N.C. House Gives Final Okay To Tax Bill

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House today gave final approval to a $219.2 million tax package that would raise the sales tax on new cars and liquor sold to bars and restaurants.

The Senate was expected to endorse the package later today.

The bill, compiled by a 14-member joint conference committee, also would levy a tax on video games and accelerate some corporate tax payments.

Final House vote was 72-9, with all opposition coming from Republicans. There was no debate.

Thursday's House vote, which again came after no debate, was 92-13 with Republicans registering the only opposition.

The Senate voted 45-4 Thursday to tentatively approve the bill, with only Republicans voting against the measure. Two Republicans — Sen. Ken Harris of Mecklenburg County and Sen. William Redman of Iredell County — voted for the bill.

Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, told the Senate that the bill should raise the tax on beer and wine in addition to raising the tax on liquor sold for consumption in mixed drinks and raising the price of liquor-by-the-drink permits.

He said the additional money could pay for a higher salary raise for public school teachers or help avoid raising the motor carrier fuel tax sticker fee and annual car license registration fee.

The proposed tax plan would:

— Raise $5 million in 1983-84 by increasing the cost of a motor carrier fuel tax sticker from $1 to $10.

— Raise $13.4 million by raising the price of annual car license registration from $16 to $20.

— Repeal the $200 income tax exclusion for interest earnings to generate $8 million.

— Accelerate corporate tax payments for companies with state income tax liabilities of $5,000 or more to raise $27.2 million.

— Levy a sales tax on computer programs sold for mass use to raise $1 million.

— Lift the sales tax ceiling on new cars, boats and planes from $120 to $300 and levy a tax on used car sales to get $57.3 million.

— Levy a sales tax on vacation home rentals for $4 million.

— Levy a $15 per machine tax on video games for $400,000.

— Raise the tax on liquor purchased by mixed-drink permit holders from $10 a gallon to $15 a gallon and raise the price of mixed drink permits for $2.3 million.

Jobless Rate Continues Its Gradual Drop

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

The civilian unemployment rate dipped to 10 percent in June from 10.1 percent in May, continuing a gradual retreat from the post-Depression peak of 10.8 percent last December, the Labor Department said today.

The small decline in the jobless rate came even though the labor force experienced its largest May-to-June growth ever. The government's seasonally adjusted figures said 1.2 million people resumed the search for work last month.

There had been fears that a return to the labor force by previously discouraged workers and the summer surge of student job-seekers might push the unemployment rate higher.

The improved employment picture was the latest in a series of upbeat economic reports, including growth in retail sales, factory use and housing activity, while gains in holding down inflation continued.

But the nation's financial markets appear to be plagued by a nagging worry among investors about rising interest rates.

That concern was cited Thursday by analysts as a key reason the stock market went into a tailspin, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks falling 10.21 points, to 1,210.44. All of the loss came in the final hour of trading.

Ex-Judge And Deputy Nabbed In Drug Probe

EVERGLADES CITY, Fla. (AP) — A former state Supreme Court justice was among 28 people arrested after a two-year drug smuggling probe in this quaint fishing village led to the seizure of marijuana worth $140 million, officials said.

Before Thursday's "Operation Everglades" raid, law enforcement officials had tried for years to crack down on smuggling around the southwest Florida town of 346 people.

"We were beat," said Collier County Sheriff Aubrey Rogers. "Two thousand square miles. All that water — you're dealing with a nightmare."

Fishermen-turned-smugglers used backwater routes along hundreds of narrow creeks, the same serpentine waterways favored by rum runners during Prohibition.

Agents said residents began getting conspicuously wealthy in the mid-1970s.

"Years ago ... (they) would go out and poach alligator, deer, turtles, anything they could to keep eating," said Florida Marine Patrol Officer Garold Glendening. "They were, I would say, poor people, but when they started doing this (smuggling) they could go out and make $50,000 in one night."

Briefing Book

Reagan Tells His Senior Staff Get To The Bottom

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a move his spokesman says will "underscore" his commitment to full disclosure in the briefing book case, told his senior staff today he wants to "get to the bottom" of the affair.

Unannounced, Reagan walked into a meeting of his senior advisers and told them "to continue to cooperate fully with the FBI and to tell everything they know" about allegations of political espionage during the 1980 presidential campaign.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes quoted Reagan as telling his staff, "We want to get to the bottom of this, and we want it out in the open."

He said the president promised to make himself available for FBI questioning if the bureau requests him to.

Although Reagan has made almost identical remarks earlier as the investigation began into an apparent flow of documents and political intelligence from the Carter White House to the 1980 Reagan campaign, Speakes had portrayed Reagan as being a disinterested observer in the matter.

The spokesman said today that Reagan's role remained the same but that he wanted to "underscore" his commitment to full disclosure, at least to the Justice Department.

Speakes said that chief of staff James A. Baker III, who was chairing the early morning session, relinquished his seat to the president.

At one point, Reagan told counsellor Edwin K. Meese III, who oversees the Cabinet, to "see to it that the Cabinet and everyone else in the administration" follows his instructions.

Then, to counsel Fred Fielding, Reagan said:

"Tell the FBI that everybody is cooperating fully and will be available for questioning, including me."

We want the truth."

Speakes said Reagan then stood up and left without pausing to chat or take questions.

Just Thursday, the president's spokesman told reporters that Reagan had had no recent discussions with aides on the matter. Over the past several days, Speakes had repeatedly said that Reagan had not been briefed on the case.

Earlier, congressional sources said that Reagan's former national security adviser, Richard V. Allen, had indicated to House investigators who he believes supplied him with the Carter White House material, supplied any documents.

It could not be determined whether Allen provided a name or simply a description of his purported source in his Thursday meeting with investigators from a House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee. But the sources, who declined to be identified, said investigators were moving quickly to follow up Allen's leads.

Today's editions of The New York Times quoted an unnamed White House official as saying Allen "has suggested" to the White House that he received information from Jerry D. Jennings, a member of Carter's National Security Council staff.

Compromises Underline Disagreement Within Caribbean Conference

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Leaders of the English-speaking Caribbean adjourned their summit this morning after an all-night session that brought compromise on trade and education issues but underlined the political differences that threaten their 13-member group.

The Caribbean Community and Common Market members adjourned at 5:30 a.m. EDT, and plan to work out final details on their agreements later today, the fifth day of the scheduled four-day summit.

Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga expressed disappointment that his goal of involving other Caribbean nations in the Caribbean Community and Common Market was stopped.

"So far as widening the community, there was no decision because there was clear ideological conflict," Seaga said.

Grenada's leftist prime minister, Maurice Bishop, blocked observer status for the Dominican Republic, Seaga indicated in an earlier television interview.

The Caricom rules require unanimity on all actions, which Seaga said allowed "rule by a minority of one."

There was reportedly heated debate on related issues, ranging from criteria for Caricom membership to changing the unanimity rule to majority rule. Asked if there was discussion of amending the Caricom treaty to allow for expulsion of members, Seaga noted that such an amendment would have to be accepted unanimously.

"I'm fearful that any agenda which has any ideological components are going to be frustrated. The community won't be able to play one of its principal roles" of forming a joint foreign policy for the region, Seaga said.

He said earlier that the Caribbean nation of 5.5 million Spanish-speaking people would double the size of Caricom's consumer market and allow "expansion beyond our English-speaking club."

Seaga, speaking in a television interview between the closed-door sessions, said leftist-governed Grenada advocated observer status for "another Marxist-Leninist state," apparently meaning Suriname. The former Dutch colony has been under military rule since 1980.

Donald Rojas, Grenada's minister of information, said it was "inaccurate" to say Grenada had blocked the Dominican Republic proposal.

"Our position is that we're going to take it and study for a while," he said.

Caricom observers can attend committee meetings and other functions without casting a vote. The only previous observer, the Bahamas, became a full member this week.

SHARED COSTS

Hotline's information reported in Thursday's column was provided by a Greenville Jaycees member directly involved with the fireworks display. He stated that the cost of materials for Greenville's Fourth of July fireworks was provided by the local Pepsi-Cola bottling company, with know-how, labor and advertising by the Greenville Jaycees, who held the entire Fourth of July day of activities for the community. However, the Jaycees president, Brad Walls, says that the expenses of both the fireworks materials and the advertising were paid for by both the Jaycees and Pepsi-Cola.

MAGNET PROGRAM

I am a parent concerned that not enough parents of Greenville public school students know about the fast-approaching deadline for enrollment of children in the Magnet School program for gifted and talented children. P.A.

Applications are now available, Ann Harrison of the Greenville schools said. The forms may be picked up at any kindergarten-third grade school or at the school system's central office, 431 W. Fifth St. They must be returned no later than July 30. Parents will be notified as to whether children are accepted by Aug. 8. For more information about the program, contact the central office or any K-3 principal, she suggested.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins said this morning he is waiting for the results of a preliminary survey by a local advertising firm before deciding whether or not to enter the race for governor in 1984.

Jenkins, former chancellor of East Carolina University, said Adams & Longino Advertising Inc. is polling active Democrats in a preliminary effort to determine support for his candidacy. "When that is done, we'll move from there," and decide about entering the race, he said.

Advertising firm spokesman Frank Longino said today that a committee of four has been formed "to examine his (Jenkins') support across the state."

"We're currently sending some letters out to people who are active Democrats, asking if they would support" Jenkins' candidacy, "as a measurement of the type of support he could figure on."

"We feel 60 to 70 percent of the voters are real soft as to their support of any candidate at this time," Longino said.

"We're just measuring support right now. If there is support, we will do statewide polling, and find out what the issues are." If Jenkins does have support, Longino said, "It will probably be late August or early September before we do statewide polling, and late September before he would announce his candidacy."

Longino said Jenkins has received "about $5,000 in donations so far from private sources and friends" to fund the polling. "The letters are not asking for donations," Longino said, but Greenville accountant "Frank Freuler has been named treasurer of the committee to accept donations."

Jenkins retired as ECU chancellor in 1978.

Romance Lives On At Attractive Niagara Falls

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — When Love Canal became the national symbol of a toxic wasteland, America's tourist agents worried that as far as Niagara Falls was concerned, the honeymoon was over. "Romance lives," says Mayor Michael C. O'Laughlin, in a voice that matches the thunder of the falls. From the looks of all the hand-holding and daytime smooching going on around the great cataract at this time of year, the mayor is obviously right. The current wedding season requires his honor's services for about a dozen couples every weekend who want to be married by the mayor of Niagara Falls. Call it sentiment.

"I take them to the Wintergarden and hold the ceremony among the plants," he says. "Very pretty. Very romantic."

The Wintergarden is a huge greenhouse, big as a city block, built as a centerpiece in a downtown renewal project. But when you talk about plants in Niagara Falls, you must be specific.

The plants most honeymooners see first are chemical plants. These and other drab, foul-smelling constructions of pipes and stacks and rusty railroad cars and buildings with grime-blackened windows stretch for four miles along the main approach to this love nest and extend almost to the brink of the falls. Indeed, the first glimpse of the spray of the falls, rising from the Niagara gorge, is lost amid billowing factory smoke.

The planners who envisioned the Wintergarden also envisioned a line of tall trees along the highway to hide the factories, and planted them. Pollution killed them.

Scott and Mindy Coulter, driving here from their home in Leetonia, Ohio, anticipation mounting with every mile nearer to the Honeymoon Capital of the World, reacted typically to the final stretch.

"Looks like 'Youngstown,'" Mindy muttered. "It didn't deter us," Scott said later. "Once you pass the factories, it's a different world."

Amen. The acreage surrounding the falls on both the American and Canadian sides is parkland set aside by both governments a century ago. For lovers of trimmed grass, comfortable benches, clean drinking fountains, lovers of daffodil blossoms as big as grapefruits watered by the falls' mist, lovers of an oriole singing from a papaw tree, or from 278 other varieties of trees, as well as for just plain lovers, it is as Scott Coulter said, a different world.

For all the factories that mar a first impression, not to mention the bad reputation that Love Canal, five miles from the falls, gave the place, the irony is that Niagara Falls was probably never more attractive than now. At least that is the testimony of some longtime residents who talked about the old days on the front porch of their rest home. All agreed the odor is improved. The falls are receding at the rate of about five feet a year, creation still in progress. The lesson seems to be that as long as they remain, no ugliness man can contrive will discourage people from wanting to see them.

Why, especially, honeymooners? That's obvious, too.

One typical day recently, the morning sun over the jade green water produced its customary rainbow in the explosive spray of the biggest splash on earth. Gulls wheeled in the mist. As the sun descended, a second rainbow took form. Two rainbows. One predictable rainbow above the gorge, one gift rainbow in the sky. The sun sank. The moon made its appearance. The gulls flew off to roost. The mist grew chilly.

If a day like that doesn't stir your juices, sweetheart, you have no soul.

Engagement Announced

STACEY LYNN MCKINNEY...is the daughter of Mrs. Frances J. McKinney of Winterville and Curtis Conway McKinney of Plymouth, who announce her engagement to Thomas Nathan Conner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul N. Conner of Gastonia. The wedding is planned for July 30.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Bride Bends A Tradition

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I did not agree with "Sentimental's" desire to have her mother walk her down the aisle and give her away instead of her father because her parents were divorced. And worse yet, you said there was nothing "improper" about it, and encouraged her to do so. What an insult to her father! I'm glad I wasn't invited to that wedding.

My ex-husband and I have been divorced for 18 years, but he walked our two daughters down the aisle, which made everyone very happy. After all, he is their father, he did give them life.

He may have been a lousy husband, but if it weren't for him, I wouldn't have my wonderful children.

GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: "Sentimental" said she preferred to have her mother walk her down the aisle instead of her father, not because they were divorced, but because her mother had raised her alone — with no help from her father.

This, in my book, makes him a "lousy" father who did not deserve the honor of giving his daughter away. (He gave her away years ago.)

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the boy who chose to get his high school diploma even though he was in jail: Hurrah for him! Send me his address and I'll send him a graduation present.

EX-"CON" COLLEGE GRADUATE

DEAR GRAD: Sorry. Neither the name of the boy nor his location was disclosed in the letter, but thanks for a sweet and generous thought.

DEAR ABBY: How can I persuade my husband to start getting professional haircuts at a barber shop? He is quite content to have me cut his hair, although I have had no training and the results are mediocre — to say the least.

When we married 10 years ago and we both were in graduate school, he asked me to cut his hair in order to save money. I did, and it's been my job ever since.

We are both working professionally now and he can well afford to go to a barber shop, but he doesn't see any sense in "throwing out" money.

I have stalled, hoping he would go to a barber, but he just waits until I cut his hair. He has never been vain about his appearance and doesn't care whether his hair is long, short, stylish or not. If he were your husband, how would you handle it?

HIS LOVING WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I would say, "Honey, you deserve to look spiffier. If you don't want to go to a professional barber for yourself, please do it for me."

DEAR ABBY: I married when I was 22. Three years later I had a baby girl. (She was planned.) When our daughter was 4, we had another child. Before I gave birth, my husband and I decided that if we had a boy, our family would be complete.

We were lucky. We had a beautiful baby boy, and I had my tubes tied.

The Lord took our son from us last November, and now we want another child. Is it possible to have my tubes "untied" now? I am 33.

HOPING

DEAR HOPING: Depending on the type of tubal ligation you had, your chances for becoming pregnant again following a reversal operation are between 70 percent and 80 percent. Good luck.

A new and refreshing recipe.
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
6-ounce can regular cocktail vegetable juice
6-ounce can spicy cocktail vegetable juice
8 ounces (1 cup) plain yogurt
1 cup (lightly packed) cooked tiny broccoli flowerets

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over regular cocktail vegetable juice and let soften — about 5 minutes. In a small saucepan heat spicy cocktail vegetable juice to boiling, pour over gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add yogurt and beat until blended — there should be no flecks. Add broccoli. Chill until mixture begins to thicken. Stir gently to distribute broccoli. Turn into 1/2 cup molds or 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. Unmold at serving time. Color will be a rosy beige rather than a rosy red. Makes 4 servings.

Couple Honored Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Brooks of Greenville were honored Sunday on their 50th wedding anniversary at an open house held at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Ron and Barbara Magahey, in Tallahassee, Fla.

On Saturday the couple was honored at a reception dinner at the Silver Slipper Restaurant in Tallahassee.

For the open house, the honoree wore a yellow ensemble complemented by a corsage of white roses.

The couple's three children, their spouses, 10 grandchildren, Mrs. Brooks' sister, Mary Schall of Cleveland, Ohio, and cousins attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are the parents of Bradford E. Brooks of Del Ray Beach, Fla., Dale D. Brooks of Greenville and Mrs. Magahey.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks have lived in Greenville for 34 years.

COMPANY DINNER

Lime Glacee
Grilled Chicken & Vegetables
Peach Upsidedown Cake

LIME GLACEE
My friend Jonathan Dudley often serves this to hot-weather dinner guests.

6 cups chicken stock
1 medium onion, sliced
2 ribs celery (leaves included), chopped
5 cloves garlic, crushed
3 sprigs parsley
3 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
8 tablespoons fresh lime juice, strained
3 drops Tabasco
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
2 tablespoons candied ginger, chopped

Pour chicken stock into a large pot, add onions, celery, and garlic, bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer 1 hour. Drop parsley to wilt in stock; remove and transfer to blender with 1 cup of the stock, blend well, and return to pot. Stir mixture well, then pour through a fine sieve into a large bowl, pressing with back of spoon to get all liquid. Dissolve gelatin in 1/4 cup water, add to hot liquid, and stir till dissolved completely. Cool to room temperature, stir in lime juice and Tabasco, and chill till thickened. Serve in icy-cold glass cups or bowls topped with generous dollops of cream. Garnish each portion with 1 teaspoon candied ginger. Serves 4 to 6.

COTTAGE INDUSTRIES

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Students at Stanford University are cashing in early on their educations by running small but successful computer companies from their dormitory rooms and homes.

A few students have reported running million-dollar businesses, from designing and marketing video games to writing software programs. There are so many students involved that a Center for Entrepreneurship has been formed to offer advice and put them in touch with other capitalists.

University officials point to a national trend in student-run businesses. Harvard, Dartmouth and Carnegie-Mellon universities also have established entrepreneurial centers.

Memory Survives

One by one, the great names in the music field and times known as the Swing Era are leaving the scene. The most recent was Harry James.

It seemed incongruous, at first. There was this circus band trumpeter who avoided using the conventional mute in his horn that other musicians of the day affected, and played his trumpet with flair.

In time, the whole country sat up and listened; the style was accepted; the talent appreciated; the music beloved.

There were few in the 48 states who did not immediately recognize the name or the style. Harry James became one of the score or so dance band leaders who were a byword among the dancing generation of 40-odd years ago.

His horn and his band were in demand long after rock groups made the scene, and the James' versatility was illustrated by occasional lapses into rock music; but it was the familiar sounds of the past people mostly came to hear.

The music of Harry James made millions upon millions of people happy. One can hardly imagine a better memory to leave behind.

Class Counts

In the ordinary world of men, being 44 years old means the prime of life; but not in baseball. In baseball, a player gaining age 44 is approaching the Ancient Mariner.

Usually, that is. Gaylord Perry is the exception.

At an age when ballplayers are acquiring a paunch and watching the game in front of a television screen, he won't buy it. He'd rather share the action than just watch.

So he's trim, plying his trade with all the wealth of experience he has acquired, playing the game he loves most, and is still in demand among the major leagues.

It is something that should make 44-year-olds all over the land feel good.

Even we, something under 44 and over 18 (we wish), felt some satisfaction on reading Perry was wanted by the Kansas City Royals.

Class still counts.

Discount Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — With applause still ringing for his work in bringing down interest rates, it might seem embarrassing for Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker to have to raise the Fed's own lending rate just before Senate confirmation hearings on his reappointment.

After all, it was a decline, not a rise, in interest rates that ended the recession. And economists say newly climbing rates are the biggest threat to recovery.

However, an increase now by Volcker and his Fed colleagues — if it happens — would be clearly in line with their oft-stated inflation-fighting theories.

Private analysts have been saying for more than a week that a rise in the Federal Reserve's "discount rate" on loans to member banks is virtually inevitable in light of the facts that other interest rates have been rising for several months and the nation's money supply has been growing rapidly.

The discount rate, though affecting a relatively small percentage of loans, is important because it does affect banks' own borrowing costs and because it serves as a visible clue to the private thoughts of the Fed governors.

At present, the Fed's money — at 8½ percent interest — is simply too cheap when the rates for overnight loans among the banks themselves have been above that level for weeks.

In addition, and perhaps more importantly, economists are waiting for a signal from the Federal Reserve that it won't tolerate too-rapid growth in the nation's supply of money and credit.

The way the theory goes, a surging money supply eventually would beget a new surge in inflation. And lenders would raise rates quickly — thereby slowing or even stifling the recovery — by adding an inflation premium because higher prices would mean their loans would be repaid in less-valuable dollars.

So although Federal Reserve action to raise its own discount rate might have the immediate effect of encouraging banks to raise other rates — such as the prime lending rate — it would also show the Fed's determination to restrain the long-term growth of available credit. And that could be more important in the long term.

Incidentally, the Federal Reserve, which is the nation's central bank, apparently has also tightened its grip at least slightly on the money supply. But that involves less-visible actions.

The entire issue is a complicated subject but an important one. Economists with widely varying views of many issues are in basic agreement that very tight control by the Federal Reserve deepened — or even caused — the 1981-82 recession. And they say the Fed's easing during the second half of last year helped the economy revive.

But enough is enough for Wall Street lenders and investors worried more about future inflation than today's conditions. And their fears matter since interest rates they might raise could, by most accounts, do significant damage to the recovery.

Volcker, as is his agency's custom, has said nothing in public about the discount rate recently, but Federal Reserve schedules indicate it has been discussed at numerous meetings involving the chairman and his six fellow Fed governors.

He is scheduled to appear next Thursday before the Senate Banking Committee, which is expected to give easy approval to his reappointment to a second term by President Reagan.

There has been some speculation that he would be reluctant to raise the rate just before his appearance — in other words, taking an action that would be sure to draw criticism from senators who have in the past blamed the depth of the recession on Volcker's monetary policies.

Such criticism has been muted as the national recovery has picked up speed in the past few months. But Volcker and his colleagues are now facing the hard choices they knew they would have to face, and it seems very unlikely the euphoria will last.

Washington is still in shock. It's hard for any of us to believe that someone in the Reagan political camp would have resorted to stealing President Carter's black briefing book during the 1980 campaign — the one which was prepared for the Carter-Reagan debate.

President Reagan first called it "Much ado about nothing." Then when the briefing book hit the fan he turned it over to his Justice Department to see what the fuss was all about.

We pundits are keeping an open mind on the purloined book. Most American jour-

RALEIGH — Last December, the Governor's Crime Commission worried out loud about the future of the juvenile justice system. Noting that today's worst juvenile criminals are committing increasingly horrendous crimes, the commission expressed concern that a sensational criminal act by a juvenile could create political pressure to scuttle the entire system.

The fear is not unfounded. Public reaction to a pair of horrific crimes in Maine and New York had led to quick, and probably unjustified, action by the Legislatures there. So, the commission proposed changing North Carolina juvenile law so the most serious juvenile offenders wouldn't be coddled by the state. One of those proposals neared ratification this week with some basic questions still up for debate.

Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, proposed legislation early in the session that would allow judges to see the juvenile records of adults who are about to be sentenced for a crime. A "pattern of conduct" develops during a person's life, Staton says, and the judge should know of it when he's deciding if a sentence will be for one year or five years.

But Staton's bill was watered down in the Senate. Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, amended it so that a judge would be informed only of those cases where the defendant was adjudicated for an A, B or C offense under the state's criminal code. Those are crimes which carry sentences of 40 years or more, or death.

The House Judiciary IV Committee liked Staton's bill but thought Sen. Tally's amendments had weakened it too much. Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, proposed adding D, E and F offenses. But his amendment got nowhere as Rep. Margaret Tenille, D-Forsyth, rose to the defense of the Tally amendments. She said the confidentiality of juvenile records should be protected, except for the most serious cases. And those cases were covered by A, B and C.

But Mrs. Tenille was shocked to learn, after the meeting, some of the crimes which would not be reported to the judge. As a juvenile, a now adult defendant could have committed some pretty mean stuff and not be covered by the bill. For example, throwing acid at someone, malicious castration, malicious maiming, kidnapping a person and sexually assaulting them, second degree rape, assault with a deadly weapon upon a law enforcement officer. All those crimes, and the judge would know nothing of them.

"This is some pretty bad stuff. I didn't realize this," Mrs. Tenille said when a legislative staffer started working through the statutes.

The next day, the committee adopted Hunter's amendment. But the expanded reporting still faced the opposition of Sen. Tally. The bill was scheduled to go before the full House at the beginning of this week and then would head back to the Senate for concurrence. Staton was predicting that the Senate would not approve the bill as amended, thus necessitating the need for a conference committee to compromise of the differences.

Sen Tally, a fierce supporter of the juvenile justice system, is adamant. She feels she's already compromised enough. "For 75 years, we've not allowed going into juvenile records. What someone under the age of 16 does can be because of his peers or family situation, a lot of reasons before he becomes mature ... they should not be held against him."

Staton and the crime commission agree that children should be treated differently in court. But, when someone commits a serious crime as an adult, they're saying we ought to be able to check the records and see if this is something new, or if the guy's been bad a long time.

To the editor:

The Greenville Industrial-Eppes Alumni Association held its second annual parade this past weekend in West Greenville. The parade moved safely up the planned route without fear of unexpected motorists moving into the lineup causing undue hazards.

The Parade Committee wishes to acknowledge Police Chief Glenn Cannon and the Greenville City Police Department for the tremendous role they played as the parade moved westward. The alumni, visitors and West Greenville citizens were elated with gratitude, for it was evident that the police force were at their best and they seemed to have enjoyed the parade as well.

Another vote of thanks goes to Mayo Allen and Terry Anderson of the Greenville City Public Works Department for the special assistance with the street barricades before and after the parade.

The parade participation was bigger and better this year and the special assistance given by the various city departments made the affair a great success. Hats off to the assisting departments who made the day as the Eppes Alumni Bulldogs moved westward.

To the editor:

This is a letter to those well-meaning humane people who cannot take an animal to the pound to be put to sleep. These same people think it's more humane to dump animals by the side of the road or in someone's yard. Evidently these people do not realize, according to State Law 14-361.1, any person who willfully and without justifiable excuse abandons an animal is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $200. I encourage people that see others doing this to take down a license number and take measures to cut down on this type of cruelty.

I picked up three beautiful puppies today that have a great case of mange and were half-starved. The Humane Society will be responsible for trying to get these puppies in good condition and finding them good homes. Someone was seen dropping these puppies off on a dirt road.

One female cat or dog in a seven-year period can produce 4,000 offspring. It took me quite a few years of working with the Humane Society to realize some animals are better off dead.

When a person dumps animals, they are not being humane. They are thinking of their own convenience and hoping someone else will come along and take care of them. This happens sometimes, but most of the times, these animals get diseases, ravage garbage cans and get in fights with other animals, as well as keep on reproducing other unwanted animals.

If you can't keep an animal or don't want one, please take it to either the Pitt County or the Greenville City Animal Shelter. The Humane Society takes all it can, but we don't have enough foster homes to care for all the strays and pets in need of adoption in Pitt County. Please think of the animals' welfare.

Decision For Jackson

Yet black leaders here fear that a strong showing by Jackson in the primaries could kindle dreams of a third-party bid. Even though such a candidacy would dash Democratic hopes of defeating Reagan next year, activists worry that a headstrong Jackson might prove oblivious to the possibility. As one official with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference remarked, "(Even) Martin (Luther King) always had trouble controlling Jesse...."

Indeed, "control" seems an overriding concern about Jackson, whose fiery speechmaking could turn off as many people as it turns on. Atlanta mayor Andy Young and Coretta Scott King, tentatively in Walter Mondale's camp, will certainly be unable to wield any influence on him.

At the same time, however, black leaders acknowledge their captive status in Democratic politics and admit that, in the current field, Jackson would be the only true champion of their cause.

"Who else do we have?" asked an SCLC official. "Everyone knows that Jesse rubs people the wrong way, but he knows the issues. (For example), who ever heard of John Jacob (president of the National Urban League)?"

Some black leaders, such as Dr. Joseph Lowery of the SCLC, are pushing for a "people's platform, dedicated to minorities, the unemployed and lower-income Americans. Such a platform would underscore problems of poverty and hunger in America — issues on which Jackson, better than any of his potential rivals, focused almost exclusively.

"Jesse's candidacy would speak to the folks who've been left out and left behind in American society," said John Lewis, an Atlanta city councilman and former Carter administration official.

Lewis' assessment may be sufficient to warrant Jackson's presidential aspirations. Especially if the economy continues to improve, Democratic chances in the general election campaign look bleak; the chances of a liberal-toned Democratic campaign seem even less likely.

Jackson might assure that the disadvantaged at least have their day in 1984. Copyright 1983 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Strength For Today

The philosopher Thomas Hobbes once said that, if he had read as many books as some people did, he would be as stupid as they were.

In spite of all the manifest advantages of wide reading, books are certainly not the only source of knowledge. Some people come to rely upon books so much for their ideas that they entirely miss the wealth of educational experience that comes from other sources.

Dean Inge once said, "The absence of books compels thought to take the form of self-examination."

Many people have never really taken a good look at themselves. They have never reflected upon their life and its relation to the world. What they need to do is to face up frankly to the issues of life; to examine their failures in connection with their weaknesses.

The wisest men have not necessarily been those who have read much, but those who have pondered what they read, whether it was much or little.

—Art Buchwald—

analists refuse to believe that one of the major political parties in our country would stoop to dirty tricks to win an election.

At the same time we are troubled by what we know so far. The people who seem to have been involved in some way or another are James Baker, the president's chief of staff, David Gergen, his communications chief, David Stockman, and William Casey, the former Reagan campaign manager, who is now director of the CIA.

Baker recalls getting it from Mr. Casey, who was supposed to have gotten it from someone in the Carter camp — a mole, as we say in the Central Intelligence Agency.

Mr. Casey does not recall ever having seen such a book. His memory on it is a complete blank. But if we believe him, this raises a question of national security. If Mr. Casey can't remember being the receiver of filched goods from the opposition party's safe, what is he doing as director of the CIA, where memory is everything? How can he provide the president concise information on Central America, the Middle East and Soviet missiles without forgetting the best details? Do we want someone to head up our intelligence service who knows the names of every company on the Dow Jones Index, but can't recall whether a mole gave him an American president's game plan?

Moving along we now come to the most important part of the effects of the theft, if there was one.

In 1980 we all agreed to await the results of the debate between the two presidential candidates before deciding which man should have his finger on the button.

Then we saw what everyone else did. A Ronald Reagan who was sure of himself and of his answers. Reagan was a completely different candidate from the one who, up until then, was constantly making misstatements which his staff had to correct a few hours later. But during the debate Reagan was as sure of his lines as he was in any of his motion pictures. It was convincing performance and the pundits walked away from their TV sets convinced Reagan was a candidate who did his homework.

Cocaine-Use Prosecutor Is Requested

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Attorney's Office has asked for a special federal prosecutor to investigate allegations of cocaine use by some Raleigh attorneys and at least one member of the criminal justice system.

Assistant U.S. Attorney J. Douglas McCullough said the probe was requested by the N.C. Attorney General's Office.

"I can confirm that we have been requested to participate in an investigation that includes cocaine use and possession and transfer by lawyers in Raleigh and others," McCullough said Thursday.

His office agreed to the state's request for help in the investigation "because of the occupations (of those) involved and the potential impact on the criminal justice system," said McCullough.

North Carolina does not have investigative grand juries empowered to compel testimony, although federal grand juries do, he said.

"Grand jury subpoenas are in the process of being drawn and issued, but I can't say to whom or why," McCullough said.

He said Lester V. Chalmers Jr., special deputy state attorney general in charge of the state Department of Justice's Special Prosecutions Division, had requested the assistance.

McCullough said Samuel T. Currin, U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District, asked for a prosecutor from outside the state because of possible involvement of a person or persons in criminal justice in this area. He said a prosecutor should be named shortly.

Asked whether the allegations against a member of the criminal justice system might involve police, prosecutors or judges, McCullough said, "I can't comment on aspects involving the criminal justice system."

Judge James H. Pou Bailey, chief resident Superior Court Judge for Wake County, said that he had received reports an investigation was going on.

"I would be dismayed and embarrassed should I learn that any drug use of the illegal type had gone on in the criminal justice system," Bailey said, "and I would join in demanding the resignation of anyone involved once it is proved."

Reject N.C. College Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's community college system has been told U.S. education officials have rejected its latest desegregation plan and that it may lose federal money and face legal action unless a new plan is ready by Aug. 15.

But state officials and the head of the Atlanta regional office of the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights said the plan needs only minor changes.

North Carolina is one of five states facing the Aug. 15 deadline.

"They understand what it is we need," William H. Thomas said Thursday in a telephone interview. "We don't anticipate that they will have problems having an acceptable submission to us."

The system agreed in 1978 to a goal of adding 171 minority students to the liberal arts, college transfer programs in each of the succeeding five years. That plan expired June 30 with the goal unmet. The programs are operated by 23 of the system's 58 schools.

System officials have negotiated with federal authorities this year, arguing that the state had trouble meeting the goal because overall enrollment in the college transfer programs has declined as interest has grown in technical curricula not involving college transfer.

100th Year For Journal

100th YEAR — Dr. George D. Lundberg, Editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, discusses the 100th anniversary of the publication. (AP Laserphoto)

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — It was 1899 when Chicago physician Denslow Lewis asked the Journal of the American Medical Association to publish a study he felt important. The editors wouldn't hear of it.

The subject was the physiology of sex. Lewis, a gynecologist, was very specific about the body's functions. He also said a woman needs sexual satisfaction for a healthy marriage.

Today, the weekly journal known as JAMA is celebrating 100 years of continuous publication by making amends to Lewis.

Along with his paper, JAMA is offering a commentary by sex researcher Dr. William H. Masters of the Masters & Johnson Institute in St. Louis.

"Obviously, Denslow Lewis was a physician far ahead of his time," writes Masters. If papers like his had been published, "Sexual malfunctions and disorders ... might have been far better understood today."

The anniversary edition also includes a reproduction of the first edition a quarter century before Lewis' paper and proudly says medicine has come a long way since Victorian ideas of propriety reigned over science.

JAMA has come a long way, too.

No longer simply a record of proceedings at once-a-year AMA meetings, JAMA now publishes 48 issues annually on an estimated budget of $20 million.

It disseminates research on matters as urgent as AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — and as specialized as ultrasound evaluation of thyroid gland diseases.

It prints letters suggesting cures for hiccups and trapshooter's cramp.

It editorializes against too many medical tests and against boxing.

It raises questions about preserving life at all costs in an age when technology has altered the definitions of life.

JAMA circulates more than 420,000 copies in six languages — German, French, Chinese, Japanese and Flemish as well as English — with plans to publish in two more — Spanish and Portuguese.

"Its influence is enormous, incalculable," said Dr. Drummond Rennie, a professor of medicine at Rush Medical School in Chicago who recently joined JAMA's editorial board after working full time for four years at its chief rival, the Boston-based New England Journal of Medicine.

Though JAMA is the official publication of the largest organization of doctors in the United States, its influence is open to debate.

In 1981, for example, the Philadelphia-based Institute for Scientific Information found New England Journal articles were cited more than twice as often as JAMA articles by researchers publishing later work in any of more than 3,900 scientific and medical journals surveyed by the institute.

"JAMA would probably generally appeal more to physicians concerned solely with practice than with research," said Dr. Edward J. Huth, editor of the Annals of Internal Medicine.

JAMA is "more newsy," said Rennie, reluctant to draw comparisons because the New England Journal and JAMA have "entirely different flavors" and both have his respect and loyalty.

The difference is apparent even on their covers.

JAMA is spelled in a large modern typeface, usually on a pastel border setting off an art print.

The Massachusetts Medical Society prefers a more traditional typeface in black-on-white, setting off a cover wholly consumed by the table of contents.

If JAMA is not perceived as the most intellectually influential of the general medical journals, its editor pledges to remedy the situation.

"My vision is to make JAMA unequivocally the best medical journal in the world," said Dr. George D. Lundberg, 50, former chairman of the pathology department at the University of California at Davis who took over the magazine about a year ago.

Lundberg said he wants to toughen the review process by which research articles are approved and to tackle controversial issues more aggressively.

He also hopes to make doctors more aware of patients as people, cultivate an awareness of history, and promote "a view that all people are brothers and sisters and especially all physicians brothers and sisters."

And Lundberg wants to speed the turnaround time on submissions, which now require an average of six months from receipt to publication.

About 87 percent of the manuscripts submitted are rejected. If a paper clears the first cut by one of nine physician editors to whom manuscripts are assigned, it is sent out for review by specialists in the field.

JAMA has a "bank" of about 3,000 reviewers, who themselves are graded on their expertise, Lundberg said. "We do report cards — we're constantly adding and throwing out."

After an article is reviewed, a physician editor may reject it, bring it up for discussion at an editorial meeting or ask an author to make changes. Editorials are often solicited to accompany the published research.

"It's a rare manuscript that gets accepted as is," said Lundberg, who alone has authority to approve articles for publication.

Popular appeal is not a stated goal of the journal, but a journal "both educational and enjoyable to read" is.

"I see our audience in the United States and Canada becoming more and more the public," said Lundberg. "Despite what you hear about functional illiteracy, the number of well-educated people perfectly capable of understanding medical science is becoming larger and larger."

Ex-Spouses 'Not Paying'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than half the women awarded alimony and child support payments in divorce settlements are actually collecting in full from their ex-husbands, according to a government report.

The Census Bureau study disclosed that only 43.5 percent of women collect the whole amount of alimony they are due, and 46.7 percent collect full child support payments.

Additionally, both alimony and child support that are paid fall behind inflation, the report by Ruth Sanders of the bureau's population division showed.

Refusal by fathers to pay was the most common reason women gave for not getting child support, Ms. Sanders said.

Other reasons, she said, included inability to locate the father and financial problems on the father's part. But many women, she added, simply did not know why the payments were not being made.

This lack of support leads many divorced and separated mothers into poverty, and that has drawn the attention of both state and federal agencies.

In his State of the Union message last January, President Reagan promised increased efforts to find fathers who don't pay, and collect from them. In addition, the Department of Health and Human Services has launched an effort to locate the fathers through Internal Revenue files, and some states are making similar efforts.

The new study, "Child Support and Alimony: 1981," showed that just over 4 million women were supposed to receive child support in that year. Of those 46.7 percent received the full amount and another 25.1 percent received partial payment. Of the 782,000 who were supposed to be receiving alimony, 43.5 percent received the total due, and 23.9 percent got partial payment.

Both sets of figures are down slightly from 1978, when such figures were collected for the first time.

Overall, of the 8.4 million women supporting children on their own, 59.2 percent have been awarded child support, but of the 16.9 million divorced women, only 14.9 percent have been granted alimony.

The report noted that child support payments in 1981 averaged $2,110 annually, up from $1,800 in 1978.

But after deducting for inflation, average child support payments declined by 16 percent, the report said. "Most support agreements do not include an escalator clause with changes in price levels," Ms. Sanders observed.

The study showed, though, that agreements between separated or divorced parents work better than court orders. Women receiving court-ordered child support payments received about 55 percent of the amount due, while those with voluntary written agreements averaged 78 percent.

As for alimony, $3,000 was the mean annual amount received, a 25 percent drop from 1978 when inflation is considered.

Survey questions for the study were asked only of women, Ms. Sanders said, since so few men have custody of children after divorce.

Other findings included:
—Child support was about 13 percent of average male income, unchanged from 1978.

—The average child support payment was $2,180 annually to white women, $1,640 for black women and $2,070 for Hispanic women, who may be of any race.

—The more years of school a woman had completed the more likely she was to have obtained an award of child support. It ranged from 42.9 percent of women who had not finished high school to 76.6 percent of college graduates.

—White women were awarded child support in 69.2 percent of divorces or separations, compared to 33.8 percent of black women and 43.9 percent of Hispanics.

Theorize Longevity If Living In Space

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — People who spend their lives in the weightlessness of space may live longer than they would on Earth, but they could lose use of major bones and muscles, according to researchers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"It does not mean that people can live forever," Dr. Jaime Miquel, a neurobiologist and experimental gerontologist for NASA's Ames Research Center, said Thursday. "It's no fountain of youth."

But it is a glimpse by researchers into the theoretical lives of people who might spend their years among the stars, their bodies always free of gravity.

Their research was conducted using data from manned space flights and from experiments with fruit flies, rats and mice.

The findings showed that aging might be slowed in space by 10 to 15 percent.

Through breathing, the body's cells are progressively oxidized, "and this may be the main cause of aging," Miquel said.

In a weightless state, the physical demands on the body are lower, and the body requires less oxygen and food to survive. Eating less food results in a reduced level of metabolism needed to sustain life.

"The main thing is that it is possible to slow down aging of certain organs" by reducing the body's demands on those organs, such as the heart, Miquel said.

Miquel, joined at Ames by Dr. Angelos Economos of the Universite Catholique de Louvain in Belgium, found that prolonged weightlessness could bring the irreversible loss of normal use of bones and skeletal muscles.

Include Workers Compensation For Farmworkers

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Migrant crew leaders may be required to provide workers' compensation coverage for their farmworkers under a bill approved by a House committee, the chairman of the N.C. Industrial Commission says.

"If the crew chief under this act has the power to control those workers, then he would have to provide workers' compensation," William Stevenson told the Manufacturers and Labor Committee on Thursday.

With considerable prodding from Stevenson, the panel reconsidered a version of the bill passed last week. Several members, including its sponsor, Rep. Joe Roberts, D-Gaston, said the earlier version would bring too few farmworkers under workers' compensation.

The N.C. Farm Bureau has opposed extending the bill to migrant workers because they believe farmers would end up footing the bill. But Roberts said that would not be the case.

"The independent contractors that come in here with workers from Haiti and Mexico will be responsible for them," he said.

The original bill would have required insurance of any farmer employing 10 workers or more. Currently, no farmworkers must be covered.

After Farm Bureau pressure, Roberts limited the bill to regular, full-time, nonseasonal workers, a change advocates of migrant rights said would make it virtually impossible for anyone to qualify.

Stevenson, stressing that he was speaking for himself and not the administration, lobbied heavily to include migrant workers in the bill.

"Each year we see more and more seasonal and migrant laborers who have been brought into North Carolina injured in agricultural work who call the Industrial Commission seeking help," he said in a prepared statement distributed to the committee. "This worker is really in worse shape than the industrial worker who is injured without workers' compensation coverage, by reason of the fact that most industrial workers have some type of group medical coverage."

"Their plight is such that I cannot in good conscience sit silent when an opportunity presents itself to come to their aid," Stevenson added.

Roberts replaced the objectionable amendment with one limiting workers' compensation to farms with 10 or more "regular" workers. Stevenson said the change would open compensation to migrant workers, as long as they worked on a given farm for several weeks at a time.

Christopher Scott of the state AFL-CIO, who strongly opposed the earlier version, said the new substitute was an improvement but stressed that other industries cover four or more employees.

"It's going to cover more people," he said. "But agriculture should not ask for a special privilege. Their standard should be the same as any business."

In other legislative action:

UNC Board

The General Assembly re-elected five members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and selected three new members from 19 nominees.

Winston-Salem Mayor Wayne Corpening and Irwin Belk of Belk Stores in Charlotte were re-elected to at-large posts by the Senate along with newcomer Sam Poole of Southern Pines, a lawyer and president of The Peddler Ltd. All members serve eight-year terms.

They edged out Daniel C. Gunter Jr., of Gastonia, former state Rep. George Hux of Halifax, Raleigh attorney Irving Joyner and former state Sen. John Shuford.

James Danieley, a chemistry professor at Elon College, was chosen by the Senate to fill the spot reserved for a Republican after a runoff against Ed Tenney, an insurance salesman from Chapel Hill. The other nominee for that spot was Barbara Stockton Perry, legal counsel for Belk Stores in Charlotte.

In the House, Raleigh attorney John R. Jordan Jr. and Haywood County businessman J. Aaron Prevost were re-elected to the board's at-large posts and Louis T. Randolph of Washington was re-elected to the minority race seat.

Prevost and Jordan were chosen over two other at-large nominees — Robert M. Pitts and William H. McMillan.

Joan Fox of Oxford was elected to the position designated for a woman, defeating Adelaide Holderness of Greensboro.

Randolph was running against Charles T. Byrd Jr. of Greensboro, director of fiscal affairs for the Corporation for the Advancement of Experiential Learning Programs and Southern Pines businessman Felton J. Capel.

Credit Cards

The House Judiciary I Committee killed a bill that would have required credit card franchise holders to inform customers of the "hidden costs" of credit.

Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, said the bill would better inform consumers about the added cost of buying goods from businesses that take credit cards.

But several members said the bill would burden franchisees without benefiting customers.

"I don't think the public is so uninformed they don't already know this," said Rep. Ray Sparrow, D-Wake, adding that local gasoline dealers felt it would hurt their business.

"I just don't see where the consumer is hurt," said Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake.

Elderly Abuse

A bill to outlaw abuse, neglect or exploitation of elderly or disabled people by their caretakers was approved by the House Judiciary II Committee.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, said current laws only cover extreme cases such as beating rest home patients. His bill would make lesser violations misdemeanors.

Workers Comp

Workers injured on the job would have longer to file for workers' compensation under a bill approved by the House Manufacturers and Labor Committee.

The law now allows filing up to two years after the accident or after the time an injury is discovered. The bill would extend that period to seven years.

Spouse Testimony

The Senate voted 23-22 to kill a bill revising laws governing spouse testimony in civil cases after a dispute broke out over adultery and divorce.

The Senate Judiciary I Committee amended the bill on the floor to exempt adultery testimony. But Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, moved to rescind that amendment, saying it "leaves in the law a portion of the law that really has become archaic."

Winner said laws prohibiting testimony about adultery were designed to prevent couples from using adultery as a means to get a divorce when there were few other ways to become legally separated.

But Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said the law affords protection for parties in divorce cases.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, successfully tabled the bill and Winner's amendment and Swain put the "clincher" on it by moving to reconsider the tabling motion then tabling it. Both motions were approved 23-22.

A two-thirds vote would be needed to revive the bill.

Midwifery

A bill regulating midwifery moved a step closer to enactment, gaining House Finance Committee approval. It now goes to the full House.

The bill, approved earlier by the House State Government Committee, would require that midwives be supervised by a physician, be either registered nurses or certified by the American College of Nurse-Midwives and pay registration fees of up to $100. Annual license renewal would cost up to $50.

Auto Inspection

Annual automobile inspection costs would increase from $4.25 to $5.50 under a bill approved by the House Finance Committee.

Under the bill, the Department of Motor Vehicles would receive 85 cents from each inspection — up from 60 cents currently — while the remaining $4.65 would go to the service stations, which presently get $3.65.

The committee deleted a provision creating a provisional sticker that could be issued to owners of vehicles that fail to pass inspection but aren't fixed immediately.

"All the stations I talked to say they're losing money on inspections," said Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake. "It takes money to fill out all the paperwork."

Opponents said raising the fees would be highly unpopular among consumers. The bill passed 19-12.

Handicapped Voters

The House Election Laws Committee approved 9-3 a bill requiring counties to provide access to polling places for all handicapped voters.

Several handicapped people appeared before the panel and spoke of the difficulties they had getting up stairs to reach polling booths.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, sponsor of the bill, said that 70 percent of the polls were in public buildings where guaranteed access for the handicapped already was required.

He acknowledged that in some rural areas polls are in stores or other non-public buildings but said they could be moved.

"If one store is available another is available," said Blue. "The question is whether the local elections boards are going to be sensitive. It's a question of the basic philosophy of making voting accessible to all."

The committee tabled two motions by Rep. J. Reid Poovey, R-Catawba, to delay action on the bill. He and other opponents said it would impose high costs on county governments.

Study Committees

The Senate Special Ways and Means Committee approved bills that would create study committees on the issues of higher education financing and disposal of stray animals.

Both bills were referred to the Senate Appropriations Committee, which will have to decide which of the many study committee bills will be funded.

Budget

House and Senate budget leaders say they will meet this weekend to complete a budget package to give the joint Appropriations Committee probably next Tuesday.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee, said the most time-consuming task now is writing special budget provisions. He said there are more than 200 of them to put in the budget.

Hardison said some of the provisions specify procedures for spending money in the budget, others are money-saving administrative changes, some clarify or correct existing law and others incorporate bills introduced this session.

"It is a whole lot cheaper and simpler to handle that way than to go the route of a bill," he said.

Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Expansion Budget Committee, said the stack of provisions looks like a "Sears and Roebuck catalogue."

Watkins said work this weekend also will concern special, pork barrel bills introduced this session. He said he has asked each member to submit what relatively inexpensive bill they would like to pass.

He said most of the bills will cost $10,000 to $25,000 but some may cost $50,000 for a total of $10 million.

Hardison said the Senate has not set a price tag for special bills.

Sales Tax

A Senate subcommittee considering two bills to raise the sales tax may not meet until next week, said Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the subcommittee. Lobbyists who are pushing for the tax increase said the delay may damage the chances of a bill passing this session.

Royall said he had asked staff members to gather information on how much money local governments received in 1982-83 compared to the previous fiscal year and on how North Carolina's income and ad valorem taxes compared to those in other states.

He said there still is a chance the bill could be passed if something is approved by the subcommittee on Monday.

Counselors

The House passed 79-26 a bill providing for certification of people wishing to be recognized as registered counselors.

The bill establishes a board to establish qualifications for certification, revoke or suspend certificates for certain offenses, and collect registration fees.

Certification is not licensing, which would be mandatory. Under the bill people who are not registered still could practice counseling.

A bill revising the Auctioneers Licensing Board was approved 97-1.

Mandatory Retirement

A vote on a bill to lift the mandatory retirement age of 70

for state workers was postponed until Monday when questions arose about the effect of a proposed amendment.

The House amended the bill Wednesday to delete the University of North Carolina system, enabling university officials to consider on a case-by-case basis people wanting to work past 70.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, sponsored an amendment Thursday to extend that provision to the public school and community college systems.

But Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, chairman of the House Pensions and Retirement Committee, said because of a House rule the amendment would force the bill back to committee.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey asked Mavretic to obtain an analysis on the bill's effect on the state pension prior to Monday's vote.

Hospital Liens

A bill creating a lien on the property of people who don't pay emergency room bills ran into trouble on the House floor and was saved by a successful vote to adjourn.

Rep. Marvin Musselwhite, D-Wake, said the bill was needed to address the growing problem of unpaid bills which he said was threatening the existence of many hospitals.

So many legislators protested subjecting real property to a lien that Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, a bill supporter, suggested that it be amended to call for a study of the issue.

Before a vote could be taken on that proposal, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, moved that the bill be tabled.

Musselwhite then moved to adjourn and the House concurred, 64-43.

Probing Misuse Of Military Vehicles

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg officials are investigating alleged misconduct and misuse of government vehicles by civilian employees and have proposed actions against two wildlife officials.

Fort Bragg officials confirmed that post commander Lt. Gen. Jack V. Macmillan ordered the investigation in January.

Based on that investigation, proposals to fire game warden Bobby Meares and suspend Mike Hunnicutt, wildlife branch chief, were sent to the men in June, said Lt. Col. Pat Cannan, a post spokesman.

Officials have declined to discuss specific allegations against the men, but The Fayetteville Observer Thursday quoted sources who said the investigation involved unauthorized hunting privileges for Fort Bragg's former chief of staff and top enlisted soldier.

Train Rams Gravel Truck

BELGRADE, N.C. (AP) — A train slammed into a truck holding gravel at an intersection near Belgrade on Thursday, causing a tank car to derail and spill low-grade aviation fuel.

Police and emergency workers cleared the area surrounding the spill of kerosene-type fuel for the Marine Corps Air Station at New River. There appeared to be no danger of fire or explosion.

There was no evacuation of nearby businesses, and traffic through the area was not blocked. Workers pushed dirt into mounds around the site to contain the fuel.

The collision between the truck, owned by Royal State Construction Co. of Wilmington, and the Seaboard System Railroad train occurred about 9 a.m. off U.S. 17 about 14 miles from Jacksonville on a private quarry road.

An unidentified train crewman was injured in the crash and was taken to Onslow Memorial Hospital in Jacksonville. Seaboard spokesmen said the crewman's injuries were not serious and he would be released soon.

The truck driver, whose name was also withheld, was also slightly injured and taken to Onslow hospital, police said.

Four train cars and the locomotive were derailed, but only the engine and two tanker cars overturned.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — SALESMAN ARRESTED — HE SOLD MANY PEOPLE PHONY REAL ESTATE.
Today's Cryptquip clue: H equals C.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Much chit-chat is apt to be in effect today and tonight. Unless one is careful, it is apt to disintegrate into disputes over minor and unimportant issues. Prepare for new activities.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good day to state your ideas and aims to kin and also listen to theirs for better understanding among you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Confer with partners and permit them to state their ideas, before you state yours, and cement better relations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Much conversation concerning property and other assets may come up today, but be sure not to over-spend or over-invest unwisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can gain favors you may need from others now, but don't do anything that could lose good will.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can talk that restrictive matter over with another, but if you think that silence is wiser, handle it in that fashion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Sitting down with nice friends and exchanging views can bring about something very worthwhile now. Be more objective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Fine day to gain advice from experts so that you can improve your activities and routines but don't take any action as yet.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Discuss that new idea you have with an expert and get all the information you can about it. Socialize this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure you check over that bill and/or statement you have to get out and make sure it's correct.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) It is important that you understand every article of that new contract with a partner, so study it carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) It is important that you understand every phase of that work ahead of you before you tackle it. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) The amusements you get into may be rather disappointing, so let it go at that. Do whatever your mate expects.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will know exactly what to do to bring more harmony and warmth within the home and family. The field of merchandizing will be very good here. Stress religion. Be sure to provide a proper diet.

Arthritis Link To Psoriasis

ATLANTA (AP) — About 10 percent of all people with psoriasis also have a related form of arthritis, reports the Arthritis Foundation.

It's called psoriatic arthritis, and it occurs in several forms. In some people only a few joints are affected. In others, the symptoms are more severe and difficult to distinguish from rheumatoid arthritis, the most crippling form of arthritis.

"Most people with psoriasis will not develop the form of arthritis related to it," says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the foundation. "But they should be aware of the possibility and consult their doctor at the first sign of pain in a joint."

Business Leader Says Japan Must Tighten Belt

EDITOR'S NOTE — Nearly 38 years after Japan began rebuilding from the rubble of World War II, 90 percent of its people consider themselves middle class, with money to spend and luxuries to buy. But there may be danger in this affluence, says a big businessman who helped make it all possible, and he is spreading a word of warning to his countrymen.

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — A new and unexpected message is going out in Japan: tighten your belts, keep wages down, give up some of those luxuries regarded now as so essential to life and be content with modest national economic growth.

That sober line is taken by one of the biggest of Japan's big businessmen, Yoshihiro Inayama, head of Keidanren, the powerful conglomerate of economic organizations largely responsible for making Japan what it is today.

"Since the 1970s," he said in a recent interview with The Associated Press, "our needs have been saturated while global economic growth has slowed down. Now we must ask the Japanese to limit their wages and life style."

This may be hardly the thing Japanese workers — a record 1.43 million of whom are jobless — want to hear. But it is typical of the way Japanese businessmen have thought ever since they got into the economic bigtime a quarter century ago.

And it is deemed possible that labor, aware that its own interests are tied to a favorable business climate, will accept what Inayama prescribes.

It is this semi-partnership of labor and management, combined with intensive competition among the big companies, which has given Japan such an edge in international trade.

Another is a willingness to invest in a country over the long term, to be satisfied with meager returns now in order to reap bigger benefits later.

Inayama, 79, only recently head of Japan Steel, the world's largest steel company, is one of the battalion of brisk old men keeping the Japanese economy on course. Identified with Japanese economic growth since the end of World War II in 1945, they pull the strings in the political establishment. It was they who after the war persuaded the Americans — through the governing conservative party — that the Japanese should not re-arm, but should remain aloof from foreign quarrels and concentrate on economic development.

Critics complain of what they call the "free ride" Japan got by huddling under the U.S. nuclear umbrella — and thus saving money on defense to use in economic advance. But at the same time the United States got in return a friendly, democratic and economically stable Japan within a decade of defeat.

The Japanese success, says John Curtis Perry in the book "Sentimental Imperialists," is a commentary on the profitability of war — for the losers.

"First rebuilding the industrial plant, then expanding it, purchasing the best technology available on the international market, adapting and improving it, the Japanese owed little to those practices conventionally attributed to them," he wrote.

Asteroid Just Missed Earth

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Like some cosmic video game, a just-discovered asteroid — a space rock half a mile across — roared close by the Earth this week at 80,000 mph, scientists say.

Although "close" on this occasion means nearly six million miles away, asteroids have been crashing into the earth's landscape for billions of years and more collisions are all but inevitable — at least in the next million years or so, said Eleanor F. Helin of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Investigating Arson Suspect

CAMERON, Texas (AP) — Officials in two Texas counties say they are investigating whether a Houston man charged with arson is linked to the firebombings of two churches and a Masonic hall used as a church.

Norris E. Moss, a 34-year-old car salesman, was charged Thursday with felony arson in Milam County, where four churches in the community of Gause were set on fire Monday with Molotov cocktails. He was being held on $50,000 bond.

Moss apparently had attended one of the churches he is charged with destroying, authorities said. He was arrested Wednesday night.

Asks Opposing Export Subsidy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has asked President Reagan to combat excessive use of export subsidies for eggs by the European Economic Community and other countries.

Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said government subsidies for egg exports by foreign countries are hurting American egg producers in foreign markets.

Expand List Of 'Worst' Dumps

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The list of the nation's worst hazardous waste dumps will soon grow by 25 percent as the Environmental Protection Agency moves to re-vamp its $1.6 billion "superfund" dump cleanup program.

By Aug. 1, the agency expects to add 100 to 150 dump sites to its list of 419 sites that currently qualify for federal cleanup assistance, EPA officials said Thursday.

The current sites are in 45 states and five territories and the additions will also be in all sections of the country, agency officials said.

The new sites are part of a wide-ranging revision of the much-criticized hazardous waste program.

Congress created the "superfund" two years ago to clean up the worst inactive toxic chemical dumps in the country. Allegations of mismanagement and political influence in cleanup decisions spurred a half-dozen congressional probes and led to the resignations of more than 20 top EPA officials, including former Administrator Anne M. Burford and Rita Lavelle, former director of the hazardous waste office, which handles the "superfund."

In answer to many critics' complaints, agency officials said rules are also being drafted that will set more stringent standards for cleaning up the dumps and establish deadlines to keep industry from dragging out negotiations over cleanup costs.

William Hedeman Jr., director of the "superfund" office, said the changes were being made under suggestions from new EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus and Lee Thomas, who succeeded Ms. Lavelle.

Just adding new sites to the list does not ensure money will be in the fund to clean them up. Only 6 of the 419 original dumps have been totally cleaned, another 22

GUC Board To Meet Tuesday

The Greenville Utilities Commission will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the utilities building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets.

Included on the agenda for consideration are rural water line extensions, an out-of-city sewer extension resolution and modified sanitary sewer use regulations.

Laupus To Head National Board

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been elected president-elect of the American Board of Medical Specialties.

Laupus will serve a one-year term as president-elect and automatically will become president for a two-year term at the group's annual meeting in March, 1984.

The board is a federation of the 23 medical and surgical boards which have established the national educational standards and training requirements for certification as a diplomate in each of the specialties. Specialty boards provide the comprehensive written and oral examinations which candidates must pass before being "certified."

Laupus has been an active member of ABMS for the last 10 years, serving as vice president and member of the executive committee and as one of the representatives for the American Board of Pediatrics, the specialty organization for which he served as president for two terms.

Sediment Control Panel To Meet

The Pitt County Sediment Control Commission will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of an erosion control plan for Sunnyside Eggs' chicken houses about 1 1/4 miles north of Roundtree on SR 1114 near the intersection of SR 1123.

New Classes Are Starting

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer the following new classes at South Greenville Recreation Center:

•Beginners macrame for adults will begin on Thursday from 2:30-4:30 p.m.

•Needlework class: designed for ages 12-15 will begin Wednesday from 3-5 p.m. Activities will include stenciling, candlewicking, count stitch and stitching on plastic canvas.

There is a $2 registration fee for each program for five weeks. For more information call 752-4137, ext. 253.

Nelson Named To Commission

Dr. Phillip G. Nelson of Greenville has been appointed to the newly established National Commission on Correctional Health Care.

Nelson will serve as the representative of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law. He has an interest in prison health care and participated in the 1983 International Congress on Psychiatry, Law and Ethics in Israel, where he spoke on medical care in North Carolina's correctional facilities.

Nelson is a clinical professor of psychiatric medicine at East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The National Commission on Correctional Health Care was founded in May in Chicago.

Humane Society To Meet

The Pitt County Humane Society will meet Monday. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at Holy Trinity United Methodist Church on Red Banks Road.

Beat Drug Habit Via Electronics

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Peter Townshend says a heroin habit nearly killed him and even stopped his heart at one point, and he credits an electric-impulse treatment with his cure.

The 38-year-old guitarist for The Who said that his heart stopped beating after a friend injected him with heroin. He was rushed to a hospital and resuscitated with heart massage.

"From the moment I touched heroin ... I felt as if I'd joined forces with the devil," Townshend was quoted as saying in the August issue of Penthouse magazine. "I went from being unbeatably lucky to becoming a powerful foe — my own worst enemy."

Townshend said he was rescued by Dr. Meg Patterson, a Scottish physician

Two Injured In Wrecks

Two persons were reported injured and an estimated $5,825 damage caused in two collisions Greenville police investigated Thursday.

Cars driven by Sadhana Bhowmik Debnath of 2004 Sherwood Drive, and Mary Paul Clark of Edgewood Trailer Park, collided about 12:15 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Elm streets, officers said, causing $800 damage to the Debnath car and $3,500 damage to the Clark vehicle.

Ms. Clark was reported injured.

Police said a car driven by Deborah Elizabeth Edwards of 1112 W. Wright Road, was injured when the car she was driving collided with a tree on Forrest Hill Circle, 75 feet north of the 10th Street intersection, about 10:16 p.m.

Officers, who said Ms. Edwards was injured, set damage to the car at $1,500 and estimated damage to the tree at $25.

Highland Games Starting This Weekend At Clans' Gathering

LINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Kilts will become the most popular summer fashion this weekend at Grandfather Mountain as the resort area hosts the 28th annual Highland Games and Gathering of Scottish Clans.

The weekend includes highland athletic events, an AAU-sanctioned track meet, as well as contests and exhibitions of bagpipe playing, highland dances and other Scottish events.

The highland athletic events include turning the caber — a large log thrown for distance and accuracy — tossing the sheaf — a 16-pound bag of hay lofted for height — and tossing the clachneart — a 16-pound stone.

The track and field meet includes a marathon that begins Saturday on the Appalachian State University campus in Boone and ends at MacRae Meadows on Grandfather Mountain.

The Grandfather Games are sponsored by Scottish Heritage, USA, and by more than 100 clans and societies that will have tents available to aid visitors in identifying their Scottish lineage and clan affiliation.

Guests of honor for the 1983 Games are:

— Alexander Gilbert Robertson of Drumachaine, younger of Straun, the only son of Robert of Straun, 22nd chief of Clan Donnachaidh.

— Maj. Francis Irvine of Barra and Straloch.

— Sir Crispin Agnew of Lochnaw, 11th baronet, advocate, 18th hereditary sheriff of Wigtown, hereditary constable of Lochnaw, chief of the Agnews, unicorn pursuivant of arms.

Activities actually began Thursday night with the opening ceremony at MacRae Meadows. Representatives of each clan carried flaming torches and formed a St. Andrews Cross of light to invoke the spirit of the clans upon the Games.

Friday night's public activities include a piping concert at 7 p.m. at Williams Gymnasium on the campus of Lees-McRae College in Banner Elk. At 9 p.m. the gym reopens for Scottish country dancing.

The most popular evening event of the Games is the Ceilidh, held Friday and Saturday nights at Hayes Auditorium on the Lees-McRae campus. The informal gathering combines Scottish fiddling, dancing, singing and socializing. The family folk festival commences at 8 p.m. Friday and 7:30 p.m. Saturday with tickets available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Saturday's activities at MacRae Meadows begin at 9 a.m. with high land dancing, piping and drumming competition. The official opening ceremonies follow at 10 a.m. with the massed band parade as pipe bands assemble and march together.

The Citadel Pipe Band from Charleston, S.C.; the Atlanta Pipe Band; the N.C. State Pipes and Drums; the Piedmont Highlanders of Greenville, S.C.; and the Charlotte Caledonian Pipe Band will join the host band. The Grandfather Mountain Highlanders.

Saturday events include the highland fling, sword dance, Seann triubhas, strathspey and highland reel. Sunday competition involves the lilt, flora, hornpipe, barracks johnnie, blue bonnets and Irish jig.

Sunday's activities include a Scottish worship service on the Meadow at 9:30 a.m., which concludes with the Kirkin' (blessing) of the Tartans and the Parade of Tartans.

Admission to the Games is $7 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Proceeds go to charity.

Mays Still Longs For Return To Baseball

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Of all the baseball greats, young and old, who gathered in Chicago's Comiskey Park earlier this week to celebrate the Golden Anniversary of the All-Star Game, none was happier or more miserable than Willie Mays.

"This is what I love to do," said the hard-hitting, slick-fielding Say Hey Kid, who made the diamond his personal playpen with the New York and San Francisco Giants in the 1950s and 1960s, closing his career in his beloved New York as a Met.

"I never get tired of it. I think I'd put on this uniform every day if I could. I like to be around baseball people, the kids, the fans, even the press.

"Baseball is my life."

There is something poignant about the mixed emotions that grapple inside of him so unnecessarily.

For a man who gave so much to the game, who emerged as a giant figure to be spoken of in the same breath with Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Joe DiMaggio, it is a shame that there are shackles that prevent him from complete freedom in his unrequited love affair with the sport.

When age forced him into retirement, he found that baseball had no suitable place for him on a living style to which he had become accustomed.

So he accepted a position in the promotion of community affairs with a hotel casino in Atlantic City, N.J. This wasn't a dive or a speakeasy. It was one of country's largest hotel chains.

It's true that his employers allowed slot machines, poker tables and roulette wheels in the parlors and encouraged gambling. But the enterprise was not outside the law. It merely fed one of the world's thirsts — even vices, if you prefer — for personal pleasure.

Baseball promptly ordered that Mays divest himself of all baseball connections and barred him from locker rooms and any other association with the game that was part of his very heartbeat.

The ban left a small vent open which would permit Willie to play in the occasional Old Timers games such as the marvelous spectacle that preceded Wednesday night's

All-Star Game.

It was great fun for Willie. Attired in a Giants uniform, No. 24, he acted like a kid diving into a bag of Christmas goodies. He laughed. He joked. He renewed old friendships, and the people smothered him with attention and affection.

He even made one of his characteristic basket catches on the warning track in his National League teammates' victory.

But that's not enough for Willie — one day in two months, maybe four months or six. It's not enough for a man to whom baseball is an addiction.

If Babe Ruth was Mr. Baseball in the Golden Twenties, then Willie Mays is Mr. Baseball of the electronic age.

When he was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, someone asked him who was the greatest baseball player he ever saw.

"Me," Willie replied unabashedly. It's his small boy brashness and honesty. But few in the baseball world would dispute him.

Baseball needs him.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who placed the same restriction on Mickey Mantle when the ex-Yankee star took a similar Atlantic City job, sympathizes with Mays' dilemma but insists that baseball must protect its integrity by avoiding even the appearance of evil.

The inference is that, in this post, Willie is compelled to mingle with wheelers and dealers and unsavory characters.

"That's crazy," said Willie. "I don't gamble. I don't drink or even smoke. I don't stand out front and urge people to come in and bet. I work mostly with kids."

He said that he had met with the commissioner recently and Kuhn was seeking some baseball-related connection for him.

"I don't intend to quit my job at Atlantic City," he insisted. "They have been good to me. But I have a lot of time on my hands. I would like to work with five or six clubs, representing them at various functions.

"I just want to be around baseball."

Torn from the game — unjustly, he feels — Willie admits he is miserable. His wife says he is miserable. A free-spirited guy like Willie, who gives the game such a breath of fresh air, should never be miserable.

Pitt Begins Legion Title Quest

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team begins its quest for a state tournament championship Saturday night as it hosts Rocky Mount in the second round of the Area I East playoffs.

Pitt, which won the regular season championship for the seventh straight year this season, had a bye in the first round. Rocky Mount defeated Kinston in two straight games in the first round.

The Rocky Mount-Pitt series will be a best-of-three affair with the first game at D.H. Conley High School Saturday at 8 p.m. The second game will be played in Rocky Mount on Sunday, and the third, if needed, back at Conley. The winner then faces the survivor of the Snow Hill-Wayne County series for the Area I East title.

Pitt brings a 15-3 record into the playoffs, the best record since 1977, when records are available. Over those seven years, Pitt has put together an 88-26 regular season record. In the playoffs, they have not fared quite as well, however, with a 35-22 record. In 1977, Pitt lost to Garner in the Area I championships, then lost out to Williamston in the league playoffs in the second round in 1978. After winning the league title again in 1979, Pitt lost to Johnston County in the Area I finals.

In 1980 and 1981, Pitt lost in the second round of the league playoffs, bowing to Rocky Mount and Snow Hill, respectively. Last year, Pitt won both the league and Area I title, bowing four games to one to Hamlet in the Eastern Championship.

Counting 11 exhibition games over the past seven years, Pitt has a 130-52 (.714) record in all games.

Center fielder Randy Warren leads the team in hitting for the season with a .500 batting average while third baseman Greg Briley is hitting at a fine .467 pace. Doug Coley, pitcher-outfielder, is third on the team with a .453 mark, followed by left fielder Rudy Stalls at an even .400.

Second baseman Mont Carter had a .390 average, while shortstop Kenny Kirkland has a .358 mark. Catcher, Curtis Evans winds up those hitting .300 or better with a .302 average.

As a team, Pitt is hitting .372.

Warren leads the team in doubles with seven. Briley had three triples, and Carter, three homers. Warren is a perfect 11-for-11 stealing bases.

On the other end of the spectrum, Darrell Edwards paces the pitching staff with a 5-0 record and a 1.93 earned run average.

Coley is 3-1 with a 4.03 ERA, while Paul Hill is 2-1 with a 1.57 mark. Bill Owens is 2-0 at 3.46, while Steve Wall is 1-0 with a 1.00 ERA.

The Pitt team overall has a 2.99 earned run average.

Perry Optimistic After Move To Kansas City From Seattle

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gaylord Perry, the man once called the "Ancient Mariner" who now wears a Kansas City Royals uniform, believes there's still life in his 44-year-old pitching arm.

And now that he is with a contending club and has relief ace Dan Quisenberry on his side, Perry figures he can continue to add to his 310 major-league victories and help the Royals win the American League West.

"I sure am glad we've got that rascal," Perry said Thursday of Quisenberry, who was the American League Fireman of the Year last year and sports a league-leading 20 saves this season.

"The last time I won 20 games was in San Diego, when they had a fellow named Rolie Fingers in the bullpen. That can mean an awful lot to a starting pitcher."

Perry was 3-10 and had an earned run average of 4.94 when the Seattle Mariners released him shortly before the All-Star break.

Another 44-year-old pitcher, Jim Kaat, was released

Wednesday by the St. Louis Cardinals. He is the only pitcher to appear in 25 major-league seasons.

Perry spent five days at his farm in Williamston, N.C., before the deal with the Royals was worked out.

"But there was never any doubt at all I would be pitching for somebody," he said before his first workout with Kansas City. "I love the game of baseball."

Perry joins an injury-ravaged club that's 4½ games out of first place in the AL West and desperately short of right-handed starters heading into the second half of the season.

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser remembered how Perry helped his New York Yankees in their drive to the Eastern Division championship in 1980 and urged the Royals to pick him up. Perry was 4-4 with Howser's Yankees in the second half of that season.

"He won some big games for us," Howser said. "He really pitched well. I saw him twice this year, and I knew he could help us. I like the way he goes about his job. He can beat the good clubs. He can beat the clubs we have to beat."

Perry said it's impossible to say how much longer he might pitch.

"I'll probably be able to pitch longer than I'll have the opportunity to pitch," said the graying hurler, whose 310 victories and 3,494 strikeouts rank him 10th and fourth, respectively, in baseball history.

Kaat, who is 22 days younger than Perry, ranks 19th on the all-time victory list with 283 and is 18th in strikeouts with 2,461.

"If I don't get to play, I'll have the rest of the year to pursue other interests," said Kaat, who said he'll try to land a spot with another team. "Broadcasting is my first choice, but coaching is a possibility."

Wertz Dies In Surgery

DETROIT (AP) — Vic Wertz, who is best remembered for hitting a long fly ball that was caught spectacularly by Willie Mays in the 1954 World Series, has died in heart surgery.

Wertz, 58, died at 7:34 a.m. Thursday as Harper Hospital surgeons attempted to perform a coronary bypass and replace a valve in his heart, said hospital spokesman Frank F. Bredell.

Wertz had suffered a heart attack June 23 and was admitted to the hospital, where he suffered a second heart attack Wednesday, Bredell said.

Wertz, hit .277 during 17 major league seasons. As an outfielder who became a first baseman.

Alarie, Doherty On USA Select Team

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Twelve of the nation's top college basketball players will be coached at Samford University next week before they tour the Orient for pre-Olympics tournaments.

The Olympic hopefuls arrived today and will train for a week before visiting Korea, Kuala Lumpur and Japan for tournaments July 15-Aug. 3.

The Amateur Basketball Association-USA of Colorado Springs, Colo., picked the players for the USA Select team. They will be coached by Samford's Mike Hanks, with help from Gerry Gimelstor of George Washington University and Joby Wright of Indiana University.

"I am very excited about being chosen to help prepare America's basketball team or the 1984 Olympic games," Hanks said.

"These players, and the 12 players chosen for the USA team in the Pan American games, are the 24 young men with the best chance of making the U.S. team for next year's Olympics. I can't wait to get started," he said.

The practice sessions, open to the public, will begin Saturday and be held twice daily through July 14 at Samford.

Overton ESPN Top Amateur

Kristi Overton of Greenville, who will compete this weekend in the international Master's skiing tournament in Georgia, has been named as the "Owens-Corning Amateur Athlete of the Week" by the ESPN cable network.

In announcing the selection of Miss Overton on Thursday's "SportsCenter" segment, the sports programming station showed film of the 13-year-old skier in competition and gave background information of her achievements.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Overton, she was selected to join eight other women and 12 men for the 25th annual Master's competition at Calaway Gardens.

During the invitational event, Miss Overton will compete in slalom and trick categories. She is the current record holder in her age group in both events.

British Victory '83 Chases Australia II In Cup Race

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Buoyed by another win in America's Cup trials, the British Victory '83 syndicate is looking forward to a longer race course and fresher winds as it chases the leader, Australia II.

"This is not really our wind at all," Victory '83 spokesman Jim Alabaster said Thursday after the British boat came from behind in light 8-knot winds to beat Canada 1.

"We would like to get on with the longer races," he added. "It's more like the real America's Cup."

Trailing by 22 seconds on the windward fourth leg of the triangular course, Victory '83 overtook the Canadian entry on the downwind run under spinnakers, and spread its lead to 34 seconds at the finish in changing winds of about 8 knots.

Canada 1, holding fifth place with 3.8 points after the loss, flew a protest flag on the fifth leg.

The second round of trials has been marked by light winds on Rhode Island Sound as the seven foreign yachts vying for the honor of challenging the Americans' 132-year hold on the cup go to a longer course today comprised of six legs of 4.5 miles each.

Australia II continues to lead the pack with 7.2 points under the complex scoring system to 6.6 for Victory '83. But the British yacht has so far equalled Australia II's record of 5-1 in the second round of racing, waiting for the favorite to falter.

Veteran skipper Jim Hardy, who has skipped three other America's Cup challenges, showed no signs of tripping as he kept Australia II in the lead on all six of the 2.5-mile legs to beat sixth-place France 3 by two minutes, 10 seconds.

In the only other race of the day, Advance of Australia continued to be plagued by bad luck as it broke a spinnaker fitting while leading Azzurra of Italy, which came from behind to win by 1:11.

The win brought the Italian yacht into a tie for third with idle Challenge 12 of Australia, at 5.0 points each, and left Advance in last place, yet to mark its first win. Challenge 12 had the day off.

While the foreign boats continued their trials, the Americans were in the midst of three weeks off to prepare for the July 16 start of the second round of trials under the scrutiny of the New York Yacht Club.

The best-of-seven finals start Sept. 13.

Bryant Named AP Player Of The Year

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — he scores a touchdown. "And the thing about it is, he's really sincere. It's genuine," says Coach Jim Mora.

Bryant, who led the Stars into the playoffs with a 15-3, the best of any team in the United States Football

USFL Player Of The Year

League's first season, was named Thursday the USFL Player of the Year by The Associated Press.

"I've never been on a team with a record as good as this one. This is big time. But I can't take all the credit," Bryant said. "It's a team thing. And the award is like secondary. I want to win that championship."

The 22-year-old rookie, who grew up in a family of 10 children in Tarboro, N.C., is known for his frugality, his humility and his shyness off the field.

On the field, he's anything but shy.

Bryant finished as the USFL's second-leading ground-gainer with 1,442 yards on 318 attempts in 18 games and was the Stars' second-leading receiver with 53 catches for 410 yards. He rushed for 16 touchdowns and caught one scoring pass, playing in all but the season's final game, when he was sidelined by an ankle injury.

"Kelvin has done more for this team than anyone could have anticipated," said Mora. "His main concern is the success of the football team. He's one of the hardest workers we have."

Mora first met Bryant a week after the Stars opened training camp last February. "At first, you wonder how a guy like him is going to fit in with the team. But he just came in and put his nose to the grindstone."

The 6-foot-2, 190-pound Bryant signed with the Stars for a reported $2 million. He liked the money and the idea of getting playing time — something he wasn't sure he'd get in the National Football League. He'd had three 1,000-yard seasons at the University of North Carolina, although he was hampered by injuries during his freshman and junior years. The word got out among some recruiters that he wasn't tough enough.

"I had heard that he had some injury problems," said Mora, "but he's put those rumors to rest. He's played what amounts to three college seasons with only about a week off and he's taken a lot of hits."

"It was just a matter of bad breaks," Bryant said of his college problems. "When I was a freshman, I hurt my shoulder because I grabbed the quarterback's shoulder pads, and they were too small. When I hurt my knee (as a junior), it was just a matter of being hit on the outside part of the leg."

General Manager Carl Peterson, who recruited Bryant with a promise that he would play behind a powerful offensive line, said, "What people notice about Kelvin is his second and third effort."

U.S. Cagers Facing Canada

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The way things have been going for the United States at the World University Games, its unbeaten men's basketball team better be ready tonight.

For the red-faced Americans, it has been that sort of a competition. They've simply been embarrassed by the rest of the world, particularly the Soviet Union.

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart's heavily favored U.S. squad will face Canada in the semifinals after Cuba goes against Yugoslavia in a semifinal game.

Since Canada lost to the U.S. by only one point in an exhibition game last month, the American players should be aware a major upset is a possibility.

With only four days left in an 11-event competition, the United States has only three gold medals. That means the Americans are 26 gold medals off their 1981 pace in Bucharest, Romania, where they won 29.

In 11 previous games, the Americans' lowest gold medal count was 14 — in 1965 at the first competition in Bucharest. They've had a high of 32 golds since joining this competition 18 years ago.

On Thursday night, three Nigerians who attend U.S. colleges equalled the Americans' grand total of three gold medals.

In comparison, the powerful Soviet Union went into today's competition with 42 golds, 19 silvers and 16 bronze — an incredible medal count of 77.

The United States had 30 medals, including 14 silvers and 13 bronze.

U.S. amateur athletic prestige suffered another blow Thursday when the previously undefeated American women's basketball team was upset 87-71 by Romania. The score was 44-41 for the Romanians at halftime. After that, it wasn't close.

The Americans may have been guilty of looking past the Europeans.

"I thought they (the Romanians) were stronger defensively than we had anticipated," admitted U.S. Coach Jill Hutchinson of Illinois State.

"The United States did not send its best team," assessed Romanian Coach Nicolae Martin.

The question then, of course, is why. What has caused America's subpar athletic showing?

The head of the U.S. delegation attempted to answer that question Thursday.

"I'm surprised at the level of competition here," Warren Giese of University of South Carolina said. "It's very tough. We need to arrange higher priorities for these games."

The swimming competition ended Thursday night with the Soviet Union capturing three more golds to give it a whopping total of 22 golds — out of a possible 29 — and 34 medals.

Canada's Frank Baumann picked off his second gold medal but just missed breaking his own world record in the 200-meter individual medley.

American swimmer Bruce Hayes, 20, from UCLA, who has one of the three U.S. victories, pushed his medals' total to six with a bronze in the men's 1,500 freestyle.

Hayes, most decorated athlete on the sub-par U.S. squad, finished with one gold, four silvers and one bronze.

In Thursday night's track and field competition, Nigerians Yussuf Alli, Sunday Uti and Chidi Imoh posted their country's first games' victories ever.

Alli, a senior at University of Missouri, won the long jump with a leap of 26 feet, 11 1/4 inches, while Uti, a freshman at Iowa State, knocked off 1980 Olympic champion Victor Markin of the Soviet Union and U.S. champion Sunder Nix of Indiana University in the 400 dash in 45.32.

Imoh, a sophomore at Missouri, scored an upset triumph in the 100-meter dash in 10.33.

Markin lost but the Soviets' fantastic gold medal run here continued in track and field. The Soviets posted victories in the other four finals.

American athletes had to settle for one silver and three bronzes in track and field with NCAA champion Ralph Spry of Mississippi taking second in the men's 400.

Some Parents Create Monsters With Pushes

NEW YORK (AP) — Some parents are "creating monsters" by pushing their children to excel at sports, particularly Little League baseball, says Digger Phelps, head basketball coach at Notre Dame.

"Worse than the physical risk in playing sports today is the possibility of creating a monster, a prima donna, a kid who thinks he's a superstar, who believes the world revolves around him and around sports," Phelps said in an article for Sunday's Parade magazine.

"I think Little League baseball, for instance, has done much to destroy the proper athletic concepts for young children," Phelps wrote. "There's too much emphasis on winning, on being a star. If a kid is not quite as good as his playmates, he may get to bat once, in the last inning when the game has been decided."

Phelps emphasized the importance of competing in contrast to "winning, always, at any cost. The greatest danger to young athletes comes from misguided, misdirected parents who, too often, live vicariously through the achievements of their children."

Phelps, who has coached at Notre Dame for 12 seasons with a 235-111 record, said when he got the job "I thought I had gone to heaven."

But he said that all changed when he took his first trip to Europe in 1975.

"It's hard to explain the impact," he wrote, "but all of a sudden I saw another world. I went to museums — in Paris, London, Amsterdam — and I was overwhelmed by what I saw. I couldn't absorb all the painters, so I fell in love with Van Gogh. I studied his art. I studied his life, his struggles, his sorrows. I stopped being consumed by basketball."

He said he took down plaques and trophies in his office and replaced them with paintings. He also switched from rock music to classical and from colorful sports jackets to three-piece suits.

"I still care very much about basketball," he wrote. "I still want to win. But there are so many other things just as important, more important. Give me a choice now between winning the NCAA championship — for the first time in my career — and getting a Van Gogh for my wall, and I'm going to have to do some very heavy thinking."

Softball Marathon

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the Easter Seal Society will hold a two-day softball extravaganza to raise funds to support physically handicapped children and adults.

The event will be held on July 16-17, from morning until night, and be held at Evans Park. Participating teams will be given four hours of practice time for the marathon, with a chance to play in scheduled Sunday exhibition games against WSFL and WNCT-TV celebrities along with other prizes.

The marathon is open to all area-organized and pick-up teams, with each team participating in two two-hour shifts, either split or consecutive. Funds are raised by players who secure individuals or businesses to sponsor their team by donating various amounts of money. All donations are tax deductible with prizes awarded to the top fund-raising teams and individuals.

Any men's, women's, or co-ed teams, organizations, umpires or individuals interested in playing are scheduled to call the toll-free softball hotline at 1-800-662-9712 to sign up.

Optimists 14
Jaycees 8

The Optimists romped to a 14-8 victory over the Jaycees in the first round of the North State Little League playoffs yesterday. The win set up a meeting of the Optimists with regular season champion SportsWorld today at 4 p.m. at Guy Smith Park.

The Optimists pushed over four runs in the top of the first, while the Jaycees came back to score three in their half of the frame, all on a homer by David Gordon. The Optimists then added three more in the second, while the Jaycees scored once in the bottom of the frame to trail 7-4.

In the third, however, the Optimists pushed over five more runs to put the game out of reach. Ken Pearson led off the frame with a home run. Meliton Carawan then walked and Kendall Hardee reached on a fielder's choice. Pack Williams reached on a fielder's choice also and Heath Clark doubled to drive in both Carawan and Hardee. An error let both Williams and Clark score.

The Optimists added two more in the fifth, while the Jaycees came up with three in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Shawn Griffin led the Optimists with four hits, while Clark had three and Williams and Nelson Galloway each had two. Gordon had two hits to lead the Jaycees.

Union Carbide 9
Kiwanis 3

Union Carbide advanced into the second round of the North State Little League tournament with a 9-3 victory over the Kiwanis yesterday. Union Carbide will take on Coca-Cola in the second round, today at 6 p.m. at Guy Smith Park.

UC moved ahead with one run in the first, then scored four times in the third to wrap it up.

Brian Poust led off the third with a single and Bill Turcotte got a hit, both moving up on an error. Jeff Bennett walked to lead them up, and with one down, Andre Hopkins doubled in two runs. Abram Long walked and a wild pitch scored Bennett. Martin Anderson then grounded out, scoring Hopkins.

UC added one in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the sixth — that on a homer by Jonathan Powers.

The Kiwanis scored one in the fourth on a Pat Joyner homer, and two more in the sixth as Joyner homered again.

Turcotte and Hopkins each had three hits to lead Union Carbide, while Joyner's two led the Kiwanis.

Coca-Cola 23
Lions 5

Coca-Cola routed the Lions, 23-5, yesterday in the first round of the North State Little League playoffs. Coke will now face Union Carbide in the second round today at 6 p.m. at Guy Smith.

Coke got all it was to need in the first inning, scoring five times. Derrick Clark led off with a double and scored when Derrick Hines doubled. He came around on two wild pitches. Walter Gatlin walked and so did Mike Smith. Kevin Jordan singled to drive in Gatlin, and Todd Taylor got a hit scoring Smith and Jordan to wind up the inning's work.

Coke added four in the second, four more in the third, five in the fourth and five more in the fifth. The Lions got all five of their runs in the fourth inning.

Hines, Gatlin and Jordan each had three hits for Coke, while Clark, Andy Miller and Smith each had two. No one had more than one for the Lions.

Exchange 7
Moose 5

The Exchange pushed over five runs in the fourth inning and held off the Moose to take a 7-5 victory in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League playoffs yesterday. Exchange will now face league champ Carroll & Associates in the second round, today at 4 p.m. at Elm Street.

The Moose took the lead with three runs in the first, but the Exchange came up with two in the third, on solo homers by Maurice Battle and Malcolm Wilson.

Then, in the fourth, the Exchange added five more. Kevin Sugg walked and Carlos White reached on a fielder's choice. Daryl Moore singled in Sugg and White scored on a wild pitch. Battle singled and an error let Moore score. Wilson then doubled and a wild pitch let Battle score. Another scored Wilson.

The Moose rallied for two in the fifth, but fell short.

Battle had three hits, while Moore and Wilson each had two for the Exchange. Allen Speight had two hits to lead the Moose.

Wellcome 4
Pepsi-Cola 3

Wellcome scored twice in the fifth, then held off a Pepsi rally in the sixth to slip past the last place finishers, 4-3, in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League playoffs yesterday. Wellcome now faces First Federal in the second round at 6 p.m. tonight.

Wellcome got one run in the first, but Pepsi matched that in the second. Wellcome went back out with one in the fourth.

But in was two in the fifth that made the difference. Chris Brown led off with a single and Adam Nobles doubled. Jared Dancy singled in Brown, and Jason Browder grounded out, scoring Nobles for a 4-1 lead.

Pepsi rallied for two in the sixth, but failed to move the tying run into scoring position.

Brown and Dancy led the Wellcome hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Pepsi.

First Federal 10
True Value 8

First Federal outlasted True Value Hardware, 10-8, in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League tournament yesterday. First Federal now meets Wellcome in the second round, tonight at 6 p.m. at Elm Street Park.

First Federal moved ahead with five runs in the first inning, including a lead-off homer by John Bolen. The Bankers added three more in the second for an 8-0 lead. True Value started its comeback in the third, scoring five times.

First Federal then got what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. Frankie Pugh opened with a single and moved to third on an error on the play. He scored when Maurice Dyer grounded out.

That made it 9-5, and True Value never caught up, adding two in the fourth and one in the fifth. First Federal got an insurance run in the fifth.

Pugh and Dyer led the First Federal hitting with three each, while Jerome Vines and Jay Ormond each had two for True Value.

Maurice Battle of the Exchange won the batting championship of the Tar Heel Little League this season. Battle finished the year with a .422 average.

Four other batters finished above .400 for the year. They include Darryl Moore of Exchange, .420; John Bolen of First Federal, .413; Judd Crumpler, Wellcome, .411.

Others in the top ten include Maurice Dyer First Federal, .396; Wes Jackson, Moose, .388; Chris Fuqua, Pepsi-Cola, .385; Darin Bullock, Moose, .353; and Sean Lyles, Pepsi-Cola, .348.

Winterville Little League
Aldridge & South .. 12
Computerland 7

WINTERVILLE — Jim Faulkner threw a one-hitter in striking out 13 batters and added two hits at the plate to lead Aldridge and Southerland to a 12-7 victory over Computerland in Winterville Little League baseball Thursday.

Kevin Joyner added two hits for Aldridge and Southerland.

After Computerland scored three runs in the first, A&S tied the score with three in the third. A&S scored three more in the fourth, but Computerland again knotted the score with two in the fifth.

A&S took control with five in the bottom half of the fifth. Derrick Harrell and Ben Edwards walked to open the inning for A&S, and Joyner singled in Harrell for the winning run.

Edwards 33
Sunshine 6

WINTERVILLE — Kervin Vines ripped a grand slam homer, threw a no-hitter and struck out 10 batters to lead Edwards Auto to a 33-6 romp over Sunshine Garden Center in Winterville Little League baseball action Thursday.

Vines, Brian Bullock and Eddie Doughtie each had two hits for Edwards Auto.

Vines' four-bagger in the third capped a 22-run explosion to put the game out of reach.

S. Pitt Bambino
Hornets 9
Bears 4

Derek Ennis drove in the winning run in the second inning with a double and added a two-run homer in the fourth to lead the Hornets to a 9-4 victory over the Bears for the South Pitt Bambino League baseball championship Thursday.

Winning pitcher Dale Sutton struck out nine batters and allowed just five hits to lead the Hornets to the title.

G. Stancill and Michael Chapman had two hits each for the Bears.

Prep League
SNOW HILL — Martin County and Greene County advanced into the winner's bracket of the Babe Ruth League's 13-year-old (Prep) District Tournament with wins last night.

Martin County downed Washington, 7-4, and will now meet Greenville tonight at 6 p.m. Greene County edged past Nash County, 11-10, and takes on Pitt County tonight at 8:30 p.m.

Washington and Nash drop into the losers' bracket of the tournament, and will face the losers of today's games in contests on Saturday.

Pitt and Greenville both had byes in the first round of the six-team double elimination event.

The winner advances to the state tournament in Wilmington beginning July 15.

O'Meara Refining Golf Skills

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mark O'Meara used to think he could earn a handsome living on the pro golf tour simply with his raw abilities, which are considerable.

Now that he is refining his skills, he seems destined to fulfill predictions that he will become one of the best in the game.

O'Meara, the 1979 U.S. Amateur champion, fired a 7-under-par 65 Thursday, joining Lon Hinkle as a first-round leader in the $250,000 annual Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

Wally Armstrong solved a three-year putting problem and was a stroke back at 66. Buddy Gardner was at 67.

Tied at 68 were Dale Douglass, Ken Green, Mick Soli and Dennis Tiziani, the University of Wisconsin golf coach and reigning state Professional Golfers Association champion.

Defending champion Calvin Peete, the top money winner here with $196,508, good for eighth place, was tied at 69 with Jim Colbert, Roger Maltbie, Don Pooley, Clarence Rose, Mark Calcavecchia and Chi-Chi Rodriguez.

The field was to be cut to the low 70 and ties after today's round at the 7,010-yard, par 72 Tuckaway Country Club course in suburban Franklin. The tourney concludes Sunday.

O'Meara, who played boyless golf in Wednesday's pro-am event, repeated that feat Thursday. He also had five birdies and eagled the 524-yard par 5 sixth hole. O'Meara does not dispute that he may be only a few refinements away from greatness. He shot 11-under par and finished fifth at Memphis two weeks ago and lost in a playoff at Phoenix early in the year.

"I've changed my swing," he said. "I came on the tour three years ago and I didn't know anything about a swing. I was just getting by on natural talent and instincts."

"Now I know what I have to do to get a good swing," he said. "There is no question in my mind that I'll be a good golfer because of the things

I'm working on." "I'm very pleased," he said. "But I'll just go out tomorrow and play shot by shot. The pressure doesn't really start until the last nine holes of a tournament."

O'Meara and Hinkle both played in twosomes. O'Meara with Jim Dent and Hinkle with Terry Diehl, because their scheduled threesome partners had withdrawn.

Hinkle knew that would lead to lots of idle time between shots. He said he doesn't like slow play, but this time used the leisurely pace to improve his concentration.

"I thought of all the times when I would be looking at the board to see what everybody else was doing instead of thinking about what I was supposed to be doing, testing how hard the ground was and how hard the wind was blowing," he said.

Hinkle suffered what he believes was a shoulder dislocation in 1981 and dropped off the tour the last months of last year to rest and work on his game.

He had seven birdies, two bogeys and an eagle on No. 6 on his first round.

"I haven't been in position a lot the last couple of years, but I'm getting close," he said. "You can't tell from one round, but it feels pretty good to shoot a 65."

Armstrong went back to a low-choke putting grip that he used in his early years on the tour. He was advised to alter his style, but his game suffered until recently.

"I had been having a horrible time getting the ball to the hole, but the fast greens helped today," he said. "The greens are getting faster as it dries, and the course is in fantastic shape."

Gardner, who won $71,468 in 1979, had struggled since he tore ligaments in his left wrist in a touch football accident in 1980. He said a change in his putting stance has helped him regain his former skills.

Watching It Go

Golfer Mark O'Meara watches his second shot on the 18th hole Thursday during the first round of the Greater Milwaukee Open. O'Meara got a birdie on the hole to give him a share of the lead with a seven-under-par 65. Lon Hinkle also finished at 65. (AP Laserphoto)

Running, Jogging And Walking: Endurance Race Tests Stamina

NEW YORK (AP) — Round and round they go — running, jogging and walking for six days and six nights. They stop when they want, eat when they want, sleep when they want.

They are endurance runners, pursuing nothing in particular and everything in the world.

"Why do we do this?" asked Lorna Richey, who Thursday was leading the women's division of the New York Six-Day Endurance Race, averaging about 65 miles a day after three days. "It's the challenge of seeing how far the body can go, how much it can take."

"You get the 'runner's high' when you finish it. It's a very exciting feeling."

How exciting can it be to run or jog or just plain walk around a track in a rotting old stadium underneath the Triboro Bridge for mile after mile? New Zealander Siegfried Bauer, the men's leader at the three-day halfway mark, was clocking about 94 miles a day. You eat as you compete, walking the track with a bowl of rice or perhaps some crackers. You sleep in tents three or four hours a day.

In this any reason to come to New York?

"Sure," said Richey, 24, a part-time teacher from Toledo, Ohio. "This event is really well-organized, about as organized as any I've been in."

"I've run in 82 marathons, including a lot of ultra-marathons (50 miles). The longest was a 24-hour in Chicago. I ran 109 miles.

Richey and the other 23 competitors in the race, sponsored by the New York Roadrunners Club — which also runs the New York City Marathon and the Fifth Avenue Mile — have varying goals.

"I'm going for the American record," said Richey, who is after two marks — 393 miles in six days set last century by a Madame Anderson, and 384 miles traveled by Marcie Schwamm of Boston last year. "I know I'll really feel the 'runner's high' when I get it."

She'll also feel "fatigued, with every muscle in your body sore. You're totally drained."

"My strategy is to run four laps and walk one. When I get to the end of five miles I rest for half an hour. Any other way would be crazy."

Six-day endurance races were popular in the late 1800s, with the world record set in 1888 when Briton George Littlewood went 623 miles, 120 yards at Madison Square Garden.

For their aches and pains, endurance runners back then collected as much as a tidy $30,000.

The sport disappeared until 1980, when Don Choi, a San Francisco postal worker who is competing here — his second such event in two weeks — revived it with a race in

Dukes May Move

Woodside, Calif.

This year's schedule includes two races in Nottingham, England, four in New Jersey, one in San Diego, one in La Rochelle, France, and the New York City competition. First prize here is a not-so-tidy $0.

"We couldn't get any sponsorship for it," said Fred Lebow, president of the Roadrunners and the guiding force behind the six-day race. "Madison Avenue laughed at us and wouldn't touch it."

But 24 runners, 12 Americans and 12 foreigners, would. So they prance around the track in the heat of the day and the cool of the night, at varying speeds to the sounds of background music ranging from Wagner to the Beatles spurring them on. And, somehow, they don't get bored.

The men have run as a "You're too busy worrying about not getting dehydrated," said Richey. "You're too busy surviving."

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The owner of the Alexandria Dukes says Carl Steinfeldt is ready to make an offer to buy the financially ailing Carolina League baseball team and move it to West Virginia, but the Charleston businessman says he's just talking — for now.

Team owner Eugene Thomas said Thursday he discussed selling to Steinfeldt the Dukes, a Class A minor league team and a farm club affiliate of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Steinfeldt recently sold the Class AAA Charleston Charlies of the International League to Maine businessman Jordan Kobritz, who plans to move the team to Portland next year. That would leave West Virginia's capital city without minor league baseball for the first time since 1971.

Although Thomas said Steinfeldt told him he is prepared to make a substantial offer for the Dukes, Steinfeldt said "at this time we are only in the process of talking. I have made overtures. I have told him we are interested."

Thomas said Herbert Morewitz, a member of the Newport News stadium authority, also has made an offer for the Dukes.

Steed Wins Putt Event

Zelton Steed won the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at Putt-Putt Golf and Games last night.

Steed posted rounds of 34 and 30 to finish with an eight-under-par 64.

A three-way tie for third between Leslie Williams, Eric Nelson and Jake Garriss was broken when Williams aced the first hole of the sudden death playoff.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

BELSHAZZAR, THE SON OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR, HAD MADE A GREAT FEAST BEFITTING HIS KINGLY STATION. WHEN THE MERRIMENT AND THE WINE FLOWED TO A HIGH PITCH BELSHAZZAR DECIDED IT WOULD BE GREAT SPORT TO BRING OUT OF THE TREASURY THE GOLD AND SILVER VESSELS WHICH HIS FATHER HAD TAKEN OUT OF THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM TO USE AS DRINKING MUGS FOR HIS PRINCES, WIVES, AND CONCUBINES. HE REALLY SHOULDN'T HAVE DONE THIS! BECAUSE THE END RESULT WAS, THE VISION OF A HAND APPEARED OVER THE GREAT WALL OF THE BANQUET HALL AND WROTE A MESSAGE ON THE PLASTER, WHICH TROUBLED THE KING MIGHTILY BECAUSE THE LANGUAGE THE MESSAGE WAS WRITTEN IN WAS FOREIGN TO HIM. DANIEL WAS THE ONLY ONE WHO COULD DISCERN THE IMPORT OF THE WRITING. AND WHEN BELSHAZZAR LEARNED WHAT THE PROPHECY STATED HE MUST HAVE REGRETTED USING THE HOLY VESSELS FOR FRIVOLOUS PURPOSES! FOR DANIEL INFORMED THE KING THAT HE WAS WEIGHED IN THE BALANCES AND FOUND WANTING AND HIS KINGDOM WOULD BE DESTROYED THAT VERY NIGHT. ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN THE BOOK OF DANIEL, CHAPTER FIVE.

Pastor To Be Installed Sunday

Installation of the Rev. Michael G. Clay as pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church in Greenville will be held at the 10:30 a.m. Mass Sunday. A reception will follow in St. Raphael Hall.

The installation ceremony will be conducted by the Rev. Thomas Hadden of Holy Trinity Church, Kinston.

Born in Philadelphia, Michael Clay was raised in New Bern, where he graduated from New Bern High School. He subsequently studied at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and upon acceptance by the Diocese of Raleigh, was sent to the North American College in Rome for further studies. On returning to the United States he returned to Catholic University and later resumed studies for his ultimate ordination at Theological College in Washington.

He was ordained in November 1980 in New Bern, at the Centenary United Methodist Church.

Father Clay's first assignment was as associate rector at Sacred Heart Cathedral in Raleigh, and was there upon being assigned to his Greenville post.

Rev. MICHAEL CLAY

Research Firm Helps Keep Films Believable

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the make-believe world of movies and television, staffers at De Forest Research make a daily stand for reality—or the semblance of it.

Susan Chernus, one of seven reality-watchdogs for the company, said she checks details on scenery, logistics and characters in movies and TV shows, but the details don't always jibe with real life.

The script of one prime-time television program set in New York City, for example, called for cars slamming into a Chinatown bus stop, a scene set in an outdoor flower market and another scene set in a midtown Manhattan alley—all impossible situations, Ms. Chernus said recently.

"You can't have a car chase in Chinatown with the cars plowing into a bus stop because there are no bus stops on the side streets of Chinatown," Ms. Chernus said.

"There is no outside flower market in New York City," she said. "And when was the last time you saw an alley in midtown Manhattan—other than the Shubert (theater) alley?"

Ms. Chernus won't say which show contained those errors—which stayed in the script despite her efforts—because "we get very paranoid about insulting our clients."

But most producers take the firm's advice, Ms. Chernus said.

The producers of the "Dallas" TV show, for example, wanted to know about the intricacies of offshore oil production and the means for adopting a baby in Texas before scripts that might contain such details were written.

The original script for the film "Roller" had someone picking up a briefcase filled with gold Krugerrands. De Forest reported such a briefcase would be too heavy for any one person to lift.

Located on the Paramount Pictures lot in Hollywood, De Forest Research is the brainchild of Kellam de Forest, 56, who has been in the business since 1952, three years after he got a history degree at Yale University and decided that he wanted to be in show business.

From a one-man operation in de Forest's apartment, the firm grew to employ seven researchers and collect a library filled with 16,000 volumes and countless magazines and photographs.

"We have the kind of library that if a prop man needs a picture of a Turkish telephone booth or if somebody needs to know what a 1938 Wisconsin truck license plate looks like, we get them," said researcher Peter Sloman.

About three-fourths of the research involves making sure that names of people in scripts don't match real people, that a screen murder doesn't take place at the same address as a real person's home or that a getaway car license plate doesn't match a real one.

When De Forest Research handled the film "Tootsie," it made sure there was no real actress named Dorothy Michaels—Dustin Hoffman's female character in the movie—and no actor named Michael Dorsey, Hoffman's male character.

De Forest also confirmed there was no real lawyer in Massachusetts named Frank Galvin, the name of the character played by Paul Newman in "The Verdict."

For the film "Prince of the City," the researchers verified that none of the names of the film's policemen matched those of real New York officers.

The list of De Forest Research clients includes some of Hollywood's top movie makers: Paramount Pictures, MGM-UA Entertainment, Lorimar, MTM and Embassy Communications. Some studios, like Universal Studios and Columbia Pictures, have their own in-house research staffs.

VCRs Delete TV Commercials

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertisers are another segment of the television industry worried about the taping of programs and movies on home videocassette recorders, since commercials can easily be passed over by the new technology's speed-search and fast-forward buttons.

"About half of all VCR (videocassette recorder) owners regularly skip over commercials during playback," says Walter Reichel, executive vice president and director of media programs for the Ted Bates advertising agency.

"VCRs with fast-forward modes and TV sets with remote control are the single biggest threat to future TV advertising," says Richard Kostyra, senior vice president, media director for the J. Walter Thompson ad agency.

On Wednesday, the Supreme Court declined to rule on whether consumers should be freely allowed to tape television programs, asking for more arguments next term on the issue of taping as a copyright infringement.

TV and movie producers claim they deserve compensation when there is unauthorized taping. Advertisements are a different story. Few people willfully tape commercials, which ride piggyback on the shows.

Nonetheless, advertisers could be damaged by taping. As VCR sales increase, so will the viewer's ability to pedal past sponsor pauses.

The Electronic Industries Association estimates that by the end of 1983, at least 8 million VCRs will be in American homes, representing nearly 10 percent of the nation's TV households. Ted Bates predicts that by 1990 close to one-third of all homes will have video recorders.

"It's not a substantial problem now, but the problem of getting our commercial messages across could become very serious," says Reichel.

"It's not a major factor now," says Kostyra. "But I see how TV competes with cable and the other media, while I'm at ends to see how we'll compete with viewer zapping."

Zapping is the industry term for the ability of viewers, with VCRs, multichannel cable boxes and remote-control devices, to jet around the dial during commercial breaks or lulls in the program action.

The Television Audience Assessment Report, released this spring, said 15 percent of all TV viewers regularly changed channels during commercials, and that figure went up to 40 percent in homes with pay cable.

But David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research, says that study was fallible because it was filled with opportunities for socially desirable responses—the kind respondents feel obliged to make. Would you admit to watching Mr. Whipple squeezing the Charmin'?

Poltrack cites a recent A.C. Nielsen Co. survey indicating less frequent channel-switching. In any given minute of prime-time commercials, 21 out of 1,000 TV homes switched; 30 out of 1,000 switched in pay-cable homes; 36 out of 1,000 switched in homes with remote-control devices, and 45 out of 1,000 switched in homes with pay cable and remote control.

Nielsen also tested the less settled period between programs. In the first three minutes of shows, there were 147 switches per 1,000 TV homes; 159 in pay-cable homes; 183 in homes with remote control, and 184 in homes with pay cable and remote control.

For the show's last three minutes, the switching figures were 115 per 1,000 TV homes, 131 in pay-cable homes, 147 in homes with remote control and 167 in homes with pay cable and remote control.

This fickleness overrides the axiom that most viewers are too lazy to change the channel. For years, networks have relied on static audiences, with the flow from one program to the next on the same channel estimated at between 60 percent and 80 percent.

This season, audience-switching has become part of CBS' strategy on Wednesday nights. ABC's 8 o'clock show is "Fall Guy," with high male appeal, CBS' is "Cutter to Houston," with strong women's appeal. CBS expects many viewers to flip-flop at 9, when ABC has "Dynasty" and CBS has male movies.

FREE CONCERT — Singer Diana Ross says she will give a free concert in New York's Central Park on July 21, donating proceeds from souvenir sales to aid park improvements in the city. (AP Laserphoto)

"This wouldn't have been conceivable before," says Poltrack.

Activists Rule Out Bombs As Major Weapon

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — The exiled leaders of South Africa's largest black nationalist group claim the underground work of black unionists and other activists — not bombs — is the key to winning black-majority rule in their country.

"If a bomb like the one in Pretoria is the only way to win, we will do it again, but it is only a method," said Thabo Mbeki, a member of the National Executive, leadership of the African National Congress. The exile group is headquartered here.

An ANC car bomb killed 19 people and wounded more than 200 May 20 outside South Africa's air force headquarters in downtown Pretoria. It was the worst guerrilla attack ever in white-minority-governed South Africa.

"The only thing different about the Pretoria bomb was the number of casualties," Mbeki said. "Take people working in trade unions or students or women's groups, who have never been trained as guerrillas, but are every day talking to workers about the ANC, organizing for the ANC. This is more important than a bomb going off."

Mbeki is the son of ANC National Chairman Govan Mbeki, who is imprisoned for life in South Africa for plotting sabotage.

He made his comments in an interview here with The Associated Press. Simon Makana, also a member of the National Executive, accompanied him.

The ANC, with its own labor wing, regularly argues that organizing workers is the way to defeat the government.

Since black unions were legalized in late 1979 by Prime Minister P.W. Botha's government, police have detained more than 250 unionists who allegedly worked for the ANC or furthered its aims.

Black unionists, however, deny having ANC links. Some even criticize the ANC for avoiding the labor struggle while claiming credit from exile.

The 71-year-old black-rights group was banned in 1961 and gradually turned to armed struggle, because South Africa's whites refused to negotiate.

Mbeki also said the ANC is trying to block the government's plan to grant parliamentary representation to voteless mixed-race (coloreds) and Asian peoples, but not blacks.

The ANC fears successful reform would push some of the 4 million coloreds and Asians to side with the 5 million whites against 20 million blacks.

The two ANC leaders repeated the claim that the ANC, whose late leader Chief Albert Luthuli won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1960, seeks to avoid civilian casualties.

"We would never put a bomb in a white school, even if general so-and-so was there," said Mbeki.

He said an ANC unit based in Pretoria scouted the air force headquarters and "calculated who would be affected." Many of the casualties, including blacks, were air force personnel, and Mbeki said the attack was approved by the ANC high command.

Makana maintained that after South African commandos killed 31 ANC members last December in Maseru, Lesotho's capital, pressure increased for attacks on whites.

The Monkey Trial

On July 10, 1925 — 58 years ago — John T. Scopes went on trial in Dayton, Tennessee, charged with teaching his public school students Darwin's Theory of Evolution. State law prohibited the teaching of anything that denied the Biblical story of divine creation. The spectacular "Monkey Trial," which questioned the division of church and state, lasted 11 days. Millions of newspaper readers across the United States and Europe followed its progress as modern science was pitted against religious tradition. The prosecution, conducted by the great William Jennings Bryan, presented a strong case, and Scopes was convicted of breaking the state's anti-evolution law. He was fined $100.

Life As It's Lived

I was delighted when Meg received invitations from both sets of grandparents to spend a large portion of her summer vacation away from home. We needed a respite from each other after yet another difficult school year during which I failed to make her comprehend the value of institutionalized education.

Besides, she needed the opportunity to practice her manners. I am always eager to hear her grandparents and other assorted relatives rave about her angelic qualities: her sweet disposition, her helpfulness, her impeccable behavior. We have to hear about these gratifying traits second-hand. We rarely see them exhibited at home.

But after two weeks during which Zachary only partly succeeded in filling the verbal vacuum, I began to miss her. All those days of glancing into a bedroom with a made bed and visible carpet finally overwhelmed me. I called her.

She was reluctant to come to the phone. "What do you want?" were her first suspicious words.

"I just wanted to talk to you."

"About what?"

"Nothing in particular. I just wanted to hear your voice."

She breathed an audible sigh of relief. "Thank goodness. I thought you were going to make me come home."

"Only if you're ready."

"I'm not. I'm gonna stay here another year."

"And what about school?"

"My Cousin Heidi plans to take me to her school for show-and-tell."

I wondered whether they had consulted my mother about their plans. "What about clothes? Your school clothes are here."

"My Nana bought me some new clothes, and I'm sure my Grandmommy plans to add to my wardrobe," she said confidently.

"Oh, I see. I take it you're having a good time."

"The best. I went to Bible School and swimming everyday at Nana's. And I spent the night at Aunt Marty's, and my Grandmommy knows how to garden, and she is teaching me."

"I hope you learn better than I did."

"My Grandmommy says

you were hopeless. And my Uncle Charles takes me swimming here and plays sea dragons with me."

The fact that Charles is also my uncle seemed to have escaped her.

"Now I have to go. I am going to ride on the jumpseat of my Granddaddy's little red truck to my Cousin Heidi's, who is just itching to play with me."

"Don't you want to speak to Daddy and Zachary?" She paused. "Briefly."

"Well, I love you and I miss you."

"I love you, too," she said gently. "But I hate to tell you — I don't miss anybody."

By and large, it pays to make aggressive leads against slam contracts — you don't have time to build tricks slowly. West selected the only suit in which he had an honor for his opening salvo, with gratifying results.

After his Stayman inquiry elicited the information that his side had a heart fit, North elected to gamble on a slam if his partner held good hearts. His jump over game was a request to his partner to go on to slam if his trump holding merited that action. South's hearts certainly qualified for a raise.

West felt that the only card in his hand that might be of use to his partner was the jack of diamonds. So, in an attempt to build a trick in that suit, he led a low diamond. The result was dramatic. Since declarer had no place to put his diamond loser, he played low and East won the king. The defenders had to score a trump trick for down one.

Note that, with any other lead, declarer can make his slam. He wins, draws two rounds of trumps and then clears the spades. Next, he starts running clubs. Since he would be end played if he ruffed, East can take three discards on the clubs. But he is only postponing the inevitable. After running clubs, declarer simply exits with a trump. East wins his queen of trumps but he must either lead a diamond away from his king or else concede a ruff-suff to declarer. In either case, declarer avoids losing a diamond trick.

Look For More Responsibility

NEW YORK (AP) — Many secretaries want more responsibilities than their bosses are willing to assign them, according to a national survey of secretaries and managers.

While both secretaries and managers agree secretaries are capable of taking on more duties in the office than they now have, 40 percent of the bosses responding to the poll by Honeywell Inc. believe their secretaries are too busy.

Secretaries, however, do not agree, the study found. Fewer than 25 percent report being too busy to take on extra chores while 40 percent say their manager sees no need to delegate work to them.

Daredevil Duo Ignores Tornado To Climb Tower

By JIM IRWIN Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — A Hollywood stuntman and his daredevil buddy say they showed their "independence" with a dual Fourth of July ascent of the 73-story Westin Hotel, which they claimed was the first double climb of a major building.

Police arrested the two — who made the climb despite a tornado watch — when they pulled themselves over the top of Detroit's tallest building after a 6½-hour climb Monday.

A third man who maintained radio contact with them from the ground also was arrested.

"You can't control the weather," 29-year-old Ron Broyles of Los Angeles radioed back when told of the tornado watch shortly before they reached the top at 2 p.m.

"I've been rained on" in previous climbs, he said. "This is nothing at all."

Broyles, fellow climber Kenn Rick, 32, of suburban Lake Orion, and Fred Jones, 29, of East Lansing, were charged with disorderly conduct and criminal trespassing, said police Sgt. Elmer Bolia. The three were released Monday evening pending a court hearing today.

The charges carry a maximum sentence of 90 days in jail and a $500 fine, authorities said.

Broyles and Rick hooked their homemade clamps into frames used by window washers on the glass-sheathed cylindrical tower, which soars over four surrounding, 39-story buildings in Detroit's Renaissance Center.

They began the climb at 7:30 a.m. and were at the 10th floor before police were alerted. Two officers were on the roof to offer aid.

"It's some sort of independence," Broyles said of the feat. The two had taken the stairs to the hotel's first roof and scaled a 25-foot wall to reach the tower, Jones said.

"This is the first double climb," Jones said. Broyles, who wore a white tuxedo Monday, said the climb was his sixth, but the first since March 14 when he scaled the 75-story Texas Commerce Tower in Houston. He was found innocent of criminal trespass charges in that case by a judge who said prosecutors had no case.

Rick jumped off the Ambassador Bridge linking Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, in March, parachuting to the Detroit River 152 feet below, Jones said. A waiting boat picked up him before he was intercepted by authorities, Jones said.

Rick also scaled one of the Renaissance Center's 39-story buildings almost a year ago. He had hoped to parachute from the top, but the jump was aborted when Rick stepped on the cord that opened his chute. Charges against him were dismissed because no "No Trespassing" signs had been posted.

KNOBBIT MAN — Bob Evans, a former Southern Baptist minister and drug counselor, poses with his creations, which he called "knobbits". Evans carves the wooden gnomes from cypress trees, and he and his wife travel around to craft shows selling them. "Once I've separated a piece of wood from the living tree, I'm committed to doing something with it", Evans says. He has given up his former professions to create the carvings full time. "Yes, I gave up some security, but I feel good about living off the work of my hands", he says. (AP Laserphoto)

Hazardous Waste Compact Bill Approved, Includes N. Carolina

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina likely will be the seventh state to join a regional compact for disposal of low-level radioactive wastes, despite warnings that in doing so it will relinquish control over its own destiny.

The state House tentatively approved 93-18 Thursday a bill to include North Carolina in the compact, which eventually is expected to contain eight states. A final vote was scheduled for today on the bill, which already has passed the Senate.

While supporters and opponents agreed that a disposal facility in North Carolina is practically inevitable, they clashed over whether it would be better for the state to concentrate solely on its own wastes or share the problem with its neighbors.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said action is necessary because the Barnwell, S.C., facility where North Carolina industries now ship much of their wastes will be closed in 1992. South Carolina has threatened to bar North Carolina wastes from the facility starting in 1986 if the bill fails, he said.

"If you don't pay the fiddler, you don't get to dance," said Miller, adding that North Carolina is one of the Southeast's highest producers of the type of waste dealt with in the bill.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the state would be worse off with the bill because it would deprive North Carolina of say-so over the amount of wastes it takes.

"You're being asked to take the wastes of seven other states in addition to giving up control," said Mavretic. "Think about the trade you're being asked to make, and you're some of the smartest traders in the state. This is a bum deal."

In his lengthy explanation of the bill, Miller stressed portions of the bill he said would lessen the likelihood that a radioactive-waste facility will be foisted on North Carolina.

States selected to have facilities would be given four-year notice. A facility could be closed immediately if state officials consider it a hazard to people living near it, Miller said.

North Carolina could withdraw from the compact at any time if it believes the group is acting in bad faith, he said.

"This is an issue that's going to have to be dealt with," said Miller. The bill "is an answer to a pressing, immediate problem."

The way for the bill's passage was cleared Tuesday when the House Judiciary Committee, chaired by Miller, removed an amendment designed to force Senate action on a House hazardous-waste bill.

The amendment would have required the state to set danger thresholds for burial of hazardous wastes, a key provision of a bill sponsored by Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland, to regulate hazardous waste disposal. The bill passed the House but is stalled in a Senate subcommittee.

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, warned Thursday that passing the Senate bill without the amendment would deprive the House of any mechanism to prod the Senate to act on Clark's bill.

Ethridge's motion to delay a vote until Monday was tabled, 73-40.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who with his aides waged a furious lobbying effort on the bill's behalf, expressed gratitude in a statement after the vote.

"The members of the House deserve the praise of the careful study and serious consideration they gave this bill," said Hunt. "The House has acted to protect both the health and safety of our people in a safe and effective way."

Defend Killing A Mascot Goat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Destroying Bill E. Goat, a Marine Corps mascot in Lebanon who was being promoted to the same role in the Army-Navy football game, was a "cavalier act," says a game official.

But federal Agricultural Department officials defended killing the goat when it was returned to New York, saying it might have had hoof-and-mouth disease.

Gen. Billy became a celebrity in Beirut last year after the 22nd Amphibious Unit adopted him. The goat was to become mascot of the Nov. 25 Army-Navy football game in Pasadena, Calif., but was put to sleep instead.

"That was a cavalier act and reflected absolutely no compassion or understanding," Rolfe Arnheim, executive director of the Army-Navy '83 Foundation, said Thursday.

Chicken Soup

NEW YORK (AP) — Would New York City really run better if its officials were better paid?

"It's like chicken soup," said Mayor Ed Koch, who pondered that question for a few seconds. "It couldn't hurt."

A mayoral panel recommended pay increases Thursday for the city's elected officials, including Koch, whose pay would rise $30,000 to $110,000 per year. That would be $10,000 more than earned by Gov. Mario Cuomo.

The head of the panel, retired insurance executive Richard Shinn, said he believed the proposal would make Koch the best-paid mayor in the country, although some city managers make more than $110,000.

The city's elected officials last had a pay raise in 1979.

"I generally think we pay public servants too little," Shinn said.

The mayor said he supported the recommendations and would accept any pay increase as soon as it was approved by the City Council.

Unusual Entrance

THE ENTRANCE . . . to this undesignated church in La Grange has a rather unusual design, with three open pointed arches in the lower elevation of the tower covered by gabled projections. The square tower has three pointed arched windows and three octagonal louvers in the middle elevation, and the top elevation consists of eight wood-faced pointed arches capped by a shingled octagonal spire. Additionally, each slope of the roof is punctuated by two small gables.

La Grange's Church Steeples

La Grange, 40 miles southwest of Greenville, is, next to Kinston the largest town in Lenoir County. It's a typical small southern town with stores, service stations and churches lining the main downtown street. Like many other small towns, it has been bypassed by the construction of a major highway — in this instance, U.S. 70 that traverses North Carolina west to east from Asheville to Beaufort.

One thing very evident in downtown La Grange is the variety of steeples on churches within a short distance of each other on the same street. The older churches have the steeples fronting the church structure and incorporating the vestibule as the lower elevation of the steeple. The more recently constructed churches follow the newer pattern of placing steeples astride the apex of the main church roof at a point near the front edge of the roof.

There are undoubtedly other towns with as great or greater variety of steeples than La Grange. However, for ease of studying different examples of steeples within a compacted area, La Grange is probably a prime example for this purpose.

ANOTHER RARELY SEEN DESIGN . . . in church steeples is that fronting the Presbyterian Church in La Grange. The bottom elevation of the shingle covered spire features four sharply gabled projections. The top portion of the steeple contains four arched louvers, with three narrow arched windows of stained glass in the middle elevation. A small gable roof is placed over the front door.

AN EIGHT-SIDED TOWER . . . of white horizontal planking, resembling a type of cupola often seen on various types of structures is the steeple design chosen by the architect of this Methodist Church in La Grange, which has a commodious vestibule. A state historic sign relating to James Joyner has been placed on the edge of the church property.

A BOXY LOOK . . . is the architectural keynote in the design of the steeple straddling the roof of the First Missionary Baptist Church in La Grange. The small cross-topped spire rests on a box-like steeple which in turn is set on a shallow square platform.

A MODERN DESIGN . . . of the type being seen more and more frequently on recently constructed churches is this steeple on the roof of La Grange's First Free Will Baptist Church. A multi-sided spire tapering to a needle-like point rests on a small platform. This structure is on the outskirts of La Grange, away from the older downtown churches shown in other photographs on this page.
