PRICE 25 CENTS

Low-Cost Land Was Available To County

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners apparently could have purchased over 75,000 square feet of property in the Shore Drive area for less than $70,000 as early as 1967, records of the now-abolished Redevelopment Commission indicate. However, a source said the county backed out when the city questioned the price.

The county recently purchased about 42,975 square feet on Greene Street between Second and Third streets for $300,000, or nearly $7 per square foot.

According to documents filed on the Shore Drive urban renewal project, the commission and Pitt County entered into a sales agreement on Feb. 16, 1967, for two disposal parcels owned by the city agency. The agreement, referred to as a "bid and purchase contract," called for the sale of the parcels containing 75,392 and 33,857 square feet, respectively.

The property involved a city block (disposal parcel 12), excluding a small cemetery, bounded by First, Second, Evans and Washington streets, and also the northern portion of the courthouse block, corner of Second and Evans streets (disposal parcel 13).

The sales agreement listed the county's purchase offer for parcel 12 as 91 cents per square foot or $68,607, while the county agreed to buy the smaller tract for $1.50 per square foot or $50,785.

Reginald Gray, current county manager who formerly served as county auditor and clerk to the Board of Commissioners, wrote A E Dubber, late director of the Redevelopment Commission, in September 1969, saying the board had directed him to submit a development plan for parcel 12. Gray said the board "plans to develop parcel 12 into parking facilities, with some beautification, to alleviate the deficiency in parking for county employees, jurors, court officials, witnesses and those having business in the courthouse; however, they reserve the right, at some future time, to erect county offices in conformity with an approved development plan at that time."

Dubber responded to Gray's letter by commending the county board members on their "foresight in realizing that parking on all or nearly all of parcel 12 will be necessary to support the county activities existing and to be housed on parcel 12. And we are particularly pleased that the county intends to do all it can to make parcel 12 attractive instead of simply covering it with asphalt."

Dubber wrote that the commission also had no objection to the interim use of parcel 12 by the county for parking. He concluded, "We sincerely hope that the city-county differences can soon be resolved so the transfer of title to these two parcels can be made to the county."

In a letter dated Dec. 4, 1969, to Billy Laughinghouse, chairman of the Redevelopment Commission, then City Manager Harry Hagerty noted, "It is apparent that we have come to a complete impasse with the county Board of Commissioners on the purchase and sale of individual parcels in this area." Hagerty said, "Perhaps they will be able to develop the Edwards Building property (between the old Armory and the courthouse), etc., and put together a large parcel by purchasing parcels now owned by the Redevelopment Commission in block 12.

The source recalled that the city-county difficulties apparently resulted from a desire on the part of the city to negotiate a higher purchase figure with the county on block 12 and an unwillingness by the county representatives to raise their bid.

The source said the city, in implementing the Shore Drive renewal project, cleaned up property in that area with the idea of increasing the local tax base through the sale of parcels to private developers and subsequent construction of

Lebanese Militia Say Ousted By Israel

fighting between them and rebel elements outside Beirut. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Lebanese Christian Phalange militiamen accused Israel of ordering them out of southern Lebanon today, and Phalangist leaders said thousands of demonstrators rang church bells and burned tires in streets to protest.

In east Lebanon, Syrian-backed Palestine Liberation Organization mutineers launched fresh attacks today on guerrillas loyal to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat after both sides sandbagged their positions, state and privately owned radios said. There was no word on casualties in the sixth straight day of hostilities.

Rightist Christian stations said the Israelis gave the Phalangists a 24-hour ultimatum late Wednesday to close their militia bases in south Lebanon. It was unclear what would happen if the militias defied the reported ultimatum.

Israel's military command in the Beirut suburb of Yarze had no comment on the radio reports, which underscored the frayed relationship between Israeli occupation forces and the Phalange, Lebanon's most powerful militia.

The Phalangists supported Israel's drive into Lebanon 13 months ago to rout the PLO. But the friendship has soured since last September when Christian militiamen massacred hundreds of Palestinian refugees in Beirut, at a time when the capital was under Israeli control.

Phalange officials speculated Israel wants to clear southern Lebanon of their militiamen so that only the more controllable militia of renegade Lebanese Col. Saad Haddad remains there in advance of the planned Israeli pullback from central Lebanon.

There also was speculation that Israeli forces were attempting to win favor with Lebanese Druse militias who have been warring with the Phalangists for months. Israel has a sizable population of Druse, a breakaway Islamic sect.

Phalangist radio stations in Beirut said church bells tolled in the southern Lebanese districts of Sidon, Zaharani, Jezzine and Nabatiyeh to protest the reported Israeli decision to close all Phalange militia barracks.

The stations said Christians in the towns staged demonstrations, burned tires on roads and called a general strike to protest.

A spokesman for the Phalangist "Lebanese Forces" militia in Beirut told The Associated Press the Israeli military command in Sidon on Wednesday requested the closure of Phalangist barracks and centers in the southern towns of Maghdoushe, Sarba and Kfar Falous by late this afternoon.

"We're not going to close them but will not resist if they (Israelis) go in themselves and shut them down," said the spokesman, who declined use of his name.

Elsewhere, Israeli occupation troops tear-gassed, shot and routed Palestinian rioters in the West Bank on Wednesday and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin won three no-confidence votes in Parliament.

Bulletin

NEW YORK (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail overruled the umpires today and ordered that George Brett's two-run homer against the New York Yankees last Sunday count, even though it was hit with a bat coated with too much pine tar.

The Yankees were declared winners of that game, 4-3, over Kansas City when the umpires disallowed Brett's home run and recorded it instead as the final out. Now, the game must be picked up with two outs in the top of the ninth with Kansas City leading 5-4.

More Plants

The confiscation of marijuana plants by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and SBI agents continued Wednesday with the seizure of 525 plants with an estimated street value, if mature, of $424,000, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

He said authorities seized the plants from six sites located in an area from N.C. 33 near Simpson to N.C. 30 between Bethel and Stokes. Tyson said all of the plants were destroyed by authorities at the Pitt County landfill.

County deputies and SBI agents earlier this week seized 1,350 plants, with an estimated street value, if mature, of $945,000, in the northern section of the county.

No arrests have been made, Tyson said.

MURDER INFO SOUGHT

I am interested in knowing why there has not been more on-going public attention given to solving the Howard Manning murder here? This was an atrocious crime that took place in Greenville last Oct. 23. Surely there is someone somewhere who knows something that will assist law enforcement in solving the case. W.N.

Members of the Greenville detective division say that there is $12,500 in rewards available to anyone who assists them in bringing the murderers of Howard Manning to trial. The Governor's office, the A&P stores for whom Manning worked, and Branch Bank and Trust Co., at a branch of which he was making a night deposit at the time of his murder, all have put up rewards. Anyone having information is asked to call Police Chief Glenn Cannon, Police Capt. A.G. Whitaker, or Detective George Albertine, all at 752-3342.

President Declares Democracy In Nicaragua 'Essential' For Peace

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says leftist Nicaragua's acceptance of democracy is "essential" for peace in Central America, a position that some critics contend could undermine existing peace initiatives.

The administration's stance, a shift from earlier demands that Nicaragua simply stop interfering with its neighbors, was expressed in President Reagan's letter to the so-called Contadora nations — Panama, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela — which have been trying to arrange regional peace talks.

In the letter delivered this week, Reagan listed democracy as the first of "four basic principles" crucial to ending the political and military conflicts in Central America.

"It is essential that democratic institutions be established and strengthened as a means to resolve political differences within the Central American states," Reagan said.

State Department officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Wednesday that Reagan was referring specifically to Nicaragua, which he has accused of violating promises made in 1979 to hold free elections.

"We consider it an essential part of any settlement of Central America's problems that Nicaragua live up to the goals it originally stated four years ago," said one official.

But congressional staff aides specializing in foreign policy contend that by demanding changes in Nicaragua's internal policies, Reagan may be raising a condition unacceptable to the Sandinista government and therefore likely to frustrate efforts for a peaceful settlement in the region.

The Sandinistas, who seized power in 1979 by overthrowing longtime dictator and U.S. ally Anastasio Somoza Debayle, have announced plans for elections in 1985, but say balloting could be postponed if the nation is still at war with CIA-backed "contras" — Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries.

Reagan's emphasis on democracy as a necessary part of a Central American peace settlement comes as the administration is increasing the U.S. military presence in the region and is preparing to step up support for the contras who have been attacking Nicaragua from bases in Honduras.

Stewart Will 'Announce' On October 11

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Gastonia native Carl Stewart, former speaker of the state House of Representatives for two terms, told a rally here Wednesday night that he will formally announce his candidacy for lieutenant governor on Oct. 11.

The rally, sponsored by the Pitt County Carl Stewart for Lieutenant Governor Committee, was attended by about 100 persons.

In an interview prior to the rally, Stewart said "there's a lot of political activity in the state right now ... campaigning for the 1984 races has started very early. I've been in about 40 counties in the last two months at scheduled events ... fund raisers such as this, and receptions."

Stewart, who ran a close second to Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green in the 1980 primary, said "I feel very encouraged" about the support he has maintained since that primary.

A member of the House of Representatives from 1967 to 1980, and House speaker from 1977 to 1980, Stewart suggested that the "Senate needs a lieutenant governor in 1984 who is not one of its own." He said the Senate is "far too cliquish ... elitist. New leadership is needed drastically."

Stewart said the General Assembly didn't have the

"gumption" to adopt a bill to regulate hazardous waste disposal, but had no problem in raising the pay of top administration officials and members of the Legislature, and establishing a retirement system for members of the General Assembly.

Stewart also suggested that, rather than raise the pay for the full-time lieutenant governor, the pay should be cut and the job made part-time and "return to the time when the lieutenant governor represents the people."

A practicing attorney, Stewart said issues in the 1984 campaign would deal with public education, public transportation, corrections and management of health services in the state.

Speaking at the fund raiser, Stewart told those attending that he fears the race for lieutenant governor might get lost in the "large Democratic primary" in 1984, because of the large number of candidates and the large number of offices to be filled. He urged those attending to do what they can to assure interest is maintained in the lieutenant governor's race.

He also said he intends to run a hard but clean campaign.

Tracing System Moves Information Not Patient

By GEORGETTE F. HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

Physicians at six hospitals in eastern North Carolina will soon be able to consult directly with obstetricians at the East Carolina University School of Medicine while both review identical patient records.

The new communication system is the first of its kind in North Carolina and one of only 10 in the country. It uses standard telephone lines to enable regional doctors to transmit tracings of fetal heart rates and uterine contractions to ECU specialists in high risk obstetrics.

The physicians can then discuss the records and determine the best treatment to assure the delivery of a healthy baby. The system will reduce the incidence of fetal death and damage and improve health care in the region, said Dr. Jarlath MacKenna, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology.

The new data transmission system will be installed initially in Pungo District Hospital in Belhaven, Roanoke-Chowan Hospital in Ahoskie and Halifax Memorial Hospital in Roanoke Rapids. Three other locations will be named at a later date, MacKenna said.

ECU's new program is funded by a $168,000 grant from the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem.

The information to be transmitted will come from fetal heart monitors, equipment that can be used externally to measure frequency and duration of contractions or internally to monitor the heart rate pattern of the fetus.

The new system has a transmitter that can store up to two hours of tracings and transmit them within minutes by way of a simple telephone connection. It can also transmit the tracings as they are being recorded.

This flexibility means that consulting physicians can detect subtle changes occurring over a period of time as well as acute episodes of distress, said MacKenna, a specialist in high risk pregnancies.

"We will be here to provide a fast second opinion and reassure both the physician and the patient that all is going well," he said. "If the unborn baby is in distress, we can then recommend treatment to correct the problem."

The Reynolds grant funds the cost of transmitters for the area hospitals and a receiver for ECU, which will be located in the obstetrics department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It also supports a staff position for an outreach educator who will provide additional training and continuing education to physicians and nurses in participating hospitals.

MacKenna says part of the grant will also be used to offer educational and training programs throughout the 29 counties served by the medical school's regional perinatal program. The recent explosion of technology and knowledge in the field of obstetrics now requires a significant amount of continuing education to make full use of available resources, he said.

The Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust, a private foundation located in Winston-Salem, was created in 1946 through provisions in the will of Mrs. William N. Reynolds for the purpose of improving health care to the people of North Carolina. Approximately $2 million is awarded annually in grants to non-profit organizations throughout the state. The trust's current areas of interest are programs which promote access to primary health care, alternative health delivery programs which are cost-effective, and illness prevention-health promotion programs.

SNACK FARE

Ginger Cookies & Iced Tea

GINGER COOKIES

Really crunchy.
2 cups sifted unbleached all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1½ teaspoons ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cloves
2-3rds cup butter
2-3rds cup sugar
¼ cup molasses

On wax paper sift together flour, soda, ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. In the bowl of an electric mixer cream butter and sugar; beat in molasses until blended — mixture may look curdly. Add flour mixture; on low speed, beat until blended. Cover tightly and chill until firm enough to shape. Roll level tablespoons of the dough into balls; place a few inches apart on a lightly buttered cookie sheet. With a fork, flatten balls very slightly — about ½ inch thick. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until edges are slightly browned — 10 to 12 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to wire racks to cool completely. Makes 32.

PERSIAN SOUP

Worth being a summer annual because it is so refreshing.

8 ounces plain yogurt
1 cup skim milk
1 large cucumber, pared and grated medium-fine (1 cup not packed)
1 tablespoon minced scallion
2 tablespoons minced fresh dill
2 tablespoons golden raisins
¾ teaspoon salt

In a medium bowl, stir together yogurt, milk, cucumber, scallion, dill, raisins and salt; chill. The raisins will fall to the bottom of the soup, so stir well as it is served to distribute them; they give the soup a great deal of its charm. Drop an ice cube into each bowl of the soup; the ice will keep the soup chilled as it is eaten and pleasantly thin it. Makes 4 small servings.

DINNER FARE

Swiss Liver & Potatoes
Creamy Spinach & Salad
Peach Tart & Iced Tea

SWISS LIVER

May be prepared in the quantity needed.

Cook bacon (1 or 2 slices for each serving) until crisp; drain on paper toweling and keep warm. Coat thin slices of baby beef liver with seasoned flour. In a large skillet in a little hot butter cook liver rather briskly, turning to brown both sides, until barely cooked through. Remove liver and keep warm. In the clean dry skillet in a little butter cook bananas (quartered crosswise and lengthwise) just until hot through. Arrange liver and bananas on a hot serving plate and garnish with bacon and watercress.

The number of primary school-aged children — 5 to 13 years old — was 30.7 million in 1981. The number is expected to decrease to 29.6 million in 1985. But by 1995, the number is likely to increase to 34.4 million.

Dear Abby

Allergy To Perfume Nothing To Sneeze At

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am allergic to all perfumes and colognes. Only people who suffer from this allergy can appreciate how terrible it is. When I come into close contact with someone wearing an excess of perfume or cologne, I get a throbbing headache and my skull feels as though it's about to explode!

I can't understand why some people douse themselves so excessively with overpowering cologne. Years ago it was considered cheap or vulgar to use too much perfume, but today when you walk into a room, you nearly pass out from the combination of fragrances used by men as well as women.

Please print this, Abby. You would be doing a lot of people a big favor.

ALLERGIC

DEAR ALLERGIC: I've had a rash (no pun intended) of letters lately on this subject. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. Most people think I'm a "kook" because I am allergic to perfumes and colognes. Just one whiff, and my nostrils close up, my throat becomes irritated, and I start coughing and choking and gasping for air. It's a panicky feeling. All I can do is run to a place where I can breathe fresh air.

Abby, some people (men as well as women) use a fragrance subtly, and others bathe in it!

I happen to be a smoker, and I respect those who are allergic to smoke. Why can't others respect my allergies? They don't seem to care or understand. My doctor said, "Sorry. I can't do anything for you. Stay away from the public, and your friends should understand."

Can you offer any help? I have never seen this subject in print.

NEEDS HELP IN TUCSON

DEAR NEEDS: Your doctor's advice should be taken literally. When you encounter an overscented person in a social situation, head for the nearest exit! And it's up to you to tell your friends about the seriousness of your problem.

P.S. Why hasn't someone invented a chic designer gas mask? It would be an instant "best-smeller." I'd be the first to buy one.

DEAR ABBY: I am going to have a baby, and I am not married. What should I do about my baby's last name? I know for certain who the baby's daddy is. Do I need his permission to give my baby his last name? Some say I do and some say I don't.

I plan to keep my baby, but I need to know what name I should put down on the birth certificate.

HAVING A BABY

DEAR HAVING: Laws differ from state to state. In some states, in order to use the father's surname, the father must admit paternity or it must be proved through the courts and an affidavit signed to that effect.

Find out what is required in your state. If a child is not able to use the father's surname, the surname of the mother is normally used.

DEAR ABBY: Say it again! I can't tell you how much I agree with you when you say that a pastor should always call before dropping in on church members.

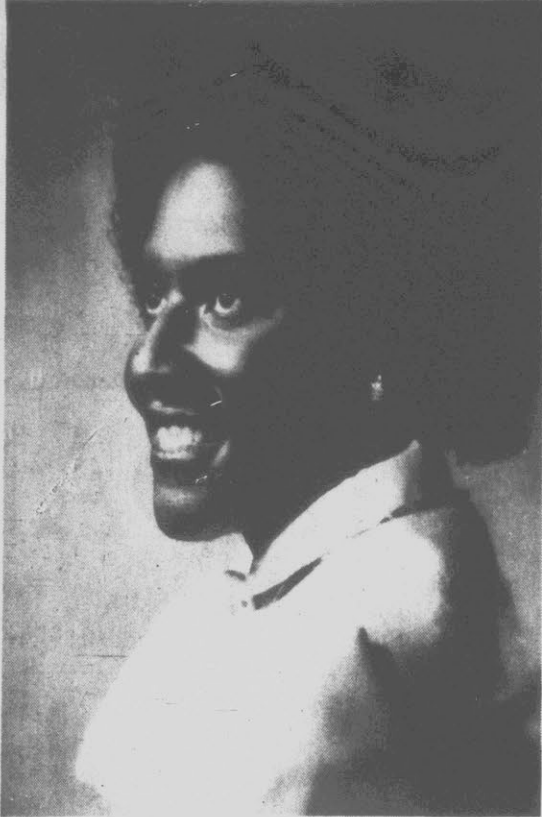

Just 15 or 20 minutes' notice would be enough. Surprise visits are almost always upsetting and inconvenient.

Where do some people get the idea that clergymen are gods?

KNOXVILLE

DEAR KNOX: It's hereditary. They get it from their parents.

Problems? Everybody has them. What are yours? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Women in the United States live an average of eight years longer than men, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. But it wasn't always that way. At the turn of the century, a male child at birth had a life expectancy of 46.3 years, while female infants could be expected to live to be 48.3-years-old, on the average — a two-year difference.

New York had the highest average dental charges among seven cities surveyed in 1981 and 1982 by the Health Insurance Association of America. The lowest charges were found in St. Louis. With the exception of the initial oral examination, New York's fees were consistently higher for cleaning, filling, crown, root canal and extraction procedures, the association said.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I am not going to preface this column by the old cliché, "I'm not a prude, but..." I am a prude. Maybe the last one in North America.

A prude who flinches when she hears a speaker pepper a lecture with four-letter words. A prude who is still shocked when a television show in prime time uses words I used to get by mouth washed out with soap for using. A prude who is not amused by children whose conversations have all the imagination of restroom walls.

This country is becoming bilingual. English and Profanity are spoken fluently here by children and adults alike.

I'm not naive. Like taxes and Dick Clark, some things will always be with us. Profanity is one of them, but I'm to the point where I feel I have no protection or options. I don't have the right of choice, as do the smokers and non-smokers. The words are as much a part of our culture as potholes and billboards. They are on television, films, T-shirts, and in classrooms. They are on records, in books, bumper stickers and magazines.

Think back on how far we have come. What was the brand name of the pink soap you mother put in your mouth when you told your brother to "Shut up!" and she didn't want to hear language like that in her house? How long did it take your Dad to hose down a dirty word written in chalk on the sidewalk by your house by a boy you were forbidden to ever see again in your lifetime? Where were you and what were you doing when you learned that the real reason Mr. Tewsbury was not given tenure and dismissed was because he told the principal where to go in four letters?

The opponents of this confession of a prude will scream about their rights to freedom of speech. It's ironic that the newspaper which you are now reading, in addition to being the greatest single champion of the First Amendment, is the last bastion of decency alive in America.

The contents of this paper are written by men and women whose spoken language would probably make the hair stand up on a rattlesnake's chest, but they have deemed to respect your home and the readers by using a vocabulary that still conveys all the emotions without offending anyone.

That's the point. Maybe I can't control the language on public elevators, at public sports events, or of the salesperson who one day ripped a package when she handed it to me and spewed out a word that melted my credit card.

But surely mass media can be made responsible for expanding their vocabulary. Profanity is a lot like smoke. Being around it is just as bad as using it yourself.

Heritage Lives On

In the mad dash to tear down old buildings to make way for the new, we often sacrifice some of our heritage, as well as demolishing still usable property.

Tabitha M. DeVisconti recognized this and made provisions in her will for the preservation of her family home and its maintenance as a museum. She willed the home, at Main and Pine streets, to the town of Farmville. Miss DeVisconti, who died this week at the age of 92, provided up to $500,000 to restore the house as a museum and to provide for its maintenance.

The home and park area to be created around it will be named for Miss DeVisconti's ancestor, Major Benjamin May. She also made other bequests to civic groups in the Farmville area.

Miss DeVisconti lived all her life in Farmville. Now she has left a heritage to Farmville's citizens — and to all of us. It is a magnificent gift which can be treasured by the people of Farmville and enjoyed by all who come to visit.

Eggs Point The Way

Whether you like them hard or soft scrambled, over hard and sunny side up, eggs are going to be an essential part of our life. Just take a look at what Sunnyside Eggs is planning for its Pitt County operation.

The company, with a plant just south of Greenville that processes 30 million dozen eggs annually, is now expanding to a 216-acre site near Roundtree west of Winterville. The expansion, to be carried out with an investment of $8 million, will have the capacity to ship more than 22 million dozens of eggs each year.

Put that in a better perspective. Allowing each person two eggs a day, Sunnyside's projected output would supply the egg needs of 850,000 people each year.

The company spreads its eggs around, with markets in North Carolina, Virginia, New Jersey, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Sunnyside's Joe Wilson estimates the volume of sales will exceed $16 million annually.

All of that is impressive, but even more impressive is that Pitt County is continuing to hold on and to nurture its industry. When a company the size of Sunnyside virtually doubles its operation, it helps the entire area.

Sunnyside estimates the expansion will make jobs for another 70 people, with an annual payroll of $1 million, and will create a market for local corn and soybeans that will pour another $8 million annually into the Pitt economy.

That is the kind of economy that we need.

Breaking Up Blues

NEW YORK (AP) — Come November, anyone looking up the familiar "ATT" in the stock tables will be seeing double.

Under the plans for the breakup of the world's largest company, that's when trading is scheduled to begin in the stock of the "new" American Telephone & Telegraph Co. ("when issued") as well as the old one.

This situation is by no means the only potential source of confusion facing AT&T's 3 million-plus stockholders in the months ahead.

Financial experts generally believe the company has done a good job to date mapping out an orderly program for its government-mandated breakup into eight different entities. But such a huge undertaking inevitably has its complications.

Along with their Aug. 1 dividend checks, AT&T is mailing shareholders information on the latest plans for its divestiture, scheduled to take place at yearend, of its local telephone-system operating businesses into seven separate regional companies.

AT&T will retain its other businesses, including long-distance service; the Western Electric subsidiary that manufactures phone equipment; the Bell Laboratories research and development arm; American Bell, which markets communications equipment and services; and AT&T International.

As it has already disclosed, AT&T plans to distribute one share of each of these regional companies for each 10 shares of AT&T stock now outstanding. Thus, an owner of 50 shares of the "old" telephone company would wind up with 50 shares of the new AT&T, plus five shares of each of the seven regional companies.

To accept this deal, as it now stands, a shareowner need do nothing but wait. The company says all owners on its books will get statements in January showing what their new holdings are. Owners of 10 to 499 shares of existing stock will have the option of swapping shares of some of the regional companies for those of others, for a fee of 25 cents per share.

Since the regional companies have never been subject to separate evaluation by the market, no one knows precisely what each will be worth, or whether their yields will add up to about the same as the current 8.7 percent.

Even if it does work out that way, an owner who formerly held just one stock yielding one quarterly payment will have several stocks, each paying separate dividends.

It occurred to some Wall Streeters that many AT&T owners, particularly those RALEIGH — The next governor of North Carolina, whoever he or she happens to be, should save a big collective kiss for the 1983 General Assembly. Two actions taken in the waning days of the session will make the governor's life a lot nicer.

On the personal front, the unprecedented $25,000 raise — which pushes the governor's salary to $85,000 in January 1985 — should be welcome. You can buy a lot of enchiladas with that much cash.

On the political side, the half-cent local option sales tax eliminates what could have been the next governor's biggest headache. It provides a method of funding for capital projects in two crucial areas. And it does so without that new governor having to take any of the political heat for it.

North Carolina public schools are said to have $1.8 billion in capital needs. The price tag for needed water and sewer projects is estimated at $1.6 billion. Both of these items are considered local responsibilities. That is, the county commissioners and city council are supposed to come up with a way to pay for them. But, the state has traditionally sought to help local governments in both areas. In the past, the Legislature has OK'd bond referenda that the voters have then passed to partially pay for these projects.

The state long ago ran out of school money and water and sewer money ran out last month. A water and sewer bond had been approved by the assembly but Gov. Jim Hunt had been reluctant to put it to the voters fearing it would be defeated. Hunt had appointed a special task force to look for innovative ways of funding school construction but it came up dry.

So, as Hunt's term winds down, it appeared that these two capital projects would have been left for the next governor to solve. Immediately, he'd be forced to go to the assembly looking for new taxes for a problem he'd inherited. Or, of course, he could let the schools continue to deteriorate, ignore the water and sewer problems and make all the local government officials who lobbied for this bill angry.

The middle ground might have been to hope for an improvement in the economy that would boost revenues and pay for some capital spending. But any new governor will be hoping to use that money for his own agenda. "The next governor is going to be like all governors. He's going to be energetic and he's going to have a program that's going to cost a lot of money," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, House Finance chairman.

Supporters of the half-cent tax hope it will solve the capital projects problem for a long time. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Vance, said the bill shifts back to local officials the political responsibility for building new schools and sewer lines. If they're unwilling to pass the half-cent tax, then they'll get none of the new money. When the schools in their county start falling down, people there won't be able to point a finger at the governor.

"The sales tax is a state source of revenue," Watkins said. "The legislature is giving the counties the authority to levy a tax that would normally go to the state."

Watkins, who was instrumental in drafting the final compromise, says the legislature led the way on this tax increase hoping to finally solve the capital projects problem. Once the tax is increased, neither the governor, the legislature nor the officials should have to fight over it again.

"It makes life easier for everyone," Watkins said, "except the people who have to pay for it."

Age Jokes

WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Reagan is making age jokes, could a political campaign be far away?

When he ran for president in 1980, Reagan and his advisers decided to tackle the question of his age — and possible voter concern that he was too old to be president — by joking about it and making no effort to play it down.

On Feb. 6, 1980, his 69th birthday, he worked the crowds in frigid New Hampshire, and was given birthday parties at every stop.

On Tuesday, he saluted the FBI on the agency's 75th birthday.

He visited the FBI headquarters, on Pennsylvania Avenue between the White House and the Capitol, and signed a proclamation designating July 26 as FBI Day.

As he wrapped up his speech, the 72-year-old president remarked: "It's nice to recognize something in Washington that's older than I am."

There's been some more fallout from the protest staged on Monday by photographers who were barred from taking pictures of Reagan's meeting with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the chairman of the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America.

The photographers made their dissatisfaction known by attending a ceremony in the Rose Garden, at which a wildlife award was being presented, but leaving their cameras behind.

On Tuesday, as they got ready to take pictures of Reagan and former French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing in the Oval Office, Edwin Meese III, the president's counselor, spied them. With a chuckle, he said "I see you've got your cameras with you today."

Eyebrows were raised at the White House when deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver took an aircraft usually reserved for the president, a Boeing 707 bearing the presidential seal, on his trip to begin preparations for Reagan's journey to Asia in November.

By taking the president's back-up aircraft, bearing the tail number 26000, Deaver left Reagan with the primary Air Force One, with tail number 27000, and several older aircraft usually reserved for the vice president or secretary of state.

Strength For Today

The word "devil" comes from a Greek word which means "to throw across."

A devil is a slanderer, a traducer, one who throws a lie across someone's fair name, a false estimate of one's worth across the pathway of his progress, a difficulty before the feet of a brother who may, and probably will, be caused thereby to stumble.

There are a lot of people today who take pride in declaring that they do not believe in devils, or demons. But they have to admit that somebody, or something, is continually casting a stumbling block before their feet.

So don't be too ready to scoff at the devil, and at the big boss of all devils, Satan himself. Experience teaches us that an adverse force is constantly being exerted against our best intentions. Temptations, impediments and other devils are being cast before our feet.

We do not have to envisage devils in the popular pictorial manner to know what they are. By their works shall ye know them.

Report On Judges Can Be Useful

at least 10 years of private practice, and if he intends to serve in a trial court this experience should be largely in courtroom work. In the society's view, 60 is too old to start on the bench. Younger men and women must have years to grow into the job.

Good health is important. The day is long past when an infirm or easy-going lawyer could look upon the bench as a life of ease. Crowded dockets now demand the physical and mental endurance of a high school teacher in an inner city classroom. Communicative skills are vital: "It is crucial that those selected for the appellate bench be good writers, capable of producing lucid and understandable opinions."

distinguishes between trial judges and appellate judges. These are different breeds, and they call for different characteristics.

A good trial judge is a ringmaster, a traffic cop and a baseball umpire. He has to have stamina, patience, kindness and humor. He must be able to communicate simply and decisively. He must be master of his courtroom. By contrast, a good appellate judge is expected to have a deeper knowledge of the law. Here we want reflective and reasoning minds. Here we are dealing with a different and higher level of communication.

The two classes of judges have much, of course, in common. The society's panel would like a beginning judge to have had Professional skills are important, but the report acknowledges that "it is neither possible nor reasonable to expect a judge to be an expert in all areas of the law." A beginning judge should have a good grasp of the key areas of substantive law, constitutional principles and the rules of evidence and procedure. After that he is on his own.

Underlying all the criteria is a characteristic more important than all the rest, and much harder to define or to quantify: integrity. The authors of the report confess that a sharp definition eludes them. Integrity is more than the absence of bias for or against different races, sexes, lawyers or issues. It is certainly much more than a mere absence of apparent conflicts of interest. Integrity manifestly embraces honesty and impartiality — these are the least we should expect — but integrity lies at the core of the ideal judicial character.

The society's purpose in drawing up its guidelines is to encourage the spread of state and local commissions on judicial qualifications. Judges ought to be chosen with great care, because they exercise great power — power over our lives, our liberties and our property.

An ordered society cannot exist without judges. Within the ground rules of politics, which never can be expelled from the field, we should draft the best judges that a selection process can find.

WASHINGTON — A couple of thousand years ago Socrates set forth the qualifications of a good judge: to hear courteously, to answer wisely, to consider soberly and to decide impartially. The American Judicature Society, after an 18-month study of the criteria for judicial office, is back where Socrates began.

If the society's report adds little to the literature on judicial qualifications, it is a useful report nonetheless. At both the state and federal levels, judges play an increasingly important role — often a dominant role — in our lives. Whether we elect our judges or appoint them, what should we look for in the men and women who will sit upon the bench?

Quite properly, the society

A Weekend Festival In Washington

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Summer Festival '83 will begin this weekend in Washington with members of the Blackbeard outdoor drama arriving in a boat at 3:30 p.m. and staying until 5:30 p.m.

Events begin Saturday at 8 a.m. with a Sidewalk Cafe, sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council. Continental breakfasts will be served until 10:30 a.m.

Mechanic Is Underground

RICHMOND, Ind. (AP) — Pauline Lichtenfels wants the groundhog with "ingenuity" to come back. She'd like to move her car.

Mrs. Lichtenfels was washing her hair Monday when she heard the motor of the family's aging auto, which hadn't been started in nine months and is kept behind a neighbor's place.

Mrs. Lichtenfels called the neighbor, Betty Riley, to ask why she had started the junker.

But Ms. Riley said she didn't know anything about the car's being started.

Mrs. Lichtenfels scooped up her car keys and ran out to shut off the humming heap. But the doors were locked, and there was no key in the ignition.

A hastily recruited mechanic — her brother-in-law — arrived to solve the case.

When he lifted the hood, a large groundhog looked up from its roost inside. In one corner of the engine, several bare wires testified to the animal's dental talent. The hot-wiring rodent quickly escaped through the 17-year-old car's underside.

And the car?

"It ran for about a half hour and then it stopped," Mrs. Lichtenfels said. "My neighbor wants us to move it now. She's afraid it'll blow up."

There's only one problem: the one mechanic who knows how to get the thing running has gone underground.

Non-Lawyer Attending ABA Session

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Rosita Stanley, a retired maintenance worker from Macon, Ga., isn't going to be the most popular person at this year's American Bar Association convention.

"It's a myth that lawyers are concerned with justice for all," she says. "They just go to law school to get rich."

Mrs. Stanley will be a rare non-lawyer among the more than 8,000 attorneys at the week-long convention opening Thursday in Atlanta. She is scheduled to represent the National Clients Council, a

Washington-based nonprofit group working to expand free legal services for low-income clients, at a panel discussion Sunday on "The American Client Versus the American Lawyer."

At a time when even leaders of the profession are debating whether there are too many lawyers, Mrs. Stanley sums up the public's misgivings. "I really don't think lawyers are very sensitive people," she says. "They try to find loopholes and try to trip people up on procedures."

That's not so much different than what Thomas Jefferson said: "It is the trade of lawyers to question everything, yield nothing and to talk by the hour."

"We are regarded as more canny than candid, more as servants of our prince, as mouthpieces or hired guns, than as servants of our consciences," former White House counsel Lloyd Cutler says.

Lawyers are concerned that Americans feel that too many lawyers are dishonest, incompetent, greedy or all of the above.

A recent ABA Journal survey said lawyers think the most important issue facing the legal profession is its public image.

"There's clearly a lack of perception about what lawyers do, but it's not always the public's fault," says John Curtin Jr., the Boston lawyer who will be moderating the panel discussion on clients versus lawyers.

He says lawyers must do a better job telling the public about how they have a duty to pursue their clients' interests aggressively, about how they donate more of their time to no-fee "pro bono" cases than any other profession and about how lawyers are not necessarily to blame for lawsuits.

"Clients push their lawyers to resolve issues on the battlefield," he says.

To that end, more and more law firms are using advertising and public relations consultants, according to ABA surveys.

But if lawyers have a tarnished image, a lack of perception by the public is only part of the reason. The 270,000-member ABA, for instance, says that last year 1,878 lawyers were disciplined — disbarred, suspended, fined, reprimanded, put on probation or allowed to resign without formal action.

That is a small percentage of the more than 612,000 lawyers in the country, but it is also a 73 percent increase in the number of disciplinary actions in the last four years.

Alan Morrison, director of the nonprofit Public Citizen Litigation Group in Washington, says the organized bar deserves the criticism. For example, he cites the opening debate at last year's ABA convention on a 5-year-old proposal for a new ethics code.

He said the first action by the House of Delegates was to decide that clients are not entitled to a written agreement setting lawyers' fees. "That says a lot about what's wrong with the ABA," Morrison says.

The National Law Journal recently reported that one of every 20 lawyers will be sued for malpractice this year.

The Journal also described how the 30 percent jump in the number of lawyers over the last five years is squeezing the job market. As a result, more and more of nation's 30,000 law school graduates each year are working in law-related businesses or service industries — such as personnel, recruiting, public relations and insurance — rather than actually practicing law.

The growth of the profession has triggered a debate among two of the academic world's most respected figures.

Derek Bok, the president of Harvard University and former dean of Harvard's law school, says too many bright students are being lured into law by the prospect of $50,000 salaries for first-year associates at some Wall Street firms.

Bok says the legal profession is draining off students who would otherwise go into science, engineering or other professions. He also criticizes legal training, saying it trains lawyers to perpetuate the inefficiencies in the judicial system.

But Eugene Rostow, dean of New York Law School, says the nation may need more, not fewer, lawyers. He says a legal education is one of the best ways to produce "leadership and greatness."

Mathew Valencic, director of another Washington nonprofit group called Help Abolish Legal Tyranny, leaves no doubt about where his 120,000-member group stands.

"Relations between clients and lawyers are not good,"

he says. "There's a severe distrust of lawyers on the part of many folks. I don't think the legal profession has accepted its problems. They see it as just an image problem."

"Lawyers seem to think the legal system is theirs. We think it's everyone's business."

Misspelled Name On Cars

EMMETSBURG, Iowa (AP) — The decals emblazoning the sides of Emmetsburg police cruisers looked just great, until somebody noticed the town's name was misspelled.

It wasn't until a few days after the patrol cars had been equipped with the new shield-shaped emblems that red-faced officials discovered that the decal-printer had put in one "t" too many.

Ironically, "Emmettsburg" — the name that the patrol cars carried — was the town's name a century ago, before the second "t" was dropped.

City administrator Pat Kliegl said new decals have been ordered.

Adopts A Duck And 6 Offspring

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Wally Weerts isn't passing out cigars, but his obvious he's proud of his adopted family — a duck and her six offspring.

One day in early July, the unlikely stepfather found an egg on top of his pleasure boat, which he keeps on a hoist at Lake Decatur. He moved the egg to go boating, then replaced it.

"Next time I came out it was three eggs. Everytime I came it was another egg, 'til it was up to six," said Weerts, 61.

Not one to disturb an expecting mother, Weerts got a box for the eggs and bolted it to a perch on the electric hoist. Now he can lower the boat without disturbing the nest.

"We're both happy," he said recently.

Weerts feeds the new family every day. "We're waitin' for the grandchildren," he says.

Self-examination Should Be Taught Teens

From the time I was 40 years old I followed the instruction of my doctor and have learned how to examine my breasts for lumps and growths. I am happy that I have never found any.

Yesterday my 14-year-old daughter asked me why she shouldn't be examining her breasts. I thought it was a good idea and I thought I would send it on to you. Do you agree? — Mrs. A.L.J., Ore.

Dear Mrs. J.:

It really is astonishing that your child should come up with an idea that is positively brilliant. As a practicing physician I have never heard young adolescents given any instructions about this.

I looked up the literature and came up with an excellent article written by Dr. Robert M. Cavanaugh Jr., director of adolescent medicine at Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, N.Y. He believes that the proper technique for self-examination should be taught regularly to young maturing adolescents.

Even though serious breast conditions are rarely found during adolescence, it gives them an excellent head start in breast self-examination, one that will continue throughout life.

Dr. Cavanaugh skillfully and with great sensitivity approaches the problem in this way. He says, "A brief explanation of the physical examination should be given during a history-taking session while the patient is still in street clothes. This allows her to prepare for the actual examination at a time when she feels relatively relaxed. The introductory explanation also provides an opportunity to emphasize the importance of establishing breast self-examination as a lifelong pattern."

The patient's modesty must be respected while she is being taught how to examine her own breasts. She is advised to check her breasts three to four days after her menstrual period ends. It is explained that during this part of the menstrual cycle a small milk cyst may be present.

Without inducing anxiety or fear, young adolescents can be taught by their mothers the exact technique for palpating their breasts. Once this has been accepted, the procedure can then be carried on throughout life. The advantages are great. If any lump ever becomes present, it will be recognized early and brought to the attention of the doctor.

And this is the key to the early treatment and cure of cancer.

The axiom that early detection followed by early treatment accounts for the fact that the success of cures for cancer of the breast has attained the highest level during the past decade.

Pitt County Forest Survey

The United States Forest Service is conducting its fifth forest inventory this month in Pitt County.

The forest survey is part of a nationwide program which collects and provides information concerning the extent and conditions of local forest lands, timber growth and removals.

Conducted by the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station in Asheville, in cooperation with the North Carolina Forest Service, the survey examines each county in North Carolina every 10 years.

Forestry technician Diane Dormady will participate in the Pitt County survey. She expects the work here to end in early August.

"Our supervisors in Asheville predict the completion of North Carolina near January 1985. We started the state last November with 4,900 sample plots to relocate," Ms. Dormady said.

According to field supervisor Mark Brown, there are eight two-person crews working in the northeastern part of the state.

"North Carolina consists of four geographical units. Greenville will be the base for Unit 2 — the northeastern Coastal Plain. We expect completion of this unit near Thanksgiving. Then we shall head west across the state to the Piedmont and mountains," Brown said.

Brown commented that recent surveys in the Southern states have shown "as much as a 10 percent reduction in forested acreage of certain regions over the past 10 years. The ongoing survey will reflect any similar changes in the land base of the N.C. Coastal Plain."

Private corporations, individuals and the government use the data to help formulate their forestry programs, policies and practices.

Authorized by the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Act of 1978, the work of the forest survey was undertaken by regional experiment stations of the U.S. Forest Service.

new facilities. The source pointed out that the city, realizing that block 12 would be lost from the tax base if it was purchased by the county, wanted the county to pay what the city considered was a fairer price to offset the loss of tax revenue. It was emphasized by the source that the city did not question the fact that the county had a valid need for property and the sale could have gone through.

According to the source, in spite of the unsuccessful negotiations on the purchase price, there was no legal precedent for the city to block the sale to the county for 91 cents per square foot. If the sales agreement had gained the county signatures, the council would have had no choice but to approve the transaction since the property had been appraised, a bid had been made, and a development plan submitted for the development of the block, it was noted.

In November 1970 Pitt County voters approved a $9 million proposal to build what is now Pitt County Memorial Hospital, clearing the way for the county to use the old hospital facility on N.C. 43 for office space. With that, the county apparently lost interest in the downtown property.

In February 1971, Dubber wrote a letter to John Edmonds, assistant regional administrator for renewal assistance for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Atlanta. In his letter Dubber pointed out, "At last we have been able to resolve the difficulties between the city and the county regarding the courthouse block in our Project N.C. R-15 (Shore Drive), and we can now proceed to acquire and dispose of the property in that block."

"Because of a recent bond issue, the county no longer wants to purchase disposal parcel 12 and we will be able to sell it to a private developer, or developers, which should result in a considerable reduction in the net cost in the project. We will, of course, proceed to have parcel 12 reappraised and determine whether or not it is best to hold this block as one parcel or divide it," Dubber said.

Dubber enclosed for Edmonds' "information and concurrence a copy of our amendment to the agreement between this commission and Pitt County which deletes disposal parcel 12 from our previously executed sales agreement."

HUD concurred in the deletion of parcel 12 from the agreement and indicated the need for new reuse appraisals on the parcel.

The Redevelopment Commission notified the county that the City Council had approved the sale of the parcel 13 section to the county and that the council approved the amendment deleting the city block from the 1967 sales agreement. The amendment was signed by Dubber, Billy Laughinghouse, the late B. Vernon Cox, county commission chairman, and attested by County Attorney W.W. Speight, now deceased, and Margaret M. Roberts, secretary.

The council has the ultimate responsibility to approve the sale of disposal parcels in the project areas and could have scheduled the parcel 12 sale to the county for consideration at a regular council meeting if the contracts had been signed.

The property was sold to the partnership of Wheless & Associates in April 1971 for $101,779 or $1.35 per square foot. The buyers proposed a two-phased office building development on the tract.

In November 1978, according to a memorandum to the city manager from Joe Laney, director of the Redevelopment Commission, the county indicated an interest in purchasing the western half of the Wheless & Associates parcel, not yet developed, for parking and possible construction of an office facility. Since the development plan for the property had not been completed, the tract could not be conveyed to another party without commission approval. The property could not

Ga.-Fla. Leaf Sales Seeing Slow Start

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Flue-cured tobacco sales are off to a slow start, but Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin envisions brisker sales later in the season.

The average price paid for Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco Wednesday, the opening day of the 1983 selling season, was $140.40 per hundred pounds, down $11.53 from the opening day average last year.

The Federal-State Market News Service also reported preliminary figures showing total sales for the belt were 3,790,145 pounds for a sale worth $5,321,299.

Tobacco grower Emmett Gaston of Pinetta, Fla., described the atmosphere at the Valdosta market as "a funeral."

But while Irvin acknowledged buyers were "less than enthusiastic," he predicted an improvement in sales as the season progresses.

Georgia sales were 3,230,243 pounds at $141.63 per hundred for a total of $4,574,839. Florida sales were 559,902 pounds at $133.32 per hundred for $746,460.

Employment Brightening

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The unemployment rate increased in 51 North Carolina counties in June, fell in 47 counties and remained unchanged in two counties, the chairman of the state Employment Security Commission said today.

Glenn Jernigan said the statewide total unemployment rate was 8.5 percent in June, up from 8.4 percent in May. The national unadjusted rate was 10.2 percent in June, up slightly from 9.8 percent in May.

"Students looking for work have an effect on statewide total unemployment each June," he said. "But we believe North Carolina's recovery from the recession is real and strong."

In June, 42 counties recorded double-digit unemployment, compared to 45 percent in June 1982.

Graham County had the highest unemployment rate with 23.5 percent, or 790 unemployed in a labor force of 3,360. Other counties with high unemployment were Swain, 18.1 percent, Clay, 17.9 percent, Columbus, 15.5 percent, Wilson, 15.5 percent and Tyrrell, 15.3 percent.

Counties with the lowest unemployment rates were Orange, 4.1 percent, Currituck, 4.6 percent, Wake, 4.6 percent, Carteret, 4.8 percent, Durham, 4.8 percent and Gates, 5 percent.

Between 40 percent and 50 percent of sales were placed under loan Wednesday, compared to 14.1 percent the first day last year, the news service said.

The percentage of primings increased and accounted for around two-thirds of sales while less lugs and cutters were auctioned.

"The fact that there's not the interest from the major domestic companies like Phillip Morris Inc. and R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. has not helped us," Irvin said. "We would like to see them showing strong interest, but we predicted a lot of uncertainty."

North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said he was disappointed with the opening prices and the amount of leaf going under government loan.

"I hope this does not reflect what we will see opening day in North Carolina," Graham said. "I believe we have, for the most part, a good quality crop here, and we are looking for higher opening-day prices with less going to Stabilization."

North Carolina markets are scheduled to open Aug. 2.

Gaston, who watched with other farmers as the auctions opened in Valdosta, said this has been "a bad year" for tobacco growers, referring to a freeze imposed this week on tobacco price supports, which had been scheduled to increase at least 10 cents a pound this year.

"They decided to freeze it, but none of our costs froze," Gaston said. "Tobacco markets used to have a carnival atmosphere. Now it's more like a funeral. But I guess all farmers are optimistic. If they weren't, they would not keep planting."

Fund-Raisers

By The Associated Press

Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt hopes to bring about $100,000 home from four California fund-raisers for his North Carolina Victory Fund, aides say.

The money is earmarked for his expected but unannounced bid to unseat U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. in 1984.

Hunt carried his message to small groups of Democrats and political activists from posh areas of San Francisco to private homes in Brentwood and Hollywood Hills in a three-day swing that began Sunday.

Hunt's fund-raisers were organized by the Committee for California, a political action committee formed last January by former California Gov. Jerry Brown, a Hunt political ally.

John Bennett, a Hunt campaign aide, said the trip was intended primarily to introduce Hunt to politically active Californians and to ask for their continued support.

Challenged By Foreign Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's pharmaceutical companies are in danger of losing their competitive edge as foreign competitors develop new products and aggressively promote sales, according to a new study.

The report issued by a panel of the National Academy of Engineering warned that a severe challenge to U.S. drug companies is being mounted by competitors in Europe and Japan.

The pharmaceutical industry has not matched the significant expansion in research and development by foreign pharmaceutical companies, the report said.

Seek Reopen Ford Transmissions Case

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Last February, an elderly man sat on a park bench in Charlotte, N.C., waiting for a bus when a woman in a Ford stopped her car nearby, left it running and walked into a building to drop off a book.

Suddenly the empty car lurched backward, the man's son told a panel of congressmen Wednesday, roared down the street at better than 30 mph and pinned his father against a building. An hour later the man was dead.

Auto safety advocates, arguing that the man was one of 232 people who have died since the mid-1970s in such accidents, called on the government Wednesday to reopen the Ford Motor Co. transmission case.

The Reagan administration said it would not because the fatality rate involving Ford transmissions slipping unexpectedly into reverse was declining, although at least 26 people died in such accidents in the last two years.

The Ford transmission problem dates back a half dozen years, but Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said he wants to find out whether a Ford-proposed solution to it — one accepted by the government in the final weeks of the Carter administration — addressed the issue adequately.

He said Reagan administration highway safety officials by their own admission have "done little to monitor this (government-Ford) settlement as required by the agreement."

Two years ago the Carter administration, despite the objections of its top highway safety official, stopped proceedings for recalling an estimated 10 million 1969 through 1979 Ford model cars, which were thought to be susceptible to the transmission slipping problem. The government already had reports of at least 117 deaths in connection with such accidents.

Instead, Ford agreed to mail dashboard decals to the owners of the cars warning them not to leave the vehicles unattended with the engine running.

Joan Claybrook, who headed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration at the time of the agreement, testified Wednesday that Carter officials halted attempts to have the cars recalled because of political and economic considerations.

An expensive recall "was viewed as an enormous burden on Ford by some members of the administration" because the U.S. auto industry was suffering from poor sales and foreign competition, she said.

Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, told Wirth's subcommittee at least 50 people have been killed in accidents related to Ford transmissions slipping into reverse since the decals were mailed.

Ditlow said a survey his group conducted of 700 of the car owners in four cities showed only 7 percent have put the decals on their cars.

Diane Steed, acting head of NHTSA, said there are no plans to reopen the case, arguing that the Ford decal campaign "appears to be working."

The highway safety agency acknowledged 26 deaths involving Ford transmissions slipping into reverse since the agreement was reached, but claimed no knowledge of the two dozen others documented by the Center for Highway Safety.

The 26 deaths, said Ms. Steed, represent "a dramatic decline" in the rate of fatalities. She told the subcommittee the agency will increase its effort to make motorists aware that they should not leave a vehicle with the engine running.

Ford representatives insisted the warning labels are adequate and Ford said it had reports of 160 deaths involving similar accidents in other cars.

No Plans For A Special Session

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has indicated he will not call a special session of the General Assembly to consider legislation on hazardous waste disposal, an aide says.

"Right now, there are no plans to call a legislative session," said R. Brent Hackney, the governor's deputy press secretary. "We are operating under the assumption that the issue will be taken up during the short session (next June)."

Legislators could not reach agreement on House and Senate versions of a hazardous waste disposal bill before adjournment last week. The Legislature had been under pressure to act because the state must adopt rules for burying wastes by Oct. 1 or turn over control of the waste management program to federal officials.

Some officials have indicated the state will avoid federal takeover by adopting federal standards on waste disposal until the state can approve its own rules.

Bill To Kill Withholding Law Faces Early Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 22 million people who complained to Congress about the prospect of having taxes withheld from their savings are about to get results. A compromise bill to wipe the withholding law off the books is awaiting final action by the lawmakers.

The results won't be pleasing to those who worry about the record federal deficit; the compromise will worsen the deficit by nearly $11 billion over the next five years.

And those who don't honestly pay taxes on their interest and dividends will run the risk of having 20 percent withheld from their savings earnings if they are caught.

But for most Americans, the new plan means taxes will not be withheld from their interest and dividends.

Congressional negotiators broke a week-long impasse over the compromise repeal bill Wednesday and sent it to the House and Senate for final votes. They could come today.

President Reagan's expected concurrence — despite earlier pledges to veto any repeal of withholding — would kill the law before it is due to go into effect on Aug. 5.

The impasse over the repeal bill had nothing to do with whether there should be withholding; it was caused by an unrelated amendment the Senate had attached to the bill. The amendment would make permanent a law, scheduled to expire Dec. 31, exempting from federal income taxes certain bonds issued to subsidize lower-income homebuyers.

The House refused to accept the bond amendment and the Senate at first would not drop it. But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, broke the tie Wednesday, switching his vote after receiving assurances the bonds would be considered again this year. To insist on the amendment now would jeopardize repeal of withholding, he said.

Also caught up in the fight was Reagan's bill to help the Caribbean nations. That plan, mainly tariff-free imports from non-Communist nations in the region, survived as part of the compromise bill.

Withholding was enacted last year after the Internal Revenue Service estimated 20 million couples and individuals don't report some or all their interest and dividends, costing the government $8 billion a year.

Withholding of 10 percent from such income — just as taxes are already withheld from wages — was to have begun July 1. After it became clear Congress would repeal the law because of widespread public opposition, the Treasury Department delayed the start until Aug. 1 and then until Aug. 5.

Congress voted repeal after receiving a record 22 million letters from savers, many of whom had been convinced by the banking industry that withholding would deplete their savings. Many mistakenly viewed it as a new tax.

Under the substitute plan, there will be withholding against the accounts of people who don't report all their interest and dividends, don't supply their Social Security number to their banks or who don't even bother to file a tax return. And instead of 10 percent, withholding will be at a 20 percent rate.

The IRS would send four notices over four months to non-filers and those identified as failing to honestly report interest and dividends. If the saver failed to clear up accounts with the IRS during that period, withholding would be started within 30 days.

An earlier version of the repeal bill would have required withholding on any person who had under-reported interest and dividends by as little as $50; the IRS estimates that would have meant as many as 4 million couples and individuals.

Under the final version, the IRS would determine — but not announce — the target level for withholding. That level is expected to be considerably higher than $50 and, thus, far fewer than 4 million taxpayers would be subject to withholding.

The compromise recommends that Congress appropriate at least another $300 million — preferably $600 million — over the next five years to boost the IRS staff and improve its computer capability of catching cheats.

Ability Is Criteria To Former Anchorwoman

By CRAIG HORST
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — While she admitted that television personalities should be good-looking, a former anchorwoman who claims she was demoted because surveys found her unattractive testified that all news personnel should be judged on "getting the news."

Christine Craft, 38, ended a second day of testimony Wednesday in a $1.2 million federal sex discrimination suit against her former station, KMBC-TV, and its former owners, Metromedia Inc.

The suit alleges Ms. Craft was demoted Aug. 14, 1981, solely because she is a woman, that her male co-anchor received higher pay for doing the same job and that station management fraudulently misrepresented the co-anchor job to her.

Responding to questions from U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr., Ms. Craft said it is impossible to please all viewers no matter what one's appearance.

"Getting the news and getting it right is the measure of any print or television journalist," she told the judge. "People can tell what's hokey or hucksterish and what's real."

Ms. Craft has testified she was told she was being hired for her journalistic skills, but that the station tried "to make her over" with heavy makeup and a new wardrobe after she started work.

Ms. Craft agreed with defense attorney Donald W. Giffin, however, that television personalities should be good-looking. She also agreed that newscasters should wear appropriate makeup and clothes.

"But I am not a person who favors heavy makeup," she said. "I try to look as natural as possible. I find it hard to do the news if I have so much heavy makeup on that I don't feel myself."

Giffin also pointed out that Ms. Craft had signed a contract three weeks after her debut as co-anchor of the 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. newscasts. The contract said she would work under the "direction, control, rules and regulations" of the station and Metromedia.

The contract also stated the station could change her assignment at any time.

Ms. Craft admitted she had not read the contract carefully, saying she relied on what she thought was a verbal understanding with Ridge Shannon, news director, and R. Kent Replogle, the station manager.

"I never read this contract or pored over it with a fine-tooth comb," she said. "I believed them when they said they wanted to hire me as a co-anchor. I believed them when they said take this and sign it, it's just the standard Metromedia contract that everybody signs."

KMBC offered Ms. Craft a job as general assignment reporter after removing her from the news anchor job. She refused and returned to anchor newscasts for KEYT-TV in Santa Barbara, Calif., where she now works.

Shannon told her she was being removed from her job a little more than seven months after she started because research indicated viewers thought she was "too old, unattractive and she did not defer to men," Ms. Craft testified.

She quoted Shannon as saying, "When the people of Kansas City see your face, they turn the dial."

Ms. Craft said the criticism caused her emotional problems that made it difficult for her to go on the air when she returned to Santa Barbara.

"I'm a very strong person, but I'm vulnerable just like anyone else," she said. "It's hard for me to be told those things. For about six months, I was very self-conscious. I felt sometimes like putting a bag over my head."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING AMENDING CHAPTER 32 OF THE ZONING ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NC

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, Greenville, NC on Thursday, August 11, 1983 at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of amending the zoning ordinance as follows:

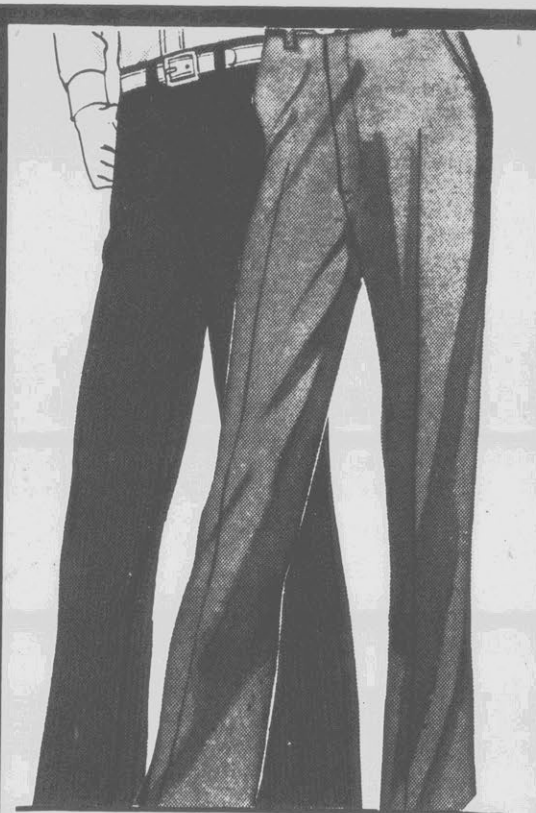

- Amend Section 32-98 to delete the requirement that the plot plan for nonresidential establishments be prepared by a registered engineer, surveyor, or architect, in cases where 5 or less off-street parking spaces are required. A plot plan drawn to scale, illustrating a north arrow, scale, angle of parking, material to be used, and other pertinent information as set forth in the proposed ordinance in readable form would still be required.
- Amend Section 32-106 to require off-street parking for dormitories at technical schools, colleges, and universities at .75 spaces per bed.
- Amend Section 32-74 by deleting the special use "outdoor advertising sign" from the floodway district.
- Amend Section 32-3 by adding the definitions, "double frontage lot", "Automobile service stations", "automobile repair (minor)", "automobile repair (major)" and deleting the term "service station".
- Amend Section 32-14 and 32-95 to add new requirements for accessory uses and buildings under Section 32-95 regulating location, setback, height, placement on corner lots in the CDF district; listing of accessory uses and buildings; adding special requirement for swimming pools, kennels, and stables and adding a requirement that accessory buildings for non-residential buildings meet setback requirements of the district they are located in.
- The following zoning districts will be affected by adding "accessory building or use" as a permitted use:
Sec. 32-46 MA - Medical Arts
Sec. 32-47 HC - Health Care
Sec. 32-52 CD - Downtown Commercial
Sec. 32-53/8 DM - Downtown Mall

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 50.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Weights light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,612,000, compared to 1,744,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today after its failure to break through to new heights on Wednesday.

Declines outpaced advances by nearly 2 to 1 in the early tally on the New York Stock Exchange. Technology issues, which led a broad selloff late Wednesday, turned mixed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 1.80 points at 1,228.67 in the opening half hour.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrials briefly flirted with all-time highs, climbing more than nine points in the first 2½ hours, then plummeted to end the day down 13.22 points at 1,230.47. In the previous six sessions, the blue-chip average had surged 53.79 points.

Analysts said speculation that International Business Machines would introduce its new home computer Sept. 1, heightened concern Wednesday over increased competition in an industry that is currently suffering from growing losses.

Today's early prices included Coleco Industries, unchanged at 32½; Data General, down ½ at 69½; Hewlett-Packard, up ¼ at 86½; and Rime Computer, up ¼ at 16½.

Traders also continued to watch interest rates, which have been drifting in advance of another round of heavy Treasury borrowing next week.

After the close of trading Wednesday, the Treasury Department said it would sell a record $15.75 billion in notes and bonds next week as part of its efforts to raise $48 billion in fresh cash this quarter. The borrowing plans contained few surprises for traders and had little impact on interest rates.

In Wednesday's slide, nearly 1,200 stocks fell in price, more than 2½ times the number of rising issues on the NYSE.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.44 to 97.14. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index retreated from Tuesday's record high, dropping 4.67 to 244.36.

Big Board volume rose to 99.29 million shares from 91.28 million Tuesday.

Indict Bank In Cocaine Probe

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a Chicago bank and 21 people in connection with an alleged $30 million cocaine ring stretching from Florida to California.

The indictment returned Wednesday accused the National Republic Bank of Chicago of "laundering" money illegally earned in the ring. A former vice president of the bank was among the individuals indicted.

U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said the case was the first time a bank as a corporate entity had been indicted on federal charges of laundering money. Most of the individuals indicted were businessmen who used such fronts as groceries, restaurants, development companies and securities firms for drug sales, he said.

National Republic Bank could be fined $17 million if found guilty on 34 counts of failing to report financial transactions as required by federal law.

The indictments outlined a cocaine sale and distribution operation in Florida, Chicago and Los Angeles that allegedly involved the purchase — between 1976 and 1980 — of more than 660 pounds of cocaine with a resale value of more than $30 million.

One indictment charged that Edward Fields, 50, of Chicago, financed cocaine purchases with $1.34 million in loans in 1978 and 1979 from National Republic. The indictment alleges that former bank vice president Kenneth H. Straub, 49, arranged the loans.

Neither was listed in the Chicago telephone directory, and could not be reached for comment.

Straub and the bank were named in a separate indictment accusing them of failing to file currency reports with the Internal Revenue Service on cash transactions exceeding $10,000. An attorney for the bank, Jeffrey B. Steinback, issued a statement saying the bank maintained its innocence.

A third indictment named 19 people, including nine from Florida, on charges of violating federal racketeering, drug and tax laws.

Declares Map Led To Nazi Treasure

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A West German journalist arrested in the forged Hitler dairies case also had maps to a Nazi treasure hoard, his lawyer claims, and the maps reportedly led East German officials to valuable pieces of porcelain.

The maps purportedly led to World War II booty stashed away by Nazi air force chief Hermann Goering, lawyer Holger Schroeder told The Associated Press Wednesday.

Schroeder represents former Stern magazine reporter Gerd Heidemann, who is being held under "investigative custody" on suspicion of fraud, because of the $3.75 million Stern paid for the false dairies.

Schroeder said East Germany's Communist government had agreed in 1981 to give Heidemann half of the alleged Goering treasure in return for a set of maps of the hiding place.

The West German tabloid Bildzeitung said the maps appear to be genuine, and were used by East German searchers who found 122 pieces of valuable porcelain on March 21, 1981, at Lake Stolp about 40 miles north of Berlin.

Schroeder said he had provided information about the maps to the Hamburg prosecutor's office for consideration when a court is to determine next week if Heidemann should remain in detention.

He said his disclosure of the Goering "deal" was to refute allegations that Heidemann kept all or even part of the money Stern paid for the forged dairies.

Konrad Kujaw, a shop owner who dealt with Nazi relics, has admitted forging the bogus Hitler dairies and also is being held in investigative custody.

Plan Expand AIDS Hotline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's AIDS information hotline has been swamped with 8,000 to 10,000 calls a day, so the telephone system will be expanded from three to eight lines.

In announcing the changes, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said the extra telephone lines will enable the Public Health Service to handle more than twice as many calls. The hotline began operation on July 1.

A three-minute tape-recording that explains the symptoms associated with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome will also be added. The disease, which chiefly attacks homosexual men, intravenous drug abusers and Haitian immigrants has resulted in 723 deaths nationwide.

Employee Hurt At Plant Fire

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One employee was burned and a fireman overcome by heat in an explosion and fire Wednesday at the National Welders Co.'s acetylene manufacturing plant in Wayne County, fire officials said.

The fire broke out in the plant, located on U.S. 117, 4 miles north of Goldsboro, at about 4:30 p.m.

James Sasser, a plant worker who suffered burns to the face and neck, was listed in satisfactory condition at Wayne County Memorial Hospital in Goldsboro, said a hospital spokesman.

The spokesman also said fireman Don Fleming, who was overcome by heat, was treated and released from Wayne County Memorial.

A foam tanker truck, used in aircraft fires, was dispatched to the scene from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base to help bring the fire under control.

At least a dozen rural fire departments and several rescue squad units assisted Goldsboro City Fire Department units.

Perry Wins, Gets 3,500th Strikeout

By The Associated Press
Gaylord Perry sure had something on the ball for the Kansas City Royals — especially when Cleveland came to bat in the sixth inning.

Perry joined some pretty select company Wednesday night when he recorded his 3,500th strikeout, joining Walter Johnson, Nolan Ryan and Steve Carlton at that plateau.

The 20-year veteran did it by striking out the side in the sixth. And three innings later, after Dan Quisenberry had nailed down Kansas City's 5-4 victory with his 25th save of the season, Perry had his first victory for the Royals.

"I changed a few things tonight," Perry said. "I told Cloyd Boyer (Kansas City's pitching coach) before the game I was going to come sidearm a little bit. That was my game plan. I just wanted to try something different."

"Gaylord pitched an outstanding game," Royals Manager Dick Howser said following Perry's fourth start for Kansas City. "His stuff was good. That's the job we want him to do." He was signed earlier in the month after being released by Seattle.

In the rest of the American League, New York shaded Texas 4-3, Milwaukee outlasted Minnesota 13-9, Chicago blasted Toronto 11-3, Seattle defeated Detroit 5-3, Oakland edged Boston 7-6 and Baltimore battered California 10-4.

"It sure felt good," said Perry, only 4-11 this year, of the strikeout milestone.

Hal McRae and Willie Aikens hit consecutive homers during Kansas City's decisive four-run third inning.

George Brett had a first-inning sacrifice fly and an RBI single in the third before McRae hit his seventh home run and Aikens followed with his 10th of the year for a 5-0 lead.

Yankees 4, Rangers 3

Rich Gossage had an easy time of it — for a change.

The Yankees' relief ace, who was tagged for Brett's two-run non-homer last Sunday and gave up a two-run single and a sacrifice fly to the Rangers on Monday night — only to win when Dave Winfield hit a two-run triple in the ninth — saved Matt Keough's victory with 1 2-3 routine innings of relief.

"I'm tired of making them exciting," he said.

Steve Kemp drove in New York's tie-breaking run with a triple in the top of the eighth inning as the Yanks won their 12th in 13 games.

Brewers 13, Twins 9

In Minnesota, Cecil Cooper and Jim Gantner drove in four runs each, Paul Molitor collected five hits and Gantner and Molitor each scored four runs as the Brewers ended the Twins' five-game win streak.

Cooper raised his league-leading RBI total to 83 with two sacrifice flies and a two-run homer, his 23rd homer of the year, tying him with Jim Rice for the league lead.

Ted Simmons drove in three runs for the Brewers with two singles, one of them the game-winner in his 7,000th major-league at-bat.

White Sox 11, Blue Jays 3

The White Sox, who left home 2½ games out of first place in the West nearly two weeks ago, return home leading the division by that margin, thanks in part to solo home runs by Ron Kittle, Harold Baines, Carlton Fisk and Scott Fletcher's bases-loaded triple that highlighted a six-run eighth inning in Toronto.

Alfredo Griffin homered for the Blue Jays.

Mariners 5, Tigers 3

Pat Putnam drove in four runs with two homers as Seattle ended its six-game losing streak.

The Mariners struck for four runs in the top of the seventh inning to wipe out the Tigers' 2-1 lead. Tony Bernazard's infield hit tied it before Putnam hit his second homer of the night and 14th of the season, a three-run shot. Chet Lemon hit his 14th homer for Detroit.

A's 7, Red Sox 6

Carl Yastrzemski hit his 449th career homer (No. 7 this year) and Wade Boggs hit his third of the week in Boston's final two at-bats in Oakland, but they weren't enough to beat the A's.

Dwayne Murphy had three hits and a walk, taking part in all of Oakland's scoring as the A's wiped out the Red Sox' early 4-1 lead.

Orioles 10, Angels 4

In California, Cal Ripken Jr. collected four hits and drove in three runs to help the Orioles remain tied for first in the East Division.

Ripken had RBI singles in the fifth and eighth innings and an RBI double in Baltimore's five-run ninth.

Snow Hill Rally Nips Garner

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill, down 5-3 after six and a half innings, rallied to gain a 6-5 victory over Garner last night in their best-of-seven series for the Area 1 American Legion baseball title. The win gives Snow Hill a 3-2 lead in the series.

The two meet again tonight in Garner, and a Snow Hill victory would sew up the title.

Trevino 'Retires'

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Lee Trevino has retired. Not from tournament golf — but from practice.

"You won't see me out there beating balls again. Warming up, yes. Sure, I'll warm up. But not beating balls. That's over. I'm retired from practice," Trevino said before teeing off today in the first round of the $425,000 Canadian Open golf tournament.

And the gregarious 43-year-old, a three-time winner of this national championship, is something more than a sentimental favorite.

He broke a lengthy victory drought with a triumph in the Canadian PGA early this month and followed up with a strong performance in the British Open.

"Oh, I can still play. I just can't practice," Trevino said. "I'd always thought you had to practice a lot, weren't doing your job if you didn't."

"Now I've got an excuse. Doctor's orders."

Trevino, who was playing well at the time, practiced extensively, hitting up to 600 balls a day, in preparation for the U.S. Open last month. He practiced so much that he developed muscle spasms in his back and was forced to withdraw.

"The doctors told me it's just something that happens when you start getting older. You just can't practice that much. Your body won't take it."

"So I'm retired from practice."

Trevino, however, got in a practice round in the pro-am tournament, shot a 5-under-par 66 on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course and won the event.

"I think I've still got another win or two, maybe a major tournament win, left in me," he said.

Although numerous withdrawals reduced the starting field to 146, the opposition remains formidable.

Chief among Trevino's opponents in the chase for a $76,500 first prize are defending champion Bruce Lietzke, who often plays his best in this tournament, Jack Nicklaus and Cal Peete, who scored his second victory of the season last week.

Among the other standouts are Fuzzy Zoeller, David Graham, Johnny Miller, Tom Weiskopf and Jim Colbert.

CBS will provide national television coverage in the United States of portions of the final two rounds, and CBC will televise the tournament in Canada.

FAN VIOLENCE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last February, Hawthorne High School here was playing Harvard High in basketball.

Coach Ralph Lepore of Hawthorne was watching the game, an exciting one, from the bench when somebody began to choke him from behind. Lepore twisted free and turned around to see the mother of one of his substitute players. She was angry because her son wasn't playing.

After mother and son left the gym, Lepore had to sit and watch as his team lost the game, 51-47.

Should Garner win, the two play again Friday in Garner in the final game of the series.

The winner moves on to the Eastern championship against the Hamlet-Whiteville winner. Hamlet currently holds a 3-2 lead in that series.

Garner scored once in the first inning, but a homer by Mike Sullivan tied it up for Snow Hill in the second. Garner went back out, however, scoring twice in the third and one more in the fifth.

Snow Hill rallied for two in the bottom of the fifth. Anthony Russo walked and Jeff Ginn singled. Greg Frederick's sacrifice fly brought in Russo. Sullivan then walked and Tommy Goff singled, scoring Ginn.

After Garner scored a fifth run in the top of the seventh, Snow Hill rallied for two to tie it at 5-5 in its half of the inning. With two away, Wade Corbett singled and Nat Norris walked. Bobby Carraway, who went the distance on the mound, singled, loading the bases. Steve Sides then got a hit, scoring both Corbett and Norris.

Snow Hill pushed over the winning run in the ninth. Norris walked and Carraway, attempting to sacrifice reached when the ball was played too late to get him at first. Sides, also bunting, was safe on an error, and the misplay allowed Norris to score, giving Snow Hill the win.

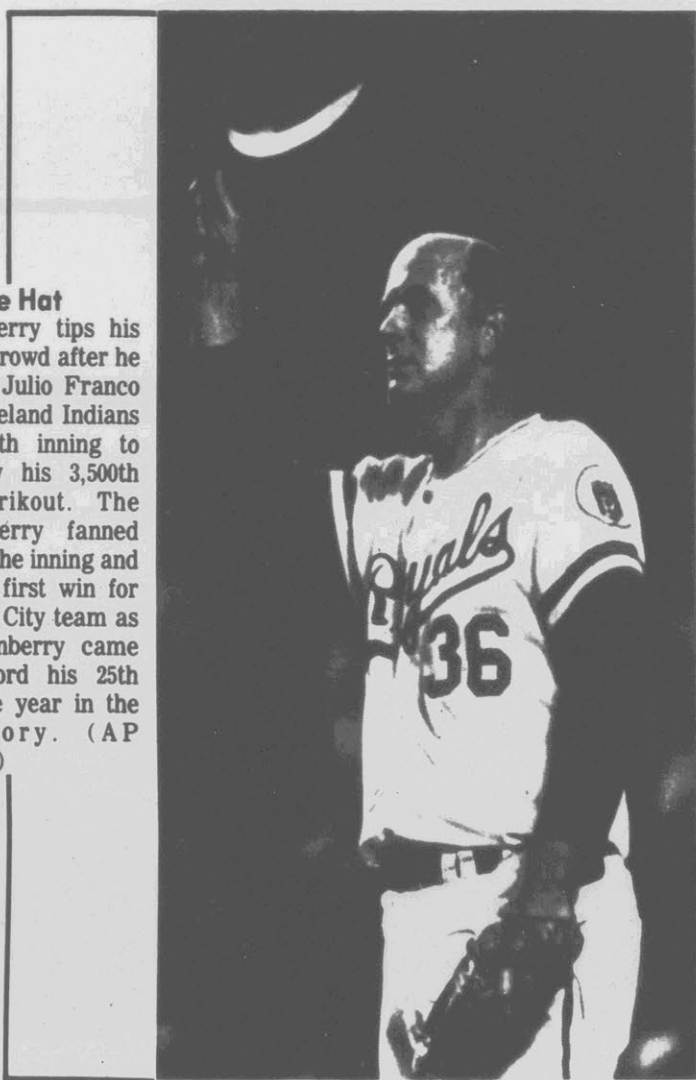

Carraway led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Goff, Sullivan and Sides each had two hits.

Brett Royhill had two hits to lead Garner.

Tip Of The Hat

Gaylord Perry tips his hat to the crowd after he struck out Julio Franco of the Cleveland Indians in the sixth inning to give Perry his 3,500th career strikeout. The Royals' Perry fanned the side in the inning and gained his first win for the Kansas City team as Dan Quisenberry came on to record his 25th save of the year in the 5-4 victory. (AP Laserphoto)

Hobgood Drops In Golf

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Orangeburg's Vic Lipscomb was two strokes ahead of the pack at the start of the final round today of the $29,000 Carolinas Open golf tournament.

Farmville's Gary Hobgood, who had shared the lead with two other golfers after the first round, skied to a 78 and fell nine strokes off the lead. Tom Braswell, Farmville Country Club pro, was well off the pace with a 152, just making the cut for the final day's play.

Lipscomb notched five birdies in the second round at Bay Tree Golf Plantation Wednesday for a blistering 5-under-par 67 and a 138 total.

Wednesday's cut left 99 golfers in the Carolinas Professional Golfers' Association Sectional event at the par-72, 7,130-yard Gold course and the par-72, 7,068-yard Green course. Only a dozen managed to break par Wednesday.

Larry Hinson of Flat Rock, N.C., who shot a 3-under 69 for a 140 total, took second place.

Bobby Mitchell, Hobgood and Bill Poteat, tied for the lead after the first round Tuesday with 69s, couldn't keep up with Lipscomb Wednesday.

Conley Physical Time Changed

HOLLYWOOD — The time for physical examinations for prospective varsity and junior varsity football players at D.H. Conley High School, published earlier in the week, was not correct.

The exams will be given from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday. Junior varsity players are urged to try and come during the morning hours with varsity players coming in the afternoon.

Poteat, from Columbia, shot par to take third place at 141 and trail Lipscomb by three strokes. Mitchell, from Danville, Va., shot a 76 to fall seven strokes back.

Hilton Head Island's Ron Cerrudo, who carded a 71, and Ken Younger of Cherryville, N.C., who had 71, tied for fourth with 143 totals.

Here are the qualifiers after the second round of play Wednesday of the $29,000 Carolinas Open Carolinas PGA Sectional Tournament at the par-72, 7,130-yard Gold course and the par-72, 7,068-yard Green course at Bay Tree Golf Plantation. Amateur or pro status is not known for golfers with totals above 151.

Pirate Rookie Breezes Past Padres

By The Associated Press
Pittsburgh rookie Jose DeLeon put something over on the San Diego Padres — a live fastball, a "cut" fastball and a forkball that acted like a knuckleball.

"He has all the pitches and he throws them over the plate and mixes speeds," said Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner after DeLeon stopped the Padres 10-1 on four hits Wednesday night. "I'm amazed at his composure. It's like he's been up here for years."

It was only DeLeon's second start in the major leagues, and he had a no-hitter for 6 1-3 innings until Alan Wiggins singled.

In other National League action, it was Atlanta 6, New York 3; Chicago 2, Los Angeles 1; St. Louis 7, San Francisco 6; Montreal 6, Cincinnati 3 and Philadelphia 3, Houston 1.

DeLeon, a 6-foot-3 right-hander, struck out seven and walked two and now has 16 strikeouts while allowing just eight hits in his 17 major league innings. DeLeon had pitched a four-hitter over eight innings in his major league debut Saturday, a 5-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

"I didn't even expect to be here," said DeLeon, who was recalled less than two weeks ago from Hawaii of the Pacific Coast league.

Pittsburgh catcher Tony Pena hit a two-run homer.

The Pirates, retaining their lead in the National League East, won for the 17th time in 22 games since the All-Star break, all against West Division opponents.

Hines In Key Role

North Pitt's Greg Hines was a starter and contributed 12 points to the losing effort of the East team in the East-West All-Star game in Greensboro Tuesday night.

Hines, who started the contest, played a total of 29 minutes, had five field goals, two free throws, three rebounds and five assists in the contest.

"I was justifiably proud of Greg," Coach Cobby Deans of North Pitt said. "He represented Pitt County and Eastern Carolina well as he played a solid game the entire evening."

Deans served as an assistant coach for the East team.

Darlene Cannon of D.H. Conley High School played with the winning East team in the girls' game, scoring three points.

Ramirez's two-run single highlighted a four-run eighth as Atlanta rallied to beat the Mets and avoided a three-game sweep by the last-place team in the NL East.

Rookie Craig McMurtry, 12-5, was the beneficiary of the rally, going from loser to winner when the Braves sent nine men to the plate in the eighth.

Mookie Wilson's three-run homer had given New York a short-lived 3-2 advantage in the seventh.

Cubs 2, Dodgers 1

In Chicago, pinch-hitter Jerry Morales hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the eighth to lead Chicago over Los Angeles. Morales' fly ball gave the victory to Lee Smith, 4-5, who relieved Ferguson Jenkins.

Hebert Sparks All-Loop Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Hebert, who guided Michigan to the first United States Football League title, was one of 10 Panthers selected to the league's all-league team, which was announced Wednesday.

The team was selected by sports writers and broadcasters who cover the league.

The Panthers, who defeated the Philadelphia Stars 24-22 in the first championship game, had four selections on the first team. The Chicago Blitz were next with seven choices overall, while the Stars and Tampa Bay Bandits had six each.

The first team offensive unit features Michigan quarterback Bobby Hebert with running backs Herschel Walker of New Jersey and Kelvin Bryant of Philadelphia.

Hebert was the USFL's leading passer, completing 257 of 451 attempts for 3,568 yards and a league-high 27 touchdowns. Walker, gained a League-high 1,812 yards and 17 touchdowns, while Bryant rushed for 1,442 yards on 318 carries.

The offensive line includes Philadelphia's Irv Eatman and Michigan's Ray Pinney at tackles, Buddy Aydelette of Birmingham and Thom Dornbrook of Michigan at the guards and Bobby Van Duyn of Tampa Bay at center.

Oakland's Raymond Chester was the tight end selection, while Chicago's Trumaine Johnson, who led the league in receiving and Eric Truvillion of Tampa Bay were the selections at wide receiver.

The Central Division dominated the defensive line choices. Mike Raines of Birmingham and Kit Lathrop of Chicago were chosen at defensive end, while Fred Nordgren of Tampa Bay was the choice at nose tackle.

John Corker of Michigan, the league leader in sacks with 28½, and Stan White are the outside linebackers, while Boston's Marcus Marek and Sam Mills of Philadelphia are on the inside.

Jeff George of Tampa Bay and David Martin of Denver were the leading votegetters at the cornerbacks. Martin

The Cubs chased Dodger loser Bob Welch, 8-10, in the inning before reliever Steve Howe yielded the bases-loaded sacrifice fly to Morales. Welch yielded six hits in 7 1-3 innings, while Jenkins scattered eight hits without giving up an earned run.

The Dodgers got their only run in the first, when a couple of wild throws by third baseman Ron Cey enabled Steve Sax to score. The Cubs tied it in the fifth on Larry Bowa's RBI single.

Cardinals 7, Giants 6

In St. Louis, Tommy Herr's one-out sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, his second straight game-winning RBI, lifted the Cardinals over San Francisco. The Cardinals stole nine bases in the game.

The victory was the Cardinals' fourth straight.

Expos 6, Reds 3

In Cincinnati, Gary Carter tripled and scored on Warren Cromartie's single to snap a sixth-inning tie and ignite a three-run rally that carried Montreal over the Reds.

Andre Dawson also cracked his 22nd homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first, to help the Expos to their third straight victory.

Rookie Greg Bargar, 2-0, scattered six hits over five innings, getting help from reliever Bob James.

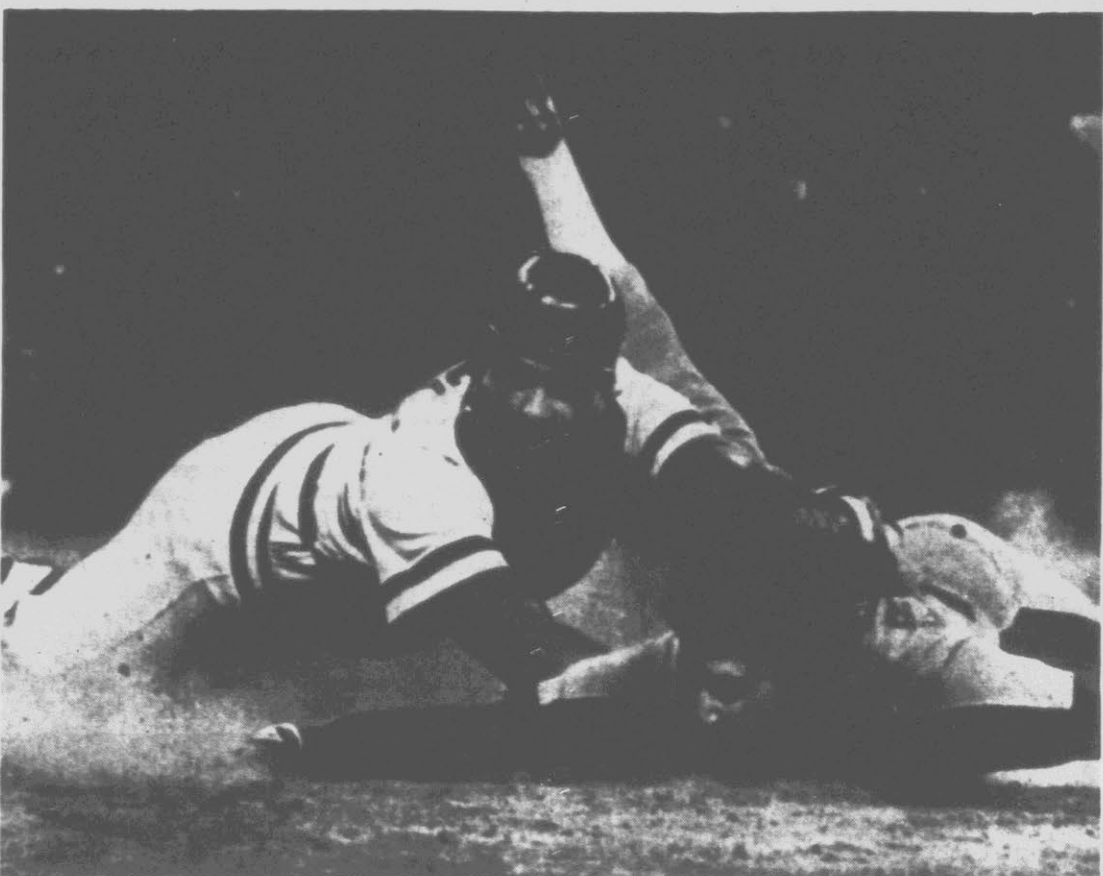

Phillies 3, Astros 1

In Houston, John Denny and Willie Hernandez combined on a four-hitter as Philadelphia handed the Astros their fourth straight loss.

Denny, 10-5, struck out three and walked one in seven innings as he won his fourth straight game. Hernandez got the save. Joe Niekro, 8-8, suffered the loss for Houston, striking out five while giving up seven hits and all three runs over eight innings.

Joe Lefebvre keyed a three-run second with an RBI triple.

N.S. Stars Win

Little League

North State 11
Tar Heel 9

TARBORO — Greenville's North State Little League All-Stars outlasted their brother team from Greenville, the Tar Heels, 11-9, to win the Area II, District 4 tournament yesterday.

The victory boosts the North Staters into the District IV finals, to be held Friday in Tarboro against the Area I winner, Southern of New Bern, a 4-1 victor over Havelock.

The winner of that game advances to the state championship, to be played at Rutherfordton, August 3-5.

The Tar Heels charged into the initial lead in the game, scoring five times in the first inning of play. But the North Staters quickly rallied, scoring three times in their half of the frame, and adding one more in the second. The North State team took the lead in the third with three more runs, 7-5, only to see the Tar Heels come back with three in the fourth to regain the lead, 8-7.

In the bottom of the fourth, however, the North State Stars picked up four more runs to run out to an 11-7 lead that was not overcome. Tim Moore led off with a double and scored on Jamie Brewington's single. Nelson Galloway reached on a hit and an error on the play moved him all the way to third and scored Brewington. Another error allowed Galloway to score. Walter Gatlin then finished off the scoring with a home run.

The Tar Heels came back with one run in the fifth, but couldn't put together an effective rally.

Galloway led the North State hitting with three, while Park Williams, Moore and Gatlin each had two. Judd Crumpler had three hits to lead the Tar Heel Stars, while John Bolen and Frankie Pugh each added two.

Gatlin was named the tournament's Most Valuable player. He was 6-for-6 in the three games played, drove in five runs and had a double, triple and homer among his six hits.

Central Carolina . . 17
Coastal Plains South 6

KINSTON — Central Carolina scored ten times in the third inning and romped to a 17-6 victory over Coastal Plains South in the State Senior Babe Ruth League tournament last night.

The loss, Coastal Plains South's second in the double elimination tournament, would up the season for the all-stars.

Central Carolina banged out a total of 16 hits in the game and took advantage of eight CPS errors during the evening to ring up the victory.

Billy Godley led the CPS hitting with three in four trips, while Hack High picked up a pair of hits.

Miller Takes Decathlon In Junior Olympics

DURHAM (AP) — Jeff Miller won the 10-event decathlon for intermediate men, while Pamela Doggett captured the girls' heptathlon Wednesday in the second day of the National Junior Olympic Track and Field Championships.

Miller, 15, of Houston, scored 2,759 points for a two-day score of 5,876 and defeated Scott Geyer, 16, of Phoenix, Ariz., who had a 5,470 in the 15- and 16-year-old division.

Miller never lost his lead after moving into first place Tuesday with a victory in the shot put. On Wednesday he won the 110-meter hurdles with a time of 15.31 seconds and the discus throw with a distance of 126 feet, 2 inches.

He won the shot put and tied for first in the high jump on Tuesday.

Doggett, 15, of Greensboro, won the 15-16 age division with a personal best of 4,658 points over Cindy Panowicz, 15, of Northville, Mich., who had 4,516.

Doggett placed third in the javelin throw with 90 feet, 7 inches, seventh in the long jump with a distance of 14 feet, 10 inches and ran a personal record of 2 minutes, 27.7 seconds for third in the 800 meters.

On Tuesday she won the shot put and was second in the 100-meter hurdles and 200-meter dash.

Steve Olekszyk of Saverna Park, Md., compiled 3,345 points Wednesday to lead the young men's 16-17 division of the decathlon over Jeff Kellom of Cleveland, Ohio, with 3,292.

Olekszyk won the shot put with a toss of 54 feet, 2 inches, was fourth in the long jump with a leap of 19 feet, 17½ inches and third in the high jump with 5 feet, 9¾ inches.

In the young women's 16-17 heptathlon Wednesday, Terese Wadman of Niles, Ill., compiled 3,003 points to lead Robyn Purdy of Salem, Ore., who scored 2,893.

Wadman won the 100-meter hurdles in a time of 14.3 seconds, won the high jump with 5 feet, 7¾ inches, tied for third in the 200-meter dash in 26.4 seconds and was seventh in the shot put with 29 feet, 10 inches.

Thursday's events for the men are the 100-meter hurdles, discus throw, pole vault, javelin throw and 1,500-meter run. Women will compete in the long jump, the javelin throw and the 800-meter run.

Some 1,500 athletes are expected at Wallace Wade Stadium on the Duke University campus as events continue through Sunday.

The following are results of the intermediate men's decathlon, and the girls' heptathlon in the National Junior Olympic Track and Field Championships at Duke University's Wallace Wade Stadium Wednesday:

Patience Is The Key

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy has her own definition of patience.

"Patience," says the two-time U.S. Women's Open golf tournament champion, "is when you three-putt the first hole and you walk off and you don't bury your putter into the next tee box."

"You have the patience to know that you're going to have those three-putts. You're going to have those bogeys. Sometimes, you're going to have entire tournaments like that."

The 29-year-old Stacy, the fifth-biggest money-winner on the tour this season, will be testing her patience today when the 31st U.S. Women's Open begins amidst sweltering 100-degree temperatures at Cedar Ridge Country Club.

The $200,000 championship is being billed as a hot-weather survival contest between the older, more experienced players and their younger, stronger colleagues. But Stacy thinks presence of mind may be the key to victory.

"You have to believe that you're going to come out here and pile up some bogeys," she said of the 6,298-yard, par-71 course. "I don't think the heat will make all the difference, but the mental states will."

"In this Open, as in all Opens, if you make a par, that's pretty good. In fact, I think (a score that is) under par will win it. Maybe 3-or-4-under."

Stacy's assessment was echoed by most of the women who played practice rounds Monday through Wednesday. The 151-player field, more than half amateurs, will be cut to about 60 after Friday's second round.

Stacy is considered an excellent candidate to win her third Open title. Other favorites are Amy Alcott, JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi, Patty Sheehan and Kathy Whitworth.

Janet Anderson, who won the 1982 Open by six shots, also may be in the hunt, along with Jan Stephenson, who said she plays better in the hot weather.

"I'm much more relaxed in the heat and I love this course," said Stephenson. "Plus, I want to win the Open so badly. This could be my week."

Stacy, who has won more than $700,000 in her 10-year career, said the Cedar Ridge course favors the bigger, more accurate hitters because of its long, narrow fairways.

Bat Still Sticky Issue

NEW YORK (AP) — The sticky issue of whether the umpires acted properly in nullifying a George Brett home run because of the amount of pine tar on his bat apparently is holding up a decision by American League President Lee MacPhail on the Kansas City Royals' protest.

MacPhail told the Royals he will announce his decision today.

The controversy started last Sunday when Brett used the bat to launch a two-run homer with two out in the top of the ninth inning against the New York Yankees, boosting the Royals into a 5-4 lead.

That brought Yankees Manager Billy Martin charging from the dugout to point out to home plate umpire Tim McClelland and crew chief Joe Brinkman that the bat had too much tar on it. The tar extended past the limit of 18 inches from the bat's knob.

Martin had known about the infraction for two weeks but was waiting until the opportunity was right to strike. It certainly was right Sunday.

Under two separate rules, Brett was called out, the home run nullified and the Yankees won 4-3.

The ruling brought Brett storming out of the dugout toward McClelland. The Royals third baseman was restrained by Brinkman and, after order was restored, the Royals announced they would protest the decision.

The contention apparently was this:

While one rule under which Brett's homer was nullified — section 1.10(b) of the Official Baseball Rules specifies that pine tar may not be applied more than 18 inches from the bat handle — it does not spell out any penalties that may be taken against the batter. It says only that the bat shall be "removed from the game."

It was section 6.06(d) of the those rules that said a player should be called out and ejected from the game if his bat "has been altered or tampered with in such a way to improve the distance factor or cause an unusual reaction on the baseball." While that section specified methods of doctoring such as filing a flat surface, filling a bat with cork or applying a coating of wax, it said nothing of pine tar.

"We are confident that we've done everything we can do," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz. "We believe we're right and we hope Lee MacPhail agrees with us."

The Royals are basing their appeal primarily on an interpretation of the rules which they believe indicate that pine tar does not make a bat a "doctored bat."

"The rule is very specific, that the bat should have been removed from the game. The umpire did not make a judgment on whether the bat was legal. He made a de facto judgment, holding that it was illegal after the at-bat. We believe it is significant that the umpire made the judgment after the at-bat."

There seemed to be no easily found evidence that pine tar did anything to affect the flight of the ball off the bat. Even the men who make the bats couldn't substantiate that.

"As far as pine tar is concerned, at least in my opinion, I would think it would do less than to have nothing on the bat," said Chuck Schupp of Hillerich & Bradsby, manufacturers of the Louisville Slugger, the brand of bat used by Brett.

Even precedent in this case was confusing. In 1975, two similar cases were resolved in different manners. After a game in which John Mayberry of the Royals hit two homers against California, the Angels protested to MacPhail that the bat was illegal because of pine tar. MacPhail disallowed that protest.

Also that year, however, an RBI single by the late Thurman Munson of the Yankees was nullified because he had too much tar on his bat.

The current investigation has been one of the most celebrated in recent baseball history and is sure to become part of the game's lore.

With Brett's bat safely locked away in his Park Avenue office, MacPhail conducted three days of investigations, looking at reports from the umpires and the clubs involved, talking with principals in the case and discussing the ruling's ramifications with baseball's rules committee.

Talladega Magic Has Captured The Spences

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Al and Adele Spence were packing their suitcases when an electrical storm knocked out the power in their home at Mount Clemens, Mich., last week.

"We finished packing by candlelight and flashlight," Mrs. Spence said. "Nothing keeps us away from the Talladega 500."

They drove the 837 miles to be on hand for their 15th consecutive Talladega 500. That's all of them.

Mr. and Mrs. Spence don't come just for the race, either. "We either start our vacation or end our vacation with nine days here," said Mrs. Spence, a food service director for a private high school.

During that time, she said, they take in the annual pageant in which a Miss Talladega is picked, go to race week cookouts, "visit people who have been good to us over the years," and watch the practice and qualifying runs for an ARCA 200 race on Saturday and the 500-mile run on Sunday.

"We have driven here from California, and this year we will drive from here to Florida to see the track at Daytona and to visit friends on the west coast of Florida," she said. Then we'll drive to Charlotte to see the track there. We've never seen it."

Spence, retired owner of a tool and die shop, said that for 40 years he did free work for race drivers in the Detroit area.

Alabama International Motor Speedway opened in 1969 and they were here for the first race.

"We always want to see the biggest and the best," Mrs. Spence said. "We had heard about Talladega and we came, although it was miles out of the way."

"We were impressed with the track and with the people. It makes you want to come back even if there wasn't a race."

For their faithfulness, Mayor Larry H. Barton presented them certificates Tuesday making them honorary citizens. "Wait till the people back home see these," Mrs. Spence said.

Mrs. Spence said her favorite in next Sunday's race is Darrell Waltrip, the only driver to win the Talladega 500 twice.

However, Spence said he likes "to see the little guys, the independents, win. It shows they've got potential, that if they had a buck, they could be on top."

Mr. and Mrs. Spence have had the same seats at the top of one of the grandstands each year.

Their interest in racing goes way back. When they were courting, she said, "If I wanted a date, I had to go to a race track."

Now, with three grandchildren, they plan to keep their visits here going.

"We'll drive here as long as we can do it," Mrs. Spence said. "When we can't drive, our grandchildren will have to drive for us."

Mr. and Mrs. Spence will be in their seats for qualifying runs Thursday and Friday, the 200-mile race Saturday and the Talladega 500 Sunday.

ACC Coed Policy: Hands Off!

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

After years of honoring the male athletes of the Atlantic Coast Conference, Playboy magazine is giving "equal" time to the league's coeds.

The upcoming issue of Playboy magazine might just be the price the Atlantic Coast Conference pays for all its new-found prominence. Coeds of the league's eight schools are featured in various states of undress.

Reaction has been varied, but for the most part, officials at the various schools have decided to leave well enough alone. They've treated it with the same reaction they might have given streaking or goldfish eating.

North Carolina State, which won the national collegiate basketball championship last winter, also claimed the most coeds in the pictorial with four. Vice chancellor Nash Winstead said there's been the normal discussion of the stories surrounding the article, but no one's calling for strict discipline.

"I don't think we've ever had any discussions where the administration expressed its opinion one way or the other," Winstead said. "It's one of those things that's an individual's right to participate in."

As for the school's reputation, Winstead said it's for others to decide.

"I don't think we ought to end up getting hot and bothered about this sort of thing," he added.

The conference itself has adopted a hands-off approach. "We have nothing at all to do with it," ACC commissioner Bob James said. "We don't have any involvement whatsoever."

The ACC is not the first to catch Playboy's eye. Previous issues have featured coeds from the Pac 10, Big 10, Southeastern and Southwestern conferences.

"If we were the only conference, then I think it would be unique," James said. "I imagine there aren't too many left."

Based on the past, just about all the major conferences have been covered—or uncovered. Playboy publicist Joanne Schwabe says no conference has an advantage over another.

"I think there are beautiful women everywhere. I think there's an attraction to the magazine and the caliber of the photograph," Ms. Schwabe said. "I think the Atlantic Coast Conference has as many beautiful women as any other conference."

There were a few schools—Schwabe characterized them as "conservative"—who weren't too thrilled with Playboy's presence. At Virginia, students demonstrated outside the hotel where photographer David Chan was interviewing candidates. The same went on at Maryland.

"Duke refused to run our ad in the student newspaper," Ms. Schwabe noted, adding that there was even more trouble in the Ivy League schools.

"The ACC was pretty tame in comparison," she said.

As for the conference's fans, whose numbers may increase with the article, there's a chance to meet some of the coeds in person. Playboy has scheduled a tour in conjunction with the pictorial.

It begins in Washington on Aug. 1, and will make stops in Charlotte, Greensboro and the Raleigh-Durham area.

"It was really tastefully done," Ms. Schwabe said. "The ACC should be proud."

West Appears Heavy All-Star Favorite

GREENSBORO (AP) — If you go by reputations, pre-game publicity and number of all-state players, the West would appear to be a favorite to win the 35th annual East-West All-Star football game tonight.

But West head coach Danny Williams of East Burke High School is guarding against over-confidence.

"We're not ready yet," he said Wednesday, "but I think we will be tomorrow."

"I know our players are no more experienced, older or faster than the East. I always look at teams in all-star games as equal. We've got some good players and have had a good week of practice for the most part."

"There are some people, because of the publicity some of our players have received, who will expect us to blow someone out. But we're not looking at it that way."

The West has nine all-stars, including quarterback Mark Maye of Charlotte Independence, the state's player of the year, and wide receiver James Brim of Mount Airy, who was runner-up to Maye in player-of-the-year voting. They were two of the most highly recruited and publicized athletes ever to come from the state.

Moses Again Winner In Meet

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Edwin Moses, the unbeatable 400-meter hurdler, never gets bored of winning track races.

Owner of one of the most impressive streaks in track and field history, Moses was a winner again Wednesday as the United States whipped the Nordic All Stars 327-247.

Moses, who has won 79 straight 400-meter hurdle races, passed up his specialty to run the third leg on the U.S. 1,600-meter relay. The Americans won in 3 minutes, 4.57 seconds.

"I've only lost once since the 1976 Olympics. I just don't know what it is to lose," the 27-year-old Laguna Beach, Calif., superstar said.

Moses' split time was 45.8 seconds. That's not bad for a man who needed 10 days to recover from stomach trouble after a recent meet in Spain.

"I felt as good as I could expect today. I'm regaining my strength again and everything is going to be OK for Helsinki," Moses said.

In the first World Track and Field Championships Aug. 7-14, Moses will be one of the most heavily favored athletes.

Slowly getting back into top form again, Moses clocked the fastest time of the year in the 400 hurdles, 47.84 seconds, at the USA Championships in Indianapolis last month. His world record is 47.13, set in 1980.

The 1976 Olympic champion, winner of every World Cup and owner of nine of the top 10 times ever, Moses is undefeated since Aug. 26, 1977. He was beaten in Berlin by Harald Schmid, the West German who also will be around in Helsinki.

Moses sat out last season because of allergic problems and pneumonia. He didn't run any races, but trained from December till June. Yet, after 20 months between competitions, he shot right back to the top.

"I needed a break mentally so I could come back winning again," Moses said. "I think I would have had problems had I competed last season. And I didn't miss a lot; there were no major championships."

Perry O'Brien, the American shot put legend, had a streak of 100-plus wins and Harrison Dillard, the great American hurdler, won 82 straight races during his career.

"But it's a different kind of competition in the shot put where you have six tries," Moses said. "Most of O'Brien's competitions were not international."

"And Dillard's streak came in different events: the 110 hurdles, 100 meters and relays — a combination of events."

But how long can Moses keep his motivation?

"I simply love the sport and I love the things I get out of sport," he said. "It's not just running track meets. It's meeting different people all over the world. It's a lifestyle I really don't want to give up on."

Moses, who plans to concentrate on the 800 meters after the Los Angeles Olympics next year, said he will run one more 400-meter hurdles race before the World Championships.

the East to defend.

"I don't think we'll stop their passing game," Browning said, "but we have to prevent the home run. We can't let them beat us with the big play. It's probably more difficult to prepare for them, since we don't know what their tendencies will be. If they come out and throw on the first play from scrimmage, we aren't going to be surprised."

While the West will primarily look to the pass, the East, according to Browning, "will mix it up." Danny Long, who was Browning's quarterback at Northern Durham, will start along with all-state tailback Terry Paige of Whiteville and Delatha Self of Durham Hillside at fullback.

Liberty Sails On

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Prosperity agrees with Dennis Conner, who years to sail his new yacht Liberty into the America's Cup finals this summer.

"We're sailing well, it's good to get in that habit," said a smiling Conner Wednesday after extracting three more short-course wins over the fading dwager, Courageous, cup winner in 1974 and 1977.

That wound up the July trials for American yachts in this World Series of yacht match racing with Liberty clearly in front with a 15-5 record this month including 13 of the last 14 and 20-10 overall.

Courageous crossed the starting line ahead by a few seconds in each race Wednesday, but Liberty quickly forged ahead, taking victories of one minute, 34 seconds, 1:10 and 42 seconds.

Among seven foreign challengers in their own races Wednesday, front-running Australia II defeated Britain's Victory '83 by 2:42, Azurra of Italy topped Australia's Challenge 12 in 2:35 and Canada 1 scored a 2:11 win over the third Aussie boat, Advance.

Liberty's three methodical wins over seven-mile layouts on the Rhode Island Sound gave the Conner crew nine victories in a row.

Courageous under skipper John Koliuss sagged to 8-19 overall, and the third American prospect, Tom Blackallers's Defender, 13-12, has been hauled out for 10 days of radical changes to the back third of her hull.

Conner was looking ahead to the foreign boat that he believes will win the right to challenge for the old silver cup in September — Australia II, with a 30-3 record against her peers here.

"One thing we might think about if Australia is the boat might be different tactics," the sunburned San Diego skipper said. "We know she is very maneuverable."

The foreign yachts have another 10 days of racing in the current series to determine which four will advance to the semifinals.

Restored Seaport Will Recall Historic Days Of Sail

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Once South Street was alive with the bustle of stevedores, sea captains and merchants plying their trade in the shadow of tall-masted sailing ships that called at ports around the world.

But when steam supplanted sails, the "Street of Ships" went into a long decline.

Now, in the age of shopping malls, the South Street Seaport is being revived in a splash of restaurants, shops, cafes, a museum and a fish market featuring restored buildings and new construction in a $327 million project which opens to the public on Thursday.

The renaissance began in 1966 when, with a developer threatening to destroy a 12-building row of historic commercial buildings, a group of New Yorkers formed the South Street Seaport Museum, where they displayed 19th century sailing ships to recall the bustling port.

The museum also sought to restore buildings such as Schermerhorn Row, a commercial block constructed between 1810 and 1812 by shipowner and merchant Peter Schermerhorn to lease to other merchants.

"It's a special place and it does special things to people," said Lori Kranz, project manager for Rouse Co. of Columbia, Md., which is developing the area and has also done similar revitalization projects at Faneuil Hall Marketplace in Boston and Harborplace in Baltimore.

"We don't have in mind to recreate authentic replicas," says Ellen Fletcher, executive director of the South Street Seaport Museum. "We want people to make a connection, to start with the present and introduce the past."

Schermerhorn Row initially housed the counting rooms for the merchants who sold rope, wood, food and sails for the ships from Europe and Asia that crowded the port.

Sailors read posted notices on its walls, ate in restaurants like Sloppy Louie's and Sweets which still exist today. They stayed in the Fulton Ferry Hotel, which occupied the upper floors of the block.

Barrels and boxes containing spices, herbs, teas, threads and other goods were stacked outside.

Artifacts of that era turned up when builders were checking the old foundations to determine if they were sound, said Hal Reiner, project manager for the Urban Development Corp.

Workmen stumbled across shoes, clay pipes, coins and buttons, he said, and in one cellar found the well-preserved remains of a ship estimated to be 220 years old.

The ship, like the other artifacts, had been used as landfill, and was re-entombed while formal archaeological excavation continues.

The restored Schermerhorn Row will look as it did in the late 1860s, said Robert Motzkin, a project manager. Wooden gutters were copied in steel. Matching bricks had to be hand-made because they are smaller than modern ones.

Fresh mortar was mixed according to an old recipe.

Still to come is a pavilion of glass and steel with promenades scheduled to open next summer. It will offer views of the Brooklyn Bridge, the ships of the seaport museum and the river.

The 100-year-old bridge replaced the Fulton Ferry between the seaport and Brooklyn and may have been the beginning of South Street's long decline.

At the same time, the modern steamers of the late-19th century required the deeper waters of the Hudson River for a harbor and there were few sailing ships to dock here.

By the 1950s, all that was left of the once-vital district was the pungent aroma of fish from the Fulton Fish Market.

right, the Fulton Market Building is under construction. The museum, state and a private developer hope what was rooted in the past will be living again in the present. (AP Laserphoto)

Child Labor In Rug Industry

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — In the "bazaar of storytellers" little boys work in conditions akin to a mid-19th-century London workhouse that could have been the setting for Charles Dickens' classic tale of the orphan, "Oliver Twist."

A score of rug-making workshops tucked away in the back alleys of this ancient Mogul city are flourishing, thanks mainly to cheap labor provided by Afghan refugee children, eager to make some pocket money.

Here, child labor is at a premium but the work force is paid a pittance for a day that starts at first light with no letup until dusk. Eight-year-olds are the mainstay of the child weavers.

A few make it to their teens but invariably quit, because of spine ailments caused by crouching hours on end or impaired eyesight — one of the hazards of doing detailed work inches away from the looms.

A badly lit room is their workplace and their nimble fingers weave furiously in a monotonous dance, blending multicolored threads into traditional designs while their goal ever so slowly takes shape.

The boys, some as young as 5, always work in pairs. One weaves while the other hacks away at excess wool with a "daranti," a razor-sharp curved blade that swishes just inches away from a partner's hands.

With the weavers working 10 hours a day, a standard 8-by-4-foot rug can take anything from three to six months to make, depending on complexity of pattern and quality.

The finished product sells for several hundred dollars in Pakistan and even more in Western markets, where hand-knotted rugs are considered an investment.

The reward for the boys' labors is a handful of rupee notes, just enough to subsist if they buy chapati bread and curry, but not enough for a slapup feed.

"We like to get them young," said the owner of one such "factory," a swarthy looking Pathan tribesman who insisted he is doing his apprentices a favor by hiring them at low wages.

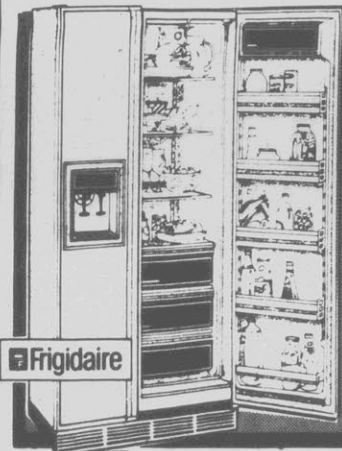

"This is where they get their training. They learn to be expert weavers," said the proprietor, who lives in a colonial-style house while his workers — street urchins in another era — sleep under the stars.

This particular factory, sequestered in a cluster of crumbling buildings, has 16 so-called trainees working full time on primitive wooden looms that have not changed in style for centuries.

DIM FUTURE — The closeup work that rug weaving demands means that many Afghan refugee children who work in the rug-making shops of Peshawar, Pakistan, have to quit by their teens because of bad eyesight or spine ailments caused by crouching for hours on end.

Players In World Debt Crisis Seen Growing Edgy

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

At the last minute, a $411 million shuffle has dealt Brazil a new hand in the world debt crisis. But around the table, the players are growing edgy about this dangerously explosive game they cannot end.

Last year, after Mexico brought on the global banking emergency by missing its loan payments, Western governments and bankers predicted that worldwide economic recovery and falling interest rates would lift the debt-loaded poor nations out of their slide.

But the recovery remains weak in much of the world, interest rates are stepping upward, and private banks are increasingly reluctant to make new loans to developing countries.

"Western governments have not seriously begun to think about a strategy to deal with a rapidly deteriorating situation," the prominent British banker Lord Lever wrote earlier this month.

Peter Kenen, an international finance expert at Princeton University, sounds equally concerned about how the crisis has dragged on.

"Nothing has been accomplished in terms of changes in policies, in terms of changes in economic realities, or in terms of debt burdens. They're all still there," he said in an interview.

For the money men of New York, London and other financial capitals, a frightening prospect remains: a big debtor country refusing to continue paying its debt.

In Brazil's teeming cities, angry voices are calling for just such a moratorium.

The dimensions of the world debt crisis have grown since Mexico disclosed its plight last August.

Developing nations and Soviet-bloc governments now owe Western banks, governments and international institutions about $700 billion, one-third of it due to the U.S. government and U.S. banks.

Two dozen of these countries — from Brazil, to Poland, to Nigeria — have fallen behind on their payments. They owe a total of $250 billion.

The reasons for the crisis are complex:

Poor nations borrowed heavily in recent years to buy oil and other imports whose prices were driven up by inflation. The redoubling of oil prices in 1979 kicked the world economy over into a deep recession, and the developing countries suddenly could not sell their crops and other raw-material exports at prices and in amounts they needed to pay for their imports.

On top of that, interest rates skyrocketed, making loans still more costly.

One after another, developing countries announced they were broke. The International Monetary Fund, the Western-dominated institution that acts as the world's emergency lender, jumped in with quick cash — and tough guidelines.

In Brazil, for example, the IMF granted the government a $5.9 billion loan to help it catch up on its $90 billion in foreign debts, biggest in the developing world. But in return the Brazilians had to raise taxes, double gasoline prices, cut government spending, and reduce runaway inflation.

When Brazil failed to meet all these IMF targets, the IMF withheld a $411 million payment due in May. That money was needed to repay another, $400 million emergency bail-out the Brazilians obtained earlier from the industrialized nations' central banks.

In mid-July, Brazil's government again gave in, agreeing to a still-tougher condition — that workers' wage increases, previously automatically adjusted to inflation, be held down below the inflation rate. The IMF then came through with the loan installment. But the political cost is unpredictable.

Brazilian workers are rallying under the slogan "IMF get out!" And rioting has rocked industrial Sao Paulo. Prominent Brazilians, including a former finance minister, advocate an open break with the IMF and a moratorium on debt payments.

Brazilian officials heatedly reject this option. But the possibility, however remote, sends a shudder through the international banking community. If one nation freezes its debt, others might follow, threatening the stability of the world banking network.

"The snapping of domestic resilience in Brazil or Mexico could threaten the system," William Cline, a senior fellow at the Institute for International Economics in Washington, D.C., told a reporter.

Flashes of defiance can be seen elsewhere in Latin America, the most heavily indebted region.

In Venezuela, which may need IMF help with its $28 billion foreign debt, President Luis Herrera Campins declares he cannot accept demands by international bankers that would severely affect the Venezuelan economy.

In Argentina, weighed down with $40 billion in foreign debt, the labor movement demands sharply higher wages and lower prices for public services — steps that would violate Argentina's emergency-loan agreement with the IMF.

National elections scheduled in Venezuela and Argentina later this year could make the debt question still more volatile.

Domestic politics in Latin America is not the only uncertainty.

Although the U.S. economic recovery is stronger than many expected, elsewhere the climb back from recession is going slowly. International economists foresee only 1.5 percent economic growth for industrialized countries in 1983, not enough to revive the market for the Third World's exports.

"To really ease the debt burden, the world economic recovery not only has to continue but will also have to become substantially stronger," analysts for a respected Swiss bank have written.

At the same time, the debtor countries are still paying double-digit interest rates, levels largely determined by U.S. policy.

Commented Ichiro Isoda, president of Japan's Sumitomo Bank, "U.S. interest rates should be lowered by another 2 percent or 3 percent ... to help reduce debt burdens of Third World nations." Instead, rates have edged up one percentage point in two months.

A third threat: American and other commercial banks are retreating from the developing world.

In the first three months of 1983, commercial banks loaned a net total of only $500 million to Third World nations, compared with an average $16 billion per quarter in 1981, international bank statistics show. The developing countries need tens of billions of dollars in new loans to pull through the crisis.

Most analysts say the next step toward pulling the world back from the brink of a debt disaster would be U.S. congressional approval of an $8.4 billion increase in the U.S. contribution to the IMF.

But beyond that a hot debate rages.

Some experts say a new, bigger international institution is needed, one that would act as an intermediary, borrowing money from the private banks and lending it out to needy governments.

If such a "Super IMF" were established, however, the banks first would have to accept huge losses on their current outstanding loans. And it could be costly to taxpayers in industrial countries, since their governments would be guaranteeing the new agency's obligations.

In effect, tens of billions of dollars of wealth would have been redistributed to poorer nations.

Cline maintains that such a scheme "would only make matters worse," driving needed private money from the Third World loan market.

Kenen, on the other hand, favors such a long-term plan, but is pessimistic.

"It seems to me it will be extremely difficult to negotiate anything of this sort right now," he said.

He and others foresee instead a continuing "muddling through" — and a long-shot bet placed on a strong rebound in the world economy.

Woman Seeking To Persuade Judges Use Harsh Sentences

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A pistol-packing activist who wants judges to give harsher sentences to criminals has drawn fire from the legal community — but one judge has required probationers to contribute $25 to her group, CRIME Inc.

Phyllis Morrow chartered CRIME Inc. in 1981, one year after she was the victim of a robbery during which she was bound for 2½ hours by two men armed with a pistol and a club.

Mrs. Morrow, 40, says she has heard enough tales of legal inequities to organize phone-in campaigns during trials, urging judges to assess harsh sentences.

The group, which she says has 1,200 members, also publishes a report on Harris County criminal judges, detailing the percentage of cases in which they granted probation.

The actions of CRIME Inc. — an acronym for Crime Reduction Involvement Means Education — prompted a grand jury investigation after a judge contended the group was trying to unfairly influence a sentence in his court.

And the judge who required probationers to contribute to CRIME Inc. has been challenged in a state appeals court.

But Mrs. Morrow says she is not perturbed by comparisons to the late U.S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy — she said she's never heard of the Wisconsin Republican who spearheaded "witch hunts" for communists in the 1950s.

Since she was robbed, she said, she does not even garden without her .38-caliber revolver, and never goes out alone.

"I call it survival in 1983," she said Tuesday.

The man she identified as one of the robbers was on probation for murder and had been charged with several other violent crimes.

"Would you like to hear about real justice?" she asked. "He was convicted on two cases — they didn't get to mine. He got life in one and 99 years in the other. Both cases were reversed on appeal. The week after the second reversal, he died of cancer. Is that not true justice?"

In the case under appeal, probationer Michael A. Washington contends state District Judge Michael McSpadden forced him to support CRIME Inc., a group with whose policies he may not agree.

"It's tantamount to blackmail," attorney James Stafford said. He compared Mrs. Morrow's newsletter, "Courthouse Alert," to McCarthy's "The Aware Bulletin," contending that neither publication gave its targets a chance to respond to accusations.

"If they picked up a newspaper and read some judge was requiring probationers to contribute $50 to the Gay Political Caucus, they'd go completely nuts," Stafford said.

Stafford expects a ruling from the appeals court later this year.

On Tuesday, a grand jury decided to take no action against CRIME Inc. after state District Judge Woody Denson complained his office was besieged by phone calls urging a maximum sentence against a burglary defendant. The group, whose members pay $10 annually or $500 for a lifetime membership, argued that the defendant, Tyrone Carmouche, should have been tried for capital murder, the charge originally filed against him.

Jack Zimmermann, president of the Harris County Criminal Lawyers Association, says such phone-in campaigns stack the odds against defendants.

"Just basic fairness would say that they're entitled to confront the people that are accusing them or are providing information that would make their sentence more severe," Zimmermann said.

District Attorney John Holmes said Wednesday he has encouraged Mrs. Morrow to "express herself after the fact" if she disapproves of a judicial decision, but to stay out of ongoing cases.

Mrs. Morrow said friends and relatives of defendants are allowed to contact a judge during a pre-sentence investigation with arguments for leniency and her group has the same right.

But Zimmermann said some members of his group fear CRIME Inc. "may be the first step in reinstituting vigilante justice."

Portuguese Police Expected A Terror Raid, Unable To Deter It

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Intelligence reports tipped Portuguese authorities about a possible Armenian terrorist attack but beefed-up security failed to prevent the bloody siege and explosion at the Turkish ambassador's residence, the Interior Ministry says.

Four Armenian terrorists sworn to avenge what they claim was Turkey's massacre of their people seized the house Wednesday and blew themselves up, also killing a diplomat's wife and a policeman.

Security guards killed a fifth Armenian terrorist as his companions shot their way into the house in a Lisbon suburb after failing to gain entry to the adjoining embassy building.

The terrorists detonated a bomb one hour later, setting the building ablaze. Anti-terrorist police stormed the building, met no resistance and found six burned corpses.

"This is not suicide...but rather our sacrifice to the altar of freedom," a group calling itself the Armenian Revolutionary Army said in a message delivered to The Associated Press office in Lisbon during the siege.

Interior Minister Eduardo

Pereira said the government had received intelligence information that Armenian groups might attack Wednesday and had intensified security at diplomatic missions.

It was the third bloody attack in less than two weeks on Turkish targets in Europe by Armenian extremists who say Turkey exterminated 1.5 million of their people between 1894 and 1915. Turkey denies the charge.

A group called the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia claimed responsibility for a July 15 bombing at the Turkish Airlines counter at Orly airport in Paris. The blast killed seven people.

The day before, a Turkish diplomat was shot and killed in Brussels, Belgium.

In London late Wednesday, Turkey's Foreign Minister Ilter Turmen praised Portuguese police for their handling of the Lisbon attack and said his country will never negotiate with Armenian extremists.

"The Portuguese government has acted with great determination and courage. If all the governments had acted in the same way, Armenian terrorism would have never attained the dimensions it has today," Turkmen said on the British Broadcasting Corp.'s "Newsnight" program.

The government said the explosion killed the four terrorists who stormed the house, the wife of Turkish charge d'affaires Mustafa Mihciglu and a Portuguese policeman, seriously wounded the woman's 17-year-old son and slightly wounded Mihciglu himself. A Portuguese officer was wounded in the initial shootout.

The former Turkish ambassador to Lisbon, Ismail Soygal, left July 17 to take up a new post, and his replacement had not yet arrived by Wednesday.

Police identified the five dead terrorists as Strak Onnik Ajamian, 19; Ara Hovsel Karvikian, 20; Sarkis Abrahamian, 21; Simon Khacher Yahniyon, 21, and Vatch Navar Taghitian, 19.

They said the identifications were based on documents found in three hotels where they were believed to have stayed and from three car rental agencies from which they were thought to have hired three cars.

All were carrying Lebanese passports and their hotel reservations were made from a public telex station in Beirut, police said,

Convicted After Four-Year Fight

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Four years and two mistrials after he was first charged, a Raleigh man was convicted Wednesday of second-degree murder and sentenced to 10 to 25 years in prison for shooting a man he found with his estranged wife.

Testimony showed that Andrew Lynn Jones, 28, entered the apartment of his estranged wife about 5 a.m. on July 2, 1979, and shot David Lee Height. Prosecutors had sought a first-degree murder conviction, charging that Jones knew what he was going to do when he entered the apartment. Defense attorneys had sought a manslaughter conviction, claiming Jones acted in the heat of passion.

Jones' attorneys have filed petitions in state appellate and federal courts arguing that two previous mistrials mean Jones' constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy were violated. They are asking that the conviction be thrown out because Jones was tried three times for the same crime.

'Recruiting' By Two Bulgarians

ROME (AP) — Police say two former Bulgarian Embassy officials have been accused of trying to recruit Italian students at American universities to collect U.S. scientific and technological secrets.

The police said Wednesday that warrants issued for the arrests of Ivan Tomov Dontchev, 34, and Simeon Georgiev Diychnov, 46, also charged them with hiring Italian labor leader Luigi Scricciolo and his wife, Paola, to get information on U.S. labor unions and on Solidarity, the independent Polish labor union.

The two Bulgarians have returned home, Dontchev last October and Diychnov in March 1978, and Italy has no extradition treaty with Bulgaria. A police spokesman said they would be arrested if they returned to Italy.

The police sources did not say whether the Bulgarians succeeded in getting the information they sought in the United States. But Scricciolo, a former official of the Socialist-dominated labor union UIL, traveled to Poland, helped arrange Solidarity leader Lech Walesa's visit to Rome in January 1981, and has been accused of conspiring with the Bulgarians to have Walesa killed during that visit.

Bulgarian Embassy spokesman Vasily Dimitrov said the return of the two men to Bulgaria was part of the "normal rotation" of diplomatic personnel. He also noted that Diychnov went home more than two years before the formation of Solidarity in August 1980.

Scricciolo has been in jail since February 1982.

Matt C. Hegger is being presented a stuffed lion by Michael Bowles, manager of the Food Lion Store at South Park Shopping Center. Matt won the lion after a recent drawing held at the local Food Lion Store.

30th Year For Annual Pageant

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Television's second longest running annual special, the Miss America pageant, this September marks its 30th consecutive year of being broadcast live from Atlantic City.

To celebrate the anniversary, 31 former Miss Americas will participate in the show. The oldest will be Miss America of 1933, Marian Bergeron, then of West Haven, Conn., and at the end of the program a half century of Miss Americas (the first was named in 1921) will gather on stage for the finale.

The pageant will be held a week later than usual this year with coronation night set for Sept. 17, and Al Marks, the head of the non-profit Miss America Pageant Inc., already is hard at work with his producers and sponsors.

Bert Parks, the pageant's emcee from its TV debut in 1954 until 1979, won't be back. Gary Collins, who emceed last year, will return for a second year, Marks said.

For the first time this year, Marks' organization is handling the entire production — technical as well as creative.

NBC's participation will be limited to using engineering personnel for the telecast only and the network won't even arrive in Atlantic City until Sept. 14. In past years, NBC had a much broader function — handling lighting, sound and setting up the convention hall for the nightly stage shows that lead up to the coronation.

"We figured out we could do it cheaper than NBC," said Marks, a 70-year-old stock broker.

Marks was president of the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce in 1953 when bandleader Paul Whiteman, who at the time was entertainment consultant to Philco, proposed televising the show.

"He had watched the pageant in the convention hall and he thought it would be excellent for the infant industry," said Marks, who has been running the pageant ever since.

Whiteman was right. Through the fall and rise of Atlantic City as a seaside resort to a gambling mecca, the show has gone on to rave reviews, despite protests from some feminists.

Olympics Show Is One Year Away

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's heavily promoted new series this summer have been warmed-over hash and not worth a trip indoors. But exactly one year from tonight, the same network will begin two weeks of original programming that one ABC executive calls, perhaps accurately this time, "the biggest television show in history."

Since John Martin, ABC Sports' vice president for programming, is referring to the first Summer Olympics held in this country since 1932 when they also were held in Los Angeles, his pronouncement may be more than mere network hype.

The opening ceremonies for the Los Angeles Games will be the beginning of 187½ hours — almost all live — of Olympic running, diving and somersaulting. After two months of summer reruns, American audiences will flock to this grand celebration of sports, politics and patriotism.

When the Americans parade by in their Olympic-endorsed Levi ensembles, while perhaps munching on their Olympic-endorsed M&M snack food, CBS and NBC may as well take the night off.

Which is why ABC's commercial time for the entire Olympics is virtually sold out, at a cost of $250,000 for 30 seconds in prime time, an astronomical figure for the low-viewer summertime. ABC's "Winds of War" sold for $175,000 a half-minute last February. Thirty seconds on last January's Super Bowl, a three-hour event, cost $400,000.

The total commercial revenues amount to $616 million for both the Summer Games and ABC's 65 hours of Winter Olympics coverage from Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, in February. After subtracting the total rights fees for both Games ($316.5 million), production costs (about $150 million), advertising agency payments ($92 million) and such factors as standard reimbursements to ABC's affiliates for broadcasting network programs, "we expect to more than recoup our investment," says Martin.

ABC's commercial charges are based on the network's anticipation of an average rating of 25 (25 percent of the nation's TV homes) for the two weeks. That average should be exceeded in prime time, but not reached during the day, when the soap-opera games of bed-hopping and back-stabbing on the rival networks are popular, principally with women.

Originally, ABC was going to pre-empt its daytime serials for the Olympics, but the network's entertainment division squawked like one of the soap's jilted lovers.

The fear was that ABC's regular viewers would defect for the trials and tribulations on CBS and NBC.

So ABC Sports agreed to drop 20 hours — two hours a day — of Olympic programming, and "General Hospital" and ABC's other serials will carry on — some with Olympic-related story lines.

"Soaps are very important in television land," Martin says. "We also welcome it in another respect. A two-hour break would not be the worst thing in the world."

Martin also knows that major finals have not been scheduled for early afternoon during the week. Why? When you're paying $225 million for rights to the Summer Games, you're paying for other rights, too.

"The L.A. Olympic Committee designed its schedule, within reason, with us in mind," Martin says. "Gymnastics, for example, will start at 4:15 local time to coincide with 7:15 on the East Coast." The major finals will be on in prime time, and ABC asked that the marathon and boxing finals not conflict, as they did in 1976 at Montreal. The LAOC complied.

ABC's typical broadcast schedule, in Eastern time, next summer will be: Olympics from 10-30 a.m.-2 p.m., soaps from 2-4, Olympics from 4-5:30, local news from 5:30-6:30, national news from 6:30-7, Olympics from 7-midnight, local news from 12-12:30, and Olympics from 12:30-2.

Besides providing coverage for American audiences, ABC has the responsibility for beaming every minute of every event to international broadcasters who might prefer field hockey to basketball. The undertaking amounts to over 1,600 hours of live coverage.

The international signal will emanate from a rehabilitated movie studio. The Games will reach one billion viewers — more people than saw all of the movies ever made on the same lot, says Martin.

Offer Interview Via Satellite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local television stations will be able to interview Democratic congressmen via satellite under a hook-up being devised by the Democratic National Committee.

The stations would have editorial control over the interviews and would pay for their production and transmission via the Westar IV satellite, DNC spokesman Terry Michael said.

Michael said the satellite network, which will begin operation after the Labor Day recess, represents an attempt by Democrats to catch up with the advanced communications methods used by Republican lawmakers.

Agriculture Dept. Says Food Stamp Help On Way

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says deep cuts in food stamp benefits will be unnecessary despite an almost empty till and congressional delays in approving $1.2 billion to keep the program operating through September.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Wednesday a multibillion-dollar measure — which will keep money flowing to a variety of government programs through the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30 — will be brought to a vote in the House by Friday. Senate action will follow quickly.

Agriculture Department officials said the prospect of congressional approval should be enough to allow the food stamp program to continue uninterrupted.

However, some state officials, who are charged with distributing the federally financed food coupons, apparently remain uneasy about the situation.

Robert Greenstein, who was in charge of the food stamp program under President Carter, said some state officials have told him that the drawn out congressional action will force a delay in the August distribution of stamps to some recipients. Greenstein now heads the non-profit Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

On July 7, Agriculture Secretary John Block sent a letter ordering states to prepare to reduce food stamp benefits by more than 20 percent for August and to suspend them altogether for September because of the delays in enacting the supplemental money.

Confusion created among state officials by that letter and assurances of action from congressional leaders prompted the Agriculture Department to tell states not to take any action until at least July 20. But that date also passed, and Greenstein said some states have held up processing any August benefits.

Nevertheless, the Agriculture Department is telling states to proceed as though the money is available.

"Every state that has needed to proceed with issuances has been told to make them," John W. Bode, deputy assistant agriculture secretary for food and consumer services, said Wednesday evening.

The additional $1.2 billion would bring the cost of food stamps this year to a record $12 billion. About 22 million people take part in the program.

The House passed the supplemental money bill May 25 and the Senate passed a different bill June 16. However, the threat of a veto by President Reagan and wrangling over more than 250 separate items in the legislation prevented House and Senate negotiators from accomplishing the necessary trimming and dealing to settle on a compromise version until late last week.

A legislative logjam on the House floor then pushed back a vote in the House until the end of this week.

Congressional leaders have indicated they expect the president to sign the measure.

Sec. Block And Family Planning A Week Of Food Stamp Rations

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block plans to dodge fancy dinners and luncheons in the coming week. It's part of a family project to eat as if the Blocks were on food stamps.

The Block project begins today with grocery shopping under the scrutiny of the news media and will conclude next Wednesday. It's part of a plan to call attention to the nation's food-assistance programs.

Block, his wife and two school-age children, will use the Agriculture Department's thrifty food plan as a guide. It is a menu designed by USDA nutritionists and is used as a basis for setting food stamp allocations, which currently aid about 22 million Americans.

Under the plan, a family would eat smaller amounts of fruit and vegetables, cereals, dairy products, and meat and poultry than they would get under plans calling for larger budgets.

An aide, John Ochs, said the thrifty food plan for Block's family of four allows about $58 a week for groceries.

Ochs said the Blocks spend about that much now for groceries to feed their family, but added, "You have to keep in mind that they're invited out a lot."

Block normally carries his lunch to work anyway, unless he has a luncheon engagement, so there will be little shift in eating pattern for him, Ochs said.

The rest of the week appears clear of dining invitations that would deter Block from keeping to the family diet, he said.

No luncheons are scheduled during the week, Ochs said, although Block is due to arrive in Nashville, Tenn., on Monday for a meeting of the American Soybean Association while the meal experiment is still under way.

What if Block is invited to the White House for a luncheon with the president or vice president? Ochs had no quick answer for that one.

A spokesman for the Washington-based Community Nutrition Institute said he thought it was good that Block "is seeing what it's like to be poor" by feeding his family on a food stamp allowance for a week.

But Geoff Becker added, "I'd like to see him go out and spend some time with poor people."

Block's Cabinet salary is $69,630 a year — plus outside income from family farming operations in Illinois.

Under federal rules, a family of four must have a gross income of less than $12,876 to qualify for stamps.

The entire program is expected to cost about $12 billion this fiscal year, including $1.2 billion Congress has been asked to approve so full food stamp operations can continue through Sept. 30.

As it is, there is just enough money to carry the program through part of August. Both the Senate and the House have approved the additional $1.2 billion, with a final settlement expected soon, perhaps by the end of the week.

Clean-Up At Wrong Place

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — A city official admits he goofed when he sent a truck and crew to spruce up a lot owned by a private citizen — but the official says the lot needed to be cleaned up anyway.

City Director of Public Service Anthony Fletcher admitted Wednesday that he mistakenly ordered the two-day cleanup at a lot owned by Stefanos Louiou of North Andover.

Fletcher said the crew was supposed to clean up a city-owned parcel once owned by Salem Suede Co. But instead the workers picked up six truckloads of bottles, cans, sticks, boards and brush from the former O'Brien Tannery, owned by Stefanos Louiou of North Andover.

The two properties are a few blocks apart.

"When I ordered the cleanup I thought it was the other property (Salem Suede)," Fletcher told The Salem Evening News.

"We made a mistake," Fletcher said, "We'll get them (the crew) on the site where they're supposed to be."

But Fletcher said the private property needed to be cleaned up anyway and he may bill Louiou for the work.

Trump Coup Tommy was highly satisfied with the progress of the rubber. On the first hand he had brought home a five club contract against a 4-0 trump break and, despite his best efforts, on the next two hands his opponents had succeeded in making only one game. As readers of this column know, whatever Tommy gains through his superb play when trumps break badly, he gives back through going down on simple hands or misdefending and allowing his opponents to make games that should be defeated.

Although his partner wanted to try, there was no way to avoid having Tommy declare the spade slam. After a Stayman sequence, North's jump over game inquired about trump quality, and that Tommy had to spare.

Declarer took dummy's ace of diamonds, then found out about the trump break when he led a spade to the king.

Tommy was in his element. If hearts were 3-3, Tommy could get rid of his diamond loser. But three rounds of that suit revealed that West had a stopper. Declarer ruffed the fourth heart and cashed three clubs, to reduce the hand to this position:

Tommy led his remaining diamond, and West found he could not make a trump trick. He won the queen of diamonds and led the jack of spades. Tommy won the king and took the marked finesse of dummy's nine. The slam was home and a lucrative rubber was scored up.

Lawyers To Appeal Desegregation Case

By The Associated Press
Lawyers with the Legal Defense Fund say they will probably appeal a settlement of the University of North Carolina desegregation case because the ruling could undermine 13 years of legal efforts to desegregate public colleges.

A federal appeals court upheld the controversial UNC agreement by a 6-4 vote this summer. The UNC system had been under fire during the Carter administration because it had failed to move quickly enough to desegregate, and threats of a federal aid cutoff were leveled.

"It is fair to say an appeal (to the Supreme Court) is likely," said Elliott Lichtman, a Defense Fund lawyer.

Judge Skelley Wright, one of the dissenting voters in the ruling, said the appeals ruling "makes a mockery" of civil rights laws and "opens the floodgates" for other states that want to avoid desegregating their public colleges and universities.

In 1981, UNC was allowed to transfer the desegregation case from the District of Columbia to Raleigh because of an appeals court ruling. The Reagan administration agreed to a settlement this year that critics said offered little that UNC had not already promised. The decision was endorsed by

Says Filibuster Risking Reforms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Wednesday a filibuster over federal price supports for wheat, feed grains and other commodities is threatening to block Senate consideration of reforms for the federal tobacco program.

Reforms placing a freeze on price supports through at least 1984 and revamping the lease-transfer system are included in a package of farm bills that were brought up on the Senate floor Wednesday, but were stalled by the filibuster.

An emergency bill freezing price supports for this year's crop at last year's level has already been approved.

Helms told The News and Observer of Raleigh he was reluctant to help break the filibuster by senators from farm states because he needs their help to protect the tobacco program from critics.

FOCUS

Patently Ingenious

This weekend will mark the 193rd anniversary of the first patent issued by the federal government. Samuel Hopkins of Vermont was issued that patent on July 31, 1790 for his "process for making pot and pearl ashes." Although the U.S. Patent Office processes more than 90,000 patents yearly, the number of independent inventors has been declining. Experts point to growing costs and more complicated technology as two of the reasons. Since George Washington and Thomas Jefferson signed Hopkins' patent, more than 4 million have been issued. Transistors, safety pins and digital computers are but three of the many useful items that Americans have invented.

DO YOU KNOW — Thomas Edison, shown here with his first light bulb, held almost 1,100 patents. What was his nickname?

Freshmen Receive ECU Scholarships

Five area freshmen at East Carolina University have been awarded academic scholarships through ECU's Alumni Honors Scholarship Program.

The awards, which cover the expenses of in-state resident tuition and fees for a year, are offered to freshmen with records of high academic achievement and superior Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. Seventeen freshmen will receive the awards this year.

Each award is renewable for up to four years, dependent upon the scholar's satisfactory progress and achievement. Funds for the scholarships are derived from contributions by ECU's alumni. Alumni donations also support the campus' annual teaching excellence awards and a number of restricted scholarship programs.

The recipients this year include freshmen Paula Respass of Robersonville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Respass Jr.; Renee Oakley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Oakley, and Todd Rouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rouse, both of Greenville; Gary Parisher of Grifton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Parisher, and Glenn Buck of Winterville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Coy G. Buck.

Conley Students Attend Camp

Two D.H. Conley High School Future Business Leaders of America members attended the Broyhill Leadership Camp held in Belmont recently.

Raymond Reddick and Ragan Spain attended the conference, coordinated by the Tomorrow's America Foundation. The theme was "Let's Get America Going Again."

Reddick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Reddick Sr. of Greenville and will serve as president of the Conley FBLA next year. Spain is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Spain of Winterville and is currently serving as state vice president of FBLA.

Club To Hold Annual Field Day

The Brotherhood Club of Greenville will hold its annual field day Saturday at 3 p.m. at Thomas Foreman Park, West Fifth Street (formerly Eppes High School). Admission is free and there will be hot dogs, drinks and entertainment for the children.

In case of rain, the field day will be held Sunday.

Conference Meets At Black Jack

The Northeast B Division Conference will be held at Burney's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Black Jack, today through Sunday. A youth choir festival will take place tonight at 7:30 p.m.

A service sponsored by the Women's Department will be conducted Friday night by Eldress Patricia Phillips and the Burney's Chapel youth choir. Saturday, a business meeting will be held at noon with Eldress Evon Best and the Union Meeting Choir. At 7:30 p.m., Holy Communion will be celebrated with Eldress Mary L. Phillips and the Sweet Hope choir and ushers.

The 11 a.m. worship service Sunday will be conducted by the president, Elder Charlie R. Parker, and the Burney's Chapel choir and ushers. At 2:30 p.m., the sermon will be given by the vice president, Elder Blake Phillips, and the Good Hope choir and ushers.

Collision Causes $6,000 Damage

An estimated $3,000 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 2:40 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth Street and College View Apartments Road Tuesday.

Investigating officers identified the drivers involved as William Henry Dail of Route 2, Ayden, and Donald Morrison Ringer of 2518 Sunset Ave.

Arts Council Completes Board

New board members were welcomed at a recent orientation session and get-acquainted hour for the board of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Incoming council president Terry Shank welcomed new board members Robert Adams, Janice Faulkner, Nancy Jenkins, Katherine Lewis, John McGara, Charles Schwartz and Jo Smith.

The board discussed goals of the council, membership structure, and funding procedures and programs presented by officers John McConney, vice president; Betty Speir, corresponding secretary; Janey Ferguson, recording secretary, and Rich Cox, treasurer.

Two Accidents Investigated

An estimated $6,550 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated Wednesday by Greenville police.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 1:20 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 40 feet west of the Verdant Street intersection, involving cars driven by Maria Cecilia Vaca of Tarboro and Sue Crotts Johnson of 212 Harrell St.

Damage was estimated at $2,100 to the Vaca vehicle and $1,200 to the Johnson car.

Randy Lee Gorham of Route 1, Fountain, was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 6:26 p.m. collision on Mumford Road, 60 feet east of the Van Dyke Street intersection.

Police said the Gorham car collided with a car driven by Doris Woolard Davis of Simpson, resulting in an estimated $250 damage to the Davis car and $3,000 damage to the Gorham auto.

Gym Clinic Planned In Grifton

Man Dies In Tanker Fire

ST. PAULS, N.C. (AP) — One man was killed and two others injured Wednesday in a fiery rear-end collision of a 18-wheel fuel oil tanker and a moving truck on Interstate 95 in Robeson County.

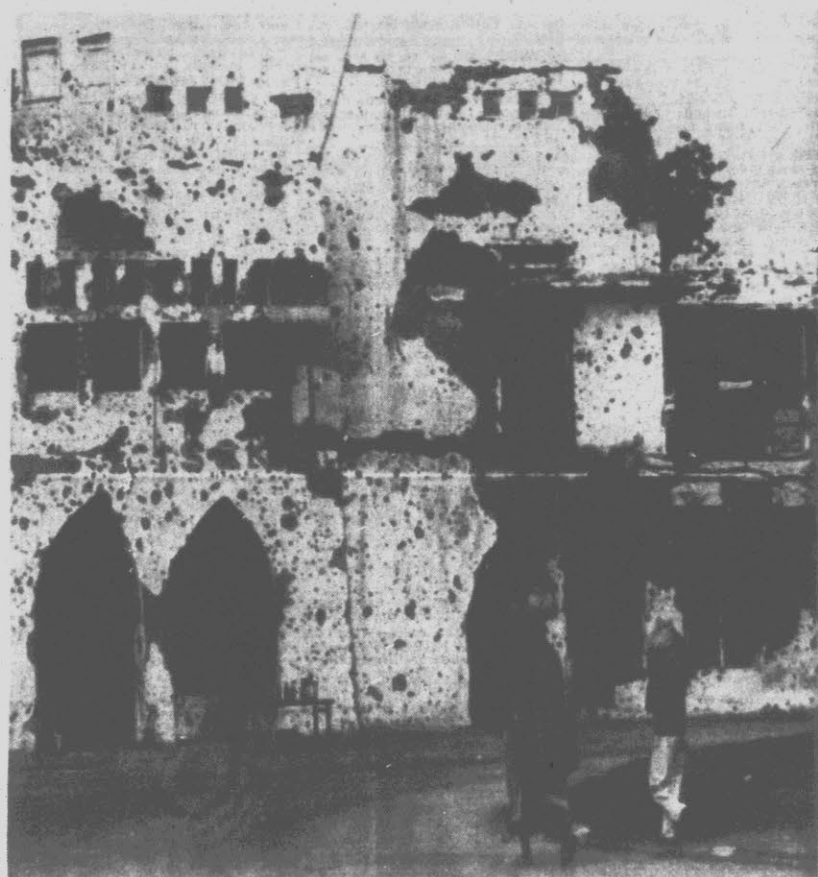

The state Highway Patrol said Henry Andrew Daniel, 24, of Parkton, driving for the Parnell Oil Co. of Parkton, was killed after his tanker filled with 8,800 gallons of diesel fuel struck a moving truck, overturned and burst into flames.

The accident occurred near the St. Pauls exit of U.S. 301 at about 6:45 a.m.

Robert Lewis Floyd, 41, the driver of the moving truck, and his son, Robert Lewis Floyd Jr., 15, both of Baltimore, were treated and released from Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton.

The moving truck skidded about 275 before landing on its side in the woods nearly 50-feet from the skeletal remains of the tanker, McLendon said.

Burning fuel oil had run along road drainage tiling into a ditch and spread into the surrounding woods beside the St. Pauls exit road creating a wall of fire, he added.

STREET SCENE — A mother and her son carry food supplies Tuesday past a downtown Ndjamena building which shows heavy scars of past fighting between the troops of Chad President Hissene Habre and rebel forces of former President Goukouni Oueddei. The conflict between the two factions has raged since 1978 as part of a 20-year civil war in Chad. Fighting restarted last month with rebel troops launching an offensive in the northeastern part of the country. (AP Laserphoto)
