Crowds In Street Protest Demonstrate In Warsaw

By GERHARD KNEIER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's biggest street protest since the declaration of martial law began with the singing of patriotic and religious songs by crowds waiting to greet Pope John Paul II after Thursday night mass.

The crowds had gathered at Palace Square and Krakowskie Przedmiescie boulevard in Warsaw's Old Town to welcome the pontiff as he arrived at St. John's Cathedral for the mass marking his homecoming. When the pope left the cathedral by another route after the service, spectators who had waited in vain for another glimpse of him began singing "God Save Poland," a hymn dating back to the 18th century partition of Poland.

A group of spectators from Gdansk, the birthplace of the outlawed Solidarity labor union, identified themselves by singing, "We're from the three cities where the Holy Ghost lives."

Their reference to Gdansk and two other Baltic strongholds of Solidarity — Gdynia and Sopot — prompted applause from Warsaw residents in the crowd.

Someone hoisted a poster reading "Solidarnosc," and clapping increased. Poles raised their fingers in "V" for victory signs. There were shouts for the union's leader Lech Walesa, who has been under police guard in Gdansk since before the pope's arrival.

More spectators joined in chanting: "Send the new trade unions to Powazki cemetery," "Walesa, Walesa!" and "Long live Bujak," — a reference to Zbigniew Bujak, leader of the Warsaw underground chapter of Solidarity.

Soon the crowd began marching toward central Warsaw in the gathering dusk, and thousands of other pedestrians joined the throng, turning what began as a spontaneous outpouring of patriotism and religious fervor into a massive demonstration.

Priests and altar boys joined the march, shouting "Long live the Pope" and "Long live Cardinal Glemp," the Polish Roman Catholic primate.

Chants became an odd mixture of praise for freedom, Solidarity, the pope and "God himself as the marchers headed toward the city center.

"Amnesty, Amnesty," they shouted, demanding release of several hundred of Solidarity leaders held by Communist authorities since the Dec. 13, 1981, imposition of martial law. "Without Solidarity there never will be freedom," others yelled.

As the crowd swelled to an estimated 50,000, riot police massed in the side streets, but made no move to halt the march.

"They don't hit us today, come with us," a few protesters shouted at reluctant onlookers who apparently feared police intervention.

The situation grew tense as the demonstration neared Communist Party headquarters, and reinforced police units took up positions around the building. Sensing an impending explosion, some marchers urged a detour away from the forbidden area. But many others shouted "forward" and the crowd marched ahead.

Senate Committee Okays Freeze On Leaf Supports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee Thursday approved a freeze on price supports for the federal tobacco program and the gradual transfer of tobacco allotments to those who actually grow the crop.

The committee, which is chaired by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., voted 17-1 to freeze price supports for the 1983 and 1984 crops at the 1982 level. That freeze was backed amid evidence that escalating support levels have priced U.S. tobacco out of the market and led to surpluses, especially of flue-cured tobacco.

The bill also requires that tobacco allotments — rights to grow tobacco without penalty — be transferred into the hands of actual producers by 1990. Those allotments have been the major target of program critics, who claim they're vestiges of feudalism.

Since most allotments are in the hands of nonproducers, who lease them at times for rates farmers believe to be exorbitant, critics claim the program works against the farmers actually responsible for the crop.

The committee also approved legislation drastically reducing federal dairy price support costs, but declined to act on a proposal to cut about $3.8 billion from price supports on the 1984 and 1985 wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton crops.

The grain price support cuts were the third element of an administration-backed plan to rein in the skyrocketing price tag for federal farm programs, which is expected to hit $21 billion this year.

According to Agriculture Secretary John Block, failure to link the reduction in crop price supports with the other elements, especially the dairy plan, could prompt a veto by President Reagan.

Dairy interests have been struggling to find a way to slash costs of their price support program, which will cost taxpayers $2.4 billion this year, because they fear if government spending is not significantly curtailed the entire program will be abolished.

Senate officials said the committee could still act on the crop supports, and Helms said flatly, "We have the votes for it."

But grain state members, especially Democrats, claimed they needed more than the sketchy information Block has provided on next year's supply management program before accepting a support cut, and they successfully headed off inclusion of that element in the package.

Shuttle Crew Is Prepared For Saturday Morning Blast-Off

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A "down-to-earth crew" of five astronauts, enjoying the public anticipation of America's first woman in space, wound up their intensive training today for Saturday's 7:33 a.m. EDT launch of space shuttle Challenger.

Weather seemed ideal and "the countdown is moving very smoothly," NASA said after crews completed work on the ship's communications, navigation and flight control systems.

"We're looking real good, we have no open items, no concerns about launching on time," test director Robert Webster said at mid-morning.

A problem with a training jet grounded commander Robert Crippen who had hoped for one last series of practice landings on the three-mile-long runway that the shuttle will use for the first time after its six-day mission.

The astronauts scheduled flight plan reviews and a brief medical exam before dinner today with their families in their crew quarters seven miles from launch pad 39A. Saturday's wakeup time is 3:13 a.m.

As the milestone mission neared, hundreds of news people and the vanguard of tens of thousands of expected visitors were crowding into nearby communities to witness the blazing blastoff — the seventh in the shuttle series.

George Abbey, who has been training astronauts for 15 years, said the crew was "in great spirits and looking forward to Saturday." Abbey praised Crippen and allowed that the presence of Sally Ride, the mission specialist who has been the focus of interest, "probably has had a beneficial effect, too."

"They've enjoyed reading some of the comments in the papers about their flight," said Abbey, director of flight operations at the astronaut training base in Houston. To relax, he said, they donned shorts and T-shirts and jogged outside crew quarters before settling in for some movies — "Chariots of Fire," for one — on TV.

Crippen, Ms. Ride, pilot Rick Hauck and mission specialists John Fabian and Dr. Norman Thagard began final preparations before dawn during a relatively relaxed day before flight.

Crippen and Hauck were to take controls of an airplane fitted out to handle like the shuttle. When that was scrubbed, Hauck went up in a T-38 jet trainer for some aerobatics. If launch is on time, Challenger will return there next Friday.

It will be the shuttle's first landing at its Florida base, following six touchdowns on desert runways in California or New Mexico. Crippen will have become the first astronaut to have made two shuttle missions.

Abbey said of the shuttle crew: "They work very well together and they're in great spirits and looking forward to Saturday. They're a down-to-earth crew and a human crew, and they have a great sense of humor."

"Crippen, because of his experience, has been a very good influence on them," Abbey added. "He's capable of some horseplay, and he keeps the crew in a pretty good mood... They're probably more relaxed than any of the others in the past."

He was asked if Ms. Ride's entrance into a world that had included only men — 87 of them — had created problems. "Sally probably has had a beneficial effect," he said, refusing to elaborate.

Officials at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, as well as the astronauts themselves, have sought to downplay the sexual landmark.

Ms. Ride is the first American woman named to fly in space; seven others are members of the 79-member astronaut corps.

Ms. Ride has a busy in-flight schedule, serving as flight engineer for Crippen and Hauck during liftoff and landing and helping Fabian deploy all three satellites, retrieving the scientific package later for return to Earth.

Hazing Law Is Upheld; Cases Back To Court

Judge Michael Bruce filed an order in Pitt County Superior Court Thursday upholding the state's 70-year-old hazing law and sent cases against three East Carolina University students back to district court for further action.

District Judge Burt Aycock Jr., on May 10, dismissed hazing charges against Gregory T. Benson, Clinton Andre Crawley and Donald G. Gattling. Aycock concurred with defense attorneys that the law violated the U.S. Constitution by depriving liberty without due process, and free speech by attempting to regulate speech-related activities.

The district attorney's office appealed Aycock's ruling to superior court. The three defendants were among 15 ECU students arrested on various charges following alleged hazing incidents connected with a Omega Psi Phi fraternity initiation Feb. 10 and Feb. 12.

Bruce's order said the hazing law did not violate the rights of due process or freedom of speech in the cases before the court. Bruce said the question of constitutionality "must be determined on a case-by-case basis."

The hazing law makes it illegal to "annoy any students by playing abusive or ridiculous tricks upon him, to frighten, scold, beat or harass him, or to subject him to personal indignity."

Defense attorneys Thursday said the working of the

C-of-C Asks City Share Cost

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

David Duffus, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, requested that members of the Greenville City Council appropriate $2,000 per year of the city's more than $13.2 million budget to help the chamber with advertising costs.

Duffus made his request at a public hearing on the 1983-84 proposed budget for the city of Greenville and the Greenville Utilities Commission at a special meeting of the City Council on Thursday.

Duffus explained that the chamber spends approximately $860 each month, or $10,000 each year, to advertise Greenville.

"We (the chamber) are working hand in hand with the city for the growth that we all want, so I am asking the city to help by supplying $2,000 a year," Duffus said.

Also making requests at the hearing was Rhea Markello, president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County.

"The city has delayed resurfacing roads and doing other needed capital improvements in recent years...Delaying these projects further might in the future necessitate a major tax increase which possibly could be prevented if smaller increases were levied gradually.

"Alternate methods of financing these long-term projects by municipal bond sales could be considered as responsible sources of revenue," Markello said.

Markello also said that the league supports travel of elected officials, but "we think it is inappropriate for spouses of our elected officials to travel at taxpayers' expense."

Markello also suggested that the Greenville Utilities Commission consider a method of notification to social service agencies in Pitt County when they have to terminate utility service to families unable to pay their bills.

"We recognize that the GUC makes every attempt to serve these people in need and to accommodate them with extended payment plans when possible. However, there are instances when policy necessitates termination of service. The league thinks that human tragedy might be averted if a system of notification to a social agency were implemented," she said.

Starring North Atlantic Seafood

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

Several years ago when "North Atlantic Seafood" by Alan Davidson (Viking) was published, its British author paid a short visit to New York City. One afternoon he came to see me.

Silver-haired and striking looking, he wore a Nehru-like black tunic and an interesting pendant on a chain around his collar. His unusual dress didn't surprise me. I knew he was a former British Ambassador to Laos who did the unexpected: he switched careers in mid-life. Since resigning from Her Majesty's Foreign Service he has lived in England and devoted his time to writing, editing and publishing material concerning food.

A recipe for Polish Fish Pie in "North Atlantic Seafood" very much appealed to a friend of mine, Jonathan Dudley, who is a fine cook. As a result, we made this savory dish in my kitchen and it was much enjoyed. Here is Jonathan's report on the Davidson book. Here, too, is the recipe for the Polish Fish Pie:

"North Atlantic Seafood" is literate and informative. Its conversational style makes it a pleasure to read.

The book is divided into two large sections: a catalog of fish, shellfish and other seafoods; and a large section of recipes from both sides of the Atlantic.

The first section is enormously detailed — each fish is illustrated with a black-and-white drawing and identified in the language of each country in which it is used. Davidson tells how to recognize fish by size and shape, where and when they are found, their use in cooking, and whatever other information he considers useful. All entries are cross-referenced with the recipe section.

Recipes are arranged by country, with the largest number of contributions from the United States and France, but including representative dishes from Scandinavia, Russia, Eastern and Western Europe, some Mediterranean countries and, of course, Great Britain. Because the recipes have been drawn from many sources, they vary greatly in the detail in which they are written, but the experienced cook will find numerous interesting ideas.

POLISH FISH PIE

Canned fish, e.g. tuna, 400 grams (14 ounces)
Butter, 15 grams (1/2 ounce)
Mayonnaise, 1 1/2 tablespoons Sour cream, 1 1/2 tablespoons
Small onion, 1/2, sliced
Paprika, 2 pinches
Potatoes, 900 grams (2 pounds), mashed

Grated cheese, enough to cover the dish
Marjoram or dill, as garnish

If there is a lot of oil with the fish in the can, drain off the excess. Then combine the fish with the butter, mayonnaise, sour cream and sliced onion in an ovenproof dish. Sprinkle the paprika over the mixture, then cover it with the mashed potato and add the grated cheese on top. Bake it for about 30 minutes in a moderate to moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit, gas 5), so that the top is lightly browned. Serve it with the marjoram or dill as garnish. Makes 4 servings.

(From "North Atlantic Seafood" by Alan Davidson (Viking).)

Your dog, cat or even your pet bird may be the cause of your child's recurring strep throat, according to a medical column in Family Circle magazine. Dr. Stuart M. Copperman of the State University of New York College of Medicine at Stony Brook found 40 cases of recurrent strep sore throats in families whose dog or cat was infected by strep bacteria. When the infected pets were treated for their infection by a veterinarian, all the families were relieved of the illness.

The Recreation and Parks Department summer program schedule is ready! Brochures may be picked up at any Recreation and Parks facility. For more information, call 752-4137, Ext. 202.

Bridal Policy

For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Dear Abby

Noble Family No Longer Titled

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem is rather complicated. My family is (or rather was) an old established Italian family of nobility. Because of some legal misunderstandings, we are no longer titled. I understand that it is possible to buy a title, and that is what I want to do. How do I go about it?

Although we no longer belong to the ultra-rich, we are by no means poor. Having a title is not very important to me, but it would mean a great deal to my mother, who is gravely ill, so please hurry your answer.

NEEDS A TITLE

DEAR NEEDS: I contacted my Italian connection, who responded:

"Dear Abby: All Italian titles of nobility were abolished following World War II. In 1946, when the Italian people voted Umberto II out of office, he went to Portugal to live in exile. While there, from time to time, he reportedly sold titles of nobility to those of merit.

"Unfortunately for 'Needs a Title,' Umberto recently died in a Swiss clinic.

"However, if 'Needs a Title' is determined to buy one, have him get in touch with me, and for a fee I will have an appropriate 'title' and official-looking document prepared, complete with medal and ribbon.

"Meaningless? Of course! But so is the title he seeks."

LEONARD W. MOSS,
WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY,
DETROIT, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for four years to a handsome, successful man. He has a problem that he's so ashamed of I can't get him to try to get help. He's a bed wetter.

Sometimes a couple of months go by without a problem. Then he gets upset about something, starts drinking too much, and the bed (and I) are soaked! I've tried waterproof mattress covers, but haven't been able to find one that doesn't sound like crinkly plastic when it's sat upon.

I am constantly deodorizing with everything I can think of, but there is still an odor. He's ruined one mattress and is working on the second.

Needless to say, this has affected our love life. I would rather sleep on the couch than with him. He resents this, gets upset, and the whole thing starts over again.

How can I help him? I love him and can't believe this is happening to us, and that I am actually writing to Dear Abby.

WET NIGHTIE

DEAR WET: You must persuade him to see a urologist. If he knew how many adults suffer from bed wetting, he would be comforted and less embarrassed. If his problem is psychological, he needs to get help at the other end.

In the meantime, a urologist will tell you where to buy a comfortable, super-absorbent, diaper-type garment, complete with moisture-proof plastic bloomers for adults with this problem. It could save your mattress — and possibly your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I hope "Lopsided and Miserable," the 18-year-old girl with one breast noticeably smaller than the other, takes your advice and seeks out a plastic surgeon. I'm 19, and up until two years ago I had the same problem.

Not A Surprise

To anyone who has served in the military it hardly seems surprising that the Supreme Court has ruled that military servicemen can not sue their superior officers.

In a unanimous decision the court ended a suit by five black sailors who claimed discrimination because of race.

The court noted there is a system of military justice and military discipline would be undermined if servicemen can sue in civilian courts.

Chief Justice Warren Burger said, "No military organization without strict discipline and regulation that would be unacceptable in a civilian setting."

What is surprising is that the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in November, 1981 that the suit should be permitted in the civilian courts.

The five sailors might have had a legitimate complaint about discrimination. It is, however, something to be handled by the U.S. Navy administratively or through the system of military justice.

Rapid Rise To Power

Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov is still little known in the western world and since he has taken over from the late Leonid I. Brezhnev there have been recurrent rumors about his health.

Nevertheless the leader seems to be consolidating his power in the Kremlin and has recently had himself elected president of the Soviet Union. The post had been vacant since the death of Brezhnev.

Andropov now is head of the Communist Party, president, and has the leadership of the Soviet's military council.

It appears now that the United States and its allies will be dealing with a powerful Yuri V. Andropov. His health remains open to speculation and no one can be certain how long he will be in power. It must be clear for the time being, however, that he is the man in control in the Soviet Union.

The Missing SS-20s

WASHINGTON — The disquieting U.S. failure to discover the location of three "regiments" of SS-20 intermediate-range nuclear missiles known or strongly suspected to be somewhere on Soviet soil has strengthened agreement within the Reagan administration that early compromise with Moscow over the deployment of new U.S. missiles in Europe is impossible.

The three "regiments," each with 10 launchers for the three-warhead missile, are believed to be somewhere in Central Russia. The U.S. intelligence community is understood to be certain that the 30 missing launchers are deployed. It is believed here that they have been positioned for potential use against either European or Asian targets — which include the mainland of communist China and Japan.

The still-rising number of SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe are clearly identifiable in their shelters from spy-satellite pictures that regularly photograph them. The missing regiments, however, have not been spotted, raising questions as to whether the Soviets have arranged new and unknown camouflage protection for them.

Indeed, the unexpected discovery in April of one additional regiment of SS-20s under camouflage signaled a warning to the U.S. that the presumed total number of SS-20s, around 360, may be far less than the actual number. That was before the existence of the three phantom regiments was even suspected.

The impact of these phantom regiments on U.S. policy could be considerable. With talks now resuming in Geneva on the NATO plan to start deploying the Pershing II missile as a counter to the SS-20s, precise knowledge of the number of SS-20s is obviously essential to the U.S. negotiators, headed by veteran diplomat Paul Nitze.

A just-published appraisal of these negotiations by the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee virtually rules out agreement with the Soviets this year "unless one or both governments propose meaningful shifts in their current positions." Soviet refusal to identify the precise location of the missing regiments is likely to harden the U.S. position.

Equally disconcerting to U.S. policymakers is the strong indication that for each SS-20 launcher the Russians are now believed to have up to five missiles, not the previously-estimated two missiles. If American specialists are correct on this point, it means that the Soviets now have more than 5,000 SS-20 warheads available for use against Western European and Oriental targets.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan abruptly has come to life on the matter of our public schools. He has decided to take on the powerful National Education Association (NEA) on such issues as merit pay for teachers, and this is a battle he can win. But somewhere along the line he ought also talk to NEA's rival union, the American Federation of Teachers (AFT). Up to a point, the president might find an unexpected ally.

It is pleasant to observe how the battleground has shifted, just in the six weeks since the National Commission on Excellence in Education laid down its barrage of criticism of the public schools. As far back as I can remember — and that goes back to my days as a reporter 40 years ago — the fight has involved money only. Before city councils, county boards and state legislatures, the one paramount question had to do with teacher salaries: It was money, money, money.

Now the growing consensus is to this effect: While more money of course will be required if the commission's recommendations are to be fulfilled, money alone is not the be-all and end-all. The competence of teachers, the preparation of teachers, the toughness of high school courses, the requirements for high school graduation — all these suddenly have come to the fore. The issue is no longer the cost of public education, but the quality of public education.

My own first reaction to the commission's report was pessimistic. I have seen dozens of such reports and recommendations before, and nothing has come of any of them. I'm a little more optimistic after an interview with Albert Shanker, president of the AFT. On such critical issues as merit pay for teachers and the whole business of competency tests, Shanker has convictions far removed from those of the NEA.

Shanker is an interesting fellow. Born in New York City in 1928, he was graduated from the University of Illinois with honors with in philosophy. After graduate studies at Columbia, he went into education as a teacher of mathematics in New York's public schools. A militant liberal and union activist, he took a leading role in forming the United Federation of Teachers in 1961. In 1974 he began the first of his five terms in office as president of the AFT.

No doubt about it, Shanker has fought for higher salaries for his union members, but throughout the past decade he also has been campaigning for excellence in teacher training and in course offerings. His counterpart at the NEA, Willard H. McGuire, recently has made murmuring noises to the same effect, but the NEA's long history of shrill opposition to these reforms speaks for itself. When the president voiced his support last month for merit pay, McGuire denounced the proposition as a "disgraceful assault on the teaching profession."

—John Cuniff—

There's A Teacher Union Reagan Can Talk To

Shanker is made of different stuff. He looks with scorn upon the preparatory courses required in many teacher's colleges: The courses are "boring and deadly and repel a good many students." Should beginning teachers be tested for competency before they are given jobs in the classrooms? Shanker seems offended that the question should even be asked. "Of course," he says. He wants the secondary schools to shake off their "Mickey Mouse courses"; he wants more homework; he wants to get rid of soft electives; he wants "no nonsense" discipline in the classroom.

I would not misrepresent Shanker as a born-again apostle of the gospel according to Russell Kirk and Mortimer

Smith. Shanker also is interested in money, money, money for his teachers. Even so, his approach is fundamentally different from the kind of negative approach the NEA has taken in Tennessee, for one example, where the NEA temporarily has defeated Gov. Lamar Alexander's innovative plan for master teachers. Shanker is ready to talk constructively with the president, with governors and with leaders of industry.

I voice hope. If the president can capitalize on the leadership of Al Shanker and others of like mind, he can whip the NEA and gain political advantage in the process. Unless I am wholly mistaken, the people generally are fed up — fed to the teeth — with what they are getting for $200 billion a year in public education. On the big issues of reform, the president has put himself on the side of the angels. Mr. Reagan, meet Mr. Shanker; and Mr. Shanker, meet Mr. Reagan.

North Carolina Becoming Urban State

—Paul T. O'Connor—

RALEIGH — The geographic nature of North Carolina is changing. Always a rural state with only small cities, North Carolina is now becoming an urban state where even the rural areas are primarily non-agricultural. The population density of the state is among the highest in the South and twice as high as is the nation's at large.

Those are the findings of Leon Danielson, an associate professor of economics at N.C. State University. In the latest issue of Popular Government magazine, Danielson reports that the state's rural counties are growing as fast as our metropolitan counties — a striking change from population patterns of only a decade ago.

North Carolina now has 24 metropolitan counties, as classified by the U.S. Census Bureau. Another 40 counties border those 24 — or metropolitan counties from another state — and thus take on some of their metropolitan characteristics. Only 36 counties don't neighbor a metropolitan county.

The state has experienced population growth during both the 1960s and 1970s. But the way the state grew is very different for each of those decades. In the 1960s, the state's population grew by 11.6 percent. In the 1970s, by 15.5 percent.

During the 1960s, almost all of the growth came in the metropolitan counties, which grew by 21.5 percent, while non-metropolitan counties grew by only 2.4 percent. During the 1970s, however, the growth rates were virtually even. Metropolitan counties grew by 16.3 percent, non-metropolitan by 14.7 percent.

A big jump in growth rate came in those counties that border metropolitan counties. During the 1960s, they grew by only 3.6 percent. But, during the 1970s, they grew by 16.5 percent, a rate higher than that of the metropolitan counties. Those are counties like Rutherford, Cleveland, Iredell, Robeson, Nash and Franklin.

Dividing the state along more traditional boundaries, growth in the Piedmont remained constant over the two decades — 16 percent. But, both coastal and mountain counties saw big jumps in their growth rates.

All of these numbers bring us to the rural-urban breakdown as calculated by the 1980 census. In 1970, 45 percent of the state's population had been in metropolitan counties. By 1980, that percentage had increased to 48. Danielson also surmises that the non-farming population in the rural counties has decreased to a point even below the 1970 census. At that time, 87 percent of the people living in rural counties did not live on a farm.

If people in rural counties thought things were getting more crowded lately, they were right. The population density of non-metropolitan counties rose from 64 people per square mile to 76 between 1960 and 1980.

Further proof that the state is losing its farm personality is demonstrated by income statistics. In 1974, 64 percent of farm operators in the state listed farming as their principal source of income. By 1978, that percentage had dropped to 58.

In those counties that ring the urban areas, increasing amounts of land are being sold for non-farm use. One big chunk — 39 percent — goes to those building homes. A small chunk — 3.8 percent — goes to industry. But another big chunk — 35 percent — is sold to people who plan to hold it for future development.

Danielson's figures bear out a picture of a state growing from one end to another, but especially in the exurbs, those rural areas one step out from the suburbs.

Homebuilders Want Martin Heading FRB

NEW YORK (AP) — Preston Martin is the choice of homebuilders to be the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, an organization having as much to do with the level of interest rates as any other entity.

They want the world to know it too: no subtle hints, no silent lobbying, as with other groups. To them, the person who reigns as Fed chairman after August has their future in his control.

Interest rates have top priority with homebuilders. There is perhaps nothing more important to them because, as Harry Pryde says, "we live or die with them."

The accuracy of that judgment is underscored by the numbers: A one percent increase in mortgage rates, says Pryde, eliminates one million potential customers from the housing market. "They drive our industry," he says.

Into the ground if they are high, as they have been under the current chairman, Paul Volcker, a man many homebuilders feel hasn't been sensitive to small business and the damage it suffers when rates are high.

Still, Pryde says, the choice of Martin was not so much an effort to oust Volcker as to choose a suitable successor. At the time of the association's spring meeting, he said, it was assumed Volcker would not be reappointed.

That left Martin, the current Fed vice chairman, and Alan Greenspan, the consulting economist, as the two most likely candidates. And of the two, Pryde indicated, there was no question who was better for homebuilding.

Martin, he suggests, expresses the views of Main Street, of the little guy, of middle America, of homebuilders. And in the opinion of many association members, Greenspan is more attuned to Wall Street's money power.

Martin knows housing, said Pryde. As does Greenspan, Martin ran an economic research firm, but unlike Greenspan, his subsequent associations often involved housing... as California savings and loan commissioner, as head of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, as chief of Seraco Enterprises, which provides capital and planning assistance to real estate companies.

There was another reason: Greenspan is perceived as being among a group of economic analysts who believe housing drains capital from more productive enterprises, such as new factories.

Allied with that thinking is the assertion that America is "overhoused," a claim that homebuilders say is patently false.

"It's a myth," says Pryde, 52, who founded and runs the Pryde Corporation, builder of 3,000 homes in the Seattle area over the past 25 years. "The demographics indicate that 42 million people will turn 30 in this decade, and that's 10 million more than in the 1970s," he said.

But much housing, he was reminded, had been prematurely abandoned, and still can be rehabilitated. Yes, he said, and it is being rehabilitated at an increasing rate, "but we are still not overhoused."

The United States, he pointed out, is by no means the best housed in all respects. "We don't compare with Japan, Germany and Scandinavia, where they have up to 450 units per 1,000 people," he said. "In the United States we have 385-390 per thousand."

In spite of the need, as indicated by the rise in the number of people around age 30, considered a prime homebuying age, Pryde points out that Japan has had more housing starts in the past three years than has the United States.

The rate of housing starts per 1,000 people in the United States is about 4 units, but according to Pryde "lots of countries have 7 or 8 or 9 per 1,000."

The homebuilders' goal for this year is 1.55 million starts, but there is no assurance it will be reached. There is hope, said Pryde, but only if the Federal Housing Administration mortgage rate falls under 11 percent.

It isn't falling, however. Recently the FHA raised its rate to 12 percent from 11.5 percent, intensifying a fear the industry is unable to shake.

Strength For Today

The world is full of isolated persons. Shyness, a sense of inadequacy, social ineptness, pride and guilt are a few of the psychological barriers which keep people from forming normal relationships with others.

Only the lonely truly know what suffering loneliness brings. It is not by chance that solitary confinement is reserved as a dreaded punishment.

Some of these lonely and frustrated people doubtlessly need psychiatric help to gain a place in society. But for most of them there is a far better answer. What they need is to be drawn out of themselves and placed on a footing of equality with others, to lift their eyes above themselves and to live with a new joy of being accepted as an important individual. That is, they need the worship and the fellowship of the Christian Church.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Gets 20 Years

In Tot's Death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — George Huggins was sentenced to 20 years in prison Thursday after being convicted of second-degree murder in the death of his girlfriend's two-year-old son.

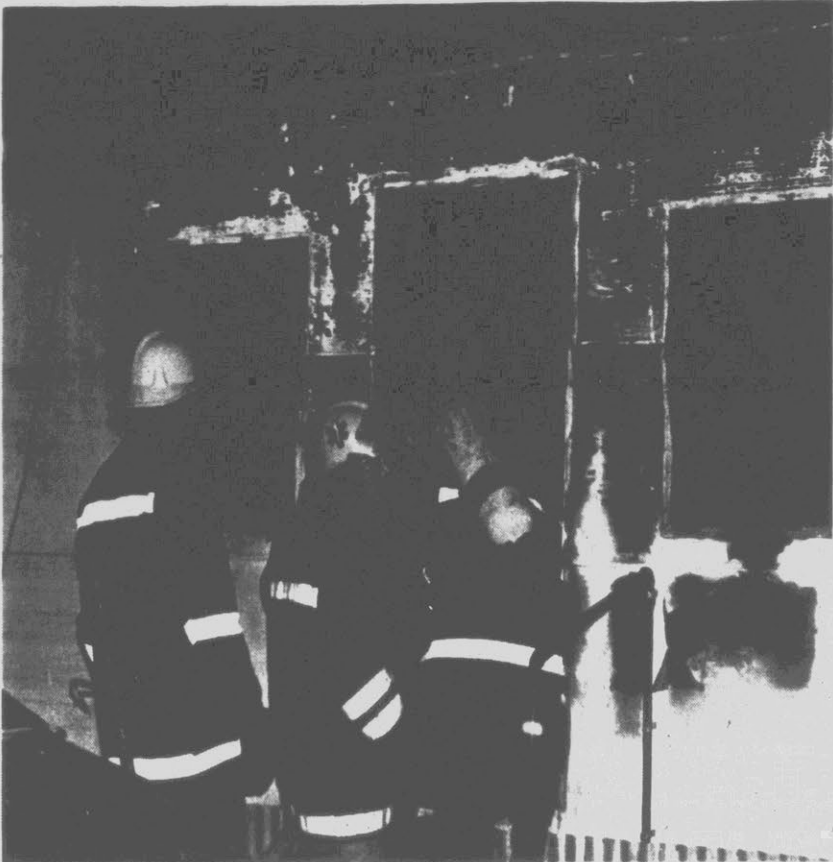

Huggins, a native of Lumberton, testified Tuesday he was baby-sitting Leon Jermaine Stroud March 8, 1982, in a mobile home near Rolesville that he shared with Jeanette Stroud and her two children.

Huggins said he struck the boy as he stood on the edge of a bathtub after the boy soiled his diaper pants. Huggins testified he was angry when he struck the boy and that the child fell into the tub, hitting his head.

The child was pronounced dead a few hours later at Northern Wake Hospital.

Huggins' attorney had argued that Huggins acted impulsively when he hit the boy and should only be convicted of involuntary manslaughter. Attorney Joseph B. Chesire V said after the trial that he would appeal the verdict.

Mrs. Stroud testified Huggins had been a good father figure to her two children and had not abused them.

The new schedule, he said, began Wednesday.

The new schedule includes departures from Greenville at 8 a.m. to Raleigh, 12:30 p.m. to Raleigh, 2:15 p.m. to Raleigh (which continues on to Baltimore), and 4:45 p.m. to Raleigh.

The arrival schedule at Pitt-Greenville, includes flights at 7:45 a.m. from Raleigh, 11:45 a.m. from Raleigh, 2:05 p.m. from Raleigh by way of Wilmington, and 4:30 p.m. from Raleigh.

Bingham noted that the airline has added a plane and crew at Raleigh, which is now handling service to and from Greenville.

Italian Crime Sweep

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Thousands of paramilitary police and special agents arrested 425 people, including a nun, a priest, a government official and several entertainers, in what authorities called a major sweep against organized crime.

The suspects, arrested in raids late Thursday and early today, face charges that include belonging to an illegal association, defrauding the state and drug smuggling. They are accused of being members or supporters of the Camorra, a group of criminal gangs in Naples similar to the Sicilian Mafia.

The office of the chief state prosecutor in Naples, Francesco Cedrangolo, said more than 900 warrants were issued, including 337 served to those already in prison on other charges. The remaining suspects were being sought, police said.

Those arrested included Sister Aldina Murelli, a Roman Catholic nun who was picked up from her convent in Ercolano south of Naples, and the Rev. Mariano Santini, a priest in Ascoli Piceno, a central Italian city which is the site of one of Italy's largest prisons.

Also locked up were Salvatore La Marca, tourism commissioner in the Naples municipal government, Neapolitan singer Assunta Setaro known as Alba, and Enrico Madonna, a lawyer who represents organized crime figures.

Enzo Tortora, a television entertainer, collapsed shortly after he was taken into custody in Rome early today.

Supreme Court Ruling Aids Drug War

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, boosting government efforts to torpedo waterfront drug smuggling, today allowed Customs officers to board any boat on inland waterways readily accessible to the open sea.

By a 6-3 vote, the court ruled that random boardings and searches by Customs officers do not violate the constitutionally protected privacy rights of boat owners.

Today's decision reversed a federal appeals court ruling that such boardings and searches are not allowed unless the law enforcement officers have a "reasonable suspicion" to believe they will find evidence of a crime.

In 1979, the Supreme Court ruled that police may not make random stops of automobiles. If officers want to check car registrations, the court said in that decision, they must make spot checks at roadblock-type stops instead of singling out only particular cars.

But Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court's majority today, said there's a constitutional difference between automobiles and boats.

"No reasonable claim can be made that permanent checkpoints would be practical on waters... where vessels can move in any direction at any time and need not follow established 'avenues' as automobiles must do," Rehnquist said.

"Customs officials do not have as a practical alternative the option of spotting all vessels which might have come from the open sea and herding them into one or more canals in order to make fixed checkpoint stops," he added.

Rehnquist, whose opinion was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor, also found support for the court's ruling from the nation's first Congress.

"The First Congress clearly authorized the suspicionless boarding of vessels, reflecting its view that such boardings are not contrary to the Fourth Amendment," he said, calling that fact "an impressive historical pedigree."

The Constitution's Fourth Amendment protects against unreasonable police searches and seizures.

Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens dissented.

They said the decision wrongly gives law enforcement officials the right to "stop and board any vessel, at any time, on any navigable waters accessible to the open sea, with no probable cause or reasonable suspicion to believe that there has been a crime or a border crossing, and without any limits whatsoever on their discretion to impose this invasion of privacy."

The decision reinstated the drug-related convictions of Jose Reynaldo Villamonte-Marquez and Robert Sortese Hamparian, arrested on a sailboat in 1980.

A Customs officer and a Louisiana state police officer seized 5,800 pounds of marijuana from that sailboat after boarding it in an inland channel about 18 miles from the Gulf of Mexico.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had struck down the convictions after finding fault with the officers' routine boarding to check the vessel's registration.

In reversing the lower court, Rehnquist said: "The nature of waterborne commerce in waters providing ready access to the open sea is sufficiently different from the nature of vehicular traffic on highways as to make possible alternatives to the sort of 'stop' made in this case less likely to accomplish the obviously essential government purposes involved."

Acting in a separate case, the high court backed out of deciding whether Coast Guard officers and other law enforcement agents need "probable cause" to suspect a crime before they may board boats in the open seas.

Upset By New Federal Rules On Food Stamps

By The Associated Press
County social service officials say new federal rules requiring 35 percent of the state's food stamp recipients to fill out four-page forms every month is a disaster that is pushing their employees to the limit.

The new law to go into effect in October will affect food stamp recipients who earn some income and those families with five or more members. That's about 35 percent of the state's more than 600,000 food stamp families.

Food stamp recipients will have to report details about employment, income, medical and child care expenses, utility bills and other costs and transactions.

"It's a disaster, and I'm not trying to over dramatize the situation," said social services Director Kenneth Witherspoon of Hoke County, one of two counties that have tested the monthly reporting. In Pitt County, the other pilot county, the social services director said the additional paperwork had pushed his staff to its limit.

Local agencies in North Carolina will need to hire 265 additional workers at a statewide cost of $13 million, according to Bonnie Cramer, assistant director for programs of the state Division of Social Services.

Last year, the Reagan Administration began requiring local welfare agencies to check income information on 30 percent of Aid to Families with Dependent Children clients every month instead of every six months.

A federal court decision imposed $50-a-week penalty payments to North Carolina welfare families for whom social service agencies failed to process AFDC and Medicaid applications on time.

Both measures have forced county officials to dip into budgets for hiring extra personnel or for overtime work.

In the Hoke County pilot project for monthly food stamp reporting, Witherspoon said the county will spend more money than the resulting reduction in benefits.

"I have numerous families suffering because we haven't been able to process these forms fast enough," he said. "The system is breaking down because I don't have the staff I need to get all this done. It is the single most disruptive activity I have ever been involved in."

Wake County commissioners have said they will not comply with the new federal law on food stamp reporting while officials in Mecklenburg and Guilford Counties are asking to be exempted from monthly reporting.

Oil Refinery Plans Dropped

EASTPORT, Maine (AP) — Rising costs and changes in the world oil market have convinced the Pittston Co. to abandon plans for a $1 billion oil refinery and superport on the Atlantic Coast.

In a statement issued Thursday from the firm's Greenwich, Conn., headquarters, the company said the project's estimated cost had almost tripled over the 10 years since the refinery was proposed.

Snow Hill Takes Memorable 18-7 Win

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — If you're a follower of Snow Hill American Legion baseball, it was a game that 10-20 years from now you can say, "Remember the night when..."

things," said Pitt County coach Bill Davis. "We're mentally and physically tired right now, and we're not swinging the bats as well as we did early in the season. We'll take a day off and try to get ready for Wayne County Saturday."

Along with his dozen strikeouts, Carraway walked nine batters and gave up seven hits for a total of 167 pitches in recording his second win in three decisions. Anthony Russo lead Snow Hill with three hits — two of them triples — in four trips to the plate and a pair of runs batted in. Steve Sides ripped three hits in five at bats for two RBI, while Greg Frederick and Tommy Goff had two hits for three RBI. Backup catcher Todd Grant went 2-2 with a two-run homer in the eighth. Randy Warren was the lone Pitt County batter with two hits, while Greg Briley drove in a pair of runs and scored two more. Substitute catcher Daniel Keel ripped a solo homer in the seventh. "We've been hitting the ball well lately," said Snow Hill Coach Jim Fulghum. "A lot of times it gets you down when you fall behind early the way they did, and I think that's what happened tonight."

Snow Hill took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning, as Pitt County starter Doug Coley walked the first four batters and Frederick singled in two more runs. Coley retired the first two batters he faced in the second with a strikeout and a grounder, but things got worse from there. Jeff Ginn drew a walk, and Goff followed with a triple to right field. Mike Sullivan lined a shot up the middle off Coley's glove to single in Goff, and Kenny Kirkland booted a grounder at shortstop to put Frederick on first. Russo stepped to the plate and sliced the ball to the right field corner for the first of his triples. Briley and Kirkland walked to open the bottom half of the frame, and Rudy Stalls grounded into a fielder's choice to plate Briley. Snow Hill attempted to turn the double play on Stalls' grounder, but the relay from Sides at second got away from Ginn at first. Bill Owens came on in relief of Coley in the top of the third and closed the door with a lone single on his record. But Snow Hill measured his pitches in the fourth. Frederick ripped a solo homer with one out in the fourth, and Russo followed with his second triple. Richie Chase singled in Russo, and Carraway followed with a base hit up the middle. Owens struck out Nat Norris for the second out, but Sides singled in Chase and Ginn ripped a double to plate Carraway. Bobby Buie came on to retire Goff with a strikeout. Stalls slapped an infield single and Joey Kennedy walked to open the home half of the fourth. Carraway retired the next two before walking Warren and Mont Carter to score another run. Coley went down on strikes to leave the bases full. Both teams plated a run in the sixth, but Snow Hill added five more in the eighth. After Frederick's two-run shot, Pitt County reliever Mike Kinley walked four and threw four wild pitches before Paul Hill came on. Warren doubled to open the ninth for Pitt County, and Hill drew a base on balls. Troy

Hudson bounced the ball over the fence in center for a ground rule double to drive in Warren, and Briley ripped a shot to right which got by Ginn to push across two more runs. Briley scored on a sacrifice fly by Kirkland.

Oakmont Baffles Pro Golfers

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — They're bowing to Oakmont. Not buckling, but bowing. "The toughest, bar none," said Bob Murphy. "Absolutely toughest course we've ever played." "Completely intimidating," said Bruce Devlin. "Absolutely awesome," Johnny Miller said. The formula for winning at the Oakmont Country Club seems simple. Executing is something different. First, keep out of the scruffy, wiry rough. If you get in it, like Tom Weiskopf did at No. 7, the ball could disappear. Second, strategically hit the ball to the green. Not to the pin, but to a point where the ball will roll, sometimes 10 or 15 feet right or left toward the hole. Third, read the greens that are so fast that the second putt is often further than the first. John Mahaffey, Seve Ballesteros and Murphy followed the formula better than anybody else on Thursday, scored 2-under par 69s and shared the lead at the U.S. Open Golf Championship after the first round. Devlin, the Australian who led the Open for two rounds last year, was one shot back at 70. Bobby Wadkins, who got into the field only after Lee Trevino withdrew on Wednesday, Lou Graham, the Open champion in 1975, and D. 1a. Weibring were at even par 71 on the 6,972-yard course.

Nine golfers were at 72, including Jim Booros, Jim Nelford, Hale Irwin, Joey Rasset, Nick Price, Lanny Wadkins, Raymond Floyd, Frank Conner and Tom Watson, the defending champion. Each of the leaders found a way to minimize his problems. Ballesteros stayed in the fairway by relying on his one-iron and using his driver only three times. Incredibly, he hit a 5-iron off the tee at the 343-yard, No. 2 hole, a par 4, something he said he had never done before. His second shot, with an 8 iron, landed 15 feet from the hole. He made the putt for a birdie. "My confidence is very high," said Ballesteros, who won the Westchester Classic last Sunday on a rolling course with hard, fast greens like Oakmont. Murphy returned to an old Arnie Palmer putter eight weeks ago and it's given him new life on the greens. "I'm just feeling the ball in now," he said. That, and hitting the tough rough just once also helped. Mahaffey and Devlin said only luck has them in contention. "I didn't play very well," said Mahaffey. "Places I drove the ball today, I could have shot 75." Mahaffey, who has had two Opens in his hands but let them get away, won the PGA tournament here in 1978, and said the course is playing much more difficult this year.

"It's so much faster," he said. "I have no explanation for sitting here right now," said Devlin, who said he played as poorly coming into this Open as he did last year when he led at Pebble Beach the first two rounds. Ironically, Devlin's first round score last year was a 70. His second round score was a 69, but he is not expecting to match that. "I think even par will win the tournament," he said, adding he would be delighted to "take three 71s the rest of the way." Even the United States Golf Association bowed to the course, deciding after the first round to cut the rough, because it had grown well above the "prescribed five inches." The USGA said it was cutting certain areas of the drive zone — about 12 feet of the rough — to 4 1/2 inches. That probably was good news for Murphy, Devlin and Miller, and to most of the other players, but not to Mahaffey or Jack Nicklaus. Nicklaus is poised four strokes back at 73 along with Gary Player, Scott Simpson, who scored a hole-in-one with a one-iron on the 228-yard par-3 No. 16, and six other players. "I didn't think it was that tough," said Nicklaus. "I made it tough by misreading two putts for bogeys."

Every Game Important In New Football League

By The Associated Press
It's big-game time in the United States Football League. With the USFL in its first season, that means that cosmic terms can be used to destroy upcoming contests. "This is, undoubtedly, the single most important game of our short-lived franchise," says Birmingham Stallion wide receiver Jim Smith of tonight's game in Birmingham with the Chicago Blitz. "Every game's important, but there's no question that this game is vitally important."

Birmingham, 8-7, is two games behind Chicago and Tampa Bay in the league's Central Division with three games left. If the Stallions are to have any chance at all to be one of four teams to qualify for the playoffs, a win is a must. The Birmingham-Chicago will be televised to most of the nation by ABC starting at 9 p.m. EDT. The other Friday night game, Los Angeles, 7-8, at 4-11 New Jersey, will be shown in Birmingham and the Pacific Time Zone. In a third game tonight, the Arizona Wranglers, 4-11, visit the Denver Gold, 6-9. Tampa Bay, 10-5, will be at 9-6 Boston on Sunday and there will be two games on Monday night — Pacific Division leader Oakland at Atlantic Division Champion Philadelphia, 13-2, and 2-13 Washington at 9-6 Michigan. For Birmingham, even a win tonight would leave them an outsider for the playoffs, which will include the three division champions and a wild-card team. The Stallions, who lost to the Blitz by 11 points the first time the two teams met, are last in the Central Division, behind Tampa Bay and Chicago, each 10-5 and Michigan at 9-6. "We must win every game from here on out if we hope to advance to the playoffs," says Birmingham quarterback Bob Lane, who has replaced the injured Reggie Collier at quarterback. "In truth, this is very much like the playoffs now. In truth, it is single-elimination time."

Los Angeles, though only 7-8, is in a better position for the playoffs than Birmingham. The Express, a 42-17 loser to Michigan last week, is only a game behind Pacific Division-leader Oakland, the only team over .500 in the division. Like most teams, Los Angeles must gear up for stopping Herschel Walker, the one bright spot in New Jersey's disappointing season. "The frustrating thing about playing New Jersey is that you have to direct so much attention to stopping a great football player," says Los Angeles Coach Hugh Campbell.

again." Duran used one of boxing's oldest axioms to beat Moore, pounding away ferociously on his 24-year-old opponent's body and figuring that eventually, his head would fall. It did. "People were saying that Davey Moore was too much for Roberto Duran. I wanted to prove them wrong. I wanted to show that I could still fight," Duran said. When he had finished with Moore, there was no question about that. Duran, who has experienced problems with his weight before, came into this bout a rock-hard 152 1/2 pounds. Moore was three-quarters of a pound over the 154-limit at the weighin and needed an extra hour to make the weight. The champion's problems 12 hours before fight-time proved to be an omen. In the first round of the bout, Duran thumbed Moore in the right eye. Almost immediately after the encounter, it began swelling and closing and by the third round, he was fighting with just one eye. It was not the ideal way to approach Duran, who was a man with a mission. "The eye was closing little by little," said Moore, holding a towel to his face. But instead of dancing and trying to avoid Duran's furious body attack, Moore chose to slug it out. It was a fatal mistake. "I thought I was stronger," he said quietly. "I thought I could beat him inside and outside." But he was up against a buzz-saw. Duran pummelled away at the champion round after round. "He was hitting me with stuff from nowhere," Moore said. "I tried to get it together so he couldn't throw so many punches at me. But I couldn't get off." In the second round, Duran drew a trickle of blood from Moore's nose. But he refused to be tempted to head-hunt, continuing to concentrate on the body with punches that left Moore sucking for air and wore him down. "Working hard on the body was some part of the strategy," said Duran's manager, Luis Spada. "He was stronger than I thought to the body," said Moore. "And he caught me with a couple of good up-percuts."

Pena Tosses Dodgers Further Ahead Of Braves In West Race

By The Associated Press

Alejandro Pena has been suffering from migraines lately.

On Thursday night he gave the Atlanta Braves a headache of their own.

The Los Angeles right-hander, who had missed his last two scheduled starts because of the throbbing headaches, bore down and pitched the first-place Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over the Braves and into a 3½-game lead over the Braves in the National League's West Division.

He got last-out help from Joe Beckwith after surrendering Randy Johnson's run-scoring single — but Pena, who speaks through an interpreter, suggested he felt he could have stuck around for the complete game.

"I felt very strong," he said. "I even felt strong at the end."

In the only other games on the NL's abbreviated schedule, San Diego defeated Cincinnati 3-1 and Houston beat San Francisco 7-2.

The 23-year-old Pena said his headaches, which doctors have ascribed to tension or stress, have been a part of his life since he was 14. "They are so severe when they start that the left side of my body becomes numb and I get nauseous," he said.

"The headaches have never really worried me; I know when they begin that they will be over in two days. I have usually had them about once a week. I've never pitched when I had a headache."

He said, however, that he grew a little worried when he told the team earlier this month about them. They put him in the hospital for a battery of tests. "I was surprised to see how deeply the Dodgers were concerned," Pena said.

But he had nothing to worry about against the Braves. He was in total command, allowing only seven hits, three by Chris Chambliss, and never permitted a runner beyond second base.

"Pena didn't look like he'd missed a couple of starts," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre.

It was the second time in a week the Dodgers and Braves had hooked up in a three-game series, and the second time Los Angeles won two of the three.

"All of our games against the Dodgers have been close, except for this one," Chambliss said. "They haven't blown us off the field. I think it was important in the two series that we won one game. A sweep by them would really have hurt us."

Steve Yeager drove in two runs with a first-inning double and a sixth-inning single and Ken Landreaux hit his seventh homer in the fifth inning to power the Dodgers' attack.

Padres 3, Reds 1

Tim Lollar, who got the Padres off on the right foot at the start of the season, took a big step toward reviving San Diego's pitching staff by lasting into the eighth inning against the Reds.

He checked Cincinnati on four hits and struck out eight batters before being lifted after yielding his third walk. It was his first win since Opening Day. He had dropped four in a row since then and had missed most of May, sidelined with a sore elbow.

"I haven't been pitching that badly," he said. "The balls that have been hit against me never seem to be hit at people. Today they were...I'm just now getting myself back into a rhythm. I feel like my old self again. It's a lot easier to pitch when you don't have pain."

Manning Lifts Brewers

By The Associated Press

The Cleveland Indians traded Rick Manning to Milwaukee for Gorman Thomas last Monday because they needed a new source of power.

Manning was supposed to supply defense for the Brewers in center field.

Things got turned around somehow. Manning hit an 11th-inning homer — only the 37th of his 8½ seasons in the major leagues — to lift Milwaukee to a 2-1 victory Thursday night over the Baltimore Orioles.

Thomas, meanwhile, has not hit a homer for Cleveland. In fact, he hasn't homered since May 28.

"A home run was the last thing I was thinking of," said Manning, who connected with a 2-2 pitch from Tim Stoddard, who had relieved left-hander Scott McGregor to start the 11th.

"This is the only one that I can remember like that, winning a game in the 11th inning," said Manning, who has three homers this season.

"I'm not that kind of hitter. Occasionally, I sneak one in. I'm glad I sneaked one in tonight."

In the rest of the American League, Toronto defeated Oakland 9-1, New York stopped Cleveland 8-1, Detroit defeated Boston 10-2 and Minnesota edged Texas 4-3.

Jim Slaton, the third Brewers pitcher, relieved Jerry Augustine in the 10th and pitched out of a two-on, one-out jam for the victory. Right-hander Moose Haas pitched the first nine innings, scattering nine hits, and was locked in a duel with McGregor until the sixth inning.

In that inning, Cal Ripken Jr. and Eddie Murray singled consecutively. Ripken took third on John Lowenstein's fielder's choice grounder and scored on Ken Singleton's grounder.

The Brewers tied the score with two out in the ninth with their fourth and fifth hits off McGregor. Just one out away from a shutout, McGregor yielded a double to Cecil Cooper and Ted Simmons' RBI single.

Blue Jays 9, A's 1

Ernie Whitt, Alfredo Griffin and Willie Upshaw hit home runs, and Toronto scored six runs in the sixth inning to defeat Oakland. Whitt's homer was a two-run shot and backed right-hander Jim Gott to his fourth victory in ninth decisions.

Gott worked 81-3 innings, scattering nine hits and striking out seven, and left in favor of Joey McLaughlin after giving up a one-out homer to Wayne Gross in the ninth.

Barry Bonnell hit a bases-loaded triple to help fuel Toronto's big inning.

Yankees 8, Indians 1

Don Baylor hit his seventh career grand slam and drove in another run with a single to back Ron Guidry's six-hitter. Guidry, who joined Dave Stieb as the AL's only nine-game winners, did not yield a run until two were out in the ninth on Toby Harrah's double and a single by Mike Hargrove.

Guidry struck out three and walked two in hurling his sixth complete game.

Baylor's slam, his seventh homer of the season, capped New York's six-run third inning and chased Cleveland right-hander Bert Blyleven. Ken Griffey drove in a run with a double and Graig Nettles walked with the bases loaded for the Yankees' other runs in the inning.

Tigers 10, Red Sox 2

Juan Berenguer, making only his second start of the season, pitched 61-3 innings and combined on a seven-hitter with Larry Pashnick to beat the Red Sox. Lance Parrish and Enos Cabell homered for Detroit, and Glenn Wilson hit a three-run double.

Austin One Match Away From Second 1983 Final

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Tracy Austin, plagued by injury over the last 18 months, is one match away from only her second major final this year.

On Friday, Austin meets Australia's Wendy Turnbull in the semifinals of the $150,000 BMW grass court championships at Eastbourne — the final tuneup before Wimbledon next week.

If she wins, Austin will reach her first final since losing to Martina Navratilova on clay in the Family Circle Cup at Hilton Head, S.C., in April.

This week at Eastbourne, Austin's impressive Wimbledon preparation — she has not dropped a single set in four matches — has indicated a return to full fitness.

And with it, renewed confidence — the result, she says, of an association with her new coach, Tony Roche.

"Tony has been working me very hard," said Austin after defeating Beth Herr of the United States 7-5, 6-1 on Thursday. "We've been working on and off for several weeks and his grass court experience is a great help for Wimbledon. He doesn't waste words like some coaches. If he says something, he means it."

Roche won the Wimbledon doubles title five times with his Australian partner John Newcombe and reached the 1968 singles final where he lost to Rod Laver.

Roche said he had been trying to make Austin — a baseline specialist with a strong double-handed backhand — come to the net more often on grass.

"She is already a very good all-round player. I'm just giving her one or two tips, like being more aggressive," he said.

Friday's other semifinal features the world's No.1 player, Martina Navratilova, against the emerging young player from Houston, Zina Garrison.

Navratilova has been in unstoppable form here in her bid to retain her Eastbourne and Wimbledon titles.

Her four opponents to date have won a total of 10 games and, on paper, Garrison has little chance.

But the 19-year-old former Wimbledon and U.S. junior champion has already eliminated two of the top nine players in the world this week.

First she put out Hana Mandlikova, the world's ninth-ranked player, and in Thursday's quarterfinal she overpowered Bettina Bunge, ranked three places higher.

The Eastbourne crowd has warmed to Garrison, who has produced some wonderfully instinctive touches on the center court at Devonshire Park.

Against Bunge, she mixed up exquisite lobs with some brilliant retrieving and passing shots.

"It's certainly the best I've ever played. I'm more relaxed than I've ever been," said Garrison, surprisingly unseeded at Wimbledon despite her place as the world No.15 ranked player.

She has never beaten Navratilova in three attempts but almost won a set on grass in Sydney last year.

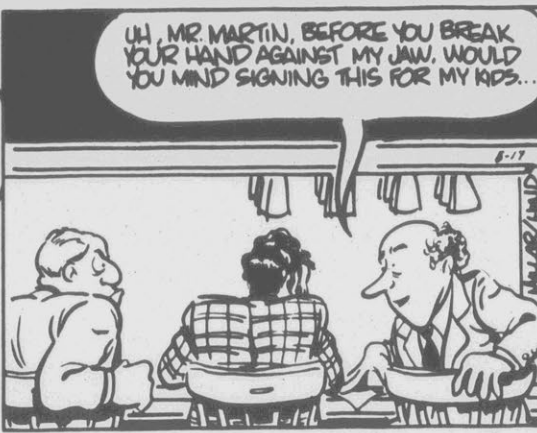

"I seem to move well on grass. Tomorrow, I'll just go out and do my best. After all, I've got nothing to lose," she said.

A SUNSHINE AND SEA BREEZE BREAK . . . is an invigorating tonic for these cast members relaxing against the rails of the backstage area next to one of the two dressing rooms. Shortly after this photo was made, the same people were magically transformed by makeup artists and costume people into dancers, townspeople, royalty, settlers and Indians.

STANDING BY THE SHIP . . . that slides on rails and towers above the stage set so that it can be seen by the audience are two cast members, Ian Mairs at left, and John Stuart, right. Mairs is a sailor and a member of the choir, and Stuart plays the role of Sir Walter Raleigh.

The Lost Colony Returns

To Roanoke Island For The 43rd Performance Season

A Review

First Time Impressions

Pageantry, pomp and tragic circumstance are the elements of which the long-running North Carolina outdoor symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," is built, and they are present in full force in this, the 43rd season of the production.

From the gorgeous costumes (jeweled gowns, red British uniforms, zebra striped Indian cape, classic simplicity of the settlers' clothes) to the excellent choir and dancers, the show reflects both the professionalism of Joe Layton in his 20th year as director and the dedication of the staff and cast.

"The Lost Colony" has become a North Carolina tradition. If you've seen it before, see it again, for it is different every year in its continuing effort to improve. If you've never seen it, as I never had, make it a point to visit it this summer. You'll be glad you did.

In retelling the story of the doomed colony, Pulitzer prize winning playwright Paul Green has lifted the play beyond mere pageantry by focusing on a few characters and their life-changing experiences as part of Sir Walter Raleigh's dream.

Among this year's cast, Gary Hackenburg (John Borden), Walter Tucker (Father Martin), John Gullucci (Simon Fernando), Pete Peterson (Wanchese), and Lisa Campbell (Dame Colman) deliver the most outstanding performances. The play surrounds the audience, further removing the sense of one-step-removed pageantry, and the natural setting of the Waterside Theatre (with its enlarged seating) enhances the Indian scenes that are performed in the wooded areas to the sides.

Of course, no show is perfect, but there is little to criticize here. Perhaps more scenes could be played closer to the stage so the audience wouldn't get stiff necks looking up and to the side. Flexible flags on the ship would avoid the impression the ship is arriving backwards, flags into the wind. Some of the Indian dances could be shorter so they don't slow up the pace of the show. Stronger characterizations are needed in the roles of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh and Eleanor Dare.

Special commendations must go to the choir and soloists - their work was superb - and added immeasurably to the show. The dancers brought all their skill into play, making their scenes memorable ones.

One of the bonuses of "The Lost Colony" are the quotes that stick in the mind: Old Tom philosophically observing that "The blind man eateth many a fly," Queen Elizabeth speaking of Raleigh, "Let him be. He dreams of his empire best alone," and John Borden quoting Raleigh, "Victory lies in the struggle, not the city won."

All in all, the evening more than fulfilled the requirements for good entertainment - beauty for the eye and ear, humor, drama, action (especially the fight scene between Wanchese and Manteo), and inspiration. What more can we ask? "The Lost Colony" is an event not to be missed . . . and I'm glad I didn't.

A Brief History

It is now only one year short of the 400th anniversary of the departure of a handful of adventurous seekers from the shores of England to explore the unknown lands of the New World. A small group of men, led by teenager Philip Amadas and Arthur Barlowe, under the sponsorship of Sir Walter Raleigh, arrived on Roanoke Island in July, 1584. On their return to England, they carried with them samples from the area as well as two young Indians, Manteo and Wanchese.

In April, 1585, another group sailed to Roanoke, led by Governor Ralph Lane. They built cottages and a fort, naming the place Fort Raleigh. Scientist Thomas Harriot and artist John White accompanied this group, and provided pictures and descriptions of the new land's natural riches.

A third group of colonists, including men, women and children, sailed for Roanoke in the spring of 1587, arriving at Roanoke in July. Governor White returned to England to secure additional supplies for the settlers - unfortunately, because of war with Spain, Queen Elizabeth I would not permit any ships to leave England until 1590. When White finally returned to Roanoke, he found the settlement abandoned, the people gone.

It is from this history that North Carolina's famed playwright Paul Green fashioned his symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," first performed in the summer of 1937. It is the best known and longest running of any American historical drama.

Backstage Views

Backstage at any theater anywhere is an exciting world, a mysterious work place of paint, costumes, props, mirrors, tangles of rope and light cords, and people milling about in what at first sight looks like unrehearsed chaos.

But it is from this seemingly sea of confusion that the miracle of transforming disorder into the magic of a polished production takes place - the putting together of all the diverse pieces into a coherent entity that the public views on the front side of a stage.

"The Lost Colony" backstage area of the Waterside Theater on Roanoke Island is different from an average theater. Here, dressing rooms open onto spacious rail-contained decks running parallel to the shores of Roanoke Sound waters. Actors, singers, dancers, technicians report an hour or more before the 8:30 p.m. curtain time, relaxing a little with something cool to drink and talking to castmates before getting down to the business of putting on makeup and donning costumes.

Veteran customer Irene Rains, who has been with the production since 1938, sits behind her trusty sewing machine, ready at a moment's notice to make a last minute repair to a costume.

As twilight deepens and curtain time draws near, actors playing the roles of Indians begin the time-consuming task of applying body makeup. They help each other in putting on the finishing decorative touches that turn them into colorful figures from long ago.

Jack Smith works alone on a pier, preparing fireworks in a barrel of sand, and property technicians double check to make sure all props are in place and in good shape. Then, when curtain call comes, all is in readiness once more to give the audience another finely tuned performance of "The Lost Colony."

Senate Acting On Bills To Save Unemployment Fund

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Employers would pay an extra $92 million in 1984 and unemployed workers would get about $50 million less under bills tentatively approved by the Senate to help the state Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund.

Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, said it could take four or five years to stabilize the fund, which the U.S. Labor Department predicted would go bankrupt by 1984 without drastic action. He said payments were exceeding income to the fund by about $180 million a year.

"It's going to take a long time," he said. "We won't see 5 percent unemployment in North Carolina for a long time, and that's when it will really stabilize."

After the bill won 47-0 approval, Childers asked that final consideration be delayed until Tuesday.

"There may be some more comments from those in industry who have opposed this," he said.

One of two bills approved Thursday raises the wage base for employer taxes from $7,000 to $8,200 in 1984 by setting it at 60 percent of the average wage. That will bring in $40 million a year while raising employer contributions by 17 percent, Childers said.

In addition, a 20 percent emergency escalator will be levied in 1984, dropping to 10 percent in succeeding years.

"As the condition of the fund improves, taxes will decrease until the fund stabilizes," he said. The escalator will raise another $52 million, bringing the total increase in contributions to $92 million, or 37 percent more than employers now pay.

Meanwhile, unemployment benefits would be reduced from 66 23 percent of the average weekly wage to 60 percent, a change expected to reduce benefits by $10 million or 2 percent in 1984. Childers said the higher rate would be reinstated when the fund returns to normal.

Changes in the way benefits are calculated would reduce benefits by about $37.5 million dollars a year, or 7.5 percent. Instead of paying benefits based on the best of four quarters, workers would be paid an average of the two best quarters.

And a new formula would spread out payments, instead of allowing 13 weeks of benefits for those working 1 1/2 quarters and 26 weeks for those working three quarters or more.

Rounding benefit payments to the lower dollar would save $2.5 million per year, or 0.5 percent, bringing the total reduction in benefits to $50 million a year or 10 percent.

Childers stressed that the bill was designed to have the least impact on employers and workers with regular employment records.

The second bill, also unanimously approved, forbids payment of unemployment insurance to teachers for the summer unless they are still out of work the following fall. It offers degrees of benefits for workers whose discharge was at least partly their fault because of negligence or misconduct.

Current law allows either full benefits or no benefits for employees fired for misconduct, leading to a lot of litigation, Childers said. Under the bill, four to 13 weeks of benefits could be allowed, depending on the degree of the claimants' fault.

Program Open To The Public

A two-prong conference focusing on international recognition of the Summer Solstice will be held at two sites in Greenville on Saturday. Green Refuses Any Comment

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green refused to comment Thursday on published excerpts of a taped conversation he had with an undercover FBI agent, while agencies with access to the tape said they had no idea how the Fayetteville Times secured a transcript of it.

The Times Thursday published excerpts from a taped discussion Feb. 15, 1982, at a Raleigh restaurant between Green and FBI agent Robert Drdak.

Drdak, one of two undercover agents involved in the Colorc investigation, testified Monday before the Wake County grand jury, which subsequently accused Green of accepting a $2,000 bribe and conspiring to receive bribes of $10,000 a month from Drdak.

Green Refuses Any Comment

Green, who is expected to be a 1984 gubernatorial candidate, was given a copy of the Associated Press copy of the transcript Thursday morning. He read parts of it in the Senate session and then retired to a private office nearby.

Emerging from the office, Green said, "I will not talk to you about it."

Green has earlier refused comment on the grand jury action, saying his attorney had advised him not to comment.

When asked Thursday if he was following his attorney's advice in refusing to comment on the transcript, Green said, "That's on my own advice. I'm not going to talk to the news media."

More Move In, Fewer Leaving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Census figures show that more people are moving into the state of North Carolina than leaving.

Federal census figures show that between 1975 and 1980, 538,400 people moved into the state while only 451,156 left.

Of the total number of people moving to North Carolina, 52.9 percent were from the South, 24.1 percent from the Northeast and 23 percent were from the North Central or West.

Figures show that most people moved to North Carolina from Virginia, followed by New York, Florida and South Carolina.

Wyoming had the fewest number of emigrants to North Carolina during that five-year span while fewer Tar Heels migrated to South Dakota than any other state.

But Adrian Koontz, a Salisbury social worker, and Isabel Nix of Hendersonville said they supported the bill because human suffering should be minimized whenever possible.

Committee chairman Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, said he believed Ballance's proposal was probably a way of "making a point that he doesn't like the bill or that he doesn't like capital punishment."

The panel did not vote on either measure. Further consideration of the bill was postponed until Tuesday.

Lemon Bill
The Senate Judiciary III Committee quickly approved a bill that would give North Carolina automobile purchasers the right to get their money back or a new car from the manufacturer if they buy a lemon.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, who introduced the bill, said it would help take the heat off car dealers who often try to make repairs when it is impossible.

Farmworkers Comp
A bill that would extend workers' compensation to farm laborers was sent to a House subcommittee despite support by the state Industrial Commission chairman and warnings that time was running short.

Bill Stephenson told the House Manufacturers and Labor Committee that the bill would take North Carolina out of the 17 states without workers' comp for farm laborers. But he cautioned that he was not speaking for the commission.

Rep. Phil Berry, D-Mecklenburg, questioned whether a subcommittee was needed. But introducer Rep. Joe Roberts, D-Gaston, said he wanted to change the requirement for carrying the coverage from farms with 10 or more workers to a certain salary level.

ABC Permits
The Senate approved a bill to let non-profit community theaters serve alcoholic beverages in counties allowing such sales over objections that it would ruin the state's reputation.

Sen. Julius "Chip" Wright, R-New Hanover, said tourists from outside the state would find themselves sitting beside "somebody who had imbibed a little too much."

The bill was approved, 26-21.

Auto Franchises
Despite protests from lobbyists for automobile manufacturers and distributors, the Senate Judiciary I Committee approved a lengthy bill regulating dealer licensing.

The bill establishes "relevant market areas" in which the number of auto dealerships for the same company is limited. The size of the market areas depends on their population.

Most of the objections centered on the requirement that the commissioner of motor vehicles conduct a hearing and rule within 240 days on disputes about whether or not a dealership should be permitted in a certain area.

Lobbyists complained that such hearings along with pending litigation could delay opening a dealership by as long as two years. But Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, said Motor Vehicles Commissioner R.W. Wilkins had insisted on that time period.

Polygraph Tests
Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, filed a bill that would bar businesses from using lie-detector tests when considering a person for employment.

Blue said he had doubts about the legality of using the polygraph during job interviews in light of a recent state Supreme Court ruling.

Dogs
Amid much joking and laughter, the House approved 64-34 a bill allowing dogs in hotels with the permission of the management.

Rep. Tom Rabon, D-Brunswick, successfully introduced an amendment requiring that a sign be posted on the door of rooms where dogs spent the night.

"I personally don't want to stay in a room where a dog stayed the night before," said Rabon.

Rep. James Hughes, R-Avery, asked Rabon what the penalty would be for hotel managers who don't abide by the law.

"I guess you'd put 'em in the doghouse," said Rabon.

Bribery
The House passed 102-0 a bill making it a crime to threaten a legislator with economic reprisals for casting certain votes or taking other legitimate actions as a lawmaker.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said the bill was aimed primarily at employers, business associates, and customers who might threaten a legislator with dismissal or other forms of retaliation.

"I'm not saying this has happened," said Adams. "But all the people I've talked to agree it would be terrible if it did."

Comp Time
The House sidetracked a bill that would bar state employees of executive rank who earn $30,000 a year or more from taking compensatory time off for overtime.

The bill was sent to the House Appropriations Committee on a motion of Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who said it would create a need for additional funds for overtime pay.

Rep. John Jordan, sponsor of the bill, said he became convinced it was needed after media reports surfaced that employees of the Department of Insurance took up to seven weeks of comp time despite earning over $30,000.

"We should have the very best people we can get in top management, not clock watchers," said Jordan.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said the bill was "one of a series of bills that are ... a slap at state employees."

"It is just such things as this that make it hard to get good people," said Hackney.

House Finance
The House Finance Committee approved a bill to grant a 5 cents partial exemption from the gasoline and special fuels tax and adjourned amidst rumors that a one-half cent county sales tax might be introduced.

Chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, said there were several proposals that might be amended to allow counties to raise sales taxes but refused to say which proposal might fuel the increase.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said several members were talking about "doing something for the folks back home" and might back a sales tax bill.

Methaqualone
The House approved 90-6 a bill reclassifying methaqualone as a Schedule I drug, putting it in a group with heroin.

Rep. Sam Beam, D-Gaston, said methaqualone had no value as a medicine but was a frequent target of drug store robbers.

The N.C. Drug Commission has yet to take methaqualone off the market. But Beam said the bill would take the step "without all the bureaucracy ... and red tape."

Thousands Want Their Chance On 'Fantasy'

By MARK SCHWED
United Press International
Televisionland is a place where mom, dad, junior and sis can take a trip away from their troubles without leaving the living room couch.

Ever since "The $64,000 Question," TV has paid off its viewers in terms they can understand — cash and merchandise. Monty Hall turned it into an art in "Let's Make a Deal," a show that transformed educated grownups into monkeys bobbing for megabucks.

But who needs a second washer and dryer?

She may not be Monty Hall, but Eleanor Richman is the god of the giveaway for the 1980s.

Ms. Richman, 33, is director of research for "Fantasy," NBC's daytime show that turns dreams into reality.

"We get 50,000 to 80,000 letters a week from around the country," she said.

"They want honeymoons and Ataris and microwave ovens."

Larry Routh, 31, is a chemical salesman from Big Lake, Texas, who did not want a honeymoon, Atari or microwave oven. He wanted to be a country music star. His 26-year-old wife, Wanda, sent Ms. Richman a letter telling of his "fantasy." On the first night they met, he wrote her a song called "A Little Bit of Heaven." She bought him a guitar for Christmas on credit.

Ms. Richman and the research department checked out the story and decided the Rouths were worthy of some fantasy fulfillment. The Rouths won a trip to Nashville, where he performed at Opryland and were put up in the Opryland Hotel's governor's suite.

Executive producer Earl Greenburg, a former deputy attorney general for Pennsylvania, said he was going after the "Walter Mitty" fantasies — the woman who would like to be Cleopatra and float down the River Nile — when he came up with the idea for the show.

But then the recession came along and put a damper on the nation's fantasies.

Just getting a full-time job turned out to be the biggest desire. American daydreams of pleasure cruises to exotic ports were replaced by requests for 200-mile trips.

A Portsmouth, Va., woman wanted her family of four to spend 10 minutes with an empty grocery cart at the local supermarket. A 10-year-old girl wanted something to cheer the family up after her dad was laid off from his job — a rattle for the baby, a stuffed unicorn for her sister and jawbreakers for herself.

"A lot of people come from extremely troubled backgrounds — reformed alcoholics, not so reformed alcoholics. You get a picture of America," Ms. Richman said. "I get so many letters from people who are out of work. Some of them just ask for fuel. This is all painful stuff."

But as Ms. Richman says, "Look, this is television." TV is supposed to be entertaining. It's supposed to take people away from their troubles.

So, people get to ride elephants down Malibu Boulevard, women learn how to can-can and kids get their Atari video games.

"It's not a numbing show to watch. You're not hit over the head with disaster," Ms. Richman said. "You find very interesting stories to watch and have sort of an emotional release. People come away with the idea of getting something from TV."

"By the time we finish you go through so many emotions," said Leslie Uggams, who shares the hosting duties with veteran game show host Peter Marshall. "By 8 o'clock, you're ready to go straight home and hit the bed."

Miss Uggams' work on the show won her a Daytime Emmy June 8 as outstanding host of a variety series.

There are the usual "greedy" requests — people who want a Ferrari or pleasure trips to trendy Cancun, Mexico. And some reunions backfire.

"We find people and they just don't want to see each other, in some cases for pretty grisly reasons," Ms. Richman said. "We got a letter from a guy about a wife who up and left him and took the baby. He tracked her down and sent her presents, but they were returned unopened. We tracked the daughter down and she said, 'I don't want to see that man. He was in jail for being a child molester.'"

But mostly, Ms. Richman feels she is helping her fellow man, something that was not as clearcut when she was manager of daytime television for NBC.

"I feel like I'm helping people a lot more than by making up soap opera stories," she said. "There's a certain sadness. If times change, maybe we'll be able to do more fun fantasies."

By TOM JORY

'Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There is a remarkably prescient scene in tonight's episode of "Eischied" on NBC.

A police psychologist, trying to get Avril MacKenzie to remember a crime committed 15 years ago, tells the aging dancer, "We're going back through the file in your mind that's full of memories on videotape. Can you find 1964? Is it there?"

That's just what the network has done, in a way, to resuscitate the series that was acclaimed by the critics but more or less ignored by viewers. Nearly four years after "Eischied" ceased production, the cop show starring Joe Don Baker is back for rebroadcast this summer.

It's an interesting tactic, dictated at least partly by the economics of television. It simply costs too much nowadays to build a reserve of pilot episodes and other programs to carry a network through June, July and August.

What's more, there seems to be an inebriatingly powerful sense that certain shows, though not necessarily appealing to the mass audience, can thrive in new surroundings.

Metromedia and D.L. Taffner, the independent producer, announced not long ago plans to produce, for syndication, 22 new episodes of "Too Close For Comfort," the once-popular sitcom canceled by ABC after the 1982-83 season. Metromedia also said it would pick up new installments of "Fame," which was dropped after last season by NBC.

NBC tried during the recently completed TV year — without success — to do the same thing with "Taxi," a situation comedy introduced in 1978 that was, for a time, among ABC's most popular programs.

A season or two ago, public TV reran "The Paper Chase," CBS' widely praised but short-lived law-school series. And now Showtime, the pay-cable network, has reassembled much of the cast to produce "The Paper Chase: The Second Year."

During its own brief existence that ended in March, The Entertainment Channel, another pay-TV network, offered subscribers "Limited Edition," a showcase for acclaimed but low-rated network series, including "The Associates" (ABC, 1979), "Skag" (NBC, 1980), and "Paul Sand in Friends and Lovers" (CBS, 1974-75).

And beginning next month, many Public Broadcasting Service stations will repeat 13 installments of "Lifeline," a documentary series about the medical profession, that was produced for NBC in 1978.

"Eischied" was introduced Sept. 21, 1979, with Baker as West Virginia-born Earl Eischied, chief of detectives for the New York City Police Department.

Eischied always seemed a trifle out of place in the big city, and his repeated commendation, "You done good," did little to alter that impression. But he cared, and his maverick approach to police work was indeed refreshing.

In tonight's episode — entertaining but decidedly not the best of the lot — a young woman is murdered and the evidence reminds Eischied of a series of killings years ago that he was unable to solve as a low-ranking detective.

"In those days, I took my clues and ran with them," he says, characteristically. Now, he can assign 56 cops to the case.

Loretta Swit In Movie For TV

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Loretta Swit's first major project since ending her long-running role as Hotlips Houlihan in "M-A-S-H" will be a two-hour CBS-TV movie titled "Freshman Year."

Co-starring with Melissa Sue Anderson and Joel Higgins, Miss Swit will play a married English professor at an eastern establishment college who almost loses her husband (Higgins) to coed Anderson.

The contemporary drama will be filmed entirely on locations in and around Boston, including the Harvard campus. But CBS makes it clear the university involved is definitely not that Ivy League school.

Yorkin, Lear Breaking Up

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Alan (Bud) Yorkin and Norman Lear, the team that rocked TV in 1971 with "All In The Family" and subsequent TV hits, is reportedly breaking up, with Yorkin selling his half-interest in Tandem Productions to Lear.

The team formed Tandem in 1959 to produce independent films, including "Come Blow Your Horn" with Frank Sinatra and "Divorce American Style." Lear was the principal writer and Yorkin the director.

CBS TV Will Reach Chinese

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — CBS has penetrated The Peoples Republic of China with that country's first regularly scheduled American network TV programming, complete with commercials.

CBS Broadcast International and China Central Television, China's national TV network, have agreed to 64 hours of programming during a 12 month period beginning this October.

Another Phase Strains A Quality Of Tolerance

By GAIL MICHAELS
Meg is going through a new phase, the Don't-tell-me phase. Actually, it's a variation of the two-year-old's I'll-do-it phase, but just because I've been there twice before doesn't make me more tolerant. The basic issue here is responsibility. Meg wants more. She doesn't want me to treat her like a "kid" any more. She doesn't want to be told.

"Don't tell me to brush my teeth and wash my face and not to touch the walls!" she recently howled after breakfast. "Why do you think you have to tell me everything?"

"Because when I don't tell you, you don't brush your teeth or wash your face and you do touch the walls."

"That's not true! I was just on my way to brush my teeth and wash my face."

"And what are you doing to the walls?"

Abruptly she stopped swinging on the door frame and dropped her hands. "I forgot."

"You're good at forgetting."

"That's because a brain can get out of practice when grown-ups are trying to do all the thinking for it."

"I can understand that. But you've got to understand that unless you make an effort to put your brain into practice first, I'm going to be reluctant to stop reminding you to do things."

"Yes, but you have to understand that when you insist on always reminding me to do things, I'm going to be reluctant to do them. Like when you tell me to make up my bed, it actually makes me not want to do it."

This line sounded vaguely familiar. I wondered if she had been listening to her father's excuses for not cleaning out the garage — or mowing the lawn — or putting the blinds up in the bathroom — or removing his dirty socks from the den floor. I gave her the same answer I give him. "But if I don't remind you to make up your bed, it might be a month before you get around to it on your own, and I don't want to wait that long."

"It doesn't hurt you. I'm still bigger, remember?"

In spite of my flippant attitude, I did accede to one of her demands for increased responsibility. I let her get up and get breakfast by herself. The first few mornings she did this, she was successful. But the morning I had to wade through the half-inch of diluted milk to get to the refrigerator, I knew that we had hit a major snag.

"The bottle was too heavy. It slipped out of my hands," Meg explained.

I noticed that she was holding the mop and Zachary's plastic sand pail full of water. "I see that you did attempt to clean it up."

Zachary appeared from the vicinity of the living room, slinging two milk-soaked wash cloths. "And I helped."

"Oh, brother," I groaned.

Meg handed me the mop. "I really am sorry, Mother," she sighed, suddenly willing to relinquish her hard-won independence. "But I'm just too young to handle messes like this."

So am I.

Refuge To Get 2 Baby Eagles

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two baby eagles were scheduled to arrive at the Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County Friday as part of a project to return eagles to the North Carolina coast.

Sponsors of the project hope the two Wisconsin-born eaglets will take to their adopted home in the secluded refuge, where they will be cared for by volunteers.

Helms Recalled As Lonely Voice

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan Thursday night recalled Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., as a "lonely crusader" whose army of conservative supporters has steadily grown.

Reagan was the keynote speaker at a fund-raising dinner for the conservative North Carolina senator who often has challenged Reagan from the right when the president has sought to compromise on issues.

Reagan recalled that Helms came to Washington as "a lonely crusader," who had the courage to vote his convictions, but rarely won fights on the Senate floor.

"Gradually, his amendments that had won only five, 10 and 15 votes were winning 30 and 40 and 50. Bit by bit, he became more than a lonely crusader. He grew into a lion-hearted leader of a great and growing army."

"So, Jesse, we just want you to know the reinforcements are here, the cavalry is ready, and we intend to march until victory is yours on Election Day 1984."

Although Helms has not yet announced his reelection bid for 1984, he is expected to face a tough battle with his most likely opponent North Carolina's Democratic governor, Jim Hunt.

More than 700 people attended the black-tie Washington fundraiser, which White House spokesman Larry Speakes said cost $500 a plate for North Carolinians and $1,000 for Helms supporters from outside his home state.

Proceeds will go to the Helms for Senate Committee in Raleigh.

Committee treasurer Mark L. Stephens said Reagan was returning a favor to Helms' National Congressional Club, which raised $4.6 million for the Reagan campaign in 1980.

Former North Carolina State football coach Lou Holtz, now head coach at Arkansas, served as the fund-raiser's master of ceremonies. Holtz worked for Helms during the 1978 campaign.

Also attending were former Baltimore Colts football player Mike Curtis and stock car race driver Richard Petty.

Cabinet members attending included Interior Secretary James Watt, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

Others attending were James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff, and 29 GOP senators, including majority leader H. Howard Baker of Tennessee, Robert J. Dole of Kansas and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina. Next Tuesday, Hunt plans to appear at a fund-raising event in Washington for the North Carolina Campaign Fund, a political action committee opposed to Helms.

Kelly's Friends

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — The tickets said, "I, Dick Kelly, want to buy my good friend — a complementary drink of his choosing."

Trouble was, Kelly didn't know anything about the passes until after his friends had cashed them in.

Kelly, who owns the Best Western Town House Motel in Sioux Falls, officially opened a new convention center Tuesday at a ribbon-cutting ceremony and reception. That's where the cards, complete with Kelly's high school picture and his initials scribbled in the corner, were used.

Kelly said he was told 10,000 tickets were printed, but he doesn't believe it. Only 40 turned up.

The bartenders were surprised, but poured the liquor because they thought the free drink tickets were legitimate.

Several of Kelly's friends admitted printing them. "I found out how many friends I had," said Kelly. "I think all of them had a card."

Struggle In Black And White

Unrest in South Africa has increased as that nation considers constitutional changes that would permit greater multi-racial participation in government. In 1961, South Africa broke away from Britain. Since then, its white-minority government has racially classified every citizen as white, Asian, black, or colored (of mixed blood.) The classifications help the government enforce the policy originally called "apartheid." This policy makes many kinds of racial mixing illegal. And it officially confines blacks to "homelands" consisting of 13 percent of the land. The reforms would grant Asians and coloreds representation in Parliament, but would exclude blacks—who make up 70 percent of the population.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the Prime Minister of South Africa?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Alan Shepard was the first U.S. astronaut in space.

Two To Prison For Truck Shots

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two Wilkes County men arrested in connection with shooting at a vehicle during the national truckers' strike in February were sentenced Thursday to three-year prison terms.

Kenneth Ball and Cyrus Perry, both of North Wilkesboro, were sentenced in Wilkes County Superior Court.

They were arrested following a shooting incident along U.S. 421 near North Wilkesboro. Both pleaded guilty to shooting into an occupied vehicle.

Ball also pleaded guilty to charges of carrying a concealed weapon, driving under the influence and several liquor law violations.

CRYPTOQUIP 6-17

JLV XKT V XAVWJ FLVS TVVRVR G BGFV JK RVS VTR LABWVXS.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — HE GOES TO EGYPT TO PEER AMID THE PYRAMIDS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals E.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

A little knowledge can be dangerous. West ducked a trick to maintain communications, only to find that he was communicating with declarer!

The auction was a matter of simple arithmetic, and the contract was normal. West led his fourth-best heart. East won the ace and returned the eight. To "maintain communications," West allowed declarer to win the trick.

Declarer cashed three rounds of clubs to see if that suit would break, then tried three rounds of diamonds, ending in dummy. When the ninth trick failed to materialize in either minor suit, declarer could have tried the spade finesse. Instead, however, he opted for a sure line — he exited with a heart, giving West his tricks in the suit.

After taking his three heart tricks, West was down to nothing but spades. His forced return in the suit gave declarer his game-going trick.

In many circumstances, West's play to the second trick would have been technically correct. This was not one of them. East could not possibly have another high-card entry.

West could have avoided the end play by winning the second heart and clearing the suit. Now declarer would have had no way of getting his ninth trick without resorting to the spade finesse, and he would have gone down one in peace and quiet.

Carroll C. Midgette of Raleigh has pled guilty to felonious securities fraud in the Superior Court of Martin County. He received a two-year sentence suspended for five years and was ordered to pay restitution to the victim, plus $500 and court costs.

According to a Grand Jury indictment handed down Sept. 20, 1982, Midgette was charged with defrauding Columbus Brown Jr. in connection with the sale of a security on or about December 30, 1980. Securities Deputy F. Daniel Bell III said investigation showed that the security sold to Brown was bogus and that no such business as Safe Ball Dart Game exists. Stunned By Aid Appeal

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — Emerald Isle officials say they were stunned to learn that a state agency applied May 13 for federal aid for a beach access facility that has yet to be authorized by the General Assembly.

A spokesman for the state Office of Coastal Management said Wednesday the paperwork was filed "in case the General Assembly approves the project."

But Mayor Richard Smith said state officials "have directly misled us."

At issue is a beach access facility opposed by town officials, which the Legislature wants to build at Bogue Point.

Other provisions in the bill require the town to close a beach vehicle ramp at Bogue Point and bar vehicles from the point throughout the year. The measures were added to the bill at the request of landowners living near the point.

The landowners had threatened to secede if necessary to close the ramp, and had Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, introduce a secession bill to force the town to cooperate.

In another development, town commissioners said Tuesday they would "take a long, hard look" at future beach music festival proposals.

Youth Killed By Lightning Bolt

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old Richmond County youth was killed Wednesday after being struck by lightning while fishing with his father, police said.

Authorities say Stanley Albert Burr and his father, William, were at Rockingham City Lake when a storm began. The elder Burr told police a lightning bolt came down between two pine trees and struck both of them.

William Burr said the bolt knocked him unconscious and into the lake. When he regained consciousness, he saw his son was badly hurt. Rescue workers could not revive him.

Arrest Made After Break-Ins

Greenville police arrested Hertford Douglas Davis, 25 of 410 Latham St., and James Jerome Davis, 23 of 1108 Legion St. on first degree burglary, breaking and entering and larceny charges Thursday morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the two were taken into custody shortly after John Elmure Moseley of 409 Holly St., reported a burglary at his home about 4 a.m.

The chief said Moseley said he woke up to find two men in his bedroom, and struggled with one of them before the two fled.

Shortly after the incident was reported, police stopped a van near the intersection of Reade Circle and Colaniche Street. Davis and Douglas jumped from the vehicle and ran, but were caught after a short foot chase.

Officers then discovered that John's Flowers at 503 East Third Street had been broken into and the fan taken from the flower shop.

Cannon said entrance to John's Flowers was gained by breaking a window. He said a jar containing money, as well as the keys to the truck, were taken from the building. He added that the jar of money was recovered from the van.
