Start Of County School Term Delayed By Board

By MARY SCHULKEN

Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County schools will not open their doors to students until after Labor Day, the county Board of Education has decided.

Members of the board voted Thursday night at a special meeting to delay the beginning of school for students until Sept. 6 to accommodate youth employed in tobacco production.

Students were originally scheduled to begin the 1983-84 school year Aug. 29. According to the new calendar, teachers will still report to work Aug. 22 but will have teacher work days from Aug. 29-Sept. 1.

High absenteeism the first several days of school was one concern of board members, along with poor orientation to the school year by students who missed the first few days.

The new calendar incorporates the following additional changes:

Sept. 2 will change to a full workday; Dec. 21 will change from teacher vacation day to a regular student day; Jan. 26 will change from a teacher work day to a regular student day; Feb. 17 will change from a teacher workday to a regular student day; April 20 will change from a teacher work day to a regular student day; June 18 will change from a teacher vacation day to a work day.

Changes were also made in the calendar to incorporate teacher vacation days mandated by the North Carolina General Assembly. The board voted to prohibit teacher vacation days Aug. 22-25, Jan. 26 and June 13-14.

School Superintendent Eddie West announced that $17,000 in compensation pay for teachers who supervise extracurricular activities has been approved by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and will be added to the county schools' budget.

The compensation schedule for high schools is as follows, with exact amounts to be determined by principals:

•Softball head coach, (comparable season) $800-$1,100; assistant coach, $200-$500; short season, head coach, $500-$800; assistant coach, $100-$400.
•Basketball (varsity) head coach, $1,300-$1,600; assistant coach, $300-$600.
•Football head coach, $1,500-$1,800; assistant coach, $400-$700.
•Golf, head coach, $100-$400.
•Tennis (varsity) head coach, $100-$400.
Track head coach,

$200-$500.
•Volleyball head coach, $200-$500.
•Wrestling head coach, $500-$800; assistant coach, $100-$400.
•J.V. football head coach, $500-$800; assistant coach, $200-$500.
•J.V. wrestling, $200-$500.
J.V. basketball, $300-$600.
An athletic director will receive $300-$600 and a trainer will receive $1,000.
Other sponsors will receive the following compensation: Choral music, $300-$600; band, $250-$1,000; varsity cheerleading, $200-$500; J.V. cheerleading, $100-$400; drama, $400-$700; majorette, $100-$400; yearbook/newspaper, $100-$400; director/student activities, $100-$400; math team, club or activity sponsor, $150; gate supervisor, $200; school photo, $100; football film technician, $15 per game.

The middle school schedule is as follows:

•Basketball head coach, (boys and girls) $200-$350.
•Baseball head coach, $200-$350; softball head coach, $200-$350.

•Track head coach (boys and girls) $125-$275.
•Wrestling, volleyball and cheerleading head coach, $125-$275.

•Club-activity sponsor, $100-$250.

The total cost of extracurricular payments in 1982-83 was $75,336, according to information presented by West. The estimated cost for 1983-84 is approximately $92,000.

A four-step process based on the number of coaching-sponsor years will be used by the principals to determine compensation.

U. S. Economy Sees Best Growth Rate In 5 Years

By The Associated Press

The economy burst out of recession this past spring at the fastest growth rate in five years, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product — measuring the value of all goods and services produced in the country — rose at a 9.2 percent annual rate in the three months ended June 30, after adjustments for price increases.

The department had earlier estimated the quarter's growth rate at 8.7 percent. The GNP had risen at a 2.6 percent annual rate in 1983's first quarter after falling 3 percent during the 16-month recession that hit bottom last November.

The report also said after-tax corporate profits rose 14.7 percent in the second quarter — the biggest quarterly jump since the third quarter of 1975. Profits had dropped 4.7 percent in this year's first three months.

Meanwhile, other government reports indicated that while personal incomes are continuing to grow, the spring surge in consumer spending is showing signs of slowing down.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that Americans' income grew 0.6 percent last month, helped by the July 1 cut in income taxes and an improving job market.

That was a slightly bigger gain than the 0.5 percent increase in June.

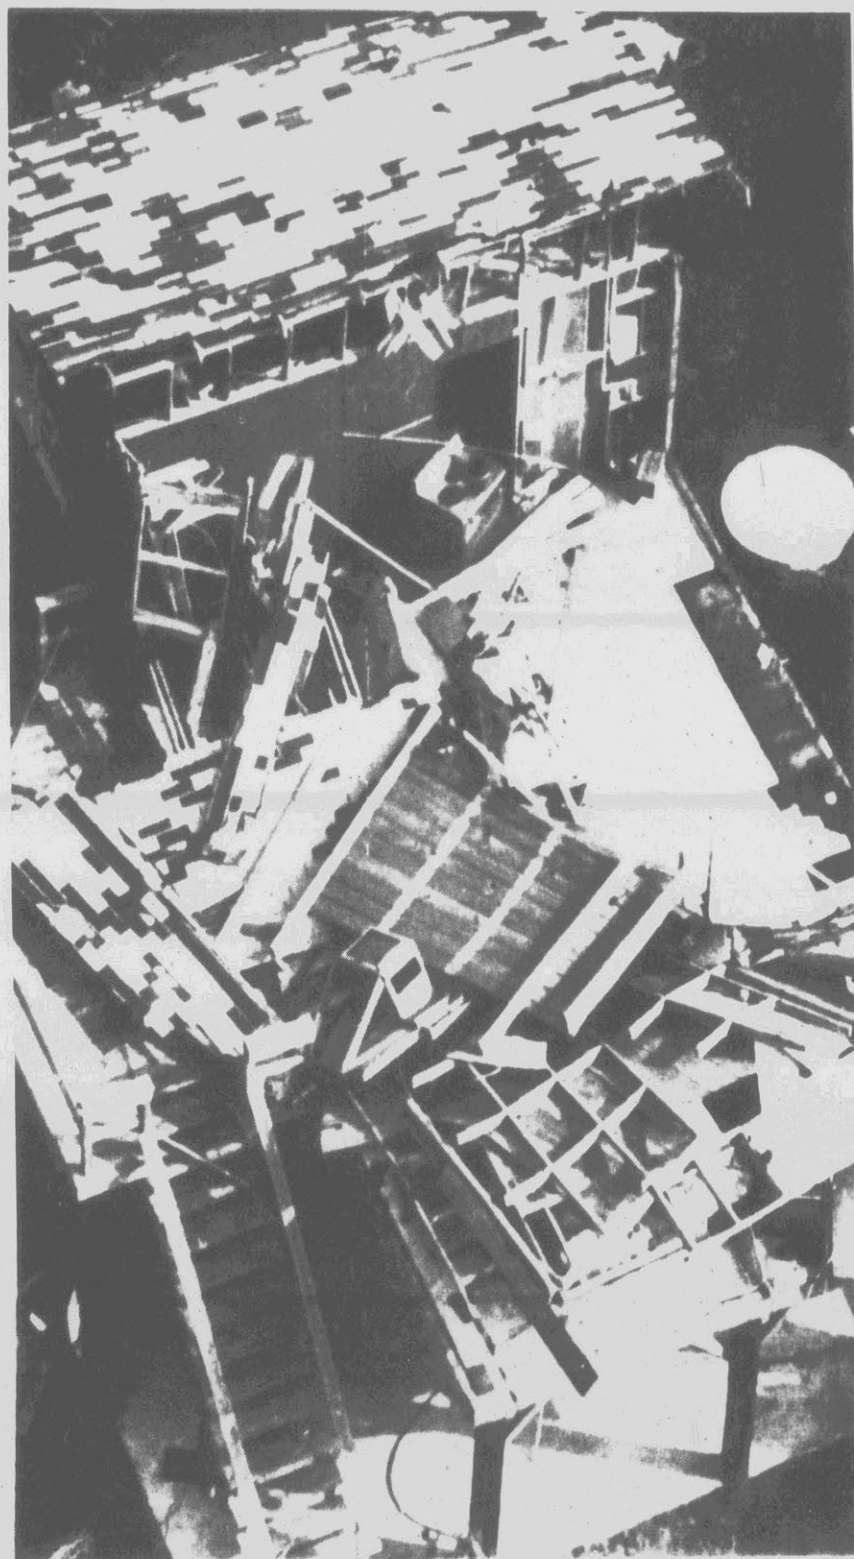

The department also said consumer spending rose only 0.4 percent in July after rising 0.5 percent in June and 1.7 percent in May. The savings rate jumped to 5 percent from 3.7 percent in June.

Malcolm Baldrige, the Commerce Secretary, said that despite the stimulus of the July 1 tax cut, growth in consumer spending was bound to slow down in the July-September quarter.

"The springtime surge followed a substantial rise in consumer confidence and probably included some spending in anticipation of the tax cut, as well as an outpouring of pent-up demand," Baldrige said.

In a related report, the Census Bureau said that between 1974 and 1980, the share of personal income taken by income and property taxes rose from 20 percent to 23 percent.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had gained more than 16 points on Wednesday, lost 14.02 points Thursday, closing at 1,192.48. Trading was moderate.

Israeli Newspapers See Bloodbath For Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli newspapers today predicted a bloodbath in Lebanon, saying Israel had failed to arrange a truce between warring Druse and Christian factions there.

U.S. special envoy Robert McFarlane met with Prime Minister Menachem Begin to seek ways of avoiding a surge of sectarian fighting when Israel withdraws from the Chouf Mountains in the coming days.

McFarlane told reporters in Jerusalem that the meeting focused on how to ensure that the pullback "takes place in a stable and orderly fashion."

McFarlane said it was important to dispel "the erroneous notion" that the pullback would leave Israel permanently in south Lebanon and in effect partition the country. "That is clearly not the policy of the government of Israel, and we discussed ways in which we can make that emphatically clear."

He said he was leaving Israel for Cairo later today, and planned to remain in the Middle East for the pullback.

The daily Maariv quoted political sources in Jerusalem as saying "Israel's many efforts to bring about a reconciliation between the Druse and the Christians in the Chouf mountains before the Israeli army's pullback have not achieved their objective."

Israel plans to pull out from the Chouf mountains in the next two weeks and has warned it will not be responsible for sectarian fighting that follows.

The newspaper Yediot Aharonot said Israeli, Christian and Druse leaders and the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon all agree that "a terrible slaughter will take place in the Chouf mountains after the withdrawal."

The papers said Israel was keeping the exact date of its withdrawal secret. The military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Moshe Levy, said Tuesday that a date had been set and it was a matter of days away. Israeli reporters say their newspapers have been barred by military censors from publishing the date.

Lebanon has asked Israel to help move two Lebanese army divisions into the central Chouf mountains before the pullback, Israel television said Thursday night.

But the armed Islamic Druse community said it would attack the Lebanese troops even if Israeli tanks convoyed them in, the report said. It said the Israeli government has not responded to the request.

Druse leaders charge that the Lebanese army is dominated by Christians and would side with the Christian militiamen. The Druse insist on an agreement with the government safeguarding their rights and property before the army moves in.

Israel has urged Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government to reach an agreement with the Druse to prevent sectarian bloodshed after the Israeli pullback.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens has said he wants the Lebanese government to work closely with the Israelis to prevent Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas from taking over the central mountains.

At Least Six Fatalities Mark Hurricane's Assault On Texas

By PAUL RECER

Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON, Texas (AP)

National Guard troops helped guard against looting in this resort crippled by Hurricane Alicia while 330,000 homes remained without power in Houston and residents were warned to boil their drinking water.

At least six people died in the season's first hurricane, which crashed into Texas' Gulf Coast with 115-mph winds and a 12-foot storm tide early Thursday, ripping through homes, businesses and trees from Galveston to the skyscrapers of Houston, 50 miles inland.

By early today the remnants of the hurricane were centered about 38 miles north of Waco and moving toward the northwest with top winds of 35 mph in gusts, less than tropical storm strength. Forecasters said it would move across the Dallas-Fort Worth area during the morning and into central Oklahoma by Saturday, spreading rain along the way.

Twenty-five accused looters were arrested on the island before midnight Thursday, and another 21 pedestrians were picked up for violating an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew. One armed shop owner chased three looters from his store on the island's seawall, officials said.

Police in Houston also were patrolling on foot among shattered glass storefronts for looters, and 40 people were arrested late Thursday.

Alicia's screaming winds demolished many houses on historic Galveston island, defaced hotels, uprooted trees, and sent debris tearing like shrapnel at buildings. Expensive yachts were left piled in heaps like discarded children's toys.

One of the victims was killed in Dallas in a wind-related traffic accident as still-potent remnants of Alicia lashed the area with tornadoes and thunderstorms Thursday afternoon, 14 hours after moving ashore.

Stunned residents surveyed the damage Thursday evening as Alicia subsided. Many among the estimated 42,000 who fled the storm had returned home. Officials said the clean-up will take weeks.

"Even those of us who are Houston natives can't remember anything like this," said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, 37, who described damage there from 94 mph winds as "very severe."

The biggest problem today in the Houston metropolitan area, home to nearly 3 million people, was a lack of fresh water because electric pumps were without power, she said. Residents were urged to conserve water and boil tap water before drinking it.

In Galveston, thousands spent a second straight night huddled in homes without electricity.

Hundreds of homes throughout the area were flooded. The wind-driven water inundated both highways leading to the mainland, temporarily isolating Galveston. When the tides receded, roads and bridges were strewn with the washed-up remains of boats, vehicles and houses.

Five of the dead were crushed by falling trees while one man drowned, officials said. Several other victims were hurt in the storm but no serious injuries were reported.

"I've stayed through hurricanes before, but no more," vowed Milton Carter, 44, of Galveston. "This is the worst I've ever seen."

The storm spawned about a dozen tornadoes in the Galveston-Houston area as it shouldered its way ashore. Alicia later was downgraded to a tropical storm as it rolled north toward Dallas with heavy rains.

By early today, even that designation no longer applied as winds abated to 20 mph.

Houston Lighting & Power officials estimated about 330,000 homes in southeastern Texas remained without electric power today.

"It's the worst damage we've ever had," said spokesman Graham Painter. The storm flattened hundreds of utility lines, setting at least 10 homes on fire, and Painter said it would take at least a week to fully restore power.

Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said damage left by Alicia could run "in the billions," but an insurance industry spokesman in Austin said any damage estimate this soon would be "irresponsible" because many people still hadn't returned to their homes.

President Reagan directed all federal resources be used to help residents cope with the damage.

"We deeply sympathize with the people of Galveston and South Texas," the president said.

Texas Gov. Mark White asked the president to declare six counties a disaster area that were in the path of Alicia, and scheduled a helicopter flight over the stricken area later today.

White also ordered National Guard troops into Galveston to help the city's 135-member police force prevent looting.

Galveston Police Capt. Leon E. Lewis said the curfew was being "strictly, strictly" enforced, and applied to all civilians including news reporters.

CARTRIDGE GAMES ASKED

Billy Beville, R.N., head nurse of pediatrics at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, has asked Hotline to appeal for the donation of used Atari cartridges to the pediatric unit. Last year an Atari 1200 was purchased to provide diversional activities for chronically ill children and adolescent patients during their stays in the hospital. Recently all the cartridges for this unit were stolen. "We are very distressed that someone would actually steal from a pediatric unit," Nurse Beville said.

As funds are not available to immediately replace these cartridges, persons in the community who have Atari cartridges they no longer use and would be willing to donate are asked to call the community relations office of the hospital, 757-4869, or the Department of Therapeutic Recreation, 757-4445.

Charlotte Ford Returns To Design: Investment Dressing

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Charlotte Ford is going back into the rag business.

The older daughter of Henry Ford II is editing a collection of clothes designed for the working woman. She calls her design approach one of "investment dressing."

"Most women don't go out and buy a whole wardrobe all at once," said Miss Ford. "The idea is to buy two or three separate pieces and just keep adding to it. I've seen that everything is coordinated."

"You don't buy a suit. You assemble one from separates. Get a jacket and skirt or trousers, add blouse or sweater, and you're suited."

"I think separates are the direction career women are taking," said Miss Ford in a telephone interview from her summer home in Southampton, N.Y. "I don't see working women in dresses anymore, although I love them."

Since Miss Ford, as heiress to an automotive fortune, hardly has to work, I asked her how she knew about the apparel needs of women who do, of women who have little time for shopping and often must budget carefully.

"All my friends work," she said. "I don't have one that doesn't. I'm with working women all the time."

In this riches to rags saga, the designer has joined with a New York blouse manufacturer, Jondel, to do a small (35 pieces) collection of blouses and shirts, sweaters, skirts, pants and jackets that will carry the Charlotte Ford label.

The emphasis is on moderate prices for linens, all-cottons, and polyesters, many with the feel of a crepe de chine. Miss Ford likes an assortment of colors, almost all designed to go well with everything else. There are brights, as in a bright red, tailored blouse, subdued tones such as iris (blue-gray), ivory and brick (rust). Several of the all-cotton tops are in muted plaids.

All the clothes are simple in line and without trim, other than buttons where needed. Absolutely no fruffery.

"I have a conservative taste level," Miss Ford said. "I feel that this is what women are after."

"I will be doing store and other promotions. I will work with Jondel's design staff, giving them ideas of my own."

Miss Ford, her sister Anne, and their mother, Anne Ford Johnson, all have appeared on the annual list of best-dressed women through the years.

"We think women will look for the Ford label," said Jon De Luca, president of Jondel. Her first will be in the stores in October.

"Our advance testing shows there's a ready audience," De Luca said. "Remember there are 48 million or more working women."

Charlotte Ford dipped into the highly competitive ready-to-wear market about nine years ago, designing a collection for Don Sophisticates, Inc. Two years ago she quit, saying only that there had been some disagreement.

"I really wanted to go back into fashion," Miss Ford said. "I've always loved it."

Miss Ford never studied design formally but said, "My mother was a strong influence, being on that best-dressed list and all."

Miss Ford said she would not be investing in the new project.

Previously, the designer tried her hand at running a New York boutique. She also wrote an etiquette book "Charlotte Ford's Book of Modern Manners" and with her sister, Anne, wrote a booklet on a subject they knew well, "How to Know Your Own Car", aimed for the woman driver.

Charlotte Ford was married first to Stavros Niarchos, the Greek shipping tycoon, and they had one child, Elena. Later they were divorced and she married J. Anthony Forstmann of the textile family. That marriage also ended in divorce.

Elena now is 17 and her mother said, "She's on the West Coast checking out colleges. My Lord, I'm beginning to feel old."

Gift To Wife Is Sure To Please

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22nd wedding anniversary coming up, and he asked me what I wanted. I asked him how much he planned to spend, and he said about $500.

I told him I couldn't think of anything I wanted, but I owed my bookie about that much and if he cleaned up my bill, I'd consider it a nice present.

He agreed, and that's what he gave me.

My question: What do I tell people who ask me what my husband gave me for my anniversary?

LIKES THE HORSES

DEAR LIKES: Tell them he paid off your bookie. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: Denny and I lived together for a year, then we had a falling out and he left for a few weeks. Denny is 23 and I am 28. While we were apart, Denny took up with "Marcie," who is 22, then he came back to me saying he still loves me, but he also loves Marcie. She is pregnant by him, and he is going to marry her. They both moved in with me and we get along great. There is no jealousy between Marcie and me. Denny still loves me and wants me to have a baby by him. He wants to marry me, too, and if that's the only way to keep him, I am agreeable. I know this sounds weird, but we three are very happy together. (We even sleep together.)

Do you think our sharing arrangement will work? Do you think we are weird? Are there any states besides Utah that allow multiple marriages?

SHARING IN SYRACUSE

DEAR SHARING: There are no states — including Utah — that permit multiple marriages. Do I think your sharing arrangement will work? I don't know. Do I think you're weird? Yes.

***

DEAR ABBY: Which is correct: "The bride walked up the aisle" or "The bride walked down the aisle"?

MADE A BET

DEAR MADE: I'm inclined to believe that the bride walks down the aisle. After the ceremony, she walks (or runs) up the aisle.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for the young man in jail who chose to get his high school diploma:

Hurrah for you! But don't settle for a high school diploma. Many prisons offer courses that can prepare you for work on the outside, so take advantage of them. Don't be just another "ex-con" when you get out.

My husband is an instructor at the prison in Vacaville, Calif., so I know something about the programs offered there. Not only can inmates earn a high school diploma, they can also learn clerical skills, electronics, lens grinding, horticulture and auto mechanics. They can become dental technicians, nursing assistants, X-ray technicians and cooks, as well as expert craftsmen in wood, jewelry, leather, pottery and ceramics.

Don't let one mistake ruin your life. Learn from it. Study hard, and good luck.

Helping Women In Poor Nations Is Goal

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Women, the traditional water carriers in backward countries, often walk 6 hours or more for one day's supply of water in villages in Upper Volta.

In other developing countries, up to 80 percent of all agricultural work is done by women. In Ecuador, as elsewhere, women often swing hoes with babies nestled in carriers on their backs.

To help such women and millions like them in developing countries, the United Nations is fielding a relatively new creation nicknamed INSTRAW.

INSTRAW, which opened new permanent headquarters earlier this month in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, is known officially as the U.N. International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women. Its director is Dr. Dunja Pastizzi-Ferencic, a native of Yugoslavia.

The institute took a relatively long time getting off the ground. It was established on paper in 1975 by the E.N. General Assembly, the result of a recommendation from the World Conference of the International Women's Year, also held in 1975.

Now that INSTRAW has a permanent home, it expects to make a difference in the lives of the women in backward countries, according to a briefing conducted by Dr. Pastizzi-Ferencic recently.

Zineb Benjelloun, an INSTRAW consultant and graduate of Harvard and Columbia universities, said an immediate goal is training modules for women in the developing countries.

Training teams will be dispatched, through the cooperation of governments and organizations, to teach women ways to do work more efficiently, leading to improved productivity and greater economic gain.

In places where women a large part of their lives toting water, for example, a goal will be laying plastic pipe from water sources to villages.

In the fields, women will be taught to use more efficient methods of farming and how to market the produce for a greater return. In cultures where women make beautiful rugs by hand, modern methods of running their businesses will be passed on.

INSTRAW, according to Miss Benjelloun, will be the catalyst and will monitor advancement of women in the various countries.

One of the first big activities aimed at integrating women into the mainstream of development activities will be a seminar at INSTRAW's Dominican Republic headquarters in December, Dr. Pastizzi-Ferencic said.

This will be a seminar for national planners on the design and implementation of both development and training projects geared toward the greater participation of women in economic and social processes so that living standards can be raised — not just for women but for men and children, as well, Dr. Pastizzi-Ferencic said.

She said constraints on development have included lack of training, education, funds and technology for tools.

Such constraints are responsible for the fact that conditions of life for entire populations have not improved over the decades, she said.

"The search for change should concentrate not only on problems facing women but also should recognize them as equal participants and as a tremendous human asset in development efforts at all levels — from national to global," she said.

An INSTRAW report on needs of women noted:

—In Nepal, a woman walks 6 to 8 hours for firewood for cooking and heating.

—Three out of four of the world's women live in developing countries.

—Women and girls are half of the world's population, do two-thirds of the world's work hours, receive one-tenth of the world's income and own less than 100th of the world's property.

—Sixty percent to 80 percent of all agricultural work in Asia and Africa is done by women.

—Two out of three of the world's illiterates are women.

At Wits End By Erma Bombeck

If I had to name the greatest single contribution to the closeness of the American family, it would have to be the refrigerator.

It cools the entire home in the summer, thanks to kids who stand in front of it with the door open. It stores dirty dishes and bowls with nothing in them, thus saving the wear and tear on the dishwasher. It's a twilight zone for half-eaten suckers and old bubblegum. It's a message center for the entire family. (My husband got such a start when he saw a draft notice until he realized the message was over 30 years old.) It has recorded more fingerprints than are housed in the FBI. It's the hub around which the family's social life centers.

Then why don't I love it? Because I am sick of fighting my way through crowds to stand there and spend hours trying to find what I am looking for. Who has that kind of time? I'm old. I have to get on with my life.

I have never understood why mothers lock the freezer with the key which they "hide" in the lock, and yet have an open-door policy with the refrigerator.

Really! When was the last time a kid ever filched a 17-pound frozen turkey and took it to bed with him? Compare this to the fact that I haven't had one leftover all summer that has made it through the night in the refrigerator. (The last time I grabbed a cold pork chop out of my son's mouth which I was saving for pork fried rice he accused me of making an attempt on his life.)

So, I had this idea. Well, actually, it wasn't my idea. I got it from my husband. So we can keep track of what is in our safety deposit box, he keeps a list. When we take a document out of the box for our taxes, he records it on a little sheet of paper. When we return an insurance policy or our passports, we write it down. In one glance, we know what is "in" and what is "out."

I figured it should work with the refrigerator, so I posted the contents on the refrigerator door and asked the family if there were any withdrawals to mark them on the sheet.

A cabbage roll had seven ins and outs, signifying no one knew what it was until they bit into it. Some smartaleck withdrew 35 Bing cherries and two peaches and returned 35 Bing cherry seeds and two peach pits for "inventory." A box of baking soda was withdrawn and returned with the words, "Needs work!" beside it.

Probably the most pathetic entry listed under "withdrawn" was ice cubes and a note beside it, "Would have returned same, but don't know what you use to make them."

He's 27 years old. Probably too old to educate.

Keep To Issues

Public school systems in Halifax and Polk counties are conducting an experimental program that adds an extra 20 days to the school year. The test project hasn't been fully supported in either county, but the expressed reasons for objecting to the expanded school year just don't stack up.

We don't agree with those who say a longer school year is needed, but having children available for field labor — as the Halifax opponents argue — and around for family vacations — as the Polk opponents contend — aren't valid reasons for anything dealing with the school year.

A spokesman for Halifax's Parents to Protect Our Children, which supports the longer year, contends the opposition is really racially based. "Ninety-five percent of our children are black," said Evangeline Grant Redding, the spokeswoman. "Ninety percent of the opposition is white. I think that says it all."

It would appear that all sides in the debate are clouding the issue — whether a longer school is needed. Despite all the rhetoric, that is the only issue that counts.

Overly Protective

Campuses across North Carolina are making sometimes rather elaborate preparations to caution and protect their charges from violating the new age-limit on imbibing alcoholic beverages. Maybe they are overly protective.

The under-19 age group is a distinct minority; but also a minority which has moved from "high school kid" to the status of "college man" or "college woman".

We'd assume many have sampled beer, some may even have acquired a taste, before moving out onto the campus world.

To be sure, campus authorities have an implied obligation to remind their charges of the revised drinking-age law; but beyond that, there is little they can accomplish.

As a matter of fact, heeding moral and social codes is the responsibility of the "college man" and "college woman", and overseeing adherence is the responsibility of law enforcers.

Reagan-Volcker Confrontation Shaping Up

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

WASHINGTON — Deepening fear at the highest levels of the Reagan administration that the Federal Reserve Board is threatening to choke off the economic recovery may lead to a fateful one-on-one meeting between Ronald Reagan and Paul Volcker soon after Labor Day.

If key officials at the White House and Treasury have their way, a well-briefed president will talk to Volcker in more precise terms than the generalities used before he reappointed him Federal Reserve chairman June 18. This time, Reagan would make clear that he is not afraid of economic growth and indeed welcomes a boom.

But so unequivocal a stance by the president, necessary to make a meeting with Volcker more than empty ritual, is far from assured. Reagan is confused on the economic policy as at no time in his presidency, thanks to the cacophony of conflicting advice. Indeed, the Fed's tilt toward austerity reflects non-stop collaboration between Volcker and Dr. Martin Feldstein. As chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, Feldstein has marched to his own drummer since arriving here a year ago.

Vague unease among congressional Republicans turned to alarm last week when indicators of housing and other economic activity started slipping. Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference, warned the Fed of "bold, swift and bipartisan" action by Congress to forestall a "credit crunch."

Much the same attitude is expressed privately inside the administration, where fear exists that Volcker's tight-money policy may abort the recovery in 1983 as it did in 1981. But politically minded officials realize there is no margin for error this time; an aborted recovery will guarantee defeat of Reagan or any other Republican in 1984, no matter who the Democrats nominate.

"Paul Volcker is going to do it to us again," one deeply worried economic policy-maker, who has been a consistent critic of the Fed chairman, told us. Similar concern is shared by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who endorsed Volcker's reappointment.

Assuming the Fed is traditionally pliant, why does not the president simply take Volcker to the woodshed and tell him to ease up? Because at this time Reagan scarcely knows what he wants, thanks to the economic jumble pouring from his advisers.

Feldstein is a Harvard don who acts as though he were on a two-year visiting professorship here with no requirement for loyalty to the Reagan administration, much less concern with Republican fortunes. White House aides believe they at long last have muzzled his public calls to slow down the recovery, but none has any illusions that Feldstein has been restrained in his daily discourse with Volcker. Indeed, two senior administration officials confided they fear Volcker may have gotten an erroneous picture from Feldstein of what the president really wants.

Volcker's harping on the need to attack budget deficits with tax increases, a policy area beyond his responsibility, exactly mirrors Feldstein's position. Both, therefore, are in opposition to administration policy, which rules out any major tax increase. What's more, a Treasury memorandum demolishes the Volcker-Feldstein claim that budget deficits push up short-term interest rates.

There is no doubt that Don Regan, the only other administration besides Feldstein to meet with Volcker regularly, faithfully represents the president's views in those talks. But both Reagan and Regan persist in a monetary Catch-22: while committed to economic growth and opposed to austerity, both demand that Volcker restrain M-1 (a notoriously quirky indicator of the money supply). That has the unintended but nevertheless inescapable effect of puching up interest rates and slowing recovery.

James A Baker III, chief of the White House staff, has led the president out of similar policy cul-de-sacs. But his grasp of monetary policy is admittedly shaky and his interest in economic affairs tenuous. Thus, the task devolves on a Baker lieutenant, Richard Darman.

Supply-siders have considered Darman the pro-tax devil, partly because of his architect's role in the 1982 revenue boost. But he has informed Kemp that advocates of economic growth and booming recovery include Ronald Reagan, Jack Kemp and Dick Darman.

That may seem strange company for the protege of Elliott Richardson, beau ideal of liberal Republicanism. But Darman, who holds a degree in economics and actually understands monetary policy, is free of totemistic attachments to budget deficits or M-1. He is also a practical politician who understands there is no margin for error in preventing a recurrence of 1981. It is no exaggeration to say that whether or not the president lays down the law to Volcker soon after returning from his Santa Barbara respite could determine this country's course in the years ahead.

Hot Item

NEW YORK (AP) — After basking in the glow of Wall Street's bull market for the past year, mutual funds are a very hot item these days.

Total assets of funds investing in stocks and bonds have nearly doubled since last summer, according to the Investment Company Institute, a trade association. From January through June, investors poured $22.4 billion into shares of these funds, eclipsing the full-year record of $15.7 billion set in 1982.

With the rousing performance recorded by many funds, particularly the most speculative ones, it's not hard to understand why many savers and investors are so enthusiastic.

But fund investors, in monitoring their existing investments or shopping for new ones, should take note of the changes some funds are making in the fees they charge.

In years past, nearly all funds fell into one of two distinct camps — "load" funds, which imposed a sales charge of up to 8½ percent at the time of purchase, and no-loads, which had no such charge.

Neither type of fund is run as a charity, of course. The organization that runs a fund, whether load or no-load, collects an annual management fee, based on the amount of assets in the fund.

In the 1950s and '60s, no-loads were a small minority in the industry. As investors grew more sophisticated, however, no-loads gained in popularity, and many load funds dropped their sales charges in response.

The growth of money-market mutual funds, nearly all of which are no-load, gave the industry a strong push in that direction.

The trend appears to be continuing today. But in the wave of prosperity that has swept over the industry lately, some new charges are popping up.

One is the "redemption fee" — a charge of, say, 1 percent levied when investors cash in their fund shares. Some funds have adopted this practice to try to encourage long-term investing, rather than frequent movements of money in and out, which naturally raises their paperwork costs.

At the same time, several stock funds have gone "low-load," assessing sales charges of 2 percent to 5 percent. "It costs a heck of a lot more to sell stock funds than money funds," said a representative of one fund, who declined to be identified. "They're a more complex product."

The latest wrinkle stems from a ruling issued three years ago by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which permits the managers of a fund to dip into the fund's assets to pay some marketing costs.

A couple of months ago, Keystone Massachusetts Group dropped its sales charges and began a program under which commissions are paid out of fund assets to brokers who sell the fund's shares.

"By eliminating the front-end load, we are responding to consumers' wishes," Stephen J. Arpante, president of Keystone Massachusetts Distributors, wrote in the Investment Company Institute publication "Mutual Funds Forum."

"By continuing to pay commissions, we maintain a method of compensating broker-dealers for their efforts as trusted advisers, both at the time of the initial investment and as they continue to supervise their clients' assets."

The bottom line for investors, of course, is the actual return they get on their money. A fund charging relatively high fees that turns in good performance with its portfolio is better than a fund with low fees but miserable performance.

It can be argued that investors who are comfortable making their own decisions should seek out good funds that don't charge sales commissions in any form. It also can be argued that commissions are justified in the case of investors who rely on brokers for help.

But, now more than ever, it is evident that investors in both categories should be familiar with all the fees a fund may charge before they buy its shares.

'Sphere Of Influence' Raises Political Hackles

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan dusted off the phrase "sphere of influence" last week to portray the relationship between France and its former African colonies, he chose a politically volatile term first used in the 19th century as competing colonial empires carved up the map of the world.

It is a description that conjures up "The Great Game," when Great Britain and imperial Russia vied for influence and strategic leeway in Afghanistan, as well as colonial armies clashing over territorial ambitions in Africa, not far from the current war in Chad.

Chad, a landlocked former French colony, is being battered by rebel forces supported by the armor and warplanes of Col. Muammar Khadafy of Libya, whom the United States accuses of harboring imperial ambitions in Africa.

Reagan told a news conference last Friday he does not intend to send American combat forces to Chad to oppose Khadafy's plans.

Chad, he explained, "is not our primary sphere of influence, it is that of France."

For weeks U.S. officials have been trying to persuade the French government to "take the lead" in Chad because of France's historic, cultural and linguistic ties to the region.

But Reagan's use of "sphere of influence" to describe those ties raised hackles and eyebrows, in part because France's Socialist government under President Francois Mitterrand has resisted being drawn into France's traditional role as a military gendarme imposing stability in its former African possessions.

"Americans have been rather allergic to these kind of terms because they imply something about the balance of power that Americans haven't liked," said Helmut Sonnenfeldt, a former State Department official in the Nixon and Ford administrations who is now at the Brookings Institution here.

"It is not a politically healthy term in this country," he said. "The confusion arises over the fact that whereas great powers have special interests, (it is debatable) as to whether they should be allowed to have exclusive interests."

Sonnenfeldt speaks from experience.

In 1975, a news leak of remarks attributed to Sonnenfeldt at a meeting of U.S. ambassadors in Europe portrayed him as accepting a permanent Soviet sphere of influence in Eastern Europe.

The quoted remarks created a political furor extending into the 1976 presidential campaign.

Sonnenfeldt says he was misquoted as accepting a fixed and unchallenged Soviet sphere, declaring that was "almost the opposite of what I had been saying."

In the last century, spheres of influence expanded, retracted and collided with the ebb and flow of empires.

President James Monroe did not use the term when he issued the Monroe Doctrine in 1823, but the meaning was clear: The United States, with the support of Great Britain, considered the Western Hemisphere closed to future European colonization.

American diplomats, anxious not to offend U.S. neighbors, avoid using the phrase to describe continuing special U.S. interests in Latin America.

Nevertheless, the most recent chapter in the long history of those interests is being written by the Reagan administration as it strives to curb what it maintains are Soviet-inspired and supplied insurgencies in such countries as El Salvador.

Some experts, Sonnenfeldt included, see a parallel between Col. Khadafy's purported reach towards the Sudan and Egypt and a 1898 clash between Britain and France at the headwaters of the Nile River.

The French government sent an expedition to Fashoda in the Sudan, about 1,000 miles from the current fighting in Chad, to dam the Nile and use French control of vital water supplies as a lever to dislodge Britain from Egypt.

But the play failed and the small French force withdrew in the face of superior British resources. France later renounced all claims of access to the Nile Valley.

"It was one of the great crises in the years before World War I and the situation is not dissimilar to the present concerns about what Khadafy might be up to now," Sonnenfeldt said.

World War II established new spheres of influence with the elimination of Germany and Japan as military powers, the dismantling of colonial empires and the advent of the United States and the Soviet Union as superpowers.

Although President Franklin Roosevelt cautioned towards war's end about being "careful to make it clear that we are not establishing any post-war spheres of influence," British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was concerned with the successful conclusion of the war effort.

In October 1944 Churchill slid a piece of paper across a conference table in Moscow to Soviet leader Joseph Stalin. It assigned percentages to British and Soviet interests in the Balkans.

Churchill made clear in his memoirs he felt he was dealing only with immediate wartime arrangements, with larger questions left for post-war peace talks.

But on March 5, 1946, Churchill graphically described the creation of a new sphere of influence:

"From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the continent," he told an American audience. "Behind that line lie all the capitals of the ancient states of central and eastern Europe..."

Education Important To Japanese

entrance to schools is by competitive examinations, the Japanese child, at every step of his career, is under intense pressure to perform.

"Parents worry about the competitiveness of their children when they go back. It is very hard for children to be here for four years and go back and be competitive," Sylvester says.

So, North Carolina industrial recruiters came up with an idea. Several years ago, they helped establish Saturday Japanese language classes in Charlotte and Raleigh, where there are Japanese children. Similar classes are starting in Greensboro. The classes are usually taught by a Japanese graduate student studying at UNC. The Japanese government will send a certified language instructor here when a total of 100 children are enrolled in these classes and they'll pay his salary.

As Johnson sees it, the classes can't totally compensate for missing school back in Osaka or Nagoya. But, it helps. And, up until a little while ago, it was more than the Japanese could get if they put their plant in Tennessee or Kentucky. But those states, as well as others, are catching on. They're copying what North Carolina did.

So Johnson is looking to take things one step further. And our neighbors may not be able to match this. The Japanese are also concerned about the level of science and math instruction our high schoolers get. What we study in college, they learn in the 11th grade. Again, they're concerned that their children won't be adequately prepared for college entrance exams.

Johnson is trying to arrange summer school classes for Japanese students at the N.C. School of Science and Math in Durham where the curriculum is every bit as good as anywhere in Japan.

When Sumitomo Electric announced plans to build a $40 million plant in Durham, the company's president said the quality of North Carolina education — both universities and local schools — was the main reason behind their choice of that state.

That's just what Johnson wanted to

Strength For Today

Life can be defined in part as a cluster of habits. Year by year, our growth largely consists in deepening and extending our habits. As soon as we have performed any act or allowed any thought to pass through our minds, the disposition to repeat the act or thought has been established. We get at last to the place where repetition becomes practically imperative.

One of life's most agonizing experiences is trying to break a habit once it is established.

Since this is true, the wise person will be very careful about the habits he allows to get started in his life. The slightest deviation from honesty can lead eventually to larceny. The impure thought can ultimately lead to the ruin of reputation and life. One out of every 10 drinkers ends as a problem drinker or alcoholic.

Since life consists largely of a bundle of habits, it is up to us to see that the right habits are started and encouraged.

Life As It's Lived

Clean-Up Threat Up To Dreaded Expectations

By GAIL MICHAELS

At breakfast last Saturday Phillip announced that he intended to set aside that weekend for cleaning out the garage.

He might as well have told us that he was abandoning us for life in a Buddhist monastery or that he had decided to float the length of the Nile on his bare back. The entire family was startled into silence. I searched his face for some clue that he was playing a sick joke, but he seemed completely serious.

Meg, of course, was the first to speak. "Don't you throw my tent away."

She had cause for concern. The one time Phillip had shown any inclination to rearrange the contents of our cars' abode was when he had tried to use its side door. The only way to accomplish this was by pushing the box containing the pieces of Meg's jungle gym out in front of him. There the box sat for two months until the garbage men relieved us of it.

"I'm not going to throw your tent away. I might even put it up," he said.

Again we were dumbfounded. Meg didn't even smile. "It's not nice to tease people, Daddy."

"Oh ye of little faith," he sniffed, and picking up his cherished 17-year-old cowboy hat, he headed out the door.

"That's my hat!" Zachary screeched.

As I was reassuring Zachary that his father was only borrowing this unsightly, misshapen piece of felt that they both set so much store by, I heard the sound of both cars being backed out of the garage. He really was going to do it. My heart leapt with joy at the prospect of getting into the car without first tripping over the broom, threading my way around the baby bed, two old boxsprings, the lawnmower and the wheelbarrow, and sucking in my breath in the hope of avoiding contact with the grease-rimmed grill.

I might even be able to get to the freezer without climbing over the desk, vaulting over the Sit-n-Spin, or tangling with the bike and the folding chairs. Suddenly, I couldn't resist going out there and pouring out encouragement and my heartfelt thanks.

He was sitting on a lawnchair in the middle of the garage. "I'm thinking," he explained at the sight of my crestfallen expression. "You can't expect me to do a job like this without first organizing things in my mind."

I groaned. Phillip's organizational efforts invariably take three times as long as the chore itself. "It's a trick. It's the same thing you do with the dishes and cooking. You figure that if you organize long enough, I'll get exasperated and take over."

"That's not true. Now go away and leave me alone," and he pulled his talisman farther down over his forehead.

Two hours later he hadn't moved.

I sighed. "I have to admit that this is the most creative excuse for resting that you've come up with in months."

"I have not been resting. I have been thinking, and I have a solution to our problem."

"What?"

"We need an attic."

"So put one in." We had, after all, often discussed our need for one.

"I figure that it will cost around $600."

I gasped. "No way!"

He arose and headed toward the door. "All right, but I want you to remember that I did try to get this mess cleaned up."

How could I forget?

An Indictment

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A federal judge investigating activities of right-wing death squads in the mid-1970s has indicted former junta member and retired Adm. Emilio Massera in connection with the terrorism.

It was the first civil court indictment of a former officer in connection with the abduction and summary execution of people for political reasons.

A former navy chief, Massera was a founding member of the junta that replaced President Isabel Peron March 24, 1976. He was routinely replaced Sept. 15, 1978.

Massera has been detained since June 17, 1983 in connection with the 1977 disappearance and presumed killing of businessman Fernando Branco, a crime unrelated to the present investigation.

Demand Is Up, Supply Is Down For Graduates Of Ag School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Better publicity for jobs in business and computer science combined with a shrinking home-farming community have led to a decline in college agricultural graduates, according to a North Carolina State University official.

But Dr. Robert Parries said the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences is fighting the problem by adding courses in computer sciences, economics and even politics to better prepare tomorrow's graduates.

Parries is assistant to the director of academic affairs for the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at N.C. State.

A national study done by the Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that agricultural job opportunities are exceeding the number of graduates available. The study, done by Terry B. Kinney Jr., the service's administrator, forecasts an annual need for 59,780 agricultural graduates between now and 1985.

But despite employment opportunities, annual projections are for only 51,976 annually, Kinney found.

"We urgently need higher education of young people in the food and agricultural sciences," Kinney said.

Parries says the agricultural school has seen about a five percent decline in enrollment, primarily in the pre-medical and plant sciences areas.

"At N.C. State it would be students in zoology or life sciences who have interests later in medicine, dentistry or optometry," Parries said. "The other group in decline has been in plant sciences, particularly in horticulture and botany."

Parries says the gap between demand and supply is even more critical at the graduate level, or those wanted with master's and doctorate degrees in agriculture. But he said the decline in enrollment on the graduate level at N.C. State is not as critical as the undergraduate, or bachelor of science, level.

Parries said the types of businesses seeking agriculture graduates are varied.

"The food industry in general is looking for graduates, as are the research organizations, state and federal departments of agriculture, the pharmaceutical and drug industry and farm credit or lending institutions," Parries said.

Parries said N.C. State is offering specialization in agricultural engineering and economics and the food sciences. Specialists in the food sciences work closely with those in animal sciences to develop new food products and increase food production, he said.

"Currently the career fields of business, computer sciences and engineering have more and better publicity than the agricultural sciences," Parries said. "We see computer science and computer literacy as becoming more and more important in the job market."

To meet these modern day demands, Parries said, the school is offering related courses to its students, such as one entitled "Computer Applications in Agriculture."

"Basically, it teaches how to use a computer in farm management and decision making," Parries said. "Even large farms are now computer operated."

"Another thing we are stressing is an understanding of economics and politics for agriculture students," Parries continued. "It's just a basic course in political science for them to understand how local, state and federal governments operate."

Four Men Found Guilty Of Enslaving Migrants

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Four men accused of picking up alcoholic drifters, promising them short-term jobs then providing them with plenty of cheap wine were found guilty in federal court of enslaving the migrants in labor camps in Florida and North Carolina.

A six-man, six-woman jury deliberated for nearly nine hours Wednesday and Thursday before convicting Willie Warren Sr., 49; his sons, Willie Jr. and Richard, and Michael Moore, all of Orlando.

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle hailed the jury's decision as "extremely significant."

"In this day and age we are beyond the point that human beings can be held as slaves," Merkle said.

The East Coast Farmworker Support Network, based in Raleigh, N.C., also applauded the convictions, but was critical that "the prosecution of the Warren family has taken so long."

"... it has ignored those who are most responsible ... that is the farmers, who have continued to hire crewleaders like the Warrens to do their dirty work for them," the network said in a prepared statement.

The men were found guilty of four counts of conspiring to enslave migrant workers from July 1979 through December 1980 and on two counts of holding two migrant workers in slavery in November 1980.

Warren, Warren Jr. and Moore also were found guilty of holding one worker in involuntary servitude in December 1979. They face sentences of up to 20 years in prison and fines of $25,000.

Richard Warren could receive a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and $20,000 in fines.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman allowed Richard Warren to remain free on bond until sentencing Aug. 30. The three others were taken into custody after the verdicts were read.

Prosecutors say the Warrens zeroed in on drifters with alcoholism problems because they were easily controlled. The workers would be rounded up across the nation, plied with cheap wine and taken to isolated labor camps.

Too late, the men would realize they had been tricked. Threats of beatings kept them from complaining about the $2.50-a-week pay.

At the end of a work week, the migrants would find out they had not earned any money but in fact owed the Warrens for wine and cigarettes. Penniless and friendless, they found themselves helpless and unable to get away.

Merkle said "common sense would suggest this is not an isolated practice."

Sister Catherine Flynn, a government witness, rejoiced at the verdicts.

"Praise the Lord," she said. "I was praying that justice would be done."

Defense attorney Edwin Ivy said Warren Sr.'s biggest problem was his credibility. The defendant admitted lying in a 1980 deposition read to the jury about his personal worth.

The government called witnesses who gave details of alleged crimes at the camps and told stories of beatings, threats, drunkenness and unfair wages.

"There was a machine out there, working those crops, and the fuel the machine ran on was cheap wine," Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Hart told jurors in closing arguments.

Six men testified they were conned into working at the labor camps in North Carolina and Loughman, Fla., between July 1979 and December 1980. They said they were then forced to remain at the camps through intimidation and threats.

"What you have heard is a story of human bondage," Assistant U.S. Attorney

Susan King said her in closing statement. "Willie Warren Sr. could have paid his workers, had he chosen to do so. He certainly made enough money. But Willie Warren Sr. is interested in profit, not in payment."

Ivy, however, pointed to testimony that numerous health workers, social-agency representatives and law-enforcement officials visited Warren-run camps during 1979 and 1980.

Ivy argued that if workers were actually being held as slaves, those outsiders would have been noticed during the visits.

He added that Warren Sr. cooperated with the outsiders' involvement at the camps and did not try to keep them away.

"These are not the acts of a man who's trying to run a slave camp," Ivy said.

Expects Next N.C. Hurricane 'Severe'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Careless development and inadequate escape routes will lead to "fantastic damage" when the next major hurricane hits the North Carolina coast, a weather forecaster says.

Bob Muller, chief forecaster for the National Weather Service based at the Raleigh-Durham Airport, said Wednesday he doesn't know when another hurricane will hit the coast, but he is sure one is coming.

"When I'm on the coast, it scares me to think that only one road is there for me to get off in case of a storm," he said.

"When a hurricane occurs, all of the people are going to wait until the last minute to leave and everyone is going to be on one road at the same time. It's going to be terrible."

Congested roads were partially to blame for the 6,000 deaths in a hurricane in Galveston, Texas, in 1900, said Muller. That's the same area that was battered by Hurricane Alicia.

Muller acknowledged that forecasters often are wrong in their weather predictions, but said that's no reason for people to ignore warnings about impending bad weather.

"We do our forecasting based on the meager knowledge that we have of the atmosphere," he said. "If a hurricane is predicted, I'll take the 75 percent accuracy and get out of there."

Miller told a Durham civic club that people have built beach cottages near the shoreline with little regard for the possibility of a hurricane.

People generally are much more fearful about building a house near a nuclear power plant than the beach, although "the probability of something going wrong with the power plant is much less than the chances that a hurricane might hit," he said.

Partial Rate Hike Okayed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Utilities Commission granted $1.9 million of Public Service Co.'s $4.7 million rate increase request, boosting natural gas rates by about $1 per month for residential customers.

The increase, ordered Thursday, will increase the typical residential bill $12.30 a year to $617.14, according to the commission's Public Staff, which represents consumers in rate cases.

The rate increase is about 40 percent of the amount Public Service had sought. The Gastonia-based company serves about 155,000 customers in 11 Piedmont counties.

The commission's decision addressed Public Service's operating cost and not the cost of natural gas, which is the biggest factor in the price consumers pay.

"The commission has made their decision, and we're not contesting it," said Charles E. Zeigler, chairman of the gas distributor.

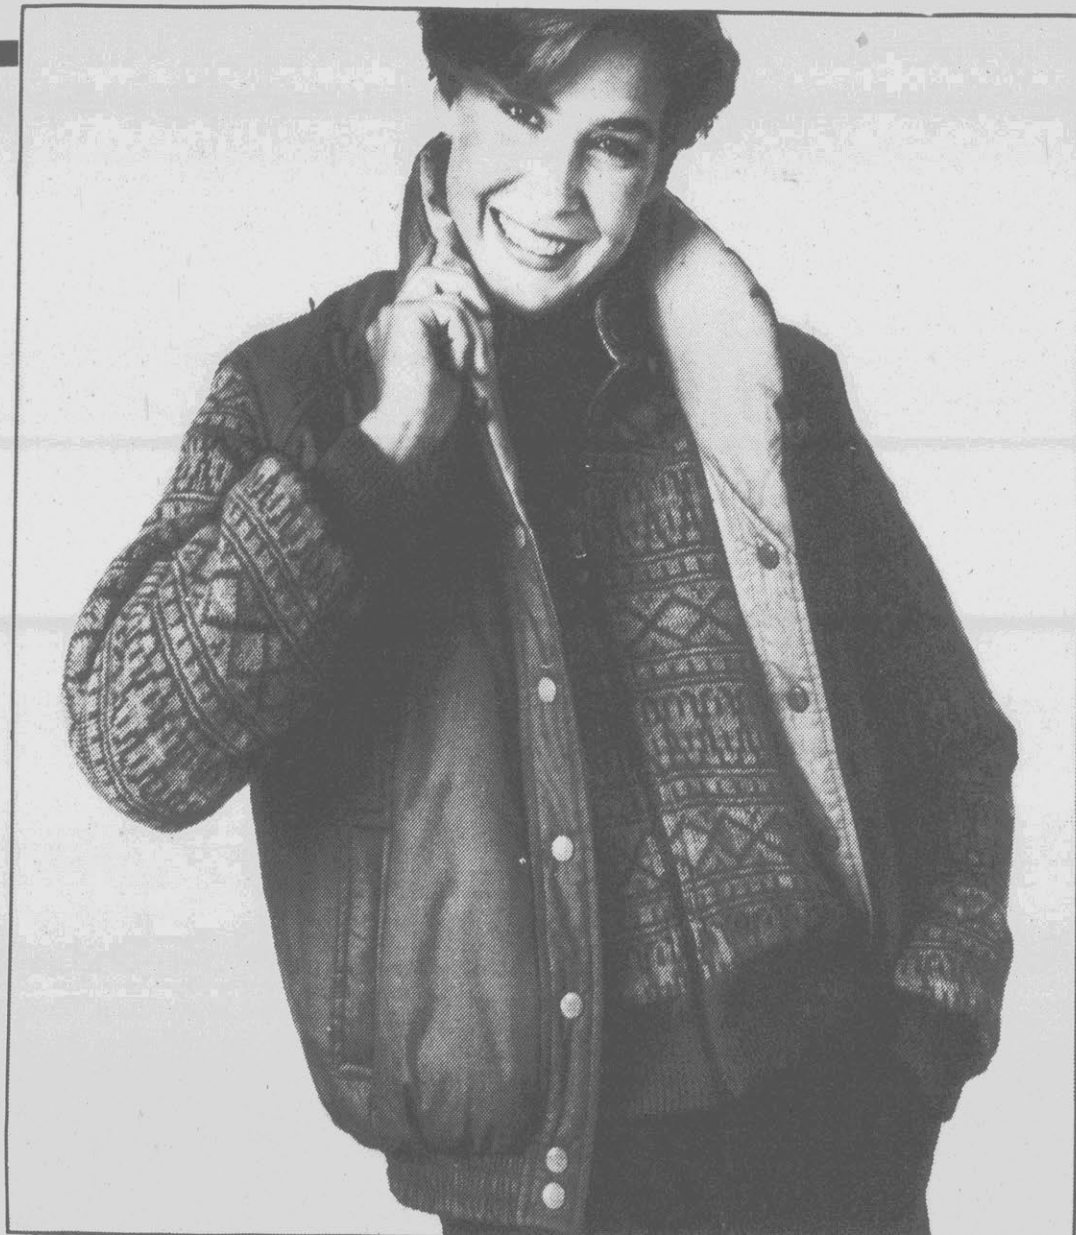

To keep natural gas prices competitive the commission placed the heaviest burden of the increase on customers other than large industrial users, said commission spokesman James D. Pantan.

He said the loss of large industrial customers would deprive gas companies of revenues they need to cover fixed operating costs, and the loss of those revenues would mean higher rates for remaining customers.

Ready To Sign Grain Accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — A five-year grain agreement with the Soviet Union will be signed in Moscow next week at a ceremony to be attended by a team of U.S. officials, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block has announced.

Robert E. Lighthizer, deputy U.S. trade representative, will lead a delegation of officials from the departments of State and Agriculture, Block said. The agreement will be signed Aug. 25.

Under the new agreement that takes effect Oct. 1, the Soviets will buy at least 9 million metric tons of wheat and corn annually. The old required annual purchases of at least 6 million metric tons.

Jones Addresses NCAE Delegation

FARMVILLE — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., spoke to a District 1 delegation from the North Carolina Association of Educators in Farmville Thursday.

Jones reviewed his position on appropriations for the new fiscal year, tuition tax credits and the American Defense Education Act.

In The Area

Dr. Nunley Joins ECU Staff

Dr. Rachel Nunley, a native of Huntington, West Va., has joined the East Carolina University School of Allied Health and Social Professions as an associate professor in the department of physical therapy.

Her previous positions include teaching at the University of Connecticut, UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State University and Tokyo University. Dr. Nunley is an alumna of Marshall University, with advanced degrees from Duke University.

Besides teaching at ECU, she will be coordinator of graduate education in physical therapy, helping develop a graduate-level curriculum to prepare physical therapists for leadership in the profession.

Prices Climb On Leaf Belts

By The Associated Press
Prices continued to climb, while quality improved for most grades of flue-cured tobacco Thursday on North Carolina's three tobacco belts, the Federal-State Market News Service said.

On the Old and Middle Belt, the market was stronger with heavy volume grades up mostly $2 per hundred pounds from the previous day. Volume remained light at most points, but quality improved.

Wednesday's auctions totaled 2,704,047 pounds for an average of $147.07 per hundred — $1.33 from Tuesday. Season sales climbed to 18,100,426 pounds averaging $145.30.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. received 19.5 percent of Wednesday's sales and 20.1 percent for the season.

Prices improved $1 to $4 per hundred Thursday on the South Carolina and Border

North Carolina Belt, where nearly 80 percent of sales was good and fair quality tobacco.

Wednesday's gross sales of 4,704,475 pounds returned $171.58 per hundred — up $1.27 from Tuesday. Season sales of 46,157,193 pounds averaged $157.77.

Stabilization received 32.3 percent of gross sales Wednesday and 27.1 percent for the season.

Prices were chiefly steady to a little higher Thursday on the Eastern belt, where several grades of lugs improved $1 to $2 per hundred over Wednesday.

Gross sales Wednesday totaled 6,341,174 pounds, averaging $171.57 per hundred — down 74 cents from Tuesday. Season totals rose to 57,595,967 pounds, averaging $162.28.

Loan receipts totaled 35.1 percent of gross sales Wednesday and 40.1 percent for the season.

Cons Get Clothes That Don't Clash On Release

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — At Rikers Island, they get a lift to one of the five city boroughs and $2.25 — enough for three subway tokens.

In Florida, they get a bus ticket and $100, part of which goes for clothes at Stump's Department Store.

At the Big House in Marion, Ill., they get slightly used clothing, $50 to $100 in pocket money and a ride to the bus station.

More people are squeezed into America's prisons these days. But they still leave as they did in the old days — with some spending money, a shiny new suit of clothes and a one-way ticket home on the next bus.

At least sometimes.

"We've had prison inmates walk out and into a waiting limousine at Rahway State," said Jim Stabile, corrections spokesman in New Jersey. "But that's not the typical way out."

A ride to the bus station and a free ticket out of town is the standard at most prisons. Federal inmates have a choice of destination: their legal residence or the city where they were sentenced. State prisoners usually can get a ticket as far as the state line.

"We're not putting them on United Airlines, first class, but we do buy them a bus ticket," said Thomas G. Phillips, administrative assistant to the warden at the State Prison of Southern Michigan, a.k.a. Jackson State.

At Brushy Mountain prison in Tennessee, the ex-con gets a ride to the nearest bus station — in Knoxville, 40 miles away.

But at California's San Quentin, "we just take them out to the gate and wish them well," said Bill McMullen, prison spokesman.

While in prison, many inmates earn money, usually at rates considerably below the minimum wage. They can send it home, spend it on personal items or save it for their release. If they don't have any money, though, the prison helps out.

In New Jersey, they get $75, with the promise of another $75 three weeks later. Jackson State gives its alumni $75 and a small loan if they need it. A San Quentin convict gets $200 "and the fresh air," McMullen said.

Some states allow prisoners to wear their own clothes. Others dress their new graduates in street clothes. Stateville Correctional Center in Joliet, Ill., issues prison-made street clothes. But hardly anyone walks away in a suit and tie anymore.

"Most get jeans, tennis shoes and pullover shirts," said Ronnie Williams, who buys going-away clothes for inmates at the Florida State Prison in Starke. "They tell me the color and sizes and everything and I buy it," he said.

They can walk to freedom in their prison blues at San Quentin. But most prefer "dress-outs," street clothes provided by the prison, and they "walk out dressed in the current fashions of the day," McMullen said.

When prisoners are freed from Marion, the highest-security federal prison in the country, they're wearing clothes from a wardrobe kept stocked by trips to J.C. Penney.

"We don't dress people so they'll be conspicuous," said Dean Leech, executive assistant to the warden at Marion. "We've got blazers down there I wouldn't be too ashamed to wear."

Street clothes issued by the U.S. Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., are inexpensive — polyester mostly. But officials there have a fashion sense.

"We're not going to give him a plaid shirt and striped pants," said Mark Luttrell, executive assistant to the warden there.

If it's cold outside, New Jersey regulations allow the prison to issue "a car coat or all-weather coat with a zip-in lining."

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Republican Congressman Jim Martin said Thursday he had decided it was time to come home to North Carolina and pursue a new career in a bid for his party's gubernatorial nomination in 1984.

Addressing about 200 supporters in a Charlotte hotel, the six-term Congressman said the time had come "to strike out on a new career with no guarantee of success, but rather the assurance of a grinding, difficult, uphill campaign."

Martin is the only Republican to make a formal announcement but is expected to be opposed by state Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, who has been campaigning unofficially for over a year.

Both Martin and Ballenger are from the western part of the state and represent the state GOP's more moderate wing, with close ties to former Gov. Jim Holshouser.

Former University of North Carolina athletic director Bill Cobey, an unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor in 1980 and Congress in 1982, also is said to be considering the governor's race. Cobey has strong support from U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and his political organization, the National Congressional Club.

Some state Republicans have worried openly that a clash between Cobey and either Ballenger or Martin could reopen old wounds from battles in the early 1970s between the GOP's moderate and conservative wings.

Martin generally avoided that issue in his announcement speech, although he said he had told the Congressional Club he would welcome its support but didn't want to put the club

"in a primary box."

Saying he would work for a government "of which we all can be proud," Martin said the issues he would stress include the state's "financial crisis," education and hazardous waste disposal.

Martin, 47, a former Davidson College chemistry professor, has served in Congress since 1973 and was elected to a sixth term last year. The 9th Congressional District that he represents includes Mecklenburg, Iredell and Lincoln counties and part of Yadkin County.

He began a four-city tour of the state immediately after making his announcement Thursday.

Pine Bark Plant Slated

WAKEFIELD, Va. (AP) — A North Carolina lumber company has announced it plans to build a pine bark processing plant here that will employ more than 60 workers during its peak operating season.

The Thursday announcement came just two months after this town's largest single employer, Columbian Peanut Co. Inc., laid off nearly all its workers.

Summit Lumber Co. Inc., based in Louisburg, N.C., said it plans to process mulch and decorative products from pine bark, beginning in December.

The company bought a 40-acre parcel 5 miles west of town on U.S. 460 for $132,500 on Aug. 10. The site where Summit plans to build the plant was formerly the Jo Ho Campground, and was bought from JHH Partnership of Virginia Beach.

"We think that we're going to help the people here," said Barry J. Morgan, Summit's vice president and manager.

Summit markets its products throughout the Northeast, Morgan said, and the Wakefield site was chosen for its proximity to the town's airport and trucking routes.

The number of workers the plant will employ may exceed the number of workers laid off from Columbian's peanut shelling mill after it closed in early June.

The plant will employ 15 to 20 year-round workers and 50 to 60 maintenance workers and laborers from February to July, when the mulch and decorative material will be bagged and shipped.

Hannon Plans Another Race

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Robert L. Hannon, an unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor and the U.S. Senate in the early 1970s, says he will announce as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination Sept. 9.

Hannon made a brief bid for lieutenant governor in 1972 with the slogan, "Christmas is every day of the year." He ran for the U.S. Senate in 1974, promising "a chicken in every pot regardless of race or creed."

Hannon has served as director of development and university relations at Fayetteville State University and as professor of social sciences at both North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro and Alcorn State University in Lorman, Miss. He would be the first black to announce for the governor's race.

Ambassador To Bahrain Picked

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to nominate Donald C. Leidel, a career foreign service officer, as ambassador to Bahrain to succeed Peter A. Sutherland.

Leidel, 55, worked for the Central Intelligence Agency in Washington, Vienna and Frankfurt from 1954 to 1962, performing what a White House press release called administrative duties. The announcement was made by the traveling White House in Santa Barbara, Calif., near where the president is vacationing at his ranch.

A native of Madison, Wis., Leidel headed the State Department's training staff and held several other posts until 1980 when he became deputy director of management operations.

Saga Of Soviet Diplomat's Ends; Flies Home

By LAWRENCE L. KNUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrei Berezhkov, the 16-year-old son of a senior Soviet diplomat, is flying home to Moscow after denying he ever begged President Reagan for asylum. His last words on American soil: "Say Hi to Mick Jagger for me."

Hours later, after his plane landed at Charles de Gaulle airport in Paris, he again asked that his regards be relayed to the rock singer and his musical group.

"Say hello to Mick Jagger, say hello to the Rolling Stones. Yeah, they're my favorite," young Berezhkov told reporters before boarding a flight to the Soviet Union.

The teen-ager's departure ended a week-long diplomatic standoff between the two superpowers marked by exchanges of accusations and demands.

The impasse was resolved Thursday in an elaborately orchestrated operation involving senior U.S. and Soviet Embassy officials with the participation of major American news organizations.

First behind the walls of the Soviet residential compound in Northwest Washington, then in a waiting room at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia, Andrei Berezhkov denied to reporters that he had written the president and The New York Times to plea: "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country. I want to stay here."

On Thursday he twice declared: "I want to go home and not stay here."

Those words untied the diplomatic knot.

They met the criteria set by the State Department that the teen-ager be permitted to express for himself what he wanted his future to be.

And they cleared the way for the boy and his parents, Valentin and Valeriya Berezhkov, to board a Trans World Airlines jet for Paris en route to Moscow.

The plane took off at 7:09 p.m. EDT, almost a week to the hour of the State Department's announcement that the youth was believed to have written a letter to the president asking to remain in the United States and that the department was insisting on a personal interview with him "to ascertain the young man's intentions."

But on Thursday the department backed off and agreed to a pair of stage-managed news conferences — one of them free of Soviet controls — and said it would be satisfied by the results.

And when the Soviet teen-ager, in the presence of two senior U.S. officials, had made his final statement at the airport to reporters for The Associated Press, United Press International and The Washington Post, the department said the Berezhkovs could go.

"He stated clearly and firmly that he wished to return to the Soviet Union with his parents," the department said in a written statement.

"Having heard him state his wish to return home with his parents in a situation where he could make a choice, Assistant Secretary of State for European affairs Richard Burt and Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights Elliott Abrams made the determination that he was voluntarily departing the United States," the department said.

As he walked to the door, reporters asked Andrei what he wanted to do with the rest of his life.

To become an actor, he replied.

And where would he like to learn that profession, in Moscow or America?

"In Moscow," he said.

And then, allowing himself a small smile, he said, "Say Hi to Mick Jagger for me."

Jagger is the lead singer of the rock music group, the "The Rolling Stones," which has been widely popular with teen-agers in the United States and abroad for more than a decade.

Earlier, at the Soviet compound, the youth's father, First Secretary Valentin Berezhkov, 67, acknowledged his son had taken the family car and was reported to the police as missing from the family apartment in suburban Bethesda, Md., for more than 10 hours on Aug. 10.

That was the day before President Reagan and The New York Times received a handwritten letter signed "Andrei Berezhkov" asking to remain in the United States.

Both the youth and the elder Berezhkov, responding to questions by correspondents from NBC television news, the Times and Hearst newspapers, denied the letter was authentic.

"I didn't write it, the tousle-haired teen-ager said.

Explaining at the airport why he had stayed away from home until 2:30 a.m. Andrei said, "I just wanted to drive around the city."

"I never thought that this would be interpreted as my intention of staying here," the youth told reporters at the embassy compound. "I ask the American authorities to leave me alone and let me go home...."

At the airport he denied he was speaking under duress.

"I don't feel I am under any pressure," he said. "I say what I feel and do what I want to do."

When the senior Berezhkov was asked if he would have objected if the boy had wanted to stay, he replied: "Grown-ups only have the privilege of emigration, not children."

The elder Berezhkov, the embassy's liaison officer with the USA-Canada Institute in the Soviet Union, said he has "no doubt" he will work in the institute on his return.

When asked whether his son can expect punishment for any embarrassment caused the Soviet Union by his escapade and the resulting publicity, he replied, "Certainly not."

Greece Presses Christina Onassis For Her $44 Million Inheritance Tax

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer
ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Christina Onassis' summer vacation on her private island has been marred this year by a tax dispute with Greece's Socialist government that could cost her more than $40 million in inheritance duties.

The government wants the 33-year-old shipping heiress to pay four billion drachmas — $44 million — in taxes on her late father's properties in Greece. They include luxurious villas, some undeveloped real estate and the island retreat of Scorpios off the western Greek coast.

Authorities say it is the biggest inheritance tax claim ever made in Greece. But Miss Onassis, according to her lawyers, is convinced she does not owe the Greek state any money.

Legal observers say it may reflect a hardening of official attitudes toward wealthy Greek expatriates who fly in occasionally on vacation but make few investments here.

"My client is being persecuted. She is being treated infinitely worse than the average Greek citizen," Stelios Papadimitriou, Miss Onassis' lawyer.

The plump, dark-haired heiress, who shuns publicity and rarely visits Greece, went to Scorpios early this month for a holiday with friends.

Her arrival coincided with a tax court rejection of her lawyers' request to defer starting death duty payments pending an appeal court hearing of the case.

"It is an unusually high amount, but given her substantial means Miss Onassis is able to pay," the court ruled.

She is required to pay $31 million in inheritance taxes and another $13.3 million in interest and fines for failing to file a Greek tax return after her father, Aristotle Onassis, died in 1975.

To help secure its claim, the court already has sequestered a one-acre lot near Athens that belongs to Miss Onassis.

But her lawyer claims that Miss Onassis is not liable to pay Greek taxes.

He said four Panama-based companies owned the Greek firms that controlled Aristotle Onassis' property in Greece. He added that Onassis, a Greek born in Turkey, held an Argentine passport and was never an official resident in Greece.

Onassis began building his shipping empire in the 1930s and after World War II married a daughter of Greek shipowner Stavros Livanos. He then became the brother-in-law of Stavros Niarchos, another shipping magnate, and the three men became a powerful force in the world's shipping industry.

Miss Onassis lives mostly in Paris and Switzerland. The Onassis business empire is run from London, New York and Monte Carlo. She carries a Greek passport.

From the legal point of view, there are no Onassis business interests in Greece, Papadimitriou said.

"The Panamanian company arrangement was typical of Onassis. He ran all his affairs like Chinese boxes — one company owning another and controlled by a third," said a former business associate who asked not to be named.

However, the Finance

Ministry, which last year sent a special investigator to Panama, says the Panamanian companies were owned by Onassis at the time of his death.

It valued his Greek estate at $61 million.

"That was ridiculously high," Papadimitriou said. "Scorpios was estimated at more than $33 million."

Onassis bought the island in 1963 for $110,000. His daughter, who inherited it jointly with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the shipowner's second wife, paid an estimated $8 million to obtain full control of the property in 1975, family friends said.

When Onassis died, half his assets, valued then at $800 million, went to found a Lichtenstein-based charity, set up in memory of Alexander Onassis, the tycoon's only son, killed in an air crash in 1973. The foundation awards scholarships to Greeks studying abroad and will build a $35 million heart surgery center in Athens.

Miss Onassis, the tycoon's only daughter, received the bulk of the remainder, under the terms of his will.

According to the lawyer, the tax dispute won't prevent Miss Onassis from spending an annual vacation in Greece, but there have been cryptic hints that the activities of the foundation may be affected.

"Due to the harassment and abuse suffered through publicity, neither myself nor others concerned in my dispute shall be in a position to perform their duties undisturbed," Miss Onassis said in a statement issued earlier this year.

Government officials expect the case to drag on for years.

Rich Finds On Ancient Culture

SNEADS FERRY, N.C. (AP) — A section of shoreline that was home to Indians for hundreds of years will soon be transformed into a luxury retirement community, but archaeologists say they've salvaged a variety of artifacts from the earlier residents.

An archaeological team led by Thomas Lottfield of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington began excavating at Chadwick Bay in May after developers announced they would be constructing townhouses on the 30-acre tract.

But with funding and time exhausted, the team has left, making way for construction crews along the bay occupied by Indian tribes from 400 to 1,000 years ago.

and eating utensils. Lottfield says he's especially interested in the remains of nuts, corn, bones and oyster, whelk, scallop and mussel shells found in what appeared to be the ancient village's trash and storage pits.

"This is number one, hot stuff, the most incredibly productive site I've worked," said Lottfield.

Data from Chadwick Bay, combined with information from earlier excavations at the Unifite boat plant near Swansboro, will add to knowledge of the culture extinguished by European settlement of the New World, said Lottfield.

Digging at the Unifite plant on the Intracoastal Waterway uncovered evidence of many structures

THE DREAM COMES TRUE AUGUST 20.

GRAND OPENING

The dream began six years ago, when a group of Tarboro citizens decided to create a "life care" retirement community in their home town. Thanks to their hard work and dedication, that dream became the largest private capital investment in the history of Edgecombe County. And now that dream comes true with the Grand Opening of The Albemarle — the most gracious and thoroughly developed retirement community in Eastern North Carolina.

The Albemarle is a grand place to retire. Everything about the Albemarle has been created to ensure an active, secure and convenient life style for all its residents. A beautiful assortment of apartment floorplans accommodates a wide range of budgets and living arrangements. Some of those floorplans are still available, but they're going fast.

So now is the time to make your retirement dreams come true at The Albemarle.

France Is Building Up Military Contingent In Chad

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP)
— France sent in more soldiers and appointed a veteran marine paratrooper today to command its forces in Chad, determined to stop what military sources called Libya's military buildup in the rebel-held north. The sources, insisting on anonymity, said the reinforcement of the military operation codenamed "Stingray" would continue as long as Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy keeps pouring men and supplies into the former French colony. The French Defense Ministry in Paris announced today that Brig. Gen. Joseph Poli, 54, a career marine paratrooper with extensive experience in Africa, would be sent to N'Djamena to command the French forces. Poli served in Algeria while it was still a French colony and also served in Djibouti and Zaire. Sending the general to Chad was seen as another sign of French determination to keep the Libyans and rebels in check. The strength of Libya's regular forces in and around the northern strategic outpost of Faya-Largeau was estimated at 3,000 men. The town fell Aug. 10 to Libyan troops and rebel forces loyal to ex-President Goukouni Oueddei. The Libyans also are expanding their air base in northern Chad's Aozou strip, annexed by Libya in 1975, the sources said. However, the Habre-French defense line is nearly 800 miles to the south — a distance beyond the range of the Libyan air force, which lacks mid-air refueling capability. On Thursday, France brought an additional 450 paratroopers from Paris to the French staging area at Bouar, 100 miles south of the Chad border in the Central African Republic. By the weekend, 2,000 French troops are to be stationed at six points in Chad and Bouar and the force may increase to 3,000 next week, military sources said. Although Libya denies having soldiers in Chad, Western military sources claiming to have access to intelligence reports say Libya has been pouring more troops and arms into Faya-Largeau, including heavy artillery, tanks and missile and rocket launchers.

In particular, Soumaila said, Chad expects France to provide forward air cover for its intended offensive against the Libyans and rebels. The French command insists the operation is meant to stop the Libyans from penetrating beyond the present undeclared truce line along the 15th parallel, and not to help Habre launch a move to recapture Faya-Largeau.

The French hinted, however, that a squadron of jet fighters may be deployed at N'Djamena air base to strengthen the base defenses currently provided by three Mirage-5 planes of the Zaire air force and French-manned Crotal surface-to-air missiles. A tacit truce, leaving most of Chad's virtually uninhabited northern half under Libyan control, went into its seventh day today with no reported incidents between the two sides. French sources denied a French radio report of a brief skirmish between French and Goukouni forces on the fringe of the northern desert. Goukouni's European representative, Issaka Ramat Alhamdou, said in Brussels, Belgium, on Thursday that Libya only provides "food and logistical support," and "about 30 Libyans assist us in transportation and radio communication."

Khadafy said while visiting Tunisia that peace would return to Chad only after Habre stops receiving military aid from France, the United States and Zaire, which has sent 2,500 troops. The United States has sent military and medical supplies.

Freak Storms In West Claiming More Lives

By The Associated Press
Freak August thunderstorms blamed for 14 deaths — including 10 people killed in the crash of a sight-seeing plane — pounded California, Arizona and Nevada for the third straight day today.

Homes, roads and businesses were flooded, and power blackouts affected at least 4,800 homes, authorities said.

Hard hit was the tiny San Bernardino County desert community of Joshua Tree, 100 miles east of Los Angeles, where the main thoroughfare was awash Thursday in up to three feet of water and dozens of businesses were flooded after a pounding midafternoon downpour.

About 70 miles northwest, near Barstow, more than 20 cars and trucks were swept off the National Trails Highway when a cloudburst sent a four-foot-high wall of water rushing from the hills. All the trapped motorists and their passengers were taken safely out of the flooded area by van, said San Bernardino County sheriff's deputy Ronald Mahoney.

A rain-related four-car pileup in a slippery Bel-Air intersection killed Evelyn Wallace, 64, of Reseda and injured three other people shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday, said Los Angeles police Sgt. Albert Lugo. The badly burned wreckage of a Las Vegas Airlines plane that disappeared in Wednesday's storms on a flight to the Grand Canyon was discovered Thursday on the Hualapai Indian Reservation in Arizona, about 110 miles east of Las Vegas and 70 miles from the Grand Canyon Airport.

Dave Donohue Jr., general manager for Las Vegas Airlines, said the crash killed the pilot, identified as Wallace S. Gustafson Jr., 48, and nine tourists whose names were withheld pending notification of relatives. Sgt. Sam Whitted of the Cococino County, Ariz., Sheriff's Department said the passengers were all Italians. In the city of San Bernardino, meanwhile, firefighters and volunteers continued to search for a woman missing and presumed dead since an overflowing a flood control channel swept over at least two cars leaving a church meeting.

The storm also cut power to about 4,800 Southern California homes Thursday evening, mainly in the beach communities of Marina del Rey and Venice and in the southeastern San Fernando Valley, said Los Angeles Department of Water and Power spokeswoman Elizabeth Wimmer. Electricity was gradually being restored, she said. It continued to rain in scattered areas today, including Long Beach and Santa Barbara.

In Joshua Tree, LoVae Pray Martines, spokeswoman for the San Bernardino County Fire Department, said, "We have two or three inches of sand and mud and debris in county library, 10 units of a motel completely invaded with three or four inches of water." A downpour of 2.5 inches in San Bernardino on Wednesday led to flooding that collapsed buildings and a rail overpass, leaving dozens of cars stranded on waterlogged streets and forcing San Bernardino County Hospital to briefly send critical-care patients elsewhere. In San Bernardino, clerks in the 4th District Court of Appeal planned to freeze-dry boxfuls of vital documents that were soaked when rainwater flooded the State Building basement. The court papers represent about 100 criminal and civil cases that must be preserved by law, said Deputy Clerk Henry Espinoza, who is heading the effort to freeze and then lightly heat the documents that were stored in 30 cardboard boxes.

Weather Affects The Habits Of Fish

By The Associated Press
Dry conditions have caused man-eating sharks to appear in the Neuse River at New Bern, jellyfish to multiply by the dozens and croakers to turn bellies up at Emerald Isle, a marine scientist says. A sharp increase in the salinity of North Carolina's rivers and estuaries is the main reason for the phenomena, said Dr. Frank A. Schwartz of the University of North Carolina's Institute of Marine Sciences at Morehead City. He explained that higher temperatures have led to increased evaporation from rivers and sounds. "Saltwater slowly wins the battle and starts pushing freshwater back upstream," Schwartz said. "Many of the marine fish will go upstream, where they normally don't go, and freshwater fish — since they can't tolerate salinity — will move back upstream."

Schwartz received reports Monday that two Pamlico County fishermen hooked a 240-pound, 8-foot bull shark at Union Point in New Bern, while another one got away. He said bull sharks are among the nine types of shark found near the state's coast that are considered dangerous to man. Another result of the drought is an increase in the numbers of jellyfish, said Schwartz. "They love hot weather and their reproduction is going lickety split," he says.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 61 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 46.79 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,511,000, compared to 1,542,000 last Friday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was trending lower. Supplies adequate. Demand moderate to good. Prices paid per pound for hens over 7 pounds at farm for Wednesday-Friday slaughter was 21 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were mixed in morning trading today following the market's broad decline in the previous session.

Oil and airline issues paced the gainers, while several retail and heavy-machinery stocks retreated.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which tumbled 14.02 points Thursday, recovered 2.64 to 1,195.12 after two hours of trading today.

Advances and declines were nearly even on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index edged up 0.29 to 95.02.

Big Board volume slowed to 28.52 million shares at noon EDT from 41.79 million at that hour Thursday.

Stocks remain under the pressure of interest-rate fears on Wall Street, although open-market rates today were little changed.

Among the oil gainers were Atlantic Richfield 1/4 to 52, Exxon 1/2 to 38 3/4, Indiana Standard 1 to 54 and Superior Oil 1 to 37 3/4.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.23 to 231.21.

Would Erase A Restriction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rules that prohibit railroads from purchasing trucking companies would be eliminated under a proposal announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Railroads have been prohibited from acquiring trucking companies, except in cases where they would use the firms to supplement their operations. The ICC has proposed elimination of the restriction and invited public comment on the proposal before final action is taken in several months.

Court Upholds Dramshop Law

By The Associated Press

The North Carolina Supreme Court has upheld a section of Gov. Jim Hunt's Safe Roads Act that was stricken before the 1983 Legislature passed the drunken driving package.

The court ruled that anyone selling liquor to an intoxicated person may be held liable for injuries or damages from car accidents caused by the customer. The "dramshop" principle drew opposition from lobbyists for restaurant and tavern owners, and was dropped from Hunt's package.

The Legislature retained one part of the bill that makes those who sell liquor to underage drinkers liable for any injuries or damages in car accidents.

The Supreme Court decision upholds a state Court of Appeals ruling in June and enables Reidsville lawyer Alexander P. Sands III to proceed with a civil case he filed on behalf of a drunken driving victim.

The lawsuit, filed in October 1981 in Rockingham County Superior Court, seeks

$1.1 million in damages from Cicero and Martha Hankins, who were owners of a Reidsville bar.

Sands' client, Shirley Hutchens, 35, of Reidsville, could be the first to benefit from the ruling.

Mrs. Hutchens, her husband, Otis Wayne, and their son, Mark Wayne, were driving to Greensboro March 19, 1981, when their car was struck by a drunken driver. Otis Wayne Hutchens, 36, was killed in the crash.

Donny Ray Fletcher, 24, received a two-year prison term after pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the death of Hutchens. Fletcher had been drinking several hours before the accident at the Hankins' bar. His blood alcohol level was measured at .16 percent just after the collision.

Mrs. Hutchens was awarded $25,000 in an out-of-court settlement with Fletcher, but Rockingham County Superior Court Judge James M. Long dismissed a case against the tavern owners.

Pink Court Has Stirred Ruckus

PAXTON, Ill. (AP) — A judge who refused to be painted into a corner has tangled with county officials who want a pink-and-green courtroom — and the clash over colors may be headed for appeal.

Ford County Circuit Judge William Roberts issued a restraining order against the plan last month, calling it "a gaudy color scheme which would be more fitting for a bordello than a courtroom. ... Neutral muted tones rather than carnival colors provide the appropriate setting for courtroom proceedings."

The board in this county seat, about 170 miles southwest of Chicago, has decided to go to the state appeals court over the brush off, which has forced court business into more cramped quarters and left board members without a meeting place.

Roberts said after issuing his restraining order that he preferred neutral shades for his courtroom, such as off-white or tan. The board's color scheme, he said in his ruling, "would cause irreparable harm in the conduct of court proceedings."

Board member Lee Raymond Carlson, chairman of the property committee, defended the panel's decision, however, saying Roberts' colors would not go with a mural on one of the courtroom walls.

"Everything was draped and ready to go and they had some of the paint mixed," Carlson said. "He had plenty of time to speak to the board and tell them his feelings and didn't. He didn't have to wait until they started to paint to do something like this."

Board officials met Tuesday with Roberts, but he denied their bid to have the case shifted to another judge.

With that, the board instructed State's Attorney James Benson to "follow any and all legal means to ensure the completion of the job with the colors designated."

Roberts responded, "If they feel that strongly about it, fine. They will have to go to the appellate court to have it (restraining order) lifted."

Can Auburn Take It All?

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Auburn is one of the teams being mentioned as a possible successor to Penn State in the 1983 national college football championship. "People have high expectations for this team and I expect a lot out of them, too," said Auburn Coach Pat Dye.

Florida State and North Carolina in the South, Notre Dame and Ohio State in the Midwest, Nebraska and Oklahoma in the Midlands and Texas in the Southwest also have plenty of support.

Auburn is being picked in many quarters to end the Alabama-Georgia monopoly. Halfbacks Bo Jackson and Lionel James get most of the headlines, but defense is the Tigers' forte. They have an awesome front line in tackles Doug Smith, Ben Thomas and Donnie Humphrey and nose guard Dowe Aughtman.

Florida State is blessed with an explosive offense led by quarterback Kelly Lowrey and tailback Greg Allen, the nation's leading scorer in 1982. Says Coach Bobby Bowden: "There is a way to stop us, and that's to take the ball and ram it down our throats. LSU and Florida did that to us last year, and if we can't stop the five-, six- and seven-yard runs up the middle on first down, some teams will beat us this year, too."

Texas, whose concern is at quarterback, will rely on a rawhide-tough defense, which returns nine starters. "When listing our strong points, you have to start with our defense," says Coach Fred Akers.

Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust has had three great recruiting years and two so-so records. The Irish may be ready to rejoin the elite thanks to a rugged defense, outstanding runners and receivers and veteran quarterback Blair Kiel.

Since the first Associated Press poll in 1936, only eight teams have been repeated as national champions. Can Penn State make it nine?

"I don't think there's any question that winning a second title might be easier the second time," says Coach Joe Paterno, who added this qualifier: "We don't have the proven big-play performers at quarterback and tailback like we did last year with Todd Blackledge and Curt Warner."

Penn State will defend its first national title with a veteran defense led by linebacker Scott Radecic and safety Mark Robinson and a solid offense, featuring All-American wide receiver Kenny Jackson. The big question mark is at quarterback where last year's backups, juniors Doug Strang and Dan Loneragan, are fighting it out.

Penn State's challengers for Eastern supremacy figure to be Pitt, West Virginia and Boston College, all bowl teams last year. Pitt will have to do it with defense, while West Virginia (Jeff Hostetler) and B.C. (Doug Flutie) have veteran quarterbacks at the controls.

The balance of power seems to have shifted in the Southeastern Conference. Paul "Bear" Bryant, the winningest coach in college football history, passed away less than two months after announcing his retirement at Alabama, while Georgia tailback Herschel Walker gave up his senior year to turn pro.

New Coach Ray Perkins is only one of the changes at Alabama. Perkins has scrapped the Wishbone in favor of a pro-style attack, which will feature Walter Lewis throwing and Jesse Bendress catching.

Georgia safety Jeff Sanchez and defensive end Stan Dooley also are out and quarterback John Lastinger's knee is still a major concern. All-American Terry Hoage heads a talented secondary.

Elsewhere in the SEC, Florida should be strong behind quarterback Wayne Peace and linebacker Wilber Marshall and LSU, which lost most of its top-flight defense, returns a strong ground game featuring sophomores Dalton Hilliard and Garry James.

Florida State's strongest competition in the independent ranks should come from Miami of Florida and Southern Mississippi.

North Carolina, led by defensive tackle William Fuller and tailbacks Tyrone Anthony and Ethan Horton, could end Clemson's two-year reign in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Clemson should be strong again but the Tigers are on probation and ineligible for the crown. They could have the best defensive lineman in 320-pound nose guard William Perry. Maryland, behind quarterback Boomer Esiason, may challenge.

Ohio State and Michigan, the perennial powerhouses in the Big Ten, have quarterbacks in Mike Tomczak and Steve Smith, respectively. Michigan's biggest loss is Smith's favorite receiver, All-American Anthony Carter. If either team falters, look for Iowa to challenge.

In the Big Eight, Nebraska and Oklahoma won at least a piece of the crown in the past 21 years and are favorites to run 1-2 again.

Nebraska returns its entire backfield, with Turner Gill at quarterback and Mike Rozier at tailback, who set a school-rushing record with 1,689 yards a year ago.

Oklahoma dropped their Wishbone last year for the I-formation to get Marcus Dupree the ball. Freshman Dupree ripped off scoring runs of 86, 80, 75, 70 and 63 yards during the season and set a Fiesta Bowl record of 239 yards against Arizona State's No. 1-ranked defense.

Oklahoma has sharp improvement on defense, with tackle Rick Bryan the ringleader, but the key Sooner is new quarterback Danny Bradley.

Oklahoma State, picked in most preseason polls to finish third, boasts tailback Ernest Anderson, the nation's 1982 rushing king with 1,877 yards, fifth best in NCAA history.

Southern Methodist, the Southwest Conference champion the last two years, lost its 1-2 tailback duo of Eric Dickerson and Craig James, but returns quarterback Lance McIlhenny. That makes the Mustangs a threat to Texas and they still have standout nose guard Michael Carter. Everyone else except Rice will fight it out for third place.

Southern California and Arizona, two of the top teams in the Pacific-10, are on probation and ineligible for the championship. That leaves defending champion UCLA, Arizona State and Washington, all of whom finished in the AP Top Ten

Tar Wars Saga Is Over

NEW YORK (AP) — After 26 days of protests, lawsuits, acrimony, a threatened forfeit and never-ending oratory, the great pine tar soap opera finally reached its conclusion ... but not before one last-gasp protest by the New York Yankees.

Anticipating that the Yankees would have something up their sleeve in the form of a counter-protest at Thursday's completion of the suspended game, American League President Lee MacPhail was one step ahead of them and armed his umpires with an affidavit that they produced right there on the field.

And then Dan Quisenberry retired the Yankees in order to complete the ninth inning of a game that began on July 24 and "ended" when George Brett's two-run homer with two out in the top of the ninth that gave the Royals a 5-4 lead was nullified by a quartet of umpires who ruled he had too much pine tar on his bat and sent the Yankees home as apparent 4-3 winners.

MacPhail overruled the umpires a few days later and ordered the game to be resumed Thursday despite countless beefs from the Yankees. After the Yankees fanned the flames a little longer, it turned into a 12-minute anticlimax and a 5-4 triumph for the Royals.

The Yankees took the field with left-handed Don Mattingly at second base — Bert Campaneris, the July 24 second baseman, is injured and Mattingly was scheduled to be the first New York batter and — so as not to waste a possible pinch hitter or pinch runner — pitcher Ron Guidry in center field, replacing Jerry Mumphrey, who has been traded to Houston.

Before the first pitch, George Frazier stepped off the mound and threw to first, appealing that Brett had not touched the base on July 24 when running out his home run.

Umpire Tim McClelland gave the safe sign, but McClelland never saw Brett touch the bag because these were not the same umpires who worked the suspended game and his signal brought Yankee Manager Billy Martin to the top step of the dugout.

Play it again, Sam. Now, Frazier threw to second and this time umpire Dave Phillips signaled safe. Enter Martin for a brief discussion. But instead of the rule book, Phillips pulled out a piece of paper.

"Billy said he wanted to protest," Phillips said later, "and I showed that we had a notarized affidavit signed by all four umpires that Brett had touched every base. He said he had reason to believe he missed first."

So the Yankees played the final four outs under protest. The judge and jury will again be MacPhail.

Martin was disconsolate. He hid in the players' lounge — off-limits to the media — and eventually ordered the clubhouse cleared of newsmen who waited more than an hour for him to come out.

He came to the door just long enough to tell The Associated Press: "I talked to the first base umpire (Drew Coble) by phone last week and he told me he wasn't looking at first base and didn't see Brett touch it. Then they flung that affidavit at me and his name was on it."

Coble could not be reached for comment.

An announced crowd of only 1,245 was on hand in 56,000-seat Yankee Stadium to witness one of baseball's historic games, which finally took place after two court rulings earlier in the day. First, the Yankees obtained an injunction blocking resumption of the game — two fans from the July 24 contest had filed suits contending they should not have to pay to see its completion — and then the AL got it overturned by an appellate court.

While all that was going on, the Royals flew from Kansas City to Newark, N.J., where they waited a half-hour before busing to the stadium when no word was forthcoming. After their brief visit to New York, the Royals flew on to Baltimore for a weekend series.

Whatever happened to the infamous bat? It was broken two weeks ago and now is good for nothing but firewood.

Lady Pirates To Host Tourney

The ECAC-South will hold a women's basketball championship tournament following the 1983-84 season, league president Dean Ehlers, Director of Athletics at James Madison University announced yesterday.

The inaugural tournament will be held on March 2-4 at East Carolina University's Minges Coliseum.

The post-season event will be the first women's basketball championship sponsored by the six-school conference. The ECAC-South already holds a post-season championship in men's basketball and earlier this year announced that the conference will sponsor championships in five additional men's sports in 1983-84.

The women's championship will involve five of the six, ECAC-South schools: George Mason, East Carolina, James Madison, Richmond and William & Mary. Navy, which is Division II in women's basketball, has elected not to compete in the tournament.

The remaining ECAC-South schools are all Division I, with the exception of William & Mary, which is Division II.

"This is another positive step as far as the strength and expansion of the ECAC-South is concerned," Ehlers said. "Although Navy has opted not to participate, we hope they will do so in the future. Hopefully, this is a first step in the ECAC-South providing a full spectrum of women's championship offerings in the future."

The tournament format will have a first-round playoff game scheduled for Friday, March 2, and the semifinals will be set March 3. The conference championship game is slated for Sunday, March 4.

The conference champion, however, will not receive an automatic bid to the NCAA championship tournament in 1983-84.

Rose Defense Sparkles In Scrimmage Contest

Rose High School's first outing against an outside foe left Coach Ronald Vincent a little disappointed, but still optimistic. The Rampants held their annual scrimmage session against Washington High School's Pam Pack yesterday, and took an unofficial 20-0 victory in the half of ball played under game conditions.

North Carolina High School Athletic Association rules do not allow for an official score to be kept, but Rose managed three touchdowns during the contest, and held Washington scoreless.

The first half of the scrimmage was a controlled-type situation in which each team ran off 12 offensive plays, regardless of first down success. The second half followed actual football rules for first downs and retention of possession.

Defense dominated the scrimmage, with neither team having a great deal of success in moving the ball. Rose's varsity scored twice, both times on long passes to wide receiver Tyrone Smith. Smith pulled in a 45-yard pass from Battle Emory for one score, making a catch right out of the hands of a pair of defenders, then getting away from them. The other came on a 50-yard pass from Todd Martin, where Smith had to come back on the ball. Neither pass was thrown with authority.

The other score came in the junior varsity segment of the scrimmage, as the Cubs scored on two plays, the first a 41-yard run by Ken Daniels, followed by a 23-yard touchdown dash by Lorenzo Daniels. Quarterback Ervin

Best then ran over the PAT.

Washington was unable to move the ball for the most part against the Rose defense, picking up only two first downs, one of them on a penalty.

Rose's offense, aside from the two passes, accomplished little, also. Cyrus Blackwell did get off a couple of good runs early in the workout, but of the four non-scoring possessions, only one offered a true threat, that ending on downs at the Washington 30.

"Our offensive line has really got to come on," Vincent said afterwards. "They are all new and it's just going to take more game situations to get them ready."

While most teams scrimmage about a week ahead of their actual opening, Rose usually works two weeks in advance. "We like to scrimmage Washington for one reason, and they open early. They are a good test. Then, we have two weeks to see the mistakes we made and the things that need work. We have a week to correct them, and another week to get ready for the first game."

Vincent said that the quarterback situation, where Martin and Emory are working, "shows progress." Martin was on the JV squad last year and Emory saw little varsity action at the position.

"I feel every year that our defense has to be the strength of the team. We have to win with defense because of the league we are in. If you can't play defense, you don't last long."

Vincent said he was quite pleased with the play of his defensive line, which came off the ball very quickly. He singled out Marvin Fleming, Bill Zadeits, Churchill Thomas, Marc Gatlin and Sterling Edwards for their play. Edwards will likely be the only sophomore carried on the varsity this fall.

"We may have to make some adjustments in the backfield — go to split backs or something — to try and take more advantage of the speed we have back there," Vincent said. "But right now, I feel that we're further along than we've been the previous two years."

Homer Boosts Cards

By The Associated Press

Andy Van Slyke of St. Louis said he wasn't looking to hit the ball over the wall. Philadelphia's Bo Diaz said he wasn't expecting to hit the ball — period.

Each got a 10th-inning pitch he liked and each pounced on it. Van Slyke's home run giving the Cardinals a 5-4 victory over Houston, Diaz's homer boosting the Phillies past San Diego 4-2.

In the rest of the National League, Cincinnati edged Pittsburgh 6-5, Chicago blanked Atlanta 3-0 and Los Francisco defeated Montreal 5-3. New York's game at San Angeles was rained out.

In the only American League action, the Kansas City Royals concluded their 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees in the Pine Tar game suspended July 24 following George Brett's controversial home run.

Van Slyke, said he was just trying to get on base when he drilled his liner to right field. "I was really busting my tail going around first," he said. "When I heard the crowd roar as I reached second base, I thought that I did it ...I try not to pressure myself. I don't consider myself to be a pure power hitter."

Van Slyke also singled, tripled and walked, scoring each time. His triple preceded Willie McGee's single that tied it 4-4 in the eighth inning.

The loss was only the third in 12 games for the Astros and prevented them from gaining ground on Atlanta in the NL West. The third-place Astros trail by seven games.

Phillies 4, Padres 2

Diaz said that with two outs, a runner on first and a 3-0 count, he expected to take a pitch from Gary Lucas, perhaps to draw a walk. But third base coach Dave Bristol was wig-wagging different signals.

"It was kind of confusing to see the hit-and-run sign in that situation," said Diaz. So he decided to check the dugout. "I kept looking in and (coach) Bobby Wine and (manager) Paul Owens were going, 'Yes, yes.'"

"We were going like this, telling him to swing at it," Owens said, swinging an imaginary bat. So Diaz swung his real one and crashed Lucas' next pitch into the left-field bleachers to snap the Padres' four-game winning streak.

The Phillies' other runs came on Joe Morgan's sacrifice fly and RBI single.

Reds 6, Pirates 5

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner kept throwing relief pitchers at Cincinnati, and the Reds kept jumping on them. Duane Walker administering the coup de grace with a three-run double that wrapped up their five-run ninth inning and halted the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

"We've been winning and coming back like that, but this is the first time in a while it's happened to us," said Tanner.

The Bucs took 3-1 lead into the ninth, thanks in part to homers by Tony Pena and Jason Thompson. Cincinnati's run coming on Johnny Bench's homer. And with Kent Tekulve, unscored upon in his last 19 appearances, warming up, it looked safe for the Pirates.

When Gary Redus led off with a homer off Cecilio Guante, Tanner went to Tekulve. He got two outs but also gave up a single to Bench and a walk to Nick Esasky.

So Tanner brought in Rod Scurry, who walked Eddie Milner and Ron Oester, forcing in the tying run. In came Manny Sarmiento — and up came Walker, who ripped his double off the right-center field wall.

"I go up and look for a pitch I can handle," Walker said. "I don't have too much scientific stuff. I do what I can."

Cubs 3, Braves 0

Chicago's Jody Davis broke up a scoreless tie in the fourth inning when he followed Keith Moreland's bloop double and Leon Durham's infield hit with a towering home run off Pete Falcone that saddled the Braves with their fourth consecutive loss and cut their NL West lead over Los Angeles to 3½ games.

Ferguson Jenkins pitched 8 2-3 innings of seven-hit ball and got last-out relief from Lee Smith.

Giants 5, Expos 3

Darrell Evans hit his 25th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning, and Tom O'Malley homered in the seventh to lead the Giants past Montreal.

Manny Trillo, traded to the Expos by Cleveland on Wednesday, reported to his new team but was not activated for the game.

Leahy Field Goal Boots Jets By Bengals For 20-17 Overtime Win

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals usually prosper through the pass.

On Thursday night, they buried themselves by it, with New York Jets kicker Pat Leahy tossing the last shovel of dirt.

Bengal quarterbacks were intercepted three times, with the last one setting up Leahy's 31-yard field goal in overtime that gave the Jets a 20-17 victory in a nationally televised National Football League exhibition game.

"We wound up killing ourselves throwing the ball," Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg said.

The Jets, who boosted their exhibition record to 2-1, tied the score in the fourth quarter behind backup quarterback Pat Ryan. He engineered a 55-yard scoring drive, tossing an 8-yard touchdown pass to rookie Mike Harmon with just over six minutes to play.

After a Cincinnati fumble, Ryan then drove the Jets 43 yards to the Bengals' 28. But with 44 seconds to play, Leahy missed his second straight field-goal attempt, this one from 45 yards out.

"I was very upset at myself," Leahy said. "But that was a long one."

The second Jet interception of the game nearly gave him a shot at a shorter one. Backup quarterback Turk Schonert threw downfield on the next play and defensive back George Floyd intercepted, giving New York the ball on the Cincinnati 31.

This time, the Jets did themselves in. Ryan hit Mike Augustyniak with a 9-yard pass, and the fullback fumbled away the ball.

One play later, the game went to overtime.

Cincinnati, looking for its first exhibition victory, took the kickoff and decided to bring in rookie quarterback Jeff Christensen. The first play was a pass, and Christensen fired the ball to linebacker Mark Jerue. He returned it 8 yards to the 22, and the Jets ran three plays before Leahy booted the winning field goal 2:15 into overtime.

Jets running back Freeman McNeil made his first exhibition start and gained 61 yards in 13 attempts.

The Bengals took a 10-7 halftime lead on the strength of fullback Charles Alexander's running. Alexander gained 90 yards on 17 first half carries and scored a second-quarter touchdown with a 2-yard run.

New York quarterback Richard Todd, who missed the second exhibition game with a hurt thigh, knotted the score with a 17-yard touchdown pass to Jerome Barkum in the third quarter. Todd played a little more than three quarters, completing 14 of 22 passes for 152 yards.

Cincinnati grabbed the lead back as rookie Stanley Wilson ran three yards for a touchdown before the end of the third quarter.

The victory also cost the Jets. Wide receiver Lam Jones bruised a leg early in the game and receiver Kurt Sohn damaged ligaments in his left knee. The extent of Sohn's injury wasn't immediately known, but Jets Coach Joe Walton expected the worst.

"We won, but we paid a deep price. We lost another wide receiver who is probably out for the year," he said.

In games tonight, Miami is at Washington in a rematch of last January's Super Bowl, and Minnesota visits Seattle.

In training camp news, the Baltimore Colts traded starting tight end Reese McCall to the Buccaneers an undisclosed draft choice.

University Presidents Seek More Influence With NCAA Policies

NEW YORK (AP) — The presidents of 27 universities are interested in playing a larger role in the NCAA and will meet next week to discuss a plan which will give them more policy-making power in the athletic organization.

The private gathering is set for next Monday and Tuesday in Keystone, Colo.

Led by Harvard President Derek Bok, the group will discuss a proposal to give the school presidents a bigger voice in the NCAA, according to a source familiar with the plans who would talk about the proposal only if he was not identified.

"University presidents don't believe institutional control exists in intercollegiate sports," said James Wharton, chancellor of Louisiana State.

Under discussion will be a proposal to create a new policy-making body of 36 higher education chiefs to rule on questions of finances, academics and ethics, the source said. Those powers now belong to the 46-member NCAA Council composed primarily of presidents, other college administrators and faculty representatives.

The ultimate decision-making body is the NCAA convention, an annual gathering of representatives of 788 colleges and universities.

The committee hopes to submit a proposal to the NCAA's annual convention in January in Dallas. Passage would require a two-thirds majority of the 788 NCAA member schools.

"As far as I'm concerned, the presidents have to become more involved in questions involving athletics on campus," said Glen R. Driscoll, president of the University of Toledo.

"What we're doing is looking for ways for presidents to get a more significant role in shaping NCAA policies regarding athletics on campus. Some more formal or structured way seems vital to accomplishing that goal," said Cecil Mackey, president of Michigan State.

The Council would continue in a subsidiary role to the new presidential body, according to the source.

In Kansas City, NCAA president John L. Toner expressed reservations.

"I do not believe (NCAA members) would look with favor upon a committee veto structure which, at a minimum, would be disruptive to the established NCAA democratic process," said Toner, who is athletic director at Connecticut.

At next week's meeting, the president also will consider amendments to a year-old rule — which they inspired — which set academic eligibility standards for all college athletes.

At issue is Rule 48, adopted last January by the NCAA, which requires incoming athletes to have a minimum number of math, English and science courses, and achieve minimum scores on standardized college entrance exams. Some believe the standardized test requirement discriminates against minority athletes.

Passage of Rule 48 last year marked the first time college presidents have joined to initiate an NCAA rule change. But the rule left some hard feelings, particularly among presidents of traditionally black colleges who believe the rule discriminates against minority athletes.

Weatherly Wins Putt

Sam Weatherly led from the start and easily won the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt last night. Weatherly had a five-stroke victory.

Steve Shackelford won a sudden death playoff from Michael Garris to take second place. Phil Martin finished in fourth place with an even par 72.

Herb Score of the Cleveland Indians set a record for rookie pitchers by striking out 245 batters in 1955.

One week from tonight, the 1983 high school football season will get underway, and our panel will be back in two weeks to again battle to see who can pick 'em the best.

Most will be veterans at it: this writer, Tom Baines, Joe Jenkins and Vicki Spivey. Our one "newcomer" will be Jimmy DuPree, who has replaced Rick Scoppe on our staff. Scoppe is now a member of the Associated Press staff in Raleigh.

Next Friday night, six of the 11 area teams covered by the Reflector will get their season off to a start: Roanoke, North Pitt, Washington, Williamston, Conley and Greene Central. The other five, Jamesville, Ayden-Grifton, Farmville, Chocowinity and Rose all start their season the following week, when the colleges also join in. Washington and Chocowinity will be new to the coverage area this year.

The 1983-84 season and the 84-85 year that follows will be the last prior to a planned massive restructuring of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association in the fall of 1985. Plans are still very much up in the air as to how that will be done — if it is done at all. There are proposals for as many as five classifications, and as few as three. The state currently has five.

Under reclassification, a number of schools might move into new areas, with a number of new conferences — or at least new realignments. Traditional rivals may no longer be in the same leagues.

One plan that has been mentioned is to list the state's schools in order of attendance and make the top 25 percent 4-A, the next 25 percent 3-A, and so on.

Under such a ruling, that would put about 80 teams in each classification. Current Big East 4-A teams Rocky Mount (19th), Northern Nash (28th), Northeastern (43rd), Rose (49th), Kinston (62nd) and Hunt (77th) would remain 4-A. However, Beddingfield, and Fike would drop back into the 3-A ranks. Currently 3-A school Bertie would move up to 4-A again. Havelock, Plymouth, White Oak, Roanoke Rapids, Ahoskie, C.B. Aycock, West Craven, North Pitt, Greene Central, Farmville Central, Roanoke, Williamston, and Ayden-Grifton, all currently 3-A would drop to 2-A, with Ayden-Grifton barely keeping from becoming 1-A.

Of course, this would be all speculation, as attendance figures will change before then, and this will probably not be the criteria adopted. It is merely one option.

Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, is the chairman of the NCHSAA committee studying realignment.

a year ago, as the favorites.

Southern Cal appears to have another strong team and quarterback Sean Salisbury probably will throw more under new Coach Ted Tollner. The Trojans have three all-stars returning in center Tony Slaton and outside linebackers Keith Browner and Jack Del Rio.

UCLA must replace quarterback Tom Ramsey, who shared Pac-10 Player-of-the-Year honors with Stanford's John Elway. Free safety Don Rogers leads a strong Bruin defense.

Arizona State lost most of its outstanding defenders, but returns the entire offensive backfield, including quarterback Todd Hons and tailback Darryl Clack. Washington lost heavily to graduation, but still have quarterback Steve Pelluer and tailback Jacque Robinson.

In the Western Athletic Conference, Brigham Young is shooting for an eighth consecutive championship, with Steve Young the latest in a long line of standout quarterbacks. If the Cougars stumble, Hawaii, San Diego State and New Mexico are waiting to pounce.

Elsewhere, Long Beach State, with record-setting Todd Dillon at the helm, will try to unseat defending champ Fresno State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Tulsa is favored in the Missouri Valley Conference led by Michael Gunter, who set a league record by rushing for 1,464 yards last year. In the Mid-American Conference, defending champion Bowling Green is expected to repeat, followed by Western Michigan, Miami of Ohio and Central Michigan.

Brazilian Beats American Gold String

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Ricardo Prado said he had heard the "Star Spangled Banner" played once too often at Pan American Games awards ceremonies, so he did something about it.

Through the first six swimming races and two diving events, the United States was a winner every time, but Prado, a 5-foot-6, 142-pound Brazilian who trains in California and Texas, ended the streak Thursday night.

"I was tired of hearing the 'Star Spangled Banner,'" a chuckling Prado said after winning the 400-meter individual medley, his world record specialty, in Pan Am record time of 4 minutes, 21.43 seconds.

Prado eclipsed the 1979 meet standard of 4:21.63 by Jesse Vassallo of the United States and finished six seconds ahead of silver medalist Jeff Kostoff of Upland, Calif. Mike O'Brien of Mission Viejo, Calif., tied with Canadian Peter Dobson for the bronze.

When Kathy Bald of Canada set another meet record in the next race, the 200-meter breaststroke, beating Susan Rapp of Eden Prairie, Minn., and Kim Rhodenbaugh of Cincinnati, the American hope of equalling the 1979 feat of winning 28 of 29 races ended.

But the U.S. team still isn't doing badly in the water, or on land, either.

Matt Gribble of Miami

lowered the games record in the 100 butterfly twice Thursday and he and Cynthia "Sippy" Woodhead, who won the 200 freestyle for her sixth overall Pan Am gold medal, led two 1-2 American sweeps. The U.S. team also won the men's 800 freestyle relay, and Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo put on another in a long string of impressive diving performances in winning the three-meter springboard.

U.S. boxers Dennis Milton and Louis Howard easily won their bouts, the baseball team stayed undefeated after four games and U.S. shooters won four more golds for a total of 18.

In the medal standings, the United States has 39 golds and 77 overall. Cuba's count is 29 golds and a total of 63, while Canada has 6-4-0 and Venezuela 2-2-1.

Louganis, the world and defending Pan Am champion in both the springboard and 10-meter platform, dominated the springboard so completely that he could have skipped the last of his 11 dives and still won.

He finished with 724.02 points, while Abel Ramirez of Cuba was second with 631.26 and David Burgering of Mission Viejo third with 616.15. Going into his final dive, Louganis already had 640.32.

The California-Irvine student has a personal best of 752.67.

Gribble became the third swimmer to lower the Pan Am record in the men's butterfly in qualifying with a clocking of 54.64 seconds. He erased the meet record times of 55.54 by Canadian Tom Ponting and 55.27 by Morales, from Santa Clara, Calif., set in earlier heats.

Then Gribble came through with a 54.25, with Morales following .37 later for the silver.

Woodhead, of Riverside, Calif., the star of the 1979 Pan Am championships in San Juan, Puerto Rico, with five gold medals, one world record and five meet records, and Mary Wayne of Mercer Island, Wash., finished 1-2 in the 200 freestyle final. Woodhead was timed in 2:01.33, more than three seconds slower than her own world record.

In boxing, Milton scored a third-round knockout of Jamaica's Anthony Logan in the 156-pound class. He scored a pair of standing eight counts, and the referee stopped the bout with six seconds remaining. That moved Milton into the semifinals, and all semifinalists in boxing are assured of at least bronze medals.

Howard, from St. Louis, won a unanimous decision over Segundo Quintero of Ecuador in the 147-pound class.

Both U.S. basketball teams lost key players. Lataunya

Pollard, the college women's player of the year with a 30-point average last season, flew home with an injured ankle, while men's forward Michael Cage left to be with his ailing father in Arkansas.

In shooting, Terry Anderson, 38, of Dallas captured the men's rapid fire pistol and led the Americans to a second team title. Jim Meredith of Fort Benning, Ga., scored a similar gold-medal double in men's air rifle, both with Pan Am records.

In baseball, Kevin Penner and Mark McGwire each hit three-run homers to lead the United States past Puerto Rico 11-2.

Earlier controversies over construction delays and unhappy athletes at the Village have largely died down since competition started Monday, but two new disputes arose Thursday in fencing and boxing.

The International Amateur Boxing Federation suspended Virgin Islands fighter Enrique Ortiz from international competition indefinitely. Hector Cordero, vice president of the federation, said Ortiz had embarrassed the sport Wednesday night when he refused to step into the ring against Argentina's Alberto Cortez in a 132-pound bout.

Team officials said Canadian fencer Stephen Angers was released from a hospital Thursday after being wounded in the leg during foil competition against another Argentine, Sergio Ricardo Turiac. Witnesses said Turiac rammed his foil through Angers' leg during their match.

A Canadian official blamed the injury on the brutality of the Argentine. Turiac responded by saying, "It is a Pan American championship and we're all fighting hard. This could have happened to anyone."

Tar Wars: A Little Something Different

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't the World Series.

It wasn't even the playoffs. It wasn't as big as the Black Sox Scandal of 1919, nor even as memorable as Bill Mazeroski's home run that won the 1960 World Series for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

But, Dan Quisenberry, who pitched the final three outs in the historic pine-tar game, said it would be "remembered as a completely different scenario."

It took just 12 minutes to play the final four outs of the suspended pine-tar game. And finally, at 6:20 p.m. EDT on Thursday, it went into the books — although New York Manager Billy Martin filed one last official protest.

The Kansas City Royals had beaten the New York Yankees 5-4 on a two-run homer back on July 24 by George Brett.

Brett, who hit the homer with an illegally tarred bat, wasn't even around to witness the end to this most bizarre event in baseball.

Brett's homer originally was nullified by umpires because of his excessive use of pine tar. Four days later, American League President Lee MacPhail made history by returning the homer to Brett, along with his bat. But, at the same time, MacPhail ejected the Royals third baseman along with Manager Dick Howser, coach Rocky Colavito and pitcher Gaylord Perry for their part in disputing the umpires' call.

The only one of the four at the resumption of the game Thursday was Howser, who watched on television in the Royals' clubhouse. The other three had gone on to Baltimore, where the Royals begin a three-game set on Friday.

"I didn't start to get nervous until about 30 minutes before the game," Howser said. "I was relieved because I didn't enjoy watching the game on television. I'm not a very good fan."

"I keep saying this. We're in a pennant race," Howser said. "All I could think about was Baltimore."

Quisenberry, who earned his major league-leading 33rd save with just 10 pitches in the ninth inning, said the culmination of this controversy represented "only a half a game for us closer" to the AL West-leading Chicago White Sox.

"We do not go the World Series because we won. We do pass go and collect $41 meal money," he said.

As far as history was concerned, Quisenberry wasn't impressed, although he admitted his wife was at home videotaping his performance for posterity.

"It was a nice way to end it. It was controversial enough," Quisenberry said of a painlessly quick ending before only 1,245 witnesses at Yankee Stadium. "It was the consummate ending, and everybody lived happily ever after."

While the Royals pulled within six games of Chicago, the Yankees fell another half-game, to 3½, behind Milwaukee for fifth place in the hotly contested AL East.

Some of the Yankees were still miffed at MacPhail for overturning the original umpires' decision, most notably Manager Billy Martin, who hid out in the team lounge and refused to talk.

But Don Baylor, the club's assistant player representative, said, "In the final analysis, probably a burden has been lifted off a lot of players' minds."

But Don Baylor, the club's

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

A PROMISE KEPT

GOD PROMISED ABRAHAM, AND THROUGH HIM ALL ISRAEL, A LAND OF THEIR OWN. THIS LAND WAS TO BE CANAAN. THE IDEA OF THIS PROMISE WAS VERY IMPORTANT IN THE OLD TESTAMENT. THE COVENANT GOD MADE IMPLIES CANAAN WAS ASSIGNED TO THE ISRAELITES AS THEIR OWN COUNTRY. DURING THEIR FORTY YEARS OF WANDERING IN THE WILDERNESS TWELVE MEN WERE APPOINTED BY MOSES TO SEARCH OUT THE TERRITORY THAT HAD TO BE CONQUERED. JOSHUA AND CALEB BEING PART OF THE GROUP. TEN OF THE MEN CAME BACK TO MOSES AND REPORTED THE LAND WAS INHABITED BY GIANTS. THIS WAS THEIR FEAR TALKING. YES, THEY AGREED, IT WAS A GOOD COUNTRY WITH FIGS, DATES, AND CLUSTERS OF GRAPES SO LARGE IT TOOK SEVERAL MEN TO CARRY JUST ONE BUNCH BETWEEN THEM ON A POLE, BUT THE PEOPLE OF CANAAN, BESIDES BEING HUGE, WERE VIOLENT. "WE WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO WIN AGAINST THEM," THEY TOLD MOSES! JOSHUA AND CALEB SPOKE DIFFERENTLY. THEY MADE A THOROUGH EXAMINATION OF ALL THAT COULD BE EVALUATED! THEY WERE CONFIDENT OF CONQUEST, FIRM IN THE RECOMMENDATION THAT ACTION SHOULD BE STARTED. THEY WERE OBEDIENT TO THE DEMANDS GOD HAD MADE ON THEM, AND LATER, BECAUSE OF THEIR LOYALTY, THEY WERE THE ONLY OLDER ISRAELITES ALLOWED TO ENTER THE PROMISED LAND WITH THE YOUNGER GENERATIONS. ALL OF THE OTHERS, WHO HAD COME OUT OF THE LAND OF EGYPT DIED DURING THEIR FORTY YEAR SOJOURN IN THE DESERT. GOD ORDAINED THAT ONLY THE ADHERENTS TO HIS SPIRITUAL COMMANDS WOULD REJOICE IN THIS LAND OF MILK AND HONEY.

the job is needed to keep green stain from the copper underneath from spoiling the building's exterior restoration. (AP Laserphoto)

Hitch-Hiked To Conclave Vote

PALESTRINA, Italy (AP) — Papal aides say Pope John Paul II hitch-hiked a ride from a local bus driver five years ago so he would not miss the Vatican conclave where he was named pontiff.

The Pope returned here Thursday and thanked Candido Nardi, 48, shaking his hand and chatting with him before delivering a homily in the town square.

Papal aides said the pope, then Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, Poland, was visiting a shrine run by Polish priests in the Italian town of Capranica on the morning of Oct. 15, 1978, several hours before he was to be locked up with other cardinals for a papal conclave at the Vatican. But he missed the bus that would have taken him to Palestrina for an express bus to Rome. Clad in a cardinal's cassock, he walked to the main road just outside Capranica and flagged down Nardi's bus.

Nardi, who was driving to Palestrina from another town, covered the 12 miles of mountain road in 17 minutes, arriving in Palestrina in time for his passenger to make the connection to Rome, 23 miles to the northwest.

About 6,000 flag-waving citizens, pilgrims and tourists cheered the 63-year-old pontiff's return Thursday. In his homily during a Mass at the town's central Piazza Regina Margherita, he spoke about what he called the virtue of suffering.

"When suffering torments our lives, when being a follower of Christ costs too much and the cross becomes heavy on our backs ... We should realize love finds its highest expression in suffering, sacrifice and self-giving," he said.

Police with metal detectors frisked those who attended the mass, and a tight security ring was formed around the 12th century Church of Santo Agapito Martire, where the pope met with a group of nuns and the handicapped.

He also prayed near the tomb of the town's patron saint, Agapito, who was said to have been beheaded in 274 A.D. after he was thrown into a lion's den for refusing to renounce his faith and the animals refused to attack him.

The pope made the trip from the papal summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, south of Rome. He was the first pontiff to visit Palestrina in 350 years.

Star Chamber: Disturbing Film

Star Chamber: a former court of inquisitorial and criminal jurisdiction in England, which sat in secret without a jury, and was noted for its arbitrary methods and severe punishments (abolished 1641).

"The Star Chamber": a film by Peter Hyams starring Michael Douglas, Hal Holbrook and Yaphet Kotto, now playing at the Plaza Cinema.

"The Star Chamber" is a film about the law and society, specifically what is wrong with the law and what is wrong with society. It is a disturbing film, pulling at the emotions of its audience, and it almost works.

The American legal system rests upon the foundation of openness and fairness. A criminal defendant is entitled to a trial by jury of his peers, to face his accusers, and to be represented by an attorney. The system is designed to protect the innocent, but at times it is the guilty who seem to be protected. The dilemma is real; we read about it almost every day, and the Supreme Court ponders this issue every session. One solution would be a return to the star chamber; quick, effective retribution. But who would wield the power of judge, jury and executioner?

Director Peter Hyams dramatizes this issue in "The Star Chamber." The film opens with a vision of modern American society without order or security. Criminals have taken control of the streets, and the criminal justice system is unable to cope. Michael Douglas, a young Superior Court judge, must exclude evidence illegally obtained in two cases and set apparently guilty defendants free. He wrestles with his conscience. Is he sworn to uphold the law or justice? Are they the same?

Full of frustration and rage, Douglas turns to his old law school professor, Hal Holbrook, who is now also a judge. Holbrook invites him to become a member of "the court of last appeal," a modern star chamber which rehears cases thrown out on technicalities. The justices become vigilantes.

Douglas is the central character in this modern morality play, and he is convincing as a man of law who comes to question the utility of the law. Holbrook and Kotto, who plays a police detective, also perform well, but in spite of the importance of the subject and the skill of the cast the film doesn't hold together.

Two-thirds of the way through the film Hyams turns his social drama into a thriller: he gives us an extended case-and-action sequence which undercuts what went before. It is difficult to combine adventure and social commentary, but films like "Z" and "The China Syndrome" demon-

Hour-Long NBC Drama Is Better Than Reruns

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Take a rich man still in the middle of childhood and a teen-age girl already in the middle of adulthood. Add a lippy chef, a soft touch of a chauffeur, a witty policeman and some bad guys.

What you've got is "Allison Sidney Harrison," an hour-long drama with a promising cast and setup.

But "Allison," on NBC tonight, has a disappointing, if not wholly unsatisfying, plot that could be adopted by any of the numerous defective duos now littering prime time.

Allison Sidney Harrison, played by Katy Kurtzman, is the precocious 13-year-old daughter of a Harvard-educated private eye played by Ted Danson, bartender in the NBC comedy, "Cheers."

Allison eschews ballet lessons for karate, talks her way out of the principal's office where she is sent for making faces in class, and befriends garbage collectors and seedy park poets.

Somewhere along the line, perhaps in the back of her chauffeur-driven Jaguar, she has acquired the talent for picking locks, too. And she uses a credit card, presumably an American Express Gold.

She prefers hamburgers to the chef's haute cuisine, and does crazy things like donating the family chauffeur and car for a night — to be auctioned off at her private school. Tut. Tut.

Not surprisingly, the youngster seems the brighter half of the father-daughter sleuth team. She calls her father "David," to the consternation of Jimmy, the proper chef-masseur-butler who likes to criticize his employers' lifestyle and pouts when he's not obeyed.

Into this setting comes a murder.

Valerie, a beautiful mystery woman, appears at the school auction and wins the night on the town. The next day she is dead. Strangled. And it looks like the Harrisons' chauffeur, played by Don Calfa, did it. Papa wants to leave the investigation to the police, namely his friend, Lt. Jesse Herman, artfully played by James McEachin. So Allison pokes around herself. Her father starts getting suspicious, too, and starts looking into the matter himself.

Allison gets in over her head, as kids like her seem to do. Does her father catch up with her in time? Well, the ending won't be spoiled here. It's evident from the opening 15 minutes. And that's the real mystery — why go to the trouble of assembling a solid cast and dressing it in a lifeless story?

Danson, perfect for the role of the dashing single father, comes across as likable and human, no small feat on television. And Miss Kurtzman performs well in her cliché role as the bright, undisciplined daughter.

No one mentions what happened to Mom. She may have become fed up with her childlike husband and gratingly mature daughter and fled the sumptuous household.

"Allison" would need some better stories to make itself a series, but it's better than most August fare and much better than summer reruns.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: E equals P.
The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

City Gets No Electric Bill

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) - Even though summer temperatures often approach the 100-degree mark around this Gulf Coast city, local officials aren't sweating about their air conditioning and electric bills.
Texas City is not charged for its electricity. City Hall, police and fire stations and all non-revenue operations use current provided free by Texas-New Mexico Power Co., which worked out the arrangement about 40 years ago.
Under the pact, the power company also provides the city with all the equipment it needs to light its streets - and that includes changing the bulbs.
In return, Texas City does not impose on the utility the 2-percent franchise tax levied by many other communities.
"It balances out," said Dwight Spurlock, Texas-New Mexico Power's vice president and division manager. "Several years ago, it maybe favored the company and now it benefits the city."
The latest available figures show that in 1981, the city came out about $250,000

Job-Preference For Teamsters

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than 100,000 unemployed Teamsters would be given preference for job openings in the trucking industry under an agreement announced by the union and unionized transport companies.
The proposed "rider" to the Master Freight Agreement that covers 300,000 Teamsters was announced by Jackie Presser, the union president; Arthur H. Bunte Jr., head of Trucking Management Inc., an umbrella group representing the major unionized trucking companies, and Steve Bridge, secretary-treasurer of the Motor Carrier Labor Council.
Teamster locals will vote Sunday on whether to ratify the rider, Pressersaid

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Beneath all of the practical and organizational blockages and problems that can today occur, there is also a strong and vital influence that can bring broader scope to your life and plans.
ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Work activities do not seem to go as smoothly as you desire, so listen to the ideas of partners and follow through.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't get into anything new today but improve your present work activities. Come to a better understanding at home.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into amusements that will lift your spirits and make you more dynamic. Forget business for a while.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day to discuss with kin what you have planned for the days ahead, but sidestep a demanding partner.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Although detailed work is boring you find it easy to communicate with others quite admirably. State your true aims.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into those activities that give you a feeling of wealth but forget amusements that are altogether too expensive.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have very good judgment where ideas are concerned, so use it. Don't let a confused family tie dissuade you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A close tie can give you good advice today, so put aside any communications that can bring you trouble.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your good friends can be most helpful in any personal wishes that you may have. Avoid money worries.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Cheer up and then you can use good judgment and you can get aid from an official for some problem you have.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You get fine ideas from contacts today and can use them to your benefit, but don't just sit around and fuss.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to change the conditions around you and close ties give good advice, so follow it. Steer clear of demanding types.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be good at anything that is of an intellectual nature and should have the finest education possible. He or she will find it difficult to organize matters. Stress religion and sports.
"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

South had a difficult bid to make at his second turn. Ideally, he would have liked to have a sixth spade for his jump rebid, but no other action was appetizing. North went to game on the strength of his ace in partner's suit.
West led a low heart. East won the ace and made the good defensive play of shifting to a trump. Ignoring been to establish dummy's diamonds while there was still a trump on the board to prevent the defenders from cashing a third heart.

It would not help declarer to play ace-king of diamonds and another, for then he would have no entry to the diamonds after drawing trumps. The simple way around the problem was to win the trump shift on the table and lead a low diamond from the ace-king. As long as diamonds broke normally, the contract would be safe.
If the defenders continued with a heart, declarer would be able to ruff on the board and get back to his hand with a high club to draw the last trumps. He could then simply run his diamonds and take a heart pitch from hand on dummy's fourth diamond.

Czechoslovakia Remembered

Fifteen years ago Sunday, Czechoslovaks awoke to find 600,000 Soviet and East European troops invading their country. Throughout the "Czech Spring" of 1968, Czech Communist Party Chairman Alexander Dubcek had given in to demands for greater personal freedoms and economic reform. Fearing that this undermined communist rule, the Soviet Union and its allies seized Czechoslovakia's government. Czech leaders were forced to sign a "friendship" treaty now known as the Brezhnev Doctrine. This gives the Soviets the right to invade any East European communist nation that breaks with its authority. The Polish government may have imposed martial law in December 1981 to avoid such a potential Soviet invasion.

DO YOU KNOW — Who heads the Communist Party in the Soviet Union?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The Washington Redskins won the 1983 Super Bowl.

Hormone Imbalance Causes Embarrassing Problem

Our 14-year-old boy has an enlargement of the breasts. You can imagine how embarrassing it is. He refuses to go to camp. He won't swim at school. He uses every conceivable excuse not to be seen undressed by his friends. Can anything be done about this?

—Mr. & Mrs. J. McF., Texas.

Dear Mr. & Mrs. McF.:

The condition you describe is gynecomastia. This is an abnormal enlargement of the breast glands that often occurs in early adolescence.

More rarely it is present in men past the age of 50. As you already suspect, the greatest problems associated with this condition are the psychological and emotional consequences especially at the time of puberty. The basic cause of gynecomastia is a hormone imbalance involving the male sex hormone androgen.

There are now very definite methods by which the hormone balance can be accurately studied by specialists who are known as endocrinologists. Their accomplishments are sometimes remarkable in preventing the progression of the breast enlargement. They are also able to reverse the process in many instances.

When the breast enlargement cannot be changed, plastic surgeons or general surgeons can remove the overabundant breast tissue through incisions that are barely visible. The surgery is safe, recovery is rapid, and the psychological rewards are enormous.

I constantly warn parents not to wait or delay seeking expert opinion in the hope that time alone will remedy the situation. Time itself cannot reverse physiological processes. It is imperative that you begin some active form of study and treatment so that your son can be spared the emotional problems that may beset him.

My brother gives himself an injection of vitamin B-12 whenever he gets tired and needs a pickup. Can't this be dangerous? —Miss C.T., Ill.

Dear Miss T.:

Vitamin B-12 is remarkably valuable when given for specific medical reasons such as pernicious anemia and proven vitamin B-12 deficiency. As an artificial pickup, it is worthless from the physical point of view. From the psychological point of view, there are people who cannot be dissuaded from believing its value.

Giving an injection to oneself is poor judgment. Broken needles, infections, and allergic reactions are possible dangers that far outweigh the psychological benefits.

When you try to convince your brother of this, you will find it almost impossible to separate him from this habit.

Pays His Hospital Bill 47 Years Late

MIAMI (AP) — Jackson Memorial Hospital received a check for $382.05 a few days ago — along with a bill dated April 22, 1936.

The money was payment from the husband of a woman who spent seven weeks at the hospital back in the days when a semiprivate room cost $5 a day and the use of an operating room cost $15.

Officials said the bill and check arrived without explanation. They wouldn't reveal the name of the woman or her husband because of confidentiality laws.

"I doubt we were trying to collect a bill that old," Betty Baderman, a spokeswoman for the hospital, said Tuesday. "We probably lost track of it."

The bill is so old that hospital officials doubt there is a record of it in their files.

"We were a city hospital back then and the whole system has changed," Ms. Baderman said.

The woman, who checked into the hospital for surgery on March 2, 1936, accumulated a $255 room-and-board bill for her 51-day stay. Today, the same hospital stint would cost her $190 a day. The operating-room fee has jumped to $385 for the first hour and $188 for each additional hour.

The total bill's increase comes to about 2,600 percent. The treatment nowadays would have cost $10,457.

The hospital doesn't know why the bill wasn't paid 47 years ago. The check arrived a few days ago without an explanation.

Lawman To Get Another Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a new trial to determine whether a Raleigh police officer violated a suspect's rights when he shot the man as he fled the scene of a break-in.

U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt has ruled that a verdict by a federal jury in April in favor of Officer Alphonsa White was not supported by evidence in the trial.

He ordered a new trial for Samuel E. Whitaker's lawsuit against White, and set a trial date of Oct. 11.

The jury decided that White and Officer Walter L. Carter had not violated Whitaker's rights. Both officers shot at Whitaker, but he apparently was hit by a bullet from White's gun. Britt refused to order a new trial for Carter.

STRATFORD ARMS APARTMENTS

A CHANGE OF PACE ... from playing in the water, making sand castles and chasing sea gulls is provided by seeking out a vantage point to watch others. The three young lads here found that the railings of a pier provided just what they needed.

COLLECTING SHELLS ... is one of the irresistible attractions of being at the seashore. At left, Walter Anderson of New Bern studies an olive shell found in shallow water. At right, two Tennessee residents, Karen Mahone of Bristol and Jerry Pratt of Bluff City, collect clam shells to take back home as souvenirs.

A MOMENT TO REST ... After a long walk along a sandy beach, Patsy Baker O'Leary, left, and Nancy Smith, both of Greenville, shed their shoes and take a welcome breather. A ridge of eroded sand provides a convenient seat for them.

GETTING A TAN ... is one of the principal reasons many visitors frequent North Carolina beaches. The trio of sunbathers in the foreground also brought along a portable radio to have music to tan by. Most coastal beaches in North Carolina are seldom overcrowded, so that there's ample space for all.

People Love Going To Beaches In North Carolina

Nature has endowed the coast of North Carolina with a galaxy of excellent beaches scattered along the ocean and inland waterfronts of the state.

Of the 23 states in the United States that have seashores — 14 states along the Atlantic Ocean, four along the Gulf of Mexico and four Pacific states, plus Florida with frontage on both the Atlantic and Gulf waters — North Carolina ranks sixth in the total mileage of tidal shoreline, with 3,375 miles. This extensive waterfront encompasses counties touching the inland waters of the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds, as well as the eight Tar Heel counties bordering directly on the Atlantic.

Several of North Carolina's beaches are well-known resorts — Nags Head on the Outer Banks, Atlantic Beach on Bogue Banks and Wrightsville and Carolina beaches near Wilmington. There are also dozens of other, lesser known but excellent, beach areas where a major recreational bonus is ample space at all times.

A substantial number of beaches located along the Outer Banks within the confines of two public national parks, Cape Hatteras and Cape Lookout National Seashore Recreational areas, offer diverse facilities and are open to the public. The state of North Carolina operates two beach area state parks, Hammocks Beach near Swansboro and Fort Macon east of Atlantic Beach.

It would take a small guide book to name and locate the hundreds of smaller beaches along the Atlantic, inland on the sounds, and along the banks of eight broad rivers lacing the coast.

In all seasons of the year, Tar Heels and visitors from far and near enjoy going to these attractive beaches, particularly in summer months. Whether it's simply to walk or lie in the sun, or to swim, fish, jog, watch people, birds and passing boats, build sand castles, picnic with families and friends, collect shells or to hide away with a book in the hollow of sand dunes — it holds true that for beach pleasures "there's nothing finer than to be in Carolina," North Carolina, that is.

A HELPING HAND ... Sometimes a young child needs a little advice when it comes to the proper way to approach sand-castle building. Here a father gives advice to his young daughter while the mother and two interested children look on.

EVERY BEACH SCENE HAS PRETTY GIRLS ... and the lovely sun-tanned blonde here is Kristen Quadland of Winston-Salem, a Goldie Hawn look-alike. With Miss Quadland is a friend, David Gwin, also of Winston-Salem.
