Grand Jury Claims Bribery Involved Green Accused Of 'Conspiracy'

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green is accused of conspiring to receive bribes of $10,000 a month from an undercover FBI agent, according to grand jury proceedings filed today in Wake County Superior Court.

Wake County District Attorney C. Colon Willoughby filed two presentments in court this morning, accusing Green of conspiring with Howard Watts of Clarkton to receive bribes of $10,000 a month from undercover FBI agent Robert J. Drdak and others, and accusing Green of receiving a $2,000 bribe from Drdak for "performing and omitting to perform official acts as lieutenant governor of the state of North Carolina, and with the intent and understanding that ... Green ... was to be influenced thereby."

According to the presentment naming Green, the alleged conspiracy under which he would receive $10,000 monthly bribes occurred "on or about December 21, 1981, as well before and after said date and continuing ... until on or about April 29, 1982."

It says Green and Watts "did unlawfully, willfully, corruptly and feloniously and with common design and set purpose ... confederate, scheme, agree and conspire together and with each other and diverse other persons and in a secret manner to unite for the common object and purpose of felonious and corruptly consenting to receive and receiving bribes by ... James C. Green."

The presentment emphasizes that the alleged conspiracy took place while Green was "the duly elected, duly sworn, qualified and acting lieutenant governor of the state of North Carolina."

Watts is accused of engineering the $10,000 conspiracy with Green.

The presentments, handed down Monday by the grand jury, means there is enough evidence to file charges against Green and ask the district attorney to investigate and possibly seek an indictment.

Green, in a Monday night news conference and a speech to the state Senate, said he is being "falsely accused" and blasted government investigators for failing to interview him or call him before the grand jury.

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," Green, a potential candidate for governor in 1984, said of the charges. "I have always tried to do what is right in fulfilling my public trust."

Green said he and his family have been "living under a cloud for too long."

"It's time to clear the air," he said. "I don't look forward to going through what lies ahead, but I do look forward to getting everything out in the open at long last."

Later the state Senate voted unanimously to allow Green, its presiding officer, to read the same statement he made to the press. He received a standing ovation.

The grand jury returned the presentments after hearing four hours of testimony from a federal and a state agent who took part in the FBI's Color investigation of allegations of corruption in eastern North Carolina.

The investigation, which began in August 1980, has resulted in the indictment or conviction of a district court judge, a state representative,

Capital Reserve Fund Is Weighed Against Taxes

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, continuing their review of a proposed budget for the coming fiscal year Monday, suggested that proposals to set aside $808,000 in a capital reserve fund be cut in order to maintain the present 54 cents per $100 valuation tax rate.

County Manager Reginald Gray, in his budget message to the board last week, proposed an increase of two cents in the tax rate for 1983-1984 in order to help fund the proposed budget and establish the reserve.

Gray recommended the capital reserve to set aside money for replacement of landfill equipment, a new tax and land records mapping system, a new bookmobile, the purchase of land and other projects, which he said would "prevent a tremendous burden on the county budget in one fiscal year."

As proposed by the county manager, the capital reserve fund would set aside $338,000 for landfill equipment, $150,000 for the tax mapping program, $300,000 for the purchase of land, and $20,000 toward a new bookmobile in the coming year.

Among the list of General Fund departments and agencies reviewed by the board Friday and Monday, including amounts recommended by Gray, and their requests for the coming year (in parentheses) if very different from Gray's proposals, were: administration, $684,445 ($538,461 this year); elections, $62,474 ($69,900); finance office $192,165; tax

More Women, Blacks, Hispanics In Government, Says White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Administration today answered a report of criticism from the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights by insisting it has "aggressively" sought minorities for government jobs. At the same time, the commission unleashed new criticism on civil rights laws in education.

The commission, including three lame duck members whom President Reagan is removing from the panel, charged today that the administration's policies "unless properly reversed, could reduce federal civil rights enforcement in education."

That plea came as Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration had "aggressively pursued the recruitment of women, hispanics and blacks for key policy positions."

His comments were in response to a published report that the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights was critical of the administration for failing to hire minorities for high-level jobs. That report appeared in the New York Times.

"We have placed more women in top policy positions than any previous president," Speakes responded, adding that within the Reagan administration there were 200 blacks in "top executive posts," and 130 Hispanics in "high-level jobs."

He said that the commission's report had not been received at the White House.

At a meeting Monday, the commission's six members voted to send the president a letter voicing concern about decreasing representation of minorities and women in important policymaking

Five Die In Hotel's Fire

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A fire shooting flames 20 feet high swept through a hotel before dawn today, forcing guests to jump from second story windows, killing five people and injuring 30 others, officials said.

District Fire Chief Jim Noah said the fire apparently began in rolls of carpeting about 3:20 a.m., forcing about 150 guests to flee the Ramada Inn Central on the city's east side.

"We had a bunch of people trapped, and they had to jump from the second floor," Noah said. "We had one woman taken to a hospital with a broken ankle. I think from a life hazard point, this is the worst fire I've seen."

Guests pushed through thick smoke and broken windows to jump to safety, some tossing mattresses to the ground to land on. Others climbed down fire department ladders.

An alarm system in the hotel's main building did not go off because its batteries were corroded, said Fire Marshal Don Peacock. He said there was no alarm system in the wing where the fire broke out, adding that there was no requirement for smoke alarms when the hotel was built.

Peacock said investigators believed the fire started "in some rolled carpeting which was ready to be laid."

"Two occupants tried to put it out with an extinguisher," he said. "Carpet puts off tremendous, black, acrid smoke."

Ayden Board Is Assured Of School Access Talk

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Rep. Ed Warren and Rep. Walter Jones Jr. will meet with Department of Transportation Secretary John Robinson and Governor Jim Hunt later this week to request approval for access to the new Ayden Middle School from highway 11, according to Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger.

Persinger said at Monday's monthly meeting of the Town Board of Commissioners that he presented Warren with the information on access to the school Monday and was told the legislators would "meet sometime this week" with the state officials.

Traffic entry to highway 11 is controlled near the new school site by the state and permission for new access must be given by state officials.

Access to the school was originally planned from Edgewood and Stokes streets but residents of the area objected strongly to increased traffic through their neighborhood.

In April the town board passed a resolution requesting that the Pitt County Board of Education consider access routes other than Edgewood and Stokes streets.

No action has been taken by the Board of Education on access to the new school and Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Eddie West said board members were "divided" regarding entry routes.

"An analysis of the board's discussion," said Dr. West, "showed a difference of opinion existed (among members) regarding accessibility on the new Ayden Middle School."

A letter to Dr. West from Cato De Vane Jr., northeast area school transportation coordinator, recommended access to the school through Edgewood and Stokes streets. Dr. West presented the letter to the board at a recent meeting.

Access from N.C. 11, said De Vane's letter, would require "an additional median crossover along with turning lanes for northbound and southbound school bus traffic" and that "the likelihood of this approach would depend upon N.C. Department of Transportation studies and recommendations."

Entry to the school from state road 1113 across private property was also considered but both De Vane and school officials said it would be "very costly."

In other action:

•Retiring Town of Ayden employees Hubert Avery and Henry Bond were honored by the commissioners.

•A bid of $11,438 for a new tractor from Herring International was approved.

•The town was authorized to join the Local Government Credit Union and Town Clerk Ralph Ford was appointed as credit union coordinator.

•Guy Braxton was recommended for a three-year term on the Planning Board, pending approval by the Pitt County Commissioners.

STARBURST PURSE...is made in Bargello using 10-mesh plastic canvas and multiple strands of miracle thin yarn.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Give yourself a stitchery lesson with the instructions for making this Pat Trexler Original Starburst Purse. It's done in a form of Bargello variously known as kaleidoscope, four-way, four corners and mirror images. It is one of the most fascinating types of needlework, but surprisingly easy to learn.

The purse is done on colored 10-mesh plastic canvas with multiple strands of Miracle Thin Yarn. Persian, tapestry or knitting yarns can also be used. With the colored canvas, extra depth is added to the design by leaving some canvas areas unworked. If you use clear canvas, you may wish to fill in these areas with additional stitches.

To obtain directions for making the Starburst Purse, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-061283 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-061283 by sending a check or money order for $12 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains the instructions, needle, colored canvas and three blending shades of yarn. Shipping charges are included. Please specify your choice of lilac/purple tones, brown/coral tones or blue tones.

People who think of needlepoint only as tiny diagonal stitches worked as a background around a preworked center design may tend to think of Bargello stitchery as a "new" type of needlepoint.

Actually, it is a very ancient needle art, steeped in history and called by various names. You may have heard it referred to as flame stitch, Florentine embroidery or canvas work. Hungarian point or some other title. I usually use the term Bargello because more people tend to recognize that term for the long, straight stitches that characterize this type of canvas work or needlepoint.

There are various legends about the origins of Bargello stitchery. It is said that it was originated in the 15th or 16th century by prisoners in the dark and dank Bargello Prison in Florence, Italy, which is now a great museum.

Another story concerns a Hungarian princess, who is said to have brought a trousseau of exotically embroidered garments with her to Italy when she married the son of a noble Florentine family.

Whether these myths have any foundation in fact or not, you can create beautiful designs with Bargello or Florentine work. The stitches can be worked vertically or horizontally, which distinguishes this type of stitchery from other needlepoint stitches that are usually worked diagonally.

The Bargello patterns follow a definite geometric pattern. In almost all types of design, the first row requires careful counting but all following rows are worked just below or above the starting row and are worked in the same manner, eliminating further counting.

While Bargello can be worked with vividly contrasting colors, it is traditionally done in softly blending shades, with a new shade introduced on each successive row.

Also each stitch is usually worked over four or more canvas threads, making for quick work. Although the stitches themselves are perfectly straight, you can achieve illusions of curves, peaks and a variety of other shapes with the different patterns available.

These descriptions may convince you that this is an advanced needlepoint technique. Nothing could be further from the truth. When I have occasionally given seminars on needlepoint, I have found that the beginners find Bargello the easiest needlepoint stitch family to learn.

In fact, the starburst design featured with today's column grew out of a class project for beginning needlepointers at a seminar I conducted in Molokai, Hawaii, last February. I will be conducting a similar seminar next February and anyone interested in attending may write to me for further information on it.

Regional Forum Is Set By Gov. Hunt

Gov. Jim Hunt invites area citizens to share their views on economic issues affecting women during a regional public forum June 21 here.

The forum, sponsored by the N.C. Assembly on Women and the Economy, will meet from 7-9 p.m. at Pitt Community College in the Humber Building. It is one of seven forums being held that night in locations throughout the state.

"Women, working both at home and in the marketplace, are vital to North Carolina's economy," said Gov. Hunt. "I believe that when you discriminate against women in the economy, you discriminate against families. And we are trying to change that in North Carolina."

The forums are planned to gather information from individuals and groups in preparation for the governor's Conference on Women and the Economy scheduled Oct. 31 through Nov. 2 at the Raleigh Civic Center. The conference will result in a series of recommendations geared toward improving the economic standing of women in North Carolina.

Jane Smith Patterson of Raleigh will serve as moderator at the Greenville forum. Discussion leaders will be Betty Speir of Bethel, education; JoAnne Shell of New Bern; employment; Audrey Kates of Cary, financial security; and Frances Walker of Moyock, business development and economic leadership.

Consumer Requests Continue

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Consumer requests for do-it-yourself information have doubled in the past five years on a Benton Harbor appliance manufacturer's toll-free consumer information line.

The Whirlpool Corp. Cool-Line Service was among the earliest 800 number service programs for consumers. Consultants say the volume of self-help requests is the most significant change in consumer requests since the program was established in 1967.

"One-third of the 220,000 calls we receive annually are from people who seek information on how to repair or service an appliance themselves," says division vice president Bob Stanley.

Stanley says the surge is primarily due to economics, with people trying to eliminate service calls and charges.

Introduce Kids To Nutrition

NEW YORK (UPI) — Few young children understand basic nutritional concepts and instead rank foods as either sweet or non-sweet, says Isobel Contento, an associate professor of nutrition and education.

The Columbia University professor says less emphasis should be placed on teaching the basic four food groups concept. Instead, she says, children should be taught to make choices within the groups they understand. For example, teach them "to eat oatmeal cookies, which have some fiber, instead of doughnuts fried in fat."

The basic four groups were introduced in the 1950s as a simple way of ensuring that people get the 50 essential nutrients in their daily diet. Meat, fish and beans make up the high protein group. The others are dairy, grains and cereals, and fruits and vegetables.

Prof. Contento collaborated with John Michela, an assistant professor of psychology and health education, in making three related studies of 5-to-11-year-olds, in which 115 children were asked to rank 71 foods in groups, using any criteria they wished. The groups they cited were sweets, meal entrees, drinks and breakfast foods.

The professors' findings were presented at the second annual Nutrition Education Forum, sponsored by Columbia Teachers College's Department of Nutrition Education and the Center for Health Promotion.

Dear Abby

Start Counting Your Blessings

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am over 35 and am expecting my first baby, a boy. The baby's sex was revealed by my obstetrician following an amniocentesis test to determine whether the baby had any chromosomal abnormalities — of which Down's syndrome is the most prevalent.

Thank God, the baby is normal, but had the results shown otherwise, we would have had a choice between abortion or raising an abnormal child. My husband and I decided not to mention the test or the sex of the child to anyone because my mother is very religious and would probably feel that we should take whatever God gives us, and I'm sure she would disapprove of my taking that test.

I can't help feeling that we are cheating by not revealing the sex of the child.

Friends are giving me baby showers, and I know that I'll have a boy, but unless I disclose that fact, someone is sure to bring a pink dress with ruffles!

What do you advise?

UNDISCLOSED

DEAR UNDISCLOSED: It is your right to keep "undisclosed" the fact that you had amniocentesis. Stop worrying about the possibility of receiving inappropriate shower gifts and start counting your blessings.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my brother, his wife and their three children, ages 6, 5 and 3. They live 1,000 miles away, and have announced that they are coming to visit us this summer. (We are looking forward to it about as much as we would welcome a tornado.)

Their children have never been disciplined and are used to doing just as they please, with no respect for authority or property. They run wild, climb furniture, get into everything, leave the table during mealtime and chase each other all over the house. The parents make no attempt to set limits, and we do not enjoy getting tough with other people's children.

Abby, we have two children (ages 7 and 10) who are never a problem. We also have a nice home that we have worked hard to furnish nicely, and I'm afraid these kids will do real damage.

I hate to be rude, but we are trying to find a way to avoid having these people. Do we: Leave town? Weather it out? Meet them elsewhere?

Please advise us. And remember, we will hold you responsible for any broken lamps.

NO NAMES IN THE NORTHWEST

DEAR NO NAMES: I vote for the third choice. If it's not possible to meet them halfway, why not be brutally frank? It won't help family relations, but the parents of children who "run wild" and have no regard for authority or property should not be surprised to learn that they are not welcome until their kids either grow up or shape up.

...

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Knows Nobody," the third-grade student who asked if you knew any famous people, you replied, "Tell me who you think is famous enough, and I'll see what I can do for you."

Abby, at the risk of being pedantic, I wish to apprise you that your grammar is incorrect.

You should have said, "Tell me whom" (objective case), "you" (understood) being the subject, and in the nominative.

A CORRECTION FROM TEXAS

DEAR CORRECTION: My grammar expert informs me that I was correct to use "who" in this instance, because the object of the verb "think" is a clause ("who is famous enough"), the subject of which is "who."

...

Problems? Everybody has them. What are yours? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Japanese Look Lends New Look To The Fashion Scene

By MARIE OKABE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Japan's avant garde designers are shocking and delighting the fashion capitals of the world.

From Tokyo to Paris to New York, the latest rave in the fashion world is the new Japanese look emphasizing comfort and fabric over the more tight-fitting and conservative silhouettes of European and American designers.

Retailers and customers describe the clothes as "modern" and "forceful," "philosophical," "refreshing" and "intellectual." Critics dismiss the style as "funereal" — the beggar or flea market look.

The most controversial of the new designers is Rei Kawakubo, creator of the Commes des Garçons line, whose popularity abroad has surged since she first showed her collection in Paris last October.

Others like Issey Miyake, the first of the new wave of Japanese designers, and Yohji Yamamoto, also emphasize dark shades and masculine shapes and have captured the fancy of European and American high fashion markets.

Ms. Kawakubo's somber, heavily layered and baggy skirts, blouses and coats — often dotted with holes — are appearing in international fashion magazines and the windows of New York's trendiest stores.

This spring when she showed her fall collection in Paris, American buyer Charles Galloway of Beverly Hills said, "There's a customer for that, and these are definitely clothes for the young."

The "beggar look," associated with the new designers, originally came from the streets of London where it appeared about a year ago, according to a New York fashion correspondent from Tokyo.

As they have done with Western technology, the Japanese designers quickly adapted the ideas and improved upon them.

"Women want something new," says Commes des Garçons spokeswoman Marian Greenburg.

International sales for Commes des Garçons alone have more than tripled to $27 million in the past two years, and American sales have soared 10 fold during the same period, Ms. Greenburg said.

In Paris — a city already sprinkled with boutiques of such established Japanese designers as Kenzo, Hanae Mori and Issey — a Commes des Garçons shop that opened last fall ships its merchandise to stores across Europe in Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Denmark and Norway.

"The Japanese look provides an alternative to American and European fashions," said Nina Santisi, publicity director for New York's elegant specialty store, Henri Bendel.

The success of the Commes des Garçons boutique in Paris led to the unveiling of its first American store at Bendel's Feb. 28.

Boutique manager Ginny Zeitler says her less daring customers are sometimes afraid to try on some of the "difficult" outfits — often seen in high fashion journals on slim models wearing a smudge of blue or black lipstick.

According to Zeitler, many of her customers are jet set shoppers and those in the fashion business, not "corporate people."

The shoppers who frequent her exclusive store do not seem to mind that a hand-dyed black and white baggy cotton dress costs as much as $515.

"We love the Japanese clothes," said one of two Brazilian women shoppers in the boutique. "They're intellectual clothing, like drama."

They were returning to Rio de Janeiro after a shopping spree in London where they bought Issey and Commes des Garçons clothes.

Other New York stores carrying the new Japanese labels, such as Saks Fifth Avenue, Bloomingdale's, Barney's and Charivari, also are experiencing a boom in sales.

At Charivari, a chain of four specialty stores in New York that has been showing Japanese fashions for about eight years, Issey and Yamamoto are the top sellers, according to one of its owners, Barbara Weiser.

Ms. Weiser, who is also a buyer for Charivari, said she already has bought two and a half time the volume of Japanese clothing she purchased last fall. "We buy as much in Japan as in Europe," she said.

Although the current U.S. recession has affected the basic clothing industry, the high fashion business has not been hurt, Ms. Weiser said.

The Japanese clothes are of interest to those who "want something new, not just another another pair of flannel pants," she said.

Some critics say the Japanese fashion designers will soon run out of ideas and that the mainstream of experienced shoppers will never go for the highly trendy clothes.

But for the moment, the new Japanese fashions appreciated for their comfort, beauty of fabrics and superb workmanship, appear to be revolutionizing the high fashion world.

FTC Gives Tips On Promotional

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Local consumer protection agencies and the Federal Trade Commission are receiving growing numbers of complaints about promotions that promise luxury items but deliver cheap gifts instead, says a consumer education specialist.

Janet Wilson, of the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension service, says the bait is what promoters call switchers — diamonds the size of ants, coupons for a cheap motel and no plane and food tickets for the "deluxe vacation."

"Next time you get a computerized, 'personal' letter in the mail that says, 'It's your lucky day,' beware," she says, and take these tips from the FTC:

—Don't be deceived by letters that appear official or urgent.

—Read such letters carefully, especially the fine print that may tell you the cash value of each prize or the requirement that you attend a sales seminar.

—Think carefully before attending a sales meeting for the sole purpose of winning an expensive prize. The odds against winning are great.

—Never sign a contract or give a deposit right away. Ask your state or local consumer protection office about the seller's reputation.

—Be wary of "limited time" offers and attempts to make you buy "on the spot." Not all states have cancellation period laws.

—Read any contract carefully before signing. It's the contract that counts, not the claims made by a salesperson that are not in the contract.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If wedding dresses could talk, mine would have nothing to say.

It has had one of the most uneventful lives you can possibly imagine. It worked for five hours, got photographed 325 times, and for the last 33 years has been living in exile in a box on the top shelf of every closet in every house we've ever lived.

Let's face it, the future of a white dress with a train that was altered to fit a 21-inch waist and a fingertip veil of illusion tulle is limited.

I knew its limitations when I bought it. It cost me four weeks' salary, but I justified it by saying, "My daughters will be married in it."

Well, a funny thing happened on the way to the next generation.

Relationships replaced marriage.

It was more fun to be married in a free fall from a plane or skiing down a mountain.

Symbolic white for purity was just too much imagination for guests to handle.

Some people made so many trips down the aisle, drip-dry wedding dresses became a fashion staple.

The economy spoke. It said, "Be practical."

Now the consensus on wedding attire runs from Melissa Manchester, who wore her wedding dress to the Academy Awards, to Princess Di, who wore a gown with a train bigger than our first apartment.

I got down my wedding dress the other day from the shelf. My daughter couldn't and wouldn't wear that dress. If Ken were to propose to Barbie tomorrow in that cardboard car, she couldn't get in to it either.

It looked limp and plain. There wasn't much style to it. I remembered it as being whiter.

And yet.

Those tapered sleeves had never known cellulite. The small waist had never strained under pressure. The veil had to conceal nothing but bright eyes filled with expectation.

The long train flowed gracefully down the aisle with no practical thoughts of dust or cleaning bills.

It was a dress of impracticality and impossible dreams that every day of your life would be as it was at that moment.

Even if I wore it, it would never be the same.

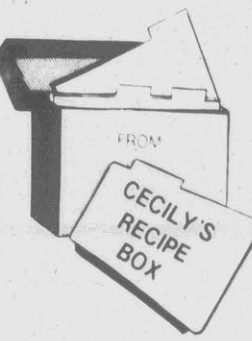

Was it worth the four weeks' salary just to sit on the shelf and turn yellow?

Oh, yes.

Has Possibilities

The establishment of a church related television station on Channel 14 at Greenville has interesting possibilities.

Tommy Payne, chairman of the board of directors for the station, said it will be non-profit and affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention. It will have adequate power to cover most of Eastern North Carolina and will offer news, music, human interest, Bible study, sports and informational programs.

In addition to local programming the station will receive programs from the American Christian Television Service, a division of the radio and television commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The $3.5 million to construct the facility will be raised through contributions from individuals and churches.

Other officials said the station will have no on-the-air solicitations and will be under local control.

Such a station can serve a real purpose in providing wholesome family programming and in giving a better picture of what Christianity is about as it is practiced in the nation's churches.

There are millions of Americans whose only contact with Christianity is that which they see on current television evangelistic shows. This planned station and other future church related stations have a great opportunity to show Christianity as the religion of love, hope and faith. That is evangelism at its best.

Risk In Minor Agents

Gov. Jim Hunt is treading on dangerous ground in spurring the use of minors as undercover agents for the state's alcohol law enforcement agency.

The use of an undercover agent always exposes that agent to danger and, in the case of a minor, that could be doubly so due to the lack of experience and maturity to handle difficult situations.

What happens if one of these "volunteer" underage agents—and we really question whether a minor can volunteer to do something of this sort—is shot by a nervous storekeeper? Or run over as he or she leaves a store? Or is caught in a holdup in a store and is injured, or killed?

We have no reluctance at all in supporting the state's drive to stop the sale of beer or wine to underage customers. But it can be done by using agents of legal age.

Presumably the idea behind this drive is to see if the stores are checking the age of a youthful customer, not to entice the clerk to make the sale. If the customer's age isn't checked, then follow it up—again using agents of legal age.

We have not yet reached the point that minors need to be used as a substitute for a law enforcement agent.

SCRABBLE, Va. Almost every day, or so it seems to me, I come down with the quails. I worry about me. This morning as I was shaving, I looked in the mirror and the face of George McGovern looked back at me; and this was odd, because George was in Washington 80 miles away. Last week I looked in the mirror, and the face of Teddy Kennedy looked back; and this was disturbing, because his jowls are lots bigger than my jowls.

It is the bird feeders, Doctors. The bird feeders. Outside the kitchen is a tremendous chestnut oak. We have hung two bird feeders from the lower limbs. One of them is the little house kind of feeder. It is called Charlie's Bar & Grill because it is owned by a chipping sparrow, name of Charlie. The other is one of those tubular things, like a elevator in a Hyatt hotel. It is called Antoine's, after a French-speaking titmouse who dines there. Does all this seem peculiar to you, Doctor? It sometimes seems very peculiar to me.

Every morning before breakfast I go to Charlie's and Antoine's, and I fill the feeders from an old tin pitcher. It is unbelievable how much these birds will eat, and the stuff isn't cheap. We buy our birdfeed from the Rappahannock Farmers Cooperative at $10.50, plus tax, for the 50-pound bag, and my caseload will go through a bag a month.

It's not the expense that bothers me, and that is what bothers me—that it is not the expense that bothers me. I know

WASHINGTON—The lesson of Maggie Thatcher's second-term sweep reads well to Ronald Reagan's White House insiders, even though Mrs. Thatcher has got glittering assets not likely to drop into Reagan's lap before Election Day, Nov. 6, 1984.

The fundamental lesson for Reaganites would have seemed Micawber a mere few years ago: that the most severe economic hardships since the Great Depression do not mean defeat at the polls for an incumbent conservative party. Under Thatcher, unemployment is far higher than here under Reagan—nearly 13 percent in Britain and just over 10 percent here.

Why high unemployment has lost its electoral sting will be debated, but one clear answer emerges quickly with a relevance in the U.S. no less than in the U.K. Both middle-class voters and many in the lower economic brackets have discarded belief in the liberal doctrine that government can spend its way out of recession without massive inflation and ever-spiraling government interference in the economy.

The decline of this hard-held liberal doctrine has driven Thatcher's bold, raw, free-enterprise capitalistic convictions no less than it has driven Reaganomics, including supply-side tax cuts. As did Thatcher during her first tour as prime minister, so also has Reagan brought inflation far down from the peak he inherited. Curbing inflation may have a more beneficent impact on voters than curing unemployment.

A second lesson in Thatcher's victory that applies to Reagan's probable reelection attempt next year is simply put: the flag. That wraps up many concepts, including defense against foreign adversaries (read the Soviet Union), public expressions of patriotism, pride in country. Such old-fashioned notions, while not out of style, were cloaked and cloistered before Mrs. Thatcher brought them out of the Labour Party's closet with a trumpet roat. Instead of revulsion, voters danced with pleasure.

But that leads White House operatives to sober reflection on one of the two electoral assets Mrs. Thatcher had that Reagan does not. The Falkland Islands war raised the flag in the hearts of British voters and recalled the great days of empire. There is nothing on the political scene here that can come close to evoking similar reactions.

Republican operatives wish they could disengage the Falkland effect from other political factors working in Mrs. Thatcher's behalf and they are scrutinizing polls in hopes of doing so.

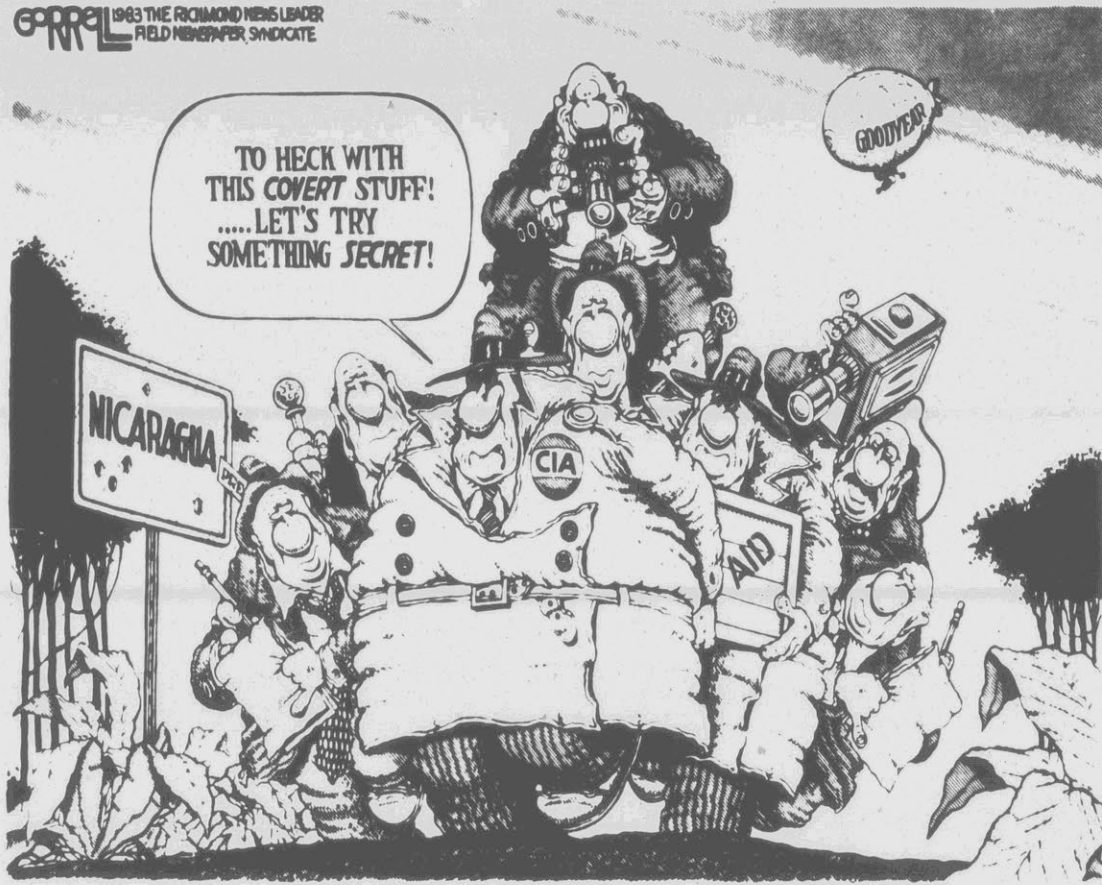

The second Thatcher asset, however, is even less susceptible to White House political analysis: the effect of Labour's suicidal plunge to the far left over the past five years. Former vice president Walter F. Mondale may be considered a far-left-winger by some Reaganites, but in fact, as leader of the liberal Democrats, he is in the mainstream of the welfare state. Britain's Labour Party, to the contrary, has renounced all nuclear weapons, ceded immense bureaucratic powers to left-wing activists and in many other ways betrayed its heritage.

Political analysts of both parties here are also well aware of misleading indicators in the Thatcher win. Although virtually complete voting tabulations show that the Conservatives will have almost twice the number of House of Commons seats as the nearest competitor—Labour—the Tories polled a smaller total popular vote (43 percent) than they did when Mrs. Thatcher first became prime minister in 1979. Together, Labour and the Liberal-Social Democratic alliance exceeded the Conservative vote by 10 percentage points.

Considering the economic travail that has beset Mrs. Thatcher's constituents for the last four years, however, the results of Thursday's vote are remarkable: affirmation of classical free-enterprise policies, the largest Commons plurality in 40 years and a share of the total vote only slightly less than 1979. To President Reagan's political handlers, that is a pleasant harbinger for November 1984.

That Closet-Liberal Of Virginia

that is a tangled sentence, Doctor, but I am not myself these days. The other morning when I was talking to George in the mirror, I said, "George, I have an open-ended entitlement program going in the back yard, and I don't care what it costs." I did not know such words could fall from my lips.

I said, "George, every morning we are feeding a high-nutrition breakfast to 34 doves, 28 sparrows, 19 cowbirds and a 12-year-old blue jay. We are feeding a hot school lunch to chickadees, nuthatches, cardinals and a whole titmouse family. The lot of them are on Aid to Families with Dependent Children. I am running a welfare state under this oak tree, and I have qualms. Almost every day I have qualms."

Kennedy got into the act. He materialized in the mirror, grinning a malevolent grin, and asked if I had told the president about what I was up to. "Senator," I said, because I am not close enough to Mr. Kennedy to call him Teddy, even though he was right there in the bathroom, "Senator," I said, "I have not told Mr. Reagan and I hope he never finds out, because he would be keenly hurt by this, what with the deficits and all, and you know what I have written about entitlement programs."

"I know," said the senator. The thing is, Doctor, that most of these freeloaders, especially the ones that hang around Charlie's, are perfectly able to work. The cardinals' income is way above the poverty level. Why do I keep feeding them? Why do I make them dependent upon me? Is it because it gives me pleasure to do good? I tell you, I am not myself these days.

The other birds work. A pair of swallows are nesting in the garage in a grapevine wreath that my wife made for Christmas. The swallows work. They don't go to a day care center. The phoebes are nesting over the door to the studio. They're not on relief. The mockingbirds and robins tend to their own business.

McGovern's visage appeared again. What about the bluebirds, he asked? I almost nicked myself with the razor. "Well, George," I admitted, "the bluebirds are living in Section 8 subsidized housing down by the fence row, and the wrens are paying only 25 percent of their recalculated net income for their quarters by the tool shed ... " Then George was gone, leaving only a snicker behind.

What must I do, Doctor? I try to suppress my feelings of guilt. They won't go away. I feel the contempt of the swallows. One of them thinks he is Manfred von Richthofen, the Red Baron, flying a Messerschmitt. I cannot face the robins. Am I—am I—I cannot face the thought—am I a closet liberal? The thought is too much to bear today, but I will think about it tomorrow, about the time I pour another pitcher of feed into Charlie's Bar & Grill.

Probation Officers Already Overloaded

RALEIGH—If the General Assembly hopes to reduce the state's prison population through greater use of probation, it had better begin looking at the workloads of probation officers. The average officer has 103 probationers to keep an eye on, a caseload twice the level recommended by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

The Governor's Crime Commission has recommended that judges and legislators begin looking for ways to reduce the average caseload down to about 85 per probation officer. The commission is recommending that defendants on probation be able to earn their way onto unsupervised probation either by paying restitution to their victims or, for some low-risk probationers, through a year's good behavior.

"They're just overworked," Gordon Smith, executive director of the commission, said about probation officers. In his report on the problem, Smith said their current large caseloads "make it very difficult for probation officers to work with their most difficult cases effectively."

The caseload for probation officers has jumped around a great bit over the last two decades. Statistics compiled by the commission staff show that caseloads averaged only 75 probationers in 1963 and 1965. In 1973, the caseload was about 78. But, in 1968, it went to about 115 and, since a level of 95 in 1978, it has risen steadily during the past five years.

On the final day of 1982, North Carolina had 50,598 people on probation or parole. The average annual cost to the state for each of those people is estimated at $400. The average cost of maintaining a person in prison is $9,000.

The crime commission has two suggestions.

First, judges now have the authority to order a defendant to serve either supervised or unsupervised probation. Many times, Smith said, a judge will order a defendant onto supervised probation, knowing he is much more likely to make restitution to his victim than if he is on unsupervised probation. The commission would like judges to consider, for low-risk defendants, a special order saying he comes off supervised probation once he pays the restitution.

It's felt that this will reduce the probation officer's load, encourage restitution and still maintain a legal hook on the defendant. Even though he won't be required to show up for probation meetings, he'll live under the threat that if he breaks the law, or the terms of his probation, he'll go right to jail.

Second, probationers considered to be low-risk should be allowed to earn their way off supervised probation.

The Department of Correction has established a classification system for all probationers. If those considered low-risk under this system can live in their communities for 12 months without getting into trouble, they should be moved to unsupervised, the commission said.

The commission says the assembly's other option is to hire more probation officers. But, in proposing the other two suggestions, they think the state can get down to the 85 client caseload without any extra appropriations.

North Carolina has one of the highest per capita prison populations in the world. Our probation caseload ratio is one of the highest in the country. Virginia, for example, has a caseload of 53, Nevada 50, Idaho 47 and Louisiana 59.

Just as the argument is made that we're imprisoning people who don't need to be behind bars, the argument is now being made that we are putting people on probation who don't need it.

Old Symbols Of Material Success Fade

guaranteed excess and inflation.

But now the Reagan administration is urging people to save more, and legislators are beginning to pontificate on the need for a consumption tax, and some of the old symbols of material success have lost their meaning.

What happened? A dozen explanations are offered, the most popular seeming to be that the urge to consume grew larger than the economy's capacity to produce, resulting in inflation.

Another possibility is that Americans felt the game wasn't worth playing anymore. The Smith family next door, they observed, lived on a much smaller paycheck than the Jones family, and yet had everything and probably more.

That is, they watched their dollars, saved their money and spent wisely.

Robert Aliber, a professor who ordinarily deals with the vast abstractions of international finance, became intrigued enough about these spending and savings habits that he wrote a popular book "Your Life And Your Money."

Saving, suggests the University of Chicago professor, can actually give you more material assets than spending can.

Many people, he states, can cut their expenditures $1,000 a year without lowering their living standards, simply by observing four principles:

—Buying packaged goods, such as toothpaste, liquor, coffee and similar items, in large economy sizes.

—Purchasing services such as long distance telephone calls, car rentals and airline travel during times of off-peak pricing.

—"Buying the steak without the sizzle." That is, buying substance rather than appearance. He suggests that some local, $5 vodka is as good as Russian vodka at twice the price.

Whether any particular family can save $1,000 is debatable, since it might depend on how much vodka they consume, but it seems likely they can save something and live better through such a saving-spending program.

Aliber contends that "any time an investor can satisfy a consumption need or an objective by spending $5 less, it's like having an additional $100 worth of investment assets."

Several Measures Win Tentative Senate Approval

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill allowing pound animals be sold for research, consolidating migrant labor camp inspections and opening most health records to the public won tentative approval Monday in the state Senate.

The lengthy bill, approved 45-1, updates health laws on a wide variety of subjects. A final vote on the bill was scheduled for today.

Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, who led a Senate Human Resources subcommittee that studied the bill for several months, said the panel managed to satisfy most of the groups with complaints about particular portions.

"They had people of all views meet with them, and I don't know of anyone who objects strongly," said Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, chairman of the Senate Human Resources Committee.

One of the proposals that drew the most controversy would permit animal shelters to sell animals directly to research facilities.

That portion of the bill is a compromise between the bill as originally written and language suggested by those who oppose the use of animals for research. The original bill would have allowed the sale of pound animals to dealers, who transport animals to facilities for research.

But critics of the bill charged that the dealers often abuse or neglect the animals and said many abuses could be eliminated by selling the animals only to research facilities themselves.

In an effort to simplify the law, the bill consolidates inspection of migrant farmworkers' camps under one agency.

It also mandates that public health records be open to the public except for records on adoptions and other sensitive matters. But it limits who may obtain certified copies of the documents such as birth, death and marriage certificates.

The compromise provision was drafted by the N.C. Press Association, the N.C. Association of Broadcasters and state Health Director Ron Levine.

Media representatives had urged that most records of births, marriages and divorces remain open. But Levine said care should be taken against enabling them to be used to establish false identities.

Other parts of the bill delete sexist language from the state's public health laws, consolidate penalties for violating the law in one section, delegate authority to local health departments for inspection of septic tanks, regulate administration of inspection programs for milk production and require that all cats in the state be vaccinated for rabies.

In other legislative action:

Housing

A bill transferring power to enforce anti-discrimination housing laws from the federal government to the state became law by winning House approval, 96-2.

The bill makes federal fair housing laws part of state law too. Those laws prohibit discrimination in renting or selling housing on the basis of factors like race, sex, color, national origin or religion.

Condos

The House also voted 94-12 to tentatively approve a bill regulating the conversion of apartments to condominiums to protect the elderly and disabled.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, said there is such a low vacancy rate for rental housing in most North Carolina cities that the elderly and handicapped need some guarantees they will have a place to live.

She said the bill would require 90 days before a resident is evicted during the conversion process and require the resident be given 30 days to decide whether he or she wishes to buy the apartment.

Sheriffs

A bill establishing a Sheriffs' Education and Training Standards Commission won tentative House approval, 95-19, over objections that the commission would be costly and unnecessary.

The commission would have authority to set minimum standards for qualifications and training as a deputy sheriff.

Currently, the Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission sets such standards for police officers and sheriffs' deputies. Police chiefs have argued that their standards should be suitable for sheriffs' deputies too.

Bills

A House bill was introduced to authorize a study of the needs for developing the biotechnology industry in North Carolina, one of Gov. Jim Hunt's pet projects.

Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, introduced a bill seeking $200,000 for training teachers in North Carolina history, the American economic system and legal topics so students will be introduced to government, business, political and judicial operations.

Religious Camps

The Senate passed a bill exempting religious camps from state wage and hour laws after amending it to stipulate that it applies only to organizations that apply for exemptions under federal law.

Some lawmakers had expressed concern that the law could be exploited by organizations that are religious in name only.

Separation of Powers

The Senate Judiciary I Committee approved a comprehensive bill redefining the differences between the legislative and executive branches of government.

The slightly amended version of a House bill is in response to a state Supreme Court ruling that the two branches' jurisdictions had overlapped.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, committee chairman, said he would move Wednesday that the Senate suspend the rules to form a "committee of the whole," meaning that staff attorneys will be able to explain the bill and comment during floor debate.

Educator Defends Reaction By Reagan To Public School Report

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — "A rising tide of mediocrity" was an appropriate phrase used in a report on education and was a "sober fact," the past president of the American Educational Research Association said Monday.

Ellis B. Page, in a phone interview from Chapel Hill, said he was "horrified" by the National Commission on Excellence in Education's report on lax homework requirements in public schools throughout the nation.

Page, professor of educational psychology and research at Duke University, said research had shown that the average high school senior does less than three hours' worth of homework per week.

"That figure is the most telling about our situation," he said. "We've got a very lazy educational system ... and the teachers' unions are ignoring that fact."

"If they (teachers) assign homework, they have to check homework. If the students go home with no homework, so can the teachers. I know this happens because when I taught high school English I became aware of the vast differences between what different teachers assign."

Toughening homework requirements, he said, is the cheapest and most feasible way to improve education quality. He said the commission's recommendation of longer school days and shorter vacations "deserves a look."

Page said he thought President Reagan reacted properly to the report, which he said he didn't consider too strongly worded.

But on Monday a Media General News Service story quoted several of the 18 members of the commission as saying they disagreed with their report's "rising tide of mediocrity" phrase.

Anne Campbell, former Nebraska commissioner of education and a commission member, said in the story that the phrase was put in the report's opening paragraph to get people's attention.

Page attended the April 26 ceremony in Washington, D.C., during which the commission presented its report to Education Secretary Terrell Bell.

The 33-page report, painting a grim picture of U.S. education, said students did little homework, were given good grades they didn't deserve, and were not proficient in basic skills such as math and English.

Reagan has endorsed the report's findings, saying that state and local governments should provide whatever extra money is needed. But critics say more federal aid is essential.

Walter Mondale, expected to run against Reagan in 1984, has proposed that the federal government spend an additional $11 billion on education.

Street light outages should be reported to the Utilities Commission at 752-7166.

Page, chairman of the National Planning Committee on Educational Statistics for five years, said the federal government's proper role in education is funding the type of research done by the commission.

Such studies, he said, can guide state and local officials as they seek to improve their school systems.

"I think the president was right to say (to state and local officials). 'We'll tell you what the situation is and will try to help out in ways appropriate, but we'll not run your systems for you,'" said Page.

"I don't see that more federal money would do any good. Schools should be governed and funded locally, as they traditionally have. We've poured federal money into education ... and haven't had very happy results."

Page also endorsed Reagan's support of merit pay, which the commission recommended to attract higher quality teachers. The idea is strongly opposed by teachers' unions.

Sees A New Wave In Industry Growth

MAXTON, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is leaving the days when communities rejoiced at announcements of a new industry with jobs for thousands, says Alvah Ward, director of industrial development for the Department of Commerce.

"The day of the huge, heavy industry requiring lots of labor is gone and never coming back," Ward said. "Today's new industries moving into North Carolina are lighter and smaller and relying heavily on computerized processes."

Campbell Soup Co.'s new $100 million plant, dedicated a few weeks ago by Gov. Jim Hunt, has only 425 employees. But state officials say the plant reflects a trend of a new wave of industrial development in North Carolina.

"All industries are going to be high-tech if they're going to stay in business," said Ward. "I'd say Campbell's Maxton plant is a clear indication of the direction we're heading."

"The day of the ditchdigger type of labor is gone," said plant manager Don Lanning. "There will be fewer jobs like the sorter jobs that require repetitive hand-to-eye coordination."

The Campbell plant, company officials say, requires about 20 percent to 30 percent fewer employees to achieve the same production levels of an older, conventional plant.

Only 60 of the plant's employees are salaried and 65 are skilled operators or experts to maintain the microprocessor machines that control all the work. "The rest of the people are semiskilled," he said.

As part of a state program intended to attract industry to North Carolina, two community colleges in the Maxton area offered special courses to help prepare Campbell's newly hired employees for their high-tech jobs. All but 25 employees were hired locally.

Dogs Tattooed By Veterinarian

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
TARBORO, N.C. (AP) —

Dr. Ross Shaffer's office goes to the dogs each Wednesday, but in his office when the patient takes a number it means the wait is over.

Shaffer, a veterinarian and avid sportsman, was concerned over the area's number of expensive hunting dogs being stolen. He decided to tattoo the dogs with the owner's drivers license number to help identify the animals.

"Horses are tattooed for the race track for I.D.," he said. "It's not unusual to tattoo an animal. What spurred it on was concern in the county about dogs being stolen."

"A man recently lost a $5,000 dog and was able to track it down near the Virginia line because of the number," Shaffer said in a telephone interview from his Tarboro office. "When the article appeared about the man who found the $5,000 coon dog due to the tattoo, people got interested. Sometimes it's hard for a dog to keep tags or a collar, but this stays with him."

The owner of a lost dog that is found can be traced through the license number by contacting law enforcement officials.

New Class Set To Begin

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and Margy Maira will be sponsoring a new session of pregnancy exercise beginning Monday, June 20. Class meets Mondays and Thursdays from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m. at Jaycee Park Auditorium. Five weeks duration with ten lessons. Fee $15.

The class is open to any expectant mother. Interested persons are to pre-register by calling 752-4137, extension 200. Those attending are to wear comfortable clothing and bring a pillow to class.

Shaffer sometimes tattoos a dog's ear but usually puts it on a back leg because, "sometimes people who steal dogs cut off the ears," he said.

He provides the service free and usually tattoos about four or five dogs in a day. His tattooing schedule is filled through July.

"I've got a vibrating machine that's relatively painless for the dog," said Shaffer, a 36-year-old Baltimore native who graduated from the University of Georgia Veterinary School. "The vibrating needle goes up and down much like they do with human tattoos."

Thus far, Shaffer says he's had no requests to have the artistic drawings associated with human-type tattoos put on a dog, but often people do ask for tattoo ideas.

"It's a public service to the people," he added. "As a professional in a community as small as Tarboro, it makes me feel better and it makes the people feel better."

Winterville Bd. Defers Approval

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board tabled a request Monday to approve the fire department officers slated for the coming year. The officers are Carlton Branch, chief; Phil Worthington and Seth Cayton, assistant chiefs and Gordon Prescott, secretary-treasurer.

In other business, seven bids were taken for rehabilitation of houses. Four were turned down because they were too high and three bids were accepted.

A public hearing was held concerning a proposal to curb gutters on Jones Street and Worthington Street. Jones Street was approved.

Permission was given to Betty Wade of First Baptist Church to have a parade for the children in Bible School on July 23.

No one appeared for the Jay-cee-ettes request for ads in their cookbook. The request was tabled.

The commissioners approved the release of $1,385.47 in taxes from 1972 until 1982.

The board approved overspending line items in the budget, but not department totals.

The members approved a bid opening for sewer repairs on East Cooper Street. The work will consist of a new manhole, replacement of a sewer pipe and 50 tons of stone bedding.

The commissioners approved Farley, Prescott, Mizzele & Co. to audit books for the year ending June 30, 1983.

The board approved Elwood Nobles, town clerk, as credit union coordinator for a local government credit union, which will begin July 1 for town employees.

The board did not approve the proposed Winterwood Apartment Complex to be built on the Norman Worthington property next to Roberson Heights. The board felt the location was not in the best interest of the town.

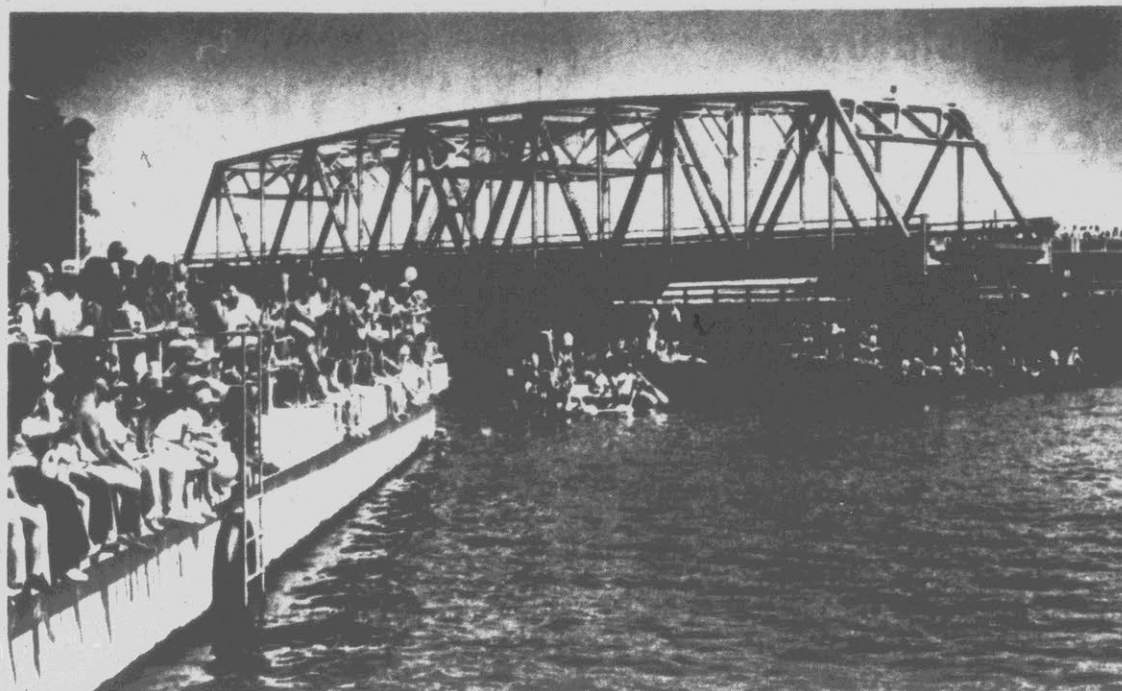

According to Nobles, the old depot building is being torn down and wood is available for anyone who is willing to haul it away.

A budget meeting and public hearing is scheduled for June 17 and adoption of the budget will be June 30 at 8 p.m.

Ceremonies for the opening of the new recreation department ball field will be held at the field at 6:45 tonight.

Damage Suit Filed Over Dioxin Contamination And Suffering

By TOM ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) —

Claiming they suffered painful, disfiguring diseases from exposure to dioxin, former workers at a chemical plant and residents near the abandoned site have sued for damages.

The 11 plaintiffs are seeking "substantial" damages from the present and previous owners of the former Diamond Alkali Co. plant, said attorney Richard E. Kummer.

"We're confident we will be able to prove and link the injuries to dioxin at the site," John N. Bain, another attorney for the plaintiffs, said after the suit was filed Monday in state court.

The suit alleges that previous and current residents, workers and nearby businesses suffered physical, emotional and financial injury because dioxin was released into the air and the ground at the plant and dumped in the Passaic River nearby.

Plaintiffs charge that the site's former and present owners failed to take special care in handling the toxic chemical. They also claim they were not given warning of the "ultrahazardous and unreasonably dangerous nature of dioxin."

Meanwhile, the federal Environmental Protection Agency was to begin a two-week extensive sampling of an area within 2,500 feet of the plant today, said James Marshall, an agency spokesman.

Dioxin was produced at the plant from 1958 to 1978 as an unwanted byproduct of the manufacture of herbicides, including the jungle defoliant Agent Orange, according to the suit.

The suit, which asks for a jury trial, was filed in Trenton and is to be assigned to Essex County Superior Court in Newark.

Named in the suit are the Diamond Shamrock Corp. of Dallas, which was formed by a 1967 merger of Diamond Alkali and an oil company; Chemicaland Corp. of Calhoun, Ga.; Walter R. Ray Holding Co. Inc. of Manhasset, N.Y., and Marisol Inc. of Middlesex.

Officials at Diamond Shamrock and Marisol said they would not comment because they had not seen the suit. There were no telephone listings for Chemicaland and Walter R. Ray Holding Co.

The plaintiffs include two former and four current residents of the Ironbound section of Newark near the plant, two former plant employees, one current worker at a nearby factory, the Newark Farmers Market Inc. and a meat market at the food distribution center.

Gov. Thomas H. Kean announced June 2 that levels of dioxin up to 1,200 parts per billion had been found at the plant. The government considers levels above one part per billion hazardous to humans.

Tests by EPA officials indicated that dioxin had spread to the surrounding neighborhood but in lower concentrations, with the chemical found at 1.1 parts per billion at a home owned by one of the plaintiffs, a level of more than 5 parts per billion at a curbside and 1.2 parts per billion at SCA Services Corp., adjacent to the abandoned plant.

The Diamond firm, which manufactured herbicides at the plant starting in 1955, sold its portion of the property in 1971 to Chemicaland.

Chemicaland, which also produced herbicides, sold its part of the property in 1979. The holding company, which had owned portions of the property since 1968, sold all of the plot in 1981 to Marisol.

Hosing Policy Will Remain At Prison

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is the only state that doesn't ban the use of a high-pressure fire hose against an inmate causing a disturbance, but state prison officials say they don't plan to change that policy.

Federal court jury foreman John Britt said the jury, which found that a Central Prison inmate was subjected to "cruel and unusual punishment" by being hosed, meant the verdict to spark reform in prison disciplinary policies.

"On behalf of the jury, as the bottom line on the use of the fire hose, we found that there needs to be a policy change (to prohibit) the use of the hose on a prisoner in a single cell," Britt said. "We found the hose was used more as a punishment than as a means of controlling the prisoner."

Former Central inmate Charles J. Slakan filed the civil rights suit in U.S. District Court to show that Department of Correction policies allowed for excessive use of force against inmates by guards.

In 1979 Slakan won a $32,500 judgment against three top prison administrators — former secretary of correction Amos E. Reed, former director of prisons Ralph D. Edwards and former Central Prison warden Sam Garrison — and two prison guards.

The defendants claimed the guards used only the amount of force necessary to subdue Slakan, who they said was inciting other inmates. Central, the state's only maximum-security prison, housed 1,400 inmates at the time.

James C. Woodard, current state secretary of correction, said the case will be appealed.

The high-pressure fire hose has not been used in the past several years.

Computer "Roots"

Computers are changing every part of our world. Yet just 32 years ago today the world's first commercial computer — UNIVAC — was unveiled. UNIVAC and successive generations of computers are the brain children of Charles Babbage, a 19th century English mathematician. Babbage spent his life trying to build an all-purpose computer with input and output mechanisms and a "memory" that could hold up to a thousand numbers. The programmable machine was to be steam-powered because no one yet understood electronics. To raise money for his invention, Babbage considered building a computer that could play "tic-tac-toe". It would have been the first "computer game" in an age before electricity!

DO YOU KNOW — Who invented the first mechanical adding machine?

Saudis Lead Campaign For Arab Unity

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia is leading a campaign to restore a degree of unity to a deeply divided Arab world.

The effort has shown few tangible results so far, but Saudi King Fahd apparently hopes it eventually will set the stage for an Arab summit and a unified policy on the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Two summit calls have been issued so far and Saudi Arabia appears to be trying to find common ground between the moderates and the radicals so a dialogue can take place.

There are pressing issues: — Syrian-Israeli tensions and the chances of new warfare remain high in Lebanon with no sign of an early withdrawal and no unity among Arab states on the U.S.-mediated agreement between Lebanon and Israel signed May 17.

— The threatened disintegration of the Palestine Liberation Organization headed by Yasser Arafat, which could result in a new wave of Palestinian radicalism and a threat to the stability of moderate Arab regimes. Libya and Syria are reportedly backing the rebels.

— The war between Iran and Iraq, which continues to divide the Arabs after nearly three years. Syria, Libya and South Yemen support Iran while Jordan, Saudi Arabia and other moderates are financing the Iraqis.

President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon last month called for a summit to discuss terms for a Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon, but the meeting seems unlikely. Arafat called for a pan-Arab meeting over the weekend, apparently to get an endorsement of his policies at a time when he is facing a rebellion in his guerrilla ranks.

Saudi Arabia has tried to smooth over feuds that are raging between Syria and its neighbors, Jordan and Iraq. Fahd also has tried with little success to end the war of words between Libya's leader Col. Moammar Khadafi and Arafat, who blamed Syria and Libya for backing a guerrilla mutiny.

In his first inter-Arab political initiative since becoming king last June 13, Fahd has continued the traditional Saudi role as peacemaker in the Arab world. Syria is the focus of the current Saudi effort. Lebanese officials and Western diplomats say President Reagan's administration is counting heavily on the Saudis to persuade President Hafez Assad to pull his 50,000 troops out of Lebanon before a new conflict erupts.

So far, Assad's government has refused to agree to a summit on the Lebanon question and vehemently opposed a U.S.-brokered initiative to end the overall Arab-Israeli conflict.

The conservative Saudis share U.S. concern about the growing Soviet influence in Syria, the possible radicalization of the Palestinians and the dangers of a renewed conflict with Israel.

Pressure is building on both sides of the cease-fire line in Lebanon, Israel has lost 11 soldiers killed in guerrilla attacks since the withdrawal accord with Lebanon was signed in mid-May. Observers here see an increasing possibility that Israel will launch limited air strikes or unleash its artillery in reprisal and to discourage infiltration from Syrian-held Lebanon.

On the other side of the cease-fire line, Arafat is facing the most serious rebellion ever in the ranks of his 12,000 to 15,000 guerrillas in Lebanon. A war against Israel could bring instant unity and an end to fighting among Palestinians. "An all-out war would be in the interest of the Arabs. I have always urged the Arabs to wage war because this is the only way to rectify political scales in the region," Arafat was quoted as saying Sunday in an interview with the Kuwaiti newspaper al-Qabas.

The tour last week of Arab capitals by Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah appears to be designed to get Syria at least to agree to negotiate on Lebanon. In exchange, the Saudis appeared to be trying to patch up feuds between Syria and its neighbors Jordan and Iraq.

The crown prince's meetings with Khadafi — a bitter foe of the monarchy — have been proof of the seriousness of the Saudi effort.

The effort to patch the feud between Khadafi and Arafat, however, failed to get off the ground. Arafat continued hammering at Khadafi for "meddling" in Palestinian affairs by supporting the mutiny.

As a result, the summit called for by Gemayel last month is unlikely to convene in the near future.

Convening an Arab summit now would only underline Arab differences and would thus have negative results for Lebanon," wrote columnist Emile Khoury in Beirut's independent an-Nahar newspaper.

Meteor Lit Up The Night In 3 States

By The Associated Press

A meteor that "lit up the whole sky just like daylight" shot across Indiana, Illinois and the western corner of Kentucky early today, witnesses said.

Edwards County, Ill., Sheriff's Deputy Herschel Smith dismissed the possibility that he and other witnesses had seen an aircraft because there was no noise associated with the sighting.

He said the meteor "lit up here like an aerial flare. ... Then it left a trail after the main part went out."

The orange trail hung in the sky for about 45 seconds, he said.

"It looked to me like it had pretty well burned up," Smith said of the meteor. In time, he said, the hurtling body "went dark."

Reported sightings about 1 a.m. extended from north of Indianapolis, through southeastern Illinois and into western Kentucky, officials said. Smith said the meteor appeared to be heading south.

Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard®

Compare the interest rate you pay on other credit cards with Wachovia's new Prime-Plus rate.

Wachovia is introducing a new approach to credit card interest rates that lets you save on finance charges, and makes the Wachovia MasterCard the one card you'll want to have.

Here's how it works. After July 1, 1983, all Wachovia MasterCard customers will be able to benefit from a new floating interest rate, which can vary monthly, based on Wachovia's prime rate plus 5%, but under current law will not exceed 18% annual percentage rate (APR).

For example, if the new Prime-Plus MasterCard rate had been applied for the month of June, MasterCard customers would have been eligible to be charged just 15½% APR. So the Prime-Plus rate can mean a substantial savings from the rates charged by most other financial institutions.

Like many other bank cards, the Wachovia MasterCard is available for an annual fee of $18. This chart shows you how the new Prime-Plus Why Wachovia Prime-Plus MasterCard is the one bank credit card to carry.

MARGARET REGISTER

Supervisor Will Retire

Pitt County Supervisor of Elections Margaret Register will retire June 30 after 10½ years in which she has implemented major changes in the election process.

Margaret W. Hardee has been appointed by the Board of Elections to replace Miss Register. She has already begun training for the office she will occupy July 1.

Miss Register is a Greenville native who has always lived here. Prior to becoming elections supervisor, she was employed many years by Wachovia Bank.

Mrs. Hardee is also a Pitt County native. She was employed many years as a legal assistant to the late W.W. Speight and recently was international sales representative for Overton's Competition Skin here.

By End Of Year?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An oral drug to combat herpes may be on the market by the end of the year, Burroughs Wellcome Co. officials said Monday.

"We have been working for some time on an oral form of acyclovir, which was approved last year in ointment and intravenous forms," said Mara Gabriel, a spokesman for the drug firm in Research Triangle Park between Raleigh and Durham.

"Clinical trials have been ongoing for quite some time," she said. Some data has been submitted to the Federal Food and Drug Administration, and the company hopes to introduce the drug by the end of 1983, she said.

An article published April 21 in the New England Journal of Medicine was the first published study of the oral form of the drug, she said. The drug was tested on patients suffering initial outbreaks of herpes as well as recurrences, she said.

"We are currently in the midst of studies to see whether it can be used prophylactically — whether a regular dose can prevent outbreaks of herpes," she said.

The drug would be sold by prescription. Acyclovir, which has been available in cream and intravenous forms, was first developed around 1974, she said.

Population Center Still A Quiet Town

DE SOTO, Mo. (AP) — Just a year ago an overgrown field near this southeastern Missouri town of 6,000 was proclaimed the center of population in the United States.

In a carnival-like atmosphere, politicians promised fame and fortune for the Jefferson County town named for the 16th-century Spanish explorer who discovered the Mississippi River. A four-inch copper disk was placed in a 10-acre tract near a grove of cedar trees to mark the spot established by the 1980 census.

The spot, according to the census bureau, was surrounded in all directions by an equal number of Americans.

But not much has happened to the area in the last year.

"At first we had a lot of inquiry, but not lately," said Ron Watson, the town's acting mayor. "No economic good has really come of it."

Larry Hovis, one of the town's businessmen, agreed. "When it first happened, there were T-shirts saying we're the population center and hats and pins and the whole bit," said Hovis. "It kind of wore off."

Today, says City Manager Henry Rolfe: "I see no perceptible effect — nothing at all."

"With the money situation like it is, you can't do much," says Herman Koch, who with his brother Henry owns the field around the spot. They set the land aside and designated it Koch Park.

"We try to keep it mowed off, and open the gates every morning so they can go down to see the marker," he said. "Course now we have to lock the gates at night to keep out the pot smokers."

Henry Koch, director of the election division in Missouri's secretary of state office, says the brothers still plan to build a sports complex in the area with bowling, miniature golf and catfish fishing from the stocked lake. "There's a need for that sort of thing down there," he says.

Valenzuela Mows Down Cincinnati, 5-1

By The Associated Press
After a slow start this season, Fernando Valenzuela seems to have a grip on things again.
"As of late, he's just superb," said catcher Steve Yeager after handling the left-hander's fifth straight victory, a 5-1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds Monday.
Valenzuela, winning his eighth game in 10 decisions, stopped the Reds on a sharp five-hitter, striking out six and walking but three in a thoroughly aggressive performance.
"This time I stayed ahead of the hitters," Valenzuela said. "For that reason, I was more successful today in protecting the lead."

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh edged Montreal 4-3, Chicago turned back New York 7-3, Philadelphia tripped St. Louis 6-2 and Houston blanked San Diego 2-0.
Valenzuela was virtually in control all the way, shutting out the Reds for six innings until Cesar Cedeño hit a leadoff homer in the seventh.
"He has a tendency to get himself in a little jam and pitch himself out of it," said Yeager of Valenzuela. "Early in the season, he got himself into jams and couldn't get out; he just lost it. But he's the old Valenzuela now."
Mike Marshall seems to have recovered his form, too. In a recent slump, the Dodger outfielder hit a home run and singled to set up another score.

"It's been a while since I've hit a home run and contributed," Marshall said. "Both hits today helped to get some runs. That's what it's all about."
Marshall's homer followed one by Yeager in the seventh inning and gave Valenzuela a 3-0 cushion at the time.

Pirates 4, Expos 3

Richie Hebner drove in the tying run with a pinch-hit double, then scored the winning run on an error as Pittsburgh rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to beat Montreal.
With the Pirates trailing 3-1,

Tony Pena singled with one out in the seventh off loser Bill Gullickson, 6-7, then scored on Dale Berra's triple. Hebner hit for winner Rick Rhoden, 3-5, and doubled to score Berra. Lee Lacy then hit a wildly hopping grounder which was misplayed by third baseman Tim Wallach, allowing Hebner to score from second with the winning run.
Rhoden, breaking a personal three-game losing streak, gave up eight hits and three runs before giving way to Kent Tekulve, who worked the final two innings for its fifth save of the season. Sand 25th career save against Montreal.
Cubs 7, Mets 3
Jay Johnstone had a pair of run-scoring doubles. Keith Moreland drove in another pair with a two-base hit, and Bill Buckner hit a solo home run as Chicago beat New York for the Cubs' 10th win in 12 games.

Steve Trout, 5-6, was the winner with late relief help. He was lifted after pinch-hitter Mark Bradley opened the seventh inning with a homer, his second fthe season. Mike Proly and Craig Lefferts finished up, with Lefferts recording his first save.
Loser Mike Torrez, 2-8, pitched 4 2-3 inning, allowing four runs, two of them earnedv while giving u seven hits, striking out three and walking one.
Phillies 6, Cardinals 2
Von Hayes rapped a two-run double and scored on Bob Dernier's two-base hit to key a three-run uprising after two were out in the fourth inning, leading Philadelphia over St. Louis. The loss was the eighth in 11 contests for the reeling Cardinals.
Trailing 1-0 at the start of the fourth, the Phillies erupted in the fourth after Cardinal left-hander Dave LaPoint, 4-3, got the first two batters.
Tony Perez triggered the rally with a single and stopped at second on Bo Diaz's single, one of four hits for him in the game. Hayes then doubled and scored when Dernier lashed another double, giving the Phillies a 3-1 lead and their eventual winning run.

Philadelphia right-hander Marty Bystrom, 1-3, was the winner with relief help from Willie Hernandez over the final three innings.
The RBIs by Hayes in the third inning were only the fifth and sixth in 34 games for the player who cost the Phillies five players in a winter trade with Cleveland.
"We've taken a lot of heat for trading five ballplayers for him," said Phillies Manager Pat Corrales. "He's starting to make his presence felt. Our fans wanted instant results. Now they're starting to see that Von Hayes is capable."
Astros 2, Padres 0
Joe Niekro and Frank DiPino combined on a three-hitter and Dickie Thon and Ray Knight each knocked in a run as Houston blanked San Diego.

Niekro, 4-5, yielded only a ground-rule double to Luis Salazar through the first seven innings, retiring 17 men in a row during one stretch. Padres starter Dave Dravecky, 9-4, failed in his bid to become the first 10-game winner in the major leagues this season.
The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a one-out single by Thon. Houston made it 2-0 in the fourth when Jose Cruz walked, stole second and came home on Knight's double.
DiPino came in with one out in the eighth after Niekro surrendered pinch-hit singles to Tim Flannery and Ruppert Jones and retired the final five batters for his fifth save.

"I've been getting ahead in the count and I've been faring pretty well," Niekro said. "When I don't walk many batters, I don't have to worry as much about keeping them from stealing bases. That's a concern for any knuckleball pitcher."

Upshaw Tackles New Duties As NFLPA Executive Director

CHICAGO (AP) — Gene Upshaw, who made a name for himself clearing a path for Raider running backs, now lines up against National Football League ownership as the new executive director of the NFL Players Association.
Upshaw, a 16-year NFL veteran and long-time union officer, was named Monday to succeed Ed Garvey, and promised to continue the militancy with which Garvey "single-handedly" turned a disorganized and once-passive union into an effective bargaining agent.
"I still believe the players are solid," said Upshaw. "What happened throughout the 57-day strike is that we became a union. Hopefully, we will build on that in the future."
Upshaw, who had served as union president during the strike last season, opened his tenure with a salute to Garvey, 43, who resigned last Friday to become deputy attorney general of Wisconsin.
"The strike left a bitter taste in a lot of people's mouths — even today," said Upshaw. "And at times a lot of players questioned the knowledge and dedication of Ed Garvey. But history will bear out his success. He put this organization on the map."

Asked whether moving up to the union's top job would require him to soften his militant image to facilitate dealing with the league's owners, Upshaw responded: "I'm 6-foot-6, 250 pounds, big, strong and black. My image portrays that."

Edwards Leaves ECU For Indiana State

Speculation of the departure from East Carolina University of basketball player Johnny Edwards, a center who averaged 18.6 points and 8.4 rebounds per game the Pirates, ended with the announcement Monday that he is transferring to Indiana State University.
Edwards led East Carolina, located in Greenville, N.C., in blocked shots with 23 and in steals, capturing 42 during his freshman season.
NCAA rules require he sit out the upcoming season, but Edwards probably will be a starting forward for Indiana State during the 1984-85 season, Schellhase said.
Edwards made the all-state team three times while playing at Laurinburg Institute, a preparatory school in Charlotte, N.C. He averaged 44 points and 16 rebounds per game during his senior year at Laurinburg.

The 6-foot-6 225-pound freshman will enter Indiana State this fall with three years eligibility remaining.
"We're extremely happy to have Johnny in our program," Coach Dave Shellhase said. "He is a proven Division One player and can help us in areas such as rebounding and scoring."
Edwards started in 26 of 29 ECU games and led the team in scoring 25 times as a freshman.
"He's got a year to sit out and get his school work down," said ECU Coach Charlie Harrison. "I really think that might have been the best decision Johnnie could have made at the time."
"Edwards' decision" has been known to me and my staff since March," he added.

Pitt Co. Legion Granted Forfeit

EDENTON — Pitt County American Legion Post 39 recorded a forfeit win over Edenton Monday when the umpires failed to show up for the contest.
The game had originally been scheduled for Sunday, and it was Edenton's responsibility to notify the officials.
Pitt County, now 6-1 on the season, hosts Wilson tonight at 8 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

Faidley Signs ECU Golf Grant

John Faidley of Myrtle Beach, S.C., has signed a grant-in-aid to play golf with East Carolina University, the first signee this spring for coach Jerry Lee.
He played at Socastee High School under coach Rich Agle. A one-handicapper, Faidley was his team's most valuable player.
Faidley finished in the top 10 in the nine major junior championships he entered in 1983, including a sixth-place finish in the Carolinas Juniors Championships in Monroe.
"John is just an outstanding young man," said Lee. "We are pleased to be getting a very fine student as well as a very fine golfer. John has the potential to be an excellent college golfer."

Invaders Rally For Win Over Denver

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Coach John Ralston told his Oakland Invaders defensive unit at the two-minute warning break that victory was just one more big effort away.
"On the sidelines, he told some of us, 'We need a big play now.' Everybody was geared up," linebacker David Shaw said.
Just following orders, Shaw tackled Denver running back Harry Sydney and forced a fumble. Defensive tackle Dupre Marshall fell on the loose ball at the Oakland 6-yard line with 1:54 remaining and the Invaders pulled out an important 16-10 United States Football League victory Monday night.
The Oakland offense produced an 80-yard touchdown play, on Fred Besana's pass to running back Jerry Aldridge, and Kevin Shea kicked three field goals. But the defense carried most of the load, with plays including a blocked punt and a pass interception.
On the last big play, Marshall fell on the fumbled ball as it rolled toward the right sideline. Sydney insisted, "He didn't have hold of the ball until he was about a foot out of bounds."

Marshall said, "All the Denver players were saying that. What do you expect them to say? They lost."
"I just dove for the ball and heard whistles blow. I didn't see where the ball was. I just got up, ran to the sidelines, and cheered."
He cheered a victory, the Invaders' third straight, which gave the team an 8-7 record and the lead over Los Angeles, 7-8, and Denver, 6-9, in the Pacific Division race.
The Gold, in losing for the first time in three games under Coach Craig Morton, got an excellent passing performance from Craig Penrose, the recently signed quarterback making his first USFL start. Penrose hit on 21 of 27 attempts for 244 yards and one touchdown, 16 yards to Johnnie Dirden in the final period.
"Our receivers made every grab possible," Penrose said. "It's just too bad for the team that we fought as hard as we did tonight and came up short."

Ginn Homer Leads Snow Hill, 10-7

SNOW HILL — Jeff Ginn ripped a two-run homer in the fourth to propel Snow Hill to a 10-7 victory over Rocky Mount in Eastern League American Legion baseball Monday.
Steve Sides elapped four hits in five trips to the plate for Snow Hill, while Ginn, Mike Sullivan and Tommy Goff contributed two hits each. Richie Chase recorded the win on the mound for Snow Hill.
Neal Avent led Rocky Mount with three hits in five trips to the plate, with Marshall White, Barry Butler and Hank Jones had two hits apiece. Danny Isbell slammed a leadoff homer in the top of the fourth.
Rocky Mount jumped out to a 4-2 lead after the opening frame, but Snow Hill bounced back with four runs in the bottom of the second for a 6-4 advantage. Isbell's homer trimmed the margin to 6-5 before Ginn put the game out of reach.

Rocky Mount plated a pair of runs in the eighth but fell short in its rally effort.
Snow Hill, now 3-1 on the season, travels to Wayne County tonight.

New ECU Deans Named, Effective As Of August 1

ECU News Bureau
New deans have been appointed effective Aug. 1 for the ECU School of Business and the School of Technology, culminating nationwide searches to fill the two positions.
Dr. Ernest B. Uhr of Old

Dominion University, Norfolk, Va., becomes dean of the ECU School of Business and Dr. Calfrey C. Calhoun of the University of Georgia will assume deanship of the School of Technology.
The appointments were approved June 10 by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and announced today by Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, ECU vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Uhr, 41, has served as interim dean and associate dean of the Old Dominion

University School of Business Administration for the past three years. Earlier he was on the marketing faculty and director of graduate programs and of the doctoral program in business administration at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and

State University (VPI), Blacksburg, Va., for 10 years.
Uhr will succeed Dr. James H. Bearden, dean of the ECU School of Business for the past 16 years. Bearden resigned his academic administrative post last December but has remained as dean until a successor could be named.

Bearden became full-time director of the Branch Banking and Trust Co. Center for Management Development in the ECU School of Business last Jan. 1. He also is serving as special assistant to Chancellor John M. Howell for public service programs.

unique set of skills and talents to the position of dean which will be very beneficial for the progress of the School of Technology.
"As our society becomes increasingly dependent upon technological advances, the leadership which Dr. Calhoun will provide to the School Technology and the preparation of students in these areas will be extremely important," Volpe said.

service provided to the School of Business as dean. I wish him the very best in his new endeavors."
Uhr is a graduate of Lafayette College and holds the master's and PhD degrees from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He is the author of four books or bibliographies and of many publications, articles and reviews in professional journals. He won the American Marketing Association's PhD dissertation award in 1969.

Volpe expressed appreciation to Dr. C.Q. Brown, chairman of the Geology Department, "for the fine job he did as acting dean of the School of Technology." Brown was named acting dean of Technology and continued his duties as Geology chairman and professor following the retirement of Dr. Thomas Haigwood in 1981.

Calhoun received his undergraduate degrees from the University of Georgia and Georgia State University and the MA degree from George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University in 1956, followed by the PhD in 1960. He is the author of eight books and has nearly 100 publications, articles and published papers since 1970.

Willoughby said it was inappropriate to discuss the evidence submitted to the grand jury or the focus of the presentments.
Watts, named with Green in the presentment, pleaded guilty in federal court in Greeneville, Tenn., to conspiracy in connection with a counterfeiting ring uncovered by federal agents in the Colcor probe.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. is looking for escape from an embarrassing political dilemma in which the Senate has set its pay below the House of Representatives while establishing tight limits on moonlighting.

positions, the Times reported.

During Watts' sentencing hearing, prosecutors played tapes of conversations between Watts and the undercover agents. On one tape, Watts identified another Colcor suspect as "a torch man for Jimmy Green."

Baker scheduled the final hours of debate on Senate compensation for today, but said he was pessimistic about bringing pay for the two Houses into balance.

There are 18 Republicans and 13 Democrats running for re-election next year, and pay is such a politically touchy issue that Baker has been unable to find a majority of the 100 senators to vote for a straight salary increase.

—Cut Senate pay to $36,000 annually.

Calhoun comes to ECU from the Department of Business Education at the University of Georgia, having served as professor since 1967 and as chairman of the department from 1967 to 1978. The 55-year old Calhoun, a PhD from Ohio State University, has been a member of the University of Georgia business education faculty since 1962. He previously held a faculty position in business administration at Georgia State University.

Volpe also expressed appreciation to Bearden for "his many years of excellent

The commission said there had been "a sharp drop in the appointments of blacks," the newspaper said. "Only 41 percent of President Reagan's full-time appointees have been black, compared to 12 percent of President Carter's appointees," the commission report noted.

Watts also was sentenced to 13 years in prison for burning warehouses owned by state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

"I am not sure we will be able to change anything," Baker said Monday.

On Monday, Baker suggested a new formula which would cut senators' pay almost in half, set stringent reporting requirements, but permit unlimited income from outside income and unearned income such as stocks and bonds.

—Remove all limits on all earned and unearned income from whatever source, including speeches, and stocks and bonds.

The commission also noted a decline in the number of women appointed to high government jobs. According to the report, women accounted for 12.1 percent of the Carter appointees while 8 percent of the Reagan appointees have been women, the newspaper said.

One of the men who met with the 17-member grand jury behind closed doors was Bill Dowdy, the State Bureau of Investigation agent in charge of the Colcor probe.

The Senate removed the ceiling from speech fees last December, voting to allow unlimited outside income — including speeches to private groups, many with issues pending on Capitol Hill.

Specifically, Baker said he is considering legislation which would:

The commission also noted a decline in the number of women appointed to high government jobs. According to the report, women accounted for 12.1 percent of the Carter appointees while 8 percent of the Reagan appointees have been women, the newspaper said.

Willoughby said it is too early to tell what further action will be taken — whether he will start a new investigation or draw up bills of indictment.

In recent required public disclosure forms, some senators stirred a political uproar by reporting earnings of more than $100,000 annually for speeches. Topping the list was Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, at $135,000.

In its separate statement issued today, the panel sharply criticized the stand that the Education and Justice departments have taken to date in handling a legal fight now pending before the Supreme Court involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania.

"I am concerned the matter be resolved quickly and there cease to be a cloud," Willoughby said.

By a vote of 51-41 last Thursday, the Senate gave its approval to an amendment that would place a ceiling on outside income of 30 percent of salary, or about $18,200 annually.

Grove City is challenging the federal government's authority to enforce federal rules against sex discrimination in higher education. The Reagan administration, which has sought to narrow enforcement of the 1972 law known as Title IX, must decide by early July its final posture in the case.

Willoughby explained he relied on the unusual presentment method to let the grand jury consider a matter under investigation "while avoiding the stigma of submitting a criminal charge to that body against a named individual."

House members earn $69,800 annually in salary; senators, $60,662.

The commission criticized the Reagan administration's losing stance in the Bob Jones University case, which the Supreme Court ruled ineligible for tax exemptions recently because of its racial policies. It said it feared that the administration position on Grove City could produce "a potential crisis, similar to the crisis in Bob Jones."

The grand jury will meet again next Monday.

The Senate defeated efforts to equalize its pay with the House last week, and until the weekend, Baker was seeking some way to reverse

Other agencies and departments reviewed included: housekeeping services $272,766; communications center $91,120 ($116,976); sheriff $783,330 ($971,609) — $755,247 this year; jail $235,888 ($272,195) — $229,792 this year; fire marshal $192,390 — $173,577 this year; inspections $67,259; data processing $620,660 — $580,735 this year; and agriculture extension $106,289.

Non-general fund departments such as social services, mental health, health were reviewed Monday also.

Gray recommended $4.45 million for social services in the coming year, compared with a request for $4.58 million and a current budget of $4.51 million. Included in Gray's recommendations for 1983-84 is $1.73 million in local funds — $1.70 million this year — with the rest of the proposed budget financed through state and federal appropriations.

Gray proposed a $2.16 million mental health budget — $2.1 million this year — which includes $161,700 in local tax money and $44,000 in county ABC revenue as required by the state; and industrial development $98,184 — $62,172 this year.

For the health department, Gray recommended $1.40 million, including $661,000 in county funds — $1.37 million this year; while for the county's solid waste program, the county manager proposed a budget of $567,327 ($601,327), compared to the current budget of $979,930.

The proposed solid waste budget is lower because the county will begin hauling its own 40-cubic yard waste containers with county employees and equipment in August, rather than having the containers pulled to the landfill by a contract hauler.

Commissioners are scheduled to review the proposed budgets for the city and county school systems Wednesday.

A public hearing on the 1983-84 proposed budget is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday at the county office building at 1717 West Fifth St.

Oscar-Winning Actress Norma Shearer, 80, Is Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar-winning actress Norma Shearer, who starred in such films "Marie Antoinette" and "Romeo and Juliet," was remembered as "a very beautiful woman" and a "caring considerate person," following her death at age 80.

The Canadian-born star, who married movie mogul Irving Thalberg, died Sunday at the Motion Picture and Television Hospital in suburban Woodland Hills, where she had been under care since September 1980 for impaired vision and other illnesses, hospital spokesman Walter Seltzer said Monday.

She died of bronchopneumonia, Seltzer said. "She came out of that great era, during that era when there were really big, big stars and she was one of them," said Fay Kanin, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Miss Shearer was in her mid-30s when she played the teen-age Juliet in the film "Romeo and Juliet," but I think she filled that role admirably," Ms. Kanin said. Thalberg tailored the role for her, casting her opposite Leslie Howard.

Miss Shearer won her Academy Award for her lead in "The Divorcee" in 1930, the same year she was nominated as best actress in another film, "A Free Soul." Other best-actress Oscar nominations were for "Their Own Desire" in 1929, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," 1934; "Romeo and Juliet," 1936; and "Marie Antoinette," 1938.

She scored screen triumphs in 1939's "Idiot's Delight," opposite Clark Gable, "Strange Interlude," "Smilin' Through," "Tower of Lies," "Strangers May Kiss," "A Lady of Chance," "The Stealers," "The Women," and was one of a handful of silent-film stars who grew brighter with the advent of movie sound.

She made her last film in 1942, "Her Cardboard Lover," at only 39.

Married to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film production genius Thalberg in 1927, Miss Shearer was widowed in 1936 when he died at age 37, shortly after producing "Romeo and Juliet."

She married her second husband, French ski instructor Martin Arrouge, in 1942, and never made another film.

Actress Irene Dunne, who dined frequently with the couple in Paris during the 1950s, said, "She was a very beautiful woman."

"She was very nice, and I imagine professionally she was a very considerate, caring person," Miss Dunne said. "I never heard that she had any of these temperamental tantrums that you hear about with some players."

Born Edith Norma Shearer in August 1902 in the Montreal suburb of Westmount, she left school at age 14 to embark on a stage career.

Ultimately, she traveled to Hollywood and met Thalberg. Their courtship was swift: Thalberg declared upon meeting her that he intended to marry her.

She is survived by her two children, Irving Jr. and Katherine.

Hospital spokeswoman Jean Ferris said there were no immediate plans for a memorial service, and that the funeral would be private at Miss Shearer's request.

Chauffeur With Baton

BOSTON (AP) — The man who chauffeured Boston Symphony conductors for 40 years is getting a chance to wield a baton himself tonight, leading the Boston Pops in "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Even though Paul Kahayias has rubbed elbows with some of the world's greatest conductors, he says he never asked for a chance to do it himself.

"I don't know too much about music, to be honest with you," Kahayias said. "I didn't decide. They decided. I'm pleased but I like to do my work and let it go like that. Thank God, they love me, and I love it."

Pops Conductor John Williams was to chauffeur Kahayias to Symphony Hall today for a conducting lesson and a rehearsal with the Pops, before his evening performance.

Williams and Seiji Ozawa, Boston Symphony Orchestra music director, paid $2,500 on Kahayias' behalf to the Boston Symphony for the privilege to conduct the Pops. The chance to conduct was sold as part of a fund drive.

The purchase was partly a retirement gift, but also "because they are very fond of him," said orchestra spokeswoman Vera Gold.

"They felt it was appropriate, since he was in the driver's seat all that time, that he should be at the podium," she said.

NORMA SHEARER, an Academy Award-winning actress, has died at age 80 at the Motion Picture and Television Hospital in Woodland Hills, Calif., a hospital spokeswoman said Monday. Celebrities At Benefit Show

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Film stars Susan St. James and Christopher Atkins are among the celebrities expected to attend the premiere of "Superman III" for the benefit of the Special Olympics.

Even the Man of Steel himself might turn up. Christopher Reeve, who portrays Superman, has been invited. So have Richard Pryor, Brooke Shields and Paul Newman.

For $100 apiece, members of the public can get into the Wednesday night reception at the New Haven Lawn Club.

Others who plan to attend include John F. Kennedy Jr., hockey great Gordie Howe and sportscaster Howard Cosell.

After the party, the stars will see the movie at the Showcase Cinemas in Orange.

The money will benefit the Special Olympics, an organization founded by Eunice Kennedy Shriver to help mentally retarded children, and Marrakech, a home for GENERAL TENDENCIES: Wonderful aspects are in effect to do pretty much what you please in order to advance. Use the afternoon and evening to reconsider previous viewpoints. Don't force issues.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may have to contend with some complications today. Don't lose your temper with the one you love. Be gentle.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The situation at home improves; however, guard against arguments. Hold on to some good ideas you get for future security.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle correspondence that can bring home the proverbial bacon. Get into studies that will improve your values.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Focus on practical affairs and make big headway with them. An expert you know can give you fine advice.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care of personal wishes today. Take any necessary treatments for health and appearance. Avoid an annoying person.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Attack your work in a cheerful way. An admirer can bring you much good. Use care in motion of all kind later in the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some special desire can be granted early. Get some important studying done. Tonight is fine for being with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Safeguard your reputation today. You gain favors from those in authority. The evening is not favorable for travel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find a better way to express your viewpoints and use the technique to your advantage. Be happy in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use the morning to get bills paid. Show associates that you appreciate them. Take time to please a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use the afternoon for concentrating on personal affairs. Show you are interested in a civic matter. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Improve your surroundings at home. Forget a rebuff you may get. Don't go near anything controversial at work.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a smooth early life, so give a fine education and add subjects that have breadth of scope and continuity. Your progeny will feel lost in case of any emergency arising. However, there is intelligence and good judgment.

Will Get Part Of Inheritance

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — John Dodge, 29-year-old grandson of auto pioneer Horace Dodge, has reached a tentative settlement to get back part of his inheritance which he said his mother squandered in an $11 million, worldwide shopping spree.

Dodge had sought a return of all of his $4 million. Under the tentative settlement reached Saturday, he will get between $200,000 and $500,000, he told The Miami Herald. The agreement still must be approved by a judge.

In the suit, Dodge accused his mother's New York bank of letting her gut his trust account.

But his attorneys say Dodge knowingly or unknowingly signed papers giving his mother, Gregg Dodge Moran, access to the inheritance.

Scientists Eye Pollution Role

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — About 30 scientists from NATO nations are meeting in Chapel Hill this week to discuss strategies for controlling air pollution.

The Tuesday-through-Friday meeting is sponsored by NATO and hosted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Environmental Criteria and Assessment Office.

Nations represented in the conference include Canada, Denmark, France, Italy, Norway, the Netherlands, West Germany and the United States.

The committee began a pilot study in 1980 to determine the types of pollutants flowing into the atmosphere.
