General Assembly To Reconvene Friday

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly must return Friday to amend a criminal discovery law and a law prohibiting alcoholic beverage sales to underage drinkers, Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday.

Hunt called for the special session, which will convene at 10 a.m., after state House and Senate committees agreed Wednesday on ways to amend the discovery law to protect confidential informers.

"I believe the General Assembly can deal with this short but very urgent agenda in a single day," Hunt said at a news conference.

Special legislative sessions may be called by the governor with the advice of the Council of State or by petition of three-fifths of the members of the House and Senate.

Hunt called two special sessions in 1982 for redrawing the state's legislative and congressional districts after the U.S. Justice Department refused to accept them.

Before that, Gov. Dan Moore called a special session in January 1966 to deal with the E.S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling on redistricting.

"The discovery law must be changed to protect the identity of confidential informants in criminal cases," Hunt said. "Law enforcement officers simply cannot protect our people without the use of informants, and informants are not going to talk if the think that their identity will be disclosed."

Amendments in the discovery law are designed to answer criticism that it will help defendants identify confidential informers and lead to a drying up of information to law enforcement officials.

The discovery law, which took effect when enacted during the last days of the 1983 session in July, requires prosecutors give defense lawyers the substance of statements made by defendants.

The previous law required prosecutors to give defense lawyers only those statements that would be introduced into evidence. An attorney general's opinion further limited the statements to those made to law enforcement officials.

House and Senate committees of lawyers wrote the amendments during a lengthy and sometimes heated meeting that was attended by a number of district attorneys.

The amendments would let prosecutors withhold the substance of statements made to confidential informers who will not testify in court. The substance of other statements relevant to the case would be released by noon on Wednesday before the week during which the case goes to court.

The amendments also would expand the existing protective order which judges may issue to prevent a potential witness from being harmed and expand penalties for prosecutors who fail to fully disclose the substance of statements.

The House committee deleted language from earlier proposals that talked about disclosing evidence that would help prove the defendant innocent and certification that the prosecutor complied with the law.

Knox Re-Visits County In Governorship Effort

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Eddie Knox realized some time ago that his bid for the 1984 gubernatorial nomination in North Carolina will be successful only if he becomes more recognizable and visible to citizens across the state.

The 46-year-old Democrat says that, in spite of spending two terms in the state Senate and now serving as mayor of Charlotte, he and his wife concluded that he was recognized by only about 3 percent of the state's residents.

Knox, who campaigned in Greenville Wednesday during a tour of eastern counties, feels his identification rate is up to about 50 percent now but there is a lot of work to be done. "We've got to accelerate the intensity of the campaign to get me known," he said.

The Mecklenburg County native pointed to the need for a "strong grassroots program" in his campaign and said that organizational efforts in each county are helping him "put together something that is solid." Since announcing his candidacy in early April, Knox has visited nearly all of the 100 counties and a stop this week in Trenton in Jones County will wind up his initial state tour.

Knox said that education is a major priority in his campaign and steps must be taken to overcome the "great disparity" that he said exists in education in North Carolina. "We have to give kids a (Please turn to Page 5)

Subtle Pressures Confront Marcos

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Benigno Aquino's widow today called on President Ferdinand E. Marcos to release all political prisoners as hundreds of thousands of Filipinos mourned the assassinated opposition leader at a Requiem Mass.

At a brief news conference after the Mass, Corazon Aquino read a Manila newspaper report that the president had sent his condolences, but said the family had received none.

"We would like to tell the president that if he is sincere in condoling with me and my children and the rest of the family, then he can do so by releasing all political prisoners," said Mrs. Aquino, speaking at the family home in suburban Quezon City.

The government acknowledges 1,100 people have been detained under Marcos' sweeping orders of arrest since martial law was lifted in January 1981, but does not call them political prisoners.

In February, the Defense Ministry said there were 539 "public order violators" in custody, but a church organization monitoring political prisoner cases estimated the number was close to 1,000.

The crowd around the Santo Domingo Roman Catholic Church was the biggest and most fervent seen in Manila since Pope John Paul II's February 1981 visit. Aquino's funeral is still five days away, scheduled for Tuesday.

Inside the church, thousands of mourners jammed the pews and aisles, chanting "We want Ninoy" — Aquino's nickname — until the somber ceremony began. An AP photographer estimated the crowd inside the church at more than 7,000.

The New York Times, quoting officials of the Reagan administration in Washington, reported that the administration is prepared to dissociate itself from the Marcos government if he or any of his top associates are found responsible for the assassination.

But the unidentified officials said regardless of whether the government had a role in the killing, the United States must try to insure that it retains its air and naval bases in the Philippines and that the Philippine government is not overthrown by the continuing insurgency of the New People's Army, a Maoist guerrilla organization.

Another report from Washington, in the Wall Street Journal, said Imelda Marcos, the president's wife, warned Aquino at a meeting in New York in May that if he returned, he was marked for assassination by "certain allies of the president who couldn't be controlled."

The Journal's report said Mrs. Marcos "mentioned names" and Aquino confided them to friends and relatives, "but they decline to discuss them, saying such information doesn't constitute hard evidence."

Aquino had vowed to help lead a non-violent challenge to Marcos' rule upon his return. Marcos had warned him to stay away, because the government allegedly had learned of plots to assassinate him.

Marcos has denied any government involvement in the slaying, but Mrs. Aquino said Wednesday that, while she was accusing no one of complicity, "I would like the government to answer certain questions which puzzle me."

Aquino's brother, Agapito, said, "I have no doubts the military had a hand in it, but we have no proof."

The government said a clue to the assassin's identity was the name "Rollo," a common nickname for Rolando, embroidered on his underwear.

U.S. officials said they have provided unspecified information on the source of what Philippine authorities say was murder weapon, an American-made Smith and Wesson .357-Magnum revolver. They said they also have been asked to help with fingerprint identification.

In response to a demand by opposition leaders Wednesday, Marcos appointed a special committee headed by Chief Justice Enrique Fernando to investigate the killing. He also offered a reward of 500,000 pesos ($45,454) for information leading to the arrest of anyone involved.

The president also ordered members of the Aviation Security Command "confined to quarters" to assist the investigation.

Pitt County's representatives in the General Assembly said this morning that they will support changes in the state's criminal discovery law when the General Assembly meets in special session at 10 a.m. Friday to amend the legislation.

The discovery law was enacted by the Legislature in the closing days of the 1983 session in July. It has drawn criticism from law enforcement officers and district attorneys across the state, who said the law would help defendants identify confidential informers and lead to a drying up of information to police agencies.

The amendments, worked out by House and Senate committees, will allow prosecutors to withhold the substance of statements made to confidential informers who will not testify in court.

"I plan to be there and plan to support the recommendations of the governor," who called the special session, Rep. Ed Warren said. "The county sheriff (Ralph Tyson) and the DA here (District Attorney Tom Haigwood) recommend the amendments highly, and I feel like that's the proper thing to do. I think it's essential that we do it."

Warren said "we should be able to finalize it tomorrow" in a "very brief" session. We should be able to do our work and come back home tomorrow."

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. said "we do need to clear the water so law enforcement officers are not handcuffed." The biggest problem with the new law, Jones suggested, is that "it was not clear or clarified."

Sen. Vernon White said, "I'm not in agreement with what we did," in enacting the new discovery law, "and I think it should be changed."

The proposed amendments to protect informants, White said, "seem to be a compromise."

"I'd much rather repeal what we did in the last session," But White said he would "support the compromise if there is not enough strength to repeal" the law.

Registrars And Judges Named

The names of registrars and judges for Pitt County's 24 voting precincts have been announced by Clifton W. Everett Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections.

Everett said special registration commissioners have also been named to register voters in the towns of Ayden, Bethel, Falkland, Farmville, Fountain, Grifton, Grimesland and Winterville, as well as in Sheppard Memorial Library, East End Branch Library, Carver Branch Library, and the library's mobile unit.

In addition, 122 special registration commissioners authorized to register voters "at large" in all precincts in Pitt County have been appointed.

Registrars and judges, with terms ending August 1985, include: Arthur precinct, Jane C. Tripp, registrar, Tony P. Moore and Peggy R. Wooten, judges; Ayden, Lucille C. Cannon, Gladys H. Pratt; Belvoir, Steve Little, Anna H. Dupree, Charlie E. Spain; Bethel, Janet E. Davis, Frances Davis, Irma S. Carson; Carolina, Sallie C. Glisson, Maxine S. Gray, Lessie C. Johnson; Chicod, Joyce T. Spencer, James G. Page, Cynthia A. Mills; Falkland, J. Russell Stancill, Virginia Stancill, Virginia Sickels; Farmville, Edna Earle Baker, Fred W. Satterthwaite, Donald C. Johnson; Fountain, Nell B.

Gardner, Jeanette Killebrew, Brenda S. Moore; Grifton, James Archie Rogers, Joe A. Goolsby, Grimesland, Barbara M. Heath, Willie Burnett, Rena V. Medlin; Simpson, Albert Williams, R.M. (Bob) Ussery Jr., Merrill Lee Harrison; Pactolus, Roy Trip, Dorothy J. Smith; Swift Creek, Helen B. Wall, Grady Smith; and Winterville, Jane S. Mellon. (Please turn to Page 5)

Tropical Storm Barry Fades Into 'Depression' In Florida

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Tropical Storm Barry, its winds only 35 mph, dwindled to a depression today as it moved ashore 40 miles south of the space shuttle's seaside launch pad.

The storm, which had prompted authorities to urge campers to seek higher ground, had weakened through the night.

The National Hurricane Center said Barry had sustained winds of about 40 mph as it neared the coast at daybreak. It was downgraded when those winds dropped below the 39-mph threshold required for named-storm status.

At its strongest on Wednesday, Barry had top winds of 55 mph.

All gale warnings, which had extended for hundreds of miles along the coast, were discontinued at 8 a.m. EDT.

Tides of two to four feet above normal were still expected, but there was little of the rain usually associated with tropical storms.

At 8 a.m., the depression was centered on the coast about 15 miles south of Melbourne, at latitude 27.9 north, longitude 80.5 west.

As the storm approached, officials at Kennedy Space Center said it was too late to bring Challenger in from the pad, where it was poised for next week's scheduled launch.

But the craft is secured by eight 2-inch-wide bolts that "can withstand hurricane-force winds easily" and is shielded by a metal framework, said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Rocky Raab.

Wes Brennan, chief of support operations for Kennedy Space Center, said the overnight crew had "a very quiet night, very calm."

Some light work on the shuttle was scheduled for today, including the installation of small explosive devices that are used to separate a number of systems in and around the shuttle during flight. NASA spokesman Jim Ball said that would be postponed in the event of lightning activity, but that was not expected.

As the storm edged toward shore, civil defense officials fielded phone calls, hoarded sandbags and kept an eye on the forecasts, hoping they wouldn't have to order evacuation of beachfront and low-lying communities.

Campers were urged to find more secure ground, and shoppers lined up to buy tape, batteries and canned goods, just in case.

"People are getting a little nervous, I'm sure," Jim Adkins, civil defense director for Brevard County, said late Wednesday. "I feel pretty confident at this point since the thing hasn't gained any in intensity," he added.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Inflation and vegetarianism have helped to bring an interesting change: Americans have gone pasta-crazy. In large cities, restaurants specializing in fresh pasta dishes have cropped up. Food writers keep discovering or developing special ways of serving pasta. And so do home cooks.

One of them sometimes prepares ribbon-like fettuccine with three vegetables — onion, broccoli florets and cherry tomatoes. The cherry tomatoes, cut in half, are added at the end of the preparation. They are not cooked; they pick up enough heat from the pasta.

To begin the meal you may want to offer a cold soup. Jellyed consomme laced with fresh lime is an excellent choice for calorie-watchers.

As dessert, you may enjoy serving fresh fruit and a nut torte. The torte can be as simple as you please or it can have a coffee, chocolate or mocha frosting. No whipped cream for the torte, please, because there's cream in the fettuccine dish.

CREAMY FETTUCCINE WITH VEGETABLES
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 small (3-ounce) onion, coarsely chopped (about 1/2 cup)
3 cloves garlic, minced
2 cups fresh broccoli florets
8 ounces fettuccine
1/2 pint (1 cup) heavy cream
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
8 cherry tomatoes, halves
In a 10-inch skillet, over medium heat, heat the oil; add onion and garlic; cook, stirring often, until onion wilts — about 3 minutes. Add broccoli; cook stirring often, until broccoli is as tender as you like — 5 to 10 minutes. Cover and reserve.

In a large saucepot, cook fettuccine according to package directions; drain; return to dry saucepot. Add cream and reserved broccoli mixture; over low heat, toss well. Off heat, add cheese and tomatoes; toss again. Serve at once; pass a pepper mill.
Makes 4 servings.

Don't Mention Bad Manners

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As the working, divorced mother of a future bridegroom, I invited the parents of the bride to my home for a 6 o'clock cocktail party in order to meet them for the first time. I went to considerable trouble and expense to make everything perfect.

At 5:30 p.m. my son and his fiancée arrived after having spent the day with her parents at their summer cottage about five miles away. The bride said she hoped I wasn't expecting her parents that evening — that her mother wasn't sure which night they had been invited for. Then she mumbled something about "no phone at the cottage," which was supposed to excuse their not calling to check the date or say they couldn't make it.

Now I feel so hurt and insulted I don't care if I never meet these people, but I don't want to hurt the newlyweds. What should I do?

NO NAME IN MAINE

DEAR NO NAME: I realize you can't easily overlook the rudeness, thoughtlessness or whatever caused their show of bad manners, but in the interest of a good relationship with your son and his future wife, make no mention of it.

DEAR ABBY: I have four children ranging in age from 5 months to 10 years. With school out, I've had my hands full taking care of them. We are one of the few families who have a swimming pool. How do I deal with all the kids who come over wanting to swim? I don't want to be rude, but I don't want to be a lifeguard and recreation director, either. Some days I can handle a couple of extra kids, and some days I can't.

Also, they want to help themselves to snacks, and I can't afford to feed the whole neighborhood. Every day I have kids coming to my door or climbing over the fence if we are in the pool. If I let them swim once, they think they have a standing invitation to come every day. Is there a tactful way to handle this?

SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN: Putting "tactful" aside for a moment, let's talk "legal." Your pool is what the law would call "an attractive nuisance," and it is your responsibility to have a fence that will keep kids out. (Talk to a lawyer about this, and your insurance agent, too.) Then have a clear understanding with the children and their parents about when they may swim in your pool. Adult neighbors whose children enjoy your pool should be willing to alternate as lifeguards.

DEAR ABBY: I read in July's Reader's Digest that Burt Reynolds gets $4,807.69 an hour. How can I get in touch with him? I have the money and I think he's worth it.

COGNAC COMING
COGNAC, France (AP) — This nation's leading export in the realm of food and drink is heading for another record year, according to the head of one of the cognac area's oldest firms.

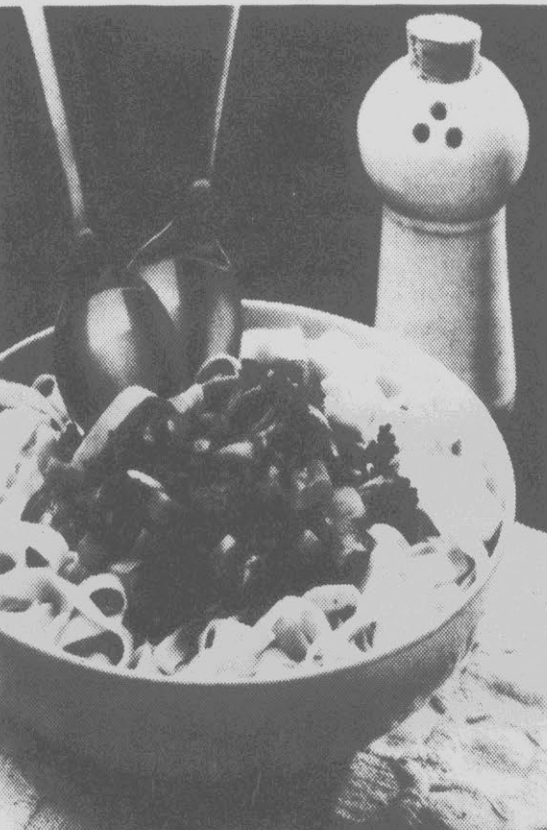

Thanks to a seasonal summer, the 235,900 acres of white grapes which are used to make cognac have started their "adornment" cycle which comes to fruition in October. If the harvest lives up to expectations, it may top that of 1982 when the yield was 134 percent over that of 1981, says Jacques Martell, whose family has been in the cognac business here since 1715.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

For years, educators have been comparing the education of kids who go to Roman Catholic and private schools to those in the public sector.

Recently, a new study reported that kids in the private community were academically more successful thanks to two things: homework and discipline.

Oh, sure. But whose? The parents, that's who! I belonged to a group of Catholic parents who for 20 years functioned out of sheer fear. We are probably the last generation alive to fear not only nuns, but the authority of lay teachers.

Our kids? They never had a fear of anything. Why should they? We had enough for all of them. None of us honestly knew why. All we knew was that there was something authoritative about a soft-spoken woman dressed in gray whose talks with God constituted a "local call" while all the rest of us were on a different area code.

When "Sister" spoke, even E.F. Hutton listened. When Sister Cecelia told my son they were going to decorate an Easter Egg tree, guess who sucked eggs all weekend and voided two dozen of them?

When Sister Mary Joseph was putting together a program for St. Patrick's Day and asked me to write an original play, I dropped my syndicated column like a bad habit and worked all weekend. As for homework, one word from Sister Celeste that my daughter had an English placement test and I crammed until my eyes looked like a pair of dirty ashtrays.

I memorized every line of "Evangeline." I got a tutor for me for the new math. I apologized when there were inkstains on the inside pocket of the uniform blouses. I packed lunches with sandwiches shaped like the Nativity Scene. My middle name was "My mother can drive." One day at a field trip at a meat packing plant where I was faint from inhaling warm blood, I saw Sister Adelaide smile at me. I lived off that sign of approval for months.

Years later, I saw Sister. She was wearing a smart green suit, turtleneck sweater and long hair with bangs. I recognized her from the rear a half mile away. Don't ask me how.

"You've turned out well," she said evenly. "You seem to have retained all you were taught."

I stared at my feet. "Thank you, Sister."

Summoning courage, I raised my head and said, "Why? Why were all of us so obedient... so disciplined... so wimpy when you were around?"

"Don't you know?" she smiled. I shook my head. "You were afraid we'd send your children home and you'd get stuck with them."

Sister, I think I always knew that.

Greenhouse Records Acid Rain Impact

By PAMELA J. HUEY

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — The greenhouse on wheels acts as an experimental umbrella to protect the corn and soybeans from nature's rainfall. At other times, it showers the crops with its own acid rain.

University of Illinois researchers, in the largest undertaking of its kind in the United States, are hoping to find out the effect of the acidic rain on crops.

Many scientists in the U.S. and Canada believe acid rain comes chiefly from coal-burning emissions in the Midwest. So far, research into the effects of acid rain on crops has been contradictory and inconclusive. There has been some work done on soybeans but none on field corn.

So U of I researchers, funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, have set up the unique greenhouses at the university's farm to find out how corn and soybean growth is affected by acid rain.

"The portion of the United States that receives acid rain consists of much of the area east of the Mississippi River, including Illinois and major portions of the Corn Belt," said Wayne L. Banwart, U of I agronomist and head of the research team.

"Our goal is to assess the effects of acid rain on the yield and growth of corn and soybeans, as well as its effect on soils."

The four mobile greenhouses made of polyethylene plastic and galvanized pipe framing sit beside 36 10 x 10-foot plots. The shelters are 136 feet long, 30 feet wide and 20 feet tall.

When it starts to rain, a motor is activated and the shelters move along rails to cover the research plots, said John Hassett, a soil chemist involved in the project and a U of I professor.

It takes 59 seconds for the greenhouses to move into place. Then periodically during the summer, sprinklers in the greenhouses irrigate the crops with acid rain.

Six water tanks in a separate facility mix city water so that the pH levels of the simulated rain range from 3.0 to 5.6. The test plots will get the same amount of rainfall that is average for May through September in Urbana.

Acidity of a substance is measured on a pH scale from 0 to 14. Seven is the neutral point — where a substance is neither acid nor alkaline. Below 7, a substance is considered acidic and above 7, it is considered alkaline.

Normal rain generally has a pH of 5.6 and acid rain has a pH less than 5.6. The plots will be getting rain that has pH levels of 3.0, 3.4, 3.8, 4.2, 4.6 and 5.6, Hassett said.

The scientists have received funding for two years but they hope to extend the project for five years. They expect to have some preliminary data by August and yield information by September.

Hassett said the scientists may find that acid rain has a positive effect on crops, particularly at low acidic levels. Hassett reasoned that nitrates and sulfates — both crop nutrients — are ingredients in acid rain.

But everything is speculative at this point, he said.

"Right now, we don't know what the effects will be," he said.

An acid rain study done in Oregon in 1981 on 28 plant species found yields were reduced in five species, increased in six, unaffected in 15 and results were mixed in two.

To Repair A Flaw

It seems more and more that defense lawyers had a heyday in the 1983 session of the General Assembly.

A special session has been called to correct the Legislature's booboo on the law dealing with discovery in drug-smuggling trials. And, as columnist Paul O'Connor pointed out earlier this week, there is still another change that renders one long-standing law useless.

It seems that, in the mass changes made in the drunken driving law that becomes effective Oct. 1, the Legislature made it virtually impossible to convict a storekeeper who sells alcoholic beverages to minors. Traditionally the law has assumed that the storekeeper knew a buyer was underaged when he sold beer or wine to a minor; hence, the need for age checks. The new law has erased that assumption and prosecutors will have to prove the clerk knew the buyer's age.

O'Connor points out that prosecutors now fear storekeepers simply will not ask for identification. That way, there is no way they could know the age of the buyer.

Such a flaw takes some of the teeth out of that drunken driving law, a law that supposedly is the strongest in the nation against intoxication on the roads.

Sometimes, change isn't an improvement. This is one of those times, and a quick remedy is in order.

Preparedness Essential

It is chilling to hear that no city on the east coast is ready for the worst kind of hurricane which can strike.

Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center says that is the case. A major hurricane would cause much damage, he says. Saving lives, of course, is the first priority and the hurricane tracker says some areas do not have a comprehensive evacuation plan.

The assessment has particular meaning here in North Carolina where the coastline juts far out into the Atlantic. Since the killer storms hit coastal areas more than two decades ago, there has been much development on the Outer Banks. Virtually any storm would cause damage, and the worst of hurricanes could wipe out entire areas.

The building that has been done is there and can only await its fate in a major storm. We must be prepared, however, to save lives whenever such a disaster strikes.

A Changing Picture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The assassination of Philippine opposition leader Benigno Aquino Jr. is one of those sudden, brutal events in a distant land that can intrude without warning on American presidential campaigns.

While no one can predict the long-range aftermath of the shooting, it confronted the Reagan administration with the question of whether the president should alter his plans to visit the Philippines in November and raised memories of the impact of foreign events on the 1980 election.

In California, White House spokesman Larry Speakes was quick to say the killing wasn't likely to affect the president's plans.

But just as swiftly there were published reports quoting unnamed Reagan aides as saying the trip could be altered if it became clear that the government of President Ferdinand Marcos was responsible for the slaying of the popular opposition leader.

In exile in the United States for the past three years, Aquino was returning home to lead a coalition of opposition parties in National Assembly elections next year and he was considered a likely opponent to Marcos in presidential elections scheduled for 1987.

Aquino's death offers no immediate parallel to the chaos in Iran four years ago that climaxed in November 1979 with the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. But it is an example of the sort of uncontrollable event that can raise the image of the United States as a helpless giant in a hostile world.

In his 1980 campaign, Ronald Reagan ably exploited the frustration many Americans felt over a feeling that United States' power and prestige had declined during the administration of Jimmy Carter.

The Republican candidate liked to remind campaign audiences of a day when warring parties in what we now call Third World countries would lower their guns if U.S. Marines showed up to evacuate American civilians.

His prescription was to rebuild U.S. military strength.

Now that Reagan is president and embarked on a military rebuilding program, the world looks no more manageable.

The airport shooting in Manila was a particularly dramatic event. But every region of the globe holds the potential for upheavals over which the United States can exert little direct influence.

Far more pressing than whether the president should go ahead with a visit to the Philippines, is the question of how to deal with events in Central America. For all its military and economic power, the United States has found no certain way to protect its interests and control the actions of dictators of the left and right.

That this troubled area in the Western Hemisphere holds the potential for becoming a major domestic political issue is underscored by the fact that two Democratic presidential candidates — Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado — scheduled trips to the region.

Cranston went to the area last week and Hart plans a trip in September.

And while the Democrats are trying to establish their credentials for challenging the Reagan policy as too militaristic, the president also is catching heat from the New Right.

Conservative activists to Reagan's right are mounting a campaign critical of his decision to name a bipartisan commission headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to make recommendations on what U.S. policy should be in the region.

The conservatives are talking about a major advertising campaign to press their view that the United States should refuse to negotiate with any leftists in Central America.

Assuming the president runs for reelection, there seems little likelihood he will get political comfort from events in the Middle East — where U.S. Marines remain stationed in Lebanon and continuing tensions between warring Arab countries and between the Arabs and Israel assure instability.

Ironically, if Reagan is looking around the globe for a foreign policy coup that reap domestic political benefits, his best bet might be in reaching an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union, the nation he often has blamed for much of the unrest in the world.

Eliot Janeway, one of the country's best-known writers on economic affairs, wrote a Sunday piece the other day for The Washington Post. He was talking about the huge load of international debt that worried so many big banks.

"The fact is," he wrote, "that much of the interest on these loans cannot be paid, and most of the principle will not be."

A few paragraphs down the line, Janeway explained the effect of a 14-percent rate of interest: "Bank interest compounded on unrepayable principle will double the debt load in five years."

A few days before Janeway's piece appeared in the Post, the Portland Oregonian carried a story in its sports section about Denver's quarterback Steve DeBerg. Evidently he faces a tough fight to hold his job. This was the headline: "DeBerg Not Phased by Elway Challenge."

Ah, these Troublesome Twos! Janeway must have moaned a terrible moan when he saw what the Post had done to him. Principle? In sweet charity, we must assume that the Oregonian's headline writer new better than to confuse "phase" and "faze." These mistakes are generally the result not of ignorance, but of inattention.

Therefore, let us try a little harder to keep eye and ear working together. We will thus avoid the young lady who broke into peels of laughter. We will avoid the confiscation of bails of marijuana. We will not be accosted by policemen in plane clothes. Neither will we wonder whether Hitler's diary was forged. Our language is crowded with these little troublemakers, and there is nothing to be done with them but to memorize the spellings that go with the meanings. One of the wire service reporters at Newport,

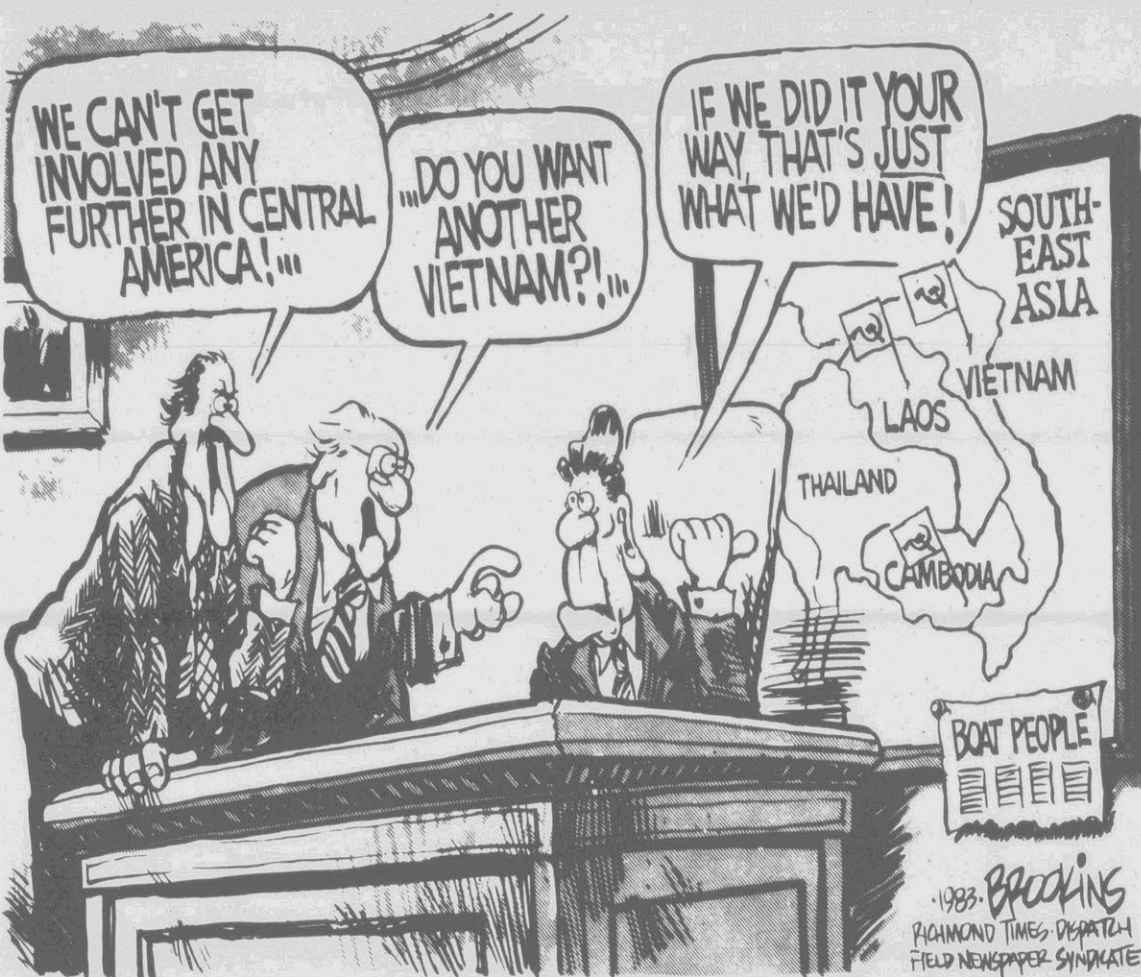

R.I. — or, more likely, some nodding copy editor — hadn't done his memory work last week. We read that a yacht had "healed over gracefully in the wind."

VERB OF THE WEEK. The award goes to Joe Gargiola for "too nonchalant." The NBC's game-of-the-week guy was covering a game involving the Pittsburgh Pirates. At one point the pirates' catcher, Tony Pena, got overconfident on a topped ball hit just in front of the plate. Pena stroled toward the ball, fumbled it, then fumbled it again, and meanwhile the runner streaked safely to first. Said the disgusted Gargiola: "He just nonchalanted that ball."

Runner-up this week: "to scapegoat." This dubious coinage appeared in the Portland Oregonian on June 19 in an editorial headline: "Don't Scapegoat Mail Ballot." The meaning was clear: Don't blame the mail ballot for success or failure of a special levy election, but as a respectable noun, "scapegoat" goes back to Tyndale's translation of Leviticus 16:8 in 1530. I would leave it a noun.

Still thinking of verbs: A reader in Coral Gables, Fla., complains of a sentence in National Geographic having to do with a voyage to the Antarctic: "Adelie penguins ... were among the species censused by the expedition." It surprised me to discover that Webster's III sanctions "to census" as a transitive verb. American Heritage, Random House and the Oxford American Dictionary do not list the verb form. My inclination would be to accept "to census" in the same way that we have accepted "to poll," "to sample," and even "to random sample." These are words of art; they serve a narrow but useful purpose, which is about all we reasonably may ask of new words as they come along.

Decision Due On 2 Railroads

RALEIGH — Someday soon, the General Assembly will have to decide what to do with the state's two railroads. The assembly can sell the railroads and pocket about $54 million. Or, it can continue to lease the railroads, possibly negotiating an improvement over the 2.3 percent annual return the state is currently making.

The decision may have ramifications beyond the money that the railroads, sold or leased, would bring into the state treasury. Hanging in the balance of the decision is the most important freight rail line in the state, the only rail line to the port of Morehead City and the question of passenger service along the Piedmont Crescent.

In the summer issue of N.C. Insight magazine, the Center for Public Policy Research weighs the pros and cons of the two options that are being considered by a legislative study commission. The Center argues that the state renegotiate its 99-year lease with Norfolk Southern Railways before the lease expires in 1994.

There's no denying the lure of a sell-off. In the current hard budgetary times, $54 million would provide a big boost for school or highway construction, state building maintenance or even the General Fund. One advocate of selling the railroads is State Treasurer Harlan Boyles who feels the money should be put into an investment fund that would provide the state with a steady source of revenue.

But, selling the North Carolina Railroad (NCR) and the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad (A&NC) — the state owns about three-quarters share of both — could prove harmful to some regions of the state.

NCR tracks between Charlotte and Greensboro are very important to Norfolk Southern and should the state sell those lines, it is almost certain that good service would continue there and along the less travelled Greensboro to Goldsboro tracks, the Center predicts.

The future of the A&NC lines, from Goldsboro to Morehead City, is not so rosy. In 1982, only $3 million worth of freight was carried along this line and that was mostly coal. The future prospects for coal shipments out of Morehead City are not good, the report says. So, the center asks how long Norfolk Southern can be expected to operate trains along those lines. By selling the railroads, the state would be losing its leverage to keep those lines open. And those lines are essential to the development of Morehead City as a port.

Steve Adams, author of the Center report, argues that through skillful renegotiation of the lease, the state could require Norfolk Southern to keep the coastal lines open in exchange for the rights to the lucrative Charlotte-Greensboro route.

Regarding passenger service, Adams says that if the people of North Carolina want it, "They better not put their hopes in (Norfolk) Southern." He says the company views passenger service as an unprofitable venture that bogs up freight train scheduling.

Boyles says that Norfolk Southern has no incentive to negotiate now. The Center says they do. They won't ever want to risk losing the investments they've made along the NCR tracks, nor do they want to lose those lines. They'll negotiate now if they fear the state might hand the railroads over to someone else in 1994.

So, the Center's recommendation is for the state to renegotiate its leases with Norfolk Southern to improve the state's return on investment. The leases should also be more flexible, the Center says, so they can be adapted to the economic conditions of the 21st century.

Surviving The Doubts

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy has survived a bout with depressed spirits over the past few weeks, a time when some fearsome forecasts were issued by private sector analysts.

The terrible budget deficits that were going to raise interest rates and abort recovery seem to have slipped back into another perspective, at least among some of the popular commentators.

Howard Ruff, who seldom fails to remind us that we must be alert to survive financially, recently issued the reassuring comment that "there is no reason to believe that the downtrend in interest rates...has ended."

Moreover, he says, "it has become apparent that future government deficits will not be as great as forecast," that government borrowing will be less than feared, and that corporations will have enough money to increase production.

No doom and gloom there! And none either from the folks at CIGNA, the big insurer, which sees interest rates falling sharply by the end of the year, and to a range of 9 percent to 9.5 percent by early 1984.

Good news too from the National Federation of Independent Business, whose latest survey of 2,131 small and medium companies found only 20 percent of them planned to raise prices over the next three months, close to a record low.

Health care costs, which had been one of the perennial contributors to inflation, also seem to have taken a turn for the better, judging at least from a report just released by Executive Compensation Service Inc.

ECS, a subsidiary of The Wyatt Co., an employee benefit consultant, found salaries of U.S. hospital and health care workers rose only 7.1 percent over the past year, the smallest increase since it began such studies in 1975.

A lot of people have been worried about the possibility of a rise in food prices, since such prices have settled into a far less volatile pattern than had existed several years ago. But increases in meat, at least, aren't likely.

That suggestion comes from the latest reports from the National Cattlemen's Association, which reports very ample supplies and a weakening of prices, a situation that might be reinforced because of drought-induced slaughtering.

There is far from agreement on the extent of the recent good news. There never is agreement when the ingredients of decisions are made up of statistics and interpretations. Always there are opposing points of view.

Sindlinger & Co. the consumer and marketing research firm, maintains that the consumer price index, which provided its own good news by climbing only four-tenths of 1 percent in July, is suspect.

"The people say this is hokum," said Albert Sindlinger, the outspoken founder, analyst and chairman of the company that bears his name. "Most household respondents tell us they never got this relief."

Sindlinger, which obtains its data direct from households through extensive telephone interviews, from "respondents who describe their actual experiences in trying to juggle their household finances," claims inflation persists.

Many prices have fallen, Sindlinger agrees, but he also points out that there are fixed costs that remain difficult for many families, such as mortgage payments and insurance payments, tuitions and repairs.

In July 1983, Sindlinger reports, respondents were finding their fixed costs 11.6 percent ahead of July 1982, a figure it calls "burdensome" even if it is an improvement from the 20.2 percent jump measured a year earlier.

Despite such comments, and in spite of a $21.4 billion federal budget deficit in July alone, the commentaries of late have been a good deal more spirited than a month ago. The mood seems to have improved.

But you know about moods: They come and go.

Strength For Today

The people of Lapland, who live under very hard conditions, are said to have the custom of teaching their children early in life to carry burdens. At first, of course, the burdens are very light; but the object is to make the children realize that for the rest of their lives the bearing of burdens will be a duty incumbent upon them.

In our society we have no such custom; but the necessity of bearing burdens is as demanding as it is upon the people of the frozen northlands.

Unfortunately, many of us make it harder by adding unnecessary burdens. For example, morbid fear is one of these. Pride is a burden which has broken many hearts and wrecked much happiness. Remorse over mistakes which cannot be rectified, envy of another's success, hatred — these are burdens which the Heavenly Father abhors. These are burdens which we were never intended to bear.

chance to get a fresh start." He said studies show that 68 percent of children 6 and under have working mothers who return home exhausted and are not prepared to tutor their youngsters. Saying that "we have to make certain these little kids' minds are stimulated," Knox suggested that private day care facilities could add instruction to their programs either for tax credits or "we could give them some teacher help."

The candidate said that regardless of who is at fault in creating educational disparities, "kids fall through the cracks" and suffer in their career preparations. Knox said that early counseling is needed to help students decide on courses of study. He added, "A lot of kids are pursuing vocations where the odds of them being successful are not good."

Knox said he has been "wrongly accused" of opposing the medical school at East Carolina University. He said that during his four-year tenure as chairman of the North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission, over $134 million was appropriated for the medical school and related programs at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, including over $84 million in operating funds, $24.5 million for AHEC and $29 million in capital monies.

Knox said he questioned the idea initially of starting a medical school, feeling that before such a facility was created, "we ought to know what it will cost." He said that "everybody was gung-ho about building a medical school and I went to (Gov. Jim) Hunt and said that somebody needs to sit down and talk about it." A task force, which Knox served on with people like former ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins and Dr. William Friday, president of the state's consolidated university system, was organized and the school was later established.

He said he voted for the final master bill to create the school and said his "record is good with ECU." Knox said he does not feel he has anything to apologize for with respect to his support for the medical school.

Knox said everyone is working in different directions with the tobacco program. He pointed to a need to get tobacco farmers together to glean the best ideas they have and then have the governor, congressmen and senators work for the same program. Knox said tobacco is recognized as the cash crop and "it will not be replaced by peanuts and soybeans."

Asked if eastern residents could be comfortable with a governor from the Piedmont, Knox said, "I would certainly be comfortable with eastern North Carolina people."

Knox was born in a farm near Davidson and received a degree in agriculture from N.C. State University.

The candidate also made stops Wednesday in Ahoskie, Windsor, Williamston, Robersonville and Bethel.

'Goof-Of-Year' In Tiger Swap

NEW YORK (AP) — The man in charge of arranging an animal swap between the United States and Soviet Union said he'll be getting the "goof-of-the-year award" for accidentally sending the wrong Siberian tigers to two American zoos.

Ulysses Seal, coordinator of tigers for the Species Survival Plan, said he mistakenly sent a male tiger to the Henry Doorly Zoo in Omaha, Neb., on Tuesday and a female to the Bronx Zoo in New York. Only the Indianapolis Zoo got the female it was expecting.

Two Injured In Collision

Cars driven by Marie Ransdell Haga of Route 1, Greenville, and Ben Long Whitley of 1206 Clark St. collided about 2:45 p.m. Tuesday at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Line Avenue, according to Greenville police.

Officers, who said Ms. Haga and a passenger in her car were injured, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Haga car and $200 to the Whitley vehicle.

Whitley was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Eagle Scout Award Attained

Stacey Duke Patterson, 13, of Vanceboro has attained the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest rank a Boy Scout can receive.

Patterson's Eagle project was the construction of a "Welcome to Vanceboro" sign at the junction of U.S. 17 bypass and business on the south end of the town. The project involved planning, raising finances, purchasing materials and erecting the sign.

The Eagle Scout belongs to Troop 58 of Vanceboro under the leadership of Richard Cannon Jr. He has received his God and Country Award and is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

Patterson is in the ninth grade at West Craven High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ivey Patterson of Vanceboro.

Joe Kue Pays Filing Fee

Joe Kue, who announced his candidacy for mayor of Farmville several months ago, paid his filing fee Friday.

Kue, 49, has been a pharmacist in Farmville since 1965. He will finish a four-year term as a town commissioner this fall.

The municipal election filing period runs until Sept. 9.

WITN-TV Announces Staff Changes

W.R. Roberson Jr., chairman of WITN-TV Inc., has announced four new additions to the staff of the Channel 7 television station.

Robert F. Perry has been named news director. A native of New York, Perry attended East Carolina University. He first joined WITN-TV in 1970 as chief photographer for the news team. He also worked at WNCT-TV, Greenville, and comes to WITN-TV from WCTI-TV, New Bern, where he was the news producer.

The new sports director for the station is Paul J. Baker, a native of Hummelstown, Pa., and a graduate of Trenton State University. He began his career as an announcer and disc jockey for radio stations in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Before coming to WITN-TV, Baker was program director at WTPA-TV-FM in Harrisburg, Pa.

Michelle Janine Hoffman, a native of Harbor Springs, Mich., and a graduate of the University of Southern California, has joined the station as a reporter. Previously, she worked as a reporter for WXOW-TV in LaCrosse, Wis.

Williamston native James A. Mobley has joined the station as a sales consultant. He is a graduate of Atlantic Christian College and before coming to WITN-TV was a personnel manager for Brown Jordan Co. in Suffolk, Va.

Banks To Merge

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Directors of NCNB Corp. and Ellis Banking Corp. of Bradenton, Fla., have agreed to merge their companies, company chairmen announced Wednesday.

The agreement calls for the exchange of 4 million shares of NCNB common stock for 4,085,364 shares of Ellis Banking stock owned by Ellis Chairman A.L. Ellis and his family members. The holders of the remaining 3,119,138 shares of Ellis common stock will receive $22 cash for each share they hold, banking officials said.

The merger, announced in principle on Aug. 16, is subject to approval by NCNB and Ellis shareholders and regulatory agencies.

NCNB is the Southeast's largest bank holding company, with banks in North Carolina and Florida. The Ellis merger would increase its assets to more than $13 billion.

Small Party For Gov. Wallace

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace doesn't like to have a big fuss made over his birthday, says an aide, who added that a small party was planned for the governor's 64th birthday today.

"He never wants a big deal made over his birthday," said Margaret McElroy, Wallace's confidential secretary, on Wednesday, "but sometimes we like to make a

Body Still Unidentified

No positive identification has been made of the body discovered Monday near Roberson Bridge over Tranter's Creek in Martin County. The medical examiner's office in Greenville has only identified the body as that of a female believed to be in her 40s. Efforts to identify the remains are continuing.

Epilepsy Chapter To Meet

The Coastal Plains chapter of the Epilepsy Association will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Scott Luce, EANC president, will speak on the recent quarterly board meeting which he attended in Hickory and about the upcoming national conference to be held in Washington, D.C. Sept. 23-25. For transportation or information call 752-3769.

Blount Is Named To Board

Marvin K. Blount Jr. of Greenville has been elected to a three-year term on the 29-member board of governors of the 3,000-member North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Blount is associated with the Greenville law firm of James, Hite, Cavendish and Blount. He is a graduate of Wake Forest University Law School and a past president of the Pitt County Bar Association.

Whitfield Continues Registration

Students in the G.R. Whitfield School attendance area who have not previously attended the school should register now for the 1983-84 term, according to Raymond Reddick, Whitfield principal.

Students will return to school Sept. 6 and student assignments will be on classroom doors. Classes, Reddick said, will begin after homeroom orientation and a regular day schedule will be followed with dismissal at 3:10 p.m.

Buses will operate on a regular schedule Sept. 6.

Drive Results Are Reported

The Greenville Jaycees and Jay-C-Ettes raised $1,672 in the Muscular Dystrophy Drive held Saturday.

The two organizations conducted a roadblock at the intersection of Arlington and Greenville boulevards Saturday. Thursday and Friday nights the Downtown Nightclub Association held a "beer break" on behalf of the Jaycee-Jay-C-Ette effort. Area restaurants conducted a "coffee break" for the same purpose Friday morning.

The receipts reported were a result of all three efforts, project chairman Phil Trull said.

Professor Developing Farms For Tomorrow's Space Travel

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When Dr. David Raper talks about farming, he isn't concerned with plowing furrows in wide fields or enhancing soil properties.

Raper's plants don't grow in fields or even in soil. But his earth-bound research at North Carolina State University may help space travelers cultivate their space-station meals in 20 years.

Raper is a soil scientist and plant physiologist at N.C. State and he is a member of the Closed Environment Life Support System (CELSS) research team funded by NASA. He is trying to iron out some of the problems space farmers will encounter.

The space farm is expected to be considerably smaller than the conventional farm and crops will be cultivated not in soil, but in artificial, soilless culture.

Raper says farmers will have only about 16 square yards per person to work with, but technology will make up for lack of room.

"In a controlled environment, plants go from seed to maturity much faster," Raper said. "That way you can plant every day. It will be kind of like an assembly line for plants."

Farmers will also have to be concerned with adapting to the elements around them. A long spell without rain won't be a problem. A power failure might.

"They will have to produce a reliable amount of growth and you want a sustained growth," Raper said. "If the air conditioner goes off or the lights go off, you can make up production by varying light and temperature. Or you can slow it down."

TOBACCO IN SPACE — Dr. David Raper looks over tobacco plants grown in a special room with controlled lighting and temperatures

Raper says the space farm will look like a low greenhouse. Since natural light will not be available, plants will grow under rows of light bulbs like fluorescent lights.

The crops now being considered are soybeans, peanuts, wheat, rice, potatoes, tomatoes and lettuce.

One condition scientists are particularly concerned about with plant growth is gravity. Another is controlling oxygen levels.

"On earth, you can't grow at zero gravity," Raper said. "We'll have to determine how gravity affects normal plant growth in space. And earth works because there are huge reservoirs of resources such as oxygen. The space farmer will not have that kind of buffer and will operate in a narrow margin."

Raper is working on plant growth models in N.C. State's environmentally controlled Phytotron laboratory. He has been working on the project for six years and is trying to anticipate some questions that will come up in space.

"Right now, we are trying to answer fundamental questions in environmental physiology," Raper said. "How can we mesh the mechanical systems with biological systems in the similar to what would have to be used for a garden in a space ship. (AP Laserphoto) man-made environment and still maintain control."

Raper says the NASA studies are hypothetical. They are trying to determine the feasibility of the experiment.

"We don't know the technology that will be available in 25 years, so we work with the best now and incorporate the new technology as we go," Raper said.

Chad Invaders Are Warned By Mitterand

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Former President Goukouni Oueddei has not been seen for more than three weeks and Western diplomats say there is "good evidence" he no longer heads the Libyan-backed rebels trying to topple the government.

In Paris, meanwhile, French President Francois Mitterand told the newspaper Le Monde that if the 2,000 French troops deployed in Chad are attacked they "will respond and that to better defend themselves, they would not limit their reply only to defensive means." Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat on Wednesday told reporters President Hissene Habre's government is aware Goukouni disappeared from view but has no reliable information on his fate.

He said Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi may have "liquidated him" after the loss of Faya-Largeau on July 30. Libyan and rebel forces recaptured the strategic oasis in northern Chad 11 days later after a week of bombing and artillery bombardment. The commander of Libyan forces there when it was lost, Col. Salah Rahdouane, is known to be under arrest.

Several of the rebel regime's ministers and high officials were captured in Faya-Largeau and brought to N'Djamena, the capital. Other Goukouni officials were reported killed when a jeep in which they were trying to escape from the oasis was hit by an artillery shell.

The diplomatic sources, insisting on anonymity, said Goukouni's disappearance since July 30 was "more documented and more curious" than previous eclipses of the former president of Chad.

"Whenever there was a published report in the past that he had disappeared, the Libyans promptly produced him to disprove it," one diplomat said.

"This may well happen again, though there is good evidence that he is no longer functioning at the head of the rebel Government of Chad National Unity set up by the Libyans."

The rebel radio in Bardai near the Libyan border, monitored here, claimed Goukouni escaped from Faya-Largeau when government troops overran it, but his whereabouts were being kept secret "for security reasons."

Goukouni is known to have been in Faya-Largeau during the July 30 battle, and was last seen by reliable witnesses in a jeep heading south away from Libyan lines.

Meanwhile, a special French envoy arrived in Ethiopia for talks with Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam, chairman of the Organization of African Unity and close ally of Khadafi. French officials said today.

Clarification

According to Malcolm Green, superintendent of the electrical department for Greenville Utilities, by 9 a.m. Wednesday GUC had a workman assigned to every reported outage due to Tuesday night's severe lightning storm.

The Daily Reflector incorrectly reported Wednesday that workmen were assigned to all trouble spots by Tuesday night. Green noted that crews worked throughout Tuesday night and into mid-day Wednesday repairing damage to GUC's electrical system.

Green said storm-related outages occurred at 179 locations Tuesday, an unusually high number for an electrical storm.

Marathon Parleys On AT&T Contract Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marathon contract talks continued today in North Carolina and other states as negotiators sought settlement of local issues that were holding up a broader agreement to end the nationwide strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Even though accords were reached with most of the 34 local operating companies, "we are unable to get satisfactory local agreement at all our local tables," said Duayne Trecker, spokesman for the Communications Workers of America.

"The AT&T apparently has no control of the operating companies, and the strike continues because some of the operating companies are insisting on retrogressions," said Trecker, whose union represents 525,000 of the 675,000 workers who struck AT&T on Aug. 7.

Pickers continued to march outside Southern Bell offices in Raleigh through the night as strikers waited for word on their local contract.

"We were under the impression things were going smoothly," said Linda Hagwood, CWA steward in Raleigh. "Apparently things have gone haywire. I think it's probably where they just want to change something."

"There are a number of issues," she said. "As for specifics, I don't know. We're ready to go back as soon as we receive notification."

CWA locals at Jersey Bell Telephone Co.; Chesapeake & Telephone Co., Northwestern Bell; Bell of Pennsylvania; Southern Bell; Ohio Bell, Mountain Bell; and Pacific Telephone were known to have failed to reach pacts by the deadline that had been set for midnight Wednesday.

Tentative agreement was reached early today between the CWA and New England Telephone Co., the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. and the New York Telephone Co.

Some bargaining sessions recessed early today when agreements were not reached by the deadline, but negotiations involving several operating companies were continuing.

In Washington, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. spokesman R. Webster Chamberlin said, "There wasn't a settlement." C&P covers the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Chamberlin said he hoped talks would resume "as soon as possible."

Paula Harvan, a spokeswoman for New Jersey Bell Telephone Co., said "talks have not broken off" but would switch to informal conversations today.

After the CWA's executive board approved a tentative national contract on Sunday, union president Glenn Watts expressed optimism that local accords would be negotiated quickly.

Two other striking unions, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International Union, also said they hoped local contracts would be wrapped up within 48 hours of the national agreement.

The IBEW, which represents 100,000 employees, said agreement had been reached on approximately half its local contracts. IBEW spokesman Tom Hickman said among the workers back on the job were about 20,000 of the 40,000 Western Electric employees represented by his union.

The two other unions were returning to work only if their members did not have to cross CWA picket lines, officials said.

Ray McKaughey, business agent of IBEW Local 2323 at New England Telephone, said his 2,000 members were told to honor CWA picket lines.

The three-year, $3 billion national pact provides a first-year raise of 5.5 percent for experienced workers, followed by two annual raises of 1.5 percent and cost-of-living allowances. It also provides protections for job security.

The strike affected directory assistance, operator-assisted calls and phone repair and installation.

Court Decides In Favor Of Extended School Year

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — School officials say they will move ahead with an extended school experiment, following a decision by a Superior Court judge Wednesday that the state Board of Education has the authority to set up the experiment in two North Carolina counties.

"We're going ahead with implementing the program," said Dr. Dudley Flood, associate superintendent of the Department of Public Instruction. "Both the boards and the administrative staffs have felt they have made a good decision and that they owe it to their clientele to at least try it."

"I believe that everyone in this state wants the best educational opportunities," said Judge Robert L. Farmer. "There are times that policies and programs and anything related to schools will change. When you have a change, it's not going to satisfy all people."

Farmer's decision was identical to one issued Monday by a Superior Court judge in McDowell County who refused to continue a restraining order prohibiting an extended school year in Polk County.

"We feel good about it," said Willie Lowe Jr., of the Halifax County School Board. "We are concerned about improving education in our county."

Attorney Richard Titus, who filed suit on behalf of Halifax County residents, said he would ask for a summary judgment on the merits of the case as a basis for further appeal.

"It isn't appealable right now," he added.

Andy Vanore, the state's senior deputy attorney general, said he would ask for quick action on the summary judgment motion, but could not say when a decision would be announced.

Flood said he expected the courts to maintain their posture favoring the program, adding that educators now must turn their attention to checking the effectiveness of the plan in time for a preliminary report to the Legislature next spring.

Since both counties have below-average scores on standardized tests, Flood said retesting would be among the criteria used to gauge the experiment. The General Assembly must decide whether to extend the $2.2 million project for another two years for a full evaluation, he added.

The plan, which increases the school year from 180 to 200 days in Polk and Halifax counties while adding one hour to each day, has been opposed by parents in each district for different reasons. Polk County opponents say it will rob them of vacation time with their children, while parents in the predominantly black Halifax County fear it will put their children at a disadvantage in finding summer farm work.

"We'll only have one week at Christmas and no spring break," said Susie Pack, a beautician who said she and 18 other Polk County residents got up at 3:30 a.m. to attend the 9:30 a.m. hearing in Raleigh.

"The children in Halifax County will be available for work in the county for only two months," said Titus. "They must compete with children from Roanoke Rapids, who will be available for three months."

The plaintiffs alleged that the experiment violates constitutional requirements of a uniform educational system and that the state General Assembly did not fully authorize the program.

"If uniformity means anything, it has to mean there is an equal instructional amount across the state," Titus said.

But Edwin Speas Jr., of the Attorney General's Office, said uniformity was disallowed in earlier experiments.

"We saw the same thing with kindergarten projects in 1969 to 1971," Speas said. After studying the impact of kindergarten in several counties, the General Assembly appropriated $100 million in 1973 to make it statewide, he said.

The plaintiffs said most people at both local and state board hearings were opposed to the plan, but that their opinions were ignored.

"It was done only by trampling the rights and sensibilities of the people," said Gwynn Radeker, an attorney representing Polk County residents.

Speas, however, said the Polk County application included endorsements from the Chamber of Commerce, Board of County Commissioners and the PTA.

Dozen Injured In Derailment

ROWLAND, N.C. (AP) — An Amtrak passenger train collided with a tractor-trailer at a crossing in downtown Rowland early today, derailing two locomotives and three passenger cars, and sending a dozen passengers to the hospital.

Most of the injuries appeared to be bumps and bruises, according to dispatcher Ricky Smith of the Robeson County Sheriff's Department. He said one locomotive overturned, but the three passenger cars remained upright.

St. Eugene's Community

Hospital in Dillon, S.C., treated and released 11 people and admitted one elderly woman for observation, nursing supervisor Mildred McClain said.

"They were thrown about inside the train and suffered minor injuries — bumps, bruises and cuts," she said. "The elderly woman had hip surgery recently and we want to be sure there has been no damage."

Smith said the crash destroyed a low-boy truck hauling a crane and tore down power lines. He said the low trailer apparently grounded on new paving at the railroad crossing and became stuck across the railroad tracks.

Smith said there appeared to be little damage to surrounding property.

He said railroad officials were contacting local bus companies to arrange transportation for the remaining passengers on the 18-car train.

Ira Furman, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said 408 passengers were aboard the train. He said the train originated in Miami and St. Petersburg, Fla., and was bound for Washington and New York.

A highway investigator from Atlanta and a railroad investigator from New York were being dispatched to the scene, Furman said.

Services Planned

The New Bern District YPHA will convene at Holy Mission Holy Church Friday-Sunday. The following services have been scheduled:

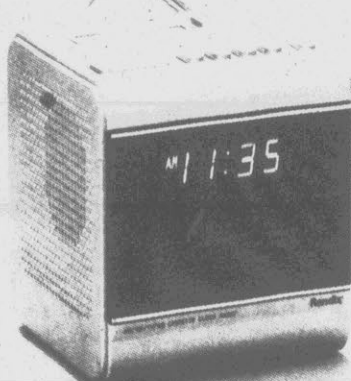

•Friday, 7:30 p.m., Pearl Davis and evangelist Gwendolyn Phillips will be the speakers and the Holy Mission Church Choir will sing.

•Saturday, 7:30 p.m. the Rev. Garfield Humphrey and the New Bern District Choir will be in charge.

•Sunday, 11 a.m., Eldress Shirley Atkinson will deliver the message and the Philadelphia Holy Church Choir will sing; 7:30 p.m., the Rev. C. Swindell and Mills Chapel will be in charge.

The services are open to the public.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 50.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Two few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is firm and the live supply is light for a good demand. Weights light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,758,000, compared to 1,780,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed some scattered losses today, continuing their decline of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 18.90 points Tuesday and Wednesday, dropped .92 to 1,183.33 by noon today.

Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

U.S. Steel slipped 3/4 to 27 1/4 in active trading. The company announced a price increase of about 7 percent for its sheet and strip steel products.

No other stocks among the volume leaders posted more than fractional changes.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .29 to 93.15. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.60 at 226.42.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 31.91 million shares at noon, against 30.16 million at the same point Wednesday.

Assembly Freshman's Impressions Are Heard

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Rep. Walter Jones Jr. gave members of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce a freshman's view of the Legislature at a coffee talk this morning.

Jones, appointed to fill the term of the late Sam Bundy in the opening weeks of the General Assembly, said one of the first pieces of advice given him after taking the oath of office on Feb. 8 came from House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Ramsey, Jones said, "told me ... 'Try to get to know each and every member of the Legislature. It helps to have friends.'"

The freshman lawmaker, son of 1st Congressional District Rep. Walter Jones Sr., said "it's hard to commit yourself (to support) on some bills" to constituents or to other members of the General Assembly.

"Changes in wording of the bill in committee can make the bill entirely different," Jones said.

Outlining the legislative process, Jones said bills introduced in the House of Representatives first go to the proper House committee where they are debated and discussed, and the sponsor explains the bill.

If the committee reports unfavorably on the bill "the bill is dead for all practical purposes."

If the committee report is favorable, the proposed law goes to the floor of the House for debate and discussion. If adopted by the House, the bill is then sent to the Senate, where it follows a similar process. If the Senate approves the measure, the bill becomes law.

Jones said "there is a constant compromise ... a give and take," on the part of legislators working to have proposals enacted. One legislator will vote for someone else's bill in order to gain support for a measure he wants passed, Jones suggested.

The lawmaker said the Safe Roads Act, which goes into effect Oct. 1, received a lot of public support. "The people wanted a stronger law" to deal with the drinking driver, according to Jones, who said the new law is one of the toughest laws in the nation.

Sections of the Safe Roads Act which have received little attention, the lawmaker said, provide for roadblocks to check for drinking drivers, provide a 10-day pretrial revocation of a drivers' license if the driver refuses to take a chemical test for alcohol and in cases where a driver's blood alcohol content is .10 percent or greater, and provide for a one-year revocation of a drivers' license if he is ordered by the court to attend an alcohol school and fails to complete it.

Jones said he and other members of the General Assembly "saw the need for other sources of revenue" for the state, other than taxes.

One such new source, he said, which the General Assembly considered but failed to act on, was a state lottery.

He expressed his desire to let the people of the state have the opportunity to vote on such a measure. "I feel like we should give the people an opportunity to vote," he said.

According to Jones, "I feel it is a privilege and an honor to represent you in Raleigh. It's a very, very important job for me, a full-time job."

"Many many people out here need help. That's what gives me the gratification. That's what public service is — serving people."

Nobody Wants The Lead

By The Associated Press
The National League East appears to be turning into the race nobody wants to win.

"This just gives you an idea of how much balance there is in this division. We're losing, but so are Philadelphia and Montreal and St. Louis," Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said Wednesday night after the Pirates were beaten for the sixth time in seven games and still remained within one-half game of first place.

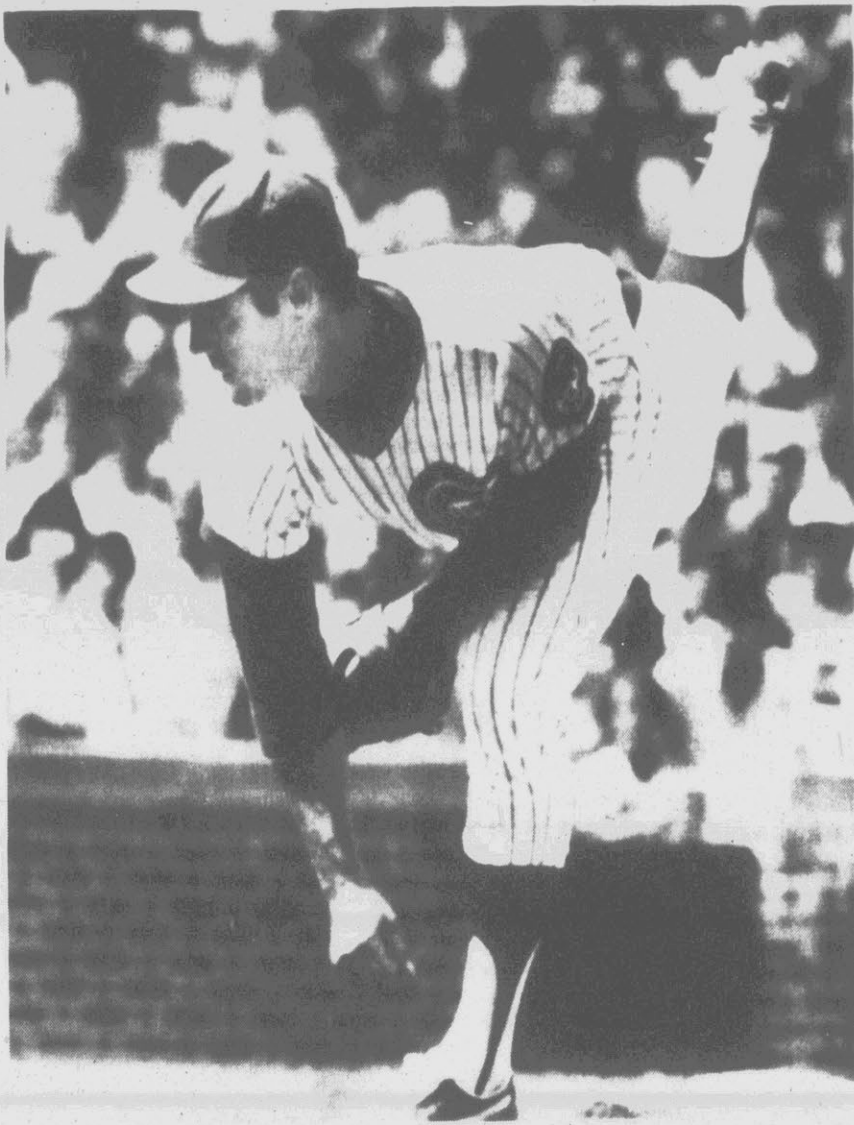

While Chicago's Chuck Rainey was no-hitting Cincinnati for 8 2-3 innings — losing his line in the record book when Eddie Milner singled — and finishing with a one-hit 3-0 triumph for the second-division Cubs' second victory in three games under Manager Charlie Fox, the teams at the top continued to stagger.

The Pirates' 10-4 loss to Houston permitted Philadelphia to retain its slender division lead, even though the Phillies were stung 5-3 by San Francisco. Second-place St. Louis and third-place Montreal fared no better, the Cardinals losing 11-3 to Atlanta to stay two games back and the Expos falling 3-2 in Los Angeles to stay 2½ games off the pace. In the other NL game, San Diego edged New York 3-2.

Mike Madden pitched one-hit ball for six innings — he left after giving up Pittsburgh's second-hit, Dave Parker's two-run homer in the seventh — and hit a two-run single in Houston's five-run fifth inning. Dickie Thon and Bill Doran each homered and Jerry Mumphrey and Phil Garner had two doubles apiece in the Astros' 16-hit assault.

"Everybody's in it and there's a lot of baseball left," said Tanner. "One reason why everybody is doing so poorly is there's so much balance in this division. Just look what this division has done the last four years (three World Series winners).

"Everybody is tough and there's only 12 games from top to bottom in the division. No other division is like that. Chicago and New York are fifth and sixth and they might have the best bullpens in the division."

"You could say we're still really lucky to be in it," said Pirates relief ace Kent Tekulve. "You could say we should have been out of it by now. But there's another game tomorrow and we just have to hope for the best."

And third baseman Bill Madlock predicted: "Any team that wins five games in the last week will probably win it."

Cubs 3, Reds 0

Milner's two-out, ninth-inning single ruined Rainey's no-hitter, but not his goal.

"My primary concern was the CG," his first complete game of the season, Rainey said. But the no-hitter was on his mind. "As I got closer to the end, I got more and more conscious of it. But the only time it got to me was at the start of the ninth when I felt kind of unnerved. So I took a step off the mound and told myself to calm down."

Rainey got the first two batters on grounders before Milner, who had become Cincinnati's first runner with a seventh-inning walk, singled up the middle.

Steroid Use Is Gamble With Health, ECU Trainer Asserts

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"Athletes who use anabolic steroids are gambling with their health," East Carolina University Sports Medicine Director Rod Compton says.

Compton's comments come in the wake of a number of athletes having their medals voided at the Pan American games, and others leaving the games prior to competing. Urine tests run on the athletes after their performances, according to Compton, can turn up not only the use of steroids, but other drugs as well, both those okayed for use and illegal ones.

"These drugs were designed for use, in small amounts, for geriatric patients and for those with a hormone deficiency. But the athletes who are taking them, for the most part, are taking far more, five or more times, what is recommended for those using it in proper therapy."

It has been found that the drugs will help build muscles and bulk and to a certain amount, strength, over a short period of time. Many athletes in the past, who have used them, have been able to get away with it because the testing processes have been unproductive of showing that they are using it. But new tests are now showing up use as long as eight months previous.

"Some athletes will quit the use of the anabolic or synthetic steroids and use straight hormones instead for a time before competing, hoping to fool the tests. But even then, the higher level than normal of the hormone shows up, giving them away," Compton said.

According to the NCAA, the use of these steroids has been known to cause:

- Premature closure of the growing plates in the long bones in younger athletes, and the younger the athlete when used, the more stunted growth can be.
- Liver damage.
- Enlargement of the prostate gland.
- Testicular atrophy.
- Aggravation and stimulation of the growth of any pre-existing cancers or hormone sensitive tumors.
- Gastric ulcers.

- Personality changes.
- The development of high blood pressure.
- Masculinizing changes in the female athlete.
- Primary liver cancer as demonstrated by current medical reports.

In addition, Compton said, they could cause sterility in both sexes, promote the growth of breasts in the male, alter the menstrual cycle in the female, and present other problems. The question of what, if any, changes in human genes is caused by steroids is still unknown.

"The Olympics have always banned steroids," Compton said, "and games they sanction, such as the Pan American, must follow suit. Those who are proven to have used steroids are banned from all Olympic competition and sanctioned competition."

Several years ago, there were accusations that Eastern bloc athletes were making great use of steroids not only the strength athletes like weight lifters and shot putters, but swimmers, too. However, according to Compton, tests at that time were not as accurate as those today when the athlete has been caught up to by the science of detection.

While the NCAA frowns on all usage of non-prescribed or non-therapeutic drugs, to Compton's knowledge there has never been as case of the NCAA banning an athlete because of drug usage, especially steroids. "The problem is the testing procedure is very expensive. We checked into it and it would cost about $15 per athlete just to check for the easy drugs that show up. Steroids and the like would cost more."

Compton added that about five years ago, the NCAA did a random spot check of athletes across the country and that East Carolina has been a part of that check. "We were involved in the basketball checking and without their knowing kept track of our athletes. They tested for a number of substances. They didn't turn up anything except one person who was on a prescription medicine. But then too, I don't know how sophisticated those test were as compared to today's."

As far as East Carolina is concerned, there has never been any "official" findings of the use of steroids. "I think it's fairly safe to say that some athletes here have used them," Compton said. "However, there have never been any tests done, and no one has admitted to it."

"We did have one athlete who came in a few years ago who had been given a small dosage by his family doctor, and we talked with him about it, and after a few weeks he quit taking it," Compton said. "That's the only known use of it as far as I know."

Compton said that the sports medicine staff has talked with individual athletes about steroid use and its perils, usually on a one-to-one basis. "We have tried to set up a drug information program for the athletes, but so far we haven't gotten it approved (by the athletic department)."

"When any athlete asks us about it, though, we fill them in, telling them the dangers of it."

Compton said the use of steroids by athletes appear to bring out four big Americanism that seem to dominate athletics today: "One, winning is the only aspect; two, bigger is better; three, getting something for nothing; and four, getting quick success."

"Now all these things may work for a while, but somewhere down the line you've got to pay the piper."

"We still don't know what the piper is really going to charge."

FSU's Lowrey To Be Ready

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State quarterback Kelly Lowrey, who sustained a bruised shoulder in practice Tuesday morning, will be out the rest of the week, officials say.

"It's not a separation as was originally believed," Florida State Sports Information Director Wayne Hogan said. "But he's going to be out the rest of this week."

"It doesn't appeal to be too serious," Hogan said. "At this point, it looks like he's probably for the East Carolina game."

Florida State plays host to East Carolina Sept. 3 in the season opener for both teams. Hogan said FSU coaches "are going to let (Lowrey) give it a whirl on Monday."

Lowrey completed 113 of 217 passes last year for 11 touchdowns and 1,671 yards. Junior Bob Davis, who threw only two passes last season, has replaced Lowrey.

Coach Bobby Bowden said Lowrey's injury brought to mind the question of depth.

"In some areas we've got depth, but there are several areas where we don't even have a first team yet," Bowden said. "We're not a solid first team yet, offense, defense or kicking game."

The heat let up for the afternoon practice, and Bowden said, "The cool weather made a lot of difference this afternoon. It was terribly hot this morning, but we get a lot of things done when it's cool."

Panthers Hope To Build Off Last Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
BETHEL — Last year, North Pitt's Panthers were the surprise team of the East, posting a 6-2-2 record and gaining a third-share of the Eastern Carolina Conference championship. Along the way, the Panthers lost only once in the final nine games of the year, but still stayed home when the post-season playoffs began. Ayden-Grifton, which had been there the year before, won the draw for the Division I playoffs, and SouthWest Edgecombe, which had lost out in a draw the year before, pulled the Division II berth, leaving North Pitt to sit and watch at home. Still, nothing could erase the fact that the Panthers had put together their greatest season ever on the gridiron. And Coach B.T. Chappell, who was named area Coach of the Year in recognition of the Panthers' year, is hopeful that there will be some carryover into this season, despite the fact that many of those who led the way have graduated. "I'm both pleased and disappointed with the way things have gone so far," Chappell said. "I'm real pleased over the fact that we have more numbers than we've ever had before," the coach said. "But so many of them are coming out for the first time in several years. We have a number of seniors who will be in key roles who have not played since they were in the eighth grade, and a few who have never played before."

Still, Chappell feels, the Panthers have possibilities. "We're in bad shape as far as experience goes, and it's probably going to take us a while to get them to do the things we want them to do. But if we can learn quickly, I think we will be all right."

The coach said that gaining quick experience will be important, since two of those seniors who haven't played since the eighth grade will probably start at quarterback and tailback, two key positions. "You can't expect them to play like veterans, but how quickly they come on will determine how we do."

There are several starters back on offense, but several of them may see different roles this year. Among the returnees are tackle Reginald Williams, tight end Daniel Keel, wingback Alvin Grimes, and split ends Gentry Sneed and Ricky Hines. Guard Ricky Perkins also started at times last year.

However, Williams will probably be at a guard position this season, and Perkins at fullback, as an example of some of the changes made. "Our offensive line is a big question mark. We've taken some of our running backs and converted them to linemen just recently, trying to get more there," Chappell said. "We have some pretty quick people, like Grimes, and we still might move him to fullback and move Perkins back into the line."

Top candidates at the offensive tackle spots include Tony Summerlin and Mike Carraway, with Tyrone Silver, Hassel Ebrom and James Jenkins all battling for the slot. At the guards are Chris Ayers, another of the seniors returning for the first time in several years, and Williams. Others include Johnny Thigpen and the three running backs recently switched, Tony Ward, Darrell Smith and Walter Johnson.

Buddy Beddard is at center, backed up by Jenkins and Thigpen. Keel returns to the tight end position, with help from Ronnie Howard and Barry Strickland. Ronnie Ebron handles the split end duties, with Mike Staton, Jesse Purvis and Timmy L. Brown in reserve.

Hines and Grimes will alternate at wingback, with Truman Baker and Lynwood Harris in reserve. Quintin Yarrell, another senior with no experience since the eighth grade, is likely to start at quarterback, while Sneed could also appear here. Both missed a week of practice, one ill and the other out-of-town, but have done well. Daniel Keel has also worked some here.

Keith Clark is at tailback, backed up by Paul Streeter and Michael Taylor, while Ronnie Perkins appears set for fullback. Grimes could also play here some, also. "We haven't spent as much time on our defense as we have on the offense, but in our scrimmage, it didn't look that way," Chappell said. "I think our defense will be pretty good."

Keel, Hines and Ebron all saw duty at defensive end last year and are expected to play this year here too. Howard and Jenkins could also see action at the spot. Perkins and Williams are the leaders at the tackle spots, with Mike Carraway, Ayers and Summerlin adding depth. "We've sacrificed size for speed at guard," Chappell said, noting Beddard, Johnson, Smith and Ebron are the likely people here.

Grimes is the top man back at linebacker, with Taylor, Clark, Street and Baker as possible running mates. Sneed returns to lead the secondary, while Staton, Purvis, Yarrell, Clark, Harris and Strickland could all see time here. "We have more depth at our skill positions than in the past," Chappell said. "But the line is still our biggest question mark. If they come around, I think we'll be able to move the ball."

The kicking game is also somewhat of a question mark. "Keel will do the punting, but he's been inconsistent so far. He's also looking the best for placements. Perkins will probably handle the kickoffs." Like most coaches, Chappell feels that SouthWest Edgecombe should be the team to beat in the Eastern Carolina Conference race. Farmville Central and Ayden-Grifton should also be strong.

But as the defending co-champs, North Pitt has set no goals of repeating. "I've told our kids that our goal is to improve from game to game. I hope that the attitude stays good and will improve. So many times if you don't have success, you start getting negative attitudes. If our people can learn fast enough, then we'll have success. I just hope it comes quickly enough so that we can be ready for our conference games."

And, who knows, maybe the Panthers will be in the thick once again.

Blue Jay Hopes Are Picked Off

By The Associated Press

With infielder Lenn Sakata behind the plate and outfielders John Lowenstein and Gary Roenicke playing second base and third, respectively, after a series of pinch hitters, the Baltimore Orioles appeared to have their defenses out of sync. Instead, it was the Toronto Blue Jays who got caught with their guard down.

"In a pennant race," said Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez, "you've got to do things that a lot of people have never seen before."

Cliff Johnson homered off Tim Stoddard in the top of the 10th to give Toronto a 4-3 lead and when Barry Bonnell singled, Martinez took over.

Martinez caught Bonnell off first and he was tagged out by first baseman Eddie Murray after he ran almost all the way to second. Pinch hitter Dave Collins walked ... and was picked off. Willie Upshaw beat out an infield hit ... and was picked off.

"They seemed to be pretty anxious to get off the bag," Martinez said. "I could see in their faces and their movements that they were raring to go."

"Tippy is not foolish," said Lowenstein, who had played 70 games at second base, but not since 1975. "He threw to Murray because he was the only man he recognized in the infield."

In the bottom of the 10th, Cal Ripken Jr. led off with a solo homer and Sakata slammed a three-run shot with two out, giving the Orioles a 7-4 victory and keeping them one-half game behind Milwaukee in the American League East. The Brewers nipped the California Angels 1-0 in 14 innings.

Elsewhere, the Detroit Tigers downed the Texas Rangers 5-2, the New York Yankees defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-3, the Chicago White Sox edged the Kansas City Royals 4-3 in 10 innings, the Minnesota Twins edged the Boston Red Sox 8-7 and the Cleveland Indians swept a doubleheader from the Oakland A's 1-0 and 4-2.

Sakata hit his second home run of the season off Randy Moffitt, but Joey McLaughlin, who surrendered Ripken's homer, was the loser. After Ripken tied the score, Murray walked and took second on Lowenstein's grounder. McLaughlin was lifted following an intentional walk to John Shelby and Moffitt fanned Roenicke for the second out before Sakata connected, snapping Toronto's 12-game winning streak in extra-inning contests.

The Orioles, held to two hits for eight innings by Jim Clancy, tied it 3-3 in the ninth on RBI singles by pinch hitter Benny Ayala and Al Bumbry off Dave Geisel.

Brewers 1, Angels 0 Robin Yount singled with the bases loaded and none out in the 14th after Don Sutton and Jim Slaton held the Angels to 10 hits. Andy Hassler relieved to start the 14th and gave up a leadoff double to Jim Gantner. After a wild pitch, Paul Molitor and Charlie Moore were walked intentionally and Yount lined a 1-2 pitch into center field.

Fred Lynn singled to open the California ninth and was sacrificed to second. Daryl Sconiers singled to left, but Ben Oglivie's throw nailed Lynn at the plate.

Tigers 5, Rangers 2 Lou Whitaker hit a tie-breaking, three-run inside-the-park home run in the top of the ninth to give Jack Morris his eighth consecutive triumph, tying him with Chicago's LaMarr Hoyt as the winningest pitchers in the majors with 16 apiece. Morris scattered seven hits and struck out nine. Bill Stein's two-run pinch homer put Texas ahead 2-1 in the seventh. Detroit tied it in the eighth inning when Alan Trammell singled and scored on Lance Parrish's double.

Yankees 6, Mariners 3

Omar Moreno's three-run homer, his first home run in 443 at-bats this season, capped a four-run sixth inning and Ron Guidry scattered nine hits in pitching his 15th complete game — one short of his career high — and eighth in a row. After Bert Campaneris' RBI single made it 3-2 and chased Seattle starter Bryan Clark, Moreno greeted Ed Vande Berg with a line drive that barely cleared the right-field wall. The Yankees added a run in the eighth on a run-scoring single by Moreno, whose four RBI tied his career high.

White Sox 4, Royals 3

Ron Kittle's grounder scored Rudy Law from third base with one out in the 10th as Chicago opened a nine-game lead over Kansas City in the West. Law opened the inning with a single off Royals relief ace Dan Quisenberry, stole his 59th base and was sacrificed to third. Harold Baines was intentionally walked and Kittle beat out a grounder to shortstop U.L. Washington deep in the hole as Law scored. Chicago starter Richard Dotson, 14-7, allowed eight hits in nine innings.

Twins 8, Red Sox 7

John Castino's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning drove in the winning run as Len Whitehouse boosted his record to 7-1 and Ron Davis picked up his 25th save. With the score tied 7-7, Tom Brunansky led off with a walk off Bob Stanley, was sacrificed to second and took to third on Darrell Brown's single before Castino's game-winning fly ball.

Jim Rice and Tony Armas homered for Boston, while Minnesota's Mickey Hatcher rapped a two-run double and Castino added an RBI single.

Indians 1-4, A's 0-2

Neal Heaton hurled a five-hitter in the opener and fellow rookie Julio Franco doubled and scored in the fourth inning. Heaton struck out four and walked one while pitching his third complete game and second shutout. Only three runners reached second base against the left-hander, who has won his last four starts, compiling a 1.29 earned run average in 35 innings.

Chowan Coach Very Unhappy

RALEIGH (AP) — Chowan College football coach Jim Garrison says he thinks North Carolina State may have violated NCAA rules in signing Chowan running back Joe Greene.

The NCAA and the Atlantic Coast Conference has taken no action in the recruiting of Greene, a Norlina native who rushed for 1,200 yards last year as a Chowan freshman.

"My office has not heard anything about the situation," ACC Commissioner Bob James said Wednesday. "I have not been contacted by anyone, nor have I heard anything from N.C. State."

Jamie McCloskey of the NCAA Enforcement Division said that from what he has heard, he could "see no problem" with the signing.

"As far as we know, we are not being investigated," said N.C. State legal adviser Dr. Clauston Jenkins.

Garrison said he had not discussed the matter with the NCAA and had "dropped the whole thing."

"I had written it off as one of those things," he said. The controversy arose when Greene, a two-sport star at Warren County High, signed a national letter of intent with the Wolfpack on the final day of national signings, April 30.

A Wolfpack assistant reportedly took the letter to Warrenton. Warren High coach Bill Frazier then carried the letter to Greene and obtained signatures from him and his parents.

The transaction occurred during the NCAA period of "no contact" of prospective athletes. Rules specify that Division I coaches cannot leave campus for the purpose of recruiting between March 1 and Dec. 1.

The question of violation apparently hinges on whether the assistant traveled to Warrenton at his own expense and if Frazier became a representative of the Wolfpack while delivering the letter of intent to Greene.

A.G. Cox Sets Practice Start

WINTERVILLE — Football practice for A.G. Cox Junior High School in Winterville will get underway on Monday.

Prospective players are asked to report to the school at 4 p.m. with t-shirts, shorts and shoes.

Plans for physicals will be discussed at that time.

scattered seven hits in seven innings and doubled to spark a four-run third inning that enabled Atlanta to snap the Cardinals' six-game winning streak. Glenn Hubbard and Rafael Ramirez each homered and Terry Harper and Randy Johnson had three hits apiece. Padres 3, Mets 2

Tim Lollar scattered eight hits in 8 2/3 innings and tripled home a run as the Padres beat New York and their old nemesis, Tom Seaver, who entered the game with a 33-9 career record against San Diego.

McCrory, Favors Among U.S. Boxers Beaten

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)

— The cockiness of a U.S.

boxing team that had pre-

in the IX Pan American Games is gone and so is its perfect record, vanquished by a

Dominican's furious fists,

the partisan chants of a

Playboy Advisor Gives Thousands Candid Advice

ADVISOR — James Peterson relaxes in his Chicago office. A 35-year-old bachelor, Peterson is to 700 letters a month. (AP Playboy's Advisor — the magazine's Laserphoto)

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — James Peterson's mother brags about her son even though he's not a doctor, a lawyer or an accountant. Instead, he's obsessed with S-E-X.

For Peterson, love and lust, infidelity and impotency, virginity and venereal disease and hundreds of other topics relating to sex are all part of a day's work.

Peterson, a 35-year-old bachelor, is Playboy's Advisor, the magazine's columnist who offers candid counsel about sex — using an Ann Landers' forum with a Masters-and-Johnson approach.

"This is my beat," Peterson says. "I'm like the guy who can quote you batting averages from the 1902 World Series."

And, he says, his family is proud of his knowledge. His mother, he says, is "really pleased" with his work and even owns a T-shirt that says, "I'm the Playboy Advisor's Mother and Proud of It."

Peterson, too, is supremely confident of his work.

Indeed, he claims he's better at responding to sex questions than many therapists. "People who are sex experts don't know how to write about sex," he says. "They talk to you like a moron or talk to you like you're a Ph.D."

And, he says, "most sex experts only know one or two things."

Not Peterson, to hear him tell it. In 10 years on the job, tens of thousands of letters — averaging 300 to 700 a month — have poured into his office.

About a third are written by women. Writers range from a 12-year-old who had a crush on a teen-age boy to a 90-year-old man whose 85-year-old wife was unfaithful.

The letters range from the banal, with questions about dating etiquette, to the bizarre, such as one in which a couple trained their dog to approach young women they were interested in for menage a trois relationships.

Many are racy, with questions about eccentric sexual fantasies, orgasms, techniques and performances. Peterson also responds to queries about herpes, marital boredom, homosexuality, vasectomies — and even birth control in the Old West.

Some letters, Peterson says, are remembered by readers for years.

One, he said, was a man who wrote him saying he'd come across information in a shoebox in his lover's closet indicating she was once a man. Peterson's response: "That's what you get for prowling around." And, "if you couldn't tell the difference, it doesn't make a difference."

Peterson — whose responses are often dull or flip — says he tries to remain non-judgmental when reading letters and researching responses.

"I've given up the word normal," he says. "You can come up with the strangest activity you can think of and I can come up with four or five letters on the same thing."

"I'm not allowed to come down hard on our readers," he adds. "But once every four or five months, I call someone a jerk."

Peterson, who worked briefly at Psychology Today before coming to Playboy, reads about four medical journals regularly and calls on sex therapists and other experts to help answer questions.

Since the column began 20 years ago, the nature of the questions has changed. About 15 years ago, he says, the big question was "will she or won't she" — premarital sex.

"There was only one anxiety," Peterson says. "Now there are a hundred anxieties. There were four scripts. Now there are 20. That's raised the general anxiety level but it's also made life easier. The sexual revolution says here are 20, find one that fits."

Despite this revolution, Peterson says couples are still inhibited and many people can't talk with their partners about sex.

"If people could really talk easily to one another," he says, "I would be out of a job."

Road Overseer Locates Bargains To Save Cash

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer
FITZGERALD, Ga. (AP) — Dewey McGlamry has been rummaging through Uncle Sam's junkyards for 45 years, finding bargains, and saving the taxpayers of Ben

Hill County an estimated $1 million a year.

That's important to the south Georgia county of 16,000 people, nearly 4,000 of whom live below the government-defined poverty level. They simply won't let the youthful 70-year-old McGlamry retire.

"I started to retire five years ago after my second heart attack," said McGlamry, the county's road superintendent since 1939. "But the folks around here wouldn't let me, and I'm glad they didn't."

"I've worked all my life, and as long as my health holds out I hope I can continue to work in Ben Hill County where my friends are. I enjoy my life."

McGlamry oversees the maintenance of the county's roads and bridges from a county-owned ranch home. He is surrounded by workshops filled with motors and compressors, warehouses stacked to the roof with tires and acre after acre of government surplus vehicles, spare parts and every building material imaginable.

"I got them all surplus," the khaki-clad McGlamry said during a tour of the 160-acre complex that included demonstrations of the working condition of the equipment.

He refuses to calculate how much he's saved the county over the past four and a half decades of grabbing up the government's castoffs. But he won't argue with the county commission's estimate of $1 million a year.

"They say I'm pretty tight, but I don't know," he said. "I just try to be conservative with the county's money. I'm not criticizing, but some counties don't care about saving money, because they don't think they're spending their own money. But they are."

McGlamry's concern goes beyond his own 38-employee department, however. Over the years, he's obtained surplus trash trucks for the sanitation department, surplus autos for the sheriff, surplus bedding for the jail, surplus furniture for the senior citizens' center and surplus recreation equipment for the parks.

He sells the timber growing on the road-department complex and the county right-of-ways, with the money going to the county treasury. Low-income families can get firewood free of charge from him, however.

To hold down his own department's expenses, he buys old mobile homes, repairs them and lets his employees live in them. "We can hold down salary costs that way and I've got them here for emergencies."

His special project is the restoration of an 18-bunk bed cage, a remnant of the Georgia chain-gang days. "I'm going to put it out by the highway and let kids look at it. To see something like that might make some of them stay on the straight and narrow."

McGlamry is proud of his stockpile of government surplus. "Some people look at it and see junk. I look at it and see what it can be used for, what it's really worth."

For example, he purchased two road scrapers for a total of $3,700. Now repaired, they each are worth about $150,000. Four restored autos purchased for $400 each are now worth about $13,000 each.

McGlamry used to buy at government auctions. But new regulations allow him to purchase directly from surplus centers or from the individual agencies.

Tie Victims To Smuggling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eleven people killed two weeks ago as their car fled from Border Patrol agents were all illegal aliens, two of them smuggling the others into the United States, officials say.

The car containing the 11 people collided about 2 a.m. on Aug. 10 with a tractor-trailer truck at the intersection of Highway 86 — a desert road known as "Blood Alley" — and Avenue 62, California Highway Patrol officers said.

"All were illegal aliens involved in smuggling activities," U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman John Belluaro said Tuesday.

"We have sworn testimony from people who reside in the United States who knew of the smuggling operation, but there were no American citizens involved," Belluaro said. "Two (of the victims) were smugglers and nine were illegal aliens being smuggled in."

INS agents near the Mexican border "were just routinely observing the traffic and they noticed the car riding very low," Belluaro said.

"It had the typical smugglers' profile so they followed behind it to get the license plate," he said. "They were observed by the smugglers who took off at a high rate of speed, which led to the accident."

The cars reached speeds up to 100 mph during the 30-mile chase, the CHP said. The driver of the truck involved in the accident was unhurt.

REPORT DEATHS

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Seventy-two men, women and children have died of gastro-enteritis in two cities of northwestern Nepal, the Nepalese National News Agency reports.

Cite Risks Of Space Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — A military research group says a moratorium on space weapons is needed to prevent an escalation of the U.S.-Soviet arms race that would increase the possibility of nuclear war.

In a study by the Center for Defense Information urged the two nations to observe a moratorium on anti-satellite weaponry. For 15 years, the Soviets have tested a "killer satellite." The United States is scheduled to begin testing its first anti-satellite weapon later this year.

"The superpowers are faced with a unique but fleeting arms control opportunity," said Gene R. La Rocque, a retired Navy rear admiral who is the center's director. "If we allow this opportunity to evaporate, war in space will become more likely, a war which inevitably will engulf the earth."

Unable Require First Aid Kits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court says government regulators have the legal authority to require airlines to carry more sophisticated first-aid kits for the treatment of serious in-flight illness.

But U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here has ruled that it couldn't force the Federal Aviation Administration to adopt the rules even though the agency had the power to impose them itself.

"Ace is the place with the Highest Hardware Plan"

9 reasons why the Texas Instruments Home Computer is the smartest one you can buy.

It's easy to use.

All you do is take it home, plug in a cartridge, and you're ready to go. Why is it so easy to use? Because it's also one of the most powerful home computers in the world. And it's that extra power that makes everything easier. It lets us give you most of the instructions you'll need right on screen. In plain English, not computerese. It lets us give you more elaborate programs. And extra options like speech, which most home computers can never give you.

TI gives your child a headstart that could last a lifetime.

It's more accurate.

At the heart of our home computer is a powerful 16-bit microprocessor just like the ones found in expensive professional computers. Its 13 decimal digit accuracy far exceeds that found in such computers as Apple, Commodore and Atari, which use much less powerful 8-bit processors.

3.

It can do wonders for your children.

No home computer can give your child more help than ours. We offer more easy-to-use educational cartridges, developed with more leading educational publishers, than any other computer in the world. Each one is designed to make learning fun. With a TI Home Computer, your child can get a headstart in school that could last a lifetime.

It can help organize your life.

A TI Home Computer can do many of the same things for you that professional computers do for businesses. It can help you make intelligent financial decisions. It can be the world's most efficient file cabinet. It can be your personal secretary. It can help you design a physical fitness program. Or a diet. Its uses are nearly unlimited.

More educational cartridges than any other computer in the world.

It makes it easy to learn to program.

Unlike some computers, our language, TI BASIC, is built in so there's no extra cost. And not only is it easy to learn, you'll also get a free programming manual. And when you start programming, you'll find that our computer is powerful enough to let you write longer and more useful programs than most other home computers. For example, ours is the only home computer that lets you combine color, graphics, animation, sound effects, music and speech all in a single BASIC program.

It lets you play games that challenge your mind, not just your reflexes.

When it comes to games, the power and sophistication of our computer let you play some of the most exciting arcade-style games you've ever seen. But that's just the beginning. We also give you a full range of games that let you and your children exercise your logic, strategy and problem-solving abilities. Once you try them, we think you'll find them the most exciting games of all.

7.

We give you a free course.

When you buy a TI Home Computer, we'll give the family a free course in how to use it. To make sure you know how to unlock the full potential of your new computer. And to let you work with a wide selection of our software, so you can decide which ones would be most useful for you. To register for your free course, simply call our toll-free help number.

We give you a toll-free help number.

We don't just sell you a computer and wave goodbye. With our toll-free help number, you can call us with any kind of question at all. Before or after you buy. The number is 800-TI-CARES. Because we do.

We give you the longest warranty.

Most computers, even those costing thousands more, only give you three months. We give you a full year. We're the only ones who do this because at TI we have some of the toughest quality control standards in the industry.

And if that's not enough, how about...

North Carolina Counting Large Heat Wave Losses

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

After a week of triple-digit temperatures, North Carolina farmers are counting their losses, utility companies are struggling to meet record power demands, air-conditioning repairmen are working day and night and beer and ice-cream sales are booming.

As the state bakes in the record heat, people are trying to come up with ways to stay cool.

"We're selling cold beer and soft drinks hand over fist," said Mike Brawley of Mike's Discount Beer Inc. in Charlotte. "People want something to cool them off."

At Carowinds Theme Park on the South Carolina line near Charlotte, tourists have flocked to Ocean Isle this week to let the waves wash over them.

"Everybody wants to get in the water to get cool," said a Carowinds spokesman. "It's been one of our busiest times this summer."

But the heat wave will cost consumers. Crops and livestock already have been severely damaged by the scorching weather. Power-company spokesmen say customers should brace themselves for higher electricity bills for August — possibly the hottest August on record for the state.

"There's no doubt, when we set demand records, bills will be higher," said Andy Thompson, a spokesman for Duke Power Co. "And when we have to buy electricity to meet customer demand, that's expensive and it will be passed along to the customers in their bills."

Duke customers used 11,554 megawatts of electricity Tuesday, surpassing the record of 11,536 megawatts set Monday. The utility was forced to buy power from Appalachian Power Co.

Carolina Power & Light Co. customers used 6.9 million kilowatts Tuesday, just short of the record 6.92 kilowatts used Monday.

North Carolina, along with the entire Southeast, has sizzled in record-breaking temperatures this week. National Weather Service officials say this month may turn out to be the hottest August ever recorded in the state.

In Raleigh Tuesday, the temperature hit 100 for the fifth day in a row. Asheville recorded a high of 98, breaking its 1968 record of 93 for that date. Charlotte had a high of 93, up from its 1967 record of 99.

The hot spot in the state was Fayetteville, with a blistering 106.

A series of storms moving across the state early Wednesday lowered temperatures into the 70s. Winds in the Fayetteville area were clocked at 70 mph and hail was reported.

Agriculture officials say relief from the storms may be too late to help crops and livestock.

Statewide, the North Carolina Agriculture Department said poultry farmers lost more than 600,000 broilers between Friday and Tuesday. The state's poultry producers process 8 million to 9 million broilers each week.

Agriculture officials say it will be a few weeks before they have estimates on how much the heat will cost farmers and consumers but they say they expect the losses to be "disastrous."

The poultry industry is the state's second-largest agribusiness behind tobacco, bringing in $780 million a year.

In Union and Duplin counties — the state's top broiler and turkey producing areas — farmers have lost thousands of birds to the heat.

"Since last Friday, we've lost about 130,000 broilers and probably 20,000 to 30,000 turkeys," said M.C. Howell, Union County agricultural extension agent. "When the temperatures hit 96 degrees and stay there for four hours or more, birds start dying."

Farmers have been hauling dead birds to the Union County landfill all week.

He said Union agriculture officials will apply this week for disaster aid for farmers who have lost their crops and poultry to the heat.

Snodie Wilson, Duplin extension agent, said the broilers and turkeys that survive will be smaller, which means producers will get less money for them.

"The big, healthy birds ready for market are the ones that die first because they're so big they need more air," Wilson said. "The ones that live will be a lot smaller because they can't convert their feed into meat. So the heat will cost farmers all the way around."

Wilson said farmers have added fans and sprinklers to their poultry houses in an effort to save their flocks.

The heat that is smothering poultry also is scorching crops in the field.

Across the state, 60 percent of the corn crop is rated poor by the N.C. Crop Reporting Service in Raleigh. The agency estimates that an acre will yield only 62 bushels of corn, compared to 101 bushels last year.

Although about half of North Carolina's tobacco crop has been harvested, the rest is in poor or fair condition. Tobacco experts say they expect about 1,965 pounds per acre, compared to 2,140 pounds last year.

The state's wheat and soybean crops also have suffered in the heat.

"It's a pretty sad situation for crops still in the field," said Robert Griffith of the Crop Reporting Service. "Most of them are burned up."

Agriculture officials say the smaller corn and grain crops will force up the price of livestock feed, which will in turn boost the price of meat at the meat counter.

The hot, dry weather has withered part of North Carolina's apple crop. Apple farmers had expected to harvest more than 7 million bushels of fruit this year. But the heat, combined with a lack of rainfall, is expected to reduce both the size of the apples and the harvest. Farmers now say they probably will get about 6 million bushels.

But the heat that is a bane to most people is a boon to others.

Air-conditioning companies say they have more business than they can get to. Stores that sell air conditioners and fans say their wares are selling like hot cakes.

"We're working 80 to 100 hours a week and we still aren't getting around to everything," said Butch Kelly of Kelly Heating and Air Conditioning Co. in Charlotte. "The business is great but the hours are terrible."

A spokesman for Eckerd Drugs in Asheville said his store has almost sold out of fans in the past week.

"It's never been this hot here and a lot of people don't have air conditioning in their houses, so they're buying fans to get them through the hot spell," he said. "I think I could sell every fan I could get in the store. There's a real run on them."

The heat has driven record numbers of customers into the Cabarrus Creamery in Concord for some cool refreshment.

"We always sell a lot of ice cream in the summer, but we're probably selling twice as much right now," a spokeswoman said. "And people are staying in here longer. Some people eat two ice cream cones before they leave."

A Charlotte florist has come up with a novel idea to beat the heat and get customers into his shop at the same time.

A sign in front of Roy White's Flowers bears the invitation, "Burning up? Come walk into our flower chiller and cool off."

The flower chiller is a walk-in cooler used to store cut flowers. The temperature in the cooler stays a chilly 44 degrees.

"We've had some people come in and take advantage of our offer," said shop employee Sheila Patterson. "When it's 100 outside, this cooler feels pretty good."

Fund Oregon Inlet Study

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Council of State on Wednesday approved a $180,000 reserve fund to pay for engineering studies and exhibits needed to convince the federal government to stabilize Oregon Inlet with jetties.

Victor W. Barfield, deputy secretary of commerce, said the risk of severe shoaling in the inlet threatens the future of the North Carolina Seafood Industrial Park at Wanchese.

The seafood park remains unused because fishermen have moved their ports to Norfolk, Va., and other places in order to avoid the dangerous inlet.

Gov. Jim Hunt had requested approval of the fund, which will come from Contingency and Emergency funds. Dare County will pay fees to lobbyists.

"Oregon Inlet is crucial to the survival of the commercial fishing industry in Northeastern North Carolina," Hunt said. "The state also has a $7 to $8 million investment in the N.C. Seafood Industrial Park. We must do everything we can to protect that investment, to help the park achieve its full potential and to revitalize the overall economy of the Northeast."

The Dare County commissioners and other local officials on Aug. 4 asked Hunt for help in trying to urge federal officials to continue with stabilization of the inlet.

Food Stamps 'Buy' Autos

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Three used-car dealers have been charged in a federal grand jury indictment with allowing customers to pay for vehicles with food stamps, federal officials said.

Dale George, 58, Jerry Payne, 48, and Glen Branscum, 50, all of Okmulgee, were charged Tuesday with violations of federal food stamp laws, Assistant U.S. Attorney Donn Baker said.

George sold an undercover Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation agent a 1973 Mercury Monterey worth $800 in exchange for $1,600 in food stamps, Baker said.

Payne is accused of swapping a 1975 Chevy Vega worth $700 for $1,400 in food stamps, while Branscum is charged with selling a $600 used car for $800 in stamps, Baker said.

Food stamps used in the transactions had been marked by agents, who now are attempting to trace their whereabouts, Baker said. He said some have appeared in Okmulgee grocery stores.

Illegal food stamp purchases are common, Baker said, "but a car is kind of a new quirk."

"Our Specialty is Quality"

Permitted To Join In Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has been given permission to participate in a Supreme Court case on whether Pawtucket, R.I., can sponsor a yearly Christmas nativity scene.

The Supreme Court said the Justice Department can participate in oral arguments that are scheduled to be heard Oct. 4. The case will decide whether municipal nativity scenes violate the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state.

In a legal brief already filed with the court, the administration joined Pawtucket in urging the justices to overturn a lower court ruling that the nativity scenes are unconstitutional.

Three-Ring Circus At ABC Departs Sept. 5

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — After five years, ABC is taking down the Big Top.

Come Sept. 5, the three-ring electronic circus, "World News Tonight," will have Peter Jennings as sole ringmaster — perhaps the most significant symbol that ABC News has grown up and believes it can compete with CBS and NBC.

Sept. 5 certainly will be a landmark night for TV news. Besides Jennings' ascension, Tom Brokaw will begin his solo stint as anchor of the "NBC Nightly News" and public television will unveil its expanded evening newscast, "The MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour."

The moves to anoint Brokaw, who had been teamed with Roger Mudd, and Jennings were inspired by the networks' continuing efforts to catch top-rated Dan Rather on the "CBS Evening News."

"We're going for a more straightforward look," says Robert E. Frye, new executive producer on "World News Tonight."

The cluttered and glitzy triple-headed anchor originated in 1978. ABC News President Rooney Arledge felt ABC didn't have the big guns to battle CBS' Walter Cronkite and NBC's John Chancellor — an admission that ABC's premiere news broadcast needed some camouflage and hocus-pocus.

Before that, remember, ABC had introduced the first co-ed evening newscast, teaming a miscast Barbara Walters with a churlish Harry Reasoner.

The evening anchor doesn't just read for your supper, he stands as the focal point of an entire news operation. He's the newscaster you turn to during a crisis, a space shot or an election night. Until now, the perception was that nobody at ABC had that singular authority.

Although substance often triumphed over flash on "World News Tonight," there were times when the broadcast's relay-race style — with reports bouncing from Jennings in London to Max Robinson in Chicago to the late Frank Reynolds in Washington — would drive you to distraction.

Reynolds gradually became more equal than his co-anchors, but he was undercut by Arledge's well-known courting of Rather and Brokaw. The public perception then was that ABC needed to look outside the organization for an authoritative anchor.

When Reynolds died last month, ABC executives made it clear that they wanted to hire internally.

And, that's the way it is. ABC now has The Peter Jennings Show, competing mano-a-mano with Rather and Brokaw in the categories of news judgment, news presentation and — lest we forget — news style, i.e. good looks.

Jennings is not as well known as Rather or Brokaw. But Frye sees this as a possible advantage. "That could be a good thing. It gives us a chance to evolve a whole new format."

And it's clear that it will revolve around the debonair, 45-year-old Jennings, as a newscaster and as a personality, who will call on his globe-trotting experiences for added meaning and insight to the news. Jennings says his motto is "be relevant," and he has occasionally become conversational in trying to explain why Americans should be interested in particular stories.

Several times this month, Jennings went to great lengths to interpret what certain foreign stories meant to his audience, or to let viewers read between the lines. ABC doesn't have a commentator, as NBC does with Chancellor, but Frye says that there will be times when Jennings will provide the analysis.

After interviewing Col. Moammar Khadafi earlier this month, Jennings summed up the Libyan president this way: "When he decides to make his point, he wants to talk to all of us. My colleagues at the other networks were subjected to the same view from this enigmatic man today."

"We did the same thing some months ago when the colonel was denying he had stirred up trouble in the Sudan. On that occasion, while we waited, Khadafi sat in his tent, flipping through the pages of a book. It was called 'The Art of Diplomacy.'"

Further Honors Await Sinatra

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, one of Hollywood's most honored celebrities, will receive more laurels Nov. 20 in a tribute by the Variety Clubs International.

The veteran crooner will be feted at an "All Star Party for Frank Sinatra" at the NBC studios in a program that will be broadcast as a TV special during the 1983-84 season on the CBS network.

Sinatra follows John Wayne, Elizabeth Taylor, James Stewart, Jack Lemmon, Ingrid Bergman, Burt Reynolds and Carol Burnett as recipient of the award for his contributions to good causes over the years.

CHURCH COMPLAINT VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Cardinal Frantisek Tomasek, the Catholic primate of Czechoslovakia, has complained to the government about discrimination against Catholics despite constitutional guarantees of religious freedom, the news agency Kathpress reports.

Jerry Lee Lewis's Wife Dies

NESBIT, Miss. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis, the piano-pounding rock 'n' roll star who has already lost a wife and two sons, went into seclusion as authorities scheduled an autopsy to learn what killed his 25-year-old fifth wife.

Shawn Lewis was found dead Wednesday in her bed at the home she shared with the 47-year-old entertainer in rural Desoto County, Miss., about 25 miles south of Memphis, Tenn., authorities said.

Sheriff Denver Sowell said investigators did not think "foul play" was involved in Mrs. Lewis' death, but refused to speculate further until an autopsy was performed.

"There were no observations at the scene to indicate a cause of death," Sowell said today. "We have no idea about the cause, but we are going to have an autopsy."

The couple married June 7, almost exactly a year after the drowning of Lewis' fourth wife.

A son of the singer drowned in 1962, and 11 years later another son was killed in a traffic accident. Lewis himself was near death in 1981 before recovering from a stomach infection.

Lewis and his wife spent Tuesday evening at home and went to bed early Wednesday morning, said J.W. Whitten, the singer's manager.

He said Lewis got up Wednesday before his wife and later sent a maid to awaken Mrs. Lewis.

"She apparently had been dead about an hour when the housekeeper tried to wake her up" Wednesday afternoon, Whitten said.

Leaving his house about an hour after his wife's body was removed, Lewis looked straight ahead from the back seat of a black Cadillac as he passed reporters gathered at the entrance to his property.

Whitten said Lewis was in shock and went into seclusion at a friend's house.

Mrs. Lewis' body was taken to the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences in Memphis shortly after 3 p.m., and Sowell said the autopsy would be performed there.

Col. Donald Butler, chief of the Mississippi Highway Patrol, said local authorities asked for help in investigating the death and state detectives from Jackson, Miss., were sent in.

Lewis met his wife, then Shawn Michelle Stephens, in her native Detroit about 3½ years ago, Whitten said.

The singer's fifth marriage came one day short of a year after the death of his fourth wife, Jaren Elizabeth Gunn Lewis, who drowned in a friend's swimming pool.

At the time of her death, she and Lewis were separated and seeking a divorce.

In April 1962, Lewis' 3-year-old son, Steve Allen Lewis, drowned while swimming in the family pool, and in November 1973, the singer's 19-year-old son, Jerry Lee Lewis Jr., was killed in a traffic accident.

In July 1981, the singer underwent surgery for stomach infections and was listed for a time in extremely critical condition. Fans from around the world — recalling such Lewis hits as "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lot of Shakin' Going On" — besieged the hospital switchboard.

According to testimony in the October 1981 trial of his physician, Lewis overcame an amphetamine habit.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, who was charged with prescribing excessive amounts of drugs to Lewis and the late singer Elvis Presley, said Lewis took 14 to 18 amphetamines before each show, 30 if he was performing a second show. "Today he's off medication. It's not all my doing but I played a role," Nichopoulos testified.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — OUR SNEAKY FISH ARRESTED FOR PERFDY: THE "TURN PIKE."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals A.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

KEEPING IN TOUCH — PLO head Yasser Arafat's senior military aide, Khalil Wazir, better known as Abu Jihad, confers with aides on the telephone in Tripoli. He told the Associated Press in an interview that he fears a new civil war will break out in Lebanon. He added that, although the PLO would do its best to stay out of any renewed fighting, it would support leftist and Moslem "national forces" in Lebanon. (AP Laserphoto)

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
JEANNETTE, Pa. (AP) — Crouching in the underbrush with camouflage paint smeared on his face, John Evangeliste clutches his pistol, listening for the gunshot that could bring him down.

"I live for this," says Evangeliste, 27. Actually, he dies for this. Regularly.

He is an avid player and promoter of The National Survival Game, which was started barely two years ago and now has at least 80 dealerships in 38 states and Canada.

One dealership is owned by a psychologist who believes the game relieves tension and aggression.

An estimated 10,000 to 12,000 people play the game each weekend, its developers say, shooting each other with paint pellets in a grownup version of Capture the Flag.

Officials at National Survival Game Inc. in New London, N.H., say they plan 200 private parks for playing the game in the United States and Canada by year's end and hope to set up similar layouts in Australia and Western Europe.

On Oct. 8-10, eight U.S. teams and two from Canada will compete in New Hampshire in the first North American championship, with an undetermined cash prize.

"We always played army when we were kids," said Evangeliste, who is co-owner of a western Pennsylvania dealership and plays the game with his wife, brothers and friends. "As we got older, it was too childish. Now we found something that lets us play again."

"That's all it is, a game," he said. "We keep trying to tell people we aren't warped like these crazy survivalists."

Some observers aren't so sure.

"The commercialized promotion and spread of this war game is very dangerous," said Dr. Thomas Radecki, chairman of the National Coalition on Television Violence and professor of psychiatry at the University of Illinois School of Medicine. The coalition last week called for congressional hearings on the game and a ban on current television advertisements.

"At the very moment that U.S. soldiers are getting more deeply involved in wars in El Salvador, Nicaragua, Lebanon and Chad," Radecki continued, "college fraternities and normal American businessmen are rehearsing declarations of war and duels to the death."

Bob Gurnsey, vice president and chief executive officer of National Survival Game Inc., complained that coalition members "were not pressed in any way as to why it's dangerous, how it's dangerous and how they made these determinations, because to my knowledge, they have never been close to or played in any one of the games."

The coalition said it had polled 12 nationally recognized experts on aggression and violence, all of whom agreed the game was dangerous.

Another professional opinion comes from Lester Mann, a psychologist in Ambler, Pa., who owns a game dealership in north-eastern Pennsylvania.

"I'm convinced, in and of itself, the game is not harmful, psychologically or otherwise," Mann said. "I frankly believe it relieves tensions and aggression.

"If anything, it reduces hostilities. People go 'bang, bang' and mark each other with paint and then have a beer together. If that's all we have to fear, we're in good shape."

Evangeliste and his brother, Mark, escape the humdrum of the family carpet business every weekend and turn the family farm east of Pittsburgh into battlefields where victors and vanquished toast each other with post-game beer and soft drinks.

"It's the ultimate outdoor action sport. ... It's escapism," said Mark Evangeliste, 31. "You get it all out of your system. That's something that golf, racquetball and tennis really don't do for me."

The first game was played June 27, 1981, in New Hampshire to settle a friendly argument over who would have the best chance of survival — a city kid whose street smarts were honed in the New York rat race or a country boy with a superior knowledge of terrain and nature. The game didn't settle the argument, but it was a lot of fun.

This year, developers began offering a handbook explaining strategy and sold Universal Studios the rights to make a movie about how the game got started.

"It really has taken off," Kent Barrett, one of the original 12 players, said by telephone from New London. He left his job as a Manhattan tax consultant to work exclusively for National Survival Game Inc.

Rules were set up by organizers Hayes Noel, a New York stockbroker; Charles Gaines, author of "Pumping Iron," and Gurnsey, then a sporting goods retailer.

Their weapon, a Nel-Spot 007 handgun powered by carbon dioxide, was originally designed to mark cattle or lumber with marble-sized paint pellets that splatter on contact. It's accurate to about 100 feet.

To win, a team must capture a flag from an enemy base and return it to their home base. Points are also scored by eliminating opponents. In Capture the Flag, opponents are tagged by hand. In the survival game, they are "killed" by pellets that can raise welts.

"It hurts. It stings," Barrett said. "But as one of the founders said, the gun gives weight to the game. If you took that away, it would just be Capture the Flag."

Players sign an injury waiver and wear goggles to protect their eyes from paint. At the Evangeliste dealership, each gun and holster costs $150, but participants may rent equipment for a $20 fee, which includes refreshments.

"It gets the blood boiling," John Evangeliste said. "It lets you live out a fantasy of being Mike Mercenary in Angola."

His wife, Beth, 21, is an avid participant and a crafty player.

"All your senses become aware," she said, camouflage paint covering her face. "You can hear the tiniest sounds. And it keeps you in shape."

We are often asked: "Just how good a bridge player is Omar Sharif?" In an attempt to answer that question, about two years ago there appeared in France "Omar Sharif's Life in Bridge." Now there is an English edition, translated and adapted by Terence Reese. It deals not only with hands played by your columnist, but also by many of the famous players with whom he was associated. This hand is one of our favorites.

East and West were Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo. Garozzo's two club opening bid was the equivalent of one club in normal methods, and the rest of the auction was natural.

West led a top club. East played the two and West dutifully shifted. He led the king of spades and followed with the queen. Most commentators expected the contract to be made. It is most unusual for someone to jump to game in one major and have five cards in the unbid major, so they thought that Forquet would duck the second spade.

They reckoned without the prowess of the man who announced the birth of his son with an announcement reading: "The world's second-best bridge player is born!" Forquet overtook the queen with the ace and played a third spade, and

FAITH MAKES DEFENSE EASY

Garozzo's ruff was the down trick.

How did Forquet know he should overtake the queen of spades? He simply trusted his partner to have made the right play at trick three!

Had West started with three or more spades to the king-queen, his correct play after winning the king of spades would have been to lead a low spade. When he did not do so, Forquet paid him the compliment of having defended correctly.

A Sequel To Our Catalog

FREEMONT, Maine (AP) — In the market for a "moose hide toothbrush case," a "camouflage maternity jumper" or "rabbit-fur wallpaper?"

Then you'll want to turn to "More Items from Our Catalog," the sequel to the best-selling parody of the L.L. Bean catalog, due to hit the bookstores Oct. 1.

Although not everyone at the mail-order camping outfitter is amused, Avon Books says it hopes that the 80-page update of last year's spoof will duplicate the enormous success of the original.

The original "Items from Our Catalog" was "the top-selling trade paperback for the first six months of 1983," said Avon publicist Lynne Johnson, who said more than 750,000 copies are in print.

The reaction of Bean officials to the new takeoff on their outdoor sporting goods catalog was mixed.

"I think we're all looking forward to seeing it," said Jane Brogii, a public affairs assistant. She said she "thoroughly enjoyed" the first book. "I think everyone did."

Not quite. "I never read it," said Bean President Leon A. Gorman. "I guess in general that type of humor has never appealed to me."

H & R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN GREENVILLE

Thousands of people are earning money in their spare time as income tax preparers.

H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 8 with morning, and evening classes available.

During the 14 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications. Courses are ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or persons wanting to increase their tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H & R Block.

The modest course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school.

Registration forms and brochures for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H & R Block office at Greenville Square Shopping Center, telephone 756-9365.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO AMEND CHAPTER 32 OF THE ZONING ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, N.C. BY ESTABLISHING A NEW DISTRICT ENTITLED FLOODWAY/CONSERVATION

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, Greenville, North Carolina, on Thursday, September 8, 1983, at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of establishing a new zoning district entitled "Floodway/Conservation," which is as follows:

Section 32-74.1. Floodway/Conservation District—Purpose. The purpose of this classification is to offer a higher level of protection over that provided by the general floodway district to scenic floodway areas.

Section 32-74.2. Floodway District—Permitted Uses. The following are permitted uses within the Floodway/Conservation district:

- General farming, pasture, outdoor plant nurseries, horticulture, forestry, wildlife sanctuary, game farm and other similar agricultural, wildlife and related uses.
- Loading areas, parking areas, rotary aircraft ports and other similar industrial-commercial uses.
- Lawns, gardens, parking, play areas and other similar uses.
- Golf courses, tennis courts, driving ranges, archery ranges, picnic grounds, parks, swimming pools, hiking or horseback riding trails, open space and other similar private and public recreational uses.
- Streets, bridges, overhead utility lines, creek and storm drainage facilities, sewage or waste treatment plant outlets, water supply intake structures and other similar public, community or utility uses.
- Boat docks, ramps, piers or similar structures.
- Dams.
- Any non-conforming permitted use which is made to a non-conforming permitted use by the adoption of this proposal shall be allowed to continue as provided under Article II. A conforming permitted use in a non-conforming building or structure may be changed to any other permitted use listed in the zoning classification in which the property was zoned at the time of adoption of this proposal.

Section 32-74.3. Floodway/Conservation District. Special Uses. The following are special uses within the Floodway/Conservation district:

- Other activities which, in the opinion of the Board of Adjustments, are compatible with the permitted uses in this district subject to the provisions of Section 32-75.

During the public hearing, any objections or suggestions will be duly considered by the City Council.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file in the City Clerk's office located at 201 West Fifth Street, during normal working hours, Monday through Friday.

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, Greenville, North Carolina, on Thursday, September 8, 1983, at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of amending the zoning ordinance as follows:

- Section 32-3 of the zoning ordinance is to be amended to add the definition, "dormitory".
- Section 32-26 of the zoning ordinance is to be amended by deleting Section 32-26 entitled "Property divisions" in its entirety.
- Section 32-80 of the zoning ordinance is to be amended by adding the following: "Whenever the Land Use Intensity Method is used for site design of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Manual of Acceptable Practices and Minimum Property Standards for Multifamily Development, as amended, shall be used."

During this public hearing, any objections or suggestions will be duly considered by the City Council.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file in the City Clerk's office located at 201 West Fifth Street, during normal working hours, Monday through Friday.

BY ORDER OF THE CITY COUNCIL

Pembroke Group Seeks Town School System

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — A group of Pembroke area residents, including several town officials, is seeking to pull out of the Robeson County school system and create their own system.

Pembroke, which is predominantly Indian, is the second-largest township in Robeson County.

The town manager, a town council member and the Pembroke Housing Authority director, all of whom are Lumbee Indians, are among about 40 members of the Ad Hoc Committee for a Pembroke School System.

The group was formed about two weeks ago in reaction to the county school board's proposed redistricting plan, which would split the Pembroke precinct for school board voting purposes and would require one of the precinct's three board members to run for re-election next year. About 3,000 school children live in the Pembroke precinct, about one-fifth of the county system's approximately 14,700 students.

There also are four other school systems in the county — at Lumberton, Fairmont, Red Springs and St. Pauls.

The group will need legislative approval to establish a sixth school system. A petition is being planned to obtain at least 4,000 names requesting enabling legislation when the General Assembly convenes in January.

David Green, chairman of the county school board, said Wednesday that he was not aware of the proposal and declined to comment on the possibility of a separate Pembroke school system.

"The redistricting plan and the lack of response Pembroke has gotten from the board could be called the last straw," Pembroke Town Manager McDuffy Cummings said. "The board is very political and hasn't been responsive to the needs of the total school system."

Cummings, who has four children in county schools, said the county's last-place showing for math and reading scores in the statewide competency test showed the need for better education.

Pembroke Town Council member Milton Hunt, who has two children in the school system, called the township "a whipping post" for the county school board because the three Pembroke board members seem to be denied a voice in decision-making.

Pembroke Housing Authority Director Clinton Thomas agreed. "If they won't listen to the people we elect to represent us, then we should look strongly to other alternatives."

INSULATION
CONTRACTOR

The Pink Panther is on the prowl again through these houses in the Greenville Parade of Homes.

These Builders are also participating in the Thermal Crafted Homes Program™ developed by Owens-Corning Fiberglas.

The THERMAL CRAFTED Home incorporates today's most-wanted features for enjoyable living. But its unique energy performance design also helps families save money on heating and cooling costs. In fact, we can estimate the potential annual heating and cooling costs for a specific THERMAL CRAFTED Home.

To create our THERMAL CRAFTED Homes, we use the Energy Performance Design System (EPDS) developed by Owens-Corning Fiberglas, the building materials manufacturer who invented Fiberglas® Pink Insulation. And Owens-Corning Fiberglas Insulating Products have been used exclusively to thermally protect our THERMAL CRAFTED Homes.

The Energy Performance Design System analyzes such energy-sensitive areas as: levels of insulation in ceilings, walls and below grade; size and location and type of windows; door design; levels of air infiltration; heating and air conditioning equipment. Energy savings opportunities exist in almost every construction option, and EPDS helps us quantify each component's contribution to energy efficiency.
