Reagan Aides Hope Time Will Relax Fears Of War

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's aides say that any political damage caused by his plan to send U.S. troops and ships to Central America will disappear when it becomes clear the deployment is not a forerunner to combat.

Reagan's Republican allies, concerned about the need to generate support or at least minimize opposition, are putting pressure on him to explain his program to the public. At the same time, he is under attack by Democrats, who say he is leading the nation into a greater risk of war in Central America.

White House officials were scurrying to get the president off the defensive last week after stories leaked from administration sources disclosed proposals to increase the number of military advisers and intelligence activities in the region. At about the same time, the government was making public plans for ground and naval exercises there.

Although Reagan's tentative schedule allowed time for a news conference last Tuesday evening, it wasn't until the day before that plans were made to go ahead with the session. It focused almost exclusively on Central America and, in particular, on the president's plans to send up to 4,000 troops into joint maneuvers with Honduras.

In recent weeks, the president has had trouble arousing his audiences as he criticizes what he has called the Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan "war machine" or the rebels trying to overthrow the U.S.-supported government in El Salvador.

Before the news conference, House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel said "we've got some work to do to get the American people on our side to support whatever we want to do down there" — a message he said he conveyed to Reagan during a private meeting.

Earlier, at a GOP fund-raising party in Long Beach, Calif., the president said "either we pay a modest price now so we can prevent a crisis, or we listen to the do-nothings and risk an explosion of violence that will bring real damage to our own borders."

The audience, made up of longtime Reagan supporters, rarely applauded.

In Hollywood, Fla., two weeks later, Reagan said the government leaders in El Salvador were making progress in controlling the violence there and "they need and they deserve our help."

His audience was made up of delegates to a national convention of the International Longshoremen's Association, one of the few labor organizations to support Reagan in the 1980 presidential campaign. But there was no sign of that support during the speech, when the dockworkers laughed at a couple of presidential jokes but otherwise did not react visibly to anything he said.

Among those who criticized Reagan publicly was former Vice President

Walter F. Mondale, who is seeking the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination. "After tonight, I'm more certain than ever that the current administration policy is leading us into war in Central America," Mondale said.

Wrecks On Smoky Highway

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Nine people were injured this morning in 13 separate accidents on smoke-shrouded U.S. 17 south of Wilmington, the North Carolina Highway Patrol said.

Trooper George Ake said it took troopers several hours to sort out the mess. He said a total of 21 cars were involved in accidents along a 3½-mile stretch of highway.

A highway patrol spokesman originally estimated the number of cars involved at 30, but Ake said it was hard at first to tell how many cars were involved.

"We had a lot of people stopped off the road trying not to get hit. There were cars everywhere and we had to determine who was involved, and who was just trying to get out of the way. It got to be a real circus. I'm just glad nobody got hurt seriously," he said.

He said no estimate of damage was available.

Ake said cars were traveling about 55 mph when they suddenly ran into visibility of only a few feet.

"These people came from a clear highway and all of a sudden, bang, visibility was four or five feet," he said. "That was a shock."

H.S. Wilkins, a patrol spokesman, said cars were still crashing into each other when Trooper J.H. Kerr arrived on the scene shortly before 5 a.m.

"The first car that arrived said, 'Get me some help. They're still piling up,'" Wilkins said.

The highway was closed for about three hours.

The highway patrol blamed smoke from a controlled forest fire for the accident. Troopers said the fire was set to clear the land on property owned by International Paper Co.

'Treading Water' With Leaf Crop

FARMVILLE, N.C. (AP) — As the North Carolina flue-cured tobacco markets prepare to open this week, farmers are hoping their crop will bring more than the low opening prices on the Georgia and Florida markets.

"I'm not sure there's going to be as much profit on this crop," said R.C. Tucker Jr., owner of the Tucker Tobacco Warehouse in Farmville who grows 550,000 pounds of leaf a year. "It's going to be a treading-the-water situation."

North Carolina's Border Belt, comprised of markets in southeastern North Carolina, opens Tuesday. Auctions begin Wednesday on the Eastern Belt, which accounts for most of the state's sales, and in markets in the Sandhills and Fuquay-Varina. The season will open Aug. 8 for the northern part of the Middle Belt and Aug. 15 for the Old Belt, which includes 10 Piedmont markets.

Opening-day prices on the Georgia and Florida markets

Wednesday averaged $140.21 per hundred pounds, down $11.72 from last year. Also on the first day 37.1 percent of sales went to the grower-supported Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., compared to 14.1 percent of sales on last year's opening day.

John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the state Department of Agriculture, said 1983 appears to be the most critical year for growers since the start of the tobacco program in 1938.

"It will be a very strenuous year for the grower to break even in many instances," he said.

Cyrus said continuing industry ailments, including declining demand and production, a freeze on price-support levels and significantly higher marketing charges are responsible for the negative outlook.

Weather conditions also have created problems in some areas by causing an irregular crop that could reduce yields and result in the harvest of immature leaves.

"The price-support freeze probably will keep 1983 prices down. Any variations — including higher prices — will be determined by the quality of the leaves."

Cool temperatures and heavy rainfall early in the growing season stunted the development of some tobacco plants and kept leaves from spreading out. Thinner leaves lack weight and the mellow flavor and aroma that manufacturers seek.

Cyrus said later high temperatures and dry weather have caused some deterioration and sunbaked and sunburned tobacco. But generally, the crop is responding well, he said.

In Pitt County, the state's top tobacco-producing county, leaf production will be 15 to 20 percent below last year because tobacco has "not filled out like it should," said Leroy James, county agricultural extension chairman.

"I don't see any way for it to be as good as last year," he said.

Middle East Envoy And Lebanese Leaders Confer

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan's new Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, opened talks today on the deadlocked Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement but Syria vowed to keep its forces pitted against Israeli units in Lebanon.

McFarlane met at the presidential palace with Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem and President Amin Gemayel's national security adviser, Wadi Haddad, the state radio reported.

The radio said McFarlane would meet later with Gemayel and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan in a fresh effort to break the stalemate over foreign troop withdrawals.

Gen. John Vessey, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, met with Gemayel on Sunday night, and was scheduled to confer with Lebanese commanders today. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said Vessey was discussing ways of strengthening Lebanon's army.

Syrian President Hafez Assad marked his country's Army Day today by vowing to keep his 50,000 troops in Lebanon until the Israeli army pulls out unconditionally.

"As long as the Israeli invasion of Lebanon continues, our armed forces will stay to confront the usurpers over Lebanese soil as part of the wider confrontation of the Arab-Israeli conflict," Assad said.

It was Army Day in Lebanon, too, and the top commander, Gen. Ibrahim Tannous, said in the order of the day to his 32,000 soldiers and officers he was confident they would extend government control beyond Beirut to the rest of Lebanon.

"Your dream is to extend sovereignty over every inch of Lebanese territory," Tannous said. "Today it is Beirut and tomorrow the mountains and the day after it will be the north, the south and the Bekaa."

Beirut newspapers speculated that McFarlane would propose a disengagement of Israeli and Syrian forces in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and urge the Lebanese government to take charge of civil affairs in Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon after the Israeli army implements its redeployment plan.

The Israelis plan to leave the central mountain regions and redeploy south of the Awali River, about 27 miles north of the Israeli border.

McFarlane, 46, was appointed July 22 to replace Philip C. Habib as the top U.S. negotiator for the Middle East and flew to Beirut Sunday on the first stop of a six-nation tour. Details of his schedule were not disclosed, but he is expected to visit Syria, Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Jordan during his trip.

The Syrians, who have blocked the U.S.-sponsored withdrawal agreement by refusing to remove their troops from Lebanon, had reduced Habib's effectiveness by spurning his last effort to visit Damascus for talks.

Syria has not indicated that it might also reject McFarlane, but the official Syrian news agency quoted Assad as saying his nation "will foil" the withdrawal pact, which he termed a "contract of submission."

An Israeli government official told The Associated Press that Israel has proposed that the Lebanese government handle civil affairs in areas occupied by Israel's army.

The proposal was seen as an attempt to placate Gemayel's government, which fears that Israel's pullback to positions south of the Awali will lead to a partitioning of the country between Israel and Syria.

An Israeli Foreign Ministry official said the planned redeployment should be regarded as the first stages of a withdrawal. But he said any further move must be matched by Syrian and Palestinian forces. Israel, with an estimated 28,000 soldiers in Lebanon, has refused to implement the troop withdrawal agreement until the Syrians begin to withdraw. Syria claims the agreement gives Israel advantages in southern Lebanon.

Also today, Beirut radio stations said Syrian-backed mutineers and loyalist guerrillas of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization battled with heavy weapons in the Bekaa Valley for a 10th straight day.

There were no reports of casualties from the new shelling, which broke an 18-hour cease-fire. Police placed the toll for the previous nine days at 42 killed and 75 wounded.

In Taif, Saudi Arabia, Saudi King Fahd held talks with King Hussein of Jordan on the split within the PLO and rift between Arafat and Syria.

Arab diplomatic sources said Fahd was exploring the feasibility of arranging a meeting of Assad, Hussein and Arafat to agree on policy toward Lebanon and Israel.

Reactions To My Comments On Tickling

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with your answers, but I think you came on a little too strong in your answer to "Tickled to Death in N.Y." Although for her tickling may be "torture" (as you called it), others find it highly erotic for both the "tickler" and the "ticklee."

I'm a 22-year-old guy whose girlfriend agrees that tickling combined with bondage has added a lot of zest to our sex lives. After being tickled to the point of near exhaustion, we are both highly aroused sexually.

For you to equate tickling with sadism and torture makes it sound like something evil. Torture causes pain and damage to the body; tickling does not.

Lighten up, Abby.

TICKLED TO BE TICKLED IN TRENTON, N.J.

DEAR TICKLED: Read on for a letter from another reader who was also less than tickled with my response. My answer is the same for both of you.

DEAR ABBY: I could not believe your response to "Tickled to Death in N.Y." You said, "Tickling is in reality a thinly disguised method of torture." Abby, that's absurd!

I have a 5-year-old daughter who loves to be tickled. In fact, she begs me to tickle her. To even suggest that in doing so I am torturing her is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard. I'm sure there are a lot of parents who tickle their children because the children enjoy it.

There is nothing more pleasant than the laughter of children.

Please reconsider your foolish statement.

DISGUSTED IN FLORENCE, S.C.

DEAR TICKLED AND DISGUSTED: "Tickled to Death" wrote:

"At first it was a game between us, but it's gotten out of hand. Every time we're together, he pins me down and tickles me until I am hoarse from screaming and my lungs ache. I am very ticklish at the bottoms of my feet, my ribs and underneath my arms, and that's what he goes for. This is no laughing matter. He is driving me crazy!"

That kind of tickling goes beyond a mutual agreement. When brute force is used, it is clearly sadistic and can hardly be compared with tickling a child who begs to be tickled. (You wouldn't pin the child down and continue to tickle her while she begged

Pat's Pointers

Sheer elegance is the word for this Pineapple Parfait afghan, crocheted from easy-care Wintuk sports yarn. It is made in 8-inch square motifs that are joined in a lacy pattern of simple chain and slip stitches. The pineapple pattern is an age-old favorite that fits beautifully into any decorating scheme — as modern as today or as traditional as you like.

To obtain directions for making the Pineapple Parfait Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-73183 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29587.

Or you may order Kit No. C-73183 by sending a check or money order for $17.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes yarn, instructions and shipping charges. Please specify your choice of pale yellow, baby blue, mist green, cerise, navy, sea coral or eggshell.

From time to time I get a request for directions for a crocheted bookmark in the shape of a cross. I had seen them but didn't have the pattern. Happily, a reader was kind enough to share the following directions.

You will need 20 yards of No. 30 (or finer) crochet cotton, a size 12 steel crochet hook and a few yards of colored crochet cotton. This will make a cross about 4 inches long.

Starting with the colored thread, chain 8 stitches and slip stitch to first chain to form a ring. Work single crochets in the ring until it is full. This will be the bottom of the cross. Break the colored thread off and join in the white thread and use it until instructed otherwise.

PINEAPPLE...parfait afghan will fit in with any decor — be it contemporary or traditional.

For a foundation row, chain 3, work a shell in the next single crochet, work a double crochet in the next single crochet, chain 3 and turn. To make a shell, work 3 double crochets in 1 stitch, chain 2, work 3 more double crochets in the same stitch.

To work Row 1, work a shell in the chain-2 space of the previous row, then double crochet in the top of the turning chain; chain 3 and turn. Repeat this row 14 more times for a total of 16 shell stitch rows and fasten off.

To work the arms of the cross, attach white thread in the 11th chain-3 space (counting up from the bottom of the cross). For the foundation row, chain 3, work a shell over the next chain-3 space, double crochet in the next chain-3 space; chain 3 and turn. Then work 3 more shell stitch rows, following directions for Row 1 above. Fasten off. Work another arm on opposite side to correspond to the arm just made.

To make an edging, attach the colored thread into a double crochet just above the ring at the bottom edge of the cross. Work all around in single crochet, making 1 stitch in each single crochet of the ring and 3 stitches over each chain-3 space or double crochet, except at the tip of each arm and the top of the cross. At each of these points, work a picot by working 1 single crochet, chain 3 and 1 more single crochet in the same stitch. If desired, dip in heavy starch and press dry.

For an optional tassel, cut about 25 3-inch strands. Holding all strands together, fold them in half and — at the fold — make a tight chain stitch to fasten them together. Now, work a chain about 10 inches long, fold it in half and attach it to the hole at the bottom of the cross you to stop, would you?

Tickling during bondage may be highly erotic (I'll have to take your word for it), but all harmless game-playing must be a matter of mutual agreement.

In conclusion: Whatever the activity, if it is forced on one by another, that, my friends, is cruel and sadistic.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't hand out any prizes for the most insensitive mother-in-law in the world until you've heard about mine.

The first words she ever spoke to me, when my then-girlfriend called long-distance to tell her we were marrying, were, "Do you have any money?"

When she came on the train for our wedding (and to meet her future son-in-law), she first tried to fix her daughter up with "a lovely young man" she had met on the train!

The day before our wedding she told her daughter that she'd been to a psychic who told her that we would have a miserable marriage.

We were to be married by a judge in a simple civil ceremony, so as we climbed the stairs to the courthouse she said, "This couldn't be tackier if you had planned it."

Cinema School: Tough Field

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carol Frank is capitalizing on her 1980 bachelor degree from UCLA's cinema school with her own film distribution company. She just sold her new script, "Sorority," to film producer Roger Corman.

She's 25, talented — and lucky. Thousands of eager dreamers are flooding America's cinema schools, and hundreds are emerging to an industry that demands perseverance before success. "There's surely a glut of filmmakers, producers and writers out there," says Dave Madden, vice president of creative affairs at 20th Century-Fox.

"All the major studios and independents turn out at most 200 films a year, so it's a case of the luckiest, best or cleverest making it to the top."

Enrollments at the 900 U.S. colleges and universities with film or TV courses have stabilized after a phenomenal explosion at the end of the '70s.

A 1980 survey by the American Film Institute tallied 35,882 film and TV students nationwide.

The University of Southern California, UCLA and AFI — the Big Three in screen art's heartland — turn away thousands of aspiring artists every year.

The chosen get grim advice.

"There isn't a school in this country that doesn't warn people again and again and again that it's a very impractical field," says Peter Bugalski, AFI's education services director. "Nobody listens."

"Every school has someone who's gone on to make it, and every student imagines, 'That's me! I'm not like all those losers.'"

AFI charges $5,250 for a one-year graduate course in directing, producing, screenwriting, production design or cinematography. Of about 90 students yearly, 40 or so are invited to produce a feature with a $17,000 grant.

Amy Heckerling, 30-year-old director of "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," credits her start to AFI and its grant for her first gangster comedy.

"I don't know how else anyone could break in to the business," she says. "If you're just hanging around a studio and they notice you, they're going to kick you off the lot."

Warnings about hardship and disappointment don't discourage Emily Kaufman, a UCLA teaching assistant who worked with Peter Guber on Dudley Moore's latest movie, "Six Weeks."

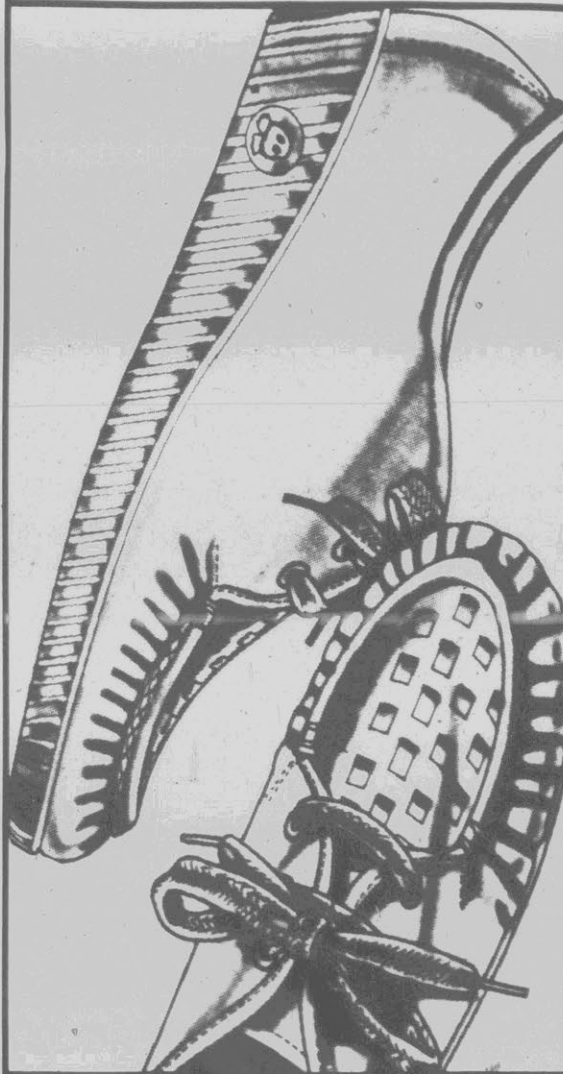

At 29, Ms. Kaufman is undecided between teaching or producing, although she offers a typical dream: "We've got the people and the talent for an independent company. Now all we need is the funds."

She gives advice that's echoed by the professors as well as Fox's Madden and Universal executive Thom Mount:

"Don't go to graduate school before you get some life experience. We're in danger of graduating too many students who are technically proficient, but have nothing at all to say."

Mark Twain, the pseudonym of writer Samuel L. Clemens, was originally used by Capt. Isaiah Sellers, a riverboat pilot who wrote a column for a New Orleans newspaper.

That Pine-Tarred Bat

The case of baseball's pine-tarred bat serves as a focal point to much that has developed in this country since the advent of that method of breaking the law that came to be known as civil disobedience.

Organized baseball has published rules that prohibit the use of a foreign substance more than 18 inches up the bat. George Brett of the Kansas City Royals violated that rule when he rubbed tar, used to give him a better grip, high on his bat. Using that bat, Brett hit an apparent game-winning home run against the New York Yankees only to have the rule cited. He was called out, the home run was nullified and the Yankees were declared the winners.

Lo, to hear the outcry across the country, murder had been committed. The common response was similar to that of those who defended the so-called civil disobedience — rules, or laws, can't and shouldn't always be followed.

Or, rules are rules only if you agree with them.

The president of the American League has the authority to set aside the umpires' ruling in the Brett case, and he later exercised that authority, ruling that the spirit of the regulation did not cover situations such as Brett's.

Baseball fans should remember that league president Lee MacPhail, in reinstating Brett's home run, gained that power through the same set of rules that were cited initially by the umpires. It was the same just a few years ago ... when Americans eventually remembered that their Constitution set the foundation for them to exercise disobedience in the streets and on the college campuses.

Anyone For Seconds?

There is good reason to suspect a Pentagon pencil-pusher might have been behind the directive barring "unlimited seconds" in Marine Corps chow lines.

For one thing, the Pentagon people have always appeared remote from reality at a post where fighting men of any branch of the armed forces are stationed. For another, Marines are notoriously lean (and, hopefully, mean) — there are no overweights to be seen in pictures of leathernecks at work nor on parade for the homefolks. That suggests most of their food-intake is used up in applied energy.

Another possibility: there is an amateur psychologist in the sub-ranks of upper-echelon Pentagon people who suggested a "leak" to the press about a warning against chow-line seconds would provide a positive reaction from the media about penny-pinching within the Corps.

Anyhow, we aren't buying.

Ex-servicemen in our office ranks concur that if the food served in the armed forces' mess halls is good enough for personnel to ask for seconds, let 'em have it.

Gas Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has won a long-delayed first round with a reluctant Congress toward fulfilling a 1980 campaign promise to remove the remaining federal price controls on natural gas.

But Reagan's plan to get the government out of fixing the prices that 45 million American families pay to heat their homes may have suffered a lethal blow from Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, a Democrat who generally supports decontrol.

As his price for backing the White House's phased decontrol program in the Republican-dominated Senate Energy Committee, Johnston insisted that a few industrial customers in Louisiana continue to be protected.

While most of the country would be subject to a deregulated "free market" under a decontrol plan approved by the Senate panel last week, those industries would get gas at one-tenth the average market prices nationwide.

For many critics and Reagan administration officials, Johnston's exemption for his home state dims the decontrol bill's prospects on Capitol Hill.

"This package is an extremely vulnerable bill — and this is one of the vulnerable points," said Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who like other opponents contend full decontrol will boost consumer gas prices.

Johnston's exemption for "direct purchasers" of natural gas in his state was approved on a 99 vote over the objections of Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., who called the provision a "double standard" that could help the energy-rich states in the South and Southwest lure industry away from the North.

But Johnston made it clear he was willing to use his status as the ranking Democrat on the committee to kill the bill entirely if he didn't get his way.

"There is no secret, of course, that I would have to strongly oppose the bill" if the exemption does not pass, he said.

That was enough for Committee Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho and the chief Senate sponsor of the White House decontrol bill, to side with Johnston.

"I know without a doubt that this must be a bipartisan bill if it is to have any chance either in this committee or on the floor," McClure said. "And that bipartisanship must start with Sen. Johnston."

Then, with Johnston's support, McClure mustered an 119 majority last week to send the bill to the Senate floor "without recommendation." The vote came after four months of debate, one of the longest sessions in the panel's history.

Both advocates and opponents of decontrol agree that the bill had a better chance in the Senate committee than anywhere else on Capitol Hill.

Much tougher battles loom in the less-sympathetic House Energy Committee, on the Senate and House floors and eventually in a conference committee — if the legislation gets that far.

Natural gas pricing has always been a difficult and divisive issue for Congress, pitting lawmakers from producer states against those from consumer states, regardless of party lines.

But when retail heating bills in parts of the Midwest and Northeast rose 40 percent last winter, the administration and the major oil companies who own most of the gas still under federal price ceilings saw an opportunity to fulfill Reagan's 1980 promise to remove all wellhead controls.

The existing half-controlled, half-uncontrolled market under the last natural gas law that Congress passed in 1978 was blamed for the "distortions" that sent retail rates skyrocketing despite a glut in supplies, a drop in demand and falling spot market prices the past year.

WASHINGTON — The true meaning of the recent week-long White House blitz designed to show Ronald Reagan's concern for blacks became clear when his own men quietly watched the demise of the one legislative initiative that might have boosted his political standing with minority groups.

That proposal, added by the Senate to the bill repealing interest and dividend withholding, offers tax breaks to businesses that locate in inner city "enterprise zones." The lack of any interest in the plan by a White House that had just completed one of its patented media blitzes, this one a love-in aimed at the blacks, was both remarkable and revealing.

It was another example of government-by-advancement, high on gloss and low on substance, with deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver calling signals. Deaver's earlier education blitz did give President Reagan valuable media initiative. But the unplanned product of his blitz on blacks was principally the fiasco of Vice President George Bush's shouting confrontation with the NAACP national convention. Government-by-advancement clearly has its limits.

Black anger against Reagan has been viewed at the White House with bemusement for most of his presidency, with occasional hints that it might even help with the white majority. The conventional wisdom was that since nothing could be done about blacks, it was best to ignore them. That meant ignoring the enterprise zones bill, even though the president was personally intrigued by it and publically gave it high priority.

But the lever on the White House bill-passing machine is controlled by the Legislative Strategy Group, headed by chief of staff James A. Baker. It was not pressed. White House lobbyist Ken Duberstein, who gets his marching orders from Baker, did not march.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), an eager advocate of enterprise zones, found it was getting no help whatever from Duberstein. Since the White House would not press Chairman Dan Rostenkowski for action from the House Ways and Means Committee, HUD Secretary Sam Pierce placed the call himself. It was to no avail.

Baker's attitude might conceivably stem from the fact that the concept originally was sponsored by Rep. Jack Kemp, whose ambitions are of no importance to the White House staff. But

Sen. Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is no fonder of Kemp than is Baker; he thought enough of enterprise zones to attach it to the tax bill.

White House enmity about enterprise zones mostly reflects lack of interest with substantive issues within a senior staff increasingly obsessed with media-oriented political strategies. But the staff's attention has been riveted by recent polls showing black Reaganphobia at a point endangering re-election.

The reaction was to be expected, given advancement mentality: a week of daily "events" showing the president and other administration officials advocating black issues in close proximity to blacks. Reagan coming in with too little and too late on open housing legislation, an area where he never can outbid the liberals, illustrates the muzzle-power of the blitz on blacks.

"A ridiculous charade" was the way one Reagan aide, who had no part in the week-long campaign, described it. He gave the blitz that table before it was capped by the Bush-NAACP shootout in New Orleans. Intended to improve the administration's relationship with blacks, the confrontation was so stormy that many Republican politicians actually felt — incorrectly — that the vice president was courting a white backlash. In the process, Bush's hard-earned civil rights reputation was tarnished.

Still, the fact Dole had tucked enterprise zones into the tax bill offered the White House a chance to retrieve something from the mess. Besides offering help both to inner-city blacks and hard-pressed small-business men — without spending much federal money — the proposal should have appealed to advancement mentality in the White House for another reason: The president could spend the next year cutting ribbons for dozens of new inner-city enterprises.

But the idea of enterprise zones was ignored last week by the Legislative Strategy Group, probably because it did not originate there. Similarly, a middle-level staff proposal for a Reagan speech to blacks on how a vibrantly-growing economy could help them never got the president's desk. Like some other innovative ideas intended to Reagan Deaver intercepted it.

In this case, however, the substance of that speech idea was slipped to the president by a lateral route. Reagan loved it, just as he did enterprise zones.

Candidates Want Own Images

He didn't waste time when he said no more tax increases were needed.

Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox stood out as the most articulate, former Guilford Sen. Tom Gilmore stood out as the student of government, Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, stood out as the one candidate willing to criticize the current holder of the office.

For two hours, they battled the issues back and forth seeming to agree more than they disagreed but all jockeying to impress. In the end, there was a lot of sentiment among the editors with whom this writer spoke, that Knox and Ballenger came out best.

Thornburgh, one editor said, "is probably the nicest guy we'll ever not elect as governor." The feeling was that the man was an academic, that although he speaks well, he does not inspire. Gilmore also fails to inspire, but he takes a lot more words to do so. He was specific when asked to be general and general when asked to be specific. "He's like Hubert Humphrey without the humanity," one prominent publisher scribbled in his notes.

Faircloth got some votes as most impressive. He's direct and he's funny. Very funny. But a few said they were surprised by his arrogance. "He's pompous," one good ole boy who edits a country weekly said. Those of us who know Faircloth thought he was acting less arrogant and less pompous than usual that day.

Slowdown May Be Beneficial

Industrial production's rise, rapid so far in 1983, will soon begin to moderate," the father-son team of forecasters maintains. "Retail sales will be strong through Christmas, sluggish in the first half of next year."

The Levys argue that weak demand for U.S. exports will act as a brake on economic growth in this country.

"A major reason for the worsening trade picture is the excessive value of the dollar relative to foreign currencies," they say. "The high price of the dollar makes imported products bargains in the United States and American goods expensive abroad."

At the same time, they maintain, some of the most important stimulants to economic activity lately have lost their former force — among them the housing industry's revival, deficit spending by the federal government, and inventory-building by increasingly confident businesses.

A drop in mortgage interest rates from about 18 percent to about 13 percent touched off a spurt in housing activity. But since then mortgage rates have stopped falling and backed up a bit again.

The swelling of the federal deficit to about $200 billion this year has raised many justified concerns, the Levys say, but it has also provided some strong short-term impetus to the recovery. They believe the deficit is likely to narrow somewhat in the government fiscal year beginning in October, thereby reducing its stimulative effects.

The economy got another short-term boost in the second quarter of this year as businesses switched from drawing down existing inventories to building up their stocks of goods. To accomplish this shift of gears requires a rapid increase in production.

Such a changeover is "an important event that occurs only once during each business cycle," the Levys said. "This change having been made, the economy needs to look elsewhere for a further stimulus to business activity."

Evans Economics, a Washington-based forecasting firm, estimates that the inventory buildup slowed to almost zero in June. "Accumulation will be quite modest during the summer months," it said, "so that the gains in industrial production will be much smaller."

The firm expects measures of economic activity for July, which are due to be published over the next few weeks, to "surprise many by posting much more moderate gains than were recorded during the second quarter."

The hoped-for outcome of slower growth would be an easing of the recent pressures that have pushed interest rates higher. In this script, only when government and business policymakers are much less confident about prospects for the recovery than they are now can interest rates fall enough to get that recovery moving ahead strongly again.

Ovid Pierce
Is Honored
At Banquet

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
WILSON — Ovid Pierce, noted novelist and formerly writer-in-residence at East Carolina University, was honored by friends and fellow-writers at a banquet held Saturday night at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson.

The banquet was the culminating event of the 34th annual meeting of the North Carolina Writers Conference. Author of four novels set in the Roanoke Valley of Eastern North Carolina — "The Plantation," "On A Lonesome Porch," "The Devil's Half," and "The Wedding Guest," Pierce has received numerous honors, including the North Carolina Award, the most prestigious of all literary recognitions.

Poet and newspaperman Sam Ragan was master of ceremonies for the event. Other writers taking part in recalling personal affiliations with, and literary achievements of Pierce were poet Mae Woods Bell of Wilson and newspaperman Roy Parker of The Fayetteville Times. Novelist Frances Gray Patton was scheduled to attend, but was unable to due to illness. "Tell him I love him, that I'm in bed re-reading again 'The Plantation,'" was the message she sent.

"Ovid has written out of his deep roots in Eastern North Carolina, movingly giving us insights into love, compassion, understanding of the area's people and its land," Ragan said. "He truly depicted the South at a time when most of its men were dead or broken, a time when women became equal to the challenge, pulled the South through."

"This courage, the ability to adapt to the difficult times following the Civil War is something a number of leading editors tried to interest experts to write about in non-fiction, then Ovid came along and in fiction did it far better than any non-fiction work ever could. His writing is lyrical, beautiful, distinguished. He has given us exquisitely wrought prose charged with emotional tension."

Mae Woods Bell, relating she was a transplant to the South and already in love with southern writing before coming here, recalled that her initial meeting with a major Southern writer, Thomas Wolfe, "was not all I expected in a Southern gentleman, but then I met Ovid Pierce, and I still have a love affair with him after 30 years. Ovid above all else is a real gentleman."

Ms. Bell spoke about the "esteem in which Ovid is held by a large number of younger men. These are the young men, students at East Carolina University, many of them country boys, he helped unstintingly, giving them guidance and encouragement. These youth, many of them now successful lawyers or businessmen, revere and respect Ovid Pierce. To them he has always been doc, governor, general, and above all a foster father."

Ahoskie native Roy Parker told about his first meeting with Ovid Pierce "at a North

Carolina writer's conference back in the early 50s after the publication of 'The Plantation.' Here was Ovid, at the time very much in the spotlight because of the critical and public acclaim his first novel won for him. It was a revelation to see this modest man be himself in the midst of a bunch of literary prima donnas, each with their own little coterie."

Himself a native of Ahoskie, not far distant from Pierce's birthplace, Parker said "the Roanoke River valley has been rich in literary talent this century. There was Bernice Kelly Harris, Inglis Flether and Meyn Holloman. You could kick a cotton row in the area and a writer would spring out like a jack rabbit. "Ovid's plantation is a magic place. And being from the Roanoke Valley, there's story telling in his blood. He has a penchant for place. In his heart there beats the blood of a prophet, a man with a message about the lonely mission of our lives."

In brief remarks following words in praise of his work, Pierce recalled "in the days when I first wrote, attempting to get published, I had no readers, no reviewers waiting for my book. There was nobody for me to write for except myself. I had no public, no name to protect. The only standard I had to go by was the manner in which I wanted words to recapture some of my past."

"Then I remembered words by Joseph Conrad, that a writer can only make people feel, hear, see, that's all we can do. Conrad made me realize I wasn't writing for myself alone."

"Friends began to listen, to care. For a long time now, I have had the happy task of writing not only for people devoted to me, but for all people. My heartfelt thanks to all of you, my friends here tonight, and to all my readers."

Patti Davis Had
'Near Collapse'

NEW YORK (AP) — Patti Davis says her parents, President and Mrs. Reagan, are "tolerant and accepting" of their children, but that her father's election to the White House brought her close to nervous collapse.

Rumors of an "icy" relationship between the 30-year-old actress — who adopted her mother's maiden name — and her mother are "a pack of lies," she was quoted in this week's People magazine. "I wish the press would stop picking on my mother," she said. "My parents are tolerant and accepting of us."

She said she "dreaded" her father's victory in the 1980 election.

"I said I couldn't handle that — and I didn't. Right after the inauguration I got really sick. I couldn't breathe and had to be taken to the hospital emergency ward. It was stress. My whole body went into shock," the magazine quoted her as saying.

Marijuana Arrest Made By Police

Greenville police arrested a 19-year-old Route 4, Snow Hill, man early Sunday and charged him with possession of marijuana, a violation of the controlled substance act.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Ronnie Linsey Roberson was arrested at 1:15 a.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Pennsylvania Avenue.

Trial date on the possession count was set for Aug. 17 in District Court here.

Repair CP&L Plant's Leak

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. hopes to have its Brunswick Unit II plant at Southport back on line by the middle of the week after a contaminated water leak forced its shutdown Saturday, officials said.

Technicians found the source of a water leak in the plant's containment structure, spokesman Wayne Ennis said Sunday.

The leak of slightly contaminated water was an "unusual event" that required notification to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and a plant closing, he said. The water had been leaking for several days but rose Saturday to 5 gallons per minute over an eight-hour period.

"Since the unit is now shut down, there is essentially no leakage of water from the source," Ennis said. "Packing repairs and other pre-startup tests are expected to be completed within the next 48 to 72 hours."

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

TEETH SHOULD LAST A LIFETIME - PLUS

Have you ever seen the photo of an ancient human skull? If you looked closely, you would have seen a full set of teeth included. Teeth are made of one of the hardest natural substances on earth and should not only last a lifetime (if properly cared for) but thousands of years after our lifetime.

Despite the fact that Americans are among those who enjoy the best dental care in the world, most of us have an oddly defeatist attitude about our teeth. We seem to fully expect each member of our family—sooner or later—to lose several or even all of our permanent teeth.

Much of this fatalism is based upon the misconception that your natural teeth are somehow not sturdy enough to last you a lifetime—that everyone must sooner or later, join the 20 million toothless people in this nation. But that's definitely not a true assumption.

With the proper eating habits (staying away from sugar), proper home care and regular visits to your dentist, your teeth should last a lifetime plus a few thousand years.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

"A GOOD FARMER IS ALSO A GOOD BUSINESSMAN"

"I always do my homework before I make an investment. That's why I've got several business enterprises that are successful. And one of those is my Perdue broiler operation. Sure, I got into chickens before Perdue was in this area. So when they bought out the company I was with and offered me a contract, I wasn't sure what to do. I wasn't very familiar with Perdue, but I had heard that they were different. I soon realized that they really want a quality chicken. That means the company hopefully makes more money. And at the same time, the grower benefits too.

A quality-conscious company that makes poultry its only business. That's who I'm growing for now. That's a good thing to have going for you when retirement comes. Good cash flow, a good tax situation, including the investment tax credit which is a tremendous savings, and depreciation of houses and equipment. From that point of view, a farmer or businessman, either one, would do well to consider Perdue.

When I retire, my Perdue broiler houses will be my only business, and I look forward to it. There are some very nice things about it you can't find in other jobs. It's not back-breaking work and doesn't take a lot of time. A person could have a couple of Perdue houses and still be involved in other things."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing—chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern super-markets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Call 1-800-682-8729 or send in the coupon below, and talk chicken with a Perdue representative.

Agriculture Project Gaining

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide campaign called Agriculture in the Classroom is slowly gaining ground in helping inform Americans that food comes from farms, not from supermarket shelves. Some kind of program is available in nearly half of the states, says the Agriculture Department, which helped begin the volunteer project two years ago.

A meeting of more than 150 education and agriculture representatives from 35 states was held in Washington last week.

"We need to increase public understanding of the most efficient and productive agricultural system in the world," Block told the group.

"The state and national organizations involved in Agriculture in the Classroom are bringing learning materials, teacher training and farm tours to our schools."

Some of the projects cited by USDA include:

—Agro-Puppy, a lifelike "puppy" that visits Kansas elementary schools to explain where food comes from and how it gets to the supermarket.

—Fifty elementary and secondary school teachers on a bus trip to farms and food processing plants in North Dakota as part of a four-day course on the economics of agriculture, designed especially for teachers with no agriculture background.

—Maryland fourth-grade students learning about the geography, history and careers in their state as they study a specially prepared unit on agriculture in Maryland, with frequent opportunities to visit a real farm.

—Thousands of San Francisco elementary school children enjoying the animals and products of California agriculture at a Farm Day in the school program.

According to one of the project's briefing papers, the Agriculture Department's leadership role in the project began in June 1981, when a meeting of agricultural groups, educators and state officials was held to see what could be done.

"In the past, various farm organizations and educators have developed and distributed materials on agriculture to schools, but there had not been much coordination or effort for all farm groups in a state to work with educators at the state and local level," the report said.

Several regional meetings were held last year to promote Agriculture in the Classroom at the state level. Those were held at Lincoln, Neb.; Harrisburg, Pa.; and Portland, Ore., and represented 27 states.

"Because of all this activity and support from the farm and education community, there are now 19 states with some kind of formal state activity," the report said.

Many other states are in the planning stage for adding agriculture to the classroom schedule.

Cattlemen should plan to use those cover crops on Payment-In-Kind land that can be grazed during the winter. Grazing is prohibited during the six principal growing months but they can be grazed from October to May. The use of winter annuals in a forage program will put additional pounds on cattle from October to May.

There are several winter annuals that can be planted to provide winter forage. A producer would want to plant a forage that would produce well in both the fall and winter months on up to April. The winter annuals suggested by a North Carolina State University forage specialist are as follows: rye, wheat, oats, ryegrass and possibly crimson clover.

Overseeding bermudagrass pastures with winter annuals can also be beneficial. Rye, ryegrass, vetch and clover will provide winter grazing for beef cattle.

If one chooses to overseed a pasture one should clip the bermudagrass to one-two inches in height and plant early (Sept. 15-Oct. 7).

For further information concerning winter annuals contact Miriam Lewis, 752-2934.

Simple Test For Cattle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says cattle producers or veterinarians can perform simple, on-farm tests to determine whether animals are free of antibiotic residues before they are sent to slaughter.

Called the live animal swab test, or LAST, the tests can be performed on urine from cows, calves and heifers. The urine is collected on a swab, which then is placed on a gel which has been coated with a harmless bacteria and left overnight in an incubator.

The bacteria grows on the gel, except where any antibiotic is present.

LAST is "the first tool available to quickly and inexpensively check for antibiotics before slaughter" and will reduce the possibility of contaminated animals reaching slaughter plants, said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"Until now, residues could be detected only by laboratory tests of carcass tissue," Houston said. "If violative levels were found, carcasses were condemned. Producers can avoid such violations by performing LAST routinely, as the last step before the animal leaves the farm."

The test requires no laboratory know-how, and most supplies are inexpensive, he said. Farmers can buy an incubator or can make one from a picnic cooler or a heavy cardboard box.

Step-by-step instructions for performing the test and for building incubators are available from the Publications Office, FSIIS-ILA, Room 1163-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Voyage Begun In 9-Foot Boat

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A 240-pound former truck driver has set forth in a 9-foot sailboat hoping to set a record for the smallest vessel to be sailed around the world by one person.

Dunlop once held the record for an eastbound crossing of the Atlantic in the smallest non-motorized boat.

His boat, Wind's Will, has been modified since last year when he made that voyage, sailing from Portland to Falmouth, England, in 76 days. Because waves claimed his radio equipment before, he took special care to secure the equipment this trip.

Dunlop, 41, of Mechanic Falls, hopes to establish 11 world records.

CIVILIAN RULE?

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — The military government says civilian rule will be restored to this West African nation in 1985, on the fifth anniversary of the coup that brought Samuel K. Doe to power.

Inedible Egg Export OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department plans to allow the export of inedible egg products for industrial use and animal food.

H. Connor Kennett of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service said the change in federal rules will take effect Sept. 15 and will permit the export of inedible egg products not intended for human food.

These egg products have not been denatured — a process that makes them unsuitable for certain industrial and animal food uses — or decharacterized — a process to clearly identify them, either visually or by odor, as inedible, he said.

"Previously, inedible egg products that were not denatured could only be shipped within the United States under specific controls," Kennett said. "Exports were restricted to products that had been denatured."

Kennett said that the United States also "is required to approve control procedures established by foreign countries" so that the products cannot be used as human food.

"The revisions should promote trade and enable U.S. firms to compete more favorably in foreign markets," he said.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 50.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 98 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 50.50 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is fully steady and the live supply is moderate to short for a generally good demand. Weights slight. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,800,000, compared to 1,787,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were broadly lower in early trading today as blue-chip issues failed in an attempt to erase opening losses.

Auto, mining, aerospace, retail and drug stocks paced the losers on the New York Stock Exchange, while several energy and financial issues edged higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which skidded 44.47 points over the past three sessions, was off another 6.21 points, to 1,193.01, after two hours of trading today.

The measure trimmed an opening 5-point loss to less than a point after an hour of trading, but then retreated again.

Overall, losers led gainers by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index fell 0.37 to 93.90.

Big Board volume totaled 32.36 million shares at noon EDT, against 40.26 million at that hour Friday.

Stocks are under pressure from investor anxiety over the prospect of higher interest rates, spurred in part by another $1.4 billion increase in the basic money supply, which was reported late Friday, and the Treasury's offering of $15.75 billion of new debt scheduled for this week.

Oil stocks were active today, with Mobil up ¼ to 29½, Exxon up ¾ to 36½ and Texaco unchanged at 36.

Big Three Industries was off ¾ to 22½, the price at which a 449,200-share block traded.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.80 to 236.58.

NEW YORK (AP) — Saving money isn't just for those who must. Celebrities from model Cheryl Tiegs to race driver Jackie Stewart have their methods, too: from buying champagne by the case to squeezing the toothpaste tube dry.

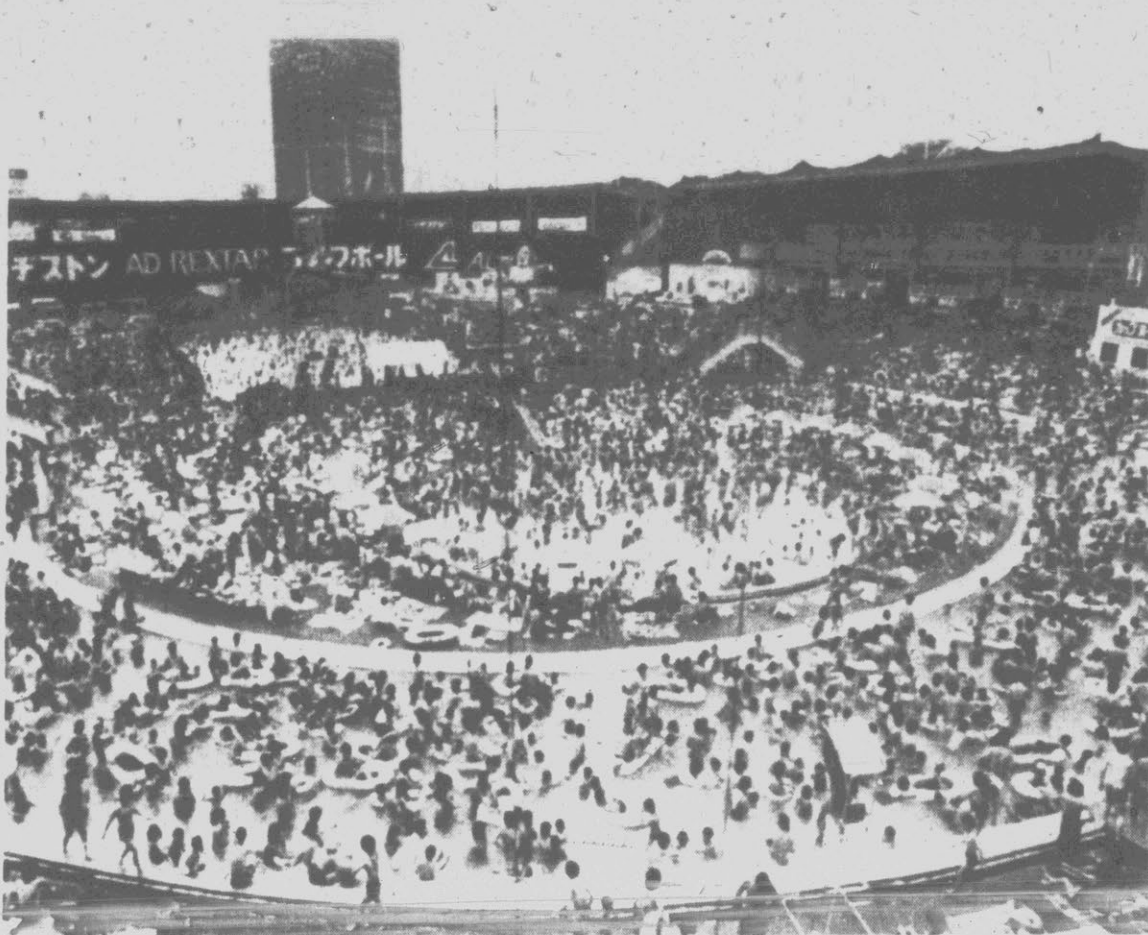

"I buy my champagne by the case," Ms. Tiegs told Money magazine in an August article on thrifty stars, "and when it's on sale I buy six cases at a time."

Said Stewart, now a TV sports commentator: "I never leave a tube of toothpaste unfinished."

Others interviewed had other ways. Jack Nicklaus uses pennies instead of dimes to mark his golf ball on the green. Columnist Ari Buchwald makes sure the lights are off in his swimming pool when he goes to bed.

Diane Sawyer, co-anchor of "CBS Morning News," said, "The most effective way I've found to save is to get up at 2 a.m. There are no afternoon shopping binges, no frivolous gifts for friends. It's draconian but it works."

Domestic Issues Facing Congress In Final Days

By CLIFF HAAS
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of battling over defense and foreign policy, Congress is taking up national health insurance for the unemployed and other domestic issues this week before adjourning for more than a month.

An extension of the federal revenue sharing program for local governments and measures to tighten controls over toxic wastes and to bail out the Railroad Retirement System also are on tap in the final week before the summer recess.

In addition, the House is due to act on a bill that would establish the third Monday in January as a national holiday to honor the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Debate is scheduled for this afternoon, but a vote may be delayed until Tuesday. Debate also is scheduled this afternoon in the House on legislation to help the faltering Railroad Retirement System, which has 1 million pensioners and has been running at a deficit in recent years.

The legislation would assure the solvency of the fund by increasing employee and employer contributions and reducing some benefits.

The Senate, meanwhile, will be trying to find its way out of a filibuster over the administration's so-called target price proposals, which would freeze grain price supports at this year's level for 1984 and 1985.

Agriculture Secretary John

Block considers the plan essential for reducing the $21.2 billion price tag for the federal farm program. He says the freeze — which will cost farmers $3.8 billion over three years in direct federal payments — is needed to make U.S. commodities competitive in international markets.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Block would meet with legislators this afternoon to try to end the stalemate.

Later this week, the House is set to vote on a three-year,

$4 billion program to provide health insurance for unemployed workers and their families.

Various versions of the plan have been endorsed by four congressional committees — two in the Democratic-controlled House and two in the Republican-controlled Senate — which is an indication of the strong bipartisan congressional support the measure has.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that as of February, 10.2 million jobless workers and their dependents lacked any form

Expect Depression Fail Become Storm

MIAMI (AP) — A depression that stopped just shy of becoming the 1983 Atlantic hurricane season's first tropical storm today was expected to slacken, the National Hurricane Center said.

"The depression remains poorly organized and little change is forecast for Monday," the center said today.

At 6 a.m. today, the "diffuse center" of the depression swirled 350 miles east of the Leeward Islands, which are located in the Caribbean south-southeast of Puerto Rico. The depression developed out of a weather disturbance that formed just off the African coast on Saturday.

The weather system was moving west-northwest at 17 mph and forecasters expected the movement to continue for the next 24 hours. The depression showed maximum sustained winds of 35 mph, with higher gusts in squalls.

A tropical depression is a weather system with cyclonic circulation around a low-pressure center. It has sustained winds of 38 mph or less. If this depression's winds reached 39 mph, it would be named Tropical Storm Alicia. At 74 mph, the system would become a hurricane.

Cases Are Bound Over

A Kinston man was convicted Friday of larceny in Pitt County Superior Court and was bound over for Superior Court on three other charges against him in connection with an alleged larceny and shooting at Carolina East Mall July 19.

According to Pitt County Clerk of Court records, Frederick Jones, 20, of Kinston was convicted of larceny of a running suit from Athletic World store at the mall and his lawyer appealed it to Superior Court. He was bound over to Superior Court on two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and with one count of shooting into an occupied vehicle.

No probable cause was found against William Eugene Hall, 19, also of Kinston, in one assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and a shooting into an occupied vehicle charge. He was, however, bound over to Superior Court on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the assault on Danny Hines.

The charges against Jones and Hall stem from an altercation just south of Carolina East Mall the afternoon of July 19 when mall security and store personnel were attempting to apprehend Jones following an alleged shoplifting in the Athletic World store there.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The launch schedule for the space shuttle Challenger's next mission remained unchanged even though the craft's transfer to the launch pad has been delayed by the threat of storms, officials said.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said Sunday the transfer has been postponed until 12:01 a.m. Tuesday because of "the high probability of thunderstorms with lightning" Sunday night and today.

The fully assembled shuttle — orbiter, external tank and rocket boosters — was to have rolled out of the Vehicle Assembly Building at Kennedy Space Center early today.

Baseball Honors Stars At Hall Induction

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Just as George Kell was closing out his career with Baltimore, the Orioles were breaking in another third baseman.

"You could tell he could field," Kell said of new player, who was Brooks Robinson. "Maybe he even showed me a few tricks with the glove."

Kell and Robinson, who were born and raised 60 miles apart in Arkansas, met up again Sunday in this tiny village when they were both inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, along with Juan Marichal and Walter Alston.

"This is a very emotional event for an old baseball player," Kell, 60, said in his acceptance speech. "It took me a long time to get here, but it was worth the wait."

"I'm in awe," he added. "I thought I belonged in the Hall of Fame, but when I walked around and saw all the names, I wasn't so sure."

The inductions increased the number of Hall members to 184, of which 148 are players — just seven of them third baseman.

Kell, who had a .306 lifetime average for 15 seasons — primarily with the Detroit Tigers — was passed over in the Hall's annual election by the Baseball Writers Association of America vote.

He was selected in March by the Committee on Veterans during his first year of eligibility in the second-chance procedure.

Kell, from Swifton, Ark., is now a Tigers announcer, where he teams with Hall of Famer Al Kaline on Detroit telecasts. As a Tiger, Kell rapped out 56 doubles in 1950 and no one has matched that total since.

Kell started his career in 1943 with the Philadelphia Athletics, then managed by Connie Mack, before ending his playing days with Baltimore.

And he got a warm welcome from the Orioles fans, although it was clear that they had come to see Robinson.

An overflow crowd of 12,000, more than double the average attendance for the ceremonies, was swelled by 40 busloads of fans from Baltimore.

Some of those fans staked out spots on the grounds seven hours before the proceedings began, and Hall officials erected a special set of bleachers, the first time that's been done, to accommodate the Orioles fans.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn hailed Robinson as "one of the most popular players in the history in the game," and the man who won 16 consecutive Gold Gloves was greeted by a sea of orange-and-black, the team's colors, when he took the podium.

"I realize I must be the luckiest man in the world," said Robinson, who spent his entire 23-year career with the Orioles. "Playing in the major leagues and being here at the Hall of Fame is more than any human being can ask for."

Robinson's acceptance speech was constantly halted by cheers and chants, and he smiled sheepishly at the warm reception.

"I share this day with my adopted hometown," Robinson, from Little Rock, said. "Baltimore, thank you very much, I love you."

His official Hall plaque said he: "Established modern standard of excellence for third baseman, setting major league records at his position for seasons (23), fielding percentage (.971)" and other marks.

He also batted .267 with 268 home runs and 1,357 runs batted in. Robinson was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1964, was MVP of the 1966 All-Star Game and was the 1970 World Series MVP when he shined as the Orioles overpowered the Cincinnati Reds.

The team had expected his election and made plans several years ago for the occasion by asking that the Orioles be scheduled to play in the 1983 Hall of Game, which they were to do this afternoon against the St. Louis Cardinals.

He also was picked for 18 straight All-Star teams. Now an Orioles announcer, the 46-year-old Robinson received the ninth-highest vote total when he was elected in January. He became just the 14th player to be elected on the first ballot since the original five players were selected to the Hall in 1936.

A total of 24 Hall of Fame members attended the ceremonies, including Joe DiMaggio, Bob Feller, Bill Terry and Sandy Koufax.

Marichal, remembered for his high kick, was the first player from the Dominican Republic to make the Hall and the first Latin to be chosen in the annual election.

He paid tribute to his home country by giving most of his speech in Spanish, a message that was televised live to the Dominican Republic by ESPN.

The right-hander, who was elected in his third year of eligibility, had a 243-142 record and a 2.89 earned run average in his 16 seasons, all but the last two with the San Francisco Giants.

"I'm very nervous today," said Marichal, 44, praised by Kuhn for his "fiercely competitive spirit."

Alston, 71, suffered a heart attack in April and was not able to attend. His grandson, Bob Ogle, accepted the award and said the manager's greatest thrill was guiding the Brooklyn Dodgers to their only World Series triumph ever in 1955.

Alston managed the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers for 23 seasons, winning seven pennants and four World Series.

Ironically, he never signed a contract for more than one year.

Also honored were long-time Chicago Cubs and White Sox announcer Jack Brickhouse, who received the Ford C. Frick Award for broadcasting, and Si Burick, a sportswriter with the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News for 57 years, for writing.

Cook Sinks Putt To Down Miller In Sudden-Death Of Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — In the end, it was steady John Cook dropping a 10-foot birdie putt on the sixth hole of a sudden-death playoff to subdue Johnny Miller for the title in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

But that was just one of the stories that unfolded Sunday in the dramatic wind-up of this national championship.

There was the drama of Miller himself, on the mend from gall bladder surgery and under doctor's orders not to play.

"I wasn't supposed to play this week. The doctors said not to, said it's too soon," Miller said.

There was Jack Nicklaus, who has won almost everything the game can offer — except this one. A five-time runner-up, he still hasn't won the Canadian Open. He came close again, missing the playoff by the margin of an 8-foot birdie putt that failed to fall on the final hole.

"How many times have I missed by one shot?" he asked, then answered his own question: "Too many."

There was Ralph Landrum, a club pro from Florence, Ky., the third-round leader, playing in his first tournament as a full-fledged member of the PGA Tour. Under pressure from some of the greatest names in the game, he refused to crack, shooting a closing round of 72 and finishing in a tie for fifth.

And, too, there was Andy Bean, who missed the playoff by the margin of a frivolous little tap-in putt with the wrong end of the putter. That occurred on Saturday. It cost him a 2-stroke penalty. Bean, grimly determined to atone for that lapse, matched the best round on the tour this year with a 9-under-par 62 in the final round.

That left him two shots out of the playoff — the precise margin of the Saturday penalty.

"I didn't know the rule," Bean said. "Now I do. It was a mistake. I paid for it."

Miller, who won the Inverrary Classic and lost a playoff in Phoenix earlier this season, and Cook each birdied the final hole of regulation play to beat Nicklaus by a stroke with 277 totals, seven under par on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Miller, who has played only seven rounds since May, had a closing 67. Cook shot 68, and got up and down from bunkers on the last three holes, the final time for birdie 4.

In the playoff, the first five holes were halved with pars. Cook twice lipping out 15-foot putts that would have ended it and Miller twice prolonging it with scrambling, one-putt efforts.

It ended on the 18th, the sixth extra hole, when Miller went for the green in two and pulled his second shot into the gallery. Cook, now a two-time winner in four years on the tour, hit his drive in a bunker, played out and put his third 10 feet below the cup on the water-guarded par-5.

Miller, with a difficult chip from a hillside, dumped his third in a bunker, then played out.

Torrez, Mets Hang On For 1-0 Win

By The Associated Press

Despite flirting with a no-hitter for the second time in three major-league outings, giving up one hit and striking out 11 New York Mets in nine innings, Jose DeLeon wasn't a winner and neither were the Pittsburgh Pirates.

DeLeon went 8 1-3 innings without giving up a hit Sunday, but Mets starter Mike Torrez, who allowed eight hits in 11 innings, also blanked the Pirates long enough for the Mets to win the game 1-0 in the 12th and give them a sweep of a doubleheader.

The first game also went 12 innings, with the Mets winning 7-6.

"That's baseball," said the seemingly unflappable DeLeon, a 22-year-old from the Dominican Republic who won his first two starts after joining the Pirates July 20, including 6 1-3 innings of no-hit ball against San Diego in his second outing.

In other NL games, it was Montreal 6, St. Louis 5; Philadelphia 5, Chicago 2; San Diego 5, Atlanta 2; Houston 9, Cincinnati 2 and Los Angeles 2, San Francisco 1 in the first game and San Francisco 8, Los Angeles 6 in the second.

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner lifted DeLeon for a pinch-hitter in the top of the 10th after Hubie Brooks broke up the no-hit bid with a single in the ninth.

"That was Chuck's decision, not mine," DeLeon said. "My arm wasn't tired. All my pitches were under control."

The Mets won the second game when Mookie Wilson raced home from second base on George Foster's fielder's choice grounder.

"I got the signal from the third base coach, (Bobby Valentine) as I came running into the base and I just kept going," said Wilson. "The play was behind me so I had to rely on him all the way and when Bobby said, 'Keep going' I went full steam."

"I didn't know Mookie was trying to score until the last second," said Pirates shortstop Dale Berra, who futilely threw the ball home.

Relief pitcher Jesse Orosco was credited with victories in each game to improve his record to 7-5 and lower his earned run average to 1.42. He pitched four scoreless innings in the opener and one in the second game.

In the opener, Bob Bailor's 12th-inning single off Jim Bibby, 3-10, snapped a four-game losing streak by the Mets and a five-game winning streak by the Pirates. Bibby loaded the bases on two singles and a walk to set up Bailor's game-winning, a line drive over a drawn-in infield.

Solo homers by Keith Hernandez and Foster, a fielder's choice RBI grounder by Bailor and a run-scoring single by Wilson keyed New York's four-run eighth inning that tied the score 6-6. Jason Thompson hit a grand slam homer in the first to help the Pirates take a 6-1 lead through six innings.

Dodgers 2-6, Giants 1-8

At San Francisco, the Giants and Los Angeles split a pitchers' duel and a slugfest.

Bob Brenly's two-run single highlighted a five-run eighth inning rally that lifted the Giants to victory in the second game before a sellout crowd of 53,178.

The Dodgers won the opener by scoring an unearned run on catcher Johnny Rabb's error in the ninth and getting a combined three-hitter from Burt Hooton, Tom Niedenfuer and Steve Howe.

Padres 5, Braves 2

At San Diego, Bobby Brown, in his first game since replacing the injured Steve Garvey, drove in two runs and scored three times against Atlanta.

Brown, called up Saturday night from Las Vegas of the Pacific Coast League, homered in the third to give the Padres a 1-0 lead and singled in the sixth for an insurance run.

The Padres also pulled off their first triple play since 1978 in the fourth inning. With runners on first and second, Glenn Hubbard popped up into short left field. Garry Templeton raced back to make the catch, fired to second base to get Chris Chambliss and second baseman Tim Lincecum's relay to first base easily nabbed Terry Harper for the third out.

Expos 6, Cardinals 5

At Montreal, Tim Wallach's one-out homer in the eighth inning gave the Expos their victory over St. Louis, which had rallied to tie the game with four runs in the top of the inning.

Wallach's 13th homer made a winner of Jeff Reardon, 5-4, who had helped allow the Cardinals to catch up.

Montreal starter Bill Gullickson gave up a run-scoring single to David Green before Reardon came in, and he was victimized by pinch-hitter Lonnie Smith's two-run single and a game-tying single by Ken Oberkfell.

Phillies 5, Cubs 2

At Philadelphia, Bo Diaz knocked in a run during the Phillies' four-run fourth inning and later homered one pitch after Chicago third baseman Ron Cey dropped his pop foul.

The Phillies led 2-1 after Mike Schmidt's sacrifice fly and Joe Lefebvre's triple in the fourth when Chicago shortstop Larry Bowa fielded Diaz's grounder and threw the ball away while Lefebvre scored. After an intentional walk, pitcher John Denny's suicide squeeze brought home the fourth run of the inning.

Denny won his 11th game in 16 decisions with seven innings of eight-hit pitching despite 96-degree heat.

Astros 9, Reds 2

At Houston, the Astros erupted for seven runs in the seventh inning to easily pull away from Cincinnati.

Phil Garner hit a two-run single and Jose Cruz followed with a two-run triple to highlight the big seventh. Omar Moreno, Ray Knight and Alan Ashby also had RBI hits in the inning.

Phil Niekro, 9-8, struck out nine and walked one en route to a seven-hit complete game, his sixth of the season.

Ferraro 'Shot In The Back' By Indians

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Ferraro, fired as manager of the Cleveland Indians, says he feels "like I was shot in the back."

Ferraro, whose team won just 40 of its 100 games and was firmly in last place in the American League East, was let go Sunday and replaced by Pat Corrales — the man fired less than two weeks earlier by the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I'm not going to say anything about Mike Ferraro," Indians President Gabe Paul said. "He's a fine young man and he handled it in a very professional manner. We just felt a change was advisable."

Ferraro, a former New York Yankees' coach, was hired last November to manage the Indians through 1984. Corrales, who had a guaranteed contract through 1984 with Philadelphia, will now manage Cleveland through that season, Paul said.

Philadelphia General Manager Paul Owens took Corrales' place as field manager on July 18, though Corrales had the Phillies in first place in the National League East.

Corrales, 42, said he was fired because he treated all his players equally.

"If I have to chew somebody out, I'll do it," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, no superstars on a club are above that. I don't think they could handle that in Philadelphia."

Corrales made no promise to make a contender out of the Indians, who were 19 games out of first when he took the reins.

"But I do think we can do some things right," he said. "We can win some games and make life miserable for some other ballclubs during the last two months."

Ferraro's firing ended a dramatic year which saw him earn his first major league managing job and then survive a battle with cancer.

He underwent surgery Feb. 9 to remove a cancerous left kidney, but still reported to spring training camp about two weeks later.

"I feel like I'm out in the gutter, out in the street,"

Ferraro said Sunday. "I've never been fired from any job. When you get in a position like this, you'd like to have somebody call you. I want to stay in baseball."

Ferraro was fired amid criticism of his handling of his pitching staff and a heavy media barrage on Paul and Indians General Manager Phil Seghi. The Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a recent editorial, called for the replacement of Paul and Seghi, and a radio station has been conducting a bumper-sticker campaign against the front office.

Paul said Corrales was first contacted about the job on Friday. The 38-year-old Ferraro learned of the move at 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

The Indians then went out and won Corrales' first game, outslugging the Toronto Blue Jays 16-11 as Toby Harrah went 5-for-5.

Ferraro had replaced Dave Garcia, who had managed the Indians to four straight sixth-place finishes since taking over from Jeff Torborg during the 1979 season.

"This has been an awfully tough season on me, ever since Feb. 9," said Ferraro, who returned to his home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He said he has a "pending" offer to work for the Indians in some capacity.

Paul said the move was made because "I didn't think a lot of the players were American League President Lee MacPhail made the only decision he could have made in the George Brett "Tar Wars" incident at Yankee Stadium a few days back.

The rules covering the situation have been reviewed many times in the media, and almost everyone with any interest in the outcome has seen them. Basically, the rule calls for the elimination of the bat from the game when the pine tar stretches too far up. The rulebook says that a player should be called out only when he doctors the bat so as to affect the flight or distance of the ball. And baseball manufacturers have stated that pine tar has no effect on either of those.

That, pure and simple, left MacPhail no choice, George Steinbrenner's opinion notwithstanding. He had to rule in favor of Kansas City, returning Brett's homer.

So Billy Martin's strategy backfired. Perhaps the time to have won his point was before Brett hit in that crucial situation — to try and unnerve him by literally taking the bat out of his hands.

While we're on the subject of baseball, a clipping reached us the other day that we'd like to pass on. John Hallow, former East Carolina baseball player, is now with the Spokane Indians of the Northwest League, a Class A organization.

Hallow, who signed with the Padre organization as a free agent and was assigned to Spokane, missed seven games with a wrist injury. But his return to the lineup was a sparkling one. On two consecutive nights, Hallow banged a double to drive in winning runs as the Indians downed the league-leading Medford A's.

Glad to see that one of our ex-Pirates is doing well in the professional ranks.

For those who are used to finding spring and summer between the end of the football season and the start of the next, "sprummer" didn't last long.

The USFL wound up its season just over a week ago, and Saturday, the NFL kicked off the new season with its first exhibition game.

High schools across the state begin their week of conditioning drills today, and put on the pads for the first time next Monday. They'll begin playing on August 29 or September 2 depending on the individual schedules.

College football practice won't be far behind, as East Carolina opens its 1983 season on September 3 at Florida State.

And before you know it, it'll be basketball season.

Stephenson Wins Women's Open

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jan Stephenson, to whom the U.S. Women's Open golf championship means "everything," had her wish come true.

The victory wagon shook, rattled and rolled, and in the end the wheels almost came off at the 31st U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

But the 32-year-old Australian managed to right herself Sunday and came away with what she described as the biggest victory of her celebrated career.

"I was choking. I was nervous. It would have been the most devastating thing to have lost it," she said after her final round 74 gave her a 290 total — 6-over-par — and a one shot victory over hard-charging JoAnne Carner and Patty Sheehan, the LPGA Classic champion who led after the first two rounds.

Carner, the Hall of Famer who nearly missed the cut after a disastrous 10-over-par 81 on opening day, fired a 3-under 68 on Sunday — the lowest round recorded on the unforgiving Cedar Ridge Country Club course — and came within a stroke of winning her third Open title.

But the championship, the $32,780 first prize and a call from President Ronald Reagan ultimately went to the nerve-wracked Stephenson, who said she has dreamed of winning the Open ever since she was a schoolgirl in Australia.

"I haven't really made a secret of how much it means to me ... and all that was probably an understatement," she said. "It means everything."

The prestigious title nearly slipped through Stephenson's fingers, the champion taking a double-bogey on the par-4 third hole, a wicked dogleg that requires near-perfect placement of the tee shot, and another on the 520-yard, par-5 fifth.

"I hooked the ball in the water on both holes," she said. "I got flustered because I was hooking, and I've been hitting so well all week."

The bogey on No. 5 put her just two shots ahead of Carner, but the 43-year-old tour veteran, who has won nearly $170,000 this year, never came closer.

"I just couldn't keep it going," said Carner, a cool weather player who struggled in Tulsa's 100-degree temperatures and stifling humidity. "That's the hardest tournament I ever played."

Stephenson redeemed herself with a birdie on the 12th hole and played defensive golf the rest of the way, accepting bogeys on the 17th and 18th holes when it was obvious her lead was secure.

"I was putting well in the pressure situations. That boosted my confidence. When I'm putting badly, I get worried," she said.

While Stephenson held her game together, two of her chief challengers could not.

Debbie Meisterlin, who had shot herself into contention with steady 72-73 rounds, blew to an 83 Sunday and finished at 301, 17 strokes over par.

"It was a nightmare," Meisterlin said. "I should have been lying out on the beach instead."

Amy Alcott, who fired a 71 Saturday and was four shots behind Stephenson heading into the final round, took a quadruple-bogey eight on the par-4 seventh hole — hitting twice into the trees — and recorded a 76.

That left the race to Stephenson, Carner and Sheehan. Sheehan shot even-par 142 through the first two rounds but had a 76 Saturday and a 73 Sunday.

Stephenson took her bogey on the final hole, a difficult, uphill par-4, and raced into the arms of her father, Frank, who has taught her since she was in grade school.

"He left the course when I hit in the water on No. 3," she said. "Mom said he wasn't feeling too well. But he made it back in time for the 18th."

Stephenson then went to the clubhouse, where she received a call from Reagan congratulating her on the victory.

"He said I'd provided him with an exciting afternoon. He thought JoAnne might catch me," she said.

Earnhardt Edges Waltrip For Talladega 500 Flag

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt averaged 170.611 mph to win the Talladega 500 and it took every bit of that for his first victory at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

He picked up $46,950 of the $373,110 purse by finishing less than half a car length ahead of Darrell Waltrip in the NASCAR Grand National race Sunday.

Tim Richmond's car, driven by Neil Bonnett was third. Richard Petty, Harry Gant and Geoff Bodine also were in the lead lap when Earnhardt, with help from Bobby Allison, outduelled Waltrip for the victory.

"Bobby helped me pass Darrell, and after I passed, Bobby went into the corner and sort of slowed him down a little," Earnhardt said. "I didn't see that he did anything wrong. He was following me."

Waltrip said he let Earnhardt get around him, "Because I figured I could get back around him. But then we ran up on a slower car, and it won the race for Dale. I'm thankful for that second place finish, though. Hopefully we gained some ground in the Winston Cup points chase."

He did gain ground, 37 points, on Allison, and would have gained more had Allison not helped Earnhardt. Allison now leads with 2,947 points to 2,782 for Waltrip, who for the past two years has come from behind — starting with this race — to defeat Allison in the standings.

"The last three or four laps were pretty exciting," I was sitting back there trying to decide when to make my move and wondering what Darrell was going to do.

"I was as intense and excited as I've been in the last few laps of a race in a long time."

As they entered the last lap, he said, "I was in the place I wanted to be, and Darrell probably wishes he was where I was."

Ten drivers swapped the lead 45 times before Earnhardt and Waltrip helped by quick pit stops, made it a two-car affair in the final stages.

Tigers 8-5, Royals 6-7 In Detroit, Alan Trammell hit a three-run double in the second inning and the Tigers went on to beat Kansas City in the first game of their doubleheader. Winner Dave Rozema, 8-1, worked the first five innings, giving up five runs on eight hits, before giving way to Aurelio Lopez.

Warren Wins In Wilson Race WILSON — Donnie Warren took the lead with three laps till the finished and went on to take the flag in the late model stock division Saturday night at the Wilson County Speedway.

Warren won the 25-lap race after drawing in the eighth position out of 15 cars. Joe McLawhorn and Don Warren own the 1976 Chevrolet Camara, which was built and maintained by the P. Stop on Pactolus.

Kell said that his friend, Hoot Evers, gave him advance warning of the new kid coming up in the Oriole organization.

"Some people thought he wouldn't hit well enough," Kell added, "but (manager) Paul Richards predicted he'd be a fine hitter. He was the toughest out I've ever seen."

Robinson said Kell a great influence, adding, "He never once said, 'Do this, do that.'"

Robinson said that as a kid, growing up in Little Rock, he followed the brilliant batting basketball coach at N.C. State; and No. 3, it's done on my time and without university personnel."

Valvano says he doesn't want people to think he is taking advantage of the NCAA championship to become wealthy.

"Yeah, I know what some people are thinking," Valvano said. "I'm sure some are saying, 'Look at that Italian SOB out there milking the NCAA trophy for every penny he can.'"

"OK, I know some people assume it's only happening now — after the NCAA," Valvano said. "But right or wrong, Jim Valvano was making a lot of money before."

How much money Jim Valvano is making isn't known. His base salary as a coach this year was $54,000, but his additional interests could push it as high as $400,000 to $500,000. Valvano won't discuss how much he makes in outside income.

he said, "but it was worth the wait. I am sure Aparicio, Reese, Rizzuto and other great defensive players will get recognition."

"When I look at a ball player, I have one criteria: Is he a winner?"

Robinson, Kell, Marichal and Alston were joined by two media veterans — Sports Editor Si Burick of the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News and broadcaster Jack Brickhouse of Chicago's TV station WGN, who received the Ford Frick Award.

There is an interesting corollary in the careers of Robinson and Kell, although of two different eras. Both are natives of Arkansas, played the same position, were teammates briefly and landed in the Hall of Fame on the same hazy Sunday afternoon as 12,000 wild baseball fans besieged this normally placid village of 2,500 at the foothills of the Catskills.

Robinson said that as a kid, growing up in Little Rock, he followed the brilliant batting

Valvano Into Business

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano knows all about being a recruiter, but when it comes to the world of business, he finds he is now the recruit.

Since N.C. State won the NCAA national basketball championship, Valvano has been in demand. Companies want him to endorse their products and to put their names on his basketball clinics. His snappy one-liners are wanted for radio and television shows, and he is a popular after-dinner speaker.

Valvano already has a corporation called JTV Enterprises, of which he is the director and sole stockholder. The money from his personal appearances, endorsements like Mountain Dew, Hardee's and Belk's, along with other business ventures pour into it.

But Valvano said the NCAA hasn't drastically changed his life in the business department.

"I can say categorically that there's not one thing I'm into now that I wasn't talking about before the NCAA's," Valvano said. "Hardee's, Mountain Dew, Belk's? All before. My radio show, the television show? Nothing's changed. The contracts are the same and I've asked for no more money or renegotiation from anyone."

Valvano has been promoting Mountain Dew, the soft drink, conducting parking lot clinics for Hardee's and helping to market his own line of signature sportswear at Belk's. The Mountain Dew people call Valvano the "Pied Piper of the Carolinas."

It keeps him pretty busy, but Valvano will still listen to new offers.

"Now, I'm not saying there won't be any new things in the future," Valvano said. "In fact, you will probably see me in more commercials and business ventures. But you can rest assured: No. 1, it didn't happen just because of the NCAA; No. 2, it'll benefit my job as

Robinson Hopes Defensive Stars Will Soon Join Baseball's Hall

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y.

(AP) — Induction into baseball's Hall of Fame was pure euphoria for Brooks Robinson, and the great third baseman of the Baltimore Orioles could not help wearing his emotions on his sleeve.

But a somber mood surfaced later when Robinson and two fellow honorees — George Kell and former San Francisco Giants pitcher Juan Marichal — enlarged on their heady experience at a press conference.

A fourth inductee, Walter Alston, manager of the Dodgers for 23 years, was unable to attend because of a recent heart attack.

"Now that I'm in the Hall of Fame, I feel I am the luckiest man in the world," Robinson said. "But I can't help thinking about all those deserving people who haven't made it."

"The commissioner (Bowie Kuhn) pointed out that in all of baseball history, only 148 players have gained the Hall of Fame. I had doubts that I would ever make it. I had begun to think of baseball as offensive oriented."

"Now that George and I (both third basemen) are in, I am getting positive vibes that defense is getting more appreciation. Maybe we will help open the door for Luis Aparicio, whom I think certainly should be in, as well as players such as Phil Rizzuto and Peeewe Reese."

Rizzuto and Reese, shortstop rivals in those dramatic New York Yankee-Brooklyn Dodger World Series of the late 1940s and 1950s, having failed to receive sufficient votes in the regular balloting of baseball writers, become eligible next year for consideration by the Veterans Committee.

Aparicio has long had strong support but failed to gain the necessary votes.

Kell, who himself was picked by the Veterans Committee, agreed with Robinson.

"I had to wait a long time,"

A Connie Chung Show Preview

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Connie Chung, the new anchor of the refurbished "NBC News At Sunrise," solicited any and all questions during a recent press get-together.

One inquisitive sort asked what her salary was. To make certain everybody in the back heard the question, Ms. Chung repeated it. "Somebody wanted to know what I'll be wearing on my first day to work."

Welcome to "The Connie Chung Show." Even without a drum roll and cymbal crash, it was a stand-up comedy act that Joan Rivers would envy.

On display was the witty, spunky personality NBC bought when it wooed Ms. Chung for a reported $425,000 from her local anchor chores at CBS' KNXT in Los Angeles.

Of course, NBC considers Ms. Chung a talented journalist. But, in today's television climate, journalism won't do it all. Just ask the sober Roger Mudd, who was dumped by the "NBC Nightly News" the same day Ms. Chung was frolicking with the media.

NBC wanted someone to create a new morning for "NBC News At Sunrise," which this very morning replaced "Early Today" on your program guide. The importance of "Sunrise" is that it leads in to the more important and more profitable "Today" show.

When that lead-in broadcast was "Early Today," with Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley, it wasn't different enough from "Today," with Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley. "We made a mistake having Jane and Bryant do that show," says Steve Friedman, executive producer of "Today." "It wasn't special."

It also wasn't doing well enough in the ratings against ABC's "World News This Morning." Friedman says an increase of 500,000 TV homes for "Sunrise" could mean double that for "Today," which used to be the pre-eminent breakfast broadcast and now is well behind ABC's "Good Morning America" and a shaky second to the "CBS Morning News."

In the past year, the three dawn newscasts — "Early Today," "ABC News This Morning," and the "CBS Early Morning News" — have attracted about 4 percent of the nation's 83.3 million TV homes. Friedman thinks the time period's audience potential could approach 10 percent, and he's putting the entire burden on Ms. Chung's slim shoulders.

"The research says the audience is there," Friedman says. "We are aggressively trying to get it with an entirely different show. It revolves around Connie. Her career will rise and fall on this show."

"This is a personality medium," says Gerry Solomon, executive producer of "Sunrise." "We'll have a spontaneous anchor who's a major talent."

Translation: If viewers recognize that all three networks offer comprehensive early morning newscasts, maybe they'll switch to "Sunrise" because perky Connie Chung is reading the news and having fun with her sidekicks: weatherman Joe Witte, sportscaster Bill Macatee and business insider Alan Abelson, editor of Barron's.

Ms. Chung is the only solo news act in the morning. She'll be competing against Steve Bell and Kathleen Sullivan on "ABC News This Morning" and Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer on the "CBS Early Morning News."

"I like sole anchors," says Friedman. "That's one reason why (Dan) Rather wins at night. He's the guy. Connie is our anchor. She'll interview Abelson, she'll point out to Macatee what she does or doesn't understand."

And when she finishes palling around with her three morning men at 7 a.m., her plan is to be available to report stories for "Today" and the "NBC Nightly News."

Ms. Chung, a former CBS News correspondent, says she accepted NBC's offer because it provided anchor work, news reporting and election coverage. Besides her weekday work, Ms. Chung will anchor Saturday's "NBC Nightly News."

"I felt if I didn't go out there and seize 1984, I would miss it like I did 1980 and 1976," she says. "This job will really make me suffer. And that's what I really want to do."

About 100 Caught By Power Outage

MAGGIE VALLEY, N.C. (AP) — A Haywood County power outage stranded about 100 amusement park visitors on a chair lift for 40 minutes Sunday and 13 were injured while unloading, officials said.

Steve Miklosi, a spokesman for Ghost Town in the Sky, said passengers were injured by the restraining bar when the chairs came to a halt.

At least two people were admitted to Haywood County Memorial Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. Both patients were listed in stable condition Sunday night.

Park officials used an auxiliary generator to operate the lift during the power failure. Miklosi said it took about 40 minutes to unload the passengers. Other park visitors were transported from the mountain by shuttle bus or tram, he said.

The incident occurred about 5:15 p.m., when most visitors were leaving the park, Miklosi said. The park closes at 6 p.m.

Maggie Valley, Lake Junaluska, Clyde and Canton were without electricity during the outage, according to officials at Carolina Power & Light Co.

The chair lift was closed for three days in August 1974 after 17 people were injured in an accident reportedly caused when one person began swinging a chair.

Say N.C. 'Great' For Film Locale

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Movie producers and state officials say North Carolina's varied scenery, low costs and a lack of red tape make it a great place to film on location.

Since the state opened its Film Office in 1980, 27 movies and hundreds of local, national and regional television segments have been filmed in North Carolina.

The films, boosting $255 million in revenues to the state, have included "Being There," filmed entirely at the Biltmore mansion and 10,000-acre estate in Asheville.

Last year part of Universal's $20 million Burt Reynolds film, "Stroker Ace," was filmed in Charlotte. And in May 1983, the $6 million adventure film "A Breed Apart," produced by the British company Hemdale, was shot in Shelby, Chimney Rock and Lake Lure.

Plan Private Rites For Actor Raymond Massey

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Raymond Massey, who has died at the age of 86, was a man of "enormous humor and courtesy" with a gift for making his characters come alive, recalled his son Daniel.

"Just look at his work as Abe Lincoln. It's an uncanny ability to get inside another person's mind and soul," the younger Massey said.

The actor's portrayals of the Civil War president led one critic to describe him as "the man who took Abraham Lincoln off the penny" and brought him alive for millions.

Massey, more recently known as Dr. Gillespie on the "Dr. Kildare" television series (1961-1965), died Friday at 8:30 p.m. at Cedars Sinai Medical Center. The death was due to complications from a month-long bout with pneumonia, said another son, Geoffrey Massey.

Funeral services were to be private.

The craggy-faced actor appeared in more than 70 movies and 80 stage productions, with starring roles in 11 Broadway shows. He retired a decade ago, but had just completed filming an autobiographical television program to be shown in his native Canada.

Among his films were "The Prisoner of Zenda," with David Niven, who died Friday, "Arsenic and Old Lace," "East of Eden," "Seven Angry Men" and "The Naked and the Dead."

Massey, who directed or produced many of his stage productions, played Lincoln in Robert Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway play, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" for two years, then took the show on national tour.

The 6-foot-2 actor later portrayed the president in three movies, describing the role as "overwhelming."

Raymond Hart Massey was born on Aug. 30, 1896, in Toronto. He was the grandson of the founder of the Massey farm machinery empire and the brother of the late Vincent Massey, Canada's first Canadian-born governor general.

Massey won his first professional acting role in 1922, a bit part in a London production of Eugene O'Neill's "In the Zone." He turned to movies in 1931 as Sherlock Holmes in "The Speckled Band," and in World War II continued acting while serving as a major in the Canadian Army. He became a U.S. citizen in 1944 and starred in 11 Broadway plays.

As an author he wrote a play, "The Hanging Judge" (1952), an autobiography, "When I Was Young" (1976), and another book, "A Hundred Different Lives" (1979).

Married three times — most recently to Dorothy Ludington in 1939 — he is survived by his sons Geoffrey of Vancouver, British Columbia, and Daniel of London, and a daughter, Anna, also of London. Daniel and Anna both are actors. Miss Ludington died in 1982.

Teen Pageant Is Set August 30

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The first annual "Miss Teen USA" pageant will be televised Aug. 30 with CBS presenting 51 beautiful teenage girls — ages 14 to 17 — competing for prizes from Lakeland, Fla.

The young beauty contestants, representing the 50 states and the District of Columbia, will compete for a year-long series of personal appearances in this country and abroad.

The competitors for the title of "Miss Teen USA" will be judged in three categories: personality, evening gowns and swimsuits. The contestants also will perform in production numbers.

Drama On Washington

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — George Washington will receive his due in a CBS-TV eight-hour miniseries dramatizing the little-known early life of America's first president.

Barry Bostwick will star in the title role of "George Washington," to be telecast during the 1983-84 season.

The series will cover Washington's life from ages 11-50, beginning just after Washington's father's death in 1743 and taking him through his journeyman days as a young surveyor, the French and Indian War and his leadership of the American army in the Revolutionary War.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — VAMPIRE'S MOST FAVORITE VACATION SPOT FOR FUN IN THE SUN: THE CAPE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals L.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦9852 ♦KJ106 ♦6 ♦K1087
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—It is a close decision. Even though your side has at least 26 points combined, the fact that you have a singleton in partner's suit means that you might not have a ready source of tricks. However, you possess a lot of intermediate cards, and that is just enough to swing things in favor of bidding three no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦83 ♦Q10652 ♦J92 ♦843
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to pass, you have little regard for money—overtricks vulnerable are worth 200 apiece! You can't guarantee that your side can defeat one heart. Also, you can't bid one no trump—that is a forward-going action. Partner has asked you to bid your longest suit, so oblige by bidding two clubs.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦J7 ♥KJ872 ♦K7 ♦J873
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your double fit makes your hand worth more than it counts, but even so, game is doubtful. When not vulnerable, it is usually correct to be cautious; vulnerable, the rewards for closing out the rubber are so great that it pays to be adventurous. At this vulnerability, pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AKQ10953 ♥7 ♦A72 ♦95
What is your opening bid?
A.—We know many players who would open four spades with this holding. That is a preemptive bid, but the person you are most likely preempting out of the auction is your partner. It is bad tactics to open preemptively on a hand that contains two aces, because it is very difficult for partner to judge what to do. Open one spade.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦7 ♥953 ♦Q1073 ♦KQ952
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
3 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is time for vigorous action. What has happened to the spade suit, and where is all the strength? It is obvious that West is waiting to get into the act, so you should make it as difficult for him as you can. Jump to five diamonds. On a good day West might think that you are strong and that his partner is broke, and so take no action at all.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦K7 ♥AKQ93 ♦AQ8 ♦KJ6
What is your opening bid?
A.—With 22 points and a balanced hand, your natural opening bid is two no trump, so why not make it? The fact that you have a five-card major suit should not stop you. Don't open two hearts—you are about a king shy for that action.

Pirates' Paradise

Today is Independence Day in Jamaica, marking the anniversary of that nation's decision to become a separate state in 1962. Though still a member of the British Commonwealth, Jamaica was originally a Spanish holding. Columbus discovered the island that he called St. Jago in 1494, and it remained under Spanish rule until 1655 when Britain acquired the territory. However, for many years pirates, and not the British, maintained the firmest control over Jamaica. The old capital of the island—Port Royal—was a headquarters for buccaneers, and Jamaica quickly became one of the most prosperous lands in the New World. Then, in 1692, an earthquake struck the island, and Port Royal vanished into the sea.

DO YOU KNOW—Who is the current Prime Minister of Jamaica?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER—Roberto Clemente was the first Latin American-born player elected to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Smash-And-Grab Gangs Hit California Drivers

JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

The arrests of a 12-year-old boy and four other people have cut down on a rash of highway robberies in which thieves smashed the windows of passing cars, grabbed purses and fled into a nearby housing complex.

But the arrests, which were made after police staked out the highway and photographed a team of thieves working in morning rush-hour traffic, haven't eliminated the problem, police say.

There have been several "smash-and-grab" thefts since the arrests, and police say one reason is that there is money to be made through robbery on the Imperial Highway, a major thoroughfare leading to Los Angeles International Airport.

"Well-to-do and middle class people have to drive out to the airport area," said police Sgt. Jeff Bertrand. "The major space industry is off Imperial Highway in El Segundo and out by the airport, and it's the handiest route to take."

"Here's a highway that is well-maintained," he said. "It looks like no problem at all, so people drive through and they get ripped off."

Recently, they were getting ripped off at the rate of up to 15 a day, according to police.

The scenario had become all too familiar to police: A woman heading to the airport along the highway drives past the Nickerson Gardens Housing Project, a neat and landscaped complex of one- and two-story buildings 10 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

She sees a teen-age boy crossing the street slowly, and brakes to a halt. Suddenly another youth dashes out and heaves a wrench through her passenger window, snatches her purse off the seat and disappears into the housing complex.

Some women have suffered broken ribs from the hurled wrenches.

"This crime could be done on any corner in any large city in the United States," Bertrand said. "It's just that the escape route there and the fact that Imperial Highway is right there, everything combined makes it an easy crime to commit and to escape."

The Nickerson Gardens Housing Project, housing about 3,000 people, has been beset by crime since it opened in 1956.

"I don't want anyone to feel that the project is totally occupied by tenants or anyone where every one of them is involved in a crime," said John Walton, acting security administrator for the Los Angeles Housing Authority. "We've got many many good tenants in the projects. They're not happy with some of the things that are going on themselves."

The project has been the scene of numerous shootings and robberies, including the slaying of a sheriff's deputy, Bertrand said, and officials say the problems are fueled by gang and drug problems.

The smash-and-grab technique, "has been used before but not to the extent that it's used out there," said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Jim Platis.

Last month, authorities

leafleted the area to warn women to keep their purses out of sight, since the robbers look inside the cars before smashing the windows.

Then police, aided by a photographer, staked out the area. Two 18-year-olds and three juveniles, including a 12-year-old who served as a decoy to halt traffic were arrested after a 47-year-old cleaning woman on her way to work was robbed at about 7 a.m. June 23.

"I watched it occur. We all did," Bertrand said. "It was terrible to watch it happen. You go, My God, it's going on right in front of us. We have quite a few photographs of this incident while it was occurring."

The woman's possessions were quickly recovered, and she escaped injury. Four of the five youths lived in the housing project, the sergeant said. None has come to trial.

"We've had I think three or four since the arrests in the same area," he said, "but there's no pattern as far as times."

One victim since the arrests was a 28-year-old woman with a business appointment in nearby Inglewood, Bertrand said. "She knew about Imperial Highway, she just didn't put two and two together. She thought it won't happen to me, and it does."

The woman had her windows rolled down because of the heat, and the robbers simply grabbed her purse.

Police are working with city officials to install a decorative fence that would cut off the easiest escape route. Eventually the area will be bypassed by the Century Freeway, now under construction.

But even if authorities stop the smash-and-grab robberies, Walton said, gang members and teen-agers involved in drugs are unlikely to give up on crime.

"If they stop doing that, who's to know what else they're going to start doing?" he said.

Just Pucker Up And Blow

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy has found that the secret to making a good spit is a lot like whistling — you just have to pucker up and blow.

That's the tactic Maurice King of Akron, Ohio used to emerge the victor in the watermelon seed spitting contest held over the weekend at Ritter Park.

"I knew I would win. I just pucker up my lips and spit the seeds as far as I could," said Maurice, whose pucker popped a seed a whopping 14 feet, 6 inches.

Tammy Canada, 13, of Huntington says her strategy was to give a big blow and just hope. Her seed traveled 14 feet to win second place.

Winning the "Best Technique" category was 4-year-old Kristie Walker, also of Huntington. She rejected the pucker and blew for a more stylish roll off the tongue.

Many N.C. Counties Interested In New Sales Tax

By The Associated Press
More than a third of the state's 100 counties have shown interest in implementing the new half-cent sales tax provided by the Legislature and 70 may approve it by June 30, the N.C. Association of County Commissioners says.

"Everyone's going to get some money, so I can't see why it would be disadvantageous to levy it," said David M. Lawrence, an assistant director of the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Edmund P. Regan, a fiscal analyst for the association said as many as 90 counties may adopt the sales tax option the start of the next fiscal year.

Under the bill enacted July 21, commissioners may raise the local sales tax after a countywide referendum or a public hearing followed by a commissioners vote. Oct. 1 is the earliest date for implementing the tax for counties scheduling hearings in August.

"I'm sure we will implement the tax because I think everyone should be 100 percent in favor of it...We have been waiting for this," said Sherwood Eason, a Gates County official.

Counties that have scheduled public hearings include Franklin, Granville, Onslow, Wake and Sampson. Several other counties said they would open discussions on the tax in meetings today.

All North Carolina counties, except Burke, already have a one-cent sales tax that is added to the three-cents state tax.

The association has compiled revenue estimates for 38 counties interested in adopting the sales tax by Oct. 1. Those counties are Bertie, Bladen, Buncombe, Camden, Carteret, Catawba, Chatham, Craven, Cumberland, Davie, Forsyth, Franklin, Graham, Granville, Greene, Harnett, Haywood, Hoke, Lee, Macon, McDowell, Mitchell, Montgomery, New Hanover, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Pender, Person, Richmond, Rutherford, Sampson, Stanly, Surry, Union, Wake, Warren and Wilson.

Regan said if those counties implement the tax by Oct. 1, they can take home $34.9 million to use by June 30.

The tax money will be disbursed according to a county's population, rather than whether the money was collected within its borders.

Money would be funneled to county and municipal governments, with 40 percent of municipal revenues going to sewer and water projects in the first five years. Counties must spend 40 percent on schools, including construction, renovation and loan payments.

Several county officials said they hoped sales tax revenues would soften the impact of losing revenue-sharing funds because of federal budget cuts.

"That (tax) is a right good boost, and it will help us out a lot," said Wilson W. Snowden, a Currituck County official.

Out To Sea

LONDON (AP) — A gigantic wave swept 12 people out to sea off Ireland's west coast and half of them managed to struggle ashore or were rescued, police said Sunday.

They said one man drowned and five were feared missing in the accident. Three of the victims were brothers.

Generic Line In Clothing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What do you get when you cross Japanese styles with the one-size-fits-most packaging of pantyhose manufacturers?

Designer Leon Max is going to find out, with a generic clothing line he hopes will change the way many women buy clothes.

The line goes on sale this month at stores including branches of Bullock's, Bonwit Teller and Neiman-Marcus.

"Women today are very busy," explains Max, 31, noting that the clothing is aimed at the lunch-hour shopper who's in a hurry. "It's as simple as buying pantyhose," he says.

The garments are packed in slim boxes, about an inch-deep and the width and length of record album covers. Buyers can try on samples of each garment or simply select the right piece from sketches on the box, which show the style and color. The boxes hang on racks.

The garments are made of non-wrinkle polyester-cotton.

"If a young, fashionable girl wears this and accessorizes, she looks Japanese," said Max. "If an older woman wears it, she looks comfortable."

'Too Easy' For Booze-Buyer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 17-year-old Charlotte girl who took part in an undercover police investigation says it was too easy for her to buy liquor at some restaurants.

Latisa Dorman, a Raleigh high school student who is 5-feet, 2-inches tall and weighs 112 pounds, spent six days in June and July working as an agent for the Alcohol Law Enforcement Division. She went to 90 restaurants, lounges and private clubs, and was able to buy alcoholic beverages in 65 of the establishments without being asked her age or for identification.

"They didn't take the time to even notice my age," said Miss Dorman. "A lot of places were just crowded, and they just didn't take the time."

The minimum legal age for drinking liquor is 21 in North Carolina. The age for beer and wine is 18, but that rises to 19 on Oct. 1.

Police charged 77 employees of the businesses with selling mixed drinks, beer or wine to her.

Opines Unions Down, Not Out

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Labor unions are down but not out in North Carolina as a result of the recession, the president of the state's largest union says.

"There's a growing force that thinks now is the time to really try to do a number on unions," said R.V. Durham, president of Teamsters Local 391 of Greensboro. "That's a thinking that's going to backfire on a number of industries."

The recession has made workers in North Carolina, already one of the nation's least unionized states, even less inclined to organize.

Teamsters Local 391 has seen its dues-paying membership drop from more than 11,000 in 1979 to about 8,900 today, Durham said.

But Local 391 hasn't suffered harsh financial setbacks to accompany its organizing and job losses. One reason for financial health is the Teamsters' nearly 2,000 well-paid members in relatively stable jobs at Miller Brewing Co. in Eden and the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. in Winston-Salem.
