Acceptance Of Grant Cleared

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners this morning gave approval for acceptance of a $4,250 federal grant to provide emergency food and shelter through the Department of Social Services.

The money, from the Jobs Bill, will be used in conjunction with a $29,000 grant received by the local Salvation Army to help meet emergency needs for the next four months.

In other business today, commissioners appointed Robert S. Hackney of Washington, N.C. to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees for a three year term. Hackney was nominated for the board by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors. Commissioners also reappointed Heber G. Braxton to serve on the Town of Ayden Planning Board; and accepted the resignation effective June 30 of Roger Cobb, tobacco specialist with the Agriculture Extension Service.

A permit was granted for the Greenville Jaycees to conduct a fireworks display at Carolina East Mall and Carolina East Center on July 2.

County Manager Reginald Gray reminded commissioners of an auction sale to be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the County Home site where a number of surplus items will be offered for sale.

Court Will Rule On School Tax Breaks

By RICHARD CARELLI
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether private citizens can go to court and prod the federal government into denying or rescinding tax breaks to racially discriminatory schools.

In a sequel to its recent decision upholding an Internal Revenue Service policy of denying tax-exempt status to discriminatory private schools, the court will study just who can sue in an attempt to speed IRS enforcement.

The justices said they will review a federal appeals court ruling that two years ago gave private citizens a broad legal right to file such lawsuits.

Earlier this month, the high court ruled by an 8-1 vote that the IRS policy is supported by "a most fundamental national public policy."

The decision said the IRS was correct in withholding tax-exempt status from Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., and the Goldsboro Christian Schools in Goldsboro, N.C.

Bob Jones University bars interracial dating and marriage for its students, and the Goldsboro schools refuse to admit blacks.

Since it adopted the tax-exemption denial policy in 1970, the IRS has revoked tax exemptions for more than 100 private schools and has denied exemptions to numerous others deemed to be racially discriminatory.

But civil rights groups say thousands of private schools continue to practice racial discrimination while depending heavily on tax-deductible contributions from individuals for support. Those groups question whether the Reagan administration is committed to quickly and aggressively stripping those schools of their federal tax breaks.

The Reagan administration had sought to end the IRS policy, contending that it never had been explicitly authorized by Congress. The Supreme Court said Congress clearly has given its implicit approval of the exemption-denial policy.

The case acted on today stems from a 1976 lawsuit filed by Inez Wright, the mother of four black children attending Memphis, Tenn., public schools, and by parents of other black children attending public schools in several other states.

The suit, seeking nationwide relief, accused the IRS of failing to root out racially discriminatory schools and terminate their tax-exempt status.

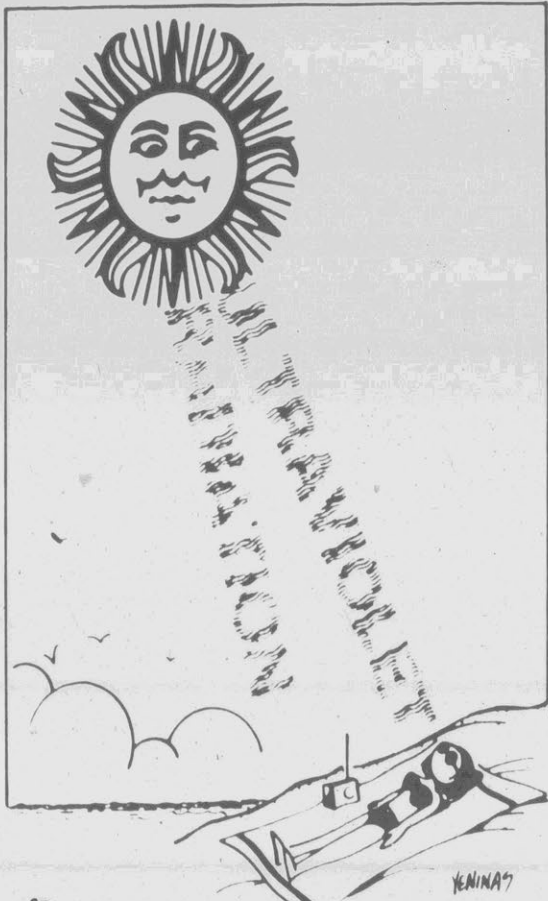

A federal trial judge in Washington dismissed the suit, ruling that Mrs. Wright and the other black parents lacked the necessary legal "standing" to file it. But the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here reinstated the suit, finding "no standing impediment."

The Reagan administration and W. Wayne Allen, board of trustees chairman for the Briarcrest School System in Memphis then appealed to the Supreme Court. The Briarcrest school was among those specifically named in the 1976 lawsuit as a "segregated academy."

Government lawyers told the justices that the appeals court ruling's "expansive view of standing... seriously erodes" established limits on federal court power and "threatens the orderly administration of the revenue laws."

They argued that the black parents had no legal right to sue because they did not claim to have been hurt by the allegedly discriminatory schools.

Friendly Sun Is 'Sinister'

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The same friendly sunbeams that make a tan also have a deeper and potentially more sinister effect on people, scientists are finding. They temporarily rearrange some of the body's defenses against disease.

One mild sunburn disrupts the balance between different kinds of white blood cells that circulate throughout the body. Is this bad? Does it affect people's resistance to disease or cause other harm?

These questions are being asked by a new field of medical research called photoimmunology. It is aimed at learning the effects of the invisible part of sunlight called ultraviolet radiation on the immune systems of living things. And it is so young — no more than 6 years old — that the answers are still unknown.

However, researchers are already speculating that these immunity changes could explain how too much sun causes skin cancer and makes people prone to a common viral infection.

"We have to emphasize the greatness of our ignorance," said Dr. John A. Parrish of Massachusetts General Hospital. "We're just beginning to understand that there is a complex interaction between ultraviolet radiation and the immune system."

By itself, the fact that sunlight can change the cells that regulate immunity throughout the body is surprising and disturbing. At least 30 labs around the world are trying to figure out what it means.

"We know that ultraviolet radiation can cause a marked change in the immune system," said Dr. Mark Greene, another leader in the field at Harvard Medical School. He discovered that it does so by selectively neutralizing cells that are important in activating immune responses.

These are antigen-presenting cells. They reside in the skin, the spleen and other organs throughout the body and help orchestrate the body's assault on intruders. They recognize them, process them and present them to the white blood cells, or lymphocytes, for eventual destruction.

"In the absence of that cell, one gets a predominance of what's called inhibitory responses," Greene said, "that may predispose you to permit the growth of developing tumors."

A type of white cell called a suppressor cell may be produced that keeps the immune system from launching its attack.

Recently, Peter Hersey and other researchers from Sydney Hospital in Australia watched what happened when volunteers spent a half hour a day for 12 days in a commercial tanning studio. They found a significant increase in their suppressor cells and a decrease in another kind of blood cell, called helper cells, that turn on the immune response. These blood cells were still abnormal two weeks after some of the people finished their sunbathing.

Sun rays reach blood that is circulating through the skin.

"What's important," said Parrish, "is that the doses of ultraviolet radiation impinging on the skin that reach lymphocytes are enough to affect their viability and function."

Much more blood runs through the skin than is necessary to keep it alive.

Back To The Sand Bags

By KIM MILLS

Associated Press Writer

The heavy snowmelt in the Rockies forced authorities to release more water from brimming reservoirs into the bloated Colorado River today, causing some flooding in Arizona and California, while runoff in Utah knocked out a bridge and caused another mudslide.

Civil defense workers in Arizona and California piled sandbags along the swollen river Sunday and moved mobile homes to higher ground. The Red Cross opened shelters in some communities to get ready for evacuations.

In southern Nevada, casino workers at Laughlin built a concrete wall to stem reservoir water to be released today, said Jack Christy, a watch commander for the Mohave County, Ariz., sheriff's department, located just across the river.

In Nebraska, lowland flooding was reported along the Platte and Missouri rivers and the weather service issued a flood warning today for the Big Blue River from Seward to below Beatrice. The most extensive flooding along the river this morning was in the Crete area, where county roads were beginning to be covered with water.

Melting snow in the Rockies that caused flooding in Utah and other states has filled the Colorado River and its reservoirs — forcing the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation to increase releases of water today from Hoover and Davis Dams on the Arizona-Nevada border and the Parker dam farther downstream on Arizona's border with California.

The releases will be increased in steps through Wednesday and will swell water levels by 4 or 5 feet for the next five to six weeks, bureau officials said.

In Utah, flooding Sunday undermined, then collapsed a power transmission tower near Vernal in the eastern part of the state and temporarily stranded people in Beaver Canyon in the southwest.

Beaver County sheriff's officers said floodwaters knocked out a bridge on Utah Route 153, about 11 miles up Beaver Canyon on Sunday, temporarily marooning about 50 people. They were brought out over a foot bridge, and an overpass was being built so their vehicles could be brought out, officials said.

A mudslide in a canyon east of Centerville, Utah, made Davis County officials nervous for a time Sunday.

Shuttle Crew Converting Challenger Into Factory

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle astronauts

converted Challenger into an orbiting factory today, activating a dozen drug and metal processing experiments — crucial steps toward the eventual industrialization of space.

The five astronauts plunged buoyantly into three days of science and technology following the weekend's doubleheader release of two communications satellites.

Anxious to get started, mission specialist John Fabian turned on the first experiments 20 minutes early. "The SPAS is up and running," he told Mission Control. "It looks like the champ we know it is. It looks real good."

SPAS — which stands for Shuttle Pallet Satellite — is a West German device containing several of the experiments. Fabian and Sally Ride are to release it in space Wednesday, retrieving it later for return to Earth.

As the ship sailed into Day 3, lead flight director Tommy Holloway told reporters: "The orbiter continues to work exceptionally well. We're delighted with the performance of the orbiter, the flight crew and the ground crew."

The only problem involved an instrument which measures gaseous contaminants in the payload bay. Holloway said its data-handling system apparently was not working.

Challenger passed over Cape Canaveral early today and the crew reported it could see thunderstorms near the runway where the spaceship is to land.

"Will you have that cleared out by Friday?" Ms. Ride requested. Mission communicator Terry Hart said they were right on the runway centerline and jokingly cleared Challenger for landing. But Ms. Ride was none too eager to end her pioneer flight, insisting, "I think we'll go around." The astronauts return here Friday morning at 6:53 a.m. EDT.

Aboard the shuttle, the astronauts dropped the pressure in their cabin from an Earth-like 14.7 pounds per square inch to 10.2 psi. The purpose was to see how well they could manage the reduced pressure for 30 hours.

Claims Bombing Had To Be Done

MURRELL'S INLET, S.C. (AP) — Tony Cimo waited

for four years while appeals delayed the execution of the jeering convict who killed his parents. Then he took over the state's role and got another convict to kill the man on Death Row.

He says his family had to hear the recorded confession of killer Rudolph Tyner repeatedly in court. They went over the details of his parents' death every time a new appeal was filed.

And he says he got reports from the prison that Tyner would "laugh telling about how my mother and father were killed... how my mother was on her knees begging for her life when he killed her."

"It had to be done," Cimo, a 36-year-old bricklayer and father of two, says of Tyner's death. "It's something that should have been done. And now it's over with."

"Except for paying the piper," adds his wife, Jan.

Cimo reports to prison Thursday for his role in the September bombing that killed 24-year-old Tyner in the Central Correctional Institution at Columbia. He pleaded guilty a month ago to withholding knowledge of a felony, conspiracy to murder and threatening to kill by means of an explosive.

He won't be eligible for parole until he's served 32 months of his eight-year sentence, but he believes he did the right thing.

"I still don't feel like I've done anything wrong," Cimo said.

1984 Race In Turmoil

No matter what becomes of the questions raised about Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, the situation has thrown the 1984 gubernatorial race into turmoil.

Green has long been considered a front runner in the race for the gubernatorial nomination. The field is crowded but Green had a major forum in the State Legislature and some powerful friends there. He still does.

The major question will be how he comes out of the legal problems which have been raised by a Grand Jury presentment. If there is an indictment and a trial he could be absolved and come out stronger politically than ever. If he is not indicted he can claim vindication but many questions will hang over a future campaign for governor.

The legal questions should be kept clear of politics, but, of course politics is always there. Green's potential opponents in next year's primary are keeping quiet about his troubles, but everyone concerned knows that the political fortunes of Jimmy Green can go either way. The race for the 1984 Democratic gubernatorial nomination is now a real cliff hanger.

Entering Deep Water

We're happy to see the President is getting into the deeper waters of education ... dealing with specifics in looking for qualities of excellence.

As have many others, he expresses surprise that some schools have dropped mandatory subjects he took as a boy and subjects his children were required to study. He, too, doubts incoming high school freshmen are qualified to determine what courses they should take.

It's a good point. Past experience has shown that — given a choice — youngsters will go for the easy courses. There are exceptions, true. Some do opt for studies that pose a challenge and will open doors to scholarships and careers that dwarf achievements of fellow students.

Unquestionably, good teaching in school and at home shapes lives of scholars. The quality of course and professional teachers is in the hands of local and state boards. Qualities of inspiration and example should be in the home.

We lean to the opinion that a desire to learn, and much of the learning process blooms within the family structure. If a child is not inspired, no "master teacher" can reach him, or her.

In Other Years, April A Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — To the horror of those who worry about federal budget deficits, the month of April came in a loser — by more than $4.4 billion.

What, you say, is so bad about that? Isn't it better than the $27 billion splash of red ink in March and the $25 billion shortfall in February?

What's wrong is that April almost always is a winner, regardless of savage comments by poets, it being the month in which income taxes receipts generally outpace the ability of government to spend.

Several explanations are offered, among them the recession's affect on business profits, the 5.1 percent rise in government spending over the same month a year earlier, and the return of 1982 tax overpayments.

No reason, however, is likely to arouse more commentary than the one involving Individual Retirement Accounts. Such accounts, it seems, sharply reduced the government's tax take, probably by more than $15 billion.

There is an irony about this, because IRAs were devised to take some of the pressure of Social Security, and therefore, off the government, by permitting individuals to defer tax payments while saving for retirement.

For the time being, however, those tax deferments have put added financial pressure on government, which deficit-ridden Washington can do without.

But, while the immediate impact has been negative, Martin Lefkowitz, who follows statistics for the Chamber of Commerce, believes the long-range impact will be decidedly positive.

In the long run, he observes, the decision by individuals to look after their own retirement will relieve pressure on Social Security.

The most significant change in financial institutions today, says Francis Schott, an economist, is the "cross invasion of financial services by institutions breaking out of traditional barriers."

Simplified, the change involves companies trespassing on old barriers — bankers breaking into insurance and insurers breaking into stock brokerage services and each seeking a piece of the financial action held by the other.

The goal, it is said, is to provide customers with a financial supermarket in which they can do all their shopping in one stop — insurance, stocks, savings, loans. It is called not only feasible, but logical and inevitable.

Schott, chief economist and senior vice president of The Equitable Life Assurance Society, which puts him in a position to study the maneuvering, isn't so certain.

"There is a major public policy interest in preserving the integrity of the regulated services," he says, citing the Glass-Steagall Act, which seeks to prevent bank customer funds from being used to prop up a bank's client companies.

People are confusing technological feasibility with customer needs, he suggests. Public policy issues, he says, "cannot, and in the end will not, be confused with the potentialities of new technology."

He gives several other reasons, one of them being the potentially adverse reaction from customers. He states:

"Just as corporate treasurers have long been wary of entrusting all of the company's pension fund to one manager, so may individuals consumers fear the risk of having all their assets at risk in one institution."

And then there is a reason that might be foremost in your mind, the one involving big brother. He asks:

"Does one wish to have one's entire financial situation be an open book to numerous persons in large organizations?"

Such obstacles, he suggests, will at least slow the process now under way. And it will, he adds, leave room for specialists, such as now exist.

The Fundamental Choice On Education

RALEIGH — In a year when there was little money for new expenditures, the General Assembly's Expansion Budget Committee had a fundamental choice to make regarding education. The committee could make a long term investment in the public schools. Or, hoping to reap a return on investment in just a few years, the committee could spend that money on the community colleges and universities. The committee decided to seek the short term alternative.

The 1983-84 expansion budget includes almost $139 million for education. Most of the big chunks in that budget are directed at high technology education programs in the community colleges and universities. It is hoped that these programs will either lure new industry here or help prepare our citizens for high tech jobs.

For example, there's an $8.4 million engineering school for N.C. A&T University, a $9.3 million computer science building for UNC-Chapel Hill, a $9.7 million engineering building at UNC-Charlotte. There are grants for high tech programs at four community colleges plus money to modernize the high tech aspects of textiles and agricultural education within the state's universities.

One budget leader, speaking privately, explained the rationale behind the committee's choice of directions. "If you were to pump a lot of money into the public schools right now it would not show itself for quite a while. That's a good thing to shoot for, but we hope we can do that next year. Right now the need is for high tech and we've got to get into it before everyone else does."

Defending the money spent on high tech, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, committee chairman, cited the recent decision by the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. to locate a major facility in Austin, Texas. The Research Triangle Park lost the facility, state officials said, because computer science programs here lag behind Austin's. "Are we going to wait for the next one to come to town looking before we decide to get going on this?" he asked. "No, we've got to get those programs in place."

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, base budget chairman, says the expansion budget "puts North Carolina in the forefront of high technology education ... so our citizens can take advantage of the second industrial revolution." That's high-falutin' language for saying we'd better start training people now for the jobs that are available. As Watkins said, the 10,000 textiles jobs lost over the past few years didn't move offshore. They were lost to automation. But, somebody's got to know how to run the new textile machines. It might as well be North Carolinians.

Still, in a year when the inadequacy of American public education has been so widely discussed, it's amazing that the legislature would ignore the lower grades. Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction, has been saying as much since the expansion budget was approved.

But Adams has an answer for that. "First of all, with the public schools, we've got to do something dramatic there. And professional educators can't agree what to do. Secondly any kind of dramatic program is more costly than we could afford to do this year. Hopefully, next year, we can do that."

There's a bit of irony involved in this. Two years ago, when Gov. Jim Hunt pushed his Microelectronics Center, he spoke of it being a long-term investment. Now, high tech is seen as a short term investment. It shows how fast the future can get here these days. That'll be something to keep in mind "next year" when the assembly looks at doing something "dramatic" in terms of a long-term investment in the public schools. The future has a way of sneaking up on us.

Ruling On Garwood Due

By DAN LOHWASSER
United Press International

The Navy's second highest military court is set to rule, probably this summer, in the case of Marine Pfc. Robert R. Garwood and could end a lengthy and controversial chapter in the story of America's Vietnam involvement.

Garwood, still officially a Marine but now working in a service station near Charlottesville, Va., was convicted Feb. 5, 1981 of collaborating with the enemy during a 14-year odyssey through the POW camps in South and North Vietnam. He was the only Vietnam-era serviceman convicted of such charges.

A three-judge panel on the U.S. Navy Court of Military Review, with little fanfare like that generated by Garwood's court martial, heard oral arguments in the appeal of his conviction by defense and military prosecutors on March 1 in Washington.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Richard Delmar, Garwood's military lawyer, said the defense raised eight arguments on appeal including "the fact he (Garwood) was the only returning POW prosecuted" on collaboration charges. The defense has also challenged the conduct of the military judge, Col. Robert E. Switzer. They claim he made statements to the press during the trial clearly showing prejudice against the defendant.

On Aug. 29 Putnam publishers will release a book titled "Conversations with the Enemy," which will be Garwood's own account of his days behind enemy lines. The publisher portrays the book as "an adventure story" of survival and the "ultimate triumph of human will."

Putnam paid $100,000 for the rights to Garwood's story, and promises the book will tell "what he did and why he did it."

The POWs who encountered Garwood in the jungles had their own account of his activities. They testified Garwood acted as an armed guard and interrogator of his fellow Americans. They said he ate, slept and worked with the prison camp cadre at times bragging about his position of authority with the communists.

The defense based its case on the testimony of psychiatrists who said Garwood's initial brutalization by the enemy left the then 19-year-old Indiana Marine mentally unable to resist his captors.

The court sentenced Garwood to a dishonorable discharge, a reduction to rank of private and a loss of pay and benefits.

Switzer, now retired and teaching law at a Jacksonville, N.C. community college, said he felt the case never assumed the significance some thought it would for the military and the demands it makes upon men held in captivity by an enemy that does not abide by civilized constraints.

"I think it was important only in the sense it was the only case of its kind arising from Vietnam," said Switzer. "It more or less re-established or reaffirmed the position taken in the cases that came out of Korea."

In fact Switzer said the appeal court ruling about his own conduct may be the biggest precedent coming out of the case.

The Real Root Of Sino-American Friction

SHANGHAI, China — The root of Sino-American friction may be neither Taiwan nor technology transfer but what is symbolized by Voice of America broadcasts, an explanation undercutting the policy pursued by the U.S. government's China specialists.

"There is just too much talk about democracy (over VOA) for the Chinese," a western diplomat told us. Indeed, the U.S. connection has brought China not only welcome American technology but unwelcome American busybodies poking around this communist police state. That infectious bacillus transported here as part of U.S. contacts, not Ronald Reagan's rhetoric, is the more probable cause of China's chill toward Washington and cautious renewal of ties with Moscow.

Such an explanation contradicts the reporting, past and present, of the U.S. Embassy in Peking. Its telegrams back to Washington currently stress that strategically crucial U.S.-Chinese relations are endangered by Reagan administration provocations and that more accommodation is needed.

The embassy's tone is set by Deputy Chief of Mission Charles (Chaz) Freeman, typical of the New China Hands who have tied their Foreign Service careers to the China connection. Freeman's reporting reflects an underlying belief that President Reagan's 1980 campaign comments shook that connection, prompting a revised outlook by the Chinese leadership.

Warnings from the China specialists of disastrous strategic consequences led to the Aug. 17, 1982, Sino-American communique promising to limit arms sales to Taiwan, but Peking soon renewed complaints about U.S.-Taiwan relations. Similarly, as we reported in an earlier column, Reagan administration efforts to loosen restrictions on technology transfer to China have been written off in advance by the Chinese regime as pretense. China is demanding what it must realize is the impossible: severance of U.S. ties with Taiwan and treatment of China on technology transfer identical to Japan and NATO members. Nothing less will satisfy Peking. Although U.S. embassy reporting expresses deep alarm about unilateral U.S. restrictions on Chinese textile imports, high Chinese officials made clear to us that a reversal on textiles would not significantly improve relations.

Nor do the Chinese seem to be awaiting Reagan's departure and possible succession in 1985 by a friendlier Democrat — maybe Walter F. Mondale. They exude no nostalgia for the golden era of Sino-American relations climaxed by then-vice president Mondale's visit in 1979. One senior official told us what Mondale brought here with him then was promises for most-favored-nation trading status, which the official indicated was China's due, and an Export-Import Bank loan "with interest rates too high."

More than coincidentally, the chilling of the American connection began when Deng Xiaoping reversed political liberalization in 1980. The temperature kept dropping this year with new restrictions between individual Chinese and Western visitors.

U.S. diplomats, journalists and academics are kept at arm's length. In particular, the long romance between Chinese communists and American news correspondents is now stone cold dead. Expecting sympathetic newsmen in the mold set by Edgar Snow in the 1930s, the Chinese government instead was jolted by reporters who returned home to write critical books.

Simultaneously, Russians are no longer non-persons in China. We observed a Russian and several important-looking Chinese cadres in protracted conversation, punctuated by periodic laughter, at Peking airport's waiting room. One Russian-speaking Western diplomat finds that middle-level officials who two years ago had "forgotten" the Russian taught them in the 1950s suddenly have "remembered" the language and are willing to speak it. Do these straws in the wind really mean China is seeking "equidistance" between Moscow and Washington? A responsible Foreign Ministry official rejected the word but confirmed the concept to us, contending that China opposes "hegemonism" on a case-by-case basis — practiced by the Soviet Union in Afghanistan and Cambodia, practiced by the U.S. in the Middle East, Korea, South Africa and, worst of all, Taiwan ("a dark cloud hanging over our two nations").

That is a long way from urging Uncle Sam to take on the Polar Bear as Deng was doing before 1980, but it also is far from resurrection of the old Sino-Soviet alliance. The U.S. will still be able to use Chinese stations vital for tracking Soviet missiles, and China still counts on the U.S. for technology. However, the intimate link envisaged by the New China Hands is beyond reach. Far Eastern expert Lucian Pye in a paper on Chinese commercial negotiating techniques has warned American businessmen to "expect that the Chinese will try to influence by shaming" and urged them to "resist the temptation to believe that difficulties may have been caused by one's own mistakes." That is good advice for the U.S. government in contemplating a Sino-American chill whose true causes have less to do with policy in Washington than with the nature of the Chinese communist state.

Strength For Today

Freedom is at one and the same time man's greatest blessing and his most onerous responsibility. Most of us, with the salvation of our souls in mind, would settle for the complete obedience to the will of God which the angels appear to have. We would give up liberty, would we not, to gain something better? But we are not angels.

Why God gave man the right of choice no one knows — save that there can be no growth of personality without the opportunity to choose. In the very ability to say yes or no to everything — including God's commands — lies the power by which the human soul can become like God. God is preparing us for eternal fellowship with him. He could have no fellowship at all with mere automatons. God so respects our personalities that he permits us to choose evil instead of good — hell instead of heaven, if we care to do so.

A person has an inherent right to be wrong — to be damned if he wants it that way.

Squeal Law Isn't In Effect Yet

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do something for teens, and for all of us who work daily to prevent teen pregnancy?

Please let young people know that the Parental Notification Regulation — also known as the "squeal law" — is not in effect; that teen-age girls can still get birth control devices from family planning agencies and Planned Parenthood without fearing that their parents will be informed.

By letting teens know that they are still guaranteed confidential services, you could prevent much anxiety and many unplanned pregnancies.

Thank you, Abby.

NAN SCHWEIGER,
PLANNED PARENTHOOD,
LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR MS. SCHWEIGER: I appreciate the input. And it's important to add that whether the "squeal law" goes into effect or not, teen-agers requesting examinations and/or treatment for venereal disease will not be reported to their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 and have been dating the same young man exclusively for four years. We've talked about getting married for some time, but even though he has given me a lovely ring, he refuses to let me officially announce our engagement. He says he doesn't believe in long engagements, and when he is "ready," we will announce our engagement and set a wedding date.

Abby, I told him that after four years of dating, enough is enough, so he agreed that we should both date other people until we decide to get married. The problem is that every time I date someone else he gets jealous and angry and wants to go back to the exclusive dating arrangement.

I can't see my life without him, yet I'm fed up with waiting. What's wrong? And what should I do?

TIERED OF NO COMMITMENTS

DEAR TIRED: He isn't ready for marriage, but he'd like to put you on "hold" indefinitely. If it's marriage you want, return his ring and tell him you've had enough waiting.

And if he isn't knocking on your door within three months begging you to marry him, forget him.

You're never too old (or too young) to learn how to make friends and be popular. For Abby's booklet on popularity, send $1, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

No-Touch Packaging

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — The fish processing industry is investigating packaging that could be put in conventional or microwave ovens without the consumer ever having to touch the raw contents.

A New York Sea Grant researcher at Cornell University says the big breakthrough in packaging may be gas impermeable containers to keep raw fish in modified atmospheres.

Joe Regenstein says companies could package the raw fish with seasonings and sauces, ready to cook without any home preparation.

Wake Grand Jury Considers Green Case Today

INFILTRATORS — Bodies of two North Korean infiltrators lie on ground near where they were killed by South Korean troops early Sunday morning near Munsan-Ri, south of Korea's Demilitarized Zone. By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Wake County grand jury meeting today may decide whether to indict Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who is accused of accepting a $2,000 bribe and conspiring to receive monthly payoffs of $10,000.

Last week the grand jury issued two "presentments," not charging Green with a crime but asking District Attorney C. Colon Willoughby to investigate further or prepare indictments.

Willoughby has refused to say whether he would seek an indictment when the panel meets today.

After Friday's legislative session, Green, who presides over the state Senate and is expected to run for governor in 1984, declined to comment. He has refused to discuss the subject since the presentments were issued last Monday, when he said he was innocent and that he always had "tried to do what is right in fulfilling my public trust."

The presentments said Green conspired with Howard F. Watts of Clarkton to take bribes of $10,000 a month from undercover FBI agent Robert J. Drdak and others "for performing and omitting to perform official acts as Lieutenant Governor."

Green has said he met in January with Drdak, posing as Thomas "Doc" Ryan, who hinted he was involved in organized crime and wanted a mixed-drink license for a restaurant in Bolton.

Green said he feared Drdak tried to entrap him with a $2,000 check, so he returned the money and reported Drdak's visits to the State Bureau of Investigation.

Drdak was a central figure in the FBI's undercover investigation, dubbed "Colcor," of corruption in several rural southeastern North Carolina counties. The investigation, begun in 1980, has resulted in the indictment or conviction of more than 20 people, including a district court judge, a state representative, a state senator, a county commissioner and a police chief.

Last Thursday, the Fayetteville Times reported in a copyright story that it had obtained a transcript of a taped conversation between Green and Drdak on Feb. 15, 1982 at a Raleigh restaurant.

According to transcript excerpts provided by the Times to The Associated Press, Green told Drdak he could give Green money by falsifying campaign contribution reports. But he also said he would not "sacrifice my principles for 1,000 a month or 10,000 a month or whatever the figure is."

Green asked Drdak, who claimed to represent a group of Detroit investors involved in import-export deals along the North Carolina coast, "what could I possibly do for you and your company," the transcripts showed.

"Get elected governor," Drdak replied.

"Well, we're going to work on that, but surely you've got some way of ... getting that money to me by check, don't you, (that) would look above board," Green said.

According to the transcript, Drdak said out-of-state campaign contributions "wouldn't look too good on your report. Green replied, 'Well, you know, they don't check those addresses too closely. You could always put John Doe, Whiteville, or Tom Ryan, Whiteville.... They don't check.'"

Publication of the transcript sparked criticism from state and federal investigators, who denied releasing it. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten ordered an SBI probe of the leak Friday and asked U.S. Attorney Sam Currin to consider ordering a similar FBI investigation.

Published reports said Sunday that Currin had expressed willingness to help but had not decided whether to conduct a formal probe. Currin could not be reached for comment Sunday.

Editors of the Times have declined to identify their source.

State senators, who responded with a standing ovation last week when Green read on the Senate floor a statement defending himself, also were critical of the published transcripts.

But after reading the excerpts, several said they were confident Green was innocent.

"If that's all they've got, Jimmy Green has nothing to worry about," said Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg. "I feel a whole lot better since I read it. I'm exuberant."

Some attorneys have criticized the FBI's tactics.

Former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., a member of a Senate subcommittee that investigated FBI conduct in 1976, said the agency's actions were "definitely entrapment. There's no question about it."

However, Robert Pence, special agent in charge of FBI operations in North Carolina, said all undercover participants in Colcor were "well-briefed on what constitutes entrapment."

$5,000 Won By Engineer

SEATTLE (AP) — An aeronautical engineer for The Boeing Co. who took a fling at winning a paper airplane contest wound up gliding to a world title and $5,000 prize.

Eric Easterbrook, 23, of suburban Des Moines, used a hand-folded, craft Sunday to win the 1983 World Indoor Paper Airplane championship.

Some of the more devoted paper airplane buffs — arguing that it's more how you fold 'em than how you hold 'em — used specially built paper airplane-folding devices.

But Easterbrook folded a standard piece of paper into a plane that glided to within 6 inches of the center of the Kingdome to win the event, said Michael Campbell, a spokesman for the contest.

Bill Clow, 43, a teacher from Kirkland, placed second in the accuracy contest with a craft that landed within 27 inches of the bull's-eye.

More than 6,000 people turned out, tossing 3,171 paper airplanes, Campbell said.

TIMING AND TOOTHBRUSHING

Does toothbrushing prevent tooth decay? One has to wonder because tooth decay is widespread despite the increased sale of toothbrushes and dentifrices.

There are reasons for this paradox. One is that the toothbrush is usually not used at the time when it could be the most effective.

Acid formation on the tooth surface begins within moments after sugar has entered into the secluded areas and reaches a maximum in 15 to 30 minutes. This is why the toothbrush should be used immediately after eating if it is going to exert its greatest effect in disrupting acid formation. Brushing teeth after getting up or before going to bed has a beneficial cosmetic effect and a stimulating action on the gum tissue, but is not of much help in controlling tooth decay.

If the teeth cannot be brushed promptly after meals or snacks that have a high sugar content, rinse the mouth thoroughly with water. The flushing action can remove the soluble, fermentable sugar from the sheltered areas before the acid attack takes place.

Green Aide Tried Intercede In Case

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — An aide to Lt. Gov. James C. Green asked District Attorney Donald K. Tisdale to intercede in a drunken-driving case pending in Forsyth District Court, a Winston-Salem newspaper says.

The Winston-Salem Journal reported when it contacted Green's administrative assistant, George Jones, at Green's office in Raleigh Friday, Jones confirmed that he talked to Tisdale about the case, but later called back to say that he was acting without instruction from Green.

In a story published Saturday, Tisdale said a man who introduced himself as Jones has asked for his help with a charge against Robert T. McMillan, 43, of Hope Mills. The help the man sought could only be interpreted as an attempt to persuade him to reduce the drunken-driving charge, Tisdale told the newspaper Friday.

"What other interpretation could you put on it?" he said. "He certainly didn't want me to raise the charge, and he wouldn't need my help if the case was to be routinely prosecuted."

Court records show that McMillan, a Trailways bus driver, was arrested March 18 while driving his own car on Interstate 40 and charged with drunken-driving and speeding 70 mph. The case has been continued four times and trial is set for June 30 before Judge Joseph J. Gatto.

SERVICES PLANNED
There will be a services at Mills Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Black Jack, tonight through Friday. There will be a different speaker and choir each night. Pastor Elder J.L. Swinson and Deacon Jerry Carter, sponsors of the meetings, invite the public to attend.

Legislative Interest In NCAE Has Been Revived

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for the North Carolina Association of Educators and the U.S. Department of Labor are at odds about whether the teachers' group is a labor union, says an NCAE official.

The disagreement has been publicized recently by state Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, during House Education Committee debate of a bill that would let educators petition for payroll deduction of dues to professional organizations.

A Senate version of the bill, lodged in the Appropriations Committee, provides that the right to a dues checkoff would be withdrawn if the groups engage in collective bargaining.

The NCAE would qualify as one of those groups but Mavretic said it is critical for all questions about the group's status to be settled before any bill is considered.

"I want to find out as clearly as I can whether the NCAE is an employee organization (union) or not," Mavretic said. "I don't think we ought to have a teacher union in North Carolina. I am trying to do my homework before making a decision."

But John Dornan, NCAE's executive director, said Mavretic, "is really trying to make a mountain out of a mole hill because it is not going to change anything our organization has done over the past two years."

Dornan explained that for more than a year, the Department of Labor and the NCAE, represented by attorneys from the National Education Association, have been debating the North Carolina group's status.

"The question is in the hands of their attorneys and our attorneys," he said. "They are still in the state where they are exchanging briefs."

Howard L. Marsh, area administrator for the Labor-Management Services Administration in Atlanta, said federal law says that organizations consisting only of city, county and state employees need not register as labor unions.

But "once an organization represents one private or federal sector employee then they become subject to the (Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure) Act" and are considered unions, said Marsh, whose agency is under the Department of Labor.

A labor union must register and file financial reports with Marsh's agency.

Dornan said the controversy over the NCAE springs from the fact that about 250 teachers at Fort Bragg, considered federal workers because they are on a military base, are members of the NCAE and participate in collective bargaining.

He said the teachers were required to be organized if they wished to make any comment on their work conditions.

But Dornan emphasized that the 250 Fort Bragg teachers make up only one of 144 local NCAE chapters and a small part of the 39,623 members. He said he did not think the NCAE should be considered a labor organization because of the Fort Bragg teachers.

Marsh refused to comment on the case but in a June 6 letter to Mavretic, he said his office received a request to determine if the NCAE is a labor organization and an investigation was begun.

Mavretic said that after his talks with Labor Department officials and legislative researchers he understood that the NCAE had been ordered to register as a labor organization and it had refused to do so. He said he understood that the Labor Department would take legal action if the NCAE failed to register.

All those involved said they expected the matter to be resolved soon, perhaps this month. Meanwhile, Senate leaders are not expected to act on the dues checkoff bill and Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, Education Committee chairman, said she'll wait for the Senate bill before taking action in the House.

Dads In Space Have Their Day

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.

(AP) — Like any dads who couldn't be with their children on Father's Day, Challenger's four male astronauts were grateful for a long-distance greeting.

Capsule communicator T.J. Hart at Mission Control in Houston told the four "dads on board" Sunday that their families had gathered at the launch control center at the Cape to follow progress of the flight.

No Cake

PARIS (AP) — The ailing Duchess of Windsor, the American woman who prompted King Edward VIII to give up the British throne, celebrated her 87th birthday Sunday surrounded by flowers but without a cake.

"She's much too ill to eat anything like a piece of birthday cake," said one of the employees at the Paris mansion where the duchess has been bedridden for the past six years. "But flowers and cards have come from all over the world. She has not been forgotten."

Cocaine In N.C. Said Plentiful

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Cocaine is becoming increasingly popular among North Carolinians, but arrests of the drug's suppliers are scarce, federal, state and local law enforcement agencies say.

"Cocaine is one of the most popular drugs on the street," said Winston-Salem police Capt. Ron Haskins. "It'll never be completely stopped. All we can do is make a dent in it."

Officers say they're overwhelmed by cocaine's ubiquity and strapped by limited resources.

DIED AT AGE 153
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — A Jordanian Moslem who walked two miles a day and never visited a doctor has died at the age of 153, the newspaper Sout Ash-Shaab reported Sunday.

Since 1977, state and federal drug agents have seized less than 5 percent of the estimated 2,750 pounds of cocaine entering the state each year, figures show.

If all of last year's Greensboro Police Department budget for undercover drug buys had gone to cocaine enforcement, it would have purchased only 7 ounces.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth McAllister in Greensboro said the white-powdered substance is often easier to get than marijuana.

"It seems like we're just hitting the surface of it. It's all over," said Wilmington police Sgt. T.E. McLaurin.

"It's pretty close behind marijuana. We have a hard time keeping our fingers on what's happening," said Raleigh police Lt. N.S. Lockey.

From relative obscurity five years ago, cocaine has reached an estimated 22 million American users.

U.S. government studies show 4 million to 7 million people use the drug at least once a month. Among illegal drugs, only marijuana exceeds cocaine's popularity.

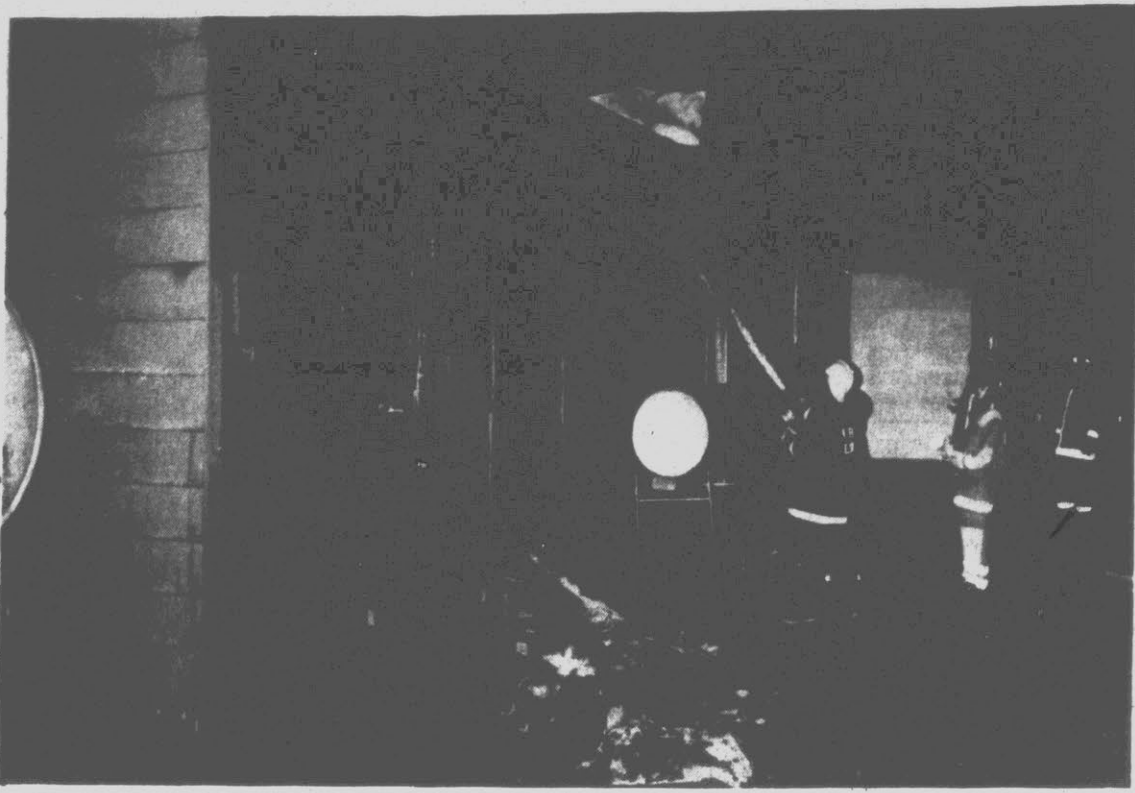

A third of the people in the 18-to-25 age range have tried it, although most regular users are over 26. One of every six high school students has sampled coke.

An expensive drug, once confined largely to the wealthy, cocaine is being used by people on all socioeconomic levels.

A recent national poll by the firm of Yankelovich, Skelly and White showed that 14 percent of all blue-collar workers had used cocaine, compared with 9 percent of white-collar professionals.

FIRE DAMAGES APARTMENT — Fire caused heavy damage shortly after 1 a.m. this morning at a Winterville apartment at 333 North Railroad Street. According to the occupant of one apartment, Wayland Williams, he, his wife, Margie, and their 14 month-old son, Kai, were asleep when they were awakened by popping sounds. Williams said his wife ran to a neighbor's to call for help. Firemen arrived found the front efficiency apartment engulfed in flames. Williams and his family escaped without injury. Damage to the small apartment was said by fire officials at the scene to be about $15,000. The apartment was owned by Mrs. Fannie Mae Cannon. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Volcker's Future Bodes Well With Late Success

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in deciding to keep Paul Volcker as Federal Reserve chairman, is hoping to build on the economic success that came late in Volcker's first four-year term.

Unmentioned, for now, are the central banker's first three years that led to two national recessions and the ouster of the president who first brought him to the Fed.

Reagan hardly sounded worried in his weekend announcement of the reappointment. In brief remarks, he said of Volcker: "He is as dedicated as I am to continuing the fight against inflation, and with him as chairman of the Fed, I know we will win that fight. End of news flash."

For good or ill, economists and other observers said, the new Volcker will be very much like the old one.

The good part of that news, the part Reagan apparently is counting on, is the Fed chairman's staunchness in inflation wars. By holding down the amount of money in U.S. banks, checking accounts and wallets, the Federal Reserve helped drastically reduce the price increases that had been undermining Americans' buying power in the late 1970s.

But the apparent costs were the recessions of 1980 and 1981-82, when layoffs pushed the unemployment rate to the highest level in 40 years.

By most accounts, the Fed eased up just enough last year to fuel the recovery that is only now gaining steam. Unemployment is still high in many industries.

Volcker was sure that a rapidly expanding money supply helped cause inflation, an even worse enemy than recession.

So no one doubts that he would crack down again if he saw money growing too rapidly — even if it meant an end to the recovery the president's supporters hope will carry Reagan to reelection next year.

A drastic slowing in monetary growth should tend to drive up interest rates — and slow the recovery — since there would be fewer dollars to borrow.

On the other hand, if the Federal Reserve allowed the recently surging money supply to keep expanding quickly, it could bring a new round of inflation. And lenders would tend to charge higher interest rates — again probably slowing the recovery — if they thought inflation would be rising and their borrowers would be repaying in less-valuable dollars.

White House economists hope there won't be any severe crunch in the next few years. And some private economists say things just might work out — at least in part because of Volcker's hard-won reputation.

"He at least won't have to prove himself again," said Michael K. Evans, who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington.

In the longer term, some economic observers say Volcker will be valuable partly because he knows first-hand of past mistakes.

Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said the Fed chief's first term "was certainly learning by doing." The second four years should bring "a smoother approach," he said.

Former President Carter brought Volcker to Washington specifically to battle inflation. But the positive results didn't show up until after Carter was gone, defeated by Reagan in a campaign dominated by the sagging economy.

Volcker, leading a majority of the seven-member Federal Reserve Board, acted quickly to restrain monetary growth and raise the Fed's own interest rates after taking his post in August 1979. By early 1980, those moves and limits on lending by banks and others had thrown the economy into one of the steepest recessions ever.

It was also one of the shortest, with its severity apparently shocking the administration and the Federal Reserve to ease up quickly.

Imprisoned Youths Found A Way Out

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A group of teenagers at the Burke Youth Center has discovered a way to escape the misery of imprisonment and win some recognition at the same time.

The boys, ages 14 to 19, are members of Explorer Post 211, headquartered at the Morganton facility, a satellite of the Western Correctional Center.

The scouts participate in overnight camping trips, outdoor work activities and educational field trips.

Membership is gained only after proving themselves trustworthy and sincerely interested, according to staff coordinator and post supervisor Herbert Myers.

"It really meant something to me to get out there and help some people," said an unidentified 19-year-old inmate who has been an Explorer since December.

"Just making somebody happy was great. There was an old woman at a home, we took some bags of stuff over there. It was just great seeing the expression on her face and in her eyes. Just making somebody happy, that was something special."

That particular youth has earned his high school equivalency degree while imprisoned, and he has a job waiting at a furniture factory in Winston-Salem when he is released.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area yesterday, computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 85. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 85 percent of your hot water needs.

Post 211 has received several awards, including being honored at the governor's volunteer awards ceremony in Asheville last year.

"I've had some guys that came into the program, and from their conduct in the past I thought they wouldn't make it at all," Myers said. "They turned out to be some of the best members in the troop, and I've looked to some of them for added supervision."

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL

Agriculture Extension Agent

Pines in Eastern North Carolina have several types of beetles that bore into the tree and cause rapid death of valuable yard and landscape specimens. Usually, pines are only attacked and killed when they are under stress or are failing. Normally, a healthy pine can withstand some beetle attacks.

Pine trees are weakened by factors such as drought, lightning, flooding, fire and old age. These factors are all natural ones and can make the tree vulnerable to insect attack. Diseases of trees such as fusiform rust, the "football-shaped" galls on limbs and trunks of pines also make a pine a likely target for beetle attacks. Man-made causes also figure importantly in beetle attacks. Landscaping operations such as bulldozing, landclearing and the travel of heavy equipment close to the tree may inadvertently damage trunks and compact the soil or otherwise destroy root systems.

Pine beetles merely complete the job of removing the oldest and weakest trees they can find. A healthy tree can actually "pitch out" some beetles by the amount of sap that it produces.

Pine beetles are of several species and they characteristically attack pines in certain locations on the tree and at certain stages of the pine's decline. By noting the position on the tree, one can make a good determination of the species of beetle that is causing damage. Simply stated, three species of engraver beetles attack declining pines from the uppermost reaches of the tree, through the midsection and down to the lower one third of the trunk.

The southern pine beetle which caused widespread losses of pines throughout the South in the early 1970s has not been a problem in more recent years. The southern pine beetle can kill trees by themselves, but often arrive on a tree with other species of beetles. They prefer the midsection of lower trunk of susceptible pines. Normally they will cause rapid browning of needles and death of the tree. They leave "popcorn-like pitch tubes" on the lower trunk usually 10-15 feet above ground and higher.

The commonly found black turpentine beetle is the largest pine beetle and attacks the lower 10 feet of unhealthy pines. Their pitch tubes are large and often have a hole in the center of the vaguely cone-like pitch tube. A tree attacked by turpentine beetles can be saved by spraying with an approved insecticide such as "lindane." It is the only beetle that can be killed by insecticides and save the tree. The other beetles attack trees and render them beyond help very quickly.

A final type of beetle is the ambrosia beetle. Its "signature" is dry, brown sawdust or powder at the base of the tree of stump. They can often be heard making "munching" noises under the bark.

To avoid beetle damage to pines, avoid damage to pines during yard work and construction. Keep pines healthy by watering and fertilizing. Watch for pitch tubes and boring dust especially in summer and spring. Quickly remove infested trees or spray with an insecticide that is labelled for use. It is more important to prevent beetle damage than it is to clean one up.

Parents Gone On First Birthday

LONDON (AP) — Prince William, second in line to the English throne, is expected to have a quiet first birthday Tuesday while his parents, Princess Diana and Prince Charles, are away in Canada.

But a "big celebration" will be held when they're reunited next month, a spokesman for Charles says.

The royal couple felt their 18-day Canadian tour was too short to bring the prince along, and that their son would be better off at home, said Charles' press secretary Victor Chapman.

"They will have a big celebration with him when they get back," Chapman said. As for the prince's birthday, a private tea with his nanny may be on the schedule.

Charles and Diana said Sunday while at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, that they had not yet decided what present to give William.

"I cannot tell you what we will be getting," said Charles, "but it will be something he won't be able to break."

Woman Dies In Home Fire

WALSTONBURG — A 20-year-old Route 2, Walstonburg woman lost her life early Sunday when fire heavily damaged the home she shared with her mother, Greene County Fire Marshall Dickie Hill reported.

Hill said that Dr. Stan Harris, area medical examiner, listed carbon monoxide poisoning as a result of smoke inhalation as the cause of Beverly Kaye Speight's death.

The fire Marshall said Miss Speight's mother, Mrs. Robenia Wells Speight, discovered the fire when she arrived home early Sunday. Hill said the fire had smoldered and apparently had not been visible from the outside until Mrs. Speight opened the front door.

Hill said a neighbor told authorities he had begun to smell smoke and had gone outside to investigate about the time Mrs. Speight arrived. He said the neighbor and firemen removed Miss Speight from her bedroom. She was pronounced dead at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, he said.

The fire, reported at 1:35 a.m., caused structural damages estimated at $25,000 and $12,000 to the contents of the brick veneer house, said Hill. The blaze apparently started in the kitchen of the home in the area of an electric oven.

Seven People Dead In Weekend Traffic

By The Associated Press

Seven people, including two motorcyclists, died in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina roads, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Jack Sparks, 21, of Tortage, Ind., was killed at 4:45 a.m. Sunday in Cleveland County when his motorcycle ran off N.C. 180, south of Shelby, struck some railroad tracks and overturned. Troopers said Sparks was thrown from the vehicle.

Also, the patrol reported, Warren Hubble Otey, 37, of Eden died early Saturday in his hometown when he lost control of his speeding motorcycle and was thrown into the path of a car.

A 50-year-old Shelby man was killed at 4:45 p.m. Sunday when his car ran off N.C. 180 at a curve, hit a fence and overturned, throwing him from the vehicle. Troopers said Claud van Buren Barrett died in the wreck 2 miles east of Shelby in Cleveland County.

Pamela Louise Sanderlin, 20, of Wanchese was killed Saturday night on U.S. 64, 2 miles west of Nags Head, when she ran in front of an oncoming car, the patrol said.

In Guilford County, Gregory Brent Garrett, 17, of Greensboro, died 2 miles west of his hometown when his car overturned on a rural road Saturday night, troopers said.

Tenny Metcalf Hopson, 18, of rural Lexington died in a car that ran off N.C. 8 in Davidson County and overturned. Four other people were reported injured in the one-car accident Saturday night 5 miles north of Denton.

Also on Saturday, Tommy Lee Robinson, 20, of Camp Lejeune, was killed when his car crossed the center line on U.S. 258 in Onslow County and struck a tractor-trailer. The accident took place about 6 miles west of Jacksonville.

The deaths raised the yearly traffic fatality toll to 506, compared to 534 at this same time last year.

Victim Bitter Over Acquittal

BOSTON (AP) — A woman who says she was gang-raped 3 1/2 years ago says it's "no wonder women hesitate to report rape" because "assaults always seem to just get a fine or nothing at all."

A jury acquitted five men Friday of raping the former Ohio beauty queen in woods near Holbrook on Jan. 23, 1980. They were convicted of malicious destruction of property by damaging her car.

"They are guilty, and they know it," the woman said in a statement obtained through prosecutor Gerald M. Kirby and broadcast Saturday night by Boston's WCVB-TV.

"They admitted to their guilt once and received suspended sentences because of tricks and law plays and plea bargaining."

Their case aroused a public outcry in October 1981 when a judge allowed them to plead guilty in exchange for suspended prison terms and $500 fines. An appeals court eventually ordered a new trial.

Fire Razes Old Building

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A three-alarm fire destroyed the old Turner-White Casket Co. building this morning, sending flames 75 feet in the air but causing no injuries.

Battalion Chief C.A. Reynolds said the fire apparently began in the northwest corner of the three-story wood and tin structure and spread quickly through the rest of the building.

He said that when the first firefighters arrived at about 7 a.m., no flames were visible, but the upper floors were filled with thick smoke.

By 7:50 a.m., the flames were shooting through the roof of the building and the heat could be felt several hundred yards away. Firefighters using hoses on the ground were forced to move away from the east side of the building because of the heat, and only firefighters on aerial trucks were able to get close enough to throw water on the fire.

On the west, the heat radiating from the blaze was not so severe, and a snorkel unit was stationed not more than 100 feet from the building's southwest corner.

"Everything began to burn at one time once we got ignition temperature," Reynolds said.

Apparently no one was in the building, owned by Clark Transfer Co., when the fire began.

Reynolds said he did not know what caused the fire and that he did not have an estimate of the damages.

Lawrence Coleman, president of the transfer company, said the building was being used for storage and by D and B Tooling Co., which had a shop and equipment in the rear.

He said the building contained about $250,000 worth of household and dry goods being stored for a number of clients.

New Difficulty With Missile

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — The Army plans to study data collected during the 13th test launch of a Pershing 2 missile to determine why a problem developed during re-entry, officials say.

"An anomaly occurred in the re-entry portion of the flight, which will require further analysis," Jim Eckles, spokesman for the White Sands Missile Range, said Sunday. He said analyzing the data would take a few days.

The missile, which has a 1,000-mile range, was launched Sunday from McGregor Range on Fort Bliss and traveled less than 100 miles to White Sands Missile Range. Plans call for 108 Pershing 2 missiles to be deployed in West Germany in December.

Nelson Rallies Past Watson For Title

Long Birdie Putt At 16th Hole Gives Nelson Surprise Win

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Larry Nelson, who came into the tournament in 92nd place on this year's earnings list, captured the rain-delayed United States Open Golf Championship by one stroke over defending champion Tom Watson today.

Nelson finished the fourth round with a 4-under-par 67 for a 72-hole total of 280, topping Watson, who was seeking to become the first man since Ben Hogan in 1950-51 to win consecutive Open crowns.

The two men began play tied at 4 under par, Nelson teeing off at the 16th hole and Watson putting on the 14th green.

Nelson birdied the 16th hole with a 62-foot putt to go 5 under, while Watson putted out for par on No. 14 to drop a stroke behind.

It stayed that way until the 18th hole when Nelson three-putted from 40 feet, missing an eight-foot second putt for a bogey.

Almost simultaneously, Watson, playing No. 17, put his approach in a bunker, came out to three feet, missed that putt and also made bogey.

Ironically, it was on the 17th hole at Pebble Beach that Watson holed an incredible chip shot to grab a stranglehold on his first Open crown. This time, the 17th was not so kind.

Six golfers had been on the course when Sunday's fourth round was halted by a violent rainstorm that turned the Oakmont Country Club into a quagmire of mud.

Besides Nelson and Watson, Dr. Gil Morgan was the only other player below par and he teed off today at No. 17 under for 70 holes. He finished with a 68 for the final 18 holes and a 283.

Morgan's partner, Raymond Floyd, was 8 over when play resumed and could not have been thrilled, forced to play in a hopeless situation and then rush off to Memphis to defend his championship in that tournament.

this week's PGA tour stop. He finished at 293 for the tournament and left.

Calvin Peete, who had started play Sunday tied with Nelson, one stroke behind Watson and Seve Ballesteros, was 1 over and started from the 16th tee today. He bogeyed that hole, ending the round with a 73 and the tournament at 286.

Ballesteros also was 1 over and resumed play with a putt on the 14th, the same situation Watson faced. He finished at 74 for the round and 286 for the tournament.

Nelson shot mediocre rounds of 75-73 on Thursday and Friday but surged into the chase with a sizzling 65 on Saturday.

"I knew I needed a big round to get into it," he said.

He had caught fire with a siege of birdies and produced 10-under-par golf for 33 holes going into today's last three holes.

"I've hit a lot of good shots," he said. "I can't explain it, but I've been hitting close to the hole."

It was only the sixth tour victory and second major tournament crown for the 35-year-old Nelson, who also won the 1981 PGA championship.

A pro since 1974, he first became interested in the game while hitting balls on a driving range during his lunch break when he worked as a commercial illustrator for an aircraft company in Marietta, Ga.

Nelson won his first tournament in 1979, capturing the Jackie Gleason Invitational Classic and finished that year with $281,022, No. 2 on the earnings list.

But he had been struggling this year and had missed the cut in 10 of the 16 starts before coming to Oakmont.

The Open victory was worth $72,000 and pushed Nelson's earnings for the year to $101,543. Watson got $44,000 for finishing second and Morgan's third place finish was worth $29,000. Peete and Ballesteros shared fourth place and earned $17,968 apiece.

It was the second time Watson has experienced a major disappointment at Oakmont. In 1978, he led the PGA here by five strokes with nine holes to play but was caught by John Mahaffey and lost the tournament in a playoff.

Risque Attire

Fezler Breaks Tradition With Shorts On Final Hole

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Forrest Fezler didn't break par and didn't break any rules, but he did break some new ground at the 83rd U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Fezler took off his slacks and wore shorts on the 18th hole Sunday, becoming the first male golfer to don shorts during a major professional tournament.

Shorts have been standard attire on the LPGA tour for years.

United States Golf Association officials indicated that no disciplinary action would be taken, since Fezler didn't violate any written regulations.

"I didn't do it out of spite," said Fezler, who took a bogey 5 on the 18th hole at Oakmont Country Club to complete a round of 76.

"I thought the crowd would like it," he said. "I just wanted to show everybody that golfers aren't prima donnas. Some of us like to be a little bit different."

Fezler hinted before the Open that he wanted to challenge the unwritten rule against shorts.

USGA President William Campbell acknowledged Sunday there is no written rule banning shorts, but hinted one could be adopted.

Fezler played his first 17 holes in blue slacks, then ducked into a portable toilet building between the 17th green and 18th tee and switched to navy blue shorts.

"I feel better already," he said.

His quick change caught the small gallery off guard.

"That's beautiful," one lady said, noticing the change.

"They must have beaten the pants off of him," a man said.

Fezler's playing partner, Robert Boyd, chuckled, then said loud enough for the crowd to hear, "He looks like he had a $5 Nassau and lost his pants."

Scott Hoch and Curtis Strange, putting on the 17th, turned and smiled.

"Yeah, yeah," Hoch yelled to Fezler.

The large gallery rimming the 18th green clapped loudly, some standing, as they noticed Fezler's attire. Some wondered if he had worn the shorts the entire round.

"That's a first," one man said.

"I like it. I like it," a woman said, loudly.

Fezler acknowledged the ovation by raising his hands and smiling.

After putting out and signing his scorecard, he quickly walked to the clubhouse and changed back into slacks.

"I think I have the backing of a lot of players," said Fezler, who has an endorsement contract that pays him for wearing the shorts.

"They think it's great."

Fezler guessed that "30 to 50 percent" of the golfers on the tour would wear shorts if they could.

"They're more comfortable," he said. "And they sure look better than knickers."

He said some of the PGA players may try to break the tour's unofficial dress code during the upcoming Quad Cities Open.

Pastornicky Escapes Slump To Lead Royals' Win

By The Associated Press
Cliff Pastornicky is the first one to admit he's no George Brett. For a while there, he was having a hard time just being Cliff Pastornicky.

Filling in for the injured star at third base, the Kansas City rookie was mired in an 0-for-14 slump until finally breaking out Sunday with a three-run homer that led the Royals to a 4-2 victory over Seattle.

"I was starting to press a little bit," said Pastornicky, who was called up from Omaha on June 14. "Before I went up to bat, (batting coach Rocky Colavito) told me to go up there and have a good time and it'll fall sometime.

"And then Cloyd Boyer, the pitching coach, told me, 'You can go up there and look bad three times, and the next time you can go up there and be the hero and hit the ball hard and drive in the run.'"

Pastornicky, after falling behind 0-2, lashed a hanging slider off Matt Young into the left-field bleachers at Royals Stadium in the seventh inning to give Kansas City a sweep of the three-game series.

In other American League action, it was Cleveland 7, Detroit 2; Toronto 6, California 1; New York 8, Milwaukee 3; Baltimore 6, Boston 3; Chicago 1, Oakland 0 and Texas 4, Minnesota 1.

Pastornicky's homer, which followed an error by shortstop Domingo Ramos and a single by Don Slaught, made a winner of Bill Castro, who relieved starter Keith Creel.

Royals Manager Dick Howser had no intention of pinch-hitting for Pastornicky with nobody out and runners at first and third.

"Pastornicky is a guy that we think can swing the bat," Howser said. "He's aggressive up there, and he goes up to swing the bat. He hit a mistake."

Indians 7, Tigers 2

Julio Franco's RBI double sparked a five-run seventh and Larry Sorensen scattered nine hits as Cleveland beat Detroit in the first game of their doubleheader. The second game was rained out.

Sorensen didn't walk a batter while striking out two in handing the Tigers only their fourth defeat in their last 15 games.

With two outs and the game tied 2-2 in the seventh, Franco doubled home the game-winning run off Dan Petry. Alan Bannister followed with a two-run double and Manny Trillo hit an RBI single, chasing Petry in favor of Dave Gumperts. Mike Hargrove then singled and Andre Thornton capped the outburst with an RBI single.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 1

Luis Leal hurled a three-hitter and Barry Bonnell, Ernie Whitt and Jesse Barfield slugged home runs as Toronto beat California.

After Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first on a bases-loaded walk to Ron Jackson, Whitt tied the game with a homer in the second and put the Blue Jays ahead for good with an RBI single in the third.

Leal struck out five and walked four in beating the Angels for the first time in his career after six losses.

"Sometimes things like that just happen," Leal said of his record against California. "But today I got my mind positive. I told myself I wanted to win today and pitch nine innings. I did both."

Yankees 8, Brewers 3

Lou Piniella drove in five runs with three hits, powering New York over Milwaukee for the Yankees' fifth straight victory. Piniella drove in two runs with a double in the third, hit a two-run single in New York's fifth, and drove in another run in the seventh with a single.

Matt Keough, making his first appearance since joining the Yankees last Wednesday, won with relief help from Bob Shirley and George Frazier, who earned his third save.

"I've always liked to hit with men on base. But earlier in the season I was struggling, I wasn't doing my job," said Piniella, who only had five RBI until Sunday.

Orioles 6, Red Sox 3

Eddie Murray hit two solo home runs and Jim Palmer pitched effectively in his first start since April 26 as Baltimore defeated Boston, Palmer, 2-1, allowed only three hits in 5 1/3 innings, walking one and striking out three.

"My back felt fine, and I hope it feels that way tomorrow," Palmer said. "I would have loved to have gone nine, but I don't think that would do much for me the next time out. I had to approach it like I was pitching in spring training."

Palmer, who was placed on the disabled list on May 3 with back and neck problems, and later developed tendinitis in his right bicep.

White Sox 1, A's 0

Britt Burns hurled a three-hitter and Harold Baines doubled in the game's only run in the fourth inning to lead Chicago over Oakland. Burns turned in his first complete game of the season and first shutout since last August 4, striking out four and walking four.

"It feels good to go out and pitch the kind of game I'm capable of pitching," said Burns. "It means a lot to me personally and also to the team."

"Good defense also helps," added Burns, who was backed by some outstanding plays, including a perfect throw from third baseman Vance Law to the plate in the first inning to keep fleet Rickey Henderson from scoring.

Rangers 4, Twins 1

George Wright drilled a two-run triple among three hits and Charlie Hough pitched a six-hitter, leading Texas over Minnesota. Hough struck out seven and walked four in his route-going performance.

The Rangers scored the all their runs in the third inning, on Mickey Rivers' RBI grounder, Wright's two-run triple and Pete O'Brien two-run double.

Evans' Homer Lifts Pitt

GOLDSBORO — Curtis Evans cracked grand slam homer in the fourth inning to erase a 4-1 deficit and propel Pitt County to a 14-4 victory over Wayne County Saturday in American Legion baseball.

Randy Warren followed Evans' round-tripper with a single, and Mont Carter ripped the first pitch over the right-center field wall to give Pitt County a commanding 7-4 lead.

Warren finished the night with four hits in six trips to the plate — raising his average to .600 — with a pair of RBI and two stolen bases. Kenny Kirkland slapped three hits in five at bats, while Greg Briley drove in three runs with a pair of hits.

Shortstop Jansen Evans led Wayne County with a pair of hits in four trips.

Darrell Edwards gave up five hits and walked nine to record the win on the mound for Pitt County.

Kirkland opened the fourth with a single for Pitt County, and Rudy Stalls followed with a base on balls. Wayne starter Glen Fortner hit Edwards with a pitch, then walked Joey Kennedy to force in the first run.

Evans drove the 2-1 over the left field wall for his first homer of the season.

Pitt County added two more runs in the sixth after two outs. Carter walked and Doug Coley reached first on a fielder's choice, and Briley and Kirkland each slapped RBI singles for a 9-4 advantage.

A double by Warren in the seventh drove in Edwards and Troy Hudson. Carter drew a base on balls, and Coley singled in Warren. A single by Briley plated Carter and Coley for the final tally.

Do Yol Lim walked and later scored on a fielder's choice by Anthony Jernigan in the third as Wayne County took a 1-0 edge. Wayne added three more in the fourth with the help of a double by Don Pate.

Pitt County improved its record to 8-3 on the season, while Wayne slides to 5-5. Pitt hosts Rocky Mount for a doubleheader tonight at 6 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

McEnroe Vows To Maintain Composure At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe, who incurred the wrath of his Wimbledon hosts and shocked spectators with his on-court behavior when he won the title two years ago, says he has turned over a new leaf for this year's appearance.

"I think I'm going to disappoint all those who are waiting for a bomb to drop on me," McEnroe said before the Wimbledon tournament began today.

Jimmy Connors, as defending champion, followed tradition and was to play first on the center court. His opponent was to be Eddy Edwards.

McEnroe was to play Ben Testerman on No. 1 court. Testerman made a good impression as a grass courts player in the Stella Artois tournament at London's Queen's Club two weeks ago and has shown himself capable of springing upsets when his big service is going well.

When McEnroe beat Sweden's Bjorn Borg for the men's title in 1981 his verbal abuse of officials and his deportment at the staid All England Lawn Tennis Club was regarded as a major scandal.

He was fined $7,300, of which $5,000 was later rescinded, and he stayed away from the traditional posttournament Champions' Dinner and Dance at the Savoy Hotel.

McEnroe, 24, told a British newspaper he was ashamed of his outbursts and will curb them.

"If there's a major blow-up with a player disqualified and expelled from the championships, then it will have to be someone else

Yarborough Takes 2nd Straight Gabriel Title

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Cale Yarborough knew right away his chances of getting to the winner's circle hinged on getting a caution flag or two.

His Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS was slipping and sliding all over the high banks of Michigan International Speedway and the yellow flags were few and far between for most of Sunday's Gabriel 400 Grand National stock car race.

But, eventually, Yarborough got the time he needed in the pits. The crew of his Hardee's-sponsored car made the needed changes and he did the rest.

The 43-year-old driver from Sardis, S.C., outran Bobby Allison over the last 12 laps of the 200-lap event and picked up his third victory of the season, his sixth career triumph on the two-mile

Stephenson Wins Keystone Open

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Defending champ Jan Stephenson walked up to the 17th green in the pouring rain, lined up a 4-foot putt and missed. Moments later she could tell from the crowd's roar on the 18th that her two-stroke lead at the Lady Keystone Open had vaporized.

But instead of choking, Stephenson sunk a 10-foot downhill putt Sunday for a final-round 69, an 11-under-par total of 205 for 54 holes and the $30,000 first-place purse at the $200,000 LPGA tournament.

"This is the first time I've ever been a repeat winner," Stephenson said at the 6,388-yard, par-72 West Course of the Hershey Country Club. "That's why this win is especially satisfying to me."

"I played very well all day. I really made every putt that was makable. I always play badly when I'm defending a title. This time I didn't," she said.

The contest came down to the 18th hole, which Pat Bradley finished with a birdie as Stephenson missed a putt on the 17th for a par.

Bradley finished one stroke behind Stephenson. She had pulled to 10 under par with a birdie-3 on the final hole, matching Stephenson's 69 total for the final round and finishing at 206.

Amy Alcott, who had the best final-round score with a 5-under 67, finished in third place at 207.

JoAnne Carner, who was 1 under on the final day, and Donna White, who shot a 2-under 70, were tied for fourth at 208.

Young Lauren Howe, the leader of the tournament for the first two days, faded to sixth place with a 3-over-par 75. Howe double-bogeyed the opening hole and wound up with a 7-under-par 209 for the tournament. It is still the best finish of her career.

Baywood Tops Roxobel, 4-2

Ruthven, Cubs Still On Top

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs continue to enjoy their position near the top of the National League East, and once again they can thank newcomer Dick Ruthven.

Ruthven, acquired from Philadelphia May 22 in a trade for reliever Willie Hernandez, checked St. Louis on two hits as the Cubs downed the Cardinals 4-1 Sunday.

"He had all his pitches working, but the location was the key," said Chicago Manager Lee Elia.

The victory, Chicago's 13th in 17 games, moved the fourth-place Cubs within three games of NL East co-leaders St. Louis and Montreal.

In other NL games, Los Angeles downed Cincinnati 5-1, Philadelphia clobbered Pittsburgh 14-2, San Diego beat Houston 6-4, San Francisco outslugged Atlanta 9-6 and Montreal got past New York 4-3.

"We thought the trade would help the Phillies substantially, but at the same time we were in dire need of a starter," Elia said.

A day after Chicago got Ruthven, the Cubs fell into last place in their division. Since then, Ruthven has won three of four decisions, upping his season record to 4-4 as the Cubs have moved up.

"We're just taking it a day at a time," Elia said. "There's a lot of baseball left. We're real happy about where we are, but there a lot of peaks and valleys."

Ruthven struck out six, walked one and faced just 30 batters. The only run he allowed was Steve Braun's first home run since 1980, in the fifth inning. George Hendrick singled in the second for St. Louis' other hit.

Chicago scored its runs in the second as Keith Moreland and Larry Bowa — both former Phillies — sandwiched singles around a walk to Jerry Morales.

Dave LaPoint, 4-4, struck out Jody Davis and Ruthven, but Gary Woods then singled in two runs. Ryne Sandberg — another ex-Phillie — followed with a two-run double to send St. Louis to its 10th loss in 16 games.

"It was just one of those days," said Tommy Herr of the Cardinals. "The balls we hit wer right at somebody."

Dodgers 5, Reds 1

Burt Hooton pitched a three-hitter and beat Cincinnati for the first time since June 23, 1978. Hooton, 6-2 this season with five straight victories, has a 5-12 career record against the Reds.

The only run he allowed was an unearned one in the first inning, which was set up by second baseman Steve Sax's 17th throwing error of the season. He has 18 errors overall.

Dusty Baker's seventh homer of the season and Ken Landreaux's double and single keyed the Los Angeles attack. Hooton also had an RBI single.

Cincinnati starter Bruce Berenyi, 4-7, allowed all the Dodgers runs in seven innings. He struck out 11 and walked six.

Phillies 14, Pirates 2

Rookie Charlie Hudson coasted to his first major-league victory as Philadelphia scored seven runs in the eighth inning.

Hudson, 1-1, scattered eight hits in going the distance for the first time in five starts since being recalled from the minors last month.

Reserve catcher Ozzie Virgil homered and drove in four runs. His three-run homer and Mike Schmidt's two-run single keyed the Phils' seventh-inning uprising.

Tony Perez belted a two-run double and Pete Rose drove in two other Philadelphia runs.

Marvell Wynne and Tony Pena homered for Pittsburgh.

Padres 6, Astros 4

Garry Templeton, back in the San Diego lineup after three weeks on the disabled list with an arthritic knee, drove in three runs with three doubles.

His second double knocked in two runs during the Padres' four-run fifth inning, which put San Diego ahead 5-4. Houston starter Bob Knepper, 2-9, was the victim of the big inning, aided by third baseman Denny Walling's error.

Houston scored its four runs in the fourth. Knepper's sacrifice fly drove in the first run and two more scored on a ball that went through San Diego first baseman Steve Garvey for a three-base error.

Expos 4, Mets 3

Tim Raines tripled home two runs and scored on Bryan Little's sacrifice fly as Montreal scored three runs in the fourth inning. Al Oliver's fourth homer of the season accounted for the Expos' other run.

Steve Rogers upped his record to 9-3. He departed after yielding pinch hitter Rusty Staub's solo homer with two outs in the ninth. It was Staub's sixth straight pinch-hit.

Giants 9, Braves 6

Jack Clark drove in four runs, two of them with his 13th homer of th LeMaster, who reached a season high with his fourth homer, also connected in the seventh.

The Giants knocked out Atlanta starter Craig McMurtry, 7-4, with two runs in the fifth to take a 4-3 lead. San Francisco then increased the margin to 9-3, but the Braves battled back with three runs in the eighth, two on a Chris Chambliss single.

Atlanta had two runners on base in the ninth, but Jeff Reardon came on for his 10th save in preserving the victory for Mike Krukow, 4-4. Krukow had not won since May 24.

Cunningham Inks New 76ers Pact

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, who considered leaving the 76ers after they won the National Basketball Association crown last month, has agreed to a multi-year contract that will make him the highest paid coach in the league, the Associated Press has learned.

The agreement with Sixers owner Harold Katz followed five days of intense bargaining over Cunningham's salary, sources said.

Cunningham will make more than $300,000 a year under the agreement, sources said. Cunningham's old contract, which guaranteed him $200,000 a year, expired May 31, the night the Sixers defeated the Los Angeles Lakers for the NBA title.

Before Cunningham's deal, Hubie Brown of the New York Knicks was about to become the highest paid NBA coach, with a salary of $300,000 next season.

He directed the Sixers to a four-game sweep of the Knicks in the Eastern Conference semifinals and a 4-1 elimination of the Milwaukee Bucks in the Eastern finals.

Seven Other Women In Line For Space Flights

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston
(AP) — Perhaps nobody is watching the performance of Sally K. Ride more closely and with more self-interest than the seven women who stayed behind.

"What I do will probably reflect on them," acknowledged Ms. Ride in a preflight interview. Much is at stake; only one of the seven women has been assigned to an upcoming flight.

It took 22 years for NASA to send a woman into orbit and there are still some in the agency who are unconvinced that women belong there. How well Ms. Ride's mission goes, it's felt, could well determine the composition of future space flights.

Ms. Ride, herself, recognizes this and feels the tension.

"The main pressure I feel is just to show that I'm capable of pulling it off," she told The Associated Press. "It's important to me, but I think it's also important to the rest of the women astronauts."

NASA selected six women astronauts, including Ms. Ride, in 1978, and two more the following year. All are mission specialists, excluded from actually flying the shuttle, who perform scientific experiments and other activities.

The women vie with one another and with 71 male astronauts in competing for seats on space shuttle missions. Aside from Ms. Ride, only Judith Resnik has been assigned a flight. The others are waiting and hoping.

Ms. Ride's mission, says astronaut Kathy Sullivan, may provide the final little push to topple emotional barriers against women in space.

A lot of people, said Ms. Sullivan, still feel "discomforted" about women in non-traditional roles, "whether its driving a schoolbus or flying a spacecraft." Ms. Ride's mission, she said, "will bring a very substantial demonstration, beyond all question, that it (the shuttle) works just as well with women aboard."

"Kepler's laws are not spontaneously violated, the spacecraft will not fall from the sky," she added. "Believe it or not, the instrument panel does not know if it is a male or female hand that flips the switches."

The women of America's space corps are scholastically gifted and fiercely independent. Two are physicians, Rhea Seddon Gibson and Anna Fisher. The rest hold doctorate degrees in science or engineering. Ms. Ride got her PhD in astrophysics. Ms. Sullivan holds one in geology. For Mary Cleave it was civil and environmental engineering. Shannon W. Lucid is a biochemist. Ms. Resnik is an electrical engineer and Bonnie Dunbar is a biomedical engineer.

Each, to a greater or lesser degree, overcame barriers to earn the qualifications needed to become astronauts.

Mrs. Lucid, at 40, the oldest of the group, said once in an interview: "The feminine revolution took two kinds of people. Some pointed out the problems to the establishment, and then others were ready to step into the jobs that were created. I was one of those."

Mrs. Lucid is married and the mother of three.

Mrs. Fisher was completing her internship when NASA opened applications. Both she and her fiancé, physician William F. Fisher, applied. She was accepted. He wasn't. They married and moved to Houston. He applied the following year and was selected.

Ms. Cleave, a 5-foot-2 woman who jokes she was selected as an astronaut "in case they ever had a job for a midget," gives an environmental explanation for the new role of women in space.

"We got too many people on the planet and we don't need ladies to make babies any more," she said. "It's not any great philosophical change in people. The change is being dictated by overpopulation."

"There's nothing wrong with that," Ms. Cleave adds. "Society has to change to fit the ecology it's living in or it's not going to make it."

Despite Ms. Cleave's view, some astronauts are having children. Rhea Seddon married a fellow astronaut, Robert L. Gibson, and they recently had a child. Mrs. Fisher is expecting.

Souvenirs Are 'Made In Space'

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston
(AP) — Nestled aboard Challenger along with satellites and science experiments are flags, medallions and patches, plus a feather and a copy of "Ms." magazine. Ordinary on Earth, these items will become coveted prizes once they've flown in orbit.

America's magnificent spaceship is also one of history's great souvenir factories.

Space souvenirs are created in two ways — through the "Official Flight Kit" and the "Personal Preference Kit." Each one is processed with mountains of paperwork and covered by volumes of federal regulations.

The "official" kit principally includes items selected and approved by National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials, often at the request of other government agencies. It's limited only by the amount of room available in the nooks and crannies of the spacecraft.

The "personal" kits consist of things picked by the astronauts themselves. Each is limited to 20 and the items are strictly controlled.

For the seventh shuttle flight, the "official" kit includes flags from 16 nations, five states and the District of Columbia.

There also is a copy of January 1983 issue of "Ms." magazine. On its cover is a picture of astronaut Sally Ride, America's first woman in space.

For the mayor of East Hartford, Conn., there is a bicentennial medallion. There's also a microfilm of the front page of Today, a newspaper published in Cocoa, Fla., near Cape Canaveral.

At the request of Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, director of the shuttle program, there are 17 poems written by students at Ambleside Primary School in England's West Midlands. There's also an American flag for the United Nations and assorted medallions, pins, patches and banners from schools and organizations.

In their kits, the astronauts generally fly items that have special meaning for them.

Ms. Ride, for instance, selected "a small feather" for her college roommate, Molly Tyson. She also chose gold rings for herself and her astronaut husband, Steven Hawley, and jewelry for parents and sister.

In addition, she took along silver medallions for the five other women astronauts in her NASA selection class.

John Fabian took a diamond registered as a gift "for son's future wife" who was unnamed. Fabian's son, Michael, just graduated from high school.

Robert Crippen, the spacecraft commander, carried a set of wings that were to have been presented to Cary Jones, a Navy ensign who died in a plane crash a few days before graduation from flight school.

He also took a University of Texas jersey for himself and a cap for University of Texas football coach Fred Ackers.

The rest of the items in the five personal preference kits are jewelry, medallions and similar items for family and friends.

Before the astronauts can take any item it must be checked and approved by NASA administrator James M. Beggs.

The astronauts must also agree to use the items only as personal gifts and promise that they "will not be sold or transferred for economic gain or for any commercial or fundraising purpose."

If those rules are broken, the government will seize the item and the offender could be subject to "appropriate legal action."

In the early days of the space program astronauts, aware of the aura attached to space-flown objects, took with them dozens upon dozens of trinkets and papers.

John Young took up a corned beef sandwich. Alan Shepard took along a golf club and balls and made some chip shots on the moon. Buzz Aldrin took a communion chalice.

The rules were imposed after Apollo 15 astronauts David Scott, Al Worden and James Irwin stuffed their pockets with stamped envelopes which they canceled on the moon and then turned over to a European stamp dealer. The spacemen were to have been paid about $7,000 apiece when the items were sold.

Two Boosters Are Recovered

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The two 149-foot tall rockets that helped boost Challenger on its way to orbit are back at Cape Canaveral, ready to be refurbished for another flight.

The spent casings detached from Challenger 2 minutes and 12 seconds after launch Saturday and fell into the Atlantic Ocean 156 miles east of the Cape, only 6.4 miles from where one of two recovery ships was waiting. The tow home began Saturday and they were back in a hangar at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station by Sunday.

Could Bolster N. C. Spending

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Military spending, already growing in North Carolina, could get an even bigger boost if Congress approves President Reagan's proposed $30 billion increase in the defense budget.

U.S. Department of Defense figures show that since 1977 military spending in the state has increased 72 percent.

Defense spending rose from $1.8 billion in 1977 to $3.1 billion in fiscal 1982. The figure includes $2.2 billion in payroll and $903 million in prime contracts for goods and services.

Last year's appointment of Sen. John East, R-N.C., to the U.S. Senate Armed Services Committee, which oversees federal spending on military bases, also might boost such spending in North Carolina.

"There is just no denying that our economy is very dependent on the military," said Troy W. Pate Jr., chief executive of East Coast Federal Savings and Loan in Goldsboro, home of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base and its 6,000 military and civilian personnel.

The military ranks third among the state's top employers with more than 11,000 military and civilian employees, according to the state Department of Commerce. Only tourism and textiles employ more people.

North Carolina's five big bases are: Fort Bragg Army Base in Cumberland County, with a payroll of $702 million and $70.8 million in prime contracts; Camp Lejeune Marine Base in Onslow County, $585 million payroll and $29.4 million in contracts; Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station in Craven County, $271 million payroll and $19.1 million in contracts; Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Wayne County, $103.6 million payroll and $10.8 million in contracts; and Pope Air Force Base in Cumberland County, $66.8 million payroll and $15 million in contracts.

But in addition to the military bases, some North Carolina industries have received sizeable defense contracts, says Defense Department spokesman Jim Turner.

Western Electric Co. in Greensboro, which makes missile components and sonar electronics, holds the largest contract. Last fiscal year's contract involved about $187 million.

Other prime contractors include R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in Winston-Salem, which provides American soldiers with $43 million in various tobacco products; Burlington Industries, Raeford, $37 million in textiles; Northern Telecom Ltd., Raleigh, $20.5 million in radio and television equipment; and Angus Fire Armour Corp., Angier, $16.8 million in flexible hoses and tubing.

Pollution Data Said Distorted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Depending on their findings, federal and state officials may direct Raleigh and Durham to alter traffic flow near their pollution monitoring sites.

Devices to record carbon monoxide levels in the two cities' downtown areas are giving a distorted picture because their locations contain high amounts of pollution, city officials say.

Because Raleigh's one downtown monitor repeatedly recorded carbon monoxide levels exceeding U.S. Environmental Protection Agency standards in the winter of 1982, the city may be declared in violation of the federal Clean Air Act.

And since another monitor in a busy traffic circle in downtown Durham also recorded repeated above-standard readings, that city also may be declared in violation.

Federal and state regulators also could take a tougher stance and require motorists in Raleigh and Durham to have their automobile exhaust systems checked every year. Such inspections are required in Charlotte.

Tax-Free Bond Rules Stricter

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina isn't included in a recent federal report listing states where home-buying loans are being abused, a state housing official said, because its standards are tougher than most.

"I think North Carolina is a very definite exception to the report," said Gary Paul Kane, executive director of the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency.

The report by the U.S. General Accounting Office said proceeds from tax-exempt, home-buying bonds are going to people who could get loans without them and that businesses such as fast-food restaurants are getting industrial revenue bonds.

Kane and John M. Barnes, assistant director of the North Carolina Division of State and Local Government Finance, agreed with one point made in the report: The more bonds issued, the more they cost. This means that general obligation bonds, such as those for sewers or schools or highways, cost the public more.

Congress is studying the use of tax-exempt bonds, which the GAO and the Treasury Department say should be restricted. The GAO and the Treasury Department say the bonds, which are sold tax-free, cost the federal government nearly $6 million a year.

During the year ending June 30, 1982, state and local governments in North Carolina sold $1.485 billion in bonds.

That figure includes $89 million in bonds that provided loans for lower-income families to buy homes. $393 million in general obligation bonds and $295 million in industrial revenue bonds, which are used to attract industry to the state or aid the expansion of existing industries.

The GAO report said standards to qualify for the bonds are such that a person could receive assistance to buy a $163,000 house in Stamford, Conn., and a $98,000 house in Atlanta.

This has not been the case in North Carolina, where the Housing Finance Agency has been using proceeds from bonds to give lower-income families home loans since 1976. The average incomes during a five-year period have been under $19,000, he said.

Since 1976, the state has issued 492 industrial-revenue bonds for a total of $1.325 billion. North Carolina does not permit just any business to get bond approval, Barnes said.

"In some states, as far as industry is concerned, you can issue industrial-revenue bonds for almost anything," he said.

However, companies in North Carolina that qualify for the bonds must provide a specified number of jobs at a required wage level, Barnes said.

Will Study U.S. Treaty

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Sen. John East's Senate Judiciary subcommittee on separation of powers will begin conducting hearings next week to determine if the 1979 U.S.-Panama treaty is constitutional.

The Charlotte Observer reported on Sunday that the hearings would begin Thursday.

East, R-N.C., said he has at least one authoritative witness who will testify that the United States and Panama signed different documents.

The hearings come at a time when even President Reagan, who opposed the treaty, is showing no inclination to overturn it.

East, who made the Panama Canal "giveaway" a mainstay of his successful 1980 campaign, said he is not concerned whether the hearings will generate new controversy.

Because the question involves constitutionality, his subcommittee is the natural arena, he said.

East said he cannot decide what should be done about the treaty until he sees what comes out in the hearing. But he acknowledged he wouldn't hesitate to try to overturn the agreement if he finds it wasn't properly executed.

"Our objections to it, that it was a bad move, have been borne out by subsequent events in Central America," he said. "Since the Panama Canal treaty, we have seen a gross enhancement of Soviet and Cuban power in that Central American area."

Sherlock Holmes Being Revived

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Jeremy Brett will play the world's most famous detective in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," a new, 13-part series based on the stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, now in production in England.

Mobil Corp. has purchased the lot for broadcast on public TV's "Mystery!" in the 1983-84 season.

Brett appeared in two "Masterpiece Theater" productions on public television last season, "The Good Soldier" and "On Approval." David Burke plays Dr. Watson in the Granada TV series, which is being adapted to the small screen by John Hawkesworth, whose television credits include "Upstairs, Downstairs." Seven stories will be filmed this year — "The Solitary Cyclist," "The Speckled Band," "The Naval Treaty," "A Scandal in Bohemia," "The Dancing Men," "The Crooked Man" and "The Blue Carbuncle." Production will continue in January with "The Resident Patient," "The Greek Interpreter," "The Norwood Builder," "The Copper Beeches," "The Redheaded League" and "The Final Problem."

Next season's "Live from the Met" series on public TV will have a couple of things old and a couple of things new — but the only live program will be a day-long gala concert celebrating the Metropolitan Opera's 100th birthday.

The Gala Centennial Concert to be broadcast in the afternoon and evening of Saturday, Oct. 22, is certain to feature most of the big names currently active in the operatic world. No details have been announced for the program, which falls exactly 100 years after the Met was founded.

Two operas from the centennial season will be in the TV schedule, both of them featuring the all-star casts that the Met likes to present to home audiences.

The first is Berlioz' epic two-part "Les Troyens," a revival that opens the season, starring tenor Placido Domingo, soprano Jessye Norman and mezzo Tatiana Troyanos. A performance taped Oct. 8 will be broadcast March 28, 1984.

The second new opera, Verdi's "Ernani," stars tenor Luciano Pavarotti, soprano Leona Mitchell and baritone Sherill Milnes. It is receiving a new production and will be taped Dec. 17 for showing Dec. 21.

The other two operas were taped last year. Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," and Verdi's "Don Carlo."

The A.C. Nielsen Co. reports 31.8 million homes across the country now are wired for cable TV. That's nearly 38 percent of the potential market.

The report, based on Nielsen estimates for May, lists the Santa Barbara-Santa Maria-San Luis Obispo area along the central coast of California as the No. 1 market in cable "penetration," with 77.4 percent of the available homes wired.

New York City has the most cable households, 2.06 million, but ranks far down the list with only 31.9 percent penetration.

Bill Macatee, host of NBC Sports' "30 Rock" weekend program, takes over as sports reporter for the network's "Early Today" show beginning Aug. 1. He'll do some globe-trotting between now and then.

Macatee was off to London this week to help with NBC Sports' coverage of the Wimbledon tennis tournament. He's due back in New York next weekend for "30 Rock," will return to England for another week at Wimbledon, then fly back home for the weekend sports program.

ON LOCATION: Dick Van Dyke and Sid Caesar, two of TV's most prominent comic actors, are at work in New York City on "Max and Sam," a made-for-TV movie that NBC plans to broadcast next season. ... CBS has two Agatha Christie stories in production, "A Caribbean Mystery" with Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, and "Sparkling Cyanide," featuring Anthony Andrews, Deborah Raffin and Harry Morgan. ... Marlo Thomas and Kris Kristofferson star in "The Lost Honor of Kathryn Beck," based on a novel by Nobel Prize-winner Heinrich Boll, filmed in Chicago for CBS. ... Jane Alexander plays the lead in "Calamity Jane," another movie for CBS in production in Tucson, Ariz.

Christopher Reeve Discards His Cape

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Reeve says he's throwing in the cape; his five-year stint as Superman is over. If the movie "Superman IV" ever hits the screen, it'll be without him.

"Look, I've flown, become evil, loved, stopped and turned the world backward," he said recently. "I've faced my peers, I've befriended children and small animals and I've rescued cats from trees. What else is there left for Superman to do that hasn't already been done?"

After a stint in summer stock in Williamstown, Mass., Reeve says he'll star in two films, neither of which has anything to do with comic book heroes.

New York stage actor Reeve found himself a national celebrity when his first episode of "Superman" was released in 1978. The most recent film, "Superman III," opened at theaters last week.

"I became famous for all the wrong reasons. It was like being a new kid at school. I had a brief ego trip where I really became unfocused and self-important," he said. "...If you survive that leap to fame, all of a sudden you're given all the same things for free, even when you may not deserve it. Some people rest on their laurels and don't work, they fear that another success may lead them closer to failure."

More Ads For Broadcast News

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — More and more broadcasters are reporting their news shows attract enough advertising to pay their own way.

News directors at 83 percent of the nation's TV stations and 66 percent of the radio stations said in a recent survey that their news programming "was attracting enough advertising in 1982 to pay its way."

By comparison, 74 percent of the TV news directors and 61 percent of the radio news directors answered the question affirmatively in 1976, the survey added.

The study, conducted by Dr. Vernon A. Stone, the director of the School of Journalism at Southern Illinois University, was released today by the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

In addition to charting the number of broadcast news operations that can support themselves, the study also found that a majority of both radio and TV stations have enjoyed increases in news advertising over the past year.

Seventy-eight percent of the TV news directors and 59 percent of the radio news directors stated that news ad revenues had risen in 1982 compared to 1981.

The study found some major differences, however, between radio and television.

On the TV side, there was a high correlation between increased revenue from commercials and increased expenditures in the news department.

"Radio stations, on the other hand, often appeared to be pocketing ad profits brought in by news rather than television."

Slow To Attain Computer Talk

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Wanted: A computer that can really communicate with people in their own "natural" language.

Two decades of research in the field of artificial intelligence has produced limited results, according to James F. Allen of the University of Rochester's computer science department. One reason, he says, is that "until recently researchers overlooked the importance of context in human conversation."

Allen explains: "If I ask, 'Can you tell me the time?' you probably won't simply answer 'Yes,' because you know what information I really need."

Allen has developed a computer program, ARGOT, which gives a computer some knowledge of a person's needs and expectations, enabling it to answer questions and engage in simple dialogues.

Saturday's Cryptquip — POOL PLAYER TURNED ACTOR HAD MEMORY LAPSE AND MISSED HIS CUE.
 Today's Cryptquip clue: I equals T.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦83 ♥K1062 ♦Q652 ♣732
 Partner opens the bidding with two hearts. What do you respond?

A.—There is a conventional bid that describes your hand exactly. When partner opens with a demand bid and you have good trump support but no side-suit first- or second-round control, jump to game in his suit. Bid four hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦KQJ83 ♥653 ♦95 ♣864
 Partner opens the bidding with two hearts. What do you respond?

A.—You do not have the values for a positive response, despite your good five-card major suit. You need 8 points or 1½ quick tricks for a positive response. Bid two no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♦953 ♥QJ854 ♦A8 ♣Q74
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—Don't let that fifth trump fool you. You have a perfectly sound raise to two hearts, and there is no reason to bid anything else. You have very little in the way of distribution and sound defensive values.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♦7 ♥QJ854 ♦A8763 ♣92
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

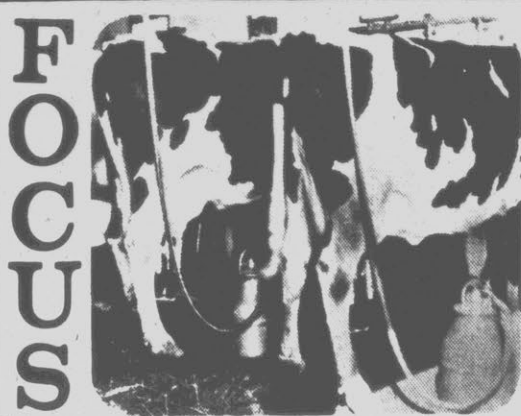

A.—This time you have a classic raise to four hearts — five trumps, a singleton and minimal defensive values. This hand could belong to the opponents in spades (even a slam is not beyond reason), so make it as difficult as possible for them to get into the auction.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦107 ♥AQJ62 ♦A763 ♣9

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—If you bid two diamonds, the problems come at the next round. You will feel guilty that you did not support spades and so take another bid. That will make you sound stronger than you are. You do better to limit your hand immediately with a raise to two spades, even though you have only three trumps.

FOCUS

June Is Dairy Month

When it comes to milk production, America's 11 million dairy cattle continue to set impressive new records year after year. Even though the nation's dairy herd is 57 percent smaller than 40 years ago, it is producing 15 percent more milk thanks to genetically improved cows and increasingly efficient dairy farms. This year the nation's cows are expected to produce a record 16 billion gallons of milk—enough to make a 7 million-ton mountain of cheese. But this high productivity has resulted in a steadily mounting and increasingly costly surplus. Even with increased distribution of surplus products, the federal government currently owns 215,000 tons of butter, 445,000 tons of cheese, and 650,000 tons of dried milk.

DO YOU KNOW — What state leads the U.S. in milk production?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Pieter Botha is Prime Minister of South Africa.

Target Date On I-40 Set

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Late 1987 is the target date for completion of Interstate 40 from Research Triangle Park to Interstate 85 west of Hillsborough, says a state Department of Transportation official.

"Completion to I-85, including grading, bridges and paving should be in late 1987, if the sun shines and we don't run out of money," said T.L. Waters, the chief of the state Department of Transportation's planning and research branch.

Parts of the road will be opened to traffic as they are completed, Waters said.

Waters on Friday met with administrators, elected officials, planners and developers from Durham, Orange and Wake counties, and from Durham, Chapel Hill, Raleigh and other towns that will be affected by the project.

The state Board of Transportation still must approve the 21.4 miles of new highway, at a cost of more than $140 million, at their July 8 meeting. State officials already have acquired about half of the needed rights-of-way.

Opponents, including some Orange County Commissioners and a private citizens group, said the route comes too close to Chapel Hill and forces the relocation of homes and destruction of 1,000 acres of wildlife habitat.

All business operating in the City are required to obtain a business or privilege license annually. For details, call 752-4137.
