Contract On U.S. 264 Project Awarded

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The contract for construction of the first segment of the long awaited new four-lane U.S. 264 expressway from Greenville to Wilson has been awarded by the State Transportation Board.

The board, meeting Friday in Raleigh, awarded the bid for a 4.9 mile section in Wilson County to S.T. Wooten Construction Co. of Wilson for $3,948,066, a spokesman for the board said today.

The initial construction on the 33.4 miles of relocated U.S. 264 will involve a section beginning west of secondary road 1507 and continuing to the Greene County line near Saratoga.

The spokesman said several other contracts for U.S. 264 are scheduled to be included on future bid lettings, including one on July 26, followed by bid openings in August, November and January. According to the spokesman, the board will meet the next month following each bid letting to consider contract awards. For instance, the July 26 bids will be presented to the board at its August meeting.

The July 26 bid letting will involve a 3.2 mile section connecting the existing U.S. 264 with the new U.S. 264 Farmville East Thoroughfare from U.S. 264 to secondary road 1200 near Farmville.

The remaining schedule, which includes bid lettings for approximately half of the Wilson to Greenville freeway, includes:

- August, U.S. 264 from east of N.C. 58 to west of secondary road 1507, involving approximately four miles;
- November, U.S. 264 from the Wilson County line to the existing U.S. 264 near Little Contentnea Creek, 4.6 miles;
- November, U.S. 264 from west of secondary road 1204 to secondary road 1200 at Greenville, two miles; and — January, U.S. 264 from west of secondary road 1210 to secondary road 1204 near Greenville, 3.6 miles.

According to the spokesman the remaining sections of the estimated $76.35 million project are not yet scheduled for bid lettings.

The spokesman said the construction schedule for new segments is not necessarily in sequence for the Greenville to Wilson freeway, although they will eventually connect to form the relocated corridor.

No word was available this morning on plans for taking bids on the four-laning of 10.4 miles of U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington. Officials have said the project, which is estimated to cost $14.81 million, is expected to be done in fiscal 1984.

Four Presidents Of Latin America Issue Peace Plea

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — Four Latin American presidents have issued an urgent appeal to Ronald Reagan and Cuban President Fidel Castro to help avert war in Central America.

In a communique issued Sunday after a weekend summit meeting, the presidents of the so-called Contadora countries proposed the immediate demilitarization of Central America, an end to arms smuggling and foreign intervention, and a ban on the establishment of foreign bases.

The focus of their concern was the growing conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras, in which both Cuba and the United States are involved.

"This very day we the presidents of the Contadora Group will direct ourselves to the presidents of the Central American governments — involved directly in the problem — but also to President Reagan... and to Commander Fidel Castro, inviting them to join in this effort with good faith and decision," said President Miguel de la Madrid as the meeting ended.

The communique was signed by de la Madrid and presidents Belisario Betancur of Colombia, Luis Herrera Campins of Venezuela and Ricardo de la Espriella of Panama. Those four countries have been trying to defuse the violence in Central America since Jan. 5, when their representatives first met on the Panamanian resort island of Contadora.

"The conflicts in Central America confront the international community with a choice of supporting and strengthening the path to political understanding... or passively accepting factors that could lead to armed confrontations of greater danger," the statement said.

The Contadora presidents indirectly blamed the United States and Cuba for the tense situation that has developed in the region.

A Warning To Counties Secondary Road Funds

MILWAUKEE (AP) — President Reagan's chief economic advisor told county officials today that domestic spending must continue to fall even though counties are feeling a squeeze because of the recession.

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told the annual convention of the National Association of Counties that the financial problems faced by local officials today should be warning enough of the dangers of renewed inflation.

"A long period of rising inflation has never been reversed without a slowdown of economic activity and a rise of unemployment," Feldstein said. "The very high rates of inflation that the economy reached in the late 1970s made the recession that followed virtually inevitable."

"A long period of rising inflation has never been reversed without a slowdown of economic activity and a rise of unemployment," Feldstein added. "The double-barreled recessions that began in January 1980 caused much personal hardship and loss of income."

"The tragedy of this long period of economic suffering should remain in our minds as a warning of the dangers of renewed inflation," Feldstein said.

Feldstein's warnings came one day after the group's board approved a series of resolutions saying counties are paying dearly for a recession they did not cause. They asked Washington for help.

But Feldstein said more domestic spending cuts are necessary if economic recovery is to continue — and if new taxes are necessary, they won't go to bailing out fiscally stressed counties.

"The extra revenue must be used to reduce prospective deficits, not to finance additional spending," Feldstein said. "Raising additional revenue only to fund more social spending would continue the process that created our current fiscal morass."

Former Vice President Walter Mondale had told the same group Sunday that the Reagan economic policies are doomed to failure.

Reagan sent a personal message Sunday after Vice President George Bush declined a speaking invitation. Mondale, a Democratic presidential candidate, filled in as the annual meeting's keynote speaker. Officials of more than 2,000 county governments are attending the convention.

Although Reagan said the economy was on the upswing and pledged to help county officials, Mondale said national economic policy is causing the financial problems of local governments.

"Current economic policy, even though we are in a recovery, is doomed to long-term failure," Mondale said.

He said federal budget deficits will be "$200 billion or more a year as far as the eye can see... (which) absolutely guarantees that long term economic and sustainable growth is impossible."

"In my opinion the federal government is not doing, either in terms of economic policies to restore this nation to health or in terms of budget policy, to help state and local governments," Mondale said.

Mondale's challenge to the Reagan policies came after the association's board approved a string of resolutions declaring that counties need federal help because they are the last resort for recession victims.

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Board of Transportation, at its monthly meeting here last week, appropriated $573,189 to Pitt County for secondary road construction improvements. The appropriation is part of $42 million allocated on a county-to-county basis in North Carolina.

The appropriation, and possibly $1 million more, is expected to be allocated by the 1983 General Assembly before the session ends this month.

According to State Transportation Secretary W.R. Roberson Jr., "Without the 1981 General Assembly's passage of Governor Jim Hunt's 'Good Roads' program, the $42 million in funding to improve our secondary roads system would not be available. We are, indeed appreciative of the legislative decision, which guaranteed that 1 and three-eighths cents of the state's gas tax revenue be used for secondary road improvements."

The amount of funding for each county is determined by a formula established by the state Legislature in which every county receives a percentage of the total funds based on the unpaved secondary roads in the county in relation to the total mileage of unpaved secondary roads in the state.

Board members have been meeting with the 100 county boards of commissioners in public meetings across the state to review and approve projects to utilize these funds.

Roberson noted that North Carolina's secondary road system is composed of 59,598 miles, of which 18,286 miles are unpaved. He said, "These roads, many of which were the old and narrow farm-to-market roads, have become vital home-to-work routes for our citizens."

The funds allocated today will be used for new paving, widening existing paved roads, improving unpaved roadways to an all-weather condition, replacing small bridges and strengthening paved roads to relieve present weight restrictions.

According to Roberson, as of Jan. 1, 1983, Martin County has 131.94 miles of unpaved secondary roads. Its share of the allocation is $301,109.

Beaufort County has 282.70 miles of unpaved secondary roads and will receive $645,168.

In Greene County there are 75.38 miles of unpaved secondary roads. It will be allocated $172,030 for improvements.

Kissinger Given Job Of Heading Policy Review

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — President Reagan today chose former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to head a new bipartisan national commission to advise him on Central American policy in a renewed effort to win congressional support for his campaign "to keep the light of liberty alive."

The president, in his prepared remarks, did not name anyone to the commission. But a senior administration official traveling with the president confirmed that Reagan had offered the job to Kissinger in a Sunday night telephone call, and that Kissinger had accepted.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said Reagan had not planned to announce Kissinger's appointment today, but changed his mind after word of his choice leaked to the media.

The source also said that Reagan would soon name eight other members to the panel. Republican and Democratic congressional leaders, he added, would appoint "senior consultants" to the group. He said the commission is to report to Reagan by Dec. 1.

Sweltering Under Effect Of Heat, No Rain

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

One hundred-degree temperatures scorched Pitt County this weekend, sending area residents to the pools or the comfort of the air-conditioner to escape the heat and humidity.

Lawns and crops suffered because of the lack of rain.

According to readings at the Greenville Utilities Water Plant, Saturday's high temperature soared to 101 degrees; the low temperature was 69. Sunday's high reached 100 degrees and the low was 72; Friday's temperatures ranged from 98 degrees to 68 degrees. No rainfall was recorded.

A local swimming pool was one of the most popular places to be this weekend. The crowd of swimmers at the Greenville City Pool numbered 185 Saturday, and over 200 swimmers took to the water there Sunday. Darrah Doane, who works at the city pool, said the number of swimmers was "about average" for this time of year. Brook Valley County Club's pool reported "a packed house both days," and the Greenville Country Club averaged 150 people a day this weekend, according to life guard Bruce Shackelford.

Consumption of electricity ran near the peak load of 134 megawatts all week, according to Malcolm Green, superintendent of electric systems for Greenville Utilities. "There was an awful lot of consumption," he said. "Night temperatures are high and people are staying at home during the day, and people who were doing without the air conditioning began to turn it on because of the heat."

Green said the highest demand Greenville Utilities had ever had on a Saturday was reported. "The demand Saturday was 130 megawatts, and it is usually never more than 115-120 megawatts on a Saturday. Sunday's demand of 121 megawatts was high also," Green noted.

"This high demand is unusual for this time of the year," he said. "It's the highest we've seen this year. There are going to be some high bills this month, and I encourage people to conserve electricity as much as they can."

Green noted that there were several power outages in the area this weekend, but none were related to an overload of the system. "There were typical scattered problems, but nothing related to the weather," he said.

Walter Stasavich of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department said there were a "moderate number of people" using the picnic shelters and park facilities this weekend. He said there were many participants in the 30-hour Easter Seals softball marathon held this weekend at Evans Park, but the number of spectators was small. "Heat was one of the reasons there were so few people out," he said.

Stasavich noted that there was "a better than average crowd" at the Sunday in the Park program, which was held early Sunday evening.

People were not all that the high temperatures affected. Agricultural extension agent Sam Uzzell said the extreme heat has been "very damaging" to the plant life in the area. "Let's hope it rains before the end of the week," he said.

"Any crop but peanuts and soybeans is under some real drought stress," Uzzell said. "The tobacco can stand it pretty well."

"The corn is in the silking, tasseling and ear-filing stages, and drought conditions are most severe at these stages," he said. "This year's corn never established an extensive root system because of moist soils, and now that it's turned so dry, the effects of drought on corn are more severe. The county has suffered yield loss on the corn already."

The agent added that the extreme heat (temperatures over 90 degrees) will kill pollen and cause the crops and vegetable plants that are pollinating now to lose their flowers.

"People who tend gardens and can irrigate them should irrigate early in the morning or late in the evening because less moisture will be lost through evaporation," Uzzell said. Overhead irrigation should be completed in the morning so the plant foliage can dry during the day.

"Those people who have Bermuda, Centipede or St. Augustine grass in their lawns should water them," Uzzell said. "It's best to water once or twice a week very deeply rather than every day lightly." He noted that Fescue grass should not be watered at this time because that type of grass is semi-dormant at this time of year and watering could cause disease problems.

Uzzell said peanut and soybean growers and vegetable gardeners should be on the lookout for a possible problem with spider (Please turn to Page 8)

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Fortunately for budget-minded cookbook collectors, four excellent hardcover cookbooks have now appeared in paperback. Still another paperback falls into a different category. Here are brief descriptions of them.

The success of Pierre Franey's "The New York Times 60-Minute Gourmet" prompted a sequel, "The New York Times More 60-Minute Gourmet" (Fawcett-Columbine). The first book contained main course dishes with vegetable accompaniments and salads; the new book contains much more of the same plus sections on appetizers and desserts. This is a fine collection of some of the best ideas for quick cookery, including a number of dishes which were served at New York City's late great restaurant, Le Pavillon, where Franey reigned as chef for many years.

Nika Hazelton's "The Regional Italian Kitchen" (Evans) has an extremely interesting and informative introduction discussing the gastronomic characteristics of each region of Italy. At the beginning of each recipe, its regional origin is noted. From soup to desserts, this is down-to-earth food. Jean Hewitt's "New Natural Foods Cookbook" (Avon) is for vegetarians and natural-food aficionados and is a revised and expanded version of her 1972 "Natural Foods Cookbook." The section on Vegetarian Main Dishes is about as interesting a treatment of the subject as you are apt to find; in addition there are separate chapters on fish and poultry cookery. Young mothers will welcome the Baby Foods chapter; it makes heavy use of the food processor.

To many cooks, Caribbean cooking may seem exotic. But Elizabeth Lambert Ortiz, who grew up in the West Indies, wrote "The Complete Book of Caribbean Cooking" in 1973, and it has found a wide audience. Now it is available from Evans. It has a list of mail-order sources for obtaining — in some communities — hard-to-find foods; but in many cases Mrs. Ortiz suggests supermarket substitutes for them. This is authentic, island-hopping cooking.

"The Whole World Cookbook" (Scribners) contains 1,500 recipes reprinted from original softcover books published by 101 Productions, a California firm. An eclectic collection in a large format, it very nearly lives up to its title. The 35 books from which the recipes are drawn include books on a single food (Asparagus, Strawberries), books on the cooking of a single nation (Hungary, India, Greece), books on specialty cooking (Cooking for Two, A Primer for Pickles) and

Dear Abby Grieving Mom Having Trouble With Words

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I sent for your booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," and although it contained some good "suggested letters" for many other purposes, I could not find the one I need at this time.

You see, three months ago my husband and I were blessed with our first child. We received many lovely baby gifts, but because I developed some serious complications following the baby's birth, I was in no condition to write any thank-you notes.

Unfortunately, we lost our little boy when he was only 6 weeks old.

My friends want me to keep the baby gifts for our next child, and that is what I've decided to do. However, I must write some kind of thank-you note, but I just can't seem to find the right words. Please help me.

LOST FOR WORDS

DEAR LOST: First, please accept my heartfelt sympathy at the loss of your beloved child.

A suggested thank-you note:

"Dear (): 'Thank you for the lovely () you sent for our baby. As you probably know, God called our angel home when he was only 6 weeks old.

'We are keeping your gift with the hope that we shall one day use it for 'the next one,' should we be so blessed.

"With love and gratitude, ()."

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong, wrong, wrong to tell those parents who signed "The Three of Us" that it was time their 9½-year-old daughter got out of their bed and into her own. (They said their lovemaking was curtailed.)

This sleeping-alone business is a modern invention of the upper middle class. For thousands of years, the entire family slept together. Sure, it interfered with Mom and Dad's lovemaking (having kids around always does), but parents find alternatives. Ask any poor family with nine kids and two bedrooms.

One of the basic human needs is to be cuddled and loved, and when children are shoved away to sleep alone they feel insecure and deprived. Please correct your advice, Abby, before a lot of healthy children are rushed off to shrinks.

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD: You're right. Children need to be cuddled in order to feel secure. (So do adults.) And it's OK for children of all ages to hop into the sack with their parents for a little while, but for a 9½-year-old girl to be sleeping between Mom and Dad is overdoing it.

DEAR ABBY: A pertinent note for summertime visitors: To my traveling friends (especially a certain Los Angeles couple):

I don't mind that I spent all that time cleaning my house — it needed it anyway. I don't even mind that I passed up other things in order to make sure it all got done on time, like my family reunion, my daily exercise class, not to mention dates.

I also don't mind that I stayed home waiting for your call to tell me that you were in the area at last. I'd been wanting some quiet time to myself and I got it — in spades.

I don't even mind having bought all that food — most of it will keep.

I also understand that vacationers don't want to stick to a schedule — if they change their plans, they have the right.

The only thing I am concerned about is — did something dire occur on your way here? It could have been something serious — or did you just break the finger you dial with?

Thanks, Abby. I hope you print this and that they — as well as others like them — will get the message.

Lifetime Of Writing Pays Off For Former Editor

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Laurie Colwin used to edit other people's books. Now, other people edit her books.

And she doesn't mind at all.

"I love being edited," says Miss Colwin, who has written three novels and two collections of short stories. "It helps, just as being an editor helps make you a better writer."

The 39-year-old New York native, whose latest book is the novel "Family Happiness," says she worked for a number of years at various jobs in the publishing industry, but spent her last five as an editor of fiction and non-fiction manuscripts.

"I was writing my own things at the same time," she says, "and being an editor during the day was very helpful to me because every once in a while I'd come across something terrible in a manuscript and this taught me what not to do in my own work."

Miss Colwin left the publishing industry in 1977 to devote herself to writing full time. "I've been living off my writing ever since," she says, adding, "I guess I'm lucky, but then it doesn't take a lot to keep me going."

Although she'd been writing "ever since I was a kid," Miss Colwin didn't manage to get anything published until she was 25. "Then, I sold my first story, and it was to The New Yorker," she says with a smile. "I was stunned, I was shocked, I was so happy."

She's published a number of other things in that magazine since and credits two of its contributors, Donald Barthelme and John Cheever, with influencing her work. "They changed the short story," she says. "They expanded the way you could say things. They made it possible to see things in a different way."

Miss Colwin says she started in writing by doing short stories and thinks aspiring writers should follow her lead. "It is not easy to write a novel, it is hard work. By doing short stories, you can teach yourself to write just by writing them."

"It's nice to write a short story because it usually doesn't take very long to finish it. But a novel you have to live with a long time to develop it properly."

"And the pace of the forms is different. To me, a short story is 25 pages, a novel is 225 pages. That's a big difference."

When doing a story, she says, she doesn't think in terms of how long it takes to finish, but how many drafts it takes. "I write a first draft, a second, and so on. With some stories I've even gone into 10 drafts, but those stories were terrible. If there is something wrong with the story and you can't fix it after all those drafts, then it will never work."

With novels, she thinks in terms of time. "A novel usually takes from six to 10 months, but there are exceptions. Take 'Family Happiness.' That took me two years and three drafts before I finished, the longest I'd ever spent with a novel. I've found that if I don't get it right quickly — two or three drafts — then I am in trouble and will never get it done."

Miss Colwin says she writes three to five pages each morning "and then I do good works and go swimming."

The good works consists of riding her bicycle to a shelter for homeless women that is close to her home. "I cook

Brenda Lea Foley Weds J.P. Carroll

RALEIGH — Brenda Lea Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Farrell Foley of Greenville, and James Porter Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Phillip Carroll of Raleigh, were married Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

Performing the single ring ceremony in Christ Episcopal Church here was the Rev. Daniel Sapp. A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. David Lynch, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with an open neckline outlined in beaded silk Venise lace and schiffli lace. The fitted bodice was enhanced with pearls. The full sheer bishop sleeves were applied in silk Venise lace and finished in a ruffled cuff of schiffli lace. Floral silk Venise lace encircled the waistline with an organza Dior bow featured at the center back. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated with a flounced hemline edged in chantilly lace. The flounce of organza was fashioned with an additional edging of chantilly and schiffli lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in silk Venise lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in schiffli and silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bridal roses accented with purple statice and baby's breath. The bride also carried a lace handkerchief made by the late grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Sallie Porter. Sandra Foley Jarrett of Albany, Ga., served as her sister's matron of honor. Patricia Wilkerson Noell of

MRS. JAMES PORTER CARROLL

Burlington was honorary matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Pam Hawkins and Jeannie Robertson, both of Greenville. The attendants each wore a formal gown of orchid organza designed with an open neckline featuring a double ruffle of organza outlining the off-shoulder bodice and scooped back. A gathered sash of organza encircled the modified waistline and the skirt was enhanced by a flounce at the hemline that extended up the back of the gown to form a bustle. They carried bouquets of orchid daisies, pink carnations, purple statice and baby's breath.

Brad Armstrong of Lafayette, Ind. served as best man while ushers included John Carroll Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and Barney Corvin, both of Raleigh; Harold Noell III of Burlington and Buddy Franklin of Graham.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Radisson Plaza Hotel in Raleigh. Cake was served by Betty Pollard of Greenville. Punch and champagne were served by Linda Pope and Nancy Hathaway, both of Greenville. Presiding at the guest register was Mildred D. Patton of Raleigh. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Jones of Greenville.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained with a rehearsal dinner Saturday evening at the Radisson.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and teaches at Oxford Orphanage. The bridegroom is a student at North Carolina State University majoring in computer science.

After a wedding trip to Kiawah Island, S.C., the couple will reside in Raleigh.

For Kit KC-71783 (cotton yarn) the prices are: small, $15; medium, $17; or large, $19. For Kit KA-71783 (acrylic yarn) the prices are: small, $13; medium or large, $15.60. Please specify your choice of natural, royal, gold, lavender, burgundy or brown.

Some knitted pattern stitches are easier to follow from charts than from written row-by-row directions. The diamond seed pattern is a good example of this. Those of you who are accustomed to Fair Isle or other multi-color knitting probably know how to follow such a chart. But for others, here is the diamond seed chart, with a few explanations.

On this, or on any other graph chart for knitting, each square of the graph represents one stitch. Usually the various symbols represent colors to be used for that stitch. Here, however, each symbol denotes a stitch that is purled on the right side or knitted on the wrong side on a stockinette background.

To work this pattern, cast on a multiple of 8 stitches plus 1. Or to put it another way, cast on any number of stitches that can be evenly divided by eight and then cast other even numbered rows — read the chart from left to right. You will start this row at point "C," purling all stitches represented by blank squares and knitting those represented by dark circles. Repeat the 8 stitches from "C" to "D" across the row until 1 stitch remains and work that as designated by the square above the letter "A."

To work Row 1 — and all other odd numbered rows, read the chart from right to left. Starting at point "A," purl the first stitch (represented by a dark circle on the chart). Knit the next 7 stitches (represented by blank squares). You will now have worked 8 stitches, ending with the stitch just above the "B" on the chart. Now, go back to point "A" and repeat the stitches from "A" to "B" all across the row. When you reach the end of the row, you should have 1 stitch remaining on the left needle. Work this stitch as a purl stitch as shown by the symbol just above the letter "C."

To try your hand at working from a graph chart, cast on 33 stitches and work the first 16 rows of the chart.

If you want just a band of diamond seed as a border, you should then work Row 17 and work the balance of your project in plain stockinette.

But, if you want an overall diamond pattern, start over at Row 1 and repeat Rows 1 through 16 as often as needed. When your piece is the desired length, end with Row 17.

TEETHING

When your baby was born, he most likely smiled a gummy, all pink smile. But under those gums was a mouthful of developing primary teeth (20 to be exact) ready to erupt through the gums.

Teething usually begins somewhere between the sixth and eighth month starting with the two lower central ones. These are sometimes called "milk teeth". Your baby will be teething on and off for the next two years by which time all twenty of his primary teeth should be showing.

A baby may be irritable when teething. His gums are sore and swollen because the tooth is trying to push its way through. He may drool a lot because it hurts when he closes his jaws. And he will probably want to chew on hard things. Give him a teething ring, a hard biscuit, or one of those plastic affairs that you freeze so that it's hard and cold to baby's gums.

The action of biting is good, too, for his jaw development. Teething is natural. It does not cause any illness. If baby is extra uncomfortable, your dentist or physician can prescribe a medicine that numbs the gums.

Freeze Will Help

Once again tobacco growers have made a sacrifice to retain their controlled program. With the growers' blessings, a bill has been passed by Congress freezing tobacco price supports at last year's levels — blocking a scheduled increase of at least 10 cents a pound in the support price for domestic leaf.

This stopgap measure will clear the way for auctions to begin this summer while Congress again stages one of its all-encompassing studies of the over-all tobacco program.

Price supports, under the control program, are pegged to farmers' costs and are raised or lowered automatically unless action is taken such as the proposed freeze.

By putting the upward spiral of prices for domestic leaf on hold the farmers will lose money on their individual crops, but they hope it will save their share of the world market, where they have been competing against leaf grown at a much cheaper cost than ours.

The resulting surplus of domestic leaf has been stockpiled, increasing the costs of administering the tobacco price support program.

Perhaps, with the freeze on price supports, and a little more interest from the buying companies, the U.S. tobacco industry might survive — unless it is destroyed by Congress. It cannot be a time for optimism for tobacco growers.

Sad Day In Congress

It is another sad day for elected public service when two congressmen admit to sexual misconduct with teen-age pages.

The conduct has been noted by the House Ethics Committee, which recommended that the full House declare the actions a "serious breach" of duty. The two congressmen involved have expressed regret for their actions.

Congressmen, of course, have a right to some privacy in their lives and, if all aberrative behavior were brought to public attention with that being the sole criteria for service, many heads would roll, both in the public and private sector.

It has to be clear, however, that there should be no sexual activity between congressmen and the teen-age pages who go to Washington to learn about government. Teaching these young people about Washington sex is not a government official's duty.

Hopefully, the voters of these two congressmen's districts will reinforce this bitter lesson.

Not All Smiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s revival, using government help to climb from apparent near-bankruptcy to record profits, has put smiles on a lot of faces in both Detroit and Washington. But it hasn't quite converted all the foes of government "bailouts."

To be sure, backers of the government program — born in the Carter administration — are crowing. Some are even trying to hammer Chrysler's success into a political weapon against the Reagan administration, which is generally opposed to government intervention in private business.

But a sample of original friends and foes of the loan-guarantee plan finds most sticking to their philosophical guns while applauding the return to health of the nation's No. 3 automaker.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan sat cheerfully at the head table at a luncheon last week as Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca announced that the company was paying back the last of its $1.2 billion in government-guaranteed loans seven years early.

But Regan, who had been decidedly lukewarm about the program when he took his post in early 1981, stopped well short of endorsing the idea for other troubled companies. "We'd have to judge all of these things on themselves," he said.

Alexander Trowbridge, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said he didn't think it was "good public policy" for the government to go to great lengths to aid one company without provision for deciding whether others should be helped in similar ways.

Still, he said, that position "doesn't diminish our delight" in the revival of Chrysler, still an NAM member, which "confounded the critics" by returning relatively quickly to apparent health.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., was one of the main opponents of the loan-guarantee plan that Congress passed in late 1979. And a spokesman said he still felt the same.

What Chrysler did was fight for and win government agreement to guarantee up to $1.5 billion in loans from private lenders.

Chrysler officials said at the time that the company would almost surely go bankrupt without such help, and many critics said even the loan guarantees wouldn't stop Chrysler's drive to oblivion.

But the plan apparently worked, combining the government help with severe company cost-cutting, including employees' agreement to trim their own benefits.

"It was equality of sacrifice and not just a simple bailout," Iacocca said.

From 1979 through 1981, Chrysler lost a total of $3.27 billion. But the company posted record earnings of $172.1 million in the first quarter of this year, and analysts say that figure probably rose in the second quarter, with 1983 profits estimated at $700 million or so.

Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said Chrysler's loan-payback announcement was welcomed by those who believed "rational government assistance — with proper safeguards — can pay dividends for the American economy."

He also took a swipe at what he called "knee-jerk conservatives" who had opposed the plan. And similar political comments came from Walter Mondale, who was vice president when the plan was approved and who is now seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, a 13-year-old girl told her father that the most important thing her country could do would be to control nuclear weapons.

He told the country about it, and the cynics snickered. They said it was just like Jimmy Carter to talk about Amy's ideas in the middle of a climactic, nationally televised campaign debate with Ronald Reagan.

After all, they said, Carter was president of the United States and this was not a matter for teen-agers, it was serious business.

It still is, 3½ years later. But reactions have changed. Amy's comment to her RALEIGH — Much is being made these days about North Carolina's future as a microelectronics center. Gov. Jim Hunt and the Legislature have staked the state to almost $50 million worth of investment aimed at making the state one of the three or four American centers of the industry. If national magazine and news reports are to be believed, then they have probably succeeded in getting the state out front in the field.

But before the microelectronics industry is declared the cure-all for the high unemployment of the post-industrial economy, we might want to look at a pair of articles published in the past month. Both question — one on a state level, the other on the national level — the industry's ability to provide great numbers of new jobs.

In the July issue of "The Atlantic" magazine, economist Bob Kuttner reports that "job opportunities in the United States are polarizing, and that, as a result, the country's future as a middle-class society is in jeopardy." Kuttner contends that middle-class jobs are being lost in the economic reshuffling while the new jobs that are coming on line pay minimal wages to a great many people and high wages to a few highly skilled people.

Microelectronics, often seen as the industry of the future for the unemployed textile and auto workers, just will not create a great many new jobs, Kuttner says. He quotes Data Resources Inc., the corporate consulting firm that coincidentally helps prepare the state budget, as saying the industry will create one million new jobs in the next decade. Another forecaster projects the need for only 15,000 new skilled electronics technicians each year.

Kuttner says the microelectronics industry is simply too productive, too efficient, to create enough jobs to substantially reduce our unemployment rate.

Narrowing the focus to North Carolina, the "N.C. Independent," an aggressive statewide tabloid, cites several reasons why "computers can't save North Carolina."

Writer Julie Hairston says microelectronics can't seriously address the state's unemployment problem because 95 percent of our jobless are unskilled while two-thirds of the industry's workforce is skilled and semi-skilled. And, those companies which need unskilled labor tend to go abroad.

Those microelectronics companies which are coming to North Carolina, Ms. Hairston says, don't pay as well as the average industrial wage for the kinds of jobs that will be available. There'll be jobs for engineers and computer scientists, most certainly, but many of the positions will be filled by people transferred in from the company's out-of-state offices.

If and when microelectronics firms bring new jobs to the state, they'll mostly go to areas like the Triangle where unemployment is low.

Finally, the microelectronics industry, as shown by the financial troubles of giant Texas Instruments, is not recession-proof. Nor is the industry guaranteed a growth rate for the next 10 years that will rival that of the past decade.

This pessimism can be taken too far. Even if the industry doesn't create enough jobs to employ every job seeker, it can make a good dent in the unemployment rolls and contribute to an economic recovery. Even if most of the jobs are located in the Piedmont, that prosperity can spill over into other parts of the state.

But the two authors provide North Carolinians with a needed dose of skepticism. They're telling us that as we prepare to dive head-first into microelectronics, let's first make sure the water's deep enough.

Those Late-Night Phone Calls

this new George Orwell Frankenstein?

There is a solution. It takes patience and a little detective work, but this is how I recently got back at one of the obscene junk calls.

Instead of hanging up on the computer I listened to the entire message. The voice wanted me to subscribe to a magazine, at the sound of the beep, which would give me a chance to win $100,000 in their sweepstakes. I wrote down the name of the magazine.

The next day I bought it and looked up the name of the publisher. I then called the magazine's office and said I had a gift of flowers to send to the publisher's wife and wanted his home address. The secretary gave it to me and I found his telephone number in New Rochelle.

That night I waited until midnight and made my first call.

"Hi," I said in a bright voice. "This is the Axmo Muffler Company. We would like to give you a free estimate on our latest muffler, guaranteed for the life of your car. It is an opportunity you can't pass up...." The publisher hung up on me.

I waited a half hour and called back. "I'm sorry to disturb you but we're conducting a survey on zits for the Acne Institute. Do you have any relatives or friends in New Rochelle who have been afflicted by this disease? He hung up again.

Every half hour I made another call. I told him I was selling roofing by mail; I informed him that if he could name the first president of the United States he would get a case of dog food at cost; I inquired if he needed mulch for his grass; and if he was interested in Mexican tax-free bonds.

By four o'clock the man was a blithering idiot.

"Why are you doing this to me?" he cried.

"Because," I said, in my most obscene voice, "you're going to it us. Stop your junk call computer and I'll stop my telephone calls."

"I'll call the police!" he screamed.

"You may call them as soon as you hear the beep," I told him.

I could have sworn I heard the publisher crying at the other end of the line.

If you want to do the same thing, be my guest. And if you can't get the big shot who instigated a junk call at his home at night, keep calling him every hour at his office.

Since the government won't stop the obscene calls, the people must take justice into their own hands. It's time every free American shouted into his phone, "BEEP YOUR JUNK CALLS, I'M NOT GOING TO TAKE IT ANY MORE."

Strength For Today

About 1,700 years ago a Christian named Cyprian, leader of believers in the North African city of Carthage, wrote in a letter to his friend Donatus:

"Brigands on the high roads, pirates on the seas, in the amphitheaters men murdered to please applauding crowds — it is a bad world, Donatus, an incredibly bad world. Yet, in the midst of it, I have found a quiet and holy people who have discovered a joy much greater than any pleasure of this sinful life.

Samantha Sets Aside The Wisecracks

father was fodder for the stand-up comics of 1980. There are no wisecracks about the Soviet journey of Samantha Smith, 11, of Manchester, Maine.

She went at the invitation of Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, bearing a message quite similar to the one Amy Carter gave her father. "Hopefully, we will all have peace for the rest of our lives," Samantha wrote in a note she put into a bottle and tossed into the Black Sea.

In the campaign debate with Reagan, Carter said he wanted to put the nuclear question into perspective. "I had a discussion with my daughter Amy the other day before I came here, to ask her what the most important issue was," he said. "She said she thought nuclear weaponry. The control of nuclear arms."

It was grist for the cartoonists and comics. Not so when Andropov wrote Samantha.

Samantha said she was worried by accounts of the nuclear arms race, so she sent Andropov a letter, asking why he wanted to conquer the world or the United States, and whether "you're going to vote to have a war or not?"

Andropov replied that the Soviet Union is doing everything possible "so that there will be no war at all on earth...."

"Nobody in our vast and beautiful country — workers or peasants, writers or doctors, children or grown-ups or members of the government — wants war, be it big or small," he wrote. "We want peace. We have a lot to do: grow grain, build, invent, write books and make space flights."

The girl from Maine said the letter made Andropov seem like a grandfather.

That's not a description that likely would flow from President Reagan's comments on the nuclear fears of American children. "The most upsetting letters I receive are from schoolchildren who write me as a class assignment," Reagan said in a speech last Nov. 22.

"It's evident they've discussed the most nightmarish aspects of a nuclear holocaust in their classrooms. Their letters are often full of terror. Well, this should not be so."

Andropov invited Samantha and her parents to the Soviet Union for two weeks, at government expense. They went on the highly publicized journey this month, with departure and arrival statements and news conferences, and with Samantha asking the question that started it all.

"Why do we keep making bombs for a war if there's nobody to start it?"

It's a simple, sensible question. Her elders have yet to come up with a simple, sensible answer.

General Assembly Night Saturday

A special "General Assembly Night" is planned by East Carolina University Chancellor John M. Howell and the management of the East Carolina Summer Theatre for Saturday.

During the evening, visiting legislators will be dinner guests of Chancellor and Mrs. Howell at the chancellor's home, and the Howells will accompany the lawmakers to a performance of the Summer Theatre's updated version of the 1920's hit musical comedy, "No, No, Nanette."

"General Assembly Night gives us a chance to extend our appreciation to the legislators for their support of ECU in general and the Summer Theatre in particular," said Scott Parker, Summer Theatre General Manager.

"Their help, through the Department of Cultural Resources and North Carolina Theatre Arts grants, is very important to us."

Parker added that state funding to professional theatres has increased opportunities for North Carolinians to be employed as actors and technicians across the state. The East Carolina Summer Theatre, which includes a company of 100 persons, is one of 21 non-profit professional theatres in North Carolina, he said.

Bernstein Again Is Going Home

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — Composer Leonard Bernstein is going home again — in part to celebrate his 65th birthday but also to help a resident dash a claim that it's the worst place to live in the United States.

Ever since 1981, when "Places Rated Almanac" used government statistics to list the Lawrence-Haverhill area as the 277th best place to live in the U.S. — out of 277 entries — Laurence Frizzell has been trying to dispel the last-place notion.

Too Cold For Channel Swim

DOVER, ENGLAND (AP) —

A 66-year-old Winston-Salem, N.C., researcher gave up an attempt to swim the English Channel from Dover to France Sunday after 3 hours, 10 minutes because he found the water too cold.

Dr. Roy Morse had covered about 7 miles when he was taken from the water about 1 mile south of the South Goodwin light.

When Morse began at about 4:30 a.m., conditions were good with the water temperature about 61 degrees. But the wind turned and became fresh. As he got away from the shore the water temperature dropped and Morse's hands became numb.

"I hope to be back," said Morse, who left for home almost immediately.

Observers said Morse swam well but felt the cold and didn't take enough nourishment.

It was the first attempt for Morse who set out to be the oldest person to swim 26 miles across the channel.

Asks Plans For Space Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an apparent reversal of his previous stand, presidential science adviser George Keyworth has asked the nation's space agency to formulate plans for a manned space station.

In a speech delivered two weeks ago in Seattle and an interview in Science magazine, Keyworth indicated he no longer opposes the concept of a space station.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is preparing to seek between $60 million to $120 million for a space station as part of its 1985 budget.

Keyworth offered some encouragement about NASA's budget request, which will be made in September. "I think the country should take a major thrust in space very seriously."

Popularity Low

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's popularity dropped sharply last month, reaching one of its lowest points since his election in 1977, according to a survey published Sunday.

The Public Opinion Research Institute, which conducts a monthly poll of 1,200 Israelis, said Begin does remain ahead of all his rivals.

Crashing Bus Into Hillside Was Best Option, Asserts Passenger

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — The driver of a bus that careened down a mountain road and crashed, leaving two people dead and 33 injured, took the only option he had besides plunging into a steep gorge, a passenger said.

Dick Lockart, who organized the weekend trip of West Virginians to a bingo game on the Cherokee Indian reservation, said brake failure apparently caused Saturday's accident 10 miles east of Cherokee on Soco Mountain.

Lockhart, who suffered facial injuries and spoke through wired jaws Sunday, said the bus careened down the mountain road for about half a mile before bus driver Joe Gardner tried to stop it against the slope.

The alternative to sliding into the hillside, Lockhart said, was plunging over the opposite side of the roadway into a steep gorge. After the bus hit the hillside, he said, it flipped over into a ditch about five yards off the two-lane highway.

Lockhart praised Gardner for his efforts, saying he avoided several collisions with oncoming cars.

"The brakes appeared to fail and the bus kept gaining momentum, but he stayed right with it," Lockhart said. "The driver did an excellent job. It could have been much worse."

The dead were identified as Donald Lee Bolen, 43, and his wife, Julia E. Bolen, 46, of Huntington, W.Va.

Eight people were hospitalized after the 3:45 p.m. accident, and 25 were treated and released.

The members of the Mountaineer Bingo Club were headed for a $250,000 bingo game at the Cherokee Bingo Hall, officials said.

Police said the Bolens apparently panicked when the brakes failed and the vehicle went out of control.

Quincy Watty of the Cherokee Police Department said that, unlike others on the chartered bus, the Bolens got out of their seats when it was apparent the bus might wreck and walked toward the back.

The bus landed on its side

Baby Death Rate Rises

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The death rate for babies in North Carolina increased significantly last year after a three-year decrease, according to the state Department of Human Resources.

In 1982 1,240 North Carolina infants under age 1 died. That represents 13.7 deaths per 1,000 live births — the relationship normally used to compute the infant death rate.

The 1982 rate is higher by 0.5 than the 13.2 recorded during 1981. Dr. Earl Siegel, professor of maternal and child health at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said that marks a significant increase.

"It is a reversal of a trend. That would be of concern," said Siegel.

The last statewide increase was in 1978, when the rate jumped 0.8 to 16.6. It dropped in the next three years, from 15.2 in 1979 to 14.4 in 1980 and 13.2 in 1981.

Death rates for non-white infants have been higher than for whites, but racial breakdowns for 1982 were unavailable last week. Rates of premature delivery, another vital indicator, also were unavailable.

7:30 p.m. — Meeting

Jerry was born in Alabama and presently lives in Fayetteville, N.C. He married at a very young age, when he was 19 and his wife, Colleen, 15. During Jerry's 20 year career with the Air Force, Colleen suffered many problems. First thyroid cancer and later a birth defect was discovered in her kidneys. Her kidneys were deteriorating and unless a miracle occurred they would have been destroyed. Well, Praise God, miracles do happen.

Jerry, being blessed with a singing talent, has won many honors and participated in the Air Force's World Wide Talent Show. However, it was all for self glory. But now it's different. God has raised up an anointed music ministry in Jerry and his testimony is presented in song as well as sharing (Col. 3:16). The song "He Touched Me" creates a highly inspirational mood as Jerry sings and as Colleen shares in beautiful sign language. Hundreds have responded as the Holy Spirit moves to show people their lost condition and their need in these last days for a Living, Loving God. Their testimony supports the scriptural truth that God DOES confirm His word (Mark 16:20).

His testimony is one that glorifies Jesus for:
... His faithfulness in times of despair
... Victories over Satanic attacks on the family
... Confirming His word by miraculously healing Jerry's wife
Come and be blessed by Jerry's testimony and talented singing.

Count On Overseas Commodity Sales

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Many farm leaders, including Agriculture Secretary John Block, are banking on an expansion of U.S. overseas sales of commodities to revitalize the depressed rural economy.

"We really need to see that (export) market expand," admits Block. "And, really, I think we have problems if this market doesn't grow."

But the Agriculture Department's own economists say it's the problems, not the expansion, that can be expected.

"One fact has become increasingly clear in this year's efforts to revive the farm economy," says analyst Sally Byrne. "Exports won't lead the way."

The main reason, say Ms. Byrne and others in USDA's Economic Research Service, is that there's little chance for any major changes in the global conditions responsible for declining export sales since the peak of 1981.

"Throughout the 1970s and into the early 1980s, each year brought another U.S. export sales record as if there were no end to the world's appetite for the products of America's farms," the analysts said in a recent USDA review of the situation. "Little attention was given to concerns about America's increasing dependence on continued expansion in world demand."

But then a global recession took hold and foreign debt levels rose. The value of the U.S. dollar soared in relation to other currencies to make American commodities more expensive. Other nations, responding to either their own needs or the partial U.S. embargo against the Soviet Union, expanded their own production.

As a result, American farm exports this year will drop for the second straight year, falling to $34.5 billion. That's down $4.6 billion from last year and $9.5 billion from the record.

There are indications that the world economy is rebounding, the analysts acknowledge. But they quickly add, "None of the encouraging signs holds much promise for the immediate future."

"Many of the conditions responsible for the decline in U.S. agricultural exports will continue to depress trade totals, at least into next year," they say.

Early season projections, they say, indicate world grain production may be up 3 percent this year while credit remains fairly tight.

China, for example, is slashing its purchases this year, the analysts say, not because of its textile dispute with the United States but because of the recent good crops it has harvested itself in the drive to curb import needs. China probably will buy $800 million in U.S. farm goods this year compared with $2.2 billion just two years ago.

The Soviet Union, which found alternate grain suppliers during the embargo, is also harvesting a good crop this year and is reducing import needs to the lowest level in five years.

The overall situation has led to significantly reduced exports over the past winter and spring, and the analysts point out, "Given the less than optimistic outlook, the second half of this year isn't likely to make up for a very weak first half."

Link Smoking, Drugs, Alcohol

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Teen-age cigarette smokers are more likely to use drugs and alcohol than their non-smoking counterparts, according to a new U.S. government study.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse says smoking teen-agers use substantially more marijuana, alcohol and drugs such as cocaine, LSD and heroin.

Institute director Dr. William Pollin and assistant director R.T. Ravenholt, speaking at the Fifth World Conference on Smoking and Health, called cigarette smoking "probably one of the most serious as well as the most widespread form of addiction in the world."

Smoking is increasing suddenly among teens, especially teen-age girls, despite all the health education and anti-smoking campaigns, they said.

"Not only is cigarette smoking itself a most serious form of drug abuse, but because of its legal status and the general availability of cigarettes, cigarette smoking serves as a gateway to the use of other psychoactive drugs," they said.

A federally sponsored study shows that among smoking teens between the ages of 12 and 17, 49 percent use marijuana, 58 percent drink alcohol and 14 percent use cocaine, hallucinogens or heroin.

By contrast, among nonsmoking teens, 5 percent use marijuana, 22 percent use alcohol and 1 percent use cocaine, hallucinogens or heroin.

"While it is unlikely that these great differences in drug abuse by smokers and nonsmokers are mainly caused by cigarette smoking per se, smoking is usually the adolescent's first experience with a psychoactive drug," Pollin and Ravenholt said.

They said research has also shown a relationship between smoking and grades. One study said that among boys with D averages, 75 percent smoke; those with C's, about 50 percent; those with B's, about 30 percent; and those with top grades, substantially less than 25 percent.

The NIDA officials also reported an upturn in adolescent smoking in 1982 after eight years of decline. Similar results were reported elsewhere in the world and come despite declines in smoking among adults.

But in Norway, where all tobacco advertising was banned in 1975, teen-age smoking has declined sharply, Norwegian officials said.

BLAME THE HEAT

BERLIN, West Germany (AP) — Police say the intense summer heat may have been responsible for Saturday's explosion of a World War II bomb buried under a city street.

Farm Scene

Cattle are usually forgotten in the summer due to producers working in the field. There are a few management practices that should not go unattended even on hot summer days.

Those producers who calve in the fall and early winter should wean their calves in July/August. Weaning calves then will allow the cow some time to build up body reserves for her next calf. After weaning calves, vaccinate for Blackleg and Malignant Edema. This will not only make them eligible for graded sales but more attractive for buyers.

Fly control during the summer can be easily be taken care of in this age and time. Fly control methods include tags, dust and sprays.

Clip pastures as necessary. Seed heads are inedible and can cause irritation to the cattle's eyes. This irritation is believed to help cause pink-eye.

Re-implant calves now if you implanted in the spring. Implanting calves results in heavier calves at weaning, thus heavier calves to market.

For further beef cattle management tips call Miriam N. Lewis, 752-2934.

Coffee Production Increase Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Global coffee production over the next year is forecast at 95 million bags, up 16.6 percent from the past year's output, the Agriculture Department says.

Brazil, which accounts for nearly a third of all coffee production, could see its harvest jump more than 77 percent from the frost-damaged crop of a year ago to 31.5 million bags.

But USDA analysts say they will probably have to reduce that estimate after they can more accurately assess damage to key growers from heavy rains during May and June.

A bag weighs about 132.3 pounds.

The production increase has resulted in a slight downward trend in coffee prices, although they have remained fairly stable for more than a year.

The department said the price at the end of June stood at just under $1.24 a pound, according to a 15-day moving average. That compares with about $1.31 a pound at the beginning of the year. During the first half of 1982, the price averaged nearly $1.25 a pound.

"Once the threat of a mid-year frost in Brazil is largely past, coffee prices are likely to fall below the $1.20 composite indicator price per pound," the department said.

"Many producing countries are concerned that while the price they have received for coffee has remained relatively stable their costs have risen, thus reducing their returns," the report said.

The United States, which imports all its coffee, purchased a total of 10.5 million bags between last October and April. That's 800,000 more than during the same period a year earlier.

Plan Expedite Additive Okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning in mid-August, the Agriculture Department will expedite approval of meat and poultry additives that have already been cleared as safe by the Food and Drug Administration.

In the past, USDA had to conduct a lengthy administrative procedure before approving such additives despite their prior approval by FDA.

"The new rule takes into account that the FDA approval process, which must precede USDA approval, has frequently resolved all questions about the safety of an ingredient," said L.L. Gast of the Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"As a result, unnecessary delay and expense associated with USDA approvals can be eliminated," Gast said.

USDA could still delay approval if it determines there remain unanswered questions about an additive's safety.

Molasses Spilled Into Backyard By Ruptured Tank

STICKY PROBLEM — Molasses from a ruptured tank that held 150,000 gallons spreads in a sticky sheet over a quarter-mile area in Muskogee, Okla., Sunday. Officials of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad are investigating the cause of the rupture. (AP Laserphoto)

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A ruptured storage tank left Jack Sweden with one sticky problem: 150,000 gallons of gooey molasses that poured ankle-deep into his backyard, drew swarms of flies and left him "praying for rain."

The tar-like syrup has covered everything in its path, seeping into a storage shed and destroying an electric piano and an $800 set of drums. The stench is starting to get to his wife and five children, Sweden said Sunday.

"I don't know what we are going to do. It's even got under the house," Sweden said. "I'm thinking maybe I should run an ad in the paper — 'Anyone wanting tree syrup, it's free, just bring your own cup.'"

Molasses began accumulating in Sweden's yard in this eastern Oklahoma community Friday night when a 200,000-gallon storage tank ruptured along a nearby Missouri-Pacific Railroad line.

Tracks leading to a loading dock were dislodged 50 feet when the tank ruptured. Service along the line was expected to be disrupted for about four days, officials said.

David Quada, Missouri-Pacific trainmaster, said the cause of the spill was undetermined.

"It could have been lightning or some kind of an act of God," said E.C. Pepper, who leases the tank from the railroad. "I was around the tank earlier this week and it didn't show any signs of leakage."

Whatever the cause, the gallons of the sweet substance have attracted lots of insects to Sweden's backyard.

"The flies are getting pretty bad around here now," he said Sunday. "We've got three dogs, and they won't touch it. But my next-door neighbor, he's got a mule, and you should see him run over and get some of it. He really likes it."

Some of the liquid has flowed into a drainage ditch near Sweden's home — but not enough. Sweden said his yard will have to be dug up with a bulldozer to rid it of the molasses. A contract already has been signed to begin the cleanup, and his family plans to move elsewhere "for at least a week."

"They're gonna have to dig up about 10 inches, because the stuff is seeping real slow," Sweden said. "They'll have to put in new dirt and reseed. It's going to be expensive."

Sweden said he was waiting for his insurance agent to contact him to see about damages.

There's no immediate danger, since molasses "has no toxic properties," said Basil Myers, Oklahoma State University extension agent. The only problem is, "it's going to be a mess to clean up," he said.

"It's really nasty stuff," Sweden said, laughing. "Once you get it on you, you can't get it off. It's just like real good glue."

Say Kidnapping Report A Lie

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A woman who sent nearly 100 police, reserve officers and volunteers on a "real elaborate" search for a sickly infant cooked up the kidnapping story to spur a hunt for her stolen car, authorities said.

Searchers combed Charlotte on Saturday night and Sunday morning, looking for a 4-month-old daughter of Mariette Cunningham, said Capt. Roy Atwell. The car was found about 8 p.m. Sunday, but authorities have concluded the baby never existed, Atwell said.

Ms. Cunningham, 30, of Charlotte, was charged Sunday night with making a false report to police, a misdemeanor, and bond was set at $500.

The woman had reported the theft at about 11 p.m. Saturday, said Officer M.I. Casey. He said Sunday she later admitted "that she thought saying a small, sick child was in the car would help get quicker recovery of the vehicle," Casey said.

Police called off the search for the car Sunday morning after learning Ms. Cunningham had no children.

Ms. Cunningham initially told police she was driving her daughter to a hospital because the infant was having trouble breathing. Police quoted her as saying that a man of about 20 slipped behind the wheel and drove away as Ms. Cunningham paid for a purchase at a service station.

"I'm not going to say we turned every corner in this city because that's impossible," said Atwell. "But we went through a real elaborate search looking for that car."

During the search, police appealed to the thief to take the child to a hospital or to leave the infant somewhere, then call authorities and reveal the location.

Teamsters May Challenge Result

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Nearly four years ago Teamsters Local 391 of Greensboro went into the Hanes Dye and Finishing Co. plant in Winston-Salem with a 204-161 vote.

Now union officials must decide by Thursday to decide whether to challenge a 250-121 vote by workers at the plant last Wednesday to end union affiliation.

Jimmie C. Hines, a Hanes Dye vice president, said conditions at the plant are better because management and employees are "just working together today."

"I think we've learned a lot these last few years," he said.

But R.W. Brown, the Teamsters' business agent for the Hanes Dye contract, said he was confused by the change in employees' support of the union.

"It makes you wonder," he said. "They ask for your help, but when it comes time for them to stand up and be counted, they're not there."

He said union pressure forced the company to improve conditions, including a new lunchroom, pay raises, additional holidays and cleaner restrooms.

Details of the campaign leading up to the vote have been turned over to union lawyers, who will decide whether the union should challenge the vote, Brown said.

Hanes Dye filed objections to the August 1979 vote to unionize and managed to delay National Labor Relations Board certification of the election for nearly three years through court appeals.

The union eventually put a

Hanes contract offer to a vote last fall. Although the workers approved it overwhelmingly, the union negotiating committee wouldn't endorse the offer.

That contract expires at the end of this month, and the company exercised its right to ask the NLRB for an election to decertify the union as bargaining agent at the contract's expiration.

Brown noted that Hanes workers had paid union dues for only six months because of a Teamsters policy of assessing dues only when a contract is in effect.

Deficit Concern For Greenspan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential economic adviser Alan Greenspan says he is concerned that efforts to reduce the federal budget deficit won't be made before the spring of 1985.

"I'm quite uncomfortable that we have to sit here for the next year-and-a-half with expectations of very large federal deficits," Greenspan said Sunday during an appearance on the NBC television show "Meet the Press."

Despite the deficits, Greenspan, chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, said "inflation has almost no chance of accelerating in the next year."

But Greenspan warned that huge deficits could cause an eventual return of inflation.

"PERDUE TAKES A CHICKEN SERIOUSLY"

"As Controller of the Roanoke Electric Co-Op, I've invested a lot of our members' money over the years. And I've learned that when you make an investment of any kind, you should check it out. And believe me, I checked out Perdue very carefully before building my broiler house. I called banks and exchange clubs in both Maryland and North Carolina, toured Perdue's facilities, talked to growers...I thoroughly researched the company and every report that I got was very favorable."

Perdue understands the importance of keeping up with technology. I don't think they're the only ones who do, but they are certainly more progressive than most poultry companies. So when they suggest that we growers make an improvement, you can bet it's going to pay off for us. After all, any company that's been in the business for 62 years and has made a profit every year must know what they're doing.

Besides my position with the electric co-op and my Perdue house, I also grow corn, tobacco and peanuts. And the best crop I have is my Perdue chickens. For almost eight years I've enjoyed a good steady income from my broiler house. And with uncertainties in other commodities and row crop farming, I would recommend Perdue as a basic steady income for anybody who wants to remain in a rural area and remain in farming. I know I'll spend a pleasant retirement in the country, thanks to my Perdue chickens."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below, and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 95 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 49.97 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate to short for a good demand. Weights light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,771,000, compared to 1,727,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today, extending its month-long slide amid continued apprehension over rising interest rates.

More than three stocks fell in price for every one that rose in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 12.02 points Friday, dropped another 7.01 points to 1,185.30 at noon. The blue-chip average has been falling since it reached a record 1,248.30 on June 16.

Interest rates were little changed today, but have been creeping higher since early May, raising concern that the economic recovery will cool off.

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed last week that it adopted a slightly more restrictive policy in May in response to rapid growth of the basic money supply, known as M1. But the Fed's minutes also showed the central bank's policy makers were sharply divided.

After the close of trading Friday, the Fed reported a $5.8 billion spurt in M1 in the first week of July, keeping that money supply measure well above the upper limits of the central bank's anti-inflation growth targets.

Analysts said traders are awaiting testimony later this week by Fed Chairman Paul Volcker for further clues on monetary policy and the course of interest rates.

The NYSE composite index fell .51 to 94.77. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.00 to 238.61.

Big Board volume reached 29.74 million shares a third of the way through the session, compared with 27.21 million in the same period Friday.

General Electric topped the active list on the NYSE, down ½ at 50½.

mites, a tiny organism that sucks the plant sap.

"Spider mites proliferate in dry weather and can be a real problem in vegetable gardens and on peanuts and soybeans," the farm agent said. "To check for spider mites, take a white sheet of paper, place it underneath some leaves and shake the leaves onto the paper. If they are present, the spider mites will show up very well on the paper once they've been dislodged." Anyone who has a question about spider mites and how to treat them should contact Uzzell at the Agricultural Extension Office, 752-2934.

"Heat and drought like this limits any of the operations going on in the farm and makes the tobacco harvesting more dangerous for those who are working," Uzzell noted.

He said the eastern half of the county is in "much worse shape" than the western half because of the sandy soil.

Skunked On A Birthday

CHICAGO (AP) — Last year, John Matar complained his brother Sam's birthday gift to him "stunk." So this year Sam made sure it did.

John, who recently turned 43, came home from his job as a plant supervisor to find his front yard fenced in and 100 skunks nibbling on the shrubbery.

Sam, the younger brother who is an automobile dealer in Carmel, Calif., had left this note on the fence:

"John: You complained that last year's present stunk. How about these stinkers!!! Happy Birthday, Sam."

But Sam had done the de-scent thing. The skunks, brought in last Thursday from a Moran, Mich., pet farm, had been deodorized.

Last year Sam sent John 50 shaggy, smelly goats.

The brothers have been trying to outdo each other on their birthdays ever since Sam sent John 25 birthday cards 12 years ago.

In other years he has given John a load of manure that neighbors shoveled onto their lawns, a herd of cattle, an elephant and a 4,000-pound pet rock.

Last year, John paid Sam back by filling his brother's car showroom with tons of junk.

"He thinks he really got me with these skunks," John said. "Wait until Feb. 7."

That's Sam's birthday.

Plague Victim Is 'Doing Well'

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A 15-year-old plague victim "is doing very well," but it is unclear how she contracted a form of the disease not normally spread from one person to another, officials said.

The girl, whose name was not released, is the 15th person to contract plague in New Mexico this year, Dr. Harry Hull, a state medical epidemiologist, said Sunday.

Pitt Group At Rescue School

DURHAM — At least 15 Pitt County residents attended the North Carolina Rescue College sponsored by the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Service Division at the Durham Public Safety Training Academy here Saturday and Sunday.

The Pitt residents, from the Eastern Pines and Ayden Rescue Squads and the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, were among 465 students enrolled in the 22nd annual rescue school, which began in Greenville in 1961.

Less than 100 students attended the first session in Greenville, but enrollment grew to the point the school moved to Raleigh in 1965 where larger facilities were available. The rescue college was later expanded to two weekends to accommodate the growing student body and in 1979 the school moved to Durham, where still larger and more modern training facilities were available.

Three former members of the old Greenville Rescue Squad were among the 25 instructors on hand to help the first and second year students learn skills such as rescue from heights, casualty handling, and the proper use of fire extinguishers, hand tools and ladders. They included Harold Ross, Pitt County road maintenance supervisor for the Department of Transportation; Stuart Savage, staff writer for The Daily Reflector; and Wilburn Small, an instructor with the N.C. Department of Insurance.

Between 200 and 300 third and fourth year students are expected to attend the July 23 and 24 rescue college session. Among instructors for the second weekend will be Small, Savage and Joe Burris, a former Greenville rescue member who is now a shift supervisor and training officer for the Catawba County EMS System.

Hope Identify Body In Neuse

NEW BERN — The decomposed body of a woman was found at mid-day Saturday in a station wagon submerged in the Neuse River at a point in Craven County near the Pitt-Craven County lines.

The investigator of the case, Sgt. J.C. Woolard of the Craven County Sheriff's department, said, "The vehicle was discovered by two fishermen at Maple Cypress Landing in the western end of Craven County. The fishermen saw the top of the vehicle which was exposed due to the low tide water in the river at that time."

Woolard said the body, which was "in a state of decomposition, has been taken to Chapel Hill for an autopsy in an effort to determine the cause of death and to establish identification."

Woolard mentioned that an effort is being made to determine if the body of the woman is connected with a missing persons report from Pitt County, where a man and wife were reported missing on January 12 this year. "We cannot be certain if there is a tie-in until identification of the body is made," Woolard added. "So far, searches have not been able to find a second body, a man's body, in the river in the area."

The Neuse River forms the Pitt-Craven boundary for a distance of about two miles north of N.C. 55 between Fort Barnwell in Craven County and Kinston about five miles southeast of Grifton.

Cites Abuses

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A Catholic church pastor says government security forces and right-wing death squads have killed more than 2,500 people so far this year.

The homily by the Rev. Jesus Delgado Sunday was one of the church's strongest denunciations of human rights abuses in several months. He said it was more difficult to obtain statistics on atrocities by leftwing guerrillas, but said available figures showed they had killed 43.

"Only corpses and shell-shocked survivors will be left to obey the country's new constitution," he said. Delgado did not give figures for soldiers and leftists killed in battle.

No Hazard In Nuke Accident

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Radiation released at a nuclear weapons plant posed "no health hazard to the public and there is no need for off-site protective action," a government spokesman says.

The accidental release Saturday night of 56,000 curies of tritium from the Department of Energy's Savannah River plant will give humans a dose of radiation equivalent to the exposure received on a 30-minute jet flight at 36,000 feet, said Cliff Webb, DOE deputy director of external affairs, on Sunday.

Hebert Passes Panthers To USFL Title

DENVER (AP) — The comparisons are inevitable and when they are made, the United States Football League's Nameless Bowl will have nothing to be ashamed of, thanks to Bobby Hebert and Anthony Carter, a passing battery that decided not to wait for the National Football League.

Together, they led the Michigan Panthers to the first USFL championship, a 24-22 victory over Philadelphia Sunday night that made the summertime Super Bowl a memorable first time around for the new league.

Hebert was the game's most valuable player, hitting 20 of 39 passes for 314 yards and three touchdowns. Nine of his passes were caught by Carter, who gained 179 yards, 48 of them on a touchdown with 3:01 to play that choked off a familiar-looking comeback by the Stars.

Philadelphia had overcome a three-touchdown deficit in the final 12 minutes to force an overtime and beat Chicago in the semifinal a week ago. So when the Stars shaved a 17-3 Michigan lead to three points in the fourth quarter Sunday, there was concern on the Michigan bench.

"We knew what they had done to Chicago," said Coach Jim Stanley. "We knew what they were capable of doing."

Hebert wasn't about to wring his hands over the Stars' recovery. Instead, he took the Panthers to midfield and then called an out route for Carter, who had been burning the Stars all night. He also warned his team in the huddle to stay alert for a change of play.

"I told them to get ready for an audible, that they would probably come with a free safety blitz," he said.

When Scott Woerner made his move out of the Stars' secondary, the Panthers were prepared. Hebert called his audible and Carter ran downfield, sprinting into the clear.

"I was wide open," he said. "It was still an out route with the audible and it was there."

Carter, the speedster out of Michigan who wears uniform No. 1 and would almost certainly have been a high NFL draft pick had he waited for the older league, took it for the TD. The cushion allowed the Panthers to surrender a final drive Philadelphia touchdown without harm.

"I am No. 1 and the team is No. 1," Carter exulted. "There is nothing better than that."

"When AC scored, I couldn't explain how I felt," said Hebert. "I was so happy, I almost choked up and cried."

Three weeks ago, Hebert cried tears of anguish when his college coaches at Northwestern Louisiana State called to inform him of the drowning death of ex-college teammate Joe Delaney, the Kansas City Chiefs' running back. This time, the tears that came in the dressing room were joyful ones.

Hebert had been the catalyst for a remarkable recovery by the Panthers. They started the first USFL season in reverse, losing four of their first five games. And their Cajun quarterback had been sacked 15 times.

"People had written us off, but we knew we were a better team and we had to go out and prove it," he said.

The Panthers did, winning 12 of their final 14 games as Hebert emerged as the league's top-rated passer. One of the losses, however, was against Philadelphia, which fashioned a 15-3 record, best in the league.

The game started cautiously, much the way many Super Bowls have begun. Novo Bojovic of Michigan, who kicks with a clove of garlic in his shoe, and Philadelphia's David Trout, the league's leading scorer, traded field goals. Then, with seven minutes left in the first half, Hebert and Carter connected on completions of 27, 12 and 13 yards.

Then Hebert changed targets, pitching a 12-yarder to a wide open Derek Holloway for the game's first touchdown. Like the last one to Carter, the play was an audible.

"They tried to blitz us," Hebert said. "We expected them to and I think we were pretty effective against it most of the game."

The 10-3 lead ballooned to 14 points on the first possession of the second half. Hebert took the Panthers 80 yards in 15 plays — two of them 13-yard passes to Carter sandwiched around a 28-yard gain on a short pitch to running back Ken Lacy. Michigan scored when Holloway caught a 14-yarder.

Now the Stars started back. Kelvin Bryant, who rushed for a game-high 89 yards, gained 22 of them on a broken play, and Chuck Fusina hit Scott Fitzkee for 20 and 17 yards in a drive to the Michigan 17. But Trout missed a 34-yard field goal.

That did not deter the Stars. Before the period was over, they were on the 5-yard line following a 44-yard option pass from Allen Harvin to Rodney Parker. Philadelphia started the fourth quarter with a third and goal from the 5 but John Coker, who led the league with 28½ sacks, trapped Fusina for a six-yard loss and the Stars had to settle for a 28-yard field goal by Trout.

"We should have scored a touchdown on that series, instead of coming away with just a field goal," Fusina said.

Two plays later, Mike Lush intercepted an Hebert pass and Philadelphia charged downfield. Willie Collier kept the drive moving, catching a fourth-down pass and was leveled on the play. He was carried off the field by teammates, so imagine Michigan's surprise when, three plays later, he made a diving catch of Fusina's 21-yard pass for a touchdown. Then he grabbed a two-point conversion pass and suddenly the Stars were only a field goal behind with almost nine minutes to play.

"I really thought we would do it," said Fusina.

Philadelphia got the ball back with 6:09 to play but the Panthers weren't giving ground this time. They forced the Stars to punt and on their next possession, Hebert and Carter hooked up on the clinching TD.

As time ran out, a number of fans in the crowd of 50,906 (46,535 paid) spilled on the field at Mile High Stadium and tried to tear down the goal posts. Denver police used mace to quell the disturbance. Twelve persons were arrested and two others were treated for minor injuries and released.

Meanwhile, Michigan celebrated its first football championship since 1957 when the Detroit Lions won the NFL crown behind Tobin Rote. Stanley and his Panthers recognized the significance of the victory.

"It's one of the greatest feelings ever," he said. "We have a bunch of men who would not say no. I'll tell you this. I could fly back to Detroit without an air plane. I feel like I'm three miles above sea level."

Snow Hill Evens Legion Tourney

SNOW HILL — Anthony Russo cracked a three-run homer and a triple to lead Snow Hill to a 9-6 victory over Rocky Mount Saturday in the American Legion District Tournament, but Rocky Mount retaliated with a 6-5 win Sunday to even the series at 2-2.

The championship will be decided tonight at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill.

William Davis picked up the win on the mound for Snow Hill Saturday with ninth-inning relief by Mike Sullivan.

Jeff Ginn, Greg Frederick and Tommy Goff each had two hits for Snow Hill, while Billy Godwin was 3-5 and Danny Isbell 2-5 for Rocky Mount.

After jumping to a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first, Bobby Carraway reached first on an error and Davis walked before Russo's triple cleared the bases. Russo scored on a single by Frederick.

Wade Corbett led off the second with a single, Carraway walked and Davis reached first on a throwing error of a sacrifice attempt to fill the bases. Nat Norris popped a sacrifice to drive in Corbett, and Russo followed with his round-tripper for a 9-0 advantage.

Eddie Naylor ripped a two-run homer in the eighth and Marshall White added a solo shot in the ninth for Rocky Mount.

In Sunday's contest, Godwin scored from third on an error of a grounder at third to even the series. Eddie Naylor went the distance on the mound for Rocky Mount allowing just six hits.

Norris walked in the ninth, took second on an error by the catcher, moved to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a wild pitch to give Snow Hill a 5-4 edge.

Neil Avent walked to open the bottom half of the frame and took second when Ginn threw from a full wind-up. Godwin doubled in Avent before scoring the winning run.

Eddie Goins rapped two hits in three trips to the plate for Rocky Mount, while Godwin and White went 2-4. Carraway went 2-4 and Ginn 2-5 for Snow Hill.

Rocky Mount led 4-2 after four innings, but Snow Hill rallied to tie the score with a pair in the top of the fifth. Russo drew a base on balls and scored on a two-base error on a single to right by Ginn. A sacrifice fly by Frederick drove in Ginn for a 4-4 score.

Dye Sets Sights On NCAA Title

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala. (AP) — Coach Pat Dye, whose Auburn Tigers went 9-3 including a victory over Boston College in the Tangerine Bowl last season, said Sunday that he is shooting for better things this fall.

"Our goal is to win the national championship," said Dye, who coached East Carolina University from 1974 to 1979.

He said at a news conference that this is a realistic goal with the material he has returning, despite what he called the toughest schedule in the Southeastern Conference.

"We want to be considered in that group of top teams in the country," Dye said. "There's very little difference among the athletes in the top four or five teams, with good players at every position. We feel like we have good players at virtually every spot."

Dye said he also strongly favors college football going to a 12-game schedule.

"There are too many advantages not to consider it," he said. "The season already is 14 weeks long, so it would not extend the time involved."

Dye also said an extra game would give schools more flexibility in arranging future schedules, and in the SEC, it would make it easier for each of the 10 teams to play each other.

"That's the only way to have a true conference champion," he said. "I would like for everybody in the SEC to go out there and play each other and see who's best."

He also said that an extra game would generate more interest and revenue. "And the players would like it. I never saw a player who didn't like to play. A lot of them don't like to practice, but they all like to play."

Spectator Arrests Follow Title Game

DENVER (AP) — Twelve spectators, about half of them from Michigan, were arrested Sunday night after fans stormed the field following the Michigan Panthers' 24-22 United States Football League championship game victory over Philadelphia.

Police said they had to use Mace when the fans became too unruly and attempted to tear down the goalposts. Two fans were reported injured. Both were treated for minor injuries and did not require hospitalization.

In the final seconds, even as quarterback Chuck Fusina of the Stars was throwing the game's final touchdown pass, hundreds of fans swarmed onto the Mile High Stadium turf.

They left the field until the game's final play, the two-point conversion, then spilled back onto it, charged the goalposts and attempted to tear them down.

Watson Joins Elite Group With Fifth Win

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — After Tom Watson had been presented with the British Open golf trophy for the fifth time, he was handed a telegram.

It was from Peter Thomson, one-time Australian great. It said: "Delighted and thrilled to welcome you to the five times club."

That reminded the golfers and tournament officials raising champagne glasses in the Royal Birkdale clubhouse that Watson had truly joined the immortals. Only four other golfers have ever been British Open champion five times — old-timers J.H. Taylor, Harry Vardon and James Braid back in the 1890s and the early years of this century, and Thomson between 1954 and 1965.

"What a way to end a dry spell," said

Watson, who had not won a tournament since last year's British Open at Troon.

His other victories were at Carnoustie in 1975, Turnberry in 1977 and Muirfield in 1980.

A record 142,894 attended the tournament. Some 30,000 watched a thrilling dog-fight between a dozen tightly-packed players in Sunday's final round.

Nobody could guess the winner until Watson came up the 18th fairway and hit a majestic iron shot from light rough into the middle of the green.

"It was probably the best iron shot of my life," Watson said.

The shot left him with two putts to spare for the title and he could not miss.

Watson finished with a four-round total of 275 — 9-under-par for the 6,968-yard, par 71 seaside links.

Hale Irwin and Andy Bean were one stroke back, tied for second place. Graham Marsh was at 277, Lee Trevino 278, Seve Ballesteros and Harold Henning 279 and Nick Faldo, Bill Rogers, Christy O'Connor Jr. and Britain's Denis Durnan bracketed at 280.

Other contenders like Craig Stadler, Mark McNulty and Fuzzy Zoeller faded in the excitement of the day's firing.

"Looking at the names on the leader board, and the way everybody was playing, it looked like a play-off all the way," Watson said.

At one stage he was tied with Marsh, Irwin and Bean.

Marsh, eight strokes behind Watson when the round began, surged with seven birdies between the 5th and 17th holes.

The Australian went to the clubhouse as co-leader and waited while his rivals played the home nine. And that where Watson took a stride ahead of the rest.

At the 16th he canned a putt from 20 feet for a birdie three.

"It was my best putt of the tournament," Watson said. "It just hit the middle of the hole."

Watson and Stadler were the last pair home. Watson drove into light rough, of the kind that had plagued many golfers these last few days.

The hole was 212 yards away. Watson took a 2-iron and planted the ball to 18 feet from the pin.

He had two putts to sink the ball and retain the title.

"I concentrated on getting the first one near to the cup," Watson said.

Then he knocked it in from a few inches.

The tournament was played in a heat wave and was packed with drama and dazzling golf.

Rogers shot a double eagle on the 542-yard 15th hole on the first day, holing with an iron from 228 yards.

Durnan, a little known English club professional, played the first nine in 6-under-par 28 on the second day and set an all-time record for the British Open, which was first played in 1860.

Rodger Davis of Australia hit a hole-in-one.

Stadler, the 1982 Masters champion, set a course record 64 in the first round and led the field going into the last day. His hopes began to disappear when he bogeyed the first two holes Sunday.

At the clubhouse celebrations, when the cheering had died away and Thomson's telegram was read out, they sang "For he's a jolly good fellow."

But this time it was not for Watson. The Jolly Good Fellow was Keith Mackenzie, retiring after 16 years as secretary of the Royal and Ancient Club, which runs the tournament. Watson proposed a toast to him and led the singing.

"Keith has made this tournament the great world class event it is," Watson said.

Watson won a first prize of $60,000 and said he would now prepare for a shot at next month's PGA championship — the one major he has never won.

Streak Helps Pirates Take Over Third In NL East

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates went to the West Coast with high hopes and a fresh outlook and returned home with a big winning streak and a new position in the National League East.

"I knew we had the potential to get back in it. There are four, really five teams that are starting the whole season over now," said Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve, who escaped from a bases-loaded, one-out threat in the bottom of the ninth inning as Pittsburgh topped the San Diego Padres 4-3 Sunday.

The victory extended the Pirates' winning streak to seven games and enabled them, to conclude their West Coast road swing with a 9-1 mark.

And that, in turn, left the Pirates in third place in the NL East, just one game behind Philadelphia and St. Louis.

"Our division is so even," Tekulve said. "It's almost mandatory that the winner in the NL East have a good West Coast trip."

In other NL games, Cincinnati topped Philadelphia 5-2, Montreal beat Atlanta 3-1, Chicago routed Los Angeles 10-0, San Francisco downed St. Louis 3-1 and New York defeated Houston 3-1.

Jason Thompson's RBI single and two-run homer, his 13th, drove in Pittsburgh's first three runs against Eric Show, 9-6. Rookie Marvell Wynne then singled home a sixth-inning run to put the Pirates ahead 4-3.

Starter Lee Tunnell, 4-3, went five innings and Tekulve was brought in to relieve Manny Sarmiento with Tim Flannery on second and one out in the ninth.

Pinch hitter Kurt Bevacqua singled Flannery to third and took second on the throw home. Alan Wiggins was then intentionally walked before Tekulve earned his 10th save by getting Juan Bonilla to hit into a forceout at the plate and Steve Garvey to ground out to third.

"The three days off for the All-Star break got us refreshed mentally," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. "The mental part is the most important part of this game."

"We're in good position," Tanner said. "We picked up six games on this road trip, and now we play something like 32 of our next 42 games at home."

San Diego Manager Dick Williams groused about missed opportunities during the Pirates' four-game sweep of his team.

"We lost all four, but we were in all of them," he said. "We just couldn't get the big hit when we needed it."

Reds 5, Phillies 2

Johnny Bench, playing his last game in Philadelphia, drilled a three-run pinch-homer in the seventh inning to give the Reds a 4-2 lead.

Cincinnati's Frank Pastore, 4-8, pitched a two-hitter, allowing Bo Diaz's ninth homer in the second inning and Mike Schmidt's 18th in the fifth.

Eddie Milner hit the first pitch of the game from Kevin Gross, 2-1, for his fourth homer.

After Bench's two-out homer, his eighth, Nick Esasky gave the Reds an insurance run by connecting for his fifth homer in the ninth.

Dan Driessen continued his hot hitting for Cincinnati with two hits in four at-bats. He has gone 16-for-29 while hitting in eight straight games.

Expos 3, Braves 1

Montreal right-hander Greg Bargar made an impressive major-league debut to help the Expos end their six-game losing streak.

Bargar allowed five hits over seven innings to get the victory, which snapped Atlanta's four-game winning streak.

Jeff Reardon came in to start the eighth but ran into trouble in the bottom of the ninth. His error and two walks loaded the bases, and he then walked Dale Murphy with two outs to force in a run. But Reardon then got Bob Horner on a short fly ball for his 14th save.

Andre Dawson's two-run homer, his 19th, gave Montreal a 2-0 lead in the fourth.

Cubs 10, Dodgers 0

Dickie Noles pitched a seven-hitter and singled in two runs during the Chicago rout.

Noles, 3-5, struck out seven and walked two in winning his first game in three starts since serving a day in a Cincinnati jail for assaulting a policeman.

Jody Davis drove in three runs with three hits and Bill Buckner belted his 12th homer, singled twice and stole two bases.

Bob Welch, 7-9, gave up five runs in five innings before 44,852 in Los Angeles.

Giants 3, Cardinals 1

Bill Laskey, making his 20th start of the season, scattered seven hits for his first complete game of the season.

Laskey, 11-8, struck out six and walked two.

Milt May slugged his fifth home run of the season to give homestanding San Francisco a 1-0 lead in the second inning and then delivered an RBI single in the fourth to snap a tie.

Jeff Leonard hit his 10th homer in sixth as San Francisco won for just the sixth time in 18 games.

St. Louis scored its run in the top of the fourth as Darrell Porter's infield popup fell for a double and Andy Van Slyke followed with an RBI single.

Mets 3, Astros 1

In Houston, Darryl Strawberry, who struck out on three pitches against Nolan Ryan his first time up, lined a two-run triple in the fourth inning to carry New York.

Ryan, 9-2, had his eight-game winning streak halted despite regaining the all-time strikeout lead.

Ryan gave up four hits in six innings and fanned five, raising his career total to 3,583. It was the sixth time Ryan has the lead in the knockout duel with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton.

Walt Terrell, 2-4, went six innings and gave up four hits to help end Houston's five-game winning streak. Jesse Orosco went the final three innings for his ninth save.

Mears' Hesitation Allows Paul To Capture Michigan 500 Flag

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — John Paul Jr. had lost his self confidence.

The young road-racing star was down. And, when he found himself in Victory Circle after Sunday's crash-marred Michigan 500, Paul had trouble putting his first Indy-car victory in perspective.

"It just hasn't sunk in yet," said the 23-year-old former national sports car champion, who won in only his fourth Indy-car start. "It's pretty monumental, pretty dramatic. I never expected to be competitive here."

Paul, who started ninth in the 33-car field, reeled in Penske teammates Al Unser and Rick Mears after coming out of the pits third following the last of 11 caution flags in the 500-miler at Michigan International Speedway.

Mears passed Unser, the eventual second-place finisher and the leader in the CART-PPG Indy-Car World Series, 22 laps from the end. Paul, driving a Cosworth-powered Penske PC-10, followed suit three laps later.

He then stayed close behind Mears' Penske PC-11 until the leaders entered the backstretch on the last lap around the 2-mile, high-banked oval.

At that point, Mears came upon another Indy-car rookie, Chris Kneifel. The two-time defending national champion hesitated for an instant before going around Kneifel on the inside.

"I saw him hesitate for just a second and then move," Paul said. "I followed him down to the inside and then got to the bottom of the track and went past Rick."

As Paul sped through the last two turns toward the victory, worth $90,776 for the team of Belgian Count Rudy van der Stratten, Mears suddenly lost control and slammed into the wall in turn 4. Kneifel's car then struck Mears' Penske.

While Paul was accepting the accolades of the crowd of more than 65,000 for his unexpected victory, Mears was being taken by ambulance to an Ann Arbor hospital where he was kept overnight for a possible concussion and Kneifel was released from a Jackson hospital after an examination and X-rays.

In an earlier incident, defending champion Gordon Johncock suffered a broken right ankle and kneecap as well as cuts and bruises on his legs, when something broke in the rear end of his March as he raced through the third turn.

As Johncock spun wildly, a March driven by Kevin Cogan slammed into him and carried both cars into the wall. Rookie Pat Bedard, breaking hard to avoid the accident, spun into Indianapolis 500 winner Tom Sneva.

None of the other drivers was injured, but their cars were eliminated and Sneva's hopes of winning the second jewel of Indy-car racing's Triple Crown and the possibility of going for the $1-million prize for sweeping the three races were ended.

There were no other serious accidents or injuries in the marathon race that began about two hours late because of an intense rainstorm.

The storm was bad enough that the stands, only about one-third full at the time, were evacuated by track safety personnel. A fiberglass and wood sun canopy from the roof of the grandstand blew into the stands and injured several people walking down to safety, none of them seriously.

Also during the rainstorm, an elderly woman, who companions said recently underwent open-heart surgery, was stricken by a heart attack and later died at a Jackson hospital.

The race was very competitive, with 28 lead changes among 11 drivers. Paul led three times for 66 laps, but didn't get up front until the 147th of 250 trips around the fast Michigan oval.

Despite 92 laps under the caution flag, Paul averaged 134.862 mph. But the victory was such a surprise to the tall, dark-haired driver that he didn't even know he'd won when the checkered flag was waved at him.

"After the last caution flag, Phil (crew chief Phil Casey) said he thought I was about fifth. After I passed Al and Rick I knew I'd done pretty well, but I didn't realize I was the winner. I had to ask my pit crew (during the cool-off lap) where I finished."

Baywood Racquet Club defeated Greenville Tennis Association 5-1 in a Roanoke League Tennis match Sunday at Baywood.

Earnhardt Takes Busch Victory Over Waltrip

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The king of the short tracks isn't exactly dead, but Dale Earnhardt proved that the rest of NASCAR's drivers are starting to catch up with Darrell Waltrip.

Earnhardt guided his Bud Moore-prepared Ford to a one-half lap victory over Waltrip's Chevrolet in Saturday night's Busch 420 at Nashville International Speedway. In the process, Earnhardt snapped Waltrip's four-race win streak at NIR and broke a personal string of 39 consecutive Grand National starts without a victory.

Earnhardt had last entered the winner's circle in 1982 at the TransSouth 500 at Darlington, S.C., while Waltrip last tasted defeat on his home track in the 1981 Cracker Barrel 420. Waltrip was beaten in that race by Benny Parsons, who also was driving a Moore-prepared Ford.

"I knew he'd (Waltrip) be the one to beat," said Earnhardt, who averaged 85.726 mph around the .596-mile oval. "Darrell was a little off, but he was still the one to beat. It's always hard to beat Darrell on the short tracks, but there are a lot of guys that are tough to beat."

"This year we changed our car around to run on the bottom of the track. We didn't run too hard at first. We wanted to save the car for the end of the race and it just kept getting better and better,"

Hankins Wins ECTC 35s Title

MURFREESBORO — Second-seeded Wes Hankins upset top-seeded Nelson Staton 6-3, 6-1 as the Greenville pair battled for the 35-and-over men's singles title of the Eastern Carolina Tennis Classic this weekend.

In the mixed doubles, Staton and Jean McDaniel of Murfreesboro topped Hankins and Betty Bogard of Greenville 6-4, 6-3 for the title. Staton and McDaniel defeated Tom and Ann Sayetta of Greenville 7-5, 7-6 in the semifinals.

Cooper Leading Brewers Back Into Race

By The Associated Press
Cecil Cooper is a player who can carry a team, and right now the Milwaukee Brewers are riding his bat.

"Cooper is going absolutely crazy," says Milwaukee pitcher Jim Slaton. "That helps a lot."

The resurgent Brewers have won 16 of their last 20 games to climb back into the American League East race, thanks to Cooper's eight home runs in that stretch. He hit two of them Sunday, driving in four runs, to key a 10-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"I feel very comfortable right now," said Cooper, who gradually has raised his batting average to .290 after a slow start. "I don't know if it's a coincidence that when I get hot the team gets hot, but I feel I can make a contribution."

In other AL action, it was New York 8, Texas 6; Oakland 13, Boston 9; Baltimore 11, California 1; Kansas City 7, Cleveland 2; Chicago 3, Toronto 2 and Detroit 8, Seattle 1.

Cooper's first two-run homer of the game keyed a three-run sixth that gave the Brewers an 8-4 lead. The Milwaukee outfielder slugged another two-run shot in the eighth, his 20th homer of the year, for the Brewers' final runs.

Cooper's second homer landed under the scoreboard behind the right-center field bullpen in Milwaukee's County Stadium, a good 450 feet from home plate.

"I was going for home runs the last two times up," he said. "The last one was as good as I can hit a ball."

The Brewers picked up a game on first place Toronto and are 4½ games behind the Blue Jays in the American League East.

"They're going to win it again," Twins Manager Billy Gardner said of the Brewers. "They've got the best all-around team in their division, and they won it last year."

Jim Gantner and Paul Molitor also slugged homers for the Brewers. Chuck Porter, 2-4, who pitched the first six innings, was the winner with relief help from Slaton.

Yankees 8, Rangers 6

In New York, Rick Cerone's run-scoring single snapped a sixth-inning tie and Dave Winfield drove in three runs with a double and single as New York defeated Texas, handing the American League West-leading Rangers their ninth loss in 11 games.

Odell Jones, 3-4, walked pinch hitter Steve Kemp to open the sixth and then hit Don Baylor with a pitch. One out later, Cerone singled to score Kemp.

George Wright had a three-run homer and Wayne Tolleson also knocked in three runs for the Rangers, including a two-run single that tied the game 6-6 in the top of the sixth.

A's 13, Red Sox 9

In Boston, Jeff Burroughs drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning as Oakland outlasted the Red Sox in a three-hour, 34-minute marathon. The A's were outlived 17-15 by the Red Sox, but capitalized on 11 walks, two Boston errors and seven stolen bases to split a four-game series.

Oakland, which fell behind 9-8 on a three-run Boston seventh keyed by Carl Yastrzemski's 44th lifetime homer, rebounded against reliever Mark Clear, 3-3, with Burroughs' base hit the big blow.

Orioles 11, Angels 1

In Baltimore, Jim Dwyer stroked four hits, including three doubles, and drove in four runs as the Orioles walloped California behind the four-hit pitching of Allan Ramirez.

Cal Ripken Jr., Rich Dauer and Gary Roenicke drove in two runs apiece for the Orioles, who have won seven of their last eight games.

Ramirez, 3-0, hurled his first complete game in his fourth major league start, striking out three and walking two. He lost a shutout when Bobby Grich hit his ninth homer leading off the fifth.

Royals 7, Indians 2

In Cleveland, Amos Otis drove home two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning, leading Kansas City over the Indians.

With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, the Royals loaded the bases against reliever Dan Spillner, 1-6. Hal McRae's sacrifice fly broke the tie, and after Willie Aikens walked to reload the bases, Otis singled home two runs. Frank White followed with an RBI single to finish the scoring.

White Sox 3, Blue Jays 2

In Chicago, Harold Baines and Carlton Fisk blasted home runs in support of Floyd Bannister's two-hit pitching in seven innings to lead the White Sox over Toronto.

Baines hit his sixth homer off loser Doyle Alexander, 0-3, in the second inning and Fisk hit his 14th to lead off the third. The White Sox scored what proved to be the winning run in the fifth when Fisk singled with one out, took third on a single by Greg Walker and came home on a passed ball by catcher Buck Martinez.

Bannister, 5-9, didn't allow a hit until Garth Iorg tripled to open the seventh. Iorg scored as Barry Bonnell grounded out and Cliff Johnson followed with his 16th homer.

Tigers 8, Mariners 1

In Seattle, Tom Brookens' two-run double and Enos Cabell's two-run single keyed Detroit's seven-run 10th inning as the Tigers defeated the Mariners.

Reliever Bill Caudill, 2-6, walked the bases loaded in the 10th, then reliever Ed Vande Berg gave up Brookens' two-run double.

After the Tigers reloaded the bases, Cabell followed with his two-run single, chasing Vande Berg. Whitaker made it 6-1 when he beat shortstop Spike Owens' throw home on Larry Herndon's grounder off reliever Mike Stanton, and doubles by Lance Parrish and John Grubb finished the scoring.

Dorsett Wants Dallas Cocaine Investigation Resolved Soon

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Tony Dorsett says he hopes a federal cocaine investigation in which his name surfaced will be resolved soon.

Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys' All-Pro running back, spoke openly for the first time Sunday, saying he wasn't guilty of cocaine usage and wishes the federal government would file charges if they have any evidence.

"It becomes frustrating and you wonder why, why are they doing these things," Dorsett told reporters upon his arrival at training camp. "If you want to sling the mud, sling the mud. Let's get it over with ... I'm not guilty of anything."

Dorsett said he was interviewed by federal agents a year ago in training camp and noted "I will do that again if they want."

Cowboy President Tex Schramm has confirmed that federal agents are reviewing information linking Dorsett, defensive end Harvey Martin, defensive end Larry Bethea, fullback Ron Springs and receiver Tony Hill with possible cocaine use. No charges have been filed.

"I mean to be honest, I have not been formally arrested or charged," Dorsett said. "Maybe this is one of the trials and tribulations that the Lord is going to put me through."

Springs and Hill both said they didn't want to discuss the federal investigation upon their arrival in camp.

"I don't know anything about it," said Springs.

Asked if he wanted to answer questions, Hill said "No, I don't."

Martin and Bethea were scheduled to arrive in camp Thursday.

Asked why he thought the players might be a target for a federal investigation, Dorsett said "My thinking is that there are some people who have been arrested and are possibly plea bargaining for themselves ... just throw out some names of some highly visible people and making things a little tough for ourselves for while."

"At this particular time I don't know what the motive is or what they're looking for. All I know is it is not good for me."

Asked if he was personally involved with cocaine, Dorsett replied "No. Not at all."

Dorsett said companies he endorses have been in touch wanting more information about the situation.

"They (the companies) are concerned about it," Dorsett said. "I don't blame them for that. We are still under contract at this point with some pretty good companies. Hopefully they will understand the situation."

Dorsett added "enough damage has been done to my career as it is."

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ983 ♥84 ♠74 ♠K652
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's cue-bid in clubs shows a maximum two no trump opening bid with good trump support. Therefore, you need not be ashamed of your hand. Since you have no first-round control to cue-bid, bid five clubs to show the king in that suit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠J ♠K8753 ♠Q103 ♠9872
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♠ Double Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to take any action at all, there is something about takeout doubles you don't understand. Had partner wanted to hear your best suit, he would have doubled one spade! Now he is making a penalty double of two spades and, since your hand includes a trump honor he thinks the enemy holds, you have an excellent hand for him. Pass.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠987532 ♥J6 ♠AK107 ♠A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You cannot be sure how useful your hand will be to partner, but you do know that you have at least an eight-card spade fit, and your hand should produce more tricks in a spade contract than at no trump. Jump to four spades. That is a shut-out bid — had you wanted to investigate another contract, you had a wide choice of forcing bids available.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♥AK9 ♠Q10762 ♠AK83
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?

A.—Although you probably have the best hand at the table, there is no action you can take that is not fraught with danger. An overall of one no trump asks for trouble if partner is weak; two diamonds is 1400 territory; and a double could lead to an unmanageable auction. Pass, and see what develops.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK10954 ♥93 ♠6 ♠AKJ3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You are too strong to just rebid two spades. Indeed, spades may not even be the right spot, which is why we dislike a jump to three spades. A bid of two clubs is most flexible. If partner passes, you are probably in the right spot. And if he does anything else, you can rebid spades to show a 6-4 distribution and a good hand.

Tricks Of The Trade In Commercials

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One fries its burgers, the other broils them, but the differences between McDonald's and Burger King go much further, extending even to their marketing strategies on television commercials.

All year long, but particularly during the summer-rerun doldrums, it can be more interesting to watch the ads than the shows. A show's sponsor says a lot about that program's demographic audience and, in turn, the time, day and season of the commercial says a lot about an advertiser's sales strategy.

For example, you can't turn on the TV Friday night or Saturday morning without seeing McDonald's "golden arches" and its Eagle-scout types singing and dancing the praises of Big Macs. "If you haven't seen a McDonald's commercial early in the weekend, you haven't been watching," says David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research.

The McDonald's goal is to bombard kids with visions of burgers and fries just before the family outing to the shopping mall.

Burger King takes a different road. Its commercials aren't on Saturday morning's cornucopia of kiddie shows. "Our campaign is targeted to adults," says Richard Kostyra, senior vice president, media director for the J. Walter Thompson ad agency. "We decided over a year ago that we couldn't compete on all fronts, so we don't have a children's campaign."

Burger King and its Whopper are romanticized in commercials by equally fresh-faced salespeople, but the message is designed to impress adults. Do you think a kid looking for a fast-food fix is concerned with the results of Burger King's broiling-vs.-frying survey?

When Burger King launched this campaign, it flooded Sunday night TV with commercials in every half hour on all three networks. Dubbed "Super Sunday" by J. Walter Thompson, the goal was to focus on what is historically the most-watched TV night.

In 1982, Nielsen's research showed that an average of 100.9 million people watched Sunday night TV, compared to 91.6 million on Monday, 90.4 million on Tuesday, 89.7 million on Wednesday, 88.8 million on Thursday, 87.3 million on Saturday and 86.3 million on Friday.

This is one reason why the introduction of new car models used to come Sunday nights on "Bonanza." Another reason was that the car dealers were home on Sunday to see the commercials.

The nature of the car business has changed, though, and its major TV campaigns now coincide with peak buying seasons — in the spring and fall, when, incidentally, the male National Football League fan is a captive audience.

The summer product pushes are obvious. There's frosty beer, cool soft drinks and sexy sun-tan lotions. In the winter, you'll see more cold remedies. One ad executive requesting anonymity said he attended a meeting that greeted the news of a flu epidemic in Boston with cheers.

Vitamins, on the other hand, don't have major sales fluctuations. "The key is getting them off the shelf and onto the breakfast table," says the ad exec. "The target there is morning radio to remind momma."

Then there are the seasons within the seasons, gift-giving time: before Mother's Day (perfumes), Father's Day (alcohol) and Christmas (video games). Hallmark sponsors a mushy family movie before Christmas and Valentine's Day to hype its cards. Camera and film ads abound pre-Christmas, summertime and before Easter Sunday, "the biggest single picture-taking day of the year," says the ad exec.

If Americans love holidays, they also love TV weddings. "Any product that has emotion, like cameras, tries to get as close to the wedding scene as possible," says the ad exec. "You're buying ambience."

In contrast, advertisers on the nightly newscasts — often the bearers of bad news — are buying audiences, specifically older folks with reality on their minds and elsewhere.

On a typical night, sponsors for the "CBS Evening News" include an arthritis aspirin, a headache remedy and ointment for hemorrhoids.

Crooner Cashes In On Big Band Swing

By JEFF WILSON

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Big Band sounds of the '40s seem to be enjoying a resurgence of popularity with ballrooms featuring swing music, millions of swing LP's being sold and even luxury "sentimental journey" cruises to Hawaii.

Larry Elgart's "Hooked on Swing" album has sold more than two million copies through K-Tel's television marketing method and the

S.S. Constitution and S.S. Independence are offering summertime cruises between Hawaii and the West Coast with Les Brown, Myron Floren and Lawrence Welk show stars providing entertainment.

The trend is just what crooner Mike Slappey, 33, has been waiting for.

He's been pacing in the wings with an album for years, convinced the Big Band resurgence would come. And he's filling ballrooms with his smooth Frank Sinatra-like sound, backed with a full-piece orchestra.

"The middle-aged people and younger people show up," the clean-cut, tuxedoed performer says. "The Big Band sound is on the upswing. I waited like a cobra for it to come back. This is the kind of music that is really music."

It was Sinatra's music, and Bobby Darin's, that inspired him.

"I loved Sinatra and Darin," he says. "I had to once write a composition in school saying 'I will not sing Mack the Knife 2,000 times.'"

"But Sinatra was my guiding light. I was in awe of his fancy suits, his cockiness and his expertise with the women. I liked that. I wanted that kind of life."

Slappey was brought up in Jacksonville, Fla., on "the outskirts, where it was real hickey."

"I knew I would never be able to launch a professional singing career there, so I came to Hollywood in 1974 and became a Century 21 real estate agent. I was infatuated with the beach girls and all the California lifestyle."

"But I realized my ultimate dream was to be a big singing star. The way I got into show business was through an old girlfriend. We had broken up and I was following her when I took a break and went to eat at a pizza parlor."

"I saw a sign advertising $25 for the winner of a talent show, so I came back the next week and knocked 'em dead and won the prize. That was it. I went full throated into the showcases and the nightclubs. Now I've got a 41-piece orchestra and play for vast audiences."

Slappey just headlined an SRO crowd at the Hollywood Palladium, and in July, he's featured at the Coconut Grove.

"The public gets to dance and see a quality Las Vegas-style show with a full orchestra," he says. "The popularity is gaining more and more momentum."

"I am very busy now because of the album and the trend toward Big Band sounds. Of course, the dancing part is a big part of it."

"Two types of people show up — those who have heard of me and those who haven't heard me. The ones who haven't heard of me might be coming only to dance, but they become new fans afterward."

"I was waiting for this dance era to return. I calculated it and waiting for nine years for this to come. I knew when punk music came out they couldn't go any lower, and that the trend would reverse itself."

Boston Has A Song, Too

BOSTON (AP) — San Francisco has one, New York has a few, and even Kalamazoo, Mich., and Luckenbach, Texas, have songs in their honor. Now, says songwriter Les Harvey, it's Boston's turn.

Mayor Kevin White and "a lot of other citizens have always bemoaned the fact that Boston doesn't have a beautiful, romantic song," said Harvey, a Worcester resident. "Boston is a beautiful and romantic city and I really felt it deserved a romantic song."

"Now," he said, "it has one."

The ballad, appropriately titled "In Boston Town," tells the story of "cobblestoned old Beacon Street, little pubs where lovers meet," where "rainy days are salty sweet." It was produced on the "In Boston Town" label, and sung by local musicians mainly from the Berklee School of Music.

After two years of writing the song's words and music, the 57-year-old Harvey says he is confident he has a hit in the making.

"It's going to be one of the biggest tunes in the country," he predicted. "It will become more popular than 'Old Cape Cod' and 'I Left My Heart in San Francisco.'"

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠732 ♥84 ♠AKQ74 ♠KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—This is simply a matter of addition. Partner has shown a balanced 19-20 points and you have 14 and a good five-card suit. To bid less than six no trump would be criminal negligence.

Abby Road Is Now Open

LONDON (AP) — The Abbey Road recording studio in London, used by the Beatles at the height of their fame, opens its doors to the public today for the first time.

Fans not only will get a look at the studio but — for a $6.80 admission fee — will view Beatles film clips and listen to recordings which the rock group never released.

Electric and Musical Industries, an entertainment giant which owns the facilities in north London, is opening Studio Two through Sept. 11 for three shows a day, seven days a week.

The studio has been fitted out with the original equipment used by the Beatles, whose first hit recorded there was "Love Me Do." They later immortalized the studio complex with an album named "Abbey Road."

"We expect to see visitors from all over the world," said studio manager Ken Townsend, a former sound engineer with the group.

"People kept writing and telephoning, saying 'Can we come to Abbey Road and look at the studios,' so we decided to help them out," he told a reporter.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-18

RTFYLEY LE TFWLEYLFA ME M RHLWW
ETHATMFY.

Saturday's Cryptquip — WOULD SOME PAINTERS IN COLD APARTMENTS PUT ON TWO COATS?

Today's Cryptquip clue: L equals I.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opine 'Too Soon' For Black Bid

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — It's still too soon for a black to run for governor of North Carolina despite the Rev. Jesse Jackson's possible presidential bid, civil rights leaders say.

Jackson met with members of the N.C. Black Leadership Caucus over the weekend. "If you run, you might lose," he said. "But if you don't run, you certainly will lose."

Some caucus members said in interviews that while there are blacks capable of running state government, a majority of North Carolina voters might not be ready to vote for a black.

"I don't think a coalition can be put together," said Rex Harris, a Fayetteville businessman. "If the Democrats were to nominate a black candidate, it would assure a Republican governor."

"I certainly think there are blacks who are qualified," added Mecklenburg County commissioner Bob Walton, president of the N.C. Association of Minority Public Officials. "But it takes more than qualifications. It takes timing, energy, organization."

FOCUSThe Birth of Women's Rights

This week marks the anniversary of the birth of the women's rights movement in Seneca Falls, New York, where the first women's suffrage convention was held in 1848. That meeting was led by Elizabeth Cady Stanton. She was a staunch abolitionist, but, when she traveled to the World Anti-Slavery Convention in London in 1840, she was denied admission because she was a woman. Knowing that women had an important part to play in world affairs, she joined with Susan B. Anthony to form the National Women's Suffrage Association. She died in 1902 without ever having cast a legal vote, and it was not until 1920 that the 19th Amendment to the Constitution guaranteed women's the suffrage.

DO YOU KNOW—Who was the first woman elected to Congress?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER—Hawaii receives more rain than any other state.

Legislative Conference Committees Are Growing

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some of the most controversial issues during the 1983 legislative session — a $219.2 million tax package and a rewrite of the state's laws on drunken driving — were resolved in conference committees.

With the end of the session in sight, the list of conference committees is growing instead of dwindling. But opinions differ about why that's happening.

A conference committee will meet today to discuss a Senate version of a House bill that would raise the sales tax by one-half cent and give the money to local governments for public schools and water and sewer projects.

A lengthy rewrite of the state's health laws is bogged down in a conference committee because House and Senate negotiators can't agree whether to repeal a law that prohibits state hazardous waste laws from being more stringent than the federal government's regulations.

As soon as that issue is resolved, a conference committee may get a bill to regulate hazardous waste disposal.

The Senate has heavily rewritten a House bill on hazardous waste landfills. Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, whose committee rewrote the bill, said he'll put the measure before the Senate when the debate over the health laws is resolved.

Lawing's committee also rewrote a House bill aimed at helping charities get more of the proceeds from bingo games operated by professional groups. Lawing acknowledged on the Senate floor last week that he expects the matter to be resolved in conference committee.

Much of the work by the conference committees is done behind closed doors, when the House or Senate negotiators meet to discuss strategy and where they're willing to compromise. By the time the public is admitted, much of the conflict has been resolved.

Several legislative leaders have been appointed repeatedly to conference committees.

"It leaves the rest of us out," said Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba. "We (Republicans) haven't been involved in any conference committees."

But Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, disagreed.

"It is ultimately resolved on the floor," Adams said. "If the conference has done some outrage, the body can reject it.... The power ultimately rests in the hands of the people on the floor."

Those who have been appointed repeatedly are:

— Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, to the general tax, sales tax and drunken driving committees. Quinn is chairman of the Finance Committee.

— Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, to the general tax, sales tax and drunken driving committees. Watkins is chairman of the Expansion Budget Committee.

— Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, to the general tax and drunken driving committees. Adams is chairman of the Base Budget Committee.

— Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, to the sales tax and drunken driving committees.

— Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, to the general tax and sales tax committees. Rauch is co-chairman of the Finance Committee.

— Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, to the general tax and sales tax committees. Duncan is co-chairman of the Finance Committee.

— Sen. Robert Warren, D-Johnston, to the sales tax and drunken driving committees.

— Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, to the general tax and drunken driving committees. Royall is Senate majority leader.

— Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, to the general tax and drunken driving committees. Harrington is co-chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Some members believe there have been more conference committees this session because of a lack of co-operation between the House and Senate and some say a lack of guidance from the administration.

"There doesn't seem to be a concerted effort by the leadership of the House and Senate to work together," Ballenger said.

"We are strictly flying by the seat of our pants. There is absolutely no direction from the governor on anything... It seems like we can't get an agreement unless somebody across the street calls," Ballenger said.

"It is practice in politics to believe in the art of compromise," said Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, Senate chairman of the drunken driving conference committee. "But this time a lot more people are saying this is my position. You either like it or you don't like it."

As for guidance, Barnes said that, "when we asked for light we got heat."

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, speculated that the lack of money is one cause for the dissension.

"When a family has a lot of money the children don't fuss with each other," he said.

Traditionally conference committee reports are accepted by the full House and Senate with little debate. In the House, that has been accomplished partly by a rule that requires a majority of the conference committee support the House position.

"Members accept the conference committee report without a great deal of questions," Barnes said. "It puts a great deal of power in the hands of the conferees."

Lawmakers' Pay Termed Paltry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina lawmakers' salaries are considered paltry by today's standards, but the pension plan they approved for themselves last week is better than many private business plans, observers say.

"They are giving themselves a benefit that is certainly comparable to the best of the private plans," said Seymour LaRock of Charles D. Spencer and Associates of Chicago, an employee benefit plan information service.

The pension plan calls for paying legislators who serve four two-year terms 4 percent of their highest salary for one year multiplied by the number of years they held office.

Rep. Gus Economos, D-Mecklenburg, for example, would receive $3,053 per year if he were to retire after his fifth term expires in 1986. That's because the highest salary he's received is $7,632 and four percent of that amount multiplied by the number of years he's served — 10 — equals $3,053.

Most legislators now receive the same amount as Economos — $7,632. Because the General Assembly pays its members as part-time workers, the typical lawmaker receives about $3.67 an hour for a 40-hour work week.

While the General Assembly is in session, legislators generally put in more than 40 hours a week, but sessions seldom last longer than six months in odd-numbered years and one month in even-numbered years.

At the 1985 salary level, members with 20 years' service could collect $5,724 a year in retirement benefits.

Legislators who don't join when first elected may buy their way into the plan later by paying 7 percent of their highest salary for each year served.

The Legislature's retirement plan has better benefits than many plans in private business, but members must contribute 7 percent of their annual salaries to participate.

However, LaRock said those benefits are not reduced by the amounts received in Social Security payments, as is the case for most private plans. Most private plans are entirely employer-paid, with no contributions from employees.

Even after deducting the amounts they'll contribute while serving, most lawmakers will net more than most employees of private businesses, LaRock said.

"That's on a par with the most generous plan for highly compensated private-pay employees," he said.

During their last five years of work, employees at Duke Power Co. get retirement benefits equal to 2 percent of their average salaries. Southern Bell's current retirement plan for management employees is 1.6 percent of their average salaries earned between Oct. 1, 1976, and Sept. 30, 1981, plus the total earned from Oct. 1, 1981, until they retire.

he would like to see it become part-time. He said he would welcome a 50 percent cut in pay, to about $20,000 a year.

"My feeling is the office has gotten too large and cumbersome," Stewart said. "We should take a serious look at whether the lieutenant governor should continue to be a member of the executive branch and at the same time be the presiding officer of the Senate."

"The lieutenant governor should not be paid more than the speaker of the house," said Stewart, who is the only person to serve two terms as House Speaker. "They have comparable duties."

Stewart said he would make public education and public transportation platforms of his 1984 campaign.

"There are a number of recurring issues in state government," he said. "Public education and public transportation are two (of the most repeated) items because they are the costliest."

Stewart, who lost a 1980 bid for the lieutenant governor's post to incumbent Jimmy Green, said he is confident of winning the post with Green stepping down. Green is expected to run for governor in 1984.

"I was running against an incumbent (in 1980) and still almost won," he said. "I have a strong base of support already out there that I can build on."

Stewart Favors Succession Bill

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Former state House Speaker Carl J. Stewart, expected to run for lieutenant governor in 1984, says he agrees with Gov. Jim Hunt that the second in command should be able to succeed himself.

"Four years is a very short time in political history to accomplish one's programs," Stewart said Saturday at an Asheville fundraiser. "As a fundamental principle, they should be able to succeed themselves at least one term."

The succession issue was revived Friday when Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, introduced a bill to eliminate it and tried to ensure its consideration in 1984.

Stewart, a Democrat, has

he would like to see it become part-time. He said he would welcome a 50 percent cut in pay, to about $20,000 a year.

Cross-Burning Not All By The Kluxers

By The Associated Press
Black leaders are expressing concern over an upsurge in cross burnings in North Carolina and over increasing activity by the Ku Klux Klan, says Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

He said both the burnings and increased KKK activity were sparked by "the pressures of modern-day life and the anxieties on the part of people who are jobless and feel they have to strike out at people."

Ira Gissen, director of the North Carolina and Virginia office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, a Jewish organization, agreed. The Klan counts Jews among its enemies as well as blacks.

"When you can't put meat and potatoes on the table, it is easy to get angry," he said. "Some people look for scapegoats."

Last November and December, seven crosses were set afire in Alexander County. And since November about six crosses have been burned in neighboring Iredell County.

"I can't recall half a dozen in the past 10 years before that in the county," said Lt. Guy L. Griffin of the Iredell County Sheriff's Department.

Edmisten's office said 14 cross burnings were reported in 1982 and six more this year — some of which were accompanied by threatening phone calls and the sounds of gunshots.
