Legislators Convene On 'Disclosure Law'

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House convened at 10:05 today and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green gavelled the Senate into session 12 minutes later for a special legislative session to discuss amendments to the controversial disclosure law.

The first step of business was a quorum call, and 95 of 120 House members showed up.

Then Rep. Allen Barbee introduced a bill that would confirm appointments to boards and commissions by the house speaker, and Rep. Al Adams introduced amendments to change the criminal discovery law to protect the identities of confidential informants.

Dozens of sheriffs, police chiefs and district attorneys filled the galleries and lobbied in the halls of the legislative building.

The lawmakers hope to end weeks of criticism of the disclosure law, which opponents said could result in the identification of confidential informers and bring law enforcement to a standstill.

Also on the agenda were amendments to make it easier to prosecute violators of a law prohibiting sale of alcoholic beverages to underage people.

Gov. Jim Hunt called for a special one-day session Wednesday, minutes after special House and Senate committees agreed with district attorneys on a way to improve the law that took effect when enacted in the final days of the 1983 session.

The session, the longest in history, ended July 22. The last time Hunt convened a special session was in 1982, when the General Assembly had to revise legislative and congressional redistricting plans to comply with U.S. Justice Department rulings.

Redistricting forced Gov. Dan Moore to call a special session in 1966, the other most recent example of a special session.

A one-day session was expected to cost $19,500.

Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, who helped reach a compromise on the criminal discovery law, said he expected the two bills to go to the Special Ways and Means Committee in the Senate.

That group is led by Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, who also chaired a special committee of lawyers appointed by Green to resolve differences over the discovery law.

The discovery law, which took effect when ratified in July, requires prosecutors to give defense attorneys the substance of statements made by the defendant to anyone. Opponents said it would allow defendants to identify confidential informers.

The previous law required prosecutors give defense attorneys the substance of only those statements they planned to introduce into evidence. Opponents said defendants were not given a fair trial because they could not prepare for some statements that may be introduced.

The proposed amendment would prevent prosecutors from turning over the substance of statements made by confidential informers and would require disclosure of other relevant materials no later than the Wednesday before the defendant is tried.

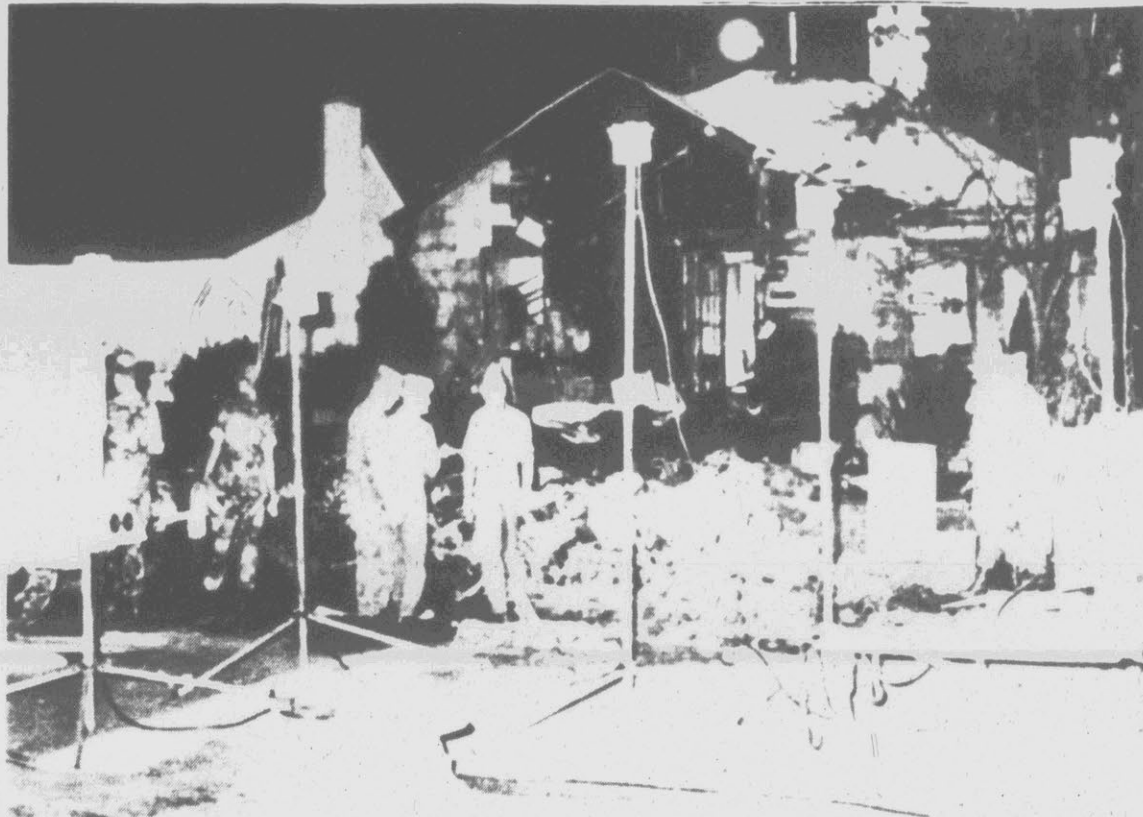

The amendments also expand the number of cases when judges may issue orders to protect informers and expand the penalties for failing to disclose all material.

Under the existing alcoholic beverage law, a prosecutor must show that the clerk sold alcohol to a minor and then it may be inferred that the clerk knew the customer was underage. Opponents said the law might be unconstitutional because it presumes the clerk knew he was committing a crime.

The new alcoholic beverage law, which takes effect Oct. 1, will make it illegal for clerks to knowingly sell alcoholic beverages to underage people and it lists the way a clerk may defend himself, like proving he examined an identification card.

Opponents say the law will encourage clerks not to ask for a driver's license so they can say they didn't know they sold alcohol to a minor.

The proposed amendment would remove the word "knowingly" and thus remove the incentive not to check drivers' licenses.

Jet Crashed In Morehead
City Residential Section

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Marine jet exploded "like an atomic bomb" when it smashed into a residential area after the crew ejected, burning an elderly woman and slightly injuring one crew member, officials and witnesses say.

The four-man crew of the burning EA-6B Prowler, a radar-jamming jet, were able to eject and parachute to safety shortly before it crashed Thursday night, officials said.

One crewman suffered a cut on the hand, said Maj. Dennis Brooks of the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing at Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station.

The plane dug a 12-foot crater in front of a house owned by Chauncey and Trudy Styron, destroyed much of the dwelling, and severely burned an elderly woman standing in a neighbor's yard.

The Styrons were inside their home when the plane hit, but were unhurt, said Dr. John Yurko, the family physician.

Clara Bell Daniels, 72, gas airlifted to the burn center at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem with second- and third-degree burns over much of her body, said hospital officials who listed her condition today as critical.

Earl Lamm, of Wilson, N.C., said he saw the plane crash while he was standing on a fishing pier a few miles away.

"I heard the thing popping. The engine was on fire," Lamm said. "He was in the air about 30 seconds, but when they jumped, it wasn't more than 10 seconds before the plane hit the ground."

"It looked just like an atomic bomb," he said.

About 150 Marines in camouflage fatigues milled around the crash site, keeping onlookers at a distance. The crewmen were identified as 1st Lt. James M. Stevenson, 26, of Palo Verde, Calif.; Capt. Gordon B. Habbestad, 28, of Spokane, Wash.; Capt. James J. Cuff Jr., 33, of Cherry Hill, N.J.; and Capt. David F. Tomaino, 30, of Needham, Mass. The plane was piloted by Tomaino. Marine officials did not identify the injured man.

The fuselage of the twin-jet aircraft was sticking up at 45-degree angle in the Styron's front yard. Burned furniture and other debris was strewn over the area and several nearby homes had been damaged slightly by flaming fragments, authorities said.

Joseph Giffin, 24, who lives three blocks from where the crash occurred, said he saw the plane on fire and spiraling

Pitt Community College Holds
Its Summer Graduation Rites

Summer graduation exercises for Pitt Community College were held Thursday with Robert W. Scott, former governor of North Carolina and current president of the North Carolina Community College system, as the speaker.

Associate in applied science and associate in arts degrees and diplomas were awarded graduates of vocational, technical and college transfer programs. High school equivalency diplomas were also presented.

"Tonight many of you will be realizing a dream," Scott told graduates. "The road for you has not been easy and you have made sacrifices ... you have a right to be proud and you certainly have our admiration and congratulations."

Scott told graduates not to expect their educational training to end with graduation, that skills in the "age of high technology" need constant updating.

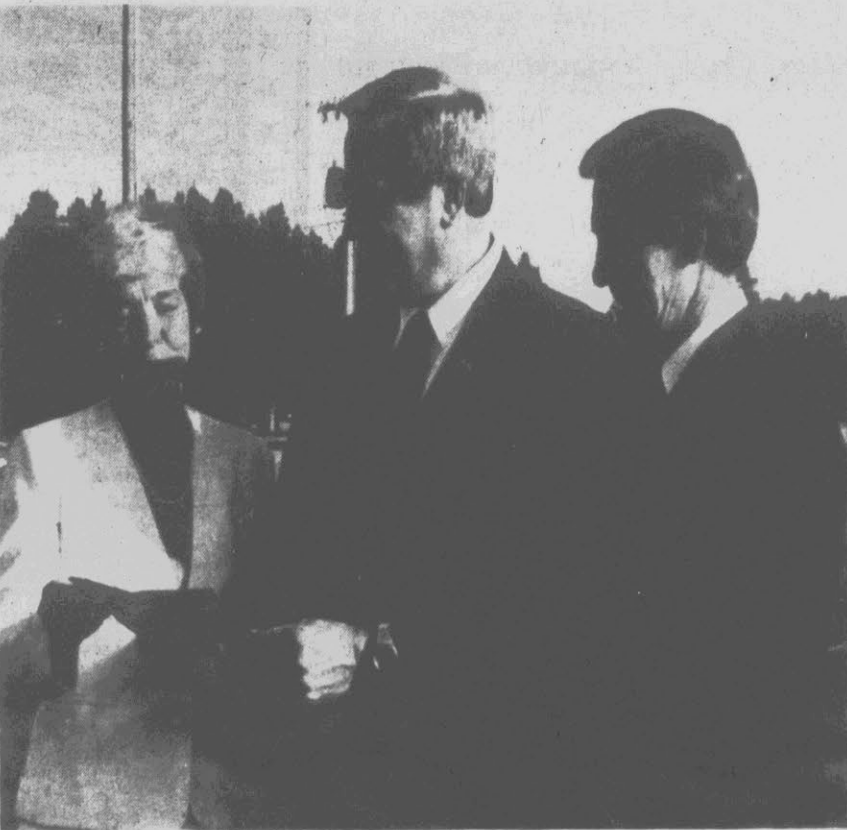

"Technology is changing everything in this world, in the home and in the workplace," said Scott. "Everybody who is employed in the work force will have to have some of the skills demanded in high technology occupations if they are to succeed and prosper."

Scott also announced that Carolina Telephone and Telegraph has awarded two $500 scholarships to PCC, as well as 25 other community colleges and technical institutes.

Susan Rayford Griffin, a human services technology graduate, gave the graduates' response to the college. "As we graduate we recognize the immense amount of self-knowledge and growth that has been acquired," she said. "We are confident of our abilities and aware of our desire to continue to challenge ourselves to learn."

TEST RESULTS SLOW?

I am a registered nurse applicant who took the State Boards July 12-13. First we were told the results would be back in two weeks, then in four more weeks. We're still waiting and many of us are irritated by the delays.

There have been no delays, Dixie King, business manager of the State Board of Nursing office in Raleigh, said. She says yours has not been the only inquiry, but that she is not sure how and why the word got out that the results would be back first in two and then in four weeks. Her office has expected all along that the tests would be six-to-eight weeks in coming back and has told every inquirer this. The same test, she said, is given in every state in the union and in the Virgin Islands and Guam the same two days and all are graded in Monterey, Calif.

Once they're back, she said, preparation of certificate and licenses and proofing will take about three days. Notices to all of the 1,900 persons who took the test will go out first; then the institutions with which each is associated will be notified.

She has no reason, she said, to think the return time from California will be any later than mid-September.

Attendance

First-day attendance for Greenville schools Wednesday followed the usual annual pattern of being considerably below the total enrollment figures.

From a total enrollment for all schools of 5,073 students, the attendance figure on opening day was 4,616 — which means that 457 students did not report for the first day of school. This 9 percent absence in the early days of school is about average for the beginning of each school year, following the usual pattern of attendance not getting into full swing until the first full week of school. Attendance on Thursday showed a considerable increase over opening day.

Enrollment, attendance and absentee figures, respectively, from each of Greenville's 10 schools on opening day were:

- Eastern Elementary — 377, 338, 39.
- Elmhurst Elementary — 393, 359, 34.
- Sadie Sauter Elementary — 417, 395, 22.
- South Greenville Elementary — 558, 505, 53.
- Third Street Elementary — 310, 282, 28.
- Wahl-Coates Elementary — 456, 425, 31.
- Greenville Middle School — 429, 398, 31.
- Aycock Junior High — 909, 796, 113.
- Rose High School — 1,138, 1,056, 82.
- Agnes Fullilove School — 86, 62, 24.

According to school officials, opening day went smoothly at all the city schools, despite the early release schedule in effect. By Monday they say it is expected that attendance will be much closer to total enrollment.

Another Try At Monitor's Site

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The research vessel Johnson steamed away from the wreck of the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor Thursday without retrieving the ship's anchor, but researchers say they will return for one more attempt when the weather clears.

The research ship was committed to leave Thursday night for another government project at Beaufort, but Nancy Foster of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Thursday night the U.S. Marine Fisheries Service had agreed to let the Johnson return to the Monitor for one extra day.

Ms. Foster said the research ship would not make another attempt to recover the anchor today, but will make the voyage back from Beaufort when the weather calms.

Weather problems Thursday prevented divers from retrieving the anchor, which had begun an ascent to the surface Wednesday before falling back to the ocean floor.

While much attention has focused on bringing up the 1,300-pound anchor, even more importance is given to taking detailed pictures of the warship's cheesebox-shaped turret and getting core samples from around the structure.

These findings will help determine if the 9-foot-high, 21-foot-diameter turret and its two guns can be salvaged in the future.

WEATHER

Fair tonight, low in upper 60s, mostly sunny Saturday with high in low 90s.

Gourmet Shop Going Well

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

They were both under 30, a couple of years ago, when they opened their fairyland of a gourmet take-out and catering shop. Now their business is going well. A year ago they got married. He is Paul Neuman. She keeps her maiden name: Stacy Bogdonoff. The sign on their shop, on New York City's uptown East Side, reads "Neuman & Bogdonoff."

They have a good staff but they themselves do everything: invent recipes; cook; book-keep; attend to their catering; choose merchandise to sell — from the finest brands of olive oil to preserves and cheeses. They're no slouches when it comes to work. "Too many hours, too many days," they say. But they take off some weekends to go to the country or the shore. Both smiled as they told me "We're besieged with invitations, because our hosts know we'll arrive loaded with food."

They designed the interior of their shop with invention and care. Wonder of wonders are the huge custom-made bins, clad in stainless steel, whose tops hold deep layers of chipped ice in which to sink some of their bowls of take-out food. Marvelously robust Caponata (the recipe follows). Delicious Curry Chicken Salad. An exotic cold Seafood Combination. Good Chili (to heat up). Paul and Stacy are part of America's new breed of young cooks who have both imagination and good taste.

Paul comes from a "food" background. Several generations ago his family started the first retail seafood store in New York City and it's still going strong. As a youngster, Paul tagged along in the early early morning to wholesale markets with his father. "I didn't want to go, but my father was so busy it was one way of getting to know him."

Paul's real interest became art. He took a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Sculpture and Glass Art at Alfred University. After graduation, he had an art studio in New York City. But to meet expenses, he worked at his father's fish store. Then he began to think of "made" take-out dishes as a creative effort he would enjoy. He furthered his knowledge of cooking by apprenticing with a private caterer. He wanted to open a take-out shop.

Stacy fed his idea. She had her BFA in photography and painting from Syracuse University. But she, too, had plunged into the food field — working in the kitchen of an Israeli kibbutz, investigating the markets and cafes of Europe, graduating from the Culinary Institute of America and attending advanced cooking classes at France's prestigious La Varenne in Paris. After that she became Education Director for what was then New York City's New School's Cooking Center. There she met Paul, who was teaching classes in Fish and Shellfish Cookery.

What advice do Paul and Stacy have to give to other young people who want to start their own gourmet take-out shops?

"Start small. Keep your attention on the quality of the food. Limit your focus — become known for specialties. Establish and keep your identity. Be prepared for trial and error."

"On the whole we sell the foods we like, the dishes we find people really enjoy."

That's why, I figure, they're successful and look as if they're having fun.

PAUL AND STACY'S
CAPONATA

- 1 small (3/4-pound) eggplant, quartered but unpeeled
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons light brown sugar
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup tomato paste
- 1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh or dried crushed basil
- 1/2 cup pitted Greek-style black olives
- 2 tablespoons capers, with their juice
- Olive oil
- 1-3rd cup diced (1/2-inch) onion
- 1-3rd cup diced (1/2-inch) celery
- 1-3rd cup diced (1/2-inch) green pepper
- 1-3rd cup diced (1/2-inch) red pepper

Cut eggplant quarters crosswise into 1/2-inch slices. Sprinkle with salt; drain in a colander for 1 hour.

In a 1-quart saucepan, over very low heat, stir together sugar and vinegar until sugar dissolves. Stir in tomato paste, basil, olives and capers and, stirring occasionally, continue heating the thick mixture for about 20 minutes; reserve.

In a 12-inch skillet, in 1-3rd cup oil, fry a single layer of eggplant slices until very brown on both sides. Drain on paper towels. Repeat with remaining eggplant, adding more oil if necessary.

In the same skillet, in 2 tablespoons oil, over low heat, cook onion, celery and pepper until tender — about 15 minutes. Off heat, stir in reserved tomato mixture; add eggplant and toss gently. Chill.
Makes 2 1/2 cups.

Dear Abby

Following These Rules Is Very Neighborly

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I liked your 10 rules on how to be a good wife so much that I clipped that column. Then along came your 10 rules on how to be a good husband, and believe it or not, my husband saved it!

My mother told me that some time ago you ran 10 rules on how to be a good neighbor. Please publish them again.

STEADY READER, SPOKANE, WASH.

DEAR STEADY: Here they are:

TEN NAYS FOR GOOD NEIGHBORS

- 1) Thou shalt love thy neighbor, but not his wife, nor shalt thou covet thy neighbor's house, or his car, or any other thing he owneth.
- 2) Thou shalt keep thy dog, thy stereo and thy lawnmower quiet while thy neighbor sleepeth.
- 3) Thou shalt borrow from thy neighbor rarely, and when thou doest, returneth undamaged and without delay that which thou hast borrowed.
- 4) Thou shalt not alloweth thy pets nor thy children to run amok, despoiling thy neighbor's lawn, flower beds and fence.
- 5) Thou shalt keepeth thy lawn green, thy fence painted and thy driveway uncluttered even as ye shall also keep thy vehicles in thy garage where they belong.
- 6) Thou shalt watcheth always for criminals and fires in thy neighborhood and guard thy neighbor's home and his property even as thy own.

7) Thou shalt not use thy home for any unsightly or illegal activity.

8) Thou shalt always stand ready to help thy neighbor in his hour of true need, even as he does for thee.

9) Thou shalt not parketh thy camper, thy RV nor thy van in the street where it blocketh thy neighbor's view and createth a safety hazard to all.

10) Thou shalt not hold wild parties or orgies that lasteth until wee hours unless thou shalt inviteth thy neighbor too.

DEAR ABBY: Is it unreasonable for me to insist that people take their shoes off before I let them in my house? We never wear our shoes in the house. I even wash the dog's feet before I let him in.

My husband and I always remove our shoes before entering the homes of other people. Please answer soon. I need to know.

KEEPING CLEAN IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR KEEPING CLEAN: Although the practice is accepted as custom in other countries (Japan, for one), some people in our country might resent it.

Moreover, if you insist that all who enter your home must remove their shoes, you may soon be able to count your friends on the toes of one foot.

DEAR ABBY: My husband just celebrated his 80th birthday. Many friends made contributions to their favorite charities in my husband's honor, which was a lovely gesture. But a few friends contributed to organizations that they knew were especially dear to our hearts.

A gift to any cause in the name of a friend is a generous thing, but when a gift is given not to one's own cause, but to the cause of the person being honored, that, I think, is extraordinarily loving and giving!

Pass this on to your readers, Abby.

Wedding Vows Spoken

DUNN — Terrie Lynn Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wilson of Winterville, and John Lenard Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Williams of Dunn, were married Aug. 16 at 3:30 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Dozier of Dunn. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Braddy of Dunn, sister and brother-in-law of the bride.

Becky Barefoot of Dunn was organist and MaryAnn Barefoot was vocalist.

Tammy Lucas of Route 2, Dunn was the honor attendant and the brother of the bride, Wayne Wilson, of Winterville was best man. William Gay of Dunn, nephew of the bride, was usher.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a Victorian style gown of white taffeta with a chiffon overlay. It had a double attached train at the waistline and the other at the shoulder. The gown was trimmed in chantilly lace and the bodice and skirt were accented with pearls. Her full length chapel length veil was trimmed in matching lace and pearls and was attached to a silk rose. The bride carried a bouquet of silk day lilies, dogwood and baby's breath tied with chantilly lace ribbons.

A reception was held after the ceremony.

The couple will live in Falcon after a wedding trip to South Carolina.

The bride attended D.H. Conley High School and Fayetteville Technical Institute. The bridegroom attended Dunn High School and Fayetteville Technical Institute.

Stylish Clothes Needed

Stylish clothes that fit well are important to children. But without proper planning keeping children well-clothed can be a financial disaster, says Judy Mock, extension clothing specialist, N.C. State University.

Put the most money into the clothing which will be worn and washed often, the extension specialist recommends. "Make certain that seams are sewn uniformly and that the stitches are not too long. Check button holes and see that they are not raveling. On fabrics that will ravel, make certain the seams are overcast. Look for reinforcement at the knees and pockets and for flat, smooth, well-matched seams," she says.

Children who are growing rapidly do not need an excessive amount of clothes. Stretch a child's wardrobe by buying clothes that are seasonless. Look for growth features such as adjustable shoulder straps, deep hems, undefined waistlines in one-piece garments and roomy armholes.

It's safest to always have the child try on a new garment. If this is impractical, purchase garments by current measurements and weight. Carry a card with each child's measurements and take a measuring tape to check the dimensions of the garment, the extension specialist says.

The dinner meeting was held at Archie's Steak House. Ms. Scott was guest speaker for the evening. Ellen Moody, southeast regional director, attended the meeting and also spoke.

Members of the Grafton Jaycettes Chapter were special guests. Gifts were presented to the state officials by the chapter.

The competition included an obstacle course, relay races and bobbing for apples.

The women competed against three other chapters from the southeast region to capture the title.

Making Allowances

One of the most common ways that children get their spending money is from allowances.

An allowance means different things to different parents but usually it is money given to a child on a regular basis.

Why give an allowance? It can be one of the best ways to teach a child about money. A regular, limited amount of money can encourage a child to plan ahead, to decide how to spend the money and how to save it.

When should an allowance be started? This will vary by child and family but usually when a child can tell one coin from another, can count and has occasions to spend money, an allowance can be given. The ages of 5 and 6 are often chosen as the right time to begin an allowance.

How much? The important factor here is what the family can afford. Other things to consider are: the maturity of the child, his or her ability to handle money and how the allowance will be used (lunches, school supplies, school trips, toys, etc.)

A good way to determine the right amount is to keep up with how much the child spends over a two-week period. But, keep in mind that too much allowance may not give the child a chance to make decisions.

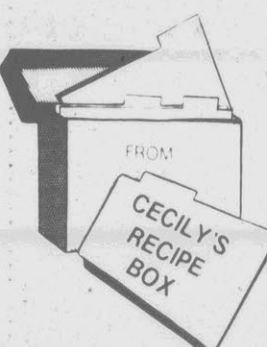

How often should allowances be given? Usually once a week is okay for young children and preteens and once every two weeks is appropriate for teens. The important point is to give the allowance on a regular schedule without the child having to ask for it.

Should allowances be taken away? There are two basic views: one is that parents don't expect their children to work to have food, shelter or clothing, so their children shouldn't have to earn allowances either. The other opinion is that children need to understand that an adult's income depends on his or her job performance — and the sooner children learn this,

DROP COOKIES

The amount of baking soda called for provides tender texture and good color and flavor.

2 1/4 cups fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose
flour

1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4-pound stick butter

1/2 cup sugar
1 large egg
1/2 cup molasses
1/2 cup water

On wax paper or in a bowl, stir together flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and ginger. In the large bowl of an electric mixer cream butter and sugar; add egg and molasses; beat until blended — mixture will look curdly. Add half the flour mixture and half the water; beat gently until smooth; repeat with remaining flour mixture and water. Drop by level tablespoonfuls, several inches apart, on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until lightly browned — 8 to 10 minutes. With a wide metal spatula, remove to wire racks to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container with wax paper between layers. Makes about 4 1/2 dozen thin cake-like cookies. If you use regular cookie sheets, wipe each well with paper toweling between bakings. Toward end of baking wash and thoroughly dry sheets before using.

Stroke Of Fortune

The experience of gubernatorial candidate D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth illustrates one other hazard for traveling campaigners.

The twin-engine plane in which Faircloth was riding hit some trees after taking off from the Marion airport and then crashed into the Catawba River. The plane and water around it then burst into flames and Faircloth, another passenger and the crew had to swim for their lives.

All of them came as close to death as it is possible to come and still survive with minor injuries.

Gubernatorial and other candidates for state office, as well as national candidates, travel thousands of miles. Whether the travel is in a vehicle or a plane, that much travel carries with it the possibility of accidents. Thankfully it does not happen often. In this case it was a terrible accident and it is only by great fortune that all on the plane survived.

Do It Now

It seems only yesterday the American Red Cross was warning that, after a winter, spring and early summer of natural disasters, its funds were depleted. It was a call for help.

Last week there was another disaster. Hurricane Alicia is believed to have caused the greatest amount of property damage of any hurricane; perhaps going over the $1.6 billion mark. It wasn't only businesses who suffered. Victims included thousands of households ... just ordinary people.

The Red Cross depends on participation of individual effort as well as financial contributions by individuals and businesses. No federal funding is involved.

The giving is easy. Large contributions are nice, but those millions of small contributions (a couple of bucks here, a few more there) make the difference.

Do it now. One never knows when (or where) the next disaster will strike.

Partnerships Boom

NEW YORK (AP) — Investment firms have been doing a land-office business lately in real estate limited partnerships.

Their customers are not just high-rolling millionaires, but savers with as little as $5,000 to invest — or even $2,000 for individual retirement accounts.

Sales of public real estate partnerships topped $2 billion in the first half of this year, with one offering by Merrill Lynch, Hubbard Inc. attracting $250 million alone.

It's estimated that activity was much greater in private partnerships, which unlike the public ones are not registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission and are generally open only to the very well-to-do.

What's all the excitement about? These partnerships, which are a sort of distant cousin to a mutual fund, are attracting investors looking for tax breaks, capital gains, income — or a combination of those benefits.

Their recent sales success story is ample testimony to their appeal. But investment experts caution that these vehicles carry risks as well as potential rewards, and have special drawbacks that make them unsuitable for some savers.

Typically, the firm that organizes a public partnership names itself or an affiliated company as general partner, with the sole power to make investments in properties such as office buildings, shopping centers and rental apartments.

It then offers a piece of the action to investors in the form of limited partnerships sold in "units" of $1,000. The minimum purchase is normally five units, or two for an individual retirement account.

To be eligible to buy, an investor is usually required to show a net worth of $75,000, excluding his or her home, or a yearly gross income of at least $30,000.

Within this standard framework, individual deals can vary greatly. Some, with the maximum use of mortgages, construction loans and depreciation, are aimed primarily at the investor looking for tax writeoffs.

They produce little or no income in the early years. As in other tax shelters, if the investments the partnership makes turn out well, there can be handsome capital gains later on. But construction delays, problems keeping the property rented, or some calamity not covered by insurance can derail the venture on the road to that goal.

Other partnerships, invested in existing properties rather than ones to be developed, stress income from rents. They offer lesser tax advantages, although depreciation writeoffs can protect most or all of their yield of, say, 8 percent or 9 percent from federal income taxation.

Obviously, savers should study the objectives of any given partnership to see if it meets their particular needs. Beyond that, they should note that these vehicles suffer from an important limitation — lack of liquidity.

"The typical partnership lasts anywhere from seven to 12 years," points out United Business Service, a forecasting and advisory letter. "If you want to get your money out before liquidation, you cannot simply sell your share."

"Unless you personally find someone to buy your share, it may be impossible to get out at all. Therefore, this type of investment is only appropriate for investors who have adequate liquidity to hold for at least 10 years."

Public partnerships are reviewed by the SEC — that's "reviewed, not approved," points out William Brennan, author of a newsletter on tax shelters and tax planning. "Although publicly offered partnerships are not approved by any regulatory agency, the review process (among other things) determines whether there has been adequate disclosure to investors of the financial and tax aspects of a venture."

Another point to ponder: The tax rules that make real-estate investing so alluring nowadays are not etched in stone. With Uncle Sam in red ink up to his top hat, there is much speculation that new tax laws designed to increase federal revenues will come up for consideration very shortly after the 1984 elections.

RALEIGH — Talk about high technology in North Carolina and first thoughts go to microelectronics and computers. But another high-tech is starting to fix its roots here and its potential for making us say "gee-whiz" is staggering.

North Carolina's budding biotechnology industry got a healthy boost this month when Ciba-Geigy Corp. announced plans to build a $7 million research facility in the Research Triangle Park. The company, which already has its agricultural operations based in Greensboro, plans to search for genetic processes that will bring better crops.

Dr. Mary-Dell Chilton, the native North Carolinian who was lured away from Washington University in St. Louis to head the facility, sees a whole range of troubles that biotechnology can lift off the shoulders of our farmers. Crop yields can be improved. Crop diseases can be rendered harmless. Crop pests can be destroyed.

Carl Kensil, president of the Ciba-Geigy's U.S. agricultural division, said the center will be looking to improve crops through gene splicing. "For example, some soybeans show more resistance to a particular disease than do other soybeans. The question you have to ask is why some are more resistant and, then, if the reason is genetic."

If a particular gene is making that soybean more resistant to disease than are other soybeans, then the task becomes to slip that gene into the less resistant soybeans. Dr. Chilton said that recent advancements in biotechnology have made that ever more possible.

Gene splicers are also looking for a way to chase pests away from crops. Research is going on, Dr. Chilton said, which will lead to the development of plants with built-in pathogens. Once the bugs start eating your plant, the plant poisons them. Or, maybe the plant just doesn't taste or smell very good anymore. The problem in this area, of course, is to make sure the plant still tastes and smells good to humans and that it doesn't kill us.

Crop yield improvements are further down the line. Biotechnology is still a very young industry and genetic manipulation to bring on tree-sized corn stalks is still a good bit in the future, she said.

In splicing genes, plant biologists go a step beyond the genetic manipulation that brought us nectarines. "The advantage of the gene-splicing technique is that it is specific," Dr. Chilton said. Scientists recognize the specific gene that is making a plant resistant to a disease and they splice that gene onto other plants.

Previously, biologists would "marry" plants, working out a hybrid. Sure they might get the characteristic that they wanted in the new plant, but they were likely to get a whole series of other genes, too. And some of those might not be wanted. So they had to keep marrying hybrids until all the unwanted genes were erased. That means gene splicing is a much quicker process, she said.

Tobacco farmers should be happy to learn that their crop should be one of the first to benefit from gene-splicing techniques. Tobacco, Dr. Chilton said, is easy to regenerate from plant cultures and, therefore, it's a good plant with which to experiment.

She said tobacco could benefit from a number of research projects. Gene splicing might lead to a leaf which is less vulnerable to the cold, diseases and pests.

Consultant Fails The Test

story this morning."

"Who the hell are you?"

"I'm a media consultant and I've been hired to up circulation. Have you ever thought about wearing something a little more sexy than a turtleneck sweater and a tweed skirt?"

"Get lost, buster. I have a deadline."

"Please don't take it personally, but don't you think you're a little too old to be a newspaperwoman?"

"I'm 34."

"Newspaper readers prefer to read stories by younger, more attractive reporters."

"If this is a gag, you got me at the wrong time. I'm trying to check out something with Henry Kissinger."

"Miss West, I'd prefer you not make that call until you change your makeup. Let's see if we can get those wrinkles out from under your eyes before you speak to Henry."

"Now you've done it. If you don't disappear in five seconds I'm going to dump this cup of coffee on that yukky Palm Beach suit you're wearing."

The publisher rushes up. "Hold it, Susanna, the man is only doing his job."

"Get him out of here before I drop the 1084 budget on his skull."

The publisher leads him away and the consultants says, "She doesn't seem to have the warmth it takes to give the public the news about Ronald Reagan. I would replace her with someone your readers could be more comfortable with when they read about Chad. Who is that woman over there at the water cooler?"

"That's our science writer. What's wrong with her?"

"She's wearing a pantsuit. Our surveys show readers are very threatened by women reporters who wear pants."

"We gave up dress codes for women reporters years ago."

"Well, you're going to have to reinstitute them if you ever hope to get your circulation up. Do you see that girl sitting at the desk over there?"

"Our film critic? What's wrong with her?"

"She's pregnant."

"But she isn't going to have a baby for four months."

"How do you think your subscribers would feel if they knew they were getting their movie reviews from a pregnant woman?"

"Look, why don't we just forget the whole thing. I'm not sure a media consultant is what this paper needs right now."

"It's your candy store. If you don't care about the way your women reporters look, don't come crying to me when your readers go somewhere else for their news."

Strength For Today

Moses prophesied the coming of the Messiah by saying, "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your breatheren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you" (Acts 3:22).

And Isaiah had prophesied in the 53rd chapter the advent of a Messiah in these words: "He shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities."

At these times, people seemed to sense that a significant turn in human affairs was about to take place.

Predictive prophesy does not occupy much space in the Bible as a whole, but when it occurs, it is extremely important. The Bible is a great book of promises. The Old Testament promises that a Savior would come. The New Testament promise is that acceptance of Him would bring forgiveness and, consequently, salvation.

'Easter Bunny' Tale May Backfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter had his "killer rabbit." Now President Reagan has an "Easter bunny" problem.

Carter's problem was just a rabbit that swam toward his boat as he was fishing on a Georgia vacation in 1979. The story, when it came out almost exactly four years ago in August, made the Democratic incumbent the butt of many a joke.

Maybe it is something about August — the weather, the heat, the vacations or what — that leads to these unusual developments from American presidents, but the "Easter bunny" story may cause much more trouble for Reagan than the killer rabbit did for Carter.

For the Easter bunny story is yet another in the series of the self-inflicted wounds the Reagan administration has suffered as it struggles to do something about the GOP incumbent's problems with women.

The bunny story is part of the White House staff's counterattack against an insider who went public with her dissatisfaction.

Barbara Honegger, a Justice Department official charged with examining federal laws and regulations looking for sex discrimination, blasted Reagan for doing nothing to push for any changes in the laws she spotted and then resigned on Monday.

Reagan spokesmen belittled her as a "munchkin," calling her a low-level functionary who did not have a policy-making role.

Then on Wednesday, spokesman Larry Speakes ridiculed her for showing up at the White House Easter egg roll in a bunny outfit, saying that showed how important she was.

Oops.

Not only did the ridicule outrage some women, it was apparently wrong.

Ms. Honegger said she'd never been to an egg roll, much less in a bunny outfit.

Now there were some highjinks at the 1980 GOP National Convention where she tossed on such a costume — in part, inspired by the killer rabbit episode — and she did say she had been called "The Bunny" by some around the White House.

But Ms. Honegger's charges and now the ridicule from on high are unfortunately timed for Reagan.

Sixty-three years ago, the women's right to vote was written into the U.S. Constitution. On Aug. 26, 1920, Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby certified that the 19th Amendment had been ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states and was added to the U.S. Constitution.

The Reagan administration really has little choice but to try to deal with the gender gap.

His problems with women — now merely differences in poll numbers between women's attitudes toward Reagan and men's opinions — could translate into votes in November 1984.

And the president's advisers fear that the gender gap might just be wide enough then to deny Reagan another term.

On the campaign trail, Reagan liked to say that he is for the "E" and the "R" but not the "A" of the ERA. He even had a plan for rooting out sex discrimination from state and federal laws, a plan that was better than the ERA.

But Ms. Honegger wrote in the Washington Post on Sunday that Reagan's dedication lacked substance, saying her reports on identifying federal laws and regulations that discriminate against women languished on a White House desk.

As is often the case in Washington, the net effect of her public outrage may be to accomplish far more than she could have from the inside. The controversy swirling around Ms. Honegger's charges may goad the administration into cleaning sex discrimination out of federal laws and working with the states to do the same.

Push Claims To Hunt For Pirate Ship

BOSTON (AP) — They brought maps and nautical charts, lawyers and photographs. One group even brought a century-old cannonball as three treasure-hunting teams pushed claims to explore off Cape Cod for a pirate ship and its cargo that may be worth $200 million.

The search for the Whidah was touched off by treasure hunter Barry Clifford, whose elaborately equipped expedition, backed by private investors, has attracted rivals and sightseers to the Wellfleet shore since he announced in November that he had found the remains of the sunken 18th-century vessel.

After a lengthy hearing Thursday, the state Commission on Underwater Marine Archeology put a "buffer zone" around the territory it already had awarded to Clifford.

The zone prevents other treasure hunters from encroaching on Clifford's territory, but also prevents him from extending his search north or south of a two-mile stretch of water in the vicinity of Marconi Station near the tip of Cape Cod, about 150 miles from Boston.

Two other syndicates are active in the same area. The Old Blue Fishing Company, of Brewster, believes the wreck is farther south, near Nauset Light, and the state panel granted it a permit to explore that territory in a square-mile area.

The third group, led by Bill Daniels, of Chatham, believes the Whidah and another wreck, the White Squall, lie north of Clifford's claim. They were granted permission to explore and excavate in a mile-square area above the edge of Clifford's zone.

While arguing unsuccessfully Thursday for an expansion of the area covered by his current exploration permit, Clifford expressed confidence that he had located the wreck.

"In my own heart, I believe we've got it," said Clifford, from West Tisbury on Martha's Vineyard.

He said his crew recently discovered large iron objects in the seabed north of his designated search area and tagged them with buoys. "If these are cannons, I don't want anyone else to get them," he said.

Most parties agree that the Whidah was a wooden pirate ship commanded by "Black Sam" Bellamy which sank in a storm in 1717. It was believed to be carrying gold, silver, jewelry, art objects and ivory that might be worth up to $200 million.

But one commission member, archeologist Valerie Talmadge, said she would remain skeptical until Clifford raises the ship's nameplate.

"Unless you pull up a piece of wood that says 'The Whidah,' how will you know what you have?" she asked.

Even then, the origin of other artifacts found in the area probably would remain in doubt because hundreds of ships have broken up in the shifting sands off Cape Cod in the last three centuries, she said.

As the eight panel members questioned claimants, each party tried offering just enough evidence to establish their right to explore further without giving anything away to the other treasure hunters.

"We would like to say as little as possible about anything," Daniels said.

Faulty Work In Carrier Repair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faulty boilers on the aircraft carrier Saratoga, which completed a $549.1 million overhaul earlier this year, must be repaired at a cost of about $8 million, the Navy says.

The repairs will delay the carrier's return to service for about a month, Navy officials say. Boiler leaks were discovered while the Saratoga was undergoing a shakedown after the 28-month overhaul at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

Tubes in the 76,000-ton ship's eight boilers will be replaced in October, officials said.

Galveston Hit By Major Fire

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Fire erupted today in a historic downtown section of hurricane-ravaged Galveston, spreading across much of one block and injuring three firefighters, officials said.

The fire, adjacent to the section known as the Strand, began about 12:55 a.m. in a drug company and continued to threaten other areas at daybreak, said police dispatcher Sheree Brockstine.

The blaze "is being contained, but firemen have not officially called it under control," said Ann Gibbs, emergency supervisor.

Authorities said one firefighter was taken to John Sealy Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation. Two others were treated at the scene.

Fire officials said the four-story Washington Hotel and two other businesses were heavily damaged in the blaze.

Firefighters from Galveston, Texas City, La Marque and Hitchcock were called to battle the flames in the area, where some buildings are more than 100 years old.

More Law School Grads Fail Exam

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State figures show that an increasing number of law school graduates are failing the North Carolina bar examination but officials can't agree on the explanation.

Figures released Wednesday by the N.C. Board of Law Examiners show that 69 percent, or 395 of the 574 students taking the exam in July passed. Of those taking the test for the first time, 76 percent passed while 31 percent of the repeat test takers passed.

In 1972, 91 percent of those taking the test passed. From 1973 through 1978, the percentage of those passing dipped below 80 only once.

Fred Parker, the Board of Law Examiners' executive secretary, said he doesn't understand why the percentage of those passing the exam is lower now than it was 10 years ago.

"There are a lot of people wondering why," Parker said. "I don't know if we have the answer."

Parker said there is a growing number of repeat bar-exam takers, suggesting their success rate is lower than first-time takers. Only eight of the 48 graduates from North Carolina law schools who repeated the test passed in July 1982.

There also have been more out-of-state law school graduates taking the North Carolina exam and the out-of-state graduates don't do as well, he said. Of the 104 out-of-state law school graduates who took the exam in July 1982, only 49 passed. Art Padilla, associate vice president for academic affairs at the University of North Carolina, said varying test difficulty may explain the declining passing rate.

First-time test takers are having a more difficult time passing the bar exam. Padilla said that from 1970 through 1975, the passing rate for first-time takers always exceeded 90 percent. Since then, the passing rate has dropped as low as 78 percent in 1979.

toward the ground.

"It appeared it was going to crash into Bogue Sound," Giffin said. He said he could feel the shock waves when the aircraft slammed into the ground.

Daniel Melke said it was obvious the plane was in trouble when it flew over his home, about a mile from the crash site.

"Its engines were very erratic," Melke said. "It would lose power and gain power, then lose power and gain power again. When he passed over our house he was on fire."

The plane was returning to Cherry Point when it crashed about 7:30 p.m., Brooks said.

"It's an extremely safe aircraft," he said of the EA-6B, developed to jam enemy radar and radio signals.

Asked whether the tight security around the site was designed to protect classified equipment, he said "There's nothing on the plane we wouldn't want our enemies to know about."

"The security is to protect the area from the possibility of gas and oil explosions and also protect the scene for the investigation," he said. "There'll be a full accident investigation, but it will probably be three to six months before we know what happened."

Morehead City is on the North Carolina coast, about 150 miles southeast of Raleigh.

Reagan Cites Women's Rights Laws

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — President Reagan, defending himself against criticism from feminists, complained today that his efforts to protect the rights of women have become clouded by a "fog of demagoguery."

In the aftermath of charges that his administration has compiled a record of empty promises for women, Reagan said, "All of us are interested in one goal: insuring legal equity for women."

In his speech, on the 63rd anniversary of women's suffrage, Reagan tried to repair some of the political damage caused by charges from former Justice Department official Barbara Honegger. She has accused Reagan of reneging on a commitment to purge federal laws and regulations of provisions that discrimination against women.

That program has been described by the administration as its alternative to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment. Ms. Honegger called it a sham.

"There are laws already on the books to safeguard the rights of women," Reagan said, speaking to a Republican women's leadership forum. "Those laws must be enforced. Some must be strengthened."

"I think it's time to cut through the fog of demagoguery that surrounds this whole issue," he added. "All of us are interested in one goal: insuring legal equity for women."

Referring to the program to rid federal laws and regulations of discriminatory provisions, Reagan said, "Contrary to what you might have heard or read, that process is going forward."

He said he had instructed the Justice Department and the Cabinet Council on Legal Policy "to accelerate their review of federal laws and to have specific recommendations on my desk for discussion immediately upon my return to Washington."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said earlier this week the Cabinet group would meet in early September, but said that did not represent an acceleration of its work.

Reagan, who returns to his Santa Barbara ranch today for the remainder of his 25-day vacation, is due back in Washington on Sept. 5.

In a brief discussion of foreign policy matters, Reagan expressed disappointment with Israel and the Arab world over the Middle East peace initiative he announced last Sept. 1.

Reagan said his peace plan "is definitely alive and available to those parties willing to sit down and talk. It's unfortunate that neither Israel nor its Arab neighbors have yet grasped the opportunities afforded."

Reagan told the audience that economic recovery will do more for women than anything else. He also urged women to run for public office, suggesting that their concerns are too diverse to be represented by a single organization.

"What some cannot accept is that women are not a monolithic group" but are "a diverse majority with varied interests and varied futures."

Duck the Quacks

Untold millions of dollars are still extracted from people who fall prey to the nationwide game of quackery. It seems almost impossible to believe that so many people still fall into the trap of supersalesmen who peddle their gadgets, drugs, devices and cosmetics as rejuvenators and quick cures for every conceivable kind of disease.

Warnings by public health officials and physicians have little or no effect on the gullible who go running with outstretched arms and monies into the receptive hands of the glib seller of "youth and health."

The American Medical Association has a display of extensive photographs of simple and elaborate machines, boxes and electric equipment for the treatment of arthritis, cataracts, wrinkled skin and loss of hair, all sold by unscrupulous people who exploit the sick, the aged, the poor and the uninformed.

An unbelievably large amount of money is spent by women who buy ointments, lotions and jellies that suggest a high concentration of "special hormones" for the purpose of removing spots, wrinkles, blemishes and any other semblance of advancing age.

The amount of hormones in most of these concoctions is insignificant and cannot alter the life of a canary. In fact, so little hormone was contained in many of them that government agencies that protect the destiny of such cosmetic suckers insisted on a change in the misleading advertising. Today there is a great deal of legislation that varies from state to state about the use of hormones even in small doses in those lotions and creams.

A good rule of thumb is never to use any cream that contains any hormone without the specific advice of one's doctor. Only in this way can each individual person be protected from the absorption of a hormone that might be detrimental.

It is astonishing to note that for every device or gadget that is banned and taken off the market 10 new ones spring up to capture the curiosity of the fall guys (men and women) who love to be exploited while hope springs eternal for youthful regeneration of aging parts.

I am always impressed with the fact that actors and actresses who have just passed "over the hill" in their profession become the enthusiastic creators of special oils and cosmetics that will stop all evidence of aging. Wrinkles, blemishes and aging skin will miraculously disappear if the admittedly expensive formulae are used without interruption for a long time.

Quackery will flourish as long as people expose themselves to the pressures of money-makers without conscience.

Glen Cove Balks At Court Order

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — The mayor of Glen Cove claims the government can't force him to let Soviet diplomats swim on his town's beach, despite a federal court motion to allow the envoys to use public recreational facilities free of charge.

The motion filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn said the Glen Cove case has provoked Soviet retaliation against American diplomats in Moscow.

In a court affidavit, U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union Arthur A. Hartman said the squabble "could easily become a major political issue between the United States and the Soviet Union."

The Justice Department asked the court to issue an injunction to prevent the Long Island community from imposing a fee against the Soviet residents for use of local recreation facilities.

Glen Cove Mayor Alan Parente said Thursday he doesn't think the Soviets should be allowed to swim or play tennis and golf at municipal facilities at any price.

"Even if the government wins this suit, the court can't force us in any way, shape or form to have the Soviets back on our beaches," Parente said. "They certainly cannot say who we can or cannot have on our beaches."

Glen Cove has sought to impose a $4,800 recreation fee on Soviet residents to compensate the city for lost tax revenues on Killenworth, which is exempt from property taxes under federal law.

In 1982, Parente revoked beach, tennis and golf permits issued to residents of Killenworth, a 36-acre estate owned by the Soviet Union and used to house representatives to the United Nations.

The Soviets have retaliated by restricting American access to recreation facilities in the Soviet Union difficult, Hartman said.

"Ours is the only embassy denied use of the Diplomatic Beach and the only reason for this denial is the ban imposed by Glen Cove," Hartman said.

Justice Department lawyers said Glen Cove's action against the Soviet residents violates a 1971 court injunction that prohibits Glen Cove from imposing any tax either directly or indirectly on the Killenworth estate.

Normal School Schedule Next

Greenville schools will operate on a normal schedule beginning Monday, the school system's staff decided today. Greenville schools have closed early this week because of the excessive heat.

Under the normal schedule, schools days will end at the following times: kindergarten through grade six, 2:30 p.m.; seventh grade, 3 p.m., and grades 8-12, 3:30 p.m.

The heat situation will be closely monitored at all times, a school spokesman said, to determine if additional early closures are needed.

British Mansion Campus For Univ. Of Evansville

UNIV. OF EVANSVILLE-EAST — Harlaxton, a rambling, ornate manor house dating back to the 1830s, is the British campus of the University of Evansville, in Indiana. Situated on 675 acres in the wealthy Lincolnshire farming region, Harlaxton lies 110 miles north of London. (AP Laserphoto)

Derailment Preceded By Two Other Accidents During Trip

ROWLAND, N.C. (AP) — An Amtrak train that derailed in Rowland early Thursday morning had been involved in two other accidents within six hours on the same trip, officials said.

The Rowland accident injured 21 passengers and derailed two engines and three passenger cars when the train hit a flatbed tractor-trailer stuck on the tracks.

The Silver Meteor, originating in Florida, struck and killed a 57-year-old woman on the tracks 8 miles north of Savannah, Ga., about 7:40 p.m. Wednesday, said Amtrak Spokesman Edgar F. Myers. That delayed the train about 77 minutes, he said.

In Ridgeland, S.C., 16 miles further north, the train hit an unoccupied truck, resulting in a 25-minute delay.

In the 1:30 a.m. crash in downtown Rowland, the truck and the machine it carried were demolished, but the truck driver was not injured, said Ricky Smith, dispatcher for the Robeson County Sheriff's Department.

Smith said the tracks at the crossing had been undergoing construction.

"They were working on that track, building it up. And when the flatbed trailer began hauling that crane across the tracks, it got stuck," he said. "The train knocked the trailer truck right off the track and demolished the whole thing."

But a spokesman for Seaboard Systems Railroad, which operates the track, said the track construction had nothing to do with the wreck.

"We did rework that crossing," Owen Pride said in a telephone interview from Jacksonville, Fla. "But it was built according to North Carolina Department of Transportation specifications."

He said the truck got stuck because the driver "did not get sufficient swing for the wheel to make the crossing. His rear wheel did not stay on the roadway."

In the accident Wednesday night, Mamie Anderson of Savannah was struck by the train as she tried to run for safety from a trestle where she was fishing on a usually deserted stretch of track near Port Wentworth, Ga., officials said.

The woman was decapitated when she was pulled under the high-speed train. Her body was thrown from the tracks into the stream where she was fishing.

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
GRANTHAM, England
(AP) — It looms like a mirage on the rolling green landscape of English farmlands — a castle of towers, turrets and filigree that draws startled gasps from travelers who ask, "Good heavens, what is it?"

Tell them this splendor called Harlaxton is the campus of a midwestern American university, and they gasp again.

"I love to bring people here for the first time just to listen to the 'oohs and aahs' as they drive up," said Isabella Fine, a moving force in the U.S.-based Harlaxton Society that has rallied support for this unique Anglo-American enterprise.

Although other American institutions have launched programs abroad, none has acquired a property as vast or impressive as this rural palace.

Harlaxton, a rambling, ornate manor house dating back to the 1830s is the British campus of the University of Evansville, Indiana. Situated on 675 acres of lush land in the wealthy Lincolnshire farming region, Harlaxton lies 110 miles north of London — a well-kept secret from all but those who happen to be invited or pass by.

The nearest town is Grantham, birthplace of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, famed among Londoners as "the most boring town in England." Its low profile enhances the surprise of Harlaxton.

"When students arrive here, they are absolutely awestruck," said Graddon Rowlands, the British principal who has guided Harlaxton for six years. "They go around for three days saying, 'Wow.' But very soon it becomes home."

Although imbued with English culture, Rowlands noted that American students don't forget their hometown roots. This winter, Harlaxton made international news briefly when two students — one of them Jim Donahue, the son of talk show host Phil Donahue — made a trans-Atlantic overnight run to New York to satisfy the student body's craving for an all-American delicacy, pizza.

"It was their idea and they paid for the trip by selling shares of the pizzas to the students and faculty," Rowlands said. "They brought back 42 pizzas. We heated them in the oven and had a jolly party."

In recent weeks, during the summer break in classes, the campus has entertained the trustees from Evansville who oversee the future of this elegant educational project.

The delegates were entertained in royal style by the lords and ladies who comprise the university's British Advisory Council.

Princess Diana's sister, Lady Sarah McCorquodale, was on hand along with such personages as Sir John Wedgwood (of the famed china family) and his wife, art historian Pamela Tudor-Craig, during festivities which took the trustees to stately homes and castles from England to Ireland and Wales.

The British group will visit Evansville this fall.

Leading the American delegation to England was Evansville University President Wallace Graves. It was he who first dreamed that Evansville could have such a home away from home.

Graves, trained in international relations and law, was an educational innovator since his days as head of the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif. When he moved to Evansville as president in 1967, his dream of an international learning center took shape.

"I had felt for a long time that any institution which has a mission of preparing the rising generation for life in the 21st century can't succeed unless it finds ways to convince young people of the smallness of the world and the interdependence of its people," Graves said.

Scouring English magazines, Graves spotted an ad for a manor house. Harlaxton, which had been leased by Stanford University in the 1960s, was available. A group of Jesuits who owned it had abandoned plans to make it a seminary.

In 1971, a sign was posted on the ornate front gate: "British Campus of the University of Evansville." The first class of 80 students came from Evansville for a semester away from home.

"Our original curriculum was English literature and economic sociology," Graves recalled. "But special interests of the students led us into other areas."

Subjects now range from archaeology to nursing. Admission now is open to students from other universities and countries. Enrollment has risen to 160.

In 1978, an Evansville trustee, San Francisco ophthalmologist Dr. William Ridgeway, decided to buy Harlaxton for the university.

Shortly before the purchase, Rowlands was brought in as principal. He had lived in the United States, lecturing at Duke University, and understood both sides of the cultural mix.

"Many of the young people who come here have never been outside their home state," Rowlands said. "It's a magical experience, but they're likely to be apprehensive. In six years that I've been here we have lost only one student to homesickness."

A new class arrives at Harlaxton soon. Students will pay tuition of $6,500 a year with air fare and spending money for the more elaborate field trips not included. A few scholarships are given to applicants among Evansville's 7,000 students.

The extravagant interior of Harlaxton is undergoing refurbishment, and Graves hopes to expand its recreational facilities. But the success of this venture has the president dreaming again.

"I'm keeping my eye out for another campus," he said, "somewhere in the world."

Co-Sponsor Effort On Artificial Reef

MOREHEAD CITY — The North Carolina Marine Education and Resource Foundation and the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce are co-sponsoring a program to establish artificial reefs off the Carteret County coast and in inland waters of the county, to improve the habitat for marine life.

Hugh Talton, a Beaufort attorney and one of 10 members of the fund's steering committee, said this morning that the group's "initial goal" is to "secure, salvage and scuttle the World War II Liberty ship 'The Protector' in waters off Cape Lookout."

According to Talton, the ship, now in the mothball fleet at Fort Eustice, Va., "is the last Liberty ship to be made available." He said the cost of acquiring the ship and scuttling it off the Carteret County coast is estimated at $150,000.

The attorney said a fund-raising kickoff supper will be held at the John Yancy Motel on Sept. 17. Talton said tax deductible donations may be sent to: Cape Lookout Artificial Reef Fund, P.O. Box 1759, Morehead City.

James E. White of Greenville, an engineer with Rivers and Associates, is a member of the foundation's steering committee. Additional information about the program may be had by calling White or writing to the Morehead City address.

TREMBLING HANDS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov's hands "trembled noticeably" during a Kremlin meeting last week, machinists union chief William Winpisinger says.

It 'Really Hurts

MILLVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Police Chief Philip M. Walsh spends his working life dealing with folks who've been robbed, but didn't really empathize with the victims until it happened to him.

"With all the people I've dealt with who had homes broken into... I thought I had a handle on it — until it happened to me and I saw how it affected my family and myself," he said Thursday.

Walsh, who came home from a two-week vacation to find his own home had been robbed, said he now realizes why robbery victims lose a sense of security they previously associated with home.

"I thought I understood what they were going through," he said. "But when you find that someone you don't know, some lowlife, has invaded your privacy, it hurts."

"It's very traumatic..." he said.

Even so, Walsh is luckier than many robbery victims. A 15-year-old juvenile has been charged with the break into his home and about 75 percent of the stolen items have been recovered.

Given Access In Kidnappings

WASHINGTON (AP) — State authorities investigating child kidnapping will be given access to federal records under new regulations adopted by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Regulations made final this week by the department will give U.S. attorneys, the FBI and state officials access to the Federal Parent Locator Service. The service provides access to address files of several federal agencies including the Social Security Administration, Internal Revenue Service, and the Defense Department.

So far, 21 states have signed agreements that will give them access to the system. Between 25,000 and 100,000 children are kidnapped each year by a parent involved in a custody dispute, according to estimates by the American Bar Association.

AN OPEN LETTER TO CONSUMERS ABOUT MAXIMUM STRENGTH DEEP WOODS OFF!

Dear Customer,

Earlier this month, we informed the news media across the country about a potential problem with the applicators on some containers of Maximum Strength Deep Woods Off! We are running this advertisement to alert consumers who may have missed the earlier announcement.

THE SITUATION

We have found that the dauber-type applicator on some 1-ounce containers of Maximum Strength Deep Woods Off! could pop out or separate from the clear plastic bottles causing the product to spill suddenly. This situation had failed to show up in our earlier tests, and visual examination of the bottles also does not reveal the potential problem.

There is no cause for concern if the product spills on your skin because it is intended to be rubbed on the surface of the skin. However, like other insect repellents, and as clearly stated on the container, it could be irritating if it gets into the eyes or harmful if swallowed, and it also can damage furniture finishes, plastics, painted surfaces and watch crystals.

WHAT SHOULD I DO IF A SPILL OCCURS?

Blot up the liquid promptly and flush washable surfaces with water. In case of eye contact, flush with water. If irritation persists or if swallowed, get medical attention.

HOW DO I KNOW IF THE PACKAGE I PURCHASED IS OKAY TO USE?

There is nothing wrong with the repellent itself, only with the dauber-type applicator found on only one product, Maximum Strength Deep Woods Off! And only Maximum Strength Deep Woods Off! is packaged in a clear plastic bottle with a cloth dauber-type applicator. You can continue to use all other Off! and Deep Woods Off! products with the usual confidence.

CAN I RETURN MAXIMUM STRENGTH DEEP WOODS OFF! TO MY RETAIL STORE?

You could do that, but we recommend that you contact us directly for information and a replacement with another Deep Woods Off! product. Please call our toll-free number — 1-800-558-6001 — weekdays between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Eastern time. Or, you can write to our Consumer Affairs Director, Carol Hansen, Johnson Wax, 1525 Howe St., Racine, WI 53403.

YOUR SATISFACTION IS OUR GOAL

Our company takes pride in providing you with products of consistently high quality with innovative formulas and unique package design. Unfortunately, in this case, one of those packages has not lived up to our expectations. We feel a responsibility to correct the situation because your satisfaction is our goal.

We hope that you will contact us for a replacement if you have any Maximum Strength Deep Woods Off!

U.S. Foreign Aid Cutback Is Inspiring Criticism

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, cheered on by Congress, is limiting U.S. help to poor countries, prompting critics to say the United States is losing its old reputation for generosity.

In recent months, the administration has either vetoed loans or expressed its unhappiness about loans for poorer countries by international lending agencies.

It has stretched out a promise made in the Carter administration to provide more money for an agency that lends to only the neediest countries, and is willing to make only smaller promises of its own.

Critics such as former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara say the United States should do more.

"We are not generous," he told reporters recently. "We're not doing our share, however you wish to define our share."

He and others suggest that the U.S. attitude toward the developing countries is short-sighted. They note that generous American help do Europe and Japan after World War II helped create strong allies and good customers for U.S. exports.

But administration officials argue that countries needing capital should turn more to private investors, and less to governments and inter-governmental agencies.

The poor countries, though, prefer to keep things on an official level so they can get loans at lower interest rates than those offered in the private markets. In either case the money must be repaid, and the international lending agencies pride themselves on their repayment record.

Some recent examples of U.S. actions to tighten up on its aid are:

—The U.S. representative on the board of the Inter-American Development Bank earlier this month vetoed a $10 million loan to Guyana, a small South American country with a socialist government that has taken over much of the country's industry. The veto was taken largely because the administration felt Guyana's rice farmers were not getting high enough prices and consumers were being subsidized too much.

—The United States on June 30 vetoed a $2.2 million loan for building roads in Nicaragua. The reason given was that Nicaragua's economic policies were "not conducive to development efforts."

—The United States has abstained from voting for World Bank loans to Ethiopia, Tanzania, Egypt, Ghana, China and India. Abstention is a form of disapproval, even when it has no practical effect. Officially, all votes are exclusively on economic issues.

More importantly, the administration is insisting it will contribute no more than $750 million a year to the International Development Association — the biggest source of easy loans for the poorest countries. Former President Carter promised just under a billion dollars a year for three years, but the total has been stretched out to four years and still has not been fully delivered by Congress.

With the United States holding back, officials fear that other countries may be discouraged from contributing. Thirty or more countries are expected to supply about three-quarters of the resources of the development association, which is part of the World Bank.

McNamara, who headed the World Bank for 13 years, said the United States gives only three-one hundredths of 1 percent of its income directly to the poorest countries.

"It's unbelievable," he said. "And it is no more than half as much as that of any other major (rich) country. That is not being generous."

He acknowledged that there is little support for international aid among Americans.

Critics also point to the administration's refusal to agree to a greater contribution to the International Monetary Fund. The fund, while not an aid organization, has lent money in recent years only to debt-ridden poor countries.

Other nations wanted to provide an additional $70 billion or more to the fund, but the administration held the total to $32 billion, including $8.4 billion from the United States. Both houses of Congress have approved legislation to authorize the contribution, although there are serious differences between the bills, leaving final action uncertain.

The House has attached requirements that would compel the U.S. member on the IMF board of directors to vote against loans to South Africa, or to Communist countries. Some congressmen have said they will block the new U.S. contribution without these provisions. The Reagan administration opposes them.

Until now, lending among governments has not been much affected — at least openly — by big power politics. The charters of the international organizations say that political considerations should not play a role.

Hungary, Romania and Vietnam — all of which have Communist governments — have gotten help from the monetary fund. So have Grenada and Guyana, which are run by governments that are more or less socialist.

China has been getting considerable aid in recent years since the Communist government took over the seats in the fund and the World Bank which were formerly held by Taiwan. South Africa has also had help from the IMF.

The Soviet Union does not belong to any of these bodies, and so is not eligible for help. Cuba has never joined the Inter-American Development Bank and withdrew from the World Bank after Fidel Castro came to power.

Sympathy, But No Legal Relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge offered sympathy but no legal relief to an American businessman whose ranch in Honduras was overtaken by U.S. military advisers who are training Salvadoran troops.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey has refused to order the U.S. government to stop the training operation that Temistocles Ramirez says is destroying his $14 million ranching, meat-packing and shrimp operation.

"It is regrettable that American courts of law and equity ... cannot grant relief in cases like the instant one because it admittedly arouses sympathy for Mr. Ramirez," Richey said in a written opinion.

But Richey noted that any businessman who buys foreign property "does so with foreknowledge that his property may be expropriated and lost." The ranch is located near the Honduran training center U.S. officials are using to train Salvadoran troops to fight left-wing guerrillas.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

'JEERING AND GIBING"--THE ANCIENT ART OF "PSYCHING YOUR OPPONENT OUT!"

WHAT WITH COUNTLESS BOOKS WRITTEN ON THE SUBJECT OF PSYCHOLOGY, ITS USE IN DAILY LIFE, AND ITS RESULTING EFFECTS ON OUR FELLOW MAN, IT MIGHT SEEM THIS SCHOOL OF THOUGHT WAS INVENTED IN THE LAST HUNDRED YEARS. NOT SO! THE ANCIENT BIBLICAL ARMIES JEERED THEIR OPPONENTS AS THEY APPROACHED IN BATTLE FORMATION, HURLING THE MOST HORRIBLE INSULTS THEIR TONGUES COULD CONTRIVE! WHEN THE EMISSARIES OF THE KING OF ASSYRIA STOOD BEFORE THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM AND SHOUTED AND JEERED AT THE INHABITANTS OF THE BESIEGED CITY, BOASTING OF THEIR POWER TO MAKE JERUSALEM A PILE OF RUBBLE, THE PROPHET ISAIAH STANDING ON THE BATTLEMENTS OF THE WALL GAVE THEM AS GOOD AS HE GOT WHEN IT CAME TO INSULTS! WHEN THE PHILISTINE ARMIES CONFRONTED KING SAUL AND DEMANDED THE ISRAELITES SEND A CHAMPION TO GIVE COMBAT TO THEIR FEROCIOUS GIANT GOLIATH, THIS PROPOSAL WAS ACCOMPANIED BY A CHORUS OF TAUNTS AND THREATS! SO THE NEXT TIME YOUR OPPONENT ON THE GOLF COURSE OR TENNIS COURT TRIES A LITTLE "PSYCHING OUT" TO GET YOU OFF YOUR GAME JUST REMEMBER HE IS ONLY PRACTICING A VERY ANCIENT ART!

Tent Melded A Diversity Of Worshipers

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The tent was the center. There, beneath the outspread yellow-and-white canvas, to the beat and flow of an odd melange of instruments, in the multiple tongues of the earth, the assorted people worshipped and were one.

That was the remarkable phenomenon of the recently concluded World Council of Churches assembly in the western Canadian city of Vancouver — a long, steady peaan of globally mingled praise and trust.

It's the "untold story" of the event, says the Rev. Lowell Almen of Minneapolis, editor of the Lutheran Standard. Present for his first time at a World Council assembly, he says he was surprised by its predominant focus on worship.

"I've never been to a church meeting like that," he adds. "It was quite an experience, something I won't forget. It had a life-changing quality about it. People afterward won't be the same."

Something intangible yet powerful wend on in that 18-day process of collectively intertwined worship, each morning, noon and night, fusing the diverse customs, cultures and ways in mutual devotion.

The scenes, sounds and moments were memorable — the English of the Lord's prayer resonating in a score of other languages, the mixed races and nationalities embracing in the "kiss of peace," the handclapping to a Zimbabwe choir, interspersed by inclusive "hallelujahs!"

There was the tall, white-vested Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie getting a hug from a Danish Lutheran woman pastor and serving the bread of Holy Communion to a veiled, Syrian Orthodox metropolitan.

There were the hand-wrought clay chalices and patens passed by ministers of different traditions, the lifted banners of many lands. There was the Rev. Philip Potter, the council's administrator, cradling an African baby handed to him by the mother as a choir sang a new theme song:

"Jesus Christ — the Life of the World."

There was the unusually varied, multinational musical accompaniment — the call of the African drums, the berberaques, and the Argentinian bombo, the strings of the long-necked sitar of India and the violin-like kemanncha of ancient Persia.

All and all, in the emotion and frequent joyful tears, an almost magical sort of combining took place, a new cohesion formed in that time of celebrative adoration and thanksgiving to God for creation, for life and its hopes.

Each morning at 8, before going into sessions, each noontime and each evening, the approximately 4,000 people gathered there in that 240-by-100-foot tent to pray and sing.

Throughout the day, there also were devotions at candle-lit chapels on the campus of the University of British Columbia, and Canadian Indians kept an open "sacred fire" going, its smoke symbolically carrying prayers heavenward.

"This is a praying assembly," said the Rev. Wesley Ariarajah, a Sri Lanka Methodist based in Geneva, Switzerland, on the council's staff. "It is the Lord's doing and it is marvelous in our eyes."

The Rev. Geroge Goodman, a Charlotte, N.C., Presbyterian, recalls a particularly morning when those praying in English began speaking more softly for some reason and "you could hear, really hear, all the others praying in their own languages."

"I felt something. Something was going on. That prayer was our commonality and all I could think of was Pentecost" — the strange, ancient New Testament time when the Holy Spirit drew people of many nations and tongues into common understanding.

"We were different in language, different in dress, different in nationalities and have many different church traditions," Goodman says. "Yet, you know, we could all affirm each other because we are affirmed by our faith in God."

That unifying spark, struck through the blended music, words and feelings, the ancient, formalized liturgies of the East, the natural, swaying rhythms from the Caribbean and the Cameroonian, the grass floor, the mixed nationalities, East and West, became the unifying flame and heart of the assembly.

The worship didn't make the headlines, and seldom does in church conventions, but its spirit permeated those business sessions, Almen says, reflected in concern for Scriptural foundations in witness and action.

"The work," he says, "seemed to be an extension of the prayers." Attention also was given to many concrete matters, including a new convergence agreement on basic concepts, reached by virtually every branch of Christianity, including Roman Catholicism.

But an unseen impetus stemmed from that big tent, symbolizing a pilgrim people seeking their way to "be one," as Christ prayed they would, "so the world may believe."

Interfaith Service Religious Prelude

WASHINGTON (AP) — An interfaith service on Friday night, involving Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and Jewish leaders, was set as a religious prelude to Saturday's march on Washington.

Marking the 20th anniversary of the historic 1963 march for civil rights, when the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. made his famed "I have a dream" speech, the new demonstration is in the cause of "jobs, peace and freedom."

Numerous church agencies have declared support for the march, being sponsored by the New Coalition of Conscience, including 600 groups representing civil rights, labor, religious, women's, peace and environmental groups.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, says the march is to protest widespread unemployment; the administration's dismantling of policies to insure justice and freedom, and the escalating arms race.

Some Jewish groups have indicated they would not participate directly, because of inclusion of several Arab and pro-Palestine Liberation Organization groups with anti-Israel views.

But the Reform Jewish body, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, is taking an active part after being assured by Mrs. King and other leaders that they would disavow any anti-Semitic or anti-Israel statements.

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Reform body, said it is participating "because we are committed to the struggle for civil rights and the spirit of coalition and cooperation forged by Dr. King."

Schindler, who will deliver the closing benediction of the affair, also is co-chairing it, along with numerous other religious leaders, including United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong, president of the National Council of Churches and Roman Catholic Archbishop James Hickey of Washington.

Ms. Perkins, widow of the late Rev. Charles G. Perkins who was pastor of Pine Bluff before his death last May 23, disavowed "any interest in women's lib," adding:

"I do not see this ordination as involving manhood or womanhood, but servanthood... When God calls, we must respond."

Asserts System Just Obsolete

WASHINGTON (AP) — "An extraordinary event" if he wins a Democratic primary, presidential hopeful William Kreml, nevertheless, has plans to promote his little-known candidacy. Kreml, a political science professor at the University of South Carolina, says his mission is to sound the alarm for what's wrong with the government. It doesn't work well, Kreml says, because of an obsolete Constitution that, among other things, requires congressmen to run for reelection every two years. Kreml, who is running in the six New England states, said the New Hampshire electorate would show "intellectual grit" if he won 2,000 votes in that state's Democratic primary in March.

Tracked Down Stolen Pooch

FALMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A grateful Chicago family whose stolen puppy was tracked down in a Boston pound by a big-hearted mechanic says it's "hard to believe anyone would go to all that trouble." Earl Whetstone picked up his pooch in Boston on Monday, three weeks after the vacationing family's camper was stolen from Boston Common with the Labrador pup inside, the Cape Cod Times reported Thursday. Although the van was found the same day, Prince, who had no identification tags, had been dumped on the streets and lost.

After stopping in Cape Cod, where they told their plight to mechanic Kevin Nolan of Falmouth, the heartbroken family returned home. But Nolan doggedly hunted Prince, finally tracing him to the pound.

Large Rise In Productivity

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. productivity, counting all business except farming, rose at an annual rate of 6.1 percent in the April-June quarter of this year in the biggest jump in nearly eight years, the Labor Department said in a revised report today. The department was revising a report that had shown non-farm productivity increasing at a rate of 4.3 percent in the April-June period. Productivity measures the amount of goods and services the economy turns out in an hour's paid working time. The measure normally rises during the early months of a business recovery since many companies are increasing production while remaining cautious about re-hiring workers laid off during a recession such as the one that ended last November. Therefore, relatively low numbers of workers are, at least temporarily, producing more goods than usual. Still, a number of analysts, including chief White House economist Martin Feldstein, have said the figures this year have been especially good. The revised second-quarter productivity increase was

Attacks Filing For Bankruptcy Consistent With 'OD'

SOUTH TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A lawyer for a paralyzed policeman who is owed $3.59 million plus interest in a judgment against this tiny community says officials are trying to starve out his client by filing for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy law. The Chapter 9 bankruptcy filing on Thursday will allow South Tucson to conduct day-to-day business while a plan is formulated for paying the debt to former Tucson policeman Roy Garcia, city lawyers said. Garcia was shot during a 1978 joint police operation in South Tucson. However, Garcia's lawyer, Richard Grand, said the reorganization petition "is all a technique devised by the lawyers and the government of South Tucson to try to starve Roy out."

Require Frosh Buy Computers

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Clarkson University's 800 freshmen are required to buy computers for class use because "we know when the students leave in 1987 and walk up to a desk, they will find a computer," a dean of the science and engineering school says. The new students who arrived Thursday each pay a $200 maintenance deposit and $200 a semester for a Zenith Z-100 Personal Desk Top Computer, which they will be able to take with them when they graduate. The $4,000 cost of each unit is being subsidized by corporate and private grants and gifts. "It's pretty difficult to do much in engineering these days, or in management, without a computer," said David Bray, a Clarkson dean.

Churches Use Tons Of Paper

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — About 14 tons of paper were used at the sixth assembly of the World Council of Churches in producing the tide of reports, proposals, speech texts and other documents turned out during the 18-day meeting, ended in mid-August. That amounts to about 3 million sheets.

Four Die In Plane Crash

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hours after Navy pilot Jimmy B. Schneider was promoted to lieutenant Tuesday, he and three crew members were killed in a fiery plane crash in Elizabeth City. Schneider's father, Robert B. Schneider of Raleigh, said the 25-year-old loved his work although he realized the danger. "He got into naval aviation because he thought it was the thing to do," Schneider said. "He was very good at it."

He said his son had landed aircraft onto carriers about 100 times since joining the Navy. "We all realized that landing on an aircraft carrier is dangerous," Schneider said, adding that he had advised his son to fly transport planes between bases rather than the more dangerous jet fighters.

The younger Schneider was commissioned into the Navy as an ensign in May 1980, the day he graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a bachelor's degree in political science. He had gone to UNC on a Navy ROTC scholarship.

Tuesday afternoon Schneider was flying a twin-engine C-1A Trader, an aircraft used to ferry crews and cargos to aircraft carriers, when the plane's tail dipped slightly, its wings turned and rolled and the plane crashed into the ground. It speared a 75-foot ball of flame.

"The left engine apparently had some difficulty," said Lt. Cmdr. Thomas E. Connor, a spokesman at the Norfolk (Va.) Naval Air Station, where Schneider was stationed. Connor said the cause of the crash was under investigation.

Also killed were Ensign Sean E. Duffy, 23, of East Northport, N.Y., the co-pilot; Airman Scott R. Oliver, 22, of Nashville, Tenn.; and Airman-recruit Elizabeth Oxley, 19, of the Bronx, N.Y.

U.S.-Cuban Boxers Set For Showdown

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — It's almost showdown time for U.S. boxers in the IX Pan American games, the confrontation with the Cubans that most anticipated since they arrived here.

Four young Americans — Pernel "Sweet Pea" Whitaker, Jerry Page, Louis Howard and Dennis Milton — won semifinal bouts Thursday night, atoning for the U.S. flop on Wednesday when three of four American boxers lost. That ended a U.S. unbeaten streak that had reached 12.

But waiting for all four on Sunday will be four Cubans who took only nine minutes and 52 seconds to dispose of four opponents, three by knockout in the first round, the fourth by disqualification.

Action on the field and in the ring Thursday continued to share the spotlight with the crackdown on the use of performance-enhancing drugs by athletes.

Mike Tully, a U.S. pole vaulter who had left with 11 other U.S. track athletes after they heard of the strict drug testing standards, returned and said he would compete at 4 p.m. today.

"I will give a statement after competing," said Tully, who paid his own way here from Los Angeles. "I think the issue will become clearer tomorrow."

Fernando Vera, a Chilean cyclist who had been handed a one-month suspension earlier this week, became the 12th athlete to be named for using drugs in competition. Vera did not win a medal here, but like the others, his name and test results were forwarded to international sports officials for possible further sanctions.

Vera was the first non-weightlifter named. The only U.S. athlete involved so far has been Jeff Michels of Chicago, a triple gold medal winner in the 243-pound weightlifting class who faces an automatic one-year suspension that would eliminate him from Olympic competition.

In another development involving Michels, Cable News Network reported Thursday night that the U.S. Weightlifting Federation has not taken action against the weightlifter.

"We have to make sure the findings were correct," said Murray Levin, president of the USWF, in a telephone interview from Boca Raton, Fla. "They may have the wrong apparatus. We have not been, and the boy has not been notified what was found in Caracas."

Levin also told CNN, "We aren't going to let this boy go down the drain because some mad man from Cologne, West Germany, has developed a system that may not be accurate. But if it is accurate and he is guilty he will be suspended (for one year)."

One U.S.-Cuba confrontation will take place today when the U.S. baseball team tries to end Cuba's 32-game Pan American winning streak. But now the U.S. must beat the Cubans twice to win the gold medal because the U.S. lost its first game in nine starts Thursday, falling 9-5 to Nicaragua.

Outside of baseball, it was a good day for the United States, which won 11 gold medals to move to 106 total and 218 overall. Cuba remained second with 64 golds and 138 medals and Canada third with 12 and 89.

The women's basketball team clinched its gold with a game left to play in a 113-33 romp over Venezuela, as Lisa Ingram made her first appearance and led the United States with 23 points. Joan Benoit won the women's 3,000 meters and Colleen Sommer took the high jump to ease the American drought in track and field.

There were three golds in tennis, one in table tennis and four in the brand new sport of sombo wrestling, a cross between freestyle and Greco-Roman.

In tennis, NCAA champion Greg Holmes of Danville, Calif., won the men's singles; Gretchen Rush of Pittsburgh, who won the women's singles on Wednesday, teamed with Leslie Allen of Winston-Salem, N.C., to take the women's doubles, and Eric Korita of Glenview, Ill., and Jon Levine of Phoenix combined to win the men's doubles, 4-6, 7-5, 12-10 in 3 hours and 20 minutes.

The women's table-tennis team of Insook Buschan of Aurora, Calif., and Diana Gee of San Carlos, Calif., beat Cuba 3-1 for the gold and the sombo wrestling golds went to Lewis Dorrance of Triangle, Va., Steve Sirof of Hayward, Calif., Bobby Sole of San Bernardino, Calif., and Jim Martin of Alexandria, Va.

The U.S. men's basketball team remained unbeaten by trouncing Argentina 88-68, its biggest point spread of the games, as Michael Jordan led the way with 24 points.

The American softball team earned a spot in Friday's championship game with an 11-9 eight-inning win over Canada as Butch Batt and Chuck Prescott scored the winning runs on bad throws by Canadians in the eighth.

The best performance of the day came not from an American but from Luis Delis of Cuba, who broke the Pan Am mark in the discus with a toss of 220 feet, 10 inches. Delis also won the shot put on Tuesday and competed in both events against fields without Americans — the U.S. weight men were among the 11 athletes who went home.

Whitaker, the world amateur champion in the 132-pound class, reflected the mood of all the U.S. finalists when he spoke of his upcoming gold-medal bout with Cuba's Angel Herrera, a two-time world and Olympic champion.

"I'm glad it's him," said Whitaker, who has beaten the 30-year-old Herrera twice after losing their first meeting and exchanged a friendly palm slap with the Cuban on the floor of the United Nations Park boxing arena two nights ago.

"I can afford another win over Herrera. I have two of them already."

Whitaker's win Thursday, over Angel Beltrés of the Dominican Republic, was the closest of the American victories. The judges voted 3-2 for the Norfolk, Va., resident, throwing it to jury consulted in all 3-2 bouts. It confirmed Whitaker's victory, 4-1.

Then came Page in the 139-pound class. For the second time in a row, he had less trouble with Giovanni Lopez of the Dominican Republic, whom he beat 4-1, than with producing a urine sample for drug testing, which took him two hours.

Page will face Cuba's Candelario Duvergel, whose bout with Gennaro Leon of Mexico was stopped with four seconds left in the first round.

"I saw him and I can beat him," the 22-year-old Columbus, Ohio, resident said. "The Cubans try for knockouts. Well, I'm going to go the distance with him... unless he doesn't."

Howard, the U.S. 147-pounder, continued to be one of the most impressive Americans in Pan Am competition.

He pounded away at Luis Garcia of Venezuela for a standing eight-count in the first round and then floored him in the second. The partisan home crowd, which some Americans think has influenced the judges, never got into the fight and Howard walked off with a 5-0 decision.

Price's 66 Surprises World Series Field

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Nick Price got a bitter dose of American-style pressure a year ago at Royal St. George in England, and now has spent a full season sampling the demands of the PGA Tour.

"It's been a learning experience for me," said Price, a 26-year-old South African who joined the Tour this season after winning the South African Order of Merit, a feat he accomplished without winning a tournament.

"You conjure something up in your mind, then you find everything is completely different from what you'd expected," he said.

And Price, who hasn't won in two seasons and hasn't played with particular distinction this year, conjured up a surprise of his own, a 4-under-par 66 that gave him the first round lead Thursday in the $500,000 World Series of Golf.

"I hit a few good shots and got it on a roll. I haven't done that for a while," he said.

The last time, in fact, could have been in the 1982 British Open, where led through 66 holes, the lost four strokes over the last six, handing the title to Watson.

"It hurt," he said. "After 66 holes, two loose drives got me in trouble. But I recovered quickly. I look on it as a positive achievement — after all, I was second in the British Open — rather than a negative thing."

Shortly after that bitter experience, he revamped his swing, abandoned the European circuit and this season joined the American Tour on a fulltime basis.

The primary surprise he found in the United States he said, was "the depth of the talent. I just didn't expect the depth of the good players over here. There are 125-150 good players in every tournament. There are 120 in every tournament capable of winning. It's amazing."

Equally amazing was his 30 over the last nine holes at the 7,173 yard Firestone Country Club course, an effort that centered around a chip-in birdie on the 11th and was a single stroke off the course record.

But it was needed to keep him a stroke in front of Jack Nicklaus and Bobby Clampett, tied for second at 67.

Nicklaus, a one-shot loser to Hal Sutton in the PGA, missed only one green, made one bogey and obviously was very pleased with his 3-under-par total. "I'll take three more of those and waltz on home to Palm Beach," he said.

Hale Irwin, Mike Nicolette, Fred Couples and Tommy Nakajima of Japan were next at 68, with Ray Floyd, Larry Mize and Bob Gilder tied at 69. Watson, the current British Open titleholder, and Sutton each matched par 70. Defending champion Craig Stadler shot 71 and U.S. Open winner Larry Nelson took a 77.

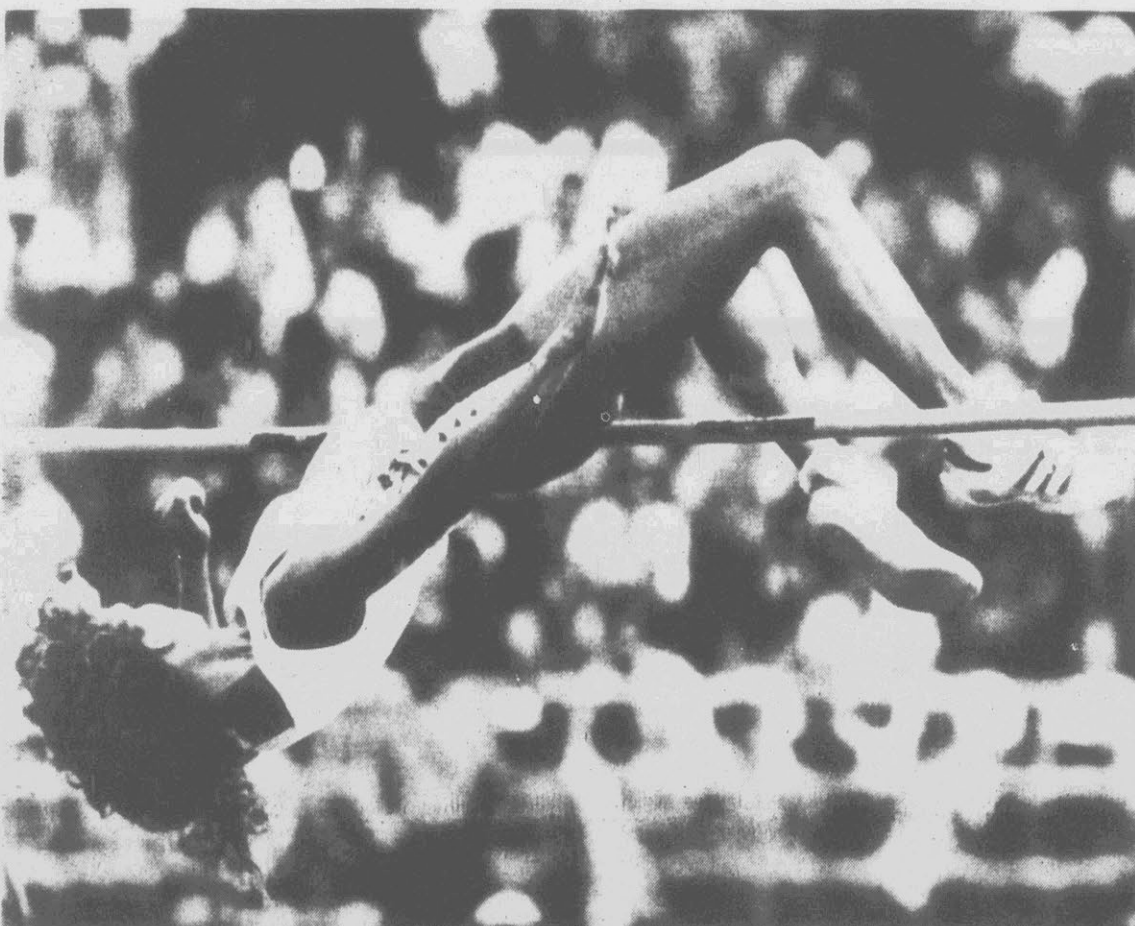

Cardinals 2, Braves 1

"George doesn't like to play overtime. That's why I like him up in the to have him up in the ninth. He likes to get out of there," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said with a smile after Hendrick jumped on Atlanta reliever Steve Bedrosian's first pitch in the ninth inning and boomed it deep into the left-field seats.

"It's really very simple; the guy's just a good hitter," said Bedrosian, who had replaced Craig McMurtry. The Atlanta starter had allowed only three hits over the first eight innings.

DeLeon, helped Thursday by two runs batted in apiece from Jim Morrison and Tony Pena, had struck out 10 or more batters in three of his eight big-league starts and has an impressive 1.93 earned-run average.

"If he keeps pitching like that, he could be the difference for us," said Manager

Tully Returns To Pan Am Games After Abruptly Leaving Caracas

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Mike Tully is back in town, the latest name in an increasingly complex crackdown on the use of steroids by athletes at the Pan American Games.

Tully, a former U.S. record-holder in the pole vault, flew into Caracas late Thursday, his fiberglass poles preceding him.

It was less than three days after Tully, along with 11 other members of the U.S. track team, had abruptly flown home. One, Randy Williams, wanted to be with his wife, who had just given birth to a son.

No official reason was given for the departures of the others. But they came just hours after news broke of strict new drug testing among athletes at the Games, and U.S. Olympic Committee officials accompanied the announcement that the athletes had left with a stern warning against the use of steroids or other banned substances. Tully would shed no light on the matter when he arrived, but promised further disclosures later today.

"Things have been really bad at home," Tully said at the Simon Bolivar International Airport. "I will give a statement after the competition. I think the issue will become clearer (today)."

The pole vault is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. EDT today.

The biggest drug bust in the history of amateur sports added another name Thursday.

Pan Am officials said anabolic steroids had been found in urine tests of Fernando Vera, the top member of the Chilean cycling team.

Vera was the 12th Pan Am athlete to be named for using steroids, and the first other than a weightlifter. The initial 11 names sent to their national Olympic committees and international sports federations for possible sanctions.

Earlier this week, Vera was suspended for one month when initial tests showed traces of steroids — artificial hormones which have been found to increase muscle bulk.

Meanwhile, there were questions over just how many athletes had been found using steroids or other banned substances.

Canadian officials said they had been informed that a Cuban volleyball player, whose name they did not know, had tested positive for drugs, and that the score of Canada's victory over Cuba would be changed from 3-2 to 3-0.

A Cuban official said there was a positive test for Ephedrine, one of 95 drugs on the Pan Am list of banned substances. But, the official added, the amount detected was small and Cuban officials were able to prove that the athlete had legitimately used a nose-drop medicine containing Ephedrine. So, the doctor said, Pan Am officials were withholding a decision on whether to take action in the case.

Only one U.S. athlete — weightlifter Jeff Michels of Chicago — had been among those found with drugs in their system. Michels said Thursday that he would continue to train, despite a one-year suspension that knocks him out of the Olympics, and that he was confident he could be cleared if his case is appealed.

"I haven't been suspended yet, and I still have my medals," he said. "Presuming notification does come, I'm sure there will be an appeal. I expect to be cleared."

The president of the U.S. Weightlifting Federation, Murray Levin, told Cable News Network: "We have to make sure the findings were correct. They may have the wrong apparatus. We have not been, and the boy has not been notified what was found in Caracas."

Michels, interviewed in Chicago, declined to comment when asked if he had ever taken steroids. But earlier he said: "I don't use them. They're against the rules."

Meanwhile, a U.S. decathlete who had been mistakenly included in a list of track team members leaving the games after word of strict drug testing broke on Monday was scratched from the competition because of leg injuries.

Gary Bastien of Auburn, Ala., was diagnosed by Dr. Roy T. Bergman, the chief physician of the U.S. team, as having three problems with his left leg — a strained calf muscle, a strained achilles tendon and bursitis of the achilles tendon.

The U.S. Olympic Committee said Bastien would remain in Caracas.

ECU-FSU To Be On WITN

WITN-TV, Channel 7 in Washington, will telecast the Sept. 3 football game between the East Carolina Pirates and the Seminoles of Florida State University, the station announced yesterday.

The game, to be played in Tallahassee, Fla., will begin at 7 p.m.

Former WITN sports director Dick Jones is slated to handle the play-by-play, with current sports director Paul Baker handling the color.

The contest is the season opener for both teams.

DeLeon's Effort Pulls Pirates Into Tie For 1st

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Rookie sensation Jose DeLeon not only wants to be a starter, he wants to be a finisher.

DeLeon didn't flirt with a no-hitter, as he has done three times since being recalled from the minor leagues just over a month ago. But he managed to strike out 11 Houston batters over 8 2-3 innings Thursday as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Astros 5-3.

The victory salvaged the final game of the four-game series for the Pirates and moved them into a first-place tie with idle Philadelphia in the National League East. The Pirates open a three-game series with NL West-leading Atlanta tonight in Pittsburgh, while the Phillies are at home against the Los Angeles Dodgers, who trail the Braves by just 1½ games.

In the only other NL game Thursday night, St. Louis beat the Braves 2-1 on George Hendrick's leadoff homer in the bottom of the ninth inning.

DeLeon's only regret was that he wasn't able to finish what he had started.

"I got tired in the seventh inning, but I wanted to keep pitching because our bullpen has been struggling," said DeLeon, who scattered eight hits. "I hope I can pitch a lot more innings this season because I still feel strong."

DeLeon, 5-2, kept the Astros guessing with his array of fastballs, fastballs and curves, allowing just a run and four hits until the eighth. He gave up four hits and two more runs after that until Rod Scurry came on to get the final out.

"I had all my stuff working again tonight," said DeLeon, who struck out 13 while pitching a two-hitter in the Pirates' 4-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds last Saturday.

The Pirates lost four in a row after that, until DeLeon gave them another victory. He has posted three of the four triumphs the Pirates have managed in the first 10 games of their current homestand.

"Everybody already has a lot of confidence in him," said outfielder Mike Easler. "Any time a guy pitches like he's been, you know he's going to keep the game close. I've really been watching him and he's shown me a lot."

"He's got that extra pop on the fastball and then he has then backing off when he throws that forkball. He goes right at the hitters and he doesn't get behind in the count. He's very composed."

"Even in fastball situations, when the hitter knows he's going to get a fastball, he throws the fastball right by them on the corner," Easler added.

The Astros were impressed with their first look at the 22-year-old right-hander, who pitched a no-hitter for 8 1-3 innings against the New York Mets in his third major-league start.

"He's got good stuff," said Astros Manager Bob Lillis. "I was very impressed with him. He's got good velocity and a good forkball and he's around the plate with it."

"He has excellent command of three outstanding pitches," said catcher Alan Ashby. "He's very tough."

DeLeon, helped Thursday by two runs batted in apiece from Jim Morrison and Tony Pena, had struck out 10 or more batters in three of his eight big-league starts and has an impressive 1.93 earned-run average.

"If he keeps pitching like that, he could be the difference for us," said Manager

Martin Happy He's Got Moreno Now

By The Associated Press
Fifteen days ago, when Billy Martin of the New York Yankees discovered Omar Moreno on his roster, he was one unhappy manager.

Now — well, for the moment, at least — he's all smiles.

Moreno was obtained from Houston in a deal that sent Jerry Mumphrey to the Astros, a straight-up swap of unhappy center fielders that angered Martin because he hadn't been consulted by Murray Cook, the Yankees' general manager, before the trade was consummated.

Before he arrived, Moreno was batting .242. But in the 13 games since putting on the pinstripes, he is hit .349 with eight runs batted in and his first home run of the season.

The homer came Wednesday, when he also had a single and a double and drove in four runs to lead the Yanks past Seattle 6-3. On Thursday he had three more hits — a single, double and triple — drove in a run and scored three as the Yanks beat the Mariners 7-4.

Elsewhere Thursday in the American League, Milwaukee routed California 7-0, Baltimore edged Toronto 2-1 in 10 innings, Detroit whipped Chicago 10-1, Minnesota beat Boston 5-2, Oakland shut out Cleveland 6-0 and, in a twin-night doubleheader, Kansas City swept Texas 3-1 and 5-4.

"I think Billy's only reservation with Omar was that he didn't know him," said Cook, "and I think Omar is going to make Billy like him."

Moreno seemed to be of the same mind. When asked about Martin's earlier negative attitude, Moreno replied: "I don't know anything about that. He never saw me play. Now I'm in a new league and I'd like to show everyone how I can play."

He's showing Martin. "He's swinging the bat real good, playing a great outfield, and running the bases really well," the Yanks' manager said — but he still hedged. "So far, I'm happy...I like to watch a player for a month before I make up my mind."

The Yanks spotted Seattle three first-inning runs, got one back in the bottom of the first, tied it in the second and broke it open with three in the third as Steve Kemp and Roy Smalley doubled to left, Moreno tripled and Willie Randolph singled. Shane Rawley went the route for the 11th time this season, scattering seven hits.

Brewers 7, Angels 0
Milwaukee retained its one-game lead in the East, riding rookie Tom Candiotti's eight-hitter past the Angels. It was his second complete game in two starts.

The Brewers pounded California sinkerballer Tommy John for 13 hits in five innings, the big one a three-run homer by Ned Yost in a five-run fifth. "It was a fast ball, but didn't sink," John said. "Actually it did sink — but it went 370 feet before it did."

Orioles 2, Blue Jays 1
For the second night in a row, Toronto saw a last-inning lead dissolve in Baltimore. This time the loss dropped the Blue Jays into fifth place in the East, 3½ games behind the Brewers.

Tippy Martinez gave up Barry Bonnell's two-out homer in the top of the 10th, but he wound up the winner when, with one out in the bottom of the inning, Joe Nolan and Al Bumbry singled off Roy Lee Jackson and Dan Ford doubled off the glove of diving center fielder Lloyd Moseby.

"We should have won all three games," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "When you have the lead in the last inning, you should win. Somebody's got to get three outs — one time."

Tigers 10, White Sox 1
John Wockenfuss' three-run homer, Lou Whitaker's two-run blast and Chet Lemon's solo shot carried the Tigers past Chicago and kept them third in the East, 1½ games off the pace.

The White Sox, whose West Division lead over Kansas City was cut to 7½ games, were ordered by the AL to travel to Detroit for this single game, rather than wait and make up an Aug. 10 rainout at the end of the season.

Twins 5, Red Sox 2
Minnesota's Frank Viola baffled Boston on three hits including Reid Nichols' homer in the second inning and Dave Stapleton's RBI double in the sixth.

The Twins, winning for the 11th time in 16 games, broke a 2-2 tie in the bottom of the seventh on singles by Mickey Hatcher and Ron Washington and Darrell Brown's grounder.

A's 6, Indians 0
While Viola was throwing heat, Oakland's Steve McCatty was avoiding it — and he still came away with a four-hit victory in Cleveland. "If they think I wasn't challenging them, it wasn't because I didn't want to throw the fastball," he said. "It's just that I couldn't get it over." It was his third consecutive complete game and second shutout in that stretch.

Davey Lopes, Jeff Burroughs and Mike Heath drove in two runs apiece for Oakland.

Royals 3-5, Rangers 1-4
Kansas City won the first game as George Brett homered and Dan Quisen-berry picked up his 35th save to tie his personal season high and move within three of the major-league record of 38, set by John Hiller of Detroit in 1973.

In the second game, Dave Hostetler's homer put Texas on top 4-3 in the top of the eighth inning. But in the bottom of the ninth, John Wathan led off against Dave Schmidt with a single, was bunted to second and scored the tying run on pinch-hitter Frank White's double before Pat Sheridan sent White home with the game-winner by drilling a single to right-center field.

Perhaps it will again fall on deaf ears, but it is again time for the powers that be to consider a separate football facility for Rose High School.

East Carolina's Ficklen Stadium is currently used by the Rampants for their home games, but they must follow certain guidelines, among those the rule that they cannot play on a Friday night preceding a Saturday ECU game.

Because of that, along with the resodding of the Ficklen surface, three of Rose's five home games will be either moved to another field or played on Thursday night.

Rose's opening home game, against New Bern, will be played at D.H. Conley's field, due to the Ficklen resodding. East Carolina does not wish to have any one playing on the field prior to its opening home game a week later.

Then, when Rose plays Beddingfield and Hunt, the games will be moved back to Thursday instead of the traditional Friday time since ECU plays home afternoon games the following Saturdays. In addition to cutting back on the time allotted for preparation for the games, a movement away from Fridays usually results in lower paying gates.

Many will bring up the old argument that money was given in the original drive to build Ficklen with the understanding that Rose could play there. But times have changed and the money raised 20 years ago is now a mere drop in the bucket compared with the funds that have since been raised and spent in doubling the size of the stadium, upgrading the lights and press facilities and the resurfacing of the field.

Putting a crowd of two to four thousand into 35,000-seat Ficklen diminishes the effect. The people are too spread out and some players have said that they feel they play before an empty stadium.

While there may be other solutions to the problem, the most immediate one could be found by upgrading the field at E.B. Aycock, adding a grandstand and press facility on the east side of the field, putting up lighting, and using the current field beside the football area for parking. That would cause physical education activities to be moved, but arrangements could be worked out. Aycock's baseball program could be played at nearby Jaycee Park.

At any rate, Rose needs to be the master of its own fate, playing when and where it chooses, not having to work around East Carolina's schedule. The only way is for the high school to have its own facility.

Most people who cover high school football in the state owe a great deal to the efforts of Dick Barkley of Arapahoe. Each year, Barkley assembles a package containing the schedules of all of the NCHSAA football playing members and provides it to the media. It includes each team's schedule, as well as day-by-day schedules.

But Barkley, keeping up with much trivia in the high school ranks, also includes little bits and pieces of information which might prove interesting.

For instance, Brevard, one of two teams which went through the 1982 season without a loss, leads the state in its current winning streak with 19 in a row, while Jacksonville, the only other unbeaten last year, has won 14 straight. A total of 14 teams went unbeaten in regular season.

Brevard, too, has the longest streak of games scored in, having not been shut out for 84 straight games. Rose ranks 15th among 91 teams listed with 39 games straight without a shutout. North Pitt hasn't been shut out in 14 games and Washington, in 13.

Union High School in Sampson County has been scored on in 72 straight games. Among area teams, Conley is sixth with 37 straight games scored on. Roanoke has not had a shutout in 11 games.

Swansboro currently leads the state in losing streak with 21 straight, followed by Louisburg and Chatham Central with 19. A total of 14 teams lost all of their games last year.

Whiteville had the highest scoring average in the state last year with a 37.9 mark, while Washington ranks 16th with 28.0. Durham was the lowest scoring team, getting only 1.9 points a game. Greene Central averaged 6.6, making the list in 26th place.

Vance had the best scoring defense, giving up 3.4 points a game, while Washington was ninth, allowing 6.5 points a game. Swansboro was scored on the most, giving up 39.6 points, while Chocowinity gave up 27.9, for 17th place.

Washington also ranked seventh in scoring margin, outscoring its opponents by an average of 21.5 points per game.

And to top off the trivia: Dixon had the biggest turnaround in points, losing to Southwest Onslow, 85-0 in 1981, and beating Southwest, 28-16 in 1982, a 97-point swing. East Wilkes had the biggest won-lost turnaround, going from 10-0 in 1981 to 0-10 in 1982.

And briefly, here are our predictions for the coming weekend's high school football: North Pitt over Roanoke; Washington over Belhaven; Williamston over Pequimans, and Greene Central over Conley.

Our panel returns next week as the high school schedule fills out and collegiate play begins.

RALEIGH (AP) — The 1983 North Carolina high school football season began Thursday with two of the season's defending state champs appearing strong enough to finish on top again.

Robbinsville, which has won four straight 1-A titles and 10 state crowns in 14 years, is the favorite to win another state championship and 2-A champ Randleman could be the class of its division.

In the 3-A ranks, Brevard has over a dozen starters back from last year's 14-0 state title team, but the Blue Devils will be hard pressed to duplicate that feat in 1983.

Defending 4-A champion Jacksonville lost 25 players to graduation, 15 of whom were starters. Jacksonville returns only its tight end on offense, with six players back on defense.

"We feel we can develop into a good team with hard work," Jacksonville coach Ray Durham said.

"Offensively, we're very far behind," Durham said. "We're never going to be a great offensive team this year because we just don't have the skill people."

Durham picked his squad to finish no higher than third in the Mideastern Conference, behind Wilmington, New Hanover and Goldsboro.

Among the teams that figure to have a shot at winning the 4-A title this season are Fayetteville Douglas Byrd, Charlotte Independent, Asheville and Greensboro Page.

Douglas Byrd returns quarterback Brad Edwards, who hit 47 of 101 passes for 862 yards and 10 touchdowns. Edwards had just three interceptions a year ago.

Charlotte Independence lost all-American quarterback Mark Maybe, but the Patriots return 16 starters from last year's 9-2 club. Among those back is 290-pound offensive tackle Chuck Tabor, selected as one of the nation's top seniors by at least one publication.

Title, which lost to Jacksonville in the 4-A game last year, has a pair of quarterbacks back who will split time under center. Together, Todd Ellis and Stafford Moser completed 160 of 280 passes for 24 touchdowns and 2,400 yards last year.

Asheville lost 20 of 22 starters, but is still picked by league coaches to win the Western 4-A Conference title. The Cougars will be counting on a pair of returning starters on the line — 6-3, 294-pound Robert Weaver and 6-2, 235-pound Keith White — to lead the way.

Brevard's stay atop the 3-A division and its 19-game winning streak, the longest in the state, will face a stiff challenge from Kannapolis, Asheville A.C. Reynolds, and Southern Durham.

Brevard returns five starter from a defense that gave up only 102 points last season.

"We won't be as good as last year," Brevard coach Frank Robinson said.

"Our defense should be fairly good, but it's hard to say just how good we'll be."

Robinson is sure of one thing: A.C. Reynolds presents Brevard with a big challenge in the Big-Mac Conference race.

"Reynolds has got a good ballclub, one of the best in 3-A," Robinson said.

Reynolds returns 15 starters, including nine on offense. Leading the list of returnees is tailback Carey Metts and fullback Bobby Bowens. Metts, a 6-2, 200-pounder, rushed for 1,520 yards and scored 82 points last year and Bowens gained 767 yards and scored 13 touchdowns.

Kannapolis Brown will be led by the senior tailback duo of Terry Williams and Greg Bost. Williams, a 6-0, 205-pounder, rushed for 1,110 yards last year while Williams had 982 yards.

Southern Durham, coming off a 9-1 season, has halfback Darryl McGill back for his senior year along with offensive tackle and linebacker Kevin Sowell, a 6-1, 220-pounder.

McGill, a 5-10, 183-pounder, gained 1,454 yards and scored 16 touchdowns last season.

Meanwhile, in the 2-A rank, Randleman has 13 starters back hoping for a third straight state title.

"We repeated last year and were lucky," said Randleman coach Charlie Gregory, whose team is ranked among the top teams in the nation by at least one publication.

"Talent-wise, we have as good a ballclub as we were last year," he said.

"I think we can be as good a ballclub as we were last year — but we'll know in a few days about that."

Gregory was referring to Randleman's season-opener Friday night against Asheboro, which is expected to be one of only a few teams with a chance to dethrone the defending champs.

Asheboro returns running back Deneal McNair, who gained over 600 yards a year ago, and three starting defensive lineman, all of whom weight over 200 pounds.

Swain County and Jordan-Matthews also figure to be among the elite of the 2-A.

Leading Randleman this season is Tony Goss, who may be the best back in North Carolina. Goss, a 6-4, 207-pound senior, rushed for 1,957 yards and scored 29 touchdowns.

"Goss may be the premiere back in the nation," Gregory said. "And he's a better defensive back."

Gregory said his star back in being recruited by "everybody," including Alabama, Southern California, Penn State, Georgia, Florida and all the Atlantic Coast Conference schools.

The 1-A division has been dominated by Robbinsville in recent years, and 1983 may be no different.

The Blue Knights have 24 letterman back, with quarterback Deron Shuler to lead the offensive attack.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "They're playing well," said Pittsburgh Steelers coach Chuck Noll after his defense collected eight sacks and three pass interceptions in a 10-3 National Football League exhibition victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Ask if he is building another "Steel Curtain," Noll replied, "I hope so."

The victory Thursday night enabled the Steelers to finish the exhibition season at 4-1. It was the first preseason loss for the Eagles, who ended up with a 3-1 record.

A Review

'Vacation' Is A One-Man Joke

The only thing more American than apple pie is the summer vacation, and the people from the National Lampoon who savaged college life in "Animal House" take on the American summer ritual of long drives in over-sized station wagons in "Vacation," now playing at the Buccaneer Theater. Like all vacations, this one is uneven. It has memorable moments and forgettable ones, but at least you won't get car sick along the way.

Somewhere west of Chicago and east of the Pacific Ocean Chevy Chase, a successful developer of new and better food additives, turns to his wife and as his eyes glaze over, announces, "This is no longer a (expletive deleted) vacation, it's a (expletive deleted) quest. A pilgrimage to see a moose." The call of the open road has turned into a scream, and getting there has become a matter of survival.

For the Griswold family of Chicago, everything goes wrong on their drive to the West Coast to visit Wally World, a cross between Disneyland and King's Dominion. Imagine every fear you have ever had of disaster on the road, and you know what lies in wait for the Griswolds. Parasitic relatives, sadistic auto repairmen, a self-destructing new station wagon, bad maps, lost credit cards, and even death itself fail to deter the pioneering Griswolds.

As in the case with most road films, "Smokey and the Bandit" parts 1 through 2001, for example, the road itself provides the continuity. One adventure leads inevitably to the next until the characters reach their final destination. While a number of the misadventures are genuinely funny, director Harold Ramis fails to fill the wide-open spaces with enough opportunities for his cast to keep us laughing.

Chase, Beverly D'Angelo as his wife, and Imogene Coca as her aunt perform well. Chase is especially effective as a perfect parody of the middle-class husband and father attempting to retain control while all around him things fall apart. And Ms. Coca, who has been too long absent from feature films, creates a wonderfully obnoxious relative along for the ride.

In spite of these performances and one of the best credit sequences I've seen in years, "Vacation" doesn't sustain its drive. It is a one-man joke film. This has not been a good summer for comedy, however, and this "Vacation" will provide some escape from the long, hot days of summer.

Sets And Stages Lost In Studio Blaze

Rolling Stones Strike It Rich

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rolling Stones rock group has signed a $28 million worldwide distribution contract with CBS Records Inc., the richest in music business history, according to a newspaper report.

The long-term agreement with the British band, which was signed in Paris because of France's favorable tax laws, calls for the group to record four albums at $6 million each, the Los Angeles Times said Thursday.

The contract also was said to provide for additional promotional expenditures by CBS which could amount to another $1 million per album, thus bringing the total package to $28 million.

Previously, the richest recording contract was reported to be the one between RCA Records and singer Kenny Rogers, who signed a five-album pact last January for $20 million.

The Rolling Stones-CBS contract calls for distribution of the group's recordings under the CBS Columbia label and will begin after the Rolling Stones complete two additional albums for Atlantic Records, the Times said.

"We certainly hate losing the Stones, but the numbers they were asking just didn't make sense to us," said Sheldon Vogel, vice chairman of Atlantic Records. "We made the richest offer we could afford and still be realistic."

The Times noted that one record company president who refused to be identified said "the Stones will have to sell 16 million to 18 million records worldwide (of the four albums combined) for CBS to break even."

It was also reported that the contract probably includes other revenue producing sources such as video recordings, films and artists who may be signed by Rolling Stones Records.

and damaging stages where the TV shows "Cheers" and "Happy Days" are shot.

Flames at the 50-acre studio Thursday afternoon shot 90 feet into the air and swept over six acres, demolishing the 56-year-old "New York Street" set where the movies "Going My Way" and "Bells of St. Mary's" were filmed.

"There was solid fire from building to building, a solid sheet, just like a tornado," said David Pondella, chief of set lighting at Paramount. "It was roaring."

All that remained of the outdoor sets were 30-foot-high telephone posts that had supported building facades.

Damage was estimated "in the millions," Fire Inspector Ed Reed said. Earl Lestz, vice president of studio operations for Paramount, said that while "New York Street" was "priceless," damage to the sound stages was "minor."

One Paramount employee told arson investigators that he saw smoke and then flames coming from a facade called the Tatoo Shop on "McFadden Street," said Patrick Patterson, a city Fire Department spokesman, adding that the fire was under investigation. Firefighters rushed to Sound Stage 15, where an expensive set depicting the Vulcan planet for "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock," had just been completed, Paterson said.

The set features 40-foot-high "rocks" made of polyurethane, which is highly toxic when it burns. However, a sprinkler system went off in the stage, which did not catch fire but suffered water damage, said Michael D. Eisner, president and chief operating officer of Paramount Pictures Corp.

"We came within about 30 seconds of losing the set," said Shatner, who plays Captain Kirk in the movie. Shatner said he had to man fire hoses outside the set until more help arrived.

Lestz said shooting of the film would begin on schedule next week.

Two firefighters received electrical shocks, possibly from downed power lines, but they were checked at the scene and released, Reed said. No other injuries were reported.

The fire broke out at 4:02 p.m. and was doused with the help of 150 firefighters and helicopters at 6:27 p.m., Reed said.

The blaze turned four streets of outdoor sets and two set storage buildings to rubble. It also damaged three sound stages, Reed said.

"It was like a 500-foot-by-500-foot bonfire," he said. "It created a tremendous amount of heat."

The "New York Street" set had also been the filming location for parts of "Chinatown," "Day of the Locust," "Love American Style," "Breakfast at Tiffany's," the two "Godfather" movies, "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," all the Jerry Lewis movies and the opening sequences for "Laverne and Shirley," Eisner said.

The fire also destroyed "Boston Street," "Church Street" and "McFadden Street," fire department spokesman Henry Ampan said.

Five television shows — "Happy Days," "Cheers" and the new series "Mr.

Smith," "Family Ties" and "Webster" — are filmed on Sound Stage 15, Eisner said. The TV shows "Mannix" and "Mission: Impossible" were filmed in part on the ruined sets, Pondella said.

Billowing black smoke spread to the neighboring Hollywood Memorial Park Cemetery, where dozens of stars are buried, including Rudolph Valentino, Douglas Fairbanks Sr., Paul Muni, Tyrone Power, Adolph Menjou, Marion Davies and Harry Cohn.

Among other major films made at Paramount were the Bob Hope features "Beau James" and "Seven Little Foys," the Alan Ladd shows "This Gun for Hire" and "The Glass Key," and "Grease" and "Pocketful of Miracles." President Reagan made several Westerns for Paramount, but those sets no longer exist.

Industry Donations Reaching The Poor Through Food Banks

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
Thousands of pounds of food that might otherwise go to waste reach North Carolina's charitable organizations through seven food banks run mainly by volunteers.

"We're an agency that fights waste and feeds the hungry," said Nan Holbrook, executive director of the Food Bank of Northwest North Carolina in Winston-Salem.

"The food is donated from the food industry," she said. "It may be food that there was an overproduction. It may be the wrong color, the wrong label."

The Winston-Salem food bank and those in Cary and Charlotte work as a network to distribute food, Ms. Holbrook said. In addition, there are independent food banks in Asheville, Wilmington, Fayetteville and Elizabeth City.

In recent weeks, the three-bank network has distributed 15,000 pounds of fresh tomatoes, seven tractor-trailer loads of canned soup, 260,000 pounds of pork neck bones, 8,000 pounds of orange and grapefruit juice and a palette of hot dog chili that had "glue on the cans," Ms. Holbrook said.

The nonprofit organization runs on donations and a 10 cents-per-pound handling fee allowed under Internal Revenue Service rules, Ms. Holbrook said.

The food banks carefully screen applicants for the food and have about 450 members, including the Salvation Army, group homes and soup kitchens, she said. Most of the donations come from grocery stores, warehouses and private businesses stuck for various reasons with unwanted merchandise.

"They have to be tax-exempt, nonprofit organizations or a church," Ms. Holbrook said. "They have to have on-site feeding programs for the hungry or an emergency box program."

The network started with the opening of the Community of North Carolina Food Bank in Cary in December 1980. Metrolina Food Bank of Charlotte followed in January 1982 and the Winston-Salem affiliate opened last October.

Ms. Holbrook said the network hopes to recruit nonaffiliated food banks and may join a national food bank network based in Phoenix called Second Harvest.

"We have met twice with the other food banks and will have another meeting soon," she said. "We don't like for anyone to have to drive over two hours both ways in order to pick up food."

The size of a food bank as well as its capacity to refrigerate food are considered before an organization may join the 57-member national organization. But the North Carolina network is on Second Harvest's "long-range list" of members since the United Way donated $15,000 for a walk-in refrigeration unit in Forsyth County, Ms. Holbrook said.

Officials say the demand for food has been relatively constant since the network started. In fact, Ms. Holbrook said the banks sometimes waive the transportation fee to help clear out warehouses.

The banks have been moderately successful, with budgets ranging from $30,000 to $80,000 a year. But their future is never certain.

"You never know the income coming in from 10 cents per pound," Ms. Holbrook said.

However, most participants find the work rewarding.

"We are not the only answer to hunger, by any means," Ms. Holbrook said. "But without us, this food would be dumped. We like to say that the poor will always be with us, but there's no need that they be hungry."

Bar Stereo Radio Devices

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 60 AM radio stations must turn off their stereo transmission equipment because the devices don't meet technical specifications set last year by the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC ordered Harris Corp., the leading manufacturer of the AM stereo devices, to stop production and to notify stations using the equipment to shut them off.

Gene Jaeger, a spokesman for Harris Corp., acknowledged there were technical differences between the company's system and the one approved for marketing by the FCC. But Jaeger said the company expected to iron out those differences by submitting new technical data.

WMS HDBGH MSJD'I YGVSYU FYXHS

WD IMDF: UDRJ IRFSJBXJVSU.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CAN YOU CALL PORCINE BARNYARD BUDDIES "PEN PALS"?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

After taking his two club trick, West shifted to a heart. Declarer won in dummy, cashed two high trumps, then cashed the remaining heart honor and ruffed a heart to strip hearts from his hand and dummy. Now declarer led the ace of diamonds.

West realized that, if he followed with a low diamond, he would be end played with the next diamond and forced to yield a sluff-ruff, allowing declarer to get rid of dummy's remaining diamond while ruffing in his hand. To prevent that, he jettisoned his king of diamonds under the ace.

That merely postponed the inevitable for one trick. Declarer crossed to the board with a trump and led a diamond. Whether East rose with the queen or not, one diamond trick was all the defenders were going to collect.

PLAY FOR THE ONLY CHANCE

Before playing to the first trick, plan the hand. If there is any combination of cards that will allow you to make your contract, presume that distribution exists.

Declarer ended up in four spades in quick time. North's hand was somewhere between a two, three or four spade bid, and game was as good a compromise as any.

West led the king of clubs. Declarer could see that he had two sure club losers, and that his problem was to avoid losing two tricks in diamonds as well. If diamonds were 3-3, that could probably not be managed. The best shot was to play West for a singleton

Close To The Dream?

Tomorrow, thousands of Americans plan to gather in Washington, D.C. as part of a drive to encourage black voter registration. In 1963, when the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led the original march, only 18 percent of voting-age blacks were registered. By 1980, that figure had risen to 65 percent. Today, more than 5,000 blacks hold elective office.

Air Force Will Try Top Nature

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Even nature couldn't grow trees on the barren, windswept Aleutian island of Shemya — but that's not going to stop the U.S. Air Force from trying.

The Air Force has launched a five-year beautification plan designed to enhance morale at the top-secret installation, where personnel are assigned for yearlong tours of duty without their families.

Because of its harsh weather and isolation, the tiny 2-by-4-mile island, 1,300 miles southwest of Anchorage, is known as "The Black Pearl of the Pacific," "The Rock" and a variety of unprintable epithets.

However, the last time the military tried to spruce up the Aleutians, in 1943, they seemed to be barking up the wrong tree: Of 2,000 planted on nearby Adak, only six survived.
