'Alicia' Slams Coast Of Texas

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Hurricane Alicia hit this island city broadside with 115 mph winds and high tides today, spawning tornadoes in a broad path of destruction as it pushed inland to pound the oil metropolis of Houston.

Two people were killed by falling trees as the first hurricane of the season tore inland, crashing across the tall glass towers of downtown Houston and flooding parts of the city.

Tides up to 12 feet above normal were reported along the Texas coast as Alicia made a landfall at Galveston, ripping the walls off buildings, smashing cars and plunging the city of 60,000 into darkness.

At least 11 twisters danced through several communities farther inland, wrecking homes and felling trees. Hundreds of homes were flooded.

Thousands had fled inland, but many others refused to leave and rode out the storm huddled in basements by candlelight.

Red Cross officials estimated that 20,000 coastal residents sought refuge in 80 emergency shelters.

About 200 guests of Galveston's historic Galvez Hotel fled to underground corridors after an interior wall collapsed about 2 a.m.

Three apparent looters were chased from a business along the Galveston seawall by the shop's owner, who drove up with a gun.

In Houston, 50 miles inland where winds gusted to 94 mph, an estimated 42,000 people had left their homes. About 250,000 people were without power.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire ordered the downtown area barricaded at dawn because of glass and debris that littered the streets. Downed electrical wires touched off several house fires.

Water pressure was low in much of the city and non-existent in other areas, said Richard Harris of the Houston-Harris County Civil Defense.

The weather service reported heavy flooding in southwest Houston with 6 feet of water at Ritchy and the Washburn Tunnel closed.

By 8:45 a.m., the eye of the hurricane had swept across Houston and was centered near 29.9 north, longitude 95.4 west, about 30 miles west of the city. It was moving on an erratic course between northwest and north-northwest at about 10 mph, with winds still gusting to about 100 mph.

"The storm is staying tight," said Steve Harned of the weather service in Galveston. "That's unusual. Usually a storm like this will break up once it hits land."

Extensive damage was reported at Clear Lake City and civil defense officials said nearby Kemah and Seabrook were cut off by flooding.

The Brazoria County sheriff's office said the towns of Quintana Beach, Surfside and Bryan Beach had been evacuated. "We haven't had a chance to check for damage," said Judy Rorex, a spokeswoman for the department.

Hurricane warnings remained posted from Corpus Christi, Texas, to Morgan City, La. much of the morning.

Up to 10 inches of rain was expected over eastern Texas and western Louisiana.

Sustained winds of 76 mph and gusts up to 102 mph were measured by the National Weather Service's office in Galveston as the hurricane hit shore. Just off Galveston Island, reconnaissance planes reported maximum sustained winds near 115 mph as the hurricane's center moved inland.

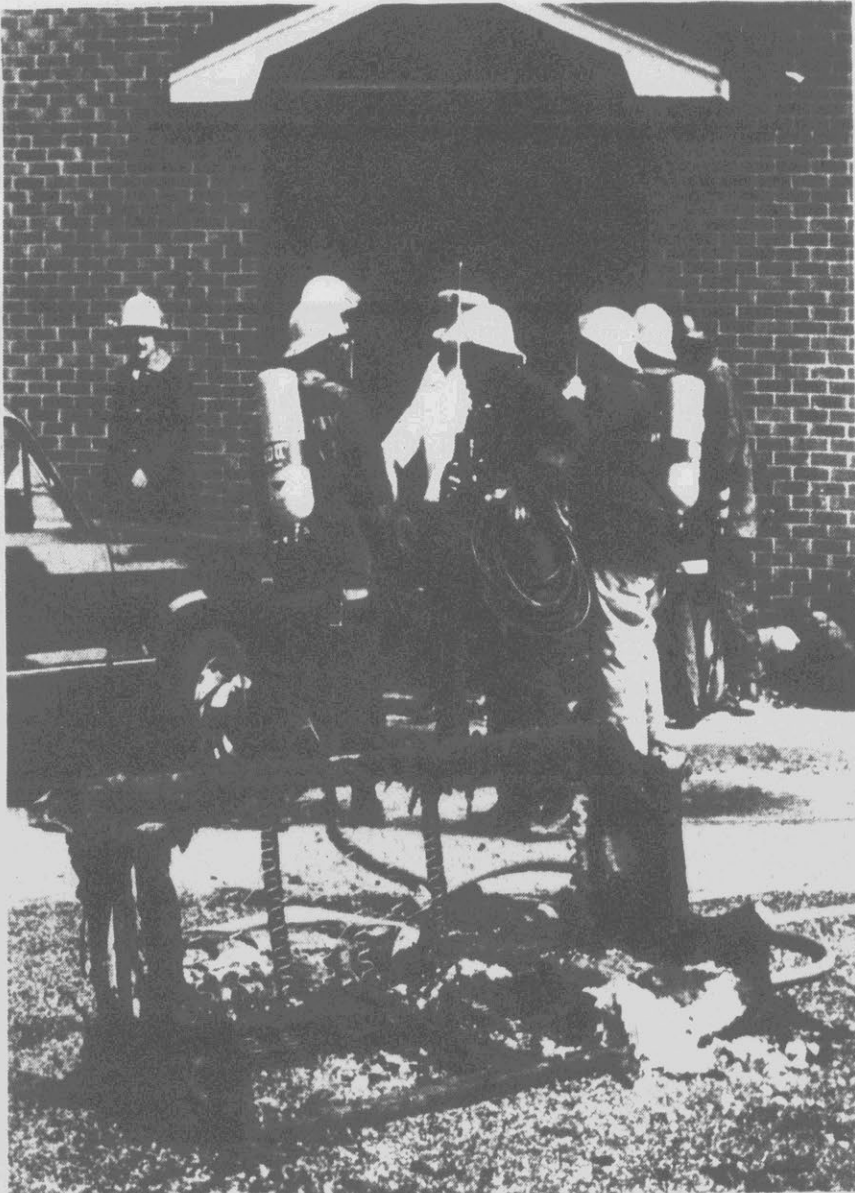

Howling winds in Galveston ripped bricks and metal siding from buildings, threw sign posts into cars and ripped limbs from trees.

The hurricane also knocked out the weather service's local radar and tide gauges.

Scattered minor injuries were reported in the storm's path. The body of the woman killed in Houston, 50 miles from Galveston, was found early today. She was identified as Elisa Lopez Flores. In the suburb of Highlands, 21-year-old Robin Futts was killed when a tree fell on a car.

"A tree fell into the house and trapped and killed a 71-year-old female at her home," said Stanley Curtis, an ambulance dispatcher with Houston Fire Department.

APARTMENT FIRE — Firemen battle a blaze that caused heavy damage to a Village Green Apartment this morning at 800 Heath St. According to officials at the scene the apartment was occupied by Kelly Hays. Police said Hays escaped the blaze when he crawled through a window of the lower floor apartment. Hays was not injured, officials said. Cause of the fire, which caused heavy damage to the interior of the apartment, was not immediately known. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Morehead City officials threatened Wednesday to sue to block state plans to replace the Bogue Sound drawbridge.

Mayor Bud Dixon said the proposed location for the bridge was "a grievous mistake that will burden the taxpayers of Morehead City with an overwhelming traffic problem for the next 50 years."

Dixon said the town would decide to file a lawsuit to fight the site plans after a meeting Friday with top state Department of Transportation officials.

"We're going just as far as we have to go," Dixon said. "If it has to go to court... we're going to see this through to the end to keep the bridge from going to 23rd Street."

Morehead City officials support a more westerly route that has been rejected by the State Transportation Board.

Cy K. Lynn, special assistant to Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson Jr., said: "They haven't brought up anything that hasn't been dealt with. It doesn't change anything."

REP. WALTER JONES

plans to seek another two-year tour in office on the eve of his 70th birthday.

"I'm definitely going to run," Jones said. "I'm in very good shape, after my surgery, and the doctor has given me a clean bill of health."

Jones underwent surgery in 1981 for a prostate problem and again in 1981 and 1982 for aneurysms in his kneecaps and midsection. He said today he was fully recovered and "raring to run."

He has spent the time since Congress recessed earlier this month traveling through the 21-county district, Jones said, attending breakfast and luncheon meetings.

Asked about the potential opposition of state Rep. John B. Gilliam III, a Windsor Democrat, Jones replied: "I don't ever run against anyone. I run for the office."

Jones said he would run on his record, with or without opposition. "I have a voting record and a record of service which stands on its own," he said, adding: "One very important thing to the people of this district is seniority, and I am one of 14 full committee chairmen."

Jones is chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

A former mayor and judge of Recorder's Court in Farmville, Jones was elected to three terms in the state House and one in the state Senate before winning a special election in February 1966 to complete the congressional term of the late Herbert C. Bonner.

Jones was elected to his first full term in the U.S. House in the fall of 1966 and has won re-election, with only token opposition or none at all, every two years since then.

Jones said a quiet family celebration was planned for his birthday Friday.

Gilliam Claims Support For A Congress Race

By MELVIN LANG

Windsor businessman John Gilliam III, with two terms in the state Legislature under his belt, is traveling the sprawling 1st Congressional District with both eyes admittedly fixed on a bid for Rep. Walter B. Jones' seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Gilliam, 36, has all but publicly announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the district seat in Congress. The formal announcement is expected in a few weeks, probably after the anticipated special session of the General Assembly.

Jones, a Farmville Democrat who will mark his 70th birthday Friday, said today he is "definitely going to run" for his 10th term. He has represented the 1st District since 1966, drawing only token opposition — if any at all — in his successful trips to the polls.

Gilliam, whose state House district this term includes Carolina and Bethel townships in Pitt County, is organizing his campaign with personal appearances throughout the 21-county congressional district this week. He was to come to Greenville today after meetings in Kinston and La Grange Wednesday.

In a telephone interview from Kinston, Gilliam said he would form an "exploratory committee" within the next two weeks "to advise (Please turn to Page 12)

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

MEMO

I think it would be a good Hotline feedback to print in full the memorandum written by Pitt County Memorial Hospital Senior Vice President Fred T. Brown to licensed practical nurses and nursing assistants employed by the hospital concerning job security at the hospital. The Hotline item published some time ago on the subject of whether LPN and nursing assistant jobs are being eliminated there brought the situation to the attention of the community and we LPNs and nursing assistants appreciate it.

The memo circulated to LPNs, nursing assistants, hospital administrators, county commissioners, hospital trustees and others says: "Much misunderstanding and concern has been raised about LPNs and Nursing Assistants, their job security and future employment opportunities at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Because of budget restraints placed on Nursing and other departments, a close re-examination of staffing has taken place and will continue. Vacant positions are frozen and will only be filled if absolutely necessary. We are also attempting to fill critical vacancies from our own employee work force before we look outside of the hospital. Changes in activity, census and types of patients have made it necessary to make staffing changes on some units. R.N.s, LPNs, and Nursing Assistants have been transferred from unit to unit. I expect some of this to continue.

"I want to assure you that your jobs are not in jeopardy. There is and will continue to be, an important role for Licensed Practical Nurses and Nursing Assistants at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. We appreciate you and your continued contributions to the care of our patients."

Student Training Group Eyes Program Changes

By SUE HINSON

Helping students to make informed decisions about their futures, nuclear weaponry, the effect of industrial waste on America's rivers, the feasibility of toxic waste dumps — in short broadening their concepts of the workings of American business and life — is what RECAST is about.

It is aimed specifically at promoting scientific interests among students in grades seven through 10 in the Pitt County and Greenville school systems with the intent of increasing the number of engineering and scientific degree graduates.

RECAST, or Regional Eastern Carolina Affirmative Students Training, is a cooperative effort spearheaded by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. It has been in operation eight years, under the sponsorship of Burroughs Wellcome, but now Union Carbide, Eaton Corp., Procter and Gamble, IBM, Pitt County Memorial Hospital and East Carolina University have joined the project.

The program is designed primarily for blacks and females, but encompasses all racial and sexual groups. It works primarily through clubs within the schools that will be advised by teachers and area business representatives.

Greenville school Superintendent Delma Blinson said he believes the expanded base will the program a future of excellence.

Kids and Cash...A Sensible Approach

Each year children in this country get and spend millions of dollars.

Where does this money come from? Some of it is earned by doing odd jobs, some of it comes to them as gifts, and much of it is given as a weekly allowance by parents.

But no matter the source, children have money. And a great deal of advertising is directed toward them, trying to get them to spend it.

Just as adults need to know how to manage money, so, too, do their children.

Putting In Your Two Cents Worth...

There is no one best method for teaching children the basics of good money management. Each family and child is different, and many different methods can be used.

Joe Walker, Extension Family Resource Management Specialist, offers the following hints to help parents get their message across:

- First, help your children feel good about themselves. Your attention and affection will help them learn.

- Avoid comparing them with other children, especially their brothers and sisters. Each child is different and has different needs. Try to keep competition down — and avoid telling your children "how it was" when you were a child.

- Keep the lines of communication open. Listen to what your children are saying — or not saying. Be understanding.

- But, set limits and make rules for your children to follow.

smooth. Heat 1 tablespoon butter in a 10- to 12-inch heavy skillet; drop rounded tablespoons of the corn mixture, well apart, into hot butter. When some bubbles appear on top, and bottom sides are browned, turn and brown other sides. Keep hot. Add butter to skillet as needed for other batches. Serve with maple syrup. Makes about 32.

Don't Rescue Him, Retrain

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a really terrific guy for 10 months. We get along great, but every morning there's a big fight because he just can't seem to wake up. He lies in bed while I stand there screaming for him to get up. After 20 or 30 minutes of me yelling at him and shaking him, he finally drags himself out of bed.

This has made both of us late many times and has put me in a bad mood for hours.

While he was in boot camp his sergeant had no trouble waking him at 5 a.m. after a long hard day of exercising, running, working, etc. Why then do I have such a terrible time getting him up? We can't afford counseling. Please suggest something.

MORNINGS ARE MURDER

DEAR MORNINGS: Your husband's subconscious "knows" that he can cop anywhere from 20 to 30 minutes more sack time while you scream.

When he was in boot camp, his subconscious told him he had to get up at the first sound of reveille. (It was a matter of survival.)

If he is to be "retrained," you must make him responsible for getting himself up in the morning. He may oversleep once, twice, or even 10 times, but if he's forced to face the consequences of oversleeping, he'll get up. (It will be a matter of survival.)

Do not "rescue him" again, or you'll be back to mornings that are murder. Take my advice and let me hear from you in six months.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I found some evidence that my husband has sexually assaulted our 21-month-old daughter. To say the least, I am just sick! He's been a wonderful husband and father and comes from a good family. I just don't understand what happened.

I have thought about talking to him about it, but if I'm mistaken, he will never forgive me for even thinking of such a thing.

Please tell me what to do. I am afraid to even mention it to my best friend.

Are there any signs to look for in my daughter or my husband? I need to know for sure. Please help.

CAN'T SIGN THIS

DEAR CAN'T: First have your daughter examined by a pediatrician immediately. If the doctor confirms your suspicions, confront your husband with the evidence and insist that he get treatment for his sick and criminal behavior. If he denies his guilt or refuses treatment, turn him over to the authorities.

DEAR ABBY: Now I've seen everything. A Chicago couple baby-sat their three grandchildren while their son (Bob) and daughter-in-law (Mary) went on a three-week vacation. When they returned, Mary asked the "sitters" to pay for the food they had eaten. They were shocked, but Grandpa wrote a check and handed it to Mary, who asked them not to tell Bob. The grandparents asked you, "Should we tell our son?"

You said "Yes," but you should have added: "Although you agreed to baby-sit for love, since Mary viewed it as a business deal, you should have presented her with a $1,176 bill for professional services. Based on the cheapest rate ($1 an hour, $1.50 from 12 a.m. to 8 a.m.), each sitter earned $588."

LAURIANNE

DEAR LAURIANNE: Great idea. Now why didn't I think of that?

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Everyone knows the last thing I want to hand down to my children is guilt. I have never wanted to infringe on their personal lives or become a burden.

It's just that I'm having difficulty in understanding why they want me to die from a broken heart leaving no grandchildren.

What am I asking? A small wedding — a few months to adjust — a full-term pregnancy and then 20 years or so out of their lives to raise a child. Is that too much?

I've talked with other parents who brought up children in the '60s and '70s who have no grandchildren and none of us know why we are being punished. I've said to my children, "How do you think I feel when a contemporary whips out a billfold containing 65 candid pictures of her grandchild and I'm still carrying around June Allyson and Dick Powell? And I hope you never feel the pain of walking through a baby department where they are practically giving away receiving blankets and have no reason to buy them."

I don't mean to — excuse the expression — "labor" the issue, but in a few years I'll be too old to be a grandmother. No one ever thinks of that! After all, there are certain duties that come with a grandchild. Timing is everything. They have to come when you're young enough to enjoy revenge and old enough to assume no responsibility whatsoever for their well-being.

In a few years I won't have the strength to crawl around on the floor and play, baby-sit longer than two hours or remember all the wisdom that made me such a wonderful mother.

I don't know why our children want to persecute their children by giving them an old grandmother where all they can do with us is sit around connecting liver spots on our hands and wheeling us out into the living room once a year and decorating us for Christmas.

I know I certainly would never have thought of doing that to my mother. Oh, sure, I thought about it, but one day she pulled me aside and said, "Look, what gives you the right to have a nice job and cook cute little meals for two, and come and go whenever you like and buy a new car and wear nice clothes and go on vacation? When are you going to be miserable and tied down like the rest of us?"

I wouldn't even bother bringing the subject up, but I just bought some pale green yarn the other day to make some Christmas things and I don't know whether to make a little delicate baby sweater or another holder for a dog dish!

I'll do whatever I'm told.

Higher Assessments?

The spectre of double-digit assessments for tobacco growers to keep their no-cost to the government price support program going is rearing its head as a real possibility for next year.

As we pointed out soon after the current sales season opened, buying companies would have to take part more actively than in recent years to put the support program on any sort of even keel. That has not happened on the Eastern Belt markets, where 41 percent of the leaf placed on the warehouse floor this year has gone under loan.

The situation is somewhat better in the other market areas: as of the start of this week, Georgia-Florida markets had sent 32 percent of their offerings to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Cooperative; the Old and Middle Belts had sent 27.2 percent and the Border Belt 26.4 percent.

Together, that represents more than 40 million pounds of tobacco under loan since markets opened in late July. In all of last year, Stabilization took in 260 million pounds — a record. If the Eastern Belt maintains its current flow, that figure could easily be matched if not exceeded this year.

But if the amount under loan even approaches 30 percent or more of the total offerings this year, you can bet the assessment levied on growers will be raised — and raised substantially — next year. That is, if the price support program is still around.

Blood And Sweat

Today's daily newspaper provides a package of many things, but in Goldsboro one came with the paycheck of a Goldsboro News-Argus employee.

It helps to know that various sections are inserted into the larger editions of newspapers by machines and employees feed the inserts in.

This employee's paycheck fed in with everything else.

It was later found between two papers by a customer who returned it to the newspaper and received a dinner for two in return.

We love our customers, but we must note that our paychecks will not be inserted in any foreseeable edition. We put our blood and sweat into producing the newspaper every day and that is enough.

Oil Demand Slack

NEW YORK (AP) — For months, experts warned that oil demand — a key determinant of energy prices — could start zooming once the U.S. economy perked up.

Now that the economy is back in gear, a boom in oil demand is nowhere in sight. In fact, oil use in this country has continued to lag behind last year's pace.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain what some experts call a loosening of the traditional link between oil consumption and economic activity:

Q. If oil use fell during the recession, why won't it rise during the recovery?

A. A big part of the answer is increased efficiency. American industry, by installing more energy-efficient machinery and equipment, is now able to produce more goods on less oil. Motorists are using less, too, and part of the reason is that today's cars simply take you farther on each gallon of gasoline — about 15 percent farther than five years ago, according to Merrill Lynch & Co. estimates.

Q. How long will the decline in oil consumption last?

A. It's hard to tell, but there are signs that the steep declines of the past four years may be over. Oil use in the United States last year was about 5 percent lower than in 1981 — and almost 20 percent lower than the peak year 1978. And while oil consumption fell another 4 percent in the first half of this year, the latest statistics show that demand may be beginning to inch higher.

Q. So there is a link between energy use and the economy?

A. Yes, although it apparently is not as rigid as in the past. If the U.S. economy continues to heat up over the rest of the year, oil demand is likely to rise. The point, however, is that demand may not rise as much as the experts had figured.

Q. What does that mean for energy prices?

A. The world's big oil producers had hoped that demand would pick up this year, saving them the pain of having to cut prices again. It seems they may get their wish, at least for the short run. Most energy experts are forecasting a slight rise in oil demand over the rest of the year and a leveling off of prices. The situation, however, is considerably different in different parts of the world.

Q. Why is that?

A. The price of gasoline and other petroleum products is actually rising in some European countries even though they have joined the United States in reducing energy consumption. Italy, for example, raised the price of several oil products earlier this week, and France and Britain also have raised prices lately.

Q. What is different in those countries?

A. The main difference is that they must buy their imported oil in U.S. dollars. Since the dollar's exchange value has risen sharply this year, in relation to the European currencies, those countries are being forced to pay more of their local currencies for each barrel of oil. For example, it has been calculated by Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, an industry journal, that Europe is paying about $10 a barrel more for imported oil than the United States. That has given European countries an added incentive to reduce their oil use even more.

WASHINGTON — Most Americans, as they rediscover the Yellow Pages, could care less about the details of the nationwide telephone strike. Twenty-minute waits for operators have a way of shortening tempers and perspectives.

But the walkout announced Aug. 7 by Bell System employees raises issues important to every American worker. The strikers seek a guarantee that future advances in technology won't force them out of work — a fear of obsolescence that many Americans grapple with privately.

It's a shame, as the strike enters its second week, that the management at American Telephone and Telegraph is probably incapable of meeting labor's demands. But it's even more unfortunate that U.S. political leaders haven't seized on labor's worries and begun to formulate policies for matching workers with jobs in the future.

The strike is unfortunate in at least one additional respect: AT&T, or the multibillion dollar Bell System, has for years enjoyed an excellent rapport with its workers, represented largely by the Communications Workers of America. Strikes have been rare. Together, the two organizations have long monitored their industry and plotted the future and their mutual prosperity.

The court-mandated breakup of Ma Bell threw that happy co-existence into question last year. The long-standing AT&T monopoly would, for the first time, encounter competition; its 26 affiliated operating companies and their workers would be cast off; new products and services would require new skills. Taken together, an unprecedented uncertainty gripped a workforce which for years was a model of stability in corporate America. When the usually friendly negotiations with AT&T failed in the wake of the speedy breakup, CWA moved to strike.

Of course, even a casual observer of Ma Bell's kingdom might have seen the changes coming. Directory assistance inquiries have been increasingly fielded by a voice-simulation machine; long-distance calls, similarly, can now be placed from nearly any phone without an operator's help. That the strike has barely affected phone service is further testament to the decreasing human factor.

Yet public fears about technology's Draconian effects on employment are only exacerbated at AT&T, where the chief product is technology itself. In fact, a chief goal of the breakup is to allow AT&T to enter the booming microelectronics and computer markets, from which it has been previously banned.

According to Lorel Foged, a senior researcher at CWA, advances in technology will "de-skill," more than displace, AT&T workers in the future. New machines will make many jobs easier, but also less worthy of high salaries. Increased competition, meanwhile, will force management to hire less-experienced workers to reduce costs. "Technology kind of chips away at jobs," Foged told our reporter, Michael Duffy.

Not surprisingly, then, workers want a bigger voice in the AT&T decision-making process, if only to enhance awareness of coming changes in jobs. They want the company to train workers for highly technical jobs now subcontracted to outside firms. Most of all, the strikers want AT&T to provide retraining for new jobs, rather than simply hire new, lower-paid rookies.

"The issue is employment security," said Dwayne Trecker, a CWA spokesman. "Out members don't want to become obsolete as fast as the machinery."

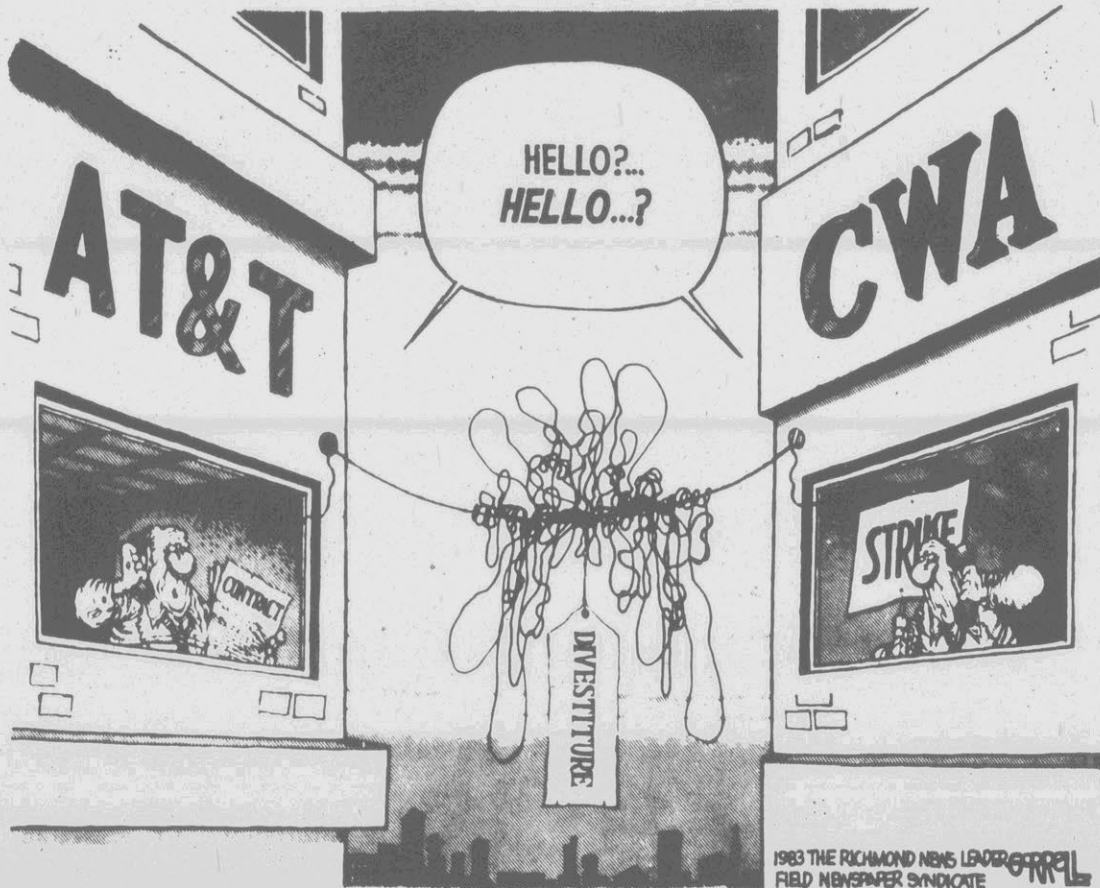

For the rest of us, the AT&T strike may seem slightly ahead of its time. Most Americans, though they notice the increased presence of computers in the workplace, aren't about to be displaced. Many, however, are beginning to work regularly with the new technologies. In time, as productivity increases, they may sense the rationale for the telephone strike.

Few believe, as does CWA, that private industry can alone shoulder the burden of retraining. (Strikers argue that AT&T, the world's largest company, has as good a shot as any firm.) In a report released last week, the AFL-CIO suggested that government must pick up the slack or watch the United States lose its competitiveness in both domestic and foreign markets.

At present, however, government seems undisposed to act. While Democratic presidential challengers damn Ronald Reagan for emasculating basic training programs, as improving economy may only delay debate on the more complex retraining issue.

Yet unless Democrats and Republicans soon focus on the de-skilling potential of technology and the need for federally-supported retraining, the ranks of the unemployed and displaced will grow. Before long, it may be too late to address the problem.

N. C. Had Chance At Nissan Plant

Early this summer, small pick-up trucks started rolling off the assembly lines of Nissan Motor Company's new Smyrna, Tenn., plant. For that small town, 25 miles southeast of Nashville, it is hard to imagine that any new industry could have had a greater impact.

Nissan — which used to be known as Datsun — spent $500 million building the plant and another $160 million making it operational. It has hired about 2,000 people.

In addition, the Nissan plant is bringing other manufacturers to that region. Companies that will supply the giant plant with all the parts that go into a pick-up must move close enough to make daily deliveries. For the Greater Nashville area, Nissan is a one-company economic recovery.

Now for the bad news: That plant, according to a top Nissan official, might have come to North Carolina. Marvin Runyon, the American who runs the Smyrna plant, said in a Tokyo interview that he looked at the Triangle area as a possible site for Nissan but that state recruiters didn't seem to want him. Runyon's boss, T. Ishihara, president of Nissan, said in a separate interview that his company has "a warm feeling for North Carolina" based on the textile machinery operations it has in the state. But, in this case, Ishihara said, "We got the impression that Tennessee showed more interest in inviting Japanese industry into its state than did North Carolina."

Runyon said he visited the Triangle in late 1979 or early 1980, was told that the area was a "research and science center," and that there wasn't enough land nearby for Nissan's needs. He says state officials showed him other sites, none of which fit his specifications. "I needed a thousand acres of flat land and all the sites they showed me were hilly."

Runyon says he "read between the lines" and came to the conclusion that the high wages his company planned to pay were unwelcome in the area. He says he got the feeling the people didn't want to upset the local wage base.

Curiously enough, just several days before, Ichiro Iwao, North Carolina's representative in Tokyo, told this reporter that, in general, the state sought "not to look for the big assembly plant. I don't think we can go after the large plants. We don't want to disturb the local labor force. We want the middle-sized manufacturing company."

State Department of Commerce officials angrily protest Runyon's assessment. Vic Barfield, deputy commerce secretary, said that if Runyon got the impression he wasn't wanted, it came from "some local official." About the high wages, he said Nissan "certainly isn't going to pay more than IBM or GE." Both have facilities near Raleigh. He characterizes Runyon's whole assessment of the situation as "impossible."

Steve Meehan, former assistant commerce secretary, says he remembers that DOC tried to steer Nissan into northeastern North Carolina where there was plenty of flat land and good labor.

Turning their guns on Runyon, the two say they doubt Nissan was ever very serious about North Carolina. "I doubt we were ever in it," Barfield said. The Smyrna site was probably chosen long before Runyon ever came to Raleigh, the two said. Meehan said that Walter Johnson, North Carolina's industrial recruiter assigned to Japan, had picked up considerable information from Japanese sources that indicated Smyrna was a sure bet. One Commerce official who asked not to be named, said Nissan visited only as a courtesy to Gov. Jim Hunt who had shown considerable interest in the plant.

Runyon says the plant probably would have gone to Tennessee even if he'd been more warmly welcomed in North Carolina. But, he says, it is quite unusual to come to town with a $700 million plant in your pocket, and get a cool reception.

Strength For Today

The word "Puritanism" has many unfavorable connotations today. Usually, it is associated with repression, bigotry and hypocrisy.

That Puritanism in the later sages of its development became arbitrary and intolerant, no one can deny. But most people do not realize that early Puritanism, beginning over 400 years ago, was a noble movement out of which grew democracy and a solid commitment to moral righteousness. It entered into the lives of millions of people and plays an important role in the traditions of several nations.

The early Puritans were people who regarded their lives as stewardship committed to them by God. They were here in the world to serve God and do his will.

Quite apart from Puritanism's later decline into rigid formality, modern Christianity owes a great debt of gratitude to early Puritanism for its religious inspiration.

Kirkpatrick Displays Rising Influence On Reagan

WASHINGTON — Jeane Kirkpatrick, ambassador to the U.N., showed her rising power when she single-handedly persuaded President Reagan the United States had to veto the Security Council resolution calling on Israel to stop building new settlements on the West Bank.

The night before the vote, national security adviser William P. Clark, a personal and ideological ally of Ambassador Kirkpatrick's, ordered the State Department to make an exhaustive new study of what the U.S. position should be. Clark worried that a veto would infuriate the Arabs and thereby undercut the Mideast mission of his deputy, Robert M'Farlane.

The diplomats at State, however, declined to interfere with the ambassador's decision that failure to veto would be an unacceptable affront to Israel. The answer Clark received from the State Department: Kirkpatrick has made her decision, and we'll stick with it.

Carlos F. Diaz-Alejandro, the Yale University professor who may have been named to the Kissinger Commission on Central America because of mistaken identity, may yet be eased out for failure to pass security clearance.

One senior State Department official says Diaz-Alejandro, under fire by this country's Cuban refugee community for being too friendly toward Fidel Castro, was appointed because the Reagan administration thought he was somebody else. Although the White House stood by the appointment through the swearing-in last week, senior presidential aides hope the Cuban-born professor fails the FBI's security clearance. No classified information is being given commission members until clearances are final.

A footnote: The State Department recommended Democratic Mayor Maurice Ferre of Miami, a staunch anti-communist, for the Kissinger Commission. Instead, the White House chose Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio. An important figure in Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign, Cisneros publicly blasted President Reagan's Central American policy the day before he was sworn in.

Secretary of State George Schultz has personally vetoed a plan to give thousands of Palestinian refugees new homes in the United States after he was told it would not only infuriate Israel but would antagonize most Arab countries.

Another reason why Schultz changed his mind after first considering the plan a bell-ringer for the United States: Opening the gate of freedom to 50,000 Palestinians would create an anti-U.S. backlash in Central American countries now sending tens of thousands of refugees, mostly illegals, into the U.S.

Arab reaction against the plan is explained by the fact that moving Palestinian refugees away from squalid camps in Israeli-occupied Arab lands would cast doubt on the emotional belief in an eventual Palestinian homeland on the West Bank itself.

Rejected by Gov. Pierre du Pont of Delaware when they asked him to run against Democratic Sen. Joseph Biden next year, Republican campaign managers have turned to his wife, Elsie, and are encouraged by her response.

Elsie du Pont, a political personage in her own right as an assistant administrator of the foreign aid program in Washington, did not relish serving as a stand-in for her husband against Biden. But she is most interested in opposing freshmen Democratic Rep. Thomas Carper for Delaware's lone House seat.

A footnote: Senate GOP insiders are burning about the advice given Gov. du Pont and Tennessee's Gov. Lamar Alexander.

ander by Doug Bailey, partner in the Bailey-Deardourff political consulting firm. He recommended that the two governors, both Bailey-Deardourff clients, not run for the Senate next year. No other Republicans with anything like the popularity of the two governors are available in either Delaware or Tennessee.

Sen. Robert Dole, Republican chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. James Jones, Democratic chairman of the House Budget Committee, got together on the telephone just before the August recess for a private chat about taxes, with this probable upshot: no major tax increase this year.

Dole and Jones agreed on the need for additional federal revenues to reduce the budget deficit but could not forge a common strategy.

French Position To Support Chad Government

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP)
— Hundreds of new French troops set up positions in northeast Chad today to back up Chad government forces, and Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy accused the United States of lying about Libyan involvement on the rebel side to justify Washington's own "interference."

planned French deployment in Chad could triple before the end of the month. Khadafy, speaking at a news conference in Monastir, Tunisia, said "There are no Libyan forces in Chad," and "what the United States has been doing in this respect is mere mendacity and invention."

troops are directly involved in the fighting and President Hissene Habre says the jet fighters that raided north Chad were Libyan. The United States has provided financial and military aid to the Habre government. In an interview broadcast in France, Khadafy also accused the government of French President Francois Mitterrand of involvement in a conflict that does not concern it. "I do not see any justification for the French forces to fight against the troops" of former president and rebel leader Goukouni Oueddei, Khadafy said. The authoritative Paris newspaper Le Monde said

Wednesday the overall French troop strength in Chad may soon exceed 3,000 men and include at least one fighter bomber squadron based in the N'Djamena, the capital. Le Monde also said radar-equipped mobile ground-to-air Crotale missiles have been installed at the N'Djamena and can shoot down supersonic aircraft up to a distance of six miles. The latest arrivals included a squad of the elite assault cavalry regiment of the French Foreign Legion. The remainder of the French strike force were marine paratroopers posted in four, and possibly five, strongpoints outside the capital along the Chad government's 500-mile-long defensive line. The line, in effect, cuts the landlocked former French colony in half and their strongpoints are where Libya would have to attack if it wanted to help the rebels get to the capital. France maintains close relations with its 18 former African colonies.

Says Fishermen Were Careless

FARMVILLE — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, said today he believes the Coast Guard has been "unnecessarily criticized" for its failure last week to rescue four Fayetteville fishermen off Wrightsville Beach.

The fishermen clung to their overturned 21-foot boat for 13 hours before they were rescued by a family friend although the Coast Guard at Wrightsville Beach had sent out three boats and a helicopter in search of them.

Jones called for a report on the incident from the Coast Guard after Rep. Charlie Rose, also a Democrat from North Carolina, said last weekend he would seek an investigation of the rescue effort. Jones' committee oversees the Coast Guard. Jones said today the Coast Guard's report to him indicated that the skipper of the fishing vessel had to use a jump cable to start his boat before leaving dock and that the skipper left port knowing that "his radio was not working, his bilge pumps were not operational and that small craft flags were already raised."

"It's a two-way responsibility," Jones said. "It appears to me the Coast Guard has been unnecessarily criticized, according to the report I have."

The four aboard the fishing boat were identified as Albert McCauley, 43, his son, John, 16; and two of his son's friends, Watson Caviness, 18, and Joe Quigg Jr., 17, all of Fayetteville.

FROM THE BEGINNING ... Collins & Aikman's first five local employees will celebrate their 20th anniversary with the industry Saturday. Above, left to right, are Wilson Wade, Earline Everette, Elizabeth Corbett, Kenneth Wade and Maxine Faulkner. The plant opened in October of 1963 but construction started in March of 1963.

Will Celebrate Long C&A Ties

On Saturday five Farmville employees will celebrate being with the Collins & Aikman from the beginning.

Since the before the plant opened its doors in 1963, Earline Everette, Elizabeth Corbett, Kenneth Wade, Maxine Faulkner and Wilson Wade have worked for the Farmville industry. They were the first local people hired to operate the plant's equipment and are celebrating their 20th anniversary with the industry.

C&A began building the present facility in March 1963, "one of the wettest springs eastern North Carolina has ever experienced," said Gene Crawford, knits division quality assurance manager for the plant. "The area was a big cow pasture and, what with the rain and the mud, we had a grand abundance of flying critters to deal with — gnats, mosquitoes and flies of all kinds."

Crawford said a deep ditch that was dug for the foundation turned into a "moat full of particularly foul-smelling water and mud."

"Access to the building was over a couple of wide boards which spanned the ditch," he said. "It was wide enough for wheelbarrows and foot traffic, but you had to keep your attention riveted on where you were going."

Crawford recalled that one employee didn't, and "took a deep six off the plank into the moat."

"His start-up teammates made him ride back to the motel in the trunk," said Crawford.

The Farmville plant began operation with about 100 employees according to plant officials. It initially produced undyed and unfinished fabric with three warpers and 30 knitting machines.

Today, it produces tricot using over 200 knitting machines.

The division, said knits division president Leon Frederick, a 36-years C&A veteran, has weathered some tough economic times over the last few years, time which he says saw "many competitors forced out of business."

"That well could have happened to us, had it not been for Farmville's people's determination to provide a superior product in a rapidly changing and complex market," said Frederick.

"I found the people in Farmville to be the most willing, most cooperative and most dedicated that I ever worked with," Crawford also noted.

Lawyers Facing Drug-Use Study

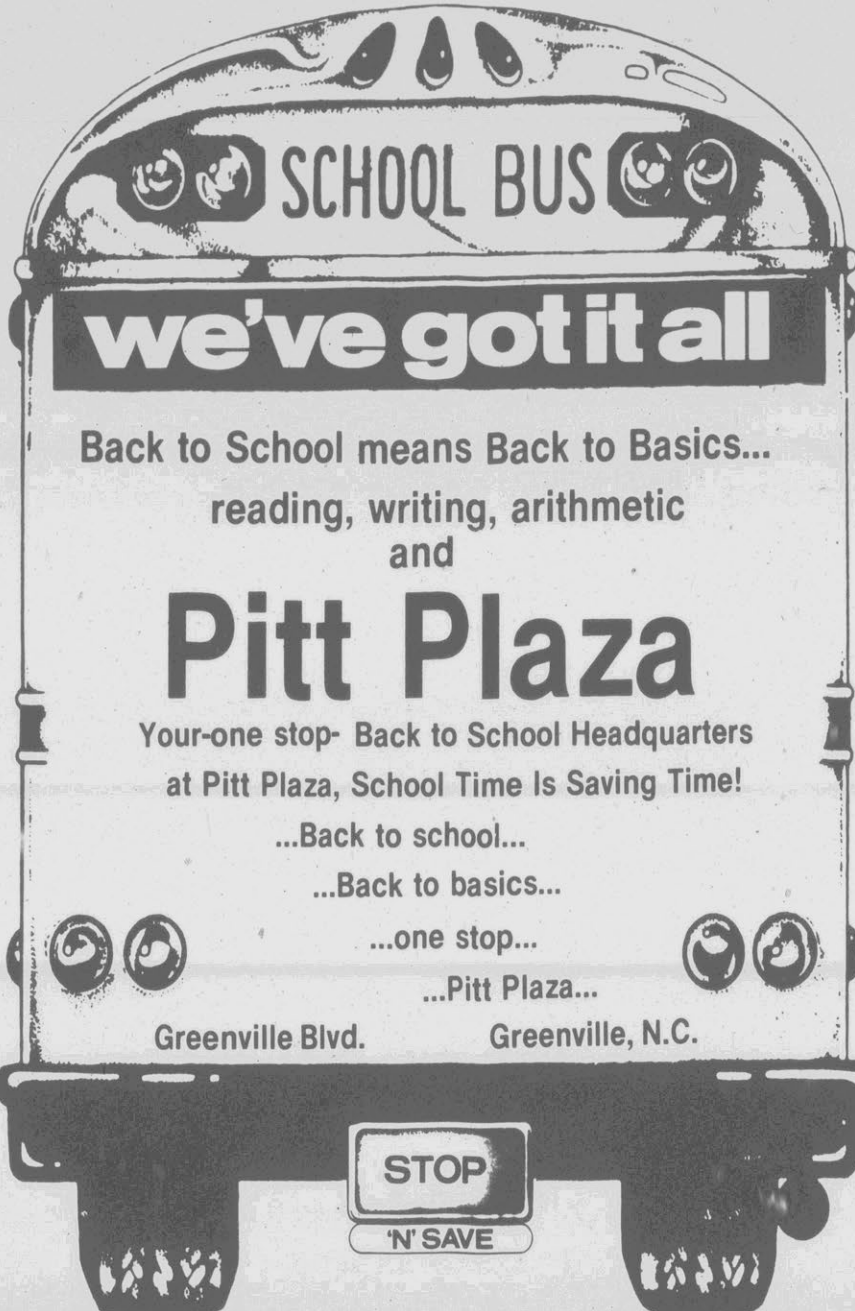

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department plans to send a special prosecutor to probe possible cocaine use by members of the Raleigh legal community.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Doug McCullough said Tuesday that a member of the Justice Department's narcotics division would handle the investigation.

McCullough said he would meet Sept. 1 with Glenn Cook, an attorney in the narcotics division, and turn over information about the probe. He said Cook or a member of Cook's staff would handle the investigation and would be present when an investigative grand jury convenes Sept. 13.

When McCullough requested a special prosecutor last month, he said he did so "because of the occupations (of those) involved and the potential impact on the criminal justice system."

He said then that some Raleigh attorneys and one or more officials of the criminal justice system would be investigated by the grand jury.

Student Training...

we've had has been worthwhile but this new involvement will make the program a whole lot better," Blinson said at a luncheon held Wednesday for a discussion of the project's goals.

"This program is helpful in a number of ways. First of all, we must be concerned with future needs for math and science teachers and this program reveals to students what avenues are open. Secondly, the program exposes students to exemplary kinds of activities in business," he said.

Participation in the clubs would be on a selective basis, much as candidates for honor societies are chosen.

"As a plant and as members of this community we feel we are committed to contributing to education," said Gene Parker, industrial relations manager of Procter and Gamble, when asked what promoted P&G to support the program.

Burroughs Wellcome Site Manager John McConney said he feels the project is a worthwhile community effort that will benefit the future of students and industry. "We need to attract more people into the science fields to ensure the future and we also feel women and minorities should be supported ... because they have as much aptitude for the sciences as those who traditionally have entered the field," he said.

Dr. Charles Coble of East Carolina University said ECU will provide speakers and services for the program. PCMH also will contribute speakers and provide health-care observation opportunities.

"This program gives the students a little better idea of what science does and problems that are experienced. They also learn that they have to work for whatever they are learning and that research is necessary," Nancy Evans, 10th grade science teacher at D.H. Conley High School, said.

"I think it is a very successful program and will continue to grow in importance," she said.

Today Is Birthday Of Virginia Dare, Born In 1587

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — She's famous, but we know almost nothing about her.

We know her birthday is today, Aug. 18. We know that she was born and baptised on Roanoke Island. And we know her name.

She's Virginia Dare, whose birth in 1587 made her the first English child born in the New World.

Virginia's parents, Eleanor and Ananias Dare, arrived in what is now North Carolina on July 22, 1587, as part of the second of Sir Walter Raleigh's attempts to colonize the new world. An exploratory expedition had reached the Outer Banks in 1584, and a 1585 colony had failed after a year.

The settlers landed on Roanoke Island in what is now Dare County. Among the colonists were 100 men, 17 women and nine children. Together they were to become the "lost colony."

Several weeks after their arrival, Eleanor gave birth to a daughter who quickly became the object of affection of all the colonists. The few children begged to hold her, neighbors helped care for her and one chronicler wrote that "the maid quieted her with snatches of gay ditties."

Colonists remembered the rituals surrounding the newborn, too. Despite being in the wilderness thousands of miles from home, the colonists clung to their religious beliefs and after several days the new parents made plans for baptism of their daughter and began to think of a name for her.

For the first arrival, suggestions were probably plentiful.

When a neighbor suggested naming her for their good queen, Elizabeth was promptly rejected as a name. Some have since written that, although a queen, Elizabeth I was "the veriest shrew" and "a vain and wordly woman."

Finally, John White, governor of the colony and the baby's grandfather, suggested she be named "for this fair land to which she has come, our new home, Virginia."

The following Sunday, the first English child born in the new world was christened "Virginia Dare."

Meanwhile, the colonists were fast realizing they'd need far more supplies than they had estimated. Gov. White, though reluctant to leave his family, including the 10-day-old Virginia, prepared for the long voyage back to England.

Accounts say that the colonists agreed with White that if they should leave the island, they would carve the name of their destination on a tree. If they had to leave in danger, the same signal would have a cross carved above it.

John White sailed away to England leaving the tiny band in the wilderness. Arriving just as England faced the powerful Spanish Armada, White's ship was needed in the war effort. Sir Walter Raleigh could offer no help.

England defeated the Armada in 1588, but the Spanish threat persisted, and still no ship was available for a trip to the new world.

Finally, in the spring of 1590, White was able to outfit a ship and return to "Roanoke" Island. He arrived on a night in mid-August off the coast of the island, almost three years to the day after he'd left. Seeing only a faint light at the north end of the island, he fired off a cannon. After no response, he had the trumpeter play familiar English tunes. Still no answer.

At first light, White searched the island and found it deserted. The houses were dismantled, but the palisades remained. Buried chests had been dug up and rifled. White later wrote, "One of the chiefs trees or postes at the right side of the entrance had the barke taken off and 5. foote from the ground in fayre Capitall letters was grauen 'Croatoa' without any crosses or signs of distress."

Taking heart at "no sign of distress," White urged the ship's captain to take him to the mainland camps of the Croatoan Indians where he was sure he would find the colonists, but a raging storm drove the vessel out to sea. No amount of entreaty could lure the captain back once his bow pointed toward England.

Back home the grieving governor soon died, never to see his family again.

And Virginia Dare? Virginia disappeared along with the rest of the colonists.

Many legends have persisted about the lost colony. Some believe the English did indeed go to live with the friendly Croatoan Indians. Some believe the colonists were annihilated by the Indians or the hostile Spanish from the south. Others insist the settlers built a crude boat, set sail and were lost at sea.

One legend says Virginia grew into young womanhood and was changed by the sorcery of a rejected lover into a white doe. She roamed the lonely island until true love restored her to human form, only to be killed by a silver arrow shot by a cruel chieftan.

Through the years, historians and researchers have pored over the meager shreds of evidence left by the colonists to no avail. Theories abound, but after four centuries, the fate of the lost colony is still unknown.

Unknown, perhaps, but eternally fascinating. The saga of Virginia Dare and the "lost colony" has been captured in dramatic story and song in Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," performed every summer on Roanoke Island.

And delving into its mysteries will be an important part of the celebration of the quadricentennial of the entire era of Sir Walter Raleigh's "Roanoke Voyages," scheduled from the summer of 1984 through the 400th anniversary of Virginia Dare's birth, Aug. 18, 1587.

Hear Patients On Vote Fraud

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A stream of Bellview Rest Home patients, whose names federal authorities charge were illegally used on Alexander County absentee ballots last fall, made their appearance Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

Four county residents, including a sheriff's deputy and a deputy clerk of court, are on trial, each charged with 30 counts of vote fraud.

None of the 25 Taylorsville rest home patients who appeared in court remembered voting by absentee ballot last fall.

Most of the patients, mentally incapacitated according to rest home workers and federal prosecutors, were unable to offer substantial testimony.

Some could not give their names. Others did not recall the party in which they were registered to vote. Many agreed with conflicting questions by prosecution and defense lawyers.

One woman said she voted for George Washington.

"All I told 'em was the best one," Andrew McVay, 77, said he regularly told elections officials who helped him vote previously.

Federal prosecutors claim sheriff's deputy Mark Odom, 21, led a conspiracy to take advantage of the patients — all registered Democrats — to secure 28 votes during the Nov. 2 election.

Defense attorneys Wednesday attempted to prove the votes were cast as the patients would have anyway.

Also on trial is deputy court clerk Geraldine Beach, 43; furniture worker Benny Dyson, 50, and John Lackey, 52, a suspended sheriff's dispatcher.

Donna Wike of Taylorsville, who pleaded guilty Monday to a related charge, said she watched Odom mark ballots for a straight Democratic ticket at the rest home in late October.

In a statement read during court Tuesday, Odom claimed he thought rest home employees were their patients' legal guardians and empowered to sign for them.

Ten-year patient Frank Austin, 71, a retired insurance and funeral home worker, said he recalled signing an application card for an absentee ballot last year but couldn't remember actually voting. "I professed no opinion on it," he said.

But Austin said he has routinely allowed others to mark his ballot during past elections and earned $5 for a vote in the 1980 presidential election.

"I didn't want to buck against the system," he said.

9 reasons why the Texas Instruments Home Computer is the smartest one you can buy.

It's easy to use.

All you do is take it home, plug in a cartridge, and you're ready to go. Why is it so easy to use? Because it's also one of the most powerful home computers in the world. And it's that extra power that makes everything easier. It lets us give you most of the instructions you'll need right on screen. In plain English, not computerese. It lets us give you more elaborate programs. And extra options like speech, which most home computers can never give you.

TI gives your child a headstart that could last a lifetime.

It's more accurate.

At the heart of our home computer is a powerful 16-bit microprocessor just like the ones found in expensive professional computers. Its 13 decimal digit accuracy far exceeds that found in such computers as Apple, Commodore and Atari, which use much less powerful 8-bit processors.

It can do wonders for your children.

No home computer can give your child more help than ours. We offer more easy-to-use educational cartridges, developed with more leading educational publishers, than any other computer in the world. Each one is designed to make learning fun. With a TI Home Computer, your child can get a headstart in school that could last a lifetime.

It can help organize your life.

A TI Home Computer can do many of the same things for you that professional computers do for businesses. It can help you make intelligent financial decisions. It can be the world's most efficient file cabinet. It can be your personal secretary. It can help you design a physical fitness program. Or a diet. Its uses are nearly unlimited.

More educational cartridges than any other computer in the world.

It makes it easy to learn to program.

Unlike some computers, our language, TI BASIC, is built in so there's no extra cost. And not only is it easy to learn, you'll also get a free programming manual. And when you start programming, you'll find that our computer is powerful enough to let you write longer and more useful programs than most other home computers. For example, ours is the only home computer that lets you combine color, graphics, animation, sound effects, music and speech all in a single BASIC program.

It lets you play games that challenge your mind, not just your reflexes.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of blank cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,780,000, compared to 1,791,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened mostly higher today and then leveled off as the market tried to extend its broad advance in the previous session. Oil stocks again paced the upswing, but several computer, auto, financial and airline issues retreated. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 16.05 points Wednesday to its highest level in three weeks, opened with another gain of 2 1/2 points. But after two hours of trading it had slipped 0.10 point to 1,206.40. Gainers held a 7-5 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index rose 0.14 to 95.65. Big Board volume picked up to 41.79 million shares at noon EDT, against 34.36 million at that hour Wednesday.

Among oil gainers were Exxon 3/4 to 39 1/2, Kerr-McGee 3/4 to 37 and Texaco 1/4 to 38 1/2. Gulf was up 1 1/4 to 42 1/4 after a 500,000-share block traded at 42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.34 to 232.41.

RUNNER BANNED
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Track and Field Association has banned 400-meter runner Ryszard Podlas from competition because he stole track shoes from a Helsinki department store during the world track and field championships.

me as to whether I should or should not run."

He added: "I have been traveling around since the General Assembly time talking to people, and I have met with people in all 21 counties (in the district.) I am not formally announcing, but we are in the throes of getting an organization together."

"It's looking very good, and all of us are very excited." Gilliam said he had found support in virtually all areas of the district, and described financial pledges to his potential campaign as "overwhelming." He cited the reaction in his home county of Bertie, where he said supporters were told money would be needed if he waged a campaign. Gilliam said the supporters raised $40,000, and "raising $40,000 in Bertie is like raising $4 million in Wake."

Gilliam claimed similar support in other counties, but did not specify amounts. "They are being very nice to me," he said.

The Wall Street Journal reported this week that winning House candidates spent an average of $284,000 on their campaigns last year.

Once a political supporter of Jones, Gilliam said he now is "of the opinion that the time has come for someone else to take eastern North Carolina toward the year 2000."

"I am 36 years old, very energetic and have every intention of meeting a good portion of the 540,000 people in the 1st Congressional District. I have the time and the energy to do so, and I intend to do so," said Gilliam, who is involved in real estate and farming interests in Bertie County.

"I get really excited about campaigning ... I am too busy to waste my time, and I am finding that I am not wasting my time."

"I feel good about what I have done, and evidently the people I serve do or they wouldn't be backing me," Gilliam said.

Lundquist Leads American Swimmers

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Steve Lundquist, who has set 100-meter breaststroke world records four times in the last year and twice in 11 days, wants to prove to the world that the United States has the best swimmers.

That the U.S. team is the best in the Western Hemisphere is becoming well documented this week at the Pan American Games, both in the pool and elsewhere.

Scrimmages Are Scheduled

It's scrimmage time for a number of area football teams, starting this afternoon.

Rose High School and Washington go at it in their scrimmage, starting at 5 p.m. this afternoon at E.B. Aycock Junior High School. Later tonight, North Pitt will host Havelock in an 8 p.m. workout.

Friday night, Williamston visits Greene Central for its workout, with Conley traveling to Roanoke for their scrimmage. Both start at 8 p.m.

Farmville Central travels to Louisburg next Wednesday night, with Camp Lejeune visiting Ayden-Grifton on Thursday. Plymouth visits Jamesville on Friday, August 26, for its scrimmage game.

The regular season also gets underway on that evening for six area teams. Roanoke is at North Pitt, Conley at Greene Central, Belhaven at Washington and Perquimans at Williamston.

"We were disappointed in our showing in the 1982 world championships," Lundquist, 22, of Jonesboro, Ga., said Wednesday night after setting a world mark of 1 minute, 2.28 seconds, .06 better than his previous standard set Aug. 6. "We're vigilantes now. We want to show the world we were a freak accident in 1982."

The United States won only eight of 28 races in the world championships, but they harvested gold in the first four races of the six-day swimming competition.

Meanwhile, Kelly McCormick of Columbus, Ohio, and Wendy Wyland of Mission Viejo, Calif., also finished one-two in the springboard diving; the U.S. shooting team added six more gold medals to raise its total for the games to 14, and Ann Marie Burns of Spring Valley, Calif., and Mary Lewis of Albany, N.Y., won gold medals in judo.

In boxing, Cuban world champions Adolfo Orta and Angel Herrera advanced with easy decisions, while the U.S. fighters took the day off.

The overall medal standings show the United States with 29 golds and 52 medals, while Cuba's count is 18-44, Canada is 5-28 and Venezuela 2-16.

Lundquist, who also has come close recently to world records in the 200 individual medley and 200 breaststroke, was asked if he had more world records on the horizon in the games. "I just go where my body tells me," he said.

As for the 1984 Olympics, Lundquist says he is 80 percent certain he will continue swimming another year, "depending on what my parents, my coaches and I decide."

The broad-shouldered, thin-waisted Lundquist, nicknamed "Lunk the Hulk," was pushed to his world mark by John Moffet of Costa Mesa, Calif., who finished in 1:02.36, just .02 slower than the previous record and .08 behind Lundquist.

"I had no clue he was so close," Lundquist said, "and I didn't want to know. I have to commend him immensely for his race."

Some more record-setting was done by Bruce Hayes of Dallas, who eclipsed the Pan Am mark in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:49.89.

The games will be hard-pressed to surpass Hayes' victory in pure drama. From the opening gun, lightly regarded Albert Mestre of Venezuela sprinted to a big lead and then tried to rely on adrenalin to carry him to triumph.

Mestre led Hayes by 1.24 seconds at the 150-meter mark, but Hayes passed him with about 20 meters to go. Mestre finished second in 1:50.36 and Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven Fla., the former world-record holder in the event, was third in 1:51.27.

"I thought coming into the last turn that there was no way I would catch him," Hayes said. "But with 10 meters to go I thought I would win."

Hayes said he realized he had won the race when he "touched the wall and the crowd was quiet for just a second. Then they started cheering Albert again."

In addition to Lundquist and Hayes, the United States also got victories from two women swimmers, one of them a veteran and the other a first-timer in international competition.

The veteran was Tracy Caulkins, 20, of Nashville, Tenn., a 47-time winner in U.S. championship meets, who won the 400 individual medley, combining for a 1-2 sweep with Polly Winde of Ellicott City, Md.

The newcomer was Carrie Steinseifer, 15, of Saratoga, Calif., who proved herself the hemisphere's fastest woman swimmer in the 100 freestyle. She beat Canadian medalists

Jane Kerr and Kathy Bald.

McCormick, a 23-year-old student at Ohio State, totaled 500.73 points in her 10 three-meter dives, beating Wyland, with 490.77.

But the daughter of Pat McCormick, the Pan Am springboard champion in 1951 and 1955, had to rally to win the gold. She was fourth after seven dives, and it took the second-highest score of the day — 63.84 — on her eighth dive plus a slip by the leader, Argentina's Veronica Ribot, to move on top.

Ribot finished fifth, trailing Sylvie Bernier of Canada and Mirano Gonzalez of Cuba.

Cathy Graham, a police officer from Huntington, Mass. set a Pan Am record of 379 points in the women's air pistol, and the United States also won the team gold in that event.

In the three-position women's free rifle, Wanda Jewell of Wahiawa, Hawaii, and Gloria Parmentier of Fort Benning, Ga., finished one-two, and the U.S. team won another gold.

And Lones Wigger Jr., scored a shooting double, winning the men's free rifle and leading the U.S. team to the gold medal.

The U.S. baseball team kept its record perfect through three games and clinched a spot in the final round. Down by four runs in the early innings, the United States rallied for a 9-5 victory over previously unbeaten Nicaragua.

'Super Days' At ECU Drills

East Carolina University's Pirates wind up their first week of drills today with three workouts, and Coach Ed Emory is fairly well pleased with the first week's efforts.

"It's disappointing to have so many nagging injuries," Emory said, "but other than that, we've had two super days of practice." Emory was referring to the Tuesday and Wednesday practices in full gear.

The Pirates worked out from Friday through Monday in light gear, as dictated by the NCAA, then went to full gear after that.

Four key players are among the walking wounded. They include first team snapper Stuart Ward, a Greenville sophomore; second team center Greg Thomas, a Goldsboro freshman; defensive end Kenny Phillips, a Greenville senior; and starting cornerback Chuck Bishop, a Hallet senior.

Ward is sidelined with a strained knee, Thomas with shoulder problems. Phillips has a pulled hamstring and Bishop is still having problems with a sprained neck from a skiing accident this summer.

Battles are shaping up at several positions, meanwhile. Among them are the contest between Kevin Ingram and John Williams at quarterback; the contest between Jimmy Walden and Tony Baker at tailback; and Earnest Byner and Reggie Branch at fullback.

Emory is also pleased with the way the new coaching staff has blended in with the players. All but one of the full-time coaches is new to the staff in his position. The only returning veteran is John Zernelt in the offensive line.

Center Dave Rimington from Nebraska will get his chance to show whether he can start in the National Football League.

The two-time Outland Trophy winner will work with the Cincinnati Bengals' first-team offense in a nationally televised exhibition game tonight against the New York Jets at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

Rimington, the Bengals' first-round draft choice, could give himself the inside track as the No. 1 center with a strong performance against the "New York Sack Exchange."

"In this kind of situation, I've just got to keep my head," Rimington said. "I'm trying not to go too crazy, but at game time I imagine I'll be pretty nervous."

Veteran Blake Moore started Cincinnati's first two exhibition games, with Rimington filling in later.

"We want to see him in action as a starter," Bengals' Coach Forrest Gregg said. "He's looked good (in practice). He's done everything we expected he would do."

Bengals defensive back Robert Jackson also will get his first start at the free safety position in place of Bryan Hicks, out with a badly bruised shoulder. Jackson was switched to free safety this spring, and is hoping to give Hicks a battle for the job.

The Jets, too, will be getting a first look at several players in the second-last preseason game. Defensive end Joe Klecko and running back Freeman McNeil will make their first starts and are expected to play about half a game. Klecko is coming back from last year's knee injury and McNeil from arthroscopic knee surgery.

Quarterback Richard Todd is expected to start for the Jets and play as much as three quarters. Todd missed the Jets' last game because of a bruised thigh.

The game will be a rematch of the two teams' playoff meeting last year. McNeil ran for 202 yards on 21 carries to trigger a 44-17 New York victory in Riverfront Stadium in the first round of the Super Bowl playoffs.

Gregg said he's not attaching a great deal of importance to the rematch aspect. He said he's more concerned with getting his club to be more consistent.

"I think it (the Bengals' play) has been spotty. There's been some good and some bad," Gregg said. "The thing we want to have (against the Jets) is a majority of good."

Gregg said he's eager to get the Bengals in regular-season form.

"We want to start putting this thing together," he said. "At the same time, some questions are unanswered and we still have to play some people."

Elsewhere in NFL camps, the Buffalo Bills sent running back Curtis Brown to the Pittsburgh Steelers for an undisclosed draft choice and the Denver Broncos sent defensive end Greg Boyd to Green Bay, also for an undisclosed draft pick.

Brown, 28, has been with the Bills since 1977 and averaged 3.9 yards per carry. Boyd, 29, also a six-year veteran, was acquired by Denver in 1980 from New England.

Denver also cut 10 players and placed four on injured reserve and Minnesota released six players.

The New York Giants placed cornerback Perry Williams, a seventh-round draft choice, on the injured reserve list. His spot on the active roster was filled by defensive lineman Charles Cook.

Coach John Robinson said the Los Angeles Rams "will be looking for help," because of the torn achilles tendon tackle Irv Pankey suffered in Monday's game against Dallas.

The Rams placed Pankey on the injured reserve list Tuesday. He is out for the season.

In Alexandria, Va., Washington Redskins' safety Tony Peters and three other men pleaded innocent in U.S. District Court to charges of conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Peters, 30, is the alleged middleman in a $150,000 cocaine deal. He faces up to 113 years in prison and $235,000 in fines if convicted on all nine counts.

Meanwhile, the Redskins obtained third-year cornerback Anthony Washington from the Pittsburgh Steelers for an undisclosed 1984 draft choice.

Flanagan Gains Comeback Victory

By The Associated Press
Like Linus in the Peanuts comic strip, Baltimore's Mike Flanagan has a security blanket. The main difference is that Flanagan wears his around his knee.

The Texas Rangers found nothing comical about facing Flanagan Wednesday night. The veteran left-hander, on the comeback trail from a severe knee injury, improved his record to 7-2 with his first triumph since being sidelined with ligament damage May 17. He lasted nine innings and scattered 10 hits before being relieved by Tim Stoddard in the 4-2 Orioles' victory.

Flanagan, who had lost his two previous starts, wore a four-pound brace on his left knee.

"Initially, I thought I might not pitch again this season," he said. "It was like taking the winter off and then trying to pick it back up without spring training. My knee is still only about 80 percent."

"The brace is tough getting used to, but my arm still feels as good as it did at the start of the season. The brace is a safety device, and supposedly I can't hurt myself in the injured area with it on. It's sort of like a security blanket."

"If I had to throw it away I wouldn't have the confidence to pitch."

Dan Ford's run-scoring double in the 10th won the game. The Orioles added an insurance run when Cal Ripken collected his fourth hit of the night, a single that scored Ford.

Elsewhere, Milwaukee swept Boston 4-3 in 10 innings and 5-1 to take hold of first place in the American League East; Toronto edged Cleveland 6-5 in 10; Chicago downed New York 7-5 in 13; Detroit belted Kansas City 10-4; Minnesota defeated Seattle 7-4; and California trimmed Oakland 6-5.

Brewers 4-5, Red Sox 3-1

Milwaukee took a half-game lead over Baltimore in the East with its sweep at home. The Brewers got all five of their runs in the second game in the fourth inning and rookie Tom Candiotti pitched a seven-hitter for his first major league victory.

Paul Molitor walked with one out, Cecil Cooper singled and Mark Brouhard singled home Molitor. Ed Yost lined an RBI single and Marshall Edwards beat out an infield hit. After a balk by reliever Dennis Boyd, Rob Picciolo hit a sacrifice fly and Ed Romero contributed an RBI single.

The Brewers won the first game on a 10th-inning single by Ted Simmons off the leg of pitcher Bob Ojeda to score Molitor.

"I knew this club is in the thick of a pennant race, but I never thought about that," said Candiotti, who was called up from Vancouver Aug. 6. "I knew I had my control, and I could get my four basic pitches over the plate. If I can do that, the hitters don't know what's coming next."

Blue Jays 6, Indians 5

In a wild affair at Cleveland, Lloyd Moseby tripped in Dave Collins with the winning run in the top of the 10th, then scored on Willie Upshaw's single as Toronto won for the sixth time in seven games. Collins singled off Rick Sutcliffe with one out in the 10th, then was awarded second when first baseman Mike Hargrove tackled him on Sutcliffe's errant pickoff attempt. Moseby followed with his triple and reliever Jamie Easterly surrendered Upshaw's hit.

It was Toronto's ninth win without a defeat in extra innings this year. "Sutcliffe hit me in the hamstring and it knotted up on me, kind of like a spasm," said Collins. "It was a good play (by Hargrove) because I would have been on third if Hargrove hadn't held me, with Damaso (Garcia) coming up. He was off balance too, it was a good play by Hargrove."

Tigers 10, Royals 4

Lance Parrish homered and knocked in three runs and the visiting Tigers scored seven times in the last two innings.

Marty Castillo also homered for the Tigers and Dan Petry went all the way, surrendering 11 hits. Kansas City's George Brett got his first home run since the famous pine tar shot on July 24.

White Sox 7, Yankees 5

Mike Squires, the White Sox defensive specialist at first base, delivered a double in the 13th to snap a 5-5 tie. He scored on Vance Law's single as the White Sox swept a three-game set in New York.

The Yankees' Graig Nettles had tied the game in the ninth with a two-run homer.

"I haven't had a chance to contribute offensively much this year. I'm in almost every game for defense. But it feels good to have the chance to do something offensively," said Squires, who got only his fifth extra-base hit of the year in 128 at-bats. Salome Barojas worked 3 1-3 innings of two-hit, scoreless relief for the victory.

Twins 7, Mariners 4

Two-run homers by Tom Brunansky and Gary Gaetti sparked Minnesota's seven-run second inning at Seattle. Rookie Mike Wlaters picked up his first major-league save for the Twins. It was Brunansky's fourth homer in three games.

Seattle's Dave Henderson belted a three-run homer.

Angels 6, A's 5

Juan Beniquez belted a grand-slam homer and the California Angels, held scoreless for 27 innings, held on over host Oakland. The A's pitchers had not allowed a run in 37 consecutive innings before California broke through in the sixth for one run. In the seventh, Bob Boone doubled with one out, Rod Carew was walked intentionally, and Rob Wilfong walked before Beniquez connected for the Angels' eighth grand slam of the season, two short of the major league record.

Pine Tar Game Is Delayed

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bronx State Supreme Court judge today temporarily blocked tonight's scheduled resumption of the "pine tar" game between the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals.

Justice Orest V. Maresca said he was blocking the game "in the interests of justice" and "to protect the rights" of fans who filed lawsuits contending they should not have to pay to see the completion of the game they attended July 24.

NEW YORK (AP) — Hal McRae of the Royals says he will be going for the seats tonight when — or if — the Kansas City and the Yankees resume their suspended "pine-tar" game.

"Going 2,000 miles to hit a single is like going 2,000 miles for a kiss. I'm going for a pad shot," said McRae, who will be in the batter's box at the resumption of a game that erupted in a sticky controversy over George Brett's bat on July 24.

Before the Royals' designated hitter gets to swing, however, a judge in a courthouse two blocks from Yankee Stadium will rule whether the game should be resumed tonight.

On Wednesday, the Yankees and one of their fans asked for an injunction to postpone the resumption.

Yankee players were to have voted Wednesday night whether to play, but they put off the referendum until state Supreme Court Justice Orest V. Maresca rules on the injunction request.

Roy Cohn, attorney for the Yankees, asked for the injunction to allow time for the court to hear suits brought by two fans who argue they should not be forced to pay another admission for the resumption of the contest.

The Yankees are charging $2.50 for what could be four outs. The Yankees' legal move was opposed by American League lawyers, and league President Lee MacPhail said there will be an immediate appeal if the ruling is in favor of the Yankees.

MacPhail warned the Yankees, under threat of forfeit, not to use the judge's ruling to tell the players the game is off and send them scattering — some to a pool party to which they were invited by relief pitcher Rich Gossage. On the field the status is this:

The Royals are leading 5-4 with two out in the ninth inning. It was at that point that Brett hit a two-run homer, putting Kansas City ahead. But Yankees Manager Billy Martin protested that Brett's bat had pine tar too far up the handle. The umpires agreed, called Brett out and declared the game over with New York winning 4-3.

Kansas City protested and MacPhail overruled the umpires, saying they should have allowed the home run to stand. He also ordered that the game be finished on Aug. 18, an off day for both teams. Brett, Gaylord Perry, Royals Manager Dick Howser and coach Rocky Colavito all will be ineligible for the game, having been ejected for their arguments with the umpires.

Cohn told the judge that if the game was resumed tonight at 6 p.m. EDT, as ordered by MacPhail, there would be a "mob scene" by fans who will insist on being admitted free. He argued that adequate police security could not be guaranteed because of a rock concert at Shea Stadium, where 50,000 are expected.

Two suits were filed, one in Manhattan and the other in the Bronx, by fans who attended the July 24 game and contend that they should not be charged admission to the rescheduled game.

There has been speculation that the Yankees won't show up for the resumption of the game.

"Even if the Yankee players vote not to play, the Royals will show up," said John Schuerholz, the club's general manager. "All I know for sure is we're heading East when we're supposed to. We'll probably decide somewhere over Ohio whether to go on to New York or turn south and head for Baltimore and crab-cakes."

He said, however, if the judge issues an injunction the Royals would certainly obey.

Blind Tar Heel Represents U.S.

MORGANTON (AP) — Eddie Erwin of Morganton normally shoots between 94 and 100 on a regulation golf course, but that's good enough for him to represent the United States in an international tournament.

Erwin, 24, was blinded in a motorcycle accident when he was 15. He will represent the United States in the Canadian Blind Golf Championships in Vancouver today and Friday.

He qualified for the 36-hole tourney by finishing second in the U.S. Blind Golf Association Championship in Greensboro recently.

Erwin won't go alone. Companion Keith Bowers will accompany him, serving as his coach, caddy and eyes.

"Blind golf is more of a two-man thing," Erwin explains. "My coach has to give me a good mental picture of what the hole looks like and what kind of shot I'm trying to hit."

"I have to know where the sand traps are, if there's a creek, where the green is and how far. Once I have a good mental picture, I'll take a practice swing."

"My coach will then get down behind the ball, taking the club head in his right hand and placing it behind the ball. Then he'll take the shaft in his left hand and move my body around to the proper angle."

"After I'm comfortable, he'll ask if I'm ready. If I am, he'll move away. It's a timing thing. Once he moves away, I'll hit the ball quickly. The longer I wait, the better chance I have of losing that mental picture. The key is to hit it the same way every time."

Blind golf is played under the same rules that govern the United States Golf Association, except one. Blind golfers are permitted to ground their clubs in a sand trap.

Erwin says the USBGA benefits the blind public in two significant areas.

"It educates the public that blind people can do more than just stand on a corner with a tin cup. And it's given me a chance to meet 10 or 12 very close friends that I wouldn't have already met. During one tournament, I got to meet Gerald Ford."

"He tried hitting a ball blindfolded," Erwin said. "The first two were awful shots but the last one wasn't bad."

It was the kind of game Dick Williams lives for — the kind that shortens managers' lives.

The San Diego manager, noted for his quick hook when his pitchers get in trouble, wore a path from the dugout to the mound Wednesday night. It took him four pitchers to get the three outs that gave the Padres a 5-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston defeated Cincinnati 7-6, Montreal routed San Francisco 12-5 and Los Angeles beat New York 4-1.

Bobby Brown had a two-run double, Terry Kennedy singled twice to drive in two runs and Garry Templeton drilled his third consecutive game-winning hit as the Padres built a 5-1 lead through seven innings. Eric Show was the beneficiary, but he left in the sixth inning.

Luis DeLeon took over and gave up Joe Morgan's homer in the eighth inning that cut the Padres' lead to 5-2.

And then came the ninth. Ivan DeJesus flied out. Gary Matthews and Greg Gross singled.

Out went DeLeon. In came Sid Monge.

Pete Rose singled Matthews home. Morgan grounded into a force play, Gross scoring.

Out went Monge. In came Ed Whitson.

Mike Schmidt walked. Out went Whitson. In came Gary Lucas.

Tony Perez was safe on Templeton's throwing error that loaded the bases. Garry Maddox forced Schmidt at third, ending the game.

Braves' Fans On Warpath Over Noc-a-Homa's Teepee

ATLANTA (AP) — The talk involves witches, hexes and curses, but it all swirls around an imitation American Indian teepee which usually occupies 250 seats in left field during the Atlanta Braves' baseball season.

Bad luck has befallen the Braves the last two years when they removed Chief Noc-a-Homa's teepee, and now their fans want the teepee back.

Wednesday night, Atlanta television station WSB-TV joined the fray, offering to buy all 250 seats for the rest of the season and pay all costs of hauling the teepee from under the grandstand in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium and reinstall it in the blue seats.

"I'm surprised at how seriously people are actually taking this stuff, talking about curses, hexes, jinxes and things," said Braves spokesman Wayne Minshew. "I thought we stopped burning witches and other such things a long time ago."

"The phone has been ringing incessantly, especially since Horner got hurt," Minshew added.

Bob Horner, the Braves' slugging first baseman who was hitting .303, suffered a broken right wrist Monday night and is out for the season.

The accident occurred barely a week after the teepee was removed to make way for the additional 250 seats for baseball and for the Atlanta Falcons' first National Football League exhibition game Aug. 6.

The Braves, without the teepee, are 3-5, their only losing homestand of the season.

"We are offering to buy the about 250 seats it occupies and offering to rebuild the base so the bleachers fit under it," said Karen Clark, a spokeswoman for WSB-TV, which made the offer during its evening sportscast Wednesday.

The 250 seats go for $3.50 each, and there are 17 home games remaining — meaning a cost of $14,875.

Minshew said WSB had advised him of the offer. He estimated the total cost of replacing the teepee, the construction work and the price of the seats at $30,000.

A final decision, he said, must be made by Braves' owner Ted Turner, who approved removing the teepee. He said, however, Turner was out of town and could not be reached for a decision immediately.

Last year, after the teepee was removed, the Braves sank into their worst losing streak of the season. They lost 19 of 21 games.

Finally the teepee was restored to the left field seats, complete with proper ceremonies and the hanging in effigy of Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda, whose team moved ahead of Atlanta into first place during the losing streak.

Then the possible touch of Caribbean voodoo entered the picture.

The Braves lost two or three more before rookie pitcher Pascual Perez of the Dominican Republic on the Caribbean island of Hispaniola broke the spell.

He got lost on his way to the ballpark and missed his start, beginning a continuing joke about his navigation.

Phil Niekro filled in for him, starting Atlanta on a streak. The Braves won 13 of their next 15, passed the Dodgers and won the National League West.

"Maybe," mused Minshew, "we ought to blindfold Perez, take him out somewhere and turn him loose, and let him find his way back. That might change our luck."

Tony Perez was safe on Templeton's throwing error that loaded the bases. Garry Maddox forced Schmidt at third, ending the game.

"I've been at this too long to get a thrill out of making all those managerial decisions," said Williams. "With a three-run lead like we had, let's just 1-2-3 and come in."

"Tony (Perez) hasn't seen me that often," Lucas said, "but the only time I faced him this year, he got a hit off me. I tried to stay conscious of making him hit my pitch — which he did."

"Then, when I had to face Maddox, I just figured I'd go after him the same way I did Tony. Dick had to be thinking, 'This is about the end of the line so let's get this guy.'"

Astros 7, Reds 6

The Astros won their ninth game in the last 11 to close within seven games of first-place Atlanta in the West.

Bill Doran had four of Houston's 13 hits. "We are getting timely hitting — base hits when we need them to forge ahead," said Manager Bob Lillis. "This series (a sweep of the Reds), we just had our hitting shoes on."

Vern Rühle relieved Nolan Ryan in the fifth inning and got the victory, retiring nine consecutive batters before Cesar Cedeño homered in the eighth.

Ryan struck out three batters to give him 3,622 for his career, 15 behind Philadelphia's Steve Carlton. "I had an upset stomach," Ryan said. "It was something late at lunch."

Expos 12, Giants 5

Andre Dawson drove in four runs, two of them with his 26th homer, and Steve Rogers became the NL's first 15-game winner as the Expos routed San Francisco.

"We've been swinging the bats well lately," Dawson said. "It wasn't a good night for Rogers, but he got the job done. It was nice to see the guys ahead of me getting on base and it's good to see (Gary) Carter starting to hit."

Carter and Tim Wallach each homered and drove in three runs for third-place Montreal, now 2½ games behind the first-place Phillies in the East.

Dodgers 4, Mets 1

Steve Sax's hit a two-run single in the Dodgers' three-run third inning as LA closed to within for games of the front-running Atlanta Braves in the West.

Bob Welch was working on a one-hit shutout when Mets pitcher Walt Terrell hit him with a pitch in the sixth inning. Welch had to leave the game. Steve Howe allowed two hits, including Bob Bailor's RBI single in the seventh inning.

Promoter Gets It 'Letter Perfect'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

When Dave Winfield checked back to his clubhouse stall at Yankee Stadium this week, he found a stack of letters waiting for him, one of which caused him almost to swallow his bubblegum.

"Dear Dave," the neatly-typed epistle on a sheet of Latonia Race Track stationery read, "We'd love to have you visit us and help us with our problem. We open our 25th Anniversary season Sept. 8 and have a terrible problem with pigeons nesting on our roof, and, of course, creating a difficult time to view out our enclosed clubhouse windows...."

"You seem to have extraordinary 'aim' with a baseball for seagulls. Perhaps we can use golf balls here to help us get rid of our pigeon problem. Do call on us on your next trip to Chicago. Best of luck always. (signed) Andy Furman, Director of Fowl Relations."

If big Dave was temporarily taken aback by such a ludicrous suggestion, it was because he didn't know the temerity of this 33-year-old drum beater, who is publicist for the little Florence, Ky., track, just outside Cincinnati, which advertises itself as "Home of the $200,000 Jim Beam Spiral Stakes."

Brooklyn-born and streetwise, with a little bit of Cash 'n' Carry Pyle, P. T. Barnum and Bill Veek in his veins, Andy Furman is an inveterate letter writer who uses the pen to promote whatever event he is pushing.

Nobody is immune from his RSVP notes which have been sent to such diversified personalities as Russian premiers Brezhnev and Andropov, Fidel Castro, Ayatollah Khomeini, Pope John II, President Reagan and Johnny Carson.

It was in 1980 while he was serving as publicist for the Monticello, N. Y., harness racing track that Furman decided that President Carter hadn't gone far enough in boycotting the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

So he immediately declared that all Soviet horses would be barred at Monticello.

He thought it only polite that he should notify Brezhnev, so off goes a letter to the Kremlin. "You may visit us," he wrote. "We have Russian dressing and Russian vodka but we won't allow any Russian horses."

When a New Jersey dentist entered a horse with a Russian name, Furman told him: "You must use the English translation."

It was the same year that boat loads of Cubans, with Castro's push, were flooding Miami shores. Florida's tropical paradise called "help!"

"Send your Cubans to us," Furman wrote to Castro. "We have a nice little community of 3,000 and we could use some more residents."

When the American embassy was invaded in Iran, Furman, still working at Monticello, installed an "Ayatollah Khomeini-Can't-Come Day" at the races and wrote the Iranian leader of the ban.

"I must be poor with letters," Furman lamented. "Nobody ever answers."

Exceptions were the Vatican and Johnny Carson.

"On June 28, 1980, we observed 'Polish Night' allowing all drivers of Polish descent to drive any direction they wanted to," Furman said. "It was chaotic but it drew a lot of people. I wrote a letter to Pope John II, who is Polish, asking his blessing. The Vatican was nice enough to respond."

On July 11 when Latonia featured the first mother and daughter, Patti and Leah Barton, to appear as rival jockeys in a race, Furman let Johnny Carson know about it. Johnny had the two flown to the West Coast to appear on the "Tonight" show.

Furman just happened to notice in a magazine story that Dennis Long was president of Anheuser-Busch Brewery. A light flicked on in his head. He dropped Long a note suggesting that Anheuser-Busch sponsor Latonia racing on the network of the Cincinnati Reds. Long complied.

stints with the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Strikers (soccer), Monticello and Centennial Race Track at Littleton, Colo., before joining Latonia in September, 1981.

"This spring I was helping out at Littleton when the Denver Gold of the U. S. Football League fired Red Miller," he said. "We staged a 'Red Miller Night,' letting in free anybody who had a piece of red on his or her clothing. The place was packed."

Learning Becomes Pleasure In Computer Format

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Just before suppertime, as working parents begin pulling into their driveways, dozens of little children pedal around Ann Piestrup's neighborhood on the lookout for her car.

If a computer's stored in her Volkswagen, they'll ditch their bikes and skip TV to act as willing guinea pigs for tests and tryouts on a new breed of learning games.

The games, created by Mrs. Piestrup's Learning Company, Spinnaker Software and a growing number of other innovators, are transforming the educational power of computers. And they're making a multimillion-dollar splash among families with computers and children as young as 3.

A pioneering learning toy, they bring the color, graphics and excitement of video games to the ABCs of reading, numbers, puzzle-solving and logical thinking.

They're instructive but not pedantic, challenging yet whimsical. They invite children to discover the rules of a game, letting them learn as they play.

They react instantly to a child's touch, yet never rush the player. They offer clear, encouraging instructions if a child gets stuck, never bleating "wrong" or "incorrect."

Companies in the vanguard of this computer wizardry are "mixing the educational with the playful so we have playful learning," Mrs. Piestrup said.

"Walt Disney does it. Fisher-Price toys do it. I think it's the most effective way of learning," she said. "A child's natural way of learning is very joyous and playful."

Until recently, educational software was little more than an "electronic flash card" or mechanical drillmaster, grafting workbook learning onto a computer screen.

"Drills in schools are fine, that's what schools are about," said David Seuss, president of Spinnaker Software in Cambridge, Mass. "But kids won't accept that at home, not when they have options like riding their bicycles, eating ice cream or watching TV."

The new generation of programs capitalizes on the special educational powers of home computers, the capability of responding instantly and acting as a child's partner in a mental playground.

They have the pizzazz of video games — "Make it red and it's twice as good," Seuss said.

And they also co-opt a key feature of video games: "It is inherent in the game that you realize what you can do to turn in a superior performance," according to Bob Olton, a research psychologist at Atari.

"This is a very attractive educational feature," he said. "The fact that you don't succeed is not interpreted as failure. Instead it's interpreted as guidance for how to do better."

In creating Learning Company games, Mrs. Piestrup, an educational psychologist and former teacher, said she wanted "to give clear information, but not to say 'wrong' or 'incorrect,' because I've seen the effect of that on so many children."

Since they're not "made wrong by the machine," children quickly become comfortable, confident and competent on the computer, Mrs. Piestrup said.

The new computer games "let the child roam around and explore and give them the opportunity to define their own activity," Seuss said.

"First they learn the rules, like learning how to get around the board in Monopoly," Mrs. Piestrup said. "Then they get a little better at it... then there's another stage in the program where they're plumbing its depths, seeing the concepts that are there."

"And after that, they transform the whole thing, controlling it to do what they want to do."

Once toddlers grasp the above-below, left-right concepts they need in Juggles' Rainbow, for example, they can make the rain "dance" in colors and the sequence they choose.

In Spinnaker's Story Machine, a child composes simple sentences and paragraphs, and the computer animates it.

"If the child writes — 'The boy runs to the tree. The dog runs to the tree. The dog eats the tree' — all those things will appear and that fascinates children," Seuss said.

The relationship between nouns and verbs isn't something a teacher, book or parent can't teach. But the game adds a new dimension to the grammar lesson and motivates children to write.

After winning a child's attention with fun, the games encourage logical thinking and a building-block approach to tackling adventures of increasing difficulty.

In Gertrude's Secrets, a puzzle-solving game by The Learning Company, children get a "prize" for placing colored shapes in a tic-tac-toe-like array. But to do that, they must find a formula for arranging the pieces.

Similarly, Spinnaker's Snooper Troops challenges children to unravel mysteries, subtly introducing them to scientific methods in order to do that.

The games have such potential that Jeanne Dietsch, president of industry analyst firm Talmis Inc., said, "We expect them to supercede television. It's a far richer medium."

Environmentalists View Efforts To Reduce Chowan River Pollution

FRANKLIN, Va. (AP) —

Top environmental officials from Virginia and North Carolina have toured projects in Suffolk and Southampton counties that are designed to reduce agricultural pollution of the Chowan River.

The river has been plagued by nutrient-fed algae blooms for more than a decade.

Betty Diener, Virginia's secretary of commerce and resources, and Joseph W. Grimsley, North Carolina's secretary of natural resources and community development, on Wednesday went on part of the seven-stop tour along the Virginia headwaters of the Chowan River.

Governors of the two states had been invited by the tour sponsor, the Chowan Challenge Committee, but had previous commitments, said Ed Felton, the farmer who heads the two-state organization.

About 115 people, including soil and water officials, state legislators and Army Corps of Engineers officers, took part in the tour, which featured examples of Virginia's Filter Strip Incentive Program announced in April by Gov. Charles S. Robb.

Under that program, Ms. Diener's department has $500,000 to pay farmers 10 cents a linear foot to plant grassy filter strips between farmland and waterways that empty into the Chowan River and the Chesapeake Bay.

Ms. Diener left the tour after the second stop, a look at a waste-water holding pond owned by Union Camp Corp., for a meeting with Robb in Richmond.

At the first filter strip demonstration, on land owned by Felton at the Suffolk-Isle of Wight County border, Ms. Diener said she was pleased at her first look at "an idea that I had that actually came true."

Grimsley called the filter strip program a very good idea toward the long-term efforts to ease the problem of the heavy infestation of the slimy, blue-green algae in the Chowan River.

In an interview, Grimsley said the algae problem abated on the Chowan during the drought period of 1980-81, but "it's beginning to show expansion again."

"What they are doing here in Virginia right now is important, an excellent program," he said.

On another issue involving the two states — the Virginia Beach proposal to withdraw water from the Pea Hill Creek arm of Lake Gaston in Virginia — Grimsley said the two sides were negotiating.

He said a subgroup of the Virginia-North Carolina Water Resources Committee would meet Monday in Franklin for a negotiating session in advance of an Army Corps of Engineers hearing next Thursday in Lawrenceville. The hearing is on on Virginia Beach's request for a permit for a water pipeline from Lake Gaston to Tidewater.

Grimsley said the negotia-

Jury Overturns Beer Conviction

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) —

A jury Wednesday acquitted a convenience store clerk of selling beer to a 16-year-old undercover agent in the first Operation SAM case to be heard in Superior Court.

The verdict overturned Joel Neese Oakley's District Court conviction. But prosecutors, with more than 50 cases from the same operation still pending for Superior Court, said the acquittal will not deter prosecution unless it becomes a habit.

The remaining SAM cases — for Sale of Alcohol to Minors — are scheduled for arraignment Sept. 12. Most had been expected to plead guilty, but District Attorney Lamar Dowda said he expects more trials because of the acquittal.

tions could establish ground rules, even conditions, to be written into a permit to govern withdrawals from Lake Gaston and minimum lake-flow and water-flow levels in the Roanoke River in North Carolina.

The North Carolina official also said that unless his state gets the agreements from Virginia officials that it wanted, "we would go to extreme lengths to oppose" Tidewater's use of the Roanoke River Basin as a water source.

Tidewater municipalities several years ago looked to Lake Gaston for a water supply, but the proposal was killed, primarily because of threats of lengthy court battles from North Carolina.

"They backed off then, but they went back home and did their planning. Now they are totally serious. Evidently they are not stopping come hell or high water," he said.

Competition Heats Up In Daytime TV Ratings

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The world of daytime television programming turns slowly, with the slightest shift in viewing habits watched carefully by the three networks.

One such change is going on now, as the daytime ratings race percolates for the first time since 1978, when ABC put a hammerlock on afternoon viewing with "All My Children," "One Life to Live," and "General Hospital," the country's most popular soap opera.

ABC is still the dominant network while the sun shines, but during several weeks this summer, CBS showed surprising strength, coming out on top in the ratings for three consecutive weeks for the first time in more than five years.

And NBC, traditionally in third place in daytime, has increased its numbers and plans an aggressive bid to challenge the other two networks, says Steve Sohrmer, a senior vice president at NBC Entertainment.

Sohrmer says he will promote a schedule of what he calls "appetizing" programs this fall, including a revitalized "Search for Tomorrow," the long-running soap opera given new life by producer Joanna Lee, and something new, that may be announced later this month, for the important 3-4 p.m. slot now dominated by "General Hospital."

The stakes and profits are enormous. According to Variety, the show business weekly, a hit soap like "General Hospital" can command up to $30,000 for a 30-second commercial and gross as much as $150 million a year.

CBS has also strengthened its daytime lineup. "As the World Turns," at one time the most traditional network soap, shed many of its older characters, brought in new writers, changed its opening credits and theme music and quickened the pace of its stories.

"In daytime programming the size and frequency of audiences are important," says Michael Brockman, a CBS vice president for daytime. "If we can get the viewer who turns in once or twice a week to watch three times a week, we will be successful."

Jon-Michael Reed, syndicated soap opera columnist, credits the resurgence at "World" and "Guiding Light" on CBS and "Search for Tomorrow" on NBC to a recommitment by their owner, Procter & Gamble, with more money being spent on production and promotion.

In addition, Reed says, the P&G soaps are each gaining their own unique style, that has made them more competitive with ABC's daytime drama. CBS also starts its afternoon schedule strongly, with "The Young and the Restless," its top-rated soap and this year's Emmy-winner for best daytime drama.

ABC, in turn, has been hurt by the poor performance of "Loving," the network's newest soap opera which made its debut earlier this summer.

The show, a creation of soap-opera maven Agnes Nixon, is broadcast before noon, a time considered inhospitable for daytime drama. But ABC still has hopes for "Loving" and reportedly has a two-year commitment for the show which may need that time to attract a sizable audience that can spell success.

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Ira Gershwin, who wrote the words to dozens of classics from "Embraceable You" to "I Got Rhythm" and was "thrilled" by current sellout revivals of his work decades after his musical heyday, is dead at age 86.

IRA GERSHWIN

The Pulitzer Prize-winning lyricist, who collaborated with his composer-brother George and others on such enduring musicals as "Porgy and Bess" and "Of Thee I Sing," died in his sleep at his Beverly Hills home Wednesday, said family attorney Ron Blanc.

"He had been in declining health since the mid-70s," Blanc said. "His heart just stopped beating."

At his death, a musical made up of songs that Ira wrote with George, "My One and Only," starring Tommy Tune and Twiggy, was playing to sellout crowds on Broadway.

Peter Stone, who wrote the book for the show, said Wednesday: "Ira was thrilled with the success of 'My One and Only.' I'm very happy that he lived to see his last success because it's a Gershwin success — the stars of the evening are really George and Ira Gershwin."

Gershwin's lyrics sparked in more than 20 Broadway productions and 10 films.

"He had a million ways of saying 'I love you' without being maudlin," recalled composer John Green, who first met the Gershwin brothers 60 years ago. "He was very soft-spoken, but one of the great wits. He just said things that were hysterically funny. He was a master of the light touch."

With his brother, who died in 1937, Gershwin rose to fame beginning in the 1920s with a string of musical triumphs, including probably the best-known American opera, "Porgy and Bess," which they wrote with DuBose Heyward.

The tale of black life on Catfish Row in Charleston, S.C., produced such standards as "Summertime" and "It Ain't Necessarily So" and was revived this spring at New York's Radio City Music Hall, playing to more than 200,000 people during an eight-week run. Gershwin helped plan that revival as well as "My One and Only."

One of Gershwin's last major projects was with Harold Arlen on the 1954 film "A Star Is Born," which has recently been restored to its original length and has been shown at benefits. A highlight of the film is Judy Garland's rendition of "The Man Who Got Away."

"Of Thee I Sing," a political-campaign spoof Gershwin wrote with George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, in 1932 became the first musical to win a Pulitzer Prize for drama.

"I'd leave only Irving Berlin as a giant of the musical theater on his level," Stone said of Gershwin.

The Tony Awards presentation June 5 paid tribute to the Gershwin brothers, and that evening Broadway's Uris Theater was renamed the Gershwin in their honor.

"His songs are distinctly American, and yet have the ability to transcend the American idiom and become equally as popular all over the world," said lyricist Hal David, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Songwriter Burt Bacharach remembered Gershwin as a "sweet and kind man" who encouraged him when he first came to California.

Singer Frank Sinatra called Gershwin "a wonderful man... a most talented lyricist."

Besides his brother, Gershwin's film and Broadway collaborators included Vernon Duke, Jerome Kern, Burton Lane, Arthur Schwartz, Vincent Youmans, Harry Warren and Kurt Weill.

Born in New York City on Dec. 6, 1896, of Russian immigrant parents, Gershwin is survived by his wife, the former Leonore Strunsky, and a sister.

Gershwin's body will be flown to the family mausoleum in Westchester County, N.Y., Blanc said. Memorial services will be held in Los Angeles and New York, he said.

Classic To Be A TV Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Robert Louis Stevenson classic, "The Master of Ballantrae," will be produced as a three-hour CBS-TV movie starring Richard Thomas and Michael York as the brothers and Sir John Gielgud as their father.

Douglas Hickox will direct the script, by William Bast, of the conflict between brothers which leads to a lifetime of hatred. The book, set in 1755, was first published in 1889 and recounts the fraternal rivalry that tears a Scottish family apart.

Production of the "The Master of Ballantrae" will begin Aug. 22 on locations in England and Wales with principal scenes to be filmed in Dorset, Dartmouth, Bristol and Bath.

Robards Is Cast In HBO Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jason Robards has been cast in the title role of "Sakharov," a Home Box Office movie dealing with the famed Soviet dissident.

Glenda Jackson has been signed to play Sakharov's second wife, Elena Bonner, who accepted the Nobel Peace Prize on his behalf.

Between them, Robards and Jackson have won four Academy Awards. Robards collected best supporting actor Oscars twice — in 1977 for "Julia" and in 1981 for "Melvin and Howard." Miss Jackson won best actress awards in 1970 for "Women in Love" and 1973 for "A Touch of Class."

McMahon expands HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Expansive Ed McMahon, long a TV fixture as Johnny Carson's sidekick, expands on his own this fall in 170 cities as host of a new series titled "Star Search."

Met Deadline On 4,000 Costumes

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Wardrobe designer Anthony Mendelson was told last March to deliver 4,000 costumes for Columbia Pictures Television's seven-hour miniseries, "The Last Days of Pompeii," and has met his deadline.

Mendelson spent several weeks researching the era before designing 50 original costumes, which he had made in Rome for workmanship and economic considerations.

Almost all of the remaining thousands of costumes came out of storage in Italy where such epic films as "Ben Hur," "Quo Vadis" and "Jesus of Nazareth" were made and put away in mothballs.

Mandrell Plans Pay-TV Debut

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Mandrell, last singing star to hostess a weekly network musical-variety series, will make her pay-cable TV debut in an hour-long special for HBO.

Miss Mandrell, twice voted "Entertainer of the Year" by the Country Music Association, will star in "Barbara Mandrell: The Lady is a Champ," taped in concert at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center's Andrew Jackson Hall in Nashville earlier this month for the November cable show.

Miss Mandrell won a 1983 Grammy Award for best inspirational performance in recognition of her gospel album, "He Set My Life to Music."

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 8-18
TZ LOAPWHP H TXHP KONL HPXKZ
NIPOK NJJ: "PGO TWJJ XA PGO IJXHH."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE CHUBBIEST BIRDS: THE CUTE ROUND ROBINS.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals L.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣.
There are some general rules of card play that you are taught early in your bridge career. It is important to learn the exceptions to those rules as well.

North could hardly believe his ears when he heard his partner open the bidding with one spade. He launched into Blackwood and bid the grand slam when he learned he was off only one king. Not very scientific perhaps, but quite adequate.

West led the ten of clubs and the hand was soon over.

PLAY SAFE, NOT SORRY

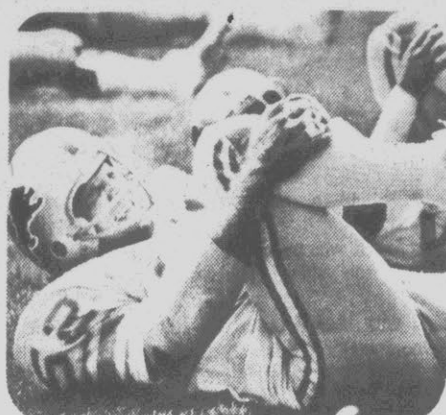

Declarer was Dick Frey, chairman of the Goren Editorial Board and Life Master No. 8. He knew that this was not the time to follow the old bromide: "First cash an honor from the hand with two or more honors."

Missing four trumps to the J-10, there is only one way to pick up the suit if the trumps break 4-0. That is to hope that the hand in front of the two honors has the trumps, and to take two finesses.

So Frey rose with the ace of clubs and led a trump to his ace. When East showed out, declarer was rewarded for his foresight. He continued with a trump. Had West not split his honors, declarer would have finessed the eight. When West went in with the ten, declarer won the queen, returned to his hand with the king of diamonds, and repeated the spade finesse. The rest was easy.

Our readers will have noted that seven no trump is a slightly superior contract. Had East held all four trumps, the grand slam in spades would have failed. But seven no trump could still have been made had the jack of diamonds come down in three rounds.

FOCUS

And You Thought It's Rough Now...

For football players, injuries are a fact of life. Yet football today is much safer than at the turn of the century. In the early 1900s, football was strictly a ground game. Some players wore uniforms with straps so teammates could pull them forward to advance the ball. Opponents, of course, pulled them back. Serious injuries were common. In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt threatened to ban the game if the violence continued. Rule changes, such as the creation of the forward pass in 1906, helped make speed and skill as important as strength and hitting. The action begins in earnest on September 4, when the National Football League season opens.

Flood Insurance Rates To Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flood insurance rates will increase about 12 percent this fall for government-issued policies and private companies will be allowed to underwrite coverage for the first time, officials say.
The Oct. 1 rate increase for two million policies issued by the government was announced by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The agency will continue to underwrite policies but private firms will be able to include flood coverage as part of homeowner insurance, officials said.

Face Price To Meet Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's electroplating and metal finishing industry will have to spend $351 million for equipment to meet new water pollution standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency, officials say.

The new standards will require 13,500 electroplating and metal finishing plants to cut pollution by 90 percent, EPA officials said.

The electroplating and metal finishing industry is one of the largest sources of industrial water pollution, the EPA said. Pollutants include such heavy metals as cadmium, chromium, copper, nickel, lead, silver and zinc.

Extra Wheat Insurance Available

Additional insurance protection is available at no additional cost to Pitt County wheat farmers who qualify to participate in an Individual Yield Coverage (IYC), according to Jim Tylor, district director of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp.

For each bushel an IYC participant is able to document that yields have been above the local average, up to $3 an acre of extra insurance protection can be obtained at no increase in the premium, said Tylor.

To be eligible a farmer must have acceptable proof of acreage and production for at least the three most recent crop years, he added. The proof must be taken to the local ASCS office to obtain the necessary yield certification.

Once the certification of yield has been obtained, it must be submitted to the agent writing the insurance policy. The extra coverage must be added automatically, said Tylor.

Woman Reports Flim-Flam Operation

Greenville police today were investigating a flim-flam scheme at Carolina East Mall that netted the thieves $2,000 Tuesday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Clara Bell Barnes of Route 10, Greenville, told officers she was at the mall when a woman approached her and told her she had seen two men fighting and that one of the men had dropped an envelope before driving away. Cannon said Ms. Barnes then went to the parking lot with the woman to open the envelope, and was told that there was a note saying there was $20,000 in cash inside. About that time, a man walked up, told the woman he had seen her pick up the envelope and asked what was inside.

After further examination of the envelope, Ms. Barnes was told that in addition to the cash, the envelope contained $60,000 in bonds. Ms. Barnes was then told that if she would put up $2,000 in cash, she would receive $6,000.

Cannon said Ms. Barnes then went to a friend and borrowed $2,000, returned to the shopping center and gave the cash to the woman. After waiting for a time for the woman to return with her money, Ms. Barnes left the mall and reported the incident to police, the chief said.

H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 8 with morning, and evening classes available.

During the 14 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications. Courses are ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or persons wanting to increase their tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.

The modest course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school.

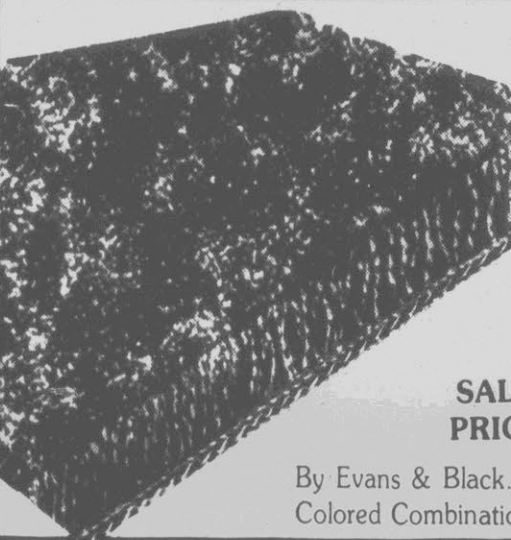

Registration forms and brochures for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H & R Block office at Greenville Square Shopping Center, telephone 756-9365.
