City Funding Solution

Act On 'Capital Reserve Fund'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The City Council took steps Thursday night toward remedying a funding problem that has caused critical areas such as capital improvements and equipment replacement to go lacking. The board unanimously adopted an ordinance "creating and establishing" a capital reserve fund for the city "for the purpose of accruing funds for an ongoing capital improvements program." In establishing what amounts to a savings account for capital areas, council members initiated a system whereby money will be set aside for major funding needs. While projects must be designated, the council can change the priority list to meet developing needs and unexpected emergencies. City Manager Gail Meeks said it is hoped that annual transfers from the city's general fund, which will be the major source of money, will help to maintain an adequate balance in the reserve account. The new ordinance sets

An amendment to the 1982-83 city budget allowed the council Thursday to set aside initial funds for the new account. The amendment designates $23,793 from the Tar River Port Commission special fund and $34,528 from the cemetery purchase account to launch the reserve program. The new ordinance sets target figures that will be accumulated over a period of years to fund local projects. They include: $100,000 for the purchase of cemetery land, over a 10-year accumulation period; $200,000 for the purchase of land for a fire-rescue station, 15 years; $300,000 for street construction and resurfacing, 10 years; $100,000 for storm drainage construction and repair, 10 years; and $154,000 for bridge repair and replacement, three years. In other business, the council approved a request by Ralph C. Tucker Jr. to rezone almost 73 acres, located south of the Greenville Athletic Club and

CHAPEL HILL - The board of governors of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill reappointed two members of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees and appointed two new members today.

Reappointed as board members were C. Ralph Kinsey Jr. of Charlotte and Harvey E. Beech of Kinston. The two new members are Samuel J. Wornom III of Sanford and William Riley Roberson III of Washington.

Kinsey, who was appointed to the board by Gov. Jim Hunt in 1979, was elected chairman earlier this year.

The governors also approved appointment of Ernest H. Uhr as dean of the ECU School of Business, Calfrey C. Calhoun as dean of the school of technology and Ruth M. Katz as director of Joyner Library at ECU.

Kinsey has served on the ECU Executive Committee, the ECU Academic Affairs Committee and the ECU Student Life and Development Committee. Kinsey, who received a degree in business at ECU in 1964 and a law degree from UNC-Chapel Hill, is a partner in the law office of Caudle, Underwood and Kinsey of Charlotte.

Beech was elected to a four-year term as a trustee in June 1979, and now serves as secretary of the board. Beech, an attorney and civic leader in Kinston, was the first black ever to receive a degree from the UNC-Chapel Hill Law School. He has served as chairman of the Kinston School Board and has been a trustee at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He is a member of the Neuse River Economic Development Commission and is vice president of the Lenior

County Good Neighbor Association.

Roberson, 36, is vice president for sales of the North Carolina Dr. Pepper Bottlers Inc. He attended East Carolina University and is a graduate of the UNC-Chapel Hill Young Executive Institute. Roberson is a member of the executive boards of the ECU Educational Foundation and the ECU Foundation.

Roberson is a member of the Beaufort County Board of Commissioners and a past member of the Washington Planning Board and the Washington Recreation Advisory Board. A veteran of the Navy, he is a past member of the board of directors of the Washington Yacht and Country Club and of the board of directors of the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

Roberson is married to the former Olivia Grimes of Washington and they have two children.

Wornom, who was named outstanding ECU Alumnus in 1980, is a member of the board of directors of the ECU Alumni Association and a member of the ECU Chancellor's Society.

Wornom, 41, earned a degree in business administration at ECU. He is founder and owner of Pantry Stores, which is headquartered in Sanford.

Nominated

CHAPEL HILL - The Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina today nominated Robert S. Hackney of Washington, N.C., to fill a vacancy on the board of trustees at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A choice for the position will be appointed by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

Appointed

The State Board of Community Colleges Thursday appointed Dr. Charles E. Russell as acting president at Pitt Community College. He will succeed Dr. William Fulford, who has asked for a one-year leave for health reasons.

Kay V. Whichard, vice chairman of the board of trustees at Pitt Community College, said today, "We are pleased that the State Board of Community Colleges has accepted the trustee's recommendation and approved Charles Russell's appointment as acting president for the coming year."

Russell has been assistant to the president at PCC.

Pick Option For Bridge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The state Department of Transportation today settled an argument over a new bridge to Atlantic Beach, voting in favor of a staff recommendation for Option No. 1 parallel to the present draw bridge.

The one-mile project with a 3,830-foot bridge will cost about $12.4 million.

A group of area citizens and merchants had favored a more westerly location, requiring a longer, more expensive bridge. That plan was known as Option 4.

During today's transportation board meeting, board member Phil Baddour of Goldsboro argued that Option 4 would handle traffic better in the future, despite its $24.2 million price tag.

"What we have to look at is whether we get more for our money with Option 4," he said, adding that most citizens in Carteret County supported that proposal.

Board chairman Bill Roberson said that while "no alternative settled all needs," the transportation board "couldn't" spend $24 million for something $12 million would buy.

Roberson said the Option 1 bridge is "shorter, costs less money, has no negative environmental impact and can be built in a shorter time."

The state Transportation board also passed a resolution for a study to determine the need and the location of a third bridge to Bogue Banks.

Board member George Harper said there's "already a need for the third bridge. The people in Salter Path have to drive 10 miles to get to a bridge."

He said the board was presently negotiating with a consulting firm for a third bridge study.

The plan that was approved calls for a one-mile project with a 3,830-foot bridge from 23rd Street in Morehead City, including a four-lane, 65-foot span over the Intracoastal Waterway. The bridge will be similar to a second bridge 20 miles west which now links Emerald Isle to the mainland.

Board members said construction on the new bridge probably won't begin before the end of 1984.

Three Israeli Soldiers Are Slain From Ambush

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Ambushers killed three Israeli soldiers, wounded one and captured another in southern Lebanon today, Lebanese radio stations said. One report said Israeli soldiers later swept through the area and arrested 250 people.

In the east Lebanon town of Baalbek, radio reports said a bomb killed a member of a radical PLO faction that had declared support for a five-week-old mutiny against guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat. His wife also was killed and two of their children and three neighbors were wounded, the reports said.

State and privately owned radio stations said gunmen ambushed an Israeli patrol near the village of Abbassieh, five miles north of the port city of Tyre, and killed three soldiers.

The broadcasts said an Israeli soldier was wounded and another captured, but gave no other details.

"We confirm there was an incident," said an Israeli army spokesman in suburban Yarze east of Beirut. "But we are checking for further information." He declined to be identified.

The Voice of Lebanon radio, owned by the rightist Christian Phalange Party, said Israeli soldiers backed by air force helicopters moved into Abbassieh and three neighboring villages after the attack and arrested at least 250 people.

According to the broadcast, occasional volleys of machine gun fire were heard as the search continued hours after the ambush 15 miles north of the Israeli border.

Wholesale Prices Inch Up To Reverse 2 Months Of Decline

By The Associated Press
Wholesale prices rose 0.3 percent in May, reversing declines in the previous two months and recording the sharpest climb since December, the Labor Department said today.

The rise in inflation at the wholesale level reflected the first increase in energy prices after five consecutive months of decline and offset the biggest fall in food prices since last July, the department said.

Despite the rise in May, wholesale prices fell at an annual rate of 2.2 percent over the first five months of the year compared with a rise of 3.7 percent in all of 1982.

The May increase had been expected and followed an earlier report that consumer prices rose 0.6 percent in April, the biggest jump in nine months.

Consumer price increases in April also reflected rising energy prices. But because of the way the Labor Department compiles the wholesale price report, the April rise in gasoline and heating oil prices did not show up until the May report on producer prices.

In an earlier report, the government said businesses plan to spend less on expansion and modernization this year than in 1982, despite signs that profits are due to rebound.

The Commerce Department said Thursday the decline in business spending this year would be 3.1 percent, after adjusting for inflation. The estimates were based on the department's survey of business executives in April and May.

Last year, capital expenditures were 5.5 percent below 1981 - the first annual decline since 1975.

While spending plans are down, orders and sales have been rising in many industries, and economists are forecasting a large increase in profits this year.

Robert P. Ulin, chief economist at the Bank of New York, said in a report Thursday that he expected corporate profits to be running 35 percent ahead of last year by the fourth quarter of 1983. He previously had expected a 30 percent rise.

Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, said the decline in business spending would be "the first time that has happened at the beginning of an economic recovery."

Jasnowski said that although "industrial activity is now increasing rapidly, capital spending will continue to be weak because of extreme excess capacity, interest rates that are still too high and the current low level of profits."

Still, consumers' confidence in the economy improved in May for the fifth consecutive month, a separate report from the Conference Board showed.

The board said its Consumer Confidence Index, based on 100 for the 1969-70 year, rose to 82.7 last month from 80.3 in April. It hit a low of 49.7 last October.

Hats Discovered At Show

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The hatless generation is doing an about-face — wearing hats.

Hats showed in practically every shape and size in the fall ready-to-wear collections from New York's leading designers, who have just shown their fall and winter collections.

"We have a whole new hat audience out there," said Lee Black, the milliner who creates hats for designer Bill Blass as well as for his own customers through department stores and specialty shops around the nation. "Women, now in their 20s, never wore hats, maybe never saw their mothers in hats. These women are looking at hats as a whole new accessory."

Milliner Frank Olive agreed. "The flower child of yesterday is my customer today," he said. "Hats are mood setters. Many of my customers are career women... hats give them a sense of authority."

"My business has doubled in the past year. We can't keep our things in stock. One of my customers owns 250 hats. Another buys 25 at a time."

And don't overlook an all-important fact, said Olive. "Men love women in hats. Our phone rings constantly... brides looking for wedding hats. They want something very special."

Olive did hats for openings of fall ready-to-wear collections of Pauline Trigere, Oscar de la Renta, Adele Simpson, Adri, Diane Von Furstenberg and Elsa Martinelli, among others.

"From the standpoint of the customer," said milliner Patricia Underwood, "women who never before have worn hats are discovering how good they look in them. The designer sees how well hats balance the silhouette."

"Princess Diana of Wales has had an impact with her hats; she's so young and pretty."

"And we're seeing more hats in the media, in advertising, in television shows."

"Hair styles have a definite effect on hat styles. The heavily teased, bouffant look is gone. If a woman has a very, very short hairdo, it is hard to change the style. So a hat can work wonders toward a different look."

Miss Underwood, British-born, came to the United States with her marriage to an American. She went into hat design 10 years ago, without any previous training unless it was the inborn artistic bent from her father and an uncle in the theater.

She works with ready-to-wear designers such as Perry Ellis, Calvin Klein and Mary McFadden. Hat designers begin early on with the ready-to-wear market, talking about colors, fabrics and silhouettes. For example, a dusty rose works beautifully with the brown tones and taupes.

Black, the reigning winter favorite for ready-to-wear, calls for a bright splash of accent color.

Milliners say no one particular shape or size stands out for the next season.

There will be exaggerated homburgs with deep crowns, the brim rolled away from the face; berets, both felt and fur, in all sizes; fedoras; stiff-brimmed tailored felts; and designer Black has copied the fireman's hat in felt.

Whatever the hat, the milliners are abrim with good news.

The late Norman Norell, the elite ready-to-wear designer, turned Frank Olive's direction away from the theater and to hats.

"But what more drama is there for any woman?" said Olive.

"I didn't plan to be a milliner. I just wanted to be a millionaire."

Hang in there, Frank Olive!

Dear Abby

Wife Hesitates To Jump From Bad Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently discovered that my husband of 38 years has been having an affair with a young woman of questionable character. She made sure that everyone in town knew about their relationship, adding to my hurt and humiliation.

Friends have rallied to my support. My minister, family physician and married children are all urging me to divorce my husband, but I am not sure I want a divorce. Like most women of my generation, I consider marriage a lifetime commitment.

I am by nature a very tolerant and forgiving person, and frankly, the thought of living the rest of my life alone frightens me. Also, I am home-oriented, with no skills.

With our present moral climate, I'm sure there are thousands of older women who find themselves in a similar position.

Is it better to keep my marriage vows and forgive a husband who has broken his, or face the future alone? What do you advise?

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

DEAR FOR: Never mind what your friends, minister, family physician and married children say. As long as a shadow of doubt exists in your mind, stay married. (I would give a man the same advice.) Never cut what you can unravel.

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a girl who has a very irritating habit. She interrupts me in the presence of others to correct my pronunciation of words.

I wouldn't mind so much, but later when I check my dictionary, I learn that I was right and she was wrong.

How should I deal with this? No names or initials, please, as this is a very small town.

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: If there are two girls in your town, date the other one.

DEAR ABBY: You asked how one may be certain his burial wishes will be carried out when the law provides that the next of kin has the final say.

A few years ago, an Arkansas man wanted his body cremated and his ashes scattered on the White River, where he had spent many happy hours fishing with his friend, the local undertaker. He had a lawyer draw up his will, leaving all his property to his next of kin, provided they followed his wishes. The will stated that if they failed to do so, everything would go to the undertaker. He gave an executed copy to the undertaker and then committed suicide.

The next of kin insisted on burial instead of cremation. The undertaker said, "If you want to make me his heir, I'll bury him, but if you want his property, you'd better let me cremate him and scatter his ashes on the White River."

No argument. He was cremated.

COUNTRY LAWYER

DEAR LAWYER: It should be stressed that the next of kin, the funeral director and all others concerned should be notified prior to death, since most wills are not read until after the funeral takes place.

Motoring Vacationers Can Have Variety Through Picnics

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — A big part of most vacation budgets is the cost of three restaurant meals a day.

The alternative for people who travel by car or in a recreational vehicle is picnicking. It's not only cheaper, but it can also provide a better balanced diet, including locally grown fruit and vegetables bought at roadside stands or in supermarkets.

Big advantages from this traveler's point of view include the chance to sample local food, plus no standing in line to get a table, and no long waits in busy restaurants to have your order taken, then served.

We've made two summer vacation trips in recent years on which about two-thirds of our meals were picnic style. Each time we covered 2,500 miles in a small Japanese car in a leisurely 11 days to get from a New Jersey suburb of New York City to Santa Fe, N.M.

Breakfast was always a piece of fresh fruit, a milk-based diet drink for my companion, cheese and wholegrain crackers for me, and two beverages — coffee or hot or iced tea.

For snacking we carried fresh and dried fruit, more wholegrain crackers and fruit juice.

Fixing our own breakfast got us on the road earlier each morning, sometimes before the restaurant or cafe at our motel was open.

An RV with kitchen appliances is convenient but not really necessary.

Our "refrigerator" was an inexpensive, lightweight, insulated picnic hamper with plastic bags of ice cubes from the motel canteen as coolant.

Our "stove" on the first trip was a medium-sized electric skillet. On the second, a saucpan and small electric hotplate.

A more versatile option is a skillet or double-duty saucpan-corn popper that plugs into a car's cigarette lighter outlet or a conventional outlet indoors.

Except for a few cool nights, we avoided hot food. One time we turned a can of corned beef hash into that New England classic, red flannel hash, by adding drained, canned sliced beets.

One day we lunched on canned sardines with fresh orange sections, a nice change from fish with lemon.

If you travel by car, plan to replenish canned supplies every few days. The trunk or back seat of a parked car, even in the shade, can become too hot for storing unprotected cans for extended periods.

Putting together your own picnic kit is more practical and less expensive than a fitted hamper.

We prefer sturdy plastic plates and stainless steel flatware to paper and plastic. Their stability outweighs the slight inconvenience of washing up afterwards.

Besides, almost every town park we stopped at had a cold water faucet where we could rinse the plates, making proper washing up easier at our motel later on.

Since our first cross-country cookathon about five years ago, we've refined our techniques and travel kits.

Cooking, heating and serving articles now go into one bag, food supplies in another.

—One person is responsible for counting the cutlery at pack-up time to make sure nothing is accidentally thrown away or left behind. We particularly like a travel kit that holds two sets of interlocking flatware and a multi-purpose corkscrew-bottle opener in a snap-closure plastic envelope.

Other handy items new to us are a tiny peppermill with its own carrying pouch and an all-purpose knife with stainless steel blade that folds into its wooden handle like an old-fashioned pocket knife.

The flatware kit, peppermill and folding knife are imported by Rowoco and sold in housewares shops and departments nationally.

—Two mugs and two immersion heaters are essential for keeping the peace at break of dawn. Water for beverages for two heats much faster in individual mugs than in a larger unit.

Martyred Communist's Widow Waiting For The Revolution

By LEON DANIEL
UPI National Reporter
GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI) — "I still believe in revolution," said Signe Waller, widow of one of the five Communists killed in a 1979 shootout with American Nazis and Ku Klux Klansmen.

"Violent revolution is necessary to change the system," said Mrs. Waller, 44, elaborating as spring sunlight played into the spotless kitchen of the modest bungalow she shares with her two teenaged children.

"Those who are destroying lives will never voluntarily hand over power to the people," said the dark-haired woman with the soft voice and steady gaze. "It's going to have to be taken from them."

Pausing in her polemic, the revolutionary homemaker inquired of her visitor, "More coffee? Are you sure you won't have a Danish?"

So goes the revolution these days in — of all places — Greensboro, a bustling bastion of capitalism in the heart of the Carolina Piedmont, a city that could claim to be the buckle on the Bible Belt.

In the recent past, however, the local Communists were the main victims in an explosion of violence televised around the world. It was a shocking massacre that brought the city unwanted — and undesired, say city boosters — notoriety.

The widow of Dr. James Michael Waller, a physician who became a union organizer in local textile mills, still is active in the Communist Workers Party.

The CWP is a militant group of Maoists which sponsored an anti-Klan rally and planned a march by an integrated group of about 100 persons on Nov. 3, 1979. The demonstration was disrupted by the Klansmen and Nazis, setting off a gun battle that claimed the lives of four white men and a black woman — all highly educated and dedicated Communists.

Two members of the American Nazi Party and three Klansmen ($22,212, $21,298 and $21,298) were charged with the murder of Dr. Waller. Many in Greensboro, however, lay much of the blame for the shootout on an "open letter" produced by the Communists which branded Klansmen "two-bit cowards" and challenged them to attend their anti-Klan rally.

"We take you seriously and will show you no mercy," the letter taunted in language some local residents regarded as calculatingly provocative. "Death to the Klan."

That letter has been used to divert attention from the way the government planned this thing," Mrs. Waller said. "The letter was just a political tract. It was irrelevant to what happened."

Others, however, believe it was that letter that brought a motorcade of 40 armed and enraged Nazis and Klansmen from out of town to the rally site in a black neighborhood of Greensboro.

There was evidence that 39 shots were fired in 88 seconds. Police did not arrive until after the shooting.

The first shot was fired by Mark Sherer, 22, a Klansman who has quietly pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge in connection with the shootings. Sherer, whose sentencing has been postponed indefinitely, is expected to testify for the government when the case against the nine defendants goes to trial.

The Communists who survived the shootout refused to cooperate in the investigation or participate in what they charge was a "sham trial" which resulted in the acquittal of all defendants, who pleaded self defense.

The Communist Workers Party, once called the Workers Viewpoint Organization, is one of the small but militant groups that has developed since the disintegration in 1969 of the Students for a Democratic Society.

The party does not disclose membership figures but some observers estimate there are about 200 active members who live mostly in New York City, Los Angeles and in the less likely towns of Greensboro and nearby Durham.

In the 1970s party members organized clinics to diagnose brown lung disease, an ailment caused by breathing cotton dust and which afflicts textile workers. They also were deeply involved in organizing unions in the mills.

Mrs. Waller, who believes her husband was killed because of his union activity, and many of her comrades grew up in the protests of the 1960s and now have reached middle age. Unmellowed by the passage of time, some are more determinedly militant than ever.

"The government is the violator in this case," said Mrs. Waller, who along with other party members demanded the appointment of a special prosecutor for the new trial.

Federal Judge Gerhard Gesell did not go that far but he did order the Justice Department to begin a preliminary investigation into possible government misconduct in failing to prevent the shootout.

"Four of the five who were killed were involved in union organizing," Mrs. Waller said. "All of them were loved and respected by the workers. They were filing grievances in the mills and winning them."

There was beginning to be a lot of black and white unity. The blacks saw we were all engaged in the same fight. The whites were beginning to see that racism only served the boss man. Jim and the others were teaching that capitalism works against the workers."

Mrs. Waller, a New York City native who used to teach philosophy at Bennett College in Greensboro, lives on a widow's Social Security check.

"I'd like to teach again," she said. "I'm a good teacher, but I don't know how the notoriety that attaches to my name would affect my getting a job."

She stays busy with party activities and works in her backyard vegetable garden.

She mentioned, with obvious pride, her daughter, a high school drama student who had just been inducted into the National Honor Society, and a son who is a high school sophomore.

The woman who blames the capitalistic system for the death of her husband stepped out into the sunlight that bathed her tomato plants.

"Capitalism offers no hope for the future," said Mrs. Waller, who plans to remain in Greensboro to work for the revolution she believes is inevitable.

"I stay here because I like the people," she said. "It's a beautiful place."

Translucent Dishes Have Many Uses

CLINTON, N.J. (UPI) — Dinnerware that looks like translucent porcelain but behaves like freezer-to-oven-to-tableware is the latest product from an innovative manufacturer in Clinton.

The first six Occasions China patterns were selected after market research profiled Corning Designs customers and their dinnerware preferences. The patterns range from pure white to banded, textured or floral.

A five-piece place setting — dinner and salad plates, mug and 6-ounce teacup and saucer have a suggested retail price in the $55-$60 range. Serving pieces include a large platter that can double as a place mat, a 1 1/2 quart covered casserole, an oval covered casserole and an 8-ounce fruit bowl.

Surveys indicate typical customers for such products are dual career couples or career-oriented singles, 25-45 years old, with incomes of $25,000 and up per person. They are people who lack time, want to own and use articles of outstanding quality that are convenient and require little storage space. They shop mainly in department and specialty stores.

They told researchers they want products that combine fashion and function, represent continuity and quality at the correct price and can be used for special occasions but are more versatile than traditional china.

Looking Ahead

It comes as no surprise that public school leaders are protesting the schools' share of expansion spending as proposed by Legislative leaders.

C.D. Spangler Jr. chairman of the State Board of Education, indicated disappointment with the new spending for public education. He recognized the problems of the Legislature in finding adequate funding but said he did not feel kindergarten through 12th grades get the necessary funding.

It is a problem that has to be recognized and faced. It is not a question of taking funding away from some other portion of state government; rather, it is one of finding the funds to operate the schools adequately. This means paying salaries adequate to attract and hold teachers in certain fields and providing for other needs of the schools.

Almost everyone understands that we must do more to improve the public schools if the young people who come through them are to compete in the increasingly complicated work world of the future.

If we do not improve school financing in this budget, then the problems will continue to await for future budgets. If the Legislature does nothing else this year it should initiate planning on how to provide the additional funding that the public schools will surely need.

Fond Memories

The closing of six consulates, resulting in some 50 to 60 Nicaraguans required to leave the country, could have been much more drastic. Consulates, after all, are not "big potatoes" in the world of diplomacy.

The embassy in Washington was permitted to continue operations, and several honorary consuls were untouched by the expulsion order.

Actually, the gesture was not extreme. Nicaragua is a very small country to maintain so many consulates in the United States. Washington's action probably means considerable saving of money for the Sandinista government.

One might look on the expulsions as ranging somewhere more than the level of a "scolding" and less than a "slap on the wrist"; it is not a routine measure, and constitutes a certain amount of inconvenience for a handful of Nicaraguans visiting or residing in this country.

Perhaps the most unsettling impact of all will be on those Nicaraguans who have been associated with the consulates for a number of years, and become accustomed to the change in lifestyles that residence in the United States represents. One can presume they have fond memories of "home," just as one may guess that gloss will wear thin upon returning to their homeland.

—Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer—

Murky Reality

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Four years ago, Americans asked, "Sandinistas who?" when a group of young nationalists overthrew dictator Anastasio Somoza. Nowadays, they're more likely to say, "Sandinistas... No Way!"

America's shift in attitude toward Nicaragua's revolutionary leaders has been fueled, of course, by Ronald Reagan, who has characterized this country in the darkest of terms. It's been reinforced, in part, by the rhetoric and actions of the ruling and often unruly Sandinistas themselves.

At close range, however, the political and economic criticisms peddled in recent Reagan speeches don't match the murky reality here. Conditions in Nicaragua may be deteriorating, but aren't rotten enough to justify an increased U.S. intervention for which Americans are being prepared.

A week-long visit here did yield some disturbing signs of decay. On May 25, junta member Sergio Ramirez Mercado announced the expropriation of a banana plantation owned by the vice president of this country's chamber of commerce, the latest in a series of confiscations permitted under provisions of the land reform law. The planter's offense had been a comment sympathetic to Washington's decision to transfer Nicaragua's share of the U.S. imported-sugar market to other countries. Ironically, the remark had been published in the Sandinista party newspaper, Barricada.

Ramirez's action came a few days after the formation of two "peoples' tribunals," established to judge Nicaraguans suspected of "counterrevolutionary" activities. Though procedures and standards have yet to be announced, the 10-member panels could become a crucible of judicial abuse when they open for business sometime this summer.

At the same time, however, the once-virulent critic of Sandinista policies, La Prensa, has survived 15 months of an official "state of emergency" law to remain the nation's largest-circulation newspaper.

Despite almost routine vocal (and occasionally physical) attacks on outspoken Catholic Archbishop Obando y Bravo and his colleagues, as well as the cancellation of Sunday service broadcasts, a U.S. Embassy official here admitted flatly that "there is no religious repression." Effectively, he said, the restricted radio broadcasts affected few worshippers. Added Armando Lopez, a member of the state-sanctioned human rights commission: "I invite you to attend some masses here, where priests speak of (Sandinista leaders) as murderers."

Meanwhile, on May 26, a long-awaited law governing political parties was introduced in the Council of State, Nicaragua's nominal Congress. Legislation outlining the objectives and guidelines of elections is expected later this year, with election day anticipated sometime in 1985.

In an interview, Interior Minister Tomas Borge insisted that elections would take place, unless someone is "bombing the airport... and attacking the Ministry of Interior." Even the U.S. official says the chances of elections are "better than 50-50.... There's a contrast with Cuba, where (Fidel) Castro talked about it, visited other countries (to study Democratic systems) and built expectations." Perhaps the best signal for elections is the widespread agreement that the Sandinistas would overwhelmingly win a fair and honest election.

Ignorance of such less-than-totalitarian elements in Nicaragua only bolsters U.S. criticism of Sandinista arms purchases and U.S. support for "contras" operating in Nicaragua's north and south. Pretensions of combating "evil" men have made it easier to overlook both Honduran air superiority and the contras' interest in goals beyond arms interdiction.

Yet Reagan's moral war is heaping economic destruction upon a country in which 60 percent of all production remains in private hands. Directly and indirectly, the cost of the war alone is estimated by the government to have exceeded $50 million — not a piddling sum for a country with less than $500 million in annual export receipts and a $300-million-plus trade deficit.

RALEIGH — Life in prison is lonely and painful, full of boredom and fear, full of anxiety for one's own safety and for the well-being of loved ones on the outside.

Given the misery one encounters in prison, it's no surprise that it is behind bars that some people first find religion. In the teachings of Jesus Christ, or the Old Testament, or Mohammad, they find the understanding and compassion they need to go through life.

Fred Morrison, former chairman of the N.C. Inmate Grievance Commission, is taking a night course at the Southeastern Theological Seminary in Wake Forest. As part of the coursework, he prepared a term paper on religious life behind bars in North Carolina.

You may lose most of your rights when you're imprisoned, but the First Amendment guarantees to all Americans, even prison inmates, the right to practice his or her religion. Prison officials generally encourage the practice of religion behind bars, Morrison says, because it helps make them better people and because religion can help alleviate the tensions created by idleness, boredom and overcrowding.

To that end, the state employs 17 full-time chaplains. Protestant churches provide seven others full time and 10 part time. They also provide 27 volunteers. Muslim churches provide 11 imams and approximately 1,300 volunteers. Religious services and activities are regularly scheduled within the prisons.

Some prison rules are bent to accommodate the practice of religion in North Carolina prisons. For example, Muslims don't eat or handle pork. So, on days when pork is the main element of a meal, Muslim inmates are allowed to take an extra helping of a vegetable as a substitute for pork. Also, since Muslims aren't even supposed to touch pork, Muslim inmates are excused from cleaning food trays on pork days.

During the Islamic month of Ramadan, prison officials adjust serving hours to allow a light morning meal before sunrise and another meal after sunset. If Muslim ministers are available, special services are allowed on two of the holiest days of the month.

Different religions have different religious artifacts. Behind bars, Roman Catholics are allowed to have rosary beads, Jews are allowed phylacteries. Muslims are allowed prayer rugs and prayer caps. Prison officials retain the right, however, to restrict the size of the articles and to demand that they be obtained directly from an approved mail-order house.

Things are not allowed to go too far. Prison officials can still deny some religions the right to operate behind bars. And, prison officials do draw the line on some religious activity. For example, they told one inmate he could not have the paraphernalia needed to conduct voodoo services in his cell.

Morrison quotes a number of inmates who tell of the impact religion has on their lives. One, speaking of religious volunteers: "They bring us drinks, food, fellowship, love, understanding and compassion by the hundreds... They minister to us out of the love that Jesus told us to have for our brothers. They care."

Another inmate told Morrison: "It's easy to get lost in prison and withdraw from reality for self-protection. The role that both you and Sister Barbara Gerwe (a Catholic nun) have played is that of a friend who is concerned and cares. You both realize Jesus Christ is an important part of your lives and must be in mine. You've helped me see that and accept it."

Nutmeg And The CIA, Together

It has just been revealed that William J. Casey, the CIA Director, bought and sold millions of dollars in stocks and other securities last summer as the market took off.

A lot of people might think that there is some conflict of interest in doing this sort of thing when you're heading up one of the most sensitive organizations in the United States. But I'm not one of them. Mr. Casey is still a private citizen and can invest his own money as he sees fit.

I admire anyone who can run a super-power's intelligence agency and also have time to keep his finger in the stock market.

I can just imagine how he did it. An aide comes in with a top secret cable.

"Our man in Havana says that Castro is shipping concrete to Grenada to build an airfield."

"Let me see that. Do you know what this means?"

"War?"

"Not yet. It means if Grenada goes ahead with its airfield, we'll boycott them, and there will be a nutmeg shortage in the United States."

"Do you want to speak to the president?"

"No. I want to speak to my broker at E.F. Hutton. I have to find out what company handles nutmeg in the U.S."

"This is just in from Tokyo. The Japanese are coming out with a new micro computer chip which could blow California's silicon valley off the face of the earth."

"I was afraid of this. If the Soviets can get their hands on Japanese hi-tech they can go ahead with their SS-64 missile and we'll have to develop a Pershing III."

"What's the answer?"

"I'm going to get out of Hewlett Packard and into Sony-American. Tell our station chief as soon as the first microchip comes off the line I want to hear about it. We can't afford to be caught napping. What else have you got?"

—Elisha Douglas—

Strength For Today

Imagine yourself to be out walking some distance from your home.

Suddenly you come upon a beautiful estate. The grounds are planted with stately trees and lovely flowers. Birds are singing on all sides. You pass the glimmering mirror of a lake with a picturesque rocky cliff, and pass into the twilight cathedral aisle of a lofty evergreen grove.

As you walk, you wonder who

"One of our undercover agents in Libya says that Kaddaffi is planning to overthrow the Royal Family in Saudi Arabia."

"This could mean the end of the oil glut. I better get back into Standard Oil of New Jersey right away."

"Should we do anything to prevent the coup?"

"What do you suggest?"

"Get word to Kaddaffi he's a dead man if he ever tries it."

"Good idea. I'll hold off on Standard Oil until we get his reply."

"By the way, the White House called and wants to know if we have anything out of Israel concerning their work with lasers. It could be a big factor in our new 'Star Wars' strategy."

"They haven't come up with anything yet. If they did I would have bought United Laser which is putting up the money for the research. Tell the White House if they see some heavy trading in United Lasers then the Israelis will have made a breakthrough."

"Our man in East Germany says his mole indicates the East Germans have developed an infrared instant camera which Moscow is going to issue to all KGB agents in the fall."

"It doesn't bother me. I've been out of Polaroid since last summer. How are the Soviets doing with their gas line to West Europe?"

"They're on schedule."

"I was afraid of that. That means the Baton Rouge Shipping Company is going to be stuck with 20 liquid gas tankers the West Germans ordered."

"I'm sorry about that, sir."

"No one can call every stock right. Did you find out the names of the subcontractors on the MX Missile yet?"

"The Air Force is being very cagey about giving out any names."

"Oh they are, are they? Get me Cap Weinberger on the line right away. How can I run a decent intelligence operation if our own people are going to keep secrets from me?"

Battle Of Vetoes, Shaping Up

WASHINGTON — Backing for President Reagan's coming battle of the vetoes is taking the form of advance assurance that at least 146 votes will always be available in the House to sustain his vetoes of top-heavy appropriations bills.

It takes one-third of the House (or the Senate) plus one vote to prevent overriding a veto. Rep. Phil Gramm, newly elected as a Republican last winter after resigning his seat as a Democrat, is collecting names for the promissory note, aided by party whip Trent Lott and other Republicans. With the expected help of perhaps a dozen Democratic conservatives, the names on the promissory note will go to the president possibly next week.

The move should be a powerful psychological weapon for Reagan's veto strategy if, as expected, Congress fails to agree on a budget resolution and starts passing piecemeal money bills far above the president's budget. White House aides are helping develop Gramm's overall strategy.

Fearful that Congress might discover secret arrangements for the first test-firing of the MX missile before Congress actually voted to approve the giant 10-warhead weapon, Air Force Gen. Charles A. Gabriel ordered that no preparations of any kind were to be made.

Chief of Staff Gabriel's worry was political. If anti-MX congressional liberals or fence-sitters learned of secret Air Force preparations to test-fire the missile before the climactic vote, it could influence that vote negatively.

That delays the actual first test of the missile to June 26 at the earliest. Working at maximum speed, it takes 30 days to prepare for the test. Gabriel disagreed with advice that the MX should be tested immediately after the vote in view of the fact that the original target for the first test was Jan. 1 — and the Soviet Union is testing new long-range missiles at a rate of almost one every two months.

The expected decision of Mark Dayton, who spent close to $7 million in a vain campaign for the U.S. Senate last year, not to run in Minnesota against Republican Sen. Rudy Boschwitz next year, will open the way for another Hubert Humphrey, son of the late vice President and Democratic Party leader for a generation.

Dayton, a department store heir and Rockefeller spouse, has agreed to join Gov. Rudy Perpich's cabinet, convincing party operatives that he almost certainly will not run for the Senate again next year. That opens the door to Humphrey, who was elected attorney general last year and has long eyed the Senate seat occupied by his father from 1948 to 1964.

But despite the pulling power of his political name, "Skip" Humphrey will have to fight for the nomination, probably against Democratic Rep. James Oberstar, before he gets a chance to run against Boschwitz, a popular millionaire Republican moderate.

On a visit to Manhattan 10 days ago, former West German chancellor Helmut Schmidt expressed amazement that the disgraced Richard Nixon seldom gets credit for what Schmidt calls the "intellectual brilliance" of his foreign policy from 1969 to 1974.

Nixon is routinely ignored at one convocation after another honoring Henry Kissinger, his national security adviser and then secretary of state.

After one such occasion, the outspoken Social Democrat who has made a fetish of criticizing and sometimes ridiculing American presidents, notably Jimmy Carter, privately expressed his bewilderment that Nixon's grasp of national security affairs seemed to have been totally forgotten. Kissinger's achievements, said Schmidt, were built in the first instance on Nixon's intellectual brilliance.

College Endowments Prosper

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

America's colleges and universities have quietly made a fortune this year.

Thanks to the stock market rally that started last August, the values of many college endowments are up sharply — by 30, 40, and 50 percent over last year.

Among the more striking examples: Yale University's endowment has risen in value from $740 million to $1.05 billion. Princeton University's portfolio went from $886 million to $1.26 billion. The University of Texas System increased from $1.47 billion to $2.07 billion.

Harvard University's endowment is up $700 million in value since last year, and is now worth $2.4 billion.

The Dow Jones industrial average has zoomed from a two-year low of 776.92 last Aug. 12 to a record 1,232.59 on May 6, before sliding back below 1,200.

But for college endowments, the benefits from the rally are mostly on paper, not in hard cash.

At Stanford, for instance, the value of the endowment increased 25 percent, from $681 million to $850 million. But cash dividends from the endowment will increase by just 6 percent next year, to about $66 million.

The big gains in endowment values — being realized by public and private schools alike — contrast sharply with a year ago, when the stock market slumped and the value of the average endowment lost about 1 percent, according to an annual survey by the National Association of College and University Business Officers.

Less clear is whether the gains will eventually spell relief for students whose tuitions are going up an average of 10 percent or more this fall, or for faculty members whose salaries have often trailed the inflation rate over the last decade.

Officials at most schools insist that endowments can't be counted on in the short run to ease the strain on student budgets — or on college budgets, for that matter. A rule-of-thumb most schools seem to observe is that endowments contribute roughly 5 percent of their average market value over a number of years toward the college's operating budget.

The aim is to keep such payouts relatively consistent each year despite stock market ups and downs, and that's why even a near-record stock market boom like this year's doesn't mean a big change in the amount of cash available for colleges.

"Very healthy investment returns over time will help keep tuition rates down," said Anthony D. Knerr, executive vice president for finance and treasurer of Columbia University, where endowment value rose 23 percent to $950 million, but where tuitions are going up 13.5 percent this fall.

This year's endowment gains, while dazzling, can come and go with the fortunes of the stock market. What counts in hard, spendable dollars, college finance officials say, is the interest and dividend income from the invested endowment funds — and that income will only rise if the economy improves and corporations boost their payouts to shareholders.

"What counts is the long run," said William Reed, vice president and treasurer of Williams College, in Williamstown, Mass., a small but wealthy school whose endowment has risen 39 percent to $160 million since last summer.

"If this has a long-term effect on interest and dividends, that's when we'll profit," said Jesse Morgan, vice president and treasurer of Rollins College, a small liberal arts college in Winter Park, Fla., whose endowment soared 55 percent since the August rally to $16 million.

"The key to the future," said Tom O'Brien, financial vice president of Harvard, "is how inflation moves in relation to our investment performance." The minimum goal for an endowment fund, he explained, is to stay a step ahead of inflation. When it doesn't, as was the case at most colleges for much of the last decade, endowment money is less available to provide scholarships or endowed faculty chairs.

Other factors keep schools from dipping freely into endowment funds to ease tuition rates. Endowments, especially at public universities, consist largely of gifts with strings attached. Funds are often legally restricted by the donor for specific uses, such as scholarships for the needy or the gifted, library books, lab equipment or art acquisitions.

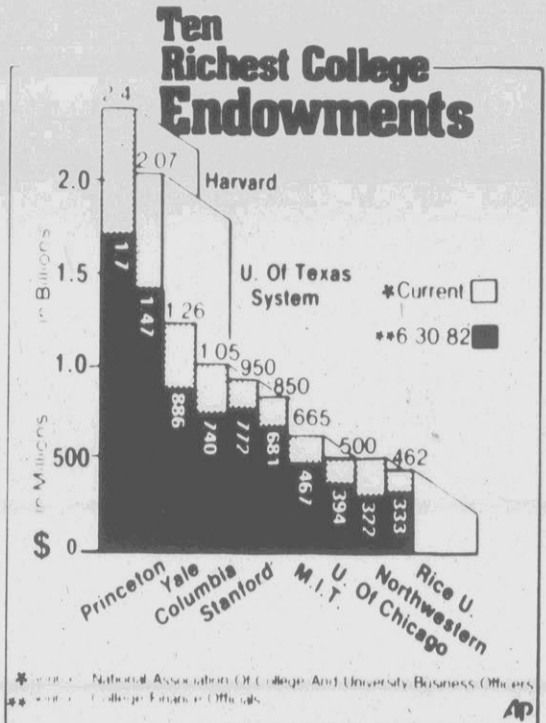

"Endowment money at a public university like ours, to use the cliché, provides the margin of excellence. It helps us do more of the extras," said Robert Sandberg, vice president of the University of Nebraska Foundation, which manages that school's endowment. Ninety-seven percent of those funds are restricted.

A big stock market rally gives endowments a double lift, explained Charles McCord, president of the University of Colorado Foundation which manages that school's endowment: not only does the school's portfolio rise in value, "a bull market tends to spur fresh gifts of stock."

The reason: if a donor's stock holdings rise sharply in value, he can get a big tax deduction by giving it to a university.

Community College Board Head Quits

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carl Horn Sr., the first chairman of the state board of community colleges, stepped down Thursday.

Horn was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt in September 1980, and said he would serve only one two-year term. A replacement has not been announced.

Hunt praised Horn, saying, "I think Carl Horn has chaired this board during what will be seen as the beginning of the golden age of community colleges and skills training. As the first chairman of our state board of community colleges, he has really set a standard of excellence."

Horn, 61, called the position one of the highest honors of his life.

The board also appointed two community college presidents and one acting president.

Dr. Fred Williams was named president of Robeson Technical College, succeeding Dr. Craig Allen, who was appointed last month to be the new president at Fayetteville Technical Institute.

Dr. Jerry Owens was appointed president of Rockingham Community College, to replace Dr. Gerald James, who is retiring.

12,000 Letters To Same Person

PARADISE, Calif. (AP) — Pacific Telephone sent the right number of letters when it wanted to tell residents of this Northern California town about the availability of phone equipment. Trouble is, all 12,000 were addressed to the same person.

Postmaster Roy Davis says a 47-foot stack of letters from the phone company arrived at his post office Tuesday, all bearing the name of the same person, a man he wouldn't identify. And no similar letters were sent to the rest of the town's 12,000 households.

Davis said he didn't even notify the addressee, just notified the company, which picked up all the letters, and may send them out again after changes are made.

"I'm sure it was computer error," Davis said.

BALTIC MANEUVERS MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet armed forces will hold maneuvers for six days in the Baltic region beginning June 29, according to the Tass news agency.

Held Liable In Work Stoppage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the Soviet Union can expect to be held liable for damages resulting from a 16-day work stoppage on the construction of the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Complaining that X-ray equipment being used to test the soundness of pre-cast concrete columns might hurt their health, workers walked off the job on May 23. It was widely reported last month that U.S. inspectors were also conducting the tests to determine if any listening devices or sensors had been placed in the concrete columns.

The department said in a statement Wednesday that radiation from the X-ray devices was well within international norms and that the work stoppage was a violation of a U.S.-Soviet construction contract.

City Council ... House Considers Tax Package Today

Oakmont Square and west of N.C. 43, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to office and institutional and R-6 (high density residential).

The land, it was pointed out, adjoins N.C. 43 and the developers would extend Arlington Boulevard in order to open up the rear portion of the Tucker property. Jim Walker of Olsen Associates Inc., representing Tucker, said the extension of Arlington Boulevard to N.C. 43 will help to remedy existing traffic problems.

Melissa L. Goodson, a resident of Lexington Square Apartments which adjoins the Tucker tract, presented a petition containing 15 names opposing the rezoning and asking that the RA-20 designation be maintained. Ms. Goodson said that some 700 apartment units are now located in the immediate vicinity and to put in more high density development would overcrowd the area. She cited traffic congestion on N.C. 43 and said the state has indicated it has no plans at this time to widen the corridor.

Mayor Percy Cox, noting that the Planning & Zoning Commission recommended the rezoning, said that RA-20 actually amounts to a holding zone. He said he was confident the planning board "took a long look at this."

The council also approved, following a public hearing, a request by William C. Shivers to rezone 1,057 acres north of state road 1421 and east of state road 1401 (Old River Road), from RA-20 to neighborhood commercial.

An existing store on the property has been a non-conforming use under the present zone and rezoning would bring the business into conformance and allow for possible expansion. The store has been in operation for over 30 years in the Old River Road neighborhood.

A request by Samuel Roberts, and others, to rezone 3.6 acres south of Mumford Road, across the road from the Greenville Utilities operation center, from industrial to R6-Mobile Home, was approved. The present mobile home units on the property are non-conforming under the industrial designation and the new zone will allow single family, duplex and mobile home usage.

The council voted to extend the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction in the area east of Greenville Boulevard, northeast, around Eaton Corp. Bobby Roberson, planning director, explained at the May planning board meeting that the proposal to extend the jurisdiction was initiated in a joint policy statement between the city and Greenville Utilities several months ago. The county also recommended the extension.

Approval was also given to a request by Bobby Parker, pastor of Temple Free Will Baptist Church, to amend the zoning ordinance to increase the size of information signs for churches in residential districts. The amendment will allow one illuminated sign, on each street frontage, not to exceed 36 square feet in area. The minimum set-back for the sign will be 10 feet from any right-of-way or property line.

Other action included:
— Approval of the sale of a CBD disposal parcel, containing 7,966 square feet, at the intersection of the eastern right of way line of Evans Street, if extended, with the southern right of way line of Eighth Street, to Kenneth T. Perkins for $9,165.

— Approval of the sale of several parcels in the West Meadowbrook project area to the Housing Authority for use as scattered sites for public housing.

— Approval of the submission of an application to the National Park Service, U.S. Department of Interior, for a development grant of $50,000 for park improvements (local funds have been set aside, including a $20,000 donation, to match the national grant).

— Approval of the submission of an application to the Small Business Administration for a $50,000 grant for recreational landscaping, including rehabilitation and improvements to the closed-out city landfill site as a public recreation area.

— Adoption of a resolution supporting the extension of radio service by WUNC-FM to eastern North Carolina.

— Approval of a request by the Greenville Jaycees for a fireworks display at Carolina East Mall on July 3 and at the Town Common on July 4.

Scheduling of a public hearing for July 14 on a petition for satellite annexation by the owners of Carolina Mobile Home Park.

Reappointment of Patricia Marshall and Richard Berry Lane Jr. to the Board of Adjustments as regular members and Dr. Bruce N. Wardrop as an alternate.

Appointment of Henry Dunn, Leslie Starr and William Gist to the Recreation Commission.

Reappointment of James Harvey Ward III and Dr. Wiley Hines as regular members on the Planning & Zoning Commission and Dr. Wallace Woolles as an alternate; and Appointment of David Bumgarner to the Human Relations Council.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House was scheduled to vote today on a $242 million, "broad base adjustment" in taxes to generate money for things like highways and a 5 percent pay raise for state workers.

There is a revenue excess of about $9.6 million in the package but budget leaders said they left that amount as a cushion in case revenue estimates for the different kinds of taxes prove inaccurate.

The package would raise taxes on automobiles, alcoholic beverages and corporations. It would levy new taxes on used cars, vacation home rentals, video games and the trucking industry.

The House Finance Committee voted 34-11 to approve the package Thursday, about 45 minutes after receiving it from about a dozen leaders who compiled it in closed-door sessions over the past few weeks.

The package would bring in $204.9 million for the General Fund in 1983-84, about $73 million in one-time windfalls. It would generate $37.1 million for the Highway Fund.

The House Expansion Budget Committee has identified additional spending needs of $232.4 million for 1983-84, including $62 million for highways and $38 million for a 5 percent pay raise for state workers.

A group of senators has submitted to the House leaders several plans for raising $204 million for both the Highway and General Funds. Senate Finance Committee Co-chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said some of those ideas were incorporated in the House plan.

Here are the major parts of the tax package:
— Lift the ceiling on the 2 percent sales tax on motor vehicles, boats, airplanes and mobile homes from $120 to $300; charge sales tax on used cars when the buyer applies for the title; charge sales tax on the difference between the value of a trade-in and the new car. This would raise $62.3 million in 1983-84 and $89.2 million in 1984-85.

— Eliminate the $200 interest exclusion on state individual income taxes to generate $7 million in 1983-84 and $7.7 million in 1984-85.

— Begin charging a sales tax on the rentals of homes, cottages and condominiums if they are leased for less than 90 days. This is aimed at bringing vacation rentals in line with motels and hotels, whose room rentals are taxed. The change would bring in $4 million the first year and $5 million the second year.

— Raise the auto license fee from $16 to $20 and the title transfer fee from $4 to $10, generating $19.7 million the first year and $20.8 million the second.

— Raise the tax on beer from 5 cents a can to 5½ cents a 12-ounce can; raise the tax on liquor from 22.5 percent of the price to 24½ percent of the price; raise unfortified wine taxes from 21 cents a liter to 23 cents a liter and on fortified wine from 24 cents a liter to 26.5 cents a liter.

The tax on mixed beverages would be raised from $10 a gallon to $15, the permit fee would go from $500 to $750 and the renewal fee would go from $250 to $500. In addition, a 5 cent a bottle tax would be added for local governments.

The plan would raise $12.6 million the first year and $15.5 million the second year for the state and about $2 million a year for the local governments.

— Reduce the money which merchants are allowed to keep for collecting the state sales tax from 3 percent to 2 percent if they collect more than $5,000 a month with a $1,000 maximum discount. That would mean an additional $7.4 million in 1983-84 and $8.6 million in 1984-85.

— Levy a $40 per machine tax on video games to raise $1.2 million a year. The bill also calls for placing counters on the machines to record the number of games played or the amount of money collected so legislators may consider another kind of tax in the future.

— Require businesses to repay money saved under the federal government's accelerated cost-recovery system and prevent the state from automatically adopting federal tax changes in the future to save the state $20 million over the next two years.
— Levy a new tax on tractor-trailer trucks weighing 70,000 pounds or more. The tax would be 2 cents per mile and would bring in $17.4 million the first year and $18.3 million the second year.

Truckers already pay the gasoline tax and a license tax. They already must report how many miles they drive in North Carolina each year so legislators hope to use that information as a basis for the new tax.

— Require more companies to remit employee's tax withholdings monthly instead of quarterly to raise a first-year windfall of $30.2 million. Other windfalls would be generated by requiring all insurance companies to remit taxes quarterly instead of annually, $15.7 million, and requiring more corporations to remit income taxes quarterly, a change that would be phased in over the next four years. The last change would generate $27.2 million the first year and $31.2 million the second year.

Swamp Canal Funds Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House of Representatives has voted to fund the continued operations of the Dismal Swamp Canal.

Continued funding for canal operations was included in an amendment offered to the Energy and Water Development Appropriations bill by Congressman Walter Jones.

"My amendment will continue the operations of the canal at their current level with three-day opening of the locks at South Mills, N.C., and Deep Creek, Va., thus preventing the 'mouthballing' of the canal as called for by the president's budget," Jones said.

The canal links Chesapeake, Va., and Elizabeth City, N.C., and is part of the Intracoastal Waterway system.

"The Dismal Swamp Canal is the most scenic and beautiful waterway in this country and should be preserved for the enjoyment of all Americans," Jones said. Its continued operation will "promote the economic development of the area, especially in Camden and Pasquotank counties."

SOLITARY BIGHORN — A bighorn sheep, known for its sure-footed mastery of treacherous cliffs in the mountains of North America, takes a breather on the flatlands of its rocky habitat at the Denver Zoo. Although bighorns still number in the tens of thousands on this continent, only a fraction of the original population remains and the survivors are faced with disease and a steadily deteriorating habitat. Watered-Down Waste Bill Advanced By Committee

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill regulating the distance between hazardous waste landfills and underground water tables has cleared a state Senate committee — but in a form that one lawmaker called "worthless."

The Senate Judiciary I Committee approved Thursday a bill requiring that the landfills be at least 10 feet above the water table. As passed by the House, the bill would have barred any hazardous waste landfill less than 30 feet above the water table.

Opponents said the 30-foot provision might have made the entire state unsuitable for the landfills.

The Senate revision was made on the recommendation of a subcommittee chaired by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland.

"Opposition to the (original bill) is just too strong," said Harris. "It's really this or nothing."

Harris said the amended bill would give the Governor's Waste Management Board authority to require a distance greater than 10 feet if necessary in some cases. But Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, said the Senate substitute was insufficient.

"I think this ... is practically worthless," said Allred. "We really shouldn't be putting these wastes in the ground, period."

The bill also would require that operators of hazardous waste landfills have enough insurance to cover "foreseeable claims" arising from suits involving the facilities.

Also, operators would have to report monthly to the waste board on the kinds and amounts of wastes in the landfills.

In other legislative action:

$1 Million Missing

Fiscal researchers told the Appropriations Expansion Budget Subcommittee on Human Resources that an appropriations package drafted earlier this week inadvertently left out $1 million to expand prison space for juveniles.

"That million dollars was never put into the package," said Jim Johnson. "I don't think they ever saw it."

Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, co-chairman of the subcommittee, said budget leaders would have to be consulted about the omission.

Without the money, the Division of Youth Services would be able to renovate two centers to comply with federal requirements that juvenile not be housed with adult prisoners, said DYS spokesman William Atkinson. But they would not be able to pay for staff and operational expenses to open the facilities, he said.

The panel voted to approve the $1.2 million appropriation for the first year of the biennium while efforts continue to find the missing $1 million for the second year.

Meanwhile, the Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee on Education appointed a subcommittee to study public school funding requests left out of both the recommended base and expansion budgets.

The move came after Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Expansion Budget Committee, spent a second day before the panel explaining budget leaders' decisions regarding education spending.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips has strongly criticized the decisions, saying the state university system got more than its fair share while the public school system was shortchanged.

Headlights

A bill requiring motorists to turn on headlights whenever inclement weather required the use of windshield wipers was killed in the Senate and buried after its sponsor tried to bring it back.

"If I didn't object to calling something a useless bill, I would say this is a useless bill," said Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, who moved to table the bill.

After the Senate overwhelmingly agreed to kill the bill, Rep. Margaret Hayden, D-Alleghany, began stalking the floor seeking support to revive the measure.

Shortly after, Soles asked that the tabling vote be reconsidered and asked that the motion to reconsider be tabled. That maneuver, called a clincher, means that any attempt to revive the bill would require two-thirds of the Senate instead of a simple majority.

Disclosure

A bill that would require prosecutors to disclose any oral statements made by a criminal defendant about to be tried was sent to a House subcommittee after district attorneys objected.

Ron Brown, president of the N.C. District Attorneys Association, said prosecutors already must provide any statements that might be used as evidence against a defendant or that might prove his innocence. He said the bill would require that law officers write down every exchange with someone arrested, including conversation about the weather.

Brown also said providing all statements against a defendant might imperil witnesses even though they were not identified.

Arrest Exemption

The House Judiciary III Committee sent to a subcommittee two bills designed to allow the expunction of arrest records for those found innocent of charges.

Chairman Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, said his bill permits expunction by petition after a court hearing at which the district attorney may object.

A bill by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, would simply remove the age limit on current laws allowing expunction for those which allows for those under age 18.

Gasohol Tax

The Senate approved a bill to provide a five-cents-per-gallon tax exemption on gasohol produced in North Carolina after amending the bill to include gasohol produced from agricultural wastes.

Corneal Tissue

A bill to allow removal of eye tissue for transplants from bodies to be autopsied was approved by the Senate.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said tissue removal would be allowed only if relatives had no objections.

Board of Governors

The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill to reduce terms for University of North Carolina Board of Governors members from eight years to four years.

Execution Date

Members of the state's legal community clashed over a bill that would revise the process for setting condemned criminals' execution dates after a stay is lifted.

Currently, when a stay is lifted the case must be returned to the superior court where the criminal was convicted, where the judge sets a new execution date no sooner than 60 days hence.

Under the bill, after a stay is lifted a new date would be set for the "earliest practical" time.

Unemployment Fund

The head of the N.C. Employment Security Commission urged the Senate Manufacturing, Labor and Commerce Committee to pass a House bill to shore up the state's jobless benefits fund.

The bill temporarily would increase the amount employers contribute and decrease unemployed workers' benefits during recessions or times when the fund is dangerously low.

But it includes a "trigger" mechanism that reduces employer contributions and raises workers' checks to their current levels when the economy improves or the fund's health is restored.

The bill passed the House overwhelmingly last month. Glenn Jernigan, ESC chairman, said last year his office paid over $37 million in jobless benefits, putting a "tremendous strain" on the fund. There's approximately $300 million in the fund now, he added.

"To protect the integrity of the fund and the workers of North Carolina ... we must take corrective action," said Jernigan.

At the behest of business lobbyists, Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, introduced an amendment that would revise the formula for determining a worker's benefits.

Currently, a worker's benefits would be determined by using 66 2/3 of the state's average weekly wage. The bill would have reduced the multiple to 60 percent, but a House committee restored the original 66 2/3.

Under Tison's bill, benefits would be 60 percent of the average weekly wage.

The committee adjourned before action could be taken on the amendment.

Bills

Sen. Joe Thomas, D-Craven, introduced a bill to spend $10,000 for developing a water quality management plan for the Neuse River Basin. The plan would come from a Legislative Research Commission study of water pollution and water needs in areas served by the Neuse River.

Sen. Vernon White, D-Pitt, introduced a bill to restrict the purchase of North Carolina agricultural land by nonresident aliens, the subject of a study commission report to the 1983 session.

The bill would prohibit corporations controlled by foreigners, outside governments, people who are not United States citizens or agents of foreigners from owning or holding interest in agricultural land in this state. Those who already hold land here could continue to do so but would be prohibited from acquiring more land.

A joint resolution to require a study of water quality in the Haw River and Jordan Reservoir was filed by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange.

Laborers on farms with 10 or more workers would be eligible for workers' compensation under a bill filed by Rep. Joe Roberts, D-Gaston.

Hackney filed a bill that would permit husbands and wives to testify for and against each other in civil cases.

Husbands and wives would not "be compellable in any event to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during the marriage."

Testimony by spouses also would not be allowed in divorce cases where adultery is alleged ... or in any other action in consequence of adultery."

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, filed a bill to require that all elections be held in May or November "so as to reduce the cost and frequency of special elections."

Cleaning

The House gave final approval to bills establishing a licensing board for alarm systems and granting farmers a tax break if they permit their crops to be gleaned.

Under the latter bill, farmers could claim a deduction of 10 percent of the unharvested crop's market value for letting people take the crops from the fields for donation to charitable organizations, which would distribute the food to the poor.

Peer Review

The House, after lengthy debate, tentatively passed 76-26 a bill that would permit rest home inspection by officials of other rest homes.

Rep. Gus Economos, D-Mecklenburg, said the bill would help rest home operators police their own field and ensure compliance with minimum health and safety standards through peer pressure.

But opponents, led by Reps. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, and Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, criticized a provision allowing officials from other rest homes to examine patients' medical records.

A final vote on the bill was slated for Friday.

Sirens

A bill that would allow volunteer firefighters to choose between sirens and lights on their vehicles instead of being required to have both was referred to the House Judiciary IV Committee after drawing protests on the floor.

Rep. Bob Slaughter, D-Stanly, said hearing-impaired drivers might not know that a rescue vehicle was coming if it wasn't required to use a siren.

CAMA

Penalties

Penalties under the Coastal Areas Management Act will be increased under a bill enacted by the Senate.

Minor penalties will increase from $100 to $250 and major penalties will increase from $1,000 to $2,500.

Water Contamination

The Senate enacted a bill making it a Class I felony to deliberately contaminate public water systems.

Handgun Hunting

A bill to allow big game hunting with handguns was enacted by the Senate.

Sewage Discharge Permits For 2 Lakes Are Temporarily Halted

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sewage discharge permits for Jordan Lake and Falls Lake will be halted for 120 days while public hearings are held to consider changing the classification of the two lakes.

A-2 means that the body of water provides a source of drinking water. The C designation means fish are under government protection.

The temporary classification, which could become permanent, would change the C rating to a B, meaning the lake is suitable for swimming. The moratorium also affects housing developments in the area of the lakes that would employ controversial sewage treatment methods. Such a problem has arisen around Falls Lake just outside Raleigh.

The controversy began in April when a development was approved by the Wake Planning Board in the northwest corner of the county that included a private sewage treatment plant that would discharge into a tributary of the lake.

Four such plants which have already obtained permits to locate on lake tributaries could have their construction permits delayed, depending on a ruling from the attorney general's office.

Another classification possible is "nutrient sensitive waters," meaning the particular body of water is suffering from an abundance of algae blooms that choke off oxygen to fish. That classification has been made only once before, on the Chowan River. In other action, the commission deferred a decision on a request by Duke Power Co. for an exemption of monitoring requirements at its 11 coal-fired generating stations.

OK Limits In Mountain Ridge Construction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A House subcommittee Thursday approved a rewritten bill to limit high-rise construction on mountain ridges in 35 counties.

Under the bill, counties with ridges 500 feet or more above surrounding land would have until Jan. 1 to adopt ordinances limiting construction of buildings more than 40 feet tall within 100 feet of ridges, said Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, who chaired the Water and Air Resources subcommittee. Otherwise, the state law would prohibit such structures.

The panel drew on bills introduced by Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Craven, and Rep. Margaret "Pinky" Hayden, D-Alleghany, in formulating the compromise.

Thomas' bill, approved by the Senate in April, would ban buildings over 35 feet tall within 100 feet of ridges more than 2,950 feet above sea level. It would allow cities and counties to opt out of its provisions within 120 days of enactment, after holding public hearings to protect the public health and safety and the mountains' natural beauty.

Mrs. Hayden's bill would let local governments enact ordinances requiring permits for buildings more than 35 feet tall within 100 feet of ridges more than 2,500 feet high or 500 feet above adjacent land.

Diamond said the compromise bill still would require local governments to include public hearings in a permit system before opting out of the state ban.

"This is not a perfect bill and if there are any problems we'll come back and correct them," Diamond said. "But I believe we'll get a ridge law out this session."

The bills were inspired by objections to a 10-story condominium project atop Little Sugar Mountain in Avery County.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, who worked closely with Thomas in drafting the Senate bill, said he was concerned after an initial look at the House version.

Hipps said he was worried the bill's many references to the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development would lead to excessive state regulation.

Under the bill, the NRCD would keep on file all local ordinances and provide each county with maps of affected ridges.

The full committee was expected to look at the bill Wednesday.

Thatcher Romps To Big Victory Commencement Is Held

LONDON (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, declaring today, "My victory is greater than I dared to hope," romped to a second five-year term as her embittered election rivals split the opposition vote. In the process, the socialist Labor Party suffered its worst defeat in 60 years. "I have not been extreme for the last four years. I am not an extreme person and I am not extreme now," said

Mrs. Thatcher in a television interview today as she pledged not to use her parliamentary majority to follow radical right-wing policies. Her party, according to the latest results from Thursday's general election, got almost the same percentage of the popular vote as in 1979, emerging with a stunning success due largely to the strong showing of a new centrist alliance.

The latest results gave the Conservatives a 160-seat lead in the 650-member House of Commons. But they were expected to lose 17 of the 20 outstanding races — including all the races in Northern Ireland — for a final majority of 146 seats over the combined opposition.

That would equal the 146-seat edge won by Labor in 1945 when Clement Attlee defeated wartime leader Winston Churchill.

With votes counted for 630 seats, Mrs. Thatcher's party had 395 seats, Labor 209, the alliance 21 — 16 of them through Liberal candidates — and other parties five.

Updated percentages were not immediately available, but earlier results showed the Tories receiving 43.1 percent of the overall vote, Labor 28, and the alliance 25.8. In 1979, the Conservatives received 43.9 percent and Labor 36.9, while the Liberal Party, the only alliance partner then in existence, got 13.8.

"It's a tragedy," said Michael Foot, the 69-year-old Labor leader. He blamed the alliance for "giving a victory to a government I believe the country does not wish to see running our affairs over the next five years."

By early morning, as the hand-counted results were declared across the country, Foot, a winner in his own Welsh mining district, conceded nationwide defeat and accepted "my responsibility" for the socialist debacle. Labor has ruled for nearly half the post-1945 era.

The alliance of the Liberal and Social Democratic parties grabbed a quarter of the vote but few of the seats in what SDP leader Roy Jenkins called an electoral "travesty."

"There will be a real sense of anger in the country. This is not a just result," said Liberal leader David Steel, outraged at an electoral system that gave the alliance less than 3 percent of the 650 seats in House of Commons. In Britain, only seats won, not the percentage polled, counts. The party winning the most seats forms the government and its leader becomes prime minister.

Mrs. Thatcher, 57, is the first Conservative prime minister to win consecutive terms since Lord Salisbury in 1900. In 1979, with a 43-seat majority, she became Europe's first woman prime minister, and last month she decided her public support was strong enough to call the new elections even though her first term had almost a year to run.

The results delighted Mrs. Thatcher, who had urged the British to banish forever the "dark, divisive clouds of left-wing socialism."

With unemployment at a near-record high of 12.8 percent, the prime minister's month-long campaign hammered out the message that only her tight-credit policies would curb inflation and heal the economy.

Years of disarray in the British left led Labor moderates to form the SDP in 1981 and saddled the main socialist party with its most radical platform ever.

Labor had pledged unilateral nuclear disarmament, a ban on U.S. nuclear bases here, withdrawal from the European Common Market, protectionist foreign exchange and import controls, and wider state ownership.

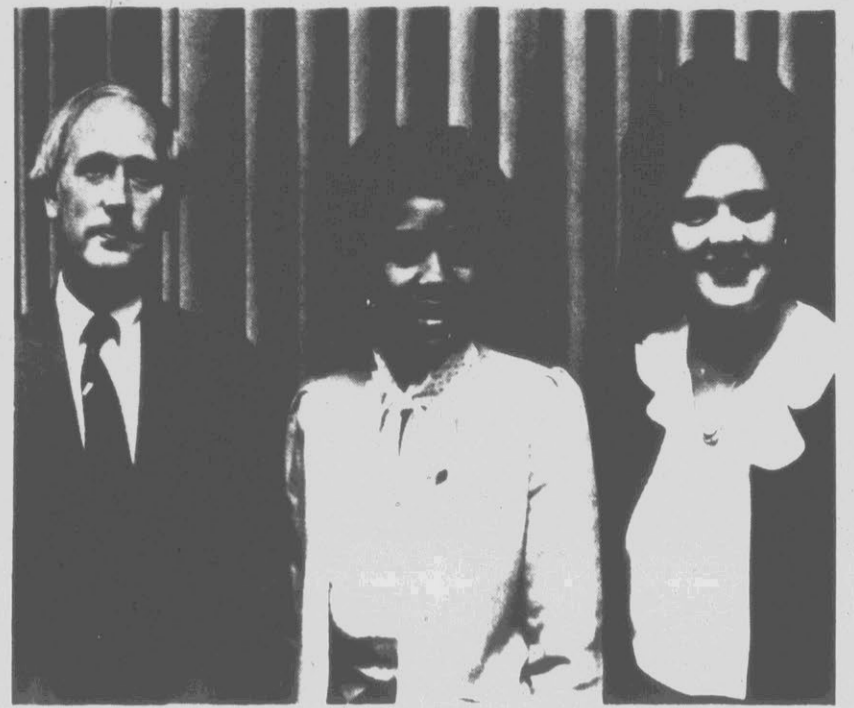

Mrs. Thatcher supported deploying cruise missiles this year to counter the Soviets' nuclear arsenal and sticking to the monetarist policies she used to cut inflation to a 15-year low of 4 percent.

Outside 10 Downing St. this morning, supporters cheered "There's only one Maggie."

Mrs. Thatcher breezed to victory in her Finchley north London district, where she spoke jubilantly to supporters.

In evident reference to opposition condemnation of her "autocratic, one-woman" rule, she said: "In this marvelous moment, when we're all thrilled, we have to remember that all power is a trust."

Britain's other female political heavyweight, SDP President Shirley Williams, 52, lost her seat in the northwest England district of Crosby.

Commencement exercises for the Pitt County Extended School were held Thursday on the Pitt Community College campus. Eve Rogers, chief court counselor for the 3rd Judicial District, was the speaker.

Mrs. Rogers told the graduates that nationwide surveys and reports alarm us with statistics and school dropout rates. "You have dared to defy the trend. Don't store your education," she said, "use it. Knowledge as it is acquired through formal training and education and through life experiences, is a precious commodity."

Dr. Edwin P. West, superintendent of Pitt County schools, presented diplomas. Those receiving high school diplomas included Kimberly Lynn Baker, Essie Freeman Bynum, Shirley Diane Davis, Sharon Lois Johnson, James Allan Kaler, Kimberly Dail Kelly, Priscilla Ann

Roundtree, James Ray Staton Jr., Teresa Lynn Sutton, Elizabeth Williams, Frank Yancey, all of Greenville; Linda Carol Vines of Fountain, and James Haywood Buck and James Arthur Sanders, both of Ayden.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE LIFE OF A PETTY KING

KINGS WERE NUMEROUS IN BIBLICAL DAYS. EVERY CITY HAD ITS OWN KING MUCH AS TODAY WE HAVE MAYORS TO CONDUCT AND OFFICIATE THE BUSINESS OF THE CITIES. HOWBEIT, THE MODERN MAYOR MUST CONSULT THE CITY COUNCIL, ALDERMEN, ETC., THE BIBLICAL KINGS AND THEIR AURA OF ROYALTY ENABLED THEM TO ASSUME MUCH GREATER AND DICTATORIAL POWERS. WHEREAS MODERN MAYORS ARE CONCERNED WITH BUDGETS, UNION DEMANDS, TRADE AGREEMENTS, AND COMMERCE FOR THE CITY IN GENERAL, THE BIBLICAL SMALL-TIME KING WAS MORE CONCERNED WITH WHAT CITY HE WOULD MAKE WAR ON FOR THE PURPOSE OF PLUNDERING, TAKING SLAVES, AND ANNEXING TERRITORY. HIS NEXT CONCERN WAS WHAT ENEMY MIGHT ATTACK HIS CITY FOR THE SAME REASONS. ALL OF WHICH FORCED THESE ANCIENT KINGS INTO A SERIES OF ALLIANCES WITH THEIR NEIGHBORING CITIES TO FORESTALL SUCH A CALAMITY BEFALLING THEM. THE END RESULT WAS A MAZE OF COMPLICATED POLITICAL RELATIONSHIPS WHICH TODAY MIGHT TAKE A COMPUTER TO UNSCRAMBLE!

FAITH is your haven of refuge in a troubled world

Coley Pitches To 'Damp' 13-1 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
HOLLYWOOD — Doug Coley hurled one-hit baseball for six innings and drove in four runs to help power Pitt County's Post 39 American Legion team to a 13-1 romp over Edenton last night.

Coley's fete was all the more impressive in that his entire pitching turn was in light to medium rain which finally went away just after he left the mound.

With Pitt leading, 11-1, Coach Bill Davis decided to find out what some of his other pitchers could do, bringing on Steve Wall for two innings of relief, and Paul Hill for another frame.

All three pitched well, each giving up only one hit. Coley, in his six frames, struck out seven and walked four. Two of those walks, along with the lone hit, came in the opening inning. Edenton also scored its only run in that frame.

Wall, in two frames, fanned one and allowed one hit, while Hill, in one inning, struck out two and gave up one hit. Neither allowed a walk.

Meanwhile the Pitt batters were unloading on two Edenton pitchers, banging out a total of 19 hits. All but one starter, Ken Whitehurst, managed at least one hit off the Post 40 pitching. Coley, Randy Warren, Mont Carter and Rudy Stalls each banded out three, with Carter having two doubles, and Warren, Coley and Stalls one each. Stalls also had a triple.

Two of those extra base hits were freaks, however. Warren's double came when he slipped a hard grounder past the charging shortstop, who, although unable to reach the ball, kicked it away from other players and before it could be chased down, only feet from second base. Warren was standing there watching Stalls' triple come when the left fielder fell chasing the ball on the wet grass and couldn't recover it at the fence before Stalls slid into third.

Hallberg Enjoying Golf, Leads Hanover Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Gary Hallberg had two people to thank for helping him to a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $450,000 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Golf Classic.

"Golf is fun again," Hallberg said after his 4-under-par 67 Thursday on the suddenly-difficult Westchester Country Club course. The suburban New York layout often yields some of the lowest scores on the Tour but scored only six rounds in the 60s in the opening round.

helped him turn his game around, he said. On a more immediate basis, there's Fuzzy Zoeller.

Zoeller, a former Masters champ and a winner earlier this season, admitted he's "sometimes erratic."

Edenton's only run came in the top of the first. Robbie Lee opened the game with a single into left field and moved up on an infield out. After walking Al Bunch, Coley proceeded to unleash two wild pitches, allowing Lee to score. Coley walked another batter before finally retiring the side on the first of his seven strikeouts.

Three more Edenton runners reached as far as second base the rest of the evening.

Fast Named To Presbyterian Staff

Garry Fast, administrative assistant for athletics in the East Carolina University football offices, has been named as offensive backfield and receiver coach at Presbyterian College.

Fast served for three years on the ECU staff, coming to East Carolina first as defensive back coach for the 1980 season. He became the administrative assistant a year ago.

Roberson, 17-4, could clinch the 3-A state title Friday night when it plays Havelock, 15-9-1, in the second game of the best-of-three series.

Havelock took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on Chris Gerende's two-run homer. Gerende's two-out blast down the rightfield line came with Richard Carter on base. Carter singled to open the inning.

Holmes' one-out solo home run over the right-centerfield fence in the fourth cut the deficit to 2-1.

In the sixth, Roberson catcher Everett Utter reached on an error to open the inning and Holmes followed with his second home run of the game, also over the right-centerfield fence.

Holmes' two home runs, which gives him seven for the season, were the only hits off Havelock right-hander Richard Carter, who struck out seven and walked three as his record dropped to 6-4.

Holmes, who went the distance on the mound for Roberson, gave up five hits, struck out eight and walked three to raise his record to 14-1.

Edwards Leaving ECU, Transfer Plans In Air

Johnny Edwards, the 6-5, 215-pound freshman center at East Carolina University last year, will not return to the Pirate ranks next fall.

As reported earlier in the Daily Reflector, Edwards is planning to seek enrollment elsewhere.

While ECU coach Charlie Harrison was out of town and could not be contacted, it was confirmed that Edwards was not expected to return to Greenville.

While reports said that Edwards had become academically ineligible for athletics, Sports Information Director Ken Smith said that Edwards could have returned to school if Edwards was ineligible, he could have regained it in time to play most of the team's games after the end of the first semester of the 1983-84 season, according to one source.

One East Carolina coach said that Edwards had told him shortly after the end of the season that he planned to transfer to Indiana State, while another source said he might attend DePaul. An Indiana State source confirmed that Edwards was expected to enroll there, but had not yet arrived on campus.

Edwards, recruited by former head coach Dave

Harrison has recruited six players, all rising freshman, including 6-10 Leon Bass of Florence, S.C.; 6-6 Derrick Battle of Whitakers; 6-2 William Grady of Paterson, N.J.; 6-3 Keith Sledge of Roanoke Rapids; and 6-7 1/2 Roy Smith of Gastonia, and 6-9 Jack Turnbill of Wilmington.

Declarer had only three losers going in. To the delight of the defenders, he found no problem increasing that number by one.

After North's two no trump opening bid, South showed his five-card major. With three good trumps and a ruffing value, North had no hesitation in choosing the major suit game. Had he been aware of his partner's ability, he might have chosen three no trump - cold as the cards lie if North declares.

West led the queen of clubs. Declarer won in dummy, came to hand with a trump and led a heart to the king and ace. East returned a trump and, when he won the first heart, returned another trump. Since diamonds did not break, declarer ended up losing three heart tricks and a club. Most unfortunate.

In an attempt to make an overtrick rather than be satisfied with his contract, declarer had underplayed the hand. Before he played to the first trick, he had only two heart losers and a club. There was no need for him to be charitable.

Declarer should have won the club ace and immediately led a heart from the board. Now he is a tempo ahead. A defender can win and lead a trump. Declarer wins and clears dummy's last heart. The defenders can lead a second trump, but one trump still remains in dummy. Declarer wins the second trump in hand, ruffs a heart in dummy and leads a club. He can get back to his hand with a club ruff to draw the last of the enemy's trumps and claim his contract.

Native Son

This 1930 painting by Grant Wood, which featured the artist's sister and his dentist, quickly became an American classic and brought Wood national recognition. Wood was born in Anamosa, Iowa in 1892. Like most American artists of his generation, he studied art abroad, but he later returned to his home state, where he became one of the founders of Regionalism in painting. In his words, "I realized that all the really good ideas I'd ever had came to me while I was milking a cow. So I went back to Iowa." Wood, who died in 1942, is now remembered as one of Iowa's most famous native sons. This weekend, the people of Anamosa and Stone City, Iowa will honor him at the annual Grant Wood Festival.

Presbyterians End Civil War

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — The Civil War ended today for 3.4 million Presbyterians, 122 years after "pride, prejudice hurt feelings and hard lines" ripped the church's Northern and Southern branches apart with the South's secession from the Union in 1861.

A communion service scheduled for tonight marks the fruition of decades of effort to reunite the church's Southern branch, the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., with the Northern-based, nationally oriented United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

The general assemblies of both denominations have been meeting separately in Atlanta's Georgia World Congress Center this week, but both planned to finish final business this afternoon and adjourn before the new church, The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), ceremonially comes into being tonight.

The two churches separated shortly after the onset of the Civil War with the establishment of the Presbyterian Church in the Confederate States of America. After the war, the Southern church had resisted a century of efforts to reunite the groups, and church of-officials expected an extremely emotional ceremony when the PCUS adjourned forever today.

Both groups planned their adjournments for 2 p.m., to be followed by a "spontaneous" parade from the Congress Center several blocks to City Hall for a welcome from Mayor Andrew Young. PCUS spokeswoman Marj Carpenter said streets would be blocked off for the parade by up to 3,000 people.

The Southern church rejected several efforts to rejoin the two branches, the earliest almost a century ago and the latest in 1954, before both branches' general assemblies approved a plan last year to merge.

The denominations then submitted the proposals to their regional governing bodies, or presbyteries, for a deciding vote. While the North easily reached its required two-thirds majority for approval, Southern proponents of reunion sweated through a cliffhanger the PCUS's presbyteries approved by the necessary three-quarters.

The Southern denomination had about 829,000 members. With the reunion, The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) will have about 3.2 million members, making it the fourth largest Protestant group in the country.

Residents Protest Dumping In Swamp

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — More than 200 angry residents packed a courtroom in the Robeson County Courthouse Thursday night to oppose a request by the town of Bladenboro to discharge waste water into Big Swamp.

During the public hearing held by the N.C. Division of Environmental Management from Robeson, Bladen and Columbus counties spoke emotionally of their love for the environmental and recreational quality of Big Swamp, and pleaded with Environmental Management representatives to keep the 356-square-mile swamp "clear and black, not green and polluted."

Commissioners from Robeson and Columbus counties expressed their opposition to the discharge request, as did representatives from the N.C. Wildlife Resource Commission.

Opponents of the discharge request were particularly concerned with the low water flow of the swamp, saying that the waste would sit in stagnant water during dry months.

Big Swamp, which drains into Lumber River, lies on N.C. 41 on the Bladen Robeson County line. The proposed discharge point for the waste water is a railroad bridge located in Robeson County.

Because the 200,000 gallons of residential waste dumped daily into Bryant Swamp which is connected to Big Swamp exceeds the chemical content standards set by the state, officials at the Bladenboro waste water treatment plant have been advised to discharge the waste into Big Swamp instead, DEM officials told the audience.

Although DEM officials have drawn up a draft permit for the discharge request, the final decision will be made within the next 90 days, said Chuck Wakefield, a DEM field officer who presided over the hearing, the small town's limited resource, he said.

Meanwhile, the new position, assistant to the cabinet, represents a compromise between Indian delegates from Robeson County and conference Bishop William R. Cannon, the Methodists' presiding officer.

The Rev. Simeon Cummings of Pembroke was selected to fill the Indian position for the 1983-84 conference year, the bishop said. Cummings is director of the Robeson County Cooperative Ministry.

The gathering of representatives of 865 churches in eastern North Carolina was faced with the Indian issue on the opening day Sunday when about 200 Lumbee Indians from Robeson County demonstrated at the college.

The conference also adopted a $6 million budget for 1984 revenues, with the funds to be spent in 1985.

He said the American Express Travelers Checks included five $20 checks (DA 148-447-410 through 414), 55 $50 checks (HA 123-802-945 through 999), 65 $50 check (HA 123-803-000 through 064), and 119 $100 checks (RA 153-676-160 through 199, RC 109-633-040 through 069, RD 046-031-360 through 364, RE 105-336-080 through 109, and RH 023-909-396 through 619).

Speech Pathologist Says Mothers Help Stutterers

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Stuttering is the same in any language, says an East Carolina University speech pathologist. Also, he says, every stutterer in the world, including Mel Tillis, can sing fluently.

These observations, based on years of clinical research, travel and enjoying country music, are significant factors underlying speech fluency training procedures which the ECU scientist, Dr. Richard E. Shine, developed and uses with a high degree of success on pre-school children with speech disorders.

His procedures are admittedly controversial among theorists and in professional literature, but Shine countered challengers and gained reinforcement for his research during a recent series of lectures and workshops in Europe.

"I have observed Dutch-speaking stutterers," Shine said. "I don't know Dutch but I could easily identify each moment of stuttering."

"The fact that no matter what language an individual speaks the stuttering reveals itself as whole word repetitions, part word repetitions, prolongations and struggle behaviors suggests that stuttering is the result of a common factor or common factors," Shine says.

Shine cautions, however, not to conclude that there is a single cause of stuttering.

Rather, he says, "stuttering results from a generalized dysfunction of the speaking mechanism which can be identified as a coordination disorder."

"That is, the child has problems coordinating and simultaneously controlling breathing patterns for speaking in sentences, the voice box to vocalize the tongue, lips and jaw to form the sounds of language."

Shine's explanation of why stutterers can sing fluently is "that the individual is using breathing patterns, the voice box and the speech articulators in a more coordinated manner."

His approach contradicts traditional, widely held theories that stuttering is a psychological disorder resulting from neuroses, psychoses, emotional problems or "nervous conditions," or is a learned behavior "caused by parents."

"This has never been shown to be true by even a shred of evidence," Shine insists.

"In fact, research demonstrates that direct, active suggestions by parents have been beneficial and certainly have had no negative effects. I always tell parents to use whatever helps the child speak without stuttering."

In fact, Shine adds, "The only reason parents say anything to a child is because the child is already stuttering. In my 19 years of experience with young children I have found that parents are valid judges of stuttering. If parents call and indicate that their child is stuttering, it is rare that their diagnosis will be wrong."

Parents often succeed in eliminating stuttering, Shine says. "However, the professional literature continues to warn parents not to try to actively help their child because it will cause stuttering, or at least cause the stuttering to become worse."

"It is interesting to note that every contemporary procedure that has been successful in treating stuttering begins by having the stutterer slow down."

"Mothers have been doing this with their children for centuries and professionals have finally begun to do so," Shine said.

He contends that in most cases "spontaneous" recovery "appears not to be spontaneous but the result of intervention by parents."

"I find parents, particularly mothers, are wonderfully intuitive in determining the best procedure for helping the child. The professional needs to listen without bias to the parent and learn how to help. I have learned a great deal from parents over the years."

Shine spent much of this spring lecturing at speech pathology conferences and conducting workshops in Belgium, Holland, West Germany and Britain. He was an invited participant at the International Congress of Logopedics in Antwerp April 22-23.

Teacher Dues Checkoff Okayed By Committee

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A bill to allow payroll deductions for teachers' organizations has advanced to the Senate Appropriations Committee, where debate over possible collective bargaining implications was expected to resume.

The Senate Education Committee voted 8-3 Thursday to approve the bill after rejecting efforts to send it to Appropriations without first voting on it.

Supporters say the bill would give teachers the same rights already given to other state employees, who may have professional dues deducted. But opponents have charged that dues checkoff is the first step toward unionization, which is illegal in North Carolina.

Representatives of both sides vowed to keep fighting in Appropriations.

NCAE President Loretta Martin noted that a majority of the Senate signed the bill.

"Hopefully that percentage will hold true in Appropriations," she said.

"It was an extremely close vote and they've got a long way to go," said Causby, whose group is opposing the bill. "We're going to keep on working. It is not an employee issue it is a group issue."

The committee spent three hour-long meetings in heated debate over the bill, agreeing to an amendment that would invalidate payroll deductions if an employee group engages in collective bargaining. But that failed to defuse opposition.

"This bill has nothing to do with education in this state," said Sen. Kenneth Harris, R-Mecklenburg. "Not a single teacher I have talked to thought this was a high priority."

"The taxpayers back home would be paying for this checkoff," said Sen. Vernon White, D-Pitt.

The bill would allow deductions when 25 percent of eligible school employees request the checkoff in writing.

Harris failed to push through two amendments to answer criticisms of the bill. One would have let local school units keep 5 percent of the dues to cover the cost of administering the checkoff. The other would have prohibited payroll deductions for groups whose dues go to out-of-state organizations.

Questions about collective bargaining were raised because about half the North Carolina Association of Educators' dues go to the National Education Association. The federal government has classified the NEA as a labor union and the group has supported collective bargaining efforts.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said the NCAE is not compelled to follow the NEA's beliefs and said she believed that the dues checkoff provision would encourage more people to become members of the NCAE, something which would have a moderating effect on the organization.

But Mrs. Marvin said the amendments should be rejected because they were aimed at killing the whole bill.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, who introduced the bill, reminded the committee that state employees already can checkoff dues to their organizations and they are not forced to pay for that right.

John Dornan, executive director of the NCAE, said he knew of five school employee groups that might take advantage of the checkoff. But Gene Causby, director of the N.C. School Boards Association, said he believed 34 different groups could be eligible for the deductions.

Fears Reduced The Vandalism

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - "Beware The Aspergantis," warn big signs at Greenlawn Cemetery, where vandalism by children used to be a problem - but isn't any longer.

"What's an aspergantis?" "That's a terrible thing," says cemetery owner Vernon Wendorph, shuddering a little when asked about the mysterious graveyard dweller.

"You just wouldn't want to run into it in the dark, that's all," Wendorph added.

The imaginary beast was invented about 16 years ago, said Lamar Long, who painted the cemetery signs. "It's the idea of 'Beware of the unknown,'" he explained. Although it has served its purpose, the aspergantis never existed, except in the minds of its creators and the fears of those afraid to confront it, Wendorph admitted.

NEW YORK (AP) — The sports guy offers everything but the real scores, and he does it with Fourth of July sound effects. The music critic pushes people around, has a big entourage and sounds like Frank Sinatra. The gadfly newsman whines when he talks and sounds like Andy Rooney.

tickle you during the morning's worst traffic snarls. "I love radio," says Piscopo, known for his zany impressions on NBC's "Saturday Night Live." "You can say anything you want, so long as you follow it with 'Only kidding.' He then makes a universally recognized visual gesture that isn't obscene on radio. "Radio's great, isn't it?"

spots have been commentaries by news correspondents, financial reports and musical interludes, such as "Mary Turner's Off the Record" and "Rock Calendar." Now there's a comedy repeat, courtesy of Piscopo and Torus Communications, which already is syndicating "The Sporting News Report" and "Retro Rock."

stars Bobby Vinton in the first miniseries that begins and ends in one night." Piscopo's manic sportscaster will be doing a radio commentary the day of baseball's All-Star Game, and there will be an interview with Mick Jagger, introduced by Sinatra, the Rolling Stone of his day.

Piscopo started his stand-up comedy career at The Improvisation in 1976. "I was pretty mediocre," he says. "I was dirty, and I didn't do any impressions." Piscopo, with a broadcast management degree from Jones College in Jacksonville, Fla., also was a disc jockey for a Trenton, N.J., radio station. "It's so much easier to do voices on radio," he says. "You create an image, and so much is left to the imagination of the audience."

creative juices began flowing. They were talking about some movie sequels that would be featured on Piscopo's radio show: "Tootsie's Choice" and "Gandhi a Go-Go." Then the discussion got around to a current movie craze. "Hey, let's do 3-D on radio," said Piscopo. "We could do 'The Honeyymooners' in 3-D. It would be a first."

Piscopo, meanwhile, will be the host of "Campus Comedy," a Home Box Office "On Location" feature taped recently at Tufts University in Boston. The 60-minute special, featuring prospective comics now attending college, will premiere on the pay-cable network Saturday night, and will be repeated June 17, 19 and 29.

BACK TO BROADWAY — Actress Diahann Carroll smiles during an interview in her New York apartment. After a 20-year absence, Miss Carroll has returned to Broadway, assuming Elizabeth Ashley's role in "Agnes of God." She last appeared on the stage in 1962 when she starred with Richard Kiley in "No Strings", a musical especially created for her by the late Richard Rogers. (AP Laserphoto)

The recent growth in radio networks has created a need for short segments to fill time and add luster to programs. The most popular

Neer and writer Ray D'Ariano produce the segments, and Piscopo makes changes and records them. "The radio stations get free programming, and we get the advertising revenue," says Neer. "Our material tends to be outrageous, funny and fresh," adds Neer. "If that occasionally means testing the limits of radio, we'll do it."

Already 250 stations have signed for the seven-day-a-week feature, which begins July 4. "The world and the show are both outrageous, irreverent and controversial," says D'Ariano. "Our goal is to be on every station in the world, including Iran. We want to be banned by Khomeini." Recently, Piscopo was at The Improvisation comedy club in New York, where new talent was performing and simultaneously being recorded for "Joe Piscopo At Large." "If we get anything good, we'll use it — maybe with an introduction from one of Joe's characters," says Neer. "But six days a week, you'll get Joe."

Talk Funds For Festival

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly is considering appropriating $100,000 for an International North Carolina Folk Festival to be held in the mountains next year.

The festival, scheduled for two weeks in August of 1984, is expected to become an annual event, said Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, sponsor of the funding bill. Thomas said the festival would be an expanded version of downtown Asheville's annual Bele Chere festival, when craftsmen, entertainers and restaurateurs go to the streets with special activities for one weekend in August.

The festival would be centered in Haywood County, but satellite festivals would take place in Henderson, Polk, Transylvania and surrounding counties. Festival organizers would have to raise $100,000 to match the state grant, Thomas said.

"It's up to the mountain folk to raise whatever they need," he said. "The money they raise from this will be used to promote the next folk festival."

SPLITS — Actor Elliott Gould, citing "artistic differences" with the director, has left "The Guys in the Truck" less than a week before the show's Broadway debut.

The opening has been postponed, and an understudy will play Gould's role. (AP Laserphoto)

Promoting Patriotism

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Hollywood promoter Ed Shaw is high on patriotism, and he's taking to the air over northern Indiana to prove it.

"I'm selling America to America," said the 43-year-old Shaw as he announced plans to drop red, white and blue balloons today on South Bend from a five-story hot air balloon.

The self-styled "Paul Revere of the '80s" has been criss-crossing the country since last June — so far he's been to 30 states — using all his tinseltown promotional skills in his "Wake Up America" campaign to get more people waving more flags on Flag Day, June 14. "My goal is to have one million people with flags," Shaw said Thursday. "When I was a kid, Flag Day was a big day. Everyone had a flag and we marched around the school."

Shaw, who promoted a $5 million voter sweepstakes in California's 1982 primary to draw citizens to the polls, says he got the idea for his patriotic odyssey during a speaking engagement last Flag Day in Oklahoma City.

"I saw one American flag and there were all those empty flagpoles all over Oklahoma," he said.

He's also offering prizes for color photos of unusual residential patriotic displays and essays of 50 words or less on the subject "Why I Love America."

 Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals M.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Life As It's Lived

'Deferred Demand' Part Of The American Scene

By GAIL MICHAELS
 Nothing fills me with more anticipation than a tax refund. From 11:47 p.m., April 15, when Phillip first comes up with the figure that the government owes us for the year, to the day the check arrives in the mailbox, I dream of everything I've wanted to buy during the past 10 years and now expect to have by July.

This phenomenon is what economists call deferred demand. Most of them say our economy thrives on it. Every time a consumer gets his greedy hands on a few extra dollars, he refers mentally to his deferred demands, chooses one to mark off the list, and thus gives a little boost to our GNP.

The consumer, however, is usually doing himself a disservice because deferred demand is like a disease. The sufferer starts off by believing that if he just gets one thing, he'll be satisfied for the rest of his life or something close to that. But by the time he gets his one thing, he has added at least four more items to his "wants" list to take that one thing's place.

For instance, a young married couple might say that if one of them could just earn a salary, they'd never covet another thing. But before long, they begin to wish that they could replace the 30-year-old mattress donated by parents with something that doesn't feel like it's stuffed with old oatmeal. Then the husband begins to visualize red meat. The wife wants a sofa with springs. They both think about a house of their own. And about dead rabbits. From there, it's definitely all downhill.

Of course, I'm beyond that point. My deferred demands are really luxury items: a car that doesn't blink for oil every 30 miles, Chippendale chairs for my dining room, curtains for my bedroom, a three-month vacation in Europe, a new pair of shorts, bunion surgery, a maid, trees, a job offer for Phillip in Raleigh.

After tabulating the probable cost of these items, Phillip figures that we will be able to retire this particular list sometime in 2076.

Then again, he can't complain. He has a list, too: a lawn spreader to park in the side yard so that he'll at least appear industrious, a camera with which to harass me, a car that doesn't blink for oil every 30 minutes, a telescope, a cook, a video-cassette recorder.

A week before the refund arrived in the mail, we sat down and realized that we had both mentally spent that check about six times over.

"Well, I guess I don't get my computer this year," he sighed.

"And I don't get my chairs."

"I have to have the camera before vacation."

"The insurance bill arrived in the mail today."

"How about the lawn spreader?"

"Zachary needs new shoes."

"I really do have to have a lawn spreader."

"I really do have to have drapes for the bedroom. There's no telling who's peering at me through binoculars."

"I doubt that you have to worry. And remember, we promised Meg art lessons."

We finally settled on a lawn spreader, a shower curtain, a new bathing suit for Phillip and two pairs of shorts for me. Our big splurge was the tree that will provide shade for our patio in approximately 10 years.

"This is no fun at all," I told Phillip as we were counting the small change.

"But just think of what you've got to look forward to next year."

That's what I'm worried about.
