States Win Major Corporate Tax Case

By JAMES RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld the right of states to collect hundreds of millions of dollars by basing taxes paid by multi-national corporations on the companies' worldwide income.

The court ruled, 5-3, that California did not violate the constitution by computing the tax on a portion of each corporation's income from foreign subsidiaries. The ruling may save all states $625 million annually, according to an organization that represents 20 states.

The court said the companies have the burden of proving that the income apportioned by the tax to California was out of line with the business transacted within the state.

Container Corp., of America, which is based in Chicago, had failed to prove that case, the court said.

California measures corporate tax liability by looking at companies' worldwide business and then deciding what portions of the firms' payrolls, sales, and property are located in that state.

California computed that Container Corp. had $33 million in annual sales, $10 million in annual payroll, and $25 million in property in the state. At issue was about $72,000 in higher tax bills from 1963 through 1965. The company has been paying the higher tax rate under protest since then.

Today's ruling is expected to be greeted with relief by state officials who were concerned that the court might impose limits on revenue-raising power at a time when their governments are still feeling the financial pinch of the recession.

The Multistate Tax Commission, with 20 member states, said $625 million was at stake for all states in the nation.

Container Corp., which makes cardboard boxes and containers, is now a subsidiary of Mobil Oil Corporation. Container Corp. has its own subsidiaries in Colombia, Venezuela, Mexico, Italy, and the Netherlands.

The Justice Department, in a similar case last year, sided with the corporate position, angering some state officials who said the administration was bowing to pressure from foreign allies. Some foreign countries said the California tax system violated international trade agreements.

The Supreme Court postponed a decision in a 1982 case, putting off the issue until the California case.

Today's ruling, which upheld a 1981 decision by the California Court of Appeals, rejected claims by multi-national corporations who said California's tax system is unfair in part because foreign wage rates and property costs are lower and profits are higher than in the United States.

Justice William J. Brennan, in his opinion for the majority, said that the evidence provided by Container Corp. "does not by itself come close to impeaching the basic rationale behind" California's accounting formula.

Marines Home From Lebanon

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Wives, girlfriends and a band playing the themes from "Star Wars" and "Rocky" greeted about 1,800 U.S. Marines returning Sunday from a multinational peacekeeping mission in Beirut.

"I can't wait," said Margaret Bates, who was waiting for her husband, Lance Cpl. Kevin M. Bates. "I've been waiting four months, 28 days, three hours, 37 minutes and some-odd seconds."

The Marines of the 22nd Amphibious Unit arrived by ship at Morehead City at about 8 a.m. and were transported by bus to Camp Lejeune. They had been in Beirut about five months before being relieved by the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit about four weeks ago.

Flood Fighters Trying To Fend Off Colorado River

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Volunteers worked overnight in the rain to bolster two sagging dikes and fend off the rising Colorado River, which forced more than 1,200 people to evacuate as storms and spring runoff pushed it to a record crest.

Hundreds of miles downstream, federal officials were considering whether to release more water today at Parker Dam, one of three Colorado River dams between Arizona, Nevada and California where floodgates were opened last week because of brim-full reservoirs.

One man died and 15 were injured in a weekend rafting accident in the river's rapids in Grand Canyon National Park, while two men died in the swollen river in Mexico, officials said.

A dozen National Guardsmen were called in Sunday to patrol flooded river homes between Bullhead City, Ariz., and Needles, Calif., said a civilian volunteer for the Mohave County (Ariz.) Sheriff's Department who asked not to be identified.

"They are on the scene now, just patrolling homes around the clock. We have search and rescue crews, reserves and regular deputies assisting," he said early today.

Detective Evan Williams said there had been a rash of looting reports in the Bullhead City area but added he didn't believe there had been more than two actual incidents — and no one had been arrested. He said some edgy residents apparently were reporting looting just on the basis of seeing crowds in the area.

About 30 of the 70 homes in the Topat Marsh area near Bullhead City were evacuated Sunday, he said.

Honduras Says Border Incidents Multiplying

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Here is a list of some recent attacks that Honduras claims were mounted by Nicaraguan troops along the 12-mile stretch of border where American journalists Dial Torgersen of the Los Angeles Times and Richard Cross, a free-lance photographer, were killed last Tuesday.

Honduras said it has sent diplomatic notes of protest to Nicaragua regarding each alleged incident, with copies sent to the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

—May 25: Col. Danilo Ferrera Suazo, commander of an artillery battalion deployed in the area, says he is attacked by rifle fire for two hours from the Nicaraguan side of the border.

—May 26: Nicaraguan troops fire on four Honduran reporters from El Heraldo and the HRN Radio Network. None are hit.

—May 27-31: Continuous fire from the Nicaraguan side. Machinegun fire is directed at a group of Honduran reporters from the newspaper La Tribuna but none are hurt.

Torgerson and Cross. A Honduran peasant is wounded. The car is marked with an "international press" sign and flies a small white pennant.

—June 23: A truck loaded with lumber going from the village of Las Trojes to the town of Cifuentes is shot up by fire from the Nicaraguan side. No casualties reported.

—June 23: Nicaraguan troops place six mines on the road near the hamlet of Zazon Hondo, about three miles from Cifuentes, to block movement by Honduran troops.

CONVERTER BOX NOT NEEDED

We had cable tv service for about 1½ years or more. The service people that ran the cable to our house and tv sets installed a small black converter box on each set. We assumed it was necessary. This week we found out that our newest set that we've had for four years has a switch inside a door panel marked CATV NORM. Band. By flipping the switch from norm to CATV, we no longer need the $1.50-per-month converter box. We explained to the staff at the local cable television service that we did not request the converters, only the service for our sets. They said they were sorry, but we apparently got what we requested. We wonder how many other subscribers have been paying an extra $18 per year per set because the original installer failed to inform their customers or take the time to look at the set they hooked up. Your readers should look near the controls for a small switch marked "CATV NORM" BAND. We believe there are others who may have the same experience we did. R.D.

First Black Miss N.C. Looks To Atlantic City

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Race probably won't matter to Miss America pageant judges, said Deneen Zzell Graham, the first black Miss North Carolina, who will compete this September in Atlantic City, N.J.

"I don't think it's going to make any difference at all," Miss Graham said Sunday, the day after she was crowned the 1983 Miss North Carolina.

But the 19-year-old Miss Graham said people might expect more from her because she is black.

"Sometimes when you're out there, they're expecting more of you," said the 5-foot-7, 110-pound North Wilkesboro dancer who was Miss Elkin Valley. "It's not fair, but I can understand it because of the whole history of this country. But I don't think it will be a problem."

Miss Graham, who has studied for six years at the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem, said she knew her crowning Saturday was a milestone in breaking racial barriers.

"It feels great," she said. Asked if she felt she had any special mission, she said, "I do have a special purpose, but it's basically to represent all the people of North Carolina. That's my job and I will do that."

Miss Graham said the reaction so far to her crowning had been "very receptive. That makes me feel good, especially coming from the other girls."

The first runner-up in Saturday night's pageant was Miss Morganton, Patricia Kim Cozort, 23, of Drexel. Second runner-up was Karan Chavis, 19, representing the greater Greensboro area, followed by Patricia O'Quinn, 22, Miss Goldsboro, and Miss Johnston County, Vicki Lynne Tharrington, 20, of Smithfield.

Never a beauty pageant contestant before, the Miss Elkin Valley competition, Miss Graham said she never felt she didn't stand a chance to win the state crown, although no black had ever won before.

"I think the girls who were experienced were a little more relaxed, but I felt I had a little something special," she said.

Miss Graham, her hair pulled back sharply, emphasizing her slender face and high cheekbones, spoke at the news conference Sunday at the close of the 45th annual pageant wearing a white linen suit with a pearl rope necklace.

To prepare for the Miss America competition this fall, Miss Graham said she will sharpen her interview skills and practice her dancing.

Aspiring to become a Broadway dancer, Miss Graham said she probably will perform a jazz dance like the one she did in the state contest to the 1940s tune "Sing Sing Sing." Talent accounts for 50 percent of the judging of both the state and national competitions.

Miss Graham, who now receives $10,000 in scholarships and prizes, said she entered the competition for the scholarship money to help complete her dance education.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old married woman who goes to a female obstetrician-gynecologist.

One of my female friends made some snide remarks concerning my choice of a female doctor, hinting that I may have some "latent lesbian tendencies."

I, in turn, cannot understand why a woman would choose a male obstetrician-gynecologist, since no male has ever experienced menstrual cramps, pregnancy, childbirth or menopause.

If you took a poll, I'm sure you would find that most men go to male doctors. Does that then mean that they may have some "latent homosexual tendencies"?

IRATE AND STRAIGHT

DEAR IRATE: One's sexual feelings are rarely a factor in choosing a physician. Since the doctor-patient relationship is anything but romantic, for your friend to suggest "lesbianism" where none exists could raise some questions about where she is coming from.

DEAR ABBY: I need a quick reply. My boyfriend loves to tickle me. At first it was a game between us, but it's gotten out of hand. Every time we're together, he pins me down and tickles me until I am hoarse from screaming and my lungs ache.

I am very ticklish at the bottom of my feet, my ribs and underneath my arms, and that's what he goes for. This is no laughing matter. He is driving me crazy!

TICKLED TO DEATH IN NEW YORK

DEAR TICKLED: Your friend is sadistic! Tell him now that you want no part of it, and forbid him to put a tickling finger on you. If he doesn't take you seriously — take a walk. Tickling is in reality a thinly disguised method of torture.

Husband Needs Serious Therapy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and Jim is 23. We've been married for two years and have two kids. A few months after we got married, Jim started to accuse me of looking at other men — even my two brothers-in-law. He accused me of cheating on him while he was at work and he started to hit me when he thought I was doing these things.

He set down rules: I was not to call my sister, open the curtains, or even go out to check the mail. When he'd go to work, he would stick paper in the door from the outside to see if it had been opened.

Well, six months later I caught him calling an old girl-friend. He also went out with her one night. As time went by, I forgave him, but I never forgot it. Jim never wanted to stay home. He said the kids made him nervous, then he'd take off for a friend's house. I was never allowed to go anywhere. I had no friends to confide in because I never got out of the house to make any. After two years of this I said, "No more!"

That's when I went back to my parents and told Jim things would have to change.

Two weeks later I saw him drive by my house with a girl in the car. They were sitting very close and he had his arm around her. I talked about this to him, and he told me it was all my fault because I was the one who left.

Abby, my heart is aching. The girl he is seeing is 16. He says he still loves me, and crazy as it may seem, I still love him. I can't divorce him because I don't want to hurt him, myself or the kids. But maybe that's what he wants. Please give me some advice.

A Case Of Labels

It seems that Congress has really turned to tobacco as its favorite whipping boy. Already we have that ridiculous warning on the side of every package of cigarettes. Now, if the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee has its way, the labels will read: "Warning! Cigarette smoking causes CANCER, EMPHYSEMA, HEART DISEASE; may complicate PREGNANCY, and is ADDICTIVE."

The committee, at the behest of Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, adopted the measure by a vote of 15-1. It's pleasing to note that the only negative vote was by Sen. John P. East, Greenville's Republican contribution to the Senate. But of all the reasons for voting against the proposal, East picked the lamest: that he doubted the scientific accuracy of the warning and that it might pose problems with product liability.

Scientific accuracy certainly is doubtful, although anyone with reasonably good sense knows that abuse of virtually anything — and certainly smoking — can cause serious health problems. As for product liability, that will be increased anytime any warning is added to a product.

But, as Congress did in its successful effort to gut the tobacco program while other farm programs remained intact or were strengthened, is putting an unfair emphasis on tobacco. It's been said before, but it's worth repeating: if health warnings are needed anywhere, they should be placed on such items as alcoholic beverages as well as tobacco.

And certainly, as anyone who has used some of today's mind-changing, body-altering medicine knows, warnings of side effects or dangers of mixing with other products should be given with prescription medication. Why they aren't is difficult to understand, unless it's because the pharmaceutical lobby is stronger than that for tobacco.

So be patient, America, keep on reading your label while you smoke that cigarette and try to remember to ask your druggist or doctor about what to expect with that new medication. Sooner or later, when the tobacco industry is gone, Congress may decide you need to know what that stuff will do to you, too.

Let's Curb Medical Costs

There is no question that President Reagan is correct when he says that soaring medical costs must be curbed.

"The growth in medical costs is malignant and must be removed for the continued health of the American people," the president warned. "The danger is that high medical inflation may soon jeopardize the quality and access of our health care. America won't be able to sustain its unequalled health care system if citizens can't afford it."

Increasing health costs affects the government, which pays for much of it; companies which provide health insurances and, one way or another, the individual.

America's health care is good, but if it becomes unaffordable there is surely be a groundswell for reform.

Rules Are Changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stripped of the legislative veto power it has wielded for 50 years, Congress will have to be more careful — or complacent — about the laws that assign presidents and regulatory agencies the authority to manage the government.

Until Thursday, there was another way: write the law, but write in a veto provision so that the House, or the Senate, or both, could overrule a particular rule, regulation or decision made under that law.

The Supreme Court ruled that process unconstitutional, which is what presidents have been saying about it since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt. They've called it an improper intrusion upon the powers of the presidency. Congressional advocates of the system countered that it was a valid restraint on the exercise of authority delegated by Congress to the executive branch of government.

To keep the kind of control the legislative veto permitted, Congress will have to write far more detailed mandates and limits into the laws it passes. That would add an immense new workload to the agenda.

And there already is a new workload waiting. It will take years to revise the more than 200 laws that include legislative veto provisions of one sort or another.

Those laws permit one or both branches of Congress to overrule an executive branch decision by passing a resolution that says no. In most cases, all that took was a majority vote of the House or of the Senate.

For example, until the court spoke, either branch could overrule regulations of the Federal Elections Commission governing campaign practices. Both branches could, and did, overrule some decisions of the Federal Trade Commission.

President Reagan had to withstand a legislative veto attempt in order to sell AWACS radar surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia. It would have taken majorities in both houses to block that deal, and the Senate sided with the president.

Congress always has the power to rewrite a law under which a president or a regulatory agency is doing something it doesn't want done. But it is a lot easier to get one house or the other to adopt a resolution blocking action than it is to get both branches and the president to enact a new law. When the president's policies are involved, he can employ his own veto power to block such a law.

In recent years, the legislative veto system has been expanded in efforts to check federal rulemakers, "unelected bureaucrats" to the conservatives who often accused them of going beyond the intent of Congress in applying regulatory authority. Congressional conservatives said the knowledge that specific actions were subject to veto would restrain runaway regulators.

But former President Gerald R. Ford, no fan of the regulators, disputed that in arguing against an extension of the congressional veto system a few years back. The Federal Trade Commission, then run by an activist Democrat, was the target of that campaign.

Ford said at the time that Congress should pass better laws in the first place, instead of writing into legislation a procedure to block results it didn't like. Besides, he said, if Congress didn't want an activist trade commission, the Senate shouldn't have approved the nomination of an activist to run the place.

RALEIGH — In November 1982, the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth issued a disturbing report on the children we put behind bars. GACCY contended that vague laws, arbitrarily enforced, meant that 2,400 children were unnecessarily assigned to adult jails or juvenile detention centers across the state during 1981.

That report gave proponents of juvenile detention law reform some ammunition in the Legislature this year. Locking up a kid is serious business. It can quickly cause emotional and psychological damage and, in extreme cases, lead to suicide. But, even with that ammunition, the reformers got little more than a modest improvement in state law, they'll admit.

"Overall, it is about the best compromise we could make at this time. It is a modest step," says Sen. Lura Tally.

D-Cumberland, sponsor of the bill.

Under present law, children can be held in either an adult jail or a secure juvenile detention center while they await adjudication of their case. To lock a child away, a judge must find that the child's case meets one of nine broad statutory criteria.

GACCY claims that the criteria are overboard, resulting in the lock up of children who don't need it. Sen. Tally's bill drops a couple of these criteria and eliminates some of the vagueness in others. But the law still allows a lot of reasons to lock kids up.

The most significant change, according to GACCY Director John Niblock, involved felonies. Current law says a youngster can be locked up solely for being charged with a felony. The new law says the child charged with a felony must also be determined to be a threat to person or property before he or she can be locked away.

But Niblock's praise for the bill pretty much ends there. He complains that almost any child can still be locked up on the very vague assumption that the child will not appear in court. And he criticizes a provision to lock up status offenders when they fail to appear in court. Status offenders are runaways and other mischief makers who have committed offenses that would not be criminal if committed by adults.

"The bill will do some good," Niblock says. "But, it will not be anywhere near the 2,400 (unnecessarily jailed young people) because some of these vague areas are still in there."

There are some who see good in the new law, however. Tom Danek, head juvenile law administrator in the Administrative Office of the Courts, says the bill "encourages the use of non-secure custody and, in my mind, that's a big step forward."

Danek notes that the bill calls for the judge first to consider if the child can be placed in the custody of family or friends, or in a non-secure facility like a halfway house. Only after the judge has determined that such a course is not wise can the child be locked up. It's hoped that this provision will lead judges to think of lock-ups only as a last resort.

While the chief District Court Judge has the authority to make these decisions, he often designates someone else to handle individual cases as they arise. Now, he can assign that job to anyone. Under the new law, he'll be able to delegate this authority only to a court counselor. It is hoped that this will leave the decision in the hands of a professional who understands the restraint needed in locking up children.

A Solution For The Unemployed

William F. Buckley, in a column the other day, quoted a middle management unemployed worker named Hank as saying, "The easiest way to get a job is to have one." Hank said when he had a job, he was approached by rival corporations about joining their firms, and when he made several pitches at other companies, they never once demanded references. As soon as he lost his job however, everyone looked on Hank with suspicion, because Americans tend to believe if you're out of work, you're out of gas.

Mr. Buckley didn't have a solution for Hank's problem, but I do.

Hank should never admit to any prospective employer that he is unemployed.

The way I would choreograph Hank's job-searching problem is as follows: The first thing I would do is have a pal drop the word that he heard Hank Smith is very unhappy at "MPPI," (a fictitious company) and might be persuaded to go somewhere else, if the price was right.

This would start the gossip mill rolling in the particular industry that Hank is trying to get into. Not only DKB, but LMP, ITT and Digital Research would hear about it.

Then I would have Hank write personal letters from his home address to the chief executive officers of at least 12 of the "Fortune 500" firms. The text would read, "Contrary to rumors all over town, I am not unhappy at MPPI, and have no intention of leaving the firm at this time, particularly when sales are climbing, and profits projected for 1984 will reach an all-time high. I would appreciate it if your search people refrain from calling me at the office, as it will only give credence to the rumor and have a negative effect on the price of MPPI's stock."

This should whet the appetites of the CEO's, who will go to extraordinary lengths to steal a management employee away from another company, but will refuse to nod at anyone who is out of work.

In a few days, if my scenario works, Hank will get a call at his home, probably late at night, from one of the vice presidents of a firm he wrote to.

Hank must whisper, "I can't talk to you from my home. I'll call you from a public booth. MPPI may have my phone tapped."

Hank then waits ten minutes and the persons the person back.

The executive invites him to lunch. Hank says, "It's a waste of time, but lets mee where no one can see us."

The executive suggests an inn 50 miles away, and the lunch is set up.

When they meet Hank lays down the ground rules. Under no condition is the DKB company to make contact with MPPI concerning Hank's position there. If it leaks out that DKB is trying to recruit Hank, the DKB CEO personally must deny it.

The executive agrees to the conditions and the luncheon proceeds. Hank lets the DKB executive do all the talking.

The executive makes a big pitch to Hank to come over to DKB from MPPI, pointing out the pension plan, the employee profit sharing advantages, and the freedom he would have to pursue his management expertise.

Hank plays the reluctant suitor? and says it's a big decision in his life and he has to talk it over with his family. The executive from DKB believes he has Hank on the hook and tells him he'll call him in the morning.

When he does, Hank's wife picks up the phone and says Hank is out having breakfast with the LMP people.

Hank waits until late afternoon and then places the call to DKB. He says, "You sold me. I decided to come on board."

"You won't regret it, Hank," the executive says joyously. "Someday you're going to thank me for giving MPPI the air."

This sounds like a complicated plan. But if the unemployed executive follows it to the letter, it should work. At least it means a lot of free lunches until you can land a job.

Off-Camera, Heroes Often Change

WASHINGTON — It was, coming from a 17-year-old, the quote of the week.

"And I say that I am ashamed of the leaders of this country who can vote for the nuclear freeze and then turn around and vote for the most dangerous and most expensive missile system that this country has ever suggested, the MX missile."

But even as presidential scholar Ariela Gross scored a symbolic victory last week after a meeting with Ronald Reagan, lawmakers whom she supposed were anti-MX allies — such as front-line freezers Ted Kennedy and Tip O'Neill — were busy stabbing her in the back. Since late last year, the entire congressional delegations of Massachusetts, Rhode Island — and most of New Jersey's and New York's — have quietly been hustling the U.S. Navy to base five cruise missile-bearing ships in their respective home states.

Ariela Gross, the Harvard-bound New Jersey native, probably assumed that she was among friends when she addressed a Capitol Hill crowd gathered to "lobby" against the MX last Tuesday, June 14. There she met Rep. Ed Markey, congressional freeze sponsor and rally organizer, and heard many others speak, including Rep. Tom Downey (D-N.Y.) and Rep. Nick Mavroules (D-Mass.). She may have also seen Kennedy pose for pictures with leading Democratic presidential contenders.

When off-camera, however, many of Ariela's heroes have acted considerably less hostile to the equally "dangerous and expensive" cruise missile system. In conjunction with colleagues, New Yorkers such as Downey and Republican freezer Bill Green wrote Navy Secretary John Lehman on March 16 to lure the mini-fleet to the Port of New York; Kennedy and O'Neill have since met privately with Lehman on Boston's behalf. Parting company with Bay State colleagues such as Mavroules, liberal representative Barney Frank has made it clear that dredging the Providence, R.I., port would better favor constituents in his southeastern Massachusetts district. (Lehman, no doubt glad to see many freezers at his beck and call, won't choose a base until September.)

Lawmakers say their inconsistency is justified by the prospect of 6,500 Navy-related jobs. Explained a spokesman for Ed Markey to our reporter, Michael Duffy, "We don't see it as a cruise issue."

Most of the jobs which will follow the fleet, however, are not "new" in any sense: According to Pentagon spokesman

Dennis Sawyer, some 3,500 belong to sailors who'll be transferred to the winning city; the remaining jobs, numbering anywhere from 1,000 to 3,000, are neither guaranteed to go to locals nor necessarily long-term. An official of the pro-fleet Boston Economic Development and Industrial Corp. told a June 6 Boston City Council meeting that most were probably short-term construction jobs.

Yet in the excitement over employment, the freezemonsters are also overlooking bigger problems with downtown cruise bases.

Though nuclear-equipped ships have occasionally called near smaller cities, never before have so many nuclear weapons, with a such large payloads, been slated to dock regularly near such sizeable populations. According to Pentagon testimony, the five-ship "surface action group" — made up of a rehabilitated battleship, a cruiser and three destroyers — will carry 360 cruise missiles. With a 200-kiloton warhead topping each missile, the mini-fleet will command more than 72 megatons of "throw weight, about one-fourth that of the entire MX missile system.

Indeed, stationing the action group in Boston Harbor or the Port of New York is akin to basing 25 MX missiles under Bunker Hill or in Central Park. Pentagon officials say the ships will spend as much time in port as on patrol. Yet, even as reports of weapons mishaps increase, Congress hasn't studied the safety of basing this considerable force in two of our largest cities.

Moreover, by massing in densely populated areas what the Pentagon admits to be a "strategic force," the U.S. is unwittingly rewriting its own deterrence formula. At present, cities are generally considered second-strike, or counterforce targets, endangered only after one side has launched a first strike against silos in less populated areas. The presence of 360 cruise missiles in Boston or New York, however, would make either city a sure first-strike target.

None of this seems to have dawned on the representatives whose constituents live on or around ground zero. Apparently, few folks are bothered by the fact that the small, radar-eluding cruise could prove the most destabilizing, unverifiable nuclear weapon either side has ever suggested.

Tougher Laws Reducing Drunken Driving Deaths

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

The party was just hitting its peak, with everyone laughing and joking and feeling good. But when another round of beers came out, one young man held up his hand in protest.

"No, thanks, I can't have any more," he said in answer to his friends' raised eyebrows. "Not with the new drunk driving law. Unless someone wants to drive me home, no more for me."

Scenes such as this are reportedly becoming more frequent across the country. Weekend after weekend, in home after home and in bar after bar, increasing numbers of Americans are heeding the growing risks of losing their drivers' licenses, paying steeper fines and going to jail for drunken driving.

"The American drinking public is becoming more aware of and paying more attention to the threat of arrest and loss of license for drunk driving," said Vincent Tofany, president of the National Safety Council.

Indeed, the war on drunken driving has galvanized the nation. Perhaps no single issue has ever prompted so much get-tough action by so many state legislatures in such a short time.

The Highway Users Federation, a non-profit research group in Washington, says that 35 states enacted new drunken driving laws last year. So far in 1983, 27 states have passed new laws or toughened existing statutes.

Catherine Yoe, a federation researcher, said Kentucky — where the Legislature is not in session this year — was the only state that had not at least considered drunken driving legislation in the last 18 months.

And while President Reagan generally shies away from expanding federal financing for local programs, his administration is considering a proposal to provide $30 million to state governments to combat drunken driving.

For politicians, working to curb drunken driving is a combination of good politics and good policy that is difficult to resist. But there has been some backlash from defense and civil rights attorneys.

"The problem with the tough new laws is that the guy who drinks twice a year and gets caught at .10 (percent blood alcohol level) after the office Christmas party gets in more trouble than the biggest embezzler," Randall Crocker, a Milwaukee defense attorney, said. "But how can you criticize anything that's supposed to be against drunk driving? It's like being against Mom and apple pie."

In Massachusetts, sheriffs complain that their jails are packed with otherwise law-abiding citizens convicted of drunken driving.

In Ohio, where the mandatory 72-hour jail sentence for first offenses is the toughest in the nation, four people accused of drunken driving have committed suicide in their cells.

In Maryland, the head of a defense attorneys' association said the tough new laws may be backfiring because judges and juries are reluctant to find someone guilty of drunken driving if the penalty is too harsh.

Civil liberties lawyers also question the constitutionality of the roadblocks police are using in several states to stop all drivers and check them for intoxication.

In Arizona, however, the state Supreme Court ruled that such roadblocks were justified to fight drunken driving, and North Carolina's new drunken driving law specifically permits roadblocks.

Despite the scattered criticism, the initial results indicate that the stiffer laws are doing what they are supposed to do: keeping the drunk from driving and the driver from getting drunk.

Nationally, the number of arrests for drunken driving has risen to 1.5 million a year. Officials say traffic fatalities are down for the third straight year. Last New Year's Eve, there were fewer fatal auto accidents than in any holiday weekend since Memorial Day 1949.

In California, officials say the new drunken driving law has helped cut traffic fatalities by 14 percent. In Maine, officials say it's 24 percent. In Minnesota and Maryland, 30 percent.

Nevada's new law, given final legislative approval in May, is typical of the more stringent penalties for first offenders: two days in jail or 48 hours of judge-approved public service, a fine of $200 to $1,000 and a 90-day license suspension.

Twelve states have imposed mandatory jail terms for first offenders, though in almost each of those states a defendant can avoid jail by agreeing to undergo evaluation, participate in an alcohol education program and perform judge-approved community service.

Twenty-one states require a driver's license to be suspended for a drunken driving conviction. In some states, drivers who refuse to take a breath or blood test face penalties as stiff as those for convicted drunken drivers.

Citing the "carnage caused by drunk drivers," the U.S. Supreme Court this year said states could consider refusal to take a breath test as evidence of drunken driving.

In the first six months of Iowa's new law, police took away the licenses of 7,887 drivers on the spot where they were arrested.

Much of the legal effort to curb drunken driving is aimed at teen-agers; it is the leading cause of death among ages 15-24.

Only four states — Hawaii, Louisiana, Wisconsin and Vermont — still allow 18-year-olds to purchase all types of alcoholic beverages. The 400,000-member national bartenders union thinks all states should raise the legal drinking age to 21. And a study in Michigan found fewer accidents among 18-to-20-year-olds after the drinking age was raised to 21.

The University of Connecticut has banned all drinking on campus, and in Washington, D.C., alcohol education programs begin in kindergarten.

Some states have found the drunken driving law a source of revenue. In its first 16 months, Wisconsin's new law resulted in 29,899 drunken driving convictions. Besides the standard $300 fine, a special $150 surcharge brought the state almost $4.5 million.

Under Massachusetts' 1982 law, a second drunken driving conviction requires a $300 to $1,000 fine and from seven days to two years in jail — even if the first drunken driving conviction came years before the new law went into effect. Some states have proposed special glow-in-the-dark license plates for cars owned by people with past drunken driving convictions.

Thirty-four states have the "illegal per se" rule, which says that registering a certain blood alcohol level makes the driver automatically guilty of drunken driving.

Formerly, a test showing a blood alcohol level of .10 percent was considered as evidence of drunken driving. A police officer would testify to the blood test results and to the defendant's ability to walk a straight line or talk without slurring, and then a judge or jury would decide whether the driver was guilty.

Now, in most states that have the "illegal per se" rule, simply registering .10 percent or higher is automatic guilt, although in Utah it's .08 percent, in Iowa .13, in Georgia .12 and in Colorado .15.

Instead of the state having to prove the driver was impaired, the driver must prove he was not. Defense attorneys protest that drunken driving has become a crime for which defendants are presumed guilty until proven innocent.

A California appeals court earlier this year threw out the state's "illegal per se" rule, but the case is being appealed.

Several recent cases demonstrate other ways in which the legal system is responding to drunken driving.

Thirty states have "dram shop" acts in which bartenders who serve liquor to drunks can be held liable for death and injuries to the victims of drunken drivers.

In New Hampshire, a man was charged with negligent homicide for loaning his car to an allegedly drunken friend who was then involved in a double fatality accident.

In Massachusetts, a woman won an $873,697 damage award from the Town of Ware after police released an allegedly drunken driver who was involved in an accident that killed her husband and baby daughter.

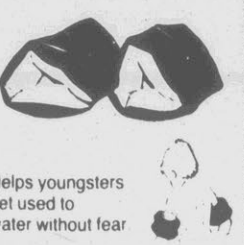

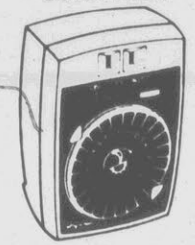

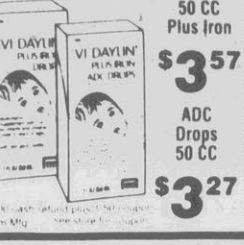

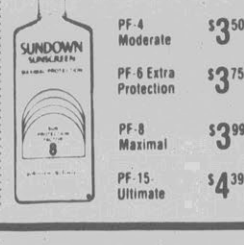

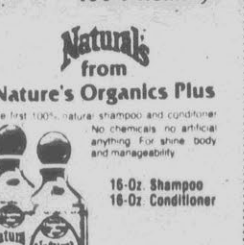

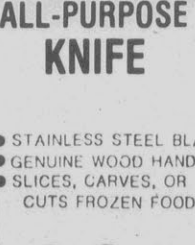

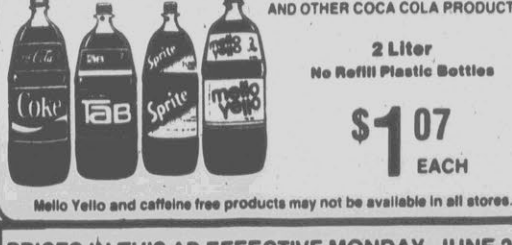

In Texas, a drunken driver was charged with involuntary manslaughter after a child died in an accident. The man pleaded guilty and took a six-year prison sentence; he said he feared a jury would put him away even longer.

Reagan Aides Seek Answers Over 'Briefing Book'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's aides, holding a "highly unusual" weekend meeting, are trying to deal with recurring questions about how the 1980 Reagan campaign obtained a briefing book prepared for then-President Carter.

Participants in the meeting included a White House lawyer who was sitting in for Fred Fielding, Reagan's counsel, who was on vacation.

Meanwhile, Jody Powell, Jimmy Carter's White House press secretary, said Sunday evening that "anyone who had that briefing book would have one of the most important political documents anyone could have in a campaign."

That description contrasts with that of Reagan administration officials, who have characterized it as the sort of compilation of an administration's public record that might be given to surrogate speakers on the campaign trail.

According to Powell and others, the book was prepared for Carter as he studied for his Oct. 28, 1980 debate with Reagan, a contest in Cleveland that became a pivotal point in the campaign.

According to three administration officials, five Reagan aides met in the White House West Wing, where the Oval Office is situated, on Saturday in what one source described as a "highly unusual" session dedicated to deciding how to deal with the questions about the document.

Participants refused to discuss the meeting, but one called it "productive."

The participants were David A. Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget; David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communication; Richard G. Darman, a presidential assistant and deputy to Chief of Staff James A. Baker III; Frank Hodsoll, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts and part of the Reagan debate-preparation operation during the campaign, and Richard A. Hauser, deputy White House counsel.

One source, insisting on anonymity, said "we've been talking off and on to the counsel's office."

This source said the meeting was "more of a spontaneous thing," rather than a formal conference.

"There were various reasons to talk," he said.

The Washington Post, ABC News, and Media General News Service each reported they obtained copies of the book from former Carter campaign officials or top-level advisers to Carter.

According to the Post account, confirmed by a top Carter adviser, the book advised the then-president to "present presidential image — make clear there is a difference between you and Reagan in knowledge and experience — and leave no doubt why you are now the president...."

The document, titled "Debate Briefing Materials," included specific policy questions, discussions about them, possible debate answers, anticipated Reagan rebuttals, and suggested follow-up answers for Carter.

One Carter adviser likened the 200-page book to a play book for a football team preparing for the Super Bowl, as well as a list of the 10 plays that will be used.

"This was the Super Bowl of the campaign," this source said of the debate.

Columnist George F. Will, told the Los Angeles Times he saw the "excruciatingly boring" briefing book while helping Reagan prepare for the debate. The newspaper quoted Will in Monday editions as saying "it was hard to see what use could have been made of it (by the Carter campaign)."

"And I'm pretty sure it wasn't made use of by anyone in the Reagan campaign," said Will, who writes for the Washington Post and Newsweek.

The weekend White House meeting brought together some of the key administration aides who were involved in debate preparations.

Stockman and Gergen, along with Baker and William Casey, Reagan's 1980 campaign chairman and current director of central intelligence, have responded to questions about the book posed by Rep. Don Albosta, D-Mich., chairman of the human resources subcommittee of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Stockman and Baker acknowledged that they had seen Carter documents before the debate. Gergen said he had heard that the Reagan campaign had received some Carter materials. Casey said he had no recollection of any. Baker said it was his "best recollection" that he received the material from Casey.

On Thursday, when Casey, Stockman, Baker and Gergen sent their responses to Albosta, Casey said in a statement released by the Central Intelligence Agency that "a great many papers" crossed his campaign desk and that "papers relating to the debate would be passed on to Jim Baker."

Reagan has denied any knowledge of the book.

Baker was Reagan's representative in debate preparations with the Carter campaign organization. Stockman, at the time a congressman from Michigan, played the role of Carter in Reagan debate rehearsals. He reportedly carried out that job so well that Reagan

"reacted very badly" and was "mad and angry" over the difficult time he had facing the Carter stand-in.

A White House source said that Hodsoll was invited to the Saturday meeting because "he was in the (Reagan) debate office, so he has knowledge of various matters as a consequence of that." There was no explanation of why Casey and Baker did not take part in the meeting.

FBI Hunts One More Poisoned Mix Container

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Three bottles of a gravy mix laced with lethal doses of insecticide have been found in supermarkets, and the FBI is hunting a fourth bottle and the tamperer who wrote of "hate" for the manufacturer.

In a letter to the New York Post, the tamperer warned that four bottles of tainted Gravy Master Seasoning and Browning Sauce — each marked with red fingernail polish — were on the shelves of Pathmark stores in four northern New Jersey communities.

Each bottle was contaminated with the insecticide nicotine sulfate, and a teaspoon of the tainted sauce could be fatal, Dr. Allen N. Koplin, the deputy state health commissioner, said Sunday.

The manufacturer, Gravymaster Inc., recalled the product in New Jersey after tainted bottles were discovered in supermarkets in North Bergen, Weehawken and Jersey City on Saturday. The fourth is believed to be in Belleville, if the letter was to be believed.

"Why I hate Gravymaster is my business," the letter to the newspaper said. But officials said it also indicated that the poisonings were intended to drive the company out of business.

"Some prankster has decided to create a problem just like they did with Tylenol," said Gravymaster President John Mills, referring to the deaths last fall of seven people in the Chicago area who took cyanide-laced capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol, a pain reliever.

There are no plans to pull the product in the 17 other states where it is distributed, said John Accola, a vice president of the Norwich, Conn.-based company.

"We can see absolutely no reason to do so. These were obviously tampered with in the store," Accola said.

Michael McDonnell, the FBI spokesman in Newark, would not discuss the search for the tamperer.

"We're going to do all in our power to apprehend this individual," said McDonnell. "This is an extortion case. It's a federal violation."

Nicotine sulfate is "quite toxic. A few milligrams can cause vomiting. A lethal dose would be about 60 milligrams, which would be quite small," said Martin Burke of the New York City Poison Center.

Burke said ingestion of the insecticide could cause diarrhea, convulsions or a coma. "It's quite a nasty product," he said. "It is very toxic."

The bottle found in Jersey City late Saturday contained "about 10 times as much" as the 17,000 parts per million of the poison found in the first two bottles, Koplin said.

"It was very obviously tampered with because it had some of the Gravy Master material on the outside. The guy wasn't very neat," said Koplin.

Robert Wunderle, vice president of public affairs for Pathmark, said it was unlikely that the product was contaminated while it was in the stores.

"What's far more likely is that someone purchased the product, took them home and then brought them back and slipped them onto the shelves," he said. "We're in the unfortunate role of being the third party victim in this case. Clearly the individual who did it was looking for visibility to his act."

Laboratory mice injected with the sauce went into convulsions and died, officials said.

The sauce, which is manufactured at a plant in Long Island City, N.Y., also is distributed in New England, Ohio, New York, Illinois, Maryland, Virginia, Florida, Delaware, Pennsylvania, California, Arizona, Iowa and Wisconsin, company officials said.

Offer Recourse In 'Lemon Law'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina receives 300 to 400 complaints each year from owners who say they have purchased defective new cars, but a new state law gives those owners some tough recourse.

"The remedies existed in the law," said assistant attorney general James C. Gulick, who is in charge of enforcing the law. But he said the remedies didn't apply to automakers because they don't sell directly to buyers.

The measure approved last week, known as the "lemon law," removes that barrier, allowing car buyers to "revoke acceptance" and ask the manufacturer to take back a defective vehicle still under warranty.

Gulick said any car bought after the legislation became law on Thursday would be covered.

Under the new law, buyers may deal directly with companies such as General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Corp. and Nissan when stuck with a car or truck from the dealer's showroom that repeatedly breaks down.

The law, which also covers motorcycles, adds teeth to the Uniform Commercial Code, the state's law covering business transactions.

The buyer can negotiate for a full refund or a settlement satisfactory to the two parties. If an impasse develops, the consumer can seek help from the attorney general's office or take the matter to court.

Also, the buyer who takes a case to court can sue for legal fees.

"We have no objection to it," said B. Wake Isaacs, director of the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association. "It gives the consumer a more direct course to go to fix something that is materially wrong with the vehicle."

He said manufacturers also appeared unconcerned about the legislation.

The buyer must take several steps before revoking acceptance. The dealer must be given the chance to repair it within a reasonable period of time.

Gulick said the reasonable period probably would be defined as a total of two weeks in a given warranty period.

It is still unclear whether the new law will help buyers with defective cars purchased before the law took effect but still under warranty.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 93 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 45.84 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to good demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,806,000, compared to 1,798,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today amid fears of higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.81 to 1,238.88 in the first half hour. Losers held a slight edge on gainers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Friday the Federal Reserve reported a $3.2 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended June 15. The decline was larger than expected.

But analysts noted that longer-term figures showed the money supply still growing at double-digit rates, far exceeding the Fed's targets.

Speculation was widespread on Wall Street that the central bank planned some credit-tightening soon to try to rein in monetary growth and avert a revival of inflation.

Today's early prices included Sony, down ¼ at 14½; Eastman Kodak, up ¾ at 71½; American Telephone & Telegraph, up ¼ at 63, and General Motors, unchanged at 74½.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 10 to 1,241.69, finishing the week with a net loss of 50.

Advances and declines ran about even on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 80.81 million shares, against 89.59 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .02 to 98.82. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.67 at a record high of 492.76.

Child Killed

PARMELE— An 8-year-old girl was struck by a station wagon and killed four tenths of a mile north of here Sunday at 7:40 p.m.

Investigating officer G.T. Raby identified the child as Andrea Louise Morgan, daughter of David and Louvenia Andrews of Rt. 2, Robersonville. He said the child had been walking along the shoulder of U.S. 13 and darted into the path of the vehicle operated by Willie Fred Williams of Capitol Heights, Md.

Raby called the accident unavoidable and said Williams was not charged.

Tyson On Board

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson was re-elected to a three-year term on the board of directors of the National Sheriffs' Association last week in Knoxville, Tenn.

Tyson, who has served on the NSA board for eight years, was named to the new term during the organization's annual convention.

The sheriff is a past president of the North Carolina Sheriffs' Association and currently serves on the executive board of the state organization.

the commanding officer of the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit, Col. James Mead, will be promoted to brigadier general, while the unit will receive a Navy Unit Commendation Award, said Marine officials.

The Marines, en route home, had stopped in Key West on Tuesday and Wednesday. But some family members said Sunday they wished their men had come straight home.

The Marines arrived in shifts at the welcoming site, which featured a tent with cakes and soft drinks and people dressed as Yogi Bear, Big Bird and Tony the Tiger.

Wendy McKenrick of Gettysburg, Pa., and Terry Gordon sat atop a van — decorated with six heart-shaped balloons and a banner — waiting for their husbands, Cpl. John McKenrick and Pfc. Chris Gordon.

McKenrick arrived and embraced his wife, but Ms. Gordon had to wait because her husband was driving a jeep to Camp Lejeune.

Marine Medic Nathan Horton saw his 22-day old son Jeremy for the first time while greeting his wife, Bonnie. And Capt. Jim Diehl was introduced to his 2-month-old son Samuel by his wife Debbie and his 2½-year-old daughter Bethany.

Lance Cpl. Dale Shank of Sacramento, Calif., said his five-month experience in Lebanon was "great."

"When I first got there, I was amazed to see what it was really like," he said. "The buildings were blown down and there was lots of destruction. It felt important that we were there."

Shank said some violence was directed against Marines near the end of their stay. "Teen-age kids began punching us and hitting us with sticks," he said. "They would try to tear our patches off. . . . Mostly the people were alright."

Pfc. Rendon Hector said he enjoyed the experience because he "got to see different lifestyles."

"People down there were so happy to see us in so many ways," he said.

AFL-CIO Plans Documentaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO is producing an eight-week series of television documentaries designed to win public support for its positions on such issues as job-creation and labor laws.

The federation's Labor Institute of Public Affairs paid $660,000 to produce the first program in the series, a 30-minute documentary about plant closings entitled "America Works."

Larry Kirkman, the institute's director, said at a news conference last week, that the program is intended "to reach out to the rank-and-file unionist across the country, but eventually we want to appeal to the public at large."

Institute Wins 'Golden Fleece'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Institute of Education has won Sen. William Proxmire's monthly "Golden Fleece Award" for administering a $975,000 grant that auditors determined was used to finance several private businesses.

Institute officials "turned a blind eye while federal funds were used to support private, profit-making businesses," the Wisconsin Democrat said Sunday.

The National Institute for Community Development Inc. had been given the grant in 1980 to arrange conferences sponsored by NIE, a division of the Education Department, Proxmire said.

But federal auditors found that 98 percent of the money was used to finance unrelated businesses using NIE's offices, Proxmire said. The businesses were involved in activities that included an attempt to buy a New York City disco, according to the auditors' 1982 report.

There is no listing for NIE in Washington area telephone directories. Lou Mathis, an Education Department spokesman said he was unfamiliar with the report and couldn't comment on its findings.

Joyner. . .

Gaskins, all believing a task worth doing at all is worth doing right," she commented.

Mrs. Joyner began working in the clerk's office here in July, 1953. She said she has seen a lot of changes in the 30 years she has been employed by the court.

"When I started to work here, we (the clerks) were in the little office where the tax collector is now and in the basement of the building. There were four employees and a clerk. Now there are 22 employees and a clerk."

Mrs. Joyner said that the increase in personnel was because of the added paperwork.

Another change in the court system was the structure of the courts. Mrs. Joyner related that she began her work as a clerk in the county court, which included Mayor's Court and Greenville Recorder's Court, as well as county court. "In December, 1968, we (the court system) went under the state and now there is one system with district and superior court," the clerk said.

Mrs. Joyner, a member of Boyd Presbyterian Church, is married to J. Kermit Joyner. They have one son, J.D. Joyner, and two granddaughters. She is a member of The North Carolina State Employees Association and the North Carolina Assistant and Deputy Clerk's Association.

Mrs. Joyner attended Stokes High School and Carolina Business School in Rocky Mount. She worked for the government in Washington, D.C. prior to becoming a Pitt County clerk.

"I worked with the adjutant general's office in the Overseas Strength Division," Mrs. Joyner said. "We had computers; when the government moved a (military) unit overseas, we compiled the strength of the unit."

When she retires later this month, Mrs. Joyner said: "I plan to travel some and be involved with church work. I like the outdoors and I'm going to enjoy my garden this summer."

She said she plans to pursue her hobby of cross-stitching when it is too cold to be outside.

But Mrs. Joyner admitted that the best part about being retired will be not having to set the clock in the morning. "I'm going to sleep late," she said. "It's going to be nice not to have to be anywhere at a certain time."

Mrs. Joyner is quick to add that she has liked her work. "I've enjoyed every day of it," she said. "There's been some ups and downs, but I've enjoyed it."

Mrs. Joyner revealed mixed feelings about leaving. "The closer the time comes to leave, the sadder I get," she said.

Clerk of Superior Court Sandra Gaskins said, "I have a beach towel ready for the tears" that will be shed when Mrs. Joyner leaves.

"I have trained the ones under me real good," Mrs. Joyner said. "I think the court will be in competent hands" with the other clerks.

Garner Man Dies In Wreck

OAK CITY — A Rt. 1, Garner man was killed Saturday shortly after 7 a.m. when his car was struck head-on on Highway N.C. 11 four miles north of Oak City.

Investigating officer R.H. Wright identified the accident victim as Maurice Maxwell Peacock, 68. He identified the driver of the car which struck Peacock's as Otis Arnold Jr., 30, of Rt. 2, Scotland Neck. He said Arnold's car apparently crossed the center line and struck Peacock's head-on. Arnold has been charged with death by vehicle, he indicated.

Two Cosmonauts Launched In Orbit

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today blasted a Soyuz spacecraft into orbit with two cosmonauts on board, the official news agency Tass reported.

Tass said the Soyuz 9 spacecraft was launched from the Baikonur base in the central Asian Republic of Kazakhstan at 1:12 p.m. Moscow time (5:12 a.m. EDT).

The spacecraft was manned by mission commander Vladimir Lyakhov and flight engineer Alexander Alexandrov.

Tass said the Soyuz 9 would dock with the orbiting Salyut 7 space station and the Cosmos 1433 satellite that linked up with the Salyut in April. An attempt by the Soyuz 8 craft to link up with the Salyut 7 complex in late April was aborted after the spaceship took an incorrect flight path.

All systems aboard the craft launched today were working normally, Tass said.

Lyakhov, 41, is a veteran cosmonaut. In 1979, he and Valery Ryumin set a world record for the longest space

President Planning On A Tour Of Asia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — President Reagan will visit Japan, South Korea and Indonesia in early November, a U.S. official traveling with Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today.

Other nations may be added to the tour, but Reagan has apparently ruled out a visit to China — at least until Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang goes to Washington, the official said.

Shultz, who will accompany Reagan, discussed the trip with the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations here. Indonesia is scheduled to host the annual ministerial meeting next year.

Urged Complain About Judge

DENVER (AP) — Speakers urged about 300 people at a rally to file complaints with the state against a judge who sentenced a man who murdered his wife to nights in jail for two years.

State District Judge Alvin Lichtenstein decided last week that Clarence Burns' wife was deceptive in her behavior and may have provoked her husband into killing her. Under the sentence, Burns, 47, who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, will be allowed to continue his work as a meatcutter.

Pirates Enjoy 'Good' Month, Top Cards

By The Associated Press

Manager Chuck Tanner of the streaking Pittsburgh Pirates put the situation in perspective.

"It's a baseball season, instead of a baseball month," Tanner said after his club had beaten St. Louis 5-0 Sunday for its eighth straight victory and sent the Cardinals to their sixth consecutive loss.

For Rusty Staub of the New York Mets and Jody Davis of the Chicago Cubs, though, it's been a pretty good half-month of baseball.

Staub tied Dave Philley's single-season record with his eighth consecutive pinch hit, extending a streak that began June 11. Davis drove in six runs for the Chicago Cubs, four of them with his second career grand slam homer, exactly two weeks after he hit his first one.

Staub's pinch hit single was wasted in Philadelphia's 8-4 victory in the first game of a doubleheader. His streak remained intact as he sat out the nightcap, won by the Mets 5-1 on a three-hitter by Mike Torrez.

Davis' blazing bat led the Cubs to a 9-5 victory over Montreal.

In other National League games, it was Atlanta 5, Cincinnati 1; Houston 9, Los Angeles 7; and San Francisco sweeping a doubleheader against San Diego, winning the opener 2-0 on Atlee Hammaker's four-hitter and taking the second game 4-3.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 0

Bill Madlock singled twice and scored a pair of runs to back Rick Rhoden's six-hit pitching as the Pirates continued the season's longest winning streak and their best string since August, 1980. Two of Pittsburgh's runs scored on passed balls by Cardinal catcher Darrell Porter.

"We were struggling," said Tanner.

"We hadn't won any more than two in a row after the first five days of the season."

The streak has moved the Pirates to fourth place, just 5½ games behind first place Montreal and two back of the second place Cardinals.

Phillies 8-1, Mets 4-5

Joe Lefebvre ripped a three-run pinch homer and Bo Diaz drove in three runs with a homer and double as Philadelphia captured the opener. The Mets gained the split as rookie Darryl Strawberry drove in three runs with a triple and homer and George Foster contributed a two-run pinch homer to back the three-hit pitching of Mike Torrez.

Staub's ninth inning pinch single kept his streak alive. He has had two doubles, a homer and five singles in his last eight pinch-hitting appearances.

"I want to keep it going for as long as I can," said Staub, now 13-for-30 as a pinch hitter this season. "I'm just in one of those streaks right now. It's uncanny when you get something like this started. Hitting seems so simple."

Cubs 9, Expos 5

Davis, the Cubs' catcher, upped his RBI total to 40 for the season, slugging his second career slam against Randy Lerch in the second inning. His first came on June 12, exactly two weeks earlier. Davis drove in two more runs in the fifth and credited new teammate Dick Ruthven with his recent surge.

"He noticed when I was taking batting practice at Wrigley Field a while ago that I really seemed tight swinging the bat. He told me to see how things went swinging easy."

Davis tried it and it worked. "I'm relaxed and seeing the ball better," he said. "I've been hitting the ball harder than I have in a month."

Despite the loss, Montreal remained 3½ games in front of St. Louis in the National League East race.

Braves 5, Reds 1

Phil Niekro tossed a three-hitter, befuddling Cincinnati's rookie-laden lineup with his knuckleball as Atlanta beat the Reds for the fourth straight time.

"I think they had quite a few guys who hadn't seen the knuckler before," said the 44-year-old right-hander, who won his 260th career game.

"He sure had her dancing," Reds' Manager Russ Nixon said admiringly.

Brett Butler led the Atlanta attack with four hits including two triples, and Rafael Ramirez contributed three hits.

Astros 9, Dodgers 7

Dickie Thon smashed a three-run homer, singled, stole two bases and scored three runs as Houston beat Los Angeles for the first time this season after seven straight losses.

Ray Knight had three singles and knocked in two runs for the Astros as the Dodgers had their NL West lead trimmed to 2½ games over Atlanta.

"It's important we beat these guys," said Thon. "We've got to beat them all the time, or at least three out of every four times we play them to catch up."

Giants 2-4, Padres 0-3

Atlee Hammaker pitched a four-hitter for his third shutout of the season and lowered his National League-leading earned run average to 1.52, pitching San Francisco past San Diego in the first game. Hammaker struck out 12 and won his 11th straight game over two seasons at Candlestick Park.

In the nightcap, San Francisco completed the sweep when Max Venable's two-out, two-run bloop double in the fifth inning snapped a 2-2 tie.

Mize Nails First Victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Larry Mize ignored the PGA Tour axiom that a young golfer first must suffer the heartbreak of letting one get away before he actually nails victory No. 1.

Given his first opportunity for a Tour triumph — and tied with former Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller and Chip Beck, a fifth-year tourist — Mize dropped a 20-foot birdie putt on the final hole Sunday and won the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic by one stroke.

Staub Matches Pinch-Hit Mark

NEW YORK (AP) — Rusty Staub, the New York Mets' $350,000-a-year utility player, has an explanation for his recent pinch-hitting success.

"It comes from many years of labor and discipline at the plate," said the 39-year-old Staub, whose eighth consecutive pinch hit Sunday afternoon tied the major league record set in 1958 by Dave Philley of the Phillies.

Staub singled in the bottom of the ninth inning off reliever Ron Reed in the first game of a doubleheader with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"When you get into something like this, hitting seems so simple," said Staub, who is 13-for-30 as a pinch-hitter this season, with one homer and 11 runs batted in. "You feel like you're never going to make out."

Staub, with an 0-1 count, opened the inning with a soft liner into center field off the right-handed Reed, who had retired 12 straight batters before facing the lefty-swinging Staub. He was batting for Junior Ortiz.

"It was a fastball down and in," said Reed. "He's such a good hitter. He just went down and got it."

After the base hit, Reed raced off the mound toward first base, tipping his hat to Staub and handing him the baseball.

Okamoto Wins Rochester

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — For Kathy Whitworth, one more golf tournament title will end her quest, but for Ayako Okamoto, who is bidding to become the Japanese version of Whitworth, the pressure never stops.

Okamoto recovered from a 4-over-par 76 to win the $200,000 Rochester International in a playoff Sunday.

After pocketing the $30,000 first prize, she said she enjoyed the fact that she is not well-known in the United States.

"In Japan, a celebrity's private life can get disturbed," she said through an interpreter.

Okamoto, Whitworth and Donna White tied for first at 6-under-par 282 after 72 holes.

All three made par on Nos. 1 and 2, but Okamoto cut short the tournament on No. 18, the third playoff hole, with a 10-foot birdie putt.

Whitworth, 43, was shooting for her 85th Ladies Professional Golf Association title, which would put her one ahead of Sam Snead as the winningest American golfer of all time. She is tied with the Professional Golfers' Association veteran with 84 championships.

White, whose 8-under 208 after Friday trailed Okamoto by two shots, also staggered home with an over-par finishing round of 74. The day before, she tied a course and tournament record with a 6-under 66.

Okamoto generated steady rounds of 68, 71 and 67 before her controlled collapse, which included three bogeys on the front nine, a birdie just before a double bogey-6 on No. 13 and another bogey on 15 before a saving birdie on 17.

Vicki Ferguson shot a 69 to claim fourth place at 283 on the par-72, 6,162-yard Locust Hill Country Club layout. JoAnne Carner and Jane Blalock were two shots out of the playoff at 284.

Betsy King fashioned a 285 with another finishing round

It was erroneously reported in the Sunday edition of The Daily Reflector that the event would be Wednesday.

Overton Tops Slalom Mark

TAMPA, FLA. — Kristi Overton broke her own junior girls' national slalom record with a score of 57½ buoys this weekend.

She was one of nine female and eight male skiers from across the country who qualified to compete for a coveted position on the six-member team to represent the United States in Sweden in late August at the semi-annual World Championships.

Overton, 13, was the youngest of the qualifiers and had the highest score of the females in three rounds of the trick event.

Those chosen for the team were: Cindy Todd, Deena Burch, Carl Roberge, Sammy Duval, Camille Duval and Cory Pickos, all of Florida.

of 69, one shot ahead of a six-player cluster at 286.

Okamoto, who at 32 has been playing golf for only 10 years, is a major celebrity in Japan, said free-lance journalist Duke Ishikawa.

Winning pitcher Doug Coley led Pitt County at the plate with four hits in six trips, while Troy Hudson was 3-4, Kirkland 3-5, Greg Briley and Daniel Keel each had a pair of hits for Pitt County.

Coley threw the first five innings, giving up all three runs while striking out four. Bobby Buie and Mike Kinley finished the game retiring 12 out of 13 batters. Kinley, returning to old form, struck out five of the six batters he faced in closing out the final two frames.

After Carter's homer in the first, Coley singled and Briley walked before Kirkland doubled in the lead runner. Briley scored on a sacrifice fly by Stalls, and Keel singled in Kirkland for a 5-0 advantage.

Warren and Carter drew walks to open the second, and Briley singled in Warren. A single by Kirkland drove in Carter, while Briley scored on a hit by Hudson.

Carter launched the 3-2 offering by Robbie Lee over the fence for a nine run Pitt County edge in the third.

Pitt County added three more runs in the fourth on a double by Stalls and singles by Keel and Whitehurst.

Pitt County added a run in the fifth and another in the seventh before Kinley singled and scored on Kirkland's second double of the night in the eighth.

Pitt County improved its record to 12-3, while Edenton slid to 3-12. Pitt County travels to Wilson Tuesday.

Ginn's Homer Lifts Snow Hill, 18-12

EDENTON — Jeff Ginn cracked a three-run homer to cap an 11-run sixth inning rally as Snow Hill pounded Edenton 18-12 Sunday in American Legion baseball.

Ginn had four hits in five trips to the plate and recorded the win on the mound, as he pitched five innings and later relieved Mike Sullivan for the victory.

Greg Frederick and Richie Chase each posted three hits, while Sullivan, Todd Grant, Bobby Carraway, Tommy Goff and Nat Norris had two. G. Thomas went 3-4 and Holley 2-4 for Edenton.

Grant walked to open the sixth and Norris followed with a single. A single by Anthony Russo plated both runners, and Ginn and Goff followed with walks to load the bases.

Sullivan singled in Russo and Ginn, and Frederick drew a base on balls. An error on a ball hit by Chase allowed Goff to score, and Bobby Kelly singled in Sullivan. Carraway singled to fill the bases, and Norris was hit by a pitch to score another run before Ginn's home run blast. Snow Hill, now 9-5 on the season, travels to Rocky Mount tonight. Edenton slips to 3-12 with the loss.

Lightning Strikes Again For Blue Jays

By The Associated Press
Heaven help the pitcher that faces the Toronto Blue Jays on June 26, 1988.
On June 26, 1978, the Blue Jays destroyed Baltimore 24-10 in a game in which the Orioles resorted to using backup catcher Elrod Hendricks as pitcher.

On Sunday — June 26, 1983 — lightning struck again.
Toronto pounded out 21 hits against five Seattle pitchers, including reserve infielder Manny Castillo, in slaughtering the Mariners 19-7.

"I don't want for anyone to get the impression I thought this was fun," said Seattle's new manager, Del Crandall, who replaced the fired Rene Lachemann on Saturday.

In other AL games, Baltimore shut down Detroit 3-1; Boston belted New York 12-5; Chicago drilled Minnesota 9-7; Milwaukee beat Cleveland 4-3; Texas beat Oakland 4-1 in a rain-shortened game, and California at Kansas City was rained out.

Dave Collins, who had driven in just four runs all season, knocked in a career-high five to pace the Toronto onslaught. Mickey Klutts had a pair of solo homers and Rance Mulliniks added a solo shot — all off Castillo — while Ernie Whitt also homered for the Blue Jays.

The 21 hits and 19 runs were the most ever by a Seattle opponent and the loss was the worst in the Mariners' seven-year history. The victory enabled the Blue Jays to remain tied with Baltimore for first place in the AL East, while Seattle has lost nine of 10.

"What did you think we were going to do, win 30 in a row?" Crandall said. "I've seen it happen both ways. I don't want it to get blown out of proportion."

Crandall's Mariners had beaten Toronto 5-2 in his first game Saturday night. But the Blue Jays wasted no time in jumping all over Seattle starter Bob Stoddard, 4-10.

Collins ripped a two-run double and Cliff Johnson added a two-run single as Toronto scored six times in the third inning to take a 9-0 lead.

When Roy Thomas, Seattle's only available long reliever, got raked for four runs in one-third of an inning and Mike Stanton, normally a short reliever, gave up three more runs in 2 1-3 innings, Crandall brought in Castillo, who had never pitched in the majors.

He got shelled for seven runs on eight hits in 2-3 innings, including a wild pitch and a hit batsman. He walked three and struck out Lloyd Moseby and Jesse Barfield, both swinging.

"They ran out of pitchers," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "It happens to everyone sometime. I've been on the other end a few times."

Orioles 3, Tigers 1

Storm Davis held Detroit hitless for eight innings before giving up pinch hitter Rick Leach's leadoff homer in the ninth.

Davis had allowed only one runner — Enos Cabell, who walked in the fourth — before Leach's first homer of the season.

Following the homer, Davis, 5-3, walked John Grubb and fell behind in the count to Lou Whitaker. Tippy Martinez relieved at that point and got his 10th save.

Baltimore leadoff hitter Al Bumbry homered in the first and Cal Ripken hit a two-run blast, his 12th, in the fifth.

Red Sox 12, Yankees 5

Boston spotted New York a 3-0 lead after two innings and then roared back. Dwight Evans cracked a three-run homer to highlight a four-run fourth before the Red Sox added four more runs in fifth. Reid Nichols then doubled in a pair of runs during a four-run eighth.

Evans' 12th homer sparked the fourth-inning rally, fueled by errors by third baseman Roy Smalley and center fielder Jerry Mumphrey. After Evans homered, Carl Yastrzemski doubled and scored on Jerry Remy's single to put Boston ahead 4-3.

The double was Yastrzemski's 1,132nd extra-base hit, tying him with Tris Speaker for eighth place on the all-time list.

White Sox 9, Twins 7

Chicago's bats were hotter than the weather as Greg Luzinski hit a towering homer and Scott Fletcher drove in three runs with a single, triple and his first major-league home run.

It was 100 degrees in Chicago as Luzinski's two-run homer keyed a four-run third inning that put the White Sox ahead 5-4. Luzinski's blast landed on the upper deck roof in left field, making him only the 21st player to hit a ball on or over the roof at Comiskey Park.

Tom Brunansky's three-run homer, his 11th, pulled Minnesota within 9-7 in the eighth. Minnesota had scored three times in the first, two on Randy Bush's homer.

Brewers 4, Indians 3

Cleveland and Milwaukee traded home runs before Robin Yount's eighth-inning double snapped a 3-3 tie.

Cecil Cooper belted a two-run homer in the first inning and drilled No. 14 in the third to give the Brewers a 3-0 lead.

The Indians came back in the sixth when Mike Hargrove tripled and scored on a wild pitch and Andre Thornton hit his 10th homer. Cleveland tied it in the eighth when former Brewer Gorman Thomas, who had been 0-for-9 in the series in Milwaukee, slammed a solo homer, his seventh.

But the Brewers bounced back in the bottom of the eighth when Jim Ganther singled and scored on Yount's blow.

Rangers 4, A's 1

Danny Darwin pitched a three-hitter and Buddy Bell homered to lead Texas to its sixth straight victory and send Oakland to its sixth loss in a row.

The game was called with Oakland batting in the top of the eighth with one out.

Billy Sample's checked-swing single drove in two first-inning runs and Bell slugged his eighth homer. Wayne Tolleson singled to extend his hitting streak to 15 games and stole a base, giving the Rangers 64 steals this season, one more than they swiped last year.

New Heroes, Darlings Emerge At 1983 Wimbledon Tourney

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The "Old Lady of Church Road" — as staid English tennis lovers sometimes refer to Wimbledon — never changes her face, but the faces of her house guests change with the years.

Even though Billie Jean King goes on forever, Virginia Wade fans nationalistic fervor by winning one for the Queen and John McEnroe can be counted on to create of fuss or two, inevitably there arise new personalities to cheer and write about.

This year, with the spectacle halfway through, a large part of the spotlight has been stolen by a clowning ball-basher called the Duke of Nigeria; a 15-year-old slip of a girl with the game and maturity of one twice her age; an extroverted giant-killer who punctured Chris Evert Lloyd's "Grand Slam" hopes, and a couple of young guys seeking to restore Australia to its one dominance of the game.

Meet the most exciting new faces at Wimbledon: Little known, 82nd on the computer rankings, Nigerian Nduko Odizor has spent the first week of his first Wimbledon knocking over people he is not supposed to even dream about beating.

First, he dispatched Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, seeded fourth, king of the clay courts and followed that up with a victory over Peter Fleming, John McEnroe's doubles partner.

Crowds love him. They pour to the courts where he is playing and push and shove to get sight of him fighting off match points, balancing a ball on his chin when he gets offended and serving rockets too fast for the human eye to follow.

His family in Lagos has no idea he is a hero. "It would take four days to get a message through," he says.

Against Vilas, he rallied from two sets down and staved off a match point. Against Fleming, he served four aces.

The attention he's attracted is equalled only by that lavished on Carling Bassett, at 15 the youngest player in the tournament and one of the toughest.

Fans still remember how she almost beat a well Chrissie Lloyd at Amelia Island. They have seen her score triumphs over Sharon Walsh and Andrea Temesvari, a Hungarian teen-age beauty seeded 14th.

The splashy London tabloids have adopted her. They run her picture at every opportunity. Some give her more space than they give Jimmy Connors.

"Carling Darling."

'Pride' Lifts Top Players

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The pretenders to the throne are out of the way, and now pride takes over the grass courts at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

"Guys like (John) McEnroe and (Jimmy) Connors have something about them," says New Zealand's Chris Lewis. "Maybe it is pride."

"They feel they cannot lose in any tournament, big or small. That is why they always win."

Connors, the defending champion at the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club, is the top seed in the men's draw. McEnroe is seeded No. 2.

Entering the second week of play, only 16 men and 16 women are left in the singles. The tournament started with draws of 128 each.

While Connors and McEnroe are expected to meet in the men's final next Sunday, Martina Navratilova is heavily favored to capture the women's singles for the second straight year and the fourth time in her career on Saturday.

All 32 players remaining in the singles were scheduled to play today.

The men's draw sent Connors against 12th-seeded Kevin Curren of South Africa, No. 16 Tim Mayotte against "lucky loser" John McCurdy of Australia, Nigeria's Nduka Odizor against Lewis, No. 13 Brian Gottfried against Mel Purcell, Roscoe Tanner against Robert Van't Hof, Pat Cash of Australia against No. 3 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, Mike Leach against Sandy Mayer and No. 14 Bill Scanlon against McEnroe.

In the women's singles, it was Navratilova against No. 16 Claudia Kohde of West Germany, South Africa's Jennifer Mundel against No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, Virginia Wade of Britain against West Germany's Eva Pfaff, Romania's Virginia Ruzici against Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa, Lisa Bonder against No. 11 Barbara Potter, Canada's Carling Bassett against No. 3 Andrea Jaeger, No. 7 Wendy Turnbull of Australia against No. 10 Billie Jean King, and No. 15 Kathy Rinaldi against Kathy Jordan.

"I would give all the titles I have won for a Wimbledon and a U.S. Open title," said Lendl, who in 1982 dominated men's tennis, winning a single-season record $2 million. "The first thing on my mind is to win a Grand Slam title. It would be a good change for me."

Everything Fell Into Place For Panther's Rookie Quarterback

By The Associated Press

"It just seemed like everything fell into place," was the way Michigan Panthers rookie quarterback Bobby Hebert summed up his record-breaking performance.

Five of his passes fell neatly into the arms of receivers Anthony Carter, Derek Holloway and Ken Lacy as Hebert set a United States Football League record for touchdown passes in one game and increased his league lead in that department to 26.

Hebert defied the heat in Soldier Field — where the temperatures reached 99 degrees in the stands and zoomed to an estimated 134 degrees on the artificial turf — and blistered the Chicago Blitz secondary with 12 completions in 21 attempts for 247 yards.

His performance before 25,041 fans — 7,100 above the Blitz's average home attendance — led the Panthers to a 34-19 triumph Sunday over their Central Division rivals and pulled them into a tie with Chicago for the division lead.

Each team is 11-6 with one week to go in the regular season. But Michigan would win the division in case of a tie because they won both head-to-head confrontations this season.

In other USFL games Sunday, the Washington Federals defeated the Los Angeles Express 28-21 and the Philadelphia Stars beat the Birmingham Stallions 31-10.

On Saturday night, the Oakland Invaders clinched the Pacific Division championship with a 17-16 victory over the Boston Breakers and the New Jersey Generals beat the Arizona Wranglers 21-14.

Pepsi 6

Tim Bland and Larke Weatherington combined for a five-hitter, striking out eight batters to lead Wachovia to a 14-6 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the first round of the Babe Ruth League baseball tournament Sunday.

Weatherington had three hits in four trips to the plate, while Terry Warren and Kenny Barnes each went 2-3 for Wachovia.

Neal Bullock had two hits for Pepsi, and Sterling Edwards ripped a three-run homer in the fifth.

Pepsi held a 6-2 advantage going into the fifth frame, but Wachovia rallied for five in the bottom half of the frame and added seven more in the sixth to put the game on ice.

Barnes singled in a pair of runs in the fifth, but it was four walks that produced the other three runs. Bland and Weatherington each doubled in the seventh to drive in five of the seven runs tallied in the frame.

Ayden-Grifton 4

The Greenville Kiwanis pulled off a 5-4 upset of Ayden-Grifton Saturday night in the Senior Babe Ruth League, handing A-G its second straight defeat after six straight wins.

The Kiwanis jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring three times. Two of those runs came on a homer by Iaboni. A fourth run crossed in the second.

The Chargers picked up two in the third before the Kiwanis pushed over what proved to be the winning run in the fifth.

In the fifth, Smith singled and moved up on a wild pitch. He scored on Fuqua's double.

Ayden-Grifton rallied for two in the sixth on a homer by Warren, but failed to catch up.

Fuqua led the Kiwanis hitting with three, while Jester, Iaboni and Smith each had two. No one for Ayden-Grifton had more than one.

'Crossfire' Conveys Image Of Death, Destruction

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Crossfire in El Salvador" on public TV tonight doesn't demystify the savage, seemingly interminable civil war in that distressed Central American state, though it does, indeed, convey an image of death and despair that is not easy to forget.

In one scene, a dark-haired child of 7 or 8 recalls the slaughter of several friends and relatives, including his own mother. "There was a whole mountain of people on top of me," he says. "When I came out, I was all bloody."

In another segment, a gravedigger is asked to identify a body left the night before on a quiet residential street.

"Desconocido," an unknown person," the narrator translates. "We don't know anything about him. No family. Desconocido."

It's the story of people, many of them presumably innocent, caught in a bitter conflict that is hauntingly suggestive, at times, of another, earlier war.

"Something we learn from you, in Vietnam," one member of a right-wing "death squad" says, matter-of-factly, on the subject of torture. "After you obtain your information, what do you do with them?" the narrator asks. "The same thing you did," the guerrilla says, "kill them. This is war."

The hour-long documentary, seen in a roughly edited version, attempts with some success to examine the civil war from both sides. Government leaders and National Guard soldiers are interviewed, as are guerrilla fighters and civilians caught in the middle.

All of El Salvador has been touched by the war, though there are those who prefer to ignore the conflict. Naturally.

"No, there is no war here," says one man, interviewed during a Christmas party in San Salvador, the capital. "We are happy." Adds a young woman: "Right now, we have to party. We're having a good time. I don't care."

"Crossfire in El Salvador," produced by Jeff B. Harmon and Chris Wenner, is the latest installment in public TV's "Frontline" documentary series. Jessica Savitch, the NBC News correspondent, is anchor for the weekly program.

MORE ABOUT "FAME"

An ad hoc network of 82 stations, including 22 NBC affiliates, has been assembled to keep the TV series "Fame" on the air next season, the show's producers say.

When NBC canceled the program last month, MGM-UA Television, its producer, started putting together the network.

Under the setup, MGM-UA will produce 24 new episodes of the series and distribute them to the 82 stations.

Financing will come from foreign sales of the show and from national advertisers provided by Lexington Broadcast Services, specialists in advertiser-sponsored productions, and "Fame" will be given to participating stations at no cost, the producers said.

"Fame" had only 39 completed episodes available for syndication. With the new deal, there will be at least 63 if it only lasts a year under MGM-UA sponsorship.

"It's truly an original program. You don't ever want to see an original die before its time," said Lawrence Gershman, president of TV distribution for MGM-UA.

EXPLORER'S CLUB — Ben Cross, star of the Oscar-winning "Chariots of Fire," will play Christopher Columbus in a new film biography in the works for CBS' for broadcast in the 1984-85 season. Cross was in "Flame Trees of Thika" on public TV's "Masterpiece Theater," to be rerun this summer, and will appear in "The Far Pavilions," a Home Box Office adaptation of the novel by M.M. Kaye, planned for distribution next year.

Watch for CBS to announce "Race to the Pole," an "ITT Theater" special starring Richard Chamberlain and Rod Steiger as the arctic explorers Frederick Cook and Robert Peary.

A grant from Chevron U.S.A. will bring "A Walk Through the 20th Century with Bill Moyers" to public television in January. The 20-part series examines the events, personalities and mores that have shaped the current century.

Jazz Groups Shine At Annual 'Kool Festival'

By PAUL RAE BURN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Miles Davis, who for more than three decades has helped set the course of modern jazz, has demonstrated again that he hasn't lost the ability to play a gentle, swinging blues or an evocative ballad.

In a performance Sunday night at Avery Fisher Hall, part of the Kool Jazz Festival, Davis paid respects to jazz history and to his own past.

He played several slow blues tunes, occasionally using snippets of melody borrowed from Dixieland and ragtime music. Each time he did so, however, he gave the melody an odd, unexpected twist, thus ensuring that it had the Davis imprint.

On slow passages, the sound of Davis' trumpet sounded as pretty as ever.

A decade ago, Davis' unrelenting modernism had driven him to a highly abstract, slightly manic music, and ultimately into temporary retirement. Now the abstraction has been replaced by a tempered lyricism, but without losing any of the excitement and freshness that have always marked Davis' music.

He has assembled a group of young musicians capable of generating a thundering rock rhythm, which they did several times Sunday night. Although their improvisations could not match Davis', they played capably and, influenced by Davis, turned out unusual, stimulating solos.

Even when Davis wasn't playing, he remained firmly in control of the group. With a nod or a quick wave of the hand, he would change the tempo, instantly bring the music down to a whisper, then send it soaring in a new direction.

As he has been doing for some time, he played a couple of electric keyboard instruments in addition to trumpet. He used the instruments the way a conductor uses a baton, to establish rhythmic patterns and to cue the other players.

Now and then he would play a note on trumpet with one hand, jabbing at the keyboards with the other hand to accent it.

Davis was followed by Herbie Hancock and VSOP II, a group consisting of several former Davis sidemen — Hancock on piano, bassist Ron Carter and drummer Tony Williams — along with the young trumpet sensation Wynton Marsalis and his brother, Branford, on saxophone.

Hancock, Carter and Williams, who all have gone on to successful careers of their own, played with Davis during the mid-1960s, in a group that was one of Davis' finest.

In the 1970s, Hancock, Carter and Williams reformed the group (without Davis) and resumed playing the kind of music that they had created with Davis a decade earlier.

They are remarkable musicians, and while their playing Sunday was of high caliber, it lacked that extra dollop of inspiration that turns a good performance into a great one.

Wynton Marsalis, who began making a name for himself only a few years ago, played blindingly fast passages with the same precision and expressiveness he showed in a sensitive ballad written for VSOP II by Ron Carter.

McCartney Says A Memory Lives

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul McCartney says he still hasn't got over the death of former songwriting partner John Lennon, and wishes people had understood what he meant when cameras caught his reaction after the December 1980 shooting.

The 41-year-old ex-Beatle said he didn't mean to sound cynical or unfeeling when, after hearing the news of Lennon's death, he chewed gum and muttered to a reporter, "It's a drag, isn't it?"

"There are some people that're just gifted in being able to say all the right things at all the right times," McCartney said in an interview published Sunday in Parade magazine. "I'm no good on that kind of stuff. People expect, because you're a star, that you not have normal reactions, that you know 'the game.' But if I'd had that down that day, I wouldn't like me."

Asked if he had gotten over the loss of his friend and one-time partner, McCartney said, "No. I can't believe it, still. It's a weird one. Still feel as though he's here, you know. But he sort of is, in a way."

Boycott Talents Are Updated

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The United Farm Workers, updating its boycott technique, has been using direct mail to urge shoppers to stay away from a supermarket chain it says handles non-union lettuce.

The first mailing of the glossy brochures went last week to residents living near 15 Lucky grocery stores from San Diego to San Francisco. The chain, with 1,600 grocery and department stores in 29 states, has been the target of a UFW boycott since 1979.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦KJ95 ♥K1073 ♦AQJ98
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is too strong for a jump raise to three spades. In support of spades, it evaluates to 19 points—you must count 5 for the void because of your spade fit. That is enough to start with a jump shift of three diamonds—slam should be a virtual certainty.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦1054 ♥KJ3 ♦7 ♦KQJ853
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Don't rebid clubs to show that you have a six-card suit—that action would show a sub-minimum two-over-one response and no particular liking for partner's suit. For the moment, just take a simple preference to two spades. That is ample, since you have already bid at the two-level. Any move should come from partner.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦K87 ♥KJ4 ♦Q98 ♦10765
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a maximum for your first bid. Your hand is improved by the fact that you have a fit for both of partner's suits. Raise to three clubs. Don't worry about the fact that your hand is flat—partner's is not. You owe him mild move.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 28, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a day to indicate that you make some drastic or dramatic changes, but carry through with what you have already agreed to do. Show respect to others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget a temptation to go off on some tangent with peculiar people or to break up existing friendships that are worthwhile.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't allow yourself the luxury of unloading burdens on one in authority or you can soon regret it. Don't socialize today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You get many new ideas, but do not take any positive steps until you have studied them further. You need to rest tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't gamble with your business affairs or you're bound to fail. Use patience with a loved one tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be with individuals who are more your own kind. Forget worldly matters that are disturbing. There's nothing you can do about them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put off new systems you have in mind where your work is concerned. A fellow worker can be annoying, but take it in stride.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation may not be good between you and a loved one, so be patient. All will soon be better than ever.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A family tie could need your help, so make sure you give it. Use the gentle approach for best results in this.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may be worried about something and drive carelessly so be wary. Be diplomatic in conversations and correspondence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to cut down on expenses instead of being such a spendthrift. If you have one car too many, sell one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are in a violent mood, but get hold of yourself. Do nothing later that could cause friends to worry about you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) One you rely upon for sympathy has his own worries now, so learn to be less dependent. Break a despondent mood.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will listen to the dreary, sad stories of others and become pessimistic if you don't plan for a good education. Your progeny can be quite a boon to society in general and therefore should have good spiritual training.

Thirteen Died On N.C. Roads

By The Associated Press

Thirteen people, including two young pedestrians, died in North Carolina traffic accidents over the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

The fatalities raised the state's yearly traffic death toll to 537, compared to 557 at this same time last year.

Andrea Louise Morgan, 8, of Robersonville, was killed at 7:40 p.m. Sunday when she ran into the path of a car on U.S. 13 in Martin County north of Parmele, troopers said.

Another pedestrian, Justin Lee Chiles, 7, of Charlotte, died Saturday after he was hit by a car on U.S. 321, 3 miles south of Newton in Catawba County.

Larry Lofton, 24, of Kinston, was killed in Lenoir County near his hometown at 7:40 p.m. Sunday when a car in which he was riding ran off N.C. 1804 at a high speed and struck a ditch.

A Clemmons couple died Sunday afternoon in Halifax County, 6 miles west of Roanoke Rapids, the patrol said. John Henry Thomas, 69, and Dorothy Canter Thomas, 57, were thrown from their vehicle when it ran off a road and struck a culvert.

Two people were killed 6 miles north of Mt. Airy Friday when a car lost control on N.C. 103 in Surry County and struck another vehicle head-on. David M. Cummings, 20, of Wilmington, Del., and Jonathan Graham Pruett, 18, of Mt. Airy died in the collision, state troopers said.

In another Surry County accident, Kenneth J. Williams, 18, of Pilot Mountain died Saturday evening when his speeding car ran off a rural road, struck an embankment, became airborne and landed on its top in the roadway, officials said.

Minnie Carter Ferguson, 71, of Winston-Salem died Saturday when her car ran off a Winston-Salem street and struck a tree.

On Interstate 77 in Mecklenburg County, Clifford Wayne Swearingen, 38, of Morrisville was killed when his car driving north in the southbound lanes struck another car head-on, troopers said.

A 68-year-old Garner man was killed Saturday morning when the car he was driving was struck head-on by another vehicle on N.C. Highway 11 in Martin County. Authorities identified the victim as Maurice Maxwell Peacock. The accident occurred 4 miles north of Oak City.

The patrol said Rayfield Murray, 30, of Beaufort was killed shortly after midnight Friday when he was struck by a hit-and-run driver while walking along N.C. 101 east of Havelock.

Frederic Monroe Taylor, 21, of Forest City was killed late Friday night when his motorcycle collided with a car head-on 1 mile west of Lake Lure in Rutherford County.

Chemical Waste Containers Moved

HAMPTON (AP) — Authorities have completed the removal of some 4,500 chemical containers from a dumpsite, and families evacuated during the week-long process have returned to their homes.

The last of 11 truckloads of the containers left Saturday for a temporary storage site at Reidsville, N.C.

Some of the gas cylinders, metal drums and fire extinguishers contained toxic materials. A total of 25 gases and compounds were found, but none leaked from the containers, said Phillip G. Retallick, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency official who supervised the cleanup.

"This is a really unique incident," Retallick said. "I've never dealt with this many cylinders.

"For one thing, you had 4,500 cylinders piled in less than an acre lot in a residential and commercial area. There's no way to tell what was in them without going into the area and dealing with each one."

The 62 people who were evacuated June 17 were put up in hotels by the Red Cross.

Fifteen evacuated merchants also returned to their shops Saturday.

Traffic around the dumpsite, located near a busy intersection, returned to normal as police removed barricades.

North Carolina officials have said the containers may be stored at the Reidsville site for up to 14 days. No final disposal site has been selected.

KING-SIZE FUEL TANKS — Three nearly completed Space Shuttle external tanks are lined up side by side at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Michoud Assembly Facility in New Orleans. These are the tanks that help boost the shuttle off the launching pad and are cast off when empty. Full, each holds 1.6 million pounds of supercold liquid oxygen and hydrogen. (LAP Laserphoto)

Not An Ordinary Car Salesman

DALLAS (AP) — At parties Tommy Armstrong introduces himself as simply a "car salesman." But he's not just any salesman — he's at the top of the top of the line.

Armstrong sells Cadillacs — more of them than just about anyone in Texas.

"I sell the American dream. The Cadillac is still most people's idea of success," said Armstrong, who sold 326 of the luxury automobiles, worth over $7 million, last year. He said recently that he makes $200,000 a year and lives in Dallas' affluent Highland Park.

"Car salesmen are supposed to be the lowest of the low," Armstrong said. But unlike many salesmen, he doesn't dream of owning a dealership. "I wouldn't want the cut in pay," he said.

Best To Keep

A 'Low Profile'

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — The Rev. Everett Sileven, who spent four months in jail for defying a court order to close his unaccredited Faith Christian school, says it will reopen in the fall.

In the meantime, says Sileven, he plans to maintain a low profile. "Whenever I get involved I seem to become the issue," he said.

He said he is optimistic that a compromise can be reached with state education officials to avoid further court action. Sileven and other church administrators maintain their schools are an extension of their ministries and should not be regulated by the state.

Okinawa.

Ernest E. Moore, son of Linberg Spruill of Greenville and Brenda Moore of Parmele, recently enlisted in the Army under its delayed entry program, which allows him to take up to 12 months before reporting for active duty. Moore will begin basic training Nov. 3 at Fort Bliss, Tex., and continue at Fort Lee, Va., where he will learn the skills of a supply specialist in the supply management field.

Americans Abroad

One of every ten Americans will travel abroad this summer. Travel agents estimate that they will spend nearly $16 billion on their adventures. And just about every one of them will carry a passport — a small numbered booklet that includes a photograph, signature, and the vital statistics of the traveler to whom it is issued. The booklet serves as proof of citizenship and guarantees the holder safe passage. U.S. law does not require passports for travel anywhere in the Western Hemisphere except to Cuba, but some Central and South American nations consider a passport the only legitimate form of identification. With a few restrictions, any U.S. citizen can get a passport that remains valid for five years.

DO YOU KNOW—What foreign nation do more Americans visit than any other?

White Collar Crime Target

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina FBI chief Robert Pence sparked a controversy three years ago when he said the state was "a quite fertile field" for white-collar crime.

But with operations that have resulted in the indictments of various top officials in North Carolina, white-collar crime is the top priority of his office, Pence said.

Recent FBI probes led to the indictments of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and state Sen. R.C. Soles Jr., D-Columbus, and the convictions of a state district judge, a county commissioner and a police chief.

"White-collar crime is subtle, it's deep, it doesn't show," Pence said in an interview at his Charlotte headquarters. "It's somebody who's traveling around the world and padding vouchers, expense accounts, defrauding the American government."

"It's bid-rigging, it's kickbacks, it's fee-splitting, it's any number of things that end up always with money ... and usually the major share of it is going to whatever public official is involved in that scheme," added the 21-year FBI veteran, whose career has included counterespionage and anti-riot work.

Colcor, the FBI's undercover investigation of corruption in southeastern North Carolina, led to charges of bribery against Green and charges including vote-buying and extortion conspiracy against Soles. Colcor agents recovered more than $1 million in property, penetrated four auto theft rings and identified four drug operations and three illegal gambling schemes.

One-fourth of the division's resources are allocated to white-collar crime. Only efforts in fighting organized crime, which often involves drugs, can compare, Pence said. Less emphasis is placed on violent crime and on foreign spying at the state's ports, military bases and research institutions.

No Change On Overweights

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (AP) — School officials say they have no plans to change a rule barring overweight girls from the Channelview High School drill team, despite protests from a mother.

"These kids get in the program knowing what is required of them," said school board member Bennie Onken. Barbara Blackstock, whose 15-year-old daughter, Laura, has been suspended twice from the team, has asked the American Civil Liberties Union to challenge the rule.

Pete Brady, chairman of the Channelview Independent School District school board, said Sunday he doesn't think any change is likely. Onken said he doesn't think the rule "violates civil rights in any way."

Smoke Detector Bill On Desk

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill sent to Gov. Mark White's desk by the Texas Legislature in the wake of a fatal fire two weeks ago would require hotel operators to maintain smoke detectors.

The measure was approved Saturday after lawmakers heard testimony about the June 14 fire at a Ramada Inn in Fort Worth that left five people dead. City Fire Marshal Donald Peacock told a Senate committee the blaze could "very easily" have killed 50 people.

The bill requires that hotel operators maintain smoke detectors "in good working order in every room of the hotel that is regularly used for sleeping."
