, Reagan discussed the school problems over lunch at the White House with leaders of four major education groups, the AFL-CIO's American Federation of Teachers, the National School Boards Association, the American Association of School Administrators and the Council of Chief State School Officers.

AFT President Albert

Shanker, a frequent critic of Reagan's efforts to give tax breaks to parents of private school children as well as his past attempts to sharply cut back on federal aid to public schools, said afterwards,

"There were assumptions in today's discussions that the federal government might do a few other things, not huge."

Earlier this year, Reagan asked Congress for $90 million to help states meet a shortage of math and science teachers. The House already has passed a $425 million version of that bill.

The president sort of indicated that they will be doing some more, but I'm sure not as much as we would want, said Shanker.

Shanker said that 60 percent of the discussion was around points of agreement, such as the need to

Pascasio Says Sheriff 'Suggested' Resignation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Former Pitt County Deputy Lee Pascasio, hinting of a suit against the state attorney general's office to clear my name," said Wednesday afternoon that Sheriff Ralph Tyson "suggested to me that I resign."

The resignation and possible suit stemmed from incidents that occurred during the murder trial last week of Billy Braswell, who admitted that he shot his wife to death in September 1982 and then tried to commit suicide.

Tyson declined earlier Wednesday to say if he had asked for Pascasio's resignation, but he did say, "I feel like it was one of those things that was necessary." The sheriff said today he had nothing further to say about Pascasio's resignation.

During the trial, Pascasio read a transcript of a tape recording he made of a conversation with Braswell which tended to corroborate Braswell's testimony that his wife shot him first.

Assistant Attorney General Don Stephens, who prosecuted the case for the state, both during cross examination and again during his final argument to the jury, accused Pascasio of being the author of the Braswell defense.

Also during cross examination, Pascasio said he had, at one time, "considered taking a warrant out" for Tyson because he believed the sheriff "had done a wrong thing."

Pascasio, not given an opportunity to explain in court, said following the trial last week that he "felt at one time, the sheriff was applying pressure on me not to testify" at a bond hearing for Braswell last November and felt that "bordered on intimidation of a state witness."

Pascasio said the matter involved a misunderstanding. "I had good intentions and the sheriff had good intentions, too. It was simply a time of disagreement," he said.

Pascasio said Wednesday that he discussed the allegations made by Stephens with an attorney early Monday then talked with Tyson. "The sheriff just suggested to me," told me he wanted for me to clear my name," and "suggested to me that I resign" in order to "devote 100 percent of my energies to do so."

"I was not expecting him to say that," Pascasio said, adding that he then asked the sheriff, "Suppose I choose not to resign?"

Church Singles Programs Provide Good Friendships

By ANDREA NEAL
INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Bachelor Ben Cagle used to head for the singles bars after finishing work. Now he says he's found a place where friendships are more meaningful — a nearby church's fellowship hall.

Cagle, 39, one of 56.8 million single Americans, can be found every Wednesday night at the St. Luke's United Methodist church singles program in Indianapolis.

"I came because I was getting tired of a lot of the shallow relationships I was having," Cagle said. "In the bar scene, there were too many superficial people."

"I'd get off work on Friday nights and I'd want some place to go. I'd go to some of the singles bars, but I wasn't happy with the girls I dated."

The number of church-organized singles programs is mushrooming, from New York City to California. They are sponsored by Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish congregations.

While some of the groups focus on the special problems of divorce and widowhood, most are designed to address the problem of loneliness in an increasingly singles' world.

In 1981, there were 33.2 million people over age 18 living in the United States who had never been married. Another 12.8 million were single because of the death of a spouse and 10.8 million were divorced.

The Rev. Jim Smoke was involved with the formation of one of the first official church singles programs at the Garden Grove Community Church in California.

Smoke joined the church staff in 1974 as a fulltime minister to single adults. He now is a consultant to churches developing singles programs.

"It's a growing phenomenon," Smoke said. "Society is recognizing singles are a viable force for the first time. Society no longer says, 'If you're 34 and unmarried you're strange.'"

Rabbi Allen Kaplan, associate director for the New York Federation of Reformed Synagogues, helps congregations develop singles programs that suit their individual needs.

He said half of the 104 temples in the New York area have singles groups.

BPW Meets Tonight

"The bar scene is a horrible scene, particularly in large metropolitan areas," Kaplan said.

"This whole de-personalization that comes about through the bar scene is something to which people are reacting. The religious institutions are safe havens."

Safety is a big reason for the popularity of church singles groups among women, said Jerie Smith, administrator of a single adult pilot program for the Lutheran Church at Minneapolis-St. Paul.

"We live in a culture where a woman iraped every eight minutes," Ms. Smith said. "Churches have a group setting so there is a physically safe place to come."

The St. Luke's group at Indianapolis began as a Sunday school class for singles, but expanded when the minister's wife died in a traffic accident. Suddenly thrust back into singlehood, the minister felt at a loss.

Now, in addition to Sunday school, there is Wednesday night fellowship, social events on weekends, boating and camping trips and retreats.

The Rev. David Owen, minister to single adults, said more than 1,200 people participate in the program during a year, with most events drawing crowds of between 150 and 250.

Owen, 47, has been a Methodist minister for 20 years. Divorced five years ago, he says, "I've been through it myself."

Owen said about 20 marriages have resulted from the program, but "we don't see it primarily as a place to meet and marry."

We emphasize friendship," Owen said.

Owen, who also counsels singles, said he is visited most often by people who have recently experienced divorce.

"They have special needs. Their lives have been totally uprooted," he said. "The most common problem is how to rebuild their life when the old life is gone, recreating a life when the old is taken away."

At a recent social hour at the church, members discussed why they joined the group and what their expectations were. The common response was "companionship, friendship and social life."

"Most people who come here initially are looking for a support group," said Maureen Hamm, 36. "If we took a silent poll, we'd all say we wanted to meet someone."

Jerry McGlothlin, 34, said being in the group "has taught me it's OK for men and women to be friends as well as date each other."

"When I came here, I wasn't ready for dating," said Jerry Harlan, 50, who was divorced after 29 years of marriage. "I didn't even know how to ask somebody out."

The church's new role ministering to singles is paying off in increased church membership. Less than half the members of most church singles' groups initially belong to the congregation, but many join when they discover "what they experience in singles, they also experience in the church," Owen said.

Not all church-sponsored singles groups are directed at heterosexual adults tired of the bar scene.

Many Roman Catholic and Episcopalian churches have begun chapters of a national support group for homosexuals. The Episcopalian organization is called "Integrity." The Roman Catholic group is "Dignity."

Dwight Geisendorff, sexton at All Saints Episcopal Church at Indianapolis and charter member of the local Integrity chapter, said the group's purpose is largely social.

The group holds monthly meetings, which feature educational programs, films or book reviews, and once-a-month parties or dinners.

Geisendorff said members join the group for the same reason heterosexuals join other singles programs.

"There are gay bars and also baths which are primarily for the purpose of sexual liaison," Geisendorff said. "You get tired of it after a while. We were looking for people with values and Christian morals and that's something you don't usually find in bars."

But for every single person frustrated with the bar scene, there are others who have found their niche in smoke-filled lounges and taverns. Some churches are beginning to minister to those people too.

For seven years, the Rev. Tom Behrens, called Father Behrens by those who know him, has spent his nights and wee-morning hours "hanging out" at about 20 bars in the East Lakeview neighborhood of Chicago.

Behrens was hired by a group of city churches, who pay his salary, to "have a church presence in the bars," which means "I basically bar hop."

"The main presence is just to be there to listen to folks who are lonely or have poor self images or problems and just want to tell another person," Behrens said.

Behrens said street ministries like his are helping improve the image of the church.

"I hear a lot of people say: It's about time the church came out here. Not that we expect the church to condone this lifestyle — drinking, debauchery and lust — but we out here are human regardless of our shortcomings."

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For the last decade, all parents have heard is how school enrollment is dropping off. Kids don't want to go to school anymore. It isn't "fun." It isn't stimulating. It isn't challenging.

In typical adult fashion, we've really flexed our muscles. We've shortened the school day to four hours or less. We've made electronic games out of English and math. We've added every frill from the History of Perrier to Holistic Car Repairs.

None of it has worked. We've got to start thinking like teenagers and use a little reverse psychology. You want to discourage dropouts? How about this plan of action?

Tell them their parents would die if they knew they were in school. Within weeks, teenagers would sneak out of the house by the thousands and force their way into schools if they had to.

Tell them they're not old enough to go to high school and watch them break out fake I.D.'s in droves. Can't get your kids to go to summer school? Just tell them that out of season it costs more. The hotter it gets, the more it costs. There won't be an empty seat in the house.

Tell them they have to drive to get there. If the school is only two blocks away, tell them that anyway. They won't miss a day.

If you really want a mob scene at the front door of every school in the country, sell tickets on a first-come, first-seated basis. No reserved seats! Then stand back. Especially if the school has had a "hit" within the last six months.

If school is touted as being fattening and gives you bad skin, they'll go for it. If you forbid them to associate with anyone who even goes there, they'll sleep over and accompany their friends to school every day it is open.

It probably sounds like a lot of trouble, but young people don't want to hear how unique public education is in this country. They no longer believe in the American dream that if you learn how to diagram a sentence, you can become president. They've been raised as a society of spectators where everything is done for them, and if you don't like what you see, you just change channels.

It isn't an easy job to keep them in school as it was a few years ago when my son said, "Everyone is skipping school. It's no big deal. I don't see why I can't do it."

"Then why don't you?" I asked.

"Because you'd kill me!"

Fear. We should have hung onto it.

Indian Newspapers Run Matrimonial Ads

By STEWART SLAVIN
NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — It appears to me that Box No. 77353 and Box No. 77400 in the matrimonial pages of the Sunday Hindustan Times should be a perfect match.

No. 77353, billed himself as a 23-year-old multimillionaire looking for a wife. No. 77400 claimed to be a 22-year-old heiress seeking a mate. For several weeks running 77353 placed special boxed ads in the Hindustan Times: "Wanted: Exceptionally beautiful, attractive and homely vegetarian girl from exclusive industrialist-business family for handsome, smart, pleasing personality, age 23 ... multimillionaire."

After some weeks, Box No. 77400 came on the scene: "Not only was she 'very homely,' but the 22-year-old attested that she was also 'slim, smart and beautiful' and had a Punjabi Hindu father who owned multimillion-dollar industries around New Delhi."

"Families of equal status may write," her ad said. India's "mating game" is played out each Sunday in the classified pages of New Delhi newspapers, where nearly 1,000 would-be brides and grooms are weekly put on the marriage block.

In this nation still ruled by ancient rites of matchmaking, the matrimonial ads are only the first step in a rigorous, drawn-out process. Things are decided much easier in India's villages, where 80 percent of the nation's 684 million people live. Children are often married off by their parents before puberty — sometimes as young as 5.

In many cases, astrology charts must be checked. Caste, religion and family income are major considerations.

Often, the entire family including aunts and uncles come under scrutiny — or do the scrutinizing.

Although the practice of dowry was banned in India 100 years ago, the payment of money and gifts to the groom by the bride's family is still the unwritten law. Only a small percentage of matrimonial ads — mostly by the would-be bride — specify "No dowry."

To be a knowledgeable watcher of the marriage ads, you must first know some ground rules.

"Homely" does not mean that a potential bride is plain, but that she is a skilled homemaker.

"No bar" does not mean that liquor won't be served after the wedding, but that differing caste, religion, or family background won't stand in the way of a match.

There are some descriptions, however, that baffle even longtime matrimonial ad watchers, such as that of a 52-year-old government employee who invited "matrimonial correspondence from virgin widow without encumbrances above 35 for unencumbered widower."

The plight of one man was particularly heart-rending.

"Sometimes stars don't match or luck strikes one hard — so is the case of this Punjabi boy," the ad began. He continued that he is "32 plus (looks younger)" and underwent the trauma of divorce by mutual consent.

He said he was now inviting "proposals from really beautiful non-divorced, charming spinsters." 5-foot-3 to 5-foot-5, must be a college graduate, healthy, fair, clear complexioned, modern, homely, ambitious, intelligent, sweet smile, sweet natured.

Things are decided much easier in India's villages, where 80 percent of the nation's 684 million people live. Children are often married off by their parents before puberty — sometimes as young as 5.

Her Self Esteem Suffered As Slapping Became Beating

DEAR ABBY: I can't get the letter from "Worried Father" out of my mind. His 19-year-old daughter, "Judy," stopped seeing her boyfriend because he had slapped her on a few occasions, but she went back with him. Her father then barred him from their home, and asked you if he had done the right thing. (You said he had not.)

How I wish I had read that in your column when I was 19. I was in similar circumstances at that age (I am now 25), and I can tell you that when my parents barred my boyfriend from our home, it drove us (him and me) closer together.

You were also correct when you said slapping eventually turns into beating. It happened to me. The more he abused me, the less my family thought of me, and the less I thought of myself, until I was convinced that I wasn't good enough for any man. (I felt lucky he would have me, no matter how he abused me.) Thank God I finally got the strength to break up the relationship.

I am now happily married to a wonderful, non-violent man, but it will take years to overcome the humiliation and degradation of having been battered and abused.

OVER IT IN OREGON

DEAR OVER IT: There is not sufficient space to print all the letters I received in response to the one from "Worried Father."

This one says it all:

DEAR ABBY: I stupidly married not one, but two men who "slapped" me before we were married. Your advice was excellent, but I would like to add this:

Judy should visit the local spouse abuse center. One visit will convince her that a slap soon becomes a punch, and then an outright brutal beating. Unfortunately, it rarely stops there. The abuser soon learns that he can hurt a woman even more by extending the abuse to her children. Any individual who lays a hand to another in violence has no respect for either that person or himself.

Please advise Judy to run as fast as she can from this lunatic. It will not get better — only worse.

BEEN THERE IN COCOA, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: There are three children in our family (all boys). We want to ask you if you think it is rougher being the youngest, oldest or middle child?

DOUG IN DURHAM, N.C.

DEAR DOUG: As I've said before, if you ask the eldest, he'll say, "The eldest, because you're expected to set a good example for the younger ones. And if a fight breaks out, I get blamed because I'm the oldest and should know better."

Ask the middle child, and he'll say, "Being the middle child is the hardest because you get none of the advantages of being the youngest or the oldest."

Ask the youngest child, and he'll tell you that being the youngest is hardest because "your parents try to keep you 'a baby' as long as possible, and you're the one who has to wear all the hand-me-downs."

In other words, it all depends where you're coming from.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Johnny on the Spot," whose ladyfriend is never on time for a date. I have a solution to this problem, and it's been working like a charm for years.

My husband has never been on time for anything, so when we have to be someplace at 7 p.m., I tell him we have to be there at 6 p.m.

This way we are only 15 minutes late, but it sure beats an hour!

Recognize Operation Sunshiners

The Operation Sunshine Girls Activities Program closed out its 9-month program yesterday with a cookout and recognition ceremony at the center, 1103 Broad Street.

Previously the girls had taken an end-of-the-program camping trip to William B. Umstead Park near Raleigh.

The Girl of the Year, Pamela Jones, was named. Runners ups were Stacey Green, Nikki Blount and Lora Tyson. These girls were chosen because of their willingness to participate fully and share with other girls. Operation Sunshine Director Gloria Pearsall said.

Mrs. Pearsall said the summer program will begin Monday, June 20, at 10 a.m.

The program will be open to girls aged 7 to 13 and will be held each weekday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (The age limit is being lowered one year.)

Playing For Keeps

It's called the toughest and most comprehensive law against drunken driving in the United States.

Effective Oct. 1 the new North Carolina law will eliminate plea bargaining and hopefully help keep drunken drivers off the highways. It should, if they can read and comprehend all that's involved, discourage drinking and driving by teenagers.

It abolishes lesser offenses (such as careless and reckless driving after drinking), and jail sentences are mandatory in "grossly aggravated" cases.

Breathalyzer results are going to play an ever-increasing role in passing judgment on drivers; and the law extends from six months to 12 months the period of license revocation for refusal to take the Breathalyzer.

There's more, much more; but the message is very clear. Starting Oct. 1 there is something else for a motorist with "only a couple of beers" under his belt to think about than running off the road or running into a pedestrian, or another car, or truck.

He (or she) can be in deep trouble just tooling along and then being stopped by a suspicious law enforcer. A DUI offense no longer is a game. The new law is making it pretty clear that North Carolina has begun playing for keeps.

Metrics Bring Yawns

Good old made-in-America apathy apparently is winning one more round in the continuing effort to make the people go metric.

It seems only yesterday when a gung-ho campaign was launched to accustom the public to metrics as a common denominator with most other countries in the world.

There were highway signs giving a destination in terms of miles and kilometers. There were containers designated in pints, quarts, etc., as well as in liters (and multiples thereof). Advocates did everything but give away money to win their point.

All the logic in the world was poured out upon the citizenry, to no avail. The public just yawned.

WASHINGTON — It is a truism on Capitol Hill that when it comes to the big issues, nobody's mind ever is changed by committee hearings or by floor debate. But if last month's Senate hearing on the born-again Equal Rights Amendment do not chill some of the enthusiasm for the ERA, it will be surprising. The proposed amendment got a very cold bath.

Almost everyone is generally familiar with the ERA, and some of us know it by heart. The amendment was proposed by Congress in 1972. It finally died 10 years later for want of 38 states ratifications. Now it has been resurrected in both houses, without so much as a comma changed, and the battle begins anew.

The amendment says "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." A second section vests power in Congress to enforce the amendment by appropriate legislation. A third section would make the amendment operative two years after its ratification.

As chief Senate sponsor, Massachusetts' Paul Tsongas served as opening witness in support of the resolution. He had a rough time of it. Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch of Utah questioned him closely on what the amendment means. What would its effect be in this situation or that situation? Time after time, Tsongas made the same reply. The courts would have to decide what it means.

A key witness against the resolution was Walter Berns, a highly respected professor of political science and constitutional law. He posed the large question that follows from Tsongas' feeble answers: Do we truly want to leave it to the courts? Is this what 535 members of Congress and the legislatures of 38 states would like to do — to let nine members of the Supreme Court tell them what they really meant by their amendment?

After 10 years of study, Berns said, he doesn't know what is meant by the ERA. He doubted that the co-sponsors know. The amendment speaks of "equality of rights" without identifying those rights. The language appears to be absolute in its terms; it appears to forbid all laws, federal as well as state, that classify by sex; the language permits no exceptions or qualifications.

But is this what the sponsors intend? Some proponents insist that the ERA, if it becomes part of the supreme law of the land, "of course" would take account of physical characteristics: Laws relating to wet nurses would not apply to men. And "of course" the ERA would not disturb a right to privacy. It would not require coeducational dorms at state universities or common latrines at Army camps. But the amendment itself is silent on these points.

Berns persisted: Is "on account of sex" in the ERA to be equated constitutionally with "on account of race" in the 15th Amendment? Do we leave it to the courts to decide? If classifications by gender are to be legally as "suspect" as classifications by race, what then? Will the sponsors accept "any meaning" the courts may give the language?

"If so," said Berns, "I would charge them with treating the Constitution with contempt; if not, I would ask them to point to the standard on the basis of which they could charge the court with misinterpreting the language."

Would the ERA invalidate a male-only draft? Let the courts decide. Are sex entitlements similar to racial entitlements? Will the rights of women to vote be equivalent to the rights of minorities to vote, and not to have their voting power diluted? It would be up to the judges. Does "on account of sex" embrace homosexual choice? Do we leave that issue to a majority of five on a court of nine? Would the amendment equalize the laws on prostitution, imposing equal punishment on the prostitute and her customer alike?

These are not frivolous questions. Tsongas got a friendly ho-ho-ho from the pro-ERA audience when he scoffed at "unisex toilets," but constitutional law is no laughing matter. If a black Marine cannot be denied access to the Quantico showers "on account of race," and of course he cannot be so denied, who is to be forbidden showers "on account of sex"? Says Tsongas: The courts would decide. It's a terrible way to amend the Constitution.

Industry Offers Helping Hand

RALEIGH — Nationwide, schools are finding it increasingly difficult to find math and science teachers. Given the salaries paid teachers and the salaries paid to math and science majors in private business, it's no surprise that less than 100 new math and science education majors joined the ranks of North Carolina's public schools last year.

One of the highly regarded solutions to this problem is to put private business scientists and mathematicians in the classroom. An industry might lend the teacher to the local school system or, at the least, reschedule his work hours to allow him to teach a class or two.

When the National Task Force for Economic Growth met at Research Triangle Park, several participants said such programs were getting under way in their areas of the country. But, some professional educators said they questioned the wisdom of taking this course. A teacher must know not only the discipline he's teaching, they said, but the teacher must also know how to teach.

Bruce Brombacher of Upper Arlington, Ohio, national teacher of the year, made the point most succinctly. "There's a difference between knowing math and physics and being able to impart that knowledge to children in K-12."

Other educators argued that to bring these non-teachers into teaching jobs, you'd have to change the legal standards for teachers. In the process, we might end up opening the classroom to a lot of unqualified people, they said.

But the arguments of the educators were overwhelmed by several governors and businessmen. New Jersey Gov. Tom Kean said state laws are fraught with roadblocks that keep extremely competent people out of teaching. These laws have to be changed, he said.

"These laws make it impossible for some people to get back into teaching or for retired executives to get into it. These are people with different experiences. They could develop into career teachers. They are well-qualified... You don't have to go so far as to quote the Einstein Rule — that Einstein could not teach physics in a high school because he didn't have a teaching certificate," Kean said.

Others argued that state laws could be written very strictly. If you didn't have a teaching certificate, you'd need to show a suitable educational background and have a specific expertise. As one businesswoman from the audience argues, "You wouldn't be getting totally unqualified people, just some people without some of the specifics of an education degree."

Gov. Jim Hunt, taking the most practical point of view, said that in some communities the debate may not be over whether to allow a non-teacher to teach math and science. It may be whether the school was going to offer any of those subjects. "In some areas, you might not be able to get a math teacher but here, living in the community, you have this retired engineer.

This question hits right at the heart of the reason the Education Commission of the States formed its task force. Good math and science education will be essential to today's children as they enter the workforce. Having a science and math literate work force is also essential to American business, especially as we encounter more competition from foreign industry.

By putting private sector scientists and mathematicians in the classroom, we may be able to buy ourselves some time in which to correct the structural problems of American education that have led to the shortage of these teachers. American business appears to be saying let's give it a try.

Data Help Develop Growth

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — James McManus goes nowhere in the marketplace without his numbers, without the data his researchers compile and his computers analyze, and from which he distills wisdom about human behavior.

"We are the most expert people in the world at quantifying human behavior," he says. He claims his business record demonstrates it. "We have the best track record in terms of compound growth," he says.

Marketing Corporation of America, which produced revenue of $25,000 when McManus founded it in 1971, brought in $83 million in 1982, a figure he expects to reach $125 million this year and $200 million in 1985.

Early revenue came largely from market research and sales promotion, and from advising clients on how to build consumer lines, advice that led to the success of Pillsbury's Pipin' Hot Loaf and Frito-Lay's GrandMa's Foods.

More recently they've been coming also from MCA subsidiaries that emerged from its knowledge of markets, including Westport Restaurants, Inc., operator of two expanding chains called The Bakers Garden and Tanglewoods.

In all, McManus and his 88 principles or associates, "all chiefs, no trainees," have begun 22 business ventures and succeeded at 10, a track record that defies the incredible odds against new-business success.

While 10 were considered failures,

The author Oliver Goldsmith once wrote, "People seldom improve when they have no model but themselves to copy."

Probably we have all noticed this truth, at least in a negative way. Everyone has at some time seen a strange old man who lives alone, queerly dressed, talking to himself, behaving peculiarly.

How do people become like this? Partly because they have no outside standard — the companionship of someone else — by which to correct themselves.

We often say that a man is known by the company he keeps. We might go further and say that a man is formed by the company he keeps. Our friends have a great effect upon us, which may lead us to the barroom or to the lecture hall, to the night club or to church.

For models in life to copy, we cannot afford less than the best. And we ourselves, as models for others, cannot afford to be less than our own best.

McManus' philosophy is to "collect intelligent, honest, individuals, people who want to work together and join in the adventure of building ideas into businesses." The goal, he says, "is to leverage 'people strength.'"

In other words, management by objective — MBO — is out, and you soon realize how hard the door is slammed on that notion.

Summit Helps Adviser Nail Down Policy

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

WASHINGTON — Fresh from the personal triumph he helped shape for President Reagan at the Williamsburg summit, National Security Adviser William P. Clark moved with unaccustomed dispatch recently to nail down White House preeminence over the State and Defense Departments.

If Reagan had taken a pratfall at Williamsburg, as one senior White House aide worried he might, the future of Clark himself would have been in jeopardy. Instead, the unprecedented pre-Williamsburg briefings ordered for the president by Clark that started months ago (and ended up with six or more hours a day of Reagan's time) achieved what they had to. Instead of ambling on stage as an amiable stumblebum, Reagan orchestrated one of the sharpest summit shows witnessed by the Western leaders.

That was the catalyst for Clark's run on the State Department following months of morose contemplation of what White House aides feel has been steady deterioration of the American position abroad. The grandson of a straight-shooting Ventura County (Calif.) sheriff, Clark has staked out new turf with Reagan's cognizance and approval. That stakeout moves policy toward the right and makes compromise, with the Democrats more difficult. As such, it becomes a major move on the 1984 presidential campaign chessboard.

Not all Reagan's success at Williamsburg derives from Bill Clark. Indeed, it was Secretary of State George Shultz and Assistant Secretary Rick Burt, his top European aide, who persuaded Clark and the president to gamble on summit approval of the East-West security statement. As it turned out, that produced the core achievement at Williamsburg.

But after Clark accepted the challenge of the East-West security statement, first broached to skeptical West Europeans May 10, it was he who squelched revolt inside the Pentagon. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and suspicious civilian aides smelled U.S. retreat in State's insistence on the summit statement. Clark overruled them and, in the event, the president carried his allies with him at Williamsburg.

But mild-mannered Bill Clark ranked in the days leading up to the summit. Three weeks ago, he had sent Shultz a routine presidential request for State Department approval of 11 names proposed as new ambassadors, all of whom were apparently political appointees, not from the Foreign Service. Shultz or his bureaucrats rejected all but one of them, substituting Foreign Service regulars.

Those vetoes help explain the anonymous attack from deep inside the White House last week against diplomacy "by tea and crumpets on the diplomatic circuit." That populist crack was ostensibly aimed at ousted assistant secretary of state Tom Enders, who almost single-handedly, without serious help from Shultz, has been running Central American policy. But Shultz's veto of White House suggestions for political appointees to man embassies abroad helped fuel the populist mood in the White House.

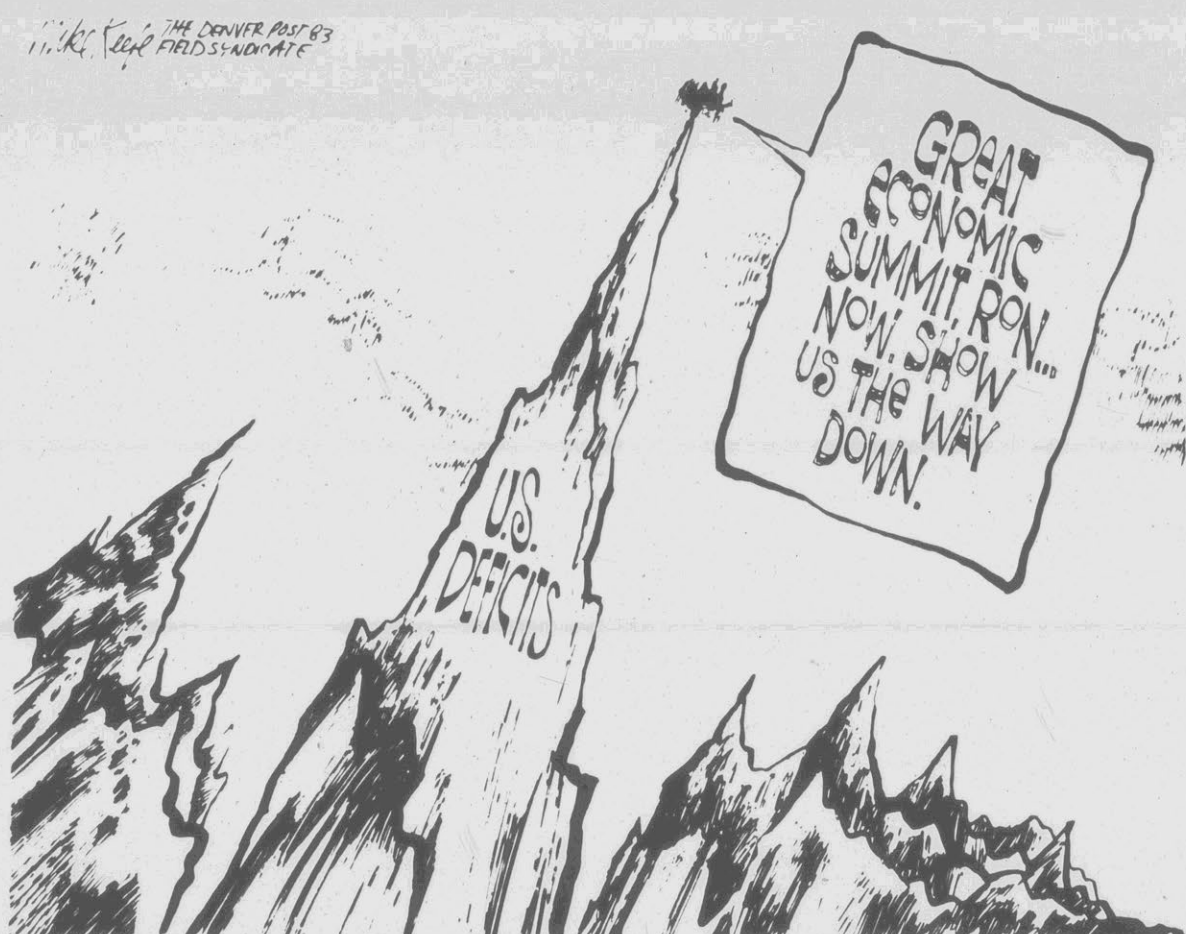

Though nursing no blood feud with Shultz — or anything close to it — Clark has shared such populist emotions. Perhaps more to the point, so has Ronald Reagan. Clark has also shared a conviction held by Reaganites that the "striped pants boys" were too attentive to Democratic critics in Congress. "One White House aide told us privately that Enders 'treats Doc Long as though he were deputy assistant secretary of state' (referring to Rep. Clarence Long, the Democrat who chairs the House Foreign Operations Subcommittee)."

For Clark, the Pentagon has become a hairshirt of a different color. Weinberger's obtuseness on the tricky politics of the MX missile, one issue that has recently prickled Clark, tossed that hot coal into Clark's office for managing. Clark thinks it should have been handled by Weinberger.

Tight control by Clark over national security policy guarantees a larger penetration of 1984 presidential politics than yet witnessed in this administration. That, not one-upmanship or personal hostility for either Shultz or Weinberger, explains Clark's swift reach for centralized control of policy in his small West Wing basement office. There are few doubters that his grasp will equal his reach.

Anti-Slavery Law Given A Good Chance

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill to make slave holding a felony stands a "good chance" of becoming law after the state House adopted an amendment that helped the measure win 105-7 approval, supporters say.

"I think the vote by which it passed will make it a good deal more difficult for them (the Senate) to ignore it," said Rep. Malcolm Fulcher, D-Carteret, who introduced the bill and nursed it through the House.

After withstanding two close votes on amendments to weaken the bill Tuesday, Fulcher bowed to political realities and Wednesday supported removing a provision giving the State Bureau of Investigation the right to initiate slavery probes.

"I understand the realities of the political process here and I realize that the amendment may enhance the chance of this bill becoming law," he told the House.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, who led opposition to the bill Tuesday, said there was no need for the SBI to have original jurisdiction in slavery cases. He said complaints about involuntary servitude could be lodged with the local sheriff, police chief, district attorney, and superior court or district court judges who, in turn, could notify the SBI.

"I would be able to vote for this bill if we would take this out," said Wright, whose attempt to push through a similar amendment Tuesday failed by four votes.

Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, said the amendment would also quiet his objections.

"I am very much opposed to any move whatsoever that would allow the SBI ... to involve themselves," he said. "If we open the door on this, we will open a floodgate that will never end."

While that amendment breezed to 104-8 adoption, others were less well received.

Bill supporters sidestepped an amendment offered by Rep. Hugh Lee, D-Richmond, aimed at eliminating what he perceived as a focus on farmers and migrant workers.

"I strongly object to pointing out certain people for purposes of punishment," he said, adding that his amendment would include everyone, including those who hold "ladies of prostitution."

While the bill holds employers liable if they "with knowledge" hire someone who uses slaves, Lee's amendment would have required proof of conspiracy or "knowingly giving personal assistance" to slave holders before someone could be prosecuted.

After several members complained the amendment was too broad, Fulcher undercut Lee's supporters, saying, "You might be signing the death warrant on this bill if it passes the House and goes to the Senate." The amendment failed, 51-56.

An amendment making in clear that employers were responsible for slave holding by crew leaders even after a contract is signed was approved 85-25 after a short debate.

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, said his amendment would require that a farmer innocently employing a slave holder and later finding workers held in captivity must terminate the contract or correct the situation to avoid being prosecuted under the bill.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, argued that the amendment might encourage farmers to avoid making such discoveries. But Ballance countered that "at some point, there's a presumption of knowledge" simply because a landowner is expected to know what's happening on his property.

The House voted 66-35 to table an amendment offered by Rep. John Brown, R-Wilkes, that would have required migrant crew leaders to sign a document saying they held no slaves. Brown had argued that "it gets the monkey off the farmer's back and puts it where it belongs."

Thatcher Asks British Voters For Landslide Win

trucks weighing 70,000 pounds or more to raise $17.4 million.

— Require more corporations to remit employee income tax withholdings monthly instead of quarterly to raise a $30.2 million windfall.

Also require more corporations to remit income taxes quarterly to raise a $27.2 million windfall.

In addition, finance leaders said they're counting on community colleges and universities to raise tuition.

They also plan to make a one-time transfer of sales and use taxes on motor vehicle parts and accessories from the General Fund to the Highway Fund to help attract more federal highway funds.

The Senate already has submitted to the House four plans to raise approximately $204 million a year. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he will wait to hear from the House before deciding which approach to pursue.

Rauch said today he and the Senate are working closely with the House to come up with a package for financing the 1983-85 budget.

Both sides agreed there will be no general increase in individual or corporate income taxes. Quinn said the counties still are seeking the option to raise local sales taxes by one-half cent and that could come later in a separate bill.

Meanwhile, House spending leaders said they hope legislators as well as state employees and teachers will get a 5 percent pay raise this session.

House Expansion Budget Chairman William Watkins, D-Granville, said the General Assembly agreed in 1979 that each time state employees get a raise, legislators' salaries should be increased too.

He said that when legislators considered their salaries separately, "they felt the heat too much" to take action.

Band Plays The Wrong Anthem

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Band leader Thomas Watts says he is "extremely sorry" that the U.S. Air Force caused a sour note at a West German-Yugoslav soccer match.

The band mistakenly played a wrong Yugoslavian national anthem, Air Force Lt. Col. Neil Norum said Wednesday.

The mistake held up play in Tuesday's match for 30 minutes while a search was made for the proper music.

Norum said the band played the anthem used by Belgrade's pre-war, anti-Communist government, which was ousted by the Communists under Yugoslav leader Jozef Broz Tito.

Plan Two-Site World's Fair

CHICAGO (AP) — A decision to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' discovery of the new world with a two-site world's fair in Chicago and Seville, Spain, is a step closer to reality, officials say.

The executive committee of the Bureau for International Expositions recommended Wednesday in Paris that its general assembly give shared status the go-ahead when it meets next week. That would all but guarantee participation in the 1992 fair by most of the 46 member nations.

Senate Expansion Budget Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, noted that legislators cannot raise their salaries beginning this session. Any raise would have to take effect beginning in the 1985 session.

Hardison refused to take a stand on the legislative pay raise.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, another budget leader, said there is a lot of support for a 5 percent raise for legislators, who failed to get a raise last January when state employees received one.

"I think it's just irresponsible not to do it," he said of the raise.

The House Speaker now earns $13,860 a year, the House and Senate pro tems earn $8,664 a year, the House and Senate minority leaders get $8,664 a year and the others are paid $6,936 a year.

"The citizen legislator is not supposed to be paid as a job," Watkins said. "All you can do is help defray the cost a little more. I don't know one individual who doesn't lose money by serving."

Charged With Role Of Spy In 1950s

OTTAWA (AP) — A former Royal Canadian Mounted Police corporal has been arrested and charged with giving state secrets to the Soviets nearly three decades ago.

James Morrison, 67, who became a private detective after he was dismissed from the police force in 1958 for passing bad checks, was arrested Tuesday in Prince Rupert, British Columbia.

Police escorted him to Ottawa where he was charged with giving secrets to Soviet agents between 1953 and 1958 while he was part of the Mounties' security service.

Solicitor General Robert Kaplan announced the arrest Wednesday.

In the 1950s Morrison allegedly told the Soviets about a KGB officer in Canada who had turned double agent. Morrison was not charged after giving a lengthy statement to the police at the time.

But he later told the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and the Winnipeg Free Press that he squealed on a KGB officer to a Soviet Embassy contact for about $4,000, because he needed money.

Parakeet Sings For Full House

BALTIMORE (AP) — Give Fred the parakeet a full house, and he'll sing up a storm for opera goers.

The parakeet nesting in the Lyric Opera House lobby "loves company," says Lyric spokeswoman Nancy Dugan. "When we have a show going on and the lobby is filled with patrons, he sings at the top of his little lungs. He just loves it," she said.

On the other hand, when the lobby is quiet, so is Fred.

"You don't know there is a bird in there," Ms. Dugan says.

No one knows how Fred got into the Lyric, but he's been there since May 13 — residing in a large potted tree in the lobby. Sometimes the yellow and green bird sits on a rafter in the sun.

Staff members said Fred was named for former Lyric manager Fred Huber. They have considered trying to catch Fred and put him in a cage, but so far he has thwarted their efforts.

LONDON (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, strongly favored to win a second term, asked voters for a landslide victory in British national elections today to "banish forever" extreme left-wing socialism.

"We are hopeful. I think we are going to win," Mrs. Thatcher said as she and her husband, Denis, went to vote 20 minutes after the polls opened this morning.

Four last-minute opinion polls released today gave the Conservatives a lead averaging 20 points over Labor.

But 69-year-old Michael Foot, leader of the socialist Labor Party, shrugged off the opinion surveys, saying, "We'll see what the real polls say today." He maintained throughout the month-long election campaign that the published polls did not reflect the degree of nationwide support for his opposition party.

Voting got off to a brisk start in hazy sunshine in London and most other parts of Britain, but a morning drizzle cut the turnout in northern England. A turnout of 75 to 80 percent of the 42.7 million eligible voters was predicted.

Turnout was reported heavy in Mrs. Thatcher's north London constituency of Finchley, and in the Hillhead district of Glasgow, Scotland, where Social Democratic leader Roy Jenkins was in a tough battle to hold onto his parliamentary seat.

Liberal leader David Steel voted 20 yards from his home in the tiny Scottish border village of Ettrickbridge. "I indulged myself," he told reporters. "I voted for myself I can tell you."

Opinion polls showed the new centrist alliance of Jenkin's and Steel's parties jostling with Labor for second place. Some forecasts said the Conservatives could capture more than 400 seats in the House of Commons, the biggest landslide since Stanley Baldwin's Conservative victory in 1935.

A total of 2,579 candidates were contesting 650 seats, expanded from 635 in the last Parliament, due to boundary changes.

"I want as big a vote as possible," said the prime minister, who urged voters "to banish forever the dark, divisive clouds of extreme left-wing socialism."

Mrs. Thatcher voted in London's Chelsea and Westminster district, where Conservative Peter Brooke was seeking re-election. The district covers her 10 Downing St. official residence.

Candidates do not have to live in their own constituencies.

In Northern Ireland, where 20,000 troops and police were on duty, guerrillas blew up a gasoline tank truck outside a police-army base in predominantly Roman Catholic West Belfast. No injuries were reported.

The Irish National Liberation Army, Marxist offshoot of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, claimed responsibility for the explosion, which occurred with 300 yards of a polling station but caused no injuries. Police had warned they expected the anti-British guerrillas as well as Protestant extremists to try to disrupt voting in the divided province, which is electing 17 candidates to the British Parliament.

Mrs. Thatcher ran on right-wing policies of strong defense and tight fiscal control, while the main opposition Labor Party fumbled attempts to forge a unified policy on nuclear disarmament. For the first time in 60 years, there was a strong challenge from a third political force — the alliance of the Social Democratic Party and the Liberal Party.

Labor's strongest issue was the post-1930s unemployment peak of 3.2 million or 13.8 percent reached this year — nearly treble the 1.2 million or 5.2 percent when Mrs. Thatcher took office after defeating Labor in 1979.

But polls showed voters were skeptical about Labor's plans to borrow heavily for a $17 billion program to create 2 million jobs in five years.

The alliance had hoped its moderate policies would appeal to Britain's growing middle class and transcend Tory-Labor class voting. But Liberal leader Steel, 45, conceded to Mrs. Thatcher a day early.

"The question now is how substantial the victory will be and what controlling influence the alliance is going to have," he said.

Mrs. Thatcher defended her record of cutting inflation to a 15-year low of 4 percent.

The party winning a majority of seats in the Commons forms the government, and its leader becomes prime minister.

When the last Parliament was dissolved, the Conservatives had 334 seats and a 35-seat majority. Labor had 239 seats, the alliance 42 and the rest were held by small or regional parties.

The 17 seats in Northern Ireland were contested by rival Protestant and Roman Catholic-supported parties, including 14 candidates for Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Irish Republican Army.

Truck Hit A School Bus; Minor Hurts

MOYOCK, N.C. (AP) — Nine Chesapeake, Va., high school students and a bus driver have been treated for minor injuries after a truck hit the bus on a 2-lane road just south of the Virginia-North Carolina border.

The Great Bridge High School students, aged 15 to 19, were taken to Chesapeake General Hospital where they were treated Wednesday for minor cuts, scrapes and bruises, then released, authorities said.

Just two days before the end of the school year, the students were returning home early after completing final exams, school officials said.

The bus driver, Emma Nixon, who suffered cuts on her left arm and face, said she was driving 12 students, including two of her own children, to their homes when the collision occurred about 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Nixon was preparing to make a U-turn through a restaurant parking lot 400 yards south of the state line. She routinely turns the bus around in the parking lot in North Carolina because there is no suitable U-turn area on the Virginia side, said Don Travitz, director of pupil transportation for the school system.

The northbound truck, driven by Ronald V. Barholm, 22, of Virginia Beach, struck the southbound bus on the right side, North Carolina State Trooper W.C. Eley said.

Barholm was not injured, and declined to discuss the collision.

Eley said the accident was still under investigation and no charges had been filed.

Tornado Hit Community

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — A tornado swept through parts of central Columbus County Tuesday night, destroying a mobile home and heavily damaging five others in the Five Points community west of Chadbourne.

The tornado, which touched down at about 10:30 p.m., also tossed a pickup truck into the air. Continuing east, it touched down again several times in the Smyrna community where another mobile home was destroyed.

There were no reports of injuries, said Howard Stanley, Columbus County's emergency management coordinator.

Stanley said it will take several days to determine the damages.

The Ithica Manufacturing plant received heavy structural damage, Stanley said.

Falling trees from the high winds snapped several electric transmission lines, bringing a three-hour power outage to more than 3,000 customers of the Brunswick Electric Membership Corp., according to Willis Horton, the utility's district manager.

Several hundred area Carolina Power & Light Co. customers lost their electric power for several hours, utility officials said.

LACK ESSENTIALS
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Two out of five people in Asia and the Pacific area lack the bare essentials in food, shelter and clothing, according to a United Nations report released Wednesday.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service's Wilmington office said he had not been aware of the tornado until Wednesday morning when reporters inquired about the storm.

Exclusionary Search Rule Is Still Being Questioned

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal scholars predict the Supreme Court will soon get another opportunity to re-view a 69-year-old rule that bars evidence seized illegally by police from being used in criminal trials.

The court avoided the issue Wednesday in an Illinois case many thought would lead to an important change in the rule.

"We bought some time," said Prof. Yale Kamisar of the University of Michigan law school, one of the staunch defenders of the so-called exclusionary rule. "The exclusionary rule is proving to be tougher stuff than many expected," he added. But, he said, "clearly we haven't heard the last" of court challenges to the rule.

In Wednesday's decision, the court made some changes to help police obtain search warrants based primarily on anonymous tips.

But the justices backed away from using the case to decide whether it is permissible for illegally seized evidence to be used when police make an honest mistake.

Kamisar said he is relieved the court did not weaken the ban on use of illegally seized evidence.

He said the court showed it is being cautious in avoiding demands by some, including the Reagan administration, to lower the bar against such evidence.

Assistant State Attorney General Paul P. Biebel, who argued the case for Illinois, said the ruling is a "major victory" for law enforcement, particularly in major drug cases that use informants.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, in his opinion for the court's majority, said, "With apologies to all ... we reserve for another day the question of whether the exclusionary rule should be modified."

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled that Bloomingdale, Ill., police acted lawfully when they arrested Lance and Susan Gates and seized 350 pounds of marijuana from the couple's car.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled the marijuana could not be used as evidence against the couple because a magistrate never should have given the police a search warrant.

Police received an anonymous letter in 1978 alleging that the Gates couple was shipping illegal drugs from Florida and storing them in their home.

After conducting some surveillance, the police were issued a search warrant and they found the marijuana.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday cleared the way for the marijuana to be used as evidence when the Gates couple stand trial.

The decision scrapped a two-part test adopted in the 1960s that required a judge before issuing a search warrant to consider the reliability of an informant and whether the tipster had a basis for knowing the information passed on to police was accurate.

Illinois had asked the court to substitute a "common-sense" approach that would give judges more leeway in deciding whether the tipster's information justified a search warrant.

The court adopted the state's proposal, saying, in Rehnquist's words, there should be room for police to act on information from "an anonymous citizen."

"The task of the issuing magistrate is simply to make a practical, common-sense decision whether, given all the circumstances set forth in the (police-supplied) affidavit before him ... there is a fair probability that contriband or evidence of a crime will be found in a particular place," Rehnquist said.

Rehnquist's opinion was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justice Byron R. White agreed that the marijuana should be allowed as evidence, but voiced concern over abandoning the previous procedural rules.

Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Two Engines Out But Alaskan Airliner Makes Safe Landing

By WARD SIMS
Associated Press Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A crippled airliner with 15 people aboard limped to a "pretty good" landing on two of four engines as dozens of spectators cheered, after an engine exploded and blew loose a propeller which gashed the fuselage, authorities said.

Reeve Aleutian Airways Flight 8, a Lockheed Electra turboprop on a run from the Alaska Peninsula to Seattle, landed Wednesday night on its second approach to Anchorage International Airport after circling for about two hours to burn fuel, officials said.

No injuries were reported among the five crew members or 10 passengers, who slid down emergency chutes after the plane rolled to a stop a few feet off the runway.

The pilot, Capt. Jim Gibson, "made a pretty good landing," said Andrew Laux, control tower supervisor. "There's a little fire around one of the wheels, but it's just a fire," he said after the plane touched down. Firefighters quickly hosed down the smoking rubber.

During the tense period as the plane circled west of Anchorage before making its final approach, scores of observers gathered, including airport personnel, emergency crews and townspeople who had heard of the trouble.

As the plane touched down, they burst into cheers.

Most passengers stayed calm during the incident, said Richard Krueger, 37, of Seattle, one of those on board. "I always think positive," he said.

The airline kept the crew from talking to reporters.

The pilot initially reported problems at about 2 p.m. Alaska Standard Time (7 p.m. EDT), shortly after taking off for Seattle from Cold Bay, about 600 miles southwest of Anchorage, said Dave Jensen, airline vice president.

The plane's right, outboard engine "exploded" and its propeller blew loose, ripping a vertical gash in the fuselage about 8 feet high and 4 feet deep, said Jim Michelangelo, chief of the National Transportation Safety Board in Alaska.

In Washington, NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said investigators were being sent to the airport today to look at the aircraft's engines, cabin damage and controls.

Gibson had chosen to fly to Anchorage, instead of returning to Cold Bay, because of the Anchorage airport's fire and rescue facilities, Michelangelo said. The plane was escorted by military C-130 planes and helicopters, officials said.

The pilot shut down an engine on the opposite wing from the disabled one to help him hold course and lose speed as he came in for the landing, officials said. The 24-year veteran had previously made a practice approach, Michelangelo said.

Gibson "had very little control over the aircraft" as he landed, said Airport Police Chief John T. Hynes. As the plane touched down, Gibson shut down the remaining two engines to help prevent an electrical fire, causing a partial loss of the plane's hydraulic and brake systems, Michelangelo said.

"There was fire in the right gear and nose gear" as the plane was slowed, Michelangelo said. "Three-quarters of the way down runway six he lost directional control and exited the runway. He ended up in the dirt five or six feet off the runway."

The pilot had to stand on the brakes to stop, said Eugene Morris, accident prevention coordinator for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Hynes said the passengers gathered in the rear of the plane as it came down. They slid down emergency chutes onto the soft, grassy area where the aircraft came to rest.

An airline spokeswoman who asked that her name not be used said the aircraft was capable of carrying 87 passengers and crew.

Tick Fever Blamed In 2 N. C. Deaths

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — State medical officials are investigating two deaths attributed to Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, a disease spread by ticks common to North Carolina.

Dr. Tim Lane, an infectious disease specialist at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital, said Tuesday that a 63-year-old woman died from the disease about two weeks ago at the hospital, apparently because her condition was diagnosed too late.

Rutherford County Sheriff Damon Huskey reported that a 76-year-old man from Forest City died in Charlotte Memorial Hospital Saturday night, two weeks after contracting the disease.

But Dr. J.N. MacCormack, head of the communicable disease control branch of the state Department of Human Resources, said Wednesday that neither fatality has been reported to his office as required by law.

"I don't know that either one of those have been confirmed as Rocky Mountain spotted fever," MacCormack said. "Many physicians like to wait on the confirmation which may require an autopsy."

Through May 31, there were 13 confirmed cases of the disease in North Carolina — all nonfatal — compared with 32 for the same period last year, MacCormack said.

Last year, North Carolina recorded a total of 225 cases and 12 fatalities. These figures are about 25 percent of the 1,000 cases reported annually to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

SLIDES FOLLOW MOUNTAIN AGING — The relative youthfulness of the Sierra Nevada mountains contributes to the area's instability. And a once-in-a-century accumulation of snow on Donner Summit provided the saturation that allowed 40 acres of Slide Mountain to pour down into the Washoe Valley. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Aging Of A Mountain Range Poses Dangers

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG

Associated Press Writer
RENO, Nev. (AP) — As mountain ranges go, the Sierra Nevada is a relative youngster — probably under 10 million years old, and tens of millions of years younger than its eastern relation, the Appalachians.

That youthfulness is what gives the Sierra its distinctive charm — the craggy granite peaks, the spectacular canyons and the towering waterfalls. It also can make the mountains deadly.

As the Sierra grows older, its rugged features are gradually wearing away. What happened in the Washoe valley on Memorial Day, when 40 acres of Slide Mountain slid into the valley floor, is part of that aging process.

And this year, a one-in-a-century accumulation of snow is likely to contribute significantly to that process.

Millions of years from now, the Sierra Nevada may be more like the Appalachians, softly rounded and gently eroded. Until then, geologists say, people living in the Sierra can expect periodic reminders that the mountains are constantly changing, sometimes in violent ways.

"What we saw (on Memorial Day) was just one little slip in the history of this mountain range," said John Bell, a geologist with the Nevada Division of Mines and Geology. "That's what's taken place here for millions of years and will probably take place for a few more million until the mountains are eroded and the valleys are more or less filled in."

Slide Mountain, as the name suggests, is a particularly unstable peak, and geologists can count at least nine times in the past 100,000 years that it let loose with rock or debris slides. The Memorial Day slide, which killed one person and destroyed four homes, was the tenth.

It "was a relatively small event on a geologic scale, but fairly significant in terms of what has taken place in historic times around here," Bell said.

What happened at Slide Mountain is in dispute. Some experts say infrared heating of the earth on the mountain caused snow to melt from underneath and give way, triggering the landslide. Others say the land itself gave way first.

But all agree on the two necessary ingredients for the slide — water, which acts as a lubricant, and gravity, which sets things in motion.

"If you take steep slopes and saturate them like they were saturated this year, they're going to start moving," Bell said.

Or, as Terry Katzer, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geologic Survey, put it, "Gravity overcame the friction coefficient and it just let go."

Katzer, like other experts, said the potential for similar mudslides in the Sierra this year "remains rather high."

"I'm really amazed that there haven't been more slides, because everything is just super saturated," he said.

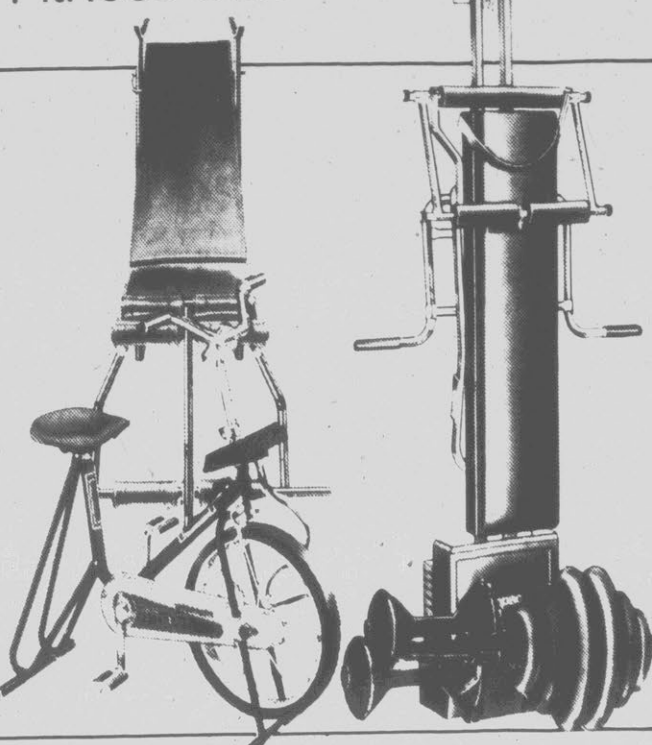

This was the snowiest year in Sierra history, with 796 inches — close to 70 feet — of snow falling at Donner Summit during the winter. The latest survey by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service said there was still 60 percent as much snow on the ground at the end of May as there was at the peak of the winter, according to Jon Lea of the agency's snow survey crew.

Robert Clark, director of the National Weather Service's office of hydrology, said that's about triple the average for this time of year. Clark called the snow situation in the West "unbelievable," and singled out Nevada as a state that could be headed for trouble in coming weeks.

There's no consensus on how long the danger will remain this year, but estimates seem to range from two weeks to a month — depending on the weather.

Bob Crittenden of the National Forest Service said that while slides can't be predicted, certain areas can be identified as slide-prone. Slide Mountain is an extreme case, experts agree, but other places also exhibit signs of danger.

Calcutta, City Of Chaos; Overflows With People

BY TINA CHOU
Associated Press Writer
CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Teeming Calcutta, India's capital in British colonial times, is deteriorating even as city planners try to make it better. But some Calcuttans say it's the only place to live.

The city's critics often say that Calcutta has been dying ever since it was built by the British 294 years ago on a malarial swamp.

Winston Churchill, the late British prime minister, once said of the port city in eastern India: "I shall always be glad to have seen it, for the reason that it will be unnecessary for me to ever see it again."

Its 10 million people are plagued daily with at least eight hours of power cuts, food shortages, lack of space and ever-increasing filth.

About a third of the population lives in slums, officials concede. More than 200,000 people live on the streets, contributing to a population density of 85,800 per square mile. The population density of New York City is about 20,000 per square mile.

Calcutta's transportation system can accommodate 2.8 million people an hour, and that's only about half the peak demand.

People jam together on bus tops and hang from tram-cars. Bullocks saunter down the middle of roads, and rickshaws thread their way through crowds at a bone-jarring pace.

Calcutta is building a subway to ease its traffic problems. But the construction, under way now for 10 years and scheduled for completion in 1987, only adds to the general chaos.

Yet many Calcuttans say this is the only place in the world they want to live.

They are proud of their rich Bengali culture and artistic traditions. The city has a unique stimulation that has bred such internationally known figures as Nobel laureate poet Rabindranath Tagore, musician Shanki Shankar and film maker Satyajit Ray.

Mother Teresa, the Yugoslavia-born Roman Catholic nun known as the "Saint of the Gutters," has opened "homes for the dying destitute" and "homes for the living," providing a humane touch to the metropolis.

The French writer Dominique Lapierre, co-author of "Freedom at Midnight" and several other best sellers, has said he plans to write a book entitled "Calcutta, My Lord" because he loves the city so much.

For many a foreigner, the foul odors of the city, its poverty and its wall-to-wall humanity could discourage a second visit.

It is common to see a woman, wrapped in a torn sari and carrying an undernourished baby, rush to a taxi stopped in traffic to beg for a rupee, about 10 U.S. cents.

Some slum dwellers sleep in waist-high dried mud boxes called "juggis" and in overcrowded huts and shacks, using water running in nearby gutters as their kitchen sinks.

Instead of resettling slum residents, the Calcutta Metropolitan Development Authority, a city planning organization, has installed power lines, light poles and water taps in the slums.

"It is far better, economically and from a social point of view, to keep the slums where they are and to improve them environmentally," an authority official told a reporter.

One slum dweller said he and his family would rather not move to apartment buildings in Calcutta's outskirts, as has been proposed, because they operate businesses or provide services in establishment of Bangladesh as an independent nation.

Most of these refugees have not been resettled.

Calcutta is the capital of India's eastern state of West Bengal, run by the Marxist Communist Party which gained control of the state government in the 1977 general elections and was re-elected in 1982.

Some Calcuttans claim the Marxist government spent most of its funds on rehabilitating villages in the city's outer areas, where the Communist Party got its votes, while neglecting the city itself.

But the Marxist Communists accuse the central government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party of withholding financial support.

"We are doing our best to solve problems, but what more can we do when the central government does not give us the money we need?" said P.K. Bhattacharya, the state government's spokesman.

While the rival political groups debate this, Calcutta's inhabitants worry about the coming monsoon season. Monsoon rains could flood the city with knee-high water and cut off power for the whole summer.

'Blew Whistle' On Officialdom

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A People magazine photographer is waiting for her. Newsweek has her picture in this week's pages. And she just squeezed in a quick appearance on the "Today" show.

Who is this woman?

"Barbara Walters asked me that only a few days ago," she begins in a soft accent of the South. "I am a strong mother, a good daughter, a patriot and I struggle to be a good Catholic."

She is Marie Ragghianti, a woman of principle.

While chairman of the Tennessee Board of Pardons and Paroles in 1976, she saw evidence that paroles and clemency were for sale. She could have ignored it. She was urged to ignore it.

But she didn't.

Her efforts helped topple the Democratic administration of Gov. Ray Blanton. Politicians fell because they never thought this mother of three, a former beauty queen with raven hair and an enchanting smile, would risk her high government post, her handsome salary and her reputation to fight them.

They were wrong.

Blanton escaped that scandal, but two of his aides were caught. They are serving five-year terms in prison. Two years after he left office, Blanton was convicted on unrelated charges stemming from the issuance of liquor licenses. He is appealing.

Despite Mrs. Ragghianti's widely publicized travails in Tennessee, the rest of the country had scarcely heard her name. Now, with the publication of "Marie, A True Story," she has become a national celebrity.

"Marie" is the work of Peter Maas, who wrote about another whistleblower, Frank Serpico, an honest cop who refused to look the other way when he found graft in the New York City Police Department.

Film rights for "Marie," have already been sold to Dino de Laurentiis for $650,000, and Mrs. Ragghianti is off on a 20-city tour to promote the book.

At a stop in Serpico territory Tuesday, Mrs. Ragghianti (ri-JAN-ti) talked proudly about her experience in Tennessee and the message she believes her story has for the country.

"The message is that one person really can make a difference and our system really does work — I'm living proof of that," she said.

Mrs. Ragghianti, 40, lives in Sarasota, Fla., where she moved to be close to a drug rehabilitation center. All three of her teen-age children have had trouble with drugs, but she said they have told her the drug use resulted from peer pressure, not from their mother's very public difficulties in Tennessee.

Marie Ragghianti's life has been rough. She was married at 19 to a man who she says beat her. Divorced, she worked as a cocktail waitress and ran a church library to support her children and put herself through Vanderbilt University.

Blanton hired her as an extradition officer, then appointed her chairman of the parole board in 1976 — a dream job, she thought at the time. But soon she balked at pressure from the governor's legal counsel to parole prisoners she felt were unqualified.

The administration circulated rumors that she had slept her way to the top. She was followed. Her records were altered by her bosses, and she was twice arrested for driving violations after leaving political functions.

After 18 months on the job, Blanton fired her, calling her a liar and a cheat. She sued over her dismissal, won the case and collected $38,000 from the state.

Blanton, elected governor in 1974 and choosing not to run for a second term, was ousted from office three days early, on Jan. 17, 1979, after he pardoned three people and granted executive clemency to 49 inmates in the waning days of his administration. Leaders of Blanton's own party agreed to the swearing-in of his successor early.

Critical Over Extravagance

PEKING (AP) — U.S. engineers helping to construct a building for the housing of seed samples have been criticized by the Chinese for extravagance.

For one, it was thought artificial lighting levels were too high for a country where scarce energy is carefully conserved.

"We designed the lighting levels quite modestly by U.S. standards," said one project engineer. "And yet, they were four times higher than Chinese standards."

In addition, the Chinese had originally vetoed a hot water system for the building, thinking that workers in the laboratory could go to a hot water plant in the central compound once a day and bring back a few gallons of water for washing laboratory glassware.

North Carolina A 'Wet' State, Declares Official

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although a majority of its counties claim to be "dry," North Carolina essentially is a "wet" state, says the administrator of the state Alcoholic Board of Control.

Forty-six of the state's 100 counties have ABC stores and permit sales of beer and wine, Bill Hester said in an interview.

The other 54 counties prohibit ABC stores outside city limits. But in 48 of those counties, there's at least one municipality that allows the establishments along with beer and wine sales.

Only six counties are completely dry, allowing no alcoholic beverage vending. All are in western North Carolina: Clay, Davie, Graham, Mitchell, Yadkin and Yancey.

"For all practical purposes, North Carolina is wet," said Hester. "You'll get arguments because 54 counties are still officially dry. But you can buy some type of alcoholic beverage in all but six of them."

In some cases, trying to label a county wet or dry is an exercise in futility.

Dare County, for example, is officially dry but the towns of Kill Devil Hills, Nags Head and Kitty Hawk are wet. The Kinnebeck township — including the towns of Avon, Salvo, Waves and Rodanthe — is dry.

Or consider High Point, which straddles three counties and was completely dry before 1977. Now the Guilford County part of the city is wet, while the Randolph and Davidson sections are dry.

"Dry" Brunswick County has 10 municipal ABC stores. There are seven of the stores in Columbus County and six in Robeson County, both of which are dry.

"It's such a hodgepodge, we have trouble keeping track of it all," said Hester.

Areas that allow beer and wine sales are even harder to identify because the state doesn't keep records of which counties and municipalities allow them and which don't.

According to Jay Hare of the North Carolina Department Revenue, 4.2 million North Carolinians live in areas where beer and wine sales are allowed. The remaining 1.6 million live in places where they're banned.

The first ABC store opened in Wilson County following the repeal of Prohibition in 1935. Currently, there are 99 city ABC boards and 46 county boards overseeing 379 stores.

There was a "big jump" in the number of ABC boards in the mid-1970s as local governments became pressed for funds, Hester said.

"Cities realized they were losing money," he said. "The people in charge saw their residents going to other towns and buying liquor and supporting (the other towns') tax base. The dry towns wanted their piece of the pie."

The latest statewide statistics, covering the period from July 1, 1981, through June 30, 1982, show that sales of liquor and mixed drinks in North Carolina totaled $296 million. Of that, $51 million went to the state.

The rest went to local government, which used much of it to pay expenses. But the stores turned an average profit of 12 percent and had combined proceeds of $36.6 million, which went for everything from law enforcement to alcohol education and research to bolstering city and county general funds.

The net profit can mean big money for some communities. Districts that have profited most from having liquor sales include Mecklenburg County, which had a net gain for 1981-82 of $4.2 million; New Hanover County, $1.1 million; Wake County, $2.5 million; and the city of Greensboro, $1.7 million.

Hester said it's difficult to pinpoint how much money specific cities and counties have lost by refusing to permit liquor sales.

He said that during the lengthy period when High Point was dry, nearby Jamestown in Guilford County "sold so much alcohol that they hardly needed a local property tax."

But since High Point voted to allow liquor sales in 1977, Jamestown's sales have plummeted by two-thirds while High Point's sales and profits are among the state's top 10.

Boone, home of Appalachian State University, is dry while nine miles away in Blowing Rock stores "do a tremendous business with all those students," said Hester.

"If Boone ever votes to go wet, Blowing Rock's bubble will burst," he added.

Boone residents soundly rejected ABC sales in a referendum last year. Mayor Hadley Wilson acknowledged that Blowing Rock provides many of his townspeople with liquor, beer and wine.

"There's no question about that," he said in a telephone interview. "It would be nice to get the extra revenue, but the fact that we don't have it hasn't hurt our budget too much."

Wilson said he expected no change in Boone's policy any time soon.

"I think it's because Blowing Rock has had some bad experiences with noise, littering, these sorts of things, as a result the many night spots that sell beer and wine," he said.

Think Tank's Report Says Soviet Army Reliability Is Questionable

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

The Red Army is short on training and experience, long on poor-quality equipment and saddled with soldiers of questionable reliability, says a study of the Soviet Union being published Thursday.

The report, sponsored by Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies, is the latest of several recent studies pointing out what are said to be serious shortcomings in the Soviet military structure.

One, a book by defense writer Andrew Cockburn, draws, on interviews with Soviet emigres about their military experience, and tells of an army that "occasionally borders on anarchy" because of brutality in the ranks, ethnic hatreds, drunkenness, thievery and poor leadership.

The new Georgetown volume, titled "After Brezhnev" and published by Indiana University Press, includes a chapter on the Soviet military written by Professor Coit D. Blacker of Stanford University. Like other parts of the Georgetown study, it is based on 18 months of research by a group of specialists and uses a variety of Western and Soviet sources.

"Soviet military capabilities, while impressive, are offset to a degree by a number of persistent problems," Blacker writes.

Much of the advanced Soviet weaponry, including warplanes, submarines and sea launched ballistic missiles, "tends to be inferior in quality and performance to the high technology systems produced by the United States," Blacker says.

Secondly, he writes, "not all Soviet forces receive the high level of combat training characteristic of American troops," he writes. He notes that Soviet pilots fly fewer hours per month and engage in fewer exercises than U.S. pilots, and the Soviet air force and navy do not have the war experience of Western forces.

Finally, he says, Soviet armed forces "may be less reliable than commonly assumed in the West."

Because the Red Army draws conscripts from more than 90 racial and nationality groups in the Soviet Union, powerful ethnic and religious tensions have developed, Blacker writes.

In addition, soldiers from the large Moslem minorities of Central Asia are less educated, and many do not speak Russian, "posing potentially serious difficulties of communication and command."

As a result, the army assigns Central Asian soldiers to non-combat support units as much as possible. Western specialists report 80 percent of the troops in support units come from minorities — Uzbeks, Kazakhs, Balts — and 80 percent of the combat troops are Slavs — Russians, Byelorussians or Ukrainians.

Blacker notes that the proportion of Central Asians and other non-Slavs among the draftees will rise in the coming years because the Russian birth rate is declining, aggravating this ethnic dilemma for military planners.

A study last year by the Rand Corp. concurred.

"We can envisage combat-related scenarios in which ethnic or racial riots, minority conflicts with local populations, or even mutiny based on ethnic grievances could become real possibilities," that study said.

Cockburn's book, published by Random House, fills in details of the ethnic antagonisms.

He quotes one former Soviet soldier: "When it is necessary to do some unpleasant work, say, clean a toilet, a Kazakh would be sent and the Russians would make him do it." Russians eat first in mess halls, Moslems are forced to break their religious code and eat pork, and racial tensions regularly erupt into violence, the emigres say.

Cockburn's sources also describe an army in which units can be immobilized by habitual drunkenness, a major problem throughout Soviet society. Thievery and sale of military gear — to supplement pay as low as $6 a month — can strip a unit of spare equipment.

The food is so bad that one Western researcher has found that apparently 65 percent of Soviet soldiers suffer from vitamin-deficiency ailments during their service, Cockburn writes.

"This is why you can sometimes see soldiers on the march stopping their tanks and scattering into the fields for vegetables or fruit in the gardens," he quotes one emigre as saying.

Bullying by senior draftees in the second year of their two-year hitch is the unofficial organizing principle of the army, he writes. Non-commissioned officers are ignored, and commissioned officers cover up indiscipline rather than blot their own records, Cockburn writes.

These conditions so sap morale that only 1 percent of Soviet conscripts re-enlist, the author says.

In a recent interview, the exiled dissident Pyotr Grigorenko, a former Red Army major general, also cast doubt on the effectiveness of the Soviet soldier.

"If he is not in the hands of a good commander, the Soviet soldier is no longer a soldier," he said.

Similar testimony comes from "Viktor Suvorov," pseudonym for an emigrant and former Soviet tank officer whose recently published "Inside the Soviet Army" describes the everyday brutality and harshness of Red Army life.

If war broke out with the West, he writes, "Soviet soldiers would surrender by the million."

Pitt High Schools To Graduate 679 Seniors Friday

DAVID DAVENPORT

MARLA AVERY

GLENN BUCK

JENNIFER WALSTON

DONNA COSTNER

A total of 679 seniors from four Pitt County high schools will don caps and gowns Friday and march down aisles to receive handshakes and diplomas.

Graduation exercises are scheduled at each of the schools, with school officials scheduled to pass out diplomas.

At North Pitt, commencement is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the school's gym, with doors closing to guests at 7:55 p.m. Seniors David Davenport and Keith Coltrain will speak to the graduates and guests. Davenport's topic is "Tomorrow, the World" and Coltrain will reflect on four years at North Pitt.

At Ayden-Grifton ceremonies will begin at 8 p.m. on the school's athletic field or in the gym in case of rain. Seniors Kim Stocks and Marla Avery will address those attending, with Miss Stocks speaking on "Roads of Tomorrow" and Miss Avery on the class's growth from freshmen to seniors.

D.H. Conley's graduation exercises will be on the school's athletic field (or in the gym in case of rain) at 8 p.m. Senior speaker Glenn Buck's topic will be "The Best Is Yet To Come" and senior Amy Gibbs' topic "What's Our Hurry?"

At Farmville Central graduation will be at 8 p.m. on the athletic field or in the gym in case of rain. Seniors Jennifer Walston and Donna Costner will speak to graduates and guests. Miss Walston's topic is "Attaining Success" and Miss Costner's is "The Magic of Believing."

County school principals note that parents and guests should arrive early and should check with individual schools on door-closing times and graduation rules and regulations.

Pope Will Ordain N.C. Seminarian

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—A Charlotte seminary student will be ordained as a priest Sunday by Pope John Paul II at the Vatican in Rome.

Peter Jugis will be the first seminarian from the 11-year-old Charlotte Catholic Diocese to be ordained in Saint Peter's Basilica.

"He's a first for us, all right," said Bishop Michael J. Begley, head of the Charlotte diocese. "Since this diocese is so young, he's our first seminarian selected for study there (at the Vatican). It's one of those things that's a sign that we're growing and moving forward."

Begley said he, Jugis' parents, Joseph and Peggy Jugis of Charlotte, and the Rev. John J. McSweeney, the diocese's vocations director, will attend the ceremony at the Vatican.

After his ordination, Jugis, 26, will return to Charlotte. He will celebrate his first Mass as a priest June 26 at Saint Vincent's Catholic Church.

In October, Jugis will return to Rome for an additional year of graduate studies in church law, Begley said.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 25 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 45.99 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,862,000, compared to 1,876,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward again today, resuming the decline of the past two sessions after a brief attempt to rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 4 points in early trading, was down 2.11 at 1,183.39 by noon. The average fell 28.74 Tuesday and Wednesday.

Losers held a slight lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Maryland Cup tumbled 7 to 36½ after a delayed opening. The company said merger discussions with an unidentified second party had been ended.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .17 to 93.40. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .96 at 459.64.

Volume on the Big Board came to 37.59 million shares at noon, against 42.68 million at the same point Wednesday.

to resign?"

He said Tyson responded, "If you don't resign, I'll need to let you go."

"Do I think he was fair? No," Pascasio said. "The sheriff knew I never lied on the witness stand. I was one of his supervisors."

"I think he (Tyson) had the opportunity ... to support me. I supported him," Pascasio said, referring to his explanation of the incident at the Braswell bond hearing.

"There's a lot of good in him," Pascasio said of Tyson. "He's a very good man. But it's deputies that make him good ... make him a great sheriff. He's really dedicated, but he has some of the best men working for him that's ever been in law enforcement. It's the deputies that get out here and work ... to protect life."

Pascasio said, "I want to be fair, but I want to tell it like it is."

"I didn't want to resign." But Tyson "did say that we ... to choose not to resign, he would have to let me go ... to terminate my employment because of the controversy over the Braswell trial."

"The sheriff has to make the best decisions he can ... in the best interests of the department," Pascasio said, but, "I feel he does so for the best interest of himself, too."

"I cleared him. I was determined to get him off the hook. He was concerned and wanted the record to be set straight."

"He could have done the same thing for me. But he didn't. This loyalty thing should work both ways. Not just from the bottom up, but from the top down, too. When the pressure gets on, that's when you should get tough and hold your ground and do the right thing."

"I feel I was fired and thrown to the dogs ... in a nice way."

The former deputy said the statements made by Stephens during the trial were "assumptions" on the part of the prosecutor and had "no factual basis to them. He (Stephens) certainly has the right to assume what he wants to."

"If his (Braswell's) story is a lie, it's one he made up," Pascasio said.

Pascasio said he "was assigned to go to the hospital on the day that it (the shooting) happened to stay on top of everything that went on. I kept a lot of notes. I was assigned to, and did. I was not assigned to investigate the case, and I didn't."

Pascasio said his suggestion, in a report to the district attorney and to the State Bureau of Investigation, that Mrs. Braswell might have shot her husband first, was speculation on his part from "observations of an experienced investigator." The shootings "could have happened in a way other than the obvious way. How easy it is to say 'murder-suicide.' You have to be open minded ... think of ways something could have happened."

An experienced investigator, Pascasio said, has to say, "Look, did it happen the way it appears, or did it happen otherwise. You have to deal with the best probability. But it could have happened in a way other than the obvious way."

"I looked beyond the obvious way. I could clearly see how it could have happened that way (Mrs. Braswell shooting her husband first). But I never denied the obvious."

"You need to be thorough when you are dealing with murder ... when you are dealing with any type of criminal investigation."

Tyson, who confirmed Pascasio's resignation yesterday and said "I feel like it was one of those things that was necessary," said this morning he had "no additional comments" to make.

'Position Paper' Is Narrowly Defeated

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Delegates to the eastern North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church Wednesday narrowly defeated a position paper condemning U.S. military involvement in Central America.

The delegates overwhelmingly adopted a nuclear freeze resolution calling on the United States to negotiate with the Soviet Union for a bilateral reduction of warheads to the lowest possible level.

The Central American proposal called for the U.S. to reconsider all military aid to Central American governments and to cease efforts to overthrow the government of Nicaragua.

Opponents said the paper was unfair in its criticism of U.S. military aid. They said the Board of Church and Society, which introduced the resolution, should have presented a report which criticized leftist regimes as well as U.S. intervention.

In another matter, the delegates postponed a proposal encouraging the appointment of ethnic minorities to the church conference cabinet.

Of the Conference's 212,000 members, only 4,090 are

Evacuated Due Ammonia Leak

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Caustic liquid ammonia leaking from a tanker truck in north Charlotte Wednesday forced the evacuation of homes and businesses in a three block area.

Firefighters wearing protective clothing and breathing tanks worked for 25 minutes to control the leak at Atlando Industrial Park. The leak was reported about 11 a.m.

Firefighters allowed people to return to their homes and offices about 11:45 a.m.

Fire officials said witnesses told them that the ammonia was being transferred through a pre-surged hose from the USS Agri-Chemicals Division of U.S. Steel Corp. to a tanker truck when a plug blew from the truck. The leak sent the liquid spewing into the air.

Whitaker Powers Tigers To 6-3 Win

By The Associated Press
Lou Whitaker, the Detroit Tigers' leadoff man, has turned to a new page in his baseball career book. He's now a power hitter.

Whitaker hit his fifth homer of the season, tripled and doubled twice to lead the Tigers to a 6-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox Wednesday night.

Had he shortened one of his doubles by one base, he would have hit for the cycle.

"I've come close to the cycle in the past," Whitaker said, "but I wasn't a home-run hitter at that time."

Despite the sudden show of strength, Whitaker says he has not totally abandoned the role of leadoff man. After all, he did score four runs in the victory besides driving in two.

"I'm a leadoff hitter. I'm just trying to do my thing so other guys can do theirs," he said. "I know I can hit, but sometimes you get robbed. I hit the ball tonight where they weren't."

In other American League games, Dave Stieb became the first nine-game winner in the AL as the Toronto Blue Jays beat Oakland 5-2. Baltimore rallied to defeat Milwaukee 7-3. New York edged Cleveland 6-5. Kansas City clobbered Minnesota 9-2. California downed Chicago 7-4 and Texas defeated Seattle 1-0.

Jack Morris, 5-5, went the distance for the Tigers, scattering eight hits and striking out eight.

Whitaker doubled and scored in the first inning, homered in a two-run third inning, doubled and scored in the fifth and hit an RBI triple and scored in the seventh inning. He now has 24 RBI on the season.

The victory was the fourth in a row for Detroit, and Boston lost its fourth straight.

Blue Jays 5, A's 2

Stieb, 9-4, yielded just four hits before he left after Bob Kearney homered to lead off the eighth inning. Joey McLaughlin finished up for Stieb, earning his sixth save after striking out the side in the eighth, and Cliff Johnson supplied most of the punch with two RBI doubles.

Chris Codiroli, 4-5, was the loser, falling behind 2-0 after two innings.

Stieb had a two-hitter through six innings before giving up a run in the seventh on a walk, a grounder, a balk and Bill Almon's single.

Orioles 7, Brewers 3

The Orioles launched their second comeback of the game with a pair of homers — by Cal Ripken and John Lowenstein — to score five runs in the eighth inning and beat Milwaukee. Both homers were two-run shots off Tom Tellman, who relieved Don Sutton to start the inning.

The Orioles erased a 2-0 Milwaukee lead in the seventh inning when Ken Singleton snapped a 1-for-15 slump with a two-run homer off Sutton, who had yielded just two singles through the first six innings.

Paul Molitor singled, doubled, tripled and had two walks for the Brewers.

Yankees 6, Indians 5

Pinch-hitter Lou Piniella's one-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning rallied the Yankees over Cleveland, giving New York only its second victory in seven games. Dave Winfield, Graig Nettles and Steve all homered for the Yankees in the first two innings.

Right-hander Jay Howell was protecting a 5-3 lead going into the ninth, when Cleveland scored twice to tie the score on singles by Manny Trillo and Ron Hassey and a two-run, pinch double by Alan Bannister. Rich Gossage, 3-2, was the winner despite facing only one batter in the ninth.

Royals 9, Twins 2

The Royals scored three runs in the fourth inning and four more in the eighth to whip the Twins. Willie Aikens and Willie Wilson had three hits apiece for Kansas City.

Robinette Drafted

Kelly Robinette, shortstop for the East Carolina University baseball team for the past four years, was drafted yesterday by the Cleveland Indians.

Robinette was a 13th round choice of the Indians.

A 5-8, 160-pound senior from Prince George, Va., Robinette is the highest draft choice of any player coached by Hal Baird since he took over as head coach four years ago at ECU. He was also the first player Baird signed after becoming head coach.

Robinette batted .214 as a freshman, .247 as a sophomore, .273 as a junior, and closed out with a .288 season this past spring. He was 42 for 146 as a senior and had 18 runs batted in, scoring 26 runs himself. He fielded at an .885 rate.

which was playing with only four regulars in the lineup because of injuries to catcher John Wathan, third baseman George Brett and right fielder Jerry Martin.

Aikens drove in two runs, one in each of the big innings.

Angels 7, White Sox 4

Rick Adams drove in three runs and Ron Jackson had two RBI to lead California over Chicago. Adams, a rookie, hit his first major league homer leading off the second inning, and his two-run single capped a three-run fifth inning that put the Angels up 7-3. Adams was hitting only .160 with one RBI coming into the game. Jackson drove in his runs with a pair of singles, in the first and fifth innings, backing Ken Forch, 5-3, who pitched a five-hitter.

Rangers 1, Mariners 0

Mike Smithson of Texas outdueled Matt Young of Seattle, and Larry Parrish scored the game's only run on a wild pitch in the seventh inning.

Smithson, 4-4, scattered nine hits over 8 2-3 innings before needing help from Odell Jones, who struck out Steve Henderson to end the game and earn his eighth save.

Young, 7-4, gave up just eight hits, three of them in the seventh when Parrish, Bill Stein and Pete O'Brein singled to load the bases. Young then fanned George Wright and Jim Sundberg, nearly escaping harm before throwing the wild pitch that allowed Parrish to score.

With Four Weeks Left, Tampa Likes Leading

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Four weeks remain in the United States Football League's inaugural season, and the Tampa Bay Bandits still find themselves leading the chase for the Central Division title.

Coach Steve Spurrier's club has become accustomed to the frontrunner's role and is looking forward to Sunday's rematch with the Chicago Blitz, a game that'll go a long way toward determining the eventual outcome of the race.

"This game," said wide receiver Eric Truvillion, "could be the season."

A victory would give the 10-4 Bandits a two-game lead over the 9-5 Blitz with three games to play — all against teams Tampa Bay beat earlier in the season. Michigan and Birmingham already trail the division leaders by two and three games, respectively.

Spurrier, however, is not looking beyond Sunday. The Blitz beat the Bandits 42-3 two months ago, so his team can hardly enter this weekend's showdown overconfident.

"All we've done is get ourselves in a position to go up to Chicago and play our biggest game of the year," Spurrier said. "I think our fellows realize we've got four more big games and this is the first of them."

"I don't think we have anything to prove, though," Spurrier added, discounting the revenge factor. "This is a key division game. Whoever wins is going to be in the driver's seat, so you don't need much more incentive to play well."

The embarrassing loss to the Blitz on April 2 was the first of two humiliating beatings the Bandits have taken. Michigan beat Spurrier's club 43-7 on Memorial Day.

The first-year mentor, however, has taken the lopsided losses in stride and accepts them as one of the built-in hazards of "Banditball," Tampa Bay's wide-open offensive attack.

The Blitz' Luther Bradley intercepted a pro football-record six passes in the first game against Chicago, and the Bandits had four turnovers and allowed eight quarterback sacks in the loss to Michigan.

"When you throw the ball as much as we do, bad things are going to happen to you sometimes ... sacks and turnovers," explained Spurrier.

Patience Pays Off For Perez, Phillies

By The Associated Press
It had been awhile since Tony Perez last faced Bruce Sutter. In fact, it was back in 1980 when Perez was with Montreal and Sutter was pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

On Wednesday night, Perez, now with the Philadelphia Phillies, and Sutter, with the St. Louis Cardinals, met again. This time it was in the bottom of the ninth inning of a tie game with two outs and runners on first and second.

"I know he's a tough reliever, and you have to be patient with him," Perez said, an American League pitcher the past three seasons.

Patience paid off this time for Perez, who belted a three-run homer to lift Philadelphia over St. Louis 7-4.

"That's what we needed," Perez said. "We came back and beat them. That's the way we were supposed to play."

In other National League games, Los Angeles pounded Atlanta 11-5. Houston edged San Francisco 1-0 in 11 innings. Montreal beat Pittsburgh 5-4. San Diego defeated Cincinnati 5-3 and Chicago nipped New York 2-1.

Philadelphia had lost 13 of its last 16 games and hadn't scored more than five runs in a game since May 4.

But the Perez and the Phillies changed that with their ninth-inning uprising.

Pete Rose started the winning rally with a pinch single.

his first hit in 21 at-bats. Pinch-runner Bob Dernier stole second and Joe Morgan walked. Gary Matthews forced Dernier at third and Mike Schmidt flied out before Perez blasted a Sutter pitch over the center-field fence.

"I would say Mr. Perez really smoked it," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog.

Philadelphia's Garry Maddox had tied the game at 4-4 in the eighth inning with a two-out solo homer, his third of the season, off reliever Doug Bair.

St. Louis scored all its runs in the fourth off John Denny. Lonnie Smith walked with one out and Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick singled to load the bases. Willie McGee singled in one run and Darrell Porter followed with a three-run triple.

The Phillies scored in the first on Bo Diaz's groundout, in the third on Schmidt's run-scoring single and in the fifth on an RBI double by Perez.

Dodgers 11, Braves 5
Fernando Valenzuela starred on the mound and at the plate for Los Angeles. The right-hander raised his record 7-2 and helped his own cause by smacking a solo home run his first of the year and second of his career — as well as delivering a run-scoring single and a deep bases-loaded sacrifice fly.

The Dodgers banged out 16 hits, including two-run homers by Dusty Baker (No. 6) and Pedro Guerrero (No. 13) and a solo homer by Rick Monday, his third.

Atlanta also played longball as Bob Horner hit his 10th homer. Rafael Ramirez belted his first and Braves reliever Rick Behenna hit his first ever in the majors.

Astros 1, Giants 0
Phil Garner's two-out single in the bottom of the 11th inning scored Omar Moreno from second base with the game's only run.

Both starters, Houston's Joe

Niekro and San Francisco's Andy McGaffigan, pitched well but neither was involved in the decision.

Niekro scattered 10 hits over 10 innings while McGaffigan yielded just four hits in nine innings.

In the 11th, Moreno singled with one out off Gary Lavelle. 3-1. Terry Puhl sacrificed and Dickie Thon was intentionally walked before Garner stroked his single, making a winner out of rookie Bill Dawley, 4-1.

Padres 5, Reds 3
Dave Dravecky became the NL's first nine-game winner with some outstanding relief help from Sid Monge.

Dravecky, 9-3, went 7 2-3 innings and allowed just five hits. Monge replaced reliever Luis DeLeon in the ninth and pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out situation for his second save.

Rookie Kevin McReynolds slammed a two-run homer and Terry Kennedy and Sixto Lezcano added solo shots for the Padres. Gary Redus and Cesar Cedeno homered for the Reds.

Expos 5, Pirates 4
Bill Gullickson pitched eight strong innings before running into trouble in the ninth, when reliever Jeff Reardon came in to put down Pittsburgh.

Gullickson, 6-6, had a six-hitter and a 5-1 lead after eight innings, but Dave Parker led off the Pittsburgh ninth with a single. Mike Easler then singled to right and scored when Terry Francona misplayed the ball for a three-base error. Dale Berra then cracked his sixth homer, chasing Gullickson and fetching Reardon.

Al Oliver had a pair of run-scoring singles for Montreal, one of them during a three-run third inning. That outburst was started by Gullickson, who doubled for his first hit this season in 22 at-bats.

Cubs 2, Mets 1
Ryne Sandberg homered to tie the score and Keith Moreland singled home Leon Durham as Chicago rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning for its seventh straight victory. The win streak is the longest for the Cubs in more than five years.

New York's Mike Torrez, 2-7, took a four-hitter into the ninth before Sandberg's on-e-out homer. One out later, Durham walked, moved to second on a wild pitch — and after Ron Cey was intentionally walked — came home on Moreland's single.

Plan Nears Completion For ACC Grid Telecasts

GREENSBORO (AP) — Rick Ray of Raycom Productions says a contingency plan to put Atlantic Coast Conference football on television this fall could be completed by today.

Ray, president of the Charlotte-based company which televises ACC basketball in conjunction with Jefferson Standard, met with the athletic directors of the eight ACC schools Wednesday at Hilton Head Island, S.C.

The ACC, seeking to put together a football package of its own, similar to that of basketball, is waiting to see if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds a ruling to allow individual schools to negotiate their own TV contracts.

Two courts have already upheld that ruling after a lawsuit was filed by the universities of Georgia and Oklahoma against the NCAA more than a year ago. Prior to the suit, the NCAA controlled all television rights to college football.

If the Supreme Court upholds the ruling of the lower court, however, the NCAA probably would be granted a stay in order to let all 1983 television contracts remain intact. Otherwise, the ACC will have a plan to put football on television throughout the fall.

In a related development, Ray confirmed a report that his company is negotiating with Clemson University to show all the Tigers' 1983 games on a delayed-broadcast basis in the ACC area.

Clemson is currently on NCAA-ACC probation for recruiting violations and, therefore, cannot play football on live national television. However, NCAA rules allow any school to delay-broadcast its games.

"We define a telecast that is not live as one that occurs at least a half hour after the beginning of the game and one that is not telecast in the area earlier than 10:30 p.m. on the day of the game," said David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA.

Clemson athletic director Bill McClellan also confirmed the report, saying the school would make no money from the broadcasts but was simply doing it for the exposure.

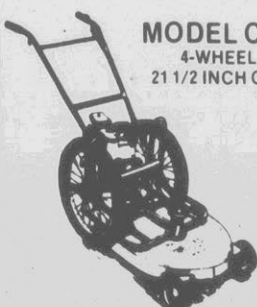

McClellan said the school is also negotiating with a cable television network for broadcast of Clemson games.

76ers Meet President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of congressional aides sent up cheers as the towering Philadelphia 76ers basketball team strode into a Senate office building. But the day was special in a different way for 76ers guard Andrew Toney.

"It's a memory that I'll treasure for life, being inside the White House and seeing the president. If we win it again, I think we'll be invited back," Toney said Wednesday after the championship team had met with President Reagan in the Rose Garden.

Forward Julius Erving said with a grin that Reagan did not ask for team autographs. But he added, "He was on the receiving end. The ball we gave him was autographed by everyone and the jersey that we gave him was number one. It had his name on it."

Court Blocks Takeover By LeRoux Of Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Hayward Sullivan was back today as general manager of the Boston Red Sox after a Massachusetts judge decided his fellow partner, former team trainer Buddy LeRoux, had little likelihood of winning his bid to take over the American League club.

After hearing arguments in Suffolk Superior Court for a second day on Wednesday, Judge Andrew Linscott issued a 1½-page order blocking LeRoux and his supporters from taking over the American League club.

Linscott set trial for July 11 and told the feuding parties to have all documents and motions filed by July 6.

LeRoux, one of three general partners in the club, claims he is the boss as a result of amending the partnership agreement with the support of a majority of limited partners. The other general partners, Sullivan and Jean Yawkey, claim the amending was improper. They went to court seeking an injunction.

"The court is of the opinion that the plaintiffs are entitled to a preliminary injunction pending adjudication on the merits," Linscott ruled.

"This injunction is to issue since there is a strong likelihood of success on the merits and also a strong likelihood of irreparable injury without such relief."

The judge said the ruling "leaves the partnership agreement as it was before June 6," when LeRoux attempted his coup, firing Sullivan as general manager and appointing his own candidate, Dick O'Connell. O'Connell was fired as executive vice president and general manager to make way for Sullivan after the 1977 season.

"The defendants are preliminarily enjoined from taking any action under the amendments set forth in the pleadings," Linscott ordered. The judge said the LeRoux faction had not complied with requirements of the Red Sox partnership agreement concerning choice of legal counsel.

"The agreement provides that a majority of the general partners is required to employ a partnership attorney," he ruled. "This was not accomplished here."

Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey, widow of Thomas A. Yawkey, who owned the club alone for 43 years until he died in 1976, sought the injunction Tuesday.

Linscott recessed the hearing then to give LeRoux's lawyers time to answer a hefty brief filed in evidence by Daniel Goldberg, lawyer for Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey.

Linscott accepted written evidence from both sides and listened to oral arguments Wednesday before taking the matter under advisement.

LeRoux, a former Red Sox trainer, announced Monday that the general partnership agreement had been amended by a majority vote of 30 limited partner shares.

The majority consisted of 16 such shares, owned by LeRoux, Rodgers Badgett, a wealth coal magnate from Kentucky who now lives in Florida, and Albert Curran, a lawyer and former general counsel of the Red Sox.

Lawyers on Wednesday also disputed whether LeRoux wanted to sell his interest in the club.

First Federal 5

John Bolen tossed a two-hitter at the Exchange as First Federal got back on the winning track yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League, 5-0.

Bolen struck out 12, walked three and hit one along the way to the shutout victory. He did not allow a hit until the fourth inning when Maurice Battle broke up his no-hit bid. Duane Williams added the other hit in the fifth.

First Federal got all it needed in the third inning, scoring twice. Trey Dansey reached on an error to open the frame, and moved up on an out. He scored when Maurice Dyer doubled. Dyer moved to third on an error on the play and scored on Bolen's groundout.

First Federal added two more in the fourth and one in the fifth to complete its five-run score.

Dyer led the First Federal hitting with three, while Dansey got the only other hit allowed by loser Darryl Moore.

Lions 5

The Kiwanis scored two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and pulled out a 6-5 win over the Lions yesterday in the North State Little League.

The Kiwanis scored first, getting three runs in the first inning. They added a fourth run in the second. The Lions came back with three runs in the fourth, then inched ahead at 5-4 with a pair in the top of the sixth.

But the Kiwanis then came up with a pair of runs to gain the win in the bottom of the frame. Rocky Thurston led off the sixth with a double and moved to third on a wild pitch. He scored to tie it up when Jon Chambliss doubled. Jamie Hale then followed with a double, scoring Chambliss with the game-winning run.

Hale, Monte Smith, Bill Wainwright and Thurston each had two hits to lead the Kiwanis. No one had more than one for the Lions.

Babe Ruth League
Pepsi-Cola 5

Coca-Cola snapped a two-game losing streak with an 8-5 victory over Pepsi-Cola last night in the Babe Ruth League, rallying for five runs in the fifth to pull it out.

Coke took the initial lead with one run in the first, then added three in the second. Pepsi came back with one each in the second and third.

Coke then put it away with five runs in the fifth. Owen Cox led off with a walk and moved all the way to third on an error on a pickoff try. Jimmy Bryant walked and stole second, with both scoring on a single by Mike Maxon. Maxon was thrown out going to second for the second out, as Michael Garis reached. Van Alston singled and a passed ball scored Garis. Clay Young doubled in Alston and scored the final run on a single by Ervin Best.

Pepsi rallied for two in the fifth and one in the sixth, but fell short.

Alston and Jimmy Carter each had three hits to lead Coke, while Maxon and Young each had two.

Pepsi was led by Mitch Phillips and Sterling Edwards, each with two.

Everette's 7
Brown & Wood 6

Everette's Pest Control pushed over a run on a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning to squeeze past Brown & Wood, 7-6, last night in the Babe Ruth League.

Everette's took the lead in the first with a pair of runs, but Brown & Wood came up with four in the third to move ahead. Everette's got one in the fourth, and then scored three times in the sixth to take a 6-4 lead. B&W then scratched back for two in the top of the seventh to tie it up.

Finally, in the bottom of the ninth, Lee Lewis led off with a walk and Robert Joyner also walked. After an out, Axle Smith walked, loading the bases. Then, with two away, Curtis Perkins also drew a walk, forcing over Lewis with the game-ending run.

Tom Rosche had two hits to lead Everette's, while Chris Meeks had three and Patrick Kanetzke had two for B&W.

Aussie Teenager Drums Vitas Out Of Queen's Net Tourney

LONDON (AP) — It was the Craig Wittus' turn today to try to stop Pat Cash, the 18-year-old Australian star in the making, in the $203,000 Stella Artois Tennis Tournament.

Wittus, 26, the United States' 67th ranked player, was aiming to succeed where Vitas Gerulaitis failed.

Cash, hailed as Australia's best young player since John Newcombe, drummed Gerulaitis out of the tournament 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 in the second round Wednesday at London's Queens Club.

"He's certainly a great prospect," said Gerulaitis, who was seeded fourth in the tournament.

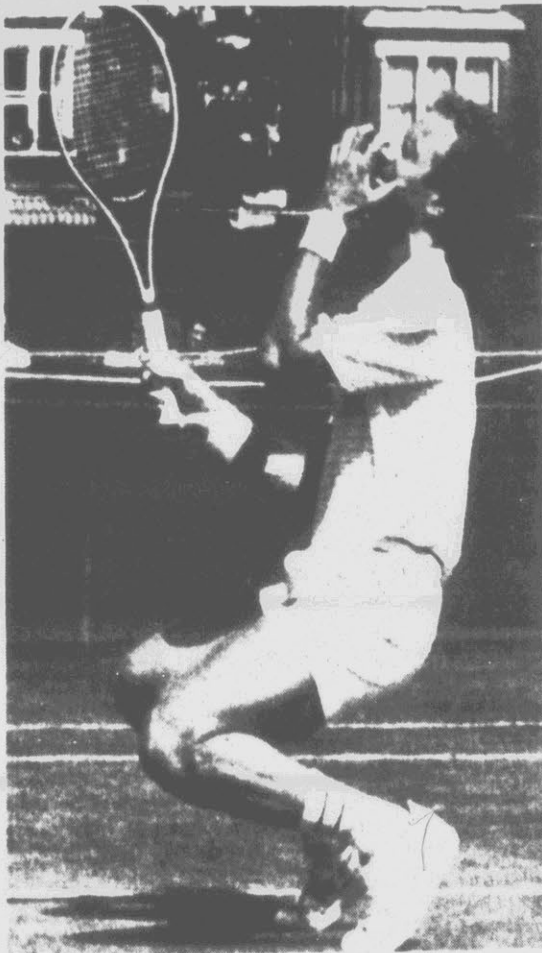

"He's tough and strong and works really hard, and he moves about the court fast and has the right attitude."

The man most disappointed in Cash's progress is Cash himself.

Last year he won the junior titles at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open and was hailed as the best junior in the world.

"My aim this year was to get into the top 40, perhaps the top 30," Cash said. "Instead I am No. 61 in the rankings."

"Still, I have learned a lot. I have played a lot of matches

Vilas Suspended By Net Council

PARIS (AP) — For the second time in 24 hours, a renowned tennis player has been suspended by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

On the heels of Yannick Noah's 42-day suspension Tuesday, Guillermo Vilas was hit with a harder slap Wednesday when the IPTC knocked the Argentine star out of competition for a year, along with fining him $20,000.

Vilas, the world's fifth-ranked player, was suspended and fined for accepting guaranteed appearance money to play in a tournament in Rotterdam. The action against Vilas was announced by Philippe Chatrier, president of the International Tennis Federation, who said the Argentine would have 30 days to appeal the decision.

The organizers of the Rotterdam tournament last March also were fined $10,000. The ban will keep Vilas out of all Grand Prix and Davis Cup events, although the tennis organization said that the Argentine player would be allowed to participate in "special events" such as exhibition matches and certain WCT events.

Vilas, who has denied the charges, became the first player ever suspended for allegedly accepting guarantee money, a practice reported to be common among the pros. Such guarantees, paid regardless of how a player performs, assures smaller tournaments of top-name participants who can generate big gate receipts.

"After an investigation of several months, we have formal proof (against Vilas) provided by the organizers themselves," Chatrier told a news conference.

No date was set for Vilas' suspension to start, pending his decision to appeal.

Noah, winner of the French Open last weekend, was suspended 42 days and fined $20,000 by the council for refusing to participate in last May's Nation's Cup tournament.

Noah said he would not appeal his fine and suspension and would sit out competition and exhibition matches, from June 13-July 25, including France's Davis Cup quarterfinals against Paraguay July 8-10.

Noah was given a choice between an 84-day suspension, during which he could continue to play exhibitions, or a 42-day ban on all events. He took the latter.

Senior Players Open Tourney

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some of the best over-50 golfers in the world are competing today in the $250,000 Senior Tournament Players Championship, which is more money than was ever available in their prime.

"For an old man, I'm playing good," said 60-year-old Roberto DeVicenzo. "I'm happy. You never know when you're going to lose it. First goes the interest. Then the power. But when you put up the money, you see that power come back."

The top prize at this week's tournament at Canterbury

Golf Club is $40,000. A total of 50 golfers, who hold about 500 PGA Tour titles among them, will be competing.

DeVicenzo, of Argentina, has been honored in the Professional Golfers' Association Hall of Fame. Because of his goof in the 1968 Masters Tournament, DeVicenzo is one of sports' most famous runners-up.

In that Masters, DeVicenzo signed a scorecard that showed him scoring a five on one hole instead of the four he actually shot. His final total left him one shot off the winning score.

on a lot of different surfaces."

Currently Cash is making as good a job as anybody of adapting to English grass courts in preparation for Wimbledon, which begins a week from Monday.

Getting ready for Wimbledon is a treacherous exercise.

Ask the top three seeds at Queen's Club — Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl. They have been slipping and sliding about the center court all this week.

McEnroe took one heavy tumble Wednesday in the process of beating Freddie Sauer of South Africa 6-1, 7-6. He rushed back to his baseline to try to retrieve a lob and went crashing into the canvas at the back of the court.

McEnroe lay on the grass for almost half a minute before gingerly picking himself up and walking slowly to the chair to towel himself down.

But he was not hurt and went on to win the tiebreaker.

Lendl gave Wimbledon a miss last year because he dislikes grass. This is his first tournament on grass since Wimbledon in 1981.

"The most difficult thing for me is chasing a ball to the side of the court, because it is slippery and I can't turn and get back," Lendl said.

But he used good grass courts serve-and-volley technique to defeat Tim Wilkison 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Connors, defending champion and No. 1 seed, had a long struggle for supremacy before defeating Ndaka Odizor of Nigeria 7-5, 6-1.

Connors' opponent today was big serving Hank Pfister. McEnroe had to play Cassio Motta, the Brazilian Davis Cup player. Lendl faced Australia's Paul McNamee.

Texas Eyeing Alabama

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The eyes of Texas will be on Alabama and college baseball's leading hitter Thursday night when the two square off for the first time in 61 years for a finals bid in the 37th annual College World Series.

Top-ranked Texas, 63-14, will be eyeing the Tide's David Magadan, who has already set two CWS hitting records and boasts a .538 batting average. Magadan, a junior from Tampa, Fla., entered the series at .523 and is now batting .535 after going five-for-five and setting a single game consecutive hits record against Arizona State.

In Alabama's 6-5 victory over Michigan Tuesday night, Magadan, a second round choice of the New York Mets in the major league free agent draft, went three-for-four and had his CWS record hitting streak stopped at eight with a seventh-inning fly out.

Texas has beaten James Madison, 12-0, and Oklahoma State in 11 innings, 6-5, to remain unbeaten in this double-elimination event. No. 6-ranked Alabama beat Arizona State in 11 innings, 6-5, and Michigan, 6-5, to go 2-0 in tournament play.

Alabama, 45-9, entered the CWS with a .340 batting average, the highest of any team here, with seven hitters above .300. But Tide batters will face a Longhorn bullpen that is filled with winners.

Roger Clemens, who boosted his record to 13-5 with a victory over Oklahoma State, was a first-round draft choice by the Boston Red Sox. Junior righthander Calvin Schiraldi also went in the first round to the New York Mets. Shortstop Mike Brumley was taken in the second round by the Red Sox.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson hasn't decided on a starter for the contest, but he has an arsenal of pitchers to use. Besides Clemens and Schiraldi, Kirk Killingsworth, 11-3, earned his team-leading eighth save over Oklahoma State. Mike Capel, who has a 3.07 ERA, is 12-1 and has a save. Steve Labay, who was drafted in the eighth round, is 7-2 with a 2.42 ERA.

The Longhorns are expected to start either Schiraldi or Labay. Dean Hayes, 11-2, will pitch for the Crimson Tide.

Alabama and Texas met for a total of seven times in 1899 and 1922. The Longhorns have won six of those baseball games.

"Texas is an awesome team," said Alabama Coach Barry Shollenberger. "I picked Texas to win this series before we found out we were coming here. That's all changed now and we'll be in there swinging."

Magadan, who has 21 hits in 33 trips for a .636 average in three postseason tournaments, batted .389 as a freshman and set a Southeastern Conference record for hitting in 27 consecutive games. He hit .395 as a sophomore and holds school records in most at-bats, hits, doubles (and leads the nation in doubles with 30), runs batted in, total bases and highest batting average.

"Texas will be tough but everybody has been lately," Magadan said. "I don't usually go up to the plate thinking about making an out and I just hit the ball hard and was lucky enough to have it fall in for hits."

Lucky or not, Shollenberger calls Magadan "special. He's got a gift. Some people can sing, some can dance, some can educate themselves. This guy can hit."

The winner of the 7:10 p.m. (CDT) Alabama-Texas game advances to a Friday night game and draws a bye in the finals, win or lose. The loser faces either Arizona State or Michigan.

NBA Coaches Play Musical Benches

Stan Albeck and Jim Lynam are the latest to play "musical benches" in the National Basketball Association. Coaches continued to fastbreak to other teams as Albeck, the San Antonio expatriate, was appointed Wednesday to coach the New Jersey Nets and Lynam, most recently an assistant in Portland, latched on with the San Diego Clippers.

The latest job changes bring to seven the number of coaches who have already moved around this year, and there will be more changes to come, particularly at San Antonio and Atlanta and possibly at Indianapolis and Philadelphia.

"We felt Stan's style would best bring out the potential of our players," said Lou Schafel, the Nets' executive vice president and chief operating officer. "We felt Stan's personality and way of coaching was best for us."

Albeck did not come cheaply. To get him, the Nets had to give up their second pick in the June 28 draft — the 46th selection overall; an undisclosed amount of cash believed to be as high as $300,000; and the rights to ex-Brigham Young star Fred Roberts, a 6-foot-10 forward who was drafted in the second round by the Nets last year, but played in Europe.

Albeck then agreed to a contract worth a reported $750,000 for three years with the Nets.

There were some legal problems as well. The Nets' pursuit of Albeck had been blocked in the courts last week when a judge ruled that the coach, who had two years to run on a $175,000 contract in San Antonio, had to remain with the Spurs.

But on Tuesday, NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien met with Angelo Drossos, president of the Spurs, and Alan Cohen, chairman of the Nets, to work out the matter.

The Clippers, meanwhile, ended their two-month search for a coach by selecting Lynam, an assistant with the Trail Blazers the past two years. The 41-year-old Lynam replaces Paul Silas, who was dismissed April 19 after three non-winning seasons.

Lynam, coach of the St. Joseph's of Philadelphia team that upset powerful DePaul in the NCAA tournament two years ago, said he views the San Diego job as "a big challenge" and sees the Clippers as a young team "of terrific potential."

Lynam's overall college coaching record was 158-118 during two years at Fairfield University, five years at American University and three years at St. Joseph's. He said the Clippers' youth appealed to him because, "I view myself as a teacher." He said that as a result of his schooling under Jack Ramsay at Portland, his teams will be built around "team-oriented play, rather than individualism."

Besides Albeck and Lynam, other new coaches already in place are Kevin Loughery, who has left the Atlanta Hawks to coach the Chicago Bulls; Bill Fitch, who switched from Boston to Houston; Chuck Daly at Detroit; Johnny Bach at Golden State and K.C. Jones, who succeeded Fitch at Boston.

Possibilities to fill Albeck's vacated San Antonio job are Bobby Weiss, an assistant at San Diego, and George Karl, a former NBA assistant.

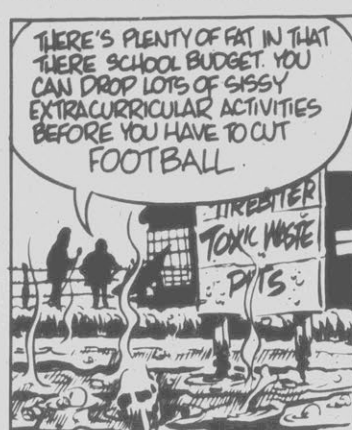

Another assistant, Mike Fratello of the New York Knicks, appears to top the list of candidates in Atlanta. Fratello was an assistant with the Hawks, first under Hubie Brown and then under Loughery, before moving to the Knicks to assist Brown there last season.

"Mike would be great," said Hawks' guard Matthews. "He knows the system. He knows everything about us. He knows us better than Kevin did because he was with us longer."

In Indianapolis, the Pacers' management has yet to offer a new contract to Coach Jack McKinney, whose old pact has expired. And in Philadelphia, Coach Billy Cunningham of the World Champion 76ers says he is considering stepping down.

"I'll let the enthusiasm of winning the title subside before I decide," said Cunningham, who points out that it will be at least a week before he decides whether he will return for another year.

Ball Heads ECU Counseling Center

Dr. Wilbert Ball, a member of the East Carolina University Counseling Center staff since 1967, has been appointed director of the center. Ball, who will assume his duties Aug. 1, will succeed Dr. George Weigand, who is retiring.

A Moatsville, W. Va. native, Ball has degrees in industrial arts from Fairmont State College, W. Va., and Miami University, Ohio. He received the doctorate in counseling and guidance from Indiana University and completed additional advanced studies at N.C. State University.

The center, staffed by six full-time counselors, offers individual counseling and special group programs for ECU students seeking academic, vocational and personal guidance.

Ladies Exercise Program Planned

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer a new session of ladies exercise beginning Tuesday. Classes will be held at the Recreation and Parks Administration Building at Jaycee Park on Cedar Lane.

Classes are from 6 to 7 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday and last for 12 weeks. Program fee is $4. Registration will be held the first night of class. For more details, call 752-4137, extension 265.

Water Program Starts June 28

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is offering a program of basic canoeing and water safety to young people between the ages of 10 to 18 years. The class begins June 28 and will be held successively on Tuesdays, July 12, 19 and 26. Students will meet at 9 a.m., have an instruction period, then take a three- to four-hour trip on the Tar River with a lunch stop, returning to Elm Street Gym at 4 p.m.

Instructions will be given in carrying and launching canoes, boarding and debarking, paddling strokes, and canoe safety. Equipment provided includes all canoes, paddles, personnel flotation devices, and drinks. Participants are to bring their own lunch bag and shoes are required. Old clothes are recommended as they will get wet. Hats, sunglasses, sunscreen, and lip and nose protection are recommended.

Cost of the program is $5. Each session is a one-day inclusive program.

Registration will be at the Recreation and Parks Administrative Building from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 15.

Senior Games Are Proposed

A meeting will be held for persons interested in the organization of a Greenville Senior Games program in May 1984 at the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's main office at Jaycee Park on Cedar Lane Friday at 10:30 a.m.

The program will stress competitive physical activities for individuals 55 and older. For more information call Lesley Ball at 752-4137, ext. 259.

Students Earn Academic Honors

Student Makes Dean's List

Kimberly Ann O'Brien of Greenville has been named to the dean's list at Salem College for the spring semester. A student must compile a 3.5 grade point average to make the dean's list.

Society Selects Local Student

Amelia Yongue has been named to The Society of Distinguished American High School Students. She is a student at St. Mary's College and the daughter of Dr. and Dr. Alfred and Judith Yongue of Greenville.

Talk Planned On Boating Safety

Hal Byrum will speak on boating safety at Holy Trinity United Methodist Church, 1400 Red Banks Road, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Byrum is past commander of the Kinston Power Squadron and is chairperson of the rules committee for the newly formed Power Squadron of Greenville. He teaches courses on safe boating. The public may attend the talk, which is free of charge.

ECU Day Camp Begins June 13

Weekly sessions of East Carolina University's annual physical education day camp will begin June 13 and end July 8. The camp program is designed for children who have completed kindergarten but are no older than 12 years of age.

Campers may participate in day-long or half-day sessions, and may sign up for one or more weeks during the camp's duration.

The weekly fee is $40 (full day), with discounts offered for two or more children in the same family and for children enrolling for more than one week. A parent who helps enroll at least 10 campers for one of the weeks may enroll his or her child for a fee of $1.

Further information about the program is available from Imogene Turner, camp director, at the ECU Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety.

Bible School Starts Monday

Vacation Bible School at Red Oak Christian Church will be held June 13-17 from 7-9 each evening. Classes will be offered for all ages from nursery (ages 2-3) through college age and adult.

Activities will include songs, Bible study and crafts. For information regarding enrollment or assisting, call 756-4553 or 756-1483.

Child Wins Church Contest

Richonda LeCrystalline Hill was the winner of the Medley Chapel Methodist Church Baby and Kiddie Contest held recently.

She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Crady Hill of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. K.B. Chance of Bethel. Edrick Chance placed second; Jeanette Purvis, third.

Guest Speaker Set For Sunday

The Rev. Robert Gay of New Haven, Conn., will preach at Arthur's Chapel Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Music will be rendered by the Arthur's Chapel Gospel Chorus.

Ahoskie Woman Charged In Wreck

Pamela Maylor Wynn of Route 1, Ahoskie, was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 9:29 a.m. collision Wednesday on Charles Street, 78 feet south of the 14th Street intersection.

Investigators said the Wynn car collided with a vehicle driven by Theresa Anne Holley of 86 Barnes St., causing $1,000 damage to the Wynn car and $300 damage to the Holley car.

PCC Offers New Therapy Program

Pitt Community College will offer the first two-year respiratory therapy curriculum in eastern North Carolina this fall.

The seven-quarter program comes in the wake of a 1981 manpower survey that projected an increased need of 151 percent for advanced critical care respiratory therapy practitioners in eastern North Carolina. Upon completion of the program students will be awarded the associate in applied science degree.

Applications for the initial class for fall quarter are now being accepted, say PCC officials. For further information write Director of Admissions, Pitt Community College, P.O. Box 7007, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or telephone an admissions counselor at 756-3130.

Greenville Student Graduates

Larry Zicherman of Greenville graduated from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville today. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Zicherman of Greenville.

N.C. Sales Of Hard Liquor Dip

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — For the first time, the North Carolina Alcoholic Board of Control has delivered less hard liquor to local ABC stores than during a comparable period the previous year.

Bill Hester, administrator of the state ABC, said the decline indicates that North Carolinians are drinking less liquor and fewer mixed drinks and are turning instead to beer and wine. "It's a nationwide trend," he said in an interview this week. "People are drinking beverages with a lower alcohol content. It's partly due to the economy, and all the public attention being devoted to drunken driving is having an effect."

In the first quarter of this year, 49,182 cases of liquor were shipped from the state ABC warehouse to stores throughout North Carolina. That's 4.2 percent fewer cases than were shipped from January through April 1982, a decline equivalent to 41 truckloads, said Hester.

"It's the first time in history that we've had a decrease, since 1937 when the first ABC store was opened," he said.

Hester said the fact that "you can buy two big jugs of wine for what it costs to get one bottle of bourbon is starting to sink in."

"They're drinking beer and wine," he added.

No statewide figures on the sale of beer and wine are available. But Jay Hare of the state Department of Revenue said excise tax collections don't seem to indicate a significant increase in consumption.

"Offhand, I'd say the beer tax figures are running at about last year's pace," he said in a telephone interview. "There's an increase in unfortified wine, and fortified wine has been decreasing. But as to whether people are actually drinking more beer and wine, I just don't know."

Hare said there are unofficial statistics comparing beer and wine excise tax collections during the first quarter of 1983 with the same period the previous year. He was reluctant to release the amounts because they're unconfirmed, but said beer levies rose by about 1.03 percent, while unfortified wine collections rose by 1.14 percent while fortified wine collections fell by 1.6 percent.

The excise tax on beer is 53.376 cents per gallon or $15 per 31-gallon barrel and is collected from wholesalers. The unfortified wine tax rate is 21 cents per liter and the rate for fortified wine is 24 cents per liter.

Response In Peat Project Plans

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of a synthetic fuels company developing a peat mining and processing operation in Washington County say they have given "reasonable answers" to objections by environmentalists.

"We feel that we have controlled the environmental impact of this thing extremely well," said Bob Fri, president of Energy Transition Corp. "I feel quite comfortable about that aspect of it."

"Our project represents a very useful laboratory to learn how the environmental impact of future developments can be controlled," Fri said. "I would hope we could be a significant factor in helping understand how future developments would take place — and how they wouldn't take place."

Fri said the site for Peat Methanol Associates' $540 million plant would contain a 1,500-acre lake that would hold freshwater runoff that otherwise might drain into Lake Phelps and the Pungo River, saltwater bodies in which fishing might be threatened.

The plant will draw groundwater from three sources and discharge the resulting wastewater into the man-made lake. A statement released at Fri's news conference Wednesday predicted that existing ground levels would not show a significant decline for 30 years.

The project, the first to receive money from the Synthetic Fuels Corp., will mine 15,000 acres of peat from sites in Washington, Hyde and Tyrrell counties. It has been the target of environmentalists who have claimed government agencies have failed to consider the project's impact on coastal marshes.

Among other concerns of opponents is that the project is being constructed on wetlands, which would require project officials to file an extensive environmental review.

Fri said the Army Corps of Engineers has stated that the land cannot be considered wetlands and no such statement need be filed.

"It's not as if we haven't analyzed the environmental impact," he said.

Conservationists have maintained that the 15,000 acres designated for peat harvesting are shrub bogs and thus subject to wetland regulations governing dredge and fill operations.

"This project will cause irreversible damage to valuable wetlands in an estuary that supports a billion-dollar commercial and sport fishing industry," argued Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation.

Concentrations of mercury have also been found in the area of the project, but Fri said he doesn't believe the findings pose a hazard to wildlife or humans.

Recycling Plays Packaging Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Though most consumers probably don't realize it, nearly half of the grocery and household items that come in paper cartons are packaged in recycled paperboard.

The American Paper Institute says this includes products ranging from cereals and instant soups to pet foods and facial tissues. All paper egg cartons, for instance, are made from recycled paperboard.

The key raw material in recycled paperboard is clean waste paper. Along with saving consumers money, recycling this material keeps it from being dumped into overcrowded landfills. Every ton of recycled paper saves three cubic yards of landfill space.

The City Council recently enacted an ordinance prohibiting trucks from traveling on certain streets or parts of streets in the city. For more information, call the City Engineering Department at 752-4137.

REJECT MIRACLE CLAIM — A statue of a "weeping" madonna that drew thousands to a rural church in Thornton, Calif. has been described by diocesan spokesmen as not seeming to be the miracle it's claimed to be. (AP Laserphoto)

Priests Reject Miracle Claim

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Angry believers denounced a panel of priests as "a bunch of devils" after the clergymen ruled that a "weeping" Madonna in a rural Roman Catholic church is probably a hoax, not a miracle.

One woman, LaVerne Pitta, burst into tears when the findings were announced Wednesday by the Diocese of Stockton.

Manuel Pitta protested that "these investigators are not investigators. They are a bunch of devils. How can they do this?"

And Antonio Usuna, whose wife says she was cured of asthma after praying to the statue of the Virgin Mary, dismissed the diocesan report, saying, "I believe in (the statue)."

Reports that the 60-pound statue sheds real tears and can move as far as 30 feet from its niche in Mater Ecclesias Mission Church in Thornton began circulating two years ago.

Church attendance has tripled since then, with as many as 600 people visiting each week.

Last year, the diocese named a commission to study the reports. In announcing the panel's findings, Bishop Roger M. Mahony said the events connected with the statue "do not meet the criteria for an authenticated appearance of Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ."

The statue may have been moved by someone, and the tears may have been applied, he said.

"No one has ever reported actually seeing the 'tears' flow from the eyes of the statue," he said. "Rather, it was reported that at a given time, liquid was on the face of the statue."

Mahony said one witness reported touching the liquid, which was oily and sticky, and "certainly not the texture or consistency of human tears."

Miracles validated by the Roman Catholic Church, he said, always have been accompanied by a clear, important message. But in this case, "there is no report of any clear and important message in the context of Christ's work of salvation," he said.

"One could rightfully question, therefore, the reason for the divine or supernatural phenomena alleged to have taken place," the bishop said.

Mater Ecclesias is an outpost of St. Anne's Catholic Church in Lodi. It should be kept "as a parish mission rather than a shrine," said the Rev. Harmon Skillin, pastor of St. Anne's.

"We will discourage pilgrimages to the church by, among other things, reserving the major area of the church for local people at Sunday morning Mass," he said.

Skillin also said some of the embellishments around the statue will be removed to restore the prominence of the altar.

Some people who learned of the ruling while in the church Wednesday said their belief remained unshaken.

Many believers think the tears are connected with the reported appearance of the Virgin Mary to three children at Fatima, Portugal, on May 13, 1917.

"When this Virgin appeared to the kids in Portugal, they didn't believe them," Usuna said. "They were practically tortured."

"These things usually appear to the humble and low-income, the poor," he added. "These things are not for everybody."

Near Limit Of Solar System

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — The Pioneer 10 spacecraft will cross the orbit of Neptune on Monday and become the first man-made object to leave the solar system, scientists say.

The unmanned probe was functioning normally when checked Wednesday, according to Pete Waller, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at the Ames Research Center.

The package of 11 instruments launched in March 1972 will be more than 2.8 million miles from Earth when it crosses the orbit, about 3.75 million miles from Neptune.

Pioneer "will cross Neptune's orbit and will be outside all the known planets and therefore outside the solar system" at 8 a.m. EDT Monday, Waller said.

"And it will become the first time in human history that any man-made artifact has left the solar system," he said.

Although Pluto is the ninth and last planet in the solar system, it is currently in the eight position from the sun because of its tilted, elliptical orbit.

Scientists centered the Pioneer 10's radio antenna Wednesday with commands taking 4½ hours to reach their mark because of the distance the signals had to travel, Waller said.

As it leaves the solar system, the spacecraft will take a picture of a star, possibly Altair, which "is a fast spinner nine times brighter than our sun," he said.

"The picture will have no significance except that it was shot 2.8 billion miles away, the greatest distance away from the Earth a picture has ever been taken," Waller added. He said the picture might be released Monday.

Streaking at more than 33,000 mph or 750,000 miles per day, Pioneer 10 has been exploring the outer solar atmosphere, trying to confirm whether there is a 10th planet or a dark star that might account for deviations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 6-month-old policy of allowing senators to earn unlimited outside income from speeches and similar sources is under attack by critics who say the practice is unfair and open to abuse.

"This honorarium thing is out of control," said Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The Senate arranged to begin debate late today on a spending bill for the last few months of fiscal 1983, and Jackson planned to attach an amendment sharply curtailing income from speeches and other similar sources.

The supplemental appropriations bill includes additional funds to keep a number of government agencies — including the Pentagon — operating through Sept. 30.

Congressional sources said senior advisers to President Reagan have advised him to veto the legislation because it includes more in social programs and less in military spending than the administration wants.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, was reportedly angered over the veto threat because he believes that unlike other spending measures likely to clear Congress later this year, the supplemental bill varies in only minor ways from what Reagan wants.

"There are a few senators taken by surprise, a few who are distressed (by the threat)," said Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee.

It was also possible that the measure might become the platform for floor fights over efforts to kill a new law requiring withholding of dividends and interest from stocks and other investments and Democratic efforts to cap a 10 percent income tax cut that takes effect July 1.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Democrats seeking to cap the tax cut were "gasping to save the lives of their favorite spending programs."

Regan said "the liberals are back in their favorite disguise as 'Mr. Moneybags' with a budget calling for more domestic spending and higher taxes."

On the honorarium issue, Jackson said in an interview that he has broad support among the Senate's 46 Democrats for making their pay and limitations on outside income the same as the House.

The 54 Republican senators are divided on the issue, according to GOP sources who spoke on condition that they not be quoted.

to $68,900, and retained a 30 percent limit on outside income.

That left the 100 senators with annual incomes of $60,662, and for the first time since the early days of the Republic, House members and senators are receiving different rates of pay.

With his two amendments, Jackson planned to give the Senate the same pay increase received by the House, along with the 30 percent limit on fees for speeches.

Senators willing to give up the pay raise would be allowed to retain unlimited income from giving speeches.

Although there is a limit of $2,000 per speech, current rules allow senators, who are generally much better known than House members, to earn far more than their government salaries, just by accepting a large number of speaking invitations.

A number of senators, in required public disclosure forms, have recently reported earning more than $100,000 annually from speeches to various organizations, many of them with interests pending in Congress.

Those who support limiting outside income say there is potential for abuse by senators who could speak to one or more small groups of lobbyists, and receive $2,000 per appearance, without really giving a formal speech.

Because of a general pay increase for federal workers, senior military officers, many congressional staff workers and thousands of civilian federal employees are now earning more in salaries than senators.

"We are confronted with an absurdity," said Jackson, who gives all of his outside earnings to charity.

Seeks To Close N. C. Liability Insurance Loophole

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Thousands of North Carolina drivers have no automobile liability insurance, and current law does little to change the situation, says an influential state senator.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, is pushing legislation that would close what he says is a gigantic loophole enabling people to evade state-mandated insurance coverage. The bill was approved Wednesday by the Senate Finance Committee.

Lawing told the panel he had thought that under existing law a driver without insurance coverage "even for one hour" automatically lost his registration for 30 days and that "even the governor couldn't get it back" before then.

Actually, however, a person who lets his policy lapse but renews it within 15 days can avoid losing his license plate simply by paying a $25 fee. People who go without insurance for longer periods must pay a $60 fee but face no threat of registration suspension.

Lawing said he learned of the loophole about six weeks ago. He said he had spoken with "80 percent of the senators" and that they were equally ignorant of it.

Although it's the insurance company's responsibility to notify the state Department of Motor Vehicles when a policy lapses, it can take weeks or months for the department to contact the driver, said R.V. Wilkins, department commissioner.

"That means a person could conceivably drive for months with no insurance," said Lawing. "I was appalled when I learned of this ... It gets down to the basic judgment call of whether we want to have compulsory insurance or not."

Wilkins told the finance committee that about 22,000 cars currently are being operated without insurance.

Under Lawing's bill, a driver who allows his insurance policy to lapse would forfeit his car's registration for 30 days. To get it restored, he would have to pay a $50 fee.

People who don't renew their coverage within 15 days would have their license plates revoked by a DMV officer. Restoration would cost $100.

Lawing said his bill could be expected to reduce the problem of lapsed policies by about 50 percent over a couple of years. But he said total elimination probably could never be achieved.

"You put a man to walking for 30 days and make him pay $100, and you'll get his attention," he said.

Education Board

The chairman of a state House committee broke a tie to kill a proposed constitutional amendment calling for election of the state Board of Education, now an appointed group.

But members of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee said they would write a minority report. If the House approves the minority report, the constitutional amendment could be considered on the floor despite the committee's rejection.

The amendment stems from a Legislative Research Commission study on education. Its sponsor, Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, was one of the co-chairman of the study group.

"We have institutionalized conflict in K-12 (kindergarten through 12th grade) through the structure of governance," Mavretic said. "We are sending mixed signals to the citizenry. It think it costs us money to be organized the way we are."

Under the proposed amendment:

— The board would be enlarged from 13 to 17 members and would add the chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, chairman of the state Board of Community Colleges. The presidents of the UNC system and community college system would be non-voting members.

— Board members would serve for four instead of eight years with the terms overlapping.

— Legislators, state employees and spouses of the two would be ineligible to serve on the board.

— The board would select a state superintendent instead of allowing the public to elect one.

— Board members would be nominated by their local school system and one nominee per county would be selected by county commissioners. The Legislature would choose one person from each congressional district.

Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, was forced to break a 6-6 tie to reject the proposed amendment.

Gene Causby of the North Carolina School Boards Association said his group supports the change because the current system is not working.

"We now have about a three-headed monster," Causby said. "If and when the system works it is because of personalities and not because of the system. This is too important to be left to personalities."

Larry Poore, Gov. Jim Hunt's education advisor, said Hunt believes he is held accountable for public education in the state and so he should be able to appoint board members.

Education Systems

A House-Senate Appropriations Committee sent to subcommittee a bill requiring Directory systems consolidate into one per county. Already 70 of the state's 100 counties have one school system.

Sen. Jim Edwards, D-Caldwell, the bill's sponsor, suggested the subcommittee consider calling for a study on consolidation because legislators don't have enough statistics to deal with the problem now.

The bill was sent to subcommittee after it encountered serious objections from both House and Senate members.

Headlights

The Senate Finance Committee gave a favorable report to a bill that would require motorists to turn on their headlights when their windshield wipers are on due to bad weather.

Rep. Margaret Hayden, D-Alleghany, said many times it's difficult to see oncoming vehicles when it's rainy and foggy. Twenty-three percent of all accidents occur in rain or snow, she said.

Violators of the law would be fined $10.

Industrial Recruitment

A controversial bill that would allow local government to spend property tax revenues on industrial recruitment was approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The bill sparked a dispute between top House and Senate members last month. The House, which passed it after lengthy debate, asked that it be returned from the Senate for consideration of a proposed amendment. The Senate, at the urging of Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, refused.

In retaliation, the House rescinded approval of several Senate bills and postponed consideration of others for a week.

Opponents of the bill in the House said it would spark a bidding war for industry between little and big counties. But sponsor Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said his county needed to use tax funds to attract industry and create jobs.

The bill sailed through the Senate Finance Committee without debate.

Election Laws

The Senate Election Laws Committee killed two bills sponsored by Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba. The first would have required that any officeholder seeking another position resign at the time he files for the new office.

Ballenger, an unannounced candidate for governor in 1984, said under the bill he would have to resign his Senate seat in order to run. Other probable gubernatorial candidates such as Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram also would have to resign their current jobs, said Ballenger.

The other bill was to allow people who vote a straight party ticket to support individual candidates from the other party.

During the 1982 election, Republican Bill Hendon, who lost his congressional seat narrowly to Rep. James M. Clarke, D-N.C., complained that many Democrats had voted a straight ticket but also had cast a vote for him. But under North Carolina policy, all such votes were counted for Clarke because a straight ticket vote takes precedence.

Motions to kill the two bills were cast by Sen. Russell

Walker, D-Randolph, chairman of the state Democratic Party.

Gasohol

A bill that would grant gasohol a partial exemption to the state gasoline tax was approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The bill was endorsed by former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, who appeared on behalf of Diversified Fuels Inc., of Wilson.

Gasohol is a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol, which is made from corn. The bill would apply only to gasohol made from North Carolina corn and manufactured within the state.

Bechtel Corp. plans to construct a plant for the purpose in Johnston County, said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston.

Board Selection

A bill that would force Washington County's education board to accept the recommendation of the local Democratic Party regarding appointments to the board was approved by the Senate State Government Committee.

Over 30 counties already are governed by a similar requirement.

High-Tech Jobs

The Senate State Government Committee approved a bill that would create a N.C. Technological Development Authority, which in turn would support development of high-technology projects.

The proposed authority would oversee a program with one or more "incubator facilities" where projects could be developed. Grants for the projects not to exceed $50,000 per year also would be available, as would a continuing appropriation for the existing N.C. Biotechnology Center.

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, said North Carolina needed to keep up with other states which are pumping millions of dollars into high-technology research and development.

"It has been proven that ... you can be very successful in creating new jobs by helping people develop new ideas," said Jordan.

Headlights

Rep. Margaret Hayden, D-Alleghany, said many times it's difficult to see oncoming vehicles when it's rainy and foggy. Twenty-three percent of all accidents occur in rain or snow, she said.

Corrections

The House Corrections Committee approved a bill to postpone the date when North Carolina juvenile offenders must be removed from adult prisons, paving the way for a $1.2 million project to open two juvenile prison facilities.

Rep. Margaret Tennille, D-Forsyth, said the money approved Tuesday by appropriations leaders would provide $113,556 a year over the next biennium to counties to pay for transporting juveniles to the facilities. She said the sites had not been chosen, but added that Burke, Wayne, Lenoir and Pitt counties were being considered.

"There are certain areas of the state that have no facilities for the plan (to move juveniles)," Mrs. Tennille said. "The two units would be located in rural areas in the northeast and western part of the state."

The balance of the funds would be used to renovate existing state-owned facilities and operate the prison units, she said.

The committee also approved a bill to let the N.C. Paroles Commission consider whether a prisoner sentenced before the 1981 Fair Sentencing Act deserves parole consideration based on subsequent reductions in the penalties for his crime.

Commission officials said the bill would be hard to administer and might lead to lawsuits by prisoners who do not get early paroles, but Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said it should only be used in cases "manifestly clear."

Hackney also pushed through a bill that was nearly killed on the House floor. The bill, which originally mandated that some non-violent felons be given community service instead of prison terms, has been amended to suggest that judges consider such an option.

Soldier Killed On Firing Range

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — One soldier was killed and three others wounded in an explosion on an anti-tank firing range while they were setting up a target, a Fort Bragg spokesman says.

The apparent dud, left over from an earlier practice, exploded Wednesday, said spokesman Capt. Bill O'Connell. Two soldiers were hospitalized and a third was treated and released from Womack Army Community Hospital, he said.

On Monday, at Fort Bliss near El Paso, Texas, 24 recruits and an instructor were injured by shrapnel when an anti-tank rocket exploded on a firing range during training.

Actor Found Stardom In A TV Commercial

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

When officials of Pine State Creamery Co. of Raleigh began advertising their products through a country-bumpkin character named Ernest Worrell, they didn't know if Ernest would sell Pine State milk. They just knew Ernest was funny.

A year and a half later, Pine State officials are smiling at the overwhelming response to their television campaign. And the Nashville, Tenn., advertising firm that created the "Ernest series" is selling the idea to dairies all over the country.

"The public just loves the Ernest ads," said Pine State President Ben Kilgore. "We're just overwhelmed with the public awareness of our name that the ads have brought about.

"We get letters, phone calls and comments from people every day, saying how much they like the commercials," he said. "It's like Ernest has a fan club."

Kilgore said he doesn't know if the ads have boosted sales but said, "When something this popular comes along, you feel like it really helps."

Pine State dairy products are marketed in Eastern North Carolina.

The television ads feature Ernest, a slow-talking character wearing a t-shirt, denim vest and a khaki hat, who drops in on his next-door neighbor, Vern. The commercials were filmed through a fish-eye camera lens and Vern's face is distorted. He never talks in the ads.

"Ernest is kind of a country guy, obnoxious but loveable, who bothers his neighbor who really doesn't much like him," said Carla Hall of Carden and Cherry Inc., a Nashville advertising company that owns the rights to the Ernest character. "I think his big appeal is that everybody has some Ernest in them or they have known somebody like Ernest. They identify with him."

Ernest is played by professional actor Jim Varney of Nashville.

Pine State was the first company to use the Ernest ads in December 1981. Since then, Carden and Cherry filmed commercials using Ernest for nine other dairies from Michigan to Oklahoma.

Is Marriage For Sex Symbol?

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Does marriage diminish the sexuality quotient of a movie glamour girl or male hunk? It's a rhetorical question, to be sure, and probably of no great sociological consequence. But the answer does illuminate changes in Hollywood lifestyles over the years.

In the very old days of the film colony, during the teens and '20s and even into the '30s, many a glamour girl lost her aura of virginal desirability when she took a husband, losing in the process her box-office allure as well as, one supposes, her innocence.

Some actors and actresses were secretly married, afraid of losing their following among fans if the news ever came out. Francis X. Bushman was one such.

In many cases, stars refused to acknowledge their children, fearful that parenthood would detract from their standing as sex symbols.

Today, in a society which Hollywood helped liberate, it appears the marital status of sex symbols, male or female, matters not a whit to those given to mooning over screen idols.

Availability, then, of a sex symbol is not a serious consideration to the smitten fan to begin with. People probably are more comfortable with their dreams than reality when it comes to sex symbols.

Perhaps because movie gods and goddesses are so remote from the reality of most people's lives their marital status is immaterial and inconsequential.

Certainly, matrimony has not cooled male ardor for Bo Derek. Nor has Raquel Welch suffered the disaffection of the multitudes since taking a husband.

Men, in would seem, lose none of their illusions, nor fantasies, simply because a dream girl takes a mate. It is natural to assume that marriage is not what the average male has in mind when he looks at a sex symbol anyhow.

Neither are women all that discriminating when it comes to mooning over male dreamboats.

Tom Selleck, Warren Beatty, Clint Eastwood and Burt Reynolds are, it's true, single, unattached and high on the list of feminine fantasies.

But also rated as heartthrobs among the female population are such battle-scarred married veterans as Paul Newman, Robert Redford and Sylvester Stallone.

The highly subjective question of marriage and sex symbolism was put squarely to Barbara Carrera, the exotic Nicaraguan beauty who was married a few weeks ago to Nicholas Navrolean, scion of a Greek shipping family.

Barbara, who recently co-starred in "Never Say Never Again," which restores Sean Connery to the role of James Bond, is a legitimate sex goddess.

Before turning to acting, the dark-haired, dark-eyed Miss Carrera was a top model whose sensuality brought her to the attention of Hollywood producers. They gilded the lily by casting her in sexy, glamorous roles.

Last year Barbara appeared in a Playboy photographic layout, something of a confirmation rite of passage into the pantheon of authentic sex symbols.

Observed objectively, Barbara clearly does not appear to be any less beautiful, sensuous or desirable since her April marriage. She does, in fact, look more radiant than ever.

She is, naturally, less available and, at least for the nonce, disinterested in flirtations and other plays more commonplace in single women than in newlyweds.

Barbara, whose smile rarely left her lovely face during the course of a leisurely lunch in the Polo Lounge, confirms the opinion that marriage these days has no affect whatever on the popularity of sex symbols.

"Elizabeth Taylor certainly didn't suffer any loss of popularity or sexuality through her marriages," Barbara said. "And Marilyn Monroe was a sex symbol all her life whether she was married or single.

"In fact, their marriages made them more interesting. Images change as people grow and develop. It would be boring if actors and actresses stayed the same year after year.

"We don't create our own images anyway. The public does and usually it sticks, no matter if you are married or single. Personally, I think whatever image I have will improve now that I am married."

Maybe.

CBS Spillane

Series Ordered

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — CBS-TV has ordered eight one-hour episodes of Mickey Spillane shows for the 1983-84 season from Jay Bernstein Productions and Columbia Pictures Television.

The network opted for the tough-guy Mike Hammer series following the success of two Spillane TV movies, "Margin for Murder" and "Murder Me, Murder You," which were telecast last season.

The series, still untitled, will be geared for an adult audience and telecast during late evening hours. Stacy Keach will star as street-wise detective Hammer.

COOL COMFORT
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans hate to give up their comfort, a nationwide survey shows.

More than 60 percent of individuals polled by Honeywell's Energy Management Information Center reported using their air conditioners more in the past year and feel it would be difficult to cut back on the use on this appliance to save energy.

YX GEOAXQ YNR YTVFXQ VYXRR RXA, RT YX FXBA AYX BEGO ANVFXA.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — A VENTUROUS AUTO RACER IS DRIVEN TO SUCCEED.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals K.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is favorable for artistic endeavors. Avoid arguments or comments pertaining to associations of a usual or routine nature. Keep on an even keel.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact newcomers whose sense of humor is similar to yours and have a good time together. Do not drive recklessly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get your home in order and bring more harmony into it for the future. Steer clear of a family argument. Appreciate kin.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Talking recreation over with regular partners can bring better understanding. Go after your personal aims with energy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have an opportunity to make improvements with the assistance of a co-worker. Don't be extravagant.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Join with outside partners and friends and make new plans for the future. Avoid a group meeting which will upset you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how you can be more consistent where your loved one is concerned. In this way, you will increase your happiness together.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid people who think they can get away with taking advantage of you. Enjoy personal happiness this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Consult a financial expert and learn how to handle your responsibilities better.
Take no risks with business associates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Sit down and try to resolve differences with a co-worker. Look at it objectively and handle it intelligently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) The work ahead of you is complicated so study it well before tackling it. Do whatever will relax you tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make sure you do nothing that could test the patience of your loved one.
Show that you are devoted and faithful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make sure that you join with kin in civic work. Be cooperative for best results.
Take a fellow worker along.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be enthusiastic and ready to do things, have a lovely smile and be very popular. Be encouraging. Life flows smoothly at school, but upon reaching middle age, may become too businesslike and demanding. Teach patience.

Plastic Shipping Pallets Valued

PLAINFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The faster and more frequently parts pour into automaking plants, the more valuable plastic shipping pallets become.

Detroit is moving toward the Japanese system of fast and frequent shipment of subassemblies into auto plants, instead of stockpiling

saves money for the auto makers, but causes a tremendous increase in handling and movement of parts, Jeco Plastic Products says.
This means that long-life plastic shipping pallets become economical even though they may cost three times as much as wooden pallets.

FOCUS

A Distant Traveler

On March 2, 1972, the tiny space probe called Pioneer
10 was launched on an exploratory trip to Jupiter.
Pioneer 10 cost just $20 million to build, and scientists hoped it would survive the 21-month trip to the largest planet in our solar system. The probe has done far better than anyone could have expected.
Today it is scheduled to become the first man-made object to leave our solar system and go into deep space. Pioneer 10 is still sending radio signals back to Earth, and scientists expect to keep receiving those signals for another 10 to 15 years. NASA officials believe the probe could survive for another 100 billion years, outliving not only its creators but the solar system itself.

DO YOU KNOW—At what speed do radio signals travel?

the nine of clubs to take the heart finesse. So East must duck, but declarer is in dummy to take the heart finesse — making four odd.

Let's back up a bit. Suppose West allows declarer to win the queen of clubs. What then?

Now declarer needs only one finesse for his contract.
He can enter dummy with the ten of trumps to take the heart finesse, and he will lose a trick in each suit except hearts, no more.

So congratulations if you elected to declare. We'd like to have you on our side in our next team match.

Bottled Water 3,500 Years Old

Here's an opportunity to test your technique. Would you rather play or defend four spades?

We do not approve of the bidding. East should show his four-card heart suit rather than raise diamonds. However, that would not have changed the final contract.

It seems that declarer can get to dummy only once because of the poor trump break. He ruffs the second diamond and can enter dummy with the trump ten sooner or later. Best is to lead the ten of clubs, but East doesn't cover and declarer will end up losing a trick in each suit.

But look what happens if,
at trick three, declarer leads the club queen from hand. If West takes the king, his safest exit is a trump. Dummy wins and declarer leads the ten of clubs. If East covers, declarer wins and gets back to the table with

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — It takes an average of 3,500 years for rain to filter through earth and rock formations before it becomes bottled water near Hot Springs National Park, according to geologists at the University of Arkansas.

The finding was disclosed by Dr. Leslie E. Mack, director of the Water Resources Center, and Dr.
Kenneth F. Steel, a geology professor, following a decade of research in Arkansas' Ouachita Mountains.

The scientists said when rain water falls in the area it sinks through the earth's rock formations, through shale, sandstone and limestone, which filter and provide unique chemical properties to the water before it emerges from the Mountain Valley spring near the park.

BASSET WITH A BEAT — Basset hound puppy Nastassja appears to be a pretty hip canine wearing her owner's headphones and listening to a stereo tape player near her home in Hong Kong. Nastassja doesn't get to listen to the latest hits, but to the voice of her owner, so that she will be accustomed to the sound of his voice. (AP Laserphoto)

CAMP MEETING — Parents rest on the porches of their wooden "tents" and children walk the dirt streets during the annual camp meeting held each August at Balls Creek Campground. (AP Laserphoto)

N. C. Religious Tradition Has Won Attention Of Historians

By RICK FOSTER
The Newton Observer-
News-Enterprise

BALLS CREEK, N.C. (AP) — Cars, school buses and other traffic whiz constantly by the Balls Creek Camp Meeting Grounds in eastern Catawba County. But the rambling collection of wooden tents seem to be taken for granted by local residents.

The campground has caught the attention, however, of state historians who want to see it in the National Register, according to David F. Hood, a Catawba County native and representative of the Division of Archives.

The Balls Creek Camp Meeting has its roots in the middle of the 19th century when the Methodist Church began the tradition in 1853. There are other camp meeting grounds in the area, such as Rock Springs in Lincoln County, dating from the 1790s.

"I think Balls Creek is the largest of the three, and, because it is an ongoing social event, it has special significance in the history of not only Catawba County but the state and the nation," Hood said.

Hood is writing architectural descriptions of the buildings, which include about 300 of the small wooden tents and the arbor, where the revivalist worship services are held each August for two weeks.

If the camp meeting grounds are deemed a national historic place, any action taken by the state or federal governments that would have any effect on the property would have to be reviewed.

The camp ground is not the oldest in the county. The Wesley Chapel Campground near Plateau was formed in the 1700s.

But Balls Creek has its share of history, dating back to the 1850s.

The tents are rebuilt constantly. John Sipe, 72, of Maiden and Paul Drum, 67, of Newton, are rebuilding two tents to replace structures built in the 1930s.

Both men are following a family tradition that goes back almost to the beginning of the meetings.

The camp has been closed only four years during its history, one year because of a polio epidemic.

The land belongs to a board of mainly Methodist trustees, but the tents are owned by individuals. A few rent tents.

In the 1930s, a tent could be purchased for $15. Now they go for $4,000 to $5,000.

Over the years, improvements have come to the camp, though they are still largely primitive. The camp has been electrically wired, and many of the tents have outlets. A few even have air conditioners.

Running water is available though most still use the common rest rooms located near the tents.

Genetic Engineering Opposed By Religious Leaders In U. S.

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Religious leaders who urged Congress to ban attempts at human genetic engineering are overreacting to a problem that does not even exist, according to the executive director of a presidential commission that studied the subject.

"Many, many problems stand in the way" of scientists' successfully manipulating human genes, Alexander Capron, who was executive director of the President's Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine and Biomedical and Behavioral Research, said Wednesday.

"They are suggesting a solution to an urgent problem we simply don't have," he said. "They have not thought through their position as clearly as they should have."

a resolution urging that engineering specific traits into the human sperm or egg "not be attempted" because it "raises the possibility of altering the human species."

Such engineering requires people to decide "which genetic traits should be programmed into the human gene pool and which should be eliminated," according to the resolution released Wednesday at a Manhattan news conference.

But "no individual, group or institutions can legitimately claim the right or authority to make such decisions on behalf of the rest of the species," it concluded.

Signers of the resolution included Dr. Jerry Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority, Pat Robertson, president of the Christian Broadcasting Network, and the leaders of the United Methodist, Lutheran, Mennonite, American Baptist and Southern Baptist churches.

Conference of Catholic Bishops, Bishop James Armstrong, president of the National Council of Churches and Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, executive vice president of the Rabbinical Assembly, also signed.

Jeremy Rifkin, author of a new book criticizing genetic engineering, drew up the resolution and collected the signatures. Although the resolution contains no reference to legislative proposals, its signers were told it would be sent to Congress, he said.

The resolution differed from that of the presidential commission, which found no reason for immediate alarm about genetic engineering research.

Instead of a prohibition, the commission suggested cautious scrutiny of procedures that could create inheritable changes.

Capron criticized the resolution in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

"If it turns out that the only way you can eliminate a disease that kills children is to expose the germline (sperm or egg) cells to genetic alteration, and if you were confident of the outcome, wouldn't you want to do it?" he asked.

Several of the religious leaders at the news conference emphasized they were not opposed to therapeutic genetic changes that would not be passed on to future generations, such as those involving procedures to correct the body's production of blood when hindered by sickle cell anemia or hemophilia.

River Has High Pesticide Level

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pesticide levels considered dangerous to humans have been found in a river that flows from Mexico into a major Southern California vegetable growing area, officials say.

The New River, which flows from Mexico on the Mexican border through the tomato and avocado farming region of the Imperial Valley, contains pollution from many pesticides banned in the United States, said Stuart Gummer, chairman of the Colorado River Basin region of the state Water Quality Control Board.

"The immensity of the pollution and contamination problem presented by the hazardous substances in the New River demands that every possible remedy be pursued," Gummer said in a recent letter to the state Department of Health Services.

SOLO SAILOR — Tom McClean's boat the Giltspur may be small, but he says it is heavy and deep; two things that are vital for his attempt to sail (solo) 2,300 nautical miles across the Atlantic Ocean. McClean says he plans to sail from St. John's, Newfoundland, on June 9 or 10 and hopes to set a record for the fastest eastward trip. (CP Laserphoto)
