Much Of Tobacco Seen Purchased By Stabilization

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Prices that brought only a few cents above support levels and fell below 1982 opening day figures in some cases resulted in long faces and disappointment today as initial sales began on the Greenville Tobacco Market.

Although some of the better offerings sold for $168 to $170 per hundred pounds at one warehouse this morning, observers quickly noted that much of the leaf was purchased by Flue-Cured Cooperative Stabilization Corp., which administers the support program. In most cases, even the higher quotes were at or just above the designated support price.

Early activity today appeared to resemble initial results from 1982 although some felt the opening piles today represented a better break of tobacco than last year. Buying companies were taking occasional piles, with Stabilization and warehouses making up the bulk of purchases.

The first two rows of tobacco today at one warehouse contained mostly primings and brought quotes ranging from $132 per hundred pounds up to $168 for leaf that was considered just above the first primers.

Last year, the opening row at a local warehouse bought quotes ranging from $132 up to $185 per hundred pounds.

John Cryus, tobacco affairs specialist with the state Department of Agriculture, said the opening rows contained some tobacco that he termed "sunbaked and sunburned" as a result of the period of extreme hot, dry weather in July. Cryus said that some of the young tobacco that was affected by the dry spell cooked on the stalk before it matured while older tobacco "held up fairly well."

The spokesman said several more days of 100-degree weather "could have been disastrous to the crop" and would have resulted in more of the sunbaked offerings.

Bill Cleve, who farms in the Vanceboro area, had about 14,000 pounds of tobacco on the floor in Greenville today, including some on the first few rows. Cleve said he was "very disappointed" with his early sales, noting that most of his leaf went "mighty cheap. Cheaper than last year."

Cleve said prices on his first pullings were generally about 10 cents per pound below last year's levels. "I can't raise it for the price it is now," he said. "There is not enough up-stalk tobacco to sell to make up the difference in the price."

Carl Lamb of the Macclesfield area also expressed disappointment in the early sales. Lamb, who said he had some tobacco scheduled for later sales today, said farmers in his area have what he feels is "one of the best crops of leaf in the field in a long time. A little rain is needed to finish it off and we'll have a good, number-one crop of tobacco."

Cyrus said initial sales today were "just about what I anticipated," with quality of offerings apparently varying slightly from warehouse to warehouse. He said that some floors had a little more leaf from higher up the stalk and consequently brought better prices.

He said Stabilization was taking 15 percent to 20 percent of the early piles and he recalled that Tuesday's Border Belt opener saw about 20 percent to 25 percent go under loan. Mentioning that the Eastern Belt finished the first day in 1982 with 39 percent going to Stabilization, Cyrus said he would be "awfully disappointed" if today's overall figure is that high. "There really is no reason for that much tobacco to go under loan," he said, in view of the quality of leaf available.

Cyrus said that while steps have been taken to "get our tobacco program back on track," the freeze on price supports came too late to be of much significance this year. He said it will take "many steps to get it turned around" but a "turning point has been made in the right direction."

State Rep. Ed N. Warren from Greenville suggested following the opening sales that "not many farmers can survive on today's prices." Warren said that while tobacco is getting more attention from the farmers, their efforts to floor clean, quality leaf is "not reflected in prices today."

"It's the same old thing," said State Sen. Vernon White from Winterville, pointing to the high volume of tobacco going under loan and sporadic participation by the buying companies.

School Bd. Asks For Sales Tax

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education has requested that the County Commissioners approve the local option sales tax recently OK'd by the North Carolina General Assembly.

Revenues from the sales tax are earmarked for local boards of education across the state.

A resolution urging the implementation of the one-half cent tax in Pitt County said the county "schools have building and construction needs in excess of $20 million ... many of the older facilities of the school system are in need of renovation and repair ... students enrolled in Pitt County schools deserve quality education delivered in quality facilities; ... therefore the Pitt County Board of Education requests the Pitt County Commissioners to approve the local optional one-half cent sales tax which would be allocated to local boards of education to improve public school facilities."

School Superintendent Eddie West estimated that, in one year, the county's share of the tax revenue would top $300,000.

The board also approved new official county policies on facilities expansion, public relations, organizational relations and relations with other agencies.

The facility expansion policy appoints an official county architect, calls for an existing facility inventory and sets up specifications for the naming of new facilities, site selection and community use of facilities.

The public relations policy mandates each school to "provide a planned program of information to inform constituents of on-going school activities and needs." In addition, the policy says the superintendent and local principals will provide orientation for new residents of Pitt County.

The organizational and agencies relations policies mandate that Pitt County schools maintain close and active working associations with other non-educational agencies and "keep them informed to the extent necessary and desired for good communication."

No referral to an agency may be made without the approval of the school system Administrative Placement Committee according to policy.

Also approved as part of the county's Student Handbook were examination and student conduct and behavior policies. The exam policy exempts the following students from second-semester exams: seniors with "A" averages and eight absences; juniors, sophomores and freshmen with "A" averages and four absences; seniors with "B" averages and six absences; juniors, sophomores and freshmen with "B" averages and three absences; seniors with "C" averages and four absences; juniors, sophomores and freshmen with "C" averages and two absences.

Deny Private Hospital A 'Certificate Of Need'

A certificate of need requested by Charter Medical Inc. for a private 65-bed private psychiatric hospital in Greenville — Charter Pines — has been denied by the state.

The Certificate of Needs Section of the Department of Human Resources' Division of Facility Services, notified the Macon, Ga., firm by letter July 28 that "this agency has determined that the ... proposal does not conform to applicable plans, standards and criteria."

Earlier this year, the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, following a series of hearings, recommended that Charter Medical's application for a certificate of need be disapproved.

Charter Medical may appeal the state's decision by requesting a reconsideration hearing or a contested case hearing within 30 days.

In an attachment to the letter to James Beck, manager of health facilities development for Charter Medical, the certificate of needs section said the Charter Pines proposal was "inconsistent" with the "cost effective, providing health care services to the medically underserved, and treatment settings," provisions of the state medical facilities plan.

The attachment also said Charter Medical "has not demonstrated that the proposal is the most effective alternative for providing the services," and that the proposal would develop services "at a level greater than that identified as needed."

In a summary of the staff analysis of the application, the certificate of needs section said that the Charter Medical proposal "would substantially duplicate similar services," that "the project in its entirety is not cost effective," that "unnecessary services would be excessive and inflationary," and that "the proponent did not demonstrate that there was adequate support for or interest in the development of the proposed project from area

A Cold July

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — While much of western Europe is suffering through a heat wave, Iceland lived up to its name by experiencing its coldest July since 1887.

Steady rain and an average temperature of 47 degrees Fahrenheit prompted many Icelanders to vacation in Spain, Italy, Portugal and other warmer locales.

Libyan Planes Bombing Northern Chad Forces

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP)

The government today claimed Libyan planes are dumping fragmentation and phosphorus bombs on northern Chad to rout President Hissene Habre's forces, and Pentagon sources said U.S. advisers have been sent to help his embattled army.

Government officials in the capital said Libyan MiGs and Tupolev aircraft have continuously dropped the highly destructive bombs on Faya-Largeau, a northern oasis town that Habre's forces recaptured from the Libyan-backed rebels of former President Goukouni Oueddei last week.

A French physician working in an N'Djamena hospital told reporters Tuesday that he had treated several people wounded in Faya-Largeau by the phosphorus bombs, which release tremendous amounts of heat. Fragmentation bombs are anti-personnel weapons that hurl shrapnel over a wide area.

"Phosphorus burns are easy to recognize and the use of those bombs is truly horrible," said the doctor, who asked to remain anonymous.

Libya has repeatedly denied any intention of intervening in the latest phase of Chad's 18-year civil war, and has denied that it has been bombing Faya-Largeau.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said today the Reagan administration has sent four military advisers to Habre's forces to show them how to fire U.S.-supplied Redeye shoulder-fired, heat-seeking anti-aircraft missiles. The sources said the training will continue for "a few days."

The Redeye missiles are part of a $10 million military aid package promised to Habre's forces.

The Reagan administration has accused Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi of aiding Chadian rebels to extend Libya's influence through central Africa. Khadafi has accused Washington of backing Habre for the same reason.

Chad's Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat today "categorically denied" rebel claims they had retaken Faya-Largeau. He said Tuesday that Habre's forces were driving Oueddei's rebels toward the small oasis of Kirdimi, 55 miles north of Faya-Largeau.

He said large parts of the oasis were destroyed by Libyan bombs, and that casualties were heavy among the 10,000 residents and the combatants. It was impossible to verify the reports because journalists were not permitted to travel to Faya-Largeau.

An N'Djamena government broadcast today said that three high-ranking aides to Goukouni had been killed near Faya-Largeau and 10 others captured. The broadcast gave no details.

The Libyan news agency JANA, in a report from Tripoli, claimed Habre was killed in action near Faya-Largeau. Habre has been personally leading the anti-rebel drive.

Reporter Describes Her Struggle With Anorexia

By CYNTHIA J. CAMPBELL

The Arizona Republic
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) —
Death is my constant companion.

Slowly, day by day, I am killing myself, and although overwhelmed by fear, I seem to be powerless against a demon within.

I have anorexia nervosa and bulimia, eating disorders that can be fatal. At times I starve myself. Other times I gorge myself with food, then purge my body of its life-giving nutrients.

I am being treated for these disorders, but so far with little success.

God, how I hate myself for what I have become.

I want to live, to let life fulfill its many promises, but this problem I have — these illnesses I know can be fatal — have taken over. They seem more powerful than my fear, stronger than my desire for life.

This story is difficult to write, for I am ashamed of what I have become. My family is unaware of my problem. I have avoided developing friendships with my co-workers for fear they would discover my embarrassing secret.

I have read a lot on anorexia and bulimia, but I have found nothing that really tells how its victims feel — nothing that describes the suffering we endure.

Perhaps, by telling my story, I can help other anorectic and bulimic women, if only to let them know that others suffer as they do.

My problems began when I was 15. I was about seven pounds overweight — tipping the scales at about 125 — so I decided to take off a few pounds.

I went crazy. Eventually I weighed 94 pounds and I was hospitalized. The doctors told my parents if I didn't snap out of it, I would die. They didn't seem to understand what was wrong with me; they didn't understand me.

When I was 19 I snapped out of it. I really don't know why. I woke up one day and told myself it really didn't matter if I was thin. I was sick of hospitals and would do anything to get out.

I gained weight and eventually got up to 137 pounds.

This didn't bother me until I learned my boyfriend was seeing other girls. I decided never to see him again — to make make him sorry he lost me.

I went on a diet and again got carried away.

After losing some weight my boyfriend wanted me back, and this confirmed my belief that if you are thin,

FIRST PERSON... Cynthia J. nervoa and bulimia. (AP Laserphoto) Campbell is afflicted with anorexia you are accepted.

We moved in with each other, and that led to my becoming bulimic.

At mealtime he would pester me to eat more. Other people also reproved me about my tiny appetite. But I was afraid to eat, afraid if I gained a pound my boyfriend would leave me.

To understand my fear, one should know that my boyfriend has a terrific body. He loathes fat people and can't understand why anyone has to be fat, or have an eating problem.

I began eating normal portions of food when I ate with him or others, then would go to the bathroom and purge myself.

Suffering from both anorexia and bulimia, I became more depressed. I started eating more and more, always making myself throw up. Before long I was binging and purging every day. I hated myself.

This binging and purging, my love affair with the toilet, continues today.

I can't stand to be alone. When there is no one else around I become full of anxiety. I feel I am going to go crazy because I can't stand myself and what I have become.

I'm also afraid of being with other people. I dread the thought of anyone discovering the hell in which I live. This terror of discovery compounds my loneliness. I even block out my family.

My grandparents, who raised me, died within a year of each other. The blow was crushing. The one thing they had asked me to do to make them happy was to come and visit them. I refused, I couldn't because I was too afraid they would discover my secret, that they would abandon me.

They had given me everything, but I refused them the one thing that would have brought them some happiness.

I can't describe the guilt I feel, how I loathe myself. They were the only ones in my life I could really depend on, and now they are gone. I feel so empty inside. I think about them every day, and I cry.

My twin brother and his wife love me very much, and every time I talk with them they ask me to come to Michigan for a visit. They have even offered to pay the airfare, and although I truly miss them, I always make excuses.

I am afraid I would not be able to control myself, that I would binge and my brother would find out and not love me anymore.

Living in the West, in Arizona, means we have a lot of winter visitors. I dread these visits. I want the company desperately, but I am petrified they will discover my secret. When they leave I hate myself and wish I could die. I am sorry I couldn't display the love I feel for them.

For five years I lived with this illness, sharing my secret with no one. Finally I decided to confide in my boyfriend. The burden was getting too heavy to bear alone.

Although I was afraid he would reject me, I decided to take a chance, hoping he would support me. I feel he is having difficulty understanding my problem, but we have managed to maintain our relationship.

Recently, I revealed my problem to a close friend and to my employer.

I have constantly sought help from psychologists and psychiatrists, but I could find no one who understood me.

About a year ago I found a psychologist who deals with bulimia and anorexia. I began attending a group with four other women — all attractive college graduates and successful in their fields — and all suffering as I am.

All hated themselves, all felt they could do nothing right. All believed they had to be thin to be liked. This was the first time I felt support. I can't explain the relief when I realized I wasn't the only one with this disgusting problem.

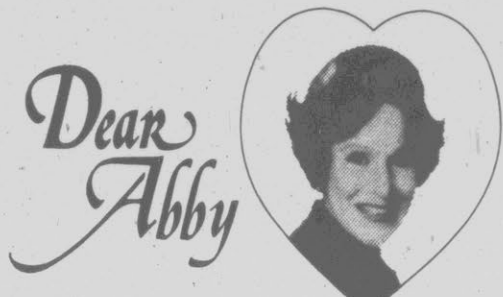

I looked forward to the weekly three-hour session. I started on the road to recovery. I gained 10 pounds.

Many, many times I wanted to stop eating, to lose the pounds I was putting on. I went through periods of deep depression. The demon inside kept saying "You're getting fat! Stop it or no one will like you. Your boyfriend will leave you."

Over and over again I would force myself to deny my urge to stop eating. I would tell myself, "You are too thin. You look like a skeleton. No man can love you because you have no shape. You have no appeal, you must gain."

Then the group sessions ended, and the psychologist didn't have time to begin another group. I continued to see the psychologist, but it wasn't the same. She had never had my problem and couldn't relate to my feelings. I became depressed again. My old habits returned.

I am so lonely and afraid. How long can I continue with this?

Should Wife End Changes?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For four years now I've been desperately trying to please my husband. I've had long hair, short hair, blond hair, dark hair, lost weight, gained weight — you name it. He's never satisfied.

It's not just my personal appearance. I always seem to have the wrong dinner ready, the wrong clothes picked out for him, etc.

I'm basically an insecure person and, needless to say, I don't need this kind of pressure. I've talked to him about it and he says, "Oh, don't worry about it. I love you."

My question is, how can he possibly "love" someone who apparently doesn't make him happy? And why did he marry me?

ERROR

DEAR ERROR: These are questions you should ask your husband. My question to you is: Why are you putting up with someone who apparently isn't making you happy? Complaining to me will not improve your marriage. Counseling — for both of you — might. And a course in self-assertiveness might build your self-esteem and give you the security and confidence you need to demand respect and appreciation.

Please take these suggestions seriously and let me hear from you again.

DEAR READERS: If you don't have a bladder control problem, you're lucky. But if you are among the estimated 10 million Americans (or Canadians) who are incontinent to an annoying degree — or know someone who is — read on:

When you sneeze, cough or laugh, do you feel a wetness on your clothing?

When you come home, do you find that you can't get your key in the door fast enough to make it to the bathroom in time?

What can a man wear after a prostate operation for the days (or weeks) he has a little "dribbling"?

These are the kinds of questions and concerns that have brought a few men and women together to form a self-help group for people with urinary or bladder control problems. They named their new organization HIP — Help for Incontinent People.

For a copy of the organization's helpful newsletter, send a long, stamped (20 cents), self-addressed envelope to: HIP, Box 544, Union, S.C. 29379. The newsletters are published four times a year. They are free, but because this is a non-profit group, contributions are welcome. I have seen the newsletter and assure you it is well worth sending for.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Gemini," the 50-year-old married woman who was furious with her mother for removing the sex books from her (Gemini's) library when she (Mother) was visiting.

You should have advised Gemini to write her mother (preferably on an open postcard) something like this:

"I was so glad to discover that you borrowed our books on sex. We hope they help you with any problems you are seeking to solve. Keep them as long as you need them, but please return them eventually."

I'll bet two bits Mother has already read them cover to cover.

E. NAYLOR, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: A girlfriend of mine is planning a big church wedding, and she's asked if my 4-year-old son would be the ring bearer. My answer was yes.

My question: Who pays for my son's tuxedo? Nothing was said about it. Answer soon, as this is very important. —TIGHT BUDGET

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Harris-Mason

The wedding ceremony of Debra Faye Harris and Jerry Glenn Mason took place at the home of Annie Rowe, grandmother of the groom, on June 11, 1983, at 1:00 p.m. The Rev. Wilson Rogers of United Methodist Church performed the ceremony. To complete the theme of an old fashioned wedding, the bride arrived by horse and carriage. The reception was held in the garden of the Rowe home where a band, organized by the bride's father, entertained the guests during the afternoon. Joining the band was the groom who played the saxophone.

The bride is the daughter of Faye Harris of Chocowinity and R.C. Harris of Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Mason of Blounts Creek.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a sheer knit chiffon dress lined in taffeta with an empire waistline with a sheer front and back yoke lined with handsewn pearls and pearl buttons lining the back from the neckline to the waist. Delicate lace trim and applique accented the dress. Flounce skirt with lace trim extended to form a chapel-length train. The hat was overlaid with lace, scalloped edge, with upswept side held in place with large silk rose. The bride's bouquet was a lace fan with silk miniature spider orchids, miniature white roses and stephanstis, backed with green sword fern with white lace ribbon.

Pillows Are Personal—How To Choose and Clean Them

A comfortable pillow is a treasured and very personal possession. But, as pillows age, they lose their resiliency and become matted. Make them last as long as possible with proper care that includes occasional washing.

Pillows are filled with foam rubber, polyester fiberfill, down and/or feathers. For regular care, re-fill fiberfill, down and feather pillows every morning. The air trapped in the fill adds to sleeping comfort.

Generally, all pillows can be washed whether they are filled with foam, fiberfill, down or feathers. Check manufacturer's care instructions. If machine washing is recommended, use the following procedure: Check pillow covers, making sure they are securely stitched. Sew any ripped seams or holes before washing. Partially fill the washer with warm water. Add detergent and agitate to dissolve the detergent.

Place two pillows opposite each other in the washer to balance the load. Now let washer completely fill with water. Push pillows under water to wet thoroughly. Wash with gentle agitation for four to eight minutes. Stop washer several times to press air from the pillows. Do not wash down or feather pillows unless they can be dryer dried.

All pillows can be dried in the dryer, but foam must be dried without heat. Dry foam pillows on the air dry cycle only. For others, use highest temperature setting and dry until pillows are fluffy and free of lumps. Stop dryer occasionally and shake pillows to redistribute the filling.

Down and feather pillows dry very slowly and must be thoroughly dried to prevent mildew. They may take 1½ to 2 hours to dry completely.

Despite good care, pillows eventually become matted. Selecting new pillows is probably one of the most personal choices a person can make. Preferences vary — some people like a soft pillow, others prefer support. Any pillow should be purchased to fit individual taste for best possible sleep.

Pillows come in three densities: soft, medium and firm. Some manufacturers offer guidelines to indicate that the soft density supports people who like to sleep on their stomachs; the medium density, on their backs; and the firm, on their sides.

Why Bother

Of late we find ourselves repeatedly second-guessing North Carolina's judges who, admittedly, are working with prisons that are overcrowded. But overcrowding or not, we fail to see the wisdom or the justice in trying someone for a crime that sickens you, finding him guilty and then only saying, in effect, "naughty, naughty."

Picture this: A Marine corporal becomes the live-in boyfriend of a young woman who has a 2-year-old son. One day, while the mother is away, the corporal becomes angered and strikes the child in the stomach area. Seriously injured, the child just lies there until his mother comes home from work. She is told the boy fell over a lunch box. We don't know whether she accepted that explanation or not, but she took her son to the hospital.

Surgeons removed 16 inches of the boy's small intestine, which had been damaged by the blow.

We hear and see daily objections to child abuse. Everyone recoils at the thought. No one can say anything good about those who practice it.

This has to be classified as child abuse. So what does the judge do: He sentenced the Marine to four years in prison and fined him $1,000, but then suspended all but 25 days of the prison term.

Why bother?

Stakes Are High

Judging by the way the Sheriff's Department is finding and confiscating growing marijuana plants in Pitt County, it would seem we have already found a new crop for our area.

Last week sheriff's deputies and SBI agents seized 525 plants which could have been sold on the street for $424,000.

Earlier in the week 1,350 plants were seized with estimated street value, if mature, of $945,000.

Clearly the profit from growing marijuana is far more than can be obtained from corn, soybeans, livestock or tobacco.

There is only one sticking point. Usually no one will claim the plants which officers find growing in the county, since they are illegal at every stage.

Growing a high profit marijuana crop is tempting, but like producing moonshine in the old days, the stakes are extremely high.

Strange Choices

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's appointment of Henry Kissinger to head a bipartisan commission on Central America has raised eyebrows both here and abroad. But so should Kissinger's selection of Harry Shlaudeman as commission staff director.

While Kissinger's sometimes malevolent view toward Latin America has been well-documented — most recently by Seymour Hersh in "The Price of Power" — Shlaudeman's involvement in the region's affairs is less well-known. But it hardly qualifies the 57-year-old diplomat to manage the studies of a supposedly open-minded panel on the region.

Shlaudeman has served every U.S. president since Eisenhower, holding posts at Foggy Bottom and overseas. At times, he's been U.S. ambassador to Venezuela, Peru and, before Kissinger brought him home, Argentina. He regrets leaving Buenos Aires, he says, "especially at this moment when (Argentina) is returning to democracy."

Shlaudeman may have earned Kissinger's favor, however, during the four years (1969-1973) he spent as deputy chief of mission at the U.S. Embassy in Chile. During that period, Salvador Allende Gossens won the Chilean presidency democratically but lost it — as well as his life — at the hands of his generals.

Before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on June 12, 1974, Shlaudeman declared that "despite pressures to the contrary, the U.S. government adhered to a policy of non-intervention in Chile's internal affairs during the Allende period." Two years later, however, a select Senate committee disclosed that Shlaudeman had misled Congress as to the United States' role in the overthrow of Allende in 1973.

"...in Santiago ... Mr. Shlaudeman participated in the formulation of recommendations and the execution of instructions which resulted in the destruction of Chilean democracy," recalled former representative Michael Harrington (D-Mass.), who was one of the Foreign Affairs Committee members who questioned the diplomat in 1974.

When confronted with the contradictions in his earlier testimony, Shlaudeman would only concede that the U.S. had helped to finance opposition parties. The money, he insisted, was "aimed at preserving the opposition ... (not) to overthrow Salvador Allende."

There are those, of course, who would say that Shlaudeman practiced obfuscation only in the line of duty. But lies of any color only compound a record already unsuited for finding paths to peace and justice in Central America.

There will be more auditors — approximately 400 more, in fact — examining Pentagon purchases next year if the House approves an increase already passed by the Senate. Though Defense spending has jumped 180 percent since 1979, the number of Pentagon auditors has increased by only 3 percent, to 3,035. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), who authored the Senate amendment to increase Defense Contract Audit Agency personnel, says the government's audit effort is "constrained."

In a recent speech to his colleagues, Metzenbaum cited the purchase of 10 $150 tickets to the movie premiere of "Superman III" as an example of unchecked Pentagon spending.

Peter-G. Peterson, who last week announced his resignation as chairman of Wall Street's Lehman Brothers Kuhn and Loeb, Inc., plans soon to re-ignite the "Bipartisan Budget Appeal," first launched in the spring of 1982. Peterson, along with hundreds of corporate moguls and academics, will be lobbying Washington to cut both social and defense expenditures and to raise taxes.

Ronald Reagan was sitting in his backyard with his pals the other day, when suddenly he said, "Hey, guys, let's put on a show."

"Gosh, Ronnie, what a great idea! What should we do it on?" someone asked.

"What about Central America?" Ronnie said.

"That would be neat. What do we need, Ronnie?"

"We need military advisers and ships and airplanes and U.S. Marines."

"Gee whippers," someone said. "This is going to be fun."

"Who we going to fight, Ronnie?"

"The Nicaraguans. They're being supplied with guns and equipment by the Cubans and the Soviets."

RALEIGH — During the 1980 and 1982 election campaigns, the state Democratic Party was criticized for failing to be prepared. Critics said the party had not adjusted to the fact that North Carolina, for federal races, is now a two-party state. While the Republicans and the National Congressional Club did a great deal of research into the voting records of Democratic incumbents, the Democrats were stockpiling little information about the Republicans.

That's all being changed now. On the second floor of the old Raleigh mansion the Democrats have converted to their party headquarters, a full time staff researcher and a team of volunteers is getting ready for 1984. June Milby, the party's press secretary, is making herself an expert on Jesse Helms.

"I've probably got more stuff on him than he does," Ms. Milby says as she sweeps her hand across the four file cabinets filled with information about Helms, Sen. John East and Reps. Jim Martin and Jim Broyhill, North Carolina's four Republican congressmen.

Ms. Milby began her research project shortly after the 1982 elections. At first, she worked alone. But now she has a group of two dozen volunteers who work several nights a week at party headquarters and a network of sources around the state and in Washington who regularly report to her on Helms' activities. While the party is interested in researching the records of the four Republicans, Ms. Milby admits that Helms is receiving the most attention.

They're going through the Congressional Record and Congressional Quarterly putting together voting records on the four Republicans. The party subscribes to both statewide and national newspaper clipping services and to a statewide television news clipping service. They've put their names on conservative mailing lists, so they think they're current on the Republicans' fund-raising efforts. And they've obtained copies of many of Helms' old TV editorial scripts.

All the documents and votes they find go into file cabinets arranged by topic. Then, each document is indexed on the party's new IBM computer. With more than 1 million sheets of paper in the files, Ms. Milby says, there'd be no way to find things quickly if the computer wasn't working.

And finding things quickly is what she hopes to be able to do in 1984. "We're going to prepare the Democrats who run for Congress to run against their opponents," she says. "One of those things that has been lacking in previous campaigns is good opposition research. It takes candidates enough time just to get their issues ready and in the past, people didn't talk about their opponent, usually. You talked about yourself and your issues."

Campaigns have changed, however, and the ability to point a finger at the opposition is now very important. With the computerized research system, she says Democrats will be able to quickly answer charges by Republican candidates — and to make some charges of their own. Also, before Democrats latch onto issues, they can check their Republican opponents' records.

Ms. Milby has already started to use some of the information. She has a small file of papers which center on Helms' record, on topics like agriculture, foreign policy, defense and food stamps. The papers, which look like fund-raising letters or future press releases, weave Helms' votes together with some public statements and third-party statements.

By the 1984 election, Ms. Milby expects to be one of the world's great authorities on Jesse Helms. Then, if she manages to help end his senatorial career, she thinks she might try to write his biography.

New Fear

NEW YORK (AP) — By now you've heard: The economy is bouncing back, and quickly. But even as people's financial worries ease, warning signs are emerging.

The new fear is that the economic engine, after stalling through a 16-month recession, may "overheat" this year and send interest rates surging upward.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why some economists fear the economic recovery — which began slowly last December — may not be sustained:

Q. How much has the economy improved this year?

A. Measured by the gross national product, which is the government's main gauge of economic performance, the improvement has been dramatic. The GNP, which measures the value of all goods and services produced in the nation, expanded at a robust 8.7 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter. It had risen at a 2.6 percent rate in the year's first three months. On the other hand, interest rates fell in January and February but have risen in recent months.

Q. What's the worry about "overheating"?

A. Some economists say a too-rapid expansion of money to finance the economic recovery will open the door to a new surge of inflation. That, in turn, could throw the economy back into the same wage-price spiral that brought on the 1981-82 recession. This concern about inflation is linked to historical precedent: Price increases were moderate during the 1974-75 recession, only to soar later.

Q. Does that mean interest rates are headed higher?

A. No one knows for sure, but some prominent economists think higher interest rates are inevitable. Henry Kaufman, the chief economist at Salomon Brothers Inc. in New York, said recently that expectations of a strong economic recovery "will propel both short- and long-term interest rates irregularly higher." He also said he expected new inflationary pressures "in the next year or so."

Q. Will the economy return to recession soon?

A. Few economists, if any, believe the economy will stop growing this year, although there already are signs that the rate of growth is beginning to slow this summer. Some economists, however, have much less faith in the outlook for 1984.

Q. If the recovery has come this far, why can't it continue?

A. It may. Yet some economists believe a full and sustainable recovery depends on further declines in interest rates. Alan Greenspan, a prominent economist, told the annual convention of the National Governors' Association earlier this week that interest rates may be too high to permit the needed level of business investment. Thus far in the recovery, Greenspan said, improvement has centered on the consumer sector, where interest rate pressures are less.

Q. Can't the government help prevent an increase of interest rates?

A. Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told Congress recently that it must reduce the size of the federal budget deficit, which is financed by borrowing from the public. If it fails to do so, Volcker said, the government's need to borrow will clash with the borrowing needs of private industry. The result could be a new increase in interest rates and new trouble for the economy.

Power Vs. Bananas

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Just as a string of military successes against Marxist guerrillas transformed the mood here, the appearance of Henry A. Kissinger on the Central American stage revived fears that El Salvador's future may still be sacrificed to a U.S.-Soviet accommodation.

Salvadoran officials and politicians have become much too astute at the Washington game to express publicly anything less than satisfaction that so eminent a statesman as the former secretary of state is concerning himself with banana republics. But in our private conversations, they raised concerns about juxtaposition of the U.S. naval display with the Kissinger Commission.

"We are afraid that Dr. Kissinger will talk President Reagan into making the trade," one prominent Salvadoran official told us. That long-feared "trade" amounts to taking the pressure off Nicaragua's Marxist regime — as communist Cuba was immunized from pressure following the 1962 U.S. naval blockade — in return for keeping hands off El Salvador. But here, if not in Washington, it is an ineradicable fact that no Central American nation can be secure while a Sandinista regime in Managua calls for "revolution without borders."

The view from San Salvador is different than from Washington. Reports that even Pentagon hard-liners gloomily suggest that the U.S. ought to think about cutting its losses in El Salvador by getting out encounter stunned disbelief from Salvadorans. Having gained the initiative in the war, they resent becoming a bargaining chip in a possible Kissingerian solution for Latin America, much less being sacrificed by the "never again" U.S. military.

Nor does anybody here believe that Special Ambassador Richard Stone's effort to contact Salvadoran guerrilla leaders will bring a settlement. "I don't understand what there is to negotiate about," Christian Democratic leader Jose Napoleon Duarte, the presidential candidate of the democratic left told us. "We cannot discuss sharing of power."

Unfashionable though this concept is, the problem posed by El Salvador's insurgency is essentially military rather than social or political. That is the way it is being solved. The combination of guerrilla ammunition shortages (attributed to interdiction of supplies from Nicaragua) and the army's newfound aggressiveness have been enough to reverse the military advantage.

In fact, the guerrilla movement never took hold in the countryside. That is testified to by refugee camps swollen with campesinos fleeing from — not toward — communist guns and by the depopulation of insurgent-controlled towns. They have been voting for the government with their feet.

That preference cannot be explained by agrarian reform, which has been defied by the U.S. State Department into the cure-all for Latin American insurgency. The economy in general and agriculture in particular are in a shambles following the confiscation of private land and nationalization of banks the past four years. Although the farm debacle also is attributable to war ravages and international commodity depression, what has happened to agriculture is a familiar result of forced collectivization when tried anywhere in the world.

Whatever agrarian reform's shortcomings, no realist here believes it can be reversed. Maj. Roberto d'Aubuisson, president of the National Assembly and probable presidential candidate of the conservative National Republican Alliance (ARENA), is such a realist even though he is anathematized by the U.S. media and State Department as a "far right" extremist. But during a three-hour conversation with us over coffee here, he repeatedly committed himself to land reform.

The reason tells something about Salvadoran politics that the U.S. Congress shows no desire to understand. D'Aubuisson, his background in the violent politics of this bloody land, has committed himself to the democratic process in alliance with the U.S. That represents a conscious decision by the Salvadoran right not to follow the authoritarian model by which Guatemala avoids the humiliation of repeated certification by Washington to maintain the trickle of American military aid.

Contrary to Washington's conventional wisdom, El Salvador also has rejected Guatemala's successful use of violence against its own people to frighten them away from the communist insurgency. Before our trip here, two senior State Department officials quoted D'Aubuisson as advocating just such a repressive approach to a visiting U.S. senator. "I said nothing of the sort," an indignant D'Aubuisson told us.

Strength For Today

Here is a definition of philosophy and philosophers: "Philosophy is a study which enables people to be happy or unhappy more intelligently;" and, "A philosopher is one who doesn't care which side his bread is buttered on because he eats both sides anyway."

Many people would be surprised to learn that they have a very definite philosophy of life. We may not be able to arrange our philosophy of life we most substantially and fundamentally believe.

Showtime At The White House

"Oh boy, it will be like old times going into Nicaragua again."

"I didn't say we'd go into Nicaragua," Ronnie said. "I thought we'd quarantine them for awhile to make sure they know we're not just a bunch of kids putting on a show."

"Heck, Ronnie, I thought you were talking about a real production with war songs and parades and everything."

"I can't put on a real war show until the people say they'll all come to see it."

"How do you propose to do that?"

Ronnie thought hard as everyone looked towards him. Finally he got a big smile on his face. "I've got it. I'll appoint a committee."

"That's going to take time. I thought we were going to have a show this afternoon," someone said.

"No," Ronnie said. "This one has to be thought out carefully. I'll get Henry Kissinger to head up the publicity."

"Henry Kissinger?" everyone said in disgust. "Why would you want Henry Kissinger to get involved?"

"Because he has a lot experience in show business. If he reports to us on how we can justify this one, we could rehearse the bombing of Managua by Christmas."

"Anything you say, Ronnie. What should we do now?"

"We're going to write a script. We have to prove the Nicaraguans are getting all their arms by sea, to supply the rebels in El Salvador."

"Is this going to be a comedy?"

"No, it's going to be a musical, but it's going to have a message in it for the Cubans and the Soviets."

"What should we call it?"

"How about 'Babes in Arms'?"

"That's a neat name, Ronnie."

Our plot will be that if we don't stop the Nicaraguans in Central America, everyone from El Salvador will start marching toward Texas in their bare feet."

"That's a big number."

"It's only the first act finale."

"What do we do for a second act?"

"When the naval quarantine doesn't work, we send in American troops."

"Congress won't let us put on that kind of show."

Look To Needs Of N.C. Future Breadwinners

With between two-third and three-fourths of the women in North Carolina expected to be in the state's labor force by the year 2000, a new report to Gov. Jim Hunt recommends sweeping changes to meet the needs of those it calls the new American breadwinners.

Equal pay for jobs of comparable worth, employee benefits tailored to individual needs and formal efforts through public education to end sex-based employment patterns are among the recommendations contained in four papers recently presented to the governor.

The papers are the result of a recent conference held in Raleigh sponsored by the Bush Institute for Child and Family Policy, a division of the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

U.S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, the senior woman in Congress, told the conference, "Equality is an economic issue, not a social issue."

She said women make up 43 percent of the American work force. Fifty-five percent of all N.C. women are now working, causing the state to rank seventh in the nation and first in the South in its percentage of women working. Two-thirds of all new workers in the state during the next decade will be women, Gov. Hunt told the conference.

It was pointed out that 90 percent of those women who work do so to support their families. Their pay is 60 percent below that of men. Only 10 percent of all those fully employed earn more than $20,000 annually, compared to 47 percent of the men fully employed. Suggestions made by Meyressa Schoonmaker, president of the N.C. Center for Laws Affecting Women, and others who gave conference papers included the following:

•Equal pay for jobs of comparable worth to an organization. The conferees suggested that, if a secretary (usually a woman) is as valuable to an organization as a maintenance worker (usually a man), their pay scales should be equal. It was recommended that the state government, North Carolina's largest employer with 180,000 workers, take the lead in this area.

•Job benefits as a right. It was suggested that a new job benefits model, call ed the "cafeteria approach," be implemented to tailor benefits to an employee's individual and family needs at various times in her or his career.

•Sex equity education. Schools were called on to provide counseling and education to encourage women to enter traditionally male-dominated fields.

•Safe working conditions. Conferees said that occupations dominated by women often are those minimally regulated for safety. It was pointed out that environmental hazards are doubly dangerous for women for child-bearing age, since two-thirds of all women now work at least a part of their pregnancy.

Attacked When Going To Help

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte police officer was attacked and injured on his way to work Tuesday after he stopped to investigate a scream, police said.

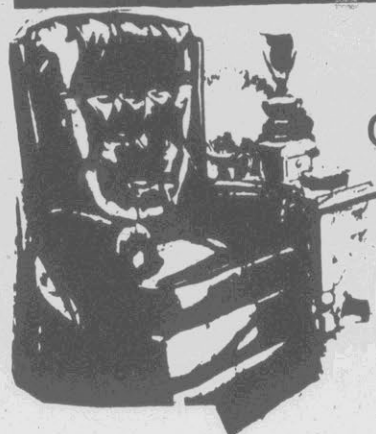

Police spokesman Jim Howlett said Officer Robert W. Job suffered a cut on his left temple in the incident. He said Job fired one shot at his three assailants as they fled.

Howlett said Job wasn't in uniform and was in his personal car when he stopped to investigate a scream. He said after Job identified himself as a police officer, three men began beating him.

Bill Ignores Veto Threat

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some House Republicans are warning their colleagues that they are inviting a presidential veto by voting a major increase in the federal revenue sharing payments over the next three years to financially strapped local governments.

The House late Tuesday ignored administration threats of a veto and approved an extension of revenue sharing through September 1986 that will return to local governments $1.35 billion more in federal revenues than President Reagan wants. A total of $15.06 billion would be disbursed over the extension period.

Revenue sharing has pumped more than $60 billion into local treasuries since it was conceived in 1972.

"The federal government is in a lot worse (financial) shape than any other level of government out there," says Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., the House Republican leader.

Michel, citing mounting federal budget deficits, claims that if the financial assistance is ended it will be the result of local officials "getting too greedy out there and asking for too much when we really can't afford it."

Adds Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., "We don't have any revenue to share — only a deficit."

Reagan budget chief David Stockman advised the House that unless the increase is ultimately deleted, "The president's other senior advisers and I will not be able to recommend approval of the bill."

The legislation, approved on a 381-35 vote, goes to the Senate, where that chamber's Finance Committee has endorsed Reagan's proposal to keep revenue-sharing payments at the level they've been since former President Nixon initiated the program.

Any differences between House and Senate versions of the extension will have to be worked out by congressional negotiators.

Unless Congress and the administration reach agreement on an extension of revenue sharing, the program expires Sept. 30.

"Many state governments are now in strained financial straits," said Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., who proposed the compromise increase.

The House bill calls for $5.02 billion to be distributed yearly in federal revenue sharing.

The plan originally sent to the House by its Government Operations Committee called for $5.3 billion in yearly revenue sharing payments over the next five budget years.

The full House acknowledged Reagan's objection to the five-year extension and voted to limit the bill to three years as he asked.

But it rejected Reagan's demand to keep the annual revenue-sharing payment at current levels, agreeing only to trim back the original proposal to just over $5 billion. That keeps the program's spending levels within the 1984 budget blueprint approved by Congress earlier this year.

But supporters of the increased payments said the higher level only partially offsets the reduced spending power of revenue-sharing dollars due to inflation since the program was last considered by Congress in 1980.

Under revenue sharing, local governments are entitled to a portion of the earmarked federal revenues based on a complex formula combining population, local taxing effort and the average income of a locale's citizens in relation to the rest of the country. Most governments have used the money for one-shot expenditures like construction, facility improvements or law enforcement equipment.

Criticizing Cleanup Delay

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Residents near California's worst toxic waste dump are criticizing a cleanup delay which the Environmental Protection Agency has blamed on cash-flow problems.

The EPA said Tuesday that it must withhold until October all but $2.7 million of $10 million promised for cleanup of the Stringfellow dump. The $2.7 million will fund a study of how the cleanup should be conducted.

"I would have thought that EPA at this point would have been so embarrassed at the delays ... that they would have slipped the check under the door and hoped nobody noticed," said Penny Newman of Concerned Neighbors In Action, on learning of the delay Monday.

Khadafy's Carribbean Spending Source Of Uneasiness In Others

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy is spending millions of dollars on four tiny, struggling island nations in the eastern Caribbean. His interest in the area is making some government leaders uneasy.

The headquarters for the Libyan strongman's effort is leftist-governed Grenada, where he opened an embassy after Maurice Bishop ousted Sir Eric Gairy in 1979 and visited Libya two years later.

Libya has contributed a $4-million, interest-free loan to the construction of a new airport on Grenada, along with gifts of 300 tons of steel, 20,000 tons of cement and 8,000 barrels of oil. A portrait of Khadafy hangs in the lobby of the government building.

St. Lucia, Dominica, and Antigua and Barbuda also are objects of Khadafy's attention.

Prime Minister John Compton of St. Lucia charged that Khadafy allocated $1 million to "progressive" political parties on his and other islands and is giving terrorist training to opponents of his conservative government. He said he would seek United Nations censure of Libya for its alleged efforts to undermine their governments.

"Khadafy never sent St. Lucia a penny nor a barrel of oil to help in hurricane reconstruction (after Hurricane Allen ravaged the island in 1980), but he can spend a million dollars to help destabilize and teach people to make bombs," said Compton.

He claimed that 26 St. Lucian youths given academic scholarships in Libya were actually recruited for "terrorism and sabotage" training. He said George Odum, an opposition party leader who has visited Libya twice, is a pawn in Khadafy's plans to make St. Lucia "a satellite of Libya."

Odum's Progressive Labor Party denied all the charges, saying there was "nothing sinister" about the Libyan scholarships. But the government confiscated the youths' passports to prevent them from going to Libya.

Prime Minister Eugenia Charles of Dominica said in December that 15 of 28 Dominican youths drawn to Libya by promises of medical and scientific scholarships returned home when they were "put in a camp like little soldiers" for revolutionary training.

Other Dominica officials have voiced concern about Yussif Hamid, an Atlanta-born Moslem convert who started a small religious colony in the mountainous, jungled island's remote north. His newspaper, The Drum, promotes Khadafy and criticizes the government and the United States.

"We view him with great suspicion," said Home Minister Brian Alleney.

Not Amused By 'Practical Joke'

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — As James Karsner was leaving the bank after depositing his paycheck, he thought it odd when a drive-in customer rolled up her windows and dove for cover.

He thought something strange was going on when he saw a policeman run by carrying a shotgun.

But when he opened the door and found himself looking down the barrel of a policeman's revolver, he knew there was trouble.

Karsner's deposit slip had apparently been doctored by a practical joker, who had printed "Give me all your money now" on the back and stuck it among blank slips at Glendale Federal Savings and Loan.

Although no cash changed hands, Karsner, 21, a Boca Raton warehouse clerk, was held by police for two hours before the mess was straightened out.

"I almost fainted," said Karsner, who was not amused. "Some practical joke."

Police say political pamphlets circulated by Hamid were printed in Libya.

Tim Hector, leader of the Antigua Caribbean Liberation Movement, visited Libya last spring. Officials of Antigua and Barbuda said he got funding from Libya for his newspaper, The Outlet.

Bishop, whose government is close to President Fidel Castro's Communist regime in Cuba, said his relations with Libya are part of his effort to build ties throughout the "socialist and non-aligned" world.

Most governments in the English-speaking islands of the eastern Caribbean are pro-American, but most of them have been independent from Britain for less than a decade, and political stability is fragile. They face common problems of underdeveloped economies and 15 to 30 percent unemployment.

Compton was returned to office last year after three years of chaotic government by a split coalition. Miss Charles has survived two attempted coups in three years.

Efforts to get the Libyan view of its role in the Caribbean were unsuccessful. A member of its embassy staff in Grenada said the only official who could discuss government policy would be off the island for at least a month.

Local Couple New Grandparents Of Quads; Hope To 'Spoil' Them

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A local couple became the grandparents of quadruplets Tuesday morning.

Dr. George P. Harvey, a Greenville chiropractor, said he hopes to spoil the girl and three boys born to Margaret and George H. Harvey of Raleigh.

"We knew it (the multiple birth) was going to take place back in April," Dr. Harvey said in a phone interview from his son's home in Raleigh this morning. "The doctors found out by ultrasound (tests)."

Dr. Harvey said the four babies, born 10 weeks prematurely, are "holding their own. My son is optimistic and so are the doctors."

Doctors at Wake Medical Center said the quadruplets were suffering from breathing problems common to premature births, but otherwise were doing fine.

This was the second multiple birth for the 32-year-old mother, who had taken the pregnancy-inducing drug Clomid. She gave birth to triplets five years ago, only one of which survived.

Dr. James D. Thullen, head of the hospital's intensive care nursery and neonatology program, said the breathing problems were not unusual for premature babies because their lungs are not fully developed.

Dr. Harvey reported that his daughter-in-law had been under surveillance in the hospital since July 5 in hope of reducing the risk of the pregnancy.

"The births went very smoothly ... and they're all very stable. They should survive statistically at this age. It's very exciting, because we've been planning this a long time," said Thullen.

The babies were born a minute apart between 7:19 and 7:22 a.m. Tuesday.

Dr. Harvey said the first-born quadruplet, the girl, weighed 2 pounds, 15 ounces. She was breathing with the aid of a respirator late Tuesday evening. The three boys each weighed "a little over 3 pounds," Dr. Harvey said. The boys were receiving oxygen but were breathing on their own. The babies measure between 14 and 16 inches long.

The mother, Margaret Jones Harvey, was conscious during the Cesarean-section delivery, Dr. Harvey said, and the 36-year-old father, a real estate attorney, was in the delivery room during the births.

The four babies have not been named.

The Greenville couple have not seen their new grandchildren yet. "We just hope they do all right," Dr. Harvey said.

"We have another grandson, and we hope to spoil all five grandchildren," he added.

Man Killed By Hit-Run Driver

Willie James Wilkes, 35 of 5B Riverside Trailer Park, was killed about 1 a.m. today a half-mile west of Greenville on N.C. 43 when he was struck by a hit-and-run car, the North Carolina Highway Patrol reported.

Trooper M.B. Johnson said the hit-and-run car skidded 41 feet before striking Wilkes, near the intersection of rural road 1202, then left the scene. The impact, he said, knocked Wilkes 134 feet.

According to Johnson, Wilkes was a patient at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and left the medical facility without permission prior to the fatal accident.

Other patrol officials said it was the second time that Wilkes had left the hospital without permission. According to a spokesman, Wilkes left once several hours earlier, was picked up by a trooper and returned.

Investigation was continuing in an effort to identify the driver of the car involved in the accident.

psychiatrists and local area mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse programs."

At hearings held by the ECHSA, representatives of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the East Carolina University School of Medicine and others voiced opposition to the Charter Medical project.

After the ECHSA recommended the application be disapproved, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's board of directors voted 11-7 in favor of supporting the private hospital plan.

Atrocities

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — More than 213,000 residents of Phnom Penh were killed under the 1975-79 Cambodian regime of the Khmer Rouge, the official Phnom Penh news agency said today.

The agency said the figure was compiled from information provided by survivors and is part of a move to denounce the Khmer Rouge for atrocities committed before it was ousted from power by the current Vietnamese-backed government.

Governor And District Attorneys Will Confer

By The Associated Press
State district attorneys and law enforcement officials have scheduled a meeting with Gov. Jim Hunt Thursday to discuss a controversial new law that allows suspects to review all statements made against them, including those by confidential informants.

The law expands the process by which defense attorneys find out what the prosecution has against their clients to all verbal or written information. Prosecutors claim that will jeopardize informants because in many cases it will be obvious to a defendant where the information came from.

Brent Hackney, the governor's deputy press secretary, said Hunt will meet with North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten Thursday morning on the matter and with other law enforcement officials that afternoon.

"We can't live with it," said Buncombe County District Attorney Ronald C. Brown, president of the North Carolina District Attorneys Association. "It was a mistake and we want it changed."

Brown said the new discovery law would hinder state prosecutions, especially in drug and conspiracy cases and any case where a criminal is mean enough to harass a witness.

Last week, Mike Easley, district attorney for Brunswick, Columbus and Bladen counties, withdrew nine drug-smuggling indictments from a grand jury, saying the new law made it unsafe for his informants.

But the president of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, James R. Van Camp of Southern Pines, says the academy supports the new law.

"It is a fundamental guarantee of our Constitution and a basic concept of fairness that a citizen be able to confront his accusers and be able to prepare an adequate defense," Van Camp said.

The district attorneys want the governor to call a special session of the General Assembly to repeal the law, but Jack Cozart, the governor's legal counsel, said Tuesday that Hunt hopes to avoid that solution.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Tuesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 59. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 59 percent of your hot water needs.

Urban Counties Will Pay Price

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Urban counties across the state will be paying the price for the recent half-cent increase in the sales tax, officials said, calling it the "Urban Counties Revenue Sharing Act."

Forsyth County, for example, could get back $1.7 million a year less than it collects, while Mecklenburg County could lose $6 million and Guilford County could lose $2.7 million, officials say.

"We are not pleased at all with the distribution system," Mecklenburg County Manager Gerald G. Fox said. "We'll probably be sitting tight on it for a while."

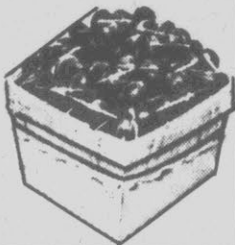

Officials in smaller counties disagree, saying the new tax is fair and is their chance to catch up.

"It gives us a chance to catch up with all that money of levying, depends on which county enacts it, but research estimates show that a county such as Stokes would get back more than twice as much in sales tax revenues as it raises, while Caswell County would get back four times as much.

The problem that the urban counties see is the way the money will be distributed. Previously, revenues from sales taxes have been redistributed based on what counties paid in.

Congressional Leaders Urge Policy Consultations

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — As U.S. special envoy Richard Stone returned home today from Latin America, congressional leaders told President Reagan they have not been adequately consulted on developments in the region and won assurances they will be briefed more fully.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee also expressed concern about the risk of danger in the U.S. military exercises in Central America, but voiced his full support for the military moves.

Stone, meanwhile, arrived back from an 11-day Latin American tour saying it had been "quite useful" but refusing to discuss his first meeting with a Salvadoran leftist leader or an apparent snub by Nicaraguan officials. Stone would not say if there would be further talks with leftist-ruled Nicaragua, telling reporters at Andrews Air Force Base, "We have to preserve the confidentiality" of the negotiating process.

At the White House, congressional Republican leaders met with Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to discuss Central America.

"I think one of the important things that came out of the meeting was a clear understanding by the president and the administration that the Congress felt they had not been consulted and briefed well in advance and adequately," said Sen. Baker.

Baker said that "a number of important or potentially important developments, both diplomatic and military, had occurred without consultation.... I'm convinced there will be good consultation in the future."

He said that House and Senate leaders, Democrats as well as Republicans, will attend a breakfast meeting with Shultz in his office Wednesday. He said other briefings are being arranged.

Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., said Reagan "talked about how vital it is that we sustain our efforts." On the military maneuvers, Cheney said, "we've had exercises down there for years. Obviously, this is somewhat different. It's a show of force."

While expressing concern about the risk of danger, Baker said, "Anytime you have military exercises, whether it's in the Middle East or whether it's in Central America or whether it's in the United States, there's always the risk of some danger to some person, and I suppose that's unavoidable in the nature of military exercises."

Without elaborating, Baker said Reagan was optimistic about the prospect for negotiations in Central America.

"It appears perhaps marginally that things are improving" with a slowdown in support from Cuba and Nicaragua to the rebels in El Salvador and the efforts of the anti-government rebels in Nicaragua, said Baker.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Shultz told the group "it is a consistent policy that is working."

Pointing out that the president's policy was based on Democratic rule in El Salvador, economic assistance, a "security shield" and negotiations, the secretary of state was said to have reported: "It is a sophisticated policy. We have to do more than one thing at one time. All the points must work together."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition that he not be further identified, told the congressional leaders "there's a better situation on the ground in El Salvador than three months ago. Salvadoran forces are doing better."

As for Nicaragua, the official told the congressional delegation, "The Sandinista government policies are not liked by some people in their country. There is a feeling that the Sandinistas have stolen the revolution."

Stone, meanwhile, said he expects to meet with Henry A. Kissinger, chairman of President Reagan's commission on Central America, and also would brief Reagan and Shultz.

Speakes said that although Stone "may very well see the president," no meeting between the two men was set for today or the next few days.

Speakes, who also said Stone is likely to meet with members of Congress, gave no indication of when the envoy would brief Shultz or Kissinger.

Speakes reiterated the president's policy that the Organization of American States is the best forum for policing the regional commitments.

Stone, describing his trip, said, "We had a wide range of discussions and they were quite useful."

Stone's trip, his third since becoming special envoy in April, came at a time of growing tensions fueled by troop movements along the Nicaragua-Honduran border, reports of Soviet freighters sailing to Nicaragua with weapons, and deployment of U.S. Navy ships off Nicaragua's Caribbean and Pacific coasts.

On Monday in Managua, Nicaragua, Stone had an hour-long meeting with officials of the Sandinista government, including junta leader Daniel Ortega and Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto.

D'Escoto and Stone both described the talks as "useful."

In what appeared to be a show of indifference toward the Reagan administration, Ortega met with a Soviet diplomat moments after Stone left the country.

In a subsequent government radio broadcast, Ortega thanked the Soviet Union for its support of the Nicaraguan government and regional peace efforts.

The highlight of Stone's nine-nation swing came Sunday in Bogota, Colombia, where he met for the first time with a leader of El Salvador's leftist rebels. Stone was unable to arrange a meeting with rebel leaders July 9 in Costa Rica after they said too much publicity surrounded the talks.

For two hours, Stone met with Ruben Zamora, a director of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the political arm of five guerrilla groups fighting to topple the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government.

Zamora, who arrived in Managua late Monday after Stone left, said his talks with the U.S. envoy should be viewed "with prudent optimism." In earlier remarks, however, he said leftists do not consider Stone or the United States as "mediators" between them and the government.

Bjg Radio For Town Of 923

SILT, Colo. (AP) — The town may be named Silt, but as far as radio stations go, it's definitely not the dregs.

Next month, a 50,000-watt radio station — the strongest signal allowable by law — will sign on in this tiny community of 923.

According to station manager Jim Seaney, Silt may be the smallest town in the country with a 50,000-watt station. The AM station, which will use the call letters KRMW, will reach western Colorado and large parts of Utah and Wyoming, he said.

Last year, Silt got national attention when the town council discussed renaming the town. But one council member said that having the name Silt was "like a boy named Sue — it makes you tough."

And if Seaney has his way, the new radio station may bring Silt the same prominence that the television show "Laugh-in" brought to Burbank, Calif. "We may do something like 'Live from the Red River Inn, high above beautiful downtown Silt, this is KRMW,'" he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mixed today following the market's fifth straight decline in the previous session.

Auto and financial issues were numerous among the early advances, while aerospace, computer and forest-products stocks edged lower.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 6 points Tuesday, recovered 3.21 points to 1,191.21 after the first 30 minutes of trading today.

Losers held a slight edge over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market's slide has come amid an upturn in short-term interest rates in the credit markets and fears that rates are headed even higher.

Massive Treasury borrowing, including a $15.75 billion offering this week, is seen as soon colliding with private credit demand, thereby lifting lending charges again.

Trading volume has remained moderate, however, convincing some analysts that many investors are staying out of the market until the Treasury offering is over and Wall Street has a clearer indication as to where rates are headed.

On the NYSE's active list, G.D. Searle rose 3/4 to 50 1/2 and Coca-Cola was up 1/4 to 49. Searle said Tuesday it obtained a contract to sell its sugar substitute aspartame to Coke for use in diet soft drinks.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell

6.21 points to 1,188.00 —bringing its loss for the past five sessions to 55.69 points.

Declines led advances 8 to 7 on the NYSE, whose composite index slipped 0.09 to 93.82.

Big Board volume totaled 74.46 million shares, against 77.21 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.77 to 235.20.

Excited Over Dinosaur Skull

LONDON (AP) — The discovery of an almost complete dinosaur skull in southern England has excited scientists, who believe the fossil may provide crucial clues on how the giant beasts evolved, the London Times reported today.

It was the second account in two weeks heralding major finds of dinosaur bones in southern England. On July 19, London's Natural History Museum reported the discovery of a skeleton belonging to a carnivorous creature previously unknown, believed to have lived 125 million years ago.

The Times said the fossilized skull of a plant-eating dinosaur called an iguanodon was on the Isle of Wight by amateur fossil collector Nicholas Chase, who noticed a giant bone protruding from a shoreline cliff eroded by the sea.

The discovery was made in 1982 and the skull has been under examination at the University Museum in Oxford for a year, but the find was not reported until today.

Iguanadons stood eight to nine feet tall on their hind legs and lived 120 million years ago.

Dr. David Norman, a lecturer in vertebrate zoology at Oxford University who has been studying the iguanodon skull, was quoted as saying it had revealed important information on how dinosaurs digested food.

He was quoted as saying further studies should provide details of the iguanodon's sense of smell, sight and hearing and more knowledge about the way the creatures lived.

"The find is tremendous," Norman was quoted as saying. "It may be very important in terms of the evolution of this type of dinosaur."

Norman, according to the Times, said it was extremely rare to find a skull suitable for such research. There are many other iguanodon skulls, including 40 in a collection in Brussels, but they cannot be used the same way because their skulls are preserved with glue that cannot be removed without wrecking the specimens.

The new species of dinosaur reported by the Natural History Museum was discovered by Bill Walker, an amateur fossil hunter. He made the find in a clay pit in Surrey, 40 miles southwest of the Isle of Wight.

The museum calculated that the bones Walker found belonged to a creature that stood 10 to 15 feet high on its hind legs, lived 125 million years ago and ate plant-eating dinosaurs.

A Rehearsal For Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Preparations for the eighth mission of space shuttle Challenger are running ahead of schedule, officials say, as the five-man crew readies for a dress rehearsal of the Aug. 30 launch.

Crews started checking ground connections and running other tests shortly after the shuttle was rolled to Pad 39A early Tuesday.

On Thursday, the astronauts are scheduled to rehearse the last few hours of launch day for their five-day mission.

"We're essentially ahead of schedule here," said Shuttle Processing Director Bob Sieck.

The start of the mission was delayed for 10 days because of a slowed-up schedule of ground tests with a new satellite.

One of the important objectives of Challenger's eighth flight is to check out a communications link with the orbiting satellite, TDRS, before Spacelab goes aloft aboard Columbia in late October.

Astronaut Richard H. Truly will be commander of the new flight and the only space veteran aboard.

The crew includes Guion S. Bluford Jr., who will be the first black American in space. He joins two other mission specialists, Dale A. Gardner and Dr. William E. Thornton. The pilot is Daniel C. Brandenstein.

The communications satellite that will be placed into orbit by Challenger over India will arrive Sunday at the launch pad.

The launch is to take place between 2:15 a.m. and 2:49 a.m. EDT, making it the first liftoff in darkness. A nighttime landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., is also planned.

It is hurricane season in this part of the country, and Sieck said a violent storm could affect plans.

Still, he clarified: "It would imminently have to be upon us ... with 65 or 70 mph winds ... before management would be concerned to the point of disconnecting systems and moving it back to the VAB (vehicle assembly building)."

Kuhn Resigns As Commissioner

BOSTON (AP) — Bowie Kuhn officially quit as commissioner of major league baseball today as owners met at their annual summer meeting to pick his successor.

Kuhn will serve as commissioner until Dec. 31, "or until a successor is selected," he said.

His second, seven-year term was due to expire on Aug. 12.

"I advised Bud Selig (Milwaukee Brewers' owner) as chairman of the search committee that I was withdrawing my name from further consideration," Kuhn told a news conference. "My decision is final, irrevocable and emphatic. I will not re-view it."

Kuhn opened these meetings with his statement of resignation to the owners, and Selig then asked that the 26 clubs vote unanimously that Kuhn's term be extended until next year or until Selig's committee can find a new commissioner. The move required that all owners vote affirmative.

"That was unanimously adopted this morning," Kuhn said. "So apparently, I've finally discovered how to get the vote."

Kuhn said he had considered resigning for some time. Last Nov. 1, when he was up for re-election, however, Kuhn said he would force a vote rather than resign. But he failed to gain the three-quarter majority necessary for re-election and Selig's committee has been seeking a successor ever since.

"I have always labored to serve the best interests of the game," Kuhn said, reading from his statement to the owners. "I have concluded now that I can serve their best interests by withdrawing my name."

Kuhn said this would clear the way for baseball's owners to find a commissioner "whom all can support and who has the potential to rally baseball together."

"This decision was not easy for me," Kuhn said. "I am proud of the accomplishments of professional baseball during my time as commissioner. But I make this decision without malice or rancor."

At that point, Kuhn said he told the owners: "My love and affection for all of you will never change."

Kuhn's decision opened the way for Selig's committee to continue the search for a successor. And by eliminating the Aug. 12 deadline for the end of Kuhn's term, the action gave the search committee more time, while providing for a smooth transition of power.

The commissioner's office confirmed Tuesday that Kuhn had spoken with the Executive Council about several possibilities. One was that he would continue to administer the game under the council's auspices, while abdicating the title of commissioner. Another was to allow the council itself to rule baseball in the absence of a commissioner.

The plan to have Kuhn continue as administrator, however, drew an angry response from some of the anti-Kuhn owners, including the threat of legal action.

"It's subterfuge of the highest order," one of Kuhn's opponents told the New York Times. "An action of that nature (allowing Kuhn to stay in control) would have to go to court. The Executive Council can be charged with dereliction of duty."

Last November, Kuhn won the support of enough American League owners but came up with five "no" votes in the National League — two more than necessary to block his re-election. Those opposed to Kuhn in the NL were the New York Mets, St. Louis Cardinals, Houston Astros, Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds.

While the search committee, headed by Selig, has kept its recommendations secret, several names have been rumored as Kuhn's successor.

The first was that of William Simon, former secretary of the treasury and now head of the U.S. Olympic Committee. The others are Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee; Jack Valenti, former baseball TV executive who is now president of the Motion Picture Association of America, and Dr. A. Bartlett Giamatti, president of Yale University. All of the four reportedly have opted out of consideration, however.

"To me, baseball is so important to the American public that if they don't keep Kuhn, they should come up with a man inside baseball who knows baseball," said Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins and a staunch Kuhn supporter. "And that's going to be awfully hard to do."

Hamlet Topples Snow Hill, 4-3

HAMLET — Hamlet held off a late Snow Hill rally to gain a 4-3 victory in the second game of the American Legion Eastern championship baseball series last night. The result evened their best-of-seven series at one game each.

Hamlet grabbed the lead for good in the first inning as Ike Moore provided a solo home run.

In the third, Hamlet picked up a couple of more runs. Gregg Cloninger led off with a single and with one out, moved to third on Mike Byrd's double. Moore then singled with two away, driving in both runners to up the lead to 3-0.

What proved to be the winning run, however, crossed in the fifth. Byrd reached on an error and moved to third on Darrell Poe's single. Moore then grounded into a double play, with Byrd scoring on the play.

Snow Hill, which had been held to only one hit through the first five frames, rallied for three runs in the sixth. William Davis led off with a walk and Steve Sides followed with a home run, cutting the lead back to 4-2. Anthony Russo followed with a single and Jeff Ginn doubled. A sacrifice fly by Mike Sullivan brought Russo home.

Snow Hill failed to get another hit the rest of the way, however, although it did leave two on in each the seventh and eighth innings on one hit batsman and three walks. Scott Altman, who went the first six frames, allowed just four hits, while Morrison, who finished up the game, held Snow Hill hitless.

Cloninger led the Hamlet hitting with three in four trips, while Moore had a pair in four appearances.

The series moves to Snow Hill tonight for game three. Games four and five will also be held in Snow Hill, while six and seven, if needed, would be back in Hamlet.

Floyd Likes His Chances

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — Some homemade statistics, a new set of irons and a lot of hard work has Ray Floyd primed and ready for the defense of his title this week in the 65th PGA national championship.

"I feel really terrific about my chances," the 40-year-old veteran said after a practice round Tuesday on the 6,946-yard Riviera Country Club course.

"I am ready," he said. "I am prepared. Now I have to go out and perform. Now I have to go out and get the job done."

And, although he hasn't won this year, Floyd said he felt extremely confident going into the Thursday start of the tournament that is the last of the Big Four events of the season.

"I've had a chance in all three majors (the Masters, U.S. and British Opens). And I had a bad last round in all of them."

"In the British, in the last round my 9-year-old son could have beaten me on the greens."

Putting has been a problem, he said. But it's not the only problem. That was disclosed by a set of personal statistics he devised and has kept over the past few months, Floyd said.

They are much more extensive than the statistics kept by the PGA Tour, he said, and indicate not only whether he missed a green but how far he was from the pin, what club he used and so on.

"I found I was not putting that badly. But I was not getting the ball close to the hole with the 8-iron, the 9-iron, the wedge, and that's where you make your score. I was making the short putts to save par, but I wasn't making the birdie putts, the 6-15 foot putts."

It showed him what he had to do.

"I have worked on it. I feel comfortable with the putter in my hand. And I have not felt comfortable with the putter in a long time."

"And last week I put a new set of irons in play."

"Maybe it's just psychological. Maybe that's all I needed. But I'm hitting my irons much better now."

"I am playing very well, and I'm putting very well. I have had a good preparation. I feel really good about my game."

Floyd, who counts two PGA titles and the 1976 Masters among his 18 tour titles, also has a great familiarity with the Riviera course, even though he hasn't played here in almost 10 years.

"I used to spend the winter out here, and I'd play the course every day, usually with (actor) Dean Martin," he said. He estimated he has played well over 100 rounds over Riviera.

And he applauded the current condition of the course.

"The greens are good, the fairways are good. The rough is severe but not to the extreme," he said. "If you play well, you're going to be allowed to shoot a good score. It is not set up ridiculously hard."

An international field of 150 will begin play Thursday, with $600,000 in total prize money and $100,000 to the winner.

In addition to Floyd, the major contenders include British Open champion Tom Watson, who hasn't finished lower than second in his last three starts, Masters title-holder Seve Ballesteros of Spain, U.S. Open champ Larry Nelson and Jack Nicklaus, who missed a title playoff by a single shot last week in the Canadian Open.

Other major players include Johnny Miller, Gil Morgan, Lanny Wadkins, Hal Sutton, Cal Peete, Fuzzy Zoeller, Craig Stadler, Hale Irwin, Andy Bean, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite and a pair of Australians now living in the United States, David Graham and Greg Norman.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by ABC.

Pirates Forget The Past

By The Associated Press

Through the good times and bad times, the Pittsburgh Pirates are trying to keep everything in perspective.

"This is a loose club," Pirates' Manager Chuck Tanner said Tuesday night after his team clubbed the Philadelphia Phillies 10-3. "We've come back from relative obscurity in the first half of the season. We're basically the same club we were then."

He went on to say: "After you play a game, you just have to erase it from your mind. You can't look back on the good or the bad."

Only six weeks ago the Pirates were 13 games under .500 with a firm hold of fifth place in the National League East. But since the All-Star break, they have won 21 of 28 games to take the top spot.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco downed Atlanta 7-3, New York defeated Montreal 5-2, Chicago edged St. Louis 5-3, Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 3-1 and Houston nipped San Diego 4-2 in 12 innings.

Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens, whose team trails the Pittsburgh by 1½ games, knew the Pirates would eventually become contenders.

"They have a history of starting slow, then you look up and they're in the race," he said. "They got back in a little quicker than normal this year."

Johnny Ray led the Pirates' attack, going 5-for-5 with three RBI. Dave Parker contributed a three-run triple in the eighth.

Larry McWilliams, 11-5, gave up nine hits before leaving in the eighth with relief help from Ceciliano Guante.

Gary Matthews homered, his ninth of the season, and Mike Schmidt had a run-scoring triple for the Phillies. Kevin Gross, 2-3, was the losing pitcher.

Both managers were downplaying the importance of the three-game series in Pittsburgh.

"This was not a championship game for us," said Owens, whose team had won seven of eight games.

"I know some people are saying this is a big series, but it's not any more important than the next one or the one after that," Tanner said. "Sure, we want to win, but if you don't win, it's not the end of everything. If you win, it's not the end of everything."

Giants 7, Braves 3
Dave Bergman powered the Giants with a career-high four RBI on a double and two singles.

Mike Krukow, 7-6, gained the victory, but walked off the mound after throwing two warmup pitches in the sixth. He strained his back in the fifth when his spikes got caught on the mound rubber. Greg Minton came on to earn his 13th save.

Pascual Perez, 12-3, lost for the first time since the Giants beat him 2-1 June 17. He gave up five runs on eight hits, struck out six and had three wild pitches in 4 1-3 innings. Dale Murphy hit his 22nd homer of the year in the third for the Braves.

Mets 5, Expos 2
George Foster had three hits, including his 18th homer, and Craig Swan recorded his first victory since April 7 to lead the Mets.

Swan, 2-5, pitched seven innings and gave up both runs on five hits. Jesse Orosco went the final two innings, allowing one hit in picking up his 10th save.

Bob Bailor had a two-run single and Ron Hodges an RBI single in the second inning to give the Mets a 2-0 lead.

Montreal's runs on Gary Carter's 11th homer, a two-run shot in the fourth. Steve Rogers, 13-6, was the loser.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3
Steve Lake keyed a four-run spurt in the second inning with a two-run double that carried the Cubs over St. Louis.

Dickie Noles, 4-6, helped his own cause in the second when he followed with a run-scoring single. Ryne Sandberg then drove in Lake for the inning's final run.

The Cubs got their final run in the third when Bill Buckner doubled and later scored on Mel Hall's sacrifice fly.

St. Louis got its runs on Lonnie Smith's two-run single in the seventh and George Hendrick's RBI double in the eighth. Neil Allen, 7-10, was the loser.

Dodgers 3, Reds 1
Alejandro Pena, 9-5, gave the struggling Dodgers their first complete game since June 19 with a four-hitter over the Reds.

Mike Marshall, extending his hitting streak to 12 games, drove in the tying and go-ahead runs with a two-run single in the fourth. He later scored on Jack Fimple's groundout.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the fourth on singles by Dave Concepcion, Gary Redus and Cesar Cedeno. Frank Pastore, 4-10, was the loser.

The victory was only the second in the last seven games, and the sixth in the last 17 for the Dodgers.

Astros 4, Padres 2
Bill Doran's two-run homer in the top of the 12th inning lifted the Astros over the Padres.

Doran's fifth homer of the season came with one out after Ray Knight led off the inning with a single and Alan Ashby sacrificed pinch-runner Denny Walling to second.

Verne Ruhle, 3-3, pitched the final three innings for the Astros while Padre reliever Sid Monge lost for the first time in five decisions.

The Padres tied the game 2-2 with two runs in the ninth off three Astro pitchers.

Dickie Thon provided the first run for the Astros with a first-inning sacrifice fly. He scored the second run in the fourth on Phil Garner's single.

Furman Picked In Southern

BOONE (AP) — Southern Conference football champion Furman is the choice of coaches and sports information directors to win the title this year for the fourth straight time.

Last fall, the Palidans finished with a 6-1 conference record and advanced to the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs with a 9-2 record. Furman lost its opening playoff game 17-0 to South Carolina State.

Furman is trying to become the first team to win four consecutive Southern Conference football championships since West Virginia did so in 1953-56.

"The conference seems more balanced and more competitive," Palidan coach Dick Sheridan said. "I think we're in for one of the more exciting conference races."

Furman, which received 121 points and 10 first-place ballots, was followed by Tennessee-Chattanooga, which won the conference title outright in 1979 and tied for the crown on two other occasions. Tennessee-Chattanooga received 118 points and seven first-place votes.

Western Carolina, coming off a first-place finish last season, was picked to finish there once again and received 96 points with one first-place ballot.

The Moccasins tied Furman for league honors in 1978 and were knotted for Virginia Military Institute in 1977. Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Bill Oliver expects another battle as he tries to get his team to the top.

"If we can have certain people come through on defense, we'll be just as good as we were last year," Oliver said. "We're light years ahead of where we were in 1982."

Appalachian State was picked to finish fourth, receiving 83 points. The Citadel got 69 points. VMI got 63 points, while East Tennessee State polled 40.

Closing out the balloting were Marshall with 37 points and Davidson with 21 points.

Davidson will compete in the conference football championship race this year for the first time since 1975. The Wildcats will meet the Citadel and Furman in conference competition, although those games will not count for the Palidans or the Bulldogs. Games against Lafayette, James Madison and S.C. State will count in the conference standings.

Jack Is Ready To Win Again

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — An eyeball examination of Jack Nicklaus' putter and wedge have turned his game around and made the Golden Bear a definite contender in the 65th PGA national championship.

"Last week was the best I've played in months. It was very encouraging."

"I feel like I'm playing well enough to win again," Nicklaus said before a practice round Wednesday on the 6,946-yard Riviera Country Club course.

And, Nicklaus said, "I have to give credit to David Graham," an old friend and a former PGA and U.S. Open champion.

Nicklaus and Graham, who has a secondary occupation as golf club designer, were playing a practice round prior to the Canadian Open last week in Oakville, Ontario.

"David asked me, 'Jack, have you been leaving a lot of putts to the left?' I said I had," Nicklaus related.

"He said he thought the putter was bent. And maybe the wedge, too."

"He took them in the shop and tested them. They were bent. He straightened them out."

"I said, going into the Canadian Open, I hadn't been playing particularly well for a long time. I wasn't playing particularly badly. I wasn't doing anything bad, but I wasn't doing anything very well, either. I was just playing golf."

"I felt like I played reasonably well at times in the U.S. Open, and hit the ball reasonably well a couple of rounds in the British Open."

"But I just wasn't scoring," he said. The ability to score, Nicklaus said, is built around the short game and two clubs — the putter and wedge.

"I started playing well in the Canadian Open. I scored well. I did everything I had to do to win the golf tournament — everything except make the putt on the last hole."

"That was disappointing. I wanted to win that tournament."

"But it also was very encouraging. Very. That's the best I've played since the Florida swing (in March). I felt like I could make something happen when I needed to. Coming into the PGA, that's a good feeling."

Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles, will be seeking a record sixth PGA title in the tournament that begins Thursday.

Corrales' Indians Win Fourth Straight

By The Associated Press
Pat Corrales was sitting in first place in the National League East two weeks ago with the Philadelphia Phillies. For that, he was fired.

Now, Corrales is sitting on top of a four-game winning streak as manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland, the only team not in contention in the American League East race, swept first-place Baltimore 3-1 and 4-3 Tuesday night. Since Corrales replaced Mike Ferraro as the Indians' pilot on Sunday, the team hasn't lost.

"When you lose, the game's no fun," said Corrales. "You spell fun W-I-N."

"It's not real hard, once they start playing well. Occasionally you're going to lose a game. You just can't get down. If you lose, you have to have confidence that you can come back."

Like Cleveland, the Toronto Blue Jays and Milwaukee Brewers were double winners Tuesday, further tightening the division. Toronto blasted the New York Yankees 10-9 in 10 innings and 13-6. Milwaukee downed Kansas City 5-1 and 3-2.

Boston beat Texas 6-5.

Chicago took Detroit 7-5. California edged Minnesota 2-1, and Seattle outlasted Oakland 15-12.

Andre Thornton drove in three runs in the doubleheader and Bud Anderson got saves in both games. Bert Blyleven, out 19 days with a stiff right shoulder, pitched six shutout innings in the opener.

"I'm trying to learn about the team and find out some things," said Corrales, who has juggled the Cleveland lineup and has the Indians playing more aggressively, "and I wanted to get a win or two. We managed to do that."

They were helped by Jim Essian's second successful squeeze bunt in two days, Cleveland's first in four years.

"That's the way I manage," added Corrales. "It looks kind of funny when it doesn't work. You're going to get burned sometimes."

"Since Pat's been here, it's been fun," said Alan Bannister. "He's made us create an exciting game. I was just telling somebody, usually when you come into the dugout, there's somebody yelling at you, cussing at you. Tonight, about the third or fourth inning, when I came in, I heard some fan yell, 'Hey, you guys can play.'"

Blue Jays 10-13, Yankees 9-6
Before the largest crowd in Toronto's seven-year history, 45,102, the Jays stormed back from 6-2 and 9-7 deficits in the opener and broke open the nightcap with six runs in the fifth. Rookie Matt Williams, in his major-league debut, lasted five innings for the second-game victory.

In the first game, Roy Lee Jackson, 8-1, set a club-record with his seventh consecutive victory.

"It's a lift when you get that many people behind you screaming and hollering," said Rance Mulliniks, who drove in four runs in the nightcap. "It helps you. It's great to see that many people out at a ballgame in Toronto. You start thinking about must games."

The Blue Jays, who moved within a game of first-place Baltimore, managed 28 hits in the twinbill, with Lloyd Moseby homering twice. Graig Nettles hit one in each game for the Yankees and Roy Smalley had two in the opener.

Brewers 5-3, Royals 1-2
Ted Simmons homered on Larry Gura's first pitch in the bottom of the ninth for Milwaukee's second victory. The Brewers, now 1½ games out, won the first game as Ben Oglivie drove in four runs, three of them with a tie-breaking sixth-inning homer.

Angels 2, Twins 1
Ron Jackson, a former Twin, hit a two-run homer in the ninth to lift the Angels to victory in a game filled with controversy.

With no outs and the bases loaded in the eighth inning, Gary Ward hit what appeared to be a single up the middle. Darrell Brown was on second and took off for third. He and shortstop Rick Burleson collided and then Brown went for home after Houston Jimenez had scored, apparently making the score 3-0.

Umpire John Shulock called runner's interference on Brown. Brown was out and Ward's single became a fielder's choice and Jimenez had to return to third.

"He just ran straight into me," Brown said. "He made a great play because it worked for him. I didn't think anyone would call a play as obvious as that. He was braced to hit me, with his arms up."

"I reacted to the ball," claimed Burleson, "and Brown was there and contact was made. I can't say if I would have gotten to the ball, but..."

Red Sox 6, Rangers 5
Boston, which is eight games out in the East, was led by rookie Dennis Boyd, recalled from Pawtucket Saturday, who struck out four and pitched a six-hitter over six innings. Bob Stanley picked up his 20th save.

The collapsing Rangers have lost seven straight 21 of their last 26 games.

White Sox 7, Tigers 5
Greg Walker, who's been in a slump, and Greg Luzinski, who most certainly has not, led the White Sox, who are 5½ games in front in the West.

Walker knocked in two runs, one with an opposite field homer, and Luzinski—who had two home runs Monday night—singled in two runs in a three-run first for Chicago.

Mariners 15, A's 12
The Hendersons, Dave and Steve, each had two homers, with Dave knocking in five runs in a wild shootout in Seattle.

Oakland's Carney Lansford matched Henderson's five RBI and two homers and a single, while teammate Dwayne Murphy drove in four runs.

Seattle scored five times in the first, only to have Oakland come up with eight second-inning runs.

Have-Nots Gear Up For Game

By The Associated Press
The Houston Oilers and the Baltimore Colts are gearing up for one of the preseason's most attractive matchups— attractive, that is, if you happen to enjoy a futile struggle of the have-nots.

The Oilers, the National Football League's worst indoor team in 1982, will host the Colts, the NFL's worst team— indoor or outdoor— Thursday night in the Astrodome in the first exhibition game for both clubs. They meet again in Baltimore on the season's final weekend.

"We need to get some victories behind us," said Houston Coach Ed Biles. "We feel it is important to establish some momentum."

The Colts, who gained a small measure with a 21-10 victory over a team of Washington Redskins rookies in a recent scrimmage, finished the strike-interrupted 1982 season 0-8-1. They scored fewer points than any team in the league and finished last in the AFC East.

Mike Pagel, a second-year man from Arizona State, will quarterback the Colts for the first half and Mark Hermann, whom Baltimore obtained from Denver in the John Elway deal, will play the second half.

Biles has named Gifford Nielsen to start at quarterback for the Oilers, who were last in the AFC Central at 1-8-0 and allowed the most points (245) in the conference. Sophomore Oliver Luck will replace Nielsen in the third quarter and veteran Archie Manning will follow.

Two players not accompanying the Colts to Houston today were tight end Dean

Roberts, who was released Tuesday, and defensive tackle Cris Riehm, who walked out of camp without an explanation.

The NFL's drug epidemic may be jeopardizing a lot of promising careers, but it is providing a golden opportunity for two Cincinnati Bengals, Glen Collins and Charles Alexander. They will try to capitalize on that beginning with Saturday night's preseason game at Riverfront Stadium against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Collins, a second-year player from Mississippi State, will take Ross Browner's defensive end position, while Alexander moves to starting fullback, a position vacated by Pete Johnson. Johnson and Browner, who admitted they had bought cocaine, are serving a suspension issued by Commissioner Pete Rozelle. It extends through the first four weeks of the regular season.

"He's a fine athlete in his own right who was great in college and now he's getting his big chance with us," General Manager Paul Brown said of Collins.

"When Johnson tailed off in the latter part of the 1982 season, we were already thinking in terms of trying Charles at fullback," Brown added. "In the long run, it may make us stronger, if their replacements come through."

Elsewhere around the camps, injuries abound. Minnesota Vikings wide receiver Sam McCullum, the former Seattle player representative whose release before last year's opener elicited protests by the players union, had surgery in Minneapolis to repair a torn ligament in his left thumb and will miss from three to six weeks.

The Green Bay Packers reported defensive end Byron Driggs will be sidelined for a week after undergoing arthroscopic surgery for a knee ailment.

City League Champions
Jimmy's 66 captured the National Division championship of the City League and then won the overall City League championship this year. Members of the team are, first row, left to right: Jerry Clark, Dave Clark, Mike Harrell, Roy Carawan, Charles Meeks, Chuck Humphrey, Lenwood Brown; second row, Mike Conger, Hal Conger, Fred Hill, Mark Duckworth, Ted Jordan, Rosie Cox, Stan Joyner, Lyman Hardee, Kemp Bradshaw and Jeff Wagstaff. Not shown is Charles Rice.

British Team Enjoys Success

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — It was a day of yacht racing success and humanitarian zeal for the British Victory '83 group at the America's Cup trials.

Their record for the day Tuesday in Rhode Island Sound:

Two victories over major opponents.

—Qualifying for the cup semifinals beginning Aug. 11.

—Emergency aid for the injured crewman of their chief opponent, Australia II.

"We haven't done anything dramatic to change the boat," said spokesman Jim Alabaster, who said the crew recently moved the Victory '83's winches and rigged a new genoa jib track.

"We're just learning to sail with that combination," he added.

Victory '83, under joint skipper Phil Crebbin and Lawrie Smith, hung on in the morning race to defeat a determined Australian crew on Challenge 12 by 27 seconds at the finish. In the afternoon, Italy's Azzurra was beaten by one minute, 12 seconds.

The results hoisted Victory '83 into second place in standing, and knocked Azzurra down to third.

The day was a melancholy one for the crews of France 3 and Advance of Australia who were formally told what they have known for several days — that they are out of contention.

France 3 and Advance were scheduled for a final race against each other, but even that didn't work out. Advance had a fitting failure and retired, leaving France 3 to finish the course alone.

The challenger race committee gave France 3 skipper Bruno Trouble the formal bad news at the dock after the day's racing. The Advance crew came in early and got the word at its living quarters.

Australia II, already qualified for the semifinals with a 34-4 record, was knocked out of the day's second race as bowman Scott McAllister, 31, suffered a broken left arm at the top of the mast.

He was hurt when a mast-head fitting broke in strong winds. Another crewman, Colin Beasely, swarmed up the mast to rescue him, rigging a security line so he could be lowered to the deck.

The British support boats, hearing Australia II radio for aid, immediately sent over Navy medic Barry Thomas to give McAllister first aid, then rushed him ashore where the British dockmaster took him to Newport Hospital.

McAllister, veteran of three America's Cup tries, was reported in good condition Tuesday night.

Work crews immediately pulled out the mast of Australia II for repairs after she docked.

Australia II, with a novel keel shape which is kept secret, methodically sailed off to a two-minute victory over Azzurra in the morning race.

The day's racing left five competitors for four places at the semifinals with these points: Australia II, 17.88; Victory '83, 12.44; Azzurra, 11.20; Canada 1, 10.72; Challenge 12, 9.60.

Three races are left. Today's races involve Canada 1 against Victory '83 and Challenge 12 opposing Azzurra.

Cleveland Unveils New Logo, Uniforms For 1983

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — If keeping things short and to the point is the shape of things to come in the National Basketball Association, the Cleveland Cavaliers will be in on the ground floor.

The Cavaliers unveiled a new logo, uniform and colors Tuesday, choosing to emphasize their nickname — the Cavs — in a design which they hope will become a highly visible and promotable symbol of the team.

The new colors, replacing the old wine and gold, are burnt orange, white and royal blue.

Replacing the swordman in billowing cape and swashbuckling boots, encircled by the words Cleveland and Cavaliers, is a new four-letter logo consisting simply of the Cavs nickname with the "V" designed to look like a basketball net with a ball starting to come through it.

The new home uniform will be white, with an orange logo and numbers, and orange and white trim. On the road, the Cavs will wear an orange uniform with blue trim and white logo and numbers.

Harry Weltman, the team's executive vice president and general manager, said that research showed that three-fourths of the fans refer to the team by the shortened nickname, anyway.

Higuera Falls To Brown In U.S. Clay Tourney

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jose Higuera of Spain is finding the playing style that made him the world's number top-rated player on clay difficult these days.

"I don't feel like hitting 50-60 balls or even a 100 to win a point," said Higuera after the defending champion was upset Tuesday by Jimmy Brown in his opening match of the 74th U.S. Open Clay Court championships.

"I have not been playing very well for a few weeks," said Higuera, who was top seeded in the tournament on the basis of his current computer ranking as the world's No. 6 tennis player — a ranking attained with his willingness to stay back on the baseline and wait for an opponent's error.

"I've made a lot of mistakes. My concentration has been very bad. I don't feel like playing too much lately. I'm not thinking about what I should be doing out there," said Higuera, 30, who made his debut in the pro rankings in 1974 when Brown, 18, was still in grade school.

Brown, currently 77th in the men's tennis computer ratings, ousted Higuera, 6-2, 6-2 at the Indianapolis Sports Center.

"After the first 4-5 games, he looked a little tired to me," said Brown, a resident of Brentwood, Tenn., whose main claim to tennis fame is winning the national 18 and under clay court championship in 1981. "I decided to just keep it in play and move it around. Sometimes he gets a little impatient."

Brown, who along with third-seeded Jimmy Arias and No. 8 Mel Purcell are the only Americans left in contention for the top men's prize of $51,000, is going after his first Grand Prix victory although he won a $50,000 tournament in Italy earlier this year that was not an official event.

Arias also advanced with a 6-2, 6-3 triumph over Pedro Rebolledo of Chile in the final match of the night. In earlier play the winners included No.

7 Shlomo Glickstein of Israel and No. 10 Mario Martinez of Bolivia.

In the only other upset of the day, Francesco Cancellotti of Italy eliminated No. 9 John Alexander of Australia, 6-4, 7-5.

Fourth-seeded Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden downed Jairo Velasco of Columbia 6-3, 6-4. No. 5. Chris Lewis of New Zealand fought off three-time champion Manuel Orantes, 7-6, 7-5 with a 7-4 decision in the tiebreaker.

Every seeded women's player in action Tuesday advanced. The list included top-seeded Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and No. 2 Kathy Rinaldi. Temesvari moved past Pilar Vasquez of Peru, 6-3, 6-3.

Farm Belt Filibuster Frustrates Supports Freeze

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block made a last-ditch plea to farm belt senators today that proved unsuccessful in ending the filibuster against his plan to freeze a price support component for grain.

"It seems incredible to me that we can have legislation that makes so much sense and we can't bring it to a vote," Block said after emerging from a closed-door, hour-long session with the 11 senators.

"The door is still open. I'm willing to talk," Block said. But while hoping for an "eleventh-hour solution" to the impasse, he was not optimistic anything would happen before the month-long congressional recess begins Friday.

The filibuster is also holding up legislation making major cost-cutting changes in the multibillion-dollar dairy program and Block reaffirmed his position that the price-support freeze, and the dairy plan must be passed as a package.

As they left the meeting, opponents of Block's proposal to freeze so-called target prices refused to budge on the filibuster they started last week. Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., led the opponents.

Continuation of that filibuster Monday prompted Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., to pull the bill from further floor debate so the Senate could move on to other business.

"There's a substantial number of us who have been in direct communication with the agriculture people in our states and believe the bill should be put aside," Melcher said.

Block, trying to slash the $21.2 billion price tag of this year's farm support program, says the government would save $3.8 billion by freezing target prices for the 1984 and 1985 grain crops at this year's level.

Dole and others backing Block have warned that unless farm program costs are severely curtailed it may be impossible to pass a new farm package as scheduled in 1985.

"One of these days the city slickers in the Senate chamber and the House chamber are going to catch on about what their country cousins have been doing with farm costs," Dole told Melcher on Monday.

"If we're not willing to tighten up a bit, we may not have a farm program in 1985," he warned.

Block, hoping to clear the way for a vote on the bill, announced late last week alternative federal programs for the 1984 wheat crop based on what Congress decided on the target price freeze.

Under the target price plan, farmers get direct federal payments when market prices are depressed to make up the difference between the present target and the low market price. The target price for the 1983 wheat crop is $4.30 a bushel. Without the freeze, it is scheduled to rise to $4.45 next year.

Aug. 15 is the deadline for announcing the program, which deals mainly with how much land farmers must idle to remain eligible for price support protection. It's critical in producer planning for the new crop.

But no matter which alternative is used, Block said he will impose a 10 percent administrative cut in the basic price support loan for wheat, dropping that critical income-protection component to $3.30 a bushel.

Farmers generally use the federal loan program to secure operating capital between the time they harvest their crop and the time they decide to sell it. But recently, market prices have been so low that many producers are forfeiting their crop to the government and keeping the loan money.

But the decision to cut the loan rate actually increased opposition to Block's overall plan. Melcher, who single-handedly blocked Senate action on another farm bill late last year, said the only way he'll stop the filibuster now is if Block agrees to increase, not reduce, the rate from this year's $3.65 a bushel.

Block contends the reduced loan rate will return American commodities to a competitive international position. Melcher and other critics claim the cut and the target-price freeze will only aggravate the financial problems farmers already face.

House Approves A King Holiday

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief House sponsor of a Martin Luther King Jr. national holiday says she is "not going to rest" following the bill's first legislative victory in 15 years, but will immediately begin wooing the Reagan administration and the Senate for support.

Rep. Katie Hall, a freshman Democrat from Gary, Ind., was floor manager for the bill Tuesday when the House voted 338-90 to make the third Monday in January a legal national holiday in King's honor.

Every year since the civil rights leader was assassinated on April 4, 1968, legislation was introduced in both houses to create a new national holiday, the nation's 10th.

But the Senate never passed the measure and neither did the House until Tuesday, when Mrs. Hall called supporters to the House microphone and they responded with often emotional, sometimes eloquent remarks about King's dream of equality.

Opponents spoke too, usually to a silent chamber, contending that King should be honored — but not with another costly paid holiday for the federal work force. State and local governments and many private businesses likely would follow the federal example, they said.

Mrs. Hall, a former teacher, will face a difficult task convincing the Reagan administration and the Republican-controlled Senate to support her bill.

The administration said in a position paper it supports honoring the birthday of King, who was born Jan. 15, 1929.

But the paper said the administration does not believe "the commemoration should involve closing down the government and creating an additional paid holiday for federal employees."

Mrs. Hall, in an interview Tuesday night, said, "We found quite a few senators who say they're willing to support the bill. I plan to start working Wednesday with members of the Senate."

"I have not gone to the White House. I intend to make contact with the White House, either the president or his legislative coordinators in Congress. I'll work with labor organizations, business and religious groups. It will be a massive effort. We're not going to rest until the job's done."

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., has introduced legislation to celebrate King's actual birthday as a national holiday.

The measure is before the Judiciary Committee, but panel chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has not yet scheduled it for consideration. There's virtually no possibility of committee action before Congress recesses this week until Sept. 12.

Mark Goodin, Thurmond's press secretary, said the senator personally opposes creating any additional national holidays.

However Tom Griscom, press secretary for Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Baker supports a national holiday honoring King.

Coretta Scott King, widow of the slain leader, said in Atlanta that she was "pleased and encouraged" by the House vote and hopes the Senate "will move as swiftly and responsibly."

Mrs. Hall's bill would take effect in 1986 if signed into law this year.

Claims Killing 100 Women

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — A handyman who claims to have killed 100 women and who faces trial in the 1979 murder of a female hitchhiker says women should be more cautious about hitchhiking.

Henry Lee Lucas, 46, who has been charged in four other slayings, made the statements on the way to a court hearing Tuesday. State District Judge John Carter set Lucas' trial for Oct. 17 and scheduled a hearing for Oct. 4 at which Lucas will enter a plea.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said Lucas told him that "he wanted to caution all female hitchhikers to stay home. He talks like he wants to spread the word far and wide."

Passengers Restrained
A Hijacker

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — A laid-off Pan Am employee came to the aid of his former employer, thwarting the hijacking of a Houston-bound jetliner by wrestling a Cuban who gave up rather than fight "three fairly virile American males," witnesses said.

The jetliner, carrying 121 passengers and a crew of seven from Miami, landed safely Tuesday at Houston Intercontinental Airport, where police and FBI agents arrested the would-be hijacker, said FBI agent John Guido.

It was the second time in two weeks that passengers have foiled an air piracy, although there have been nine hijackings this year.

The suspect, identified by the FBI as Alfredo Ayala, 30, had told a stewardess in Spanish that he was going to take control of Pan Am Flight 925, said Joe McGuinness, Pan Am director of sales.

The man, apparently unarmed, moved toward the cockpit of the Boeing 727 and was overheard by passenger Spicer Lung, 45, who had worked for Pan Am for 18 years and was a catering manager in Houston until he was laid off three weeks ago, McGuinness said.

Lung and his 15-year-old son, Spicer Lung Jr., leaped from their seats and grappled with the man, McGuinness said.

A flight attendant identified as Fernando Viollas Lobos, of Houston, and another passenger, Ralph Symons, joined the struggle and helped subdue the man.

Using some hemp from the cockpit, a pair of plastic handcuffs and a seat belt, Lung tied the would-be air pirate into a first-class seat, where he sat quietly for the rest of the flight, McGuinness said.

"I didn't realize at first what was happening," said Symons, a Miami attorney. "By the time I got out of the seat ... Spicer had his arm behind his back, the kid had him by the throat and pushed him up against the wall, and I grabbed him."

"So suddenly the guy was looking at three fairly virile American males. All of us were a little hostile at that point," Symons said.

"I tell you, he (the hijacker) lost all desire by then," he added.

Guido said Ayala was scheduled to go before a U.S. magistrate today, and Ron Kettler of the Houston FBI office said the Cuban man would be charged with attempted air piracy or interference with a flight crew.

The flight left Miami at 6:50 p.m. EDT, and the pilot radioed at 7:10 p.m. that the aircraft was being hijacked. Six minutes later the pilot said a passenger had subdued the hijacker and the flight would continue to Houston.

"We heard a rumble in the first-class section and didn't know what to think," said Lulu Evans, 37, who was returning to Houston from a vacation. "Then a few minutes later the pilot came on (the intercom) and said that a passenger had expressed a desire to go to Cuba, but that he had been restrained and we were on our way to Houston."

"It was all very calm," Ms. Evans said.

Lung, described by McGuinness as "a typical shy hero," slipped out of the airport without talking to reporters. "The incident was over and he doesn't want to talk about it," he said.

Frank Ward, the assistant director of Houston's aviation department, said Lung was "very sincere and very proud of the fact that not only had he done something good for the passengers, but he had also done something positive for Pan Am."

Joe Ramirez, a Pan Am employee who had worked with Lung, said Lung worked for the airline for 18 years, mostly in Nicaragua. Lung came to Houston about five years ago and was named catering manager a year ago, Ramirez said.

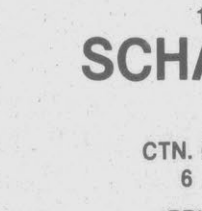

"Without him, I don't know what would have happened. He was really wonderful to help us," said passenger Teresa Negreg, of Mexico City.

"ENPP N LDNAU N LDNAU."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BOASTING PLUMBER'S GREAT DELUSIONS: PIPE DREAMS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals I.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

A rubber bridge player could easily be satisfied with the queen of diamonds. When that worked, he would repeat the finesse, and would not be disturbed when West showed out. He would get back to dummy with a club, repeat the finesse in diamonds, and give up a trick to the king of spades to make his small slam.

The good duplicate player would see that he has a chance for 13 tricks. He would win the king of hearts, cash the king of clubs and enter dummy by overtaking the jack of clubs with the queen. When both defenders follow to that trick, declarer should realize that he has a third entry in the club suit.

Next, the spots in diamonds are important. Declarer would lead the nine of diamonds and underplay the eight from his hand. When the finesse succeeds, he is still in dummy to lead the queen of diamonds. East can duck, but declarer repeats the finesse and picks up the diamonds.

Now he leads the ten of clubs to the ace and takes the spade finesse. He can still get back to the table by overtaking the three of clubs with the four to repeat the spade finesse and make all 13 tricks for an overtrick.

Tropical Storm Menaces Oahu

HONOLULU (AP) — A tropical storm packing 40 mph winds and heavy rains was headed toward Oahu, Hawaii's more populous island, where coastal residents were warned to be ready to evacuate.

Tropical Storm Gil was about 290 miles east of the island chain on Tuesday, and was moving toward the islands at 20 mph.

Civil Defense officials issued advisories for residents in coastal areas to be prepared to leave their homes in case the high surf kicked up by the storm becomes destructive.

Gale warnings and high surf warnings were issued for all of Hawaii's 1 million residents, officials said.

Last November, Hurricane Iwa swept past the island chain, causing millions of dollars of damage on the islands of Oahu and Kauai.

Hope To Extend Monroe Runway

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Monroe officials say they will apply to the Federal Aviation Agency for a special grant to acquire the land to extend the city's airport runway 1,200 feet.

The application will be submitted to the FAA in Atlanta on Aug. 11.

City officials went to Atlanta last week to try to speed up the city's application for a $1.7 million project to extend the runway from 4,100 feet to 5,300 feet and install an instrument landing system.

With a federal grant, 90 percent of the money would come from the FAA, 5 percent from the state and 5 percent from the city.

ABA Votes Ethics Code

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — The American Bar Association's policymaking House of Delegates today approved a model ethics code that blocks lawyers from blowing the whistle on clients guilty of fraud and other white-collar crimes.

By a voice vote, the 383 delegates, whose votes form official policy of the 300,000-lawyer organization, ended six years of haggling over the new code.

The new code will now be offered for adoption by individual states and the federal courts.

"This document is the result of a tremendous amount of compromise," said Boston lawyer Robert M. Seavey, who headed the commission that hammered out the code.

The proposed code, originally a bold document that even included requirements that lawyers provide some of their services for free, was watered down significantly since introduced to replace a model ethics code adopted by the ABA in 1969.

That code, which in itself carries no weight of law, serves as a model for binding lawyer-conduct laws in about two-thirds of the states. It is up to state authorities, usually a state's highest court, to discipline lawyers. The states are free to adopt all or part of the new code, or to ignore it.

The House of Delegates adopted about 80 percent of the new code's provisions last February, but rejected one that would have allowed lawyers to turn in corrupt clients to head off fraud.

The lawyer-client confidentiality provision was changed to allow such whistle-blowing only "to prevent a client from committing a criminal act that the lawyer believes is likely to result in imminent death or substantial bodily harm."

If a lawyer learns of a client's fraud, the new code requires that he or she drop the client without explaining why.

That provision sparked some debate again today, when Gerald Richman of Miami, representing the Florida Bar Association, said his state's lawyers wanted to make lawyer whistle-blowing mandatory.

"The Florida Bar has lived with that for 13 or 14 years with no problem at all," Richman said.

Those who opposed the provision that would have allowed lawyers to tell law enforcement authorities about their clients' fraud say a lawyer's first responsibility must be to the client. They say the lawyer-client relationship is similar to that of a priest and penitent, or a news reporter and a confidential source.

ABA President Morris Harrell, a Dallas lawyer, said he hopes the public will understand that lawyer-client confidentiality "is a necessary ingredient of the legal system."

On Monday, President Reagan told the ABA that feminist and minority criticism of his appointment policies is "hogwash," and said his administration has hired more women for top policy posts than any other in the same period.

But in Washington, the National Women's Political Caucus said Reagan had appointed only 78 women to top posts, while President Carter had appointed 97 women to such jobs in a comparable period.

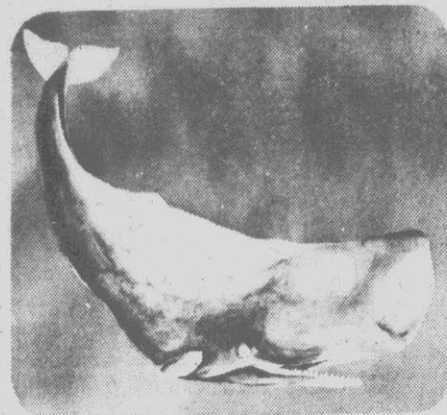

Also on tap during the ABA's national convention: — A recommendation that the ABA lobby the federal, state and local governments to pass laws banning discrimination against homosexuals in employment, housing and public accommodations.

— A request that the organization once again shift gears and seek a federal ban on members of racially discriminatory private clubs claiming their dues as tax-deductible business expenses.

The ABA went on record in early 1982 as favoring such a federal ban, but last summer reversed itself after coming under a heavy lobbying effort by the National Club Association and the Conference of Private Organizations.

— A vote on whether to oppose any Federal Trade Commission regulation of lawyers. FTC Chairman James Miller may appear before the delegates to urge that such opposition not be adopted.

— Competing proposals for changes in the Freedom of Information Act calling for more — or less — secrecy among government agencies, especially the Central Intelligence Agency.

FOCUSThe Great Whales

Tomorrow the U.S. Postal Service plans to release commemorative stamps designed to call attention to the plight of the great whales. One species — the Atlantic gray whale — is already extinct, and others are endangered. Though the U.S. has banned whaling, it shares responsibility for this tragedy. Until the mid-1800s, the U.S. was the world's leading whaling nation. Some 700 American whaling ships sailed the seas in the 1800s — more than those of all other nations combined. Whales were hunted for oil to light lamps, and for whalebone — a substance that was used to make products from umbrellas to corsets. The impact American whalers had on the world's whale population is felt to this day.

DO YOU KNOW?—What are the two main whaling nations today?

Governors Plan Act On Acid Rain Issue

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Describing the acid rain issue as a "large train coming," the nation's governors have moved to give themselves a role in shaping solutions to the problem.

The Committee on Energy and Environment of the National Governors' Association decided Monday to establish a 10-member task force to try to find ways to reduce acid emissions falling on the Northeast and other areas of the country.

Acid rain is caused by emissions from coal-burning utilities, industrial pollution and automobile exhaust.

Members of the task force will be appointed by the incoming chairman of the association, Illinois Gov. James Thompson.

Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire will be the task force chairman, Norman VanderNoot, a top Sununu aide, said today.

Other Northeastern representatives will be Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, he said.

In addition to the three governors from the Northeast, the task force will have three from the Midwest and two each from the South and West.

Democratic Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia, chairman of the Committee on Energy and Environment, said he hoped the group would have a balance of members from generating states and those incurring high amounts of acid rain.

Industry Leaders Watch A Low-Cost TV Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's new summertime show, "Eye on Hollywood," makes its debut Thursday night, and chances are Hollywood will have its eye on the program, too.

The half-hour, weekly video magazine, which will spotlight show-biz glamor and the Southern California lifestyle, is, in fact, a re-tread. It's patterned after a highly successful magazine show on the local ABC station called "Eye on L.A."

While no trend-setter, "Eye on Hollywood" is expected to attract some degree of industry interest, partly because of the relatively low cost of producing the half-hour show.

"Whether 'Eye on Hollywood' is successful or not, there's going to be a continuing search to make shows at an economic price," says Craig Haffner, co-producer and head of programming for KABC, the local ABC-owned station from which the network purchased the show.

"A ballpark figure is that we can deliver a show for half the cost of a situation comedy," Haffner says. A half-hour sitcom costs the network roughly $450,000-$600,000.

"The coming of cable has brought a demand for more product," he says. "I think network television is in the same position now that network radio was in when television came along. It's suffering from escalating costs. It's still big, but not as big as it once was. So the networks are now looking for ways to produce programs at a cost they can afford."

"Eye on Hollywood" is made up of a mixture of segments from the local show and of new clips shot for the network version.

The premiere show takes a look at hopefuls trying to make it in Hollywood, does a retrospective on Rod Serling's "Twilight Zone," visits the penquins at San Diego's Sea World, and does a fast look at the denizens of Venice Beach.

The show is the first regular network exposure for Tawny Schneider, a former Miss America who has been a contributing hostess to "Eye on L.A." for the past four years. She shares duties on the network show with Chuck Henry and Johnny Mountain, also from "Eye on L.A."

Miss Schneider met her new husband, John Schneider of "The Dukes of Hazzard," while working on the local magazine show.

"Actually, the first time I met him was at the Academy Awards in 1982, when I was hosting the pre-Oscar show," she recalls. "I didn't like him. I had a terrible first impression. Then 'Eye on L.A.' sent me to interview him. I tried to get out of it. That was last Oct. 8, and we started dating after that."

Haffner, who helped sell the show to the network, says, "We're not a clone of 'Entertainment Tonight.' That's an entertainment magazine. We are a lifestyles magazine of Southern California. The focus will be on the trend-setting styles of this area."

Is the rest of the country that interested in Southern California?

"I grew up in Indiana," Haffner says. "I don't know that I would stop everything in my life to see what's happening in California. But what happens here does influence the rest of the nation."

"If we have mild success with the show," he says, "you may see us back next summer. If we have more than mild success, we could be back sooner."

Drama Workshop Productions Slated

Two old-fashioned melodramas and three skits will be presented to the public at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the auditorium at Wahl-Coates School. There is no admission charge.

The two melodramas are "Kisses and Kisses," and "Wait 'Til The Sun Shines Nellie," also titled "Goodbye, Swivelheart." Several short skits worked up by the students will be included on the program. The entertainments are being presented by young people in the area who have been attending the three-week Summer Drama Workshop which has been held in conjunction with the Community Schools Program.

The workshop began July 18 and concludes this week. Students in grades four through six have attended sessions from 1 to 2:30 p.m. each afternoon, with students in grades seven through nine attending sessions from 3 to 5 p.m. A total of 16 were enrolled in the lower grades, with 18 enrolled in the upper grade level.

Betty Topper, director of the workshop, said students at both levels learned fundamentals of drama including acting techniques, improvisation, stage directions and other elements of theatrical productions.

Five Rose High thespians assisted Mrs. Topper in this year's workshop — Jon Pringle, Brett Hursey, Brenda Stanton, Stacey Sewell and Carol Ambert.

Niven Rites On Tuesday

CHATEAU D'OEX, Switzerland (AP) — Actor David Niven was buried Tuesday in this tiny Swiss mountain resort after modest ceremonies attended by his family, Prince Rainer of Monaco, actress Audrey Hepburn and other friends.

Niven, 73, died here Friday after a year-long battle with a muscle-wasting disease. He made nearly 100 films — winning an Oscar for "Separate Tables" — during his 40-year career.

Niven was buried in a simple grave in the village churchyard.

Violinist Yehudi Menuhin led pupils from his nearby music school in Mendelssohn's Octet for String in F at the ceremony. He said he had chosen the work by the composer, who loved Scotland, in honor of Niven's birthplace.

Besides Menuhin, celebrities at the funeral were Prince Rainier of Monaco, whose late wife, Princess Grace, was a former film star and close friend of Niven's; Miss Hepburn, who lives close by, and author William F. Buckley Jr.

Menuhin said Niven's life bore witness to the saying "there is nothing worth winning except laughter and the love of friends" and praised his "indomitable spirit" during his struggle with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

Relatives said Niven gave the "thumbs-up" sign minutes before he died.

"David was a fine advertisement for himself, his profession and his country," said Arnot Morrison, pastor of St. Peter's Anglican church, where the funeral was held.

Niven had spent his holidays for some 30 years in his chalet in the village.

Niven's widow, Hjordis Tersmeden, the former Swedish model and his second wife, was composed throughout the service but broke down as the wooden coffin was lowered into the ground.

Group Asks TV Commercials On Kiddie Shows 'Scrambled'

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — If a group called Action for Children's Television has its way, American parents may soon be able to block out television commercials aimed at children, an Asheville psychologist says.

Lisa Friedenberg, a psychologist at the University of North Carolina at Asheville, says the ACT has petitioned the Federal Communications Commission to allow the manufacture and use of a scrambling device that would switch off children's commercials.

Ms. Friedenberg says the device is needed because children don't know the difference between programs and advertising.

"Studies have shown that children under 8 years of age can't tell the difference between the commercial and the program," Ms. Friedenberg said. "They have no way to know if a commercial is truthful or not."

"And that's not the worst part," she said. "Studies have also shown that the format of commercials actually perks up a child's attention, that the average child tends to pay more attention to a commercial than a program."

According to Ms. Friedenberg, advertisers have charged that it is parents' responsibility to control what their children watch on TV. But she said ACT has won several victories in their protests against commercials on children's programming.

She said the group forced advertisers of children's vitamins to withdraw their commercials from children's programs, convinced the National Association of Broadcasters to ban the selling of products by hosts of children's TV shows and persuaded the NAB to reduce the maximum amount of advertising time on children's programs on weekends.

Industry analysts say one reason companies are so anxious to advertise their products on children's shows is the cost. In 1980, the cost of a 30-second commercial during children's shows was $30,000, compared with $75,000 during prime-time television.

"It's a real bargain for advertisers, and they know that children don't have the ability to know what's good for them or what they need or don't need," Ms. Friedenberg said. "Advertisers know children are very receptive to their commercials, whether they're pushing candy-flavored cereal or the latest toys."

In a 1974 ruling, the FCC told advertisers they must have a separation between a child's program and the commercial. But Ms. Friedenberg says research shows that the separation is totally ineffective.

But she says the scrambling device will work if the FCC approves it.

According to ACT plan, the devices would be hooked up to televisions. It would be activated by a special signal given by the network before a commercial appeared on the screen.

Chemical Contaminants Could Take Fish Off Menu

By RICHARD T. PIENIAK

Associated Press Writer

The brown trout in Colorado's Arkansas River live only half as long as they used to. Most of those that make it past age 4 are emaciated.

For the past 13 years, only "catch and throw back" fishing has been permitted in the north fork of the Holston River in western Virginia.

Commercial fishing is banned in New York's Hudson River and Massachusetts' New Bedford Harbor — at a loss of thousands of jobs and millions in sales — because of heavy concentrations of polychlorinated biphenyls, PCBs.

And fish in 10 Michigan rivers are contaminated with dioxin.

"It has spread throughout the country. There are no isolated incidents," said Kenneth Kamlet, director of the pollution and toxic substances division of the National Wildlife Federation. "We're leaving a legacy for decades to come. The problems don't go away."

The persistent pollution in the Holston River was caused by mercury-contaminated waste left in disposal ponds at a nearby chlorine and caustic soda factory. The plant has been shut since 1972 but the waste is still there — 11 million tons of it.

The culprit in Colorado is waste from years of mining. Fish in the Arkansas River have been affected as far as 90 miles downstream from Leadville, Colo.

In fact, says biologist Barry R. Nehring of the Colorado Division of Wildlife: "Approximately 400 miles of stream in Colorado have been impacted by mining. Either the fish are eliminated or reduced in number."

And striped bass fishing on the 300-mile-long Hudson River, once a multi-million-dollar business, has been banned since 1976 because of an estimated 300 tons of PCBs resting in river mud.

"I don't think there's any freshwater fish anywhere in the United States that doesn't have some PCBs and DDT in it," Edward Horn, a New York state fisheries expert, said last week.

Next to its effects on the quality of drinking water supplies, chemical contamination hits hardest at freshwater fish, and lately in saltwater species in coastal waterways.

Of the dioxin discoveries in Michigan rivers, Harold Humphrey of the state Department of Public Health said preliminary data indicated "that if testing were done anywhere in the industrialized areas of the United States you could possibly find the same kind of thing."

In New Bedford, Mass., home to the East Coast's most productive fishing fleet in terms of revenue, the harbor contains an estimated 100 tons of PCBs, once used as an electrical transformer coolant.

Tests of harbor mussels by the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute showed PCB levels of 22 parts per million last year, one of the highest readings in the world.

Fishing has been banned in the inner harbor since 1979. There is concern that the PCBs — which made their way into the harbor from two capacitor manufacturers, the town landfill and the municipal wastewater treatment facility — are working their way through Buzzard's Bay and toward the waters of Cape Cod and the Georges Bank fishing region. Local lobstermen have sued the two manufacturers.

While Horn thinks the overall situation is getting better because of intensive detection and cleanup efforts, he said: "We're becoming aware of new problems faster than we are correcting the old ones. ... It looks like it's getting worse but in reality, we're becoming more aware."

"What's really alarming is the number of places in this country with PCBs or DDT or dioxins where the Food and Drug Administration considers the eating of fish to be a health hazard," Horn said.

"The cumulative effects have finally, in some cases, begun to have an effect" on the quality of fish, Horn said. "It's probably no different with acid rain. It's been around since the turn of the century. Now there is an effect we can see and it's happening rapidly rather than slowly."

Stopping the flow of pollution doesn't necessarily end the contamination of fish.

Although DDT hasn't been dumped into Los Angeles County's sewage treatment system for 10 years, bottom feeding fish like Dover sole exhibit a "very sizeable contamination of DDT and PCBs that can only be attributed to the past discharges and the persistence of those contaminants in sediments on the bottom of the river," said the wildlife federation's Kamlet.

The federation also surveyed the James River in Virginia to determine the aftereffects of the extensive dumping in the late 1960s and early 1970s of kepone, an ingredient in ant poison.

Tests were conducted to determine what types of chemicals were being dumped, with emphasis on totaling up how much of each was being dumped by different sources up and down the river.

Researchers found "quite a few, and in many cases unexpected ones" that found their way into fish bodies but were not being routinely monitored, Kamlet said. "For years afterward, and right to this day, the residual effects continue to keep certain types of fish and shellfish off limits because they are unsafe to consume."

All fishing was banned in 1975 from the lower James and lower Chesapeake Bay. Eight years later, commercial fishing is still prohibited, but sports fishermen are allowed to keep their catches. The kepone, meanwhile, remains at the bottom of the river, too expensive to remove.

Another problem with fish contamination is bioaccumulation. When water passes through a fish, some contaminants collect in its tissue and stay there.

Sometimes the consequences are deadly. For example, in Virginia's Piney River more than 150,000 fish died from 1977 to 1981 because of acidic waste runoff from an adjacent titanium mine and plant.

But, Kamlet said, the worst poisoning cases are those that "don't kill fish off but contaminate them. That is really the more dangerous situation because it is then possible for those contaminants to be passed along in the food chain — on to bigger fish, birds, mammals and, of course, human beings."

"A person can't readily tell if they're eating a contaminated fish," Horn said, adding that researchers find it "hard to discern fish contamination unless it's very substantial, almost up to the point of actually preventing reproduction or shortening the life span by a sizeable amount."

As a result, testing of fish has become commonplace and elaborate. In many cases, the testing has led to bans on commercial fishing and health department warnings that residents limit consumption.

For example, officials in Wisconsin recommend against eating in a week more than half a pound of catfish, carp or white bass caught from a PCB-contaminated stretch of the Mississippi.

New York state residents have also been warned not to eat more than one fish meal a week — of any species taken from any body of water in the state. For striped bass, the recommended consumption limit is once a month due to the added presence of dioxin.

And contaminants from New York, sent down the Hudson when the state demolished a dam in 1973, were recently found in fish along the New Jersey coast, 250 miles south.

New Jersey officials have banned sales of striped bass and American eels and issued a once-a-month consumption recommendation for bluefish, white perch and white catfish.

When the Clean Water Act was passed in 1972, it was designed to restore rivers, lakes and streams to "a fishable, swimmable condition by 1985."

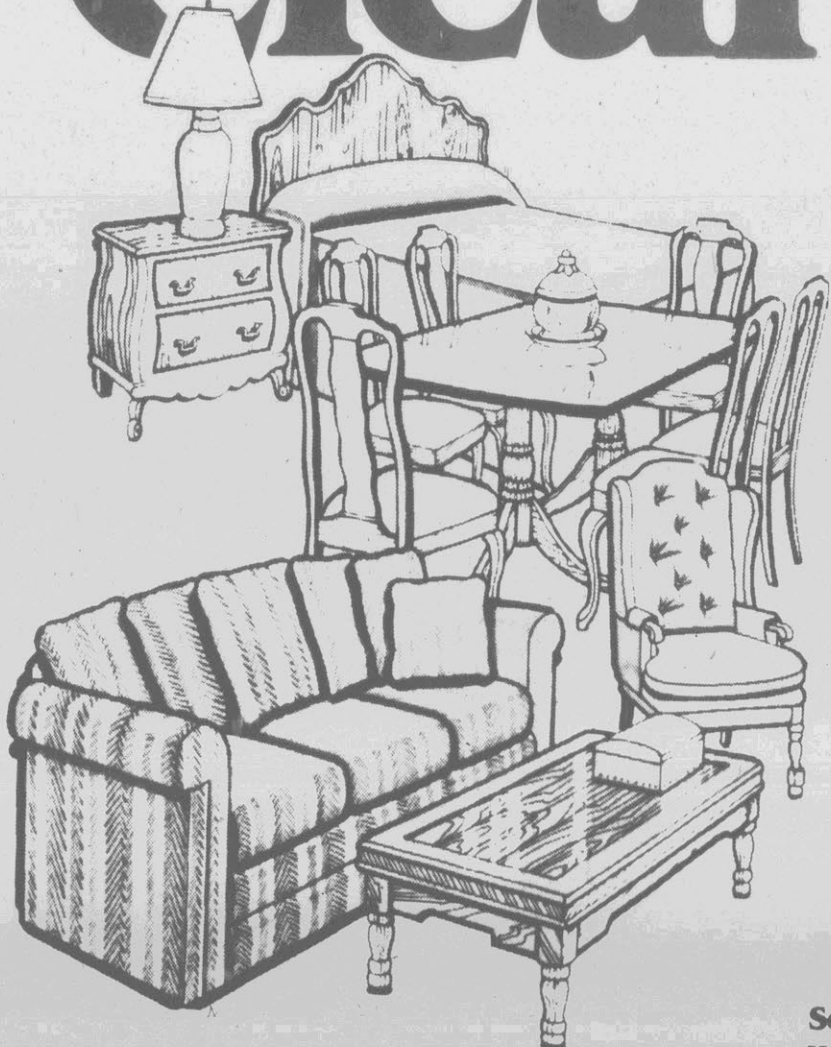

While the nation's rivers and streams carry fewer conventional pollutants than they did 10 years ago — an estimated $30 billion has been spent to improve sewage treatment plants, for example — the water act's goal remains unachievable because of contamination by chemicals and heavy metals.

Quell Angry Outbursts

With Professional Help

Our 18-year-old daughter has had terrible periods of uncontrollable anger. After that she becomes depressed and we cannot get her out of the house to go to school or be with friends. We don't know where to turn. — Mrs. K.W., Va.
Dear Mrs. W.:

You did not in any way intimate in your letter where you have "turned" in an effort to help your daughter. You do not suggest that you have sought professional guidance or help. Consequently I must assume that you have been trying to "solve this problem yourself." And that is a basic mistake.

It must be apparent to you that her behavior is just not part of a transient period. Far too many people believe that they themselves can handle such a difficult situation without enlisting the support of doctors or psychiatrists.

During the past three decades, there has been a virtual explosion of amazing new drugs that have revolutionized medical and psychiatric treatment of such problems.

These psychotropic drugs have almost cleared many of our private and public mental institutions and have given life to those who might otherwise be permanently confined to them.

Many so-called mental patients are now being treated in doctors' offices and as ambulatory patients in clinics because of these remarkable drugs. They can again live at home and function normally in their jobs and in their communities. To be able to do so effectively and with dignity is the ultimate objective of all psychiatric treatment.

There are so many drugs available for patients with neurotic or compulsive behavior that the choice must be made by the "ultra-specialists" who are known as psychopharmacologists. Even these highly trained specialists try drugs singly and in combination for short periods of time before they finally determine which is the ideal drug for the specific patient.

Your daughter's outbursts of anger followed by depression are gross evidence that she needs such specialized support and treatment. With the help of your own doctor, you can be directed to a psychiatrist who is ideally able to find the drugs that would lift the veil of depression, that surrounds your daughter.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 21-28.

HOUSE
COVERT AID By a vote of 213 for and 214 against, the House rejected an amendment making it difficult for the Administration to continue supplying covert military aid to rebels fighting the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua.

The Democratic proposal sought to soften a Republican move to keep the aid flowing unless the Sandinistas stopped provided covert aid to leftist rebels elsewhere in Latin America.

It expressed the sense of Congress but did not mandate that the Sandinistas stop their aid. It was offered to HR 2760, which was headed for final passage.

Sponsor Michael Barnes, D-Md., said "the propert of trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan government is illegal, ineffective, escalatory, counterproductive and unnecessary."

Opponent Don Ritter, R-Pa., called it "immoral to pull the rug out from under those who are fighting for democracy and their rightful heritage as part of the original Sandinista revolution."

Members voting yes wanted to stop or curtail secret U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10.

Not voting: None.

LIMIT The House rejected, 170 for and 247 against, an amendment to limit the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador to the present complement of 55, thus thwarting the Administration plan to send 70 more advisors to the Central American Nation.

The amendment was offered to the $200 billion fiscal 1984 defense authorization bill (HR 2969) that later was sent to conference with the Senate.

Sponsor James Shannon, D-Mass., termed it "an absurd idea that our advisers can travel into the field with Salvadoran troops and not become involved in combat themselves."

Opponent Dan Burton, R-Ind., said President Reagan "is the commander-in-chief and we should give him the support that is necessary to deal with a very, very difficult problem right now."

Members voting yes were opposed to additional U.S. military advisers in El Salvador.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Neal, Clarke.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill.

Not voting: None.

BOXING The House defeated, 157 for and 254 against, a bill (HR 2498) to create the Congressional Advisory Commission on Boxing.

Costing taxpayers $800,000, the panel was to have nine months to recommend whether the federal government should start regulating professional boxing to make it safer for fighters.

The death of Korean Duk Koo Kim in a bout last year with Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini was cited by advocates of U.S. regulation.

Supporter Bill Richardson, D-N.M., said "we cannot continue under the fragmented and dangerously ineffective state regulation scheme..."

Opponent Howard Neilson, R-Utah, said the bill "typifies the mentality which has brought us so much federal regulation — if there is a problem, there must be a federal solution."

Members voting yes wanted to take the first step toward possible U.S. regulation of pro boxing.

NORTH CAROLINA voting yes: None.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

SENATE
MX The Senate gave President Reagan a victory by rejecting, 41 for and 58 against, an amendment to delete funding for the MX missile.

The vote kept $2.5 billion for buying the first 27 MX missiles in the fiscal 1984 defense authorization bill (S 675), a $200 billion measure later sent to conference with the House.

Both houses now have tentatively approved the MX to replace the Minuteman as the next-generation land-based missile, despite Pentagon uncertainty over whether it can ever be safely based.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., who voted to delete, said the basing problem undercuts the nuclear deterrence doctrine because "the only way to safeguard it is to launch it on warning, the so-called use-them-or-lose-them doctrine."

MX supporter Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said the missile will adequately deter the Soviets and enable the U.S. to conduct "vigorous diplomacy (for) global stability, human rights and arms control."

Senators voting no supported the MX.

John East, R, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

SILOS By a vote of 42 for and 57 against, the Senate rejected an amendment allowing the Pentagon to buy the MX but blocking the missile's deployment in existing Minuteman missile silos.

Foes of the MX supported this as a fallback position after they lost their bid to block its acquisition (above).

Sponsor Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the MX in Minuteman silos could be destroyed by silo-busting Soviet SS-9's. This vulnerability would encourage the U.S. to fire the MX on the basis of only sketchy, and possible incorrect, evidence that the Soviets had launched an attack.

Opponent James McClure, R-Idaho, said basing the new missile in Minuteman ICMB silos "is the absolute minimum U.S. response to the relentless Soviet strategic buildup of the 1970's."

Senators voting yes opposed deploying the MX in Minuteman silos.

East voted no. Helms voted no.

VOLCKER The Senate confirmed, 84 for and 16 against, the nomination of Paul A. Volcker to continue as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Supporter William Proxmire, D-Wisc., said that although Volcker's tight-money policies drew harsh criticism they managed to "break the back of... an inflation that obviously bid to wreck our great economic system unless brought under control."

Opponent Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said "we should be telling Mr. Volcker that in a democracy we do not combat inflation by placing 12 million citizens on the rolls of the unemployed."

Senators voting yes wanted Volcker to continue as the Fed chief.

East voted yes. Helms voted no.

Vaccinated Against A Deadly Hepatitis

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte's three biggest hospitals have joined several other institutions across the state offering to inoculate high-risk employees against a potentially fatal form of hepatitis.

Hospital officials say about 950 Charlotte employees are taking the expensive three-shot series of hepatitis B vaccinations. The treatment costs about $100 a person.

"We're pleased with the number who are taking it here," said Margaret Epperheimer at Mercy Hospital. She said the inoculation program will continue over the next few months.

Figures on the number of hepatitis B cases in Charlotte are unavailable. In North Carolina, there were 381 cases last year. Eight people died from hepatitis B.

Nationwide, the disease is blamed for about 4,000 deaths annually. As many as 200,000 people suffer from the disease and another 800,000 are believed to carry it without noticeable symptoms.

Medical officials say hepatitis B is different from hepatitis A.

Some Help For Soldiers' Feet

NAILSWORTH, England (AP) — British soldiers can't be expected to keep a stiff upper lip with itchy toes and smelly feet. So Her Majesty's army has ordered more than 250,000 pairs of boot insoles.

The Pressboard Company said Monday it has received an order for insoles to fit into the army's new part-nylon boot which is replacing the traditional leather boot found inadequate during last year's Falklands War. The old boots absorbed water too easily.

Insoles will fight odor and athlete's foot, helping to keep British soles cool in summer and warm in winter, the company said.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas is opening a new chapter in the way it selects textbooks for its schools, by hearing from people who favor buying certain titles as well as from book critics.

Texas is the nation's largest single purchaser of textbooks. The books are such big business here that Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener, a former textbook editor, observed "as Texas and California go, so goes the nation."

If a publisher must change a book to sell it to Texas, the changes usually will be included in the book wherever it is sold. If a book fails to sell in Texas, the publisher may decide not to publish it at all.

The process by which Texas selects the books was to resume today with the first textbook committee hearing of the year. Local school districts may use state funds to buy only those books approved by the Board of Education, which will vote on committee recommendations in November.

This year for the first time, the 27-member textbook committee will hear public testimony for — as well as against — books.

The change, enacted by the Legislature, was proposed by People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship group.

People for the American Way contends that American like textbook critic Norma Gabler want to rid schools of materials that encourage thinking and discussion not consistent with their own orthodox views.

Mrs. Gabler once complained to a textbook committee that a fifth-grade history book devoted 6½ pages to Marilyn Monroe while mentioning George Washington only five times.

"Is Texas ready for Marilyn Monroe to become the mother of our country?" she asked.

Texas will be buying nearly $36.3 million worth of new books in such subjects as algebra, world history, French, Latin and construction trades. Replacements for worn-out and lost books, Braille books, freight and other costs will raise the bill to $65.5 million.

Fifty-six groups and individuals, including Mrs. Gabler and her husband Mel, a retired Exxon clerk, have asked to speak to the committee, which scheduled testimony through Wednesday.

Publishers, as usual, will be allowed to respond to complaints.

The Gablers, who have received national attention as textbook critics, began attending the hearings in 1961 after their son, Jim, brought home a book they thought distorted the Constitution.

In 1973, the Longview couple formed Educational Research Analysts, which employs several full-time researchers.

Last year, the Gablers' written protests covered almost 600 typed pages and included over 2,100 specific objections to 45 textbooks.

People for the American Way says the Gablers want to reinstate traditional sex roles; rewrite history to reflect their view of the past; deny scientific theory by insisting that creationism be given full consideration in science classes, and eliminate discussion of such subjects as segregation, women's rights, trade unions, the civil rights movement, slavery in America, world hunger and poverty.

Made A Par 3 The Hard Way

NORTH LIBERTY, Iowa (AP) — Gerry Ambrose, a weekend duffer from Iowa City, made a par three the hard way at the Quail Creek Golf Course in North Liberty.

Playing with a foursome Sunday, Ambrose hooked his tee shot on the 150-yard Number Seven hole into a patch of dense waist-high weeds.

Rather than search for the ball in those weeds, Ambrose teed up another ball and shot again.

This time, it went right into the cup. With the penalty stroke for his first shot, Ambrose made his par three.

Women Play Big Role In Health Care

By CARLA McCLAIN
 The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The aura of big money and awesome respect awarded the American doctor is nowhere to be seen in the Soviet Union, where most physicians are low-paid women, a Tucson health worker says.

"Their status and pay are more like our blue-collar workers, even though they require about the same amount of training as the American doctor," says Carol Schmidt, a geriatric nurse practitioner at the Handmaker Jewish Geriatric Center who toured medical facilities in Moscow and other Soviet cities with other American health workers.

As a result, about 70 to 75 percent of all Russian doctors are women, and medical practice is stereotyped as a "caring" vocation "naturally suited" to women. They are paid "relatively low" salaries set by the state, rather than fees charged to the patients, she said.

In fact, Ms. Schmidt added, Soviet men shun doctoring despite the fact that medical school entrance standards are deliberately lower for men than for women to lure more males to medicine.

But because medicine is considered a "service" profession, it falls to a second-class level in the Soviet psyche, which rewards big industry and industrialization instead.

One of a doctor's main duties is "keeping to a minimum the number of workdays lost through illness," according to a special report on Soviet medical care, published in the United States.

Although the Soviet people are guaranteed free health care by their government, such care does not enjoy the high priority it has in the United States. Facilities are old, supplies are outdated "by about 30 years," and sterilization is below U.S. standards, the Americans noticed.

"Soviet medical care in general lags technologically behind ours," Ms. Schmidt said, and a Soviet hospital patient who wants to be sure of getting the best possible care "finds it useful to slip a little extra of his own money to the doctor on the sly."

One of the most glaring medical differences between the two countries is the obvious shortage in Russia of drugs and medications so widely used by American doctors, she said.

"Instead, doctors stress diet, herbs, mineral waters, spas, baths and mud preparations," said Ms. Schmidt.

Observers blame the lack of drugs for the fact that the Russians are still plagued by outbreaks of infectious diseases such as cholera, tuberculosis and gastrointestinal infections, unlike the United States.

However, the country's worst medical problems are heart disease and alcoholism, the Soviets said.

The touring Americans took an especially close look at Soviet attitudes and care of the aged, but they were denied entrance to skilled care nursing homes because "we prefer to show you cases that are not depressing," the Americans said they were told.

So, the group visited instead a "boarding home" for elderly people who needed only minimal care.

Wine Accord Is Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Europeans say they will stop sending wines laced with dried blood powder to the United States, and in return Americans will stop using hydrogen peroxide to put bubbles in some of the champagnes they export to Europe.

Under the accord announced last week, the United States has promised to avoid naming its wines after famous European wine-growing areas.

The accord follows seven years of negotiations between the United States and the 10 member nations of the European Economic Community.

Hungarians Push Ahead On Reforms

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer
BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Without waiting for Soviet approval, leaders of Hungary's Communist government are pressing ahead with economic and social reforms unique in Eastern Europe. But the Soviet Union is said to be looking over their shoulders with interest.

In the last few months, the Soviets "have been thinking about introducing as many Hungarian economic models as possible, not only in agriculture but in industry and services, too," said Marton Tardos, head of economic planning at the National Academy of Science.

The academy is close to the government, to which it gives advice on key economic matters.

"If it's fair to say that the Soviet Union is not as cold to the idea of reform as it was ... then it's possible that rigid East German and Czechoslovak economic policies will change as well," Tardos added in an interview.

Tardos said the Kremlin's interest followed the change in Soviet leadership late last year. Long years of "cold neutrality" in Moscow toward Hungarian economic experiments disappeared when Yuri V. Andropov succeeded Leonid I. Brezhnev as the Soviet leader, Tardos said.

Andropov was ambassador to Budapest during the 1956 Hungarian uprising, which was put down by Soviet forces. He is considered here to have played a decisive role in the installation of the popular Janos Kadar after the removal of the Stalinist, Matyas Rakosi, as Hungary's Communist Party leader.

Of a work force of about 4 million, about 200,000 Hungarians work at non-state jobs, either full- or part-time. A recent ordinance raised the maximum number of employees allowed in a private business from six to 12.

While the Soviet Union is said to be following private-sector developments with curiosity, Hungary's state economy has aroused even more interest, analysts say.

Since the early 1970s, Hungary has steadily moved away from the Soviet model of rigid central planning and responsibility in favor of more decision-making on the plant floor or in the agricultural cooperative.

Increasingly, agricultural and industrial employees and executives receive bonuses tied to performance. Profit-oriented thinking is replacing emphasis on production for volume's sake, say Hungarian economists.

Unprofitable state industries which do not move with the times are targets for major shakeups.

The Csepel Iron and Metal Works combine, one of Hungary's major employers, was broken up in June into 13 units, each with increased decision-making powers.

The giant Tungsram conglomerate, which employs about 24,000 people and exports light bulbs and fixtures to more than 100 countries, went into the red late last year. Its managing director was let go as a result and "along with him those who couldn't change their way of thinking," said Atilla Kiss, Tungsram's economic manager.

While not disclosing figures, Kiss said Tungsram "will not have a loss this year."

"The decision-making powers of plant managers have been greatly raised and the emphasis is on profit," Kiss added in an interview. "We're still not doing it as well as those in the West, but that seems to be the way we're going."

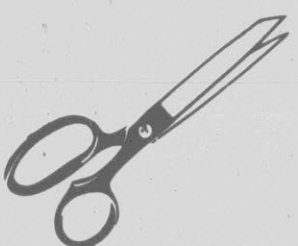

Hungary appears to be moving toward more flexibility in politics as well. A recently proposed law encourages two or more candidates to run for parliamentary seats, with equal chances for Communists and non-Communists.

A Hungarian political analyst said privately it is "theoretically possible" that non-Communists could gain a majority under the plan, which builds on a little-known and seldom-applied 1971 regulation.

Find Women Move First In Flirting

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A subtle nudge beside the video game. A seductive sway to jukebox music. A simple swivel of a bar stool. Such are the ways of flirting, and a biologist studying the phenomenon says women make the first move more than half the time.

"It's not pathological, and it's not voyeurism. It's genuine intellectual interest," said Timothy Perper, explaining how he began a two-year study that has taken him from Manhattan to Philadelphia.

Perper, 44, a former professor at Rutgers University, watched about 2,500 male-female encounters in 50 bars before reaching his conclusions. The study was funded by a $30,000 grant from the Guggenheim Foundation.

Perper said the grant let him do his research with a touch of class.

"We went to respectable places because we wanted to show that flirtations and pickups are in no way restricted to joints," he said.

At a bar in Philadelphia, Perper pointed out a female undergraduate from West Chester University standing next to a young man at a video game.

As they played, she leaned over and "accidentally" bumped into him. He failed to notice.

"Forget it," observed Perper. "That was a crucial escalation point."

From his post in the bar, Perper picks his "focal subjects," using techniques honed in the 1970s when he studied rats. He isolates and documents each step in the sequence of flirtation behavior.

"I learned how to observe watching the rats — to be objective and distant but not alienated. This is not a cold scientific pursuit that treats people like bugs."

During interviews, Perper found males were not as conscious of the signals used to initiate or escalate a flirtation as were women. He also found that men often were slow to respond.

"Women initiate more than half the time," he said in an interview published Thursday in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Perper was watching recently as Alice, an auditor from Texas, and Fred, a data-processing consultant, (not their real names) met in a dimly lit cocktail lounge in Somerset, N.J.

Alice and her sister chose a table next to one occupied by Fred and other men in three-piece suits.

"She's not pretty, but there's not a guy here who can resist her. She chooses, and Fred's been chosen."

Their shoulders touched briefly as he moved his elbow onto the back of her chair. As they exchanged business cards, their hands brushed.

"That's a reach," Perper said excitedly. "He's putting his arm into her body space. Conversation at this point is not about what they're doing. It's about business."

"Fred and I read each other, and for this minute, it was good," said Alice later. "We haven't promised each other anything beyond a dance later on. But dance is body language, a form of communication which may or may not lead to something else."

Alternative To Costly Repairs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials say they believe they've found the solution to an estimated $10.4 million-a-year loss on military radio repairs. From now on, they'll buy new radios unless it's cheaper to fix them.

Lt. Col. Michael Bishop, an Army spokesman, said that the Material, Development and Readiness Command has ordered all of its supply organizations to conduct "cost-benefit" analyses before making decisions on repairing equipment.

A June 16, 1982 audit concluded that the Army paid six times more, in some cases, to repair radios than it would have paid to replace faulty equipment.

Made-to-measure draperies, bedspreads and comforters

How to measure: measure drapery rod width from bracket to bracket. Measure the number of inches the rod projects from the wall multiplied by 2. Add 4 inches for overlap. These figures totaled will give you the width measurement to order. Length: measure from top of traverse rod to desired length. Drapery should extend 1/2 inch above rod.

Choose from a dazzling array of antique satins, open and close-weave casements, prints, sheers and jacquards. Simply bring in your window measurements and Sears will make draperies that fit! Bedspreads and comforters are available in fabrics to match your draperies—all 25-40% off!

- Pre-finished, quality-built kitchen cabinets
- Brand name carpeting & flooring; interior/exterior paint & stain

Our Total Package System Takes The Hassle Out Of Home Building

1 For one low price, Lowe's will supply all the materials to build this energy efficient home above from the foundation plate up. And the price is guaranteed for 90 days (which could save you money right there).

2 Once construction begins, we'll deliver the materials to your lot in building sequence, so there will be less chance of loss due to weather or pilferage. In other words, you won't get carpeting when the roof's going up.

3 Lowe's-designed homes exceed normal energy efficient standards. That's because they incorporate extra insulation, caulking, insulated doors & windows, attic ventilation system, heat pump and more. So you save year after year.

4 "Delta Queen" is just one of many home plans. We offer a wide choice of home styles & sizes - from contemporary solar designs to small vacation cottages. Ask for full details and free, illustrated booklets.

SPECIALS

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail price does not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.) Lowe's Reincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for the products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
