Court Bars Suing Military Superiors

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court ruled today that military servicemen may not sue their superior officers for damages in cases involving alleged violations of their constitutional rights.

In a 9-0 decision, the court threw out a suit by five black sailors who claimed they were discriminated against because

The court said that under the Constitution there are two systems of justice: one for civilians and one for military personnel. The need to maintain military discipline would be undermined by permitting servicemen to sue their superiors. the court said.

Justice Warren E. Burger, in his opinion for the court, said, "The special nature of military life, the need for unhesitating and decisive action by military officers and equally disciplined responses by enlisted personnel, would be undermined by a judicially created remedy exposing officers to personal liability at the hands of those they are charged to Burger said, "No military organization can function without strict discipline and regulation that would be unacceptable in a civilian setting.

The ruling overturned a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which said in November 1981 that the black sailors should be permitted to pursue their suit.

The appeals court, in the first ruling of its kind, said officers may be sued by their subordinates for "recognized constitutional violations

The sailors claimed they were victims of racial discrimination. They said they were assigned the worst jobs aboard the landing ship USS Decatur and that the officers tolerated racial abuse against them.

The sailors said they were targest of sympathizers of the Ku Klux Klan, and that a noose was hung in the quarters of

They alleged that they were punished harshly for minor infractions

The five filed suit in 1978, seeking $10 million in damages. The case had been thrown out of court by a federal judge, before the 9th Circuit Court reinstated it.

The Supreme Court ruling left open the possibility that the sailors could still sue for damages under a civil rights law that bars conspiracy to violate civil rights. The high court said the 9th Circuit Court should examine that issue.

The five men, who now have left the Navy, are Vernon Wallace, Robert Lemons, Cornelius Hickey, James Richardson, and George Shannon.

Prisoners Escape Israeli Lebanon Detention Camp

By The Associated Press Dozens of prisoners broke out of the Israeli detention camp of Ansar in southern Lebanon and were hunted today by troops, tanks and helicopters firing machine gun volleys into nearby olive and lemon groves, according to Lebanese news reports. An Israeli military spokesman in the Beirut suburb of Yarze denied the reports and said, "Nothing unusual is happening at Ansar. I don't know of any mass escapes.

Lebanese reporters sent dispatches sent back to Beirut from the Ansar area, saving Israeli troops had set up observation posts on the hills overlooking the camp 35 miles south of Beirut after the reported midnight breakout

They quoted villagers as saying the soldiers lit the area with flares and pursued dozens of fleeing prisoners into nearby villages. The state radio also reported a breakout at the camp, but did not say how many people escaped.

There were other unconfirmed reports that guerrillas attacked the prison Sunday night to cover an escape while inmates rioted and set fire to tents to distract the Israeli garrison.

Israel's military command said guards shot and killed an escaping prisoner Sunday at the camp. But it said it knew nothing about a mass

The camp was set up in southern Lebanon to hold thousands of people, most of them Palestinians, who were rounded up during the Israeli invasion of Lebanon last

According to the Lebanese reporters, at least 15 Israeli tanks were patrolling the area east of the camp today, firing machine guns into stands of olive and lemon trees where escapees might be hiding. They quoted villagers as saying they heard heavy gunfire for two hours in and around the prison Sunday night.

The state radio quoted anonymous police sources as reporting smoke, flames, explosions and heavy gunfire in the Ansar area. Another Israeli spokesman said a car rigged with explosives blew up today south of Beirut on the old Sidon road, an Israeli military supply route, and killed no Israeli forces were in the area, about 11/2 miles from the headquarters of the 100-man British peacekeeping contingent.

'The explosives-rigged car blew up, killing the two occupants. There was no other damage or injury." the Israeli spokesman said. British spokesman Maj Michael Southworth said, "We heard a big bang and saw a large cloud of smoke.

In the Lebanese capital, Parliament convened under tight security to vote on a formal ratification of the troop withdrawal pact signed by Lebanon and Israel on May 17. It was expected to endorse the accord overwhelmingly.

HOMES FOR FOREIGN STUDENTS SOUGHT The American Intercultural Student Exchange represented here by Linda Mann, is seeking "adoptive families" for the coming school year for a 17-year-old boy from Laredo, Spain and a 17-year-old boy from Paris, France. # Youth Jobs Program In County

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission, reports that the Greenville office has an active summer youth program. "The youth of Pitt County employed during the summer school vacation session have become a viable factor in the work force," according to Hannan. "In addition, young people may be able to realize a substantial financial benefit."

Recently the staff of the Greenville ESC office distributed more than 1,000 posters throughout the residential areas and business community area soliciting either short or long term employment for young people. Advertising is also being done via radio, TV, and

Last year, Hannan reports, in excess of 1,000 jobs were filled by youth employees and it is expected the figure will be even higher for the summer of 1983. The majority of summer jobs will be in the harvesting of cucumbers and tobacco, a limited seasonal but profitable means of employment for young workers.

ESC is also handling the Targeted Jobs Tax Program for youth employment. Certification for this credit must be done before the first day of employment. The employer may realize a savings of up to one-half of the wages paid for each certified youth employee, up to $3,000 per year per individual. Age group for this program is 18-24.

For the age group 16-17 the employer may realize an 85 percent savings through tax credits, up to $3,000 per individual. Hannan says, "We are expecting a greater interest this year than last in these tax credit programs. The employer and community involvement have been very encouraging. We look forward to working with employers in this targeted jobs area." "Someone needs whatever job is available," Hannan commented, "even if it's only for one hour.'

Building Is Needed

East Carolina University's prospects for funding improved with the proposed expansion budget put forth by the legislative leadership this week.

The expansion budget would provide $8,544,961 in additional funding during the 1983-85 biennium.

Including in the new appropriation package would be $6,918,379 in 1983-84 and $7,504,098 in 1984-85 for completion of the medical school.

Also included is $227,000 in library funds, $478,000 for plant maintenance and $1,153,124 for basic support programs in the biennial budget

Money for this and other expansion spending would have to come from a fund raising package currently being considered by the Legislature.

The regular and expansion budget for ECU, including its medical school, would put its budget at around $74 million annually.

Certainly the proposed new spending is welcomed. The additional new appropriations for the medical school are essential to continue the development of the school and it would be unthinkable at this stage to do anything else

The additional library funds, maintenance funds and programs funds are badly needed for further development of

We would hope there will be more capital improvements funds made available for the university's main campus. For some time now a new classroom building has been a top priority and planning funds have already been allocated.

No one would deny that the classroom building is badly needed if the university is to continue to serve the thousands of students who come to the campus each year. There is no question that a way should be found to finance the building in this biennium.

Revenue Essential

A $242 million additional tax package proposed by a state House Finance Committee last week is likely to be the key to raising the funds needed to finance proposed expanded appropriations for the coming biennium.

The tax changes are selective and involve such items as increased alcohol tax, raising the tax ceiling on new cars, boats and planes, increasing the auto license fee, changes in the merchant's sales tax discount, and taxing trucks by the mile. No general income tax or sales tax hikes are in the Expanded spending has already been proposed to provide for capital improvements for higher education, completion of the ECU medical school and the N.C. State veterinary school and state employee salary increases and other items.

The money, however, is not there to finance those essential things if new revenue is not raised. That is the purpose of the House Finance Committee's recommendations and passage of these revenue items, or something like them, seems to be essential.

In a recent interview, Vance spoke about U.S. strategy in relations with the Soviet Union.

'My view," he said, "is that in dealing with the Soviet Union we must be strong to start off with, to be strong militarily, politically and economically, and we must deal from that base of strength."

And yet. Vance said, "we do not need

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cyrus Vance, a to be bellicose. Indeed, being bellicose and seeking to stick your finger in their eye gets you nowhere.

What I think we should be doing is managing the relationship by the use of both carrots and sticks.

Where it is possible to find common ground that is in our mutual interest, such as in arms control negotiations, this is something I think we should follow

With U.S. and Soviet negotiators back at the bargaining table in Geneva Vance said he did not doubt President Reagan's sincerity in seeking major cutbacks in nuclear weapons but thought Reagan might be attempting too much at once.

Vance speaks through experience. In March 1979, two months into the Carter administration, the president sent him to Moscow to propose deep cuts in U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons.

Vance preferred nailing down the more modest, informal agreement that President Ford reached at Vladivostok in 1974 and which was beset by disputes over the U.S. cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

Arms negotiator Paul Warnke agreed with Vance's approach. But "others in the administration," Vance writes politely, prevailed. He flew to Moscow, was turned down and retreated to a fall-back proposal he had brought with him. That proposal became the basis for the 1979 SALT II agreement that Reagan has called "fatally flawed."

While it is understandable that Reagan would seek a more sweeping arms control measure, Vance said, "I don't think you can achieve that kind of deep cuts. You are going to have to do it in smaller steps. Arms control negotiations in the nuclear field require patience, endurance and perseverance. If you reach too far, you may get nothing."

Apart from his civil style, unusual in memoirs by former high government officials, Vance makes several thoughtful suggestions how the United States might profitably conduct foreign relations.

He says it is important to follow a steady course so allies and adversaries know where the United States stands. Tough talk doesn't impress anyone, he says, and picking a fight with the Soviets usually is unwise and probably dangerous in the nuclear age.

Vance favors a strong defense, arms control and paying more attention to the Third World

The More You Use, The More You Save

RALEIGH - How often have you heard environmental issues cast as debates between clean air or water and a healthy economy? For example, environmentalists say a factory is polluting the air and the factory manager says he'll go out of business from the high cost of pollution control devices.

At a conference in Raleigh, representatives for both environmental groups and industry were told they don't have to be at odds with each other. New developments in industrial management and technology make it entirely possible for us to have both a healthy environment and a healthy economy.

Don Huisingh of N.C. State University told the conference that pollution prevention is far better than pollution control. Better to prevent the pollutants from ever being generated than having to buy expensive equipment to catch pollutants before they're pumped into the Seven years ago, Huisingh said, IBM began a program of pollution prevention. It was IBM's feeling that all pollution represents inefficiency. If unburned fuel was fouling the air, IBM should try to burn the fuel more completely. That way, they'd get better value from their fuel dollars and they wouldn't have to pay so much for pollution control devices.

Throughout its operations, IBM searched for ways to recycle chemicals or water, ways to more completely use fuels. So far, IBM has saved $63 million in the United States and $16.5 million internationally, Huisingh said. The company saved itself the trouble of filtering out 95,000 tons of air pollutants, 2,500 tons of water pollutants, 611 million gallons of wastewater and 3,600 tons of sludge. In addition, the company saved 228,000 gallons of fuel.

IBM is not alone. One eastern North Carolina poultry plant had two by-products that were costing a fortune to duspose of: feathers and bloody guts. John Runkle of the N.C. Conservation Council reported how one state official, during a luncheon meeting, came up with an idea. Why not filter the blood and guts through the feathers. The water that comes out at the bottom of the filter is clean enough to put back in the river. The yucky feathers, believe it or not, can then be sold to cat food companies. The poultry company no longer has to pay for landfilling the mess and they're selling an additional product. And, we have one less environmental problem.

Huisingh and Runkle proposed the formation of a N.C. Center for Pollution Prevention. While they envisioned it as belonging to a government agency, they conceded that it might simply be a private center.

In this center, some of the good ideas which companies like IBM and the poultry farm are able to dream up could be shared. So far, industry has been extremely willing to share this kind of information, Huisingh said. Many industrial conferences include just such money-saving advice. In the end, these businesses would be saving themselves some money, maybe making some, and we'd have less pollution to clean up.

On another front, Tim McAdams of Pacific Environmental Services in Durham reported that there are now two waste exchanges operating in North Carolina. When a manufacturer is finished with a chemical, he often must bury it. But, many times, that chemical could be valuable to another businessman. Waste exchanges specialize in matching producers of hazardous wastes with other businesses which can put the wastes to use, thus eliminating the need to bury the waste in a landfill.

Look Out For The Options

The Department of Agriculture has just reported that it will cost $80,260 to raise a child born this year until it reaches age 18

This seemed like a lot of scratch to Carter Brown, a friend of mine, who is expecting a child very soon. So he went down to the Department to see what he was going to get for his money 'Is it really going to cost me $80,260 to raise a child until it's 18?" he asked the man behind the desk.

'It's a bargain," the man told him. Eighteen months ago we projected it would cost $134,414. But that was when we included an 8 percent inflation rate. Our $80,000 figure is based on no inflation

"What does the $80,000 cost include?"

"Just the bare bone items such as $17,000 for food, $27,000 for housing, $13,000 for transportation, and the rest for miscellaneous items such as medical

"I don't imagine you included orthodontic work in your estimate?" Brown asked. 'You have to be kidding!" the man roared with laughter. "If we included what it will cost for serious dental work no

What other items did you fail to include in your report, so I won't be surprisone would have a baby.

The man looked at his list. "Well, in the early years of the child's upbringing you'll probably be able to stay within the $80,000 figure. But as your offspring goes into its teens, you could get into serious financial overruns.' 'Such as?

"The Department did not include in its report the cost of such teen-age necessities as hi-fi equipment, movie and rock concert tickets, sports equipment, computers, weekend parties, guitar lessons, Christmas, arcade games, and insurance.

"Why not?" Brown asked. "They seem to be as essential as food, housing and transportation.

"Because we have them down as options. Some parents prefer a strippeddown child and others prefer to add everything that's on the market.

"If I pay the basic price of $80,000 to raise a child for the next 18 years, plus all the extras that you've mentioned, is there any guarantee it will turn out all right?

'There is no warranty with the price whatsoever. You pay your money and you take your chances. We don't guarantee any more that when it gets to be 18, it will be able to read and write. Frankly you'll be lucky if it volunteers to cut your lawn or do the dishes once a week. And if you think for 80 grand it's going to clean up its own room, you're living in a dream

"It sure seems like a big investment to get so little in return.

"The Department of Agriculture is recommending you have a baby. Our job is just to report what it will cost you to raise one. The $80,000 is our official figure. The other items I tipped you off on are unofficial, based on my own experience as the father of three teen-agers. I didn't include the price of collect longdistance telephone calls during the first 18 years because I didn't want to scare you.' 'So if I add in all the extras I can easily wind up spending $200,000," Brown said. That's a good ballpark figure unless you or your wife have to seek psychiatric care while raising your child.

'Well, I guess $200,000 is not an unreasonable sum of money to invest until a child reaches 18 years old'

"It's actually a steal," the man from Agriculture said. "When your kid reaches 18, it's going to cost you that much just to send it to college.

Economy Forces China To Retrench

largest country has looked down the road at its reforms moving toward a freer economy, shuddered a little and judiciously moved back toward orthodox Communist control.

That was the unmistakable tone of the Chinese government as the National People's Congress convened here. It was encapsulated for us by Vice Premier Yao Yillin, who will address the Congress on economic reforms: "Under present circumstances, we feel there is too much decentralization in our economy, and now we need a little more centralization."

Such retrenchment is attributed to economic needs, but more likely the real reason is political. Stability and prosperity were the twin goals of Deng Xiaoping as he began his reforms in 1978 after two decades of intermittent chaos; stability has taken precedence. The same insistence on iron control from the top that smothered democratic sprouts also views with alarm the decentralization of market economics.

Thus, although Chinese agriculture has been outstripping industry, profit-hungry farmers taking advantage of incentive payments displease the bureaucrats. 'They think they can do what they want to do," one central planner told us, "not act according to a state plan."

Superficially, China has moved West since our last visit in December 1978. Bright colors, hair permanents and even dresses are commonplace for women. Exhortatory slogans and rhetoric have diminished. Not only are once-ubiquitous portraits of Mao Zedong long gone, but Mao's People's Communes have just been given their death sentence. The new 'responsibility" system is based on cash incentives for better work.

But the Democracy Wall posters that flourished 4-1/2 years ago are a bittersweet memory, buried along with false hopes for democratization. Self-styled demooratic activists who had been in clandestine contact with Western diplomats disappeared over a year ago, part of tightened state political control. In that climate, the freedom of individual decision-making inherent in market economics is alien.

Today's centralization is typified by the new 55 percent income tax, piled atop other taxes, on profits of Chinese enterprises. Yao Yillin explained to us that the tax is needed to provide funds for "infrastructure" (transport and energy). But in addition, there was deep concern in the government over how enterprises

'Some of the profits were not well used," a government economist told us. But would not higher taxation undermine bonuses for industrial workers - bonuses that have worked so well for farmers? He replied, a little grumpily, that not merely bonuses but "socialist awareness" should

Apart from retrenchment, there is reason for doubt how fully reforms are carried out in this country of 1 billion souls. One plant manager confided recently to a Western diplomat that if he really singled out his best worker for bonuses, both manager and worker would find their bicycle tires slashed. In a country where unemployment is undisclosed but high (estimated at 20 percent for youth in prosperous Shanghai). featherbedding vitiates productivity.

On this trip, as on our 1978 visit, the sight of idle workers in factories was familiar. That explains why the Capital Iron and Steel Complex outside Peking (which we visited) shows no gain in productivity. It employs an astounding 72,000 workers (20,000 in mining) to produce 12 million tons of steel annually.

Even the new, well-publicized abolition of People's Communes so far is limited to pilot projects. Nevertheless, the "responsibility" system has triumphed in agriculture where, Yao Yillin told us, The enthusiasm of the peasants has been greatly increased." By cold cash? "Yes." he replied. "they are able to make more money.

But those peasants, quite naturally, prefer to grow non-essential fruits, such as persimmons, whose prices are irrationally high under the government's decreed price system, rather than grow lower-priced grains. The price system is supposed to be changed soon, but why not let the market set all prices? The answer from Liu Suinien, a member of the National Planning Commission, is revealing: "Grain is too important to the economy for its price to be set by market forces.

If over 30 years of communism and turbulence have not dimmed the Chinese peasant's profit motive, neither have they dulled the Chinese bureaucrat's demand for control. When we asked Liu whether the Yugoslav model of workers' selfmanagement might suit China, he said of the Yugoslavs: "They only look at their own interests, not the state's. Workers and management (there) come together against the state's interests."

Strength For Today

Does the world owe everybody a living? The great Maltbie Babcock once wrote: "When, instead of saying, the world owes me a living, men would say, I owe the world a life, then the kingdom of God will come in power."

The world owes every man justice. All men are equal in the sight of God, and under free governments all men stand equal before the lew. But life is a proving ground and we are put here by a beneficent heavenly Father to see what we can make Out of life with what we have.

What the world owes you and men is a chance, and free government is worthy of the name only if it sees to it that there is no infringement of that A living? That we have to

This chance is freely accorded to us by God, and we are justified in taking even strenuous measures to see that this chance is accorded to us also by our fellows.

Taylor, 54, co-chairman of a joint team that worked 14 vears on the reunion plan before it was finally approved by the two denominations, won the top office Saturday on a sweeping first ballot over two Northern

Before the consolidated governing assembly of the new church went into its first full working day, Presbyterians joined with other Christians Sunday night in a service at the World Congress Center.

More than 5,000 people participated with Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Protestant leaders of various denominations alternately officiating in the liturgy, reading Scripture, leading prayers and litanies.

"God, our creator and reillumine our deemer way," they prayed. "Gather together your scattered people, unite us in the bonds of love and service.

QUESTION: A friend of mine and I work on a job where we have several months occasionally work odd hours. For the past several months occasionally my friend has turned me on to some Cocaine, which he claims helps him get through the day. It feels pretty good for a little while. However, after it wears off, it's hard to make it through. I am concerned that my friend has a problem with drugs. As for me, I have declined the last few times to snort Cocaine with him. What advice could I give him? Name withheld by request. him? Name withheld by request.

ANSWER: The first law of chemical abuse is "What goes up, must ome down"—the old chemical rebound principle. When just about any sychoactive drug—whether coffee, alcohol, sedatives or Cocaine—is finished taking you where you want to go, it will leave you behind your starting point. Cocaine, for instance, will speed you up for awhile, but starting point. Cocaine, for instance, will speed you up for awhile, but when it wears off, you'll be slower than before you had the drug. Likewise, the longer you stay up and the higher you get, the harder you come down and the longer you stay there. With many people the first impulse is to use more chemicals to get back up where the chemicals have left you. Of course, that route ultimately leaves you even further down. When it gets to the point that you can't maintain your lifestyle without the use of drugs, it is time to consider that some basic changes may be in order. Change is always more frightening than staying the same, but change is necessary for growth. Our goal is to assist people in same, but change is necessary for growth. Merritt Sprague, who heads the insurance program, said the other five major producing states should be added later. They are Kansas, Missouri, Ken-

Vaccination Is Reminded

WASHINGTON (AP) The Agriculture Department is reminding horse owners that with summer and increased mosquito populations just around the corner they should vaccinate their stock against equine encephalitis Several vaccines are effective against the disease, also known as sleeping sickness, but they last for only a year.

USDA veterinarian Chester Gipson said eastern and western equine encophalitis occur every year in many parts of the country so that immunization is a must in every region.

Even though the Venezuelan strain has not appeared in the United States since 1971, Gipson still recommended that stock along the Mexico border and Gulf Coast be vaccinated against it as well.

Although generally found in horses, Gipson pointed out that the disease can also affect humans.

USDA also says it has changed standards for manufacture and licensing of vaccines to counter so-called Marek's disease in poultry to facilitate development of vaccines from sources other than turkey herpes virus

Officials said the search of alternatives is prompted by the resistence to licensed vaccines shown by some strains of the disease

Information on the new procedures is available from the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service

Hopefuls Wooed Black Officials

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) In one of the 1984 gubernatorial campaign's first candidate forums, four Democratic hopefuls wooed more than 100 black municipal officials Saturday Announced candidates Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox joined unannounced aspirants Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and former state legislator Tom Gilmore in addressing the luncheon meeting of N.C. Black Elected Municipal Officials. Former Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg was scheduled to attend but had travel problems.

The candidates, in various ways, all emphasized jobs, education and their qualifications in remarks limited to about three minutes each.

Before stepping to the podium, the gubernatorial candidates said they recognized the significance of the black vote.

Seek To Bar Farmland Sales To Aliens

Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A move to restrict foreign ownership of the state's farmland is embroiling supporters and opponents in a dispute over who represents the best interests of North Carolina's economy

Sen. Vernon White, D-Pitt, and Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, last week introduced identical bills that beginning next month would bar foreign individuals, governments, and businesses from purchasing North Carolina farmland

The law would not be retroactive, meaning that foreigners currently owning land in the state could keep international development. According to Hinkle, less than 1 percent of North Carolina farmland is owned by aliens. In its report to the Legislature, the study committee said that by Nov. 24, 1982, foreign holdings totaled 270,366 acres. Of that amount, 73 percent was forest or timber land, 18 percent was crop land, and 2 percent was pasture land.

The report lists the top foreign buyers of the state's land as the United Kingdom (38 percent of all alien land holdings in North Carolina). the Netherlands (29 percent), Italy (16 percent), Canada (5 percent), and Switzerland (5 percent).

Foreign investors are said to be attracted by the bountiful amount of fertile farmland in the United States, as well as the nation's political stability and land's long-term increase in value. According to the report, it's difficult to gauge the speed with which foreigners are buying North Carolina land. But it says there's not much chance that aliens will compile "huge tracts of homogeneous land" because of the state's varied topography, soil and climate.

Even so, the committee cited three potential problems stemming from land ownership by foreigners:

People who live thousands of miles away might not understand the land's physical capabilities and thus might misuse it, resulting in long-term or permanent damage from erosion, sedimentation pollution, or failure to maintain drainage.

- Land prices could rise artificially high and local farmers wishing to increase their holdings could be outbidded by foreign investors who often have government

 Local firms might be bypassed in the production and marketing of the agricultural enterprise. If raw products are exported for processing, local employment and prices might be adversely affected. Once they gobble up the land, the people living in the area will be forever affected by them," said White. But Hinkle said landowners should have the right to sell to whomever offers the most money.

"I just can't see taking property rights away from small farmers," said Hinkle, adding that he owns about 90 acres in western North Carolina. "If I wanted to sell I'd take the best price I could get and I'd resent ... it if the state interfered."

He added that some of the problems feared by opponents of foreign ownership could be caused as easily by domestic buyers such as banks or corporations that consolidate large tracts.

"It would just be bad when you have 50,000 people coming into the labor market each year and plants are closing right and left to close the door to people who can provide some jobs," said

W.B. Jenkins, assistant to the president of the N.C. Farm Bureau, said his organization has taken no position on the bill.

Gov. Jim Hunt also has not chosen sides, said Brent Hackney, his deputy press secretary. "But he'd oppose any legislation that would prevent foreign concerns from helping our economy and providing jobs," said could also make it extremely expensive for cities to prosedimentation. The problem is that moutainsides are so steep, it's very difficult for developers to build a road, Gardner said. "It can be done properly, but folks are doing a sloppy job. Improperly built roads allow soil to wash down mountainsides into streams, which run into reservoirs that are in turn filled with silt, he said. "Trout can't tolerate muddy water," Gardner "They can't live in it and they can't spawn in it."

He said sedimentation in reservoirs can force communities to require expensive filtration equipment in order to produce drinking water.

About 80 percent of the erosion and sedimentation problems in North Carolina comes from agriculture runoff while the rest is from construction, Gardner said. Althoughe there's no state law governing agriculture or logging erosion, construction runoff is controlled. But Gardner said some developers are circumventing erosion statutes.

Many mountain developers will go in on logging roads and do some logging, which is exempt from the sedimentation control act.' Gardner said. "Then when they have an area cleared, they'll go ahead with devel-

He said it is often hard to prove a developer's intentions when logging begins in a potential development area.

'Many times developers fail to file an erosion control plan until they are found in violation, and because of this, severe erosion and sediment problems have already occured," said Dr. Joseph A. By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) The national debt, officially pegged at $1.2 trillion, is estimated at $3.5 trillion in a report released today by the staff of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

The same report, however, says that even the official, or statutory debt, is overstated and the possibility of the government going bankrupt is remote.

The $1.2 trillion represents the money the government has borrowed to make up for the difference between its revenues and expenditures. The report, prepared for the committee's use, said more than 30 percent of this is money owed by the Treasury to federal agencies "the equivalent of taking money from one pocket and putting it in another. "In short, we could wipe put over 30 percent of the federal debt overnight simply by canceling bonds al ready owned by government agencies," the reort said. 'This would have no economic effect and might make people feel that the debt is less of a burden than they thought it was." On the other hand, the report said, loans and loan guarantees issued by government agencies, and even larger contingent liabilities, resulting largely from insurance and annunity programs, boost the government's potential liability to more than $7 trillion. "Of course, merely totaling up the government's maximum theoretical liability is a bit like adding apples to oranges," according to the report, written by Bruce Bartlett, executive director of the committee.

In the report, Bartlett said "a better picture of the total national debt" is given in a consolidated financial statement issued annually by the Treasury Department, which makes distinctions between annunities that will have to be paid and insurance that may not have to be. "On this basis, the national debt amounts to $3.5 trillion," Bartlett said. "Of course, the government also has assets in the form of land, buildings, inventories, cash on hand, etcetera. And most importantly, it has both the power to tax and to print money. Moreover, because it is sovereign, it has the power to change the terms of its obligations.

"Thus, the possibility that the U.S. government could, in some meaningful sense. actually go bankrupt is quite remote." trillion, the report

Nevertheless, it added, "It is disturbing that the federal government is accumulating liabilities of such a massive proportion.'

We may be imposing on unborn generations enormous tax burdens, inflation or, at the very least, political dilemmas of great size, as hard choices must be made between the cancellation of implied promises and contracts made years earlier and the threat of taxes or monetary policies which could destroy the economy,' the report concluded.

The Houston flamethrower is also still No. 1 on the career walks chart. And he couldn't be happier.

Ryan, firing fastballs at 99 mph, fanned 11 San Diego batters Sunday - to tie Philadelphia's Steve Carlton with

But what pleased Ryan the most about his five-hitter was that it marked the first time in his career that he pitched a complete game without walking a single batter.

hamstring pull sidelined him for a month. Ryan had missed the early weeks of the season with prostatis. "I was much stronger than I've been any time this year."

he said. "The conditioning work we've done has paid off." Ryan said he "didn't feel as strong" in the later innings, but the radar gun that measured one of his first-inning heaters at Ryan, for his part, has downplayed the leapfrog strikeout battle with Carlton.

"I don't pay attention to that," Ryan said. "I wasn't aware of how many strikeouts I needed. I can't let what Mr. Carlton does, what I read in the papers, affect my approach to San Diego's Steve Garvey, who struck out twice, was asked

Warren Leads Pitt County In Split

KINSTON - Three seemed to be the magic number Saturday might for Pitt County centerfielder Randy Warren. The former Rose High School standout ripped three hits in three at bats and scored three runs — twice.

Pitt County raced away with the opening game of a doubleheader 10-2 but failed in its effort to repeat as Kinston took a 5-4 decision with a run in the first extra inning of the nightcap.

Darrell Edwards struck out 12 and stayed out of trouble most of the night to record the win on the mound. Warren's 6-6 performance including a towering homer in the second game lifted his batting average to 632 on the season, while teammate Doug Coley saw his average slip 20 points despite four hits in eight trips to the plate on the night.

Pitt County jumped on Kinston pitcher Rod Brown for a run in the first innning of the opener. Warren and Carter each walked to open the game, but a double play seemed to take Kinston out of trouble. A long single by Greg Briley scored from solid favorite to keep his Wimbledon title after outplaying John McEnroe 6-3, 6-3 on grass in the final of the Stella Artois tournament at London's Queen's Club.

McEnroe admitted it. "He is playing really well," McEnroe said. "Right now he must be the Wimbledon favorite.

But Connors warned there are many unknown factors at Wimbledon, which begins next week

"If I were a bookie I would rate my chances one in 128 right now," Connors said, referring to the number of players entered in the men's singles

'After the first day I will tell you more. A lot happens on the first day at Wimbledon. You have to get in there. Once the first round is past the gate is open," he said.

'So many things happen at Wimbledon. So many players are out to win or to make a name for themselves by scoring an upset on one particular day.

Connors named Steve Denton, Vitas Gerulaitis and South African Kevin Curren as players who might upset predictions at Wimbledon if their service is on target.

Connors hit top form in Sunday's Stella Artois final and blasted McEnroe off the court in 1 hour 22 minutes. He was never behind in the match.

McEnroe was in trouble more than once. A ball skipped off the net and hit him in the eye at the start of the second set.

Four games later he raced in a vain effort to get under a short return from Connors and aggravated an old shoulder

Connors, 30, raced about the court like a youngster. He hit out at McEnroe's big first services and often connected with winning

His last two winners - forehand-service returns - brought roars from the crowd.

"I can keep up that pace for three games," Connors said, "but I play a bit differently in the five-set matches at Wimbledon.

'The final at Wimbledon last year went to five sets, and I saved my best till the last. I bide my time in five-setters better now than I used to.'

McEnroe had an exchange with photographers at the side of the court after the seventh game. He turned a television camera round on its swivel on his way to his chair, then traded words with a press photographer who had stepped forward to speak to the umpire.

I get fined $1,500 when I say something to these guys," McEnroe said after the match. "Why shouldn't they be fined $1,500 when they say things to me?

In her last tournament before Wimbledon, Billie Jean King retained her Edgbaston Cup women's tennis title at Birmingham, England, with a 6-0, 7-5 victory over Alycia Moulton.

King, who is not playing the $150,000 BMW championships at Eastbourne starting today because she prefers to practice, took just 58 minutes to whip her young opponent from Sacramento, Calif., who was born in 1961, the same year that King made her Wimbledon debut.

Abbott Sparkles In Return

By The Associated Press There was no way Glenn Abbott was ever going to pitch in the major leagues again.

The Seattle Mariners right-hander had undergone major arm surgery, then contracted viral meningi-

"I couldn't even throw the ball last year," Abbott said. "There were a lot of negative thoughts going through my mind. Up until the end of January of this year, I was still suffering from a 20 percent hearing loss and blurry vision from the meningitis.' He was a wreck.

"I didn't think he would ever pitch again," Mariners Manager Rene Lachemann said.

Then, on Sunday, in his first appearance since Oct. 3, 1981, Abbott limited Kansas City to four hits, going the distance to beat the Royals 8-1.

"For him to go nine innings ... his first time back is miraculous," Mariners pitching coach Frank Abbott was the beneficiary of 16 hits, including three apiece by Al Cowens and Jamie Allen, who homered, and the 32-year-old pitcher retired the final 10 Kansas City batters in a row.

There were four extra-inning games in the American League Sunday. Boston edged Baltimore 7-6, Milwaukee downed New York 6-5 in 12 innings, Toronto defeated California 6-5 in 15 innings and Texas tripped Minnesota 4-3 in 11 innings. Detroit swept a doubleheader from Cleveland, 4-1 and 3-1, and Chicago swept a doubleheader from Oakland. winning the opener 12-10 in 11 innings and taking the nightcap 8-1

Abbott, the only remaining member of the original 1977 Mariners, underwent an operation to remove bone chips from his pitching elbow after the '81 season. He was sent to the Mariners' Triple A team at Salt Lake City on rehabilitation option this season and contracted meningitis.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 6

Dwight Evans homered twice, and Tony Armas and Jim Rice each homered. But the Red Sox didn't snap their seven-game losing streak, longest since 1981, until the ninth inning with the help of a bunt single and a bases-loaded walk. The Orioles had won six in a row

Jerry Remy started Boston's winning rally with his bunt single. Evans then doubled and Rice was walked intentionally, loading the bases for Wade Boggs. Boggs walked on four pitched from Tippy Martinez.

John Shelby hit a three-run homer for Baltimore.

Brewers 6, Yankees 5

Cecil Cooper doubled and scored on a two-out single by Jim Gantner to give the Brewers a 12-inning victory over New York. Cooper doubled off Rudy May with one out in the 12th. Walks to Don Money and Charlie Moore, sandwiched around the second out, loaded the bases for Gantner, who hit a 3-2 pitch to end the 4-hour 9-minute marathon.

Milwaukee tied the score 5-5 with two runs in the sixth on a wild pitch by Dave Righetti and a sacrifice fly by Ned Yost.

Don Baylor homered in the fourth for New York.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 5

Willie Upshaw's run-scoring triple in the 15th snapped a 3-3 tie and started a three-run rally that enabled Toronto to hang on for a victory over California. After Upshaw tripled, Lloyd Moseby was walked intentionally with one out. Ernie Whitt, who homered earlier, then singled to score Upshaw, and Moseby scored on a two-out single by Barry Bonnell.

California fell one run short with a two-run rally in the bottom of the inning. Bob Boone drove in one of the runs with a double, and Doug DeCinces singled in another.

Rangers 4, Twins 3

George Wright rapped a solo homer with one out in the 11th inning to boost Texas over Minnesota. The Twins sent the game into extra innings with runs in the eighth and ninth innings, and the two teams matched runs in the 10th inning.

Buddy Bell drove in a run to make it 3-2 in the otp of the 10th, but Dave Engle's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the inning tied it up again.

Rangers left-hander Rick Honeycutt did not give up a run until two were out in the eighth inning.

Tigers 4-3, Indians 1-1
Milt Wilcox pitched a five-hitter to win the opener, and Jack Morris won a duel with Len Barker although he yielded two more hits - to win the

Lou Whitaker drove in two runs with a triple and a single for Detroit in the opener, anbd Chet Lemon homered for the Tigers in the nightcap. Barker allowed only three hits, striking out eight and walking three in the second game, but Morris got the better of the duel with a five-hitter.

White Sox 12-8, A's 10-1 The White Sox won the opener in 11 innings. Vance Law's sacrifice fly broke a 10-10 tie, and Greg Walker followed with a solo homer. Law's sacrifice fly scored Tony Bernazard, who started the 11th with Chicago went ahead 10-7 in the top of the 10th on a wild pitch by rookie Mike Warren and a two-run triple by Ron Kittle, but Dwayne Murphy and Wayne Gross hit consecutive homers in the bottom of the inning to make up the difference. Murphy's was a two-run shot.

In the second game, Jeery Koosman tossed a five-hitter and allowed only an unearned run. The White Sox broke the game open by scoring six runs in the third inning as Walker and Law contributed

Ali Exhibition

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) - Muhammad Ali had some words of advice for winger Dave Semenko of the Edmonton Oilers after their three-round exhibition boxing match Sunday night.

'He's involved too much in one sport," said the former three-time world heavyweight champion when asked if Semenko could ever be a boxer.

"I think he could if he tried but I don't think it would be wise," said Ali in a slow, halting voice.

Ali clowned during most of the fight and let Semenko stalk him. It wasn't until the final minute of the third round that the former world champion showed his old form, throwing a flurry of punches.

NEW YORK (AP) - So what's that funny man Rich Little doing on a serious TV special about genetics?

"When I hear it," the master impressionist explains, "I can picture a voice." And he proceeds to mimic the world's most recognizable rasp - Humphrey Bogart's.

It's a stunt to show that despite the way it sounds, no two human voices are exactly the same. "The pitch and tone comparisons," cur narrator declares, "show an obvious counterfeit ... our ear deceived by a delightfully entertaining fake."

'The Body Human' is back, on CBS this evening, with an hour-long program callled "The Living Code. The subject is heredity, and the genetic "messages" that produce, with each human never created before and quite impossible to duplicate the one and only you.

The production, like others in the irregular, Emmywinning series, is first-class - dramatic, often exciting, sometimes disheartening, never condescending or exploitative.

'The Living Code' is the 14th program in the series that began March 16, 1977, with a show called "The Miracle Months." CBS has at least two more planned.

Using a character like Rich Little to illustrate a point has become a trademark of "The Body Human," which has proven itself, over the years, extraordinarily adept at explaining the complex machinery of life to the average viewer.

Thomas W. Moore, the executive producer, is a two-time Emmy-winner with "The Body Human," one after the 1977-78 season and the second for a show called 'The Magic Senses. broadcast Sept. 6, 1979.

Moore shared another Emmy as co-producer of "Lifeline," a documentarystyle, prime-time series on NBC that fo a0194 tjs their rounds, with much of the action in the 09:58 operating room. Public television will revive the 13-part. 1978 series starting in July.

"The Living Code" examines genetics in a half-dozen distinct segments - some of them playful, like the one involving Little or another in which a woman's murderer is caught in a genetic web of blood, tissue, hair and saliva. Other short sequences illustrate the way genes are responsible for shared features, as well as variety. A "living portrait" involving 500 members of the same, extended family reveal extraordinary similarities in smile and hairline, though eye color and other features may differ wildly.

Cable Marketer Says Industry Must Improve

By NORMAN BLACK Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The cable television industry "has built a better mousetrap" but must now learn how to spring it on the marketplace, the president of the National Cable Television Association says.

"Everyone in this room knows in his or her gut that the cable industry has built the better mousetrap, but somehow the path that is supposed to be beaten to our doors has become so crowded lately that the consumer can't always find us. Thomas E. Wheeler said as he formally welcomed cable executives to the association's 32nd annual convention that began today.

"Even though we've finally reached the market and though Congress may be on the brink of providing us with richly deserved regulatory relief, not for one minute can we expect the consumer to beat a path to our door. Wheeler said. "We everyone of us in this in dustry - have to collectively build that path. Wheeler's reference to Congress stemmed from the scheduled start of debate today on a cable deregulation bill by the U.S. Senate. His emphasis on finding new ways to convince consumers that they really want cable service embraces the main theme of this convention.

"Remember the line from the motion picture 'Cool Hand Luke?'' Wheeler asked. "What we have here is a failure to communicate. Well, what we have here is an enormous opportunity.'

The NCTA president noted that the cable industry nationwide still manages to sign up only about half of the homes that it passes, a figure he blamed more on the industry's inability to market itself than on competition from pay TV, microwave TV and satellite operators.

Yet even with only 50 percent penetration, he said, it is cable that can claim responsibility for the well-

reported declines in viewing audiences for ABC, CBS and NBC have been heard to declare this hard plunge as something of a mystery." Wheeler said. There is no mystery as to where the viewers are going. We don't need your Magnum PI. 'Quincy,' your 'Hart to Hart, or your men and women of 'Hill Street Blues' to solve this mystery. It will take more than Mr. T. and The A-Team' to derail this movement to cable

If the industry really wants to flourish, however, it must find a way to show consumers that cable has some thing different to offer, he said

'Potential subscribers believe cable programming is just more of the same. Wheeler said, citing recent research.

What is needed is a national advertising and public relations campaign and the NCTA now is overseeing the creation of a Consortium for Cable Information to take on that job, Wheeler said.

This is an effort that will benefit all segments of our industry," he said. "What we have to do is to clear the debris that has been crowding and cluttering that path that leads the consumer to our door

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1-Neither vulnerable, as auction. This time North's South you hold: ♥ AK862 ♦ Q875 ♠65

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 1 1 NT Pass ? What action do you take?

A. - Even though you do not have the values for game, it is still incumbent upon you to probe for the best contract. Bid two diamonds. If you don't locate a fit there, you might elicit a heart preference from partner.

Q.2-As South, vulnerable, you hold:

◆ AKQ872 ♥6 ♥ K1093 ◆52 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 1 4 Pass 1 NT Pass What do you bid now?

A.-You want to force to game. A jump to three spades would be invitational, and four spades might not be the best spot. But a bid of two diamonds would not be forcing, because partner made a limited rebid. The only practical solution is to jump to three diamonds.

Q.3-As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass 1 + Pass 2 4 Pass ?

A.-Same hand, different

◆AKQ872 ♥6 ♦ K1093 ◆52

What do you bid now?

rebid is unlimited, so a simple change of suit by you is forcing. Bid two diamonds. You don't want to jump and rob yourself of bidding room you might need it later.

Q.4-Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♦7 ♥AJ9762 ♦854 ♦942 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 NT Pass 2 Pass

Pass

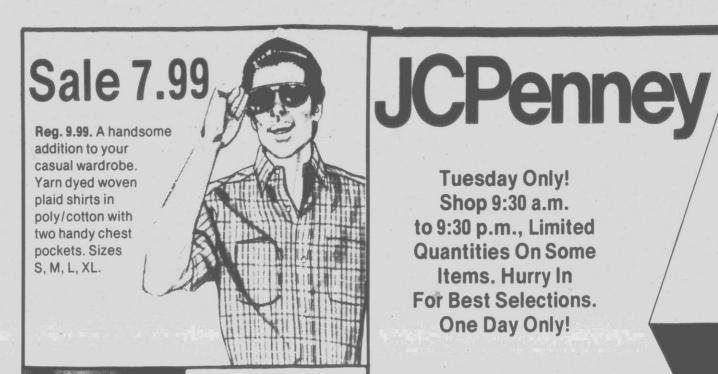

What action do you take? A. - North is showing a max imum no trump with good heart support. So you can count six tricks with only 5 of North's points. The other 13 should give you reasonable play for game. Bid four hearts - at this vulnera bility, the reward for making game is particularly attractive.

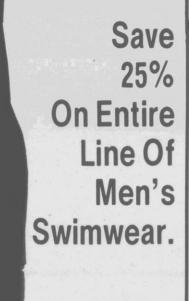

Q.5-As South, vulnerable, you hold:

◆Q87652 ♥J10 ♦AKQ6 ◆7 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 Pass 1 Pass 3 Pass

What do you bid now? A. - Don't make the lazy bid of four spades. You are in slam territory and you need to advise partner of that Cue bid four diamonds. Perhaps partner only needs to know that he doesn't have two fast losers there to become interested in slam.

First Slav Pope

Final preparations are underway for Karol Wojtyla's second visit to his homeland since becoming Pope John Paul II. Poland's government, unlike many other communist governments, tolerates the Roman Catholic Church to which 90 percent of its citizens belong. But to prevent unrest during his previous visit, authorities banned consumption of alcohol and limited the distance Poles could travel to see the Pope. That did not stop millions from celebrating the return of their spiritual leader. An outspoken foe of Marxist ideology, the Pope said, "There can be no just Europe without the independence of Poland marked on its map." One of the Pope's former students concluded, "He is still Karol Wojtyla at heart - the man who will go into battle for us.

Philosophical Differences Over N.C. Tax Package

By MARY ANNE RHYNE Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) The state House and Senate are likely to run into philosophical differences about how to raise money to balance the proposed 1983-85

budget, but the public probably won't see the problems aired in open session. The House voted 93-13

Friday to tentatively The 52-page plan was approve a $242-million tax package that would make compiled after House leaders received four Senate pro posals for raising about $204 million. The House package will get a second vote Monday night before the Senate gets another chance to determine how to raise additional revenues.

"We're working closely together," said House Finance Committee Chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus. "We're not that far apart."

But House members who asked not to be named warn the package may bring out the traditional, philosophical differences between the House and the more conservative Senate. They say the Senate traditionally has been more concerned about protecting businesses which they contend need the money to continue providing jobs.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, summed up the House approach of spreading the tax burden over a very

"We feel this revenue package is broadly based, fairly drawn and will not unduly impact on any one business, area or section of the economy," Miller told the House on Friday. He was head of a subcommittee that compiled the package in closed-door meetings over the past few weeks.

Senate members acknowledge they do not favor some of the business-related taxes as well as the tax increases on things they say affect the average citizen. Some potential sticking points in the bill are:

 A weight-distance tax of 2 cents per mile on trucks weighing 70,000 pounds or more.

- A requirement that more businesses give the state their employees' tax withholdings monthly instead of quarterly.

- An increase in auto license fees from $16 to $20. - An increase the cost of auto title transfers from $4 to $10.

- Removal of the federal government's accelerated cost-recovery exemption for businesses. - Remove part of the merchant's sales tax discount. - Réquire all insurance

None of the leaders want to openly support increasing old taxes or enacting new taxes. House Democrats had the package explained to them in a caucus early Friday at which they were asked to voice their criticisms before the floor vote. The Senate is expected to adjust the tax package, which could put the matter before a conference committee that will meet behind closed doors.

"No one wants to be the nail sticking up that gets hammered down," commented one senator who asked not to be named, saying it was easier to avoid that in closed-door meetings.

See Payoff In Energy Gamble

Starting next month, 19 North Carolina cities including High Point and Lexington will begin collecting on an investment they made eight years ago. "We're very pleased - and anxious to get into business,' said Mayor George Clay of Shelby, chairman of the board of the N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 1, the legal entity representing the cities' interest in the power plant. "Never for one minute have I had any second thoughts about whether we did the right thing," he said.

Currently the cities buy electric power from Duke Power Co. at wholesale rates and then sell it to their citizens. On July 1, their power will come from a nuclear generating plant they set out to buy from Duke in 1975.

The public works project, with $2.3 billion to be spent over more than 30 years, has been one of the largest in state history.

Three Die In

N.C. Traffic By The Associated Press Traffic accidents claimed three lives in North Carolina during the weekend, including a 16-year-old youth thrown from his car after it ran off a road, the state Highway Patrol reported. Mark Allen Hamm of Creston died at about 3:15 p.m. Sunday in Ashe County on N.C. 1317, 13 miles north of Jefferson, when his car entered a curve at high speed, ran over an embankment and struck a ditch Also Sunday, Donald Anderson, 31, of Queen's Village, N.Y., was killed when he drove his car off U.S. 13 north of Greenville in Pitt County at 6:50 a.m., and the car overturned. wholesale charges.

In addition to High Point and Lexington, the member cities are Albemarle, Bostick, Cherryville, Cornelius, Drexel, Gastonia, Granite Falls, Huntersville, Landis, Lincolnton, Maiden, Morganton, Monroe, Newton, Pineville, Shelby and Statesville.

The agency has bought 75 percent ownership of a 1,145-megawatt nuclear reactor, powerful enough to genpower High Point uses at peak demand times.

The reactor is one of two units in Duke's Catawba Nuclear Station in York County, S.C. Construction began in 1975, but regulatory delays mean it won't begin operation until 1987, said agency spokesman Linda Burgiss.

But Duke has agreed to operate Catawba and its new McGuire Nuclear Station northwest of Charlotte interchangeably beginning July 1, so that the agency will receive power from McGuire when Catawba isn't running.

Construction costs for the cities' share of the $1.3 billion reactor will be about $1 billion. But interest, administrative costs and operating expenses mean the power agency will issue $2.3 billion in bonds, to be repaid from electric sales to the cities. The agency already has issued $1.375 billion.
