Divers Find Anchor, Chain Of Old Ironclad 'Monitor'

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Divers today found the anchor of the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor during the second day of an expedition to retrieve the anchor and other artifacts.

The anchor was found about 150 yards off the port bow buried in about 2½ feet of sand, said Jack Stringer, spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, co-sponsor of the mission.

Stringer said the anchor was still attached to the chain and weighs approximately 1300 pounds. He said divers planned to bring the anchor up Tuesday.

Divers found the wreck of the Monitor Sunday night with the help of a charter boat captain. Observation periods will be extended today to make up for time lost Sunday when the expedition had difficulty finding the wreck because of changes in the area's navigation system.

Stringer said visibility today was about 5 feet and very poor. Divers will also be working on the scientific end of the expedition this afternoon and will bring up bottom samples.

The anchor will be the first major artifact raised from the wreckage since a lantern was retrieved in 1977.

A charter boat captain familiar with the area assisted the divers in locating the vessel, the Greensboro Daily News reported. The newspaper said the lost day will cost $8,000 — the price of keeping the 120-foot research vessel Johnson afloat.

"We received confirmation (that the Monitor was found) at 7:15 p.m.," said Jack LaCovey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Divers plan Tuesday to use a cutting torch to remove a 10-foot section of the chain connecting the anchor, according to the Daily News. A winch and crane aboard the Johnson will lift the anchor to the surface.

The first dive had been scheduled for Sunday morning, but was delayed after the ironclad could not be found. LaCovey said the delay would not force an extension of the planned five-day expedition.

"We are going to give it five days out here. After five days we have to move on," Bob Jones told the Daily News. Jones is a senior official for Harbor Branch Foundation of Fort Pierce, Fla., which is helping to sponsor the expedition.

"There were apparently some changes in the LORAN system that threw them off," LaCovey said, explaining that the divers accidentally descended to another wreck in the area. "What they thought was the target was not."

LORAN is a ground-based radio system by which ships can get exact bearings within about 10 feet.

The divers, who went down to 230 feet in a four-person submarine in the first dive of the expedition Sunday, are to make photographs and video tapes, said Dina Hill of mission co-sponsor East Carolina University.

ECU underwater archaeologist Gordon Watts planned to leave the submarine later and examine the 120-year-old wreck more closely, said Ms. Hill, adding that weather conditions and underwater visibility were excellent Sunday.

"In 1979, we lost only one day due to zero visibility conditions at the site," she said.

CONVOCATION — Ralph Kinsey, chairman of the university's board of trustees is shown speaking to members of the faculty at East Carolina University's 74th convocation held this morning. Kinsey told the faculty that "the environment established by Chancellor (John) Howell is conducive to harmonious growth and productivity" and will make solving problems at ECU "much easier." (Reflector Staff Photo)

Heat A Factor For City Schools

"Greenville City Schools are scheduled to open as planned on Wednesday," Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the schools said this morning. "However, due to the possibility of continued excessive heat, we have a monitoring system in effect in all the schools to keep a close watch on conditions."

"If it becomes necessary, we will close schools early on hotter days when buildings do not cool off sufficiently during the night to make conditions bearable for both the students and teachers."

Blinson said that because of the possibility of having to put early closure into effect, "parents need to be prepared for their children to be coming home early, and in cases where applicable, to be ready to arrange for baby sitting services."

Additionally, Blinson said that if a decision is made to close schools early, the decision will normally be made between 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. with announcements to be given immediately to local radio and television. "One important thing for parents to keep in mind," Blinson added, "is that in the event of early closure, bus runs will not necessarily be on a regular schedule, that it may take a bit longer than normal to get children to their homes."

Only three of the Greenville City Schools are fully air-conditioned — Aycock Junior High, Greenville Middle School, and Wahl-Coates Laboratory School. The new wing at Rose has air conditioning, but the other portions do not. Agnes Fullilove School and the other five elementary schools — Eastern, Elmhurst, Sadie Sauter, South Greenville and Third Street School, have no air conditioning but depend solely on individual fans in classrooms as cooling devices.

ECU Chancellor Howell Opens Academic Year On An Optimistic Note

ECU News Bureau
Chancellor John M. Howell opened the 1983-84 academic year for East Carolina University today declaring that "We have a good future before us."

Howell told the opening faculty convocation that "we face a future of change that will require a great deal of ingenuity to respond without large infusions of money."

"We at ECU are equal to the challenge, because we are dedicated and we have experience in this sort of work."

Howell noted that during the past summer, University of North Carolina President William Friday said, "ECU is one of the great success stories of education in the state in the last 25 years. The institution has dramatically changed; it's now a fully developed, professional/liberal arts program."

During the last year, Howell said the university "moved forward on a broad front and made a good beginning on the success story of the next 25 years."

In a year aggravated by state revenue shortages and a 6 percent cut in operating budgets, "you have made impressive advances in scholarship," Howell told the faculty. In addition to scholarship, he reported a wide variety of public service activities and a heavy teaching load.

"We have done a great deal of striving in all of our educational institutions — and particularly at ECU," Howell said. "The fruits of our labor have been many and they were acknowledged in President Friday's comment."

"It is within this context that I want to turn the barrage of criticism that has been loosed on all aspects of our educational establishment during the past few years," Howell said. He noted that universities "also have been hit."

"Although the news media have a well-recognized enthusiasm in criticizing other institutions and in amplifying criticisms that others make of us, we cannot blame all of this on the media."

"In most cases they are simply reporting what we write or say publicly about each other."

Accrediting bodies which in the past never released their evaluations to the public are now releasing "very technical recommendations of use only to the institutions being evaluated" and "we are called upon to explain to the public intricate educational problems that are incomprehensible to many in the audience of the media. The damage is never completely repaired."

Howell said that educators "intent of calling attention to needs in education must be measured in their statements in order to avoid doing more

City Auto Tags Will No Longer Be Required

The City Council recently adopted a new method of billing and collecting the motor vehicle property tax that City Manager Gail Meeks feels "will be of benefit to all concerned."

She said that contrary to the old system of selling city license plates in January, the city will begin adding the $5 license fee for each motor vehicle to the property tax notice. Local citizens will no longer be required to display a metal city license plate on the front of their vehicles, although they will be available, at no cost, if desired.

"Every year in January, there are long lines of citizens waiting at city hall to purchase city license plates," said Mrs. Meeks. "This has been an inconvenience for the public, especially since the state began its staggered motor vehicle registration program a few years ago. In addition, some people prefer not having a metal tag on the front of their car; then again, others will want one."

She noted, "On the other hand, the administrative burden on the city will be substantially reduced. Since the motor vehicle tax will be collected with property taxes, the new system should be much more efficient and thorough."

For those who purchase a city license plate in January, the motor vehicle tax on this year's city property tax notice will be $2.50. "The full program will actually begin in January 1984," Mrs. Meeks explained. "Citizens will list their vehicles with their other property. This tax listing will be for the 1984-85 operating year, and the total fee of $5 will be included on the city tax notices which will be mailed in August or September of 1984."

The new law, however, provides that vehicles registered between July 1, 1983, and June 30, 1984, are subject to the $5 tax.

"Some people believe they will be required to buy a city license plate and pay the tax," the manager said. "But this is not the case. There will only be one charge, and it will be on the annual tax notice. Citizens will not have to buy a plate."

Heat, Drought Exact A Price

Severe heat and drought have rendered extensive crop damage for Pitt County and made the weekend uncomfortable for anyone not paying out big bucks for air conditioning or otherwise finding ways to keep cool.

According to Greenville Utilities Substation Engineer Mike Waters, Saturday brought the biggest Saturday usage of electricity by Greenville area consumers ever — between 134 and 135 megawatts. He says he expects this week, with extreme heat coupled with the opening of the university and city schools, to be possibly the biggest week ever. He advised use as conservative as possible to help consumers avoid large bills and also aid the system in conserving.

Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James said all field crops are suffering. Rain within the next 10 days might make some difference in the quality of late corn, soybeans and peanuts, he said, but would probably be too late to benefit tobacco or early corn. He said he has had no reports of livestock loss or suffering because of the heat.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's Emergency Department reported no medical emergencies related to the heat.

There were an unusually large number yesterday of users of the city swimming pool for this late in August, pool manager Jim Parker said — 131. Sunday was the last day of operation for this year. Other pools also reported large usage.

COOLING OFF — Cindy Cannon and the children, Crystal, 17 months, and Lisa, 5, get cool in the city swimming pool Sunday afternoon as a heat wave continued throughout the southeast setting record high temperatures in many states. Yesterday marked the last day of operation for the city pool. (Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Abby's Reply Still Stands

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You said that hair and fingernails do not grow after death. Well, you are wrong. My mother told me that when she was a little girl, she lived over a funeral parlor, and bodies were kept down there for as long as two weeks waiting for all the relatives to get there for the funeral.

She said the undertaker said sometimes they had to shave a corpse and cut the fingernails several times because they grew long and became noticeable.

My mother isn't living now to verify this, but it's true nevertheless.

I think you owe your readers a correction.

NELLIE IN KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR NELLIE: I received many letters from people who had "known" about cases where the remains of people long dead had been found with "beards down to their knees and fingernails six inches long."

Pursuing this grave undertaking, I called Bill Gold, spokesman for the Los Angeles County Coroner's office, who said: "Growth of hair and nails ceases at the time of death — when body metabolism stops."

"Hair and nails may give the appearance of having grown after death, but that is due to the dehydration and shrinkage of the skin."

Sorry, you are dead wrong. My statement remains good as Gold.

DEAR ABBY: Until I saw the letter in your column signed "Second Thoughts," I thought I was the only person in the world who just plain didn't care for sex. I could easily live the rest of my life without it.

My husband and I lived together for two years before we were married, so he most definitely knew how I felt about sex. Last week we celebrated our eighth anniversary, and I thank God every day for sending this wonderful, understanding, considerate man to me.

We rarely have sex. It almost never comes up, but our lives are filled with other things that interest us. He has never complained or made me feel guilty. We have never gone for counseling because apparently we don't need it. I've always heard that a poor sex life will turn a marriage sour, and wonder why it hasn't affected ours?

DOING NICELY WITHOUT

DEAR DOING: Maybe he gives at the office.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. I love a man who lives with another woman. He acts like he is afraid of her and doesn't know how to get away from her.

He calls me all the time and asks me to meet him somewhere after work just so we can be together. I know he loves me because he always wants to be with me. I love him and want to be with him, too, but it's hard for us to be together because this other woman has some kind of hold on him.

He doesn't know what to do and I don't either. I can't go on like this. Please help me.

B.

DEAR B.: Only your boyfriend knows why he is "afraid" to tell the woman with whom he is living that he wants out. As long as he lacks the courage to free himself, you can consider yourself on the outside looking in. If you're wise, you will quit meeting him and realize that as long as he's living with another woman he is more hers than yours.

Fashion Line Began With Opera Costumes

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the beginning, there was the hat!

Hats were the start of great fashion careers for the likes of designers Schiaparelli, Halston and Adolfo.

Now comes Lloyd Allen, 31, a native of McAllen, Texas. Allen's ready-to-wear design career began with hats too; he was a milliner with the company that costumes the Metropolitan Opera.

"The first opera I did was 'Aida,'" Allen said. "I can build you a helmet out of plastic made to look like lead. I can do 16 helmets in an hour."

"You learn to make a lot of headgear when you're dressing the Met. There may be as many as 300 people in a company."

Working on opera costumes taught Allen, a music major in college, about fabrics, stitching and color. It didn't teach him patternmaking, so his first design, a rain poncho, was one big square and circle stuck together. The circle was the neckline opening and was made into a cowl.

Allen used nylon cire, a shiny, lightweight material, for the ponchos and produced them in a rainbow of colors, each packaged in a small, portable pouch.

Vogue magazine wrote about the ponchos, and to meet the demand Allen's first production line was the sewing machine in his apartment. Eventually, as volume increased, he cut the ponchos and farmed them out to seamstresses from off-Broadway plays.

Today, five years and several thousand ponchos later, Allen has his own firm featuring cotton sportswear. His forte is use of sweatshirt materials.

"I've always played around with sweatshirting," he said in an interview. "It's a good fabric you don't have to think about. But it has been relegated to the locker room or to active sports. I see it in terms of street styling. I even see it for evening wear."

The result is a small, but versatile, collection of dresses, pants and giant flared capes that Allen calls swirls to combine with the basic garments.

The linchpin of the group is a slim, one-piece dress with the look of a two-piece. This is done with a contrasting treatment that looks separate — a weskit falling in a deep V from shoulder to low-slung waist. Allen does it with a basic black, with long sleeves, and the contrasting weskit treatment in tomato reds, plums and yellows. For spring and summer '84 he will do the dresses in white with contrast weskit effect.

Allen said of his collection, "I'm trying to find something women can wear for the business world, not work clothes but clothes with style, yet as comfortable as play clothes. I'm aiming for simplicity, not for the extravagant, just the essentials. Life has enough complications. Clothes shouldn't have to add any."

"I design for a cross section of women, say 25 to 45 and on up. My clothes are not for juniors."

He treats sweatshirting (cotton fleece) as a year-round fabric, and for customers in warmer parts of the country has added the lighter weight cotton interlock.

To help promote his clothes in the stores, the designer has made a video cassette featuring models wearing his fashions and Allen himself playing guitar and a rock tune he composed — "I keep bumping into you..."

"I've played the guitar since I was 12 or so," said Allen. "I just picked it up." He studied music theory at St. Edward's University in Austin, Texas, but joined friends in New York before finishing college. Friends also put him in touch with Gary Brower, who worked for the Met and also did a lot of Broadway shows.

Allen recalled that when his poncho first was launched, he didn't even have an office, unless you call a pay phone booth an office.

"I remember calling Saks Fifth Avenue," Allen said. "They said, 'Where are you?'"

I LOVE THE NEW ME

I lost 36 pounds in 6 weeks

Let me introduce myself and tell you about one of the most important happenings in my life. I am Carl Whitfield, a Pitt County native and retired law enforcement officer, and I have just lost 46 pounds. Not only am I happier with my appearance, but I have much more energy. My physician had been telling me for several years that I needed to lose weight, and I had tried...in fact I had tried several programs and several over-the-counter products. Nothing seemed to work. Then I saw Charles Overton in an ad similar to this one, and I thought if he can do it so can I. So I went to Diet Center, and this is what I found:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.

2. THERE WERE NO SHOTS, DRUGS, OR CHEMICALS USED AT DIET CENTER. What I found there was a well-balanced nutritionally sound diet and a behavior modification program to help me keep the weight off.

3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS TO BUY AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive foods. My wife shopped at our regular food store, and she ate right along with me.

4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found that I tightened up naturally. While no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary for inch loss at Diet Center, to promote good health it is recommended that exercise be a part of your daily routine. I chose walking as my basic exercise. My wife joined me in my daily walk.

5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry. I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals—not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program but they have the educational and professional background to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

Computer Furniture, Home Gym Highlighted

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL
CHICAGO (UPI) — Computers, physical fitness and child safety figure to make big bucks for the nation's housewares manufacturers this year, judging by some of the newest items at the 79th semi-annual International Housewares Exposition.

Company after company is bringing out sturdy, reasonably priced computer furniture, much of it handsome enough for the living room.

Gary Liebsher of Charleswood Furniture Corp., Wright City, Mo., predicted computer furniture will be even bigger than home entertainment centers for stereo equipment.

Metropolitan Vacuum Cleaner Co. of Suffern, N.Y., filled a need with the Data-Vac, a small, hand-held, 4-pound combination vacuum cleaner and blower unit for $60. One end sucks up dirt and the other provides forced air channeled through a pinpoint nozzle to blast loose the dust and paper and ribbon fuzz that quickly jam up printers and other computer equipment.

Everybody is into home health care products. West Bend just bought out Total Gym of San Diego, makers of exercise equipment for the sports and physical rehabilitation markets, and plans to push hard into the home market.

Total Gym is a series of four exercise units, price range $240-$500, which feature a sliding padded platform on rails that hook onto a metal support. You sit or lie on the platform and pull yourself up and down. Your body provides the weight, the platform provides support for your back, and the angle at which you attach the rails to the support determines the level of resistance.

Less costly health care equipment abounds. Pollenex has a Smoke Grabber smokeless ashtray that George Burns and his cigar will be advertising. Norelco showed a series of machines, including scales, a vibrating bedboard, a Clean Body Machine for $35 that scrubs and sponges you, and a line of home blood pressure units, $22 to $245.

General Housewares Corp., of Terre Haute, Ind., had the cholesterol and weight-conscious in mind when it pushed its $20 Dry Fryer into department stores. The heavy frying pan, with nonstick finish, has a raised center section with a slot that circulates hot air so frying can be done in just one teaspoon of oil.

"People who diet don't want to give up eating," GH dietitian Sheila Kaufman said.

Many states now require safety restraints for children in autos. Cosco reports its business is up 50 percent since last year on child safety seats, and spokesman Neal McLachlan said in states with strict laws, "It's up tenfold."

One of the smallest booths at the show had the biggest crowds. Singer packed them in with Easy Menders, hand-held gadgets to sew on buttons, make thread tacks (say in hems and seams that give way at the office), and make perfect replacement patches in clothes. They're about $30 each.

The most-asked question was, "Have you seen the cement mixer?" That, at $450, is the Farberware Electronic Ultra Chef, a glass container that heats, stirs and senses temperature to mix your delicate sauces — or bake your roast — while you flee the kitchen.

So much money for something to replace the cooking pot and wooden spoon?

"Ten years ago they asked who'd spend $250 for a machine to slice vegetables," said Richard Hochman of the National Housewares Manufacturers Association, noting that Cuisinart and its imitators have done rather well.

Smaller nifties: — Empire Brushes' new Megamop with huge, more absorbent head and swivel action.

—Gemco's Whistler glass teakettle with plastic handle, which can be used on the range or in a microwave.

—Hang-It-All's $3.95 washable, plastic pegboard that can be screwed right into the wall, without furring strips.

—Network's $40 electronic baby sitter, a monitor that requires no special wiring because it works off the electric wiring in your house.

—Bandwagon's big wipe-away board to list What's In My Freezer and When Did I Put It There. Magnets hold it on the side of the appliance.

Pat's Pointers

Clever little pompon animals will brighten a dorm room or nursery, cheer up a shut-in, serve as imaginative party favors or delight your favorite youngster.

The perky little penguin, skunk, duck and mouse are all made from pompons — no knit or crochet skills needed. Bits of felt, ribbon, flowers and buttons are used to decorate them. Each little animal standings approximately seven inches high.

To obtain directions for making the pompon animals, send your request for Leaflet No. PP-8383 with $1.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. P-8383 containing the instructions and all necessary materials for making all four pompon animals by sending a check or money order for $11.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Shipping charges are included in the kit price.

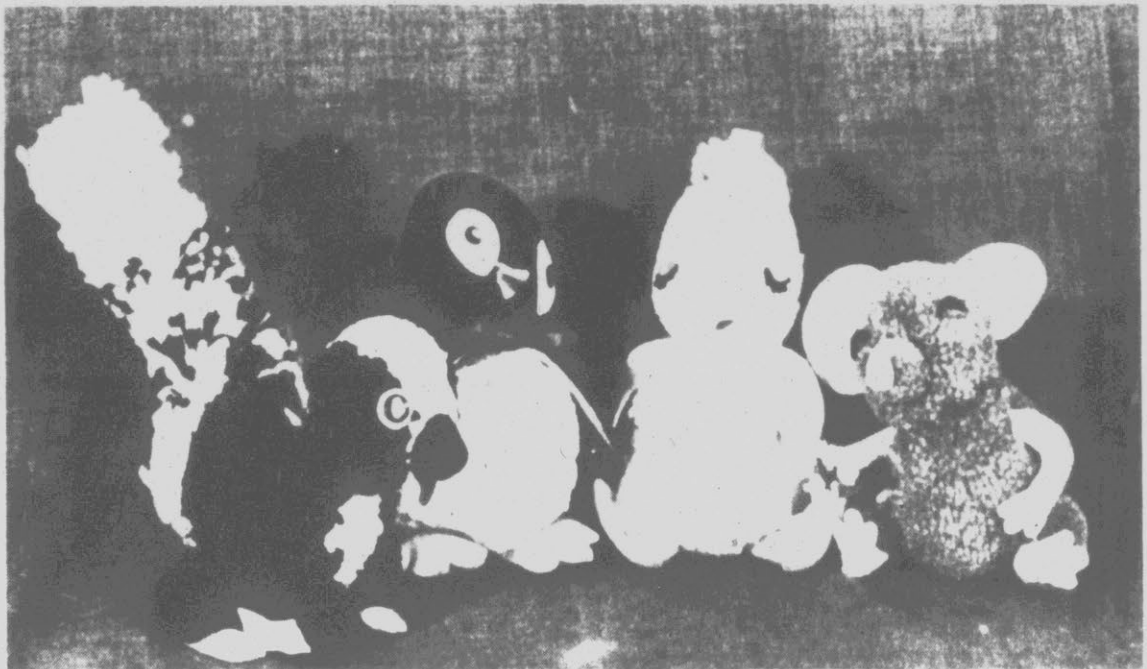

Dear Pat: While I was crocheting today I showed my work to my grandmother. She told me you had written about a lace trim called "Mile a Minute." She thought mine was even faster so I decided to call it "Two-Miles-a-Minute Lace." I chain six (6), insert hook in the next chair, yarnover and pull yarn through. I leave that yarn loop on the hook and pull up loops in all the rest of the chains (like you do in the afghan stitch). Then I yarnover and pull the hook through all the loops and single crochet in the top of the last stitch. Just keep doing that until the strip is as long as you wish.

I will be 10 years old Sept. 21. Please write back to me if it's going to be in Sunday's newspaper.

— Kari Pankey, Greensboro, N.C.
Congratulations, Kari, for creating an original pattern stitch — many people who were crocheting long before you were born have never invented a new stitch. And thank you for sharing it with us.

By coincidence, the same day's mail brought the following letter:

Dear Pat: Could you help me to understand a crochet pattern know as "Mile a Minute." I cannot seem to understand the instructions, which read:

PERKY ANIMALS...are perfect for brightening up any room and are made just from pompons with no knitting or crochet skills necessary.

"Chain 4, make a single crochet in the 4th chain from the hook, chain 2, make 2 double crochets in the same space. Chain 3, turn, go in chain 2 make one single crochet, chain 2, make 2 double crochets. Repeat."

I believe that something is missing or incorrectly stated in the instructions. Any help you can give will be greatly appreciated. I am confused where it states "go in chain 2 make, etc."

— Margie J., Pittsburgh, Pa.

This is still another version of the "Mile-a-Minute" edging I know, but I believe that I can clarify this set of instructions for you. I assume that you understand that in the 4th chain from the hook you work a single crochet, then chain 2 stitches, then work 2 double crochets in the same chain. Upon completing these steps, chain 3 stitches, turn your work and — in the chain-2 Space made on the previous row — work 1 single crochet, chain 2 and work 2 double crochets in the same chain-2 space. You would then repeat these steps, starting with "chain 3" over and over as many times as desired.

The version that I have used for many years is worked along an edge of single crochet stitches. With the yarn attached at the beginning of a row of single crochet, chain 7 stitches. Work 1 double crochet in the 4th chain from the hook and work another double crochet in the same single crochet where you started the chain of 7 stitches. Then, skip 3 single crochets and in the next single crochet stitch, work 1 double crochet, chain 4, 1 double crochet in the 4th chain from hook and 1 double crochet in the same single crochet stitch. Repeat the steps given in the last sentence all along the edge to be trimmed.

As the names would indicate, each of these trims works up quickly and easily once you become familiar with the pattern.

Bread-&-Butter Pickles: Surefire

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Bread-and-butter pickles are comparatively new in American home preserving. Fannie Farmer, in the first (1896) edition of her famous cookbook, doesn't mention them. As a matter of fact, she gives mighty few pickle recipes.

It may be that bread-and-butter pickles were first made commercially and that it wasn't until almost the middle of this century that home cooks copycatting them.

I suspect it was in the 1940s that cooks started preparing them in their own kitchens. I base this date on the fact that in the first commercially published edition in the 1930s of Irma Rombauer's "The Joy of Cooking" there is no recipe for bread-and-butter pickles.

Since the 1940s, recipes for the pickles have been with us by the score and in various versions. A great many of these are large in size. If you want to try a small batch of this delicious relish and have it on hand in your refrigerator, we urge you to use the following excellent recipe.

In it the vegetables are soaked in cold tap water. Some recipes call for using ice and water. We tried the recipe with and without ice and found that the ice made no difference whatsoever in achieving a crisp pickle.

BREAD-AND-BUTTER PICKLES
8 or 9 (each about 4 inches long) pickling cucumbers (about 1 1/4 pounds)
1 large onion (about 5 ounces)
1 large green pepper (about 5 ounces)
1/4 cup salt
2 1/4 cups water
2 cups cider vinegar
2 1/2 cups sugar

3 teaspoons white or yellow mustard seed
1 1/2 teaspoons celery seed
1 teaspoon ground turmeric
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
With a brush, scrub cucumbers under cold running water; drain; do not peel, but trim ends; slice thin — there should be 8 cups. Peel onion, quarter and slice thin — there should be 1 cup. Quarter green pepper, remove seeds and membranes and rinse; slice thin crosswise — there should be 1 cup.

In a large bowl stir together salt, water and vinegar. Add cucumber, onion and green pepper; mix well. Cover and let stand at room temperature for about 3 hours. Strain, reserving cucumber mixture and liquid separately.

Pour reserved liquid into a medium saucepan; add sugar, mustard seed, celery seed, turmeric and cloves. Over moderate heat, stir until sugar dissolves; bring to a boil; simmer, covered, for 15 minutes. Add reserved cucumber mixture; bring to a boil; simmer, covered, until cucumbers just begin to become transparent — about 1 minute. Store in the refrigerator. Makes about 1 1/2 quarts.

HOW PARENTS CAN PAY TUITION WITH INTUITION.

Think about it. Four years of tuition. Four years of rental student housing... plus all the incidentals of financing a college education. For most of us, it isn't easy. Not by a long shot.

But here's a thought that not only makes it more affordable, but makes it sensible as well:

You can purchase a fully-furnished 2-bedroom, 2 or 2 1/2-bath condominium townhouse apartment at Kingston Place (only a mile from E.C.U.) at pre-construction prices ($59,900) with a full 90% financing plan to make it even easier.

Think about it. Tax laws now permit a parent to rent to a son or daughter... so long as the rent charged is at is at "fair market value".

So, you want a good place for your student to live. You rent him or her your good place. At the end of four years you've not only educated a young person, but you've also paid a goodly sum toward the costs of owning income property!

And at the end of their college stint, you can continue to rent your condominium at Kingston Place or sell it outright... an excellent tax shelter for parents.

Think about it. Why wait four years for a return on your college investment dollars when Kingston Place can begin paying you back today?

Pre-construction purchase reservations are now being accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. We invite your inquiry.

Retaliation Ahead?

We have been led to think it is common practice for families of diplomats to enjoy a form of immunity from laws of their host country, ranging from such things as traffic violations to shoplifting, and from prosecution of more serious crimes.

The mutually adopted policy was intended to prevent harassment and wrongful charges during a period of pique between governments.

If this is the way it is, we wonder over the United States' policy line that foreign children who acquire a taste for Western life may express a reluctance to return to their homeland, and are entitled to protection of the federal government.

The son of the Soviet Embassy's first secretary posed the most recent case. A couple of years ago the son of a Ukrainian visitor "defected" and refused to return to his homeland with his family. It disturbed us then, and it does now. Only worse problems can result.

It seems inconceivable that a minor, however willful, should be the responsibility of any other than his own parents and his own government.

American diplomats going abroad should take heed ... perhaps to the extent of leaving their children at home. There's just no telling what retaliatory measures could be in the offing.

Delay Bothersome

Just when it seemed the Morehead City-to-Atlantic Beach bridge location was settled, it appears that city officials may go to court to block the bridge location chosen by the Department of Transportation.

Mayor Bud Dixon said the city will go as far as it can to block the 23rd Street location. City officials want a site further to the west.

Prompt construction of the bridge affects hundreds of thousands of visitors to Morehead City and Bogue Banks.

A court action could delay the building of the new bridge for many years and, in the meantime, the traffic problem will be getting worse, not only for the visitors but also for the residents of Morehead City and Bogue Banks.

Hopefully this latest controversy over the bridge location can be promptly settled.

Unreported Call

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Glenn's unreported telephone call to Defense Minister Moshe Arens in Jerusalem recently was an effort to keep Israel out of the 1984 presidential campaign and end anti-Glenn moves by Israel and some of its American friends.

Glenn failed to get from Arens what was wanted, which was an antidote to the Aug. 9 story by New York Post reporter George Arzt. In his widely read column "Inside City Hall," reporter Arzt indirectly quoted Arens as having confided to a select political audience in Gracie Mansion Aug. 2 that as president, Glenn would try to get Israel off the West Bank and other captured Arab lands.

Intervention from abroad is not unique in presidential elections, but it is risky. That is particularly true when it takes the form of pressure from behind closed doors, as reported by the Post, against a candidate stating a conviction widely held in the U.S.

Glenn's immediate reaction — to call Arens and set him straight on Glenn's pro-Israel voting record — was subtle but characteristic of the Marine hero. Agreeing that astronaut Glenn was a strong friend of Israel, Arens told him that he had never expressed reservations about him. He promised he would issue a denial of the Post story and confirm Glenn's esteem for Israel.

But when it came, Arens' denial simply said the story was "groundless." Arens, whose influence in the American Jewish community is profound, ignored Glenn's pro-Israel voting record, thus buttressing the Post's revelations and emphasizing Glenn's vulnerability.

The vulnerability revealed itself in a frank interview Glenn gave the Jewish World, the influential Long Island weekly, published on June 24. Dredging up old statements by Glenn on the Middle East and trying to tie him to the Palestine Liberation Organization after telling him he had a "rather negative perception ... in the Jewish community," the paper's reporters triggered an angry response from Glenn:

"You're continually trying to put words in my mouth, which I don't like, quite frankly ... I did not say that ... Don't put words in my mouth. That's not fair. I resent that." Defending the consistent line of his Mideast policy, Glenn stuck to his position that the U.S. should open up "contacts" with the PLO to move it away from "terrorism." He pleaded for the right of American politicians, and particularly presidential candidates, to discuss "the contentious issues" without fear.

"It we're afraid to mention even what the problems are and I'm so scared of getting criticized ... that's not leadership," Glenn said.

Neither front-running Walter F. Mondale nor Sen. Alan Cranston has Glenn's vulnerability with the American Jewish community, whose political pull derives from high voter turnout, skill in selling a point of view and ability to make campaign contributions.

If Arens worries that President Glenn will pressure Israel to withdraw from the West Bank, President Mondale's skirts would be cleaner — in Israel. Addressing a United Jewish Appeal fund-raiser in Los Angeles last winter, he compared an Israeli pullout from captured Arab lands to "an American president coming back and saying 'I got peace with the Russians and all I had to give up was everything west of the Mississippi.'"

Cranston is also viewed as loyal to Israel. His new fund-raising letter, targeted on Jewish contributors, says that President Cranston would "lay to rest the myth of a 'balanced' U.S. policy in the Middle East." He would tell the Arabs that Saudi Arabia's "holy war" and the "extremism" of Syria, Iraq and others have no more claim on a "balanced" U.S. policy than "martial law in Poland, apartheid in South Africa or torture in Chile and Argentina and El Salvador."

Courtship of ethnic voters is no phenomenon. Ronald Reagan has been gushing about his deep affection for Hispanic voters and the Democrats will soon do the same.

But those from beyond U.S. borders may exceed a tolerance level when, as the Israeli defense minister has discovered, political pressures against a presidential candidate are exposed. That could spell backlash.

RALEIGH — Oops! The General Assembly may have goofed up another law.

Already, there's been a lot of teeth gnashing over changes made to the state's trial discovery laws during the 1983 session. It appears the new law will expose the informers who help the police catch drug smugglers.

Now some lawyers are saying the Legislature may have, in a different action, opened a gigantic loophole in the state laws concerning the sale of alcohol to minors. By just changing a few words, these critics charge, the Legislature has made it practically impossible to prosecute someone for selling alcohol to a minor.

Currently, under state law, if a clerk sells to an underage buyer, the fact that he made the sale creates a legal presumption that he knew the buyer was underage, says David Crump, deputy attorney general and counsel to the Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

The seller then bears the burden to prove that he didn't know the buyer was underage. He might, for example, provide evidence that the buyer used a forged identification card to mislead the clerk.

On Oct. 1, because of action taken by the assembly this year, that law will change. As Crump explains, the presumption will be removed. The state will then have to prove that the clerk knew the person was under age.

The difference is monumental. According to a source in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, the department's lawyers feel it will be virtually impossible to convict someone of selling to minors. Lawyers for sales outlets will simply advise their clients not to ask for identification. If a minor doesn't show identification, then the clerk will have no way of knowing the buyer is underage and the state won't be able to prove he knew the person was underage.

The leadership of Crime Control asked the attorney general's office for an opinion on the law change. But, according to one department source, the attorney general's office refused. The source said the AG's office felt Crime Control's fears were on target and that writing an opinion would just make it easier for the lawyers of people who sell alcohol to minors.

Crump agrees that under the new law conviction will be very hard to obtain. And, he agrees that clerks might be able to protect themselves simply by refusing to ask for identification from anyone who looks young.

During the session, Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, introduced a bill designed to tighten the sales-to-minors statute. But, his bill was amended in the Senate. That amendment, sponsored by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, is creating the controversy now. (Barnes, coincidentally, was a co-sponsor of the new drunken driving law.)

Barnes was out of state and couldn't be reached for comment. But Wicker says he and Barnes and a number of other lawyer-legislators feel the new law is OK. They discount the concerns being voiced in Crime Control, by prosecutors and by Crump.

Marlyn Sugg of Albermarle, former state chairman of Mothers Against Drunken Driving, isn't discounting the problems the new law might create. "This is a pretty stupid thing," she said of the law change. "This kind of gizmo going on in the General Assembly will only help those who are breaking the law by not caring whether or not they sell to minors."

Mrs. Sugg said MADD plans to take action on the law. She plans to write all legislators who voted for the bill and MADD chapters around the state will be contacting legislators at home. She said she hopes that the Legislature will come back to town before October to fix the law. Crime Control apparently has the same hope.

Dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — If you take great pride in the strength of the U.S. dollar, which is to say its superior buying power in relation to other currencies, you might not have thought the issue through.

This is especially true if you are jobless, because the dollar's strength, so often portrayed as a symbol of economic well-being, is a direct contributor to the high rate of domestic unemployment.

This strength-is-weakness scenario is accomplished by making it difficult for American companies to price their exports competitively, and making it easier for foreigners to undercut U.S. producers in their home markets.

How many jobs? Hundreds of thousands. The Commerce Department says at least 20 percent of all U.S. jobs are tied to exporting, and since the trough of the recession late last year net exports have fallen by $12.8 billion.

Few economic issues today have more facets than that of the dollar's value in international trade. And probably no issue demonstrates better the complex economic relationships that sometimes confuse even economists.

The same strong dollar that is causing so much domestic unemployment, for example, is also helping to keep domestic inflation down, because foreign goods sold in the United States are priced relatively inexpensively.

Which do you want: A dollar that continues to rise in value or one that begins to lose some of its international buying power?

If you choose a stronger dollar you will, in effect, express support for housing and other credit-sensitive industries, because a stronger dollar might mean a continuation of low inflation and, perhaps, moderate interest rates.

If you choose a weaker dollar you will be siding with those who seek to make U.S. manufacturers more competitive in international markets, simply because a weaker dollar would mean lower price tags on U.S. exports.

The complications ripple through the world. Consider this one: A strong dollar makes it difficult for debtor nations, especially the less-developed ones, to repay their loans. And many of those loans are to U.S. banks.

Fortunately, you need not make a choice, since the marketplace does it for you. Federal Reserve figures show that in relation to a package of 10 foreign currencies, the dollar has risen more than 50 percent since the end of 1979.

Why? President Reagan has had a lot to do with it, although not completely by design. Interest rates are high on the list of reasons why. Political instability too. And maybe even cynicism.

Playing Catch Up

Every time I go on vacation my secretary leaves a memo to catch me up on news events I missed:

My Lord, things have been quiet since you've been away. We have sent AWACS and F-15s to Egypt in case we have to go to war with Libya, which now seems to be at war with Chad. Looked up Chad on the map for you. It is a land-locked country below Libya bordering the Sudan on one side and Nigeria on the other.

We have aircraft carrier Eisenhower off Libya as a warning to Khadafi that he's pushing his luck if he keeps supplying rebels, who are trying to overthrow the legal government of Chad. Called State Department to find out the name of Chad whom we are supporting. They said they'd get back to me, but never did.

While you were away there was a military coup in Upper Volta, which is in Africa below Mali, and above the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Togo and Benin. The new ruler of Upper Volta is a Libyan-backed officer (State Department said they would give me his name as soon as they had it). We are watching Upper Volta situation carefully but probably will not send any aircraft carriers there since it's located right smack in the middle of the continent and very inconvenient for gunboat diplomacy.

I almost forgot to tell you. They also had a military coup in Guatemala in Central America. Guatemala is just below Mexico and above Honduras. The Defense Minister Mejia Victores overthrew the born-again Dictator Rios Montt whom Victores accused of being a religious fanatic. (Note this is the first time this has been used as an excuse for a coup in Central America.) General Victores is calling for free elections and a return to democratic principles so our Navy is staying out of it.

Not too much new out of Honduras except we are still planning to hold large maneuvers down there and have sent in more advisers to beef up the Honduran army, as a signal to Nicaragua, Cuba and the Soviet Union to keep their hands off El Salvador. We have a naval fleet off each coast to make sure that Nicaragua gets the message, but are still denying vehemently that we want to overthrow Sandanista government. The president said we always station naval ships off Nicaraguan waters when we hold hemisphere maneuvers in our own back yard.

In the meantime U.S. Ambassador Richard Stone is trying to work something out with the El Salvador rebels to have them participate in the elections which will be held this fall, either before or after the maneuvers in Honduras. While Stone is talking to the rebels, Henry Kissinger has been appointed to head up a commission to find a solution to the Central American crisis. The president is hoping Henry will give him a viable Central American policy by next February. In the meantime the president is going ahead with covert operations in the area whether Congress says he can or not. Have enclosed map so I don't have to explain where these countries are.

While all this is going on in Central America the Israelis have pulled out of Beirut and the Syrians are still in the Bekaa Valley. We have a fleet standing off Lebanon in case this situation deteriorates, which it is likely to do unless Robert McFarlane, who has taken Habib's place in Middle East negotiations, is able to persuade all foreign troops to get out of the country.

Did I tell you what happened to the American dollar while you were gone? It's the strongest it's been in years, which is great for the American tourists but playing havoc with U.S. exports. We've outpriced ourselves from world markets. France has accused us of purposely strengthening the dollar to wreck the French economy. They are so mad they won't help us figure out what to do about Chad.

Most important news you missed while on vacation: George Brett of the Kansas City Royals hit a home run with too much pine tar on his bat, and Dave Winfield of the Yankees was arrested for killing a seagull in Toronto with a baseball. No, I haven't gone crazy. I'm just reporting the facts.

Your Humble Servant,
Cathy

IMF Needs Changes In Lending Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the International Monetary Fund, struggling with unprecedented requests for help from debt-ridden developing nations, are considering changes in their lending rules that those countries would surely see as cutbacks at the worst possible time.

But without the changes, some IMF officials fear, the viability of the fund itself could be in jeopardy.

And as if that prickly problem isn't enough, concern persists that Congress could reject an $8.4 billion increase in the U.S. support to the IMF. Without that money, the outlook for the fund's effectiveness — even its continued existence — would be less bright.

In the dog days of a Washington summer, such worries are often put aside as many government officials, including the president, leave town for vacations.

But this year the nagging issues won't go away.

Behind the concern is the gigantic debt developing countries owe to foreign governments and international banks.

The IMF staff has projected it will grow to $664.3 billion this year, from $612.4 billion in 1982.

As a result of the debt, the finance ministers representing the 146 member nations of the IMF agreed earlier this year to boost an emergency lending fund by 47.5 percent to keep debtor nations from defaults that could set off an international financial panic.

The IMF, which has been at the center of efforts to manage the debt crisis, receives lines of credit from its members and then loans money to countries with balance-of-payments problems that agree to stringent economic reforms.

So far, only 19 of the 146 countries have finished action to increase their portion of the additional $32 billion contribution.

One of those not yet on board is the fund's largest member, the United States.

Both houses of Congress have approved their own versions of legislation that would increase the U.S. contribution by $8.4 billion, but final action remains in doubt.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

John Wesley and George Whitefield, outstanding religious leaders of the early 18th century who worked closely together, finally spearated over differences in doctrine. Many years later a friend asked Whitefield if he expected to see Wesley in heaven.

"No," replied Whitefield, "neither you or I will see Wesley in heaven. But the reason, my friend, will be that Wesley will be so close to the throne of God and you and I will be so far away that we will not be able to recognize him."

Whitefield had watched the life of this man whom many people thought was his enemy and, laying aside all personal resentment, spoke of him as one whose spiritual life transcended that of all his generation.

To admire and value those we disagree with is a fine quality, particularly because it requires that we put aside the differences and recognize the whole man for what he is.

At home, where the economic recovery is still in its initial stages and high interest rates are causing the housing industry to squirm, the issue is of importance.

To outsiders, no doubt, the threat seems short-sighted when viewed in light of the troubles of poorer countries. They argue the United States will benefit from the additional help for developing countries, many of which buy goods from the United States. Because of that, the legislation has been called a "jobs" bill by some of its backers.

Without the U.S. backing, officials feel that other countries might not come through with their agreed-on shares.

Even if the additional resources come through, officials of the IMF are talking about steps to conserve the pool of money.

One hotly debated suggestion calls for changing the organization's lending rules so that countries would not be able to borrow as much against their quotas, which represent the amount of money they have deposited in their currencies with the IMF.

With the increase in the quotas, the maximum amount of lending at current levels would be quite generous, say those arguing for a reduction.

There is a desire, says the monetary expert, "to make sure the fund's financial position is viable for years to come."

Yet, the proposal is likely to be very controversial among developing countries when it is discussed at next month's annual meeting of the fund.

Poor Countries Move To Delay Paying Huge Debt

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Monday, August 22, 1983 5

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Poor countries are arranging to delay payment on over $40 billion worth of debts coming due in the next few years - four times the amount delayed in 1982, according to officials of the World Bank.

The cost of delay is estimated at hundreds of millions of dollars.

On Friday, Brazil requested other governments to hold off on $1.5 billion worth of debts due this year and next. It already has an agreement to "reschedule" $4.4 billion due this year alone to private banks - which have lent much bigger sums than governments in recent years.

There are 22 countries that have started or completed reschedulings so far this year, including Mexico and Brazil, the world's biggest borrowers with debts of about $90 billion each. Negotiations involving 13 countries are still under way.

The list also includes the poorest of the poor, such as Uganda and the Central African Republic. In those countries the average citizen earns a dollar a day or less and he may be worse off at the end of the century than he was in 1960.

Two countries with Communist governments, Poland and Romania, are also included.

A country in financial trouble virtually has to reschedule its debt payments. The alternative is to continue to pile up arrears.

"Such an action has serious drawbacks," says an article in the September issue of the quarterly "Finance and Development," published jointly by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. "It will undermine confidence in the country, making it difficult - if not impossible - for it to borrow in the future."

Until 1979, there were only two or three reschedulings a year, amounting in 1978 to a total of $1.8 billion. India, Zaire and Turkey were among the perennially hard up.

Seven negotiations have begun in the past three months, compared with 11 during the whole of last year. The additions include Nigeria, the most populous country in Africa and a big oil supplier to the United States, as well as smaller ones like Peru and Liberia.

Pending conclusion of some of the agreements, overdue payments on loans were apparently well over $14.3 billion, the total logged at the end of 1982 by the fund.

Since then, Brazil alone has fallen behind on some $2 billion worth of debt.

These overdue payments consist largely of interest, with only small amounts of principal. The fund calls them "arrears." Americans think of them as indicating bad loans.

A country might decide to keep up its debt payments at the expense of cutting imports. But in many poor countries imports are often essential food supplies and further cuts could easily mean serious riots or even revolt.

Once a rescheduling agreement has been reached, the loans are no longer considered in arrears. It is expected that the debtor country will keep up the new and easier payments.

Vehicles Collide On Tenth Street

Cars driven by Nancy Edward McLean of Washington, and Ivan Kimball Solomon of 62 Village Greene Apartments, collided about 9:18 p.m. Friday on Tenth Street, one-tenth of a mile west of the Brownlea Drive intersection.

Police, who said Solomon and a passenger in his car were injured, estimated damage from the collision at $3,000 to the McLean car and $2,500 to the Solomon vehicle.

Solomon was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of the mishap.

Damage Results From Collisions

An estimated $1,600 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated Saturday by Greenville police.

Officers said cars driven by Harriet Husted Wooten of Route 1, Greenville, and Sharon Elaine Brown of 700 West Fourth St., collided about 8:50 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenfield Boulevard, causing $700 damage to the Wooten car and $200 damage to the Brown vehicle.

Police charged Ms. Wooten with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

Police said an estimated $700 damage resulted to a car driven by Tonya Lenae Gibson of Route 11, Greenville, when her car collided with a vehicle driven by Judith Ann Cobb of 207A North Summit St.

No damage resulted to the Cobb car in the 3:10 p.m. collision on Jarvis Street, 150 feet south of the Second Street intersection.

Second Degree Burglary Is Charged

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said William Lester Klohr, 28 of 1209B Cotanche St., was arrested last week by officers on second degree burglary charges in connection with an August 11 incident at 1208 Cotanche St.

Cannon said Klohr allegedly broke into the dwelling through a window when the three East Carolina University co-eds living there were out of town.

Charges Made In Break-Ins

Billy Lee Nobles, 21 of 1013 West Third St., and Jerry Coward, 24 of 115 Watauga Ave., were charged by Greenville police Saturday with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with break-ins at the Pizza Huts at 2610 East Tenth St., and 305 Greenville Boulevard.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers found Nobles and Coward at the Pizza Hut on Greenville Boulevard about 4:55 a.m., where a glass door had been broken and a coin operated cigarette machine had been forced open.

The chief said further investigation revealed a similar break-in had occurred at the Pizza Inn on Tenth Street.

Cannon, who said $40.50 in change was found in the car in which Nobles and Coward had been traveling, reported that bond for the men was set at $10,000 each pending a court hearing in the case.

ECU Officers Complete Course

Two East Carolina University police officers, Hal Gray Swindell and John Allen Roush, have completed the 400-hour basic law enforcement training course at the N.C. Justice Academy at Salem.

The two men graduated from the academy program August 19.

The basic training program is designed to impart the knowledge and skills needed by law enforcement officers, and contains topical areas ranging from criminal law and arrest, and search and seizure, to firearms, driving and defense tactics.

MOBILE HOME DESTROYED — Winterville and Ayden firemen battle a blaze that destroyed the mobile home of Willie Carr, of Route 2, Winterville early Sunday morning. According to Carr, he left the home about 7:30 p.m. Saturday and returned after flames destroyed the home. The flames were spotted by Carolyn Moye, who lives next door. Ms. Moye said the major part of the flames were in the center of the mobile home when she called firemen. According to Phil Worthington, assistant fire chief at the scene, the cause of the fire would not be known until firemen could get inside the and investigate the rubble. There was no estimate of damage and no one was reported injured. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Farm Scene

By MITCH SMITH
Agricultural Extension Agent

As the flue-cured tobacco season continues to advance many farmers are considering the use of a plant growth regulator known as Ethrel. Ethrel is a chemical ripening agent which has been known to increase the harvest schedule resulting in more efficient use of curing facilities and labor.

This management tool functions by increasing the rate of the coloring process during which the plant has begun senescence. Although a farmer faces the threat of school opening and a shortage of labor, there are a number of factors which must be in order before he should consider the use of this chemical.

Ethrel contains a plant hormone known as "ethylene" which triggers the natural ripening process. In order for this hormone to perform properly it must be applied to mature tobacco. Maturity is the period from which the plant has reached its full growing potential and has started to respire. Ethrel speeds up this respiration process. In order to determine whether or not a crop is mature, one should obtain a test kit and spray a select number of stalks. Test kits are available through agricultural chemical companies or through the Agricultural Extension Service.

Application of Ethrel may be by a directed spray or by an over-the-top application. For directed spray, apply two quarts of Ethrel plant regulator in 50-60 gallons of water per acre. Drop nozzles similar to those used in corn can be used in this type of application. For an over-the-top application mix two quarts with 40-60 gallons of water for each acre of tobacco to be treated. Apply as a fine mist using three nozzles so that all leaves are covered thoroughly. This is similar to the application pattern of systemic sucker control agents. Use a spray pressure of 50-60 pounds per square inch.

Treat only as much tobacco as you can harvest in one day. Tobacco treated with this chemical should usually be harvested no later than three days after treatment. Barn space must be available during this time.

Curing of tobacco treated with Ethrel must be watched very carefully. The curing time saved with this chemical is during the coloring process. Tobacco will either be started at a higher temperature or increased at a faster rate depending on how soon one harvests the tobacco after application. Curing of treated and untreated tobacco is not recommended in the same barn since treated tobacco may cure one-third faster than untreated.

Whatever path chosen in any management process, growers are encouraged to strive for that quality grade. A successful future for this highly important crop depends to a large extent on continued by growers to produce the best quality tobacco that money can buy anywhere in the world.

Tobacco that is stored on the farm may fall victim to several pests including the tobacco moth and the cigarette beetle, according to Mitch Smith, assistant agricultural extension agent.

The tobacco moth is the more damaging of the two, he noted, with damage beginning in May and continuing throughout the entire year. In addition to direct damage by feeding, tobacco moths may reduce the grade of tobacco to NOG due to large amounts of silk webbing, droppings and insects which build up in the tobacco.

Smith said several steps should be followed to prevent damage. First, keep the storage facility sanitary by eradicating old or damaged tobacco. The storage building should also be kept reasonably tight to prevent other damaging insects from entering. Periodic checking for the presence of live insects is essential to the maintenance of clean tobacco. Avoid storage near feed, grains or seed. If detection of the cigarette beetle or tobacco moth occurs, control may be necessary.

The tobacco moth may be controlled through the use of Dipel, said Smith, who recommended application of the insecticide by a fine spray. One treatment will last a year. Bactospeine may also be used, he added. Fumigation should be considered as a last resort.

The control of the cigarette beetle is difficult and usually unnecessary, said the farm agent. If control is required, professional fumigation should be considered cautiously.

Opine Merger Is Questionable

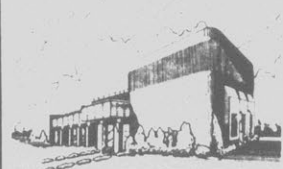

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Leaders of North Carolina's two major state employee associations say they're not sure whether rank-and-file members will approve a merger of the two groups.

"It will be a very close vote," said Ivan V. Hill of Greenville, president of the 28,000-member North Carolina State Employees Association.

"It is hard to predict the membership," said R. Mack Jarvis of Hudson, president of the 13,000-member North Carolina State Government Employees Association.

Both Raleigh-based employee groups will consider ending a 36-year rivalry when they hold separate annual conventions in Greensboro in September. Two-thirds of the voting delegates must approve the merger, which would create the State Employees of North Carolina Inc. to represent 41,000 state employees.

Mental Health Perspectives

Mental Health Perspectives by Scott Luce

There is no age group in American society which is immune to depression. However, the elderly, those 65 and older, are more likely to suffer depression than younger persons. Out of over 20 million persons in America over the age of 65, at least one million suffer from some form of depressive illness. It is likely that as the percentage of elderly Americans in our population grows, so will the number of those depressed.

The elderly are subject to many stresses caused by losses that accumulate as the individual grows older. Loss of loved ones, job, status, income, health, and mobility are a few of the things which can bring about the reaction called depression. Depressed elders may become hopeless as they look for help and find none. The elderly are a high-risk population for suicide.

In Pitt County elderly persons who are depressed can seek help through the Pitt County Mental Health Center. Specialized services, counseling, evaluation and assessment are available through the agency Geriatric Specialist and other trained staff. Services are low-cost and confidential. For more information call Scott Luce, Geriatric Specialist, at 752-7151.

Please submit questions to Community Services, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonburg Rd., Greenville, or call 752-0119.

Victim Thrown From A Bridge

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Two Marines have been booked for investigation in a case in which police say a man was flung over the side of a 10-foot bridge into a bush.

Police said Shannon Johnson, 19, and Drew Jobin, 21, both stationed at El Toro, are accused of trying to rob Frank Valdez, 32, of Santa Ana, on a pedestrian walkway on the San Diego Freeway.

"They never really took anything," said Police Lt. Tom Durham. "He fought back."

"Valdez landed in an oleander bush and rolled down the hill so he was not really hurt from the fall," Durham said. He was treated at a hospital for head and chest injuries and released.

Oppose Toehold By Citibank

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina banking officials are fighting plans by the nation's largest bank, Citibank, to open a small bank in Charlotte.

Federal law restricts bank holding companies from owning commercial banks outside their own state, but Citibank wants to open an industrial bank, which isn't covered by the law.

Citibank proposes to start with a modest capital of $3 million, but some members of the state financial community don't expect it to remain small.

Driver Slain In Catawba County

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A 24-year-old Lincoln County man was killed when he was shot while driving his pickup truck late Saturday evening, sheriff's deputies said.

Kristen "Casey" Gantt was shot about 11:20 p.m. while driving on N.C. 127 through the Catawba County community of Mountain View, about 2 miles south of Hickory, Catawba County Sheriff's Department Detective Jerry Pitts said.

Gantt was dead on arrival at Glenn R. Frye Hospital in Hickory.

Gantt, a truck driver who lived in the the community of Vale in Lincoln County, apparently was going home when he was shot, Pitts said.

Pitts said he knew of no motive for the shooting.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

SUGAR - TOOTH'S WORST ENEMY

Sugar is the major cause of tooth decay. Despite this, the average person consumes about 126 pounds of sugar a year. (That's enough to make about 10,000 chocolate chip cookies!) No wonder the average person has 10 decayed teeth before his or her 15th birthday.

How does sugar perform its dreadful deed? When you eat sugary snacks, the sugar reacts with bacteria in your mouth that form colonies on the teeth. These sticky colonies of bacteria (called plaque) convert sugar to acids and tooth decay results. Simply, sugar is the fuel for tooth decay.

Every time you snack on a sugary food, these acids are working for at least 20 minutes afterwards (so three sugar snacks or drinks a day create an hour's worth of acid attack). The longer a sugary food lasts in your mouth, the greater the risk of tooth decay. Sticky and chewy forms of snacks are more harmful because they tend to cling to your teeth longer.

The best decay prevention is to reduce your consumption of sugar combined with daily brushing and flossing to keep plaque from organizing.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Charged In Pitt Wreck

BETHEL — Sandy Cornelius Howell of Bethel was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a Sunday night wreck east of here that resulted in a gasoline tanker overturning. Highway Patrolman Robert Backus, who investigated the 9:45 p.m. accident, said the wreck occurred when Shelton Ward McNair of Plymouth, driving the tractor trailer with a gasoline tanker, attempted to pass an automobile operated by Howell and the car allegedly crossed the center line. Backus said that McNair tried to avoid the Howell vehicle but struck the car in the rear. He said the tanker overturned, spilling gasoline onto the highway and roadside area. Both of the vehicles were traveling east on U.S. 64 when the wreck occurred, he said.

The trooper, who said the tanker was carrying about 8,200 gallons of gasoline, reported that another tanker and two smaller trucks were dispatched to the scene and the remaining fuel was pumped into the other vehicles. Fire and rescue units from Bethel and Robersonville responded. Backus said McNair was transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment and was released. Howell was not injured, the patrolman said.

Backus said damage to the tractor trailer was estimated at $25,000, while the Howell vehicle sustained damages estimated at $1,800.

the Philippines from self-exile in the United States. One opposition figure charged that President Ferdinand E. Marcos must take "direct responsibility" for the Sunday slaying of his political rival at Manila airport.

Manila Police Chief Gen. Prospero Olivas said lab tests showed the man authorities said killed Aquino at Manila's airport Sunday had fired a gun. But he said the assailant, who was killed by soldiers immediately after Aquino was shot, still has not been identified.

The city was calm today as Aquino's body — still dressed in the bloody clothes in which he died — was placed in an open coffin in his home in suburban Quezon City. The face was disfigured, with bruises and an undressed bullet wound. The body was clothed in a white safari shirt and jeans covered with dried blood.

His mother, Aurora Aquino, had demanded the body be returned untouched to her by the military. "She wants the world to see what they did to her son," said Aquino's sister, Lupita Kashiwahara. "It's not beautiful, and we don't want any mortician to make him look beautiful."

Opposition Assemblyman Salvador H. Laurel said, "We question the mysterious circumstances in which the assassin was able to enter the restricted area." He spoke at a news conference at Aquino's home.

Laurel said if Marcos does not answer several questions about the assassination, it could be "the end of his regime."

He said the questions that needed answers were: Who killed Aquino, why was the killer there, who was the plane to fetch Aquino, and were any of the security men involved in the assassination?

Asked if he was holding Marcos responsible, Laurel said: "I personally feel that under this situation there should be command responsibility and he should take direct responsibility."

Others in the opposition accused even more strongly. "The government did it!" political figure Salvador Gonzales shouted to scores of mourners at Aquino's home.

Political leaders in various nations called for a thorough investigation of Aquino's slaying as he stepped off an airplane returning from exile, and the International Commission of Jurists in

Arrests Made After Robbery

Two men were arrested by Pitt County authorities Sunday morning on robbery charges after they allegedly stopped a vehicle in Greenville and forced the two occupants at knifepoint to drive them out into the county.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Paul Franklin West of 702 Pollock St., Kinston, and Linwood Earl White of Route 6, Kinston, told officers they had stopped for a red light at the intersection of First and Green Streets around 6:45 a.m. when a man came over and asked for a light for his cigarette. They said the man pulled a knife and a second subject jumped in the car, telling West to drive both of the men out of town.

The victims reported that they drove the men out to a dirt path off the Old River Road, where they were robbed of $45, Tyson said. He said West was beaten up in the incident. Following the robbery, Tyson said the victims told officers they drove the men to the water treatment plant off the River Road and the men got out of the car.

Deputies arrested Joey Roger Tripp, 21, of Route 5, Greenville, and James Ernest Willis, 19, of Bethel, around 10:30 a.m. Sunday at Tripp's residence on charges of robbery with dangerous weapons, according to the sheriff. Bond was set at $10,000 each.

Tyson said West was treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for injuries received in the incident and was released.

Investigation is continuing, Tyson said.

"I have no quarrel with criticism or with efforts to impel ourselves to strive harder. It is only non-constructive, attention-getting criticism that I regret," Howell said.

Howell said the university is "on the right track" in dealing with accrediting problems in its many teacher education programs, the main criticism of which related to administrative organization for centralized coordination of the programs.

Reviewing the work that has been done on this and other aspects, including faculty participation, Howell said "I believe we turned a problem into an accomplishment."

In the area of scholarship, he said faculty production of books and monographs increased by 22 percent, articles and chapters published increased by 7 percent; reviews increased by 41 percent and scholarly papers presented rose by 17 percent.

Honeycutt Flashes Brilliance In Debut

By The Associated Press

Rick Honeycutt had never pitched in the National League and hadn't been at bat since college. So, naturally, he felt right at home throwing and swinging for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Honeycutt was 14-8 with Texas before being dealt to the Dodgers on Friday. He made his LA debut Sunday in a 6-0 victory over Philadelphia, scattering four hits over seven innings before leaving with a slight cut on the left middle finger. Honeycutt struck out a season-high seven and retired the final 11 batters he faced.

He also singled in his first major-league at-bat and brought home a run with a squeeze bunt as the Dodgers registered their ninth victory without a loss this season over Philadelphia. Los Angeles has outscored the Phillies 34-7 in the nine games and shut them out five times.

"This ranks way up there in my career. I know one game doesn't make you but you have to start somewhere," said Honeycutt.

"I've always been in a situation before where we've been out of it by now. But here, when you're definitely in a pennant race, these guys come to play every day. It tends to make you stronger."

Honeycutt, who can become a free agent at the end of the season, was not disturbed about switching leagues, though he was anxious to get started as a Dodger.

"I had a lot of butterflies. I was nervous," he admitted. "I tossed and turned a little last night."

"If I get back in the groove, I feel I'll do better here. I feel it's to my advantage. There's a lower strike zone and you're facing the pitcher every third inning or so."

"I'm not going to blow people away. That's one of my philosophies I changed this year. I want the opposing hitter to hit my pitch."

Honeycutt didn't fare badly hitting enemy pitches either.

"He threw it, I swung at it," he said of his single off Phillies starter Kevin Gross. "I'm going to make contact most of the time. In college (University of Tennessee), I was an All-American first baseman."

Mike Marshall slammed a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

Braves 11, Cubs 9

While the East leader can't find an offense, the West pacesetters from Atlanta rediscovered theirs in Wrigley Field. The Braves had lost four in a row, scoring only six runs, but got 25 in their last three victories against the Cubs. Dale Murphy had a two-run single in a six-run first inning, homered in the fourth after the Cubs had climbed within a run, and singled to cap a two-run seventh.

Leon Durham, Mel Hall, Jody Davis and Thad Bosley homered for Chicago.

"We really needed a lot of runs because this was one of those days at Wrigley Field," said Murphy in reference to a 17 mph wind blowing out. "Nothing is safe in this park with the wind blowing out."

Cardinals 5, Astros 2

Host St. Louis won its fifth in a row as rookie Danny Cox outpitched Nolan Ryan for his first major-league victory. St. Louis, which had been having trouble on the mound, held Houston to six runs in a four-game sweep of the Astros. George Hendrick had four hits and knocked in two runs.

"You couldn't tell they were bad from what they did against us," Astros Manager Bob Lillis said of the Cards' pitchers. "Against us, they've been world-beaters all year."

Cox gave credit to Chase Riddle, his coach at Troy (Ala.) State and the same man who signed Steve Carlton to his first pro contract in 1963.

"He put a lot into my head about pitching," said

Cox. "Mixing speeds, getting the hitters' timing off; that was the main thing. I've always been able to throw the ball hard."

Reds 6, Pirates 4

The visiting Reds rallied for three eighth-inning runs with the help of a two-run error by second baseman Johnny Ray.

"I thought I had a play on the ball, but I knew it would be close," Ray said after misplaying the high hopper by Duane Walker. "It would have been a bang-bang play."

Mets 4, Giants 3

George Foster homered for the third straight game and Mike Torrez fired a five-hitter before needing ninth-inning relief help from Jesse Orosco as the Mets swept a three-game series with the Giants. Foster's ninth-inning homer tied the game Friday and he belted a grand slam Saturday.

By winning all three games, the Mets posted their first series sweep over the Giants since 1977 and their first sweep at Candlestick Park since May 1-3, 1972.

"We've played 500 ball (21-21) since the All-Star break and we're displaying some good, young talent out there," Foster said. "Something like this sweep has to be a confidence-builder."

Expos 3-2, Padres 0-5

At San Diego, Charlie Lea extended his personal winning streak to four games with a nine-hitter in the first game. The shutout was the third of the year for Lea and his sixth complete game.

In the nightcap, Dave Gwosdz slammed his first major-league homer, a three-run shot, to lift San Diego to victory.

Emory Displeased With Scrimmage

The Pirates of East Carolina University played their first intrasquad scrimmage Sunday, but head coach Ed Emory didn't like what he saw from most of his top players.

"I was most displeased overall," said Emory. "We made too many mental mistakes and too many penalties. We played our ones and twos versus all the scouts, and the level of play of the ones and twos dropped to the level of the competition — which a good football team cannot do."

"I was really disappointed with the level of play of our young kids. Our twos have got to improve."

"My major concern is the punting game with John Williams out and Jeff Bolch out with a back sprain," Emory said.

The Pirates lost Williams, the second team quarterback and first team punter, with an ankle injury late last week when he was stepped on in practice. Bolch, a junior punter, will be out with recurring back problems.

Emory said the play of the three young quarterbacks — freshmen Ron Jones and Darrell Speed and junior transfer Tony Kyser — was improved.

Defensive tackle Steve Hamilton went down on first play with Achilles tendon strain, while tight end Norwood Vann suffered a dislocated finger. Neither player is expected to be out of practice for an extended period.

"Maury Banks filled in well for Hamilton," Emory said. "(Hal) Stephens played well at the other tackle, and Gerry Rogers did some good things at nose guard."

"Clint Harris and Vernard Wynn did much better at safety. Randy Bost and Rally Caparas looked pretty good yesterday."

The Pirates open the 1983 season at Florida State September 3.

Martina Downs Evert, Again

TORONTO (AP) — Just before she started her defense of the Player's Challenge women's tennis title Sunday, Martina Navratilova was reminded that she has never won the United States Open.

Navratilova, the top seed here, shook her head at the public address announcer's comment and proceeded to capture her 11th singles championship and 23rd consecutive match of 1983 with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-1 win over fellow American Chris Evert Lloyd, the second seed.

The prominent question was not "How did she do it?" but "How will she do it, starting Aug. 29?" at the U.S. Open.

Ironically, Lloyd, who won her first set off Navratilova in four meetings this year, seemed to have gained the most from their 53rd career confrontation, which Lloyd still leads 30-23.

"It's a great match for me to play going into the U.S.

Open since I'm more confident now that I know she's vulnerable," said Lloyd, who has won that event six times. "It was a good result after being killed by her the last three times (most recently in Manhattan Beach, Calif., last week)."

"With her kind of game, she can be mediocre on some days. If I can keep pressure on her and work on some things this coming week, I can win."

"I doubt that Martina's going to choke (at the U.S. Open). You're going to have to beat her. She was beatable today. But I didn't play my best tennis."

Navratilova was tested during the 1983 Canadian Open, being forced to three sets not only by Lloyd but by West German Eva Pfaff in the third round after only being extended three times prior to the event this year. But she remains confident about her chances in Flushing Meadows, N.Y. later this month.

"I know I'm not sick like the last time," said Navratilova, who said she was ill when she lost in the quarter-finals last year to her usual doubles partner, Pam Shriver. "I don't want to be too confident and I don't want to be too blasé, but everything feels good this time — knock on wood."

While it came down to a third set Sunday, Navratilova left no doubt who was the champion. Responding to Lloyd's claim Saturday that she was not as mentally tough as her opponent, Navratilova tightened her game while Lloyd crumbled.

"She may be mentally stronger at this point," conceded Lloyd. "I think, probably, Martina got a little tougher in the third set."

"I had a letdown since the first couple of games went so quick. She produced the good shots when she needed to."

Although it was a much anticipated matchup (next to Carling Bassett of Toronto making the final — instead of being knocked out in the first round by Yugoslavian Mima Jausovec), Lloyd admitted that she and Navratilova were probably not at their best

Strange Hangs On For Title At Hartford Open

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — It was a bold Curtis Strange who twice charged to the top of a pack of golfers vying for the lead in the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

But it was a conservative Curtis Strange who walked to the 18th tee in the final round of the tournament Sunday clutching a two-stroke lead over Jack Renner, the man he had overtaken for the lead.

Strange's second shot on the par-4 hole came to rest on the fringe of the putting surface about 35 feet from the cup. On the next shot he tried only to push the ball to within putting distance.

The ball stopped about five feet from the pin and Strange missed the short putt. It was the second time in two days he bogeyed the hole.

But by then it didn't matter.

Strange already had won the $54,000 first prize. Renner, his playing partner, parred the hole and finished a stroke behind.

"I played a very conservative chip and a very conservative putt," said the 28-year-old Strange, who won his first PGA tournament in three years. He didn't mention that he teed off on the 424-yard final hole with a one-iron.

"With a two-stroke lead, you just don't want to make the big mistake," said the six-year veteran, who posted a closing 68.

Renner made his mistake a hole earlier. Down two strokes heading into the par-3 17th hole, he missed a four-foot putt for a bogey. Had he made the putt, Renner may have forced a playoff for the championship. Strange would not have had the breathing room to play the 18th as conservatively as he did. Instead, Renner, with a final round 71, wound up tied with Jay Haas for second place at 269.

Strange's 16-under 268 was the highest winning score at the 6,579-yard Wethersfield Country Club course since 1974. In last year's GHO, Tim Norris broke three course records en route to a 25-under 259.

Renner and Haas, who came out of 13th place with a 6-under-par 65, each won $26,400. Don Pooley's 270 was good for fourth place and $14,000.

Until Sunday, Strange had run up a three-year string of 29 PGA tournaments in which he placed in the top-10 without winning.

His charge began Friday morning when he birdied five of his first nine holes en route to a 9-under-par 62. He had started the day at 2-under, tied with 24 others five strokes off the lead.

The first-day leaders — Fred Couples, Victor Regalado, Payne Stewart and DeWitt Weaver — folded in later rounds.

Strange entered the third round with a one-stroke lead over Tom Kite, and while he turned in a 69, Renner shot a 7-under 64 to take the lead. Strange fell to third place.

He started the final round strong by dropping a 25-foot putt on the first hole. And, when Renner bogeyed the par-5 sixth hole, Strange caught him at 15-under-par.

On the seventh hole, Strange birdied while Renner bogeyed again and Strange went ahead by one stroke.

Yarborough Wins Race; Waltrip Gains Ground

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) —

Cale Yarborough took the checkered flag in the Champion Spark Plug 400, but the real race — the quest for the 1983 Grand National driving championship — is just heating up.

As fate would have it, however, Yarborough — who drove his Hardee's-sponsored Chevrolet to an easy victory over Darrell Waltrip's Chevy on Sunday at Michigan International Speedway — has no chance of winning the Grand National title and, frankly, doesn't care.

"To win the championship, you have to be 100 percent a race driver," Yarborough said after pocketing the $26,100 first-prize check. "I don't want to devote that kind of time to racing. I only run 16 races a year, now.

"I have four or five other businesses, and I'm spending a lot more time with my family. My kids know who I am now."

Yarborough, 43, decided two years ago to cut back on his schedule and gave up his ride in Junior Johnson's car. Waltrip took over that seat and immediately won his first season title.

The three-time Winston Cup champion, who was slowed in the last two turns by traffic, still beat Waltrip across the finish line by .86 seconds. Bill Elliott was a distant third, followed by Terry Labonte and Tim Richmond.

The two men who do covet the driving championship are Waltrip and his arch-rival, Bobby Allison.

Allison went into Sunday's NASCAR race leading Waltrip by 170 points. Last year, Waltrip trailed Allison by 341 points halfway through the 30-race season and won seven times in the home stretch while finishing second five times to claim the title.

What made it so hard for Allison to take was that he let Waltrip come from even further back to nip him in 1981.

Allison never has won the Grand National championship.

On Sunday, Allison's car blew an engine and had to drop out of the race on lap No. 138. It was only the second time this season that Allison's Buick had failed to finish a race, but the veteran driver from Hueytown, Ala., was clearly upset by it.

"You can't imagine how disappointed I am right now," Allison said after cooling down a few minutes in the privacy of his motor home. "It's really, really hard to talk."

Allison then waved off reporters and walked away.

Staton, Hines Win GTA Singles Titles

Nelson Staton downed Bobby Short and Wandria Hines defeated Belinda Haselrig for the men's and women's championships of the Greenville Tennis Association annual members only tournament this weekend at the River Birch Tennis Center.

Staton teamed with Jim Akers to win the men's doubles title in three sets. The mixed doubles title was to be decided today at 5:30.

CLub trophies will be presented during the awards banquet in November.

Women's Final

Respass Waiting For Roanoke Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROBERTSONVILLE —
Roanoke High School football coach Nolan Respass is an admitted pessimist. "They've got to prove it to me first," he said when evaluating his 1983 gridiron prospects.

Last year's Redskin team went 4-6 overall and 3-5 in the Northeastern Conference, while having one of the state's top collegiate candidates in lineman Donnie Wallace, and another who was less publicized but almost as good in Bernie Williford.

"In this conference, 4-6 is not too bad," Respass said. "It's a tough league. Last year, we had some outstanding linemen and no backs. This year it's just the opposite. We have some pretty good backs, but no linemen."

And how does Respass evaluate this year's team: in typical pessimistic terms. "We're bad. We lack experience. We lack size. And I don't know if we have adequate speed or not. Like I say, they've got to prove it to me."

Looking immediately to the bright side, however, Respass pointed out that the Redskins have 36 or 37 players out for the varsity — more than at any other time in the past. "We've got a lot of sophomores out and we're probably going to play a lot of them."

The line play, in addition to being inexperienced, will be handicapped early by having to learn a new system. "We're going to a trapping type of offense, and I love it, but it's going to be tough. If our linemen play decent then we can play and be competitive — I didn't say win."

"You know too that I hate to throw the ball, but if (quarterback) Stacey Wallace comes through, then we'll throw the heck out of it. He's a good passer. In fact, I've never had the opportunity to work with three quarterbacks, but we have three this year, along with three fullbacks and six halfbacks. It's a pleasure to have this situation."

Respass said that the biggest question mark is on defense. "I feel good about our secondary and linebackers, but our line in small and inexperienced. And in this league, they pound you and pound you and humiliate you."

In the offensive line, Respass looks to Charles James and Sammy Respass to battle for the center position. "If both of them work out, one of them will probably play at another spot," the coach said. Battling at guard are Greg Caspar, Jeffrey Roberson and Eddie Raynard. Working at tackle are Ronnie Anderson and Braxton Peterson, both lacking in varsity experience.

The ends, who will sometimes both line up at tight end, and at other times, both will split out, are Garrett Baker ("a fine player") and Ricky Taylor ("another good one"). Backing them up are James Walters and Richard Wilson.

Wallace is currently slated to start at quarterback, but Chris Roberson could come through and replace him. Both of them are juniors, while Tyrone Higgs, a senior, is also battling for the slot.

Donny Glover, described as "a ball of fire," by Respass; Steve Roberson ("we expect big things of him") and Preston Howell ("a sophomore who will play somewhere, maybe in the line") are the candidates for fullback.

Other halfback candidates include Roger Jackson, Dwayne Credle, Terry Hines and Willie Wilkins.

On defense, a lot of the same names appear. "We're going to have a lot of people going both ways," Respass said.

The down linemen will include James, Peterson, Morning and Casper. At the outside linebackers, candidates include Raynard, Steve Roberson, Howell and Huggins, while Chris Roberson, Glover, Jeffrey Roberson and Taylor are on the inside.

Garrett Baker and Wallace will see action at safety, with Walters, Jackson, Wilkins and Hines at the halfback slots.

"Our kicking game should be one of our strong points," Respass said. "We have an import from El Salvador, Jorge Martinez, but he's never had 11 people running at him before. If he can overcome that, I think we'll have a good situation. He doesn't miss on PAT's and is pretty accurate from 30 yards out on field goals."

Casper and Jeffrey Roberson will handle the punting duties.

Like most others, Respass is looking to Tarboro and Bertie to be the class on the conference, and he also puts Washington into that select group. "After that, it's a mad scramble," he said. "Anyone can beat you on a given night."

"I just hope that we'll be in the middle of the pack somewhere. If we can finish 500, I'll be tickled to death," the eternal pessimist said.

Orioles Slide In Palmer's Return

By The Associated Press
Jim Palmer seemed to be throwing all right, but he wasn't the old Jim Palmer. If you're looking for the old Jim Palmer, try the new Moose Haas.

Palmer, the 37-year-old Baltimore right-hander who has won 265 major-league games, returned from his latest visit to the disabled list and allowed four runs and 10 hits — including solo homers by Leon Roberts and Hal McRae — in 6 1-3 innings Sunday as the Orioles lost to the Kansas City Royals 8-3.

Palmer was gone when the game ended, but Manager Joe Altobelli said: "I don't think he was happy with it, but the big thing is how he comes out of it physically. I'm encouraged if he comes out of this without any pain or strain on his arm. If everything is OK, he'll probably work again in five or six days."

Meanwhile, Haas scattered five hits in six innings to tie a club record with his eighth consecutive victory as the Milwaukee Brewers downed the Oakland A's 7-1 and pulled within one percentage point of first-place Baltimore in the American League East.

"What Moose is doing is no accident," said catcher Ted Simmons. "I don't want to talk about the Cy Young Award, but right now it would take Dave Righetti or Dave Stieb for me to even consider trading him."

Besides his sixth-inning homer, McRae drove in three other runs with a double in the first inning and a two-run single off Tim Lincecum in the ninth as the Royals snapped Baltimore's four-game winning streak.

"He (Palmer) seemed to be throwing all right," McRae said. "He got the ball out over the plate on the homer. I don't know what he was trying to do, but most of those you hit out are usually over the plate."

U.L. Washington singled on the first pitch by Palmer, who was making his first major-league appearance in eight weeks after being sidelined since July 3 with tendinitis in his right shoulder, although he pitched twice in the minors under a rehabilitation program. Washington scored on McRae's double.

Winner Bud Black allowed seven hits and two runs in 7 1-3 innings, including a homer by Gary Roenick. Royals relief ace Dan Quisenberry notched his 34th save despite a two-run homer by Eddie Murray in the eighth.

"I just stink," said Quisenberry, who blew a two-run ninth-inning lead Friday night. "I'm not making major league pitches. I've thrown more high pitches this weekend than I have in a month."

Brewers 7, A's 1

Cecil Cooper, the major-league RBI leader with 105 RBIs, drove in four with a pair of singles to back the seven-hit pitching of Haas — who hasn't lost since June 10 — and Jim Slaton. Haas' club record of 28 consecutive scoreless innings ended in the third on Mike Davis' RBI single, but Cooper's first two-run single put the Brewers ahead in their half of the third, ending Chris Codiroli's string of 24 scoreless innings. Cooper singled two more runs across in the fifth.

"Moose always had the hard stuff," Simmons said. "When you have a good fastball and a hard slider and can throw strikes, you're always good for five or six innings. But after that, unless you have something else, you're going to get beat. Now Moose is throwing off-speed stuff for strikes and he can consistently get the left-hander out on the outside corner."

Twins 4, Tigers 3

Ken Schrom and Ron Davis combined on a six-hitter for Minnesota. Schrom, 12-4, owns 23 percent of the Twins' 53 victories. Gary Ward's single, Kent Hrbek's triple and Gary Gaetti's sacrifice fly gave the Twins a 3-2 lead in the fifth and they scored what proved to be the winning run in the seventh on Randy Bush's bases-loaded grounder.

Blue Jays 7, Red Sox 3

Cliff Johnson hit a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning, one of six Toronto doubles, and pinch runner Willie Upshaw scored on Jesse Barfield's single. Toronto scored twice in the ninth on RBI singles by Lloyd Moseby and Rance Mulliniks. Jim Gott scattered seven hits, including Jim Rice's 27th homer, tying him with teammate Tony Armas for the AL lead.

Yankees 2, Angels 1

Ken Griffey's two-run single following a two-out, two-base error by Angels second baseman Bobby Grich in the ninth inning lifted the Yankees behind the four-hit pitching of Dave Righetti and Rich Gossage. Geoff Zahn was staked to a 1-0 lead in the ninth inning on Daryl Scomiers' triple and Doug DeCinces' single. But he walked Roy Smalley to start the bottom of the ninth and Willie Randolph's two-out bouncer skidded past Grich, setting the stage for Griffey.

White Sox 3, Rangers 1

Carlton Fisk hit a two-run homer and Floyd Bannister allowed five hits and struck out nine in 6 2-3 innings for his ninth consecutive victory as the White Sox remained eight games ahead of Kansas City in the AL West. Fisk's homer in the fifth inning gave the White Sox a 2-1 lead.

Mariners 7, Indians 2

Mike Jeffcoat, making his major-league debut, blanked Seattle on two singles over the first six innings. But the Mariners scored five times against Jeffcoat, Dan Spillner and Tom Brennan in the seventh on singles by Al Cowens, Steve Henderson, Pat Putnam, Ricky Nelson and Rick Sweet, plus Spike Owen's RBI grounder and a single by Ron Roenicke.

Wilander Not Threat In Open

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Despite his impressive victory in the $375,000 Association of Tennis Professionals Championship, Mats Wilander of Sweden doesn't view himself as a threat in the U.S. Open, which begins next week.

"I'd be more surprised if I win it than if I lose in the first round," Wilander, who celebrates his 19th birthday today, said after sweeping to the ATP title with consecutive upsets of second-ranked Ivan Lendl and top-ranked John McEnroe.

"I don't expect to win the Open, even after this. But if John or Ivan have an off-day, I can beat them — even on this surface."

Wilander won the ATP title, worth $48,000, by upsetting McEnroe, 6-4, 6-3 Sunday. He upset Lendl 6-0, 6-3 in Saturday's semifinals.

"Now I know I can beat McEnroe and Lendl if I play good, and they don't play on top," Wilander said. "I still know I can lose to these players — I can lose tomorrow — but I know I can beat them."

"And I know now I can play on this surface."

The ATP Championship was the first hard-court victory for Wilander, who beat McEnroe earlier this year in the quarterfinals of the French

Open, which is played on clay.

"I didn't think I had a chance to win, not after last week (at Montreal) when I lost in the first round," said Wilander, who is ranked sixth in the ATP computer rankings and was seeded fourth in this tournament.

McEnroe said he was surprised by Wilander's newly acquired proficiency on the Decoturf II surface, which also is used at the U.S. Open in New York.

"That's the best I've seen him play on this type of court," McEnroe said. "If this is an indication of things to come, he's going to be tough."

Wilander served an ace to win the first point of Sunday's championship match, and repeatedly hit baseline passing shots and lobs for winners as McEnroe went to the net.

McEnroe broke Wilander's serve in the fifth game to take a 3-2 lead. But Wilander broke McEnroe in the eighth game to get back on serve, then broke him again in the 10th game to win the set.

Each player held serve through seven games in the second set until Wilander broke McEnroe to take a 5-3 lead and then held his own serve to end the 90-minute match, which ended in 96-degree heat at the Jack Nicklaus

Sports Center near Cincinnati.

McEnroe pocketed $24,000 as runner-up.

Victor Amaya of Louisville, Ky., and Tim Gullikson of Boca West Fla., defeated Carlos Kirmayr and Cassio Motta, both of Sao Paulo, Brazil, 6-4, 6-3 in the doubles final. Amaya and Gullikson split $18,000 first-place money, and the Brazilian team shared $9,000 for second place.

Like Wilander, Martina Navratilova is reserved going into the U.S. Open.

"I don't want to be too confident and I don't want to be too blasé, but everything feels good this time," said Navratilova, who defended her title Sunday in the Player's Challenge tournament at Toronto with a 6-4, 4-6, 6-1 triumph over Chris Evert Lloyd.

The victory was the 11th singles championship and 23rd straight match victory of the year for the top-seeded Navratilova, who still trails Lloyd 30-23 in overall confrontations.

"It's a great match to play going into the U.S. Open since I'm more comfortable now that I know she's vulnerable," Lloyd said of Navratilova, who lost her first set to Lloyd in their last four meetings. It was only the fifth time this year that Navratilova had been pressed to three sets.

Ilie Nastase may still be able to play in the U.S. Open despite a 42-day suspension from tournament play following a dispute with a line judge at the Volvo Grand Prix Head Classic in Stowe, Vt. But only if he appeals his suspension and $8,500 fine to the Men's International Professional Tennis Council. The perennial "bad boy" of tennis could continue to play in other Volvo Grand Prix and Davis Cup matches as long as the appeal is pending.

SEC Takes Initiative In Stopping Drug Abuse

By The Associated Press
Coaches and athletic directors around the league say the Southeastern Conference has seized the initiative in stopping drug abuse by athletes before the festering cancer spreads.

At Auburn University, members of the football team picked to win this year's SEC title had to have blood and urine tests for drugs when they returned to the campus Saturday, said Coach Pat Dye.

Other schools also may require some form of testing after hearing from a National Football League specialist in drug rehabilitation, The Times-Picayune of New Orleans reported Sunday.

The SEC doesn't have a league policy on drug testing, leaving each member school to make its own policy.

Dye wrote to players and their parents beforehand to let them know about the testing. He said the tests were part of the required medical checkups for players.

He said he knew of no widespread drug problem at Auburn.

"But even if you've got one kid, you've got a problem," he said.

"If I had to guess, I'd say Auburn has the least problem of anybody in the SEC because of its setting and environment. But I'm not naive enough to think some youngsters haven't experimented with drugs," he said.

"We will test the players, and I think you'll find most teams will be doing the same thing."

At Louisiana State University, basketball coach Dale Brown said he also favored testing players for drugs. However, he said he would not until he gets together with football coach Jerry Stovall, other LSU coaches and Athletic Director Bob Brodhead to put together a departmental policy.

Sources familiar with the Georgia basketball program told The Times-Picayune that urinalyses of basketball players is being considered.

Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said he would test players if the team doctor or trainer recommends it. And Florida AD Bill Carr said he's conducting an investigation to see how big that problem might be at the University of Florida.

"It is a very serious problem in college athletics, and it isn't a new problem," said Georgia coach Vince Dooley, whose team has won three SEC championships in a row.

Dye said Auburn's test results would not be disclosed.

"If we find a problem, it's a private matter between me and the player," he said.

"I would not kick him off the team. We'd try to correct it the best way we know how. We will try to help."

"But if his involvement in drugs continues and is detrimental to our football team, we'll deal with it another way."

The SEC's momentum toward drug testing began three weeks ago when Alabama coach Ray Perkins, a former NFL head coach, arranged for the NFL's head of drug rehabilitation —

Charles Jackson — to meet with SEC coaches and administrators in Atlanta.

Jackson wouldn't comment on details of his report to the SEC, but said, "If the colleges become more active at their level, we may not have so many problems in the NFL later on."

"He said there's a problem at all schools in the country and, believe me, you gentlemen have that problem in the SEC as well," said SEC official Gordon Pettus.

Sources familiar with the report said athletes were using drugs at all 10 SEC schools, the newspaper said, with marijuana, cocaine and other drugs identified as being used by college athletes.

Room For Improving A Good News TV Effort

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There is promise in any show called "Good News" — who's NOT looking for some of that? — but the people at Turner Broadcasting have a way to go if they intend to fulfill the vow.

The pilot for a series starting tonight on the 203 outlets served by Turner's SuperStation WTBS comes across as a rather indecisive attempt to package positive thinking — seldom genuinely amusing, often blatantly commercial.

In fairness, the final form of "Good News" is sure to differ in some, if not many, respects from the version of the show available for preview.

Literature on the series says "Good News" "covers the positive, healthy and creative side of human events..." and there's nothing deceptive about that.

But it's not clear — again, from the pilot — whether the producers intend the program to be funny, or merely life-affirming. Presumably, the observation that Koo Stark, the British porn star once friendly with Prince Andrew, can't find a job is supposed to be hilarious. It seems, instead, rather tasteless.

There are, indeed, touches of humor in "Good News," most memorably in the graphically displayed titles for individual segments: "Fright Guard" for a report on an aerosol spray designed to allay kids' nighttime fears, "The Incredible Hull" for a story on a Norwegian shipbuilder, "Martial Arts and Crafts" for a story on the Japanese tradition of bushido.

A seemingly pleasant, though perhaps unduly cheerful, young woman named Liz Wickersham is hostess — anchor? — for "Good News." She appears more than happy to introduce stories on infant massage, a grade-school trial of Goldilocks for breaking and entering, and some "mini-moguls" who borrowed $50 to publish a 30-page booklet on insects.

If all of that is news, and it may be, no doubt there is enough around to sustain a half-hour TV show, even the weeknightly series that Turner Broadcasting envisions. So why a story on stepped-up production on the Jaguar assembly line? Or a piece on Chicago's Midland Hotel, the first to equip its rooms with personal computers?

Those are the kinds of things businesses usually pay for.

And here's another problem: "Good News" implies news — and that news is bad, or at least not good — and there can be a danger in that.

Some may recall President Reagan's suggestion in March that the television networks devote more time to "good news." That ruffled some feathers.

"I don't think it's fair," Howard Stringer, executive producer of the "CBS Evening News" said at the time. "We don't go out looking for bad news." Said Reuben Frank, president of NBC News, "We'll cover the good news when it's news."

"Good News" is, quite clearly, entertainment, possibly even good entertainment.

Is there a chance, nonetheless, that some viewers might wonder why all TV news, or even some TV news, isn't like "Good News"?

Purvey Brand Of Rural Humor

HODGENVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The heat got you down? Then it's time to sit in the shade and shoot the breeze with Homer Trumbo.

It's so dry, he'll say, "the other day I saw a catfish come to the well to drink."

He gives a soft, rolling laugh.

"Yeah, the other day I went down to the creek and I saw minnows kicking up dust."

He pronounces it "crick" and "menners."

"You know, I got six rows of popcorn, and it got so hot that popcorn started a-poppin' out in the field. And my old mule was standing underneath a tree, and he saw that popcorn poppin', and he thought it was a snowstorm and froze to death!"

Satisfied now that his listener is knee-slapping, Trumbo winks and says, "It's getting to be a good business, you know it? Everybody wants to hear a good lie."

Trumbo, 46, is Hodgenville's P.T. Barnum. Will Rogers and Slim Pickens rolled into one, a bear of a man sporting a beard and bib overalls.

He's also a good reason to go to the upcoming Casey County Apple Festival or Larue County's Lincoln Day. Homer and his brothers, George of Hodgenville and Ralph (better known as "Mac") of Roanoke, are perennial favorites.

Railsplitting, naturally, is a big part of their show, since the Trumbos are from Abraham Lincoln's birthplace. Last year, Mac took first place in a championship railsplitting contest in Lincoln, Ill.

Mac also usually acts as master of ceremonies, bantering with the audience and giving a running monologue on the state of marriage, food and Hoosiers.

"You know what's dumber than two Kentuckians trying to build a house under water?" he asks. "Two Hoosiers trying to set it on fire."

"You know what they call a good-looking woman in Indiana? A tourist!"

Mac often lifts "It's so dry" jokes from Homer's repertoire.

One of them goes, it's so dry "the other day I saw two trees fightin' over a dog."

"What people like more than anything in the world is

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠863 ♥J8 ♦AKQ82 ♣Q65
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 4 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A. — If you elected to double four hearts, you are in good company — a number of Souths elected to do so in the World Open Pairs Championship, only to find that the contract was unbeatable. Those who bid four spades achieved an excellent result — down one with game cold in the other direction.

Q.2 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ8 ♥AQ842 ♦AQ1082
Partner opens the bidding with three diamonds. What action do you take?
A. — Partner has promised six tricks with diamonds as trumps. You can expect to bring him three or four tricks, but your diamond void might mean that partner has to lose more trump tricks than he thought. We salute you if you curbed your bidding instincts and chose to pass.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK108 ♥A7 ♦8754 ♣764
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A. — You might have a slam, but investigation could prove awkward if you were to make any raise in diamonds, even a jump. It is more convenient to make an advance cue-bid of the ace of hearts now, since you can raise diamonds at your next turn. Bid three hearts.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠875 ♥KJ108753 ♦954
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A. — We agree that three diamonds will probably play better than two hearts. However, unless you are playing a system that allows partner to pass such action, you cannot afford to bid — partner will bid again and you are in bigger trouble. Pass and wait to see what happens. If partner gets doubled, you can then run if you see fit.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q983 ♥J732 ♦Q753 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A. — Although you are a point short of the requirement for a response, you dislike partner's suit so much and are so prepared to play in any other spot that we would hazard a response of one diamond. Naturally, you intend passing at your next turn unless partner makes a forcing rebid.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♥Q983 ♦J73 ♣Q7632
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A. — There is a temptation to keep the bidding open with one trump in the hope that partner can introduce a second suit, as in Question 4. However, partner might take some violent action in spades or even pass one no trump, neither of which would appeal to you. Pass.

Al Hirt Likes Memphis Scene

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jazz trumpeter Al Hirt, who closed his famous Bourbon Street club in New Orleans' French Quarter in May, is reported ready to blow up a storm in a new restaurant and club called "Cooper's Deli and Al Hirt Presents."

Club owner Joe Cooper says he and the 60-year-old Hirt shook hands to seal the deal Sunday and that lawyers will work out the details.

"Al will play a minimum of six weeks in Memphis, spread out through the year," said Cooper. "And he also is going to assist me in bringing other famous entertainers into the club."

Negotiations are under way for a building on historic Beale Street, which is billed as the birthplace of blues music, Cooper said. Entertainers Charlie Rich and Lou Rawls already have said they plan to open clubs in the vicinity.

to see people being themselves," Homer says.

In his case, it's just natural to tell tall tales. "Homer's dog don't even come when Homer calls," brother George says.

"They all know I'm a liar, but they still believe me," Homer says. "I can tell a lie and they'll respect me. But you take someone honest and let them tell a lie, and people get mad."

"Some people drag a lie out too long. You hear some people tell a lie and it will nearly kill you to listen to it. People don't like to hear a long lie. They're just not gonna listen to it. It's just like anything else: You don't like to see a horse run slow."

Homer says he flirted briefly with politics, serving one term as magistrate in Larue County. Frankly, he says, he couldn't step out the door without people cornering him, asking him to get their road fixed or second-guessing his votes.

"After I got off Fiscal Court, I had to hire somebody to call me two or three times a night and cuss me out just so I could get to sleep," he adds.

Finds Risks In A Double Role

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Singer-actress Constance Towers, wife of John Gavin, the U.S. ambassador to Mexico, finds herself playing a double role that sometimes has its hazards.

At least twice a month she flies to Los Angeles to put in long days before the camera as the matriarch Clarissa McCandless in the CBS daytime soap "Capitol."

After one flight back to Mexico City, the 52-year-old actress says in the current People magazine, she had to dress in an airport ladies' room for a diplomatic reception — and "got stuck in a stall."

"She also said she plays only 'good person' roles. 'I feel a deep responsibility for my husband's position,' she said, 'and I simply could not play a manipulative, evil person and wind up having the people of Mexico see the ambassador's wife being someone they couldn't believe in.'"

Saturday's Cryptoquip — DEFT SCHOLARS AT THE FARMYARD SCHOOL ARE LEARNING PIG LATIN.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals N.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Caught After 100 mph. Chase

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A robbery suspect led Durham Public Safety Officers on a 100 mph chase Sunday night before being captured after his car crashed into a curb, authorities said.

Detective David Rigsbee of the Public Safety Department said the suspect was taken to Duke Medical Center Hospital for treatment of a cut on his head. Rigsbee said charges were pending.

The robbery occurred about 6 p.m. at Revco Drugs, Lt. J.A. Knight said. Police declined to release the amount of money taken.

Officers said the suspect got into a car parked behind the store. When Officer Mike Byers spotted the suspect and turned on his light and siren, the car sped up to more than 100 mph.

The ensuing chase involved over a dozen officers.

A second suspect escaped in the car escaped, authorities said.

FOCUS

Major Minority

Hispanic Americans are the fastest-growing minority group in the U.S. The largest share of the nation's estimated 16 million Hispanics come from Mexico. One out of every five people in Texas is Mexican. More than one million Puerto Ricans now live in New York City — more than in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the President of Mexico?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Yuri Andropov heads the Soviet Union's Communist Party.

Charged With Fatal Stabbing

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — A 43-year-old woman has been charged with murder in the stabbing death of her husband early Sunday morning in Franklin County, sheriff's deputies said.

Alice Perry is being held without bond in the Franklin County jail until a scheduled first appearance hearing Monday, county sheriff's department officials said.

Mrs. Perry is charged with stabbing her husband, Ronald Lee, to death with a butcher knife.

Teaching Awards For Two On ECU Faculty

PEGGY H. WOOD

DR. NORMAN C. PENDERED

ECU News Bureau
Mrs. Peggy H. Wood, professor and chairman of the department of medical science, and Dr. Norman C. Pendered of the school of technology, received annual outstanding teaching awards Monday at East Carolina University's annual faculty convocation.

For Professor Wood, it was the second time in three years that she has received the ECU Alumni Award for teaching excellence. The awards are made in the names of distinguished ECU alumni to recognize and promote teaching excellence.

The two veteran faculty members were presented engraved pewter trays and $500 stipends to be used for professional advancement activities. Presentations were by E. Marvin Slaughter Jr., president of the ECU Alumni Association.

Mrs. Wood joined the ECU faculty in 1969 as director of the medical record librarian program which later became the Department of Medical Record Science in the School of Allied Health and Social Professions. She is a past president of the N.C. Medical Record Association.

A native of Granite Falls, Wood attended Lees-McRae Junior College and the Emory University School of Medical Record Administrators. She received the baccalaureate and master's degrees from ECU.

Rewrites Dialogue In Harold-Speak

CHICAGO (AP) — Not so long ago in the empire of clout, rumors of reform spread across the land. The bold do-gooder was Harold Skytalker. To prevail, he had to defeat evil Darth Vrdolyak. And thus, it began: Council Wars.

That's how Aaron Freeman, a 27-year-old comic, sees the ongoing City Council power struggle between Mayor Harold Washington and the backers of Alderman Edward Vrdolyak.

With the "Star Wars" saga as his inspiration for a current North Side cabaret production, Freeman has created a trilogy telling the tale of the marathon political duel between a reform-minded mayor — dubbed Harold Skytalker — and the aldermen opposing him.

"I knew someone was going to benefit from this," he said of Washington's April mayoral victory. "I figured I'd try to make it me."

Though Freeman is an "unabashed Washington supporter" who worked in the mayor's campaign, he pokes fun at the mayor's penchant for six-syllable words.

In the first episode, when Jesse Jack Solo, alias the Rev. Jesse Jackson, urges Washington to rebel against the Empire, he declines at first, saying he enjoys his job as a congressman.

"I am already quite amicably employed," Skytalker, alias Washington, says, "in my capacity as representative to the Federation. It would be anathema for me to eschew my legislative responsibilities."

Freeman says when he writes lines for Washington, "I think of the sentence in English, then I translate it into Harold-speak."

Pendered, a Pennsylvania native, joined the ECU faculty in 1970. The former head of the industrial arts education program at Penn State University, he is a former editor of the Pennsylvania Industrial Arts News and recipient of numerous awards in the industrial arts field.

He is professor and chairman of the Department of Industrial and Technical Education in the School of Technology and long-time director of graduate studies in industrial arts at ECU. Nine Fatalities In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
An elderly man who collapsed from the heat while riding his motorcycle was one of nine persons who died in North Carolina traffic accidents during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

Troopers said Arthur Walter Feck, 66, of Clinton, was overcome by the heat and passed out about 3:15 p.m. Sunday while driving his motorcycle on U.S. 421, 8 miles south of Clinton, in Sampson County. Feck fell from his vehicle and rolled into a ditch.

A driver for the Schafer Distributing Company was killed at 9:30 p.m. Sunday when his tractor trailer truck collided with another truck and burst into flames on Highway 220 near Ellerbe. The driver's name was not released pending notification of relatives.

Also Sunday, Richie Ray Shumaker, 21, of Statesville, was traveling at high speed when his car ran off Interstate 77 in Iredell County, crossed back over the road and overturned, throwing him from the car. The accident 1 1/2 miles north of Statesville occurred at 9:30 p.m.

Douglas Eugene McDougal, 15, of Maxton, died at 9 p.m. Sunday when he was struck by a car as he walked along N.C. 71, 1 mile north of his hometown in Robeson County.

On Saturday, Dexter Lynn McCormick, 21, of Spring Lake was killed at 5 a.m.

when his motorcycle sped around a curve on a rural road north of his Harnett County hometown, went off the road and hit a ditch.

Billy Franklin Harper, 31, of Lexington died at 4 a.m. the same day when he drove his car onto U.S. 64 west of Lexington and was hit by a tractor-trailer.

John Rodney Strickland, 17, of Hope Mills also was killed early Saturday he drove his car into another vehicle that was backing onto a rural road south of Fayetteville.

An accident early Friday claimed the life of Gary Morgan Carter, 19, of Kinston, when the car in which he was a passenger ran off the side of a rural road in Lenoir County and overturned several times. Carter was thrown from the car.

James Dennis Ames, 22, of Charlotte, died at 11:21 p.m. Friday when he drove his car off a rural road about 3 miles northeast of Charlotte and struck a telephone pole.

The deaths raised the yearly traffic fatality toll to 749, compared to 779 at this same time last year.
