Fireworks Cap Festive National Holiday

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

Americans flocked to beaches and campgrounds, packed stadiums for baseball and big-name music, rose above it all in hot-air balloons, or prepared for parades today and fireworks tonight to cap a festive Fourth of July weekend marking the nation's 207th birthday.

A 50-gun salute at Battery Park, across the harbor from the Statue of Liberty, was the scheduled kickoff to Independence Day festivities in New York City, followed by street fairs in lower Manhattan, a hot dog eating contest at Coney Island and a huge fireworks show tonight over the East River. Washington was to celebrate the Fourth with a Capitol flag-raising ceremony and the biggest parade in the city's history, featuring 140 marching units representing nearly all the states and 20 nations.

The Baltimore Symphony Orchestra was staging its annual "Fireworks and Masterworks" concert tonight, featuring Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," with the rockets' red glare lighting the sky near where "The Star Spangled Banner" was written.

President Reagan and his wife Nancy spent the holiday weekend at the "California White House," Rancho del Cielo, near Santa Barbara.

"Look in our own neighborhoods and families, and you will see America is still a land of heroes with all the courage and love of freedom there ever was before," Reagan said in a July 4th message to the nation. "And that's our best hope for the future."

Many Americans took to the highways for the three-day holiday weekend. By early today, 268 traffic deaths were reported nationwide, and the National Safety Council predicted between 420 and 520 people could die by midnight tonight.

Many of the sailors aboard five Navy ships off the coast of Lebanon celebrated the holiday a day early with a decktop barbecue. As rock music played, sailors in swim trunks sat alongside helicopters and gunships sipping soft drinks and eating hamburgers, hot dogs and steaks.

Meanwhile in New Mexico, thousands of anglers cast their lures into Elephant Butte Reservoir hoping to land an 11-pound striped bass named "Big Bro," the feature attraction at a three-day fishing derby. The tagged fish would be worth $100,000 to a lucky angler.

In Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was signed, hot air balloons soared in a race to commemorate the 190th anniversary of the first balloon flight in the United States.

Temperatures well into the 90s Sunday drove more than 1 million people to the sand and surf around New York City — including a man wearing only a guitar and a woman dressed in nothing but lipstick. Six people were arrested for violating a new state law banning bathing in the buff, authorities said.

More than 50,000 people jammed Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., to picnic and clap to the sounds of country music provided by some of the biggest names in the business — including Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings.

By mid-afternoon, about 200 people had been treated for overexposure to the 95-degree heat, said Stan Gorlick, a spokesman for the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

Twisters And High Wind Leave Debris In Midwest

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms and at least 12 twisters left a wet, debris-strewn trail across five Midwestern states today after ripping apart dozens of homes and businesses, killing two people and injuring 38 others, officials said.

Heavy rains and winds clocked up to 74 mph raged across Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin and Michigan.

"More than a dozen tornadoes were reported Sunday," Hugh Crowther, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "Seven tornadoes were spotted in Wisconsin, four in Minnesota and one in Iowa."

A twister overturned six mobile homes and damaged four others in a park outside New Ulm, Minn., in the south central part of the state.

In Champlin, a suburb northwest of Minneapolis, all 12 businesses in the Champlin Plaza shopping center were damaged and a number of cars were flipped over in the parking lot by high winds, authorities said.

Don Neumann, a bartender at an American Legion club near the shopping center, said the sky grew "black at first, then turned to level green."

"We closed the back doors and went inside and told everybody to hit the deck," he said. "The force of this thing was so strong it was sucking the T-shirt off me."

Further east, officials said 14-month-old Karen Schnell apparently suffocated when a tree was blown onto a trailer home near Taylors Falls, Minn.

Witnesses said the girl was pinned beneath her grandmother, Mary Ann Schnell, who was hosting a family reunion at her home about 60 miles northeast of Minneapolis-St. Paul on the Minnesota-Wisconsin border.

Mrs. Schnell, 54, suffered a concussion and was listed in satisfactory condition today at St. Croix Falls (Wis.)

Hospital.

"Everything in the trailer crushed on top of her," said David Lynch, Mrs. Schnell's brother. He said the grandmother could feel the child moving underneath her, but was unable to move.

Unfamiliar With It

NAMPA, Idaho (AP) — When a newspaper sent a reporter out with a copy of the Declaration of Independence — minus the title — none of the 25 people interviewed recognized what it was.

Reporter Michael Zuzel of The Idaho Statesman presented the three-page "petition" to passersby. It was single-spaced on two pages, with spaces for signatures and addresses on the bottom.

The words "Declaration of Independence" were left off, the paper reported Sunday. Instead, "The Committee for Independence" was printed in bold letters at the top of the petition.

Zuzel said he stopped about 40 people in 90 minutes, and of 25 people who read the document, none recognized it as a copy of the nation's founding statement.

Most read the petition silently, Zuzel said, and seemed to carefully examine the first paragraph: "When in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the Political Bonds which have connected them with another..."

Readers' concentration seemed to waver by the second paragraph, even though it begins with what might be the declaration's most easily recognizable phrase: "We hold these Truths to be self-evident..."

Most readers said the document seemed long and hard to understand, according to Zuzel.

SPINAL CORD SOCIETY

I feel we have many people in North Carolina who are spinal cord injury victims or suffer from some type of severe neural disorder — strokes, MS, spina bifida, head injury and palsy. It may be these people are not aware there is a Spinal Cord Society and a newsletter is published each month regarding research and development that is underway in various locations. My husband is a paraplegic and we did not know about this organization until July, 1982.

If any of your readers are interested in becoming a member of this very worthwhile organization, they should make their checks payable to SCS in the amount of $24. ($12 is for a subscription to the newsletter for one year.) and forward to Spinal Cord Society, 2410 Lakeview Drive, Fergus Fall, Minn. 56537. Contributions are tax-deductible. If you have a question regarding the legality of this organization, SCS is a non-profit corporation under the laws of Minnesota, with a 501-c-3 designation. Also, they have a toll-free number, 1-800-328-8253. J.H.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The strategist for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says Helms may trail Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt by as much as 10 points in polling for the expected Senate campaign next year.

But Tom Ellis said a poll by The Charlotte Observer showing a 19 percent spread is not accurate.

Hunt leads Helms 50 percent to 31 percent in the Carolinas Poll of The Observer, the newspaper reported Sunday.

Thirteen percent of the 584 registered voters surveyed said they were undecided, and 6 percent of the respondents preferred other candidates.

Neither Helms, the two-term incumbent, nor Hunt, governor since 1976, has announced for the 1984 election 16 months away.

"We are using the polling we've always gone by," Ellis said. "It's always been right and the newspapers have always been inaccurate."

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce said he was surprised at the large margin. Since April, the Helms for Senate committee has been placing advertisements criticizing Hunt and praising Helms in about 150 small daily and weekly newspapers and on about 80 radio stations.

"I frankly would have expected us to be down a bit," Pearce said. "After two months of them trying to tarnish the governor, I would have thought the numbers would have been closer than that."

The poll shows that Hunt holds a solid margin among voters in the mountains, Piedmont and eastern North Carolina and among voters of all educational levels, races, genders and ages.

Helms leads only among voters who think President Reagan has done a good or an excellent job, among registered Republicans, among voters in large towns and among those who listed household incomes of between $25,000 and $30,000, the survey showed.

Democrats outnumber Republicans in North Carolina 3 to 1.

The telephone survey was conducted by the marketing research department of Knight Publishing Co., publisher of The Observer, from June 6 to June 16. The margin of error in the political races is 4.1.

- 6 p.m. — "Time for a Hot Dog."
- 7 p.m. — beginning of the street dance.
- 9 p.m. — fireworks display.

Players Stay Up Late For Big Bingo Bonanza

By TOM MCCORD

Associated Press Writer
CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — It cost $500 just to play, but about 2,400 people sat through more than 60 games of a $1 million bingo bonanza this weekend, with six women claiming $16,600 checks when the caller shouted "G-58."

The games, played in an empty textile factory that stayed chock-full of cigarette smoke, lasted more than 12 hours. But nearly all the contestants kept dotting their cards with red, green or orange markers until it was over after 2 a.m. Sunday.

"They wouldn't be here if they didn't think they would win," said Dan McCoy, 39, a Cherokee tribal council member whose firm hired a Virginia Beach, Va., company to promote and run the twice-monthly sessions.

"It's a very good, economy-stimulating project for the area during the winter months," said McCoy, who noted that off-season unemployment on the Cherokee reservation near Great Smoky Mountains National Park is 40 percent.

Because the bingo hall is on a reservation, state gambling laws don't apply.

Up to $1 million was offered in prizes this weekend, with $200,000 offered near the end of the session as the top jackpot. Because nobody filled all the spaces on a card in 48 calls or less, the prize was halved.

Five numbers later, when "G-58" was called shortly before 2 a.m., the six winners ran to the front of the hall, which is about two football fields long and 300 feet wide. Players sat elbow-to-elbow at 700 tables.

The women went home with checks for $16,667 each, making them the biggest winners of the night.

"Oh, I don't believe it," said one of the winners, Helen Truxell, 62, of Peninsula, Ohio. "I've been here three times. I won $1,000 the first time, didn't do so the second time, and, oh, brother!" she said, looking at her check.

"I want to buy myself a car and put a down payment on a house."

The others sharing the biggest jackpot were Loraine Anderson of Atlanta; Theresa Yost of Oak Lawn, Ill.; Joann Tyler of Louisville, Tenn.; Teri Kelley of Decatur, Ga.; and Anne Bliven of Tampa, Fla.

"This is the biggest game, as far as we know," said Jimmy Morris, cashier and computer services chief for the contest's manager, Cherokee Bingo Management Inc. of Virginia Beach, Va.

Hats Coming Back, Things Looking Up For Industry

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Looking for a quick and easy, light-hearted summer project? This softly sculptured crochet purse will fill the bill on all scores. It is done in a fascinating stitch that resembles the Florentine or Bargello needlepoint stitch.

Make it with single strands of bulky craft yarn or double strands of 4-ply worsted-weight yarn. The purse, as shown, is worked in four colors. To use up leftover yarns, you could use seven or eight colors.

To obtain directions for making the Bargello Crochet Purse, send your request for Leaflet No. C-70383 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29587.

Or you may order Kit No. KC-70383 by sending check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit includes instructions, marbelized ring handles and craft yarn in four colors. Price includes shipping charges also. Please specify your choice of Jewel Tones, Autumn Leaf Tones or Summer Pastels.

DEAR PAT: Regarding your Leaflet CL-3208 for a crocheted vest — I have made the vest twice and it's miles too big! I used a size J crochet hook and a size 9 and even omitted 12 rows and it's still too big. What am I doing wrong? My gauge was a little off on group stitches and way off on rows. — Mrs. B.B., Manchester, N.H.

Your last sentence contains your own answer, Mrs. B. Even being a "little off" in gauge can make a big difference and being "way off" will make a huge difference! Since this vest is made from side to side rather than from the bottom up, it is your row gauge that determines the final width — a fact that you obviously understand as you mentioned omitting some rows.

The extreme importance of exact gauge is probably the most widely misunderstood aspect of crochet and knitting. Being even one-half stitch per inch or a fraction of a row off gauge can mean a variation of several inches in a full garment.

In any garment, the listed hook or needle size is meant simply as a general guide to the size you might need. It is just the size implement the designer used in making the item.

You evidently crochet much more loosely than I do

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Casablanca" fans get goosebumps over Humphrey Bogart's farewell to Ingrid Bergman at a foggy Moroccan airport. David Stein gets them over Miss Bergman's hat.

Its brim, with the exotic dip over her eyebrows, made the style a big seller and an enduring classic. But little has thrilled the industry since, except perhaps Jacqueline Kennedy's penchant for pillbox hats in the '60s.

Now, thanks to Princess Diana and '80s fashions, the millinery slump appears to be over.

"Business is incredibly good," said Stein, partner of Frank Olive, one of the most respected hat designers. Stein's observation is reflected by the sales figures.

The government's Census of Manufacturers, taken every five years, shows the hat industry did $58.7 million in wholesale business in 1972, when hats were far from a staple in the average woman's wardrobe.

By 1977, the figure was $74.2 million. In 1982, it had grown to $120 million, a reflection of the American woman's growing fascination with hats.

"They are definitely coming back," said Lee Black, who this season designed for the Bill Blass collection a "Tron" sailor hat named after the Disney movie and offering an updated look to the old hardhat.

Blass, like many designers this season, showed hats with most of his sophisticated daywear, and there were glamorous ones for evening with netting, jewels and feathers.

In fact, the fashion mood of the '80s — toward dressier, more finished looks — may be just right for the hat industry. Hat designers are banking on it, and retail price tags for their newest offerings range from $30 to $140.

Black says "Tron" is doing well in the marketplace. Among other popular sellers are the familiar Casablanca and the plumed blue hat Princess Diana wore as she left on her honeymoon and which is offered by the Olive house.

Stein thinks the princess' taste has popularized the hats traditionally worn by the British royal family.

"She is the first member of the royal family who really looks at herself in the mirror before she buys a hat," he said.

Stein has cited one of the chief drawbacks of hat wearing — many women feel ridiculous in them. But de-

Couple Marries Recently In Edenton

EDENTON — Kathryn Anne Raines and Norman Victor Dunn, both of Greenville, were united in marriage June 26 at three o'clock in the afternoon. The wedding took place in the Edenton Baptist Church with Dr. John Allen officiating.

Wedding music was provided by Anna Kay Manning, organist, and John Becker, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Carolyn White Raines of Edenton and John E. Raines of Hanover, Ill. She is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a medical transcriptionist. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Anne Martin of Carson City, Nev. and Norman Dunn of Springfield, Ill. He is employed by East Carolina University in the physics department as an instrument maker.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Raines of Fairfield, Iowa. She wore a formal gown of silk organza over taffeta featuring a Victorian neckline and sleeves. The gown was accented with peau d'ange lace. The skirt extended to a chapel length train. She wore a waltz length veil of peau d'ange lace and seed pearls and carried a cascade of white roses and stephanotis.

Sheree Donley of Greenville was maid of honor. Kathi Todd of Philadelphia was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Chris Doublet and Alma Weathersby, both of Greenville; Jo Caton of Winston-Salem; Gayle Balliet of Greensboro; and Jean Byrum of Charlotte.

Lyle Henoyer of Charlottesville, Va. was best man. Ushers were Michael Dunn of Carson City, Nev., brother of the bridegroom; Greg Ashorn, Ed Newbaker, Steve Umstead, Johnny Walker and Carl Hartsfield, all of Greenville.

Mistresses of ceremony were Mrs. Joseph Thorud and Mrs. George Byrum, both of Edenton.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the mother of the bride at the American Legion Hut.

The bride was honored at a luncheon given by Mrs. George Byrum, Jean Byrum and Mrs. Joseph Thorud at the home of Mrs. Byrum. The bride was also honored at several other pre-nuptial parties.

Couple Weds Sunday In York Memorial Church

Ernestine H. Wilkins and Bobbie Harris, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at York Memorial Church. The Rev. Luther Brown performed the double ring ceremony at 2:30 in the afternoon.

The bride is the granddaughter of Sallie Ann Teel of Greenville and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Eliza Harris of Farmville.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Sammy Gardner and soloist Vanessa Jones. Betty McLawhorn greeted guests. The wedding was directed by Doris Land.

Escorted by her brother, Willie Lee Hollis of Greenville, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in floral silk Venice lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in chantilly lace and accented with silk Venice lace. The long fitted sleeves were fashioned of chantilly lace. The modified A-line skirt was enhanced by a flounce of chantilly lace that extended to an attached chapel length train accented by tiers of lace trimmed flounces that extended up to the waistline. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace. She carried a bouquet of roses, spider orchids, baby's breath and fern.

Matron of honor was Pauline Wilkins and maid of honor was Marie Smith, both sisters of the bride of Greenville. Both attendants wore a violet floor length gowns of polished satin. The gown was styled with an off-the-shoulder neckline with a ruffle and bows on the sleeve. The waistline was encircled with a sash. Each carried a bouquet of roses with baby's breath and greenery accented with ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Louise Knight, Doris Clemons, Cassandra Hollis and Dora Hollis, all sisters of the bride; Kimberly Armfield, cousin of the bride, and Dorothy Hollis, sister-in-law of the bride, all of Greenville. Junior bridesmaid was Juanita Wilkins of Greenville, niece of the bride. Each bridesmaid wore a shocking pink gown styled like those of the honor attendants and carried similar bouquets.

Flower girl was Shonika Wilkins of Greenville, daughter of the bride. She wore a shocking pink dress like those of the bridesmaids and carried a basket of rose petals. Ring bearer was Ronnie Wilkins Jr. of Greenville, son of the bride.

I.J. Harris of Stanford, Conn. served as best man. Ushers were Donnie Harris, Eliza Harris and Charles Harris, all brothers of the bridegroom from Pinetops; Ronnie Harris, brother of the bridegroom, Edward Clemons and Herman Knight, all of Greenville.

A reception was held at The Bachelor Benedict Club following the ceremony.

The bride completed high school at North Pitt High School and continued her education at Pitt Community College. She is employed by Pitt Memorial Hospital as a unit secretary. The bridegroom attended Farmville Central High School.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Dear Abby

Mother Counts Two Blessings

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of 22-month-old twin boys. When we're out shopping, someone will say, "Look, twins!" Then someone else says, "Cute to look at, but not to have."

I've been stopped by people who ask, "Are they twins?" (What a question! They're identical.) And when I say (proudly), "Yes," they say, "Well, I'm sure glad they're yours, not mine!" Abby, I'm glad they're mine, and it angers me to hear such unkind remarks. Of course, I had no say in the matter, but I consider myself lucky to be the mother of twins. And my husband feels lucky, too. As for the double trouble and expense of raising two instead of one, they're well worth it.

Please, Abby, ask people not to feel sorry for me. And if you can put in a good word for twins, I'd appreciate it.

TWICE-BLESSED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR TWICE-BLESSED: Not only are you "twice-blessed," your twins are. Being a twin offered countless advantages to me. I was never lonely. I always had a best friend — someone to play with, to sing with, to dance with. Someone to laugh (and cry) with, to share my most intimate secrets.

Parents of twins worry less because they feel that there's safety in numbers. (There is.)

Twins get the usual teasing: "What are your names? Kate and Duplicate? Pete and Repeat? Me and My Shadow? Or Double Trouble?" And silly questions: "Do you ever get yourselves mixed up? How do you know which one you are?"

Twins share a very special relationship — so aptly described by Lord Byron:

"All who joy would win

"Must share it.

"Happiness was born a twin."

Happy birthday, Sis:

Fourth Of July

The Fourth of July is unquestionably the greatest secular holiday in the United States.

True, Congress actually approved the resolution of independence from Britain on July 2, 1776; and true, the declaration was not publicly read until July 8. Still, it was drafted by Congress on the Fourth of July, which made it a good date to observe the national birthday.

It took time for the idea of celebrating the event to really spread around. Philadelphians were virtually the only citizens of the new nation to whoop it up on the first anniversary, and maybe their example, and travelers' tales, spurred the idea of partying on the Fourth.

Another force was at work.

Civic-minded groups began linking the day with patriotic ideals and citizenship — the essential bones of nationhood — and those qualities grew with the country.

Undertakings of public interest began to be launched on the Glorious Fourth. For instance, the digging of the Erie Canal enjoyed that auspicious start; the building of the first railway, laying the cornerstone of the Washington Monument, and formal recognition of the Philippines' independence share July 4.

These days, the Fourth is a national holiday and everybody who can, makes the most of it. Fireworks and diversions — both patriotic and just plain fun — are the general rule.

One more rule has been added: Play it Safe!

The world does not need more tears.

Where Did They Go?

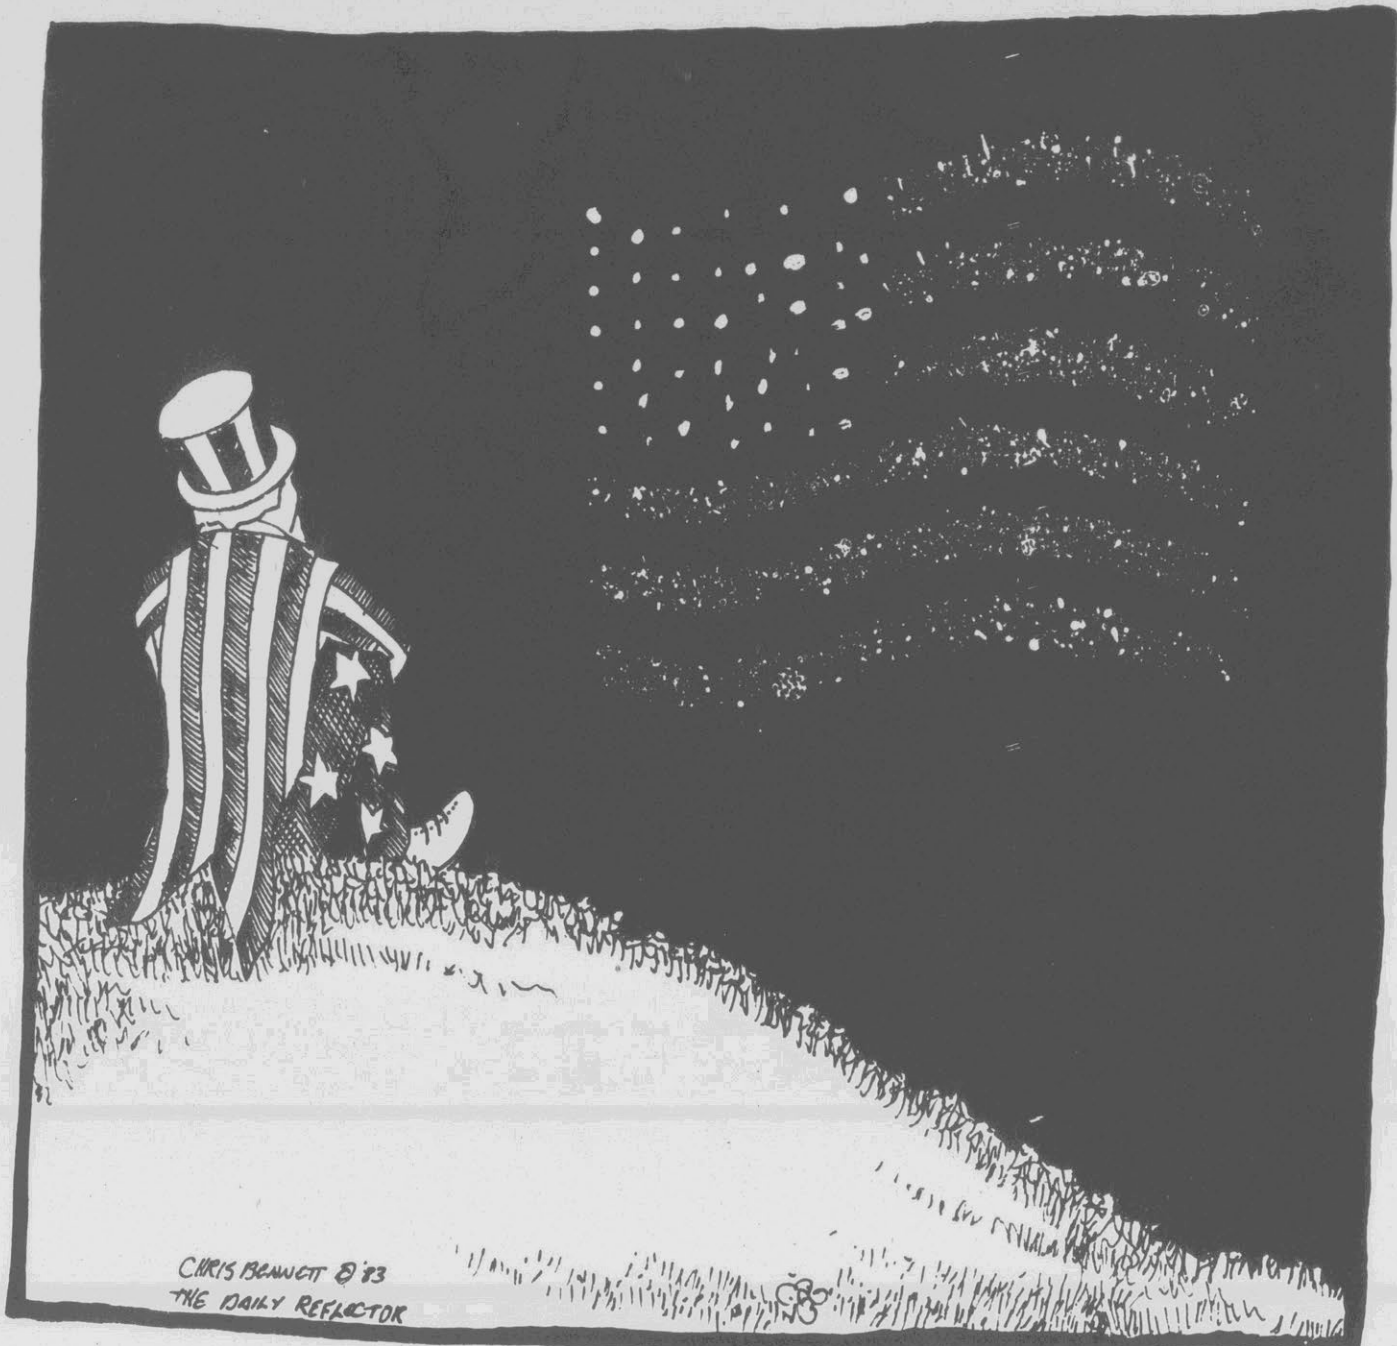

You know North Carolina's school teachers and other state employes are feeling sorry for Carolina Power & Light Co. The utility, according to its president, hasn't had a significant increase in basic rates since December 1981. But CP&L's Sherwood H. Smith Jr. says all of that — at least for the moment — can be corrected if the Utilities Commission will approve a 14.93 percent rate increase for CP&L.

Give or take a few months, that's also the last time North Carolina teachers and state workers had a raise — and it wasn't as "significant" even then as a CP&L is seeking now. In fact, our state employees probably would do a double take and faint if they were given a 14 percent raise.

Instead of a raise, those teachers, state workers and the general public in the area served by CP&L — which Greenville isn't, for which we hope we're thankful — now faces the prospect of paying about $11 more per month for 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity.

The increase, Smith said, is needed to help CP&L cover the costs of a new coal-fired generating plant, the Shearon Harris nuclear plant in Wake County and other expenses.

For a utility that constantly seeks rate increases to boost its profits so that investors will be enticed to pour more money into its coffers, CP&L seems to rely heavily on its consumers to foot the bill for growth. Where are all those investors we've been protecting for years?

Old Hands Make The Best Lobbyists

RALEIGH — On the second floor of the Legislative Building, in the lounge areas surrounding the telephone switchboard, the "Shadow Legislature" convenes everyday. Lobbyists mull around, trading information, plotting strategies, talking with legislators.

No doubt, many of them are also trading old legislative war stories. For, within the lobbyist corps, there are a great many former legislators. In fact, almost all of the state's high-powered lobbyists once served in the General Assembly. The five "most influential" lobbyists, as determined by the N.C. Center for Public Policy research, are all former legislators. They are John Jordan, Sam Johnson, Tom White, Ruffin Bailey and Zeb Alley.

And there are many more. Emmett Burden, Edd Nye, Tom Ellis, Jim Morgan, Russell Swindell, Lindsay

Warren, Charlie Webb, Jack Moody, Fred Mills, David Henderson — all are former legislators who are now lobbying.

Most were successful legislators who retired from public office for one reason or another and who are now making nice money either full or part time. But some didn't retire. They got beat. Nye and Ellis, for example, both lost their seats during the 1982 Democratic primary and both say they may want to come back in 1985.

Why so many former legislators in the lobbying corps? Because generally they make the most effective lobbyists. Why are they so effective? "They have friends in the Legislature, they know the process, they know people in the executive branch of government. If there are any shortcuts, they know about those," says Edd Nye, who lobbies for the N.C. Pharmaceuticals Association.

"But, probably, most important, they know what gets the attention of a legislator," Nye says. "They know when to hold their cards and when to deal. They know about timing ... On any issue, there are some key legislators. They know who to call back home to call those keys."

Burden says it's the knowledge of the process that makes former legislators better lobbyists. He's seen people lobby three terms, yet still not know where to get a copy of a printed bill or a committee substitute. Some people lobby without knowing how a bill moves through the assembly — either in the textbook sense or the real political sense.

Ellis says a lobbyist should know about the timing of assembly action. That is, know how long it takes a bill to become law, and when a bill is either most vulnerable or at least susceptible to change or defeat. Legislators have to learn about timing if they're ever to be effective. So do lobbyists.

Of a half-dozen lobbyists interviewed, all said that political debts expire with a legislator's retirement. If Senator Jones owes you a green stamp when you retire, you'll never collect it as a lobbyist, they said. But, if Jones remembers you as a trustworthy friend, he'll take your word on the issues and that's just as valuable.

What they're all saying, of course, is that lobbying the Legislature is a job for those in the old-boys network. You don't see former Republican legislators lobbying because they were never a part of the network. You don't see former women legislators — although that might change. In the network, old friendships and trusts are called upon.

The most effective lobbyists were legislators long ago, when the current legislative leaders were just rookies. They are now institutions. They've served in the Legislature, they've been lobbyists for decades. They are the heart of the network.

Strength For Today

Some religious books today imply that the chief aim of the Christian faith is to give people peace of mind. This is not true, and the quicker we learn it, the deeper and more significant peace of mine we shall have.

For the primary aim of the Christian faith is to bring people into a submissive and cooperating attitude toward the sovereign will of God. The most significant question a Christian can ever ask himself is, "What is the will of God and how do I go about obeying it?"

If he makes that his first question and finding the answer his first object, he will eventually have peace of mind — a peace so deep that it will pass all understanding. But he may have to ponder deeply and change his life to get the question answered.

Peace of mind is a byproduct not just of religious faith but also the living of a Christian life. Let us try go put ourselves into the line of God's will, and the matter of peace of mind will take care of itself.

Keep Howard Off The Shuttle

"How do we do that?"

"Suppose we challenged the Soviets to a race in space. You know, like the Indianapolis 500. The race would start from lift off and the shuttle that completes 80 orbits around the earth and lands first will win the cup."

"Now we're cooking. We could make the space program into a spectator sport. The whole world would be watching it."

"Will the Russians compete?"

"Sure they will. The Soviet people are losing as much interest in their space shots as Americans are losing in ours. Besides, both sides always talk about the race for space, but we've never really had one."

"We could do what they do at Indianapolis and sell advertising on the sides of the shuttle. Every contractor who had anything to do with the program would want his name plastered on the ship."

"The astronauts could wear crocodiles on their uniforms, and hats with the name of the fuel company on the visor."

"Don't forget television. The networks would bid higher for this race than they did for the 1984 Olympics."

"They would want their own announcer inside the shuttle to tell the people what was going on."

"So we'll let Howard Cosell go along."

"What does Howard Cosell know about space racing?"

"Have you ever heard Howard cover a sport that he didn't know everything about?"

"Okay, But how do we keep the Russians from cheating?"

"We send up an international team of racing stewards in a space lab to keep tabs on the shuttles. They'll be stationed over Switzerland to count the laps. A team of American astronauts will be in the Soviet ground control station, and a team of Soviet astronauts will be at Cape Kennedy, to make sure they both lift off at the same time."

"What about the landing? There won't be any excitement if the Soviet shuttle lands in Siberia, and our shuttle lands at Cocoa Beach."

"We could have the finish line at the Paris Air Show, with American and Soviet leaders in attendance to cheer their shuttles on."

"I's a helluva idea. Let's call up the Soviet space people and challenge them."

The call was made.

The U.S. public affairs chief talked for an hour and then hung up.

"Whate did they say?"

"They agreed to everything with one exception."

"What's that?"

"They said 'Nyet' to Howard Cosell."

Quotes

"I regret often that I have spoken; never that I have been silent." — Publius Syrus

"It takes two to speak the truth — one to speak and another to hear." — Henry David Thoreau

NEW YORK (AP) — With interest rates on the rise again, it is an especially tricky time for savers who depend on their investments for income.

From May 4 through early last week, the interest rate on six-month Treasury bills climbed from just under 8 percent to about 9 percent. Over the same span, the rate on 30-year Treasury bonds moved up from 10.27 percent to about 11.15 percent.

Though these rates remain far below their 15 percent-plus levels of a year and a half ago, bond-market bulls argue that they represent a very attractive deal just now. With inflation having slowed recently to the 4 percent-5 percent range, an investor buying, say, a Treasury security or shares of a bond mutual fund can get an extraordinarily high "real" return.

Even for an individual in the 50 percent tax bracket, a 9 percent yield is good enough to keep pace with a 4.5 percent rise in the cost of living.

But there is obviously a reason why the money markets have put rates at their current high levels. That reason, most analysts agree, is the fear that inflation won't stay down much longer.

That concern has been aggravated in recent weeks by a surge in the growth of the money supply. Pessimists contend the Federal Reserve must tighten credit soon or run the risk of a pickup in inflation. Either way, this school of thought holds, rates are likely to go still higher until the Fed's dilemma can somehow be resolved.

Against that background, income-conscious investors are faced with a vast array of choices — bank deposits and certificates in many forms; money-market funds; Treasury, corporate and municipal debt securities; stocks, and more.

The sharp rise in stock prices since last summer has made good dividend yields harder to find in that particular market. There remains a selection of issues, notably electric utilities, yielding in the 10 percent range. But the yield on the 30 stocks in the Dow Jones industrial average recently stood at less than 4.5 percent, down from almost 7 percent a year ago.

By contrast, some investment experts believe a good case can be made right now for Treasury bills, provided that a saver has the $10,000 minimum required. The federal government has had a lot of trouble in recent years balancing its books, but it is still generally regarded as about the safest credit risk in the world.

Thanks to gaping budget deficits, Treasury securities with maturities ranging from a few months to 30 years are available in awesome supply. There is upwards of $800 billion outstanding in these issues. Last week alone, the Treasury sold more than $26 billion worth.

With short-term bills rather than long-term bonds, the investor minimizes the risk of getting left behind should interest rates climb further. "Bear in mind," says United Business Service, a financial advisory letter, "that the interest on these premier quality securities is exempt from state and local taxes."

At around 9 percent, their current interest rate is competitive with money-market funds and money market deposit accounts at most financial institutions, which generally ranged between 7.5 percent and 8.5 to 9 percent at last report.

Interest kicked at midyear — if you buy a bill now that doesn't mature until Jan. 1, you may avoid incurring any income tax liability on the interest in 1983.

After an investor submits a tender to the Treasury or any Federal Reserve bank or branch, using the standard form available for that purpose, the government shortly returns a check in the amount of the stated interest on the bill.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As probably the only graduate of Leonia High School, New Jersey, living in Greenville, I was thrilled to see in the Friday, June 24, Reflector a picture of my old alma mater. LHS has always rated high academically and, since enrollment is declining, the school board, in a mailing, points out that out-of-town tuition is less than private school tuition with all the benefits.

Now a transplanted Northerner who is an avid reader of each issue of the Reflector, I enjoy the articles of local happenings as well as items from out of state.

Fees Multiply For Fishermen

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Commercial fishermen will pay up to five times more for working in North Carolina waters because of increases in fishing fees and licenses approved this year by the Legislature.

The increases, expected to raise about $400,000 in state revenues a year, came after two years of study and controversy.

The legislation increased fees for boat licenses and eliminated a state tax on marketed seafood, replacing it with a dealer tax. It also created a new charge for operators of fishing piers.

Recreational fishermen who use hook and line methods and do not sell their catch would not be affected by the licensing system, which will take effect when new licenses are issued in January.

Some industry representatives said the increased revenues are needed to manage the state's fish and shellfish resources. Ned B. Delamar, executive director of the N.C. Fisheries Association, said the 600-member group supports the increases.

"They realized that something needed to be done," he said.

But part-time fishermen and those with smaller boats vigorously opposed earlier proposals for large increases in license fees or a separate license to sell the catch commercially. They said the increases would put them out of business and that larger vessels should pay more because they catch more fish.

Under the new system, annual licenses for boats will cost $1 a foot for vessels shorter than 18 feet, $1.50 a foot for those 18 to 38 feet long and $3 a foot for vessels longer than 38 feet.

EASING QUARANTINE

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

THE ABCESSSED TOOTH

When an abcess hits you, you'll know it! The pain is severe and constant, with the side of the face swelling in a few days. This is an emergency.

The abcess normally starts with a cavity which is left untreated. The bacteria begin their treacherous work by destroying the outer case of enamel, then the inner (more sensitive) part of the tooth called the dentin. Eventually, the cavity will invade the inner-most part of the tooth, called the pulp where the nerves and blood vessels are. Now, you've got trouble and you'll know by the pain. It is caused by the swelling of the blood vessels against the nerves since the pulp is surrounded by rigid walls.

The pulp loses the battle and slowly dies, leaving the tooth full of decomposed tissue and swarming with germs. When the germs reach the tip they will set about making an abcess. Then they will proceed to gradually destroy the surrounding jawbone and tissue.

A filling will not help a root abcess. The decision now (after the infection is treated) is whether to save the tooth by root canal therapy or have it extracted. This pain and possible tooth loss can be prevented by having cavities filled early.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Teacher Union Predicts 38,000 Layoffs Next Term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Federation of Teachers predicts that with the economy perking up and the political spotlight suddenly on education, fewer teachers will be laid off in the coming school year.

An annual survey by the 580,000-member teachers union projects that 38,000 teachers could get pink slips in 1983-84, down sharply from the record 55,500 the union projected last year.

The survey was released today at the opening session of the 580,000-member AFT's annual convention.

AFT is the nation's second-largest teachers union, after the National Education Association, with 1.7 million members. Seven thousand NEA delegates have been meeting in Philadelphia since Saturday.

AFT officials said this year's layoff projection, while encouraging, varied widely from state to state. In some parts of the country, the layoff picture remains gloomy.

"The situation is very unsure and very uneven," said James Ward, AFT's director of research. "While there appear to be signs of some general economic recovery across America, state and local government revenues are still depressed and are likely to remain so for most of the fiscal year."

Still, said AFT president Albert Shanker, "There is reason for optimism in spite of the squeeze put on the federal education dollar. We are coming to grips with the fact that as a nation we need strong, competent and effective teachers if we expect to educate our children adequately and realistically."

The survey was based on the "best guesses" of local union affiliates, along with judgments based on analysis of local financial conditions and reports from state education departments.

The union said that teachers in nine states struggling with education budget cuts face layoffs at least as severe as a year ago.

It projected 10,000 pink slips in Illinois, double last year's 5,000. North Dakota teachers face a possible 400 layoffs, compared with 100 last year, and 200 in New Mexico face job loss compared with 100 last year. California is expected to equal last year's total of 5,000, while 3,000 Massachusetts teachers face job loss compared with 2,000 a year ago. Two hundred Virginia teachers face layoffs, the same as last year. In Pennsylvania, 6,000 face job loss this fall, compared with 5,000 last year. In Indiana, 2,000 could be laid off compared with 1,500 last year, and in Idaho, 200 teacher layoffs are projected, compared with none in 1982.

In The Area

Winterville Jaycettes Recognized

The Winterville Jaycettes have been recognized as one of the outstanding chapters in the United States for its involvement in the U.S. Jaycette Community Development Programming.

To receive this recognition, a local chapter was required to participate in an educational and/or fund-raising project for at least three of the U.S. Jaycette-endorsed or sponsored programs. The Winterville group held bake sales to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Hospital and a skate-a-thon for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. They had a candidate for the Pitt County Board of Education at one of their bi-monthly meetings.

Two Weekend Accidents Reported

Greenville police report that one person was injured and an estimated $7,000 in damages occurred in two traffic accidents this weekend.

Steven Edward Garrett of 1404 N. Overlook Drive was charged with exceeding safe speed after the vehicle he was driving collided with a vehicle driven by Bennie Ray Pittman of Farmville in the Pitt Plaza parking lot. The accident, which occurred Friday at 9:30 p.m., resulted in $1,000 damage to the Pittman vehicle and $1,500 damage to the vehicle driven by Garrett. A passenger in the Garrett car, Timothy Lee Drinnon of 1208 Burrington Road, was reported injured in the accident.

Thomas Neal Dixon Jr. of Richmond, Va., was charged with hit and run, driving under the influence and driving while license revoked after the vehicle he was driving struck a car parked on North Greene Street Saturday at 1 a.m. Estimated damage to the parked vehicle, owned by Williams Turner Bradley of 219 Singletree Drive, was $2,500. Damage was $2,000 to the Dixon automobile.

Want A Bite Of The Big Apple

NEW YORK (AP) — Over a thousand Staten Islanders say they want to take a bite of the Big Apple — and they don't want to give it back.

A newspaper write-in poll found that 96 percent of the 1,336 Staten Island residents who responded thought the island borough south of Manhattan should secede from New York City.

Of those who answered the question, "Should Staten Island secede from the city of New York," 1,283 people answered yes and 53 said no, according to a story in Sunday's Staten Island Advance.

The newspaper said it decided to raise the question since a state court ruling found the at-large City Council to be illegal. Each of the city's five boroughs stands to lose two seats apiece on City Council, leaving Staten Island with only a single representative.

Sunday Fire

An undetermined amount of damage resulted from a fire in an apartment located at 2601 Arlington Blvd. which occurred Sunday at 6 p.m. The apartment was owned by Speight Realty Company. According to a spokesman for the Greenville Fire Department, the blaze was reportedly caused by a short from an electrical appliance.

West German Chancellor Sees Andropov Meeting Postponed

MOSCOW (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl traveled to the Soviet Union today, but his first planned meetings with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov were postponed, a West German diplomat said.

The diplomat said the West German government had been told Soviet authorities cited "personal reasons" for the change in plans.

Kohl was to see Andropov 90 minutes after his arrival in Moscow this afternoon and the two leaders then were to sit together in the evening at a state banquet.

There was no immediate word if Andropov would see Kohl Tuesday morning, as scheduled.

The cancellation of Andropov's two sessions today immediately lead to speculation that he was too ill to meet Kohl.

Coinciding with Kohl's scheduled arrival, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda attacked NATO's missile deployment plans as "enhancing the risk of outbreak of a new war."

Kohl is expected to discuss the missile issue with Andropov and other Soviet leaders during his three-day stay.

The chancellor said Sunday he would tell Andropov "there can be no doubt about our resolve to deploy new weapons" starting in December unless there is a breakthrough in the Geneva talks on reducing medium-range nuclear forces in Europe.

In a front-page story on Kohl's visit, Pravda said the Soviet Union welcomes Kohl and his foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, "in the interests of strengthening European and universal peace."

But another story by Pravda writer Yuri Kharlanov attacked the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plan to put 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe, 204 of them in West Germany.

Kharlanov said "the present policy of the U.S.A. and NATO is an attempt at changing the regional and global balance ... in their favor, and at increasing nuclear missile confrontation, which ultimately leads to enhancing the risk of outbreak of a new war."

He also charged NATO with manipulating Western European public opinion in a "noisy campaign ... designed to justify the unjustifiable."

NATO says that the missiles are needed to balance 350-plus Soviet SS-20 triple-warhead missiles, two thirds of them aimed at Western Europe, and that the deployment will proceed unless Moscow agrees to a substantial reduction in the SS-20s.

An official Soviet source, who spoke on condition that he not be named, has said the Kremlin leadership is resigned to the deployment but hopes Kohl's visit will provide a way to keep the door open for a post-deployment solution of the missile dispute.

In addition to Andropov, Kohl was expected to meet Premier Nikolai Tikhonov and Dmitri Ustinov, Moscow's defense minister.

West German officials have said they expect "difficult, tough talks" about the missiles to dominate Kohl's first official trip to Moscow.

Kohl, in an interview with the conservative Welt Am Sonntag newspaper prior to his departure, said he was traveling to Moscow with neither "great expectations nor great fears," and that he would try to convince Soviet leaders that the West German government wants peace.

Soviet officials have warned that the stationing of new NATO missiles would mean Warsaw Pact countries would take equivalent measures.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — WHY DID KNIGHT USE ROLLED-UP NEWSPAPER TO KILL FAT DRAGON FLY?
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals C.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A6 ♥Q5 ♦K1054 ♣AQ874
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—While you might be in the slam zone, there is also the possibility that your best contract is three no trump. To test the possibilities of the hand, bid three diamonds. That's forcing in this auction. If partner persists with three no trump, settle for that; but if he bids anything else, make a slam try.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q6 ♥Q952 ♦J3 ♣AK1098
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have an awkward hand. You do not have enough to insist on game, so you can't afford to bid two hearts — that would be a reverse and, therefore, forcing. You can't rebid three clubs — that would show longer clubs and a weaker hand. That leaves only two no trump, even though we would hardly claim that your spade holding constitutes a stopper.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A9865 ♦K742 ♣10654
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What action do you take?

A.—Even though you are void in partner's first-bid suit, don't consider your hand to be a minimum. You have an ace and four-card support in partner's second suit, headed by the king. Your hand could easily be enough for partner to make game, so you owe him another bid. Raise to three diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQJ872 ♥K95 ♦762 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—With your unbalanced hand, you certainly don't want to play no trump. However, you aren't quite good enough for an invitational jump to three spades. Just bid two spades. If you can make game, partner should have enough to bid again.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQJ872 ♥762 ♦K105 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Almost the same hand as in the last problem, except that we switched the red suits around. The point count is the same, but this time you have an honor in partner's first suit. That is just enough to justify an invitational jump to three spades — it is not forcing because partner rebid one no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K10765 ♥KQJ6 ♦AJ6 ♣6
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—A difficult hand. You are too strong for a jump raise of partner's suit, but not quite good enough to jump shift — especially since your long suit is weak and higher ranking than the suit in which you wish to play the hand. The solution is to bid one spade, and then jump in hearts at your next turn.

Thousands Watch Hoover Dam Spill

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
BOULDER CITY, Nev. (AP) — Hoover Dam made a spectacle of itself for thousands of holiday tourists who watched Colorado River water gush over the spillways for the first time in 42 years.

But sightseers were scarce during the weekend at some other points along the raging river, which has caused at least seven deaths and inundated thousands of acres in the United States and Mexico in the last two weeks.

Record snow runoff produced twin waterfalls 450 feet wide and 175 feet deep Sunday at spillways on each end of Hoover Dam, which made an interesting show for tourists but promised weeks of continued flooding downriver. The last time water flowed over the spillways was during a test in 1941.

The spillways, located on the Lake Mead side of the 726-foot-tall dam, send water into collecting pools which drain into wide tunnels carrying the water nearly a half-mile to the river 650 feet below.

The gater in Lake Mead has risen to 1,222 feet, nearly six inches over the top of the spillways. Even heavier flows are expected by the end of July, when water is expected to be 5½ feet above the top of the spillways.

Bureau of Reclamation officials say they will have to halt power production at the dam to limit flow to 45,000 cubic feet per second. As a result, water usually routed through power generators will be turned off.

Southern California communities getting power from the dam should be able to find alternate power sources, officials said.

Residents of flooded areas claim federal officials failed to release enough water earlier this year to ease current problems, and then failed to provide adequate notice of flooding plans.

Needles, Calif., businessman Bill Claypool, in a weekend interview at Bullhead City, Ariz., contended that documents filed last week in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles showed that the bureau last fall sought U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service permission to increase flows from the dam.

That indicated the bureau knew then there was a likelihood it would have to intentionally flood the river now, he said.

But bureau spokesman Clark Germann said officials were unaware of any such request to the Fish and Wildlife Service.

At several spots along the river, resorts that normally would be jammed over the Fourth of July weekend were virtually empty because of the flooding.

"It's a disaster," said Jeanine Branson, who owns a riverfront resort in Parker, Ariz. "There just isn't anyone, and on a normal Fourth of July, it's nothing to see 50,000 to 60,000 people along this strip. There are going to be a lot of people along the river go out of business."

Bullhead City Chamber of Commerce spokesman Fred Eck said business there was off 25 to 50 percent. Tourists are confused about what parts of the river are flooded and many are avoiding resorts not affected, he said.

The small resort community of Earp, Ariz., was like a "ghost town" Sunday, said Jerry Lord, a spokesman for the California Division of Forestry.

Tourism was down 20 percent in Needles, said San Bernardino County Sheriff's Deputy Marilyn Haimann.

In the Mexican town of Estacion Victoria, about 20 miles southeast of Yuma, Ariz., police reported that a wooden bridge spanning the river snapped Saturday because of the cascading river, but no one was hurt.

President Reagan designated six counties disaster areas Friday in California and Arizona, where damage has been estimated at $12 million.

Astronaut Will Have Ham Radio

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — This is the first time a Whiskey-Five-Lima-Fox-Trot-Lima, from the Space Shuttle Columbia. With those words, expressing his assigned call sign, astronaut Owen Garriott is expected to become the first "ham" radio operator to operate from space next fall.

Garriott, a mission specialist on September's scheduled ninth shuttle flight, received permission from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration last April to carry an amateur radio transmitter on board the Columbia.

NASA said Garriott could use the gear during his off-duty hours whenever he wished.

But as in all things bureaucratic, Garriott needed one more permission slip. Amateur radio operators, like any other user of the airwaves, must answer to the Federal Communications Commission and the agency's rules weren't exactly written with the idea of "hams" originating calls from space.

Garriott applied for various waivers of the rules, and the FCC granted it last week.

"The pioneering nature of this venture warrants favorable action on Dr. Garriott's request," responded James C. McKinney, chief of the FCC's private radio bureau. Granting the waivers "is in keeping with our statutory mandate to provide for experimental uses of radio frequencies."

Garriott, a ham radio operator since his youth who now holds an Advanced Class license, will use a five-watt transmitter on board the Columbia that will be powerful enough to reach ham receivers on the ground within line-of-sight of the shuttle.

Since the shuttle orbits the Earth in about 80 minutes, conversations will be brief because Garriott's radio will be in line-of-sight contact with a single point for only a few minutes at a time. He is expected to transmit in the range of 145.510 megahertz to 145.770 megahertz, and receive in the range of 144.910 megahertz to 145.470 megahertz.

Slow Golf Ball On Their Links

PORTAL, N.D. (AP) — For golfers who favor a really leisurely hole-in-one, the Gateway Cities Golf Club has just the place: a par 3 ninth hole that requires the ball to cross the Canadian border in a one-hour flight.

Gateway Cities' first eight holes are located on the east end of North Portal, Saskatchewan. The clubhouse and the 125-foot ninth hole lie on Portal's east side, in North Dakota.

Since North Dakota uses Daylight Savings Time and eastern Saskatchewan does not, a ball hit from the tee on No. 9 at, say, 2 p.m. CST reaches the green about 3 p.m. CDT.

"It's really a slow-moving ball," said Leo Ceglowski, 54, a Portal farmer and Soo Line railroad employee whose wife, Vi, 50, works as one of two clubhouse managers.

The first hole-in-one on the ninth hole was hit in 1934 by George Wegener.

Prison Census 4th In Nation

By The Associated Press
Only three states in the country have a higher proportion of their population in prison than North Carolina, according to a recent U.S. Bureau of Justice survey.

The report showed that in December 1982, there were 255 prisoners for every 100,000 residents in North Carolina. That figure ranks above the national average of 160 inmates in state prisons for every 100,000 people.

Nevada had the highest number of prisoners, 301 per 100,000 residents, followed by South Carolina with 270 and Florida with 261. The District of Columbia far outranked any of the states with 531 prisoners for every 100,000 residents.

The two states tied for the lowest proportion in the nation are New Hampshire and North Dakota, with 47 prisoners for every 100,000 residents.

The December statistics showed that North Carolina had 16,578 inmates in the state prison system. By Jan. 1, that figure had increased to 16,662.

The figures represent an increase of about 5 percent over the 15,791 prisoners in North Carolina in December 1981.

Of the 10 states with the highest proportion of prisoners in the nation, nine were in the South, according to Bureau of Justice statistics.

The federal statistics, which include only those serving sentences of one year or more in state prisons, vary somewhat from incarceration rates reported from a meeting of the Southern States Correction Association in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

North Carolina's prison population has changed little since December. As of June 22, there were 16,603 prisoners, a decrease of 59 since December.

Stuart W. Shadbolt, information officer for the N.C. Department of Correction, said the state's 83 prisons are designed to hold 15,591 inmates.

Swansboro Sets Arts Festival

SWANSBORO — The sixth annual Arts by the Sea, a cultural and entertainment festival sponsored by the Swansboro Merchants Association, will be held Saturday.

More than 40 artists and craftsmen will be displaying and selling items on the corner of Church and Front Streets on the waterfront beginning at 10 a.m.

Entertainment will include performances by singer Nancy Rowe, the Dune Buggy's Suitcase Circus, the Sandy Run Gospel Choir, and a water ski show.

Survey Freshmen Attending ECU

ECU News Bureau

More than half of East Carolina University's 1982-83 freshman class come from families with annual incomes of $30,000 or more, and well over half have parents who attended college, although only 3 percent are the offspring of East Carolina alumni.

The proportion of students from fairly affluent families is rising at ECU; 30.4 percent are members of families with incomes exceeding $40,000, a figure up seven percentage points from the previous freshman class. However, at the other end of the spectrum are 10 percent from very low socioeconomic backgrounds — annual incomes of less than $10,000 and at least one parent who did not complete high school.

These facts were among the results of an American Council on Education survey taken during the orientation of last year's freshmen. Results were released to the ECU Office of Student Life.

Only 5 percent of the freshmen have homes within 10 miles of the campus, and only 2.4 percent said they chose ECU because they wanted to live at home. Fifty-six percent live at least 100 miles from campus, and 23.3 live at least 50 miles away.

Nearly half the freshmen noted their religious preference as Protestant. Roman Catholics comprised another 13.6 percent, with 1.2 percent being Jewish respondents.

Less than a fourth of the respondents claimed to be receiving no financial support from their parents, with more than half receiving most of the funds for their educational expenses from parents. Only 17.9 percent said financing their college education was a "major concern."

Rangers Score Dozen To Rip Oakland, 16-4

By The Associated Press
For five tough extra innings, runs were hard to come by for the Texas Rangers.

Then came the 15th ... and they were literally cheaper by the dozen.

Checked by Oakland pitching from the 10th through the 14th, including one fruitless inning when Texas loaded the bases, the Rangers crashed out with a record 12 runs in the 15th to bury the A's 16-4 Sunday.

"It was an extremely strange game," Texas' Larry Bittner understated after the five-hour, 19-minute marathon that broke a 55-year old record for most runs scored in an extra inning. "It gets to the point where you just want to get it over with. It kind of humbles you a little."

The big inning surpassed the 1928 New York Yankees' 11 runs in one frame of an extra-inning game against the Detroit Tigers. In addition, Bobby Jones had two doubles in the inning to tie a major league record held by several players.

Jones' three doubles tied a club record and he tied another with his five hits. The 16 runs tied a club record for an extra inning game and the 21 hits in the game was one short of a club record set earlier this year. In addition, the 12 runs in an inning set another Texas record, as did the time of the game.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Seattle 4, Toronto 1; Detroit 10, Baltimore 1; Boston 7, New York 3; Minnesota 4, Chicago 3; California 5, Kansas City 2 and Cleveland 5, Milwaukee 2.

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 1

Glenn Abbott pitched a five-hitter and Pat Putnam hit a two-run homer to lead Seattle over Toronto.

Dave Stieb, 10-7, had set the Mariners down in order through the first four innings before walking Richie Zisk on a 3-2 pitch to lead off the fifth. Stieb worked Putnam to an 0-2 count, before the Seattle first baseman hit the next pitch for his eighth homer of the season.

Abbott, 3-0, struck out six and didn't walk a batter.

Tigers 10, Orioles 1

Lance Parrish keyed a four-run third inning with a two-run double and John Wockenfuss capped a five-run eighth with a grand slam homer as Detroit clubbed Baltimore.

Juan Berenguer, 4-1, pitched the first six innings for the Tigers, allowing only three hits, including Jim Dwyer's third-inning home run. Doug Bair pitched hitless ball over the final three innings to collect his first save as a Tiger.

The Tigers piled up 14 hits off four Baltimore pitchers, including Mike Boddicker, 4-4.

Red Sox 7, Yankees 3
Gary Allenson hit a three-run homer and Jim Rice continued his long-ball spree with his sixth homer in the last four games, powering Boston over New York.

Allenson's homer capped Boston's four-run fourth inning. It was his first in 68 at-bats this season, while Rice hit his American League-leading 22nd with one out in the seventh.

Winner Bob Ojeda, 5-3, gave up eight hits, struck out five and did not walk a batter before getting relief help in the eighth from Mark Clear, who gained his second save after giving up an RBI grounder to Dave Winfield.

Twins 4, White Sox 3

Ron Washington's bases-loaded single with two out in the ninth inning lifted Minnesota over Chicago. Before Washington came through, White Sox third baseman Lorezno Gray made a diving stop on a grounder to get a forceout at the plate.

Ron Davis, 3-3, pitched 1 1-3 innings of hitless ball to get the victory. He relieved Bobby Castillo, who pitched 6 1-3 innings of no-hit ball until Greg Luzinski hit a home run. The two combined for a four-hitter.

The White Sox tied the score 3-3 in the eighth inning on Carlton Fisk's two-run triple to chase Castillo.

Angels 5, Royals 2

Bobby Grich capped a three-run first inning with a two-run single and Ron Jackson blasted a two-run homer to carry California over Kansas City.

Rick Burleson's single triggered California's first-inning uprising off Bud Black, 3-3, that was capped by Grich's liner to center.

Willie Aikens cut into the lead with a solo homer in the Kansas City fourth, but Grich's leadoff single in the bottom of the inning was followed by Jackson's fourth homer of the season.

Indians 5, Brewers 2
Rick Sutcliffe scattered

seven hits in 8 2-3 innings and Toby Harrah's two-run homer capped a three-run seventh as Cleveland beat Milwaukee.

Sutcliffe raised his record to 10-3 with last-out relief help from Bud Anderson, who recorded his first major league save. Sutcliffe struck out six and walked four as Cleveland won for only the second time in its last nine games.

Chuck Porter, 0-4, yielded four runs over the first 6 1-3 innings to take the loss.

Baseball's All Star Clash Second 50th Anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston Red Sox reliever Bob Stanley has been picked twice to be a member of the American League All Stars, and he finds something a little unique in the timing of those selections.

"I played in the 50th game in 1979, and I'll be in the 50th year this time," Stanley says. "That's pretty good timing. Only thing is, I'd sure like to win one."

Baseball's two major leagues meet Wednesday night (7:40 p.m. CDT) at Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox, in the 50th anniversary edition of the All-Star Game, which began in 1933 as an adjunct to the Chicago World's in 1933. The game itself will be the 54rd, because it was held twice each from 1959 to 1962.

The National League has won the past 11 games and 19 of the last 20. Last year in Montreal, the first All-Star Game held outside the country, Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati hit a two-run homer in the second inning as the Nationals won 4-1.

"Everybody says it's because the National League has better players than the American League, but that's a lot of baloney," Stanley says of the NL's run of luck. "It's one game a year. I've only been in one before, so I don't know why the National League won all those others, but I'll tell you one thing, it's not like we're not trying."

Planters 4

Derek Leupon singled in a pair of runs and later scored in the third inning Sunday while Tim West threw a five-hitter to lead Everette's Pest Control to a 5-4 win over Planters National Bank for the Babe Ruth League championship.

Leupon, Lee Lewis and Axel Smith all had three hits for Everette's, while no one had more than one for Planters.

Leupon singled in Tom Rosche and George Saad, then crossed the plate on a single by Lewis.

Everette's put two runs on the board in the top of the first on a single by Smith, a double by Saad and a single by Curtis Perkins. But Planters answered with a pair in the bottom half of the frame.

Planters added a run in the third and another in the fifth, but stranded a runner at second with one out in the sixth.

Sportsworld 14
Kiwanis 2

Winning pitcher Tim Moore ripped a grand slam homer and Jeremy McAllister had a three-run blast to lead

Sportsworld past Kiwanis 14-2 Sunday in North State Little League baseball action.

Moore ripped three hits in four trips to the plate for Sportsworld while striking out 13 Kiwanis batters and giving up just one hit.

McAllister had two hits for Sportsworld.

Sportsworld jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning before McAllister's blast spread the margin to 7-0 in the second. Moore's homer came with two out in the top of the third.

Kiwanis scored a run in the third and another in fourth, but Sportsworld plated two in the fifth and another in the sixth.

Carroll & Asso. 6
Exchange 0

Julius Smith struck out 13 batters in throwing a one-hitter to lead Carroll and Associates to a 6-0 shutout over Exchange Sunday in Tar Heel Little League baseball.

Travis Williamson ripped a solo homer in the top of the second after Carroll and Associates had taken a 2-0 lead in the first. Shortstop Joel Daughtry had two hits for Carroll.

Carroll and Associates plated three more runs in the fourth to put the game out of reach.

Jazz Festival Ends With Warm Look To The Past

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A warm look back on a hot summer night at songs of the Depression ended this year's Kool Jazz Festival on a note of good music and old friends. Most of the players Sunday in "Hard Times, Good Times with Studs Terkel" were old enough to remember the Depression. They have the white hair to prove it and the songs ready to blow. Pianist Teddy Wilson said he didn't suffer in the Depression. He started on the road with the Pete Webb Band, went to Milton Senior, worked in a place run by Al Capone.

"The Grand Terrace paid $35 a week," Wilson said. "That was living well in those days. Everybody was dancing to our music."

The evening began with a spotlight on a gramophone playing a record of "Brother Can You Spare a Dime" sung by Bing Crosby. Terkel, who narrated, often obtrusively, said Depression songs were either realistic like that one or escapist like "Wrap Your Troubles in Dreams." That was played by the first combo — saxophonist Eddie Barefield, 73, trombonist Vic Dickenson, 76, trumpeter Doc Cheatham, 78, guitarist Danny Barker, 74, bassist Milt Hinton, 73, and drummer Panama Francis, 64. Cheatham soloed instrumentally and sang, "I guess I'll have to call my broker. I'm in the market for you." Later Dickenson soloed and sang "I've Got a Pocketful of Dreams."

Dolly Dawn, 64, who became a band "girl singer" at 13, sang "Ten Cents a Dance," "I've Got the World on a String," "Underneath the Arches."

Saxophonist Lawrence "Bud" Freeman, 77, played a couple of things, then was joined by Miss Dawn on Rodgers and Hart's "I've Got $5. (Two shirts with collars. They all belong to you.)" Jay McSham, 74, who virtually steals every show he's on with his piano, accompanied Big Joe Turner, 72, in a couple of strong-voiced blues shouts and a final "Roll 'Em, Pete." Teddy Wilson, 70, applied his light touch to "On the Street of Dreams."

Mitchell Parish, who specialized in escape instead of realism lyrics in the Depression, sang his most famous lyric, "Stardust." Singer Maxine Sullivan, 72, lightly swung "Getting a Little Fun out of Life," "I've Got the World on a String" and "A Hundred Years from Today." She was accompanied by bassist Jack Lesberg, 63, drummer Johnny Blowers and pianist George Wein, 57.

Cornettist Jimmy McPartland, 76, an ebullient, natural leader, headed the final combo, including saxophonists Freeman and Eddie Miller, 72, clarinetist Johnny Mince, 70, trombonist Stiegel Wilcox from the Jean Goldkette Band days.

The final rouser, including everybody plus cornettist Dick Sudhalter, 44, was the biggest Depression escapism song of all, "We're in the Money."

Amusement Over Beach Boys Is Wearing Thin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wayne Newton says he likes the Beach Boys, too, and that his initial amusement with the controversy over this year's Fourth of July concert at the Washington Monument is starting to wear thin.

"When I first heard about all the furor, I laughed," the Las Vegas crooner said in an interview Sunday as he prepared for tonight's free show. "I thought it was pretty funny because the Beach Boys are friends of mine."

"I'm still amused by it, but I'm also pretty tired of it. I feel like I've gotten a bum rap because of this whole thing. It's sort of like getting the old pie in the face."

Newton said he had agreed to do the show six weeks before the controversy arose in April as a result of remarks by Interior Secretary James Watt.

Watt said he wanted Newton rather than a rock group because previous July 4th concerts on the Mall had drawn the "wrong element." The National Park Service, part of the Interior Department, oversees Mall concerts.

The March King

Everyone — young or old — loves a good marching band. And much of the music you'll hear at Fourth of July Parades today was composed by John Philip Sousa. Sousa won the name "The March King" by composing about 140 of America's best-known marches, including "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Semper Fidelis." From 1880 to 1892, Sousa led the U.S. Marine Corp band, one of our country's oldest musical organizations. Afterward, he formed his own band and toured the world, playing his own marches and popularizing the music of Tchaikovsky, Liszt, and Wagner. The Sousa band was so successful that it sparked the creation of local and high school marching bands throughout America.

DO YOU KNOW—What is the meaning of the Marine Corp motto "Semper Fidelis?"

Child Search Continuing

ROAN MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — The search for a frightened 8-year-old Hickory boy lost on Roan Mountain was scheduled to resume this morning, with more than 100 police officers plus volunteers from North Carolina and Tennessee involved in the operation.

Searchers called off the second-day of their manhunt Sunday night as darkness fell. Michael Eugene Reel apparently wandered off from a campsite he shared with his mother, Patricia Reel, either late Friday night or early Saturday morning, Carter County, Tenn., Sheriff's Deputy Joe Valentine said.

"They did have a sighting of him earlier today," Avery County Sheriff's Dispatcher Mark Phillips said Sunday. "Now they're getting the dogs up there. He just won't come to the people that see him. Evidently he's pretty scared and won't come to them."

When the mother awoke Saturday morning, the boy was missing and she reported him missing at 12:18 p.m., Valentine said.

Roan Mountain is about 30 miles southwest of Boone, near the North Carolina-Tennessee state line.

Phillips said searchers in helicopters were using a loudspeaker to try to talk the boy into coming out into the open, but had no luck as of 9:30 p.m. Sunday.

Half Price For The Baldheads

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A barber's deal could mean big savings for the shiny-domed set: 50 percent off on haircuts for bald men.

Mike Darnell, president of First Place, said the Bald Man's Special will be available this month at his company's seven locations, and could be offered permanently.

The special "makes a valid point for the bald man," said Darnell.

"Some won't admit it, but for the ones who are proud of it, it's really fair," he said. "They shouldn't pay full price."

Darnell, who once managed three of the stores, said when balding men came in for a haircut, they often balked at the $12 price.

"So I'd say, I tell you what. I'll make you a deal. I'll give you a 30 percent discount if you're 30 percent bald."

Receding hairlines don't count, said Richard Drew, business manager at one of the salons. He says it's easy to determine a man's extent of baldness. "Generally, if they have a few hairs on top they're considered bald," he said.

By 6th Wife

LONDON (AP) — A letter from Henry VIII's sixth wife, Katherine Parr, expressing her "great joy and comfort" at becoming the king's bride, will be sold at auction by Sotheby's on July 11.

Miss Farr accepted the king's proposal knowing two of her predecessors had been beheaded, two divorced and the other died soon after childbirth. They were married July 12, 1543, and she was still married to Henry when he died in 1547.

White House Aides Ponder Briefing Book's Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House aides say it's too early to assess the impact of the investigation into how President Reagan's aides got secret briefing material from Jimmy Carter's campaign, but they've given up hope the matter will just fade away.

The key question is how the documents, made public by the White House last week, got from the Carter White House into the hands of Reagan's campaign aides, such as CIA Director William Casey, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, Communications Director David R. Gergen and Budget Director David Stockman.

The Justice Department and a congressional subcommittee are conducting separate investigations to answer that question.

The Justice Department announced last Thursday it has instructed the FBI to conduct a full fledged inquiry and deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Sunday that White House officials are being told to cooperate fully with it.

Barnard "held a meeting of some of the witnesses at his jail before some of the witnesses came to the grand jury."

Barnard said that some of the witnesses met at the county jail on the way to Asheville, but he said there was no discussion of the grand jury.

"They just came by here and carpooled," he said. "It just made sense. The jail is the safest place to leave a car, I guess."

Barnard said he did not know of any election fraud in the county.

Carter's former pollster, Patrick Caddell, says there's no way the same person could have had access to all of the documents the White House made public or said it had access to just before the Oct. 28, 1980 Reagan-Carter debate.

If nothing else, the furor has emphasized the factionalism within the White House. Each of Reagan's top four advisers has his own loyal cadre of workers, many of whom gloat when one of the others is in trouble.

It's Baker and Gergen, who reports to Baker, who are in the spotlight and some in the camps of Counsellor Edwin Meese, National Security Adviser William Clark and deputy White House Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver aren't all that upset.

"Mr. Clean is getting knocked around," said one dejected Baker loyalist, talking on the condition his name not be used.

As chief of staff, Baker occasionally has had to tell others in the White House to watch their behavior. As a result, said the source, "There are people sneering (and) ... laughing that it's a 'Baker side' problem."

The source said Baker "is taking it very hard."

Baker has said he recalls getting a Carter briefing book and believes he got it from Casey, who says he can't remember seeing it.

Gergen at first said he couldn't recall getting any papers, but later found some material in his files and apologized for the error.

"He's definitely wounded," the source said of Gergen. "I think people (within the White House) are more openly attacking him."

A top level administration official, who also would only speak on grounds he not be identified by name, said he believed the degree of scandal ultimately involved in the matter would depend on whether the documents were stolen or leaked.

"If people say, 'Wait a minute. What they (Reagan aides) had was issue material ... and there's no evidence that it was acquired in any manner than perhaps being leaked, it won't matter what the Justice Department does or Albosta's committee," he said, referring to the investigation begun by Rep. Donald Albosta, D-Mich.

This official suggested that reporters who accept leaked material and congressmen who leak it would not be in a legitimate position to criticize the Reagan campaign for obtaining leaked information, if that was how it was acquired.

"Unfortunately, I do not think it is uncommon for material from one campaign to come into another, just as I do not think it is uncommon for (reporters) to take stuff that is leaked from the government," he said.

"If it's unethical to take something that turned out not to be sensitive material — I don't think anybody suggests it was illegal — then I suggest that what's done every day in Washington by Congress and by the press (is also unethical)," said the official.

Jody Powell, who was

Reagan's press secretary, said he didn't believe a distinction between "leaked" or "stolen" was "terribly meaningful."

Port-Of-Call

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The battleship USS New Jersey arrived here Sunday for its first foreign port call since it was reactivated last year to bolster U.S. power in the Pacific.

Recommissioned in December, the 40-year-old ship is equipped with 48 cruise missiles, the Navy says. It also has nine 16-inch guns and can fire armor-piercing projectiles weighing up to 1,700 pounds for a distance of 23 nautical miles. The ship has a top speed of 35.5 knots. The New Jersey, decommissioned for the third time in December 1969, saw action in Leyte Gulf in World War II, and in Korea and Vietnam. It carries a crew of 68 officers and 1,325 men.

Vote-Buying Evidence In Clay County Claimed

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — FBI agents have uncovered evidence that elections officials may have been involved in an organized vote-buying operation during last November's elections in Clay County, according to documents filed in federal court.

Clay is one of several counties in western North Carolina where federal agents have interviewed residents about voting irregularities. A federal grand jury meeting in Asheville has heard evidence in the case and will reconvene this week.

Documents filed by defense attorneys and U.S. District Judge Woodrow W. Jones indicate that Dolle Crisp, chairman of the Clay County Board of Elections, and Frankie M. Campbell, an elections clerk in Clay, are targets of the investigation.

Mrs. Crisp said last week that she wasn't aware of any vote buying.

"There was no conspiracy. It was a fair and honest election," she said. "I was out there (at the polls) the entire time, and nothing went on that wasn't clearly above board."

Charles R. Brewer, U.S. attorney for North Carolina's Western District, said last week that voting-law violations in at least one county may be serious enough to change the results of some state office elections. But Brewer declined to name the county or discuss the investigation in detail.

A motion filed by Brewer June 10 relates some of the allegations in the Clay County investigation.

"The investigation to date...indicates that the election fraud in Clay County was carried out for the benefit of particular candidates," the motion said. "There existed some degree of central organization in the scheme, in which various individuals...carried out one segment of a larger plan."

Another allegation in Brewer's motion was that some of the participants in the alleged vote-buying scheme, with the help of Sheriff Howard Barnard of Clay County, may have conspired "to form a common defense, to control lesser culpable individuals and thwart the grand jury investigation."

Brewer's motion said

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

County Extension Chairman Will it take an ideal production season for any single field on your farm to produce a profit in soybeans?

If so, this might be the year to leave that field idle, according to Jim Dunphy, extension soybean specialist for North Carolina State University.

While soybean prices are expected to remain high enough to offer some profits to farmers with above-average yields, they do not offer much hope for anyone who doesn't expect much over 20 bushels per acre.

Out-of-pocket costs are estimated to run about $137 per acre of soybeans grown in North Carolina including no profit and no returns to land or management. At $6.50 per bushel, higher than most elevators are currently offering, it would take just over 21 bushels to break even. That's a figure that farmers with no equipment payment should look at. If he owns his own equipment, he can put off the replacement costs for a year or two. But if he has equipment payments to make, he probably should be looking at more realistic costs approaching $200 per acre that would take 30 bushels of soybeans to break even.

This is what we call an "extremely short-term survival strategy" and offers a few tips to help farmers work their way through less than desirable prices and uncertain yields.

For a lot of farmers, management time has been at a premium. They have expanded their acreage of all crops so much that they have had to take some management short cuts. They have adopted one general weed control program, for example, for their entire acreage rather than taking extra time to develop the ideal program for each field.

We have an arsenal of first-rate herbicides in soybeans and we still have the option of cultivation. Those who take the time can save money and wind up with the most effective weed control programs by combining cultivation, banded and directed herbicides, figuring where the new post-emergence grass herbicides will fit.

Willie Hosts Holiday Picnic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Country music superstar Willie Nelson gave a Fourth of July picnic, and 50,000 friends came.

The football field at Giants Stadium here was covered with a turquoise canvas and looked like a huge swimming pool with thousands of bodies moving in waves to the sounds of country, rock and pop performers.

The 10-hour music marathon began shortly after noon Sunday, marking the first time Nelson's decade-old Texas tradition has moved to the Northeast.

Temperatures reached 115 degrees on the field and of medicines treated more than 200 people for the effects of the heat.

But the mood was upbeat as fans listened to Nelson and others, including Linda Ronstadt, Waylon Jennings, Emmylou Harris, Merle Haggard, and the rockabilly trio Stray Cats.

Set Feeder Calf Sale In Ayden

A state graded feeder calf sale will be held in Ayden at the East Carolina Stockyard Sept. 5 sponsored by the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

County livestock agent Miriam Lewis offers the following suggestions to pork producers for preparing for the sale:

- Vaccinate calves for blackleg and malignant edema at least 14 days before the sale.
- Castrate bull calves and dehorn all calves. Worm all calves.
- Use growth stimulants, especially in steer calves.
- Provide clean water for all cattle.
- Control flies by use of ear tags, spraying, dust bags and back rubbers.

For further information contact Miriam Lewis at 757-2934.
