County Tentatively Shaves School Funds

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Looking for a way to cut the recommended 1983-1984 budget to avoid a proposed 2 cents per $100 valuation tax hike, the Board of County Commissioners Wednesday tentatively approved a reduction of $307,821 in school capital outlay funds for the coming year.

Commissioners made the tentative cut as they reviewed proposed education budgets in their final budget session before a public hearing Monday night.

County Manager Reginald Gray, when he presented his recommended budget to the board last week, proposed a 2 cents increase in the tax rate, saying there has been no property tax increase since 1980.

Part of the increase, he said, would help establish a capital reserve fund to set aside money for replacement of landfill equipment, the purchase of land, a new tax and land records mapping system and other projects.

Earlier this week, commissioners suggested that cuts could be made in the $808,000 recommended for the reserve fund, but set no dollar amount for the proposed cuts.

Wednesday, in reviewing proposed school budgets, the board tentatively agreed that part of the cut needed to maintain the present 54 cents tax rate come from the school's capital outlay allocations.

Gray had recommended $690,469 in capital outlay money for the county school system ($507,920 was appropriated for the current fiscal year), and $329,391 for the Greenville city system ($268,308 this year). The tentative cuts would take $215,712 away from the county and $92,109 from the city, leaving $474,756 in capital money for the county schools and $237,282 for the city system.

One cent on the tax rate would raise about $215,712.

Commissioners also suggested that at least part of the capital outlay funds appropriated for the schools in the coming year be placed in a reserve for allocation after a merger study has been completed.

Gray pointed out that school capital outlay money will come from revenue sharing funds in the coming year, and said at least part of the projected revenue on which his recommendations were based is dependant on Congressional approval of the continuation of the revenue sharing program.

Commissioners reviewed, but took no tentative action, on Gray's recommendations for school current expense money for 1983-1984, indicating that further study would be given to the current expense budgets, possibly next week.

Gray has recommended $4.93 million in current expense

Additional $207.7 Million Eyed Tax Plan Shaping Up In Senate

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Senate subcommittee today adopted a plan to raise an additional $207.7 million in 1984-85 that removes almost all of the objections of business and industry to a House tax plan.

The Senate Finance Subcommittee plan would raise revenue estimates for 1984-85 to provide an additional $10.2 million and would put all teachers on a 12-month pay plan to create a one-time windfall of $74 million.

Like the $240-million House plan, it would raise the sales tax on new cars and levy a sales tax on used cars, eliminate the $200 interest exclusion on income taxes, levy a sales tax on vacation home rentals, tax computer programs and increase the tuition at community colleges.

The Senate plan removes from the House plan higher taxes on alcoholic beverages, corporations, merchants, video games, heavy tractor-trailer trucks and insurance companies.

Representatives of those industries appeared Wednesday before the full Senate Finance Committee to sharply criticize the House plan. But the same lobbyists had nothing to say today in opposition to the Senate plan.

Finance Committee co-chairman Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, acknowledged there are big differences in the House and Senate approaches and that it probably will take a conference committee to resolve the differences.

"The Senate had a chance to hear from the 'people,'" Rauch said. "There was a clamor from outsiders, from business that caused us to realize it (the House plan) was going to hurt business."

Senate Democrats also had a caucus Wednesday night and sources said they were told the House plan was too "anti-business."

Rauch said his Finance Committee will vote on the bill Friday and the matter could go before the Senate on Monday night.

The subcommittee plan did not incorporate some of the recommendations which Rauch gave to the full committee Wednesday.

He suggested the state begin paying its workers on the first of the month to generate additional interest income on payroll money and to get a one-time windfall of $400 million. The windfall would come because the state could postpone paying salaries from the current fiscal year to the next fiscal year.

Rauch also asked for consideration of repealing the state income tax exemption on bonds for industry and joint power agencies, levying a sales tax on services like those of barbers and lawyers, considering delaying capital spending until Jan. 1, 1984, and reducing the 1983-85 budget by 2 percent to more accurately reflect spending.

He said his ideas would generate a minimum of $500 million.

At the hearing Wednesday, Lindsay Warren of the N.C. Motor Carriers Association said the truck tax would be the same as a 10 cents per gallon increase in the gasoline tax or an increase in the annual registration fee from $910 to $2,500.

He said the cost of the tax would be multiplied because there are 22 other states that will retaliate with additional taxes on North Carolina trucks if the bill becomes law.

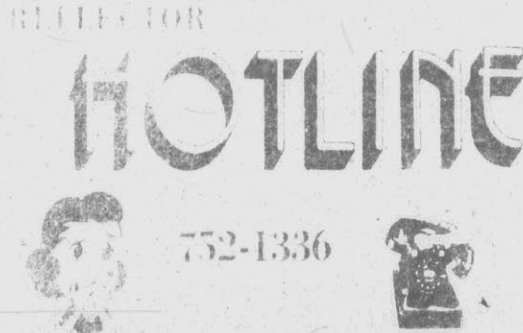

"It is an unfair and very discriminatory tax," Warren said. "Enough is enough. There is a limit to what industry can do and can sustain."

Representatives of the beer, wine and liquor industries criticized the proposed 10 percent increase in the taxes on alcoholic beverages. They agreed that they are paying a disproportionate amount of taxes already and the burden should not be increased.

Ruffin Bailey of the N.C. Beer Wholesalers Association said the state has the second highest tax on beer in the nation and the sixth lowest consumption.

"The alcoholic beverage industry, from the top to the bottom, is paying a disproportionate amount of tax in this state compared to

BONE MARROW TRANSPLANT

Twenty-eight-year-old Greenville resident Frank Barnette must have a bone marrow transplant soon as his only hope for long-term survival.

Dr. Mary Raab, his physician, has arranged for him to be the next new patient at a bone marrow transplant center in Seattle, Wash., and it is hoped that he will be accepted around July 1.

Barnette has pancytopenia, a pre-leukemic condition that affects his energy level, his blood clotting ability, everything about his physical well-being. Right now his energy is so low that he is sleeping most of the time, his wife, Elaine, said. A blood transfusion would restore his energy somewhat, but it is deemed inadvisable because adding antibodies would not be good for him in view of the upcoming transplant.

FRANK BARNETTE

Formerly Barnette, a U.S. Air Force veteran, was attending East Carolina University, majoring in geology, and Pitt Community College at the same time. He is now unable to go to school or work because of his health condition and is battling with the Veterans Administration because it is seeking to deny benefits, saying that the condition which appeared during his years in the Air Force is a childhood illness. His doctors have sought to refute this claim and Congressman Walter B. Jones' office has now gone to bat for him.

Barnette's family, who are originally from Swansboro, have been tested to see who is the best bone marrow match. It's a tossup between his brother, Charlie, who lives here and his sister, Barbara Ann of Raleigh. Both are willing to provide the marrow and both may accompany him to Seattle, along with his wife, and stepdaughter, Kara. The family will stay in an efficiency apartment provided by the hospital while they're there, possibly as long as four months.

Mrs. Barnette, who was in school at the time her husband's condition worsened, formerly worked for the ECU School of Medicine.

Anyone willing to assist Barnette and his family financially is asked to send donations to the Frank Barnette Fund, c/o Dr. Mary Raab, Department of Medicine, ECU School of Medicine, 3-E 106 Brody Medical Science Building, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Attention Valeria George.

John-Paul Leaves For His Homeland

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II today embarked on an eight-day pilgrimage to his homeland, declaring he would pray for Poles at the shrine where they have always gathered "in the happy and sad hours of their history."

The pope left Rome aboard a special Alitalia jetliner at 2:55 p.m. (8:55 a.m. EDT) on the two-hour flight to Poland. Thousands of Poles streamed into Warsaw for his arrival, police convoys combed the city and secret police "bodyguards" dogged Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in Gdansk.

In a telegram to Italian President Sandro Pertini, who telephoned the pope earlier in the day to wish him a good trip, John Paul said:

"I undertake this pilgrimage to my homeland... to pray at the feet of Our Lady of Jasna Gora for the Polish people who have always gathered around that venerated icon in the happy and sad hours of their history."

Walesa, freed from 11 months' martial law in November, said the guards were shadowing him and trying to prevent him from leaving Gdansk to meet with the pontiff, who supports Solidarity, the free trade union outlawed under military rule.

There has been speculation that sometime this weekend, Walesa's regular time off, he would make the 300-plus mile journey to Czestochowa, site of Poland's holiest icon, the Black Madonna, and meet the pope there.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban claimed the police escort was for Walesa's protection. "There have been signals indicative of a possible provocation likely to endanger his security," Urban told a Warsaw news conference. He said the policemen wouldn't try to hinder Walesa's movements.

In the streets of Warsaw, vendors did a brisk business hawking religious souvenirs as well as ice cream, soda water and pizza to pilgrims descending on the capital in buses.

The streets were decked with the red-and-white Polish flag, the Vatican's yellow colors and banners reading, "Holy Father, Lift Up Our Hearts" and "Holy Father, With Our Love."

At St. Anna's Church, where young Solidarity supporters regularly gather by a floral cross in the courtyard, youths handed out sarcastic leaflets saying, "Long Live the Soviet Union — At Our Cost."

In Castle Square, along the pope's route into town, a woman shook her head as a police convoy drove past, sirens wailing. "Why are they doing this just at this moment?" she asked.

Authorities have warned they will deal sternly with any political demonstrators during the papal visit.

The tight security, designed both to protect the pontiff and to forestall any outbursts of support for Solidarity, underscored the stark difference between the Poland which John Paul visited in 1979 and the country still under the shadow of martial law today.

The visit comes at "an immensely difficult moment in the life of my country," John Paul said at his audience Wednesday in St. Peter's Square on the eve of his eight-day, six-city tour.

It is a pilgrimage anxiously awaited by his devoutly Roman Catholic countrymen, who for centuries have sought refuge in the church in times of crisis.

Moscow and Washington will be closely watching the pope on his pilgrimage. John Paul's itinerary includes meetings with Polish government officials, visits to workers' strongholds and a series of religious events.

"If John Paul takes a stand in his statements that will further stabilization, then he will be making a positive contribution to the lifting of martial law," Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski told reporters Wednesday.

Martial law was suspended in December 1982, a year after it was imposed in the midst of workers' demands for human and civil rights, but many of its restrictions on freedom remain in force.

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who heads the Communist government, and his aides have made no secret of their hope that the trip will improve his regime's image at home and abroad — and perhaps even hasten the lifting of Western economic sanctions imposed after martial law was declared.

Plane Damaged At Local Airport

A single engine airplane was damaged Wednesday when the landing gear on the craft collapsed after the plane landed at Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Ed Turcotte of 134 East Longmeadow Road, who was piloting the plane at the time, said this morning that the landing gear collapsed after landing about 12:30 p.m.

Turcotte was not injured, but he said damage to the Beechcraft Bonanza, owned by Judson Blount of Greenville, might run as high as $10,000.

According to the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office, the 1973 model aircraft is valued at $52,500.

Turcotte said the mishap was "just one of those things that happens." A retired military pilot, Turcotte said he has experienced similar incidents "two or three times" while in the service.

He compared the accident to "running your car into a ditch."

He said the Federal Aviation Administration will investigate to determine why the landing gear collapsed.

Aircraft mechanics jacked the plane up Wednesday afternoon and moved it to a hanger to await the arrival of FAA inspectors.

Tripoli Throng Machinegunned

BEIRUT, LEBANON (AP)

Gunmen in a white Mercedes car sprayed pedestrians with machine-gun fire at the southern entrance of Lebanon's northern port city of Tripoli today, killing 14 and wounding 17, state radio said.

There was no immediate word on the identity of the gunmen, but the car had diplomatic license plates, the state radio broadcast said.

Another radio station, the right-wing Christian "Voice of Lebanon," put the death toll at 17 and said masked gunmen fired from three cars at a string of shops, a restaurant and a crowded beach at Tripoli's southern entrance of Bahsas, 50 miles north of Beirut.

The "Voice of Lebanon" said one Syrian was wounded when a truck carrying Syrian troops came under fire in the same area a half-hour before the shootings by the masked men.

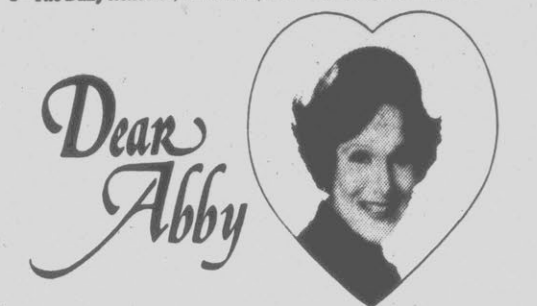

It could not be immediately determined whether the shootings were connected with the two days of street battles that were halted Wednesday by a cease-fire between pro-Syrian and anti-Syrian militias in the city.

Three people were killed and 15 wounded in the clashes Tuesday and Wednesday between the Syrian-backed "Arab Knights" and the "Islamic Union Movement," a fundamentalist faction opposed to Syria's military presence in northern Lebanon.

Party Hostess Put-On Leaves Her Put-Out

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A woman friend (?) phoned and invited me to a wedding anniversary party for mutual friends. She said, "I'm having a money tree for the honorees, so make your check out to me. I will cash it and hang the money on the tree, and put your name on the card listing all the donors."

I agreed to send my check, although I thought the idea was in poor taste since the honorees were wealthy and had much more than I.

Then she said, "I'm sure you won't want to attend as the party is set up for couples only and you are a single woman, so just mail the check to me. Goodbye." Since I had already agreed to send a check, I meekly mailed it.

I later learned that several single men attended the party and had a good time. The honorees never acknowledged my gift, and since they're not the type to disregard a gift, I can only assume that my name was not put on the card.

I welcome your comments.

STUNG IN COLUMBIA, MO.

DEAR STUNG: Your "friend" could author a book on how to lose friends and alienate people. As any Monday-morning quarterback can tell you, when your friend said she was sure you wouldn't want to attend because the party was set up for couples and you were single, you should have told her you would either bring an escort or come alone and take your chances.

It's not too late to tell her that your gift has not been acknowledged, and knowing it is unlike the honorees to ignore a gift, you are writing them to ask if your name was on the card — or inadvertently omitted.

DEAR ABBY: When flying on a commercial plane, I find that it is a rare flight when an infant doesn't scream or cry for a good part of the trip. I am extremely sensitive to noises, and the constant cries of a baby upset me no end.

I pay a large sum of money to fly, while the infant who flies for free ruins my trip. I feel that this is an infringement on my rights.

What are your thoughts about having a section on planes for passengers with infants? Just as there is a "No Smoking" section, there can also be a "No Infant" section.

ALLERGIC TO CRYING BABIES

DEAR ALLERGIC: "No Smoking" sections on planes are not entirely smoke-free because smoke has a way of drifting.

A "No Infant" section would offer little relief from a screaming baby because sound (like smoke) also "travels." Given a choice, I'd opt for the crying baby and use earplugs or a headset.

DEAR ABBY: "Looking Ahead at 72" writes that she hopes that when the time comes (to die), some loving person will remove the hair from her upper lip because she wouldn't want to be caught dead with her moustache showing.

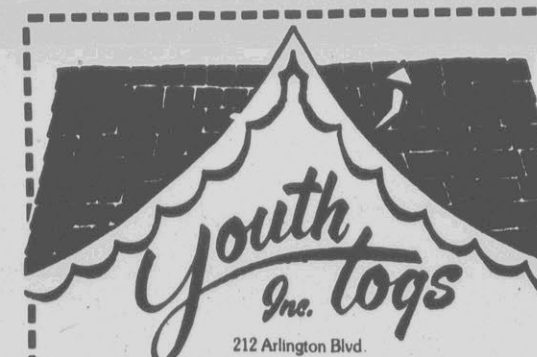

Abby, you seem to think it's the mortician's responsibility to make the deceased appear as "natural" as possible. I have been in the funeral business for over 30 years, and it's our policy to allow the family to view the deceased before the public visitation in order to be certain that the deceased looks "natural."

Here are some of the requests we have had:

1. "Can't you put a smile on Dad's face? He looks so sad."
2. "Stick a pipe in his mouth, or nobody will believe it's Joe."
3. "Put Dad's glasses on. Nobody ever saw him without them."
4. "Take the rouge and lipstick off Grandma. She never wore any."
5. "Put a Wall Street Journal in Dad's hand, so he'll look more natural."

Her Winning Secret Is 'Four P's'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Seattle hairdresser Patti Hammond is a systematic winner.

The 52-year-old grandmother makes a business of entering contests, sweepstakes and drawings. In the past three years, she has won some $10,000 in cash, gift certificates, home furnishings and trips.

"I don't just enter every contest unless it's got something to offer that I really want — cash, car or trip," said Mrs. Hammond, owner and operator of the Hair-i-Styling Salon in Seattle. "I'm usually entering between 12 and 20 every day."

"It seems like hardly a month goes by that I don't win something," she said. "You've got to think like a winner to be a winner."

She said her secret to winning lies in "the four Ps — positive thinking, persistence, prayer and postage."

Mrs. Hammond, whose three grandchildren provide the colored pencils and crayons she uses to draw attention to her entry envelopes, mails one entry a day at the beginning of a contest. Toward the middle, she sends two entries a day and for the last couple of weeks before deadline, she sends up to five entries a day from different mailboxes around town.

She folds her entries in accordion pleats to make them stick out from the rest.

She spends 20 hours a week and about $150 a month writing cards, decorating envelopes, stamping and mailing. She subscribes to three contest newsletters that alert her to contests she may have missed and provide tips on how to win.

"I'm never without my 3 x 5 pad of paper, so if I have to spend 10 minutes waiting at the doctor's office, I'm always writing my name," Mrs. Hammond said.

She keeps diligent records of her mail and supply expenses. She claims tax deductions for the expenses, and she must pay income tax on her winnings.

Her biggest, and most recent prize was a week at Club Med in Playa Blanca, which brought her through San Francisco.

"It came on our 34th anniversary," said the white-haired woman wearing purple feathers in her hair and heart-shaped purple sunglasses. "Not registered mail; just a plain envelope telling me I'd won."

While she was away, one of her employees mailed her 25-50 daily entries so she wouldn't fall behind schedule. She sent 88 postcards home during her week-long vacation, using the same system she does to enter contests.

"I would have withdrawal symptoms if I didn't go to the mailbox every day," she said.

"It's a lot of work, but it doesn't seem like work to me," she said. "Everybody has a hobby. This is my real love and I made a lot of believers out of people who thought I was loony. It pays off — it really pays off."

"But my tongue gets very tired of licking."

Cookbook Puts Diet Fare In Glamour Class

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Calorie watchers should get a lift from a new cookbook, a diet aid dedicated to the "greening of the American cuisine."

"The Golden Door Cookbook" (Forman Publishing, Los Angeles, $24.75) was put out by Deborah Szekely, who served on fitness councils under presidents Nixon and Ford and who operates the Golden Door Health Spa in Escondido, Calif.

There are delectable hors d'oeuvres, tempting breads, hearty roasts and fancy desserts. They may seem a far cry from the usual Spartan diet fare, but all are low in calories.

The main taboos in the book are salt, sugar and beef. The reader is also advised to decrease intake of fats, whether they be saturated or unsaturated.

Ms. Szekely, who has been working in the food field for 42 years, is keenly aware of the fact that diet dishes must look attractive and taste good to be successful.

Above all, she notes, where possible the ingredients should be fresh. When you browse through a supermarket, for instance, shun the brightly colored bottles and boxes and head for the fresh fruits and vegetables and eggs and cheeses.

"Fortunately," she says, "tantalizing flavors satisfy the appetite, even though their quantity be small. When you eat dull food, more and more of it is required for satisfaction." I don't agree with this entirely, but she has a point.

Sugar and salt are the chief villains in the book. Ms. Szekely points out the ironic situation today where many people conscientiously cut down on their purchase of sugar, then proceed to stoke up on sugar-packed soft drinks. Better to quench the thirst, she says, with fresh fruit.

She strongly advises the reader to avoid salt, noting that most of us get all the sodium our systems require, since many cheeses, canned foods and baked goods contain salt. If you must use it, try sea salt.

There is a growing belief that too much beef is not good for one, but to eliminate it altogether as this book does, while featuring veal and lamb, puzzles me.

In general, the recipes sound tempting and the ones I tried were tasty, such as this one for Cauliflower Whip.

1 cauliflower head, pared and trimmed
3-to-4 tablespoons broth reserved from boiling the cauliflower
1 tablespoon Neufchatel low-fat cream cheese
1 teaspoon corn-oil

margarine
Grated nutmeg and vegetable seasoning to taste
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Parsley, chopped

Place cauliflower in saucepan, cover with water and simmer covered 20-25 minutes, until tender. Remove cauliflower from water and place in food processor or blender with reserved cauliflower broth. Puree until smooth. Add cheese, margarine, nutmeg and vegetable seasoning and puree. Garnish with Parmesan and parsley and serve. Serves 4. Calories per serving, 64.

Engagement Announced

JOANN PERKINS...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey Perkins of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Van Joel Sharpe, son of Mrs. Barbara Jean Sharpe of Route 4, Greenville, and the late Jerry Sharpe Jr. The wedding will take place July 16.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

I'm never going to read my horoscope again!

I know, I said that two weeks ago when it said I was going to have an adventure on water and my contact lens fell down the commode, but I mean it this time.

I'm sick and tired of every other sign getting the good stuff. I'm looking at a fashion horoscope right now with a big headline reading, "WITTY AQUARIUS HAS KNACK FOR MIXING CLOTHES." There's more. The story goes on to say, "Who is that bubbly woman wending her way through the crowd on the dance floor? If she's wearing navy and chartreuse and there's a glittery gold star on her cheek, there's no doubt about it. It's the witty and brilliant pacesetter, Aquarius."

You know what my sign says? "Spend more time on your personal needs. Dress refully. Don't rush the process. Plan a new bedroom furniture arrangement to add allure to your nights."

All zodiac signs do make me hostile. Don't tell me about Aquarians. I've been around them all my life. You know them too. They don't have one single skirt in their closet with an elastic waistband. They know how to tie scarfs so they don't look like they're stopping the bleeding.

No matter in what position the moon is, I am always advised to "overcome obstacles" . . . "persevere" . . . and "know that mondy doesn't buy success . . . only happiness."

I hate my sign. But then I suspect most of the people born under it hate it too: Eva Braun, Tom Dewey and Roy Rogers' horse, Trigger.

What sign was I born under? A bakery! What else!

Holding Tax Line

As the Pitt County Commissioners come down to the finals of providing a 1983-84 budget they seem determined to maintain the present tax rate of 54 cents per $100 valuation.

County Manager Reginald Gray proposed increasing the tax rate by two cents to help fund the proposed budget and to establish a capital reserve fund.

It was proposed that $808,000 be set aside in a reserve fund for capital improvements. The commissioners say this should be reduced to meet the operating needs of the county.

Gray recommended the capital reserve fund to finance replacement of landfill equipment, a new tax and land records mapping system, new bookmobile, land purchase and other projects with the thought of preventing a large burden in any one year.

It was not clear just how much the reserve fund might be cut and certainly we are totally in favor of any efforts to hold the tax rate, assuming services are being financed adequately.

The commissioners, however, should do all possible to build the capital reserve so that large investments can be met in the future without bond issues. If the fund is to be reduced, so it must be. The concept, however, of building a capital reserve fund is just sound business practice and it should not be abandoned.

Cannot Satisfy Everyone

The N. C. Department of Transportation last Friday chose the Option 1 location for a new $12.4 million bridge from Morehead City to Atlantic Beach.

The plan, which will place the bridge near the present low level bridge that is to be demolished, should settle a spirited debate over four proposed locations.

The 3,830 foot bridge will join 23rd Street in Morehead City. It will include four lanes and a 65-foot span over the Intracoastal Waterway. The old bridge has been a traffic bottle neck because it must be opened for boats.

The bridge location does not satisfy everyone, but the question should be settled now and hopefully planning and construction on the much needed facility can proceed.

It may be my imagination but every young person I meet this June is graduating from law school. The question is how many lawyers can the country support. The answer is that nobody really knows.

Harlan McCugh, a senior partner with McCugh, McCugh & Moore McCughs, is one of those who believes the United States will never have enough lawyers to serve the needs of the people.

"The reason why I'm so bullish on the law as a profession is that the more lawyers you have the more business you generate for each other. We're the ones who make the problems for other lawyers to solve."

"I'm not too sure I understand."

"Well, there is a famous story about a lawyer in North Dakota who hung up his shingle in town and was starving to death. Then another lawyer moved in and hung up a shingle across the street. Suddenly they were both prospering. The rule of thumb in America is that it takes a minimum of two lawyers on opposite sides of the street before one can make any money."

McCugh continued, "The beauty of the American justice system is that one doesn't have to do anything wrong to have need of a lawyer. All somebody has to do is accuse you of doing something wrong, and then you have to seek legal help to defend yourself. Even if you aren't accused of doing something wrong, it's best to hire a lawyer in advance, just in case somebody might take a gamble that you did."

"Another reason why I'm bullish on the law business is that lawyers are taught to write contracts and legal papers that can only be decoded by other lawyers. So when one lawyer draws up a contract, he or she is automatically assuring a fee for another lawyer who has to read it and see that the person signing it is not getting a raw deal.

"I had an instance not long ago where a lawyer for a motion picture studio sent a one-page contract to a screenwriter I was representing. I took one look at it and became furious. I called up the studio lawyer and said, 'Are you crazy or something? My client could sign this contract today. Where the hell did you study law?'"

The studio lawyer apologized and said

"You were smart not to let your client sign the one page contract," I said.

"Another reason I'm bullish on lawyers," McCugh said, "is that almost every family in America has a relative who is a lawyer, and you don't even have to leave your house anymore to find one.

he had a paralegal draw up the agreement, and hadn't realized the young man had written it in plain English. He promised to send over the studio's usual 170-page contract right away. As soon as I got it, we started haggling over it for three months, and I was able to charge my client my normal outrageous fee."

"You were smart not to let your client sign the one page contract," I said.

"Another reason I'm bullish on lawyers," McCugh said, "is that almost every family in America has a relative who is a lawyer, and you don't even have to leave your house anymore to find one.

Washington — Strengthening the family link between President Reagan's national security adviser William P. Clark and Ambassador Paul Nitze, Reagan's chief negotiator on nuclear weapons in Europe, has all but ruled out misunderstandings of the kind that angered the White House last year.

Just before Nitze returned on May 17 to the Geneva talks with the Soviets, Clark took him on a horseback ride for nearly two hours in the Washington environs. Clark's wife, Joan, and Nitze are cousins, a little-known fact that, despite their differences on the Euro-nuke issue, has brought the two together.

Last year Nitze and his Soviet counterpart reached an informal agreement that was immediately rejected by Reagan — and the Soviets. With Clark's power now rising to a peak, and the president counting heavily on Clark's personal control of the arms talks, no such embarrassment is likely in the future. Nitze knows he has an open door or telephone line to his cousin-in-law anytime he wants to use it.

Before his surprising endorsement of Sen. John Glenn for the Democratic presidential nomination, Massachusetts senator Paul Tsongas tried to enlist another New England liberal in Glenn's candidacy: Connecticut's Sen. Chris Dodd. Dodd told Tsongas it was far too early for such a final decision. But friends say that what really mattered to Dodd was the fact that in endorsing Glenn he would be alienating several other senators who are presidential candidates, particularly Alan Cranston, a power as Senate Democratic whip, and Sen. Gary Hart. As liberal leader of the anti-Reagan policy in Central America, Dodd might need Cranston's support in future Senate votes.

A footnote: A seminal reason for Tsongas' endorsement of Glenn is his need to shore up his standing among moderate and conservative Democrats back home, particularly those in the camp of former governor Edward King. Tsongas could be vulnerable to a conservative Democratic challenge in his reelection bid next year.

RALEIGH — The young man held in the county jail had more problems than his police record indicated. Prior to his arrest, he twice tried to kill himself. No one at the jail, no one in the local probation office, knew that. A third suicide attempt was imminent but only the young man, himself, and his psychiatrist at the community mental health center were aware of his history of problems.

This case has a happy ending in that the young man didn't die at the end of a rope fashioned from cell sheets. He told his probation officers of the suicide attempts and appropriate steps were taken, with the psychiatrist's cooperation. When he tried to kill himself a third time, jailers were able to stop him.

The Governor's Crime Commission uses this story as an example of a problem facing the Department of Correction and county jailers. Had the young man not told his probation officer of his suicide attempts, and had he not allowed his psychiatrist to release his records to court officials, he'd probably be dead now. His jailers would have had no idea that he was a special case to watch and his suicide attempt probably would have caught them off guard.

State and federal laws guarantee the privacy of mental health records. Information from the records cannot be released without the explicit consent of the patient. In addition, correctional officials in many areas have no working relationships with mental health officials. Nor are the privacy statutes well understood. In the end, the inmates suffer.

The crime commission is concerned that the Department of Correction cannot receive this information unless it is volunteered by the inmate. Some of these people withhold this information because of the stigma attached to mental illness.

Others keep it private because they believe it will prolong the time they must spend behind bars.

That lack of information poses all kinds of problems. As could have occurred in the case of our suicidal young man, prison officials may lack the needed information to prevent an inmate from hurting himself.

An inmate's psychiatric record could be of great help in determining where he should be housed, or how he should be treated by prison mental health services. All inmates receive screening but someone's record can complete the sketch which that testing reveals.

The commission's draft report expresses the concern that prison mental health officials could begin to treat the inmate in a way totally inappropriate to the treatment he was receiving prior to his incarceration. In other words, the prison doctors could end up messing him up worse.

The commission doesn't believe the state and federal privacy laws act as a complete barrier to the sharing of information about these inmates. The problem may stem more from a lack of communication between correctional personnel and local community mental health facilities.

The six recommendations included in the draft report on the problem all stress the need for more cooperation between these two branches of government. The commission says correctional and mental health officials need to sit down with each other, at the community and state levels, to establish procedures that will guarantee that one hand of state government know what the other hand knows about inmates.

The alternative to this type of cooperation, says the commission's report, are some undetected cases of troubled inmates — and more successful suicide attempts.

We'll Never Have Too Many Lawyers

Now when a mother calls up her lawyer son from the hospital and says, 'I fell on the sidewalk and broke my hip,' the first question he usually asks her is, 'Were there any witnesses?'

"There aren't enough lawyers in America to handle all the accidents that are happening all around us, much less the insurance companies who are refusing to pay."

"You paint a very rosy picture for young people just coming out of law school," I said.

"I'm not making it up," McCugh told me. "You've got government lawyers working day and night confusing everyone as to what the legislators had on their minds when they passed a law, or repealed one. You have people being poisoned by chemicals, crime is soaring, and the simplest business transaction cannot be consummated without two legal minds in the middle screwing it up. I would say the outlook for the law class of 1983 has never been brighter."

"What a wonderful message. Can I print it?"

"Of course. Why do you ask?"

"I didn't want you to sue me."

A father forgives. A father makes mistakes. As parents, we have a right to be the imperfect human being that we are. A father inspires. Father W. J. Hecht of Cleveland wrote a spiritual will and testament for his four children. It was read at his funeral mass. In part, it said: "I leave you faith in God. Please keep it, use it, cherish it and pass it on. This inheritance of faith far surpasses my other possessions I could leave you."

So what's a father to do. St. Augustine said, "Do what you can and pray for what you cannot yet do." Mark records an incident that can keep the goal in sight: "He took a child and put him in the midst of them; and taking him in his arms, He said to them, 'Whoever receives one such child in My name receives Me; and whoever receives Me, receives not ME but Him who sent Me.'"

Mark 9:37.

Strength For Today

The cleansing of the temple was a very important episode in the life of Jesus; and it continues to be important in gospel teaching for the simple reason that the Church stands in constant need of being cleansed.

To say this does not mean that anyone regards the Church today as corrupt or dishonest. Every branch of the modern Church is committed to the task of bringing men and women to God and making the world a better place in which to live. Yet the Church, even though a divine institution, is always in danger of taking on the coloration of the world. It easily adapts itself to standards of worldliness. It forgets its Lord sometimes in seeking to please certain of its members. It sometimes seems to value more highly the esteem of men than the esteem of God.

The cleansing of the temple by our Lord emphasizes the necessity for a strong, healthy church as the greatest single factor in producing a strong, healthy world.

Strengthening The Clark-Nitze Link

Former secretary of state Alexander Haig quietly warned his successor, George Shultz, in the aftermath of the Enders-Hinton sackings that he had better stand up for his Foreign Service bureaucracy fast — or lose his influence within the State Department. That was the background of Shultz's rather emotional remarks praising both Assistant Secretary of State Tom Enders and Ambassador to El Salvador Deane Hinton at a carefully-orchestrated State Department tribute 10 days ago. The Enders-Hinton sackings were engineered from the White House, not Shultz's seventh-floor emporium at State. Two days later, in a separate gesture of reconciliation, national security adviser William P. Clark, who had arranged the ouster of the two Foreign Service diplomats, made a conspicuous appearance at a small housewarming in Enders' new Georgetown house. That did not come close to erasing the impact on the aggrieved Foreign Service of Shultz looking weak when he was upstaged by the White House.

Partly as a result of a private letter from Rep. Tom Corcoran on Jan. 26, President Reagan has promised neutrality in Corcoran's soon-to-be-announced primary campaign against Sen. Charles H. (Chuck) Percy, despite Percy's three terms and his chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The letter from the Republican conservative was "to assure you that ... no hard feelings" resulted from Reagan's speech at a Percy fund-raiser in Chicago in mid-January and his refusal to drop in at Corcoran's reception in the same hotel the same evening. Corcoran was not an announced candidate, although the president had every reason to believe he would run. The race for the Republican nomination between Percy and the three-term congressman may turn on national security issues. Percy is vulnerable to charges of being insufficiently pro-Israel and of opposing Reagan's tough arms control posture. One poll taken by Illinois Republicans shows that defense and foreign issues, not the economy, are up-permost in the voters' minds, with Percy in an exposed political position on both

The unsung hero at the Williamsburg summit two weeks ago was Evan Galbraith, U.S. ambassador to France, who was secretly positioned at Williamsburg as a safety precaution in case he would be needed by the president.

Needed he was, when French president Francois Mitterrand balked at agreeing to any East-West security statement. Mitterrand had notified the White House privately weeks before the economic summit that he would never agree to any document outside the economic area. But Reagan wanted the summit to emphasize western unity against Soviet efforts to defeat NATO's nuclear rearmament plan.

When summoned by the president at the last minute to help convert Mitterrand, Galbraith was there and, after hours of discussion, the French president came around. One result: Galbraith's stock inside the white House stands higher today than any other ambassador.

Andropov Cements Power In Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist Party leader Yuri V. Andropov was elected president of the Soviet Union today, consolidating his power by taking over the post that had remained vacant since the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev seven months ago.

His unanimous election at the opening session of the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament, means that Andropov has taken firm control of this nation of 280 million people.

Andropov, who turned 69 Wednesday, was nominated for the position by Konstantin U. Chernenko, who said it was "expedient" for the head of the Communist Party to also be president. Chernenko, a veteran Politburo member who was a close associate of Brezhnev, in the past several months had been thought to be Andropov's chief rival for power.

By succeeding Brezhnev as head of the all-powerful Communist Party, taking over the presidency and assuming the leadership of the Soviet Union's military council in May, Andropov now has all three of the posts held by Brezhnev.

"Allow me to express my wholehearted appreciation and gratitude for the high trust and honor given me in electing me chairman of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR," said Andropov, a former head of the Soviet KGB intelligence agency, in a brief acceptance speech.

"Your trust and consideration are a trust placed in the Communist Party and a member of this party for over 40 years," he added. "I would like to assure you that I will use my experience ... to respond to your trust and confidence."

Then Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko blasted U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union but said the Soviets want better relations between the two nations.

"We want to make our relations with the United States steady because we are aware that they are instrumental in preventing war ... (and) in the common interest of holding back the danger of a nuclear holocaust," Gromyko said in a speech to the Supreme Soviet.

He charged that the Reagan administration had "manifestly expressed imperialistic ambitions which encourage the cult of militarism."

"The instigators of this policy shout torrents of lies to prove that the threat comes from the Soviet Union," he added.

Andropov became party general secretary on Nov. 12, 1982, two days after former leader Brezhnev died after 18 years at the helm of the Kremlin.

Brezhnev had held both positions, and Andropov, whose health is believed to be failing, was expected to become president last November.

He did not take the post then, sparking speculation that he had been unable to get an absolute hold on the nation's secretive political apparatus.

But in taking the presidency today, he displayed his strength — taking the nation's two top positions only seven months after Brezhnev died.

Brezhnev, who became the top party man in October 1964 when he ousted Nikita S. Khrushchev, was not able to take over the presidency until 1977. He took the head of state's job from Nikolai V. Podgorny.

Andropov becomes the ninth president of the Soviet Union. Yakov M. Sverdlov was elected the first head of state in 1917.

An Andropov ally, Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, 74, had been widely touted as the man likely to take the head of state's job at this parliamentary session.

Andropov's election was thought to have been worked out Tuesday and Wednesday during a plenary meeting of the 300-plus member Communist Party Central Committee, which Andropov heads as party leader. The committee approves decisions taken by the ruling Politburo, its membership down to 11 men from 14 two years ago.

Filling the president's job ties up the loose ends left by Brezhnev's death. The head-of-state position makes it more appropriate in terms of protocol for Andropov to meet visiting national leaders.

When the Central Committee session closed Wednesday, widely expected additions to the ruling Politburo had not been made, leading to speculation that the stalemate in the top leadership was continuing.

The legislative body also announced the removal of two men from the presidium, its leadership body, and the appointments of two replacements.

YURI ANDROPOV

Also on the agenda was approval of a draft law on worker collectives, a measure making innovative changes in the way the Soviet Union organizes its work force.

The Supreme Soviet meets twice a year to adopt major Soviet legislation. Votes on matters brought to the floor always get the unanimous approval of the 1,500 deputies.

The most notable change announced at Central Committee session was appointment of Politburo member Grigori V. Romanov, the Leningrad party boss, to the powerful 10-man Central Committee secretariat.

Romanov is seen as an Andropov ally and his assumption of a seat on the secretariat, headed by Andropov as general secretary, could significantly strengthen the Soviet leader's hand.

Polish Regime Urges People Avoid Disorders

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II could help Polish authorities bring an end to martial law, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski told a news conference today on the eve of the papal pilgrimage.

Rakowski, a key aide to Communist Party chief and Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, said the authorities still viewed any meeting of the pontiff with Lech Walesa, chief of the outlawed independent union Solidarity, as a "political" rather than "religious" event.

"If John Paul takes a stand in his statements that will further stabilization, then he will be making a positive contribution to the lifting of martial law," Rakowski said. Military rule was imposed Dec. 13, 1981 and eased a year later, but stiff controls still remain.

At the Vatican, the pope said at his weekly general audience today that he hopes his trip to Poland will "serve the cause of truth and love, freedom and justice. So that it may serve the cause of reconciliation and peace."

Rakowski's statement was the clearest indication so far by a top government official of expectations for the eight-day papal visit, which begins Thursday. It is the second Polish pilgrimage since John Paul, the former Archbishop of Krakow, was elected pope in October 1978.

Rakowski, once regarded as a leading liberal but seen increasingly as a pragmatic conservative, repeated police and Interior Ministry warnings against disturbances during the pope's stay, saying the authorities would maintain tight security.

Rakowski appeared to be cautioning the pontiff against making political statements to crowds expected to number in the millions.

The government has repeatedly warned priests against criticizing the authorities, but said higher church leaders have avoided using the church as a forum to attack the state or its allies.

"It is not possible to predict what the pope is going to say exactly, but there will be no serious surprises," Rakowski said.

In touching on a possible meeting of the Pope and Walesa, Rakowski reiterated government views that Walesa had been given political status by the Western media, but hinted that a compromise on his seeing the pope was still possible.

When asked about a potential compromise, Rakowski replied, "In politics we are frequently confronted by compromises."

Vatican officials who arrived here Tuesday said the church was still trying to arrange a meeting between Walesa and the pope, and a government source said it might occur, but not in private as the church hopes.

"The head of the Vatican state should discuss this matter with the Warsaw authorities," Rakowski said.

Rakowski is the most senior government official to meet the foreign press arriving for the papal visit. His news conference seemed designed as an orientation session for many incoming reporters on the eve of the trip.

Polish authorities are concerned that religious and political passion will overcome crowds during the visit and that many Poles will unfurl banners or chant slogans embarrassing to the government.

"The security of this visit is the most important thing," said Gen. Jozef Bejm, national police commander. "Security must be maintained, and it will be maintained."

The general told a news conference Tuesday that police will use their forces "to the fullest extent" to maintain security for the visit, which takes John Paul to eight provinces.

The government has banned alcohol sales since Monday. This means no bottle sales — either for Poles or foreigners who could go to state-run hard currency shops — and no drinks, not even beer or wine in restaurants.

"The atmosphere of this visit is different from the previous one," said a police official interviewed in the state media. "Social discipline is relaxed. Religious emotions may easily be topped by political ones. A stone thrown in the crowd can become a Pershing missile."

Stories abound of special units of Zomo, the feared riot police, and of army units assigned to help priests man roadblocks and entry points to cities to maintain security.

Church authorities in Warsaw alone have mobilized 10,000 people, including laymen and priests, for the pope's stopover in the capital. Officials in other cities on the papal itinerary said they will organize similar numbers.

At St. Annes, a monastery in southwest Poland where the pope will stop for two hours, routes have been changed to avoid heavily wooded areas, and "each tree will have its own guard," a Warsaw newspaper reported.

"Security will be extremely tight," said one government press official, surveying a ceremony site already blocked off by white-painted metal poles marking "crowd sectors." It is under 24-hour guard.

"When you arrive, you will have to load your camera with film under the eyes of security, and you won't move around here without someone from the church or state at your side," he said.

Border Burgers Have A Market

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Big Mac is a Big Mac in any language, but folks who want a hamburger and fries at the Golden Arches can order a "hamburguesa y papas fritas" as part of a trend toward bilingual restaurants in this Mexican border city.

"We consider the Hispanic market exceptionally important to us as a business," said McDonald's Corp. spokesman Bob Keyser at company headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill.

With Hispanics making up 62 percent of El Paso's nearly half-million residents, it's little wonder that all 11 McDonald's restaurants offer menus in English and Spanish.

"In a market like El Paso that's fairly unique, it's not a hiring requirement, but most people who work for us also are bilingual," said Gail Burbank, McDonald's spokeswoman in El Paso.

Bilingual workers and English-Spanish menus are necessary are both found in the Mills Avenue McDonald's, just a half mile from the muddy Rio Grande, which separates El Paso from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

"Hamburguesa con queso or cheeseburger? What's the difference? This is El Paso, so there's not much difference," said Manuela de la Esperanza, a maid who travels four days a week from her home in Juarez to work for an El Paso family.

Ms. de la Esperanza and fellow maid Roberta Ayala Gutierrez only speak Spanish, and said that after work they love to stop in McDonald's downtown restaurant near the bus stop to order a cool "barquillo" — vanilla ice cream cone.

Mexico's economic problems have spilled over into neighboring El Paso, where three 1982 peso devaluations sliced by one-sixth the Mexicans' purchasing power, and caused the closure of an estimated 35 El Paso stores that depended on cross-over business from Juarez shoppers.

Even McDonald's has been affected. "Problems across the border obviously have had sporadic effects on our walk-in business. The better the situation is in Mexico, the better we do," Keyser said. McDonald's El Paso stores stopped accepting pesos for payment last August.

"The peso was fluctuating too much (against the U.S. dollar). We lost $160 one day in the peso exchange," store manager Gordon Chamberlain said.

But many Mexicans changing their dollars for pesos — the rate is now 148 to the dollar — still think they get their money's worth at McDonald's. "Desayuno — breakfast — is a bargain at 99 cents for an Egg McMuffin," 18-year-old Juan Luis Alvarez said.

There is no Spanish translation for Egg McMuffin, so the menu name is the same in both languages. The same is true for Big Macs, hot cakes and McRib sandwiches.

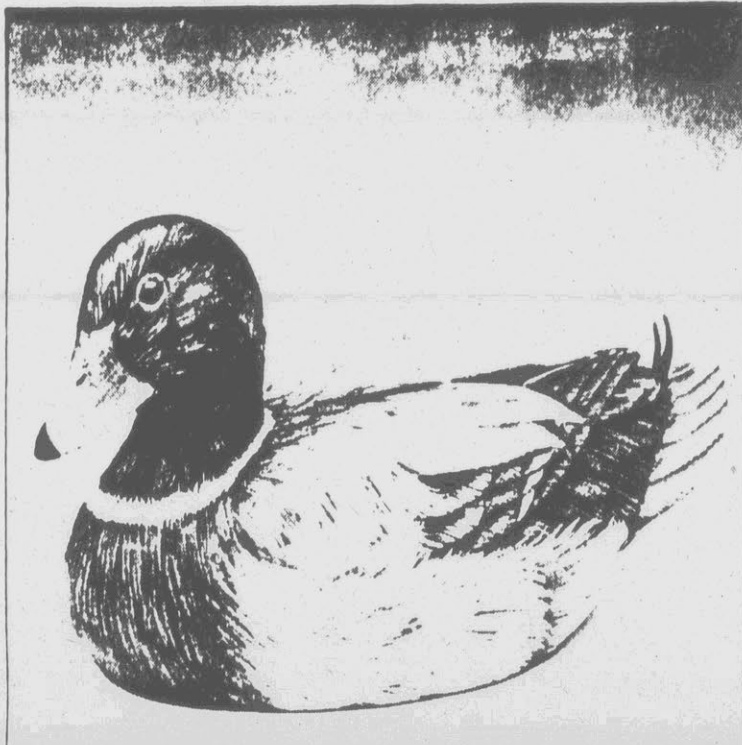

Not so for an all-American piece of apple pie. The Spanish equivalent is "pastel manzana," or apple pastry.

But "huevos revueltos" is scrambled eggs and the quarter-pounder with cheese is a "quarter-pounder con queso."

"I still like a 'hamburguesa con queso y papas fritas' best," Alvarez said. "We can't get any good ones in Juarez."

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.N. conference on Palestinian rights will convene in Geneva, Switzerland, instead of in Paris as originally scheduled, the planning committee has decided.

Anyone wishing to bid on the cutting and cleaning of lots for the City of Greenville should call the Inspections Department at 752-4137 to have their names included on the list of bidders.

Astronauts Hold Launch-Site Training Exercises

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Five astronauts, including America's first space-faring woman, conducted launch-site training today after countdown began for Saturday's early morning blastoff.

NASA officials said the weather forecast for 7:33 a.m. EDT launch looked ideal. There was one early technical problem aboard Challenger, but the space agency said it may have been a false alarm. In any event, it went away.

On the anniversary of the flight of Valentina Tereshkova, the Soviet woman who broke the man-in-space sex barrier in 1963, Sally Ride and four male astronauts were ready for the seventh space shuttle mission.

The count started at 3 a.m. EDT, with the clock ticking down from 40 hours toward liftoff Saturday. Twelve hours and 33 minutes of "hold" time are built into the count to allow for contingencies.

NASA test engineer Robert Sieck reported that early in the count there was an indication of a bad data exchange between the spacecraft computers and one of two master events controllers — a unit needed to control the explosion that separates the shuttle rockets from the orbiter shortly after launch. The problem cleared up after the system was reset, he said, and NASA was making more tests.

Commander Robert Crippen flew test landings before dawn today on the 15,000-foot runway where Challenger is to return to Earth on June 24. Later, he, Ms. Ride and Rick Hauck made honed their flying skills in T-38 jet flights over central Florida.

Test conductor Robert Webster's "call to stations" summoned more than 50 engineers and technicians to consoles in the control center three miles from the launch pad. Scores more workers were on the pad, grooming the sleek spaceship Challenger for the six-day trip.

Their first tasks were to check the external fuel tank, verify the shuttle's computers and navigation systems and test the crew's drinking water.

Much of the pre-launch media attention has focused on Ms. Ride, the 32-year-old astrophysicist who is the first woman named to a U.S. space flight, although the trail was blazed by two Soviet female cosmonauts.

She and her four colleagues, Crippen, pilot Hauck and mission specialists John Fabian and Dr. Norman Thagard, flew to the launch area Wednesday afternoon in three T-38 jet planes after completing training at the astronaut base in Houston.

"We're really looking forward to it and we're ready to go," Crippen told reporters on their arrival.

The T-38s touched down on the same runway where the Challenger is to return to Earth on June 24 — the first shuttle set to land on the strip just five miles from the launch pad.

"We're looking forward to landing right back here again in about nine days," Hauck said. "Rick said that pretty well," Ms. Ride said. "I don't think there is anything I can add."

Landing on the swamp-surrounded runway at Cape Canaveral eliminates the need to bolt the shuttle to the back of a Boeing 747 transport for a return trip to the launch area. This will shave at least a week off the preparation time for a shuttle's next mission.

In their final two days of training, the astronauts will hone their flying skills with proficiency runs in the T-38 jets, practice landing on the shuttle runway in a Gulfstream jet modified to handle like the spaceship, check their flight gear and review flight plans.

Ms. Ride's historic role has overshadowed other aspects of the flight, but it is one of the most ambitious yet in the fast-maturing shuttle program.

With Ms. Ride playing a key part, the astronauts are to deploy two commercial communications satellites — for Canada and Indonesia — practice rendezvous maneuvers with a third payload and conduct more than 20 scientific and technological experiments.

During the mission, Ms. Ride and Fabian will use the ship's 50-foot robot arm to place a scientific payload in orbit, retrieving it later for return to Earth. While the payload is flying free, Crippen and Hauck will fly formation with it, closing in for retrieval in a rehearsal for a satellite repair mission planned next year.

The five-member crew is the largest ever launched from Earth in a single spaceship. The old mark was four on the fourth and fifth shuttle flights.

The upcoming flight originally had only four crew members, but Thagard, a medical doctor, was added in December to study motion sickness, which has afflicted seven of 16 astronauts who have made shuttle trips.

Must 'Teach' Microorganisms

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — If bacteria will ever be used to clean up large areas tainted by dioxin, scientists must teach microorganisms to devour the toxic chemical, not just nibble at it, researchers say.

Two Michigan State University scientists said Wednesday they have had "limited success" in changing the eating habits of two types of bacteria to encourage them to eat more than their usual quota of dioxin.

Senators Making Final Bid To Increase Salaries

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. is seeking support for a pay plan that would equalize Senate and House salaries, while delaying tough new restrictions on moonlighting until next year or later.

After a week of intermittent consideration of the pay issue, the Senate appeared certain to resolve it today.

Last week, the Senate voted 51 to 41 to limit the compensation its members can receive from speeches and other outside income to 30 percent of salary, or about $18,200.

A number of senators had reported giving speeches worth over $100,000 annually, some to groups with issues pending in Congress.

But sensitive to voter discontent with pay increases, the Senate declined last week to raise its $60,662 salary to the House level, which has been at $69,800 since last December.

Sources who spoke on condition that they not be identified said Wednesday that Baker and other key figures in the pay dispute were making one last attempt to find a majority of senators willing to vote themselves a pay raise, while putting off the new limits on outside income until Jan. 1, 1984 or Jan. 1, 1985.

If that fails, the Senate would be stuck with the embarrassing disparity in pay with the House and similar limits on outside income.

The Senate would then go on to approve a $16 billion supplemental appropriations measure to which the pay amendments are attached.

In a speech on the Senate floor, Baker also called for broad reforms in the way the Senate operates, including six months off, cutting salaries by more than half, and no limits on outside or investment income.

There would be strict reporting requirements on all income, allowing voters to decide whether a senator or House member was earning too much from improper sources.

Conceding his sweeping proposals have no chance of enactment now, Baker said, "We are institutionally incapable of dealing with that patent conflict of interest ... setting our own salary."

He proposed a constitutional amendment setting up an independent commission to establish salaries.

Recommending that senators and House members be permitted to pursue second careers at home, Baker said, "I would like to see us once more to be an aggregation of lawyers and doctors and farmers and architects."

"I do not think we will ever solve this problem as long as we think of ourselves first and primarily as federal employees who are supposed to be here 12 months of the year," said Baker, a Tennessee Republican.

Baker announced in January that he will not seek re-election to a fourth Senate term in 1984. He said giving up the Senate seat he has held since 1966 did not mean he would retire from politics and refused to rule out a bid for the presidency in 1988.

As efforts to resolve the pay issue continued behind the scenes, the Senate added more than $300 million in extra funds for federal education, health and jobs programs.

Among the additions were: —$225 million to a program of health care benefits for 11 million unemployed workers. —An additional $40 million for education programs, mainly aimed at Southern and Western states.

—$30 million to provide summer jobs for jobless teen-agers.

Want 2 More Battleships

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy wants to build more fast attack submarines and reactivate more battleships, one of its top admirals says.

Testifying Wednesday before the defense subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Vice Adm. Robert L. Walters defended plans to reactivate the battleships Iowa and Missouri.

Walters also defended the Navy's request for money to contract for three SSN-688 class nuclear attack submarines in the next federal fiscal year instead of the two that have been requested each year since 1977.

Walters also said in his prepared testimony that submarines are going to have to become even more sophisticated if the United States is to stay ahead of the Soviet Union technologically.

"As the Soviets continue to construct new and increasingly sophisticated submarines, it becomes more difficult to maintain this qualitative edge," Walters said. "The Soviets are building fast, quiet, deep-diving submarines. It will be a challenge to our technological competence to stay ahead of them in the future."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the subcommittee chairman, told Walters and other Navy officials he did not expect money would be appropriated for any significant increases in Navy manpower.

Stevens questioned whether additional battleships should be reactivated, since it takes 1,500 officers and enlisted men to man each of them.

So far, one battleship, the USS New Jersey, has been reactivated.

Despite their heavy manpower requirements, battleships "provide incredible firepower and survivability unequalled in post-war ships," said Walters, the deputy chief of naval operations for surface warfare.

DA Says Grand Jury Decided Not To Hear Green Testimony

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Wake County grand jury that Monday accused Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green of conspiring to take bribes knew Green was available to testify, but decided not to call him, Wake County District Attorney C. Colon Willoughby said Wednesday.

The grand jury returned presentments Monday accusing Green of taking a $2,000 bribe and conspiring to receive bribes of $10,000 a month. Willoughby and former U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn, who was appointed to help prosecute Green, must now decide whether to seek indictments from the grand jury, which meets again next Monday.

Green has denied the allegations and complained that he was not asked to appear before the grand jury despite telling Willoughby he was willing to testify. The grand jury considered testimony from two other witnesses.

"I want you to know that last week, when this presentment procedure was explained to me, I volunteered to appear before the grand jury ... and again, I have not been contacted," Green said.

"I knew he was available," Willoughby said. "The decision of what witnesses to call is up to the grand jury."

The foreman of the grand jury was told Monday that Green was willing to testify, court officials said.

"It's very unusual for the subject in an inquiry to be called into a state grand jury," Willoughby said.

The grand jury also accused Howard F. Watts of Clarkton of conspiring with Green to obtain the $10,000-a-month bribe for Green.

Blackburn, 39, an attorney in private practice in Raleigh, is a former U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina and a former assistant state attorney general under Robert Morgan and, briefly, under Rufus Edmisten.

As assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District, a post he was named to in 1977, Blackburn successfully prosecuted Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald in a celebrated triple murder trial. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld the conviction last year after a lengthy appeal by MacDonald.

money for the county schools ($4.95 million was requested), and $2.26 million in local money for the Greenville school system ($2.46 million was requested).

This year, the county appropriated $4.68 million for the county and $2.03 million for the city.

Gray's recommended budget for the county school system reflects an increase of about 5 percent over the current year, while his recommendation for the city system is an increase of about 11.3 percent over 1982-1983.

In addition to Gray's recommendations for the individual school systems, he recommended a joint appropriation that would combine programs for autistic and severely and profoundly handicapped children in the two systems, as recommended by both school superintendents. The recommendation, totaling $56,810, would provide $29,125 for one severe and profound class and $27,684 for a class for autistic children.

Gray told commissioners that the special appropriation would be for one year only, until students in the two classes are included in the school systems' average daily membership allocation from the state.

In his budget message to the board, Gray said his recommendations for school current expense funds would provide no new programs or teachers. However, he said his recommendations will "keep present programs in place and are reasonable for a good school program for our young people."

Also reviewed Wednesday was the proposed budget for Pitt Community College. Gray has recommended a total of $591,878 in county money for PCC. Included in his recommendations are $479,878 in current expense funds and $112,000 in capital outlay money for 1983-1984. This year, PCC received $452,622 in current expense funds and $111,717 for capital outlay.

The school had requested a total of $701,236 for the coming year, including $210,174 for capital projects and $491,062 for current expense items.

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer
SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Leaders of 22,000 copper workers called an illegal strike against Chile's largest industry starting today to press for release of their union president, jailed for organizing nationwide protests against military rule.

A judge on Wednesday ordered Rodolfo Seguel, 29-year-old leader of the coppers workers, held until he decides if a trial is merited on the government's charge that Seguel jeopardized national security by organizing the demonstrations.

Detectives bashed down the door of the home where Seguel was sleeping early Wednesday and took him away. Seguel had called for peaceful protests Tuesday and hundreds of thousands of Chileans answered the call, but others took the streets and clashed with police in demonstrations that lasted into the morning. The call for the illegal strike today was a new challenge to President Augusto Pinochet and the growing, labor-led opposition. The state copper monopoly, Codelco, accounts for half of Chile's $4.5 billion annual export income.

The constitution of Chile says strikes are illegal unless they are based on work contract disputes. Also, any strike in the copper industry is illegal because it is considered an industry of strategic importance.

The leaders urged copper workers to stay off the job at El Salvador, one of its four main mines, for 48 hours, starting this morning.

About 4,300 workers are employed at the mine in the Atacama Desert 600 miles north of Santiago.

The copper union leaders announced a 24-hour strike for Friday against the other mines.

Orbe, the official news agency, said the government would apply "severe sanctions" against strikers but did not elaborate.

Hugo Estivaldes, the copper union vice president, said the strike was called to back demands for the release of Seguel and that of two other union leaders and a union lawyer arrested Tuesday in a demonstration near the El Teniente mine in Rancagua.

The union also demands the reinstatement of 23 miners at the El Salvador mine who were fired for arriving 10 minutes late for work in political protest Tuesday.

Four labor federations claiming 200,000 members in various industries but less united than the copper union scheduled a meeting to consider broadening the mine walkout into a general strike.

Hundreds of thousands of Chileans heeded calls by the five labor groups, led by Seguel, to take part peacefully in "days of national social protest" on May 11 and on Tuesday, the first in the nearly 10 years of Pinochet's regime.

The Interior Ministry held Seguel responsible for street disorders Tuesday in which three people were shot to death in working class districts of the capital and 644 people were arrested in 10 cities.

Fueling the unrest is a dramatic decline of Chile's free-market economy.

A five-year boom benefited many if not most of Chile's 11 million people, and in 1980, Pinochet, an army general, won a referendum giving him nine years of authoritarian power.

But in 1982, the economy shrank 14 percent and Pinochet came under attack for his handling of a deep recession.

Labor unions and political leaders from conservatives to socialists are demanding an end to his emergency powers and election of a congress. Pinochet has resisted.

But with unemployment well over 20 percent, few workers have so far been willing to risk their jobs by striking. The protest movement has been limited to school boycotts and the banging of empty pots.

Mayor Washington Is Warmly Greeted

CHICAGO (AP) — It was a hostile territory during his campaign to become Chicago's first black chief executive, but Mayor Harold Washington found the mood in the neighborhood has changed.

Washington chose the predominantly white Northwest Side for the first in a series of neighborhood meetings Wednesday, returning to an area where he was greeted by surly protesters during the campaign. The voters overwhelmingly backed Republican Bernard Epton in the April mayoral election.

On Wednesday, Washington addressed more than 700 mostly white residents at a local high school. And far from being jeered and hooted down, he received a standing ovation after reiterating his pledge to reform city government and devote more funds to neighborhood improvements.

Washington told the gathering, "I think I'm looking into the eyes of future partners in the building of this city. If I didn't believe that, I wouldn't have come here."

Among the issues addressed at the gathering was that of additional scattered-site public housing, fiercely opposed by white neighborhoods but supported by Washington.

The mayor has tried to allay fears about the program by promising that high-rise projects would not be built in neighborhoods with single-family homes.

Jo Ann Sytel of the Hanson-Riis Park Neighborhood Organization told Washington, "We will be a part of the overall picture. The responsibility for our neighborhoods is in your hands, and we do not take that lightly."

Jean Mayer, a member of the Southwest Parish and Neighborhood Federation that sponsored the event with other taxes," said Jim Morgan, representing the N.C. Association of Liquor Distillers.

Bill Rustin of the N.C. Merchants Association asked the committee not to reduce the 3 percent merchants' sales tax discount because it costs more than that to collect the tax for the state.

William Elmore of the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry objected to removing the federal depreciation schedule from state tax laws. He said the state needs the economic stimulus from the tax break.

Frank Gray of the N.C. Manufactured Housing Institute asked the committee to consider taxing double-wide mobile homes as one mobile home.

He explained that the bill would raise the cap on the 2 percent sales tax on motor vehicles from $120 to $300 and mobile homes are taxed as motor vehicles. Double-wides are taxed as two vehicles.

Sneed High of the N.C. Coin Operators Association said the $40 per machine tax on video games would be unfair because it is a 1,000 percent increase in the tax. He said money spent on the games is dropping and the tax would be "punitive."

the Northwest Neighborhood Federation, told the mayor that members of her group are "fighting to maintain our communities."

The groups are asking that there be no more public housing in their neighborhoods until other city neighborhoods have received their "fair share."

React To Rulings On Abortion

By The Associated Press
Supporters of legalized abortion praised Supreme Court rulings on abortion as "stronger than anything we could have hoped for," while foes said they would renew their efforts in Congress for a constitutional amendment.

In three separate decisions Wednesday, a decade after the high court first legalized abortion in 1973, it struck down state and local government regulations that could have made abortions more difficult to obtain.

One required abortions for women more than three months pregnant to be performed in full-service hospitals. Another required doctors to tell women seeking abortions about possible birth-giving alternatives, and to tell patients that the fetus is "a human life." A third required doctors to wait at least 24 hours after a woman signs an abortion consent form before performing the procedure.

"The court seems to have gone out of its way to say; the decision in 1973 was correct, reasoned, well-grounded in the Constitution and stop messing with it," said Nanette Falkenberg, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "It's clearly much stronger than anything we could have hoped for."

Archbishop Terence Cooke of New York called the Supreme Court action "disappointing to all who revere human life."

"When our most basic institutions condone such violent disregard for life... the value and nobility of every human life and every human family are dealt a lethal blow," Cooke said.

Barbara Lewis, legislative director for Ohio Right to Life, said the decision "dramatically reinforces the absolute necessity of passing a human life amendment" to the Constitution to outlaw abortion.

After the ruling, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who supports reversal of the court's 1973 abortion decision, called for renewed debate on the subject in Congress.

Peter Gemma, of the National Pro-Life Political Action Committee, said he was "honestly surprised because I fully expected that we would have a favorable ruling."

Jane Gruenebaum, spokeswoman for the National Abortion Federation, an association of abortion clinics, said the state laws struck down were "really aimed at denying access to abortion to women. They in no way enhanced the health of the women concerned."

There are 530 abortion clinics across the country, which accounted for three-fourths of all legal abortions in 1980. The decision on Wednesday ensures the future of abortion clinics.

In a small victory for groups opposed to legalized abortion, the court upheld a provision in Missouri that required a woman under 18 to have parental or judicial consent to receive an abortion, unless the woman lives independently of her parents and guardians.

"If we had lost that I would have been terribly shocked," said Gemma. "It's only common sense that parents will have some authority over their kids, particularly on a decision as important as abortion."

In the Missouri case, the court also upheld portions of a law requiring the presence of a second physician during abortions for women in their last three months of pregnancy and requiring a pathology report for every abortion performed.

The court, however, struck down a Missouri provision requiring hospitalization for all abortions performed for women more than three months pregnant.

TICKETING HANDICAPPED — Jack Myers, a paralyzed stroke victim who is challenging W. Va. motor vehicle laws by driving his electric-powered wheelchair-cycle on city streets, is ticketed by Vienna (W. Va.) Police Chief Gary Deem. Myers says the cycle is his only means of running errands and fending for himself. (AP Laserphoto)

Disco Queen Is Welcomed

BOSTON (AP) — Disco queen Donna Summer was welcomed back to Massachusetts as Gov. Michael S. Dukakis declared it "Donna Summer Day," and got in return a black-and-white satin jacket like those worn by members of her entourage.

The governor, at a Statehouse ceremony Wednesday, said he didn't know what he would do with the flashy garment. But his wife, Kitty, quickly said he would wear it while jogging.

"I think Boston should support the arts more," the 34-year-old Miss Summer said during the "Welcome Home" ceremony in her hometown. "A lot of artists have had to leave Boston to seek recognition."

Miss Summer agreed to kick off a two-month national tour with a free performance at the Boston Opera House for 2,600 listeners of a city radio station. She was to visit her old high school today and tell students about her success in the music industry.

Vehicle Collides With Train

Mary Nell Hill of Industrial Trailer Park was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety Wednesday after the car she was driving collided with a Southern Railway train at the crossing on Memorial Drive about 2:15 p.m.

Officers, who identified the engineer of the train as James Ormond Rogers of Raleigh, said the Hill vehicle stopped for the train at the crossing, then rolled forward and collided with one of the cars.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $1,500 to the Hill car and $500 to the train.

Pocketbooks Taken From Car

Greenville police said two pocketbooks were reported taken from a car parked in a lot at the intersection of Fourth and Evans Streets about 1:50 a.m. today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the purses, owned by Carol Marie Wolstenbom of 401 Jarvis St., and Norma Allen Jones of 205 North Summit St., were recovered a short time later from a trash bin a short distance away.

Cannon said $5 in cash was reported missing from the Jones purse and $10 in cash missing from the Wolstenbom pocketbook.

Handbag Taken From Parked Car

Chief Glenn Cannon said Kimberly Ruth Harrison of 207B East 13th St. reported her handbag was taken from a car parked at the Crow's Nest at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets about 11:50 p.m. Wednesday.

Ms. Harrison told officers the handbag contained $2 in cash.

Open House Set At Day Care Center

FARMVILLE — The Edwin Kids Day Care Center, a non-profit organization located at 401 Vines St., Farmville, will have an open house Saturday from 3-5 p.m.

The open house will showcase the center's services and give parents an opportunity to register for summer and fall enrollment.

Half-day and full-day programs are available and both offer planned curriculums and scheduled educational field trips.

Some activities the children recently participated in included a visit to the Greenville Fire Department, a picnic at Peppermint Park, a visit to Dr. Michael Dixon's dentist office and a visitation from an officer of the Farmville Police Department.

Fundraising projects will begin in July.

A special music program will be offered by Sandra Dupree this summer. She will feature group singing, activities and instrument instruction. The children will also participate in a summer program offered by the Farmville Public Library.

The center is affiliated with the Department of Public Instruction's Child Food Care Program and the N.C. Department of Agriculture. It is certified by the state Department of Human Resources.

Technologist Wins Award

Rebecca R. Leith, radiologic technologist in ultrasonography at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, won second place in the staff exhibits competition during the annual meeting of the North Carolina Society of Radiologic Technologists held June 1-5 in Winston-Salem.

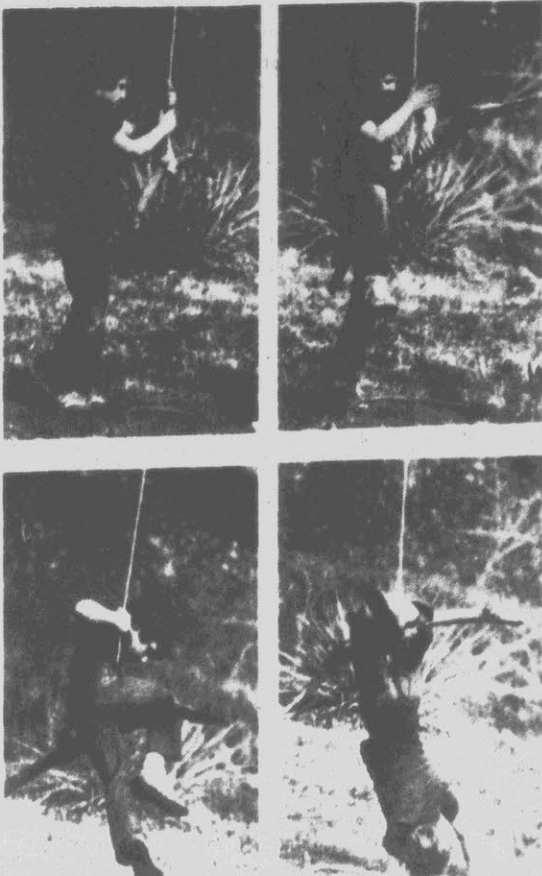

Ms. Leith's exhibit, entitled "Ultrasonography of the Neonatal Head," showed how ultrasound is performed on the newborn infant and the abnormalities it can detect. Ultrasound is used to evaluate abnormalities such as intracranial hemorrhaging which can result in retardation or death.

Dr. Steven White To Be Speaker

KILL DEVIL HILLS — Dr. John H. Furr of Norfolk, Va., will preside over the upcoming 88th annual session of a two-state regional medical group this weekend at the Holiday Inn here.

Scientific sessions will be held Friday and Saturday mornings with various doctors as guest speakers including Dr. Steven M. White of the East Carolina School of Medicine Division of Ophthalmology in Greenville.

Dr. W. Beverly Tucker of Henderson will be installed as the new president for 1983-84 at a closing banquet session Saturday night, followed by Hope Mihalap, a comedian, as after-dinner speaker.

MAKESHIFT SWING — Eight-year-old Josh Jones of Leavenworth, Kan., finds out the hard way that determination and patience don't always pay off as he winds up in a less than desirable position on his makeshift swing. Josh, who made the swing, says he will probably substitute a tire for the stick, to tame its unpredictable nature. (AP Laserphoto)

Approve Tests Of Competency

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

Four versions of part of a proposed writing competency test and two new reading and math competency tests for public schools were approved Wednesday by the N.C. Competency Test Commission.

The commission voted unanimously to accept the new test questions after a day-and-a-half meeting at Greensboro's Regional Center of the state Department of Public Instruction.

The new versions of the reading and math tests, which use 120 new questions on each to measure the same minimum skills covered by the current tests, will be used beginning in fall 1984.

Since 1978, the state's public high school students have been required to pass reading and math competency tests to receive diploma. Starting with the class of 1987, they also will have to pass a writing competency test.

Three versions of the reading and math tests are administered to high school juniors. The commission will add the two new versions and drop an old one, making available four editions of the reading, math and writing tests, said William Brown, director of the state Division of Research, who works with the commission.

Scholastic Testing Service of Bensenville, Ill., was paid $37,000 to help the commission come up with the new tests.

Each version of the multiple-choice section of the writing test contains 78 questions on punctuation, grammar, word usage, job applications, letter-writing and addressing envelopes, said James Hemby, interim president of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson.

The writing test also will include a section on writing a telephone message and taking a position on a topic and supporting it. While that section of the test also has been field-tested, the commission hasn't decided on the wording of the questions for that section, Hemby said.

Tenth-graders in 1984-85 will take the writing test for the first time on a trial basis. They will take it officially for the first time as juniors in the fall of 1985 and will have several chances to pass it before graduation in 1987.

N. C. Officials Deny Nat'l Guard Allegations

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina National Guard leader Adjutant Gen. William Ingram and state officials say they can answer each allegation of wrongdoing lodged against him during a legislative meeting Wednesday.

"I don't know what has triggered this (investigation) to this point but I feel it's personal now against me," said Ingram, who was accused by Rep. Murray Pool, D-Sampson, of improperly influencing promotions, misusing aircraft and starting his pension without retiring, among other things.

Crime Control and Public Safety Secretary Heman Clark, whose department oversees the Guard, said he believes the committee has "a lot of false innuendo." He and senior deputy attorney general Andy Vanore said they were prepared to answer each of the charges.

Pool told the Legislative Committee on the National Guard that questions about the 1st Battalion's 120th Infantry in Wilmington were raised after group commander Col. Arnold Jones died and was replaced by Maj. Nathaniel Robb. Pool said the law requires that promotions be based on seniority, yet acting commander Maj. Gene Ezzell and 26 other higher-ranked officers were passed over.

Pool also stated that:

- Up to 35 guardsmen in Raleigh play golf once a week during the spring and summer during their duty hours, costing the state $65,000 a year.
- Leftover concrete purchased for a Guard pistol range in Butner was used at the homes of city public safety officers, a charge investigated by the State Bureau of Investigation. The probe resulted in no criminal charges.

As for the concrete delivered to public safety officers homes, Clark said it was surplus and any expense was born by the concrete companies.

"The pension is a question legislators need to talk to themselves about," he said.

"If the statute is ambiguous it should be clarified," Clark said Ingram has received about $3,000 from the pension and is ready to repay it if needed.

State officials have searched aircraft logs and have found no misuse, Clark said. He said the trip to Mule Day was "for recruitment."

Synod Picks Moderator

FLAT ROCK, N.C. (AP) — The 179th General Synod of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, with about 280 delegates attending, elected a new moderator and vice moderator on Wednesday.

Joining the delegates for the meeting, which opened Monday night and ended Wednesday, were 151 ministers and 131 laymen.

Elected new moderator, the highest office in the church, was Dr. William Kuykendall, professor of history at Erskine College in Due West, S.C. The Rev. James Coad Jr. of Little Rock, Ark., was elected vice moderator.

Delegates reported on the church's three new retirement centers, said Ben Johnston, editor of the denomination's monthly magazine. A center north of Memphis, Tenn., opened last week, while centers in Gastonia and in Due West, S.C., are scheduled to open in September.

Outgoing Moderator Rev. Robert Marshburn of Doraville, Ga., said the church has experienced 11.5 percent growth in past year, due mostly to church members joining from the Presbyterian Church U.S. and the United Presbyterian Church USA, which merged last week.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,653,000, compared to 1,862,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up another broad gain today, continuing the rally of the past week after breaking through to record highs on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 51 points in the last five trading sessions, rose another 9.51 to 1,246.79 by noontime today.

The average's 10-point gain Wednesday carried it past the previous closing high of 1,232.59 reached on May 6.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

International Business Machines, the top holding of investing institutions, put some extra zip in the advance late Wednesday with a forecast of further strong earnings growth this year. IBM stock, up 3 points Wednesday, rose 1 1/4 more to 122 1/4 after a delayed opening today.

Other gainers among the volume leaders included Sears Roebuck, up 7/8 at 43; American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 at 64, and General Electric, up 3/4 at 57 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index rose .76 to 97.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.39 at 478.38.

Volume on the Big Board totalled 58.99 million shares at noontime, against 38.88 million at the same point Wednesday.

El Salvador's President Leaves For Washington

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Alvaro Magana left today for Washington and said he hopes to convince President Reagan to give El Salvador unrestricted aid to fight leftist guerrillas.

Magana left Ilopango airport here at 7 a.m. — 9 a.m. EDT — aboard the presidential plane, accompanied by Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena and Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova. They were to change to a U.S. air force plane in Miami for the flight to Washington.

Magana made no mention of possible negotiations with leftists, who have been waging a 3 1/2-year war to topple the U.S.-backed rightist government. However, U.S. officials in Washington said the subject likely would come up when the Reagan and Magana meet Friday.

Leftist leaders proposed such negotiations to presidential envoy Richard Stone in Mexico City earlier this week as he wrapped up a 10-nation Latin American fact-finding trip.

In the past, Salvadoran officials have rejected similar proposals, saying the rebels should lay down their arms and participate in general elections that Magana plans for December.

"We would like to be sure we have substantial aid and (that) we get it on a continuing basis, without too many ties attached," Magana told NBC News Tuesday night.

"The subversion gets unlimited aid and without any conditions," he said, referring to money and weapons allegedly smuggled to rebels from neighboring Nicaragua and the restraints imposed by Congress on aid to El Salvador.

Magana also is scheduled to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other U.S. officials, address the Organization of American States and conduct a news conference Saturday.

Reagan and Magana met once before in San Jose, Costa Rica, at the end of Reagan's Latin American tour in December.

Scheduled to accompany Magana for the three-day visit were Defense Minister Gen. Eugenio Vides Casanova, Fidel Chavez Mena of Foreign Affairs, and presidential secretary Francisco Jose Guerrero.

By law, Reagan has to certify to the Congress every six months that El Salvador is making progress in eliminating human rights abuses and pushing through social and economic reforms for aid to continue.

The next certification date is in July, and U.S. aid could stop unless Congress renews it.

For the past two years, the United States has been providing military and economic aid to Magana's administration — including technical assistance from not more than 55 U.S. military advisers.

Again Boycott Joint Exercises

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second straight year, U.S.-sponsored naval maneuvers in South American waters will be boycotted by Argentina in a protest of U.S. support for Britain in the Falklands War.

But the Navy said Wednesday that five Latin American countries that had boycotted the 1982 maneuvers in an apparent gesture of support for Argentina, will participate this year. Six U.S. ships have set sail for five months of air and sea maneuvers, the Navy said.

Last year's exercises followed the two-month South Atlantic war in which Britain regained control of the Falklands, which Argentina had seized.

Brazil, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela joined in last year's apparent boycott. All five countries will participate this year, the Navy said.

Six U.S. ships have set sail for five months of maneuvers with the Latin American navies.

Settlement Seen Cheaper

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A suit on behalf of 3,000 people whose phones were tapped in an organized crime crackdown was settled because it was cheaper than going to court, a phone company says.

Southern New England Telephone Co. agreed Wednesday to the $150,000 settlement in the 6-year-old class-action suit.

The company was accused of illegally tapping phones from 1963 to 1971, said James Curtin, general counsel and vice president, who said the company denies any wrongdoing. The suit charged the wiretap campaign snowballed into an effort to monitor calls of reporters, lawyers, and civil rights and anti-war activists.

Obituary Column

Bullock
ROCKY MOUNT — Mrs. Mamie Bullock of 931 Stokes Avenue here, died Tuesday night.

She was the wife of Dempsey Bullock of the home and the mother of Mrs. Mamie Ruth Cobb of Fountain.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary in Tarboro.

Dail

SNOW HILL — Mr. Jimmie Ray Dail, 46, a farmer of Route 1, died Wednesday in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 3:30 p.m. from the Church Street Chapel of the Farmville Funeral Home by the Rev. Donald Fader. Burial will follow in Snow Hill Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife.

Early Payment By Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., claiming a "remarkable comeback," has paid off $409.9 million of its $1.2 billion federally guaranteed loans — even though the repayment was not due until 1990.

Fred W. Zuckerman, Chrysler vice president and treasurer, presented a check Wednesday to Daniel P. Davison, chairman of U.S. Trust Co. in New York City, which will distribute the money to the private lenders.

"Imperialism is elevating its scales of intervention...with its millions of dollars, its weapons, its advisers and its plans to strengthen the army," he said. "Within a few days we will start to execute new plans and a new military campaign, with which we are going to obtain a new strategic victory."

The broadcast said Villalobos' statements were recorded Tuesday at what it called the swearing-in ceremony for a new rebel battalion in the northeast Morazan province, a longtime rebel stronghold.

Mrs. Doris Pittman Dail of the home; his mother, Mable Fields Dail of Snow Hill; one daughter, Miss Ann Dail of Kinston; two sons, Jimmie Allen Dail and Jerry Lynn Dail, both of Snow Hill; three sisters, Mrs. Sidney Earl Hill of Hookerton, Mrs. Robert Bright and Mrs. Harold Edwards, both of Kinston; three brothers, Earl Dail of Fountain, William Dail of Walstonburg and Alton Dail of Stantonsburg.

The family will receive friends at the Farmville Funeral Home from 7-9 p.m. Friday. In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the memorial fund at the Grimesley F.W.B. Church.

Morris

VANCEBORO — Mrs. Beatrice Smith Morris, 77, died Wednesday in Craven County Hospital.

Her funeral service will be conducted Friday at 3 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel here by the Rev. Jerry Smith and the Rev. Kenneth Dixon. Burial will be in Celestial Memorial Gardens here.

Mrs. Morris, a native of Craven County, spent all her life in the Vanceboro community. She was employed by Jay Apparel for many years and was a member of the Bridgeton Pentecostal Holiness Church.

She is survived by her husband, Levi Morris; a daughter, Mrs. Archie Morris of Rt. 2, Vanceboro; a sister, Mrs. John Waters of Vanceboro; three grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. At other times they will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Morris, Rt. 2, Vanceboro.

Parker

TARBORO — Mr. Willie Parker died Wednesday in Edgemore General Hospital.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary in Tarboro.

Pittman

BALTIMORE, Md. — Mr. Johnny Pittman Jr., formerly of Pitt County, died Saturday in Mt. Sinai Hospital in Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. at St. James F.W.B. Church in Fountain with the Rev. Robert Phillips officiating. Burial will follow in the Bullock Cemetery.

Mr. Pittman was a native of Pitt County but had lived in Baltimore for the past 20 years. He was employed by a construction company as a cement finisher.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Jean May Pittman of the home; two daughters, Miss Judy Ann Pittman and Juanita Pittman, both of the home; his mother and his step-father, Mrs. Gladys Bridgers and Jessie Bridgers, both of Rocky Mount; and one sister, Mrs. Ida Ruth Long of Greenville.

The body will be at Hamby Memorial Funeral Chapel in Fountain after 6 p.m. Friday until one hour prior to the funeral. Family visitation will be Friday from 8-9 p.m. at the chapel. The family will meet at the home of Mrs. Catherine Lindsey Taylor in Fountain.

Evans Blasts Houston

By The Associated Press

Darrell Evans stayed up to watch his own version of the late show — then put on a show all by himself against the Houston Astros.

"This is incredible. I've never done anything like this before," said Evans after his three home runs and six RBI powered the San Francisco Giants to a 7-1 victory over the Astros Wednesday.

Perhaps Evans wouldn't have been as successful had he not stayed up late to do his homework. Hitless in 17 previous trips against the Astros, Evans studied video tapes of himself for a couple of hours after Tuesday night's 12-inning, 3-2 loss to the Astros. He said he paid particular attention to his hands and feet and made some adjustments.

"I can hardly wait to get up to the plate when I'm hitting like this," said the 33-year veteran after boosting his home run total to a National League-tying 18 and RBI to 44. He also is hitting .315 and has a slugging average of .653.

In other NL action, it was Atlanta 3, Los Angeles 2; Montreal 7, Pittsburgh 4; St. Louis 7, Philadelphia 6; Chicago 7, New York 4 in 10 innings and San Diego 5, Cincinnati 1.

With his explosive afternoon, Evans tied Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the NL lead in homers, ran his career total to 250 and became the first National League player to hit three homers in a game since Claudell Washington did it for the New York Mets against the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1980.

Evans hit his first two homers — a solo shot in the first inning and a three-run blast in the third — off Houston starter Mike LaCoss, 4-5.

The left-handed slugger hit a hard liner that was speared by Houston first baseman Ray Knight in the fifth. After Max Venable's solo homer in the sixth gave San Francisco a 5-0 lead, Evans smacked a two-run shot deep into the right field seats at Candlestick Park.

"Even before I went in the ballgame, I felt real good," Evans said. "I just felt like I was going to hit the homers, and as soon as I hit the balls I knew they were gone."

Evans' power display backed the four-hit pitching of Fred Breining, 6-4, who had a perfect game until one out in the sixth.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Jerry Royster tied the game with a run-producing infield single, then Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly provided the deciding run as Atlanta rallied for two runs in the ninth to beat Los Angeles.

With the bases loaded, Royster bounced a hard grounder off the foot of reliever Dave Stewart, 5-2, to tie the score. Murphy then followed with his game-winning sacrifice fly.

Atlanta reliever Gene Garber, 2-1, who came on in the bottom of the seventh, recorded the victory. Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

"This is a very patient ballclub," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "The players feel that if they keep plugging away, something good will finally happen."

Expos 7, Pirates 4

Andre Dawson drove in four runs, two during a four-run fifth inning, and belted a homer as Montreal rallied to defeat Pittsburgh.

Ray Burris, 2-2, survived a three-run first inning and went on to gain the victory with relief help from Jeff Reardon, who posted his ninth save. Burris, 0-11 as a starter in 1982, posted his first victory in a starting role since the NL playoffs in 1981.

Losing 3-2, the Expos went ahead 6-3 in the fifth off Jim Bibby, 2-7, as Dawson slugged a two-run single. Al Oliver slapped an RBI double and Warren Cromartie hit a run-scoring grounder. Dawson also had a sacrifice fly in the second inning and smashed a solo homer, his 11th, in the seventh.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 6

David Green lashed a two-out RBI single in the eighth inning, capping a four-run rally that led St. Louis over Philadelphia in a game that saw Steve Carlton regain the all-time career strikeout mark.

The Cardinals' rally marred a seven-strikeout performance by Carlton, boosting his lifetime total to 3,542 — seven more than Nolan Ryan, with whom he had been tied. Both Carlton and Ryan earlier this year topped Walter Johnson's lifetime mark of 3,508.

Losing 6-3, the Cardinals won the game in the eighth on an RBI single by Dane Iorg, Glenn Brummer's run-scoring grounder, and RBI singles by Darrell Porter and Green.

Kevin Hagen gained his first major league victory with one inning of relief, and Bruce Sutter pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

Cubs 7, Mets 4

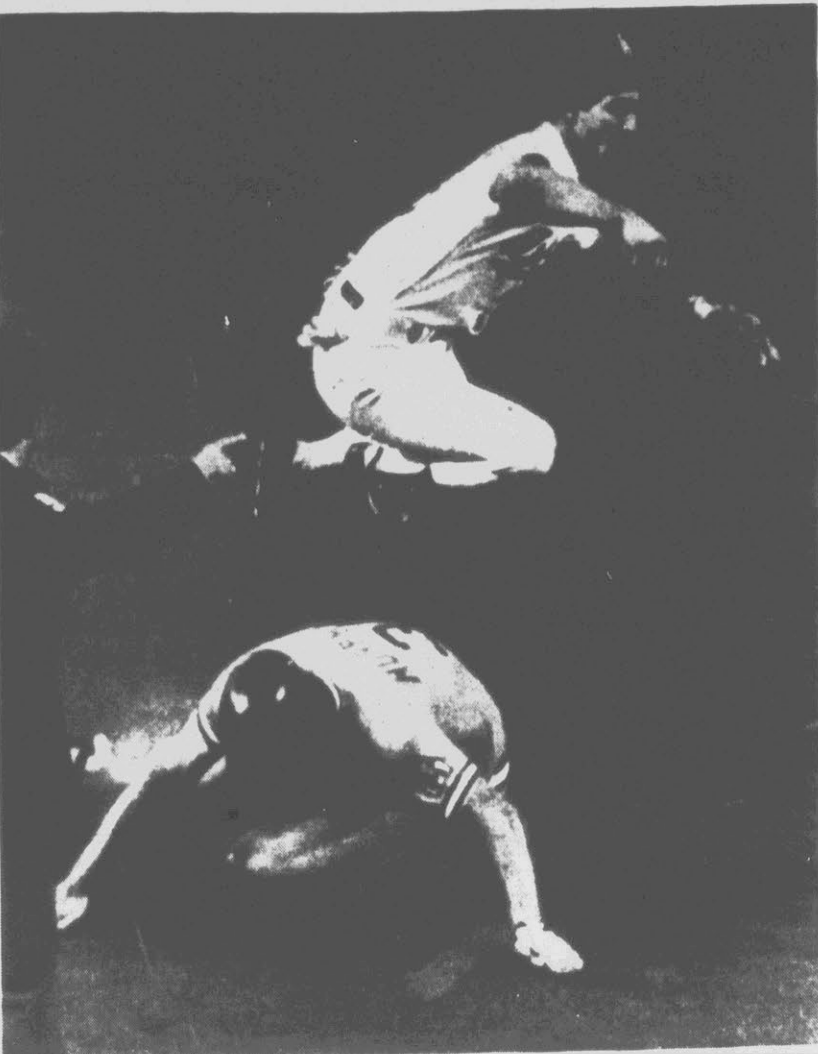

Jay Johnstone's bases-loaded, two-run single in the 10th led Chicago over New York. Mel Hall opened the inning with a single and moved to second on Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice which saw Mets' first baseman Rusty Staub charged with an error for missing the tag, and advanced to second on Bill Buckner's sacrifice.

Ron Cey was walked intentionally to load the bases and Johnstone delivered his two-run single off Scott Holman, the fifth of six pitchers used by the Mets. Holman, 1-5, was lifted in favor of Mike Torrez after walking Cubs winner Lee Smith, 2-4. Larry Bowa then greeted Torrez with an RBI single to make it 7-4.

Padres 5, Reds 1

Ed Whitson pitched a three-hitter and helped himself with a two-run single as San Diego defeated Cincinnati. Whitson, 1-4, making his fourth start since coming off the disabled list May 20, struck out five and walked one.

Terry Kennedy also slugged a two-run homer for the Padres. His blast in the first off Charlie Puleo, 2-3, actually provided the Padres with their winning run.

Over And Under

baseman Steve Sax in the first inning at Dodger Stadium. Murphy was out at second, but the Braves went on to take a 4-3 victory. (AP Laserphoto)

Four Pitt County Errors Give Rocky Mount Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Barry Butler struck out seven on the mound and slammed a two-run homer in the fifth the lead Rocky Mount to a 6-3 victory over Pitt County in American Legion baseball Wednesday.

Hank Jones slapped two hits in four trips to the plate to lead Rocky Mount, while Randy Warren continued his hitting spree with three hits in five at bats for Pitt County.

Pitt County out-hit Rocky Mount 9-5, but four errors cost Post 39 the game.

Pitt took the lead with three runs in the top of the third. Bobby Buie reached first on an error to open the inning, and Warren followed with a single.

A fielder's choice by Mont

Carter nailed Buie at third, but Warren and Carter scored when Doug Coley lofted the ball to left field and Todd Goins couldn't hang on to for a running catch. Coley crossed the plate on a double by losing pitcher Kenny Kirkland.

Rocky Mount retaliated with a pair of runs in the bottom of the third. Kirkland hit Goins with a pitch to open the rally, and Eddie Naylor and Neil Avent drew walks to fill the bases. On a delayed steal, Kirkland hit Avent in the back, sending the ball into center field and allowing Goins and Naylor to score.

Rocky Mount picked up two more runs in the fourth, as Hank Jones and Danny Isbell scored when a grounder by Avent went between Carter's legs at second base. Jones had singled and Isbell drew a base on balls to set up a 4-3 Rocky Mount lead.

Butler's homer in the fifth put the game out of reach, as Pitt County stranded runners at second in the fifth and sixth innings. Greg Briley tripled to open the eighth, but Butler struck out Kirkland and Troy Hudson to quiet the rally.

Pitt County, now 7-2 on the season, hosts Snow Hill tonight at 8 p.m. at D.H. Conley.

Tuesday's incident.

Martin admitted whacking the urinal with a bat. According to one source, the outburst came during the fifth inning, when the Yankees were down 6-1.

"None of the players did it," Martin said. "I broke it. I called Gabe (Indians president Gabe Paul) and offered to pay for it."

According to the New York

Post and New York Daily News, Steinbrenner is upset at Martin for a number of things.

The News said that Monday night, after the Yankees lost 9-0 to Cleveland, Steinbrenner became even more upset when he learned that Martin had skipped a workout he had ordered last week and that only 11 players had attended.

Martin said that if he's in trouble, Steinbrenner should fire him. "I ain't running scared of nobody. Our relationship is supposed to be on a man-to-man level. I'm not going to talk about my job with him through the papers."

'Sick' Pitchers Lift Chicago Over Angels

By The Associated Press

Shane Rawley and LaMarr Hoyt didn't feel all that well — but they were better than the batters they faced.

Rawley, fighting a fever, struggled to a nine-hitter as the New York Yankees snapped a four-game losing streak by beating the Cleveland Indians 8-5, and Hoyt, likewise battling the flu, scattered four hits in seven innings as the Chicago White Sox defeated California 5-2 in a pair of American League games Wednesday night.

Elsewhere it was Oakland 10, Toronto 1; Detroit 4, Boston 2; Minnesota 6, Kansas City 2; Seattle 6, Texas 4, and Baltimore 11, Milwaukee 8 in 10 innings.

"I had a pretty high fever last night, a sore throat, and I ached all over," Rawley said. "I was just a little weak, and it affected my velocity just a little." He walked five batters and struck out only two.

Despite those normally mediocre numbers, Yankees Manager Billy Martin called Rawley's performance heroic.

"He was sick and I didn't think he could start," Martin said. "He was up all last night. I didn't think he threw the ball as hard as he usually does. He did one heck of a job when you consider everything."

The Yankees built a 7-0 lead with five runs in the first inning, three on Graig Nettles' homer, and two in the second before the Indians turned the rout into a close game. Chris Bando hit a three-run homer for the Indians.

"Throw out the first inning, and we win the game," Cleveland Manager Mike Ferraro philosophized.

The victory came less than 24 hours after Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said he was unhappy with the team's performance and some of Martin's activities, creating more headlines.

"It's something all the players accept," Rawley said of Steinbrenner's penchant for public utterances. "It's kind of neat because there is always something to look forward to. But I don't think it affects us because on the field. It's a whole different ballgame."

White Sox 5, Angels 2

Hoyt seemingly didn't mind getting lifted by Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa after seven innings, during which he fanned four batters and walked one.

"I was gassed," he said. "I had the flu the last couple of days and the fatigue from my illness just didn't make me feel strong enough to finish."

Scott Fletcher triggered the White

Sox's decisive two-run rally in the fifth-inning with a double and also had a sacrifice fly. With one out, he doubled and Jerry Dybzinski tied it 2-2 with a single. With two away, Carlton Fisk tripled to center to put Chicago ahead to stay.

California's Doug DeCinces went 0-for-4 and had his 12-game hitting streak stopped.

A's 10, Blue Jays 1

Davey Lopes drove in seven runs for Oakland with a double, a triple and a grand-slam homer.

Lopes, an 11-year veteran, drove in two runs with a second-inning double off Luis Leal, then picked on Toronto reliever Dave Geisel for a run-scoring triple in the fourth and his seventh homer of the year and third career grand slam in the fifth.

Rookie Mike Krueger picked his first major-league complete game for the A's, scattering eight hits.

Tigers 4, Red Sox 2

Kirk Gibson, Detroit's batting star in a losing effort the previous evening, kept his bat hot against the Red Sox, drilling a two-run triple.

"Like I said last night, it's a lot more fun to contribute to a winning cause," said Gibson. "That's what we're here for."

Chet Lemon and Lance Parrish each hit a solo homer.

Twins 6, Royals 2

Scott Uliger and Frank Viola teamed their talents for the Twins to turn back Kansas City.

Uliger, replacing injured Kent Hrbek at first base, drilled three hits — two doubles and a single — to match his previous total big-league output. Viola scattered eight Royals hits.

Mariners 6, Rangers 4

Al Cowens hit a two-out, two-run triple in a three-run ninth inning as the Mariners vaulted past Texas.

His game-winning hit to right-center field off the Rangers' ace reliever, Odell Jones, followed singles by Domingo Ramos and Steve Henderson, put Seattle on top 5-4 and snapped a five-game victory streak by Texas.

Orioles 11, Brewers 8

Baltimore, riding five runs batted in by Cal Ripken Jr., rallied from a seven-run deficit after six innings and beat Milwaukee on John Shelby's single that produced the Orioles' winning run in a four-run 10th inning.

"This might top them all," Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn muttered. "It probably does, getting a 7-0 lead and losing in extra innings." Mark Brouhard hit a two-run homer for Milwaukee.

'Bear', Ballesteros Agree Driver Is Out At 1983 U.S. Open

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Seve Ballesteros are in agreement on at least one point:

For the most part, the driver stays in the bag during the 83rd U.S. Open Golf Championship which began today. The rough is so deep, so severe, if a player challenges it with the driver "he's out of his tree," Nicklaus said.

John Hand, director of competitions for the sponsoring USGA, said "the only word to describe it is 'penal.'"

Ballesteros, the young Spaniard who won the Masters and established himself as a solid favorite here when he won the Westchester Classic last Sunday, said he used a one-iron off the tee 11 times and the driver only on the three par-5 holes on treacherous Oakmont during his final practice round Wednesday.

"You don't hit the driver very often," agreed Nicklaus, who will be seeking the record fifth American national championship that was denied him by Tom Watson's dramatic chip-in a year ago at Pebble Beach.

But, in taking the driver out of the hands of the players, "they've taken an awful lot of the gamble out of the golf course," Nicklaus said.

"They've forced you to play safe. As a result, the scores are going to be lower. If the gamble was left in, the scores would be higher."

Ballesteros predicted the scores will be high enough in any event.

"The fairways are very narrow. There is too much rough. The greens are fast, very fast. You cannot chip. The scores will be high. Maybe two over (par) will win," he said.

Ballesteros, 26, now the winner of two Masters and a British Open crown, said "my confidence is very, very high," coming into today's first round.

He noted, however, "this tournament has not been any good to me." He once was disqualified for missing his starting times and failed to qualify for the final two rounds on another occasion.

"Seve is a very good player," agreed Nicklaus, at age 43 seeking still another addition to the record 19 major titles he's collected in an unmatched career.

"But he hasn't yet proved he can win on an Open course."

Nicklaus hasn't won this year but, he said, that is not significant coming into this one, one of the four events around which he has built his golfing life.

"I'm well prepared," he said. "Actually, I'm playing rather well. I have a shot."

And, most leading players agreed, not many in the field of 146 pros and 10 amateurs do have a shot. The number, generally picked around 20, is limited by the severity of the course, which Watson said "is the toughest I've ever seen."

Watson, in the worst slump of his career, said he is "not playing particularly well. Off the way I'm playing, I wouldn't give myself much chance."

Palmer Let Nicklaus 'Out Of The Cage'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Oakmont revisited — 21 years later.

Who can forget the June of 1962 when the pendulum of bigtime tournament golf swung from the fabled, charismatic Charger to the dour, workmanlike fat kid from Ohio?

"I let the Bear out of the cage," Arnold Palmer was to remark later in reviewing his playoff defeat at the hands of the bulbous, 22-year-old rookie, Jack Nicklaus, in the 62nd U. S. Open Golf Championship.

"If I had been able to beat that strong, young dude in that tournament, I might have held him off for another five years. But Jack gained such confidence and momentum there was no stopping him after that."

It is now two decades plus a year later and this storied old course still lies here tucked in the side of a mountain outside Pittsburgh — hardly a blade of grass changed.

Arnie and Jack are back, too, but the same can't be said of them.

Arnie is 53, his hair a silvery sheen, his oldtime ability to strangle a golf to death dulled by the years but still, nut-brown and lean, a magnetic, macho personality.

Nicklaus is no longer the kid whose Ohio State teammates called "Blobo," "Whaleman" and "Baby Dumping."

He shed some 20 pounds, let his gold-colored hair grow to a fashionable length and turned into a Hollywood matinee idol type while amassing the greatest collection of major championships — 19 — in the history of the game.

The "Golden Bear" became the "Golden Boy," one of the most popular personalities in all sports. But at 42, without a tour victory in a year, he is looking over his shoulder at a brilliant, daring young Spaniard named Seve Ballesteros.

The dark-eyed Latin may be the new crown prince of golf, but he will have to go far to transcend the drama that signaled the changing of the guard on this same course 21 years ago.

As 20-year-old amateur, Nicklaus had finished second to Palmer in the U. S. Open at Denver in 1960 and won the NCAA and his second U. S. Amateur title in 1961 before turning pro. As a brash, raw rookie, he now was daring to challenge the great Palmer in his own backyard before all his neighbors and friends.

Palmer was at the height of his game, already winner of three Masters, the British and U. S. Opens. He was a national idol. People stayed close to their TV sets on weekends to watch him stage one of his patented miracle finishes.

This adulation was multiplied in this mine and steel area where Arnie grew up, married and raised his family in Latrobe, Pa., a stone's throw from the course.

Arnie played his round and drove home for dinner.

Oakmont galleries were understandably hostile to Nicklaus. To them, he was a brash young outsider who threatened their hometown hero.

Palmer and Nicklaus ultimately tied for the championship at 283, forcing a playoff. Big Jack won the playoff, 71 to 74, suffering some of the grossest indignities ever heaped on a competitor.

A chubby kid with a crew haircut and a baby face, looking like a young Boog Powell, Nicklaus lacked Arnie's flair. Appearing grim at times because of intense concentration, he was a slow, methodical player, often standing over a putt seemingly an eternity before moving the club.

Lloyd's Pays $10 Million In Shergar Theft Case

LONDON (AP) — Lloyd's of London said its underwriters have agreed to pay theft insurance for the stolen champion racehorse Shergar and the London Times reported that the payout probably will total $10.6 million.

A spokesman for Lloyd's who declined to be named said insurers involved believe Shergar is still alive despite a statement by Irish police that they think he is dead.

The spokesman said the amount of the theft claim "will certainly run into millions" but did not name the sum.

Shergar was stolen at gunpoint from the Aga Khan's stud farm at Ballymany in Ireland by a gang of masked men Feb. 8. The stallion, owned by a 34-member syndicate in which the Aga Khan has six shares, won the 1981 English and Irish Derbies.

When stolen, Shergar had ceased racing and become a highly-prized stud. His abduction has cost the syndicate greatly in lost stud fees.

Sportsworld 14
Lions 3

Galen Brinn and Tim Moore slapped a pair of hits each, while Sportsworld's pitchers allowed only two hits to pave the way to a 14-3 victory Wednesday in North State Little League baseball.

Sportsworld had Doc Williams on the mound most of the way before Kelvin Yarrell came on in relief. The tandem struck out 10 batters.

Jason Wing scored four runs for Sportsworld with a single and two walks.

After Wing drew a base on balls to open the game, Brinn, Moore and Jamie Brewington singled to drive in four runs and put the game away. Sportsworld added five more in the second inning, one in the third and five more in the fifth.

Carroll&Asso..... 7
First Federal 4

A two-run double by Tauré Claibourne in the fifth inning gave Carroll and Associates a 7-4 win over First Federal in Tar Heel Little League baseball Wednesday.

Drew Johnson and Michael

Cox each homered for First Federal, but Carroll and Associates rallied for five runs in the fifth to tie the game.

Michael Sutton walked and Travis Williamson reached first on an error before Claibourne's double. Singles by Julius Smith and Marvin Gaye drove in two more runs.

Johnson ripped a solo shot in the third and Cox a two-run homer in the fourth for First Federal.

Babe Ruth

Planters 6
Coca-Cola 1

Eric Jarman fired a two-hitter to lead Planters Bank to a 6-1 win over Coca-Cola in Wednesday Babe Ruth League baseball.

Jason Galloway and Clark Stallings walked to open the second inning, and a balk moved the runners to second and third. A sacrifice by Jarman to the second baseman drove in the winning run.

Planters added a run in the third and three insurance runs in the fifth to seal the victory.

Wachovia 11
Pepsi-Cola 3

Wachvia rapped just six hits but received 13 walks from Pepsi pitchers to record an 11-3 win in Wednesday Babe Ruth baseball action.

Larke Weatherington slapped two hits in four trips to the plate for Wachovia, while Mitch Phillips and Sterling Edwards went 2-4 for Pepsi.

Wachovia took a 2-0 lead in the second inning and put the game away with four runs in the third.

Lee Eakes, Larke Worthington, Terry Warren, Travis King and James Matthews walked to open the third for Wachovia. A sacrifice by Mike Sasser and another base on balls drove in the final two runs of the frame.

Wachovia added three more in the fourth and one each in the fifth and sixth.

Pitt Sr. Babe Ruth

Winterville 5
Jamesville 4

HOLLYWOOD — Steve Kite scored the winning run on a double steal to give Winterville Machine Works a 5-4 victory over Jamesville in Pitt County Senior Babe Ruth League baseball Wednesday.

Winning pitcher Chris Via and Wesley Smith slapped two hits each for Winterville, while C. Hardison and J. Wynne had two for Jamesville.

Winterville improved its record to 1-4 on the season, while Jamesville slid to 0-2. Winterville travels to Washington tonight.

Pitt Babe Ruth

Chicod 14
Ayden 5

AYDEN — Steve Mills slammed a solo homer in the fourth inning to tie the score and Chicod went on to take a 14-5 win over Ayden in Pitt County Babe Ruth league baseball Wednesday.

Mills and Mike Elks went 3-5 on the night, while Shane Adams was 2-4 for Chicod. Eddie Brown had three hits in four at bats, with Feign Worthington 3-5 and Jeff Adkins 2-4 for Ayden.

Randy Mills walked after Steve Mills' homer in the fourth, stole second, moved to third on an error and scored the go-ahead run on a single by Adams in the fourth.

On a barnstorming tour in the late 19th century, John L. Sullivan offered $1,000 to any man who could stay four rounds with him. Fifty men tried and only one succeeded.

Adams was 2-4 for Chicod. Eddie Brown had three hits in four at bats, with Feign Worthington 3-5 and Jeff Adkins 2-4 for Ayden.

Hernandez Shocked By Trade

By The Associated Press

Going from the world champions to the team with the worst record in baseball came as a shock to Keith Hernandez. But he says it won't change his approach to the game.

"This game's a challenge, no matter who you play for," Hernandez said after being traded from the St. Louis Cardinals to the New York Mets an hour before the trading deadline Wednesday.

"I talked to (Mets General Manager) Frank Cashen and he's very excited about their getting me. They're hoping that I can turn things around. Hopefully I can."

The trade of the 29-year-old Hernandez, a one-time National League Most Valuable Player, was the only pre-deadline deal that that could be classified as a blockbuster.

In return, the Cardinals got Neil Allen, the reliever beset this season by personal and professional troubles, and Rick Ownbey, a raw but promising right-hander who was promptly dispatched to Louisville of the American Association.

There were only two other major deals, both in the American League.

In one, the Chicago White Sox and Seattle Mariners exchanged second basemen. The Mariners got switch-hitting Tony Bernatard; the White Sox got Julio Cruz, the leading base-stealer in the majors this year with 33, who is playing out his option.

In the other, the New York Yankees got a right-handed starting pitcher, a commodity they sorely lacked, in Matt Keough. Keough came from the Oakland A's in return for first baseman Marshall Brant and pitcher Ben Callahan, both minor leaguers.

In a minor deal, the Mets sent veteran outfielder-first baseman Mike Jorgensen to the Atlanta Braves for a player to be named later. In a deal made Tuesday, New York got catcher Junior Ortiz from Pittsburgh for outfielder Marvell Wynne and pitcher Steven Senteney.

Hernandez, hitting .284 with three home runs and 26 RBI, was unaware that he had been dealt until 20 minutes before the trade was announced at 7 p.m. EDT, an hour before the deadline. He was taking batting practice in preparation for Wednesday night's game with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I wasn't shocked that I was traded," he said. "I was shocked that it was to the Mets."

A .299 lifetime hitter, Hernandez is expected to replace Dave Kingman at first base for the Mets. Kingman, who led the National League with 37 home runs last year while hitting only .204, has 12 homers this year, but is hitting only .204 and has been the subject of recurrent trade rumors.

"Dave Kingman is still with the club, but in all conscience I have to try to make a trade for him," Cashen said.

The trade of Hernandez finally opens up the outfield spot the Cardinals had wanted for David Green, who had been shut out of the alignment of Lonnie Smith, Willie McGee and George Hendrick. Smith is currently going undergoing voluntary therapy in a drug-rehabilitation center.

Hendrick, who worked out a first base during spring training, played first Wednesday night, and Cardinals' General Manager Joe McDonald said the team plans to keep him there for the time being.

The Cardinals also called up Andy Van Slyke, a 22-year-old outfielder, from Louisville, where he was hitting .366 with seven homers 42 RBI in 49 games.

Allen, who had 67 saves in his first four seasons, is suffering through his worst season, with a 2-7 record and a 4.50. At one point, he asked to be sent to an alcohol-rehabilitation center, and was undergoing treatment for stress at a New York Hospital when he was traded.

Ownbey, suffering from control difficulties, was 1-3 with a 4.67 ERA.

Cruz, hitting .254 with two homers and 12 RBI, said he was "nervous, scared, excited" about going to Chicago.

But Mariner Manager Rene Lachemann said it was a matter of getting a player for him now instead of losing him later.

"You hate to see Julio go," Lachemann said. "To me, he is the best fielding second baseman in the game. But he seemed determined to leave at the end of the year and we would have lost him without compensation."

Bernatard, a switch hitter, had played in all of Chicago's 59 games and was hitting .262 with two homers and 26 RBI. He was leading the White Sox with 61 hits, 16 doubles and five sacrifice flies.

The Yankees, seeking a right hander to balance a starting rotation that has four lefties, picked up Keough, who was 2-3 with a 5.52 ERA this season. He was 11-18 last year, with a 5.72 ERA. His best season was 1980, when he was 16-13 with a 2.92 ERA.

Cummings Readies For Return

NEW YORK (AP) — Terry Cummings' acceptance speech for the National Basketball Association's rookie of the year award sounded like he was campaigning for next season's comeback player of the year.

"I want everyone to know I'll come back next season and will do my best to live up to this award," Cummings said after receiving his rookie of the year trophy Wednesday.

Cummings already had established his strong rookie-of-the-year credentials for the Clippers — 23.7 points and 10.6 rebounds per game — when heartbeat irregularities were discovered early in April. The San Diego forward missed the last two weeks of the regular season and there were whispers that his career might be over.

"I'll definitely be back," Cummings said. "Some of the doctors say I might be at only 90 percent (effectiveness), but I believe I can play to my full potential."

Cummings said doctors aren't sure what caused his heart problems, and his treatment, for now, consists of a special diet.

"I'll be a little smarter now and eat more fruits and vegetables and broiled foods," Cummings said.

He said the shock of finding out he had a heart problem was "like buying a brand new car and finding out it doesn't work. It was frustrating because I never had problems with my body before."

Philadelphia's Moses Malone, in a near-unanimous vote, was named the NBA's 1982-83 Most Valuable Player for the third time at the same awards luncheon.

Malone, who was first in the NBA in rebounding with 15.3 per game and was fifth in scoring with an average of 24.5, also was the MVP of the NBA championship series, during which the 76ers swept Los Angeles in four games.

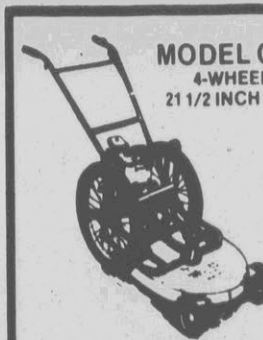

The last player to win both the regular-season and championship series MVP was Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was known as Lew Alcindor when he did it in 1971 for the Milwaukee Bucks.

Malone, who also won the NBA's MVP award in 1978-79 and 1981-82, received 69 first-place votes from a na-

Tape Indicates Green Wary Of Undercover Agent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Thomas "Doc" Ryan told Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green he represented a group of Detroit investors involved in "import-export" deals along the North Carolina coast who wanted to see Green elected governor. The Fayetteville Times reported today.

Ryan was actually FBI agent Robert Drdak and the luncheon meeting on Feb. 15, 1982, was secretly tape-recorded. The Times reported today it had obtained a transcript of that tape, which has not been made public.

Green was wary of Ryan and asked Ryan four times if he was an FBI agent while the two men ate lunch in Raleigh, The Times said.

Green was accused by a Wake County grand jury Monday of conspiring to accept $10,000 a month in bribes from Drdak and with accepting a $2,000 bribe as a campaign contribution.

At one point in the conversation, The Times said, Green told Drdak that "I'm not in a position to sacrifice my principles for one thousand a month or ten thousand a month or whatever the figure is."

Green was first introduced to Drdak by former Clarkton businessman Howard Franklin Watts, a long-time acquaintance of Green's now serving a 13-year jail sentence on counterfeiting and arson-related charges stemming from COLCOR.

Drdak met again with Green at the Western Sizzler steak house on Feb. 15. The meeting lasted about two hours.

Drdak began by telling Green that he was raised in Detroit and was working for some Detroit people who had "invested some money in some, ah, deals along the coast there, import-export deals is a better word, and they they lost a bunch right off." He says his people sent him and another fellow down "to see if we could kinda straighten things out..."

Here are excerpts of the meeting, as presented in The Times' transcript:

GREEN: Well, let me tell you this, Tom, you know, I've leveled with you. You know you — you could be...

DRDAK: Sure.

GREEN: ...the FBI...

DRDAK: Sure I could be anywhere. I could be anybody.

GREEN: ...Break Jimmy

Green's neck, but I'm not gonna let you do it. On the other hand, you could have several different things going right — right now that might be a little bit off color and a little bit out of line. Well, the minute I got in there and tried to help you, they might say he paid Jimmy off, he can buy Jimmy Green, then I got more trouble than I can face up to the rest of my life...I love to work with people and I love to help people if I was not in public office, it would be a different thing. Sure yeah, you could use the money and I could use the money and everybody could use the money. I'm not rich but am gettin' along pretty good not as good as some people. I simply saying to you I'm not in a position to sacrifice my principles for one thousand a month or ten thousand a month or whatever the figure is.

DRDAK: Yeah.

GREEN: And I, will honestly tell you I couldn't tell if you put ten thousand or one thousand or what.

DRDAK: It's a, well it was, ah,

GREEN: Are you with the business or are you with the FBI?

DRDAK: We're an investment firm. We're with an investment firm in Detroit. Investments.

GREEN: A fellow said to me a while ago, said to me, ah, certain organizations in this state today, political organizations, have employed three people, and I've just heard this since I saw you last, have employed three people — to try to do to me and — and other office holders just what I tried to prevent.

GREEN: Let me ask you a question. You mentioned those names (District Court Judge J. Wilton Hunt and Columbus county commissioner Ed Walton Williamson), those people down there that who are my friends and your friends that you help, how do they use what you give them without getting caught? How do they use a bunch of cash like that?

DRDAK: Well, now, you know, now it wouldn't — it wouldn't do for me to say that that's the help I gave'em.

GREEN: Well, I know and I'm not, ah, I'm not —

DRDAK: I told you before, you know, I would — I would never — I would never, ah, disclose a trust with you and that's the way it'd hafta be with them.

GREEN: I don't really know if you can do things that way without somebody knowing about it beside a few people and that would be the end of me if it did.

DRDAK: Well, of course, nobody would know but me.

GREEN: And me.

DRDAK: If you just want to do it that would be the thing.

DRDAK: You're paranoid, you're paranoid.

GREEN: Could be another

ABSCAM. (Green laughs)

DRDAK: You're paranoid. It'd take somebody with a lotta — it'd take somebody with a lotta time on their hands to be fooling around in an area just with that in mind, you know what I mean?

GREEN: Let me — you ask if you were to try — if you were to do somethin' to help me as you suggested before, ah, how would you go about doin' it?

DRDAK: We could do it anyway you want it.

GREEN: Obviously, I wouldn't let you give me anything. I wouldn't take anything from you.

DRDAK: I didn't think — I wouldn't wanna give it to ya. No, I wouldn't wanna give it to ya.

GREEN: Well, how would it be done?

DRDAK: Because, see, in honesty, I wouldn't —

GREEN: How would it be done?

DRDAK: Well, anyway you would feel comfortable, ah,

GREEN: I don't know.

DRDAK: The reason I wouldn't wanna give it to you is because see the shoe could be on the other foot.

GREEN: The only way...

DRDAK: But let me say the shoe could be on the other foot. You can be wantin' to use somethin' like this to be governor then say here's this — hole come to bribe me and I got him, see?

GREEN: I'm not that kind.

DRDAK: Well, see. Well, I'm careful too now.

GREEN: Well, but, ah, in what way do you think, ah, you could do it so if somebody ever said to me, ah, Tom Ryan, alias John Doe says he gave you ten thousand dollars — and I say he's a damn liar and they say here's a search warrant to search your house and see, and yep, here are the serial numbers.

DRDAK: Well, you — you mentioned the first day that, ah, they would ah, that they would turn up somewhere and you would find it and, of course, you couldn't, you know, leave it under the john in the men's room.

GREEN: I don't know how, though. I don't know how that could be down here.

DRDAK: It could be in the (pause) hell, it could come in a delivery, say like, ah, GREEN: But you know I — I-I don't know how you'd deliver it, without somebody knowing that you — that you went and sent it or that I went and came.

DRDAK: Ah, what if, ah, it was, ah, sent by somebody that didn't know what was goin' on either way? Say like, ah, GREEN: Well, if you get a third party in it, then you got to someone else in it.

DRDAK: No, say that, no say they-they thought they were delivering a potted flower. Make a flower delivery.

GREEN: From who?

DRDAK: The Jaycees.

GREEN: From where?

DRDAK: Say the Jaycees. See, he won't know what's in there. He, all his knows is it's a flower.

GREEN: How much are you talking about?

DRDAK: Hm?

GREEN: How much are you talkin' about?

DRDAK: What we talked about first.

GREEN: I couldn't read your writing.

DRDAK: Well, you mentioned it.

GREEN: You either didn't have enough zeroes or you had the decimal in the wrong place.

DRDAK: It wasn't — it wasn't, ah, it wasn't enough.

GREEN: I didn't know what it was. I don't know if it was one or 10.

DRDAK: It was a 10.

GREEN: That was a month.

DRDAK: Um hm.

GREEN: Now Tom, let me ask you something, what could I possibly do for you and your company that would be that...

DRDAK: Get elected governor.

GREEN: Well, we're going to work on that, but surely you've got some way of — some way of getting that money to me by check, don't you, would look above board.

DRDAK: We could.

At this point, Green says it will take two and a half to three million dollars to elect the next governor of this state... and he and Drdak begin talking about campaign contributions.

GREEN: If we can raise the money, we can win.

DRDAK: Well, how —

GREEN: You can't win it with a million dollars, the other man can't either.

DRDAK: How would you — how would you suggest a way — I didn't mention — I didn't mention a check because, ah, you know, you have — you have paper there, but it could be arranged, ah, to look like somethin' else. You know how would you suggest that you feel comfortable with?

GREEN: Well, I'd want to sit down and study the new law a little bit make sure, they raised the limit from three to four thousand dollars. For instance, you as an individual and your wife as an individual can write me a check for four thousand dollars apiece for my campaign (unintelligible).

DRDAK: That's gonna come out in the — that's gonna be in some kind of a report.

GREEN: They'll be a report, yeah, Tom Ryan or XYZ Corporation.

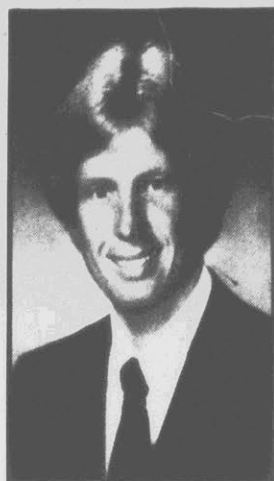

Drdak then asks Green about the campaign spending reporting laws in North Carolina and asks if people from outside the state can contribute, but adds, "It wouldn't look too good on your report though."

GREEN: No. Well, you know they don't check those addresses too closely. You could always put John Doe, Whiteville, or Tom Ryan, Whiteville, or — Ed Williamson in Whiteville. They don't check.

DRDAK: So what you're sayin' we could — if we could find a-a hundred names, we could probably raise four hundred thousand dollars.

GREEN: With no problem. No problem at all.

B. B. King And Band To Prison

YARDVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Blues singer and guitarist B.B. King and his seven-piece band are headed to prison again, and prison officials are grateful.

A concert by King and his band today at the Yardville Youth Reception and Corrections Center will be the 44th such free concert for inmates the musicians have given throughout the country, said James Stabile, spokesman for the state Corrections Department.

"He's been doing this since 1970. He plays concerts and isn't paid anything for them," Stabile said.

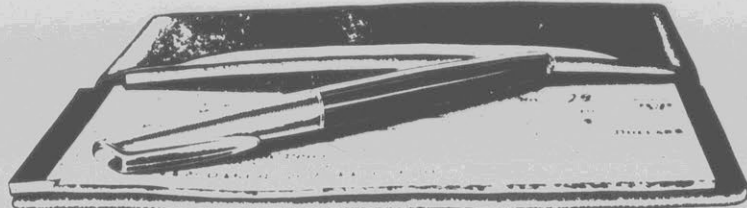

King, 57, offered to perform at Yardville during his engagement at Harrah's Marina hotel casino in Atlantic City. About 700 inmates were expected to attend, Stabile said.

YOUTH DAY

The House of Worship will observe youth day services Sunday at 11 a.m.

A joy night service will also be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. with minister Wilkes of Redemption Holiness Church rendering the services and the New Jerusalem Choir providing the music.

Rental Rehabilitation Demonstration Program

(Request For Proposals)

The City of Greenville through its Community Development Program is requesting proposals for a Rental Rehabilitation Program Demonstration. The area designated for this Demonstration Program encompasses those neighborhoods generally known as Higgs, Cherry View and Biltmore. Under the Demonstration, the City will provide 40% matching grants to help rehabilitate substandard rental properties. The rental units should be occupied by low income tenants. Qualifying tenants will be offered Section 8 Rental Assistance to avoid relocations. This Program is funded with $90,000 of Community Development Block Grant funds.

Proposals for assistance will be received by the Community Development Office until 5 P.M., June 17, 1983. For more information and a proposal package please contact Ms. Dorothy Daniels at the Community Development Office, City Hall, 201 West 5th Street, Greenville, N.C. or call 752-4137 ext. 268.

Compensatory Time Off Disallowed In Proposed Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Most state government departments wouldn't be affected by a bill barring executives from taking compensatory time off because they already prohibit it, says State Personnel Office Director Harold Webb.

The House State Personnel Committee approved Wednesday a bill disallowing comp time for employees holding managerial positions who earn more than $30,000 annually.

Prior to the vote, Webb told the panel his office conducted an informal telephone survey last month to determine how the 21 state departments handle comp time. The survey didn't include the University of North Carolina system.

Webb stressed, however, that his survey dealt with executive personnel while the bill alludes to management. Executives include major program directors and higher positions up through deputy and assistant department head, but other state workers may hold positions considered managerial.

According to the survey, 14 departments don't have a comp time policy for executives. Five departments have a policy. They include the Employment Security Commission, the community college system, the Insurance Department, the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, and the Department of Cultural Resources.

According to Webb, those five departments combined employ about 5,000 people — roughly 10 percent of the total number of state workers.

The remaining two departments, Wildlife Resources and Human Resources, have policies that allow for comp time during certain situations, such as work done during weekends or holidays.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance and chairman of the House State Personnel Committee, introduced the bill after media reports surfaced that executives in the North Carolina Department of Insurance took as many as seven weeks of comp time while being paid as much as $36,000 a year.

Webb said he preferred a joint resolution authorizing a legislative study of the matter. Such a study would be ordered under a pending Senate bill sponsored by Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus.

Jordan, however, said converting the bill to authorize a study committee would be tantamount to killing it.

In other legislative action:

Insurance

Convicted drunken drivers would have to carry maximum automobile liability insurance under a bill approved 8-7 Wednesday by the House Insurance Committee over industry lobbyists' objections.

"This bill will enhance the Safe Roads Act," said Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood. "It will hit these drunken drivers in the pocketbook and maybe convince them it doesn't pay to drink and drive."

Under the bill, endorsed by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, convicted drunken drivers would have to purchase the highest available coverage for three years.

The highest possible coverage is $100,000 per accident for bodily injury or death involving one person; $300,000 per accident for death or bodily injury involving two or more people; and $50,000 per accident for property damage.

Currently, drunken drivers may carry $25,000 per accident for injury or death of one person; $50,000 per accident for injury or death of two or more people; and $10,000 for property damages.

Ruffin Bailey, an insurance lobbyist and former state senator, warned the bill was so strict it would encourage efforts to circumvent it.

It would increase the drunken drivers' surcharges and premiums 18 percent, Bailey added.

Wildlife Budget

A request by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission for an additional $1.8 million over two years drew a favorable vote from the Joint Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee on Natural and Economic Resources.

The proposal still must be approved by the full Appropriations Committee before going to the House and Senate floors.

In a report submitted to the committee, wildlife commission officials said the allocation proposed by legislative base budget panels was only slightly higher than the $12.9 million spent in fiscal 1981-82.

Waste-Energy

A bill to let county governments issue bonds to build waste-burning plants was approved by the House Public Utilities Committee despite objections that it allows officials to monopolize waste.

The bill, filed at the request of Burke County officials considering a waste-burning plant, gives counties control over garbage to ensure they will be productive, said Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake.

But Paul Rankin of the National Solid Waste Management Association said the monopoly would allow facilities to pass on unlimited costs to taxpayers.

School Bus

A bill designed to let drivers pass stopped school buses on some five-lane highways is headed for a joint conference committee after the House Highway Safety Committee refused to concur with Senate amendments.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, supported the action, saying the Senate version deletes an important rule of evidence that allows police to charge the owners of vehicles that pass stopped buses.

He said arrests doubled since that provision was put in the law several years ago.

Mo-Peds

Drivers whose licenses were suspended would have to give up operating mo-peds, even though they require no license, under a bill sent to a House Highway Safety subcommittee.

Rep. LeRoy Spoon, R-Mecklenburg, said the bill was intended to make sure no one convicted of driving while impaired could operate a mo-ped, even if sober.

"Why do you not care if someone who has never been licensed drives a mo-ped, but you don't want a sober person who has a license suspended driving a mo-ped?" asked Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne.

Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, suggested the bill be amended to require mo-ped licenses.

A subcommittee report was expected by next week.

Representatives of builders in Jackson County objected to a combined House-Senate bill to limit high-rise construction on mountain ridges being considered by the House Water and Air Resources Committee.

The developers said many attractive homes would be banned by the bill which would allow counties and cities to adopt regulations limiting ridge building or follow a proposed state law on the subject.

The bill affects buildings 40 feet and higher in 35 counties. It classifies as ridges anything 500 feet or more above the valley floor and the land within 100 feet below the ridge crest.

The committee amended the bill to prohibit the state from bringing civil suit against a city or county for its ordinance or for violations of the local ordinance and to make it easier for state map experts to find the ridges affected by the bill.

Developer Hugh Morton of Western North Carolina Tomorrow urged the legislators to approve a bill soon to prevent building that may come soon.

Hospice

The Senate Human Resources Committee sent to subcommittee a bill that would set up a licensing procedure for hospices, volunteer groups that help the terminally ill and their families.

Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, the bill's sponsor, said it is "vitally necessary the hospice movement get and achieve its own identity."

She said the bill would protect vulnerable people, enable the terminally ill to get insurance benefits for using hospice and make health care more cost effective.

But Howard Campbell of the N.C. Association of Local Health Directors said the bill would, "merely be giving an identity to an entity that would not necessarily assure quality services are delivered in a cost-effective manner."

Sheriffs' Liability

The House Law Enforcement Committee approved a bill clarifying a sheriff's personal liability for his deputies' acts. Currently, a sheriff is vulnerable to suits for anything done by one of his employees.

Under the bill, a suing plaintiff would have to prove that the deputy's acts were:

- Within the "actual scope and course" of duty; or
- Performed at the command of the sheriff; or
- Performed with the sheriff's "personal participation."

Sheriffs would not be liable for acts done in defiance of their direct orders.

Rape Victims

The rape victim assistance program begun during the last session would be expanded to compensate for ambulance rides and mental health assistance under a bill approved by the House Law Enforcement Committee.

The bill would not change the limit of $500 in aid per victim.

Emerald Isle

The Senate overwhelmingly enacted a bill to require public beach access at Emerald Isle while closing an off-road vehicle ramp.

Divorce

The House approved 64-35 a bill doing away with all grounds for absolute divorce except separation for one year.

The bill would eliminate grounds for immediate divorce including adultery, impotence, the wife's pregnancy at the time of marriage by a man other than her husband without his knowledge, criminal activity, and deviant sexual behavior.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said the overwhelming majority of divorces in 1982 were granted under the one-year-separation rule.

He said most people filing for divorce on other grounds merely wanted to accuse their spouses of unsavory acts that may or may not be true.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, fought the bill, saying that when the other grounds for divorce now exist, people "should be able to do so as quickly as possible."

Bus Administration

The House passed 90-2 a bill expanding the State Board of Education's jurisdiction over school bus maintenance and administration.

Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, said the bill differed from a controversial bill defeated during the last session which would have given the state control over bus routing.

Employee Limit

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, filed a proposed constitutional amendment identical to a law passed in the previous session.

It requires that the growth of the state employ not exceed the average increase of North Carolina's population during the preceding 10 fiscal years.

For example, if the state's population grew by an average of 1.6 percent between fiscal 1973 and 1982, the number of state employees for 1983 couldn't grow by more than 1.6 percent.

Speedy Trial

The Senate approved a bill that would hold North Carolina's Speedy Trial Act at 120 days instead of speeding it up to 90 days in October.

ABC Permits

Non-profit community theaters could serve alcoholic beverages in counties allowing liquor consumption under a bill tentatively approved by the Senate after opponents failed to kill the measure.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said the bill was "hypocrisy" in light of the Safe Roads Act.

"I can't see anything good coming of this bill," he said. "It would allow beer and booze to be served in theaters where you've got minors participating in the show."

"This will help the tourism industry and all kinds of things," responded Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe.

Minors-Taverns

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, filed a bill to prohibit anyone under 10 years old in taverns.

Redefining Government Powers In Three Branches Near Approval

By F. ALAN BOYCE

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

The enactment of a lengthy bill redefining North Carolina's three branches of government is unlikely to bring any sweeping changes in the way the state does business, legislative leaders say.

The bill, tentatively approved by the Senate Wednesday and headed for possible enactment next week, is designed to unravel the independence of the legislative, executive and judicial branches in light of state Supreme Court rulings that the boundaries had become blurred.

Much of the legislation centers on the authority for setting salaries, making rules and running government — an authority that has long rested with the powerful Advisory Budget Commission. While the bill carefully relegates the ABC to an advisory role, few lawmakers believe that will change the power structure.

"A rose is a rose, regardless of what you call it," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, an ABC member and chairman of the Appropriations Committee. "They (officials of the executive branch) will be seeking advice no matter what."

Diabetes Is Controlled In Rats; Maybe People Next

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Drugs, surgery and radiation all keep rats from getting diabetes. For scientists, this is exciting news, because it may soon mean control of the disease in another species of animal: people.

How soon is still in doubt. But some experts believe the solution to human diabetes could be years, not decades, away.

If it happens, a good deal of the credit will probably go to an unfortunate little creature called the BB rat. Nine years ago, researchers discovered that this animal often inherits a form of diabetes that is remarkably similar to the human variety.

Since then, the BB rat has become the chief proving ground for all kinds of theories about how diabetes starts and how it can be stopped. The rat — named for the place that found it, Bio-Breeding Laboratory in Ottawa — is tested, dissected and otherwise scrutinized in dozens of medical centers around the world.

Among the first to recognize its importance were scientists at the University of Massachusetts Medical School, who now house 5,000 of the white rats in their animal labs in Worcester. There they oversee work that has led to perhaps the most important theory in the recent history of diabetes research — the idea that this disease is a disorder of the body's immune system.

Their research, along with experiments at other labs, has uncovered the workings and defects of the specialized cells of the pancreas that make insulin, one of the necessary hormones of life.

The ultimate target is the kind of diabetes that strikes young people, often children in puberty. About one million Americans have this disease, called type 1, or insulin-dependent, diabetes.

Unlike people who get less-severe cases of diabetes in middle age and beyond, these youngsters must receive insulin injections to stay alive. And even though this can keep their diabetes in check, the disease is still a major cause of blindness and can lead to heart attacks, kidney failure and loss of limbs.

In BB rats, diabetes is passed through the genes from generation to generation. About half of those born with this inherited weakness grow up to have the disease. Somehow their immune systems go awry. Instead of fighting germs, they attack the cells that make insulin and eventually kill them.

What touches off this self-destruction is still a mystery. But Drs. Aldo A. Rossini, Arthur A. Like and others at Worcester have found that by tinkering with the rats' immune systems, it's possible to keep them from getting diabetes.

They discovered that commonly available drugs that weaken the immune system will ward off the diabetes. So will blood transfusions, radiation therapy and surgical removal of the thymus gland.

No one knows yet whether any of these treatments will help humans, or even whether the disease in people is actually a defect of the immune system. But the hints from the rat studies are so strong that several medical centers have begun trying them on humans.

Tests are being developed that will reveal the early stages of damage to the insulin-making cells in humans long before diabetes sets in. One strategy is to find these people and try to stop their disease before irreversible injury occurs. At the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston, Dr. George Eisenbarth has begun treating some of these people with prednisone, a steroid drug that works in rats.

This or some other drug may at last bring about a time when diabetes is a preventable disorder.

"My bias is we have reached the stage of clinical trials," or human testing, Eisenbarth says. "If a trial succeeds with a safe drug, then the time will be here."

Canadian scientists are giving young diabetes victims cyclosporin, an immunity-suppressing drug that is frequently given to organ transplant patients.

Last February, Rossini published the discovery that whole blood transfusions early in life will keep rats from getting diabetes. Eisenbarth says he suspects that other researchers have already begun trying this therapy on people.

However, Rossini is uneasy about the speed with which doctors have used the results of rat studies to devise experimental human treatments.

Drugs that weaken the immune system are dangerous. They can increase the chances of cancer and other diseases. The treatments, he said, may actually be worse than the disease, for diabetes victims may follow reasonably normal lives for many years.

While learning that rat diabetes is an immunity disorder, the Worcester researchers have ruled out other theories about what causes the disease. Among them:

—Some people suspected that eating too much sugary junk food can bring on childhood diabetes. But the scientists found that even a diet of candy bars does not increase rats' susceptibility.

—Stress seemed like another reasonable cause. But subjecting rats to high-pitched noise does not make them more likely to get diabetes.

—Some speculate that germs touch off the destruction of insulin-making cells. But susceptible rats still get diabetes even when they are removed from the womb before birth and raised in microbe-free surroundings.

How many of these discoveries will eventually apply to people? Rossini does not know.

"A rat is not a human," he said, "even though some humans are rats."

Coppola A 'Born Gambler', But Empire Collapsed

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ten years ago, Francis Ford Coppola led the vanguard of a new generation of college-trained filmmakers who aimed to revolutionize the movie industry.

Today he is the reluctant star of a long-running cliffhanger that will determine the fate of Zoetrope Studios, his dream of the movie factory of the future that has turned into a financial nightmare.

Bank foreclosure is scheduled for June 16, but it may be postponed — for the sixth time.

Coppola's plight contrasts with the huge prosperity of his onetime protege, George Lucas, creator of the "Star Wars" megahits, and with the unceasing success of another star of the New Hollywood, Steven Spielberg, director of "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial."

"Francis wanted to build an empire instead of just making movies," said a former associate who spoke on condition that he would not be named. "He tried to create an industry, and he has no mind for business. Also, he became obsessed with the mechanics of filming and ignored what made him great: dealing with the human situation."

Coppola, who declined to be interviewed, ascended the heights with "The Godfather" in 1972. It passed all previous box office records and won the Oscar for best picture — but not for Coppola's direction. That came in 1974 with "The Godfather II," which disproved the rule that sequels never exceed the original.

Coppola, who also sponsored Lucas' "American Graffiti" and "The Black Stallion," next embarked on the ambitious "Apocalypse Now." Coppola watchers mark that as the beginning of his decline.

"Apocalypse Now" took a fearsome toll on Coppola's creative energies and finances. He endured a monsoon, the near-fatal heart attack of star Martin Sheen, the recalcitrance of Marlon Brando.

Eleanor Coppola wrote of her husband's ordeal in a book called "Notes." As he was trying to assemble the film, she found a note to himself in his typewriter:

"The movie is a mess — a mess of continuity, of style — and most important, the ending neither works on an audience or philosophical level. Brando is a disappointment to audiences. My nerves are shot. My heart is broken. My imagination is dead. I have no self-reliance. But like a child just want someone to rescue me."

Despite disappointing reviews, "Apocalypse Now" did good business — $35.6 million in U.S.-Canada rentals alone. Coppola, who had poured his "Godfather" millions into the Vietnam film, escaped disaster.

Not content to relax and enjoy his fortune, Coppola next pursued his vision of a self-sustaining studio that would combine a creative haven with the latest technology. He paid $6.5 million for a 60-year-old studio in the heart of the Hollywood district, filled it with electronic gear and a staff that cost $500,000 a week.

Proudly displaying his new filming system to reporters in early 1981, he called it "a friendly slave at your feet, ready to do anything at your command."

But slave conquered master. Technical problems helped balloon the budget of his "intimate" musical,

"One from the Heart," to $27 million. The film was panned by critics and earned $1 million at the nation's theaters.

Two other Zoetrope films, "The Escape Artist" and "Hammett," have had equally bad luck at the box office.

While his empire was crumbling, Coppola spent last summer in Oklahoma filming two S.I. Hinton novels, "The Outsiders" and "Rumble Fish," both starring teen idol Matt Dillon with $8 million budgets. The former had a modest success; the latter is due out in the fall.

While seeking new financing for Zoetrope Studios, Coppola has won a series of reprieves from the mortgage holder.

A Review

'War Games' Is A Notable Film

In the final sequence of John Badham's film, "War Games," WOPR, the central computer for the entire American nuclear defense system, announces that "Global Thermonuclear War is a strange game, the only winning move is not to play." Director Badham has been criticized for making that statement in his movie, now playing at the Buccaneer Movies, but the film would make little sense without it. "War Games" is an outstanding movie, a combination thriller and political satire that moves quickly and cruelly to its logical conclusion.

Critics around the country have been finding numerous small faults in "War Games," even though almost all of them admit to liking the film. Most have called the ending moralistic, drawing a distinction between the film and its message. But the two are linked, and like such earlier films about nuclear war as "Dr. Strangelove" and "Fail Safe," "War Games" is both an adventure movie and a political statement.

The storyline is straightforward. A high school student with a love for computers (Mathew Broderick) accidentally gains access to WOPR while searching for new computer games and triggers a simulation of a total nuclear attack upon the United States. Unaware that the game is a simulation, NORAD command responds as if the attack were real. Minutes before the American retaliatory launch, the "game" is discovered and Broderick arrested, but the computer plays on.

The second half of the film involves a search for the computer's programmer

(John Ward), a growing teenage love between Broderick and his girlfriend (Ally Sheedy), the frustrations of NORAD's computer expert (Dabney Coleman) and the increasingly-serious play of WOPR.

Although "War Games" is crisply directed and all the actors perform well, the power of the film comes from its premise. "War Games" begins with two ideas: technology is increasingly faster than human ability to completely control it, and nuclear war is only a button's push away. The combination is terrifying, and it's to Badham's credit that he can make his point in such a thrilling manner.

Don't be misled, "War Games" will not hit you over the head with a sermon. The movie is full of small moments of satire, romance, adventure and suspense; bad puns and social commentary exist comfortably side by side. The deck is loaded, however. When Professor Falken, WOPR's inventor, argues with the NORAD commander, "General, you are listening to a machine. Do the world a favor and don't act like one," Badham wants us to agree. I found it hard not to.

Take A Vacation From Summer Reruns...

With Cable TV and HBO!

Bored by summer reruns on commercial television? Then turn to cable TV with HBO — for a fresh summer season worth staying home for! You'll see first-run Hollywood hit movies like Poltergeist, Rocky III and Missing. Spectacular concerts with superstars like Dolly Parton. Exclusive comedy specials, family shows like FRAGGLE ROCK™ (featuring a new family of Muppets™) and championship sports. All uncut and uninterrupted by commercials. And all for less each month than taking the family to just one movie!

But HBO is just one reason to order cable TV today.

You get a lot more channels. For a lot less than you think. If you believe that cable TV is just "more of the same," you're in for a delightful surprise. Cable TV offers special interest channels to meet your own personal interests. Round the clock news channels to follow the events of the world as they happen. Sports programs covering big events you can enjoy on ordinary TV. Plus children's, cultural, and rock music programs — and much more. All at a price that's easy on your budget.

Even if you don't watch TV very much, cable TV's a great value. That's because you get the kind of quality programs you deserve and expect. Improved reception. Entertainment worth your time. Plus information you can use and put to work. From financial advice to breakthroughs in science and medicine. All conveniently brought to your home 24 hours a day.

Assassin Before A Parole Board

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan Sirhan, trying to persuade a parole board to set a date for his release, says he was "provoked" to kill presidential candidate Robert F. Kennedy in 1968 to protest the plight of Palestinians after the Six-Day War.

The 39-year-old convicted assassin made the comments Wednesday in the first day of a hearing before the state Board of Prison Terms, which must decide whether he should receive a new date for freedom.

A prosecutor opposing Sirhan's release argued he has yet to realize "the enormity of his crime."

The board was to resume deliberations today.

"I am a Palestinian by birth and citizenship," Sirhan told the board, adding that he killed Kennedy because of "the events and the aftermath of the 1967 war in the Middle East."

He said he felt the New York senator, slain a year after the Arab-Israeli war, was "instrumental in supporting the Israeli state against my countrymen. I felt provoked ... He was projected in this country as being a man of peace ... and yet when it came to the Palestinians, he didn't give a damn about them."

Kennedy was shot to death in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, after claiming victory in the California primary for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Sirhan, then 24, had cursed at Kennedy and opened fire with a .22-caliber pistol in the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

"I did it for my country," he cried then, explaining later he was angry at Kennedy for backing the shipment of 50 Phantom jets to Israel.

"The degree of hate" and premeditation surrounding the slaying "are rarely equaled," Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney Larry Trapp told the board.

"Sirhan's attitude is grossly deficient and grossly callous," he said. "Clearly Sirhan never appreciated the enormity of his crime."

The board said a group called the American-Arab Relations Committee in New York City had offered to take Sirhan to Jordan if he were deported. Libya previously had offered Sirhan a home if he were to win release.

"As much as you people hate me, as evidenced by your treatment of me, let's part company," Sirhan told the panel in answering questions about his hope to live in an Arab nation.

His lawyer Luke McKissack said "kicking him out of the country with no right to return might be the most satisfactory solution. My feeling is ... he would disappear into the woodwork."

But Trapp said after the hearing that such an arrangement would be an "insult to all Americans that he would be released to a country where ... he would be treated as a hero."

Last year's panel rescinded Sirhan's 1984 date with freedom after hearing evidence that Sirhan had threatened an author and prison officials while in prison.

He was sentenced on May 22, 1969, to die in the gas chamber. He spent nearly three years on San Quentin's death row before California's death penalty law was struck down and his sentence reduced to life imprisonment.

FOCUS

Just Another Astronaut?

Twenty years ago today Valentina Tereshkova, left, set a milestone that no American woman has been able to challenge until this month. On June 16, 1963, Tereshkova became the first woman in space. Born on a collective farm and a former cotton mill worker, she manually controlled Vostok-6 during its 48-orbit, 70-hour flight. Later she became Chairman of the Committee of Soviet Women. This week Dr. Sally Ride, an astrophysicist, is scheduled to set a record of her own as the first American woman in space. Dr. Ride, who will operate the shuttle's robot arm, is 1 of 8 U.S. female astronauts. But she has emphasized, "There is nothing I am going to be doing in space just because I am a woman."

DO YOU KNOW — What American completed the first manned space flight?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Neurology is the branch of medicine that studies the nervous system.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Brain Is a Hardy Organ

My daughter was injured in an automobile accident and was unconscious for about four hours. She now has completely recovered from this terrible accident that happened about three months ago.

We have been assured that she will not be left with any permanent effects. Even though we have been told this, it is hard for us to believe that there won't be any after-effects. Do these ever show up at a later date? — Mrs. H.L.T., Idaho.

Dear Mrs. T.: It is really astonishing to learn that the brain is a much harder organ than is commonly believed. It can withstand far more manipulation during surgery than can the stomach or the intestines. I point this out because injuries to the head may be very severe, and yet the brain, protected by the skull and layers of fluid around it, may have no permanent damage.

Brain tissue may be bruised, which is known as a contusion and can be either lacerated or torn. The bleeding that is associated with such severe injuries and the swelling of the brain that follows are responsible for the symptoms such as the loss of consciousness, changes of speech and other neurological signs.

Concussion of the brain is caused by a blow to the head which may result in momentary or longer periods of unconsciousness. Whether this is temporary or prolonged depends entirely on the severity of the injury. Even skull fractures need not necessarily result in permanent injury to the brain.

The fact that you have been assured that your daughter has completely recovered from the injury should relieve your anxiety. Because she is free from neurological signs and symptoms should be your added assurance that there are no residual aftereffects of her injuries.

It sometimes takes a long period to fully recover physically and psychologically from such an experience. But having once recovered, there is little or no chance of any later developments that will interfere with her health, scholastic progress and accomplishments.

Undoubtedly, the doctors will continue to follow her to be certain that there are no hidden residual aftereffects.

Unfortunately, parents retain for a much longer time the terror and anxiety that they had following a child's catastrophic accident. Children have such a remarkable rebound that they seem totally free from after-effects much earlier than do their parents.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Punishment of a child must be meaningful if it is to be effective. Too often the child does not completely understand the reason, and the lesson is thus wasted and resented. Parents must both agree on the nature of the punishment if the child is to be free of conflict and confusion.

Calvin Klein Alive, Well

NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Calvin Klein calls it "good gossip," but says it's just not true that he's dead or dying.

Klein, 40, told Women's Wear Daily in a recent interview: "I'm in great health. I don't even take vitamins."

Klein has been rumored to be receiving treatment in a Swedish sanatorium, blood transfusions in Switzerland and medical care in facilities across the United States. Last week, a West Coast radio station reported he was dead. Even bankers who deal with Klein have called to ask about his health.

"For a long time I wouldn't even discuss it, because people tend to believe that denials are a way of hiding the truth. But now it's gotten way out of proportion, and Barry (Schwartz, his partner) even had to call my mother when I was away to tell her I'm OK," Klein said.

Described by the paper as "tanned and vibrant," Klein suggested the rumors may have got their start two years ago when he was treated for viral meningitis, or when a colleague underwent treatments for cancer.

"I understand why I may be a target. I'm young, I'm successful, I'm not so bad looking and I enjoy living life in the fast lane. It's good gossip," he said.

AT RECORD LOW PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterand's popularity has slipped to a record low of 32 percent in a public opinion poll scheduled to be published today.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

GO DXOH PX ODZVP PX VOOK NTWL
PGO VZKNTWLH

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — THE BIG MAMA BIRD READS "MOTHER GOOSE."

Today's Cryptiquip clue: P equals T.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today will be a day in which changes in attitude are not in your best interest. Continue in the status quo. The evening is best used staying out of any ensuing controversies.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are inclined to be slipshod in your work now. Be more careful. Don't upbraid a co-worker who doesn't do what you want.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep working on your talent for desired results. Control that tendency to pick up and let go. Be happy tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Clear up your domestic situation. Don't have any guests in today. Make sure you pay some pressing bills.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be particularly careful in making out reports and in communications with others. Drive very carefully today.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Seek out financial expertise where your monetary affairs are concerned. Study your property to see what repairs are needed.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are upset about not gaining personal goals. Friends cheer you up. Learn how to budget more carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Schedule your time wisely to accomplish a good deal in the outside world. Plan time to help one in dire straits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you are too demanding in going after your wishes, others resent it. Steer clear of group affairs which result in arguments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Others are apt to criticize unjustly today. Make sure your credit is good. Handle public work wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new contact could suggest some new plan that is not right for you, so thank him and go about your own business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't run away from your job in favor of new ventures. Be understanding with a co-worker. Use kindness at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care in communicating with a loved one. Be sure to spell everything out. Be careful when signing contracts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want everything in precise order. Teach to allow for human error and be more understanding of fellow human beings. There is ability for correct analysis, so be sure to give a fine education. Stress religion.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

U.S. internationalist Eddie Kantar of Los Angeles is one of the country's great teachers. And you can benefit from a private lesson at a price that would be a crime to turn down. His new book, "Kantar for the Defense, Volume I" (Wilshire Books, 204 pp., paperback, $5. Available postpaid from Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025) deserves to find a place on your book shelf.

You are presented with 100 problems (101 if you count this one, which appears on the cover) as you would meet them at the table — you see your hand as defender and the dummy, and you are told what partner and declarer play to each trick. By the time you have finished the book, your defense will have improved tenfold. To help you along, the key points of each problem are lucidly explained at the end of each hand.

Cover up the East and South hands and decide how you would defend. You lead the king of diamonds, partner plays the two and declarer the six. At trick two you switch to the king of clubs, partner drops the jack and declarer the five. How do you continue?

"Cash the ace of diamonds before exiting with your remaining club. Partner's play of the jack of clubs promises the ten, so you should envision a discard coming upon the ace of clubs.

"On the third club you discard your remaining diamond. Partner returns a diamond at trick six, which you ruff for the setting trick. You defend so beautifully."

Well, maybe not before you read the book. But certainly thereafter!

A New Crop By Punsters

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In case last year's slogan — "Cheese and Quackers" — wasn't bad enough, Wisconsin State Fair officials have unveiled a new crop of puns for 1983.

Julie Carlson, public relations director for the fair, told the State Fair Board on Tuesday that the 1982 slogan had won a national advertising award.

She then listed some of the ad slogans designed to attract people to the fair's Aug. 4-14 run this summer, including:

— "The Duck Stops Here;"
— "Oink! Sam Wants You;"
— "Udderly Fun;"
— "Whinny Ya Coming."

She said another offering for 1983 would feature barnyard animals in Milwaukee Brewers baseball attire, with the slogan, "We're the Farm Team."

The slogans have begun appearing on Milwaukee area billboards and will soon be seen in Green Bay and Madison, she said.

Puns have also invaded the daily schedule for the fair. Some entries in a pun contest last year will be used to designate certain days, including:

— "Ewe Ain't Seen Mutton Yet;"
— "Hog Day Afternoon;"
— "Cheepers by the Dozen;"
— "Poultry in Motion."
