Poles Await Lifting Of Martial Law

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's major state-run dailies and the official news agency PAP asserted in commentaries today that Poland is moving swiftly toward a formal lifting of martial law.

Splashed across front pages, the commentaries followed a call by the government-backed political front PRON for an end to martial law and amnesty for political prisoners and those in hiding since the December 1981 crackdown.

"The appeal of PRON about lifting the psychological barrier, which martial law undoubtedly is, should be met favorably by the authorities," said the newspaper Zycie Warszawy.

PAP, in a commentary broadcast by Polish radio, said: "The long-awaited moment has come to draw the final conclusion from all this... to formally lift martial law."

The commentaries — remarkably similar in tone and conclusion that Poland was near an end to all formal elements of military rule — were seen here as the first step in a media campaign to pave the way for a move by Parliament later this month to lift martial law.

"When implementing the state of war, the authorities said it would not last a day longer than necessary," recalled the government daily Rzeczpospolita. "State of war" is the formal name for martial law.

"The growing spirit of understanding and rebirth has determined that the day of lifting the state of war has come," it added.

The Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu said that lifting martial law would require an "increased effort... to speed up the solving of our problems."

The PAP commentary also spoke of "logical and humanitarian consequences" that would "allow the return of those who lost their way," an apparent reference to an amnesty.

The statement, signed only "by a PAP commentator," coincides with speculation that Poland's Parliament may hold a special meeting July 20 or 21. Poland's national holiday is July 22, and one government official has said privately that Communist Party chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski might then call for a lifting of martial law.

"I take it as a matter of course," one official said when asked if the Parliament will meet on those dates. When asked if it would lift martial law, he added, "Well, why not."

On Saturday, the Patriotic Movement for National Rebirth, a front backed by the government and the Communist Party, urged the government to "lift martial law and pass regulations to make it possible for those convicted of violating ... martial law and people in hiding to return to work and civic life."

The authorities appear to have concluded that the visit last month of Pope John Paul II "steamed off frustrations," in the words of one official who requested anonymity, and opened the road to lifting martial law despite demonstrations by supporters of the outlawed independent union Solidarity.

Hazardous Wastes Loom As Big Issue

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The disposal of hazardous wastes figures to be a major consideration as the General Assembly enters what could be the last week of this year's session.

A bill that would ban burial of most hazardous wastes has passed the House but is bottled up in a Senate subcommittee, where it faces substantial opposition from industry lobbyists and influential Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

The subcommittee had planned to meet Monday but was pre-empted by budget meetings. Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, said she hoped to convene the panel Tuesday.

If the subcommittee doesn't produce a bill by midweek, it will be extremely difficult for one to pass by Saturday, when most legislative leaders are predicting the General Assembly will adjourn.

"Yes, I do think the bill will pass," Ms. Gray said Friday. "It's important to the governor, to the entire leadership. We must pass one."

Sponsored by Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland, the bill would ban burial of most wastes. Others could be put in landfills only if they don't exceed specified danger thresholds.

Critics say such thresholds would be arbitrary and without scientific basis. Proponents counter that recent technological advances make them feasible.

Another sticking point is the bill's repeal of an amendment to a 1981 law that prohibits the state from adopting any hazardous waste regulations stricter than federal standards.

Clark and other lawmakers who oppose the amendment say they no longer have faith in the federal Environmental Protection Agency to impose regulations that will protect people and the environment. Hardison, who sponsored the 1981 amendment, says excessive regulation would discourage job-creating industry from coming to North Carolina.

Hardison, a member of the subcommittee studying Clark's bill, said in an interview Friday he would not back down on his effort to restore his amendment — even if it means jeopardizing the bill.

"The only way I'll back off is if I get outvoted," he said. "If you're going to throw the baby out with the bath water, why have the bill?"

The picture was complicated last week as a frustrated House, trying to prod the upper chamber into action, attached a repeal of the Hardison amendment to a lengthy Senate bill rewriting North Carolina's public health laws. That bill is before a joint conference committee.

Hunt's strategy, say his aides, is to persuade the subcommittee considering Clark's bill to relent on the Hardison amendment in order to salvage the bill. The battle over the Hardison amendment then could be resumed in the conference committee considering the public health law revision.

"It (the Hardison amendment) is the major bone of contention right now, but we're hoping the subcommittee will be reasonable," said Hunt legislative aide Zeb Aley.

Hunt, who has imposed a temporary moratorium on hazardous waste landfills, has embraced the Clark bill as a compromise between environmentalists who favor a permanent ban and industry allies who want as little regulation as possible.

Clark agrees, but says lobbyists who depict it as anti-industry appear to have the upper hand in the battle to influence the Senate. "Industry objects to the thresholds, industry wants the Hardison amendment, and industry has a sympathetic ear in the Senate," said Clark. "If anything comes out (of the subcommittee), it probably will be substantially different from what we passed."

Increase In Building Permits

Permits valued at over $2.5 million were issued in Greenville during March as building activity here reflected an increase over the previous month, according to state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

The local total of $2,568,406 compared with $1,597,117 recorded in February as Greenville was one of 13 cities in the state issuing more than $2 million in construction permits.

The Greenville total included $871,000 for 26 single-family units; $326,425 for 13 multifamily units; $905,181 for 14 nonresidential units; and $465,800 for 55 additions and alterations. A total of 108 units were authorized in Greenville during the month.

Pitt County issued permits totaling $3,853,606 in March, compared with $1,680,867 in February. The county total, which reflects Greenville's permit figure, included $883,000 for 28 single-family units; $326,425 for 13 multifamily units; $2,070,181 for 18 nonresidential structures; and $574,000 for 61 additions and alterations.

Brooks said that statewide, the 44 cities of more than 10,000 population authorized a total of 3,877 new building permits in March, an increase of 15.6 percent from the 3,355 reported a year ago, and a 38.3 percent jump from 2,803 in February.

Estimated value of the construction, at $104,096,837, dropped 6.7 percent from the March 1982 total of $111,541,932, and fell 1.8 percent from $105,971,323 in February.

Compared to March 1982, the average construction cost for a single-family home fell 1.4 percent, to $41,169 from $41,765, Brooks said. The average was down eight-tenths of a percent from February's $41,515.

Building values for March in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $412,880; Goldsboro, $417,471; Jacksonville, $2,670,555; Kinston, $764,700; New Bern, $441,788; Roanoke Rapids, $676,600; Rocky Mount, $622,658; Tarboro, $291,650; and Wilson, $1,812,830.

LIEN ON HOUSE?

A collection agency for Pitt County Memorial Hospital is harrassing me to the point of suggesting a lien may be put on my house to collect a bill. I understand there may be a toll-free number one can call to have the tactics of the hospital and collection agency looked into. I'd like to have it. H.H.

There is no such toll-free number that Hospital Patient Representative Ed Hackett knows about. It is true, he said, that persons owning property may have liens placed on their property to collect bills, if the hospital attorney deems this reasonable. It usually is not resorted to, however. The collection agency would turn the bill back over to the hospital which would refer it to its attorney before this route would be taken.

If you feel the collection agency is unduly harrassing you, you may contact the N.C. Department of Insurance, 1-800-662-7777. Hackett suggests, however, that you first talk directly to him about your problem meeting the bill.

Reagan The Loser In Women's Caucus

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — None of the five Democratic presidential candidates who came to this weekend's convention of the National Women's Political Caucus left a big winner. But if there was a loser, it was President Reagan.

Each of the Democratic hopefuls spelled out his positions on the issues to members of the nuts-and-bolts political group Sunday. And most of the feminists seemed to find their stands acceptable.

Support for the Equal Rights Amendment, pay equity, abortion, pension reform and day care were mentioned by all of the candidates in their speeches and in answers to questions during the closing session of the convention.

"It's important to say that nobody lost," feminist Gloria Steinem said.

But Reagan came in for some harsh criticism during the convention for his stands on the economy, the ERA and abortion. Discontent with the Republican incumbent may lead to the caucus's breaking with tradition in endorsing a presidential candidate.

"If Ronald Reagan is the Republican nominee, there is a possibility that we would endorse a candidate for the first time in our history," said caucus chief Kathy Wilson.

On Saturday, Ms. Wilson, a Republican, called on Reagan to take himself out of the running for a second term in 1984.

The caucus's Republican members also adopted demands for the 1984 platform at the convention. In a letter to Reagan, they said the party must once again support the ERA and abortion — reversing the stances taken by the GOP in 1980.

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes today said he had no response to the Republican members' criticism of the Reagan administration. But he said the president was aware of the comments.

The appearances Sunday by the Democratic candidates, who were taking advantage of the chance to address representatives of 77,000 political activists, were the most attention-getting part of the three-day convention, which included workshops on campaign tactics and issues.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Alan Cranston of California, Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina all made fairly good impressions in terms of the issues.

But Hart stumbled by failing to play by the rules set by the caucus for each man's appearance when he continued to speak after time had expired for his opening statement.

And former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew earned the anger of some of the delegates by not coming to the convention at all.

All five candidates promised to appoint women to many key posts, if elected. None would agree to any specific quotas on women appointments. But all said they would do better than Reagan.

And Mondale — looking at the panel of questioners — quipped, "I know everyone at the table and it looks like a good Cabinet to me."

After being introduced by Harriett Woods, Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate from Missouri in 1982, Cranston opened his talk by saying, "It's great to be introduced by a great American leader who would make a great vice president."

Hollings said he would appoint a female attorney general, and Glenn said he would not rule out a woman for secretary of defense.

All promised to use all the powers of the presidency to push for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. The original ERA died June 30, 1982, when the deadline for ratification by the states expired. But an identical measure has been introduced in Congress.

"I'd be a (former president) Lyndon Johnson. I know how to twist arms," said Hollings. "We know how to get things done. You give a little, you take a little, swap around, and we'd get it passed in a year."

In his own way, each candidate tried to demonstrate his sensitivity to feminist issues.

For example, Mondale opened his speech by declaring, "I am a feminist."

"All the candidates' positions were generally acceptable to most of us," said Roxanne Conlin, an Iowa activist who is working for Glenn.

Will Inspect 2 N.C. Bridges

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two North Carolina bridges similar to one that collapsed in Connecticut last month will be inspected by experts this week to see if they have any cracks or other weaknesses.

State and federal officials ordered the special inspection of a Forsyth County bridge which carries four lanes of Interstate 40 traffic over Cloverdale Avenue and Hawthorne Road in Winston-Salem.

The other bridge, on N.C. 28 near Fontana Dam, carries two lanes over the Little Tennessee River in Graham County in the state's far southwest corner.

Both bridges "have the same general type of detail" as the Connecticut bridge which killed three people, said Jimmy Lee, state building maintenance manager in Raleigh. Although Lee said the Greenwich bridge carries a far greater traffic load than either North Carolina structure, he would not estimate daily traffic levels on the North Carolina bridges.

Experts plan to evaluate the strength of the bridges using sophisticated ultrasonic equipment which can detect cracks.

The North Carolina bridges were built decades ago using the so-called "pin and hanger" design, less popular among engineers today. Steel pins, held in place by hangers, attach the roadway to girders.

Authorities suspect that one of the pins on the Connecticut Turnpike bridge cracked, causing the fatal accident.

Trimble-Teel Vows Solemnized On Sunday

Erika Darlene Teel and Thomas Ray Trimble were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Temple Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Robert W. Trimble, father of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony, with the Rev. Bobby Parker assisting.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon A. Teel of Greenville and the granddaughter of Mrs. Katie M. Smith of Chocowinity. Parents of the bridegroom are Rev. and Mrs. Trimble of Davison, Mich.

A program of wedding music was presented by Eloise Jackson, organist. Phyllis Parker sang "Each For the Other," "The Wedding Prayer," "Take Our Love" and "Saviour Like a Shepherd."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white silk and organza and chantilly lace over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a fitted lace bodice and a high V-neckline with a sheer yoke and pearls. The fitted sleeves of organza and chantilly lace appliques closed with a matching ruffle. The full skirt, which flowed into a cathedral length train, was highlighted with scattered appliques of chantilly lace and accented with pearls. A flounce, trimmed with rows of lace, edged the hemline. She wore a fingertip veil of silk illusion bordered with scalloped chantilly lace attached to a lace covered cap encrusted with pearls. She carried a cascade of white carnations and pink sweetheart roses tied with white and pink lace ribbons.

Rhonda McLawhorn Weese of Greenville served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Teel Sutton, cousin of the bride, Susan Manning, Deidre Aldridge and Sandra Jones, all of Greenville and Teresa Trimble Johnson of Warren, Mich., sister of the bridegroom. The attendants each wore a dress of pink voile featuring a high neckline and long Victorian sleeves edged in lace. The bodice had a V-yoke and was outlined in lace. The dress was accented with a bustle back. They wore matching picture hats and carried nosegays of white carnations with pink miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Brandi Crisp of Washington, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. Her floor length dress of white lace was highlighted by a pink sash at the waist and pink ribbon edging the ruffle at the hemline. She carried a basket of rose petals. Roy Theodore Cox III of Greenville served as ring bearer.

Tim Trimble of Nashville, Tenn. served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Mike Trimble of Beaufort, cousin of the bridegroom, Dave Johnson of Warren, Mich., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Vernon Ashley, Dennis S. and Mark D. Teel, all brothers of the bride from Greenville.

The mother of the bride chose a floor length mauve shirtwaist gown with long sheer sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of light blue polyester knit. Both mothers wore corsages of pink rosebuds. The grandmother of the bride wore a corsage of pink carnations.

The wedding was directed by Barbara Haddock of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Staton of Bethel served at the register.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Cake was served by Mildred Manning and punch was poured by Virginia Lloyd.

Jason Smith of Greenville presented guests with scrolls. Rice bags were distributed by Jennifer Allen and Kathleen Cox, both of Greenville.

An after-rehearsal party was held Saturday night in the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a graduate of Greenville Christian Academy. She is employed by Belk-Tyler. The bridegroom graduated from Calvary Christian School, Roseville, Mich., and attended Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn. He is employed by Harris' Supermarket.

The couple will take a wedding trip to Canada.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

The exquisite beauty of a graceful Japanese bird print worked in counted cross stitch is enhanced by an elegant needlepoint frame made from 7-mesh plastic canvas and double-faced satin ribbon, worked in long, straight stitches. This is actually two projects in one. You could use the frame alone for your favorite photograph or to display a graduation, wedding or birth announcement. The cross-stitch design, by itself, would be lovely in a wood or gilt frame or as a pillow design.

To obtain directions for making the Japanese Bird Print and Ribbon Frame, send your request for Leaflet No. X-71083 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order a kit by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Send $23 for A-71083, complete with instructions, ribbon, plastic canvas, cross stitch fabric and floss. For the frame materials only, order A-71083 and send $18; or for the cross stitch materials only, order X-71083 and send $11.

Satin ribbon and plastic canvas may sound like an unlikely combination of materials, but they work beautifully together to create some very interesting and unusual effects. I first saw them used when designer Virginia Ross sent me a "Santa Face" Christmas decoration last summer, which I did feature in one of my fall columns.

Since then, I have experimented with various stitches using the ribbon. It works best with long stitches, either straight or diagonal. I also found that the stitch design should be kept as simple as possible. Very interesting effects can be achieved with weaving the ribbon in and out, leaving some canvas threads exposed. When doing this, you need to experiment with various colors of canvas. When done on the clear canvas, the canvas threads are almost unnoticeable. With colored canvas, the threads themselves become an integral part of the design.

The novice will find it easier, however, to work with Bargello type stitches such as those used in making the frame. The one thing you must take care to do is to keep the ribbon as flat as possible as you work. This tends to make your stitching go more slowly, but, since you are using extra long stitches, the overall project time will probably be less than that for many other projects. I have found that it doesn't work too well to secure the ends of the ribbon under previous stitches as you would normally do with needlepoint. It seems to work better to either sew the loose ends to the wrong side of previously worked stitches or to use a special glue — such as Tacky glue — to secure them.

The good news is that it is much easier to thread the needle with ribbon than with yarn. I recommend using a size 18 or 20 needle with the 1/8-inch ribbon.

The accompanying chart shows you how to work one portion of the frame design, with each chart line representing a canvas thread or rib and the blank spaces denoting the canvas holes. The first stitch is made by bringing your needle up at the base of an arrow shown on the chart and taking it down at the tip of the arrow.

Work stitches 1 through 12, working from right to left. Then skip one space and start again at stitch 3 and repeat stitches 3 through 12. Continue to repeat stitches 3 through 12 across the row. Your last repeat will end with stitch 6. Then fill in all blank areas with long, straight stitches in the same color or with a contrasting color ribbon.

I have not found the ribbon satisfactory for joining two or more pieces or for over-casting unfinished edges, so I use a matching or blending yarn for these finishing touches.

PRECAUTIONS FOR PARTIAL DENTURES

A partial denture is a removable appliance that substitutes for one or several missing natural teeth. It is held in place by clasps that grip the natural teeth adjacent to the partial.

Good oral hygiene habits are particularly important for wearers of partial dentures. If food residue and film are allowed to accumulate on clasps (which are food traps) the important abutment teeth may decay. Therefore, partials should be cleaned after each meal and special attention should be given to cleaning the inside of the clasps.

While you're at it, clean your regular teeth to remove any food debris that could accumulate under the cover afforded by the partial denture.

If a partial denture breaks or becomes damaged in any way, it should be taken at once to the dentist for repair.

Attempts to wear a damaged appliance can be dangerous.

A shift of a fraction of a millimeter in the form of the partial can cause destructive forces on several teeth. Also, an improper amateur adjustment could possibly render the partial completely useless and irreparable by anyone.

Ruling Is Logical

The U.S. Supreme Court has been relentless in striking down laws which discriminate against classes in our society.

The court last week indicated that, more conservative though it may be, it does not intend to be less vigilant in efforts to eliminate discrimination.

The court ruled that it is illegal to pay less benefits to women than to men from pension plans.

It had been maintained by the insurance industry that because women lived longer they should receive reduced benefits at retirement. While that may be actuarially sound, it makes little sense from a human standpoint because a pension program is a form of insurance and none of us knows how many years we will live following retirement.

The ruling could mean major changes in the insurance industry and not all of them may be favorable to women. Because they live longer women can get a lower rate for life insurance than men at a given age. Women also receive breaks on auto insurance premiums because of safer driving records.

Nevertheless, lower pension payments for retired women are not justifiable in our modern society. The Supreme Court has indicated it will not tolerate lower payments to individuals simply because they are women and it is a logical ruling.

Technology And The Law

The U.S. Supreme Court last week decided to take more time in determining whether video home recording is a violation of copyright laws.

The case involves Universal City Studios Inc. and Walt Disney Productions against Sony Corp., which manufactures home recorders.

A decision in the case had been widely expected at this court session. Instead, the court ordered more arguments this fall.

The final ruling will have major effects on the studios which produce television programs and the hundreds of thousands of homes which routinely use video recorders to capture programs and watch them at a later time.

The case is also an indication of how rapidly changing technology is raising legal questions that are overwhelming to the judiciary system. It will be interesting to see how this one is resolved.

Briefing Debate

WASHINGTON — When Rep. David Stockman of Michigan impersonated President Jimmy Carter on Oct. 24, 1980, in Ronald Reagan's debate rehearsal, he vigorously attacked the Republican nominee's position on Medicare — a tactic at the heart of the briefing book affair transfixing Washington two-and-one-half years later.

Stockman's attack on Medicare is offered as the best proof that possession of the Carter campaign's briefing material tipped the debate, and the election, to Reagan. But on the campaign stump, Carter had been incessantly attacking Reagan's Medicare position. Thus, no clandestine intelligence was needed to know that this was a guaranteed debate issue.

Whether or not the briefing book affair seriously damages the president depends not on its value to the Reagan campaign but on how it was obtained. Nevertheless, high-level Democratic strategists believe that if Reagan's 1980 debate victory is viewed by the nation as bogus, public acceptance of a 73-year-old president running for re-election next year will diminish.

But even if the White House can show that the material was neither illegally obtained nor instrumental in the debate, the affair shows that major shortcomings of the Reagan administration were apparent in his campaign. Deep discord within the White House and Stockman's peculiar behavior as budget director were previewed in preparations for the debate.

Stockman's impersonation of Carter was indeed the premier performance at the Oct. 24 debate rehearsal at Reagan's rented Wexford estate in the Virginia hunt country, but not because he used the illicit briefing material given him the night before the mimic the Democratic president. "What struck me," one senior Reagan aide said, "was the intensity with which he was attacking Reagan."

Stockman displayed that intensity in briefing up Medicare, an issue listed at least three times in the material handed Stockman ("I challenge Gov. Reagan to deny that he led the effort to oppose Medicare."). Medicare was duly slipped into Reagan's own briefing book for the debate, and he was ready when Carter brought up the issue in Cleveland at the Oct. 28 debate.

But no leak from the Carter campaign was necessary to alert Reagan. "I was for Medicaid and Medicare," Carter said at the Wayne, Mich., Ford plant Oct. 1. "My opponent was against Medicaid and Medicare." On 24 additional occasions between then and the debate, Carter zeroed in on Reagan's opposition to Medicare.

Yet, when Stockman addressed the Optimist Club at Cassopolis, Mich., in his congressional district the day of the debate, he could not resist relating how a "pilfered" document had helped him rehearse Reagan four days earlier. That fits Stockman's compulsion to tell all, most recently reflected in his confession to Time correspondent Laurence Barrett that unleashed the present furor.

But it also reflects the bifurcated nature of the Reagan campaign. Longtime Reaganite aides Lyn Nofziger, Stu Spencer, Martin Anderson, Richard V. Allen and Richard Wirthlin had no inkling the campaign had obtained Carter information.

The campaign aides thus far identified as handling the Carter material are mainly newcomers. That included aides inherited from vice presidential candidate George Bush, such as James Baker and David Gergen, and that one-time booster of John B. Connally, Dave Stockman. At no time did they reveal the existence of the secret information to the old Reaganites.

Apart from that unusual breach in internal communications, the Reagan campaign was divided on tactics. The newcomers stressed reaction to what Carter might have to say and, therefore, put heavy emphasis on preparing a briefing book for Reagan; the longtimers declared the governor didn't use briefing books and ought to stress his own ideals anyway.

By and large Reagan was Reagan in the debate, with minimal use of prearranged dialogue. As in the case of Medicare, it is difficult to trace either Reagan's own briefing materials or the use of Carter's materials to his victory. Still, the debate was the making of Stockman and, to a lesser degree, Baker, presaging the split within the Reagan White House and, belatedly, yielding the turmoil that suddenly envelops the Reagan presidency.

RALEIGH — In February 1982, an explosion at a Greensboro chemical plant set off a fire that threatened the heavily populated Pomona neighborhood and nearby railroad cars loaded with other dangerous chemicals. City officials and firefighters had more than flames to deal with, however. They had to fight a fire where they didn't know what was burning.

No one was available to identify either the chemicals on fire or other hazardous materials in the plant. Some old chemical storage drums broke open and the contents began to wash into the city's sewer lines. No one could identify the contents of the drums.

The result: The fire was fought with water and dangerous vapors were created. Neighborhood residents complained of respiratory problems for several days.

Proponents of a bill recently filed in the General Assembly use this and a dozen other cases to make their point that North Carolinians have a right to know when dangerous chemicals are being used in a workplace. Employees of the firm should know, the local police and firefighters should know, the state should know. Then, if health problems arise among workers or if there's a fire or flood or explosion, safety officers will know how best to deal with the problem.

Under the bill proposed by Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, employers would have to inform their employees of all dangerous substances with which they're working. They'd also have to file public disclosure forms with state and local officials. On the job site, all the hazardous substances would have to be labeled with health information about that substance.

"We've spent a great deal of time this session talking about the health hazards of hazardous wastes," Payne told the House Air and Water Resources Committee. "Before they become wastes, they are still a hazard and should be treated with the same caution."

Payne said it is essential that in cases of an accident or fire that those coming to the aid of the injured know the specific chemical they're dealing with. "We have to know what are the right steps to take," he said.

Several committee members immediately started picking at the bill. Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, noted that the law would have to be enforced and that would be expensive. Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said federal and local regulations on hazardous chemicals already exist. This would be adding another layer of regulation. Rep. Robbie Nash, D-Rowan, said he was more worried about the effect of the bill on business. "I don't want to see us burden business anymore."

All of which set Rep. Joe Mavretic,

D-Edgecombe, to respond that the Legislature's first responsibility is to protect the public's health. "Personnel is the main ingredient of modern management. North Carolina businesses believe this so implementation should not be a problem. Employees come first," he said.

Payne's bill was filed late in the session because he tried to compromise with likely opponents on a number of fronts. But, the committee still felt the need to sent it to a subcommittee for more work.

The bill takes precautions to guard industrial secrets. Maintaining the secrecy of a chemical mixture may be essential to the continued success of a business. The subcommittee was to see if those precautions were sufficient.

Also unresolved were the questions of whether state government should be involved and, if so, which state agency should gather the information.

'Terrible' Teacher Wins Citation

ror stories. "If Miss Cantor catches you whispering in class while she's giving a spelling lesson, she makes you write every word on the blackboard 10 times." "Does she ever strike you?" "No, but she carries a ruler in her hand, and she looks like she's going to. You know what she said the other day? She said if she were a nun in a Catholic school she could box our ears every time we didn't hand in a book report on time." "I'm going to bring it up at the next PTA meeting."

"It won't do any good," my son would say. "Nancy Williams' father complained at the last meeting about Miss Cantor and the principal just laughed at him."

"Miss Cantor is a nut when it comes to grammar. She told us that we'll all wind up as criminals if we don't learn to write a decent sentence. Even when you start crying she doesn't care."

"I don't know any human being who isn't moved by a child's tears. This Miss Cantor is one for the books."

"You should see the homework she gave us tonight."

My son would then tell us, "She says if she isn't satisfied with our improvement we won't get promoted to the next grade."

"I have a good mind to take you out of that place. It sounds more like a prison than a school to me. Are your other teachers as cruel?"

"No, just Miss Cantor. She's a real witch."

My wife would just shake her head. "No wonder you kids don't like school."

Well, the years have passed and the kids have grown up. Whenever we get together for family gatherings the name of "Terrible" Miss Cantor still pops up. So much so that if Miss Cantor is still alive and teaching, I would nominate her right now for a merit raise. If we're going to reward teachers, one of the best guidelines would be to recognize those who inflicted mental pain and anguish on their students, rather than the ones whose names the kids will never remember.

Strength For Today

Is there any place in our religion for fear?

Many people will say no. They will tell us that fear paralyzes the very powers through which God works in us. The presence in the heart of both fear and faith is impossible.

Why then are we told that fear of God is the beginning of wisdom? Because the fear of doing wrong, of offending against the goodness and mercy of God, is just as much a part of our religion as love to our neighbor. Through all his teachings Jesus warned men of the serious consequences of transgressing the will of God and made it plain that a man has much to fear who sins against God and regards the matter lightly.

These are the words of Christ: "be not afraid of them that kill the body, but who are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both the soul and body in hell."

Experts Agree Recession Is Over

NEW YORK (AP) — From what you hear and read, the prospects for a solid and lasting economic recovery seem as hot in July as they were cold in January.

When the year began, government reports were pointing to an economy staggering after a year and a half of recession. Some private economists were saying the slump might linger into spring or summer. Even the more optimistic forecasters thought a recovery would be slow and less robust than in years past.

Six months later, the economy appears to be charging with a full head of steam, and many economists are rewriting their forecasts with a rosier tone.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain what changed the economic outlook:

Q. Where does the economy stand now, in recession or recovery?

A. The experts agree the recession is over. It probably ended last December or January. They also agree the economy now is growing again. In practical terms, that means builders are putting up more houses, mills are churning out more lumber, department stores are selling more furnishings, and a wide reach of stepped up buying, selling and manufacturing is putting people back to work.

Q. Why didn't the experts anticipate this in January?

A. It would not be correct to say economists did not expect the economy to improve this year. Most did. But it now looks as though they erred on the cautious side. The Reagan administration, too, seems to have underestimated the economy's turnaround. In January, the administration expected the economy to grow 3.1 percent between the end of 1982 and the end of 1983. In April, the forecast was raised to 4.7 percent, and last week the number was raised to 5.5 percent.

Q. How did the experts miss the mark?

A. At the start of the year, economists seemed to be worried that the unusually high rate of unemployment — which hit a 42-year peak of 10.8 percent last December — would make consumers and business executives abnormally cautious about spending money in the early stages of an economic recovery. That worry seems to have been over done. At the same time, experts did not expect inflation to remain as low as it has so far this year.

Q. What was surprising about inflation?

A. One of the major unknown elements was the price of oil, which dropped sharply in the first three months of the year. That, in turn, helped reduce the price of various petroleum products, and provided new savings to businesses and individuals. Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. recently estimated the drop in oil prices this year should save the United States about $7.5 billion on its import bill.

Q. How can you be sure the rosier forecasts will not also prove wrong?

A. There is no such assurance. No one is capable of foretelling with precision what interest rates, prices, employment and other economic yardsticks will do in the future. Just as the economists generally were too pessimistic earlier this year, they may be overly optimistic now. The economy, after all, is not without its problems even as its general condition seems to be improving.

Q. What are the main problems?

A. One is interest rates. Data Resources Inc., a forecasting firm, said last week that a "major rise" in interest rates "could destroy the recovery." Also, the economy's brighter outlook remains clouded by an international debt crisis that could trigger widespread bank failures, which in turn could jeopardize the global financial system as well as the health of the U.S. economy.

At 78, Pioneer Still At Work

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The 78-year-old scientist who helped develop some of Burroughs Wellcome's most important drugs says he can't understand why people would want to spend the rest of their lives in recreation.

"To me, creative work is an integral part of life," says Dr. George H. Hitchings, considered to be a pioneer in modern chemotherapy. "I don't know how I'd fare without it."

Hitchings is no longer active in drug development, but he remains active at Burroughs Wellcome as a consultant and is in his office at the Research Triangle Park facility nearly every working day. He spends most of his time writing.

Dr. Joseph Pagano, director of the Cancer Research Center at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, says Hitchings' work merits a Nobel Prize.

"The quality and the number of contributions he has made and the importance of them to science are on that level," Pagano said. "The chances are that if you get a major disease, a drug he developed or helped develop will be useful to you."

Hitchings's first job with Burroughs Wellcome was as a biochemist. He was promoted to chief biochemist, associate research director and research director of the firm's chemotherapy division. In 1967, he became vice president in charge of research, stepping down from that post in 1975 at age 70.

Despite the commercial pressures of working for a pharmaceutical company, Hitchings says he has been able to accomplish more at Burroughs Wellcome than he could have in academia.

"In a pharmaceutical house, you knew you have a responsibility to the people who are supplying your funding," he said. "You want to contribute. At the same time, you want to follow the search for truth. If you can integrate the two, you're a lucky fellow."

Street light outages should be reported to the Utilities Commission at 752-7166.

on Jarvis Street, 100 feet north of the Third Street intersection, resulting in an estimated $300 damage to the Duncan car and $200 damage to the Moye vehicle.

Grants For ECU Projects Actually Increase

BY FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

A massive excavation of an ancient Indian settlement, a new educational program for school food service managers, tests of new drugs, a contemporary music festival — all these projects and activities, made possible with special support from government and private sources, are underway at East Carolina University.

During the past fiscal year funded programs brought a record total of more than $6.5 million in "outside" money to ECU, a million-dollar increase over the previous year.

In times of tight budgets and funding cutbacks, ECU has managed to increase its grant and contract activity, an accomplishment which Robert Franke, director of the Office of Sponsored Programs, attributes to the dedication, expertise and initiative of the ECU faculty.

"More project proposals are being submitted to the government agencies, private foundations and corporations," Franke says. "When more proposals are written and submitted and more faculty are involved in writing proposals, the likelihood of funding increases. The results of this effort are reflected in our year-end totals."

Receiving funding is "well worth" the effort, Franke noted. Outside funds enable the faculty researcher to obtain laboratory equipment, employ research assistants, purchase supplies and materials, buy computer time and meet necessary travel and postage expenses. Some faculty members, particularly those in medicine and the sciences, are given reduced teaching loads to accommodate their research activities.

It all adds up to significant expansion of ECU's teaching, research and service functions.

Normal state appropriations and students' tuition pay for regular instructional programs, but major research and special interests, such as those ECU is conducting to help secondary school mathematics and science teachers sharpen their skills, require extra funding.

ECU biologists have conducted funded research on various forms of marine life — some of which are beneficial and others, serious threats to the coastal environment. The study of phosphates in offshore waters has been a specialty of ECU geologist Stanley Riggs, co-winner of this year's O. Max Gardner Award in the UNC system.

Two significant awards received by ECU faculty members in recent weeks include $140,000 from American's 400 Anniversary Committee to anthropologist David Phelps for archaeological exploration of traces of the Carolina Algonkian Indians and $101,000 to nutritionist Kathryn Kolasa to develop a new curriculum for school food service summer institutes.

The arts, also, have received funding, said Franke. Several state and private agencies have given support for public programs in music, art and theatre. In mid-June, the N.C. Arts Council granted $1,000 to the School of Music for an international electronic music festival.

"In keeping with its own history, organization and mission, the ECU School of Medicine is more research-oriented than most of the academic schools and departments, and their outside funding indicates this," Franke said. "Also, through its clinical departments, the med school is able to offer health-related services to the public which would not be possible without the extra funding provided by grants and contracts."

Franke sees some very healthy trends for the future of outside funding at ECU. "Our faculty are winning awards from agencies with whom we have had no contact in the past," he said, "and as new faculty members arrive, they bring with them their own contracts, which results in greater diversity than ever before."

"Also, we are becoming more involved in cooperative arrangements with other institutions. Right now, we have active projects being carried out in collaboration with Duke University, the Medical College of Pennsylvania, the University of Pittsburgh and the University of South Florida. Some of our 1982-83 proposals were written with professors from Virginia Commonwealth and Cornell universities."

There are approximately 200 sponsored programs in progress or in the planning phase at ECU this summer. The exact figure changes daily as projects are completed and notification is received that pending proposals have received funding.

$200 Million Not Enough

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal regulators say Carolina Power & Light Co. hasn't resolved safety problems at its Brunswick Nuclear Plant, despite pumping more than $200 million into repairs and modifications.

In a report issued last month, the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission gave the plant its lowest rating in seven of 10 safety-related categories — including maintenance and fire protection.

The report covered 1982 and January 1983. CP&L has been busy since then trying to improve conditions at the plant, but the NRC said early this month that all the problems found last year hadn't been resolved.

The NRC, in a letter rejecting CP&L's request to lower a $600,000 fine for safety violations at Brunswick, said continuing violations "indicate that you have not resolved certain fundamental problems."

CP&L officials declined to comment on safety problems at the plant, saying they involve issues pending in the company's rate case before the state Utilities Commission.

CP&L has requested a $165 million increase that would increase residential rates by 17 percent.

Exercise Helps Treat Arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — People with arthritis may not always feel like moving, but exercising is an important part of treatment, says the Arthritis Foundation.

"Proper exercise, combined with medication and rest, is vital to controlling arthritis," says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the foundation. "Arthritic joints must be moved through their optimal range of motion to maintain mobility."

He says a doctor or physical therapist should prescribe the proper exercise program for each individual.

Counseling Program Is Underway For Students

Some 20 students are attending a special counseling program at Aycock Junior High School this summer.

The program was developed jointly by Kay Whitehurst, principal of Aycock, and Dr. Florence Weaver, chairman of the Department of Counseling, ECU School of Education.

Frank O'Neal, a teacher at Aycock and coordinator of the program, says the program provides an invaluable service to the community while meeting the special training needs of counseling interns in the ECU School of Education.

Ten ECU graduate students are fulfilling their counseling internship requirements by providing individualized counseling for the Aycock students enrolled in the program.

O'Neal organized selection of students for the program. He explained that 150 students were identified by Aycock Guidance Counselor Brian Sweeney, through computer analysis of students who had been assigned to the in-school suspension program at Aycock during the past school year.

Letters about the program were sent to parents of these students by assistant principal Gene Baker.

The letters were followed by phone calls. Many parents responded by coming to Aycock to discuss the program. Counselors also visited the homes of most students who had been suspended more than once last year.

The goal of the program is to help students who are having difficulty in accepting responsibility for their behavior. In the program, each student explores with a counselor the issues that lead to the suspension last year. The student is then helped to develop a plan for next year that will hopefully prevent him from again getting into trouble at school. Each student receives counseling at least once each week.

O'Neal describes the program as an excellent example of the community, university and city schools discovering a way to meet each other's needs.

Law Grads Finding A 'Job Crunch' Too

By The Associated Press

The job crunch that has hit manufacturers and retailers is also being felt among law school graduates, legal officials and educators say.

The number of law school graduates has doubled since 1970, and Allan Head, executive director of the North Carolina Bar Association, says statistics indicate there might be a glut.

"The practice of law in (North Carolina) is like a sponge. It can only absorb so many lawyers," Head wrote in the April-May issue of Barnotes, an association publication. "Many lawyers in small and large North Carolina communities fear that the saturation point has been reached."

In 1974, there were 5,750 lawyers in the state, or one for every 925 people. By 1982, the number of lawyers had increased to about 8,600. That's one for every 680 people.

Nationwide, there were more than 355,000 lawyers in 1970, or one for every 570 people. By 1980, there were about 540,000 lawyers — one for every 420 people.

Enrollment in the state's law schools has increased from about 1,400 in 1970 to about 2,400 last year. About 700 lawyers graduate each year from the state's five law schools — Campbell University, Duke University, North Carolina Central University, the University of North Carolina and Wake Forest University — compared with 315 annually in the 1970-71 academic year.

Almost 40 of those who passed the state bar exam in July 1982 were unemployed as of last September, the bar association estimates.

"That's the highest percentage we've ever seen of licensed, unemployed new lawyers that long after passing the bar exam," Head said.

But G.K. Butterfield Jr., president of the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers, said he's "not ready to pull the panic button and say we have too many lawyers."

Butterfield said he isn't alarmed by the growing number of graduates from the state's law schools. He thinks speculation about an oversupply comes in part from attorneys in established firms who fear young, aggressive lawyers will take some of their clients.

Wreck Kills Lelia Rives

One of Greenville's oldest citizens, Mrs. Lelia Honaker Rives, 96, was killed Saturday evening in an automobile accident in Raleigh.

Mrs. Rives, who long directed the food services program of East Carolina University, had moved to Raleigh about three years ago to live with her daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Clark.

Saturday about 8:30 p.m. while she and Mrs. Clark were returning from a party celebrating Mrs. Clark's 63rd birthday, Mrs. Clark, the driver, lost control of the car and wrecked it. Mrs. Rives was dead at the scene. Mrs. Clark, who with her mother, was pinned in the car for some time, was taken to Wake Medical Center for tests and treatment. She said the last thing she remembers is her mother shoeing an insect toward the open window on the driver's side of the car. She lost control and hit a pine tree. The accident occurred about four miles east of Garner on Secondary Road 2542.

Mrs. Rives, a native of Wytheville, Va., was a graduate of Sullins College in Bristol, Tenn. and studied additionally at the University of Virginia. She was principal of Ivanhoe High School in Ivanhoe, Va. for some years and also was a mathematics teacher in Wytheville, Va. The wife of Leon L. Rives, she came to Greenville prior to 1928 and managed the cafeteria of Greenville High School from 1928 to 1936 when she was hired by East Carolina Teachers College to manage two dining halls. In 1947 she was appointed stewardess of all the dining halls on campus, a position she held until her retirement in 1957.

auto factories, but their leaders say they will join in a one-day strike later this month.

Deadly Dive

Diver Still In Critical Condition

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — United States and Canadian diving experts say Soviet diver Sergie Shlibashvili should never have attempted the dive that left him in critical condition with severe head injuries after he struck the 10-meter platform at the XII World University Games.

"That kid shouldn't have been doing that dive," U.S. swimming coach Bob Rydze said after American diver Greg Louganis used the same dive to win the gold medal in the 10-meter platform competition Sunday night.

Rydze and Canadian diving expert Don McGavern say it is the worst accident in the history of competitive diving.

During qualifying for the competition Saturday, Shlibashvili attempted the standing 3½ reverse somersault in the tuck position, one of the most difficult dives in competitive diving. The 21-year-old Soviet diver struck the back of his head on the wooden platform on his way down and then tumbled into the water feet first bleeding profusely. The 10-meter platform is the same height as a three-story building and divers reach a speed of about 30 mph from that point to the water.

Shlibashvili immediately was pulled from the water and taken to the University of Alberta Hospital where he was listed in stable but very critical condition and on life support in the neurological intensive care unit late Sunday night. He underwent surgery Saturday night for 48 minutes to relieve pressure on the brain.

Hospital spokesman Dr. John Read, at a news conference Sunday, said Shlibashvili still had not regained consciousness and it was "very likely" that permanent brain damage and possible paralysis would be the result of the injury. Read said there were multiple skull fractures, along with other injuries which he would not describe.

No other information on Shlibashvili's condition was given out at the request of Soviet officials, who are refusing to comment until the family of the Physical Culture College student from the Georgian city of Tbilisi could be contacted. Shlibashvili's mother is his coach when he is at home.

A Soviet doctor and official are attending Shlibashvili 24 hours a day but have turned the treatment of the diver over to the Edmonton doctors who performed the operation. The Edmonton physicians — two neurosurgeons and an ear, nose and throat specialist — requested anonymity. Read said it was unlikely the diver would be returned to the Soviet Union any time soon.

An official of the Soviet news agency Tass said Shlibashvili, the Soviet Union's fifth-ranked diver, had been doing the dive for about a year.

McGavern said he had watched Shlibashvili in practice and "he was coming so close to the board it scared me." But McGavern, Canada's national technical diving advisor, said it was not his place to say anything to the Soviet coach.

Both he and Rydze felt it wasn't the difficulty of the dive but rather that the Soviet diver was not ready.

"I don't think anything is wrong with doing those dives as long as you're capable of doing it," Rydze said of the high-risk dives which were allowed two years ago. "There's always a risk, like Lougo (Louganis) hitting the board on a simple reverse. He just made a mistake."

At the U.S.-U.S.S.R. meet in 1979, Louganis hit the 10-meter board and was knocked unconscious, receiving only a minor concussion though. Ironically, the meet was held in Shlibashvili's hometown.

"Some guys can't drive 200 mph around the track at Indianapolis. It's the same thing here," Rydze said. "It's the coach's responsibility."

Canadian Coach Don Webb said the Soviet coach did try to dissuade his diver from doing the dive. But Shlibashvili convinced his coach that it was all right.

Most of the divers had watched in practice but would not watch the actual dive.

Louganis said there were no dives that were overly dangerous if the diver is capable.

Rocky Mount Ousts Pitt County

ROCKY MOUNT — Pitt County's American Legion team saw its hopes for gaining the 1983 state title come to a screeching halt Sunday when Rocky Mount posted a 13-5 victory to sweep the mini-series and advance against Snow Hill.

Rocky Mount downed the Pitt County squad 11-5 Saturday night at D.H. Conley to gain the advantage in the series.

Neil Avent drove in a pair of runs on three hits for Rocky Mount Sunday, while Eddie Coats, Billy Godwin, Hank Jones and Todd Goins, each had two hits. Doug Coley and Ken Whitehurst each had a pair of hits for Pitt County.

Coats and Avent scored in the first inning when Joey Kennedy dropped the throw from Pitt County third baseman Greg Briley on a grounder by Barry Butler.

Rocky Mount added four more in the third, as Avent singled and later scored on a passed ball. Godwin singled and Marshall White walked before Jones singled in Godwin. White crossed the plate on a single by Goins, while Jones scored on a bases-loaded walk to Coats for a 6-0 Rocky Mount edge.

'Biggest Moment' Didn't Phase Milwaukee Champ

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The most important putt in Morris Hatafsky's life was only a six-incher, and it wasn't even the primary concern of the 31-year-old golfer.

Hatafsky calmly sank the putt on the second extra hole Sunday, defeating George Cadle in a sudden-death playoff in the $250,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

"The last putt 'didn't bother me,'" said Hatafsky, whose $45,000 prize represented only his second victory in eight years on the tour. "But this is easily my biggest moment on the tour."

"The pressure was on the earlier holes," he said. "But I felt confident coming in here. I felt that if I could be in the running on the last day that I could win."

Hatafsky shot a final-round 66, six under par at the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Cadle, seeking his first tour victory, shot a closing 64 and surged into a tie when Hatafsky bogeyed his final hole in regulation. Cadle and Hatafsky both finished with 275, 13-under par for 72 holes.

Hatafsky set up his winning putt with a downhill putt of about 25 feet.

He reached the green in three shots after his ball had landed in the right rough on his drive.

Hatafsky said he gained confidence after he salvaged a par on his ninth hole.

"The next thing I knew, I was playing the best nine holes I've ever played," he said.

Cadle had an eight-foot putt for par, but rolled it two feet past the hole and had to settle for a bogey. He had birdied five of the last six holes en route to a 64.

Tied for third place, one stroke behind the leaders, were Skeeter Heath, Payne Stewart and 1983 Memphis Open winner Larry Mize.

Richard Zokol shot a final-round 69 and was at 277, along with Dan Pohl and Mark Calcavecchia.

Don Pooley, who held a one-stroke lead after 54 holes, was at 278 with a final-round 73.

Also at 278 were D.A. Weibring, Jim Colbert, Jay Haas and Tze-Chung Chen.

Haas birdied six of his first 10 holes of the day to tie with third-round leader Pooley early in the final round. Haas shot a final-round 67.

Wally Armstrong began the final round in second place, a stroke behind Pooley. He finished with a final-round 75, tied with five others at 280, including defending champion Calvin Peete., who fired a final-round 65.

"When the playoff came, I didn't try to do anything different than I had done on any holes during the tournament. I just played my game."

"I gave it my best shot," Cadle said. "Morris deserved it."

Hatafsky hit the green about 25 feet away with his third shot on the 527-yard, par-5 hole.

He had a double break on his putt coming back, but left the ball about half a foot away.

Littler Cruises To Four-Under Win In Syracuse Senior Event

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Had Gene Littler been riding in one of the nine classic automobiles he collects his driving could not have been much better than it was at the Bellevue

Country Club.

Littler hit 16 fairways and sank six birdies for a 4-under par 67 Sunday in the final round of the $150,000 Greater Syracuse Seniors Pro Golf Classic to edge Don January by two strokes. It was Littler's third senior title in seven events this year.

"Driving is the toughest part of this course," Littler said of his four-day total 275, 13 under par. "Every hole is a scary ride."

The $25,000 first place prize money in the Professional Golfers Association senior event raises his yearly total to $139,600 giving him $186,746 for his three-year career on the tour for players 50 and older.

Littler replaces Bill Collins as the event's champion. Collins shot a 294 in this year's event.

January, the tour's second-leading money winner behind Miller Barber, set the course and tournament record Thursday with a 65, tied the record on Saturday, but shot 4-over Friday and 1-over in the final round.

His 277 total earned him the $15,000 second place purse, giving him $154,250 for the year.

Snow Hill Advances, 4-2

GOLDSBORO — Mike Sullivan lofted a sacrifice fly to drive in Anthony Russo with the winning run in the eighth inning Sunday to give Snow Hill a 4-2 victory over Wayne County and the right to advance against Rocky Mount in the American Legion Eastern Area Tournament.

Snow Hill out-slugged Wayne County 12-8 Saturday night to take a 1-0 advantage in the mini-series.

Snow Hill hosts Rocky Mount in the opening game of the second round of the tournament Thursday and 8 p.m.

Richie Chase gave up just five hits Sunday in going the distance and earning his sixth win in as many decisions on the mound for Snow Hill, while teammate Tommy Goff ripped a pair of hits in three trips to the plate.

Russo had drawn a base on balls and moved to third when Greg Frederick's attempted sacrifice was erred at first base.

Snow Hill plated runs in the first and second innings, but Don Pale ripped a two-out, two-run homer in the sixth to knot the score. Snow Hill added an insurance run in the ninth when Russo hit into a fielder's choice to drive in Goff.

In Saturday night's contest, Russo had three hits in five at bats, while Frederick, Chase, Goff and Nat Norris each had two for Snow Hill. Winning pitcher Bobby Carraway gave up just six hits in recording his third win.

Snow Hill put the game out of reach with four runs in the fourth after taking a 5-3 lead in the third. Russo doubled, advanced on a passed ball and scored on a single by Jeff Ginn. Frederick singled, and Sullivan reached first on an error to score Ginn. A sacrifice fly by Chase drove in Frederick, and Goff singled to score Sullivan.

Michigan Tops Oakland

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Jim Stanley isn't certain how the Oakland Invaders became the barometer for his Michigan Panthers, and he's not complaining.

After the Invaders defeated the Panthers in the third week of the inaugural United States Football League season, Stanley felt the Panthers were finally ready to make a move.

He was right.

The Panthers went on to win the Central Division with a 12-6 record and now, following their 37-21 playoff victory over the Invaders on Sunday, they're on their way to Denver to meet the Philadelphia Stars next Sunday in the USFL's first championship.

"This is a tribute to a group of young men who would not say no," Stanley said. "The turning point of the season was the third game of the year against Oakland when Derek Holloway scored three touchdowns."

The playoff victory over Oakland before a USFL-record crowd of 60,237 was as much a tribute to the patient and steady hand of Stanley as it was to the solid team the Michigan organization has assembled.

Twice, on fourth-down situations, Stanley elected to pass up the easy field goal and both times it paid off. With 11 seconds remaining in the first half, quarterback Bobby Hebert flipped a 1-yard TD pass to Anthony Carter and with 10 seconds remaining in the third quarter, Ken Lacy raced 18 yards for a touchdown.

"Doing that on fourth down, normally, is not me," Stanley admitted. "But, it depends on the type of game. On the Lacy touchdown, we needed six points more than a field goal. We felt we could move the ball, but so could they, with their great quarterback, and we had to stop him."

Oakland Coach John Ralston said the crowd-noise bothered his team, but refused to use it as an excuse for the defeat.

"We were prepared better for this game than for any we've played all year," Ralston said. "Michigan was a better football team today."

Oakland's Fred Besana, the second-ranked quarterback in the league behind Hebert, put the Invaders ahead with a 1-yard plunge in the first quarter.

NL Rookies Come Alive

By The Associated Press

It hasn't been the easiest of times for Greg Brock or Darryl Strawberry, a couple of heralded rookies.

But Sunday, they did some good for themselves, and their teams.

Both in slumps, they got the proverbial monkey off their backs with game-winning hits — Brock's three RBI leading Los Angeles over Pittsburgh 10-3 and Strawberry's two-run homer powering New York over Houston 7-5.

"It's all mental," said Brock, who entered the game hitting just .219 and mired in a 4-for-43 slump. "I haven't lost any confidence, it's just a little thing in my swing and I haven't been able to correct it. Hopefully, the slump is behind me."

Strawberry, meanwhile, was only 1-for-21 and batting .200 at game time before providing the Mets with their winning runs in the eighth.

"I'm not up there looking anymore," vowed Strawberry after his ninth homer of the season. "Now, if they throw me a pitch I can hit, I'm going to put it in the stands."

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal beat Atlanta 7-6, Philadelphia stopped Cincinnati 2-0, St. Louis turned back San Diego 4-2 and San Francisco took a pair from Chicago, 12-8 and 4-2.

The Pirates led 3-1 entering the bottom of the third when the Dodgers rallied for three runs. Dusty Baker's ground-rule double brought in one run before Brock singled home the tying and go-ahead runs. Brock also singled home the Dodgers' fifth run in the fifth inning.

The Dodgers added five runs in the eighth in a rally keyed by Pedro Guerrero's two-run single to make a winner of Burt Hooton, 8-2, who won his seventh consecutive decision.

"It's trying," said Brock of his recent hitting problems. "A slump is a slump, I don't care if it's up here or in a slow-pitch league. I had a slump in the Rookie League, I had a couple last year at Albuquerque (in the Pacific Coast League) and they're just as tough."

In New York, Strawberry came through with his game-winning homer after Hubie Brooks led off the eighth with a single.

"I had no thoughts of allowing Strawberry to punt," said Mets Manager Frank Howard. "I wanted him to shoot for the hole. I don't coddle or baby any of my players."

"I was well aware that he didn't look good in striking out his two previous times at-bat, but I wanted to take a shot and see what happened."

Expos 7, Braves 6

Tim Lincecum scored from third base on Al Oliver's forceout grounder in the eighth inning, lifting Montreal over Atlanta. Raines led off the eighth with a triple off reliever Donnie Moore, 2-1, and scored one out later when Oliver beat out a potential double-play grounder to the mound.

The Braves rallied from a 6-3 deficit to tie the game in the eighth on Bob Horner's sacrifice fly.

"Speed is something I've always had," said Oliver. "I've just never used it that much on the bases. Once I saw (pitcher Terry) Forster turn toward second base, I figured I had a chance."

Phillies 2, Reds 0

Bo Diaz singled home the tie-breaking run and Marty Bystrom and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter to lead Philadelphia over Cincinnati.

Bystrom, 3-4, developed a blister on a finger of his pitching hand, forcing him to leave the game after five innings. He scattered three hits and struck out seven for his season high. Ron Reed and Al Holland preserved the shutout, with the latter posting his seventh save.

The Phillies scored their first run in the second inning on Diaz's RBI single, then added a run in the ninth off Mario Soto, 9-8, on a bases-loaded walk to Tony Perez.

"The team plays hard in back of me but we just can't score any runs," said Soto, whose teammates have scored but 16 runs for him in his last eight starts. "Maybe they're trying too hard."

Cardinals 4, Padres 2

Glenn Brummer capped a four-run, ninth-inning rally with a two-run double as St. Louis came from behind to beat San Diego.

Mark Thurmond and reliever Luis DeLeon beat shut down the Cardinals on four hits until Steve Braun tripled with one out in the ninth. George Hendrick then socked an RBI single, his third hit of the game, and Gary Lucas, 4-5, relieved DeLeon.

Lucas surrendered a single to Andy Van Slyke, and when Tommy Herr followed with a single to left Hendrick scored the tying run when Padre catcher Terry Kennedy dropped Alan Wiggins' throw home.

Brummer followed with his two-run double that gave the victory to Dave Von Ohlen, 2-2, the second of three Cardinal pitchers.

Giants 10-4, Cubs 8-2

Joel Youngblood drove home the winning run in the eighth inning with his third hit as San Francisco came from behind to win a slugfest with Chicago in the first game of their doubleheader.

Youngblood, who scored four runs and drove in three, snapped an 8-8 tie by singling home Johnnie LeMaster, who walked and stole second. Youngblood scored one out later when he stole second, took third on an error and came in on Jeff Leonard's third RBI hit.

Alee Hammaker rebounded from his embarrassing seven-run shelling in the All-Star game to pitch the Giants past the Cubs in the second game. Hammaker, 10-4, scattered nine hits, struck out four and didn't walk anyone in the nightcap.

Braves Broadcast Team Gains Fame As Atlanta Climbs To Top

ATLANTA (AP) — They're basically the same team which has been broadcasting Atlanta Braves baseball nationwide since 1977 — but now Skip, Ernie, John and The Professor are famous.

Their fame has come as the Braves dug their way out of the National League West cellar to win the division championship last year and to lead all of major league baseball in victories so far this season.

Thanks to owner Ted Turner's cable-carried "SuperStation" WTBS, "America's Team" is seen and heard from coast to coast with a potential audience of 26 million households.

Those viewers all hear Ernie Johnson, Skip Caray, John Sterling and Pete "The Professor" Van Wieren describe the action.

Turner's Braves are the only team in the majors playing 600 or better baseball at present and the fans are tuning in to Turner's telecasts.

In May, the ratings for Braves baseball were the highest ever.

"I think it would have been more frightening if we had just come on to it," said Johnson, the former Milwaukee Braves reliever who is senior man on the broadcast crew. "The first year we did it, we started in 800,000 homes and did 50 telecasts. As it grew, you got more accustomed to it. But it is a little mind-boggling now."

Johnson became head of the team in 1976 when Milo Hamilton resigned. Hamilton now does Chicago Cubs' games which are broadcast via Chicago's WGN over cable.

Van Wieren, a veteran minor league broadcaster who, with his glasses and balding head looks a little like a professor, was brought aboard, as was Caray, the son of famous baseball broadcaster Harry Caray, who also does the Cubs on WGN.

Skip Caray, at the time, was broadcasting games of the National Basketball Association Atlanta Hawks.

"I was uptight," Caray said of the first days of the alliance. "I had made it here, I guess, in basketball, but baseball was a whole new thing. Pete had to be uptight because it was his first major league job, and Ernie had to be uptight because he had just become 'The Voice Of The Braves.'"

Sterling is the new man, a replacement for Darrell Chaney, a former Brave released from the broadcast crew over the winter.

A Strange TV Sitcom Family: Characters Like Each Other

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In this upcoming television season, when the networks have new comedies about divorced parents, swinging parents and a "family" with two bachelors and their dippy blond maid, "Family Ties" returns with its novel approach to the household sitcom.

Imagine, if you will, a

"TRADING PLACES" R	2:35-4:50-7:05-9:20

family comedy in which the husband and wife genuinely love and respect each other, and their three children like each other enough to be credible. Hard to believe, huh?

What's more, NBC's "Family Ties" deals with realistic and contemporary concerns, such as a teenager's first sexual experience, job loyalty and, in tonight's repeat episode, the feelings of the liberal parents when their home is burglarized. What? A sitcom without ghosts, talking orangutans or genies?

Somehow, "Family Ties," the best comedy not set in a Boston bar named "Cheers," gets by on gentle, sophisticated humor, although the children do get a little too precocious and smart-alecky at times.

"Sometimes we manipulate the characters too much for a laugh," says Gary David Goldberg, the show's executive producer. Indeed, there are times when you get the feeling that 7-year-old Jennifer, played by Tina Yothers, is doing a stand-up comedy routine.

But that's a small price to pay for a frequently warm and amusing comedy that touchingly brings former children of the '60s, when their responsibilities were non-existent and their idealism was rampant, into the realistic '80s, when they have to raise three pragmatic kids.

If the show strikes a strong reality chord, much of the credit goes to Goldberg, a former producer on "Lou Grant," whose '60s radicalism has undergone softening similar to those of his main characters, played by Meredith Baxter Birney and Michael Gross.

The outspoken Goldberg, who is collaborating with Steven Spielberg on the movie comedy "Reel to Reel," remains part brick-thrower. His anti-establishment attitudes gained attention last winter on CBS' documentary, "Don't Touch That Dial," in which he lambasted TV for its cowardice.

"When I was at 'Lou Grant,' and CBS called to complain, we knew we had an Emmy-winner on our hands," he says. "It was like a weather vane. They want to tread the same old tired ground, attract 20 million viewers and do no damage."

CBS had first dibs on the "Family Ties" script, which was then a 60-minute light drama. But it was rejected by the top-rated network. "Now, I had a great motive — revenge," says Goldberg. He approached Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, who envisioned the series as a half-hour comedy about a 1980s family.

Last season, "Family Ties," up against "The Fall Guy," had better content than ratings. "How do you compete against Lee Majors jumping into a vat of naked women?" asks Goldberg. "There should be room for both shows. You can't have vats of women every hour at every network."

Fortunately for Goldberg, Grant Tinker, chairman of NBC, agrees. Although NBC's new schedule has more fluff and fantasy on it, Tinker was true to his promise that he would renew quality shows, even if their ratings were low.

"Family Ties," in 55th place last season with borderline ratings, probably would have not been renewed at the other networks. It won't be any easier this season. "Family Ties" faces even stiffer competition in "Dynasty," which some TV prognosticators expect to be the top-rated series.

But all Goldberg can do is make the best program he can. "I told them if they left us alone to do the show, they would get a very good show," says Goldberg. "Grant's talent is picking the right people, and letting them do what they do best. You work even harder because you don't want to let Grant down."

NOT GLAMOROUS, BUT NECESSARY — Helmeted Duncan Maio, a member of the technical crew of the East Carolina Summer Theater, works on props for a forthcoming stage production. TV Actress Is A Theater-Goer

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — When actress Jayne Meadows takes a break, she heads straight for the theater.

"It's all I do," she said. "I used to come in from the airport. Drop my luggage in the hotel. They would take it right up to my apartment. I would go on to the theater. I never miss one second of time to see a play."

"I see every good talented actor I can. That's what I do."

If her husband Steve Allen can't make it to the theater, Miss Meadows never hesitates to hit Broadway alone.

Same thing in London. She recalls with glee getting the "last ticket" to "Nicholas Nickleby."

They were in New York for two days. She and Allen had just gotten off the Queen Elizabeth II and they were driving by the cut-rate ticket booth in Times Square when the urge struck.

She telephoned all over town and finally got a ticket.

"I wrote my graduation thesis on Dickens. I've always loved Dickens. I think Dickens today would be the biggest writer of soap operas and television series. That's where he would be."

Miss Meadows had just arrived from the West Coast where she is working on a new television series for the fall season, ABC's "It Isn't Easy," and despite a heavy work schedule, she was determined to take in as many plays as possible during the recent trip.

"Wednesday the matinee, Saturday we're working. Saturday we're having pictures with the spokespeople for the Diabetes Association. Sunday I could go to a matinee. Sunday night I could go to a show. Saturday night I could go to a show."

First she wanted to see "Foxfire."

"Jessica Tandy, she's the best actress in America, she's the best." Miss Meadows declared.

The energy of this 5-foot-7, 130-pound actress leaves one breathless.

"Oh you don't eat on a plane? That's the only time I ever really eat a meal."

Probably because its the only time she ever sits down.

She's been acting professionally since she started with a stock company near her hometown of Sharon, Conn., at the age of 15.

"I was hired for my first Broadway play when I was barely 17," she said.

"I wrote plays when I was 10. I produced them and acted in them."

"I always made my sister the princess," she said referring to her younger sister Audrey. "I'd dress her up. And I'd always play the character parts — the good parts, the fun parts."

Although she had spent most of the day flying cross country, Miss Meadows suggested running over to Michael's Pub, where Allen was playing.

"It will be great fun. He doesn't think I'm coming tonight," she said.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: J equals O.

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Turns Effort To Catholic Women

DETROIT (AP) — A United Methodist minister for 10 years, the former Rev. Caroline Jonah has laid aside her clerical title and robes to become a Roman Catholic, hoping to help that church open its priesthood to women.

She says she will be considered a lay person under Catholic rules, but that her Methodist ordination "is indelible and does not rub off" and her situation will "point to the future" for other Catholic women.

High Court Left Its 'Narrow Interpretation' Behind

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a display of awesome and singular power, the Supreme Court capped its 1982-83 term by shacking Congress, buttressing abortion rights, outlawing federal tax breaks for racially discriminatory schools, and banning pensions that shortchange women.

The court appeared to drift further from the philosophy of narrow interpretation that had been its hallmark throughout the 1970s and showed in key decisions a greater penchant for aiming at the most sweeping impact.

In one of the most important constitutional rulings in its history, the court struck down the "legislative veto" long used by Congress to rein in regulatory agencies and presidential power.

The decision, written far more broadly than necessary to resolve the particular issue before the court, will force fundamental changes in the relationship between the federal government's legislative and executive branches.

The justices also spoke in broad phrases when they reaffirmed and strengthened their 1973 decision that legalized abortion. Their recent decision struck down Akron, Ohio, ordinances that would have made abortions more difficult to obtain.

The court invoked "fundamental public policy" in ruling that the Internal Revenue Service was right to prohibit federal tax breaks for private schools that discriminate against blacks.

The justices paid little attention in that ruling to Reagan administration arguments that the IRS policy used against Bob Jones University in South Carolina and the Goldsboro Christian Schools in North Carolina, along with other schools, never was authorized by Congress.

And on the final day of its nine-month session, the court ruled that federal law bans employer pension plans providing smaller monthly retirement checks for women. An invalidated Arizona pension plan did just that because women, as a group, live longer than men and collect pension pay for a longer time.

Politically, the court's strength still lies at its core — the centrist justices whose minds, hearts and votes are fought for by the liberal and conservative factions. But those "swing voters" now appear more willing to let the court flex its muscles.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, as in recent years, exercised his opinion-writing assignment power to assure he spoke for the court in some of its most important rulings — including the legislative veto and IRS policy cases.

That power was made more evident by the fact that Burger dissented from only 13 of the court's 152 full decisions.

Justice William J. Brennan, the court's senior member and leading liberal, managed to author several key decisions only because in those cases Burger was a dissenter.

When the chief justice does not vote with the majority, the majority's senior justice decides who will write for the court.

Often, however, the crucial votes were cast by the court's majority makers of the center — Justices Byron R. White, Lewis F. Powell, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

In most matters, Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and William H. Rehnquist can be found with fellow conservative Burger.

Justice Thurgood Marshall most often voted with Brennan as he has for more than a decade.

In the most pronounced voting trend, the court provided several significant victories for law enforcement forces over dissenters' protests that individual rights were being sacrificed.

In four of those decisions, Mrs. O'Connor led the court with support from Burger, Powell, Rehnquist and White.

Here are summaries of other major opinions announced by the court in its 1982-83 term:

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AQ987 ♠5 ♣7642 ♦86

The bidding has proceeded: North East South

1 ♠ Dble ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a poor hand defensively — indeed, your spade length detracts from partner's defensive possibilities. Jump to three spades. After an opposing takeout double, that action is preemptive.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AJ83 ♠K95 ♦AK ♦QJ62

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East

1 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have an excellent spade fit and a maximum no trump. To simply raise to four spades is a gross underbid — you are in slam territory. The way to get the message across to partner without getting beyond the game level should partner have no aspirations, is to cue-bid four diamonds. Pass if partner simply rebids four spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦96 ♠KQ1093 ♦AK5 ♦J65

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have the values for game, but where do you want to play the hand? On this sequence, partner need not have more than five spades, so you can't be sure four spades is the right spot, and three no trump without a club stopper is a bit gay. Bid three diamonds and see if you can't coax a heart preference or a no trump bid out of partner.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦95 ♠AKJ85 ♦A95 ♦1076

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—With only one diamond stopper and no sure source of tricks, you do not really want to bid two no trump. The same arguments apply here as to the previous problem. Bid two diamonds. If partner can take a heart preference or bid no trump, you will know where to play the hand.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AQ83 ♠KJ92 ♦K85 ♦96

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?

A.—You have almost the ideal distribution for a takeout double. Unfortunately, you do not have the strength to act in the immediate seat at the three-level. For that, you would need about a king more than for a one-level takeout double. Pass, and hope that partner can act in the balancing seat.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦A8 ♠KQ965 ♦A83 ♦AJ3

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?

A.—You certainly want to get into the act, but how? If you double, partner might jump to some uncomfortable level in spades, and your suit isn't good enough for either a bid of three or four hearts. Your best shot is probably to bid three no trump — you don't need too much from partner to have a good shot at that contract.

—If a person stopped for suspected drunken driving refuses to take a sobriety test, that refusal may be used as evidence of guilt.

—Police may use dogs to sniff airport luggage in efforts to detect illegal drugs, but the luggage may not be detained for an unduly long time.

—Random boardings of boats along waterways with easy access to the open sea do not violate the privacy rights of boat owners. The decision is expected to boost a national effort to curtail a navy of drug smugglers.

—The court made it a little easier for police officers to search or seize illegal drugs or weapons without first getting a search warrant by broadening a 12-year-old exception to the general rule requiring warrants. The exception is known as the "plain view doctrine."

—Sentencing a person convicted of numerous, but relatively minor, crimes to life in prison with no chance of parole is "cruel and unusual punishment" barred by the Constitution.

—People found not guilty of crimes by reason of insanity can be locked away in a mental hospital for periods longer than they would have served in prison if convicted.

—Police officers who stop a car with people inside they suspect of a crime, in addition to frisking the suspects to make sure they are not carrying weapons, may search the car's passenger compartment for weapons.

—States may not make it a crime, as an invalidated California law did, for a person who "wanders or loiters" to refuse to identify himself or herself when stopped by police.

DEATH PENALTY

—Federal appeals courts may speed up the process of handling last-ditch requests for delays in the executions of death row inmates as long as the merits of the legal arguments raised by those inmates are considered.

—States may require that jurors deciding what sentence to give to a convicted murderer be told about a governor's power to commute a life sentence without parole to a life sentence in which parole is possible.

—It is not necessarily unconstitutional for a death sentence to be based in part on factors, called "aggravating circumstances," not specifically spelled out in a state's death penalty law.

—Prayer sessions in Congress and in state legislatures, even when led by paid chaplains, do not violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

—States may provide tax deductions for parents of school children who face tuition payments even though the overwhelming majority of parents who can take advantage of such tax breaks send their children to church-affiliated schools.

—States and local communities may not give churches veto power over the granting of liquor licenses to nearby business establishments.

VOTING

—A state's congressional districts may be subject to constitutional attack even when their population differences vary from the "one person, one vote" principle by less than 1 percent. State legislators must justify even the tiniest of population variances if they are challenged, and show they resulted from "good faith" efforts to achieve perfection.

—Changes in an electoral system covered by the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965 are valid even if they perpetuate past racial discrimination, as long as they do not increase the discriminatory impact.

—States may not impose significantly more demanding ballot-qualifying deadlines for minor party or independent presidential candidates than those facing the Democratic and Republican hopefuls.

POLITICS

—Congress may give veterans' groups tax-exempt status while allowing them to lobby its members even though Congress denies the lobbying privilege to all other tax-exempt groups.

—States may not always force public disclosure of financial contributors to minor political parties nor of candidates who get money from such parties. The court said in a case involving the Socialist Workers Party that such laws are unconstitutional when the required disclosure likely would lead to "threats, harassment or reprisals."

CIVIL RIGHTS

—The court limited the legal protection for people who claim they were made the targets of racial discrimination in violation of a federal law banning such bias by recipients of federal money. Lawsuits based on the key law, by itself, must prove a discriminatory motive, not just a discriminatory impact. Lawsuits based on federal regulations stemming from the law, called Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, may force a halt to the discriminatory practice without proving biased intent but may not get "compensatory" awards without such proof.

—People who successfully sue government officials may collect "punitive" damages to serve as an example and deter future wrongdoing.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

—States may ban new nuclear plant construction until the federal government devises a safe method for disposing of nuclear waste.

—Federal regulators do not have to consider "psychological stress" on nearby residents before approving a nuclear power plant to begin or restart production.

—Waste disposal risks do not have to be subjected to plant-by-plant consideration in federal licensing proceedings.

FREE SPEECH

—A federal law that banned protests or demonstrations on the public sidewalks surrounding the Supreme Court building was an impermissible infringement of free-speech rights protected by the Constitution's First Amendment.

—A federal law banning the use of the mails for the unsolicited advertising of contraceptives also was unconstitutional.

OFFICIAL IMMUNITY

—Members of the military may not sue their superior officers for monetary damages when their civil rights are violated.

—Government employees may not sue their bosses over alleged violations of their free-speech rights.

—Police officers and other government officials may not be sued for lying while on the witness stand during a trial even if that perjury leads to a wrongful conviction. Of course, those police officers and officials may be criminally prosecuted.

STATES RIGHTS

—State and local governments must abide by the federal law banning forced retirements before age 70 unless age is a "bona fide occupational qualification" for particular jobs.

—States and cities have no constitutional duty to pay for hospital bills of suspects wounded when apprehended by their police officers. But the state and local governments do have a constitutional obligation to seek medical attention for such wounded suspects.

FAMILIES

The natural fathers of illegitimate children have no automatic right to contest the children's adoptions.

TAXES

—States may tax U.S.-based multinational corporations based on calculations that include the corporations' worldwide income.

—The 1980 windfall profits tax on oil, which produces billions of dollars in federal revenue, is constitutional even though it exempts some oil produced in Alaska.

THE SEXES

Employers may not offer male workers family medical plans that don't stack up to those available to female workers by singling out pregnancy benefits for a male worker's spouse for less generous benefits.

GOVERNMENT REGULATORS

—The Reagan administration acted unlawfully two years ago when it rescinded rules requiring all new cars sold in the United States to feature automatic seat belts or air bags which built into dashboards. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration must justify its 1981 decision to rescind the rules, which may not be easy, or set a new deadline for auto industry compliance.
