House Now Moving Toward MX Decision

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid strong lobbying by President Reagan and opposition groups, the House was moving today toward deciding whether to give its go-ahead for production of MX missiles.

And across the Capitol, the Senate was being asked to vote its endorsement of a presidential commission's report that called for placing the strategic nuclear weapons in silos now housing Minuteman 3 missiles.

A motion by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., to choke off debate awaited a vote Thursday.

Both sides in the House lobbying fight said the margin of victory or defeat for the MX in the House vote was expected to be razor-thin, with perhaps fewer than a dozen members making the difference.

The president, who took part in the lobbying effort Tuesday, was expected to make several telephone calls to members of the House today. "We view it as extremely close," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

Reagan and other administration officials on Tuesday telephoned representatives considered susceptible to being influenced, and the president sent all members of Congress a letter saying the MX is a "lever that is working ... to keep the Soviets moving at the negotiation tables" and must proceed.

Reagan also used a speech at a ceremony Tuesday marking "Captive Nations Week" to drive home his message.

"In terms of speaking to the world with one bipartisan voice, of standing up for U.S. vital interests and of strengthening America's agenda for peace, no question matters more for this country in 1983," he contended.

But House opponents, aided by allies in disarmament, church and environmental groups, were targeting Democrats who helped provide the 245-176 majority in a May vote that provided money for flight-testing the missile.

Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., a leader in the effort to deny Reagan the $2.4 billion he wants to buy the first 27 MX "Peacekeepers," said there has been erosion among Democrats who have fresh doubts about the sincerity of the president's commitment to get an arms-control treaty with the Soviets.

Mavroules said these doubts were fed by an Air Force planning document that envisioned deploying more than the 100 MXs recommended by the presidential commission and embraced by Reagan.

Opponents in both the House and Senate have hammered on the theme that because the Minuteman silos are believed vulnerable to destruction in a Soviet attack, the MXs would have to be fired simply upon warning that the Soviet missiles were on their way.

This would destroy the stability of the current nuclear "balance of terror" and heighten chances of a nuclear war by mistake, they contend.

Reagan and other MX advocates contend it is the Soviet advantage in land-based missiles that is causing instability.

In the Senate, members had before them today an amendment that endorses the findings of the presidential commission, headed by retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft.

Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, proposed to add the endorsement Tuesday to a $200 billion defense bill containing MX funds as a means of testing the Senate's sentiment toward the MX.

Tower, R-Texas, acted after Sen. Gary Hart, in the eighth day of debate on the bill, continued to hang back from offering his amendments to place conditions on the MX program or kill it outright.

Tower and other Republicans have accused Hart, D-Colo., of using delaying tactics so that the House would vote on the MX before the Senate, where support for the missile is much stronger. Hart contends he has just been trying to accommodate senators with amendments on other subjects.

Trying to force the issue, Majority Leader Baker late Tuesday filed a petition for cloture, a legislative device that, if approved by 60 of the 100 senators Thursday, would limit further debate on the bill to 100 hours.

In the only amendment passed Tuesday, the Senate approved, 47-46, a compromise measure by Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., that would permit the Education Department to assume control of overseas military-dependent schools from the Pentagon after May 4, 1986 only if the president or Congress determined that the switch would not be harmful.

An effort by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., to shift $125 million from other programs to space-based laser weapons was killed, 65-27.

Hospital Bd. Adopts $85 Million Budget

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees approved an $85 million budget Tuesday night for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The budget projects no room rate increase for the first time in the hospital's history.

Final approval must be made by the Pitt County Commissioners.

Hospital President Jack Richardson said the "conservative approach in our financial plan for the coming year" reflects that "we are facing an uncertain future in the hospital industry due to a new reimbursement system for Medicare patients and the current leveling in patient days."

The budget reflects a projected increase in patient revenues of 9.5 percent. Richardson said the expected increase is due in part to the increased intensity of care being provided at Pitt Memorial.

Total operating expenses are projected at $69 million, a 9.7 percent increase over the current year. Expansion plans for laboratory services and the upcoming cardiac surgery program account for $2.3 million in increased expenses.

Salary costs will increase 6.9 percent from $34 to $36.6 million. The continuing development of a computer information system at the hospital will cost an additional $328,889.

The hospital has set aside $3.4 million for capital equipment purchases during the year.

The prospective reimbursement system alluded to by Richardson allows the federal government to pay a fixed amount for each type of patient treatment. The rate the hospital will receive for providing patient care is set in advance and patients are classified in diagnosis-related groups. The system is scheduled to be implemented Oct. 1, coinciding with the beginning of the fiscal year. He said the hospital has received no full documentation on what the fixed amounts for the various DRGs will be. "This puts us at somewhat of a disadvantage in planning our budget," he said.

Richardson said, for the first time, the hospital is forecasting no substantial growth in utilization of patient beds. "We are expecting an increase of 5.8 percent for a total of 165,000 patient days," he said. "Activity in the current year has shown a plateau from the recent growth trend since the move to the new facility in 1977. However, we are in transition toward more secondary and tertiary patient care services, which will impact on increased costs of operations."

In other action the board:

•Approved the establishment of a new non-profit corporation to be named East Carolina Health Services Inc. to handle support services to physicians and hospitals in eastern North Carolina. A first effort, it was pointed out, may be to provide a laboratory to some hospitals and physicians in the area. The board of directors of the corporation will be four members of the hospital board of trustees, one member of the county commissioners, the dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, and the chief executive officer of the hospital.

•Approved capital equipment requests of $93,457 for a stationary film file for radiology at $12,157; an echo (Please turn to Page 24)

'Greenpeace' Is Planning Apply Soviet Pressure

By TIM KLASS
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — The Greenpeace Foundation says it will "pressure the Russians" to release seven anti-whaling protesters who were seized by Soviet authorities after they photographed a Siberian operation where whale meat is reportedly fed to minks.

Luis Barreto, a crew member from the Greenpeace Foundation ship Rainbow Warrior said Tuesday the seven could be released within a week.

"We intend to pressure the Russians on a worldwide scale," he said. "They're setting themselves up for a lot of political pressure that they don't need. They've got a thousand issues much bigger, in their eyes, than this."

Six of the protesters were arrested after they spent about an hour distributing leaflets and photographing the Siberian operation, Barreto said, and another was seized by a military helicopter as he tried to flee in an inflatable motorboat.

Officials at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and the State Department in Washington, D.C., said they have received confirmation from the Soviet Foreign Ministry only "that something has occurred" and that seven Greenpeace members have been detained.

The whereabouts of the seven, including U.S. Greenpeace director Chris Cook, 35, of Washington, D.C., remained unknown.

Greenpeace strategy originally called for a return to the Bering Sea and a confrontation with the Soviet whaling fleet.

But Capt. Peter Willcox, who maneuvered the Rainbow Warrior through a tricky confrontation with Soviet vessels, said in Nome, Alaska, Tuesday he didn't want to head back into Soviet territory.

"But that is really not my decision," he said. "If our folks on shore decide we're to go back, then we'll go right back. But personally, I don't want to do it."

A Greenpeace spokesman in Vancouver, British Columbia, said the organization will not make any decision until the fate of the seven is known.

EDWARDS BEING SOUGHT

The Greenville Police Department and the Craven County Sheriff Department have issued a joint appeal for information about the whereabouts of Charlie Frank Edwards, 50.

Edwards, a lay minister, is the husband of Mrs. Pearl Mae Wilson Edwards, an employee of the East Carolina Family Practice Center, who was last seen Jan. 12. Her body was located last weekend in a submerged car in the Neuse River near Fort Barnwell. Edwards was last reported seen on the same date. Anyone having information about him is asked to contact Detective Lee Garrish of the Greenville Police Department, 752-3342, or Lt. Mike Warren of the Craven County Sheriff Department (collect) 637-6915.

"Edwards was well-known in this area," Garrish said. "Somebody knows where he is and we really need to talk to him."

Planning-Zoning Commission Disapproves Change Request

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, following a show of opposition by a contingent of local citizens to a rezoning petition involving part of Fairlane Farms subdivision, voted to recommend that the City Council deny the request.

Approximately 25 to 30 residents of St. Andrews Drive and Fairlane Road attended Tuesday night's meeting to express through a representative their opposition to a request by Harvey D. Bradshaw to change residential zones on almost 10 acres within the subdivision.

Bradshaw, the developer of Fairlane Farms, submitted a request to rezone approximately 6,412 square feet from R-6 to R-15, some 9,981 square feet from R-15 to R-6, 3.9 acres from R-15 to R-9, and 5.82 acres from R-15 to R-6. The R-6 zone is a high density designation that allows multifamily uses.

Commissioners Rufus Keel, Chuck Ziehr and Rick Miller voted in favor of the motion to recommend that the council turn down Bradshaw's request, which is the third in a series of rezoning matters involving Fairlane Farms. Jim Ward did not participate in voting due to development interests on St. Andrews Drive.

Bradshaw, a Hooker Road resident, said he has been involved in the development for the past four years and said he believed he had demonstrated "good faith" in building the subdivision. He said his proposal to rezone part of the tract to R-9 was the result of opposition expressed by residents to the R-6 zone.

The property is located north of Horseshoe Drive and is bound on the west by a drainage ditch and Sedgefield Park Subdivision, on the north by Fairlane subdivision, on the east by Bradshaw's home, and on the south by proposed Horseshoe Drive.

Kelly Adams, a St. Andrews Drive resident, said Bradshaw had been helpful in working with his neighbors and he said Bradshaw indicated he would work for the installation of buffers and for the development of single family dwellings.

Attorney Jim Bullock, representing the opposing residents, presented petitions he said were signed by almost 100 percent of the residents of Fairlane Road and over 90 percent of the St. Andrews Drive citizens. Bullock said key concerns involved the funneling of heavy subdivision traffic out Horseshoe Drive, the only outlet, and the vehicle congestion

Rain, Lightning And Cool Temperatures

By JANE WELBORN

The much-awaited rain came to the Greenville area Tuesday, bringing with it breezes and dropping temperatures.

A rainfall of .83 inches was recorded at the Greenville Utilities Water Plant. The temperatures ranged from a high of 95 degrees to a low of 70 degrees Tuesday.

No damage was reported as a result of the storm, Pitt County Fire Bobby Joyner said today. "It was very quiet, thank goodness," he commented.

Tuesday night's storm caused power outages in the area, though.

"There was an unusually large number of direct hits on the system (of electrical lines) last night," said engineer Malcolm Green of Greenville Utilities. "Considering the large amount of lightning, we came out easy, because the potential was there for a lot of damage."

Green said there were three major power outages in the Greenville Utilities service area — one on the west side of Greenville near Stantonburg Road, one on N.C. 43 south of D.H. Conley High School and one in Stokestown on N.C. 102 near Ayden. He said there were "a lot of scattered problems, such as fuses blown" as a result of the storm.

He said three trouble crews began working at 10 p.m. and finished fixing the electrical lines at 2 a.m.

"One of our primary concerns this time of year is the rural areas," Green said. "The farmers are now putting tobacco in the bulk tobacco barns. We try to get the rural (power) lines back on as quickly as we can because farmers run the risk of losing their tobacco if they are without power for long periods of time."

He said three or four homes on Harding Street were without power for several hours as the crews directed their effort to restore power to the large electrical users in the county before they began to work on (Please turn to Page 16)

Shoplifting Grew Into A Shooting Case

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Two Kinston men were arrested Tuesday night in connection with a shoplifting at Carolina East Mall that escalated several minutes later into a shooting a short distance south of the mall on N.C. 11.

Greenville police received a report about 6 p.m. that a van driven by mall store manager Bob Hartman had been shot into. No one was injured. They were given the license number of the vehicle the shooting suspect was driving.

Mall manager Lou Canakes said this morning that mall security was called about 5:30 p.m. by an employee of the Athletic World store in the mall. He said a man had been confronted by the store manager, Danny Hines, about having taken a nylon running suit. Hines chased the man into a field south of the mall, Canakes said, with him and security guard Dan Edwards following in a car.

Once caught up with in the field adjacent to Highway 11, the fleeing man agreed to return to the mall with the mall manager and the store manager to talk about the alleged shoplifting, Canakes said. The three of them started walking toward the mall. However, when they were approached by another man walking toward them from the direction of the mall, the shoplifting suspect apparently changed his mind and crossed the highway with the other man to a car parked at Eastern Construction Co. A man was lying under the rear of the car apparently attempting to repair a muffler, while a woman with a baby and another man were seated inside the vehicle. Canakes said he left the scene after obtaining the license number of the car.

He was on his way back to the mall, Canakes said, when he heard shots and saw a van driven by Hartman, who had been participating in the search, career across the median. He went back, he (Please turn to Page 16)

Wedding Vows Said In Falkland Ceremony

FALKLAND — Joann Perkins of Greenville and Van Joel Sharpe of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday at Friendship Holiness Church here. Elder Dennis Wooten and Elder Bennett Wooten performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey Perkins of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Barbara Jean Sharpe of Greenville and the late Jerry Sharpe Jr.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Barbara Barrett, musician. Scotty Brown and Veda Wilkes sang "You and I," "God Has Smiled On Me" and "What A Difference You've Made In My Life." Darlyn Sharpe, sister of the bridegroom, sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie desinged with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in re-embroidered chantilly lace beaded with pearls. Matching lace enhanced the empire bodice which encircled the waistline. Appliques of chantilly lace fashioned the full sheer bishop sleeves which were finished in matching lace cuffs. The modified A-line skirt featured panels of re-embroidered chantilly lace and a crystal pleated flounce edged in matching lace. The attached cathedral length was accented with cascading tiers of crystal pleating bordered in re-embroidered chantilly lace.

Angela Thompson of Greenville was maid of honor and wore a rose polyester floor length gown. The V-necked bodice was trimmed with a double ruffle and the skirt flowed into a single ruffle which formed a bustle effect up the back accented at the waist with a rose. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a long-stemmed carnation with baby's breath and rose satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Sylvia Suggs and Theresa Knight, cousins of the bridegroom, Sandra Green and Lisa Bradley, all of Greenville, and Shelia Barrett of Winterville. They each wore a lilac gown with a square neckline accented by a single ruffle. A bustle effect was formed by a double row of ruffles up the back. They each carried a long-stemmed carnation like that of the honor attendant.

Tarka Wooten of Greenville was miniature bride and wore a formal gown of white lace styled in layers over a hooper skirt. Her veil was accented with a single row of pearls and she carried a bouquet similar to the honor attendant.

Flower girls were Dawn Sharpe and A'Niya Sharpe of Greenville, nieces of the bridegroom. They wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor with baby's breath in their hair. They carried white lace baskets filled with mum petals.

William Perkins jr. of Greenville, nephew of the bride, was miniature bridegroom and Derek Perkins of Greenville, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Ray Sharpe of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsman included Reginald Sharpe of Greensboro and Von Sharpe of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Richard Best of Farmville, cousin of the bridegroom, Russell Perkins and William Perkins Sr. of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a formal rose polyester gown with a high neckline and the mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of rose polyester with a matching jacket. Both wore white carnation corsages.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. An after-rehearsal dinner and cake cutting was given by Darlyn Sharpe.

The wedding was directed by Darlyn A. Sharpe.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is employed at McDonalds. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt High School and is enlisted in the U.S. Army.

After a wedding trip to Jamestown, Va., the couple will live in Greenville.

Cook Has File On Snake Dishes

By KIM SUE
LIA PERKES
Scottsdale Daily Progress
SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Welmon Nelson's dishes may not be featured in posh restaurants, but nonetheless he's a connoisseur of the rattlesnake.

In a small one-room cabin tucked away in Pinnacle Peak, Nelson — called Lobo by all who know him — whips up the delicacies in his efficiency kitchen.

"I like to cook," he said. "Being a bachelor, I learned how to cook. Besides, I learned it's a nice way to entertain a pretty lady."

Living amidst natural desert landscaping, Lobo doesn't have to go far to find a rattler. Every once in a while one will deliver itself to his doorstep without charge.

However, Nelson also recognizes the snakes are extremely dangerous — even to the experienced outdoorsman, and notes that contrary to popular lore, they don't always rattle a warning before striking.

With specialties like Western Diamondback Champagne Chili and Skillet Spinach Snake Coeffle, Lobo said, just about any dish can be enhanced by adding rattlesnake to the recipe: "How 'bout Rattlesnake Newburg? Or you can have it with eggs. It'd be nice in an omelet."

Rattlesnake can be breaded, using a fried chicken coating, but Lobo warned not to go too heavy on the coating or the taste of the snake may get lost. It can also be pickled or served as an hors d'oeuvre.

"The thing about rattlesnake is there's not enough meat to make a main dish," Lobo said, noting that it needs to be combined with other ingredients to create an entree.

Even a very large snake provides a small amount of meat in comparison with its size, he said.

The consistency of the meat is always a little on the chewy side, he said, adding that the size and age of the snake does not seem to have any correlation to the tenderness of the meat.

Some assert that the flavor of rattlesnake reminds them of chicken, but, Lobo said, "what it reminds you of more than anything else is lobster."

To preserve the true flavor of the reptile, "it's important that it be treated like any other killed animal," he said. "Don't set it in the back seat of the car and let it sit for a day."

For the cooking, a cleaned rattlesnake should be lightly boiled in salted water for about an hour to an hour and a half and the meat filleted from the bone, Nelson said, adding the meat should be

Residents Enjoy Blooming Plants

A special attraction for "the residents to enjoy" at the University Nursing Home, is a front border of blooming flowers.

The flowers were planted by Phyllis White, activities coordinator, and Deborah Russ, music therapist, at the nursing home. The flowers include pink geraniums, variegated coleus, white flocks, miniature yellow marigolds and purple snapdragons.

The Residents' Garden Club helped with the planting and now maintain the border's upkeep.

The plants were given to the nursing home by Plant and See and Sunshine Nurseries.

Rattlesnake meat can be used as a substitute for other meats to make such things as tacos or it can be added to any recipe to enhance flavor, he said.

Team Nectarines With Yogurt

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Dictionaries may eventually change their definition of Bavarian Cream. At present it is described as a dessert made with gelatin, a flavoring (often fruit) and whipped cream. Nowadays recipes for Bavarian Cream sometimes replace part of the cream with yogurt. New times, new ways.

The cook who invented the following recipe for Fresh Nectarine Bavarian Cream liked the yogurt replacement idea. Her dessert is a light one and it's not overly sweet. It may be served as is, but we think strawberry sauce enhances it.

FRESH NECTARINE
BAVARIAN CREAM

- 5 large (1 1/4 pounds) fresh nectarines
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1-3rd cup orange juice
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1/2 cup plain yogurt

Strawberry sauce, see Note yogurt into nectarine mixture; with the rubber spatula, fold in cream, turn into a 1-quart mold and chill to set. At serving time unmold and, if you like, garnish with extra nectarine slices. Serve with strawberry sauce.

Makes 6 servings.
NOTE: For the strawberry sauce, puree fresh, or thawed frozen, sweetened strawberries.

Wash and dry nectarines; quarter and pit; dice about 1/4-inch fine — there should be 2 cups. Stir in sugar, lemon juice and nutmeg.

In a 1 1/2 or 2-quart saucepan over low heat sprinkle gelatin over orange juice; let stand 5 minutes to soften; over low heat, with a rubber spatula, stir mixture (including side of pan) until gelatin dissolves; stir into nectarine mixture. Chill until mixture begins to thicken.
Whip cream until stiff. Whisk

Gamble Pays Off

Three years ago Congress took a $1.5 billion gamble in an effort to save the financially ailing Chrysler Corp. With Chairman Lee Iacocca publicly pointing up its effort to recover, Chrysler, in 1980 and 1981, drew out $1.2 billion in government-guaranteed loans that were to be repaid by 1980.

There were many of us who were skeptical that repayment would ever be made. Many of us expressed the belief that the government had no business getting involved in private enterprise; maybe bailing out a municipality such as New York City, but not a for-profit corporation such as Chrysler.

Those doubts still nag, but Chrysler at least has done what it said it would. The company made the initial repayment of $400 million last month and now is ready to made the final paycheck of $800 million — seven years ahead of schedule.

Assuming Chrysler will follow through with the payment, now scheduled for September, the guarantee by Congress appears to have been a fantastically wise move. It has saved thousands of jobs, kept the automobile industry competitive and virile and saved Chrysler.

What more could you ask?

Computer Era

A report from Carnegie-Mellon University, a hotbed for turning out first-rate engineers, tells us that job openings for engineers (except for those in computer science and electrical engineering) are relatively scarce; whereas openings for liberal arts majors familiar with computers are in good demand.

(Carnegie-Mellon is one of the computer-oriented schools, where computer science and statistics are required courses for liberal arts majors.)

The picture reinforces an opinion carried some months ago on this page; that computer courses should be required in high schools. Not just because they represent a new fad, but because their use is part and parcel of today's world and as essential in the world of tomorrow as pen and ink (used to be).

The Computer Camp at Aycock Junior High School indicates others share that conviction.

There is bound to be a continuing need for specialists in the many fields of engineering — this just happens to be a year of glut in the fields. But there is no limit to the need for familiarity with computers. They are going to be important in private lives, learning careers, working lives and professional roles.

Those who are ignorant in the field are certain to be left behind.

Future's Bright

WASHINGTON — The future was in town for a convention last week, but we're not sure everybody's ready for it.

Meeting at a nearby hotel were approximately 1,500 members of Future Homemakers of America. As the organization's name might imply, they were mostly teenagers with a yen for home economics. Not surprisingly, the hotel lobby and corridors were filled with young women, many of them clad in a blur of red, white and blue.

Yet among the crowd stood some unlikely homemakers. Their names were Bucky, Donald, Everett and Steve.

This curious quartet helped to prove that home economics is for boys, too. Indeed, young men account for about 7 percent of FHA's 400,000 members. Bucky, Everett and Steve — Ohioan, Alabaman and Coloradan, respectively — are even national officers of the organization.

That young men constitute any share of this country's aspiring homemakers is bound to raise the eyebrows of many American males. As most former teenage jocks know, boys aren't supposed to like that stuff, let alone make it their calling. Possible motives spring to mind, some not too flattering.

Seated in lounge chairs, valises in hand, Bucky, Donald, Everett and Steve were able to allay a few suspicions. One wants to manage a big hotel or restaurant, another fancies a career in genetics. ("Right now, it's not a field for humans," he reported.) They all view FHA as some kind of platform and, well, like the advantages implicit in the group's lopsided, male-female ratio.

But these young men readily dismiss any suggestion that theirs is an opportunistic or unmanly interest. "Becky Home-ecky" and "Suzy Homemaker" are two old sayings that we're trying to get rid of," insisted Everett, who said that, after a career in law, he'd someday like to teach home economics himself. "We don't want to give you the impression that we just cook, sew and all that. There's a lot more to it."

Among the various skills and concerns the four cited were nutrition, home-owning, time management, balancing checkbooks and, of course, sex education and color coordination.

"All the things you really need to survive," said one. Added another: "It's a chemistry, biology and drama class all wrapped into one. You could call it Bachelor Life."

But Bucky, Donald, Everett and Steve don't limit their foresight to avoiding grease fires and other possible travails of singlehood. Home economics, they note, also involves married life, child care and development, alcohol and drug abuse, and problems of the elderly and single parents — in other words, anything related to the family. Combined, it all seems to be a rather full plate for most adults, let alone teenagers.

More significantly, it's rather progressive. The FHA sees itself as "pro-family," yet it defines the family as any structure that "nurtures" its members. That leaves room for a variety of groupings, heads of households and shared responsibilities. As Steve pointed out, "It's important for men to realize that they, too, can be homemakers All of us have to educate more (men)."

Could Alan Alda have said it better?

Unfortunately, Bucky, Donald, Everett and Steve are closer in outlook to that famous househusband, the late John Lennon, than to the majority of American men. With or without the prayers of Jerry Falwell, most of us linger in the hot tub of tradition where men's and women's work don't mix. Often even the most progressive husbands regress into the worst of Archie Bunkers.

To be sure, new pressures and standards increasingly enhance the need for a modern outlook. As economist Victor Fuchs of Stanford summarizes in a new book, "How We Live: An Economic Perspective on Americans from Birth to Death," advances by women in the workplace, if unmatched by greater male flexibility at home, may only exacerbate the breakdown of the family structure.

At this point, however, we can only salute our acquaintances who wear the red FHA blazers. Though their ideas and associations might seem incongruous with many we had as teenagers, they seem to see a Brave New World.

Things To Say... And Not Say

Things to be said when discussing Carter's black book and other crimes and misdemeanors, if you are a Republican team player.

"It's much ado about nothing."

"Everybody does it in politics."

"We didn't steal the book. Someone gave it to us."

"I never used any of the material. It was useless and boring."

"If there was any wrongdoing I hope the Justice Department gets to the bottom of it."

"In retrospect it was stupid to even have accepted the material, but at the time we thought it might be helpful."

"Their side was probably doing it to us."

"I never heard about a mole in the Carter White House until I read it in the newspaper."

"When I received the material I'm sure I gave it to X."

"Y must be mistaken. He never gave it to me."

"It's summer and the press has nothing to write about."

"It's unfair to compare the stealing of a black briefing book to Watergate. There were no break-ins, and the president isn't trying to cover up anything."

"It's silly to think that Carter would have won even if Reagan didn't know its game plan."

"Jim Baker was stupid to admit he was the material."

"Stockman was stupid to admit he got the material and it was helpful."

"Bill Casey was stupid to deny he ever saw the material."

"George Will didn't do anything wrong when he helped Reagan prepare for the debate."

"George Will didn't have to say on TV he saw material from the Carter camp."

"In a political fight you use everything you can to beat your opponent."

"It's defferent to steal material than if someone hands it to you."

"I forgot who gave me the stuff. I never saw the guy again."

"It's ridiculous to say I knew anything about it."

"The whole thing is a Democratic conspiracy to make us look bad."

"There was never a Republican mole in the Carter White House."

"If there was a mole in the White House he never passed on any classified material."

"The information from the Carter National Security Council was common knowledge to everyone."

"Nobody cares about the dirty tricks except the press and the politicians."

"The president says he wants to get to the bottom of it. That shows he had nothing to do with it."

"You can't control every volunteer in a political campaign."

"In a campaign you get so many pieces of paper that you never ask where they came from."

"I don't know how the Carter papers turned up in my files. I certainly didn't put them there."

"It's strange that this story should have broken just as the 1984 elections are upon us."

"The important thing to remember is Carter would have lost the debate even if we didn't have the briefing book."

"If the Democrats want to make something out of this we have plenty of stuff on them that we haven't released before."

Things to say if you are a Democrat:

"If someone had given me purloined papers from the Reagan camp, I would have returned them immediately."

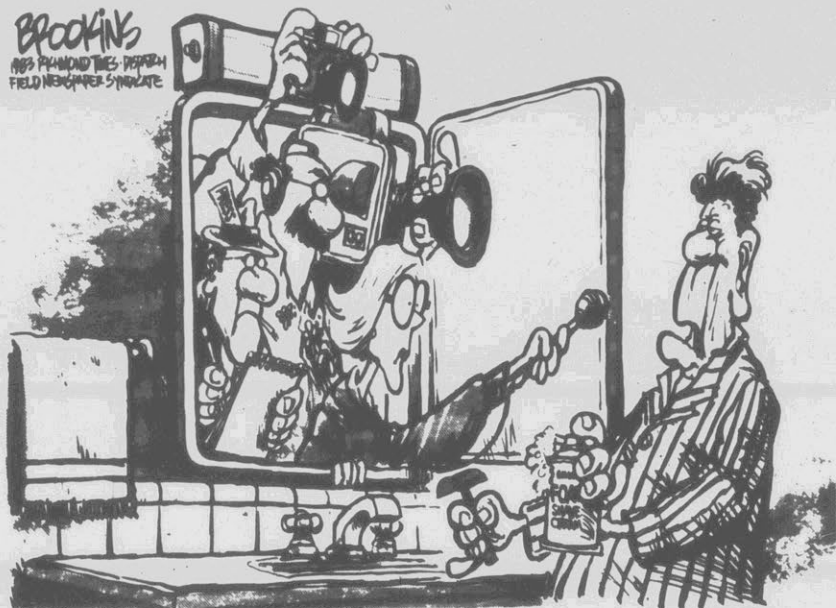

"It makes me sick to think this is how they won the election."

"Nobody learned a thing from Watergate."

"I'm not enjoying the White House discomfiture one bit. If I were the president I'd fire the whole staff."

"If it hadn't been for the mole in Jimmy's White House, Amy Carter might now be in charge of nuclear proliferation policy."

One Party Ahead For Britain

LONDON — The suicidal post-election lunge toward the hard left by Britain's weakened Labour Party, when combined with widespread appeal of Tory nationalism and working-class distrust of Labour's socialistic nostrums, points to a one-party Britain for the foreseeable future — sending a warning signal to the democratic left elsewhere in the West.

The warning, sounded by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party victory over leftist Michael Foot last month, is intensified by what has happened since. While Thatcher's triumph may well moderate potential ideological excesses of the Democratic Party in its campaign against President Reagan next year, it is having no such chastening effect at home.

Instead of profiting from its drubbing by Thatcher, the Labour Party is begging for rigor mortis. Possible salvation lies alone in the uphill battle by centrist Roy Hattersley for election at the Oct. 2 party conference as Labour's new leader, succeeding the hapless Foot.

Hattersley scorns foreign policy "unilateralism," supports American bases in Britain and has battled hard-left Labour Party militants for a decade. But he is a very long shot. The far likelier Foot successor is Neil Kinnock, whom colleagues label "soft left." Neil Kinnock, who has held no ministerial post in any previous Labour government, is being pressed to run as a team with Michael Meacher, a leader of the hard left. That procedural break with tradition is designed to block Hattersley from the leadership and insulate the left from centrist pressures.

If the Kinnock-Meacher team is elected, the once-mighty Labour Party might forfeit its role as serious opposition. The party of Clement Atlee and Ernest Bevin would be transformed into a flabby peddler of implausible and unwanted ideologies: unilateral nuclear disarmament and a "command economy" run in all its aspects by a centralized socialist mechanism.

How much this ideological path is unwanted by British voters can be judged by election post-mortems. The party of labor won only about 30 percent of skilled working-class votes, down from 50 percent in 1974. More surprising was the frantic runaway from Labour by unskilled workers, who gave the party less than half their votes. Among trade unionists, fewer than half voted Labour and even the unemployed appear to have given the Tories and the Liberal-Social Democratic Alliance more than half their votes.

Labour polled its lowest vote since 1918, but its apologists who blame that humiliation on Thatcher luck of the Falkland war and the Foot drag as Labour's campaign leader are not in touch with reality. Those special factors were icing on the election cake.

Totally apart from Thatcher's four-year rule, Hattersley told us, the Labour Party has been declining on its own along an easily-foreseeable course for many years. He predicted that if the hard left wins Oct. 2 and elects leaders committed to its dogma, the Labour Party will "become a pressure group and a nuisance, not a Party to govern this country."

The hard left almost gained preeminence two years ago when Anthony Wedgwood Benn, its intellectual leader, was barely defeated in his race for deputy leader. But since then, the militants have scored consistent gains, capturing control over grassroots party organizations, imposing a virtual recall of Labour members of Parliament who stray from the left line in the House of Commons and pushing union leadership to the left.

No wonder that Hattersley and the centrists seem doomed, and with them the strong two-party system that has been Britain's balance wheel. New rules jammed down Labour's throat give the labor unions 40 percent of the weight in selecting new party leadership and local party organizations 30 percent, leaving only 30 percent for members of Parliament. Traditionally, members of Parliament alone elected the leadership.

Transferring control from Parliament to militant minorities (including Communists, who exert great influence over union policies and local party machines) was billed as "reform." But it has now implanted an anti-democratic cancer in the center of the Labour Party, and the cancer is spreading.

That explains Hattersley's pessimism and suggests that the new Conservative government will have little to fear from the opposition. Labour will shrink into impotence and the Alliance has only 23 seats in Commons. Thatcher's own restive backbenchers now look like the real control mechanism on Thatcherism, a transformation of politics in the world's oldest democracy that would have seemed impossible. Thatcher has done it, but not without abundant help from the militant left wing of the Labour Party. The lesson for democratic left parties worldwide is clear.

Approval Of A Budget

RALEIGH — "The train is on the track."

That's the most popular expression you'll hear around the Legislative Building during the final days of a session. Translated into everyday English it means that the leadership has put together a budget package with enough political goodies to assure passage. The rule for legislators is simple. If you want the goody put in the package for you, you can't take out any of the goodies intended for anyone else.

This form of railroad legislation showed itself in the Joint Appropriations Committee last week when an effort was made to trim away a giant salary increase for our next governor. The increase was there at the request of Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, the House base budget chairman. There were plenty of good arguments against, but few good arguments for, the pay raise. But when it came time to vote, the sheep meekly loaded themselves onto the choo-choo train.

Adams argues that the raise is needed to maintain the state's prestige. It's a disgrace to pay governor only $60,000 a year when 350 state employees make more than that. Do we want a "two-bit" office of governor?, he asked.

Arrayed against that argument were the sentiments of Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, who said the working people making $4 an hour didn't think the state needed any more extravagance. That's pretty much what Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green also said in opposing the pay increase.

Duncan and Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham, sponsor of an amendment to take the pay raise out of the budget, noted all the perks we already provide the governor. He lives in the mansion, he gets flown or driven all over the state, he gets fed and he gets his medical insurance. In all, Duncan estimated that it costs more than $400,000 a year to have a governor.

Only $400,000. That appalled Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, who is popularly known as "the senator from Duke Power." He dusted off an old utility defense for the big salaries paid to utility presidents — "We need to go out and purchase the best leadership this state can afford. That's all we're assuring ourselves is the management of the state of North Carolina."

Tison did not explain how $25,000 extra each year will make our next governor, who most certainly will come from the dozen candidates who've applied for the job at the current salary level, any better.

Nor did anyone point out that Gov. Hunt, who did not bring great wealth to the job, appears to be making ends meet. He wears nice clothes, pays his kids' college tuition and maintains a house back home

The great unanswered question to this whole matter is why the Legislature took the political heat for raising the next governor's salary. Especially when there's so much dissatisfaction with the crowd of candidates. Many of the "yes" votes on the pay raise came from legislators who've said privately that none of the leading candidates is up to the job. It doesn't seem to make much sense to raise the salary of an office when you're of the opinion that the next officeholder is a chump.

Spaulding may not have derailed the train but he certainly helped himself by trying. He's a black lawyer who wants to run for Congress from the Second District. He knows he's got to shake the impression that he's liberal just because most blacks are. If he runs for Congress next year, he'll be able to say he tried to stop that salary increase and that's a boast a lot of train-riding conservative legislators won't be able to make.

Try 'Staple Surgery' On 312-Pound 13-Year-Old

NEPTUNE, N.J. (AP) — At 6, William Richardson Jr. tipped the scales at 100 pounds. His mother tried locking the refrigerator door, and William wore a tag around his neck that read "Please do not feed."

But the 13-year-old now weighs 312 pounds, and doctors resorted to special surgery Tuesday to help him shed some of the unwanted fat — an operation to staple shut part of his stomach.

The family agreed to the surgery because doctors said the problem pounds eventually could be life-threatening for Richie, as he is nicknamed.

"I need it," the boy said just before the operation, which took nearly two hours.

But he said he expects to miss some of his favorite foods — meatball submarine sandwiches, ribs and, most of all, the fried chicken made by his sister, Valerie Johnson.

During the gastric bypass operation at Jersey Shore Medical Center, doctors partitioned Richie's stomach with two rows of stainless-steel staples so that most food he eats will pass through his system without being absorbed, hospital officials said.

"It's the only thing medicine has to offer," said Dr. Walter F. Judge, the hospital's director of endocrinology, who has been treating Richie for seven years.

The stomach-stapling surgery is fairly low-risk because it does not involve opening the intestinal tract, which could cause infection, Judge said.

Richie was reported awake and in stable condition today in the hospital's intensive care unit.

"He's had the operation and he's come through it fine," said Helen Aumack, a hospital spokeswoman.

Judge said that because the surgery reduced the size of Richie's stomach, the boy will be able to eat only soft and semi-soft food for the rest of his life and will have to take vitamin B-complex tablets every day.

Constant eating, rather than large individual meals, is to blame for Richie's obesity, according to his mother, Pearl, and doctors.

"At the clinic we have failed him in his eating problem. We have tried everything," said Judge, who said the boy's problem has been diagnosed as morbid and genetic obesity. "He's 13 years old. If something isn't done, it will shorten his life span."

The doctor said he hopes Richie will be able to lose 100 pounds during the next year and 50 pounds the year after.

"We would be thrilled if he gets down to 150 pounds by the time he is 15," Judge said.

Richie, who will start eighth grade in the fall, said he would be able to cope with the surgery and the changes in his habits.

When doctors placed the "Please do not feed" tag around 6-year-old Richie's neck, "We were attempting to get others to cooperate. It didn't make a dent in his eating," Judge said.

"He is a likable guy. He would go to a friend's and they would feed him. He just likes to eat," Mrs. Richardson said.

Mrs. Richardson initially

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Wednesday, July 20, 1983 — 5

opposed the surgery, but the threat to her son's health finally persuaded her to allow the operation.

"It was frightening to think the overeating for him is a life-and-death situation, so I thought about it some more and prayed to God and decided to go ahead," she said.

Two Charged In Factory Fire

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Two employees were charged Tuesday with setting a fire that destroyed a third of the Bangle Brothers Hosiery factory June 27, idling nearly 400 workers.

Shelia Renee Helms, 25, of Concord and Tandra Jo Beam, 24, of Kannapolis were charged with burning a building used for trade.

Chief deputy Jerry

Troutman of the Cabarrus County Sheriff's Department declined to release further information and would not discuss possible motives.

Ms. Helms had worked at the mill as a preboarder — shaping hosiery and readying it for market sales — for some six weeks, president and part-owner Phil Bangle said. No work record on Ms. Beam was available.

Bangle said about 115 of the mill's 400 employees have been put back to work in the two undamaged sections of the plant. The firm plans to rebuild.

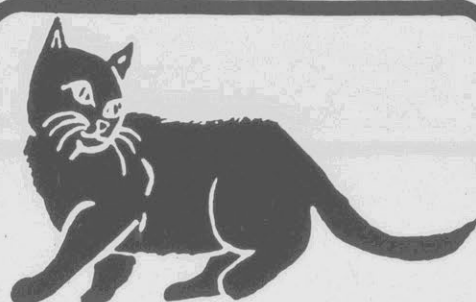

Plans Ahead On Shuttle Flight

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — When Guion Bluford Jr. becomes the first black astronaut in space, he'll be carrying with him a pair of football jerseys from his alma mater and a cassette of its fight songs for his wake-up calls aboard the space shuttle.

Bluford, 40, a 1964 Pennsylvania State University graduate with a bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering, also will receive a copy of the 1862 congressional act that set aside land for public universities like Penn State.

The shuttle Challenger is scheduled to leave Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Aug. 20 for a five-day flight which will be the first scheduled for a night launch and night landing.

'Liberty' To Receive Facelift

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Statue of Liberty, that famous beacon of freedom in New York harbor, will soon go behind bars. She is also going to lose her torch and may lose her arm.

It is all part of a $30 million facelift to shore up major structural defects found in the 97-year-old monument.

Beginning this fall, engineers plan to erect scaffolding around the entire 151-foot statue that will remain in place during the two years the renovation is under way.

The restoration will rebuild — one at a time — the ribs that hold up the statue. Also planned are removal and replacement of the badly corroded torch and possible removal and repair of the statue's upraised arm.

During the work, each of the 300 copper sheets covering the statue will be removed, a section at a time, so that workmen can replace the ribs and rivets which attach the sheets to the main supporting structure inside the statue.

A survey has found that as many as 25,000 of the 300,000 rivets holding the statue together have popped out because of corrosion in the original iron rib structure, which is due to be replaced with either copper or stainless steel ribs.

The problems were outlined by French and American engineers Tuesday as they turned over to the National Park Service the results of a 2-year study of the monument.

In accepting the document, Park Service Director Russell Dickenson said the renovation will be paid for entirely by private funds to be raised by a Statue of Liberty — Ellis Island Centennial Commission headed by Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca.

The study found that the statue had become a victim of years of exposure to the salt air, air pollution and high winds in New York harbor. It found plants growing on the statue's arm, which also has a hole poked in it from a spike in the crown. This occurred, the engineers said, because the French-built statue's head is two feet off center, a mistake made when the statue was reassembled in this country by American workmen.

The torch leaks badly, allowing rainwater to rust out its structural supports, presenting a "definite risk of structural failure." The water has corroded the support for the arm to a lesser extent, the study found.

The study did not predict what might happen if the repairs were not done, but Richard Hayden, who worked on the report, said, "I would hate to have a 100-year storm hit New York harbor before the restoration is done. It does symbolize the United States of America and to have that arm fall down would not show the strength of America."

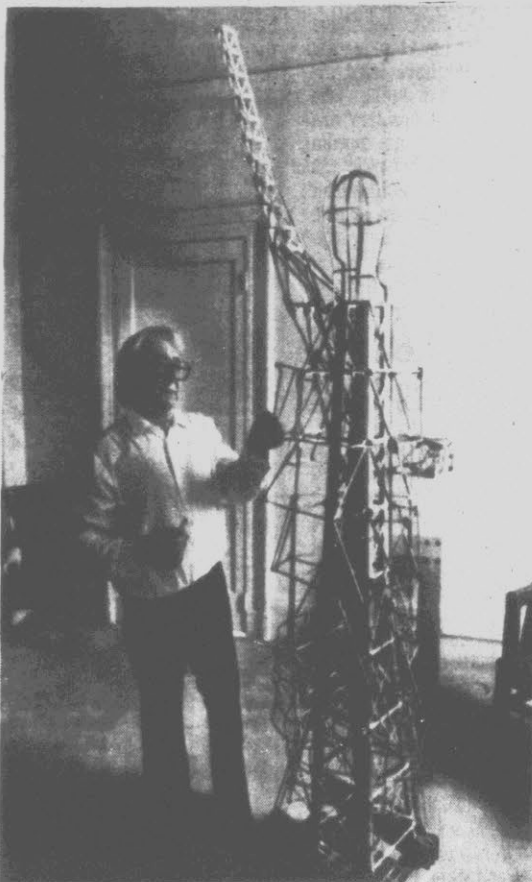

The study found that the exterior of most of the copper sheets was in good condition although it said some will have to be replaced. It also recommended scraping off layers of paint applied to the interior of the statue, which it said were trapping moisture and speeding up interior rusting.

The study also said the trip to the observation deck could be made more comfortable for the 1.8 million tourists who visit each year by replacing the narrow, winding staircase with a more modern stairway or by adding a glass-enclosed elevator. The park service has yet to decide which of these options to chose.

The statue, a gift to this country from the citizens of France, was constructed in Paris and shipped to America in 1884. The construction cost the French $250,000 and Americans paid $280,000 to build the pedestal on Liberty Island.

STRUCTURAL — Pierre Tissier, a structural engineer, works on a structural model of the Statue of Liberty at a press conference in Washington Tuesday. Bird Is Apparently An African Visitor NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — This New England island is a vacation destination for thousands each summer, but few of the sun-seekers have attracted as much attention as a yellow-footed western reef heron that apparently traveled all the way from Africa.

Robert Ridgely, an ornithologist at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia, speculated the bird "may have hitched a ride on a ship or a piece of flotsam."

Roger Tory Peterson, a noted bird illustrator and author of bird guide books, and about 200 other birdwatchers visited the Quaise marsh on Nantucket Island during the weekend to ogle the slate-grey bird. The bird, believed to be the first of its kind sighted in North America, "probably got lost in a storm," he said.

The heron was first spotted on Nantucket in April. But it wasn't identified as a foreign species until last week when scientists at the Academy of Natural Sciences recognized it from pictures taken by one of their ornithologists.

The unusual vacationer has been attracting a lot of fans.

Dear Abby

Daughter Pays High Price To Get Father's Support

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl. My parents are divorced, and when Dad left he signed everything over to Mom — the house, car and all his properties, plus he agreed to pay support for her and me. Mom has her own career, so we could probably get by without his money, but why should we?

Dad has remarried and has a family, but I don't think that should entitle him to pay us less.

Last year I tried to help Mom get an increase in support, so I went to court and gave evidence as to what I knew from visiting Dad — what he owned, how nice his apartment was, etc. Well, the judge didn't think Dad could afford to pay us more, but Dad got stuck for all the legal fees.

Dad hasn't written or asked to see me since that day in court, and I don't think that's fair. I am his child, too, and I figure he owes me something.

Please answer in your column so I can send it to him.
HURT DAUGHTER

DEAR HURT: Perhaps your father feels that you betrayed him when you went to court and reported on what he had in order to get an increase on his support payments.

You say you figure he "owes" you something. If you're referring to love, the only way to get it is to give it.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is home from college for the summer, and while cleaning his room, I found (under his bed) a stack of magazines featuring nude women, bound, gagged and some being whipped or beaten.

My husband says it's nothing to worry about, that just because he favors that sort of magazine doesn't mean he participates in such activities.

I disagree and am very concerned. What do your experts say?

SAD AND SICKENED

DEAR S & S: My experts say that having a curiosity about a subject does not necessarily mean that a person is "into" it.

It might relieve you, however, to confront your son with what you've discovered and give him the opportunity to assure you that you need not be "sad and sickened."

But if you do, your college-age son may insist that his reading material is his own business, and that you should not have invaded his privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Add one more female to your list of women who are plagued with facial hair. I never travel anywhere without a tweezer, a small razor, a triple-strength magnifying mirror, a high-intensity lamp and an extension cord. (I have to use them twice a day.)

I had electrolysis done in a doctor's office, but most of the hair grew back. I could scream! Sign me...

HAIRY

DEAR HAIRY: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Please tell your readers that electrolysis does not always remove all hairs permanently in one treatment. Extremely coarse hairs must be removed two and sometimes three times. An honest electrologist will tell the client this up-front.

Also, the best way to find a competent, honest electrologist is through a dermatologist. There are still 22 states in which "operators" are not required to be licensed to practice, but do practice anyway.

Please urge your readers not to give up on electrolysis. I have been through it, and it was worth all the time, money and discomfort I endured.

Camp Curb

HAMMOCKS BEACH STATE PARK — Camping permits for night hours on Bear Island at Hammocks Beach State Park near Swansboro will be canceled Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Jesse Hines, director of the park, said the closure to campers is being made due to the expected arrival of significant numbers of female loggerhead turtles coming ashore at that time to lay eggs and then return to the Atlantic. There are no restrictions being imposed on visitors to the island during daylight hours.

Persons interested in confirming possible additional restrictive periods that may be imposed on night camping are asked to call the park's center, telephone 326-4881.

Food Stamps 'Buy' Drugs

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A Winston-Salem man traded drugs for food stamps as part of what police say is a major heroin operation in Winston-Salem, an undercover agent testified Tuesday.

Handy Gunter Jr. of the State Bureau of Investigation, testified during the first day of the trial of Charlie Mack Williams Sr., 52, and Wilbert Ray Meadows, 49, both of Winston-Salem.

Williams and Meadows are among more than 100 people who were charged last month after federal, state and local law enforcement agencies completed a six-month undercover investigation of stolen-property rings in the Piedmont.

Working with police departments in Winston-Salem, Greensboro, High Point and Burlington, SBI agents targeted suspected fencing operations in four counties. Early in the investigation, officials said, they learned that many of the targets were trafficking in food stamps.

Williams and Young are charged with conspiring to distribute heroin, distributing heroin and trading heroin for food stamps. Williams is also charged with trading cash for food stamps.

Gunter said he infiltrated an operation allegedly run by Williams by posing as a supplier of stolen goods, especially television sets.

FOILED A BLITZ
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Raids on a clandestine bomb factory in Catholic west Belfast foiled plans to blitz the city's downtown with firebombs, police said Tuesday.

South received a reprieve in the auction. Unfortunately, he did not have the technical skill to take advantage of it.

East cannot be faulted for his balancing double. It was bad luck that he found South with such a strong hand and his partner with relatively little. Still he ended up with a plus score, so it wasn't all bad.

West led the queen of hearts. Declarer won and led the king of trumps, which was allowed to win. The trump continuation was won by the ace, and East reverted to hearts. Declarer tried for an end play by cashing the ace of clubs and exiting with the jack. This time West won, cashed a heart winner and exited with a diamond. In the fullness of time declarer lost a diamond trick for down one.

Declarer did not use his resources to best advantage. On the auction, there was a good chance that East held the king of diamonds, and that was all that declarer needed to make his contract.

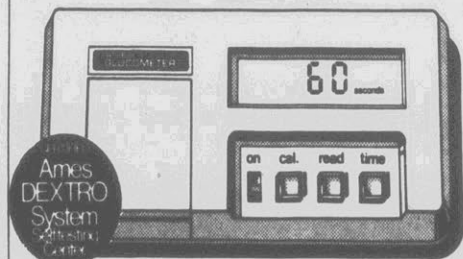

At trick two, declarer should lead the nine of trumps from hand and overtake with dummy's ten. Let's suppose that East wins and returns a heart. Declarer wins, enters dummy by overtaking the seven of trumps with the eight, and leads a diamond.

The defenders are rendered helpless. Suppose that East wins the king, cashes a heart and then shifts to a club. Declarer rises with the ace, cashes the queen of diamonds and gets back to the board with the last trump. The ace of diamonds takes care of the club loser, and the contract is safe.

Can't Find Leak In Water Line

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A leak in Hickory's main water line may have caused the loss of up to several million gallons of water, and the source of the leak still has not been discovered, city officials said Tuesday.

Sabotage At A Nuclear Plant

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In reaction to what officials acknowledge could be the latest incident of insider sabotage, the nation's largest nuclear utility has beefed up security measures at an Illinois atomic power plant.

Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago acknowledged Tuesday night that it had ordered increased surveillance of some areas inside its LaSalle plant at Seneca, Ill., after the wiring to a piece of key safety equipment was discovered last week to have been switched.

While officials for the utility and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission were reluctant to use the word sabotage, they said that they have no explanation why the wires were crossed.

"We have no evidence to say that someone deliberately reversed them but we have no explanation as to how it might have happened, and the utility has come up with no information on how it might have happened," said Jan Strasma, a spokesman at the NRC's Chicago office.

Jerry Benson, a spokesman for Commonwealth Edison, said Tuesday night that the utility has not ruled out any possible cause for the wire reversal.

"Until we go through all the areas, we're open to every possibility," Benson said. "Until we determine how it occurred, we are going to have stepped-up surveillance of the area."

An internal NRC document obtained late Tuesday by The Associated Press said the reversed wiring in a switch controlling part of the emergency backup cooling system for the Unit 1 reactor was discovered last Friday at the LaSalle plant some 60 miles southwest of Chicago.

"The licensee's (Commonwealth Edison's) investigation has been unable to determine when or by whom the wires were reversed," said the NRC document, which was dated Monday.

The document, titled "preliminary notification of event or unusual occurrence," said the utility notified the NRC and state officials on Friday after the reversed wires were discovered.

But it said that neither Commonwealth Edison nor the NRC's regional office in Chicago would announce the discovery.

"The level switch had functioned properly during the previous surveillance test on June 17, 1983, indicating that the two wires were correctly connected at that time," the NRC notice said.

The instrument technician who was known to have last worked on the panel June 18 was interviewed by Commonwealth Edison officials but "was unable to provide any explanation on the interchange of the wires," the notice said.

Edward L. Jordan of the commission's inspection and enforcement office in Washington said the reversed wires could be the result of a "random error" by a technician and, therefore, would not hold much significance since there are backup systems. "If an error is intentional in conjunction with other acts, then there is a significant risk," he said. "This would be the insider attack."

Both the NRC and the nuclear industry have become alarmed recently over the growing incidence of insider sabotage by utility workers or employees of construction contractors working on the plants.

Already this month, the commission's staff has determined that gouges discovered last April in a reactor coolant pipe at Pacific Gas & Electric Co.'s Diablo Canyon plant in California apparently resulted from "malicious mischief."

Carlyle Michelson, a member of the commission's Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, warned in a January 1982 memo that "the major threat of sabotage to a nuclear plant is associated with the insider or an employee who has access to vital safety areas."

Two months ago, following reports of 11 suspected insider sabotage events in the past three years, the commission sent a notice to all nuclear plants warning that the potential for insider sabotage "must be recognized."

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., a frequent nuclear critic, last month accused the commission of not taking the sabotage issue seriously and asked that it be placed on the agency's list of top safety concerns.

Meanwhile, the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, released a report Tuesday suggesting that improvement is needed in "screening nuclear plant employees to reduce the number of potential saboteurs."

The NRC said the LaSalle problem surfaced last Thursday during the regular monthly surveillance test of the backup emergency core cooling system when one of two reactor water level switches failed to respond when activated.

"The failed level switch is one of two redundant level switches which, if tripped, would initiate ... low pressure core spray and residual heat removal" in certain types of accidents, the NRC notice said.

Drove In Lake, Three Drowned

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Three Greensboro residents who drowned early Saturday morning when a car plunged into Lake Jeanette all had been drinking, according to blood tests by the state medical examiner's lab.

The lab said Walter O'Neal Kelly, 38, the driver of the car, had a blood alcohol level of 0.29 percent, or nearly three times the 0.10 percent level established by state law as too intoxicated to operate a vehicle.

His wife, Geronna Mae Jones Kelly, 45, had a blood alcohol level of 0.34 percent, and the other passenger, Harry Menzo Gary, 55, had a blood alcohol level of 0.13 percent.

The Highway Patrol said the three deaths will not be classified as highway traffic fatalities because each got out of the car and stood on its roof, from where they could have been rescued if they had stayed there instead of trying to swim to shore.

Confrontation And Reform In Mayor's First Month

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Candidate Harold Washington promised that if he was elected mayor, he would end "business as usual" at City Hall. And he did.

To hear his admirers tell it, Washington — despite great odds — is fast bringing reform to a city that legendary alderman Paddy Bauler boasted in the 1950s "ain't ready for reform."

But to hear the mayor's detractors, the city that works isn't working. They say decisions aren't made, projects languish and Washington has neglected his job while concentrating on a battle for control of the City Council.

In his first three months in office, Washington, who became the city's first black mayor after a racially divisive election, has tangled with the powers and traditions of Chicago — tinkering with its patronage machine, taking on organized labor and battling Old Guard aldermen, who seized control of the council three days after his inauguration.

On the reform side, city records are being opened to the public. City lawyers may no longer moonlight. Patronage has been limited by a court order Washington endorsed. And the public will have more time to review the budget.

On the austerity side, Washington's fired hundreds of city workers, taken a 20 percent cut in his $60,000-a-year salary, cut the 1983 projected deficit from $138.4 million to $90 million and informed labor leaders the city can't pay millions in overdue wages.

"All of these things really began to put the city on track, changing it from what it has been," said Alderman Danny Davis, one of Washington's 21 council supporters.

"There was all kinds of graft, corruption ... for ages and ages," Davis said. "(But) the mayor has ... said there will not be business as usual."

Critics emphasize another side of the Washington's administration: The mayor, who has called press and council critics "scurrious and low-down," is a confrontation politician, just like his predecessor, Jane Byrne, in her early days.

The result, they say, is that Chicago's chief executive isn't taking care of business.

After 18 years as a state legislator and congressman,

Washington came to the office held by such power politicians as Richard J. Daley and Anton Cermak.

From managing a staff of about a dozen on Capitol Hill, he claimed a city with a $2 billion annual budget and control over 30,000 jobs.

"Because he's new to executive responsibility, he's been a legislator all his life, he's been somewhat overly cautious," said Alderman Roman Pucinski, one of the council's Old Guard.

"Under our form of government, the mayor has to sign off every single detail," Pucinski said. "He's quite understandably very cautious in what he's signing. This caution, worthy as it is ... creates a bottleneck. Many projects have been held up simply because the mayor hasn't been able to get to them."

Alderman Bernard Stone, another Washington opponent, said the mayor's problems go beyond caution.

"If you wanted to count the days he's been out of town and the days you couldn't find him, it would probably be half."

"Right now, he's flushed with his importance nationally," Stone added.

Washington press aide Chris Chandler scoffs at the accusation.

"He has made three trips out of town," he said.

Washington was most visible when he and 21 council supporters crossed swords with 29 Old Guard aldermen led by Alderman Edward Vrdolyak, who took control of the council and parceled out most of the power to white aldermen.

That action was upheld in three court tests, but a coalition of black groups has filed a federal suit accusing Vrdolyak's forces of conspiring to deprive blacks of their fair share of representation.

Though some say the power struggle is racially motivated, political strategist Don Rose, who masterminded Mrs. Byrne's 1979 campaign, says that is only one element.

"The nature of the battle has surpassed the issue of race," Rose said, although he contends that both sides use it. Vrdolyak's forces, he said, "have used the racial issue to hold their people in line."

While council control is still being negotiated, mayoral aides say Washington is forging ahead with promises to reform Chicago and shape up its finances.

Foreign first names are allowed, but they must be written in the original version, not as they may sound in German. For example, the use of "Meik" for the English name "Mike" is not permitted.

Two institutes, one in East Berlin and the other in Leipzig, have the final say on whether to sanction or bar an unusual first name submitted by the child's parents.

Local birth registration offices are instructed to seek advice from one of the two institutes if they are faced with a first name which strikes officials as out of the ordinary.

Most East German parents pick conventional names for their offspring, authorities said. Christian and Michael were the most popular names last year for boys, and Nicole and Anja for girls.

Reporting the sudden popularity of Winnetou as a first name, the East German press did not give figures on how many children have been given that name.

However, the articles said "scientists" at the Leipzig institute attribute the wish for unusual first names to the influence of movies and television."

This was an apparent reference to the Winnetou serial being broadcast on East German television.

Germans have always had a soft spot for American Indians. Karl May's house in Radebeul near Dresden, East Germany, has been turned into an Indian museum. Several hundred East Germans belong to Indian clubs. They hold annual council sessions where they show up in Indian headgear and Indian attire.

He addressed both issues recently and stunned labor leaders by telling them the city cannot afford and will not honor agreements to pay more than $8 million in overdue wages to union building tradesman working for the city. They were traditionally paid wages equal to the highest paid in the private sector.

"Taking on the unions on the prevailing wage, that's a reform no mayor has ever taken on," said Rose. "He goes right into his constituency by doing this."

Davis foresees more confrontations.

"It's not going to be a love affair for four years," he said. "The issues are so it can't be ... We're talking about affirmative action. We're talking about housing. We're talking about equal treatment."

Pucinski says that may suit Washington well.

"There are those who argue very convincingly that Washington thrives on controversy," he said. "He thinks controversy gives government vigor and vitality. He may be shooting from the hip for a long time."

Germans Like Indian Names

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer
BERLIN, East Germany (AP) — What's in a name like Winnetou Schmidt? Likely, an East German child.

Winnetou, which means "burning water," has become a hit as a name for East German boys, the state press reported, despite the Communist nation's strict regulations against giving children unusual names.

Winnetou was the hero of Western epics by Karl May, a German writer whose 19th-century novels about the fictitious Apache chief and his paleface friend "Old Shatterhand" are enjoying enormous popularity in East Germany.

May, who died in 1912 at age 70, never visited America, but his fertile imagination provided vivid, if inaccurate, descriptions of life in the Old West and Indian tribal customs. Seventy million of his books have been published in German-speaking countries, making him the most widely read German author.

East German authorities frowned on May for a long time, apparently because the Nazis esed his books to illustrate their racial theory that whites and Indians should not mix.

The East Berlin government relented only this year, allowing the printing of the first Winnetou volume, and the result has been a boom in May books and cases of infants being named after the Indian hero.

Up to now, East German authorities have been very strict on first names, ruling out those which do not clearly indicate the sex of the child, family names such as Larsen (which means the son of Lars), imaginary names or geographic designations.

Foreign first names are allowed, but they must be written in the original version, not as they may sound in German. For example, the use of "Meik" for the English name "Mike" is not permitted.

Two institutes, one in East Berlin and the other in Leipzig, have the final say on whether to sanction or bar an unusual first name submitted by the child's parents.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — "Onni (sister), how could you let me live alone for more than thirty years, not trying to find me," a 38-year-old woman screamed from one side of the television screen.

"We did try, we did try," sobbed a second woman from the other side. "Nowhere could we find you."

Lee Song-Ja was speaking from a television studio in Pusan to her older sister, Chung-Soon, in Seoul, 250 miles away.

They were the 1,000th family reunited through a new and enormously popular Korean television show which helps find families separated before and during the 1950-53 Korean War.

The show has struck a nerve in this country where millions of families still have missing relatives, 30 years after the war ended.

Since June 30, the Korean Broadcasting System, the state-run television network, has brought together more than 2,200 families on the program.

In one tearful reunion, Huh Hyun-Chul, 39, told his 34-year-old sister, "You are Huh Hyun-Ok, not Kim Hyun-Ok. You've found not only your brother but also your real name."

Astounded, the woman remained speechless for a moment and then began yelling "oppa, oppa (brother)" before she broke down.

Meant to be a two-hour one-shot program, the show was planned as the final episode in a series of anniversary programs on the Korean War, its producer Ahn Kuk-Jong said. But it proved so successful, more segments were announced.

The following day, tens of thousands of people, including many from provincial towns, formed a long line to register to appear on the show. By the weekend, more than 100,900 people had signed up, and thousands have had the chance to tell their stories.

The program is hosted by Yoo Chul-Jong, a 50-year-old former air force major, and Lee Chi-Yun, 35, a popular daytime television personality. Both are frequently seen wiping away tears during the program.

The show allows less than a minute for each participant to appear with a handwritten sign inscribed with the names of relatives being sought and a brief account of how they were separated.

On July 10, the program included a one-hour telecast from Los Angeles to introduce 57 families, and three of them found their relatives within a few hours after the show was broadcast. The station said future segments will cover Korean communities in New York, Chicago and other major American cities.

On weekdays, the network replays the videotapes of earlier programs on screens set up inside and outside the KBS Building and at nine provincial stations that take part in the project.

Thousands of people visit the KBS Building each day. Its walls and main steps are lined with posters and placards, advertising for missing relatives.

Authorities say more than 20 families have found their relatives through these posters, while many others encountered relatives in line waiting to register or inside the studio. One man found his brother the day after he was reunited with his sister.

Most people aren't so lucky. About 90 percent of those registered have not yet found relatives or have learned that they are already dead, KBS officials say.

Small details or unusual physical features often served as key factors in determining kinship, especially for those who grew up in orphanages where they often had been given new names. Sometimes, worn-out family pictures provided evidence.

Huh Hyun-Chul found his sister because she remembered a barbershop where they parted. She was then only four years old.

"Yes, that is right. You were given to a barber and I cried hard when I was leaving that barbershop in Suncho," the brother said, tears welling in his eyes.

Kwak Man-Young, 49, raised his arms and cheered the country and KBS when he learned that his mother was still alive. The information came from a sister he had not seen for more than 30 years.

In another case, 61-year-old Lee Kwan-Yun, who found her son after a 33-year separation, "It still seems like a dream to me that I could see my son again. If ... I am dreaming a dream now, I wish I would not wake up."

The reunions have not extended to people living in North Korea.

That country, which boycotts any talks with South Korea for political reasons, has denounced the reunion program as a ruse and a "hypocritical burlesque" aimed to "deceive the people and public opinion at home and abroad."

No State Charge Of Embezzling

NEWLAND, N.C. (AP) — District attorney Tom Rusher says he will not file state charges in the embezzlement of $22,000 from the town of Banner Elk.

Frank Pusey, former Banner Elk police chief, pleaded guilty March 7 to federal charges of mail fraud in connection with the case. He was given a three-year suspended sentence and fined $2,500. He had already paid $15,000 in restitution to the town.

"If the slate were clean and we had first shot at the investigation, we might view it differently," Rusher said Monday. "But given everything that has happened and where things stand, we will not initiate any action."

U.S. Attorney Charles R. Brewer said in March that he became involved in the case only after Rusher declined to prosecute. Rusher said he never declined to prosecute, but simply had asked that the Banner Elk Town Council vote to file a complaint.

"There was never any complaint made," Rusher said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened sharply higher today, extending Tuesday's gains, as interest rate jitters faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks leaped up 15.42 points to 1,212.54 in the opening half hour.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Congressional testimony by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker today appeared to calm fears that the Fed would adopt a more restrictive stance, pushing interest rates sharply higher and choking off an economic recovery.

There had been widespread concern that the Fed would have to tighten monetary reins again to curtail the sharp growth of the basic money supply, known as M1, or risk rekindling double-digit inflation. Today, Volcker said the Fed was paying less attention to M1 and was revising the way it calculates M1 growth to ignore a surge early in the year.

In credit markets, short- and long-term interest rates fell for a third straight day. Expectations that the Fed planned no major tightening had been building all week and Volcker's testimony was leaked by Washington sources late Tuesday.

Of the 15 most active issues in the early going, only one declined and only one was unchanged. The rest rose.

Today's early prices included Gulf States Utilities, up $\frac{1}{4}$ at 14 $\frac{1}{2}$; Consolidated Edison of New York, down $\frac{1}{4}$ at 23; Security Pacific, up $\frac{1}{2}$ at 51 $\frac{1}{2}$; Leaseway Transportation, up $\frac{1}{4}$ at 40; Pacific Gas & Electric, up $\frac{1}{4}$ at 15; and Mesa Petroleum, unchanged at 15 $\frac{1}{4}$.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 7.22 points to 1,197.12.

About three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 74.03 million shares from 69.11 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 52 to 95.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.59 at 240.71.

the smaller problems. "We try to get (the electricity of) the largest number of people back on as quickly as we can," Green commented.

County chairman Leroy James of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service said Tuesday night's rainfall would help the county's struggling corn crop.

"There's no question about it," said James, "it will make a big difference in the corn." He said much of the late corn in Pitt County was "beyond hope" but that early corn would benefit from the moisture.

The corn crop, in the quick-growth tasseling and silking stage, has been under severe stress from the nearly two-week drought that has gripped the state since early in July.

Eastern North Carolina had baked in a dry spell for two weeks. The last measurable precipitation, .01 inch, was recorded at the Greenville Utilities Water Plant July 6.

Greenville Utilities reported that the peak day for water consumption was last Friday. According to water plant operator Cliff Shackleford, 8.242 million gallons were used on that day.

"Consumption (of water) is fairly normal for this time of year during a dry spell," Shackleford said. He added that local residents do not have to worry about conserving water yet because the plant can handle 12 million gallons a day, with another 2.5 million in reserve in deep wells.

Glenn Hardee, general manager of the Eastern Pines Water Corp., said, "Water consumption has gone up tremendously, and this is directly related to the heat. All the wells are running at capacity."

Water is important to the survival of plants, animals and humans. In a heat wave such as the one eastern North Carolina is currently in, water is especially important. Two persons have died as a result of heat-related problems.

Dr. Michael J. House, a Greenville veterinarian, said pet owners "really do have to worry about pets in the heat, because they don't respond to the environment quickly enough." He noted that dogs do not sweat and therefore have no cooling mechanism.

Leroy James of the Agricultural Extension Service and House offered the following advice for pet care in the heat:

- See that the pet has water three or four times a day to keep it from dehydrating.
- Keep pets out of the sun. Find a cool place for them; run a window fan to cool the pet off.
- Try to reduce the pet's activity.
- Clip the pet's hair if it is long and thick.
- There are certain breeds of dogs that are more prone to the heat than others," House said. "I suggest that long-haired dogs such as

City Counts 3 Collisions

An estimated $4,100 damage resulted from three collisions Monday and Tuesday, according to Greenville police records.

In an accident that occurred Monday, a vehicle driven by David Carroll Wilson of Route 3, Greenville, collided with the vehicle of Michael Lee Hall of Atlanta on Memorial Drive. No injuries were reported and Hall was charged with a safe movement violation.

Estimated damage to the Wilson vehicle was $150, while damage to the Hall vehicle was placed at $450.

In a collision that occurred at the intersection of Chestnut and Wilson streets Tuesday, a vehicle driven by Ann Jones McLellan of 1209 Ragsdale Road collided with a vehicle driven by Chester Field Corey of 618 B Hudson St. McLellan was charged with failure to yield at stop sign. No injuries resulted.

Estimated damage to the McLellan vehicle was $2,000, while damage to the Corey vehicle was approximately $800.

Another accident resulted Tuesday when the vehicle of Frank Moyer Jr. of 1218 Farmville Boulevard collided on Fifth Street with a vehicle driven by Anthony George Bess of Grifton.

Bess was charged with following too closely. No injuries were reported.

Damage to the Moyer vehicle was placed at $300, while damage to the Bess vehicle was estimated at $400.

collies and St. Bernards be clipped.

"Dogs with short noses, such as bull dogs and pekinese, have more problems with heat prostration," he said. These dogs "increase their respiration and use their lungs for a radiator," and House said they have problems breathing when the air is hot and stagnant.

The veterinarian said cats do not have many problems with the heat because "they are so inactive." He added that parakeets and other pet birds have problems in the heat and should be kept away from hot areas of the house such as the kitchen.

Large farm animals also have problems with overheating. The animal experts suggested providing shelters for cattle so they can get out of the heat, leaving a block of salt out so the cattle can lick it during the day and running fans in a hog house or cattle barn to draw out some of the heat.

...AND NOW THEY HANG WOMEN

On June 18th the Islamic Republic of Iran hanged ten women, three of them teen-age girls. Their "crime" was refusal to recant their faith.

They were Bahá'ís and as Bahá'ís believed in:

- The unity of mankind
- The unity of all religions
- The equality of all races
- The equality of men and women
- Universal education
- Universal peace
- The harmony of science and religion

Iran's mullahs threaten to destroy the entire Bahá'í community. The judge who condemned the women to death, and recently sent seven Bahá'í men to the gallows, warned: "The Islamic nation will, God willing, fulfill the prayer mentioned in the Koran, 'Lord, leave not one single family of infidels on earth.'"

The President of the United States appealed to the Ayatollah Khomeini to stop the killings, and the Congress in a concurrent resolution has condemned the persecution.

Only the concerted pressure of world public opinion can avert a tragedy of appalling proportions: genocide.

We invite Americans of all races and creeds to express support of Presidential and Congressional appeals to end these killings. The people of the United States should be in the forefront of world demands that the barbarous persecution of a peaceful community cease.

Department Urges White To Let NCAA Order Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says a court order should be allowed to stand that would break up the NCAA's exclusive control of college football telecasts.

The department on Tuesday urged Supreme Court Justice Byron White not to stay a lower court order which nullified the NCAA's existing television contracts and opened the way for colleges to make their own TV deals.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has been granted a temporary stay of the ruling that invalidated $281 million in television contracts with ABC, CBS and Turner Broadcasting System and is seeking one that will hold until the Supreme Court can decide whether to hear the case.

The University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia Athletic Association won the ruling in U.S. District Court in Oklahoma in their suit charging that the contracts violate federal antitrust law. The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver upheld the lower court and rejected the NCAA's bid for a stay.

In a friend-of-the-court brief filed at White's invitation, Solicitor General Rex E. Lee said the department thinks it unlikely that the full Supreme Court would decide to review the ruling, and declined to give an opinion on whether anybody would be permanently hurt if a stay were not granted.

"Although many of the justifications offered by the NCAA merited careful consideration by the (lower) court," Lee wrote, "on balance, the NCAA failed to justify the restriction that it has placed on the ability of its member schools to arrange for the telecast of their own football games."

Lee said that the NCAA's conduct violated the Sherman Act, an antitrust law, although he said that the justice department disagrees with some aspects of the court of appeals ruling.

For example, Lee wrote, the appeals court should have focused on the NCAA's regulatory power over colleges rather than on its power over television advertisers.

White over the weekend issued a temporary order postponing the effect of the appeals court ruling against the NCAA. He asked for briefs from both sides and the Justice Department to help him decide whether to issue a longer-lasting stay that would remain in effect until the Supreme Court decided whether to hear the case.

In Oklahoma City, Andy Coats, the attorney representing the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia Athletic Association, said a decision by White to allow a stay would ruin the schools' chances of negotiating their own contracts this season.

Coats, the mayor of Oklahoma City, said he hoped for a decision from White late this week or early next week.

Several colleges are considering options if U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga's decision voiding the NCAA's contracts goes in effect. Among the possibilities are a television package offered by the College Football Association and a free-for-all scramble by the schools for rich cable contracts.

When the Supreme Court is out of session, as it is now, one justice can issue a stay of a lower court ruling if he believes four members of the Supreme Court would eventually vote to give the case a hearing.

Judge To Decide Fate Of Red Sox Owners

BOSTON (AP) — Did two of the Red Sox general partners set up a local broadcasting millionaire in a "squeeze play" against the third partner?

Did that same third partner plot with a money man from Kentucky to grab control of the American League club in violation of state law and the club's charter?

After seven days of testimony revealing the bitter unraveling of the team's ownership agreement, those issues and more than half a dozen others await a decision from Superior Court Chief Justice James P. Lynch Jr., an avowed Red Sox fan.

Lynch took the case under advisement late Tuesday after closing arguments from lawyers representing Kentucky coal investor J. Rogers Badgett and Red Sox general partner Buddy LeRoux on one side and the two other general partners, Mrs. Jean Yawkey and Haywood Sullivan, on the other.

LeRoux threw the franchise into turmoil June 6 by announcing that he and Badgett had rounded up enough limited partnerships to amend the general partnership agreement and put LeRoux in charge rather than Sullivan.

The Sullivan-Yawkey forces sued to block the move, charging that LeRoux had no right to take control. They also asked the court to uphold their right to buy LeRoux out.

In his closing argument, attorney James St. Clair, representing Badgett, claimed that Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey had wanted to be rid of LeRoux for some time.

To that end, St. Clair said, they manipulated David Mugar, a wealthy Boston businessman, into negotiations with LeRoux and Badgett over sale of their shares. The goal was to trick LeRoux into making an offer that would trigger the other partners' right to buy his share.

"In conclusion, the evidence has established beyond serious question that a power play or squeeze play was planned against Mr. LeRoux and Mr. Badgett to get them out at the cheapest price," St. Clair said.

In his hour-long rebuttal, attorney Daniel Goldberg, representing Sullivan and Mrs. Yawkey, said, "That allegation of conspiracy has no more substance than the emperor's new clothes."

Allen Baffles NL Hitters

By The Associated Press

Neil Allen feels the difference, but perhaps not as much as the National League hitters who must face him since he was traded from the New York Mets to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Allen was 2-7 when he was traded to the Cards for Keith Hernandez on June 15. Since that time, he is 4-1 for St. Louis in seven starts with a 2.39 ERA in 49 innings.

"If I made a mistake and gave up a run or two, the game was over there (in New York)," Allen said Tuesday night after pitching a 4-0, three-hit victory against the San Diego Padres.

"These guys (the Cards) make that up, so I can just go after the hitters," Allen said. "It's a difference between night and day mentally. Here I don't have to worry about anything. All I have to do is throw strikes."

Ozzie Smith provided what little offensive support Allen needed with a two-run homer, his second of the season and second in four games, off Padres left-hander Tim Lollar, who also threw a three-hitter.

"There's no comparison," Allen said. "It's a whole new relaxed atmosphere here."

In other NL games, Atlanta defeated New York 11-7, Houston downed Philadelphia 7-3, San Francisco beat Chicago 4-3, Cincinnati took Montreal 5-2 and Los Angeles and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader, the Pirates winning the opener 4-1 and losing the nightcap 3-2 in 11 innings.

Braves 11, Mets 7

Jerry Royster homered and Glenn Hubbard hit a two-run triple in Atlanta's seven-run sixth inning, boosting the Braves over the Mets, who had led 6-1 when the inning began.

The Braves had six consecutive hits in the inning, chasing New York starter Tom Seaver and tagging reliever Jesse Orosco with the loss. Royster drove in the first run of the inning with his homer and the last run of the frame with a single. Bob Horner had a two-run double in the inning.

The big inning offset a pair of two-run homers by Mets rookie Darryl Strawberry, who has 11 on the year.

Astros 7, Phillies 3

Phil Garner homered and drove in three runs, and Terry Puhl scored three times to lead Houston to its 12th victory in 14 games. The Phillies, meanwhile, lost their second in a row under new Manager Paul Owens, who replaced the fired Pat Corrales.

Puhl singled, doubled and tripled in Houston's attack, twice delayed by rain, before the game and again in the first inning.

Bob Knepper, 4-9, gave up four hits in five innings, yielding three unearned runs, and Mike LaCoss recorded his first save of the season in a rare relief appearance.

Giants 4, Cubs 3

Darrell Evans raced home with the winning run on catcher Jody Davis' error in the 10th inning, and Milt May hit his third home run in three games as San Francisco edged Chicago.

The Giants loaded the bases in the 10th off Bill Campbell on a walk to Evans and consecutive singles by Jack Clark and Jeff Leonard, who bunted his way aboard. Max Venable then grounded to first baseman Bill Buckner, but Davis dropped Buckner's throw home for an error, allowing Evans to score.

May hit his sixth homer of the season to lead off the fifth.

Reds 5, Expos 2

Joe Price pitched five innings of one-hit ball and Dann Bilardello drove in three runs as the Reds beat the Expos in a game delayed nearly five hours by rain.

The start of the game was delayed for two hours and 48 minutes and rain returned in the fifth inning to add a further delay of 2:07.

Price, 9-5, allowed only a one-out single by Doug Flynn in the second inning. He won his fourth straight game by going the first five innings.

Ben Hayes took over after the second rain delay and allowed three hits in three innings. Bill Scherrer came on to pitch the ninth but left after walking two batters with one out. Tom Hume took over and allowed pinch hitter Terry Francona's sacrifice fly in recording his sixth save.

Bilardello stroked a two-run double in the seventh and Eddie Milner hit his fifth homer to lead off the eighth to break open a tight game. Bilardello added a run-scoring single in the ninth.

Pirates 4-2, Dodgers 1-3

John Candelaria pitched the Pirates to their eighth straight victory as they won the opener, and the Dodgers ended the skein in the nightcap when Rick Monday drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning at Pittsburgh.

Candelaria ran his personal winning streak to six games, combining with Rod Scurry on a seven-hitter. Scurry worked 1 1-3 innings of hitless relief. Brian Harper homered for Pittsburgh in the first game.

In the nightcap, Monday's sac fly drove in Steve Sax for L.A.'s winning run. Sax singled and went all the way to third as Pirates first baseman Jason Thompson waited for Derrell Thomas' bunt to roll foul. It didn't.

Wheat First Securities Junior Tourney Opens

The Greenville/Wheat First Securities Junior Tennis Tournament, co-sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, gets under way Thursday at 9 a.m. at the River Birch Tennis Center.

Players from all over Eastern North Carolina and from as far away as Charlotte will be participating. Several players with state rankings will be playing in the event, including 19th-ranked and top-seeded Greg Lloyd of Raleigh in the boys 18 division.

In the boys 12 division Greenville's David Ruiz, ranked fifth in the state, is the top seed. Laura Ross of Concord will be the top-seeded girl in the 16-year-old division. The top seeds in the girls 14 are Catherine Land and Kelly Wall of Greenville.

There will be over 100 juniors participating in the event, with the finals scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday.

Beanball Leads To Fight, Ejections

By The Associated Press

Was Toronto reliever Jim Acker throwing at Hal McRae, or did he merely slip?

"It doesn't really matter what his intentions were, it's what happened," McRae said.

What happened was that McRae, who homered off Luis Leal in the fifth inning of Kansas City's 6-2 triumph Tuesday night, got hit in the helmet by an Acker pitch to lead off the seventh.

"I've been hit several times since I got hit in the head in 1974, but I've never gone out to the mound," McRae said.

Until Tuesday night in Toronto. The Royals slugger charged Acker, knocked into him and then both players disappeared beneath a pile of bodies as the benches emptied. When order was restored, McRae and Acker were ejected.

"I'm not sorry I did it," McRae said.

"I got hit in the head. I got a right to go."

"I don't mind that style of play," said the rugged McRae. "I can give it and take it as good as anybody in the game."

Acker said the brawl-triggering pitch was a fastball that got away.

"Hitting somebody is part of the game, but you don't intentionally throw at the guy's head," Acker said. "We were only down by three runs and I was pitching good. The last thing I wanted to do was get myself ejected."

McRae said he didn't speak to the Blue Jays' pitcher after the incident.

"I didn't go out there to talk," McRae said.

"I didn't say nothing. There was nothing to say."

In other American League games, New York beat Minnesota 4-0, Cleveland edged Chicago 5-4, Texas halted Milwaukee 3-1, California defeated Boston 6-1, Detroit got past Oakland 4-3, and Baltimore topped Seattle 8-1.

McRae's solo homer, his sixth, gave the Royals a 5-2 lead against Leal, 10-7, in the fifth inning. George Brett's 19th homer made it 6-2 in the ninth.

Bud Black, 4-3, allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Dan Quisenberry finished up for his major-league leading 22nd save.

Black had thrown high and inside to Cliff Johnson in the sixth inning after the Blue Jays' power hitter belted three long foul balls. Some said Acker's pitch precipitated the beanball to McRae.

Yankees 4, Twins 0

Shane Rawley threw a six-hitter in shutting down visiting Minnesota, which lost its sixth straight game.

Rawley needed just 101 pitches and faced only 31 batters as New York won its fifth consecutive game. It was Rawley's second career shutout and the Yankees helped out by turning four double plays.

Rawley upped his record to 9-8 as only one Twin reached second base. The left-hander is now 7-1 lifetime against Minnesota.

Oscar Gamble singled home the game's first run in the first inning against Bobby Castillo, 5-8. He doubled and scored on Graig Nettles' single in the fourth.

Dave Winfield's two-run triple capped the scoring in the fifth inning.

Indians 5, White Sox 4

Andre Thornton, usually a designated hitter, belted a solo home run in the bottom of the eighth inning to put the Indians ahead. He then made two fine plays at first base in the ninth to preserve the victory in Cleveland.

Thornton's 12th homer came off reliever Dick Tidrow, 2-2. Manny Trillo drove in Cleveland's first three runs.

Rick Sutcliffe upped his record to 12-4 despite allowing 10 hits. Three of those hits were RBI singles by Jerry Hairston, Vance Law and Jerry Dybzinski in the fourth inning that put Chicago ahead 4-2.

Rangers 3, Brewers 1

Texas and the Brewers were tied 1-1 after five innings when the rains came in Milwaukee.

After a delay of one hour and 59 minutes, George Wright singled home the go-ahead run in the sixth inning, snapping Milwaukee's eight-game winning streak. The victory also ended Texas' five-game losing streak.

Wright got his key hit off Don Sutton,

7-6.

Rick Honeycutt, 12-6, went the first five innings for the victory. John Butcher took over after the rain delay and finished up for his fifth save.

Angels 6, Red Sox 1

Right-hander Ken Forsch threw a three-hitter to beat Boston.

Forsch, 9-6, blanked the Red Sox on two singles before Dave Stapleton led off the eighth with his sixth homer of the season.

Forsch struck out three and walked one in pitching his ninth complete game of the season.

The Angels, playing at home, took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on an error and Fred Lynn's run-scoring groundout.

Brian Downing belted a two-run homer in the third, his ninth, and Lynn drilled his 16th home run to lead off the sixth.

Tigers 4, A's 3

Detroit rallied for two runs in the top of the ninth inning in Oakland to nip the A's.

Alan Trammell led off the decisive inning by drawing a walk from Dave Beard, 2-3. Lou Whitaker moved Trammell to third with a bloop single and Enos Cabell followed with his second sacrifice fly of the game.

Whitaker took second on the throw home, stole third and scored on Glenn Wilson's sharp single to center.

Oakland had taken a 3-2 lead in the eighth on a wild pitch by Jack Morris, 10-8.

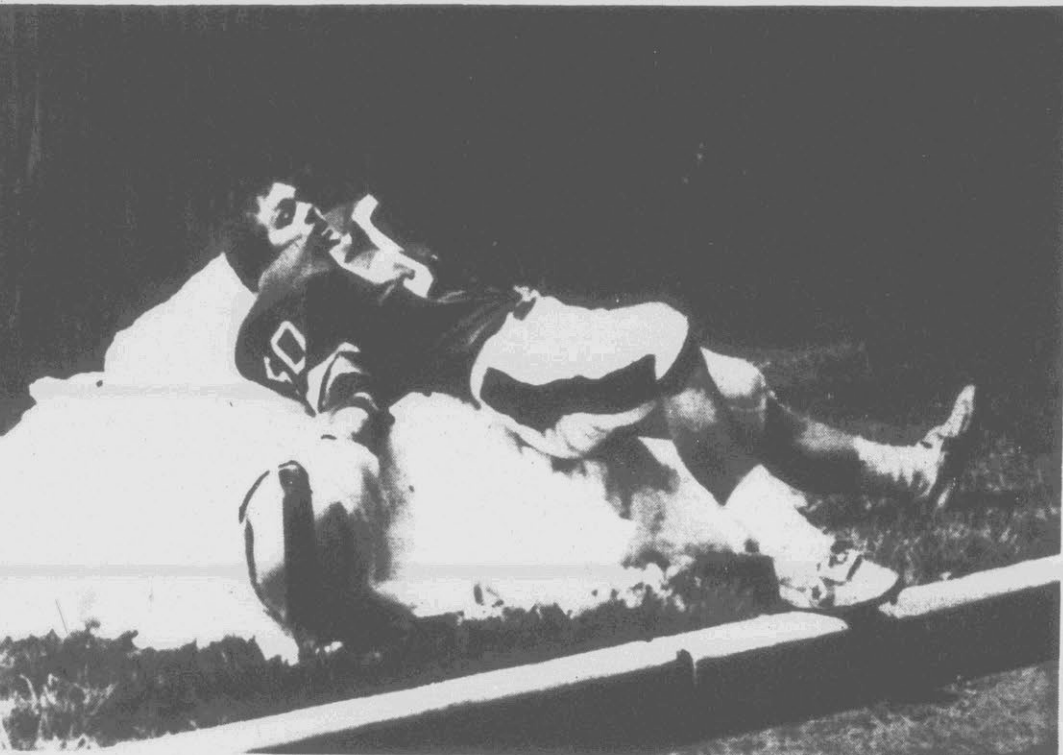

Davey Lopes hit his 12th homer for the A's.

Orioles 8, Mariners 1

Scott McGregor's four-hitter shackled Seattle while Cal Ripken drove in three runs with a homer and a double.

McGregor, 11-4, retired the final 16 Mariner batters in Seattle. He struck out one and did not issue a walk.

Ripken's solo homer, his 15th, gave Baltimore a 3-1 lead in the third. The Orioles then chased Glenn Abbott, 3-2, with four runs in the fifth.

White Ready For Return To NFL; Matthews Ready To Sit Out 1983

By The Associated Press

Sherman White likes life in the National Football League so much he wants to come back and is awaiting a contract offer from the Buffalo Bills. Bruce Matthews doesn't even want to get started in the NFL for what the Houston Oilers are offering him.

White, an 11-year-veteran defensive end, said after last season he had lost his enthusiasm for the game. But he indicated Tuesday that he's had a change of heart.

"I'd love to be in Buffalo," White said. "I'd like to be signed, sealed and delivered."

"I put all my faith into the fact that Buffalo would try and sign me and bring me into camp. But I won't come to camp without a contract."

White, the second player chosen in the 1972 draft, started four seasons for the Cincinnati Bengals before being traded to Buffalo in 1976.

Last year, despite playing well in the Bills' 4-5 season, White said he was tired and he didn't get the usual charge when he looked at teammates' faces in the huddle.

"The faces looked empty," said White,

34. "There was no enthusiasm."

White became a free agent in February but turned down an offer to play in the new United States Football League.

Matthews, a tackle from Southern California, was the Oilers' No. 1 draft choice but said he would sit out the 1983 season rather than accept the Oilers latest offer of a $1.2 million, four-year contract. Matthews wants a $1.6 million pact over four years.

Asked if he would sit out the season as an alternative, Matthews said "Well, I have to say I don't want to, but if it came to that I wouldn't have much choice based on what I've decided."

"If they don't want to sign me there are other avenues that can be taken."

Matthews said the "other avenues" included the USFL or a possible trade. "But I really want to play in Houston," he added.

Elsewhere, Detroit sent former All-Pro defensive end Al "Bubba" Baker to the St. Louis Cardinals, completing a deal that brought the Lions' defensive tackle Mike Dawson.

The Cardinals also will give the Lions a high undisclosed choice in next year's draft.

Detroit's second-round choice in 1978 out of Colorado State, Baker played in 67 games for the Lions, recording 75 quarterback sacks, and appearing in the Pro Bowl in each of his first three seasons.

The Philadelphia Eagles signed defensive lineman Ken Clarke, their second leading tackler in 1982, to a series of one-year contracts.

The Dallas Cowboys cut free agent running backs Rick Asberry of Pittsburgh and James Banks of Indiana State. Linebacker John Fortner of Idaho left camp voluntarily, and Virginia tackle David Sullivan, troubled with knee problems, failed his physical.

Denver's Rick Upchurch, the NFL's all-time leading punt returner, worked out Tuesday, then talked freely about being in a drug rehabilitative program for four weeks at the Hazleton Foundation at Center City, Minn.

"They had to prove to me that smoking marijuana could be addicting," said Upchurch, who added that although he used marijuana to help him sleep after a game, he was through with it.

"I'm making sure I'm not smoking marijuana or anything," he said. "I owe it to myself and to the organization."

Foreign Tournaments Paying Guarantee Money

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly every tennis tournament not held in the United States is breaking the sport's rules and paying guarantees to attract top professional players, according to a world-wide tennis publication.

The August issue of the World Tennis magazine said that 95 percent of those Grand Prix events have doled out "millions of dollars annually ... in appearance fees to the top four or five players in the world, and an additional 15 to 25 'special interest' players."

Last month, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina — one of the world's top players — was fined and suspended for a year by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for allegedly taking $100,000 to appear in a tournament in Rotterdam, Holland. Tournament officials also were disciplined.

Grand Prix rules prohibit payment directly or indirectly to influence or guarantee a player's appearance at a tournament.

The story, a product of a six-month investigation, cites specific examples of six-figure guarantees paid to top tennis pros to ensure their participation in specified tournaments.

"Payola has become endemic in tennis, as much a part of the sport as rackets and balls," the story said.

"The fine line between legitimate product endorsements and actual player 'inducements' to influence the appearance of players at tournaments has become muddled."

Agent Mark McCormick told the magazine, "Under the rules, guarantees are not acceptable. But I think they're kidding themselves a little bit."

M. Marshall Happer III, Pro Council administrator, told the magazine, "It's perfectly OK to maximize your income if such is incidental to playing in the event," but he felt players and agents have misused the privilege.

Happer claimed that guarantees "reduce a player's incentive to win" and said he has put five to 10 Grand Prix tournaments under scrutiny.

John Harris, co-chairman of the $200,000 D.C. National Bank Classic, said Monday that it was "interesting" that Eliot Teltscher, Guillermo Vilas and Jose Higuera were skipping his tournament.

"I'm not accusing anybody of taking any guarantee money," Harris said, "that would be a difficult thing to prove. But why does a player go back to Europe to play in a small tournament?"

Teltscher, ranked 17th in the world, said that he "forgot" during his vacation to withdraw from the $75,000 International Championships of Netherlands in Hilversum this week. He said he had intended to play in Stuttgart, West Germany, last week, but changed his mind.

"I think it's terrible for a guy to insinuate that I took guarantee money," Teltscher said. "He doesn't have any idea of what he's saying. He never contacted me about playing there (in Washington)."

Like Teltscher, Higuera is playing in Hilversum. The director of that tournament, Peter Van Eijsden, said, "I did not give either player any money. I'm probably the only tournament director in Europe who doesn't pay under the table. We're just a poor, small tournament."

The article cited the following incidents as examples of ambiguity surrounding the issue:

—The announced prize money for the Pro-Serv organized European Champions Championship in Antwerp, Belgium, was $700,000. It attracted Ivan Lendl, John McEnroe, Bjorn Borg, Mats Wilander and Yannick Noah. The player budget for the event, according to sources, was actually $2 million, including the guarantees that were paid. The event was played at the same time as the Australian Open.

—In August of 1982, Jimmy Connors played in the National Revenue Tennis Classic at Columbus, Ohio, opposite the prestigious $200,000 U.S. Open Clay Court Championships in Indianapolis. Connors did a TV spot and "received a fee for promotional work." Though a tournament spokesman declined to specify how much, sources said it ranged between $50,000 and $80,000.

—In March, 1982, it was announced that McEnroe signed an agreement to endorse a soft drink called Topspin, made by Lipton Tea, Italy. Coincidentally, McEnroe had decided to play the Italian Open.

—Connors decided to play in the U.S. Pro Championships outside Boston after his mother's firm, Tennis Management Inc., was appointed co-promoter by the Longwood Cricket Club."

First baseman Rip Collins of the Chicago Cubs played a full game on one occasion without making a putout or an assist.

Blackaller Pilots Liberty In Light Wind

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Tom Blackaller sailed to a light-wind victory over America's Cup rival Dennis Conner, but says he must shell out big money for some changes in his boat.

"We've got to get her going in 25 knots of wind and a chop," said Blackaller. "It's expensive and its time-consuming, but we've got to do it."

The two-time world champion in the Star class took the wheel of Defender Tuesday and pinned a whopping two-minute, 40-second defeat on Conner's Liberty, racing in a feeble southerly wind.

"Our boat is obviously very, very fast in light air," Blackaller said, with a grin. "If we can keep that and get her going in heavy winds, we are going to have a barn burner."

The 43-year-old silver-haired skipper from Alameda, Calif., was alluding to his two losses to Conner Saturday in blustery winds by margins of 1:09 and 2:39. The race committee later took away the second victory on Blackaller's protest.

"We will probably have to spend $50,000 on a lot of metal changes — hull shape changes," Blackaller said, "It will probably take 10 days."

Kaat's Release From Cards Ends '25-Year Vacation' In Baseball

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Kaat, whose major league career spanned a longer period than any other pitcher, says he's resigned to having appeared a final time on the mound.

"I've turned the page on my playing days," the 44-year-old Kaat said this week from his home in Glen Mills, Pa. "I have no complaints. I had a 25-year vacation, but it happened so fast."

Kaat, released two weeks ago by the St. Louis Cardinals, appeared in 898 games, the fifth-highest number in major league history, during a career which started with the Washington Senators in 1959.

He was one of only seven players in the history of the game to play in parts of four decades. The others were Willie McCovey, Mickey Vernon, Ted Williams, Early Wynn, Minnie Minoso and Tim McCarver. He was acquired by St. Louis in 1980 from the New York Yankees.

Kaat made baseball history in April 1982 when he appeared in the Cards' opening game, thereby becoming the first pitcher to perform in 24 major league seasons. The mark surpassed the record of 23 he had shared with Wynn.

When released by St. Louis, the native of Zeeland, Mich., ranked 19th on the all-time list for pitching triumphs with his 283-237 career record and 18th in strikeouts with 2,461.

Following his release, Kaat attempted to hook on with clubs short of left-handers, but struck out with the management of the Milwaukee Brewers, Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates.

"They have younger pitchers in the farm system they want to bring up," said Kaat.

Rio Piedras Provides Baseball Talent

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

One day in 1975, as 12-year-old Jose Oquendo trotted off a Little League field in Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, a middle-aged man came up to him. "You're something special," the man told young Jose, "and I'm going to teach you how to play and act like a big leaguer."

"Sure, I knew who he was. Everyone in Puerto Rico knows Vic Power," says Oquendo, 20-year-old rookie shortstop for the New York Mets. "He said he would help me get to the big leagues. And he said he would show me how to act when I got there."

Rio Piedras, a San Juan neighborhood located in the shadow of Roberto Clemente Stadium, is Shortstop City, home to three National League starting shortstops — Oquendo, Ivan DeJesus of the Philadelphia Phillies and Dickie Thon of the Houston Astros. Not to mention Ed Romero of the Milwaukee Brewers, Sixto Lezcano of the San Diego Padres and such former big leaguers as Felix Millan and Willie Montanez.

All are disciples of Vic Power, who knows what life in the big leagues are about.

There may be more fertile areas for baseball talent — for example, San Pedro de Macoris in the Dominican Republic, a city of 100,000 that currently has 13 men on major league rosters, including Pedro Guerrero, Joaquin Andujar, Rafael Ramirez and Julio Franco.

But no one man has been as productive as Power, who compiled a .284 batting average in 12 big league seasons in Philadelphia, Kansas City, Cleveland and Minnesota. A part-time scout for the California Angels, he's also a full-time guru to young ballplayers like Oquendo and Juan Nieves, an 18-year-old pitcher with unlimited promise who just signed out of prep school with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I would say that 60 to 70 percent of the players in Puerto Rico — not just those in the States, but the ones that are still here — have been coached by Vic Power," says Luis Rodriguez Mayoral, a close friend of Power's and a one-time scout for the Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates.

Every Wednesday, from 2 p.m. until 7, Power runs a clinic for teen-agers; on Tuesdays and Thursdays, the younger kids get their shot. The clinics, free of charge, are tightly disciplined, akin to a major league spring training camp with graduates like DeJesus, Millan and Montanez often acting as instructors.

"We try to teach them the fundamentals of the game," says Power. "Puerto Ricans play the game by instinct. They don't know the fundamentals."

But there's more to it than that.

"He knows how to communicate with kids," says Rodriguez. "If they are going to play in the States, he teaches them how to live there. He teaches them how to sit at a table, how to eat, how to dress, how to address people — 'yes sir, yes ma'am.'"

"I call it psychology," says Power. "I tell them about the problems they will have with the language, with segregation, with the food, with all those things."

Power — born Victor Pellot 51 years ago in the rural town of Arecibo — knows about such things. In the early 50s, he was a showpiece of the New York Yankees' organization, slated to become the team's first black. But in 1954, a AAA sensation, he was traded to the Philadelphia A's and came to the majors with them.

He retired in 1965 and returned home. "I felt that I was obliged to give Puerto Rican kids my experience," he says. "I felt I represented Puerto Rico in the major leagues and they must do the same."

There is one other thing to know about Vic Power, a showboating first baseman who caught the ball one-handed with a flourishing sweep of the glove. Numerous managers tried to change him, he says, until Jimmy Dykes told him: "Don't argue with success."

These days, he laughs about that. "I tell players to keep their own style, but I tell them: 'Don't Showboat!'"

Jose Oquendo talks about that, pausing to reach for the right English phrase.

"He taught me ..." Oquendo says.

"He taught me not to be a Hot Dog."

Ladies Classic Set At Southern Pines

The Third Annual Faberge Ladies Golf Classic to benefit Camp Easter-In-The-Pines will be held July 29-31 at Mid-Pines Resort in Southern Pines.

In conjunction with the Ladies Classic will be a celebrity amateur tournament July 27-29 including such stars as Larry Storch and Forrest Tucker of "F Troop" fame, Claude "Sheriff Lobo" Akins and band leader Buddy Rogers. Also attending will be Jeff Mullins, Red Wilson, Enos "Country" Slaughter, Bones McKinney, Leslie Neilson, Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice and former Gov. Jim Holshouser. Playing golf with the celebrities will be sponsors and other special friends of Camp Easter.

All proceeds from both events will be donated to Camp Easter. Owned and operated by the Easter Seal Society, Camp Easter is a residential camping facility for the physically handicapped, serving hundreds of children and adults each year.

Apparently Unable To Meet Adjournment Goal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State lawmakers compromised on bingo and raffle regulation and postponed action on gubernatorial succession, but still appeared unable to meet today's self-imposed adjournment deadline.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said Tuesday that the session would not end before Thursday, although the Senate has approved a resolution calling for adjournment at 2:30 p.m. today.

"When you've got tax bills, spending bills, midwifery, bingo, and hazardous wastes in your lap within the past 48 hours, it's a pretty sizable load," Green said in an interview.

A joint conference committee Tuesday quickly resolved differences between House and Senate versions of a bill designed to keep professional operators out of charity-sponsored bingo games.

The bill would allow civic, charitable, religious, veterans' or fraternal organizations to obtain a one-year license from the Department of Revenue to run bingo games. One or more group members, not outsiders, would conduct the games.

The groups would have to own the equipment and own or lease for at least one year the property where the games are played.

Sessions could be no longer than five hours long and would be limited to two per week separated by at least 48 hours. Raffles would be limited to one per month.

The maximum cash or merchandise prize for a bingo game would be $500, except $1,500 or $2,500 for those who hold only one session per week. The maximum prize for a raffle would be $500 in cash or $20,000 in merchandise.

Money received from bingo games would be placed in a separate bank account. All payments would be made by check and an annual audit would be required.

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, House sponsor of the bill, said it should help charities get more of the profits from bingo games.

"The most important thing is the licensing procedure," Ethridge said. "It gives us a contact with the charity at that point where we can explain to them the law of the land."

But he said he was disappointed that the Revenue Department instead of the state Justice Department will administer the law, a change Senate conferees insisted upon.

"The Department of Justice has the expertise and can handle it much better," Ethridge said. "They're already familiar with it."

The compromise must be approved by the full House and Senate before being enacted.

Meanwhile, the Senate Special Ways and Means Committee voted 3-2 to delay until 1984 action on a bill that would let the state's voters decide whether to limit the governor and lieutenant governor to single four-year terms.

Under a Constitutional amendment approved in 1977, the governor and lieutenant governor can serve up to two successive four-year terms.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, sponsor of the proposed repeal, told the committee that only 585,767 people had voted in the 1977 statewide referendum — 307,754 in favor of succession and 278,013 against it.

"I think the people ought to be able to speak again, since they spoke with such close results in 1977," said Allsbrook. "It's not something we're voting on for ourselves. We're not saying we're for it or against it. We're just letting the people decide."

Because the bill would amend the state Constitution, it would have to be approved by three-fifths of the state House and Senate and by a majority vote during the 1984 election.

But Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said that while he had opposed succession before, he felt the state should stand by its decision.

"I know the numbers were small, but that's the process in a democracy," said Warren. "I'm not sure we have given the new system time to show its true colors. I'm not sure it's the best time to go back to the people with this."

Lobbyists for Gov. Jim Hunt had fought Allsbrook's bill, saying one term doesn't afford enough time for a good governor to implement his program. They also said that repealing succession might be interpreted as a sign that the Legislature was dissatisfied with Hunt's performance.

Allsbrook, however, said since Hunt won't be running for re-election he has no reason to oppose a referendum. "This is no reflection on him," said Allsbrook. "This is the people's law."

In other legislative action:
Animals

The House voted to go along with a Senate amendment and enact a bill requiring county animal shelters to keep dogs for 72 hours or longer before putting them up for adoption, selling them to institutions in North Carolina for research or killing them.

The bill requires the shelter keep a record for each dog, telling when they were impounded, how long they were kept and what finally was done to them.

It requires that people taking their animals to the shelter be informed of what may happen to them.

Pornography

A bill tightening the penalties for sexual crimes involving minors was amended and then unanimously approved by the House. The bill must be returned to the Senate for concurrence.

The amendment would delete provisions making it a felony for a person over age 18 to allow sexual performance by someone under age 16. Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said that would affect high school seniors dating sophomores.

The rest of the bill would make it a felony to employ a child to engage in sexual performance or promote the child in sexual performances.

Midwifery

The Senate tentatively approved 33-4 a bill allowing registered nurse midwives to deliver babies in hospitals or elsewhere under a doctor's supervision. A final vote was scheduled for Wednesday.

Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, didn't vote against the bill but warned that some of the medicines midwives would be allowed to give women could be harmful if not administered properly.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he preferred hospital births but respected an individual's right to choose an alternative.

"We had midwives before we had doctors," said Rauch. "To my knowledge there have not been problems, there have not been abuses."

Under the bill, midwives would have to pay up to $100 for a license. A board to regulate midwifery would be established, including two registered midwives and two obstetricians.

Confidentiality

A bill requiring legislative staff members not to divulge confidential information won approval of the Senate Special Ways and Means Committee. The full Senate gave tentative approval, 24-17.

Under the bill, staffers could be fired for telling reporters or other people about a legislator's request for research into a possible bill, occurrences during executive session, or other private matters.

Supporters of the bill say it merely enacts into law what already is unofficial policy. But Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said to do so would send the wrong signal.

"I don't know of any problem at this time," said Rand. "It would give the impression ... we've done something we don't want the public to know about or that we're getting ready to do something we don't want them to know about."

But Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said the bill actually would protect staffers by removing from them pressure from outsiders to disclose confidential information.

"There's not one of us here who want our personal business revealed," said Swain. "You may wake up more sober one day if you don't feel this is a (justifiable) situation."

House Rejects Compromise On Waste

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of strict hazardous waste regulation are trying to wring concessions out of a reluctant state Senate, which approved a bill that the House promptly rejected as too weak.

A joint conference committee was appointed to seek a compromise Tuesday, and Rep. Billy Clark, sponsor of the House bill that the Senate heavily amended, said he would push for tougher standards.

"This (the Senate bill) just isn't strong enough," he said. "I hope to get something better but if we can't I'll come back and take it. It's better than nothing."

Zeb Alley, Hunt's chief legislative lobbyist, declined to take a position on the Senate bill but agreed that an effort to change it would be worthwhile.

"The governor wants the strongest bill he can get," said Alley. "If Billy Clark feels like he can strengthen it in conference, it's fine with us."

The House version of the bill would ban disposal of liquid wastes in landfills while allowing burial of some others in specified concentrations. The Senate bill would allow placement of any waste in a landfill unless it can be proven that doing so would hurt people.

The Senate unanimously approved its version Tuesday after adopting 43-0 an amendment crafted by Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus. He mediated negotiations involving the administration and Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, who supported business lobbyists in favor of less regulation.

The amendment sought to find middle ground between the House and Senate positions on a 1981 provision Hardison sponsored that bars North Carolina from imposing hazardous waste regulations more stringent than those set down by the federal government.

Clark's bill would repeal the Hardison amendment. The Senate bill would retain it with four new exceptions to federal standards.

One such exception added Tuesday would be bans on burial of wastes that "pose a substantial hazard to public health when placed in a landfill." It also would require that prior to landfill disposal, efforts be made to find alternatives such as recycling, reduction and detoxification.

"This compromise extends to all of our people the safety which we owe them," said Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe. "It prohibits people from putting poisons in our earth which might harm future generations."

But Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, said the bill didn't go far enough and proposed an amendment to allow rules exceeding federal standards if buried materials might damage the environment.

Without his amendment, Hancock said, "We will let things be perpetually spoiled simply because they don't pose immediate harm to humans, although they could do so in the future."

Hardison fought the amendment, saying it would "confuse the issue." It failed, 30-14.

After the vote, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green announced he had asked Sen. Joseph Thomas, D-Craven, to introduce a bill establishing a study commission to consider the hazardous waste issue. A moratorium would be placed on hazardous waste landfills until the commission gives its report.

"It is my opinion that we have not made sufficient progress in dealing with this very critical problem," said Green.

Senate approval of the amended bill was assured Tuesday when a House-Senate conference committee dropped a repeal of the Hardison amendment from another bill rewriting North Carolina's public health laws.

The House had attached the repeal in an attempt to force Senate action on the Clark bill, which was lodged in a subcommittee for weeks. The impasse was broken Monday when the Senate Rules Committee sent Clark's bill to the floor.

The health law bill was approved by both houses Tuesday.

Approval Expected For Compromise Sales Tax

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A compromise allowing any county to raise the sales tax by one-half cent and letting some areas levy a motel room tax encountered some resistance Tuesday in the Senate but won initial approval.

The Senate voted 31-8 to approve the compromise reached by a House-Senate conference committee in the early morning hours Tuesday. House members received an explanation of the bill but were not scheduled to vote until today.

The measure faces two more votes in both the House and Senate before it could become law. One of the votes is expected to come today in the House and Senate.

The compromise could raise $104.2 million in 1983-84 and $135.4 million in 1984-85 by letting all 100 counties choose whether to raise the local sales tax by one-half cent. Currently all but Burke County have levied an optional 1 cent local sales tax.

The money would be distributed according to population, a method which benefits smaller, rural counties. The sales tax already in effect is distributed according to where it was collected.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said the distribution method is discriminatory and may encourage large counties like his to "opt out" of levying the additional tax.

"I think I would be remiss if I let this pass without opposing it," he said.

Counties would be required to spend 40 percent of the money for the first five years on public school buildings and cities would have to spend 40 percent for water and sewer projects. The rest of the money could be spent in any manner.

The required spending amounts would drop to 30 percent for the following five years and there would be no spending requirements after 10 years. Cities with populations of more than 75,000 also could choose to spend up to 20 percent of the money on housing programs.

"We felt five years would be sufficient to get the schools and water programs to a point where they should be," Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House conferees, told the House. "We didn't want to go beyond that."

The spending ratios could be changed by state officials upon appeal and presentation of evidence by local governments.

The bill also would let Mecklenburg County levy a 3 percent motel and hotel room tax and let the counties of Buncombe, Haywood, New Hanover and Forsyth and the cities of Ocean Isle, Topsail Beach and Surf City levy a room tax of 2 percent.

Money from the room tax would go to attract more tourists and conventions to the areas and to restore beaches in coastal areas.

The compromise stems from a House bill to give counties the option of raising the tax, distributing the money according to population and letting local governments use the money as they please.

It also stems from a Senate bill to require the state sales tax be increased and half the money go for water and sewer projects and half for public school buildings.

"I do favor going ahead with what we have," Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, said of the compromise. "I'm a little disappointed ... I felt our bill spoke definitely to the needs of schools and local governments."

Pleads Guilty To Murder Plot

WEST JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — A Watauga County man pleaded guilty Tuesday to solicitation to commit murder.

Ashe County Superior Court Judge William Freeman gave Dockie Leonard Triplett a three-year active prison term.

Triplett was arrested May 31 and charged with paying $2,500 to an undercover SBI agent to kill his estranged wife, Patsy Triplett of Watauga County. She was not harmed.

NAACP Sets Priority On Increased Membership

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County NAACP chapter president D.D. Garrett said Tuesday local members of the association are working together to back the national theme of the organization — "Stand Up!

Be Counted in 1983 — Join the NAACP." Garrett, along with Pervis Cohens and Willie May Carney, attended the 74th annual NAACP convention held last week in New Orleans. "There were about 7,000 delegates, including the three of us from Pitt County," Garrett said in a prepared statement. He said attention this year is being placed "on three dimensions." The first is to "increase the NAACP membership from 400,000 to one million, which includes increasing the current Pitt County membership from 500 to 1,000," Garrett said. The second goal is "to increase the number of people on the registration books. In North Carolina there are numerous black eligible voters not on the books, people who have never registered." The final goal, Garrett said, is that of "economic development, the fair share program."

In response to a question about his opinion on the recent voter registration efforts nationally by Jesse Jackson and other black leaders, Garrett commented "there are enough unregistered black voters for everybody who wants to take part. We, the NAACP, set the agenda, and we are happy to see anyone get in on the effort. The important thing is to move on and forward."

Garrett emphasized that, during the week-long conference in New Orleans, "there were no rifts among the delegates. In fact, the matter of the controversy about Margaret Bush Wilson and Benjamin Hooks did not come up on the floor during the convention.

"The important thing," he said, "is that the NAACP is together, well and strong. It is the oldest, most respected, most talked about and the most watched civil rights organization in America today."

Five Members Of Family Slain

LAKE ARTHUR, La. (AP) — Officials sought a 28-year-old ex-mental patient today in the fatal shootings of five of his relatives, among them a 2-year-old boy, and police said the gruesome attack has left this small town terrorized.

Michael O. Perry, who has legally changed his name to Zuick Ma, may be traveling to Tijuana, Mexico, by car, possibly armed with shotguns and pistols, according to deputies.

"I don't know if it's a religious name or what," Police Chief Jimmy R. Boudreaux said today. "This guy here's a mental case. He's been in several institutions."

Perry's father, Chester, 48, and mother, Grace, their 2-year-old grandson Anthony Bonin; son Randy, 19, and nephew Bryan LeBlanc, 22, were found shot to death Tuesday in the family home and a nearby house, police said.

Boudreaux said he was called about 5:15 p.m. Tuesday by Ernest Ashford, LeBlanc's stepfather, who found the bodies of Kandy Perry and LeBlanc in a house.

Boudreaux said he went around the corner to the Perry home and found the other three victims.

The time of death was unknown pending an autopsy report, but a heavy stench pervaded the area where the bodies were found, he said.

"It's hard to determine (when they died)," he said. "It's a good possibility that it was Sunday."

The Perrys had returned from vacation Sunday and had not been seen since, he said.

Handguns, a shotgun and perhaps more weapons may have been used for the killings, the chief said.

"In Perry's house, some of them were in bad shape, like they were all hit in the face, the head area. Especially the little baby," Boudreaux said.

Residents of Lake Arthur, a rural community of about 3,600, were stunned by the killings, Boudreaux said.

"People are in shock. It's a small town. You know how it is," he said. "Everybody's got their doors locked.

They're hearing noises in their attics. They're seeing things outside. They're running us crazy."

Ervin Trahan, chief of detectives for the Jefferson Davis Parish Sheriff's Office, told reporters that several diagrams and messages relating to the killings were found at one of the houses.

"I saw some of it," Boudreaux said. "Crazy stuff, stuff he's got written down, all kinds of little, crazy drawings."

Boudreaux said that about a month ago Ma had talked about going to Tijuana.

Michael Perry lived in a trailer behind the family home, Boudreaux said, but had frequently traveled to other parts of the country, including New York and Washington, D.C.

He had several brushes with the law in the past few years, the chief said.

"They (his parents) would call us when he'd get out of hand," Boudreaux said.

The Perrys' family car was missing Tuesday, as were the elder Perry's wallet and credit cards, the chief said.

Boudreaux said the Perrys were friends he had known all his life.

"They were very active, church-going people," Boudreaux said. "You couldn't ask for better people than Chester and Grace Perry."

Ford Recalling 675,000 Cars

DETROIT (AP) — Although no accidents have been blamed on improperly closing doors, Ford Motor Co. is recalling 675,000 of its 1981, 1982 and 1983 Ford Escort and EXP and Mercury Lynx and LN7 subcompacts.

The large recall comes after reports that high-mileage vehicles — all two-door models — could develop cracks in the door latch striker mountings, a company statement said Monday.

"The problem is durability over the long term," said spokesman Mike Davis. "It's metal fatigue that comes under operating conditions that were unforeseen." Owners can receive free reinforcement of the door latch striker mountings at dealerships.

Film To Be Shown At Jarvis

"The Hiding Place," a motion picture depicting the true-life story of former Nazi prisoner Corrie ten Boom, will be shown Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The showing will be open to the public.

Food Distribution To Begin Tuesday

Surplus cheese and butter will be distributed beginning Tuesday at 8 a.m. in the basement of the Pitt County Office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

According to county officials, the county was unable to obtain other commodities such as flour, corn meal, rice, dry milk and honey because shipments have not reached the Raleigh office.

Below are the criteria that will be followed for this distribution:

- Recipients of AFDC or food stamps.
- Persons whose income is at or less than 130 percent of the federal income poverty level which equates to the following: family size: one, $527; two, $709; three, $891; four, $1,073; five, $1,255; six, $1,437; seven, $1,619; eight, $1,801. For each additional family member add $182.

"One Small Step..."

On July 20, 1969 — 14 years ago today — the world watched in wonder as U.S. astronaut Neil Armstrong stepped out of the lunar ship Eagle and became the first human being to set foot on the moon. Armstrong was a perfect choice for the Apollo 11 mission. As a former Navy flyer and a civilian test pilot, he was already used to taking command. When, at the last moment, NASA control told the Eagle crew that the computer could not handle the final stages of the moon landing, Armstrong took over the manual controls and brought the craft down to the lunar surface. According to the biological monitors back on Earth, Armstrong's heartbeat never wavered during the final descent, and he showed no sign of fear.

Argue Over How To Catch Tax Cheats

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is finding it tough to catch tax cheats without imposing a burden of paperwork on honest taxpayers.

The Internal Revenue Service estimates the government loses $8 billion a year to 20 million couples and individuals who fail to report all their interest and dividends. Congress voted last year to pick up about $3 billion of that loss by withholding 10 percent of such income for the tax collector.

But banks and savers put up such a fuss that the Senate and House have agreed to repeal that law.

As a substitute, the Senate passed a bill stiffening penalties on cheating taxpayers and uncooperative banks and requiring that 20 percent of interest and dividends be withheld from accounts of up to 4 million savers who don't accurately report their income or who don't even file a return. That eventually would recoup about $2 billion a year.

Now, House negotiators, concerned about riling voters with more paperwork, are refusing to buy that approach either.

"The recordkeeping part of this is just incredible," Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, complained as Senate and House negotiators considered the substitute plan Tuesday. "Maybe this is an effort to get the timber business started again ... so we can produce more paper."

"I don't know one (House) conferee who is impressed with this," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. "I don't see any enthusiasm to support this."

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Finance Committee and chief backer of all-out withholding on interest and dividends, said the substitute is not nearly as complicated as it sounds. If it inconveniences people who are cheating on their taxes, so be it, Dole said.

Convinced an agreement was nowhere in sight, Dole adjourned the conference until today.

The lawmakers did reach agreement on two unrelated amendments that are attached to the withholding-repeal bill:

—They approved President Reagan's plan to bolster the economy of the Caribbean area by allowing duty-free imports of selected products from those countries. The initiative also would allow U.S. businesses to deduct the cost of holding conventions in any of the 28 countries except Cuba.

—They rejected a Senate amendment aimed at strengthening the president's hand in overall trade matters. It would allow a president to retaliate against nations that engage in unfair trade practices.

The battle over withholding of taxes from interest and dividends began last year when the measure was approved as part of an effort to cut the federal deficit. Banks launched a massive mail campaign against the provision earlier this year.

Eventually the House voted to repeal withholding without any substitute action against tax cheats. But the Senate opted for repeal for most taxpayers while allowing 20 percent withholding against those identified as cheats.

It is the job of the Senate-House conference committee to reconcile their differences.

Under the Senate bill, the Internal Revenue Service would notify banks and other financial institutions of people who failed to file a tax return or underreported interest or dividends by more than $50 in a previous year. Those people would have 90 days to set things straight. If they did not, the bank would send another notice and, if the customer did not settle accounts with the IRS within 15 days, 20 percent of their interest and dividends would be withheld for the government.

Starting in 1984, any person who opened a new savings account or bought a share of stock would have to sign a statement under oath that he or she had not been identified by IRS as a tax cheat. Anyone failing to sign such a statement would be subject to 20 percent withholding.

The Senate bill also would require taxpayers to file interest and dividend earning statements with their tax returns.

Planning-Zoning...

that would result from the addition of multifamily units.

The attorney said the fact that Bradshaw has included a R-9 buffer in his proposal indicates that the developer recognizes the problems with R-6. He said the planning board should not compound the problem by letting R-6 go there.

W.R. Brewer of 109 St. Andrews Drive said he has resided there for 18 years and has fought to "keep a nice residential section." He contended that Bradshaw gets one area rezoned and "then he wants to change that."

Acting engineering director Lee Murphy said traffic studies indicate the proposed development would not create unusual problems at the Horseshoe Drive intersection or warrant a traffic signal on Hooker Road, which he said is considered a minor thoroughfare. He said he could not recommend denial of the request based on projected traffic flow.

Planning director Bobby Roberson also said the staff had no opposition to the request in considering the difference in R-9 and R-6 density.

Commissioners voted to recommend that the council approve three other rezoning requests. They were submitted by: M.E. Porter to rezone 6.6 acres, located within the Whichport Development property behind the Sheraton Motel property, adjacent to Landmark Drive, from highway commercial to R-6; Dalton Worthington and others to rezone 12 acres, located 800 feet east of Tobacco Road and fronting on U.S. 264 Bypass, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-6; and by J.T. Manning Jr. and his wife, Rena, to rezone 3.16 acres from RA-20 to R-9, located adjacent to Alive Drive and Shenandoah subdivision.

Roberson said the planning staff had no objections to the three requests. In the Manning request, it was pointed that a 125-foot section on Fornes Mill Run would remain RA-20 as a buffer. Ward did not vote on the Worthington or Manning requests due to development interests in those areas.

The board approved preliminary plats for Heritage Apartments, located at the eastern end of White Hollow Road in Heritage Village subdivision; Kingston Place, located on the west side of Greenville Boulevard southeast across from Eastwood subdivision, (.96 units); and for the proposed dedication of Durant Street, located on the west side of Memorial Drive adjacent to Clark Equipment Co., with the stipulation that the developers provide another access point to the property to the south from U.S. 264 Bypass.

In other business, the board members:

- Voted to recommend that the council approve a petition by Bill Clark to annex 3.16 acres within Quail Ridge subdivision, off 14th Street;
- Endorsed a request by Mr. and Mrs. John Wellons, owners of Kings Row Apartments, to close a portion of Tammi Trail which has been dedicated but never accepted by the city or opened for public use;
- Approved a request by Marvin Blount Jr., developer of Bedford subdivision, to change the names of 11 streets in the subdivision, with the stipulation that the city will not incur the expense of changing four existing street signs;
- Voted, by a four to two margin, to deny a request by the planning department to remove outdoor advertising signs as a special use as provided under Section 32-74 of the city's zoning ordinance;
- Endorsed a request by the planning office to change the offstreet parking requirements for dormitory facilities from one space per four beds to .75 offstreet parking spaces per bed;
- Endorsed a request by the department to add a subsection to the zoning ordinance exempting nonresidential establishments from being required to have a plot plan prepared by an engineer, surveyor, or architect registered in North Carolina when five or less parking spaces are needed;
- Endorsed a request by the planning office to change and amend the provision for automobile service station and automobile repair in commercial and industrial districts, (includes new definitions for service stations as well as automobile repair-minor and automobile repair-major, with respect to activities allowed);

WOUNDED WARRIOR — Bruce Abraham of Seattle rests in a wheelchair at Norton Sound Regional Hospital in Nome (Alaska) where he is recovering from a broken ankle suffered in a Greenpeace confrontation at a Soviet whaling village. Abraham was injured as he transferred from a skiff to the Rainbow Warrior, a 150-foot converted trawler used by the environmental organization. Seven anti-whaling protesters were detained by Soviet authorities. (AP Laserphoto)

— Endorsed a request by the office to change the requirement for accessory uses and buildings, stipulating, among other provisions, that accessory buildings over 15 feet in height may not exceed the height of the principal structure on a lot; and — Scheduled a special call meeting for Monday at 5:30 p.m. to consider a request by Pitt County for rezoning consideration regarding a structure located between Memorial Drive and May Street, (Ziehr voted against scheduling a call meeting).

Giant Shark On Sandbar

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A 3,500-pound whale shark grounded on a sandbar on Pensacola Beach was pulled back to deep water after a four-hour struggle, an official says.

"It's very unusual to have a whale shark up in here," said Marine Patrol Lt. John LaLander.

Swimmers called the Marine Patrol on Tuesday to report the 30-foot shark had beached itself in knee-deep water and was struggling for freedom because of the low tide.

"All he could move was his tail," said LaLander.

Workers using rope and a boat finally were able to pull the shark into water 30 feet deep, allowing it to swim away. The Marine Patrol, Coast Guard and a members of a marine group took part in the rescue, LaLander said.

Officials don't know why the shark beached itself about four miles east of Pensacola Beach in the Gulf of Mexico, he said.

Whale sharks can grow up to 65 feet and generally roam deep waters for their diet of plankton. The fish generally are docile and do not endanger swimmers, LaLander said.

Video Game Fad Going Bankrupt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The video arcade business, which just a year ago seemed one of the best get-rich-quick opportunities of the '80s, is on a Donkey Kong slide, with entrepreneurs dropping out like Space Invaders from a video sky.

"People thought you could put a Pac-Man on every corner and turn into the Bank of America," said Ira Bettelman, vice president of C.R. Robinson Co., one of the nation's largest arcade game distributors.

"We've had more bankruptcies (among clients) in the past year than in the previous five," Bettelman added.

On Friday, Robinson's was the scene of a court-ordered auction of dozens of repossessed video arcade games — the third since January. Robinson had never held an auction before this year, Bettelman said.

Wall Street also appears to be turning bearish on video games. A report published this spring by Sanford C. Bernstein Co. says arcade income is down 25 percent to 50 percent from last year, and predicts arcades worldwide will take in $5.3 billion this year compared with $7 billion in 1982.

"When we were experiencing the boom, we were called night and day. We didn't need a marketing strategy," said Pamela Whishaw, marketing consultant to Games Unlimited, which puts video games in chain restaurants and other locations.

"Now we're consolidating," she said. "We can't afford to keep any game in a location that isn't earning at least $40 a week."

The bust does not appear to be affecting the home video market, which accounts for half of all computer software disk sales. But the Bernstein report predicted that one of every four arcades operating at the time of the study would close by year's end.

The losers appear to fall into two categories: the small operator who bought one or two games at the height of the craze, and the full-time entrepreneur who failed to follow what Bettelman described as "good business practices and principles."

"Some didn't know the overhead and costs involved. Some would go into a bad location. A lot of our customers who went bankrupt didn't own an arcade but placed the game in so-called street locations, liquor stores and the like," he said.

Part of the problem is the apparent saturation of the arcade market following last year's influx of newcomers who bought huge numbers of games and placed them in every conceivable location.

Another factor is the all-important novelty factor. A new video game, which can cost up to $3,000, typically remains popular with its mostly youthful players for only two months. If it hasn't earned its cost by then, the operator is usually out of luck.

In addition, repairs are often necessary, and can be costly — especially for small operators.

Not everyone is pessimistic about the future. Sandy Bettelman, another Robinson vice president, said he believes the Bernstein study is old news.

"The bottom was really a year ago, and now it's crawling out of the valley," he said.

He said he believes the video game business is due for an upsurge as newly developed games using laser technology hit the market.

But Ira Bettelman maintains that the video game business is by nature a chancy one.

CALL FOR SUMMIT
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov and Hungarian Communist Party chief Janos Kadar are calling for a summit meeting of leaders of the troubled Soviet bloc economic alliance.

A Lot Of North Carolina's Families Have Grown Up With Planters.

There's something about the place where you grew up. Especially when your roots were planted in North Carolina long ago by your father or his father. And generation after generation, your family has built a home and a life here.

That's how it is with Planter's Bank. We made our home in North Carolina way back in 1899. Since then, we've helped thousands of families build larger houses, send kids to college and buy new cars. And we've grown stronger, just as North Carolina's families have.

Today, Planters Bank is nearly 50 branches strong. Giving you and your family the most up-to-date financial service with the same special personal attention you deserve.

Planters Bank couldn't feel any closer to North Carolina's families. After all, we grew up together.

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) —
Oahu. The image is of verdant valleys rimmed by golden, sun-filled coastlines and the bright lights of Waikiki.
But another vision is approaching, and it is composed of mountains of decaying newspapers, junked cars and beer cans. Here in the Western Pacific, the leftovers of the party are approaching the edges of the good life.
"Our problem is land," said Frank Doyle, refuse director for the city and county of Honolulu, which encompasses the entire island.

Because most of Oahu's potable water is located in the island's higher elevations, disposal sites such as landfills can only be located in lower areas near the ocean where they can't contaminate water supplies.
"If we don't reduce the volume of garbage we are putting out, we may be faced with dumps placed right next to residential areas," said Honolulu Public Works Director Michael Chun. "And if you have to put a landfill right next to a residential area, you're looking for trouble."
The project is still in the planning process and faces months — maybe years — of hearings and approvals.

Oahu's population has grown quickly over the last two decades, from 632,772 in 1960 to 964,691 twenty years later. And that has created more garbage, enough to cover one football field 12 feet deep each day, said Doyle.
During the fiscal year 1982-83, that meant 700,000 tons of garbage, he said, up from 550,000 tons of material in 1975-76.
About 70 percent of the waste on the island, where more than two-thirds of the state's residents live, is from households. Doyle says commercial and retail operations put out about 25 percent. The remainder comes from industrial sources.
Hazardous waste, generated largely by the Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard, is transported by ship to the U.S. mainland for disposal. Hawaii has no sites for disposal of hazardous materials.
The island presently has three county-run landfills, which are to be closed in mid to late 1984. The city and county of Honolulu are negotiating for four more sites.
"When they fill up, we'll have to search for four more sites, then four more, then four more," Chun said.
Chun said a proposed trash-to-energy plant is being discussed. If it is built, he said it could reduce the volume of waste on the island by 90 percent while generating electricity, he said.

Chun said.
Honolulu Mayor Eileen Anderson has questioned whether the proposed project will be able to meet federal clean air standards. And a skeptical public needs to be convinced the project is worth it, said Doyle.
Oahu's 592 square-mile land area is slightly more than half the size of Rhode Island, while its population density of 1,379 people per square mile is close to one and a half times New Jersey's.
The city and county of Honolulu pays approximately $16 million annually for its refuse collection and disposal efforts, said Doyle. The military spends about $2.3 million to collect its refuse.
Military and residential wastes are mixed together, said Doyle. The city and county realizes about $2 million yearly in disposal fees from private haulers, contractors and other non-residential users of the municipal disposal facilities. The city also collects about $250,000 yearly in fees from small businesses.
About 40 percent of the county's refuse is collected by private refuse haulers. At present, there are about 20 licensed haulers in Honolulu.
Another big headache for the island is junked cars. "It's almost an insoluble problem," said Honolulu Finance Director Peter Leong. About 470,000 cars are registered on Oahu, slightly more than one car for every two people, Leong said. Close to 20,000 cars are discarded each year on the island.
"The market was taking care of the problem for a long time," said Leong. "But PILE-UP OF JUNK — A growing number of junked cars and near-brimming landfills are posing a big problem for the Hawaiian island of Oahu. The problem has been compounded by the island's small land area and its rapid population growth. (AP Laserphoto)

'English Only' Rule To Stand

By KATHLEEN BIRD
Associated Press Writer
ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) —
Despite a Hispanic group's threat to force him out of office, Mayor Thomas G. Dunn says he won't back down from an "innocuous" memo that ordered City Hall employees to speak English on the job.
"My memo will stay as is," the five-term mayor said Tuesday. "If anyone can understand English, they can understand my memo. It does not malign or denigrate anyone."
Leaders of the Hispanic-American Political Association, who claim 800 members, agreed with Dunn that it is rude for employees to talk in foreign languages in front of others who cannot understand.
"If it is a particular problem with certain employees, discipline them," said Rafael Fajardo, an association director and a former Board of Education member.
But Fajardo said the group objects to the blanket order and may launch a petition drive to recall Dunn unless he retracts "his unconstitutional demand."
"We encourage the use and mastery of the English language by foreigners," Fajardo told a news conference here. But he said the mayor's order was insulting to Spanish-speaking people who make up more than a quarter of the city's 106,000 residents.

The Democratic mayor issued the order last month requiring that the 1,500 city employees speak only English unless asked to interpret for a member of the public.
The mayor said the rule is not aimed at a particular ethnic group and violations do not carry the threat of dismissal. But Hispanic residents said they took offense because of past disagreements with Dunn.
Frank Cuesta, president of the Hispanic-American Political Association, said that unless Dunn takes back his order, the organization will put volunteers on the streets by the end of the month to collect voters' signatures for a recall drive.
About 10,000 signatures would be needed to bring about a recall election, he said.
Dunn said he thinks a recall drive would fail and encouraged his opponents to challenge him in next year's election. He also said he is certain his memo was legal.
Rosa Esperon, a lawyer with the Puerto Rican Legal Defense Fund in New York, said the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission considers "speak English-only" rules discriminatory.

Banker Sees Interest Up

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A leading North Carolina banker says interest rates may have begun to climb again after apparently bottoming out late last year.
John Medlin, president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Winston-Salem, said Monday he would not guess "how fast or how far up the rates would go." He said the important point is "that business, inflation and interest rate cycles are not dead."
He said interest rate increases may accelerate as private credit demand rises and collides with the federal government's need to borrow to finance its deficit.
Medlin spoke to 300 managers from 163 Savings and Loan Associations at the North Carolina League of Savings Institutions' annual convention, which concludes Wednesday in Myrtle Beach.
Medlin warned Savings and Loan officials not to use money market savings account deposits, whose interest rates change with market conditions, to finance long-term, fixed-rate mortgages.
At least 75 percent of the S&Ls in North Carolina and South Carolina lost money last year because rates paid for deposits exceeded rates earned on older mortgage loans.

FAIL TO CONFIRM
COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — An air and sea search has failed to confirm several reported sightings of foreign submarines along Greenland's west coast, the Danish military said Tuesday.
Anyone wishing to bid on the cutting and cleaning of lots for the City of Greenville should call the Inspections Department at 752-4137 to have their names included on the list of bidders.

'Nanette' Keeps Touch Of Camp

A GET TOGETHER MOMENT . . . Jay Fox as Uncle Jimmy and Melodie Wolford as Nanette have a quiet moment amid the musical proceedings of "No, No, Nanette" now playing at McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus. The production is being presented each night this week through Saturday. (Photo by Chris Bennett)

Summer Theater means a show a week, singing and dancing and packed houses at McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus. Monday was no exception, as "No, No, Nanette" opened to a large and enthusiastic audience for its run through Saturday this week.

"No, No, Nanette" opened on Broadway in 1925 and was successfully revived in 1971. It is a light, mindless musical, suitable to produce smiles on a summer night.

The story is simple, a vehicle for the musical numbers which are the main attraction of the play. Nanette, a proper young girl, wants to have a little fun before she settles down and marries, but her aunt and uncle disapprove. She convinces her uncle, a Bible publisher whose philosophy in life is making young girls happy, to let her go to

The true story that has captivated over 8,000,000 readers.

Atlantic City for a weekend, and there Nanette, her boyfriend, the aunt and uncle, his lawyer and wife, three of the uncle's girl friends and assorted young men and women converge for the confusion necessary for the romantic comedy.

"No, No, Nanette" was camp in 1925 and is just as camp today. Director/actor Jay Fox and choreographer/actress Mavis Ray fill the stage with bright period costumes, a clever set and enthusiastic dancers. They create the mood of innocence and energy which are the essence of our ideas about the Twenties.

Although Ralph Stenwall, Melodie Wolford and Susan Marrash-Minnerly turn in solid performances as the attorney, Nanette and Pauline the maid, the show belongs to Ray and Fox.

Mavis Ray, returning to teach dance at ECU after a six-year leave of absence to tour Europe and Broadway and to appear on television and in film, plays Nanette's good-hearted aunt as well as choreographing the production. Her understated performance is a nice balance to that of Director Fox, who plays Nanette's uncle. Fox appeared last summer at ECU as the MC in "Caberet" and has extensive Broadway experience which shows in his delightfully comic creation of Uncle Jimmy Smith. Whenever he is on the stage in his series of plus fours "No, No, Nanette" approaches the level of high camp, making fun of itself and providing fun for the audience.

Like most summer theater productions, "No, No, Nanette" is not without some problems. Throughout the performance most of the singers had to strain to be heard over the orchestra; only during the numbers with the full chorus could the lyrics be heard clearly throughout the auditorium. This is a minor problem, easily corrected.

More significantly, "Nanette" could have been more successful with a larger dose of parody. It is a foolish little play and it begs

Ailing TV Newscaster Succumbed

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Reynolds, an ABC News anchorman known for his passionate pursuit of the world's major stories, died today after a long illness, the network said. He was 59.

The immediate cause of Reynolds' death was viral hepatitis but multiple myeloma, a form of bone cancer, was a secondary cause, said Elise Adde, a network spokeswoman.

Reynolds, who had been absent since mid-April from his anchor slot on ABC's "World News Tonight," died at 12:40 a.m. at Sibley Memorial Hospital.

The chief anchorman of the evening news program since 1978, Reynolds' network broadcasting included coverage of all major political conventions since 1965, the Senate Watergate hearings, and U.S. manned spaceflights.

During the Iranian hostage crisis in 1979, Reynolds anchored a nightly show recapping the day's events, a program that grew into ABC's popular "Nightline."

He won broadcasting's George Foster Peabody Award in 1969 and in 1980 was given an Emmy for a program called "Post-election Special Edition."

"Frank Reynolds represented journalism at its best — professional, talented, experienced and aggressive," said ABC News President Boone Arledge. "He reflected our highest achievements and expectations and served his profession with enormous dedication. We are diminished greatly by his passing. We join his family in mourning a vital member of our family."

"He's very passionate about stories," Brit Hume, an ABC News correspondent once said of Reynolds. "He wants to be good. He gets everybody else up."

Reynolds' prolonged absence "has hurt us badly" in the ratings, ABC News Vice President David Burke said in June after "World News Tonight" dropped from second to third in the audience ratings behind "CBS Evening News" and "NBC Nightly News."

Reynolds would occasionally show his emotions

After a 1981 assassination attempt that wounded President Reagan, all three networks erroneously reported that presidential press secretary James Brady was killed.

Arledge recalled that Reynolds became visibly angered during confusion over Brady, who was severely wounded.

"When it (the Brady report) turned out to be wrong, Frank Reynolds comes on and says to our reporters, 'Let's get this straight.' He was justifiably angry, but everyone wrote that he lost control," Arledge said in a December 1981 interview.

Reynolds co-anchored the "ABC Evening News" with Howard K. Smith from May 1968 until December 1970, when he lost the post to Harry Reasoner, who moved to the network from CBS.

Reynolds, who once told a friend his career was "Lazarus-like" made his return to the anchor slot eight years later, joining Peter Jennings and Max Robinson on "World News Tonight."

He joined the network news division from ABC's Chicago station WKBK — now WLS-TV — where for two years he had anchored two newscasts daily.

For 12 years prior to that he was a newsman with WBBM-TV, the CBS station in Chicago.

A native of East Chicago,

Ind., Reynolds also lived in nearby Hammond, where he met his wife, Henrietta. The couple's five children include a son, Dean, who is a Washington correspondent for Cable News Network.

The close-knit Roman Catholic family lives in suburban Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Reynolds described her husband as a voracious reader of history and biography who also enjoyed Agatha Christie mysteries and Ian Fleming thrillers. Their social life consisted mostly of dinner parties with close friends, an occasional play or a night out at the symphony.

"He's always intense about his reporting," Mrs. Reynolds said in a 1980 interview.

Joan Collins Is Theft Victim

ST. PAUL DE VENCE, France (AP) — Actress Joan Collins, star of the television series "Dynasty," was robbed of $35,000 worth of jewelry while staying with a friend named Dallas, French police said today.

Miss Collins, together with her daughter Tati, was spending a vacation at the home of American architect Robert Dallas in this hillside resort on the French Riviera, the police said.

Thieves broke into the house last week while it was empty and stole rings and necklaces from Miss Collins' room. The police said no trace has been found of the thieves, who seemed to be familiar with the house and stole nothing apart from Miss Collins' jewelry.

Stars Re-Team

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Can lightning strike again for Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta as it did for the performers in "Grease?"

As the young lovers in that 1978 musical, they rang the bell at the box-office. They have been re-teamed in "Two of a Kind," a romantic, non-musical comedy at 20th Century-Fox.

CRYPTOKUIP 7-20

MUM WUTTF NLG DUM WHNGLG YGNNUVY
K DUVMTF CLGEUSS'C YHKH?

Yesterday's Cryptokuip — ONLY BROKE BIKE SHOP OWNERS DO TRY TO PEDAL THEIR WARES.
Today's Cryptokuip clue: Y equals G.

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1983

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can have a late start today in getting into the various ideas and conditions that you wish to put in effect but as the day continues, you find you see things differently.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan those new arrangements you wish to make and then follow through in a positive and precise way.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study all of your responsibilities and then plan just how they can best be handled, then follow through wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) First think over how you want to put new deals over with a partner so that you will not quarrel, then all works out fine.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your mate has asked you for favors in the past and now is the time to accede to requests.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure you follow through in all your work commitments in an exacting way and you get excellent results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get your house in good order and repair after so much hesitation and feel happier. First get the OK from kin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact those persons who can give you the advanced information that you need at this time. Show you will do something helpful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use a more direct method if you want to add to present abundance. An advisor could also be of assistance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find the personal interests that can bring you the happiness and well being you seek. Get to group meetings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you confer with a good advisor you can start a new campaign of action that can bring you greater success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take time to consider the wishes of friends and try to help them in their ambitions, especially those who are out-of-town.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you handle career matters properly, you can gain much added prestige at this time. Be more direct.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will love to study and learn about the latest trends and technology and be prepared for any changes coming into this life, so prepare now for a fine college education. There is some musical talent here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 8-10.

HOUSE
PUBLIC WORKS The House passed, 306 for and 113 against, a bill to spend $1.5 billion over three years on public works projects carried out by communities hard-hit by the recession, and on loans to small businesses. About 60 percent of the nation's counties would get a share of the money.

The bill (HR 10) would preserve the Economic Development Administration and the Appalachian Regional Commission, which the Reagan Administration wants to terminate. It was sent to the Senate.

Supporter James Howard, D-N.J., said the bill recognizes that many communities victimized by structural as well as cyclical changes in the economy "cannot solve their problems on their own."

Opponent Norman Shumway, R-Calif., said "the firms and regions that this legislation is intended to benefit may well be better off as a result of a healthy, sustained economic recovery."

Find Him In Classifieds

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A good man may be hard to find, but a good man who does windows? Check the classifieds.

When Anthony Jennings began advertising a Rent a Husband service — indicating he does windows, too — his business picked up dramatically.

"Anthony's Rent a Husband. Painting, repairs, cleaning, I do windows," reads the ad in Madison's two daily newspapers, the Wisconsin State Journal and The Capital Times.

"I'm not making a killing, but I am making a living," Jennings said recently. "A lot of people are starting to hire handymen or people who can perform more than one specialized task; one person they can trust."

Jennings, 23, is married and has a young child.

"Eighty percent of the people who called told me the ad caught their eye," Jennings said. "I'll do anything from sweeping your front porch to fixing your roof. Whatever you've got for me to do, I'll do anything people are willing to pay me for that's legal and moral."

Jennings took construction classes at Madison's La Follette High School and started working as a handyman upon graduation.

"I can afford to work for less because I have lower overhead," he said. "People are really wising up to that."

Dairymen Ignore Milk Cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring warnings that excess milk production should be halted, the nation's dairymen continued to produce at record levels during the first six months of this year, the Agriculture Department says.

The department says that dairymen produced nearly 70.5 billion pounds of milk during the first half of the year, 2 percent more than the same period last year and 4 percent more than the six months of 1981.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: None.
Not voting: James Broyhill, R-10.

HOUSING By a vote of 263 for and 158 against, the House passed a bill (HR 1) that authorizes $15.6 billion in fiscal 1984 for federal housing and community development programs.

It is the first federal housing program approved by the House during the Reagan Administration. Its backers said it renews the federal commitment to decent shelter for all.

In part, the bill calls for construction of an estimated 200,000 units for poor and moderate-income occupants, extends the Community Development Block Grant and Urban Development Action Grant programs, and funds rural housing, urban homesteading and rent-subsidy programs.

The Senate is working on a counterpart bill.

Supporter Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said "the Reagan Administration record is one of devastation of lower income housing programs."

Opponent Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, called the bill too expensive and said "the prospect of a federal budget deficit of $200 billion constitutes our greatest threat to affordable housing."

Members voting yes supported the $15.6 billion housing bill.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: James Martin.

RENT CONTROL The House rejected, 205 for and 217 against, an attempt to deny federal aid for multi-family housing to communities that have rent-control ordinances. The vote occurred during debate on HR 1 (see preceding issue).

Supporter Toby Roth, R-Wisc., said "there is nothing that is a greater impediment to adequate housing in this country today than are rent controls."

Opponent Fernand St. Germain, D-R.I., said the attempt to roll back rent control is "too much interference" in local affairs.

Members voting yes were opposed to municipal rent control laws.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Valentine, Ike Andrews, James Martin.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Whitley, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: Broyhill.

SENATE
NERVE GAS The Senate approved, 50 for and 49 against, a $130 million outlay to enable the U.S. to resume production of nerve gas weaponry after a 14-year moratorium.

The vote table (killed) an amendment to block the expenditure as part of the $200 billion defense authorization bill for fiscal 1984. After senators deadlocked at 49-49, Vice President Bush cast the deciding vote in favor of producing binary nerve gas.

Supporter Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said a replenished nerve gas arsenal will encourage the Soviets to negotiate arms reductions and discourage their use of chemical weapons against NATO forces.

Opponent David Pryor, D-Ark., said renewed production would not enhance U.S. military prowess but "could mark the beginning of a new kind of arms race."

Senators voting yes wanted the U.S. arsenal to once again include nerve gas.

John East, R, voted yes. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

SECURITY By a vote of 44 for and 53 against, the Senate failed to table (kill) an amendment prohibiting the military from using private firms for firefighting and security services at U.S. bases.

The Pentagon wants to contract privately for such services, but this vote blocked it from doing so for two years.

The vote occurred during debate on the fiscal 1984 military authorization bill (S 675; see preceding issue). Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-

Fla., who voted to kill the amendment, said "the vitality and competition of the free market (can) bring greater efficiency to the military."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said "contractor employees have the right to strike and should that happen it would quite seriously interfere" with the operation of a military base.

Senators voting yes wanted bases to be able to contract privately for firefighting and security services.

East voted yes. Helms voted yes.

B-1 By a vote of 68 for and 30 against the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to delete from the 1984 defense authorization bill $6.2 billion for the first purchases for the

B-1 bomber.

The B-1 is being developed as an interim weapon between the aged B-52's and the advanced technology Stealth bomber slated for deployment in the 1990's.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, who voted to kill the amendment, called the B-1 a "freat deterrent" to enemies who would "make the mistake to underrate what the underlying willpower of the American people is."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said of the B-1: "We do not need to spend $20 billion to $40 billion on a temporary fix."

Senators voting no wanted to kill the B-1 bomber project.

Handlers Learn Dog Show Tricks Of The Trade

By HELMA WEEKS
Bucks County
Daily Intelligencer
HATBORO, Pa. (AP) — Showing a dog may not look difficult, but there's more to it than meets the eye. It's not just running around a ring and stopping in front of a judge.

Dog showing, like any other sport, takes training and endless practice to achieve success. Exhibitors have to learn how to present their animals so judges will take notice of potentially award-winning traits. For more than 25 years, dog show handlers in Bucks and Montgomery counties have been learning tricks from Richard Van Istendaal of Hatboro. Each Wednesday, Van Istendaal teaches show handling to aspiring exhibitors and their dogs.

"I have had these classes since the '50s," he said. "When I started, right here behind the (Hatboro Union) Library, there were no classes for show handling. There were plenty of obedience classes but the breed buff had to fumble through."

Van — as he is known by those in dog show circles — has become almost an institution of the show world. He not only teaches exhibitors how to set up a dog properly and how to gait it, but he also teaches the various moves a judge may request.

To the casual observer, Van Istendaal's training classes may look a little odd as adults run around in circles with their dogs. But a little closer observation will reveal the nuances of showing a dog — how to avoid collisions, how to pass a slower moving handler, how to move in unison with one's dog while keeping an eye on the judges.

Running circles around Van Istendaal is just the beginning. The classes include intricate showing patterns that require a bit of fancy footwork by the handler, patterns judges request when evaluating a dog's gait in the ring.

"The object is to keep the dog in a position where it can be seen by the judge at all times," Van Istendaal said. "You have to outhandle your competitors, especially if all the dogs are of equal quality."

Van Istendaal looks and sounds like a demanding ballet master as he orders his students around the imaginary ring. His voice pierces the still evening air as he points out mistakes. Above all, he seeks perfection.

He takes pride in the fact that a great number of his former students are still actively involved in the sport, even though the average dog fancier stays with showing only a little more than two years.

Van Istendaal's interest in dogs began early in life. "My parents raised German shepherds," he says. "Later I showed keeshonden and Scottish terriers. I taught my sons, Richard Jr. and Edward, how to handle."

He helped train rare breeds such as shi tzu, bichons and soft-coated wheaten terriers before they were recognized by the American Kennel Club.

"Once these breeds were recognized, the dogs which had been trained here were among the first to attain the championship," he said.

New Deadline On Compliance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Male college students who are seeking federal education grants or loans have been given until Sept. 1 to sign forms certifying they have registered for the draft, the Education Department says.

Under a law passed last year, the nation's 2.5 million male recipients of federal student aid must sign the compliance forms. The law took effect July 1 after the Supreme Court lifted a lower court's injunction.

While the issue was still before the high court last month, the Education Department set an Aug. 1 deadline. On Monday, the grace period was extended to Sept. 1.

A Year Of Human-Bear Encounters

By NICK GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer
HELENA, Mont. (AP) — An increase in human-grizzly encounters may be the result of more people entering the fierce mammals' habitat and of a mild winter that left few carcasses for the bears to eat, wildlife officials say.

Since the Montana Legislature named the carnivore its state animal last winter, five grizzlies have been illegally shot by hunters and two have been killed by government rangers.

Grizzlies, in turn, have killed a camper and injured a ranger in Glacier National Park.

But the worst year for grizzly attacks in Montana was 1980, when three people were killed in Glacier National Park.

Vince Yannonie of the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks said recent human-bear encounters are the result of more people entering grizzly country.

Weather may also be a factor. Fewer elk and deer carcasses — relished by the carrion-eating bears — were left this year after a mild winter when the bears emerged from hibernation.

The federal government gives the grizzly special protection as a "threatened species" in the 48 contiguous states. Most of the grizzlies, estimated to number fewer than 1,000, are in Montana, Wyoming and Idaho. In Montana, an estimated 250 roam in Glacier National Park and range into southern Montana out of the Yellowstone National Park area in northwestern Wyoming. A handful survive in the Cabinet Range near the Idaho Panhandle.

Grizzlies were gunned down in unprecedented numbers this spring during a hunting season limited to black bears.

In only a few weeks, at least five grizzlies — one-fifth the quota during Montana's legal fall hunting season — were shot in northwestern Montana.

Yellowstone Park rangers killed a bear in late June that had strayed into a garbage dump and injured its leg when it was caught in a snare.

The grizzlies also won a few rounds. Two hikers from Virginia were treed by one in late May in Glacier Park. The bear poked around their abandoned backpacks before leaving.

In June, a Glacier Park ranger who encountered a female grizzly protecting her cubs was pulled from a tree and mauled. He survived.

William May, 23, of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., wasn't so lucky. A bear dragged him screaming from his tent on June 25, at a campground along Hebgen Lake a few miles northwest of Yellowstone Park in the Gallatin National Forest.

The 435-pound male grizzly ate part of May's body. Rangers caught the bear in a leg snare and killed it to learn why it attacked May. But the autopsy showed no injuries, such as bullet wounds, or disease to account for the attack.

"We'll probably just never know why the bear attacked," said ranger Ross MacPherson.

Yannonie said campers and hikers are more likely to have problems during the bears' breeding season in June and July. "They (male grizzlies) seem to roam a little bit more, looking for the sows. And they get kind of ornery."

Forest Service guidelines for camping in grizzly country recommend keeping sleeping bags and gear free of food odors, not sleeping in the same clothing worn while cooking, avoiding perfumes or other sweet-smelling substances, and making noise to scare off bears.

Medfly War Objector Is Fighting On

SARATOGA, Calif. (AP) — Although the war has been declared over, Charles Martin stands by his decision to boycott the battle against the Mediterranean fruit fly — a decision that has cost him $5,000 in legal fees and a lot of grief.

"It has been an emotional drain," says Martin, 52. "I'd just as soon forget the whole thing, but I just can't let it drop."

The tall, slender Martin was the only person cited for refusing to obey an order in 1981 by former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to strip fruit and vegetables from yards to get rid of any medfly eggs.

Martin, facing a possible $500 fine and six-month jail term for a misdemeanor, has filed an appeal seeking dismissal of the charge. If he loses the appeal, he faces a costly trial.

It all started in Martin's garden in August 1981 when a medfly fighter checking homes poked his head over Martin's fence and asked if he had any fruit.

"I told him I did have fruit but that I wouldn't strip it," Martin said. Those turned out to be fighting words. A sheriff showed up with a warrant and stripped the garden bare while Martin was in court unsuccessfully seeking a restraining order.

Martin said he didn't want to strip his two-thirds of an acre plot because he needed his organically grown produce to maintain a chemical-free diet. Medication he was given for wounds from the Korean War left him with liver damage and an extreme sensitivity to chemicals.

People with medical excuses should have been exempted from the stripping program, he said.

"It will be many months before the appeal is finished," said Martin's attorney, Howard Levin of San Jose.

In a recent interview, Martin said the case already has cost him $5,000 in legal fees and could wind up costing twice that. "We'll have to call expert witnesses to put the court in the position of really facing the issue," he said.

Martin claims the issue is that the governor's emergency declaration was flawed because it did not specify "extreme peril" to people and property as required by law. He also argues that the stripping order was rescinded before he had his day in court.

But the state and the Santa Clara County district attorney's office said that the proclamation's reference to a peril against agriculture implied a peril to people, too. They maintain emergency orders wouldn't be enforceable if public agencies could not prosecute people after the declarations are revoked.

The medfly wars in California ended Sept. 21, 1982, when officials declared victory over the insects, ending a $96 million campaign to save the state's $14 billion-a-year agriculture industry. About 4,000 square miles were sprayed and quarantined after the first medflies were found in San Jose in June 1980.

One other thing is back to normal, Martin's garden. The beans, tomatoes and carrots are flourishing and the peach, pear and apricot trees bearing fruit. Martin said he has his own weapons against cutworms, earwigs and other garden pests.

"I have my chickens and ducks," he said. "I run them through the vegetable plots."

Ambassador To Senegal Chosen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he plans to nominate Edmund DeJarnette, deputy chief of mission at the U.S. Embassy in Dakar, Senegal, as U.S. ambassador to the Central African Republic.

A career foreign service officer, DeJarnette has held Peace Corps posts in Ecuador, and Washington, and has served in State Department posts in Africa. If confirmed by the Senate, he would replace Arthur H. Woodruff.

Popularity Of Drive-In Is Waning

By DANIEL L. CUSICK
Scranton Times
SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — The obituary of the drive-in theater industry is not ready to be written but, according to some, there is a growing illness that may not have a cure.

Following World War II, these massive outdoor showplaces sprang up all over the landscape, usually just far enough out of town to be accessible while giving the feeling that a carload of people were going someplace when they set out to reach one.

The smallest of them needed several acres to accommodate the parking spots, the standards for the speakers and heaters, the ever-present gaudy refreshment stand and, of course, the screen which rose several stories above everything else in sight.

Gasoline was cheap, compared to today's prices. So people could, and did, make their way to what they called, variously, "passion pit," "balcony in the boonies," "poorman's palace" and a welter of other nicknames.

It was a relatively cheap and enjoyable way for a whole family or a carload of friends to spend the entire evening.

The drive-ins had it all going for them. They showed first-run features along with cartoons, newsreels and previews of coming attractions, just like their counterparts under roofs. And they even conducted those popular giveaways and game shows at the intermissions.

But there was one other aspect that they had as an advantage over the standard theaters. People could attend without getting as well-dressed as the custom then demanded for going downtown to an in-house theater.

Gone now are all the little extras. There are no more carhops waiting to serve the viewers, no newsreels or giveaways, and the schedule has been cut back, in most cases to two or three weekend days at the majority of the under-the-stars moviehouses. Mike Delfino, owner of the Circle Drive-In on the Scranton-Carbondale Highway, says drive-ins can't compete with the movie houses for first-run features. Although Delfino doesn't foresee a shutdown of his operation, he admits, "Everything has its price." With that, Delfino hit upon what is probably the major threat to drive-ins.

In recent years, the sylvan settings of most of these places have become increasingly open to individual homebuilders, developers and other businesses. Space for building within the established cities either is running out or is totally unavailable. That puts the pressure on the outlying areas, and the price offerings for such pieces of land that now contain the open-air theaters are rising almost daily.

Frank Scavo, operator of the Oak Hill Drive-In in Moosic, says his business is not what it was in the past, but adds that his operation isn't anywhere near the point where he would abandon it.

At least two of the Scranton-area "ozoners," as the movie trade papers like to call drive-ins, have kept the wolf from the door to some extent by opening their places to flea markets on one or two days a week.

All the theater owners point out that they rely heavily on younger people as their audience.

"It's a place," one of them said, "where they can meet and be together without parental eyes on them. That doesn't mean we operate a lovers' lane. It just means that the kids can be, for a couple of hours, away from the social pressures they may have in a theater."

So the rage for drive-ins that prevailed during the late 1940s through the '50s and '60s has cooled. And as all the outdoor theater managers readily acknowledge, television has been another factor.

Bronze Age 'Manhattan' In Pakistan Is At Stake

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
MOENJODARO, Pakistan (AP) — The remains of an outstanding civilization that flourished 4,500 years ago in what is present-day Pakistan may soon be lost forever — unless an urgent rescue operation is mounted, archaeologists say.

At stake is the Bronze Age city of Moenjodaro, a metropolis so sophisticated in urban planning it has been likened to Manhattan in New York City because of the grid system on which it was built.

The ruins, of which only 10 percent survive, are part of a chain of 400 cities and towns of Indus Valley civilization known to lie buried under the silt of the mighty Indus River that stretches from the foothills of the Himalayas to the Arabian Sea, 1,200 miles apart.

Moenjodaro, meaning "Mound of the Dead," is regarded as the cradle of Buddhism on the subcontinent. It was discovered in 1922 by a British archaeologist, Sir John Marshall, when villagers dug up heaps of pottery fragments in their fields.

Now the unearthed site is threatened by wind erosion coupled with the twin menace of water-logging and salinity, causing bricks to crumble to the touch.

Years of irrigation of the area and inadequate drainage have caused the water table to rise to within a few feet of the surface, dashing any practical hope of excavating the rest of the city 60 feet underground, experts say.

"In 1964 we gave Moenjodaro a life of 30 years. Nearly 20 years have passed and very little has been done," said Muhammad Ishtiaq Khan, the military government's Director of Archaeology and a recognized world authority on the ruins. "At this rate there will be nothing left in 10 years."

"The city is outstanding and unparalleled as far as town planning is concerned. No city in the ancient world can compare with Moenjodaro. Some scholars have even drawn a parallel with Manhattan."

He compared the problem of preservation to the rescue operation of the Abu Simbel monuments of Egypt — in which men worked against time to lift gigantic statues from an area to be flooded by construction of the Aswan Dam.

In 1975 the plight of Moenjodaro was considered so grave that the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization stepped in and launched an appeal for $18 million in donations to preserve the site.

So far world community response has been negligible. Only $2.7 million has been raised.

The master rescue plan envisages the eventual sinking of 56 tubewells, construction of drainage channels and pumping stations, embankments along the Indus and a spur jutting out into the fast-flowing river to divert its torrent.

The walled city, 300 miles northwest of Karachi, is estimated to have had a population of 40,000 to 60,000 living off an agricultural economy. The excavations cover only three square miles, a fraction of the city's true size.

Its layout is not unlike Islamabad, Pakistan's modern capital, with different sectors for different standards of housing, extending in orderly blocks down to the river.

The few other excavated Indus civilization sites are designed on a similar plan, with a raised citadel to the west and the city laid out in blocks below.

The most notable of these is Harappa, discovered in the mid-19th century and used as a quarry by British railway engineers building the Lahore-Multan track, just west of what is now the Indian border.

It seems unlikely they realized they were carting off remains of a 4,000-year-old city, a contemporary of ancient Babylon, and the Egyptian pyramids.

Morocco Given Wheat Offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Morocco will be provided with $25 million worth of U.S. wheat under the Food for Peace program, the Agriculture Department has announced.

Private U.S. exporters will ship about 190,000 metric tons of wheat to Morocco by Sept. 30 under the agreement signed Monday. A metric ton is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The department said Morocco will not be required to repay the federal loans if it implements several projects to improve farming, including increased production of cereals, better crop forecasting and advance agricultural research.

What astounded archaeologists at Moenjodaro was the high degree of sanitation that existed in the city — something that must have loomed as an oasis in a desert of ignorance and uncivilized living, Ishtiaq said.

Three-story houses with separate toilets were common, as were chutes for litter disposal. It also had bathing and elaborate drainage systems that predate the Romans by at least 1,000 years.

Streets were laid out according to wind direction which meant the narrow alleyways remained cool in the hot summer. No door opened onto a main thoroughfare, suggesting a high level of privacy.

Like the city of Troy, Moenjodaro was built atop many levels, indicating the ancients had the skill to pre-plan their city. It could also mean the lower levels, nine in all, are far older than anybody realizes, Ishtiaq said.

"What we know stretches back 4,500 years. But just suppose the earliest remains go back to the sixth millennium," he said. "That means Moenjodaro predates even Mesopotamia. It would make it the oldest civilization known to man."

"Unfortunately, we know only one-third of the story. The other two-thirds are buried. Sixty feet of cultural debris is a great depth."

what caused the city's demise, Ishtiaq said there are indications it was gradually abandoned, possibly because of a changing climate.

Another prevalent theory is that the people fled to escape the hordes of Aryan nomads who launched an invasion of the subcontinent from Central Asia in about 1,700 B.C.

"Very little of intrinsic value has been found," Ishtiaq said. "Almost no jewelry and no weapons. It seems the people took their belongings with them and disappeared."

"That's the trouble with Moenjodaro. So little is known. This is the enigma of Moenjodaro. It's essential we save it."

Senate Backs Whaling Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has unanimously approved a non-binding resolution urging the United States seek worldwide compliance with the International Whaling Commission's moratorium on commercial whaling.

The commission last year voted to halt commercial whaling indefinitely in 1986, but the Soviet Union, Japan, Norway and Peru have filed objections.

The Senate resolution, which was approved without dissent, called for U.S. officials to "use all diplomatic and legal means to achieve worldwide compliance."

BOOK THEFTS

LONDON (AP) — The former director of the icon department at Christie's auction house has gone on trial for allegedly stealing 97 books and icons from the firm's reference library.

If Over 65, Know Rules Of Medicare

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

If you're over 65, you probably know about Medicare, the federal health insurance program for the elderly.

But unless you know exactly how Medicare works, you may be paying more than you have to for health care.

Does your doctor accept "assignment," for example? What is an approved charge? How much will Medicare actually pay?

There are two parts of Medicare, one for doctors' bills and one for hospital charges.

When it comes to doctors' bills, Medicare generally will pay 80 percent of the approved charges for covered services above a fixed annual deductible, currently $75.

The approved charge — sometimes referred to as the reasonable charge — is not necessarily the same amount your doctor charges you. It is based on a formula involving all the fees charged by all the doctors in your area for a particular service.

The Health Care Financing Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services says that "because of the way approved charges are determined and because of the high rates of inflation in medical care prices, the approved charges are often less than doctors' and suppliers' actual charges."

You are protected against the difference between approved and actual charges if your doctor agrees to accept assignment. When a doctor agrees to accept assignment, he or she agrees to accept the amount approved by Medicare as payment in full — even if he normally charges more.

Here's what it means:

Suppose you go to your doctor for a cardiogram. The regular charge is $50. The approved charge, according to Medicare, is $35.

Assume you've already paid the $75 deductible for this year. (If you haven't, you'll have to pay the full bill yourself because the deductible means you're responsible for the first $75 in charges you incur.)

Medicare will pay 80 percent of the approved $35 charge for your cardiogram or $28. If your doctor agrees to accept assignment, all you must pay is the remaining $7. If he or she does not, you must pay $22 — 20 percent of the approved charge, plus the difference between the approved charge and the actual one.

Those extra charges can add up. According to a 1981 study by the Public Citizen Health Research Group, a consumer activist organization in Washington, D.C., a government survey showed that doctors billed Medicare beneficiaries more than $1 billion in excess fees in 1979.

You can save money by asking your doctor, in advance, if he or she will accept assignment. If not — and if you do not want to change doctors — try to find out ahead of time the difference between Medicare's approved charges and your doctor's fee schedule so at least you will be prepared for the bills.

Hospital coverage is different. There is an initial deductible and there are different payment schedules, depending on how long you stay in the hospital.

Here's how it works:

When you are hospitalized, Medicare will pay 100 percent of the bills for all covered services for the first 60 days except for the first $304 — about equal to the cost of one day's stay. For the next 30 days, Medicare will pay all bills beyond the first $76 a day.

You have 90 days coverage for each benefit period — which begins when you enter a hospital and ends when you have been out of the hospital, or other facility providing skilled nursing care or rehabilitation services, for 60 days.

If you need more than 90 days of hospitalization, you can use what are known as "reserve days." Each beneficiary has 60 reserve days in his or her lifetime. During reserve days, Medicare pays for covered services beyond the first $152 a day.

COUPONS

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail price does not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.) Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
