Blistering Heat Sets All-Time GUC Records

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission experienced its highest peak demand in history for electricity — 160 megawatts — last Tuesday.

It was hot, very hot. The day's high temperature was over 100. It seemed, from the usage of electricity, that everyone was running their air conditioners overtime in an effort to keep cool.

At the same time air conditioning units were running full blast, GUC employees were busy attempting to "Beat the Peak" — reduce the peak demand for electricity and thereby save the commission, and ultimately GUC customers, money.

"Last summer was a mild summer. This is different," GUC Director Charles Horne said last week. "In August we have exceeded the July peak and in July, we exceeded every other peak in the commission's history."

Horne said, "Monday, we had a peak demand of 159 megawatts after taking off 10 megawatts with load management. Last month (July), we had a peak of 149 megawatts after taking off about 9 or 10 (megawatts).

Tuesday, the use of electricity peaked at 160 megawatts, after the load management operation reduced the potential load by 11 megawatts.

"Our true peak would have been 169 megawatts Monday, and 171 megawatts Tuesday, if we had not been able to manage some of it," Horne explained.

It's this effort by GUC to manage the peak use of electricity that leads efforts to save electricity, not only in the Greenville area, but leads load management efforts by other utilities nationwide.

GUC began its load management program in 1978, when it offered "Beat the Peak" to customers. Since that time, more than 13,000 load management switches have been installed on customers' water heaters and central air conditioning units.

GUC employees use the switches, controlled by a radio signal, to cut off water heaters and air-conditioning compressors for brief periods of time to reduce the total

Quarter Million Rally In D.C.

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring "we still have a dream," a quarter of a million black and white Americans rallied Saturday behind an anti-Reagan "jobs, peace and freedom" platform and called for reviving Martin Luther King Jr.'s vision for a just America.

The huge crowd massed in 95-degree temperatures before the Lincoln Memorial, where on the hot Wednesday afternoon of Aug. 28, 1963, King appealed to the conscience of a nation during the biggest civil rights march in American history. That event proved to be a turning point in the struggle by blacks for social equality.

This time no one captivated the crowd the way King did that afternoon.

But chants of "Run, Jesse, run!" went up when the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the charismatic King lieutenant who is considering running for the Democratic presidential nomination, delivered his customary speech — an inspirational oration that has become his trademark.

"I am somebody!" Jackson declared, and those assembled before him began reciting the familiar words with him: "Respect me. Protect me. Never neglect me. If my mind can conceive it and my heart can believe it, I know I can achieve it. Down with dope! Up with hope! I am somebody!"

As he has across the country, Jackson condemned the pace at which blacks are winning public office and exhorted black people to register to vote.

The day ended with messages from King's widow and the recorded "I Have a Dream" speech delivered at the same spot 20 years earlier — one of the most famous orations of the 20th century.

"Martin Luther King Jr. is here today, too," Coretta Scott King told the dwindling crowd after six hours as twilight fell. "I can feel it; I can sense Martin's presence."

Police in a hovering helicopter at first said the crowd at its mid-afternoon peak numbered 200,000. But late in the day Capt. Robert Hines of the U.S. Park Poice said analysis of aerial photographs put the figure at 250,000. At the 1963 March on Washington, the crowd was variously estimated at 200,000 to 250,000 by officials.

It was an easy-going, peaceable assembly. Police reported about 20 arrests, chiefly of vendors who had no vending licenses. About 100 people were treated for heat-caused difficulties at two hospitals, and an undetermined number of others at first-aid stations.

Some waved their placards at the White House as they marched by, but Reagan was out of town. The line of march stopped so supporters could greet, wave at and try to touch Mrs. King.

In a day of oratory promoting virtually every liberal cause, more than four dozen speakers urged that King's birthday be made a national holiday and supported a long list of proposals, all of which Reagan opposes.

They included a nuclear weapons freeze, ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, reversal of U.S. involvement in Central America and enactment of costly legislation to put people back to work rebuilding deteriorating American cities.

Almost every speaker recalled King's words in biblical rhythm 20 years ago which mobilized public opinion behind enactment of the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"I have a dream," he cried out that day, "that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plain and the crooked places will be made straight and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together."

LEADING THE MARCH — Coretta Scott King is flanked by other leaders of the "Peace, Jobs and Freedom" March as they walk along Constitution Avenue Saturday on their way to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington. Hundreds of thousands of marchers participated to commemorate the 1963 "I have a dream" speech by Mrs. King's husband, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Leading the march with her are, left to right, Mrs. Joseph Lowery; Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Mrs. King; Walter Fauntroy, a delegate from Washington, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. (AP Laserphoto)

Hostages Aboard French Jet Exchanged For Fuel

ROME (AP) — Arabic-speaking gunmen who hijacked an Air France jetliner and forced it to land in Sicily let 55 passengers walk to freedom early Sunday and then resumed the flight, apparently to Syria, officials said.

At least 21 people, including three or four hijackers and crew members, remained on board when the Boeing 727 took off for Damascus, said officials at Fontanarossa airport in Catania, Sicily.

Officials said the hijackers' identities and motives were unknown. Hostages began to be freed after a fuel truck approached the plane on a heavily guarded runway and began refueling the aircraft.

Catania airport officials said the plane took off at 3:20 a.m. local time (9:20 EDT).

The gunmen commandeered the plane Saturday on a flight from Vienna to Paris and forced it to land in Geneva, Switzerland, where it was refueled and they freed 37 passengers.

A hijacker fired one shot from the plane while it was on the ground at Geneva, but the fire was not returned and no one was wounded, Swiss officials said.

Teachers Like Vacation Plan

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County and Greenville educators say they are more than pleased with legislative action that has brought teachers' vacation benefits in line with those of state employees.

"It seems to say, hey, you're doing a good job in the profession," Eastern Elementary kindergarten teacher Pat Minges said.

"I think it is going to be wonderful to take a day when we need it. In fact, I don't know of any teacher that is not pleased with this," she said.

The measure that brought all this about, Senate Bill 458, stipulates that teachers may now receive from 1 day to 2.15 days leave per month, depending on years of service.

For example, teachers who have worked for public schools for less than two years will receive 1 day per month; those with 10 years but less than 15 years of service, 1.65 days per month,; and those with 20 or more years, 2.15 days per month.

North Carolina is the only state that now has vacation leave for teachers that is not totally locked into the school calendar.

As Greenville School Superintendent Delma Blinson pointed out, teachers will not be allowed to take vacation time on days when students are in school. "They will only be able to use these vacation days on non-mandatory work days," he said.

"I doubt we'll utilize all the vacation time because work days are so necessary," Ms. Minges said. "We have no other time to do the paper work and have parent-teacher conferences, but it is still nice to know that the option is there.

"What is most important about this new development, ... however, is that those of us that are professionals feel the children must come first and that this benefit won't hurt the children," she said.

Leck Keeter, Pitt County associate school superintendent in charge of personnel, said administrators and teachers within the county system are

Falling Enrollment To Change Schools

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina public school openings were delayed only temporarily by a record-breaking heat wave but the State Department of Public Instruction says schools are facing long-term changes because of declining enrollments.

The Department said in a news release received Saturday that several systems opened in mid-August, but sputtered to a halt when the heat wave descended on North Carolina.

The heat and attendant tobacco harvest delays were a one-time glitch. The department said more significant developments are following declines in primary and secondary school enrollment across the state.

Student enrollment is expected to drop 1.35 percent this fall from last year, the department said. Consequently, state schools will be operating with 353 fewer classroom teachers and 43 fewer aides.

Another transformation nearly complete in North Carolina public instruction is the shift from "union" schools — those including grades K-12 in one facility — to separate elementary, intermediate and secondary schools.

Thirty years ago, most of North Carolina's school were union. Only 22 union schools will open their doors this year.

The 1,087,694 students expected to enroll this fall, 14,856 less than last year, will attend about 2,000 schools statewide in 142 systems. Approximately 70,000 state-paid employees will work in schools this year, including about 42,000 teachers.

Employees paid through sources other than state funding will number about 35,000.

About $1.5 billion in state money is earmarked for public schools this term, the same amount as in the last fiscal year.

The department said North Carolina schools will continue to change as new programs designed to increase learning time and teacher incentive are tested.

One such program, a test of a longer school year and school day in Halifax and Polk County schools, has drawn criticism from parents and came under fire in a recent court battle.

Another pilot program is taking place in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system where the General Assembly authorized an experimental extension of teachers' probationary periord from three to six years. The probation extension is part of teacher career development plan proposed by school officials.

DR. E.B. AYCOCK

Aycock

Dr. Edwin Burtis Aycock, 74, a Greenville physician, died at his home Friday afternoon. The funeral service will be conducted Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Hugh Burlington. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery. Members of the Pitt County Medical Society will be honorary pallbearers.

Dr. Aycock, a native of Fremont, was a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and McGill University in Montreal, Canada. He came to Greenville in 1939 to practice medicine and had lived here since that time except for four years he spent in the U.S. Army in World War II.

He served on the Greenville School Board for 15 years as a member and chairman and, because of his contribution to education, the E.B. Aycock Junior High School on Red Banks Road was named in his honor. For over 30 years, he provided care for school athletes. He was a life member of the Pitt County Medical Society, a member of the Immanuel Baptist Church and a past-president of the Greenville Lions Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jean Hodges Aycock; three sons, Edwin Burtis Aycock Jr. of Greenville, John Gordan Aycock of Winter Park, Fla., and Howard Hodges Aycock of Charlotte; his mother, Mrs. Mattie Aycock of Fremont; two brothers, Frank B. Aycock Jr. of Maple and Jesse N. Aycock of Camp Hill, Pa., and four grandchildren.

Brown

Mr. Joe E. Brown, 59, of Route 2, Greenville, died at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Friday. The funeral service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by Bishop Dan B. Wait and the Rev. James Bailey.

The body will be taken to the Ward Funeral Home in Gastonia where the family will receive friends Monday from 7-9 p.m. A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Gaston Memorial Park in Gastonia.

Mr. Brown, a native of Pitt County, spent most of his life in Greenville and was a veteran of World War II, having served in the U.S. Army in the European Theater. He received his undergraduate and master's degrees from East Carolina University. For a number of years, he was a principal at Walstonburg Middle School and for the past six years had been director of migrant education for Green County. He was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jane (Jackie) Barnes Brown; a daughter, Mrs. Linda Vierow of Flint, Michigan; two sons, Joe E. Brown Jr. and Anthony Wayne Brown, both of Greenville; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Patti Lynn Jordan of the home; two stepsons, the Rev. Mark William Jordan of Winston-Salem and Matthew Winford Jordan of Gastonia; his father, the Rev. Adrian E. Brown of Greenville; a sister, Mrs. Mary Jane Hall of Parton; three brothers, Adrian E. Brown Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va., Wiley Brown of Raleigh and James P. Brown of Norfolk, Va., and five grandchildren.

Reaves

Mrs. Effie Barrett Reaves, 65, of 200 Roundtree Drive died Thursday at her home. The funeral service will be conducted Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church by Dr. W.L. Jones. Burial will be in the Brownhill Cemetery.

Surviving are three sons, James (Reggie) Reaves of the home, Marvin Reaves of Utica, N.Y., and Johnny Reaves of Brooklyn, N.Y.; three daughters, Mrs. Bettie J. Smith of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Jacqueline D. Moore of Manassas, Va., and Evangelist Shirley J. Daniels of the home; three sisters, Mrs. Patsy Smith of Greenville, Mrs. Lula B. Lloyd of Plymonth and Mrs. Mrs. Goldie B. Wooten of New Haven, Conn.; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

A wake will be held at the church from 8-9 p.m. Monday. Arrangments are being handled by Flanagan's Funeral Home of Greenville.

Simmons

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Samuel Carl Simmons, 64, died Saturday in Bayside Hospital at Virginia Beach. A funeral service will be conducted Monday at 2 p.m. at Holloman and Brown Funeral Home, Virginia Beach.

He was a former resident resident of Stokes, N.C., but had made his home in Virginia Beach since 1947.

He is survived by his wife, Jeanette Whichard Simmons of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Tommy Allen of Virginia Beach; three brothers, Joe Simmons, Ray Simmons and Kent Simmons, all of Virginia Beach, and two grandchildren.

Troopers Will Be Briefed On DWI

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Highway patrolmen from Troop A will be at Pitt Community College Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday to learn all they can about the state's new driving while impaired law which goes into effect Oct. 1, along with other Safe Roads Act legislation adopted by the 1983 General Assembly.

The 150 troopers from the 23 counties in the troop, which is headquartered in Greenville, will be "retraining," the troop commander, Capt. Carl Gilchrist, said. "They will be unlearning present driving under the influence laws and becoming familiar with the new driving while impaired charge."

After Oct. 1, Gilchrist explained, drinking drivers will no longer be charged with driving under the influence.

"Instead, they will be charged with driving while impaired," he said. "And no longer will there be plea bargains for lesser included offenses when the driver goes to court. He will either be found 'guilty' or 'not guilty' of DWI."

The charge of driving while impaired can be proven in two ways, Gilchrist said, first "by proving the driver's physical or mental faculties are appreciably impaired by alcohol, drugs or a combination of both," or by "proving the driver's blood alcohol content is .10 percent or more.

"If he refuses to take the Breathalyzer test, he faces an automatic and immediate 10-day revocation of his license," Gilchrist explained, "and refusal can ultimately mean a 12-month license revocation."

If the driver takes the test, and is convicted in court, he faces one of five levels of punishment. The trial judge, at a sentencing hearing, determines the punishment, based on evidence of grossly aggravating, aggravating and mitigating factors.

The levels of punishment, according to Gilchrist, include: Level 1, with a mandatory minimum of 14 days and up to two years in jail, and a fine of up to $2,000; Level 2, which carries a mandatory minimum of 7 days and up to one year in jail and up to a $1,000 fine; Level 3, which can result in any combination of 72 hours jail or community service, a 90 day revocation of driving privileges and a fine of up to $500; Level 4, with a combination of 48 hours jail or community service, a 60-day license revocation and a fine of up to $250, and Level 5, with 24 hours jail or community service, a 30-day loss of license and a fine of up to $100.

According to Gilchrist, Level 1 punishment will apply in cases where drivers have "two or more impaired driving offenses within seven years or any other two grossly aggravating factors are present," while Level 2 punishment will be given in cases were there is "one grossly aggravating factor involved."

Level 3, 4 and 5 punishment is reserved for cases in which there is no grossly aggravating factors, Gilchrist said. He explained that Level 3 punishment will be given in cases "where aggravating factors outweigh mitigating factors," while Level 4 punishment is designed for cases where "neither set of factors outweighs the other. If mitigating factors outweigh aggravating factors," the officer said, "the the driver can expect Level 5 punishment."

Gilchrist said grossly aggravating factors include: two or more convictions for impaired driving within seven years, a prior conviction for an impaired driving offense within seven years, driving while license is revoked under an impaired driving revocation, or in cases where serious injury has been caused by the defendant's impaired driving.

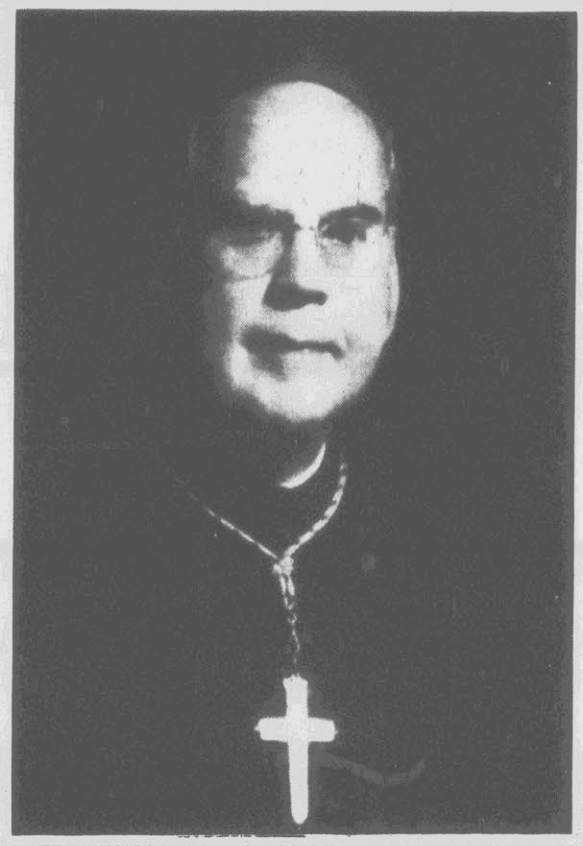
Aggravating factors under the new DWI legislation include: gross impairment or an alcohol concentration of .20 or more, especially reckless driving, driving while license is revoked, speeding to elude arrest or speeding more than 30 miles an hour over the posted speed limit, passing a stopped school bus, negligent driving leading to an accident causing over $500 damage or personal injury, or two or more prior convictions for a non-impaired driving offense carrying three driver's license points within five years or one or more prior convictions for driving while impaired more than seven years old.

Mitigating factors under the new law, Gilchrist said, include: slight impairment soley from alcohol, with a blood alcohol content of not more than .11 percent; slight impairment solely from alcohol when there is no chemical test available to the defendant; safe and lawful driving except for impairment of the drivers faculties; in cases where the driver has a safe driving record, with no serious traffic violations within the past five years; cases in which impairment is primarily from lawfully prescribed drugs; and cases in which the driver voluntarily submits himself for assessment and treatment before trial.

The Safe Road Act also raises the legal age to buy and possess beer and wine to 19.

In the case of 16 or 17 year olds, Gilchrist said, "If they refuse to submit to a chemical test, or are caught driving with any amount of alcohol or illegal drugs, their license will be revoked until they are 18 or for 45 days, whichever is longer."

Other provisions of the Safe Roads Act, according to Gilchrist, allow officers to set up roadblocks to check for impaired drivers and make it illegal for the driver to consume any alcoholic beverage while driving.



TERMINALLY ILL — Cardinal Terence Cooke is suffering a terminal case of "acute leukemia complicating a chronic lymphoma condition," his physicial, Dr. Kevin Cahill, said in New York Saturday. Cahill said the cardinal could die within months. Cooke became archbishop of the 1.8 million-member archdiocese of New York in 1968 and was elevated to cardinal by Pope Paul VI the following year. # New Sub Named For Rickover

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — As a handful of protesters demonstrated, a new fast-attack submarine was christened Saturday for retired Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, often described as the father of the nuclear Navy.

Rickover's wife, Eleanor, shattered a bottle of champagne to start the 360-foot nuclear-powered vessel on its ceremonial slide from the Electric Boat shipyard into the Thames River.

The 83-year-old Rickover, who reportedly would rather have had an aircraft carrier named after him, attended the ceremony but made no formal remarks. However, he grabbed the microphone after kissing his wife to say, "That wasn't part of the program."

Chief of Naval Operations Adm. James D. Watkins gave the keynote address, saying Rickover "reached for the infinite" 30 years ago when he "envisioned the war-fighting potential of the nuclear submarine."

"It took a visionary to circumvent the ever-present naysayers and get this program going. Against all odds, Admiral Rickover proved that nuclear power could be safely used, both in shipboard propulsion and civilian power-generation applications," Watkins said.

His naval career ended after 60 years — longer than any person in U.S. history — when he was forced into retirement in January 1982 by President Reagan and Navy Secretary John Lehman.

Rickover received congratulatory telegrams from former President Jimmy Carter; Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services.

"It is fitting testimony to your leadership that the Hyman G. Rickover sail as a proud reminder to all of us who have been so influenced by you," Carter's telegram said. The former president once served as a Rickover aide.

A handful of protesters demonstrated outside the shipyard. Police said Louis J. Debenedette, 40, and Jean Holliday, 54, both of Uncasville, were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

Rickover has been a longtime critic of Electric Boat, chastizing the company for cost overruns in its submarine construction program.

He also reportedly was upset with the Navy's decision to name a submarine after him, apparently believing it more fitting for an aircraft carrier to bear his name.

Reporters were not able to talk to him Saturday.

A bill asking the Navy secretary to name an aircraft carrier for Rickover passed Congress in March 1982, but the vessel subsequently was named the Abraham Lincoln.

State Highway Allotment Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will receive an additional $4.4 million in federal highway aid, but state Transporation Secretary W.R. Roberson Jr. says that's just the good news.

"The bad news is we requested $54 million," Roberson said. "We're very disappointed at this allotment to our state. The 1983 General Assembly reserved $19.8 million to match our state's share of federal highway funds which other states could not match."

He said the $4.4 million would require about $1 million in state matching funds.

Lancaster In Stable Condition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Lancaster was in stable condition Saturday recovering from a 5½-hour quadruple bypass heart operation that went "incredibly well," his secretary said.

The 69-year-old Oscar-winning actor underwent surgery Friday after doctors at Cedars Sinai Medical Center discovered blockages in his coronary arteries.

"Obviously this is a very serious operation, so nobody comes out of it and is ready to go play golf," said Lancaster's secretary, Sandy Wiesenthal.

"He never had pain or anything" before the blockages were found, said Ms. Wiesenthal, adding that Lancaster "came through the operation incredibly well."

Lancaster was stable and "doing well" on Saturday, said hospital spokeswoman Liz Miller.

The actor is expected to remain in the cardiac surgery intensive care unit for two or three days, hospital officials said Friday. A spokesman for Lancaster who asked not to be identified said the actor would be hospitalized for a week to 10 days "at the most."

Lancaster is scheduled to begin shooting a Dino De Laurentiis film called "Firestarter" in October in North Carolina.

House Explosion Injures 6 People

PRINCETON, Neb. (AP) — An explosion in the basement of a wood frame house, apparently triggered by a propane leak, critically injured six people Saturday as it blew out windows, ripped curtains and knocked two men off a front porch, authorities said.

The blast also started a small fire, said Capt. Steve Gates of the Lancaster County Sheriff's office.

The injured were listed in critical condition in Lincoln's St. Elizabeth's Burn Center. Some were believed to be children, but names were not immediately available.

Eyewitnesses said Dave and Joyce Nippert were moving into the house with their family when the explosion occurred.

Jerry Brinkman, who was helping the Nipperts move furniture into the house, said he was standing on the porch when the blast occurred and it knocked him to the ground.

"It was just a flash," he said.

When he got up, he saw a burning figure run from the house. He could not identify who it was but said he grabbed the female and rolled her on the ground.

Brinkman said the Nipperts had owned the house for several years but hadn't lived in it.

Nippert's brother, Dale, was standing on the porch of the house when "a big gust of warm wind blew me into the trailer. It wasn't really a loud explosion. I had no idea what was going on," he said.

The trailer to which he referred was being used to move furniture and was backed up against the house, he said.

It was the second apparent propane explosion in as many days for Nebraska. On Friday afternoon eight children and two adults on the Santee Sioux Indian Reservation were burned in a propane explosion. The children remain hospitalized in Sioux City, Iowa, on Saturday.

Teachers Receive Degrees

Barbara G. Brown, teacher at Eastern Elementary School, and Zenora W. Hopkins, music teacher for the Greenville schools, have completed requirements for and received the master's of science degrees in childhood education from North Carolina A&T State University, Greensboro.

GUC Names Energy Specialist

Reese Helms, manager of energy services for Greenville Utilities Commission, announced that Susan Bizzaro has been named energy education and communications specialist for GUC.

Helms said Mrs. Bizzaro will design and coordinate programs to help customers use energy more efficiently and will serve as a community resource through projects such as teacher workshops, exhibits, energy fairs and publications.

Mrs. Bizzaro has taught on the junior high and high school level and for the past five years has been a writer-editor for newspapers in northern Virginia. She has won several state awards for writing and design.

ECU School Earns Accreditation

Ten-year accreditation has been granted to the East Carolina University School of Home Economics by the American Home Economics Association's Council for Professional Development.

The council's action was based on a self-evaluation report compiled by the school's faculty and the report of a visiting team. In the written report, ECU's home economics school was described as "outstanding" and received special commendation for its administrative support, its organization and leadership, the commitment of its faculty and its clearly defined goals.

Dr. Eugenia Zallen is dean of the school, which has five major academic programs: child development and family relations; clothing and textiles; food, nutrition and institution management; home economics education, and housing.

Personal Finance Classes Planned

Three non-credit programs dealing with personal finance — mortgages, estate planning, investment stretegies — will be conducted at East Carolina University during October.

"Wills and Estate Planning Under the 1983 Tax Laws" will consist of two class sessions, Oct. 4 and 6, from 7-9 p.m. "Money Matters: Intelligent Investing for 1983," will meet on Wednesdays, Oct. 6-26, from 6:30-9:30 p.m. "New Concepts in Real Estate Financing" is set for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 20.

Registration materials and information are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville; telephone, 757-6143.

Red Cross Classes Scheduled

Ruth Taylor has announced that several courses will be sponsored by the Pitt County Red Cross in September.

She said that cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) courses will be taught Sept. 9 from 6:30-10 p.m. and Sept. 10 from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m., and also Sept. 19, 20 and 21 from 6-10 p.m. Both courses will be taught at the Community Center at the corner of Fourth and Green Streets. Preregistration is necessary, call 757-0270.

Multimedia standard first aid courses are set for Sept. 6 and 8 from 6-10 p.m. and also Sept. 23 (6-10 p.m.) and 24 from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. The class is also at the Community Center.

An adult beginner swimming class will be held at Memoria Gym Sept. 12-29 on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7-8:30 p.m. Participants must be at least 18 years old Preregistration is necessary and applicants should call 757-0270.

Embroiderers' Guild Elects Officers

Other officers are vice president, Gloria Baker of Greenville; secretary, Peggy Sessons of Greenville; treasurer, June Dykstra of Greenville; membership chairmen, Pam Burkart of Greenville and Carole Exum of Winterville; hospitality, Ruth Stokes and Olive McGowan, both of Greenville; area publicity, Pam Burkart of Greenville and Corrine McCain of New Bern, and mailing, Laura Haskins.

The NCEGA is a non-profit organization dedicated to furthering education in the field of embroidery and offers day and night classes. For further information about the group, call 756-7399 or 752-0367.

Nurses Registry Available

Helen McArthur, R.N., 756-1854, Aug. 29-Sept. 2; Grace Turner, R.N., 756-0375, Sept. 5-9; Mrs. McArthur, Sept. 12-16; and Mrs. Turner, Sept. 19-23.

Phone Directories Being Delivered

Dick Flye, district commercial and marketing manager for Carolina Telephone, said the company's new telephone directory for Greenville, Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Fountain and Snow Hill are now being delivered.

He said customers who do not receive the new phone book by Friday should call the company's business office.

Four Cars Involved In Collision

Three vehicles were damaged Friday on Cotanche Street in a rear-end, chain-reaction accident involving four cars, according to police reports.

Cars driven by Hugh Carlton Cole of Goldsboro, Timothy Brian Hufford of Winterville and Cynthia Ann Brinson of 2605 Tyson Drive suffered damages of $500, $500 and $100, respectively. Brinson was charged with following too closely. A car driven by Elva Marena Wright of Kinston was not damaged.

No charges were filed in another accident Friday on South Memorial Drive that involved cars driven by Henry Leon Groome Jr. of 101 Canterbury Road and Cahrles Vestal Wilkerson of 79 Barnes St. Damages to the Groome car were estimated at $300 and $400 to the Wilkerson car.

ECU In Top Half For Science Funding

East Carolina Unveristy's level of external funding for research and development in the sciences is in the top 45 percent of the nation's major colleges and universities, according to a recently released National Science Foundation report.

In a numbered listing of 563 institutions, ranked by amounts of total and federally financed expenditures in science and engineering, ECU is listed 251st.

The report covers fiscal year 1981, the latest time period for which complete data were available to the NSF. During that year, ECU's expenditures were about $1.6 million.

The highest ranked North Carolina campus was N.C. State University, 39th in the list with a reported total of more than $50 million.

"Beat the Peak" participants benefit by receiving up to $10 credit on their utility bills for the months of June, July, August and September — $5 per month if their water heater is equipped with a load management switch, and $5 a month if air conditioners are controlled by a switch.

According to Horne, the load management program has "saved $2 million for our customers" since 1978.

"Out of the $2 million, $700,000 has gone directly to our 'Beat the Peak' customers in the form of credits." The rest — $1.3 million — has gone back into the system for maintenance and additional switches, and "has been reflected in the net power cost to all of our customers."

Even though a customer may not have a "Beat the Peak" switch installed, the reduction of the peak is "affecting our net power cost," which means "some savings go to them by keeping our rates down."

Horne said that load management savings in July amounted to "roughly $115,000" while savings in August "will be about $135,000 it looks like. We're saving $600,000 to $700,000 a year."

Things will change on Jan. 1, Horne explained. Although GUC will continue to operate the load management program, the benefits will "come in a different kind of savings" because of "a different type of operation."

He said load management will be used on a monthly basis after the first of the year because of changes in billing requirements when the Power Agency, from which GUC purchases its electricity, begins to purchase all its supplemental power from Carolina Power & Light Co.

"We'll be gauging not on our own peak load, but using load management based on CP&L's peak hourly load," Horne said. "Our billing will be based on what we are using at the time of CP&L's maximum load ... what our load was at the time of CP&L's maximum load.

"It's a different way of billing," and Horne said, "We've been trying to do some test runs this summer for this kind of billing."

Horn suggested that the "different mode of operation" is "part of a program to see if we can manage our loads. It costs all of us so much to be able to generate these peaks. If we can all work together, the net result will be that all power agency customers, and CP&L customers, will get a lower cost of power."

While the GUC "is one of the smaller (utility) systems in the nation, we have one of the largest load management programs in operation," Horne said.

The Greenville utility ranks 12th in the nation in the total number of load management switches installed and leads the nation with 25 percent of its customers participating in the load management program.

The utility is also engaged in an experimental program to manage the load caused by the use of bulk tobacco barns.

Although the GUC load management program is the single biggest conservation effort in the area, home owners, builders and large users such as Pitt County Memorial Hospital and local industries have conservation programs.

Reese Helms, GUC's supervisor of energy conservation, said local builders are constructing many new homes to E-300 standards. They have more insulation in the ceiling, walls and floors, use insulated glass, and use more energy efficient heating and cooling systems, among other things, he said.

"We have about 750 E-300 single family homes now, and about 100 multifamily buildings ... 10 small commercial buildings."

And more of the energy efficient homes are going up. "The percentage varies," but Helms said the figure ranges from "not less than 50 percent to as high as 80 percent" of new housing is being built to the high standard.

The additional cost? "The additional investment over the minimum, state (building) code standard could be $1,000 to $2,400 more."

It is worth it? "In tests conducted several years ago here comparing three E-300 homes to three conventional or state standard homes, the E-300 homes consumed 30 percent less energy for heating.

"We used unoccupied homes," Helms said, "so the lifestyle factor of occupants did not have to be taken into consideration."

Helms said large industrial firms "have invested quite heavily in energy efficiency. Procter and Gamble has a very sophisticated energy management system which uses a computer." The same is true of the hospital and a number of other large users.

"In most large buildings, the cost of energy almost dictates some type of energy management system," Helms suggested. But "it varies considerably with smaller businesses and commercial buildings." While "a growing number have invested more and more in energy effecient equipment and renovations," Helms said "an equal number still find their energy costs proportionately high.

"Some businesses have really made a commitment to it while others just haven't made the necessary investments.

PCC Pins 84 Nursing Graduates

Eighty-four Pitt Community College nursing graduates received their pins in a ceremony that featured Sharon Shipley, associate degree nurse of the staff of East Carolina University School of Medicine, as the speaker.

"Reality shock is not just some word," she told graduates at the Friday pinning ceremony. "Its real and you're all going to feel inadequate ... but you must tell yourself that you are prepared."

Leslie Williams of Greenville was presented the Arlene Collins Memorial Scholarship. In addition, Linda Marriner of Jamesville received the Arlene Collins Clinical Excellence Award. Sharon Smith of Greenville was awarded a scholarship presented by the second-year nursing graduates.

Judith Kuykendall, nursing department chairman, presented the scholarships and awards while the nursing faculty presented the pins and the lighting of the lamps.

Receiving pins and practical nurse certificates were:

Associate degree graduates receiving pins were: Greenville: Linda Banks, Marilyn Cannon, Susan Dale, Merle Dennis, Sheryl Gladson, Geraldine Gowen, Donna Lee, Kathryn Nobles, Christine Smith; Winterville: Katherine Braswell, Sandra Cox, William Eldridge, Margaret Heath, Cynthia Keel, Wanda Marlowe; Grimesland, Mary Pender; Williamston: Linda Godard; Ayden: Penny Butler; Snow Hill: Norman Williams; Robersonville: Teresa Howell.

ECU's Howell Locks In Trend For New Year

ECU Chancellor John M. Howell looked to the future with confidence in his speech to the opening faculty convocation for the fall semester.

"We face a future of change that will require a great deal of ingenuity to respond without large infusions of money," he said. "We at ECU are equal to the challenge, because we are dedicated and we have experience in this sort of work."

He cited a comment by UNC President William Friday that "ECU is one of the great success stories of education in the state in the last 25 years."

Howell said the university has begun to move forward on a broad front and "made a good beginning on the success story of the next 25 years."

Despite revenue shortages, he told the faculty "you have made impressive advances in scholarship."

"We have done a great deal of striving in all of our educational institutions — and particularly at ECU," the chancellor said.

He cited an increase of 22 percent of faculty production of books and monographs; articles and chapters published increased by 7 percent, reviews increased by 41 percent and scholarly papers by 17 percent.

The faculty of East Carolina University is known for its accomplishments. It has done so with limited resources, and with continued efforts by faculty members there is no reason there cannot be a great future for ECU.

Drought's Effect Will Make Mark On Crop Yields

Even as the rains fell and the heat wave broke last week, farmers were assaying the widespread damage that a dry and hot summer had caused to their crops.

Tobacco production will be down although in many areas tobacco matured before the worst of the dry conditions.

Beyond that virtually all crops were adversely affected. Crop yields are certain to be cut drastically and most vegetable production was reduced by the drought. The peanut crop is expected to be average and it may be that the rains did not come in time to save the soybean crop.

A bad year such as this has a double effect on an area like ours where farming is a mainstay of the economy. Lower yields, of course, mean less money for the farmer who must still pay his production costs as if he had a bumper crop. At the same time we can expect higher prices for food items, and that will have its effect on the wage earner when he purchases groceries.

A New Year At ECU Offers Promise Of More Successes

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

How hot was it?

Well, the temperatures were above 100 in Greenville and in most eastern North Carolina cities for several days last week. Fayetteville saw a reading of 110, which brought sympathy from citizens of other areas who were comfortable by comparison.

It also brought jokes about the plight of the Fayetteville people.

"Fayetteville is the hottest town on the east coast," another joked.

"We thought it was that hot in the winter," a past Fort Bragg trainee moaned.

It was all a matter of degrees in eastern North Carolina last week. It was almost as uncomfortable at 103 degrees as it was at 110.

They can be seen any day and virtually at any time of the day, sweating and panting as they move along various streets.

"It makes me want to find a hammock under a shade tree and a tall pitcher of lemonade," he said.

No doubt the jogger would like the same thing after the run.

In a monumental case of bad timing, the Greenville municipal pool closed down for the year on the hottest day, with further hot days ahead.

Many private pools were still operating, however, and one of the lucky members expressed her joy.

"The human body was designed to be immersed in water when air temperatures reach 100," she commented.

Some electric bills, which reflected usage for the previous month, arrived during the worst of the heat. They sent shudders through the recipients since there had been some 100-degree days previously.

Paraquat

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's decision to enlist the controversial herbicide paraquat in his battle against marijuana may achieve the administration's goal of encouraging Latin American countries to do the same.

Earnest concern about pot, however, is insufficient reason to begin a domestic spraying program. High-priced showmanship might be a suitable description for Washington's most controversial anti-drug effort since Congress briefly suspended overseas use of the U.S.-made chemical in 1979.

To date, only national forest land in Georgia and Kentucky has undergone a treatment that federal officials contend could involve as many as 40 states. In Northeastern Tennessee, federal teams employing 20 agents and two helicopters combed Cherokee National Forest for two days for possible spraying before deciding that its marijuana patches were unsuitable. As a precaution against tipping off pot farmers, the Drug Enforcement Administration is remaining secretive about future spraying sites.

White House drug abuse policy officials, led by former University of Missippi drug researcher Carlton Turner, openly admit their targets are more political than anything else. Since 1981, when Congress lifted its ban on subsidies for paraquat export, the U.S. has had more trouble pushing the herbicide on such prominent pot exporters as Colombia and Peru than it did on Mexico during the '70s. By instituting a domestic program, said Drug Abuse Policy Office spokesman Patrick McKelvey, "We're trying ... to show that we're not being hypocritical."

McKelvey insists that paraquat presents no health hazard to residents living near targeted areas. Of the contaminated pot which manages to reach the marketplace, McKelvey says that its unwitting users face only a limited health risk. He cites as proof a study, conducted by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, which found that as much as 99.8 percent of tested paraquat samples decomposed during combustion.

But opposition from assorted governors, members of Congress and private health and environmental groups shows that the consensus on paraquat is hardly unanimous. Doubts about paraquat's benignancy exist principally as a result of studies by the federal government itself. In 1979, the then Department of Health, Education and Welfare under Secretary Joseph Califano (who, among other recent projects, oversaw an investigation of drug abuse on Capitol Hill) called paraquat a health risk, as did the National Academy of Sciences in a report issued last year.

Last month, in the American Journal of Public Health, the CDC's Philip J. Landrigan wrote that, according to a computer-assisted study, as many as 300 U.S. marijuana smokers may have inhaled harmful doses (500 milligrams) of paraquat annually from 1975 to 1979. Perhaps more importantly, Landrigan added that CDC researchers had not considered the potential pulmonary damages from the inhalation of 4,4'-dipyridyl, a toxic chemical produced by the combustion of paraquat and found in much larger residual quantities.

Though U.S. farmers are said to spray up to 11 million acres of crops with paraquat annually, a June 1983 Science Digest article said that as many as 500 persons may have died as a result of paraquat's agricultural uses. In that light, the deleterious effects of spraying near national recreational areas and water supplies seem less dismissable.

Even the Chevron Chemical Co., one of two firms licensed to sell paraquat in the U.S., has voiced its concern about the domestic spraying to the DEA. "Because of all the unknowns," said Chevron spokesman G. Michael Marcy, "we prefer that our product not be used on marijuana."

Meanwhile, the administration's effort to limit paraquat applications to, in McKelvey's words, "areas that are hard to get to," only exposes its economic inefficiency. Even those who support marijuana eradication would have to look skeptically on a program that has as targets patches with no more than 13 plants each, as was the case in Georgia recently, or nets 19 plants in all, as happened in Kentucky last weekend.

Such unimpressive statistics would seem sufficient to prod the White House to seek economies of scale, at least. As McKelvey even admits, "The Colombians have been encouraged to employ paraquat principally because of the enormous pot acreage in their country."

Yet is the administration prepared to epray the renowned marijuana farms of California, a mecca for environmentalists? Given state and local officialdom's hostile response to date, will the White House wish to risk alienating more states as November 1984 draws near?

Moderates Won In Decision On Licenses

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The odd-couple combination of White House politicians and foreign policy moderates in the bureaucracy plotting a pre-election U.S.-Soviet summit won big when national security adviser William P. Clark refused to dissuade President Reagan from ending license requirements for Caterpillar's pipelayers.

But for Clark's careful neutrality, the Aug. 20 defeat of the president's ideological hard-liners would assume dimensions of irreversibility. That would point to the near certainty of a summit next spring and victory for the odd couple's strategy of sublimating national security to 1984 re-election politics.

Odd-couple leaders viewed the bitter, mostly sub-surface battle over the pipelayers as vital, a conclusion having little to do with its financial importance to Caterpillar (which could be substantial). It was vital because of its symbolism in the internal administration etruggle over a summit between Reagan and Yuri Andropov next spring.

Led by Secretary of State George Shultz in the Cabinet and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver in the White House, the pro-summiteers needed to win the president's mind on the pipelayer issue, a brew that for years has boiled with politics and ideology. A clear-cut decision would give them a second big win following the new Soviet grain deal. It would set the stage for a third when Shultz travels to Madrid for highly-publicized talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko next month.

Clark was quite aware of the transcendent importance to Shultz of the Caterpillar issue. He worried that a loss for Shultz would promote another power-struggle orgy that would damage the president, himself and Shultz (though talk that Shultz was ready to resign if he lost is ridiculous). So Bill Clark limited himself to the role of scrupulouely neutral presidential informant as the battle raged.

Clark's self-enforced neutrality leaves open the question of where and how he will come down on the summit question, a fact that pro-summiteers should keep in mind before they count on getting Reagan's signature on an invitation to the Soviet president.

Shultz and Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin have already had half a dozen talks aimed, in the words of one White House insider, at "a Ronnie-Yuri summit." The intensified Shultz-Gromyko dialogue shows no give on the Soviet side.

Nevertheless, State Department Sovietologists have produced lengthy papers suggesting varioue formulas for a summit. These bureaucratic musings go routinely to the White House. There they are strongly reinforced by followers of the Deaver line who believe a summit would swing votes to Reagan, and quietly ridiculed by hard-core Reaganauts as a violation of fundamental Reaganism.

The battle over ending license requirements for Caterpillar's pipelayers showed the commitment of the prosummiteers to wiping the slate clean of anti-Soviet movee by President Carter in 1978 (to protest Soviet human rights violations). Shultz rejected an offer to reduce from 90 days to three days the time for granting a license to Caterpillar to sell the pipelayers.

'I Hope They Gave You One That Works'

James J. Kilpatrick

SCRABBLE, Va. — I truly had not intended to spend the better part of this month in scenic Albemarle County, Va., but one dirty little chest pain led to another, and so it developed that on the afternoon of Aug. 1, I was admitted to the University of Virginia Hospital.

I see by the Statistical Abstract that 40 million persons are admitted to hospitals every year; on any given day roughly 1 million patients are lying around in those cotton shifts with the ties in back. The experience is thus practically universal, but this experience was not universal for me. After 62 years without so much as a broken bone or a pickled appendix, this was my first go at surgery. All things considered, as W.C. Fields or somebody used to say, I'd rather have been in Philadelphia.

We began by making a movie. This involves a producer, an executive director, a floor director, a right groin director, two licensed cameramen and a script girl. They assemble somewhere southeast of the old aorta, and after reaching agreement on plot and character, they run a fire hose into the general area of cardiac interest. Through the fire hose passes a thousand gallons, more or less, of an opaque dye. The dye is released into the heart; the cameras grind away; and the resulting film is nominated for an Academy Award.

It did not strike me that my own contribution to the art of cinematography was in any way special, but the producer and director were greatly pleased. They were crying "How about that!" and "Hey, man!" and voicing other such expressions of delight, for it transpired that the dye had revealed a 95 percent blockage of the left main artery. It is nothing at all to score a blockage of 70 or 80, but to begin the day with a 95 is like sinking a 30-foot putt for an eagle on the first hole.

The next thing I knew I was looking at the ceiling. I will now deliver my first recommendation for hospital reform: Let us do something about those empty ceilings. The patient who is rolled through five miles of hospital corridors, only to be parked in a loading zone at the end of his tour, would like to see something besides ceiling tiles. Those rump-sprung hospital gowns also cry out for the designer's touch. And some system should be devised, like a temporary water faucet on the left arm, so that a nurse could run off a glass of blood just by turning a spigot.

Of my surgery, the less said, the better. I am ashamed to mention it. Mine was only a triple bypass, and I have discovered that in the leagues of open heart surgery, a triple bypass is just nothing. It is like hitting .210 or finishing a golf tournament 12 over par. The mail brings letters from total strangers wishing me well. "I had a quadruple bypass in March and am now running 12 miles a day." "I am a little old lady, 94 years of age, and I had a quintuple bypass six weeks ago. Tomorrow I go back to my bowling team." I had one letter from a liar who boasted that the cardiac engineers had given him six bypasses, a cloverleaf and a two-lane exit ramp.

One of my discoveries is that hospitals work by fixed routines. Sometimes these are called protocols. My protocol called for a sleeping pill at 10 o'clock. "I have to wake you up," the nurse would say, "but I have your sleeping pill." Teaching hospitals also have a big thing about listening to chests. Everybody tunes in. Nurses, medical students, interns, residents, professors — they all have stethoscopes. "I think I hear a little rustling down there," says one pretty nurse. "It is mice," I tell her. "They tend to come inside toward the end of summer."

At one time patients lolled around in bed for a few weeks after surgery, but now it is get up and walk, walk, walk. Seven times around the fifth floor equaled one mile. Nothing good can be said for those hikes. No flora, no fauna, no scenic overlooks. Now that I am home, I am walking seven times around the house. The dog thinks I am nuts, but little by little the old legs are coming back.

I haven't mentioned the bill. It was for $17,428.02, with the doctors' fees yet to come. That figures out to $1,742.80 a day, which makes it the most expensive vacation I ever took. I'm not knocking the experience. I have some fancy embroidery on my chest and legs; I have lost 12 pounds, and I have smoked my last cigarette. There's no way to thank all the readers and editors who sent cards, but I would like especially to thank a gentlewoman in Ohio. "I never knew conservatives had a heart," she wrote, "but I hope they gave you one that works."

To the editor:

Black Dollar Day is an economic demonstration to show the black community's economic strength. It is designed to make the business community aware of the strong impact of dollars spent by black consumers.

This demonstration is one in which everyone can participate at no cost, no risk and no inconvenience. All the participants need to do is to exchange $10 or more for $2 bills and Susan B. Anthony dollar coins before Sept. 1, 1983, and spend these bills and coins anywhere for anything Sept. 1-5 — Labor Day weekend.

We would like for all black citizens and black organizations to participate. The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP has contacted banks in the community to stock the $2 bills and Anthony coins.

American blacks make more than $150 billion a year. This amounts to a considerable amount of potential power. The NAACP National Dollar Days is one of our attempts at harnessing this vast potential power. Black citizens, remember: We do business with people who do business with us. We have to teach our dollars to make more sense.

Women's Vote Still Eludes Reagan

He and his aides are puzzled at the negative reaction to what they view as generous efforts to increase opportunies for women in the federal government.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the president's record of female appointees to high-ranking federal jobs is unmatched in history. The administration's showcases are two Cabinet women — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Margaret Heckler, secretary of health and human services.

He also also named Sandra Day O'Connor as the first woman justice of the Supreme Court and Jeanne Kirkpatrick as the first woman to head the U.S. delegation to the United Nations.

But the White House is learning that the problem is much broader, and that Reagan's oppostion to the Equal Rights Amendment hurt his image with the modern-day American woman who believes there is still discrimination in many areas.

More than a year ago, Reagan ordered a review of all federal statutes that might include discrminatory language.

The Justice Department has conducted the intensive search, calling on all agencies to point out laws that discriminate against women. So far, three quarterly reports have been made to the White House, but no action has been taken and the reports have not been made public.

Barbara Honegger, a Justice Department special assistant, delivered a blow to the administration when she described as a "sham" Reagan's efforts to eliminate discrimination in the law.

She wrote in The Washington Post that Reagan had backed off on the Republican Party's 40-year commitment "to the broadest constitutional protection for the civil rights of American women — support of the ERA."

If anything, she said, the administration has narrowed the interpretation of existing statutes forbidding sex discrimination. Moreover, she said no action has been taken to eliminate sex discrimination in federal regulations.

White House officials were stung by her attack, and so were Justice Department officials. At the Justice Department, Ms. Honegger, who has since resigned, was described as a "disgruntled job seeker" and dismissed as a "low-level" staffer who hardly anyone had heard of.

In the conclusion she wrote, "I don't think Ronald Reagan gives a damn."

The president went out of his way two weeks ago to apologize to the Federation of Business and Professional Women after they were turned away from the White House gates when their scheduled tour was abruptly canceled.

Reagan sought to make ammends by putting in a personal appearance, but his remarks offended some of the women.

The polls show there is a "gender gap" in Reagan's pursuit of the women's vote and 10 percent fewer women approve of his job perfomance than men.

His political advisers are aware of the problems. They are soliciting the advice of some prominent women on how to make a better appeal for the women's vote.

Columnist Ann Landers has been asked for advice. Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter and an ERA activist, also has been recruited.

With the elections more than a year away, Reagan still has a chance to make many affirmative moves to improve his image with women, but it may require a philosophical change of direction.

"I DON'T WANT ANY SPECIAL TREATMENT....YOU POLITICIANS JUST GROVEL, FAWN AND BEG LIKE FOR ANY OTHER INTEREST GROUP...!"

Office

RALEIGH — North Carolina Republicans will soon have a party headquarters they can be proud of. After years of renting office space around the capital, the party has finally bought a building of its own. And what a building it is — or, better said, what a building it soon will be.

Following the lead of the state Democratic Party, which several years ago bought the old Dodd-Hinsdale House in Raleigh, the Republicans have purchased a 4,000-square-foot ante-bellum house just down Hillsborough Street from their adversaries.

Like the Democrats, the Republicans have taken on a major restoration job for themselves. The house was used, until recently, as a student boarding house for nearby N.C. State University. The building had been carved up — without much concern for its historical integrity — into a number of makeshift bedrooms. And it would be fair to say that the building had fallen into disrepair.

But beneath the grime, the tacky wallpaper, the painted wood, the dirty floors, there lies a beautiful building and previous owners knew that. They sold the house to the GOP for $139,000, which is a lot for something that looks, to the passerby, like a big firetrap.

For all the money Republicans are reputed to have, Dave Flaherty, party chairman, says he can't afford to hire help to put the building back in shape. So, for the last three weeks, Flaherty and his headquarters staff have been down at the new headquarters scraping paint, tearing out old bathtubs, ripping down wallpaper, cleaning and painting. They've been joined by volunteers.

"All I'm trying to do right now is get the thing ready to move into," Flaherty said as he painted the door on the men's john. "They're going to have this place looking like a palace. We're going to restore it to all the old stuff."

The house has plenty of "old stuff" to restore. Most of the windows are made of bevel-leaded glass. Some of the others are stained glass. All the floors are hardwood, of course, and there are white columns in the main foyer. The closets are all cedar-lined. There are five fireplaces, one of which has a solid mohogany mantle. The rest have tile mantles. The lighting fixtures are ornate antiques, probably original equipment, and there's even a bun warmer sitting atop the radiator in what was the dining room.

"The people who owned this could have made a fortune by ripping all this stuff out and selling it," Flaherty said.

The house has four large bedrooms upstairs, each of which will be restored to its original state. Some changes will have to be made, however. The showers and tubs are being removed with the exception of the tub in the main upstairs bathroom. Flaherty says that's being left simply as a historical curiosity. The kitchen appliances are being moved into a large closet that will be called the "tuxedo kitchen."

Outside, the building looks even worse. The white paint is covered with enough filth to ruin the clothes of anyone who leans against it. That should change quickly, however. Carpenters have been hired to fix up the exterior. Then a crew will sand blast away the old paint and put on a new coat. A ramp for wheelchairs will be built onto the front porch. All of that is expected to cost $10,000 and interior restoration is budgeted at another $60,000.

Industrial Policy: Pro & Con

NEW YORK (AP) — It is a charismatic issue, which means almost inevitably it will be seized by candidates for political office and publicized as thoroughly as a new soap or fast-food item.

Never mind that some people claim we already have the product, a national industrial policy. It still will be offered as the brand new solution to some of the nation's oldest and most pressing economic problems.

It will be praised as the vehicle for phasing in high technology while saving jobs and arresting the decline of heavy industries. It will be damned as central planning that threatens private enterprise and civil liberties.

That is to say, the very idea of a national industrial policy is and will increasingly be controversial, with much of the controversy arising from the fact that it means vastly different things to many people.

As described by labor leader Lloyd McBride in a magazine recently, it means "active intervention and participation of government in economic planning and decision-making."

In this sense, said McBride, president of the United Steelworkers of America, "government is the primary economic policy-maker actively engaged in the allocation of resources and regulation of markets."

In practice, he said, it would mean a trade policy to protect domestic markets, an investment policy to allocate capital to certain industries, and a labor policy to cushion unemployment.

To which critics, such as The Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank, respond with the damning description "central planning," a reminder of the marketplace chaos and loss of freedoms it has brought to Socialist nations, a warning that it can be a program to be seized by ideologues, and forecasts of an enormous, big-brother bureaucracy claiming to know what is best for you.

To many people, however, a national industrial policy has little to do with these extremes but instead is a common-sense approach to focusing the nation's talents on solving the most pressing economic and human problems.

To Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., an industrial policy is needed because "more than at any other time since the Depression, traditional policies are...increasingly irrelevant to the unique economic realities of this decade."

He maintains that the aim of his broad proposals are to encourage investment and "new entrepreneurial frontiers," stimulate research and development, and expand global markets for American goods.

One major trouble with that and other proposals, says Richard McKenzie, a visiting fellow of The Heritage Foundation, is that "government control of capital ultimately translates into control of people."

Gregory Klein, a foundation researcher, lists more than 30 bills introduced into the 98th Congress "that collectively would forge a national industrial policy." Five of them, he says, seek to resuscitate the depression-era Reconstruction Finance Corp., and nine would change the tax code to direct money towards what are perceived as national goals.

While labor generally supports the idea of a national industrial policy, vague as it is, the Reagan administration does not. Side by side with McBride's article ran a strong denunciation by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

"Viewing the free market as weak and outmoded, these national planners want to manipulate market forces by singling out key industries or firms for special attention," he said.

Planners, he suggested, cannot possibly make, coordinate or even monitor all the decisions they would be forced to make. They would be susceptible to political pressures, and they would threaten civil liberties, he said.

Such extremes of viewpoint, especially with political campaigns coming up, seem destined to make national industrial planning a well discussed issue.

Politicians, government figures, and union leaders aren't the only ones publicizing the issue. Academics are doing their share.

Robert Reich, a Harvard professor, author of "The Next American Frontier," praised by presidential candidate Walter Mondale, has written still another on the subject called "The Next American Frontier."

Economists, such as Barry Bluestone of Boston College and Lester Thurow and Bennett Harrison of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, are prominent in the debate, understandably so because of the potentially vast changes involved.

In fact, it seems reasonable to expect that sooner or later almost everyone will be involved in the issue.

Political candidates, at any rate, seem to agree that it's loaded with potential. And you can be fairly certain, therefore, that they'll talk it up, for or against.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The American people continue to fear greater U.S. involvement in Central America, despite President Reagan's assurances that the United States does not seek a larger military presence in the region.

In the latest Gallup survey, conducted soon after the president's July 26 press conference in which he defended his administration's plans for military exercises in Central America, the public expressed these views:

1. They currently oppose, by a 5-to-2 ratio, increasing the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador. In March the public had voted heavily against the first proposed increase in the number of advisers, to 55.

2. By an even larger 69-to-21 percent majority the public now rejects a Defense Department Plan to permit U.S. advisers to enter combat areas in El Salvador.

3. The proportion of the public fearing that U.S. intervention in El Salvador could turn into "another Vietnam" remains at a very high level, with 72 percent saying this is at least fairly likely to occur.

4. Americans' desire for a hands-off military policy in El Salvador extends to other nations in the region as well. By a 55-to-35 percent vote, the weight of public opinion is that the United States should not get involved in the internal affairs of friendly Central American nations rather than provide them with military assistance.

Here are the questions asked and the principal findings, based on the 86 percent of the sample who say they have heard or read about the situation in El Salvador:

"The U.S. Defense Department has recommended increasing the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador. Would you favor or oppose this?"

Increase U.S. Advisers
(Based On aware group)

| | |
|---|---|
| Favor | 24 |
| Oppose | 63 |
| No opinion | 13 |
| Total | 100 |

"U.S. advisers in El Salvador have not been permitted to enter combat areas, a Policy which the U.S. Defense Department now wants to change. Would you favor or oppose permitting U.S. military advisers to enter combat areas in El Salvador?"

U.S. Advisers In Combat Areas

| | |
|---|---|
| Oppose | 69 |
| No opinion | 10 |
| Total | 100 |

Combining the results of these two questions, 12 percent favor both an increase in the number of U.S. advisers and permitting them to enter combat areas, 53 percent are opposed to both new options, and the remaining 35 percent give mixed responses.

The following question was asked for the first time in the latest survey:

"Some people say the U.S. should give military assistance to governments in Central America that are friendly to us. Others say we should not get involved in the internal affairs of these nations. Which point of view comes closer to the way you feel — that we should give military assistance to these nations or that we should not get involved?"

The opinion of men is quite evenly divided. To an extraordinary degree, however, women disagree, coming down heavily on the side of non-intervention.

The vote of Republicans is split, while Democrats opt for non-intervention by better than 2-to-1. Also, college-educated respondents are more likely than persons with less formal education to say the United States should protter military assistance to friendly Central American nations. The views of Hispanic-Americans closely parallel the national norms.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,565 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period July 29-August 2.

Winging

NEW YORK (UPI) — Willie Sutton was in the wrong business, according to Stephen Leibholz.

Sutton, the legendary robber, said he pilfered banks because "that's where the money was." But today the big money is winging its way from computer to computer across the telephone wires.

"About $600 billion a day is sent via wires," said Leibholz, an expert on computer crime. "About $70,000 for every man, woman and child on earth is being transferred electronically each year.

"Computer thefts average $630,000 per hit," he added. "The average bank robber gets $9,000. This is an area where crime does pay."

No one knows how much money banks lose to computer crime each year. Estimates range from $140 million to $3 billion. Federal officials estimate only 10 percent of computer crimes are ever reported to authorities.

"We polled our clients and the 10 percent figure appears pretty consistent," Leibholz said. "There's such corporate embarrassment they don't want to admit it's happened."

Leibholz is founder and president of Analytics, a designer of telecommunications security networks based in Willow Grove, Pa. His firm markets Sherlock, which scrambles computerized information into coded texts that are unintelligible to unauthorized personnel.

The federal government uses a cryptograhic system in which the codes are changed constantly to protect classified defense material, Leibholz said.

The movie "War Games," he said, is a generally accurate portrayal of a "computer freak" and the way outsiders gain access to computer systems. "But all computer systems with national security information are protected by a cryptographic system," he said. "Somebody with a normal terminal couldn't even talk to them."

The defense system may be hard to penetrate, but some banking systems are embarrassingly vulnerable. Leibholz has used a 10-year-old boy to show banks how easy it is to penetrate their computerized network. "It took him about 40 minutes," he said.

The weakest link in a computer system is the telephone wires through which most computerized information is transmitted, he said. "The easiest way is to tap the wires. You just have to cut two wires to make good wiretaps."

Passwords are a weak defense against the computer snoop, Leibholz said. Like the programmer in "War Games," many people choose the names of their spouses, children, birthdays or Social Security numbers as passwords. Others paste the magic word on their computers where they won't forget it, or use an easily remembered name.

Charlotte Leader Served Under Both Parties

Frank R. McNinch of Charlotte went to Washington in 1930 under appointment by President Herbert Hoover as a member of the Federal Power Commission. And McNinch, a former state legislator and former mayor of Charlotte, remained in Washington under President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who reappointed the Charlotte man and named him chairman of the commission.

McNinch thus had the distinction of being appointed to high federal office by both Democratic and Republican presidents.

McNinch became known as one of Roosevelt's "trouble shooters." As chairman of the FPC, McNinch became a prominent figure in the battle over creating the Tennessee Valley Authority. In 1935, Roosevelt sent McNinch to represent the United States in the World Power Conference at The Hague, Netherlands, and in 1937 appointed him chairman of the Federal Communications Commission with orders to reorganize it.

As a member of the FCC, McNinch became an early advocate of the "fairness doctorine" under which broadcasters are required to give equal time to advocates of both sides of all controversial issues. After his stint on the FCC, McNinch served as a special assistant to the U.S. attorney general.

But when Roosevelt reappointed McNinch as a member and chairman of the FCC, he did so despite the opposition of both of North Carolina's U.S. senators — Josiah W. Bailey and Robert Rice Reynolds. The two Democratic senators fought McNinch, also a Democrat, because he had bolted the party in 1928 and was a leader in the movement that gave Republican Hoover North Carolina's electoral vote. McNinch, an ardent prohibitionist, differed with Al Smith, the Democratic candidate who called for repeal of the 18th amendment, over the liquor issue.

Bailey, who had made party loyalty the big issue when he unseated veteran Sen. Furnifold M. Simmons in 1930, fought McNinch on the same issue. At the time Hoover appointed the Charlotte man, Bailey labeled the appointment transparently political and asserted McNinch had no right to be appointed as a Democrat. Bailey was defeated when the Senate voted to confirm the appointment, and he and Reynolds met the same fate when Roosevelt reappointed McNinch four years later.

The Senate approved the reappointment at the end of a bitter three-hour debate during which Bailey spoke for more than an hour. He asserted McNinch would change his policies at will if that would profit him and that he would serve power tycoon Samuel Insull as faithfully as he would Roosevelt. However, He agreed with U.S. Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D-Mont., that McNinch had supported liberal policies both under Hoover and Roosevelt.

The debate took a comical turn when Sen. Bennett Clark, D-Missouri, insisted that Reynolds, who had remained silent throughout the debate, take the floor and tell how he stood on the confirmation of McNinch. Clark said the Senate was entitled to know the views of both North Carolina senators.

Reynolds, who apparently had intended to take no part in the discussion, arose and made a typical flowery oration in which he extolled the grandeurs of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park at length but touched on briefly on the subject before the senate. However, he interposed enough references to McNinch into the discussion to make it clear he disagreed with the Charlotte man's opposition to Al Smith. He also pointed out that in his campaign for the Senate in 1932, he had pledged to oppose the renomination of McNinch.

Reynolds, who was obviously embarrased, brought gales of laughter from other senators when he read into the record of a brief letter he had made public several months earlier when the White House announced the reappointment. Reynolds said that by writing that letter which was brief and couched in polite terms, he had fulfilled his pledge to his constitutents. He then sat down without referring once to the confirmation question.

When Reynolds had concluded, Clark arose and said: "The Constitution provides that appointments to offic shall be made with the advice and consent of the Senate. I take it from what the senator has said that this appointment was made contrary to his advice but that it has his consent."

Catholic Cardinal Turns Down Bid To Join Assassination Panel

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime L. Sin on Saturday refused President Ferdinand Marcos' invitation to join the panel investigating the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Sin's rebuff of Marcos came at a time when the president appears increasingly isolated and beleaguered by critics and political opponents as a result of the slaying and unproductive police investigation.

An estimated 500,000 Filipinos, meanwhile, thronged the route of a 100-car cortege that took Aquino's body back home to Tarlac, the provincial capital north of Manila where the opposition leader got his start in politics nearly 20 years ago.

Sin, the archbishop of Manila, said after declining to join the investigation that "rightly or wrongly, a large number of our people believe that the government is responsible" for Aquino's death, if only because he was in the custody of security officers at the time he was shot to death at Manila airport last Sunday.

In a speech to the Knights of Columbus in Manila, Sin noted that Enrique Fernindo, chief justice of the Supreme Court and chairman of the fact-finding panel, said the inquiry would be public, and "it goes without saying that all of us would be following the progress of this investigation — if we are allowed to."

Former Chief Justice Roberto Concepcion, considered by some observers the most independent of the initial five appointees to the panel, probably will not participate because of "poor health," Fernando said in a telephone interview. Concepcion, 80, resigned after Marcos imposed martial law in 1972.

Sin, an outspoken foe of Marcos' human rights record, earlier described Marcos as "begging" him to join the investigation, but said he declined because of more pressing church business at the Vatican and a lack of legal experience.

However, a church source requesting anonymity said Sin felt that the special commission named last Thursday was stacked with Marcos loyalists and that the archbishop "thought that his own voice would be a voice in the wilderness."

Marcos has vehemently rejected suggestions of official complicity in the slaying and created the special commission of senior jurists to find out who killed Aquino and why.

A man soldiers killed seconds after authorities said he shot Aquino at close range with a .357 Magnum has been identified only as "Rolly," the nickname stitched into his underwear.

A Manila newspaper said Saturday that a cousin of the dead assassin had come forward to claim the body of "Rolly." The Philippines Daily Express, quoting "military sources," said the unnamed cousin had identified the alleged assassin as "Rolando Vizcarra," the same name that appeared a day earlier in a Japanese news service story.

Syrians, Israelis Exchange Fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian and Israeli forces exchanged artillery barrages in the Bekaa Valley, at one point firing three or four shells a minute, reporters in that area of eastern Lebanon said Saturday.

A Syrian communique said its forces clashed with the Israelis on Saturday morning, making a direct hit on one Israeli position. But an Israeli military spokesman in Yarze just east of Beirut said "no such incident happened." A military source in Tel Aviv also branded the Syrian report "a fabrication."

The Israelis said their troops had earlier chased a band of Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrated from behind Syrian lines, killing one guerrilla and wounding another.

Lebanese reporters west of the Israeli and Syrian lines said the two sides fought a two-hour artillery duel Friday night, following up with machine gun fire and flares that lighted the skies over the Bekaa into early Saturday morning.

The hostilities were reported as U.S. special envoys in Europe and the Middle East sought to defuse tension between Christian and Druse militias in Lebanon's central mountains to allow the Lebanese army to take over the embattled region peacefully from Israel's withdrawing forces.

The Syrian communique said the two-hour clash broke out at 8:15 a.m. (2:15 a.m. EDT) when "the Israeli enemy opened tank fire against one of our positions in the Bekaa. Our forces returned fire and silenced enemy sources of fire."

The communique said an Israeli position was seen taking a direct Syrian hit that "killed or wounded all elements manning it." It said two Syrians were wounded in the exchange.

The Lebanese journalists who reported a battle Friday night said that at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT) on Saturday two rounds from Syrian positions set ablaze a forest near Israeli positions around the Bekaa town of Ammiq but that fire was not returned.

The Friday night exchange involved Israeli positions in the Bekaa areas of Rafid, Jib Jinnin, Mhaidseh and Kfar Mishki and Syrian positons at Uanta, Azza, Masnaa, Deir El-Ashaer and Dahr El Baidar, according to the dispatches.

They said the shelling took place at the rate of three to four shells per minute at the height of the fighting.

The Israeli command said the pursuit of guerrilla infiltrators occurred in the Bekaa area of Kamed El-Loz and that there were no casualties among Israeli troops.

President Reagan's top Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane had a second day of talks with French officials in Paris on Saturday and declared the United States and France were determined to help Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government take over the Chouf mountains from the Israeli army.

Top Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, who also is in Paris, told The Associated Press he planned to meet with McFarlane, adding: "I can say nothing before the meeting. It's quite confidential and quite important."

Diplomatic sources in Damascus said McFarlane's assistant, Richard Fairbanks, was expected in Damascus on Saturday from a quick visit to Saudi Arabia. He had a meeting set for Sunday with Syrian Vice Premier and Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, the sources said.

The rightist Christian "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said the Lebanese army plans to begin moving into the Chouf on Sept. 5 and complete the deployment on Sept. 8. The report could not be verified.

Patriarch Maximos V. Hakim, head of the Greek Catholic Church in the Middle East and the Western Hemisphere, met Gemayel for an hour Saturday.

France Vows Will Stay Out Of War

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — French Defense Minister Charles Hernu on Saturday pledged support to the government of President Hissene Habre but said France refuses to become involved in what he called Chad's "civil war."

Hernu then flew back to Paris to report to President Francois Mitterrand following a two-day visit to Chad to inspect French troops and confer with Habre. He had a second meeting with the Chad leader shortly before taking off in a French military jetliner.

In a radio interview shortly before his departure, Hernu said France would stand by its commitment to help defend Chad against the Libyan military incursion, but "will not allow itself to be drawn into the Chad civil war."

Libyan troops and Chadian rebels loyal to former President Goukouni Oueddei have stretched their control over the northern half of Chad in battles since July but an undeclared truce has been in effect for two weeks, apparently largely as a result of the deployment of French forces on the fringe of the northern desert.

Hernu said he found the 3,000 French paratroopers sent to Chad had a "morale of iron" and constitued an effective "arm of dissuasion against any internationalization of the conflict provoked by Libya."

Challenger Set For Dazzling Liftoff On Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Challenger is set to turn night into light Tuesday in a dazzling predawn launch that may be visible for hundreds of miles as a 500-foot tail of flame carves a fiery path in the sky.

The ship will carry America's first black astronaut, the world's oldest space traveler, a communications satellite for India, an important drug-processing test, 260,000 postal covers and six rats.

"We're proud to be here and we're ready to fly," mission commander Richard Truly said as he and his four-man crew landed Saturday in T-38 jets that brought them from the Johnson Space Center in Texas.

"We're anxious to fly, and we're looking forward to a good mission," said Air Force Lt. Col. Guion Bluford, the first black named to a U.S. space mission.

The other crew members are Navy Cmdr. Daniel Brandenstein, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Dale Gardner and Dr. William Thornton, a physician from Faison, N.C., who at 54 will be the oldest person yet to have flown in space. Truly is a Navy captain.

The countdown to launch began right on time at 3 p.m. EDT Saturday, with no problems reported. Liftoff is set for 2:15 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

It will be the first after-dark launch of a U.S. manned spacecraft since Apollo 17 roared toward the moon shortly after midnight on Dec. 7, 1972. It was a clear night, and the exhaust of the Saturn 5 rocket was seen several hundred miles in every direction.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the fire from Challenger's solid fuel booster rockets should be even brighter and if the weather is clear should be visible for 450 miles. That covers most of Florida, Georgia and the Bahamas, half of South Carolina, southeastern Alabama and the northern edge of Cuba.

The night launch is dictated by the requirement to place the communications satellite in a precise position above the equator south of India. That also sets up the first night landing in the U.S. man-in-space program, with Challenger scheduled to land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 12:23 a.m. PDT on Sept. 5, Labor Day, after six days aloft.

Wednesday's deployment of the satellite is the major objective of the mission. But the astronauts will be busy with many other chores, and there are some interesting experiments aboard.

Two days are set aside for testing the ability of the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm to move heavy payloads. That will be done by lifting a 7,460-pound payload — twice as heavy as anything yet hoisted by the arm. The purpose is to gain experience for later flights when the arm will handle satellites weighing up to 40,000 pounds.

Making its fourth flight will be a experiment designed to determine how effectively pure drugs can be made in the weightlessness of space. Live cell samples will be separated by electrical charges instead of the simple protein samples flown on the previous tests. Included are pancreas cells to be used in research that could lead to new treatments for diabetes.

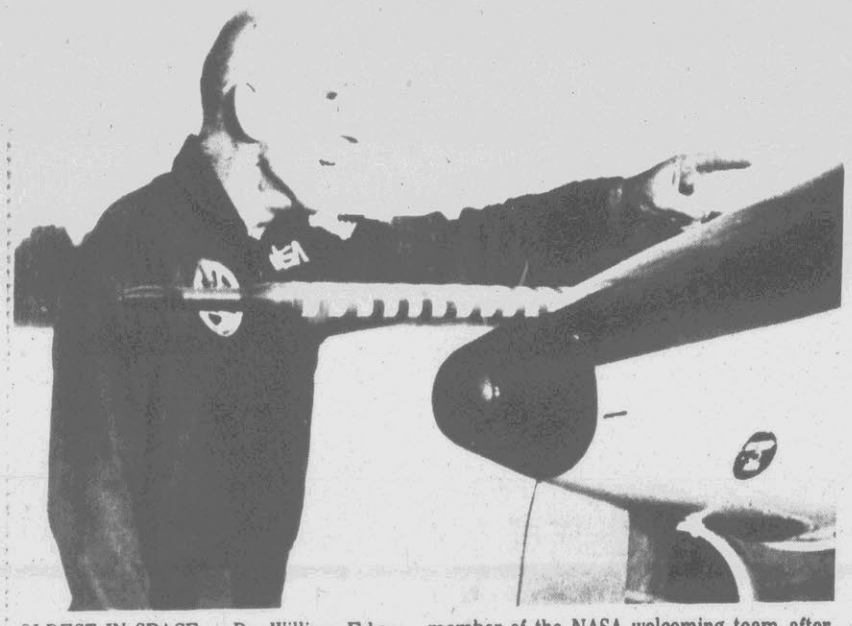
Also on board will be six laboratory rats riding in a life support package being tested for future animal experiments in orbit.

"We're primarily testing the page's ability to support the rats," said Thornton. "The rats have been adequately provided for with food and water and they are breathing the same air that we breathe. We are cycling their lights on and off to keep them happy. We see no reason to think they will have any difficulties other than an exciting ride."

Challenger also is carrying cargo that could produce revenue.

Packed in in the cargo bay are 260,000 postal covers, each bearing a $9.35 stamp. The Postal Service plans to sell the covers to collectors for $15.35 each and split the proceeds with NASA. If all are sold, the take would be more than $3.8 million.

The stamp, intended primarily for Express Mail, shows the head of an American eagle illuminated by a full moon. The covers bear a color replica of the shuttle crew's flight patch and will be enclosed in souvenir folders.



OLDEST IN SPACE — Dr. William Edgar Thornton of Faison, who is 54, is scheduled to become the oldest astronaut to travel in space when the shuttle Challenger is launched Tuesday. Thornton is shown pointing to a member of the NASA welcoming team after arriving at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida Saturday. He is a member of a five-man crew for the Challenger. # Reagan Critical Of Israel

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, arguing that his stalled Middle East peace plan is still alive, chastised Israel on Saturday as posing an "obstacle to peace" by building new settlements in occupied territories.

Reagan said his peace formula, announced last Sept. 1, was in the best long-term interest of all parties and represented "the only realistic basis for a solution that has thus far been presented."

Reagan made his remarks in his weekly radio address, broadcast live from his mountaintop vacation ranch. The president was dressed in boots and jodhpurs and was ready to go horseback riding as he made the five-minute speech.

"The Middle East peace initiative which we announced almost a year ago is definitely alive and available to those parties willing to sit down together and talk peace," Reagan said. "We remain commited to the positions we set forth, and we stand ready to pursue them in the context of the Camp David accords."

There have been reports recently the administration was considering a shift in its peace plan because it has failed to move off dead center in nearly a year.

Under Reagan's plan, the West Bank and Gaza strip would be granted Palestinian self-government, in association with Jordan. The exact nature and degree of Jordanian control, and the precise borders, would be worked out in negotiations.

Israel rejected the plan out of hand and continued to erect new settlements. The administration had hoped to recruit Jordan's King Hussein in talks over Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank, under provisions of the Camp David plan.

However, after a dispute with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, Hussein said he would not participate and would "leave it to the PLO and to the Palestinian people to choose the ways and means for the salvation of themselves and their land."

Reagan said, "The establishment of new Israeli settlements in the occupied territories is an obstacle to peace, and we're concerned over the negative effect this activity has on Arab confidence in Israel's willingness to return territory in exchange for security and a freely and fairly-negotiated peace treaty.

Storm Barry Picks Course For Texas

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Barry, a 350-mile-wide whorl of thunderheads and rain clouds, plodded slowly through the Gulf of Mexico with 50 mph winds Saturday.

Gale warnings were in effect along the Texas coast from Port O'Connor to Brownsville.

"We're forecasting a northwest turn, which makes the Texas coast the best possible choice right now," said Hal Gerrish at the National Hurricane Center. "But it's turning, and that makes a landfall point awfully hard to tie down."

The Coral Gables hurricane center said Barry's fuzzy center was located about 200 miles east of Brownsville, Texas, at latitude 25.9 north, longitude 94.2 west Saturday night.

The weather system, 1983's second Atlantic tropical storm, was moving to the north-northwest at 15 mph, and gale force winds extended 100 miles to the north of the center and 50 miles to the south.

"Steering currents are getting weaker and the storm could take a northwest turn. Therefore, residents along the upper Texas coast should keep in close touch with later advises," the Hurricane Center said.

The agency warned that tides of 2 to 4 feet above normal could be expected by morning along the lower and middle Texas coast, with rainfall of 3 to 5 inches during the night and Sunday.

Leaf Sales See Jump In Prices

By The Associated Press

Higher prices and better quality marked this week's flue-cured tobacco auctions on the South Carolina and Border North Carolina and Eastern belts, while demand rose in sales on the Old and Middle Belt, the Federal-State Market News Service reported.

The Border Belt saw a sharp increase in grade prices for nearly 90 percent of the grades. Gains ranged mostly from $1 to $6 per hundred pounds.

Quality improved as leaf and cutters accounted for nearly two-thirds of offerings, with over three-fourths being classed as good and fair tobacco.

Gross sales for the week totaled $21,281,198, for an average of $181.99, up $11.20 from the previous week.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp. received 13.3 percent of border belt gross sales this week and 23.1 percent for the season.

On the Eastern Belt, average prices rose between $1 and $8 per hundred for most grades, while the percentage of leaf delivered to Stabilization dropped sharply to just 17.4 percent of gross sales and 32.5 percent for the season.

Gross sales for the week were 29,564,110 pounds, averaging $182.37 per hundred.

Demand was good on the Old and Middle Belt where grade averages continued to improve and Stabilization receipts dropped slightly to 16.9 percent and 18.5 percent for the season.

Sales of 39,687,348 averaged $152.71 for the week.

Children Engulfed In Fireball As Propane Gas Vapors Ignite

SANTEE, Neb. (AP) — Eight children playing in a cloud of leaking propane gas were engulfed in an orange fireball when the vapors ignited, triggering a blaze that burned for eight hours and forced the evacuation of this Indian reservation community.

Ten people were hurt, including a propane truck driver and a woman who lived in a mobile home about 25 feet from the storage tank.

"I heard the explosion and I could see the flames over the rooftops," said Robert Brown, 19, who lives about 50 yards from the scene of Friday afternoon's blast. "And all the children were running around on fire."

The eight children, who ranged in age from 4 to 15, remained hospitalized Saturday with burns. All 400 residents of this town on the Santee Sioux Indian reservation were forced to flee after the 4:30 p.m. explosion, and they returned about seven hours later.

The propane leaked as a tanker truck driver, Sam Ruito, was filling a 10,000-gallon underground storage tank for Santee's public school system, said Tribal Chairman Rick Kitto, who witnessed the explosion.

He said a crowd of children had gathered as cloud of vapor formed, about 20 feet high and 50 feet around.

"It was a very hot day, and the gas may have felt cool to their skin," Kitto said, adding that Ruiter had been trying to shoo the children away.

Suddenly the gas ignited, engulfing Ruiter and the children in an orange fireball 50 feet in diameter, Kitto said. The truck was quickly backed away by members of the community's fire department, but the 6,000 gallons of propane emaining in the underground tank kept burning, shooting flames 40 to 60 feet in the air.

The children ran in the direction of the fire department, where workers grabbed hoses and sprayed them with water to douse their burning clothes.

The children were taken to St. Luke's Burn Center in Sioux City, Iowa. Two were in critical condition, one serious, three fair, and two in good condition. A nursing supervisor said all suffered burns on their upper bodies, arms and hands.

Sentence Shocks Arizona Jurors

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Some jurors who convicted an 18-year-old of bloodying another man's nose in a prison fight wept when they learned the verdict requires him to spend 25 years behind bars.

"It's the most outrageous thing I've ever been involved in," defense attorney Kelly Knop said Friday. "If it had happened on the street, the cops would not even have been called."

Guadalupe Montana Gonzales was convicted Wednesday of deadly assault for his role in a fight among inmates at the Arizona Correctional Training Center in July 1982. He must be sentenced to life in prison, with no possibility of parole for 25 years, under a mandatory sentencing law for prisoners who commit dangerous assaults against fellow inmates or guards.

Witnesses said at least three of the 12 Pima County Superior Court jurors shed tears when Judge Philip Fahringer told them about the sentence. By law, they were not allowed to be told about the mandatory sentence before their verdict.

"My God, we never expected that," an unidentified juror told the Arizona Daily Star.

"We were a little shocked, and thought that maybe we should have known that (about the mandatory sentence) ahead of time," said another juror. "I think it should be more up to the discretion of the judge. But then maybe some of these heavy sentences have to be given to slow it (prison violence) down some."

Gonzales, who still has four more years to run on a term for a robbery and assault that he committed as a juvenile, testified he struck another inmate with a broom handle to defend himself. The victim, who required stitches on his head and suffered a recurring bloody nose, refused to testify against Gonzales.

Sentencing is scheduled Sept. 23. The judge set Sept. 19 to hear defense arguments that the mandatory sentence amounts to cruel and unusual punishment barred by the U.S. Constitution.

Two other alleged participants in the fight were tried at the same time as Gonzales and found innocent. A third is being prosecuted in juvenile court.

Prosecutor Tom Zawada said Gonzales was charged with deadly assault because the victim's injury could have caused him to die.

Leave ...

happy about the upgrading of vacation benefits.

"Before, teachers had, depending upon the number of years of service, one and a quarter days per month. The maximum a state employee could receive a year was 2.15 days per month," he said.

The new regulations indicate, Keeter said, that teachers who accumulate or accrue up to 30 days can be paid for the vacation time when they separate. According to Blinson, that could become a significant problem if the state does not appropriate money to cover separation or severance.

"Upon resignation, an employee may be paid for unused time up to 30 days, but the state didn't appropriate the money, putting us in the horns of a dilemma. If the state does not arrange for the money, it will be left up to county commissioners and boards of education," Blinson said.

In spite of anticipated funding problems, Blinson said he was "very pleased" with the extended teacher vacation ruling.

"We have needed something to make the teachers feel their jobs were not dead-end, and this is a good start," the city school leader said.

"I think increasing leave benefits is a progressive step in the right direction to equalize school employees with other state employees. Another good factor is the flexibility this plan allows the teachers in taking one-half of their leave when they want to. It adds to their sense of morale and professionalism," he said.

School Leader Decries Plan

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A new state law giving teachers more vacation days threatens the quality of education and should be changed, according to High Point Schools Superintendent C. Owen Phillips.

Phillips has asked that the plan, which makes teachers' vacations compatible with those of other state workers, be discussed at a regional superintendents meeting in Greensboro Sep. 20.

The law, enacted July 20, allows 10-month school employees 10 to 20½ vacation days, depending on years of employment, while 12-month employees may get as many as 25.8 days.

Phillips said the problem is that teachers must take their leaves during the 20 days allotted for teachers' work days and inservice training. The law requires all teachers to work during the 180 days required for student instruction.

"The work still has to be done whether they are on vacation or not," he said, adding that if teachers don't have time for noninstructional functions outside the classroom, they may be forced to use classroom time.

School Costs To Be Higher

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spending for education is expected to reach $230 billion in the new school year, up from $215 billion, while student enrollment drops 1 percent, Secretary of Education T.H. Bell said Saturday.

He released the Department of Education's annual "back to school" forecast, which said total enrollment in the nation's schools and colleges is expected to approach 56.7 million this fall. That is 400,000 less than the 57.1 million students enrolled in the fall of 1982.

"Education in the fall of 1983 will be the primary activity of more than 60.2 million Americans," Bell said. "In a nation with a population of 234 million, more than one of four persons will be a direct participant in the educational process. And that figure rises to nearly 3 of 10 when support staffs of our nation's schools and colleges are included."

He said nearly 3.3 million people will be employed as classroom teachers, and an additional 300,000 will be working as superintendents, principals, supervisors and other instructional staff members.

Elementary and secondary schools are expected to spend $141 billion during the 1983-1984 school year, while the spending of colleges and universities is estimated at $89 billion. Public schools and colleges will spend nearly $184 billion in 1983-84, while privately controlled institutions are expected to disburse more than $46 billion.

Of the $230 billion to be spent on education, an estimated 9 percent will come from the federal government, 39 percent from state governments, 24 percent from local governments and 28 percent from other sources, including tuition and fees, endowment earnings and private gifts and grants, Bell said.

Enrollment in elementary schools is expected to decrease from 30.9 million in the fall of 1982 to 30.8 million this fall. Small annual decreases in elementary enrollment have been occurring since 1969, Bell said, reflecting a continuing decline in the number of children 5 to 13 years old. This trend is expected to reverse in the mid-1980s, with modest increases projected for the rest of the decade.

A decrease from 13.8 million high school students in 1982 to 13.5 million this fall is expected. High school enrollment peaked in the fall of 1976 and subsequently has experienced small decreases each year, Bell said. Further reductions in enrollment in grades 9 through 12 are expected throughout most of the 1980s.

Enrollment in institutions of higher education reached an all-time high of more than 12.4 million in the fall of 1982 and enrollment this fall is expected to be close to that number. College-age population is expected to decline through the rest of this decade though remaining relatively high due to increased attendance of older students, part-time students, women and minority groups.

About 2.4 million elementary and secondary school teachers will be engaged in classroom instruction this fall. This represents a small reduction from the number of teachers employed a year ago. Minor decreases at both the elementary and secondary school levels are anticipated, Bell said, while the number of instructional staff members at the college level is expected to hold steady at about 870,000.

More Discipline, Homework

Poll Shows Public Backs Tough Stand In Schools

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Americans feel requirements for promoting students should be tougher and teachers should give youngsters an educational boost by assigning more homework, according to a Gallup Poll.

The report on American attitudes toward public education will appear in the September issue of the Phi Delta Kappan, a professional journal published by Indiana University.

The poll of 1,540 people aged 18 and older indicated that most Americans agree with the recommendations of President Reagan's National Commission on Excellence in Education.

About three-fourths of those polled said they favored promoting children from grade to grade only if they can pass tests, while 20 percent were opposed.

The respondents also said they would like to see more math, English, science, U.S. history and government in high school and that students who plan to attend college should be required to take a year of foreign language.

The importance of attending college got a higher rating this year than five years ago. According to the poll, 58 percent said it was very important while 31 percent it was fairly important. In 1978, the figures were 36 percent and 46 percent, respectively.

Although the public is not yet convinced the school year should be lengthened from 180 to 210 days, the poll indicated a trend in that direction. In the 1982 poll, 37 percent favored lengthening the school year while 53 percent opposed it. In this year's poll, 40 percent were for and 49 percent against the idea.

This year's survey showed 61 percent of those polled favored more homework for grade schoolers, and 65 percent said high school students were not required to work hard enough. That was up from 49 percent and 54 percent respectively in 1975.

The pollsters said the public perceives four major problems in local schools: discipline, drug use, poor educational standards and lack of proper financial support.

Respondents' attitudes about educational quality indicated Americans think that schools are on the decline. Thirty-one percent said their local schools deserved an A or B rating and 20 percent gave them a D or F rating. In 1974, the figures were 31 percent and 11 percent.

Fifty-eight percent said they were willing to pay more taxes to "raise educational standards throughout the nation," but only 38 percent said they would vote to raise taxes.

The pollsters also discovered that fewer parents want their children to be teachers in public schools. In 1969, 75 percent would have encouraged a teaching career while 15 percent would have discouraged it. The recent poll shows that 45 percent would like their children to become public school teachers and 33 percent would be opposed.

Reasons for the opposition included low pay, discipline problems, lack of prestige and lack of reward from teaching. Those favoring the career cited the challenge, teaching's contribution to society and positive influence on children.

While 42 percent said teacher salaries are about right, 47 percent said they were too low and 11 percent said they were too high.

Merit pay to reward good teachers was favored by nearly two to one.

Tests Show Tar Heel Mother Will Have Quints

TABERNACLE, N.C. (UPI) — Kathy Small says she was surprised when doctors told her she was pregnant late last year because she had an operation eight years ago to prevent her from becoming pregnant again.

But she was shocked last Friday when an ultra-sound scan revealed she was carrying five babies.

"I was just expecting triplets," said Mrs. Small, 32. "When the doctor checked the test and it showed up five, I just cried."

Her husband, Tim, 27, said he was also stunned by the news.

"I'm happy, I'm tickled," he said.

If all goes well, the quintuplets will be the first born in North Carolina since the state began keeping records of multiple births in 1948, according to the state center for health statistics.

The federal government no longer keeps statistics on multiple births, but one set of quintuplets was born in 1977, the last year records were kept. The preceding year, there were four sets born.

Mrs. Small said she has never taken fertility drugs, which increase the chance of multiple births. According to the World Book Encyclopedia, the chance of quintuplets is 1 in 85 million births when those drugs are not used.

Mrs. Small, who has three sons from a previous marriage, first learned she was pregnant last November. This spring, she was told to expect triplets, but the tests conducted earlier this month indicated she is carrying three girls and two boys, each weighing four to five pounds.

Doctors originally predicted she would deliver July 24, but later changed the date to Aug. 24 and are now predicting Sept. 14.

Mrs. Small, who normally weighs 100 pounds, has gained 112 pounds during her pregnancy. She said her doctor has told her she can have a natural childbirth and wants her to carry the babies as long as possible so their lungs can develop fully.

The Smalls, who have been married almost a year, live in a three-bedroom mobile home in Tabernacle, a small community located midway between Asheboro and Lexington.

Mrs. Small worked as a housekeeper in High Point until she became pregnant. Her husband recently quit his job as an upholsterer at a furniture factory.

"I felt like I needed to be at home," he said.

Although the couple is concerned about the cost of raising quintuplets, Small said, "Just so long as they're healthy, I don't care.

"There'll be some expenses. But if the Lord wanted us to have them, there'll be a way to take care of them," he said.

The couple has selected names for the babies, but they sometimes forget them.

"We've got it written down," Small said. "You know this ain't going to be confusing. We can't even remember their names."

No Safety Violations By Train

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

The Amtrak Silver Meteor, which officials are now calling the "rogue train," was involved in its fourth accident in three days Friday while returning from New York to Miami.

Officials say misfortune, and not safety violations, appeared to be behind the accidents, which left two people dead and 21 people injured.

On its northbound run Wednesday night, the train struck and killed a woman in Georgia, then crashed into a pickup truck 16 miles down the track in South Carolina. A few hours later, the train hit a tractor-trailer truck in Rowland in eastern North Carolina.

Early Friday morning on its return trip to Miami, the train hit a car in the eastern North Carolina town of Kenly, killing the driver of the car.

"The rogue train, as we're calling it, had an unprecedented number of accidents, but as far as anyone knows, the crew committed no safety violations," Ira Furman of the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington said Friday. "There seems to be just a lot of misfortune involved in the accidents."

Furman said two officials from the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating the accidents.

"In no way was Amtrak or Seaboard (System Railroad, which in charge of track maintenance) responsible for any of these accidents," Black said. "There were no safety problems on our part and this whole thing is unprecedented. Nothing like this has ever happened to us before."

The 18-car train carrying 413 passengers struck Mamie Anderson, 57, of Savannah, Ga., about 7:40 p.m. Wednesday while she was fishing from a railroad trestle. The train was delayed 77 minutes. Two hours later, the train plowed into an abandoned truck in Ridgeland, S.C., causing a 25-minute delay.

After changing crews in Florence, S.C., the ill-fated train struck a disabled tractor-trailer in Rowland at 1:10 a.m. Thursday and derailed, injuring 21 passengers. The injured were treated at local hospitals for minor injuries. One St. Petersburg woman was hospitalized.

Passengers who wanted to continue the trip were loaded onto buses and taken to Washington, where they boarded other Amtrak trains for the trip to New York.

Early Friday morning on the return leg of the trip, the Silver Meteor hit a car, killing the driver of the car, Walter Earl Blackmon Jr. of Henderson. The accident occurred at 2:25 a.m. when Blackmon apparently tried to drive between the lowered crossing barriers.

Furman said a primary cause of crossing accidents in sparsely populated areas in the South may be attributed to a lack of railroad warning devices and gates. But North Carolina Transportation Department officials said flashing lights and gates were operating at the crossings where the accidents occurred in Rowland and Kenly.

"From what I have been told, these accidents were not caused by a lack of warning," said Ernest Mallard of the state Transporation Department's engineering division. "These were cases where the drivers caused the accidents, not the equipment and not the train."

Black said no charges have been filed in any of the accidents, pending investigations by local authorities.

Defendant Says Green Regularly Stole Tobacco

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Sandy White Jr., a former warehouse manager for Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, claims Green regularly stole tobacco and instructed his employees in tobacco fraud, according to FBI documents revealed Friday.

In a July 29, 1982 conversation with federal agents, White said Green told him he wanted 5,000 pounds of tobacco stolen each year from his North Carolina warehouses, using a "short weighting" method Green later demonstrated.

The hearing was held to decide if White should stand trial for the Dec. 28, 1982, arson of the Clarkton Farmers Exchange, a Clarkton business owned by Howard Franklin Watts, also indicted in the arson. The hearing will resume Monday before a U.S. Magistrate.

Defense attorney William Hart said White's defense team and federal prosecutors agreed that White gould testify against Green concerning tobacco fraud. White had agreed to talk truthfully with federal agents as part of a plea bargain agreement, but federal agents say he did not always tell the truth, thus voiding a promise of immunity from prosecution.

White is scheduled to stand trial on Sept. 19 for the charges, which stem from the FBI's undercover probe of corruption in Columbus and Bladen counties.

Green is awaiting trial on a June 21 state indictment charging him with bribery. He has not been charged in connection with illegal tobacco dealings.

White was quoted as saying he did the "dirty work" for Green, while managing much of Green's farming interests between 1975 and 1977. White told agent Terry Peters of Raleigh that Green regularly stole tobacco when White first went to work for him in 1975, according to FBI memos.

White also allegedly told agents that, on Green's instructions, he used powdered milk to cut down whole cows' milk produced at a dairy farm owned by Green.

According to the FBI memos, White said Green showed employees how to steal or "flake" tobacco from bundles that already were weighed and sold.

White said Green gave him a magnet to place on the weights of the tobacco scales to alter the poundage readings. Then at night, White and other employees would slip into the warehouses and pull 10 pounds of tobacco from each sheaf.

White allegedly told the agents that the stolen tobacco would be given to a local farmer who had a bad crop that year but still had his allotment card, which is a federal license to sell tobacco.

The local farmer would re-sell the stolen tobacco and split the profits with Green, White said.

According to the documents, White also told agents that Green leased tobacco acreage but did not plant tobacco, just to get allotment cards for the stolen tobacco.

White also said he once drove to Las Vegas at Green's request to pick up a briefcase full of silver dollars, according to an FBI memorandum.

PAT REESE

Reporter's Condition Serious

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A newspaper reporter shot in the face during a confrontation with a county mental health director remained in serious condition Saturday while police tried to unravel what happened.

Officials at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center said Pat Reese of The Fayetteville Observer remained in the intensive care unit after surgery for a gunshot wound in the lip and massive facial bone damage. Police said they had not been able to speak to Reese.

Meanwhile, the newspaper reported in Saturday editions that Reese had been involved in a controversy with Cumberland County Mental Health Director Billy Graham director over a tape recording made by the reporter. Graham, 52, was found shot to death in Reese's car outside the mental health center.

The newspaper said Reese had recorded an interview with a mental health center employee concerning alleged wrongdoing within the department.

Reese left that tape at the Myrover-Reese Home for alcoholics, which was named after the 25-year veteran police reporter. When he went back to retrieve it, the tape was gone and later turned up in Graham's possession, the newspaper said.

Graham had had some disagreements with Reese over funds for the home for alcoholics, said Robert Wilson, managing editor. But the reporter didn't cover mental health and the disagreement had nothing to do with his work for the newspaper, Wilson said.

"They had had some disagreements in the past, but nothing to indicate anything like this may happen," Wilson said.

Graham, mental health director for 12 years, had presented Reese with the Citizen of the Year award in 1977 for his work with alcoholics in the community.

An attorney for Reese, James Nance Jr. of Fayetteville, said he wrote letters to Graham to try to recover some property of Reese's, but he refused to specify what that property was. Nance said Graham did not reply to his letters.

However, Graham's attorney, Bobby Dever said there had been a dispute over a tape recording.

Dever said Graham had instructed him to deliver a memo to police if anything happened to him, adding that he would meet with police on Monday.

"I'm just absolutely stunned that something like this could have happened," Dever said. "Nothing was this important. It's such a shock to me either one of these persons was capable of what happened."

Initially, Fayetteville Police Chief Danny Dixon said Graham apparently shot Reese and then turned the gun on himself. Later, however, Dixon said police had no theories on the shootings since Graham was shot twice.

"We'll have to talk to Pat when he comes around to find out what happened," he said.

HOUSTON (AP) — Striking Continental Airlines employees have filed suit in federal court seeking to nullify contracts the company signed with workers hired to replace union machinists.

The suit filed by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers also asks that Continental be forced to negotiate with the union over pay and working conditions.

Unconvinced Legislators Amend Disputed Laws

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Members of the General Assembly corrected problems with two laws they passed during their regular session, but they weren't too happy at being called back by Gov. Jim Hunt for a one-day special session.

"Let's hope they don't find something else we've done bad or else we'll be back here next week," said Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin. "I think it was totally ridiculous we had to come back."

During their brief stay Friday, lawmakers clarified a controversial discovery law to assure the identities of confidential police informants can be protected and closed a loophole in another law making it illegal to sell alcoholic beverages to underage people.

Hunt denied the session was called to allay public fears and argued legislative action was needed to assure police can continue to protect their informants and to avoid undermining his administration's efforts to cut down on drinking by teenagers.

But legislators had mixed reactions about the need for Friday's five-hour session, which was held at an estimated cost of $19,500.

"I didn't think so when I came up here and I haven't seen anything to change my mind," said Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg.

Lawing said he came to Raleigh "because Number One (the governor) said so" and because he took an oath of office to represent his constituents.

Both of the major measures handled during Friday's session passed by lopsided margins in the House and Senate.

The debate was highlighted by charges that lawmakers were brought back because of misinformation spread by law enforcement authorities about the discovery law, which required district attorneys to provide defense lawyers with the substance of any oral statements made by a defendant.

District attorneys said the requirement might have allowed a defendant to determine the identity of an informant, but defense lawyers said it was needed to assure a person's right to a fair trial and access to information proving innocence.

"It is a sad day in this state when we are brought back because the people of North Carolina were misled," said Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville. Watkins pushed through the disclosure requirement but said he backed a compromise because it would allay public fears caused by misinformation spread by district attorneys and law enforcement officials.

The compromise allows prosecutors to withhold statements from informants who will not testify in court if the information does not tend to prove a defendant's innocence.

Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe, who steered the measure through the Senate, said the July law was "a real good political horse to ride and they (opponents) couldn't stand for it to stay in the stable."

District Attorney Michael Easley of Southport said he was not troubled by the blame being heaped on him and his colleagues.

"That's fine," he said. "As long as the law is straightened out, I don't care who they blame it on. We accomplished protection for confidential informants and a little more protection for witnesses.

"There was a real problem," Easley said.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, agreed.

"I think there was a need for it (the session)," he said. "Informants were disturbed. Based on that alone, we needed to come back.

"We're here to represent the public of North Carolina and the public was disturbed. We came and we took care of the public's fears," said Harris, a non-lawyer who became convinced a problem existed after talking with prosecutors and lawyers in his district.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, agreed the session was needed to ease public concerns, but it was "a disturbing precedent" to recall the Legislature because of a controversy sparked by misleading information.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said the problem "was important enough to be here to clarify what we did," he said. "I think a lot of misinformation was disseminated to the public."

Wicker sponsored the second measure sought by Hunt from Friday's session — legislation closing a loophole in the law banning sales of alcohol to underage buyers.

Inmate Seeks Second Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A death-row inmate who confessed to leaving a nurse to die after he raped her, slashed her with a knife and ran over her with a car, will seek a new trial because he was poorly represented, attorneys say.

A motion filed Aug. 2 says John W. Rook, 24, "was denied effective assistance from his counsel at his original trial" three years ago. Rook was scheduled to appear Monday in Wake Superior Court to ask for a new trial.

Rook, a Clayton native, was sentenced to die after he was convicted of killing Ann Marie Roche, 25, of Raleigh. Rook confessed to the crime, saying he beat Miss Roche with a tire iron, slashed her with a knife, raped her and ran over her with his car. Doctors testified it might have been up to 24 hours before she died.

Although Rook is white, attorneys John C. Boger and Steven Winters of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund in New York will plead his case along with Durham attorney David S. Rudolf. Rook was represented at trial by attorneys J. Franklin Jackson and C.D. Hidegerd.

Boger said in a telephone interview that it is not unusual for his organization to defend white clients.

Assistant District Attorney R. Thomas Ford, who will present the state's evidence at the hearing, said the burden of proof for a new trial will be on Rook's attorneys.

"The burden is on the defense to show he didn't have a fair trial ... and that his attorneys did not do an adequate job," Ford said. "We'll be attempting to show that he received a fair trial and that his attorneys did an adequate job."

By The Associated Press

Nebraska, which barely missed winning the last two national championships, has been picked to dethrone Penn State as the king of college football.

In the final 1981 Associated Press poll, Nebraska dropped from fourth to 11th by losing a 22-15 shootout to national champion Clemson in the winner-take-all Orange Bowl. And the Cornhuskers finished third last year despite winning their last 10 games following an early-season 27-24 loss to Penn State, which went on to win its first national crown.

This time, Nebraska received 30 of 51 first-place votes and 976 of a possible 1,020 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters in the AP preseason poll.

The Cornhuskers easily outdistanced Oklahoma and Texas, who waged a close race for the runner-up spot. And Nebraska gets an early chance for revenge in Monday night's inaugural Kickoff Classic against Penn State, which is No. 4 in the preseason poll.

"I guess that's OK," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said when informed of the preseason rankings, "but I don't know if we can be that good. I'm a little bit surprised because I really haven't followed the national scene enough to know who should be rated on top.

"I don't know how good we are. I don't know if anybody knows how good they are right now. I guess when you only have eight starters coming back you're a little uneasy. But our second-teamers played a lot last year, so it's not like we're totally starting from scratch.

"We'll just have to see what happens. Any coach would rather start out down the list a little further — maybe fifth or sixth. This will probably be a little added incentive for Penn State and every team we play — if we're still there."

Oklahoma, which finished 16th a year ago, received 11 first-place votes and 860 points to three first-place ballots and 857 points for Texas, last year's No. 17 team. Fourth-place Penn State received two No. 1 votes and 756 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten are Auburn with two firsts and 749 points, Notre Dame with 617 points, Florida State with one first and 575 points, Southern California with 553 points, Ohio State with 518 points and Michigan with one first and 515 points. The other first-place vote went to Clemson, which did not make the Top Twenty.

The Second Ten consists of North Carolina, LSU, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Iowa, Maryland, Washington, Southern Methodist and UCLA.

Final Countdown Begins For Pirates

East Carolina University's Pirates went through their last heavy workout Saturday and will begin tapering off on Monday as they count down the final week of pre-season prior to their opening game.

The Pirates open the 1983 campaign on Saturday at Tallahassee, Fla., against national ranked powerhouse Florida State, tabbed by some as the best football team in the country. Both AP and UPI rank the Seminoles seventh in their pre-season poll, shown elsewhere on this page.

Coach Ed Emory seemed to be more pleased with the outcome of yesterday's scrimmage than he had been following one this past Sunday.

The first and second offensive and defensive units — and mixtures thereof — went against the scout teams throughout the afternoon. And while the defense appeared to dominate the scrimmage, Emory was pleased with some aspects of the offense.

"We had situation drills to start with, 16 goal line plays for each unit. Then we worked on short and then on long yardage situations. Then we finished off with about two quarters of game situation play. We want to get the kids used to running on and off the field, and getting the punting units on the field."

Emory said he would have to check the video tapes before he could have a total evaluation of the day. "I definitely think it helped us."

The coach said he felt first string quarterback Kevin Ingram had a fine day in the drills. "He's confident and poised."

Emory was also pleased to see second stringer John Williams back on the field following an ankle injury a week ago. "He worked out, but we didn't let him get hit."

The Pirates also protected their first and second unit runnings backs, Earnest Byner, Reggie Branch, Jimmy Walden and Tony Baker. "None of them ran any of the running plays. We did throw some to them, but we didn't put them in the running game."

Emory said he thinks the Pirates are about where he hoped they would be at this point, although there still are some injury problems which are hampering those players' preparations for the season. "We expect to have them back, but they haven't practiced the whole time and that will slow them down. We are so thin depth-wise, we have to stay healthy.

"We've come a long ways, and the kids know what they want. All we'll do this week is rehearse and polish and review. We won't have much contact. This was our 44th practice session so far, and we'll work a couple of more (Sunday). Then, it'll be once a day from here on in."

Emory said he thinks the Pirates are ready to hit someone other than themselves. "We want them to be as prepared as they can be. We want their ready physically, mentally and technically. If we can do this — and be disciplined — I think we can have some fun Saturday.

Price Is Right For Series Lead

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — South African Nick Price has two principal challengers — Hale Irwin and a troublesome hook — going into Sunday's final round of the $500,000 World Series of Golf.

The hook cost him two strokes Saturday, but the young man — who has never won in the United States and has won nothing at all since the 1981 South African Masters — retained a 2-shot lead after Saturday's storm-interrupted third round.

"I've played consistently," said Price, who has led all the way. "My driving is the only thing that has any flaws in it. If I can guard against the hook, I'll be okay.

"I don't really mind being in front all week.

"Hale is playing well, but I'm just going to go with the same plan I've played with all week — play for the pars and hope that a few birdies will fall in there."

The dangerous Irwin, twice a U.S. Open winner and a 2-time runner-up in this event, closed within striking distance of Price, who led by three at the start of the day's play and by four at the turn.

"I did what I wanted to do, put some pressure on him and not let him just run away with it," Irwin said after his 67 put him second alone at 205.

"It was a relatively error-free round. And my only chance tomorrow is to play the same kind of round, not make mistakes and put some early pressure on him."

Play was held up for 2 hours, 15 minutes by a severe afternoon thunderstorm that swept over the 7,173 yard south course at the Firestone Country Club, disrupted the national telecast of the event and delayed the finish until a few minutes before darkness.

Tied for third at 207, four shots back, were Isao Aoki of Japan, Ray Floyd and Mark McCumber. Aoki had a 67, McCumber 68 and Floyd, who lost this event in a playoff last year, 70.

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this title, managed a 69 despite an uncertain and unreliable putter afd led a group at 209, one under par and six back going into the final round of the chase for the $100,000 first prize.

He was tied with Fuzzy Zoeller, Fred Couples and Bobby Clampett. Zoeller also had a 69, while Clampett and Couples matched par 70.

Defending World Series champion Craig Stadler shot a 71 and was well back at 214. Hal Sutton, the PGA title-holder and the year's leading money-winner, and British Open champ Tom Watson were at 211, one over par. Watson had a 71 and Sutton matched par 70. U.S. Open winner Larry Nelson was 69-215.

Price, who blew the 1982 British Open title to Watson, joined the American PGA Tour this season after playing several years on the European circuit.

He had a 3-shot advantage when the day's play started and appeared poised for a runaway when he birdied three of the first-round holes.

He dropped a 15-foot putt on the first hole, 2-putted for birdie-4 on the second, than got a 5-iron shot within eight feet of the flag on the fourth and made the putt.

A hooked drive on the ninth cost him a bogey, however, and he turned in 33.

Another hook off the tee resulted in a bogey on the 14th and, despite his lead, he was struggling. He had to make a 15-footer to save par on the 15th, missed the green with a wedge and bogeyed the 16th, then pulled himself together with a 15-footer bor birdie on the 17th.

The field was reduced to 41 players when Bill Rogers withdrew before the start of the round because of a death in the family.

No. 1 Cornhuskers Take On Penn State

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne says he won't be sure just how good his team is until after it meets defending national champion Penn State Monday night in the inaugural Kickoff Classic.

"I'm in a little quandary as to how good we really are," Osborne said Saturday at Giants Stadium, where the game will be played.

The Cornhuskers were ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press preseason poll, and that prompted Osborne to say, "I would really rather not be No. 1 at this stage."

"The time to be No. 1 is at the end of the season," Osborne said. "You really have to have a great football team to be rated No. 1 early and stay there. The good part is if you're rated No. 1 and keep winning you stay there."

Osborne said he is concerned about what a loss could mean so early in the season.

"The thing that makes me uncomfortable is, you might have a good football team and come out 0-1. You might be good enough to win the national championship, but be behind the 8-ball (after one game)," Osborne added.

"I hope we can be a good team and I honestly don't know how good we are. We'll learn a lot Monday and I hope we can go from there," he said.

The Cornhuskers, who finished third in the final Associated Press poll last year with an 11-1 record, have what may be the most explosive offense in college football this season. Three of their four starters on offense are in the backfield.

Tailback Mike Rozier is a Heisman Trophy candidate after setting a single-season Nebraska record by rushing for 1,689 yards as a junior, wingback Irving Fryar is one of the top receivers in the country and quarterback Turner Gill is a versatile performer who rushed for 497 yards and passed for 1,182 last season.

"To stay in the game we have to play great defense," Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said Saturday. "Playing defense against Nebraska is a no-win situation.

"I used to think if we could get two touchdowns and a field goal we could win any game. I don't feel we could do that against Nebraska," Paterno added.

The Nittany Lions, who won their first national championship with an 11-1 mark last year, have several outstanding players returning on defense, including Scott Radecic, who Paterno says is "one of the great players we've had at linebacker."

Penn State's concern is its offense, which lost quarterback Todd Blackledge and record-setting tailback Curt Warner to the National Football League.

Paterno said he has decided who will replace Blackledge at quarterback, but he won't make an announcement until Sunday. He said he first wants to discuss his decision with Doug Strang and Dan Lonergan, the two juniors who have battled for the job.

Tisdale, Woodard Pace U.S. To Golds

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Wayman Tisdale and Lynette Woodard led the balanced U.S. men's and women's basketball gold medalists to easy victories over Puerto Rico Saturday as they completed play with unbeaten records in the Pan American Games.

Tisdale, a 6-foot-9 All-American from Oklahoma, scored all but six of his 22 points in the second half, powering the U.S. men to a 101-85 romp.

The U.S. men finished the final round with 5-0 record and were 8-0 overall in this tournament.

The women, who posted a 5-0 record, clinched the gold medal Thursday with a 113-33 triumph over Venezuela, while the men won their gold medal Friday night by defeating Brazil 87-79.

Both U.S. teams put six players in double figures Saturday.

Sam Perkins of North Carolina hit 16 points for the U.S. men and was followed by North Carolina teammate Michael Jordan with 13, Fred Reynolds of Texas-El Paso with 11 and Jim Master of Kentucky and Greg Stokes of Iowa with 10 apiece.

Cheryl Miller of Southern California, the No. 1 freshman in women's college basketball last season, and international veteran Denise Curry, a former UCLA standout, hit 18 points each for the women, while Janice Lawrence of Louisiana Tech had 17, Cindy Noble, formerly of Tennessee, collected 13 and Cheryl Cook of Cincinnati had 12.

The men, who improved with each game after rallying from big deficits in their first two contests, pulled away from Puerto Rico early in the second half.

Tisdale, Reynolds and Perkins led the charge, helping the Americans build a 67-56 lead with 11 minutes to play.

Puerto Rico, which lost the 1979 Pan Am title game to the United States, moved to within 69-65 two minutes later. But the Americans then outscored the Puerto Ricans 18-6 in the next 3½ minutes to wrap up the decision. Puerto Rico finished 1-4 in the final round and 4-5 overall.

The women, outscoring their last two opponents by a total of 127 points, rolled into a 58-37 lead at the half against Puerto Rico, which failed to win a game in the wwomen's tournament.

Woodard had 16 of her points in the first 20 minutes, Miller added 14 and Curry 10 to give the U.S. women their huge halftime advantage.

Porter, Thomas Head ECU Hall Selections

Three former athletes and one former coach are to be inducted into the East Carolina Sports Hall of Fame, bringing the number of honorees to 42.

Howard Porter, former basketball coach; Lt. Col. James Thomas, former basketball player; Bill Hill, former wrestler; and Dick Cherry, former football player, will be inducted during halftime ceremonies on September 17 when the Pirates open their home season against Murray State. Game time that evening is 7 p.m.

Originated in 1974, the ECU Sports Hall of Fame honors those individuals who, through their direct participating in ECU athletics, have brought outstanding recognition to themselves and the university. No more than four honorees may be selected each year.

Howard Gerald Porter served as East Carolina's head basketball coach from 1947 to 1959, recording the most games coached and the most wins coached by any basketball coach in ECU history.

Spanning 12 seasons, Porter's teams compiled a 183-101 mark (64%), including the school's best season in 1953-54. That year the team was 23-2, and qualified for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) national championship in Kansas City, Mo. His 1952-53 team, 18-5, also advanced to the NIAI tournament.

Over the 12 seasons, Porter never had a losing season.

Porter holds the distinction of having five of the school's 10 best seasons and can still look to the record books for more than a dozen school records that still stand from his coaching days.

A long-time instructor in the physical education department, Porter is now retired in Greenville.

Lt. Col. James Carl Thomas was called the finest overall basketball player ever at East Carolina by his coach, who joins him in entering the Hall of Fame.

During Thomas' playing days, the Pirates recorded the best four years in ECU history with records of 18-5, 23-2, 16-8 and 18-3 from 1952-56.

A four-year starter, Thomas played in more games than any other player in ECU history, serving as captain of the team and earning all-conference honors. Over his four years, the Pirates were 75-18, winning a record 48 consecutive games in old Memorial Gym, a streak that was snapped at 50 the year following his graduation.

Neither flashy nor a big scorer, Thomas was noted for his ability to make things happen. Defense was his specialty.

Following his graduation, Thomas was commissioned into the Air Force, serving in Korea. He later earned both a master's and Ph.D.

For 14 years, he served as an instructor at the U.S. Air Force Academy, returning to Greenville and ECU in 1980 as head of the ROTC unit on campus, a position he holds today.

William Morris Hill was the finest wrestler in ECU's very successful and colorful wrestling program. Wrestling in the 177-pound class, Hill finished fifth in the NCAA national championships in 1974 and was named All-America, the only time an ECU wrestler has ever earned that honor.

During his four years on the team, from 1970-74, Hill never missed a day of practice and appeared in every tournament and match. Named the outstanding freshman wrestler in 1971, Hill was then named the MVP the next three seasons. He was also named the state's best wrestler as a junior and senior, while serving as team captain.

With an overall record of 122-15-1, Hill captured four Southern Conference titles, four North Carolina Collegiate championships and during his senior season won seven tournament titles.

Following his days on the mat, Hill served as an assistant coach to Hall of Famer Coach John Welborn, then as head coach from 1977-79.

Richard Foley Cherry Jr. rates as one of the finest quarterbacks ever to play at East Carolina, guiding his freshman and sophomore teams to the first two bowl games in ECU history.

Playing for Jack Boone, Cherry was named all-conference three times, all-state in 1953 and honorable mention Little All-America in 1953. It was during the 1952 and 1953 seasons that the Pirates were 6-3-2 and 8-2-0.

In 1953, Cherry threw four touchdown passes in one game, while completing the season with a total of 16. Both set school records that still stand today.

With a broken ankle keeping him out of play in 1954, Cherry returned in 1955 and 1956 to serve as the team's co-captain.

The highlight of his career came in 1953 when he guided ECU to a 34-0 victory over arch-rival Lenoir Rhyne, then coached by Clarence Stasavich, who later replaced Boone at ECU. That was only the secon time the school had beaten Lenoir Rhyne and one of just six wins in 21 tries during the early era of ECU football.

Stankavage Ready To Move Into Starting Role For Heels In 1983

AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — For someone who's been a backup for much of his career, University of North Carolina quarterback Scott Stankavage has experienced enough to assume the starter's role in 1983.

Relegated to No. 2 status behind Rod Elkins for three years, Stankavage eventually got more playing time because Elkins was always hurt. For three years of emergency service, Stankavage has completed 50.4 percent of his passes for 1,642 yards and 14 touchdowns, 11 of which came last year.

In 1981, Stankavage replaced Elkins following an injury in the South Carolina game. He led the Tar Heels to victory in the following game against Maryland before succumbing to pressure in the Clemson contest, a 10-8 loss which he allowed was due to a lack of concentration.

"I really didn't focus on what I had to do to win the football game," Stankavage said, adding that the next weeks provided a personal challenge.

"To come back from losing my job and saying to coach (Dick) Crum I want a chance to get my job back, just being able to come back from that has meant a lot to me."

Getting over the criticism was the worst part, Crum said.

"The press was kinda on his case. I just moved him off to one side for a little bit and I told him I just wanted him to settle down and get his mind back together again," he said. "What he went through on the field that day was as emotional an experience as any guy has ever had in a college football game. You've got to admire him for coming back."

In 1982, Stankavage was called on again to replace Elkins after he ripped up a knee in the rout of Army. He led North Carolina to two more victories before Elkins returned against Maryland in a 31-24 loss. The next week was the end of Elkins' career when the knee went out again at Clemson. The game of musical quarterbacks was over.

"I don't resent that or feel badly about that at all," Stankavage said. "That's the way our situation's set up. It's a senior-led football team. He was a senior and I wanted the best for him."

He salvaged not only his year but the team's campaign by engineering the 26-10 victory over Texas in the Sun Bowl.

"That was one of the greatest wins I've ever been a part of and I think that's one of the best games I've ever played and yet I was three for 11," Stankavage said.

Now, there's no one ahead of the Furlong, Pa., native. He's Crum's choice for No. 1, although he isn't the unanimous selection of the fans who sit in Kenan Stadium.

"What I care about is how the team feels. We're kind of our own family here," Stankavage said. "No one else really knows what it's like down on the field and what we go through. The players are the people who I want to have confidence in me."

Certainly, Crum has faith in him as he seeks to improve on last year's 8-4 roller coaster.

"I think this is the first time I've had a quarterback who was a non-starter with as much time," Crum said. "I think the pressure situations he had to operate in were tough on him then, but are good for him now.

"He's been to the valley," he added. "He's been as low as you can get. And he's come back."

Pisciotta Pitches U.S. To LL World Series Championship

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Six-footer Marc Pisciotta handcuffed the Dominican Republic on six hits Saturday, as 14 boys from Marietta, Ga., gave the United States its second straight Little League World Series title with a 3-1 victory.

The crowd, estimated at a series record 40,000, chanted "U-S-A" as the slick-fielding Georgians became their state's first Little League world champion.

Their victory, coupled with a triumph by a team from Kirkland, Wash., last year, marked the first time teams from the U.S. have won consecutive Little League titles since 1966.Taiwan had won the championship here five years in a row before Kirkland's victory.

The Dominican Republic team, from Barahona, scored its lone run in the sixth and final inning when Ramon Mateo reached on a fielder's choice and scored on a double by Rafael Santana, the only extra-base hit allowed by Pisciotta.

Georgia broke on top 1-0 in the third inning on singles by Johnny Adkins, Adam Olmstead and Pisciotta. Olmstead scored from third on a wild pitch by 4-foot-11 loser Idelfonso Cuello, making it 2-0.

Georgia upped its lead to 3-0 in the fourth. With two outs, David Gernatt reached on shortstop Ruddy Beltre's throwing error. Gernatt went to second on Joe Hutchinson's bunt single and scored on Adkin's hit to right.

League President Creighton-Hale estimated the attendance at a series record 40,000, although there was no official count. Lamade Stadium has 10,000 seats, but thousands of fans sat on a high, grassy hill beyond the outfield wall.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Times and customs change, even in basketball.

Julius Erving, the celebrated "Dr. J." of the NBA champion Philadelphia 76ers, recalls one big change during his time as a player.

"I remember in high school one day a guard threw me a leading lob pass near the basket," he said. "I think it was accidental.

Mothers 'Participate' Actively In Althoff Football Program

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Mothers have a role in the football program at Althoff Senior High School, and it's not just sitting on the sidelines.

They ran, they kicked, they passed and they sweated.

Thirty-six women, many of them mothers of Coach Glenn Schott's players, spent three hours on the football field learning about the grueling game a few days before their sons were to start practice.

"It's so much more difficult than I thought it would be," said Ginger Miller, whose son, John, plays tackle. "Everybody has a certain responsibility and you have to remember it. You have to make split decisions."

Schott said he wanted to hold the clinic to get the mothers involved in the program, teach them about the sport and relieve the fear and apprehension that many mothers have about their sons playing football.

And besides, he said, mothers are important in their sons' development as football players.

After they moved out of the school's air-conditioned cafeteria and onto the football field, it didn't take the mothers long to figure out why their sons would be coming home from practice exhausted.

"Run!" yelled the coaches. "We run to football practice!"

Schott lined the mothers up for calisthenics. He led them in jumping jacks, toe touches, push-ups, sit-ups, hurdle stretches and other stretching exercises. Then the women were divided into groups according to their sons' positions, and practiced various drills before getting a chance to kick the football through the goal posts.

After nearly an hour, the mothers returned to the cafeteria for cold drinks and sandwiches. Some of their muscles were stiff.

"If we can't move tomorrow, will you carry us to work?" asked Suzie Fizer.

Schott said he was surprised how willing the mothers were to participate and said he would like to make the clinic an annual event.

"I think they had fun," he said. "They learned a little bit about football and will be able to watch the game with a little more enthusiasm about what is going on."

Wiley Ends String, Wins Pan Am 400m

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Cliff Wiley of Baltimore ended a string of personal disappointments Saturday, winning the men's 400 meters at the IX Pan American Games, where a little-known stimulant cost a Dominican sprinter his silver medal.

Wiley is an outspoken critic of athletes who use steroids and other drugs, yet he, too, has had trouble because of the Pan Am doping crackdown. He suffers from asthma and, he said, "with the (drug) ban, there's nothing I can take."

But his victory provided the only bright light of a cloudy day in track and field for the United States — the lone gold medal and one of just three medals in all.

The biggest drug bust in the history of international sports now has reached 16 athletes here. Juan Nunez, who finished second in the men's 100-meter dash, was found to be using Fencamfamine, the Pan American Sports Organization said.

As with 14 other athletes cited earlier in testing for banned substances, Nunez's name and medical report were turned over to the Dominican Republic Olympic committee and international track authorities for possible sanctions.

There was no official word that Nunez had been stripped of his silver medal, but Pan Am officials said in announcing other names of drug-using athletes that any medalists caught by the sophisticated tests would lose their awards.

On the next-to-last day of competition at the games, the U.S. team added to its big lead in the medals count. It officially picked up the gold medals in men's and women's basketball, as both U.S. teams beat Puerto Rico to finish their tournaments unbeaten.

So far, the United States has won a total of 120 gold medals and 249 in all. It stands a good chance of topping the records it set in both categories in 1979 — 127 gold medals and 264 total.

The American total is guaranteed to increase substantially Sunday, with medals awarded in boxing. Seven U.S. boxers are in the championship bouts, and all 11 members of the team are assured of at least bronze medals for having reached the semifinals.

But it was bad news for the Americans at Olympic Stadium. Besides the gold for Wiley, 28, the best the United States could go in the five other finals was a pair of bronze medals — for Lorna Griffin in the women's discus and Easter Gabriel in the women's 400. Canada's Charmaine Crooks won the 400 in 51.49, a meet record, while Maria Betancourt of Cuba took the discus with a toss of 198 feet.

Dave Steen of Canada won the decathlon with 7,958 points. Between injuiries that kept U.S. decathletes Gary Bestian and John Crist out of competition and dropouts by other competitors along the way, there were just three men who completed all 10 events — Steen and Venezuelans Freddy Aberdeen and Douglas Fernandez.

Cuba's Jorge Reyna won the triple jump at 55-11¼, and Mexico's Raul Gonzalez won the 50-kilometer walk in 4:00.45. The walk and the decathlon 1,500 meters finished at the same time, and it was a strange sight, with Steen, Fernandez and Aberdeen charging around the inside lanes while the walkers moved herky-jerky on the outside of the track.

Meanwhile, one U.S. athlete who had been a top hope for a gold medal, steeplechaser Henry Marsh, said a communications mixup caused him to miss the games. But U.S. track coach John Randolph called Marsh's statement "rubbish."

Wiley charged through the final 100 meters, pulling away from Cuba's Lazaro Martinez to win the 400 gold in 45.02 seconds. The other U.S. runner, James Rolle, who led at the top of the stretch, faded to fourth behind Brazil's Gerson Andrade.

It was a sweet victory for the speester, who has been hindered this year by asthma, "and with the (drug) ban, there's nothing I can take."

"Coming out of the last turn, I just reached down and got it," he said. "It's been a tough year for me. I thought I would be in the Pan Am Games, the World Championships and win the TAC meet."

Wiley finished sixth in The Athletic Congress national championships in Indianapolis last June, and didn't make the U.S. team for the World Championships of Track and Field in Helsinki earlier this month. The third time, on Saturday in Caracas, proved to be the charm.

"I'm still one of the top 400-meter runners in the world," said Wiley. "I wasn't in the world championships and people began to doubt me. I don't know why."

In basketball, the United States had clinched the golds earlier this week, but had to wait for Saturday's close of the tournament to make it official. Both teams closed with blowouts.

The U.S. women whipped Puerto Rico 112-65, as Lynette Woodard of Wichita, Kansas, scored 20 points. Cheryl Miller of Southern California and former UCLA star Denise Curry added 18 points apiece, and Janice Lawrence of Louisiana Tech had 17 for the Americans, who had clinched the championship Thursday.

In the men's tournament, the United States beat Puerto Rico 101-85, with Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma scoring 22 points and the North Carolina duo of Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan adding 16 and 13 points, respectively. An 87-79 victory over Brazil on Friday had clinched the gold for the U.S. men, their eighth championship in nine Pan Am Games.

The U.S. women's team finished 5-0, while the men were 8-0.

The drug found in Nunez's system, Fencanfamine, was developed in Europe but apparently is not well known in the rest of the world. U.S. doctors said they were unfamiliar with the drug, and two South American doctors said Saturday it was not generally available in the Western Hemisphere.

The South American doctors said Fencamfamine is similar to amphetamines. It stimulates the central nervous system, they said, but they could not say if it was used in any medicines, such as cough and cold remedies.

The doping crackdown started last Monday, when officials announced that four weightlifters had been found with anabolic steroids in their systems. One of them, Cuba's Daniel Nunez, had set a world record in the snatch while sweeping the three gold medals in the 132-pound class, but officials said the record wouldn't count and the championship would stand vacant.

Steroids were the drug found in the first 12 athletes named — 11 weightlifters, including U.S. gold medalisst Jeff Michels of Chicago, and a Chilean cyclist.

On Friday, the names of three more athletes were released, with officials saying they had tested positive for a stimulant, Ephedrine. Cuban fencer Mario Wilson and Dominican shot putter Juan de la Cruz had their names sent to nationasl and international sports authorities for review. But officials said the third athlete, Cuban volleyball player Lazaro Beltran, apparently had taken the drug to treat a cough, and therefore would not be punished.

Marsh, home in Salt Lake City, said he had wanted to run the 3,000 steeplechase in Caracas but was blocked by a communications snafu.

Competing at the World Track and Field Championships in Helsinki earlier this month, Marsh tripped over the final barrier in his race and tumbled to the track. "The next day, my knee had swollen up and I couldn't run," he told The Associated Press.

Officials replaced him on the U.S. team for the Pan Am Games, but Marsh recovered well enough to set an American record of 8 minutes, 12.37 seconds for his event in a meet at Berlin five days after his spill in Helsinki.

By then, however, his roster spot was gone and when he returned home he heard a story saying he had not competed because of transportation problems.

"That's just not true," he said. "I would have gladly gone and run. I was told that I had been replaced because of the injury."

Randolph, however, contradicted the steeplechaser.

"Rubbish," the coach said. "The tickets were arranged."

The Pan Am steeplechase was won by Emilo Ulloa of Chile with a time of 8:57.62.

Fabi Takes Pole, Again

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — High-flying Teo Fabi turned another fast lap on Riverside International Raceway's sizzling road circuit Saturday and nailed down the pole position for the Los Angeles Times-Budweiser 500 Indy-car race.

Fabi, who fought off a mild flu bug overnight, ignored the 100-degree temperatures at the desert race course to wrap up his fourth pole position of the season and first on a road course.

The 5-foot-4 Italian, who sat on the provisional pole after the opening session of time trials Friday, drove his Skoal-sponsored March-Cosworth racer to a fast lap of 130.712 mph Saturday.

That was better than the 129.570 he turned in Friday, but still short of Kevin Cogan's track qualifying record of 131.467, set last year.

The 28-year-old Fabi, who earlier this year stunned the racing world by winning the pole for the Indianapolis 500 with a record run, gained his first major professional victory in the Pocono 500 two weeks ago. He will head a 26-car field for Sunday's 500-kilometer — 313.5-mile — race around the 3.3-mile, nine-turn circuit. The race, which will be televised live on ESPN, will start at 4:30 p.m. EDT.

Mario Andretti, who won the pole and ended a losing skein of more than two years last month at Road America in the last Indy-car road racing event, was next at 129.472 in a Lola T-700-Cosworth, followed by Bobby Rahal at 129.048 in a March-Cosworth.

Rick Mears, the two-time defending Indy-car season champion and winner of the last two Indy-car races here, failed to better his first-day speed and slipped back from fifth place to the ninth starting spot.

Fabi, despite feeling under the weather Friday, had predicted he would go faster on the second day of time trials.

"The car now is reasonable," said Fabi, who was not happy with the handling of the green and white March in the earlier qualifying. "We made a few changes on the car and it's getting quicker all the time."

A year ago only four cars were running at the finish of this race, with the heat taking its toll on both drivers and equipment. Almost everyone involved in the CART-PPG Indy-Car World Series agrees that 500 kilometers in the desert heat is too much.

"This race is too long," Fabi said. "The heat doesn't bother me so much, but it is very hot for the drivers and the equipment.

"It's really a matter of survival, not racing, said Cogan, who will start seventh on the grid. "If the race was 150 or even 200 miles, you'd see guys going hard right from the start. With the heat and the race this long, most everybody just tries to take it easy the first 200 miles to save themselves and the car."

Rahal, who has had a lot of success as a sports car endurance racer, said, "In that kind of racing, you almost never see a driver going 300 miles in one stint. We have co-drivers in most endurance races.

Heimueller Settles For Five-Hit Win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Gorman Heimueller walked the first batter on four pitches, but he made quick work of just about everybody else in pitching the Oakland A's over the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 on a five-hitter Saturday.

Heimueller, 3-3, walked Paul Molitor to lead off the game and then allowed single runs in the second and third innings. But the rookie left-hander breezed after the fourth, allowing only two singles in finishing the complete game with a mere 83 pitches to lead the A's to their second straight victory over the Brewers.

"I just threw them a lot of off-speed stuff," said Heimueller, who throws both a slider and a screwball. "I've seen Tommy John do it so many times when I was younger, so why shouldn't I be able to do it? If I stay ahead of the hitters and keep the ball in the park, I'll take my chances."

"Anybody who gets it over and gets ahead of the hitter is going to be effective," said Kuenn. "That's the name of the pitching game — get ahead of the hitters."

Heimueller was helped by a three-run first inning for Oakland, two of the runs scoring on Garry Hancock's two-out single. Hancock broke an 0-for-26 slump with a single Friday night and Saturday's hit helped him get back on track.

"Garry is a guy who can figure very importantly in our plans," said A's Manager Steve Boros. "He has a history of getting a few at-bats, not doing too much, and then sitting down on the bench. But we've got to get him over that hump. Though there's no sense sitting him down here."

Hancock, who came to the A's from Boston with Carney Lansford in an off-season trade for Tony Armas, appreciates the management's support.

"He (Boros) is not down on me, and if he's not down on me I shouldn't be down on myself," said Hancock, who is still batting .270 despite his recent slump. "If Id've swung the bat today like I've been swinging it the last two weeks, that single would've been a grounder to second. I've been trying to drive the ball too much. This time I just went with the pitch."

Rickey Henderson led off the Oakland first with a single and Mike Davis walked. Both runners moved up on a double steal and Mike Heath grounded out to score Henderson. After Davey Lopes walked and stole second, Hancock drilled a two-out single to left to give the A's a 3-0 lead against Chuck Porter, 6-6.

Ben Oglivie's RBI single in the second made it 3-1 and Charlie Moore singled in another Milwaukee run in the third.

Toronto .....7
Detroit .....4

DETROIT (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays already have exceeded Manager Bobby Cox's expectations, yet he hopes the best is still to come.

Saturday, the Blue Jays and the Detroit Tigers were locked in a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning when Rance Mulliniks belted a two-run homer and Lloyd Moseby homered on the next pitch as Toronto went on to a 7-4 victory.

"We're fun to watch," Cox said. "We've got power, we've got speed and we do a lot of crazy things. This was just a good baseball game. Detroit played great; we played great."

"These guys are just 100 percent determination," Cox said. "That's what they're giving me every day. If they lose a tough one — it happens. But it's OK as long as they give their best effort. They're up. They stay up."

Cox admitted, however, that the Blue Jays — who had lost in extra innings the previous three nights — still face an uphill struggle to gain ground in the American League East.

"We've got to play like heck now," Cox said. "Especially after losing those three ballgames before today. We had a chance to bury some people, but just didn't do it."

Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez, 8-6, came on to start the eighth, replacing starter Glenn Abbott, who was claimed on waivers from Seattle this week.

Dave Collins, who had four hits, singled with one out and then rode home on Mulliniks' sixth homer of the season. Moseby then belted the next pitch for his 17th homer.

Alexander, 1-8, had lost 15 of his previous 16 decisions and had not won since he pitched for the New York Yankees last September. The Blue Jays acquired him from New York in July, and he had made nine previous starts for Toronto, losing six of them.

Alexander left in the eighth after Alan Trammell drilled his first pitch of the inning for his 12th homer. Reliever Joey McLaughlin took over and allowed another run on singles by Larry Herndon and Enos Cabell and a wild pitch. Dave Geisel pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Toronto added two insurance runs in the ninth as Alfredo Griffin tripled off Dave Gumpert and Collins then singled off Howard Bailey. Collins stole second and scored on Moseby's single.

The Blue Jays got two runs in the first on singles by Collins, Mulliniks and Willie Upshaw and Cliff Johnson's sacrifice fly.

Tom Brookens hit his fifth home run in the third to pull Detroit within 2-1 and Glenn Wilson tied it in the fifth with his 11th home run.

Daniel, Bradley Draw Three-Way LPGA Tie

DENVER (AP) — Beth Daniel and Pat Bradley fired sub-par rounds Saturday and drew into a three-way tie for the lead alongside Alice Ritzman after 54 holes of the Columbia Savings LPGA Classic at Columbine Country Club.

Bradley, who started the day 4 shots off the lead, carded a steady 2-under-par 70, while Daniel, the defending champion, had a 71.

Ritzman, a non-winner in six seasons on the women's pro golf tour, was the first-and second-round leader after a pair of 68s.

She struggled Saturday, but was even-par until she bogeyed the 11th hole and fell into a tie for the lead with Daniel. Daniel surrendered the lead momentarily after encountering sand trouble at 17 and taking bogey, but Ritzman gave it back with a bogey on 18 when her approach shot became embedded in a bunker and she needed two putts to get down after blasting within 10 feet.

Ritzman finished with a 2-over 74. The three leaders were tied at 6-under-par 210 heading into Sunday's final round. Just one shot back were veterans Kathy Whitworth and Jane Blalock. Whitworth had a 72 and Blalock a 69.

"I'm glad it's over," said Ritzman, 31, a Montana native who now lives in Phoenix, Ariz. "I really didn't hit it very good. I was hitting my iron shots thin and I wasn't in position very many times to make birdie.

"I feel very fortunate to play the way I did and still be tied for the lead."

Ritzman, who had only one bogey her first two rounds, had three on Saturday. She got her only birdie at No. 6, hitting a sand wedge to five feet and making the putt.

On 7, however, she missed the green, chipped long and two-putted for her first bogey. She got the next at 11, bunkering her approach shot and two-putting from five feet, and took her final bogey at 18.

Bradley, who has always played well here but has never won this tournament, felt this could be her year. "I'm hitting the ball really well and making some putts," she said.

Dodgers Trim Braves Lead With Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pedro Guerrero drilled a three-run homer and drove in four runs to back Rick Honeycutt's five-hit pitching as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 6-1 Saturday night.

Guerrero, who has six hits in his last eight at-bats, also had a triple and a single as the Dodgers won their 10th game in their last 11 outings. They are also 10-1 against the Phillies this season.

Honeycutt won his second second straight game, both against Philadelphia, since being acquired from Texas August 19. He struck out five, walked two and retired 19 Phillies on groundouts.

The Dodgers jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the fourth when Guerrero singled and went to third on Ken Landreaux's double. Mike Marshall delivered an RBI single and Landreaux scored as Greg Brock grounded into a double play.

After the Phillies made it 2-1 in the fourth on an RBI grounder by Bo Diaz, the Dodgers came back in the sixth when Dusty Baker singled and scored on Guerrero's triple.

In the seventh, Steve Sax singled with one out and moved to second on Bill Russell's groundout. Reliever Ron Reed walked Baker and Guerrero then belted his 25th home run of the season.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lee Tunnell pitched a five-hitter, allowing only one hit after the second inning, and Bill Madlock belted a two-run homer as the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Atlanta Braves 2-0 Saturday night.

The victory, coupled with a 6-1 victory by Los Angeles over Philadelphia, gave the Pirates a one-game lead over the Phillies in the National League East. The Braves saw their lead in the NL West drop to one-half game over the Dodgers.

Tunnell, 7-5, struck out a career-high eight and walked three in pitching his first major-league shutout. After working out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the second inning, he retired 17 of the next 18 batters, allowing just a fifth-inning single by Randy Johnson.

The Pirates scored in the third against Ken Dayley, 4-4, when Lee Lacy doubled with one out and Madlock followed an out later with his 12th homer of the season.

Tunnell did not allow another hit after Johnson's single until the eighth when pinch hitter Gerald Perry singled.

"It's a 25-man game," said McGee. "I got the opportunity tonight and it worked out for the best."

It was the 15th save for Sutter, who relieved winner Dave Rucker, 5-1, after starter Joaquin Andujar stiffened up following the long delay.

"I never gave up. I tried to do my best," said Andujar. "But I'm sorry I tried to work that one inning after the rain. I got tight in the shoulder."

With one out in the eighth, Smith doubled off Ted Power for the Cardinals' third hit of the game. Andy Van Slyke then walked and, after George Hendrick struck out, Dane Iorg walked to load the bases.

"I'm only human and we all make mistakes," Scherrer said. "I'm going home and hide in the closet. If there wasn't a tomorrow, this would be a real bad day."

Cincinnati starter Bruce Berenyi held St. Louis to two hits over five innings before the rain delay. Power took over after the game resumed.

Australia II, Victory '83 To Battle For America's Cup Foreign Entry

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — With the keel battle finally over, Australia II and Victory '83 of Britain begin a final series of races Sunday to determine which 12-meter foreign yacht will be this year's challenger for the America's Cup.

The white-hulled Australian vessel, with its radical winged-keel design, is the favorite to win the best-of-seven foreign finals on Rhode Island Sound. It has defeated Victory '83 seven of the nine times they met this summer, while dominating the foreign field with an overall 44-5 record.

The top foreign challenger will meet an American defender in a best-of-seven final series beginning Sept. 13.

"We've wasted a lot of time and energy fighting over this keel design and it will be good to get the boats back in the water and do our competing there," Warren Jones, director of the Australia II syndicate, said Friday after the New York Yacht Club dropped its protest concerning the innovative design.

Australia II's keel has a weight at the bottom that flares back in a winged design. It gives the boat more stability and allows it to turn faster by helping to better control the flow of water beneath the vessel.

British officials pointed to the 31-18 record Victory '83 compiled this summer — including a victory against Australia II in the semifinals — and said Saturday they were optimistic.

"We've been all very calm and cool, looking at Sunday," said Suzy Pearce, a spokeswoman for the British syndicate. "We have her out today testing some sails, then we'll bring her back, spray her down and see what happens."

The British crew also attached small, temporary wings to the keel of Victory '83 late in the semifinals, but the change did not seem to make a big difference. Officials refused to say whether the British crew will use the wings in the foreign finals.

The Australians spent their last day before the races on land, giving the boat "a bit of spit and polish, making sure everything is absolutely perfect for tomorrow," Australia II spokeswoman Lesleigh Green said. "Everybody is very happy with the boat's performance, so we didn't take it out."

"The crew is raring to go. It's been a long summer for them already," she said, noting the preliminary races started June 18.

Australian boats have won the right to challenge for the sailing world's top prize in every series since 1964, when Sovereign of England was the foreign contender. However, the United States has defeated every foreign boat in the 24 final series held since 1851.

The three American 12-meter yachts have already begun their final series of races. The New York Yacht Club must pick one of the boats — Liberty, Courageous or Defender — by Sept. 8 to defend the Cup.

In the first defender race Saturday, Liberty overcame a 26-second deficit at the start to top Defender by 1 minute, 10 seconds on a shortened 10.9-mile contest.

Liberty skipper Dennis Conner, who successfully defended the Cup in 1980, also guided his new boat to a 1:16 victory in the second race which was ended after two marks.

The major obstacle in Australia II's path this summer has been the insistence of the New York Yacht Club, which administers the races, that it did not conform to the specifications for a 12-meter yacht due to the keel.

After Australia II began to dominate the seven-boat foreign field, the NYYC claimed the design was illegal and asked international yachting authorities to investigate. The protest was made despite the fact the NYYC apparently has never seen the contested keel.

Australian officials cover the bottom of the boat whenever it is raised from the water, and NYYC officials failed to attend the officials' measuring of the yacht earlier this year when the bottom could have been inspected.

No pictures of the design have been released. A controversy erupted earlier this summer when a Canadian frogman was spotted earlier this year trying to take secret pictures of the boat at dockside.

American officials also quietly tried to obtain the keel design from a Dutch testing firm, then tried to show Australia II was partly designed in The Netherlands and not solely in Australia, which would be illegal under Cup rules and grounds for disqualification.

The NYYC backed down Friday, saying a little known 1982 ruling by the International Yacht Racing Union approved the use of a winged-like keel for the 1983 races.

"With these matters resolved we now can all focus on the match itself and may the beter yacht win," the NYYC said in a statement.

Many yachting experts believe the Australian boat, with its design breakthrough and veteran crew led by skipper John Bertrand, has the best chance in decades for a foreign boat to win the Cup.

NYYC officials claim they are not worried.

"I think we'll win it in four," Robert McCullough, chairman of the NYYC's America's Cup committee, said Friday with a laugh. "I'll take 4-1 as a safety factor."

Seattle Seahawk QBs Lead Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jim Zorn and Dave Krieg, battling for the Seattle starting quarterback job, each orchestrated a touchdown drive as the Seahawks beat the San Francisco 49ers 20-6 in their final National Football League preseason game Saturday.

The Seahawks ended the exhibition schedule with a 2-2 record. The 49ers were 1-3, and their offense produced only four touchdowns.

Zorn, who played the first half, completed three passes for 35 yards as Seattle drove for a touchdown which broke a 3-3 tie in the second period. Dan Doornink ran two yards to score, two plays after a pass interference call against the 49ers gave the Seahawks a first down at the San Francisco one-yard line.

Krieg hit Eric Lane on a nine-yard touchdown pass in the third period. He completed two other passes, for 24 and 20 yards, on the scoring drive.

Norm Johnson kicked field goals of 29 and 21 yards for the Seahawks. San Francisco's only points were on Ray Wersching field goals of 30 and 33 yards.

Skins Capitalize On Panther Mistakes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BETHEL — Roanoke's Stacey Wallace, playing his first varsity football game, threw two touchdown passes and ran for another in leading the Redskins to a 26-0 victory over error-prone North Pitt Friday night.

The contest was the opening game of the season for both clubs.

Roanoke Coach Nolan Respess, who admitted last week that he wasn't a believer in the passing game — but had a quarterback who could throw it — said he planned to throw more and more. "We're going to air it out," he vowed after watching Wallace complete seven of 14 passes for 102 yards and the two touchdowns. "He's just a junior and this is the first time he's played."

Wallace and the Redskins scored the first three times they got the ball — all in good field position following North Pitt fumbles. Wallace dashed around right end for the first TD, from five yards out, then passed 35 yards to James Walters for the second score. On the second play of the second period, he tossed it 14 yards to Richard Wilson. Jorge Martinez added two PAT kicks for a 20-0 halftime lead.

Another Panther fumble in the second half led to a four-yard touchdown run by Rick Hines that raised it to the final 26-0 margin.

Oddly enough, it was a game that North Pitt could just have easily have won. The Panthers moved the ball well at times, but were their own worst enemy, fumbling 11 times, and losing six.

In contrast, Roanoke had only two turnovers — both on interceptions against Wallace.

Roanoke was hampered by penalties, collecting 10 for a total of 79 yards. "I'm always disappointed with penalties. I can't fault the guys that much when they are aggressive penalties, but I hate these proceedure penalties and stuff like that," Respess said.

Depsite the penalties, Respess felt his team played well for the first game. "I thought we were fairly well organized. Our defense bent but it didn't break. We have a lot of young players, and seven of the defense played on the junior varsity last year.

"I think the early 20 points took a lot out of them," Respess continued. "If it had been closer, I think it might have been a different game."

North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell didn't agree. "I don't think the kids gave up," he said, "despite the score. They tried to do their best, but we made too many mistakes.

"We have people who are good athletes, but we're lacking in experience. And it's been hard to get people to practice.

I thought we had some success when we didn't make mistakes. We just couldn't sustain anything."

Wallace, who led the Roanoke rushing with 76 yards on 11 carries, got things going quickly after North Pitt fumbled at midfield after just four plays. Wallace ripped off nine yards, scrambling out of the pocket, down to the Panther 42 yard line. Two plays later from the 40, he kept the ball around the left side of the line and raced 35 yards, down to the five. On second down from there, he scored going around right end for a 7-0 lead with just 4:21 gone in the game.

The Redskins quickly got it back just two plays after the kickoff on another fumble at midfield. It took only four plays for them to get in back into the end zone. After Wallace raced 14 yards for a first down at the 35, he passed on the next down to Walters for the score and it was 13-0 with 5:13 still to go in the first period.

Again, after just two plays, North Pitt coughed it up, and Roanoke again took over at the center stripe. This time, however, it took ten plays to get in down the field. After two plays lost two yards, Wallace hit Garrett Baker for a first down and a 13-yard gain. Hines ripped off 12 more to the Panther 27, but two plays lost a yard and a penalty pushed it back five more, making it third and 16. But Wallace kept the ball to the right side and raced 15 yards to make it fourth and one, and North Pitt jumped offsides on the next down, giving the 'Skins a first down at the 13. After two plays lost a yard, Wallace hit Wilson from the 14.

On the play, Wilson was not the primary receiver, but Wallace overthrew both the primary one and a leaping defender and the ball fell into the arms of Wilson, on his knees in the end zone.

The Panthers, helped by a face-masking penalty, quickly moved the ball from their own 37 to the Roanoke 25 before failing to pick up a first down. Roanoke drove back down field to the Panthers 32 before also failing on fourth and two.

The Panthers came back to get a first down at the Redskin 45, but a sack by Jeffrey Morning of Quintin Yarrell stalled the drive.

Early in the second half, Roanoke drove from its own 30 to the Panther 29 before Walter Johnson intercepted Wallace and returned the ball from the two to the 16.

North Pitt didn't give up, however, driving back to the Panther six, where on first and goal, another fumble again ended their hopes. The Panthers got it back at the Redskin 44 after a punt, and moved to the 24 before again fumbling it away.

After again holding, the Panthers got it back on the Roanoke 22 after a bad snap took away the Redskin's punt but this time two quick penalties pushed the ball back to the 32 and the Panthers were unable to recover for a first down.

Roanoke opens its home schedule on Friday, hosting Ayden-Grifton, while North Pitt travels to East Carteret.

Pam Pack Romps, 41-0

WASHINGTON — Shane Manuel and Kenny Holley each scored two touchdowns as Washington High School romped to a 41-0 kicking of Belhaven in the season opener for both football teams Friday night.

Washington used over a dozen running back in the contest, and a total of 67 in the game. "We played a lot of people. We fumbled a lot and we got a lot of penalties," Coach Bing Mitchell said, "but we were pleased with the way things went overall."

Manuel started the scoring less than a minute into the game, returning the first Belhaven punt 64 yards for the score. Ronnie Godley added the PAT for a 7-0 lead with only 53 seconds gone in the game.

Not long afterwards, Washington recovered a Belhaven punt on its own 40, and drove for the second touchdown. Steve Oden got that, on a one-yard plunge with 7:09 showing, but the PAT try failed and it was 13-0.

Twice more during the period, the Pam Pack pushed over scores, both following Belhaven punts. The third score of the frame came on a five-yard by Holley and the other came minutes later on a 54-yard dash. That ran it to 27-0 and it stayed that way the rest of the half.

Following another fumble in the third period, Washington marched to its fifth touchdown. That came on a 29-yard run by Manuel, capping a drive of about 70 yards. The final score came in the opening seconds of the final quarter, following a Belhaven punt. Kenny Pierce scored on a 43-yard dash to the end zone.

Jimmy Waters led a host of Washington runners with 86 yards on just six carries. Holley had four lugs for 69 yards and Pierce carried five times for 66 yards. Manuel picked up 41 yards on five trips and Tyrone Gorham had 32 yards on just three carries. Willie Satchell led Belhaven with 12 lugs for 41 yards.

Washington returns to action on Friday, hosting West Craven, while Belhaven has the week off before facing Jamesville in a non-conference meeting on September 9.

Williamston Rips Perquimans, 22-6

WILLIAMSTON — Al Willingham rushed for two touchdowns and led Williamston to a 22-6 victory over Perquimans County in the opening game of the 1983 football season for both schools.

Willingham, who rushed for 94 yards in the game, scored a total of 14 points, adding one two-point conversion.

Fumbles helped set up three of the game's four touchdowns.

Perquimans scored first, getting its lone touchdown of the game in the first period for a brief 6-0 lead. The touchdown came on fourth down from the five yard line when Teton Reed passed to Virgil Whitehurst. Perquimans had taken over on the Tiger 7-yard-line after recovering a fumble.

Williamston came back to score twice before halftime, both in the second period. First, Willingham scored from five-yards out, climaxing a drive of 47 yards after Weldon Fisher had recovered a Perquimans fumble. A key play in the drive was a 42-yard pass from James Ward to Michael Peele. Rodney Connor kicked the PAT for a 7-6 Williamston lead.

The Tigers added to that quickly, as Larry Brown returned an intercepted pass 60 yards for a second TD. Willingham ran over the extra point, running the score to 15-6 at the half.

It stayed that way until the fourth period, when Gregory Piersall recovered another fumble at the Perquimans 27. Three plays later, Willingham broke away for 21 yards and the final touchdown of the evening. Connor again kicked to end the scoring.

Peele has 78 yards in receptions for the Tigers, who travel to Farmville Central next Friday night.

Fleet power.

Tony Baker and Earnest Byner ran for almost 1,600 yards last year. This year, they're back with a crew of fleet, talented runners right behind them.
But the big, big story is the powerful offensive line averaging over 270 pounds and anchored by the third strongest man in the world... Terry Long.
All together, they add up to fleet power in an exciting ground game that compliments the passing air attack out of the "I" formation. A leading pre-season magazine described the Pirate fleet as "powerful".

Late Touchdowns Lift Rams Over Vikes

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Sophomore Anthony Thompson plowed over from the one-yard line and Bernard Williams returned an interception 60 yards to cap a fourth-quarter rally giving Greene Central a 12-0 victory over Conley in the 1983 premier for both schools.

On second-and-nine at the Conley 25, Steve Mills completed a pass to Leander Maye. But the Vikings lost their second fumble of night, this time at their own 22-yard line.

Greene Central lost five yards on a penalty on second down, but quarterback Elmer Dixon swept right and kept the ball for a 24-yard gain to the Conley three-yard line. Thompson picked up two yards before being stopped.

Dixon attempted to sneak over, but the Vikings' defense held strong. Then Thompson bolted over on the delayed handoff for a 6-0 edge with 5:59 remaining in the game.

After the kickoff, the teams exchanged punts giving Conley the ball on its 48. Williams intercepted the first-down pass and scampered 60 yards untouched to the end zone for a 12-0 score with 2:18 on the clock.

"All day long I felt like we would play some good football tonight," Grantham said. "I can't say I was surprised with the outcome; I was pleased we won. But I thought we would have scored before the fourth quarter. Our timing was not the best in the world."

Thompson carried the ball 14 times for 96 yards for the Rams, while Dixon completed eight of 18 passes for 112 yards. Maye led Conley with 68 yards on 15 carries, while Donald Blackwell ran 13 times for 50 yards.

"Thompson is just a super athlete," Grantham said. "He was the head of the defense most of the night. As time went on, other guys took up the pace.

"On offense, we need Elmer's passing to blend in with the running game a little better. We let him call his own plays, and most of them were pretty good tonight. There was a few here or there, but overall I was really pleased with his performance.

"I don't know that we're any better than they are. We just had some good things happen and got a few breaks."

The first of those breaks came on the opening drive of the game, as Conley drove to the Greene Central 12-yard line before losing the ball when Maye fumbled after catching a Mills pass. Maye had carried the ball eight times in the drive for 48 yards and three first downs before the ball squirted away on the final tackle.

Both coaches felt the momentum shift after the fumble.

"In the opening series we punched the ball down the field on them," Garner said. "We came up empty-handed and just never got over it. We just didn't capitalize on our opportunities."

"If they had scored, it would have been tough," Grantham said. "We've had trouble in the past getting behind and not being able to come back, so I was pretty worried."

After that, neither team until the middle of the second quarter. The Rams received a Conley punt at their own 48-yard line and proceeded to record a pair of first downs on just four plays from scrimmage.

A sweep by Thompson for five yards to the Vikings' 12 set up second down, but Dixon was sacked by Maye for a 10-yard loss. Dixon's third-down pass to Steve Wells was deflected away by Brian Joyner, and John Brown intercepted his final attempt of the drive in the end zone.

Again Conley failed to move the ball and Greene Central took over after returning the punt to the Vikings' 42. Thompson ran left for 14 yards on the first play, then broke two tackles to pick up 18 yards to the Conley 10.

The Rams lost two yards on a broken play. After a time out, Dixon and Bernard Williams collided on the exchange and Joyner recovered the fumble to end another scoring opportunity.

Greene Central opened the second half much in the same fashion as the Vikings opened the first, driving 41 yards to the Conley 24-yard line with a pair of first-down strikes from Dixon. But again the Rams couldn't find the handle, as Dixon fumbled on second-and-five and the Vikes recovered.

This time, Conley's fumble was recovered by Greene Central at the Vikings' 37, but the Rams' drive stalled at the 31.

Both teams suffered as a result of incomplete passes on the next three possessions, as Conley missed a pair of attempts from the Rams' 34 at the start of the fourth quarter to kill a drive.

The two touchdowns by Greene Central put the game out of reach, as Conley failed to drive on the kickoff and the Rams ran out the clock after a punt.

"We were out of position a lot of the time; we only had 10 players on the field several times; we had too many delay of game penalties," Garner said. "What did I find positive in tonight's game: absolutely nothing.

"Our offense is as simple as possible; there were only nine running and three passing plays we used all night. Until we change our attitude and get more aggressive about winning, it's going to be the same old thing."

Greene Central travels to Beddingfield next Friday, while Conley hosts Jones Senior.

Pirates, Phils Top West Leaders

By The Associated Press

The best of the West turned out to be just a feast for the East.

Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, running neck-and-neck for the National League's East Division lead, encountered their counterparts, Atlanta and Los Angeles, Friday night.

The Pirates mauled the Braves 9-1 and the Phillies beat the Dodgers 4-1, leaving the standings unchanged — Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in a virtual flat-footed tie, Atlanta 1½ games ahead of Los Angeles.

Elsewhere in the NL, Montreal routed San Diego 10-4, Cincinnati defeated St. Louis 7-3, San Francisco crushed New York 12-1 and Houston shaded Chicago 1-0.

In Pittsburgh, Larry McWilliams paid another dividend on the trade last year that brought him to the Pirates from the Braves, pitching a five-hitter against his former teammates while the Bucs were belting Pascual Perez, who went the other way in the deal.

"They've given me a chance to pitch over here and I appreciate that," McWilliams said after beating Atlanta for the third time in a row. "Maybe the Braves gave up on me a little too early."

Braves Manager Joe Torre said Perez might have been trying too hard, "because I know it would have meant a lot to him to beat the Pirates. But Mac was great."

McWilliams was 25-23 for Atlanta in four seasons. He's 19-11 with the Pirates, including 13-6 this year.

Pascual is 13-5 for the Braves this year. "The trade helped both teams," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

Tony Pena's three-run homer capped a five-run second inning and rookie Doug Frobel added a two-run single in a three-run fifth.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 1

While McWilliams might have been thinking personally about paying back the Braves, the Phillies were thinking collectively about getting even with Los Angeles, which had beaten them in all nine previous meetings this year.

"We owed 'em a lot; it was embarrassing," said reliever Al Holland, who picked up his 15th save after rookie Kevin Gross six-hit the Dodgers over the first seven innings.

The victory also ended the Phillies' six-game skid, the Dodgers' eight-game winning streak and LA pitcher Fernando Valenzuela's personal three-game winning skein. "We got the monkey off our back," said Phillies Manager Paul Owens.

Reds 7, Cards 3

Cincinnati's Dann Bilardello drove in two runs, the first with a fifth-inning homer, the second with a single in a five-run sixth inning to drop the Cardinals 2½ games out of first in the East and into a tie with Montreal.

In the decisive sixth, Dave Concepcion singled and Dan Driessen doubled and Concepcion scored when second baseman Mike Ramsey threw away Johnny Bench's grounder. Ron Oester singled for the next run, Paul Householder also singled and Bench scored when right fielder David Green bobbled the hit. Bilardello's RBI single and winning pitcher Charlie Puleo's bunt single on a suicide squeeze capped the scoring.

Expos 10, Padres 4

Manny Trillo, making his home debut with the Expos, got a well-deserved ovation from the Olympic Stadium crowd. The Montreal second baseman, obtained from Cleveland in an Aug. 17 trade, drove in four runs with a first-inning single and a three-run double in the seventh.

Tim Raines added three of the Expos' 15 hits, stole two bases to give him a league-high 60, scored three times and drove in two runs. Three of San Diego's runs came on homers by Bobby Brown and Ruppert Jones. Brown's homer gave him a 17-game hitting streak, a club record.

Giants 12, Mets 1

Ex-Met Joel Youngblood got the Giants rolling early in New York with a three-run homer in the first inning and added two more hits and another RBI while Jeff Leonard had four hits drove in five runs, two on a homer.

Ed Lynch, who pitched his first complete game in the majors last weekend in San Francisco, was pounded for five runs in three innings this time while Fred Breining went the route, scattering nine hits.

Astros 1, Cubs 0

Nolan Ryan, who left the game after 2 2-3 innings with a strained groin muscle, Vern Ruhle, whio pitched five innings, and Bill Dawley, who earned his 13th save, combined to limit Chicago to two hits.

Steve Trout also had a two-hitter going until until the bottom of the seventh, when Dickie Thon singled, took second on a grounder and scored on Jose Cruz's single for Houston's lone run. Ryan had one strikeout and has 3,628 for his career, 25 behind Steve Carlton, the all-time major-league leader.

Tully Sets Pan Am Mark After Celebrating Return

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Pole vaulter Mike Tully rode back into the IX Pan American Games without the fanfare surrounding his departure. But there were more headlines when he left again today — positive this time, instead of negative.

Tully set a Pan Am record in the pole vault Friday, adding one more twist to the increasingly complex crackdown on drug abuse at these Western Hemisphere championships.

Late Friday, F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, confirmed that 10 American weightlifters had been tested for drugs at their own request prior to the games.

Eight of the Americans tested positive for steroids, Miller said — but not Jeff Michels, the 243-pounder from Chicago who is the only United States athlete cited so far in the Pan Am drug action.

"The test we conducted was specific for steroids," Miller said. "Michels showed negative. But then the Pan American Games lab tested for testosterone (another form of hormone), and Michels tested positive."

All of the talk of drugs has pulled attention from the athletes during much of the final week of Pan Am competition. But the United States is doing well, and had a splendid medal haul on the 12th day.

In addition to Tully, sprinters Elliott Quow and Randy Givens won gold medals in track. The cycling team won two golds, and the equestrian team added one in Nations Cup competition. Women Sombo wrestlers took home four gold medals. And the U.S. men's basketball team clinched the gold medal with an 87-79 victory over Brazil, with Michael Jordan of North Carolina scoring all of his 16 points in the second half.

Going into the next-to-last day of competition, the United States had a runaway lead in the medals race, with 117 golds and 244 total. Cuba was second with 66 golds — two more than it won in San Juan four years ago — and 145 overall. Canada was third, with 14 golds among its 93 medals, and Venezuela was fourth with 59 medals, 11 gold.

Tully had returned to the United States early Tuesday, along with 11 other members of the American men's track and field team.

Long Games Pain Blue Jays

By The Associated Press

The longer the Toronto Blue Jays play, the more they seem to lose.

Alan Trammell's two-out home run in the bottom of the 10th inning Friday lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over Toronto, which lost in extra innings for the third straight night.

"They've all been exciting lately," said Toronto catcher Ernie Whitt. "Tomorrow is a new day."

In other American League games, Baltimore routed Minnesota 9-0, Boston got by Chicago 3-1, Kansas City hammered Texas 8-3, New York edged California 3-2, Cleveland topped Seattle 4-1 and Oakland beat Milwaukee 4-3.

"I've never hit a bigger home run in my life," Trammell said. "That's an awesome feeling to round the bases and have your teammates lined up waiting for you."

Orioles 9, Twins 0

Baltimore took over the AL East lead as rookie Mike Boddicker, 11-6, hurled a three-hitter. He also took over the AL shutout lead with his fourth of the season.

Boddicker is 9-1 at home this season.

The Orioles' victory, coupled with Milwaukee's loss, moved Baltimore ahead of the Brewers by one-half game.

Al Bumbry and Todd Cruz each drove in three runs as the Orioles had 13 hits.

Two of Bumbry's runs batted in came on a second-inning sacrifice fly with the bases loaded. Right fielder Tom Brunansky caught the ball but collided with center fielder Darrell Brown, allowing two runs to score.

A's 4, Brewers 3

Tony Phillips, who had just fouled off a sacrifice-bunt attempt, came through with a clutch RBI single to trigger a three-run fifth inning.

Moose Haas, 12-3, who had won eight straight games, took the loss. He had not lost since June 10.

Cecil Cooper's 26th home run gave visiting Milwaukee a 1-0 lead in the top of the fifth, but Garry Hancock and Donnie Hill singled to start the Oakland fifth.

Phillips then fouled off a bunt attempt before singling to right, driving in Hancock. Hill also scored on the play when right fielder Charlie Moore overthrew third base, allowing Phillips to reach third.

A's 4, Brewers 3

Tony Phillips, who had just fouled off a sacrifice-bunt attempt, came through with a clutch RBI single to trigger a three-run fifth.

Moose Haas, 12-3, who had won eight straight games, took the loss. He had not lost since June 10.

Cecil Cooper's 26th home run gave visiting Milwaukee a 1-0 lead in the top of the fifth, but Garry Hancock and Donnie Hill singled to start the Oakland fifth.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 1

Bannister, 12-10, had not lost since the All-Star break. He gave up four hits and struck out nine in seven innings in Chicago.

Royals 8, Rangers 3

Willie Aikens and Frank White each drove in a pair of runs during a six-run, sixth-inning rally to carry Kansas City, which sent Texas to its fifth straight loss.

The Royals, playing at home, banged out 15 hits. Aikens went 3-for-3 and drove in three runs while Pat Sheridan had four singles.

Yankees 3, Angels 2

Don Mattingly's leadoff home run in the top of the ninth inning gave New York the lead and reliever Rich Gossage protected it.

Dave Righetti, 14-4, took a four-hitter into the ninth in California, but Ellis Valentine led off with a double. After Steve Lubratich sacrificed, Gossage was summoned.

Geoff Zahn, 8-10, took the loss.

Indians 4, Mariners 1

Rick Sutcliffe, 14-9, pitched his second straight four-hitter and eighth complete game to shut down the Mariners in Seattle.

Cleveland scored twice on sloppy Seattle fielding.

Singles by Toby Harrah, Mike Hargrove and Julio Franco gave the Indians a 1-0 lead in the third and another run scored when second baseman Tony Bernazard threw away Andre Thornton's grounder.

Thornton's 15th homer made it 3-0 in the sixth off Bob Stoddard, 6-14, and the Indians added an unearned run in the eighth.

Games Tell Much To Quarterbacks

By The Associated Press

The final preseason game has told a lot for some of the National Football League's quarterbacks. Some got good news, some got bad news and some are still waiting for any news.

Brian Sipe, who had lost his starting job on the Cleveland Browns to Paul McDonald, made an impressive bid to regain it in the final exhibition contest.

Sipe completed 16 of 22 passes and led the Browns to a 17-point halftime advantage before they held on to beat the Los Angeles Raiders 20-17. Sipe connected with Bobby Jones on a 24-yard touchdown pass with 42 seconds left in the first half to put Cleveland up 20-3. The Raiders scored two second-half touchdowns, a 1-yard run by Greg Pruitt and a 6-yard pass from Marc Wilson to Derrick Ramsey.

In other NFL games Friday night, Atlanta beat Baltimore 10-7, Miami trounced the New York Giants 24-3, Tampa Bay breezed by New England 41-21, Minnesota crushed Denver 34-3 and San Diego defeated the Los Angeles Rams 27-17.

Thursday night Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 10-3.

On the slate for Saturday night were Seattle at San Francisco, Washington at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Detroit, Green Bay at St. Louis, Kansas City at Chicago, the New York Jets at New Orleans and Houston at Dallas.

In addition to Sipe, Dan Marino had a strong game for Miami, Jerry Golsteyn was outstanding for Tampa Bay, and Tommy Kramer and Steve Dils had fine nights for Minnesota. On the weak side was John Elway's debut as a starter for the Broncos.

And, on the still to be decided front is the question of who will start for the New York Giants.

The Parent-Child tournament will be held September 18. A couples Member-Guest event will be held on October 2.

State Looks To The Force

AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The force is not with North Carolina State — not yet.

That force is what new Wolfpack coach Tom Reed calls "dominant force." He says you know you've got it when you can stand back and watch your team dominate the opponent at each position.

"You cannot win a football game unless you have the majority of your football team comprised of a dominant force. That's all there is to it," Reed says.

Reed has divided the Wolfpack, coming off a 6-5 season, into nine separate areas. On defense, the tackles and nose guard make one unit. The other units include outside linebackers, inside linebackers and defensive backs. Offensively, there's the line, running backs, quarterbacks and wide receivers. Kickers make the ninth component.

"If you can't win a football game, you won't have a good season," Reed continued in stating the obvious. "So we're not satisfied with finding the starters. We're satisfied only with developing dominant forces at each individual position."

Of the nine positions, Reed is pleased only with two. The first is at inside linebacker, where seniors Vaughan Johnson and Andy Hendel return. Hendel led the team with 37 solo tackles while Johnson was next with 28.

The other source of pleasure for Reed is at running back, where tailbacks Joe McIntosh and Michael Miller are expected to split time. Meanwhile, Reed calls fullback Vince Evans, whx sed ear due to a knee injury, the best athlete at that position.

The offensive line is inexperienced, the wide receivers are small and none of the four quarterback candidates has ever taken a snap in a varsity game. Reed has his work cut out just before the Sept. 10 opener against East Carolina.

"The dominant force is when a football team goes out on the field, when that position lines up on the field and when that game is over, there's something that tells you that position was good," Reed said. "Nobody ran against them, nobody threw against them, or they knocked people off the ball.

"When you bring enough of those dominant forces together, you're going to win the game. That's how you proceed to win throughout the course of the year."

Just as his predecessor Monte Kiffin, Reed is anything but low-key. But where Kiffin's speeches were rife with humor, Reed's is almost military in approach. In fact, he did speak to the ROTC officials on the N.C. State campus to determine how he could get the most out of his football team.

"They ask you to die. I said if I was going to motivate, I figured I'd ask these guys," he said.

"You always hear 'hate wins this or you gotta be mean and nasty.' They said no," Reed said. "They try to instill esprit-de-corps within their group and . . . help them achieve success."

Reed is intense. He has a major chore ahead of him and he's approaching it with the same energy he usedat Miami of Ohio when he built an addition to his house himself.

Chocowinity Sees Improved Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

CHOCOWINITY — Last year, Chocowinity High School's Indians won only three games, but two of those came in the final three games of the season, and the lone loss in those three games came by a single touchdown.

This season, Coach Carl Brock is hopeful that the lessons gained last year will pay off this year in a possible playoff berth for the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference member.

"I feel like we've come up a lot since last year," Brock said. "We are much more improved that at any time since I've been here. I think we have a chance to be competetive with everyone we play in the conference, and I think we can be competetive in our non-conference games too."

The big key will apparently be injuries, since the Tribe will be playing virtually the same group on both offense and defense. Most of those, however, are veteran players who saw a great deal of action last year.

"The second half of the season, we started going with the younger players to get them ready for this year, and I think it's paid off for us," Brock said. "We have seven people back on offense who started at one time or another, and eight on defense. This gives us a very good nucleus to build around. The kids got confidence last year and they feel they can do the job. It's mostly a senior club, with 13 or 14 of them. That's a pretty big senior class for a 1-A school."

As with most 1-A schools, there is not a great deal of size on the club, but one returning veteran, Darrell Clark, is impressive. He stands 6-1 and weighs in at 240 pounds, anchoring both the offensive and defensive line.

The Indians run their offense out of the pro-I set "80 percent of the time," according to Brock. Right now, however, they are somewhat handicapped by having first string tailback Roy Hooker (5-7, 165, Jr.), one of the seven back, sidelined with a broken hand. However, Brock said that he was hopeful that Hooker will be back in action come Friday when the Tribe opens the season against Swansboro.

In the offensive line, Adam Dixon (5-10, 165, Sr.) returns at center, with Johnny Squires (5-10, 160, Sr.) and Darrin Waters (6-0, 170, Jr.) at the guards. Both started last year, although Waters was a tackle.

Both of the players starting this year at tackles are non-veterans, Troy Woolard (6-0, 160, Sr.) and Paul Carrow (5-8, 150, Sr.).

Mark Smith (6-0, 180, Sr.) returns at the tight end position, with Reggie Ross (5-11, 150, Sr.) taking over at the split end spot. Shawn Harding (5-10, 140, Sr.) returns at flanker, but will probably split time with Melvin Tripp (5-7, 140, Sr.). Tripp, however, will move to tailback should Hooker not be available.

"We are going to try to balance it out on offense," Brock said. "We may run a little more than we pass, but we really want to have a very balanced offense."

On defense, the Indians will line up in a 5-2 or a 5-3, depending on the situation and what the offense shows.

Dixon returns at nose guard with Clark and Walters returning at the tackle spots. Squires will be back at the middle linebacker position, with Hooker and McMillen at the outside positions. McMillen is the only non-starter back up front.

The defensive ends will be handled by two veterans, Tripp and Mike Starkie (5-8, 140, So.). Harding returns at one corner spot with Ross moving into the safety position. Either Larry Elks (5-6, 130, Sr.) or Rod German will be at the other corner spot.

"We have a lot of people going both ways, but that's not unusual for a 1-A school. Woolard and Carrow will be able to do some spelling in the line and Smith in the linebacker and defensive back positions."

In the Tobacco Belt race, Brock looks to Jamesville to be the team to beat. "They return most of their backfield, so they should be strong. Creswell should also be strong. Bath also usually comes on strong at the end.

"But if we stay healthy, I feel that we could have a shot at one of the two playoff spots," Brock said.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

Dove Season Open — This coming Saturday marks the beginning of the 1983 hunting season in North Carolina. With the opening of dove season, hunters will once again take to the fields after that elusive grey buttet. The big question at this moment is whether there will be any harvested cornfields to hunt.

With the record temperatures this month, the corn crop has really taken a beating. I took a drive through the country last week and saw only a handful of harvested cornfields.

The season officially opens at noon with a 12-bird limit. Hunters are asked to purchase their hunting license early to prevent long line that traditionally show up at license agencies on opening day. Also, put safety first when hunting a field with friends and know where your shot will end up. Good Hunting!

King Mackeral Tournament — Anglers are reminded of the upcoming Wrightsville Beach King Mackeral Tournament slated for Sept. 22-25. Last year's tournament attracted 340 boats and this year promises to be even bigger. Further information may be obtained by writing Kay Crocker, chairman, P.O. Box 659, Wrightsville Beach, N.C. 28480.

Peat Methanol Controversy — Controversy is brewing in coastal North Carolina as well as across the state on the proposed building of a peat methanol plant near Lake Phelps. The fight is on pitting concerned conservationists and fishermen against supporters of a synthetic fuel mining operation.

On one side, supporters of the peat mining list the benefits of the project and refute the claims of the dangers tot he environment that might arise from such an operation.

The other side stands firm on its concern for this fragile environment and the reasons for a peat methanol plant in the first place.

In relation to the present controversy, this writer is reminded of an operation on the shores of the Pamlico River that sparked an equal amount of controversy when it was first proposed. Studies were available then that showed affects on the environement would be minimal. With the ability to carry on the fight, this operation eventually won its battle. The loosers as it has turned out have been the marine life of the Pamlico River and the many thousands of people who appreciate the natural resources this river system provides.

Local News — Benji Doughtie of Greenville landed his first sailfish while fishing off Oregon Inlet last weekend. Doughtie was fishing with Billy Clifton on board the Carolina Sallie.

Manning To Leave State

Manning, the 6-foot-11 rising senior, will complete his prep career at a Kansas high school. He has grabbed the attention of colleges across the country.

Manning is the son of former professional basketball player Ed Manning, who has accepted a coaching offer from the University of Kansas. Manning will be working under head coach Larry Brown.

Manning's high school coach Mac Morris says the family told him of the move Thursday.

"They informed me of their plans and said they wanted me to hear it from them first," Morris said. "Sure, it's a shock and a disappointment to me, but I understand what's best for the family comes first. He'll make out all right in Kansas though, both with his basketball and with his life."

Ruttman On Busch Pole

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Joe Ruttman barely outgunned Darrell Waltrip to win the pole position Friday night for Saturday night's Busch 500 Grand National stock car race at Bristol International Raceway.

Ruttman, driving a Pontiac, turned in a top speed of 111.922 mph over the high-banked, .533-mile track to grab the No. 1 spot with Waltrip winning the outside pole with a speed of 111.896 mph.

The first 15 cars for the 30-car field were determined Friday night with the rest to be decided in time trials today. The race starts at 7:30 p.m. EDT.

Waltrip, who trails Bobby Allison by only 61 points in his bid for a third consecutive Grand National point championship, will be gunning for his sixth straight victory at Bristol International Raceway.

Allison barely made the field Friday night, qualifying in the No. 13 spot with a speed of 109.891 mph in a Buick. Veteran Richard Petty was just behind him at 109.796 mph in a Pontiac.

Tim Richmond was third in a Pontiac at 111.293 mph, followed by Ricky Rudd at 111.279 in a Chevrolet and Terry Labonte at 111.100 in a Chevrolet.

Wake Gets QB In Transfer

RATS FOR SPACE — Nancy Hannagan, an animal health technician, holds up two of the six "Lewis strain" albino rats that are being maintained at the Kennedy Space Center Life Science Support Facility in Florida. The rats will fly aboard the space shuttle orbiter Challenger, scheduled for launching Tuesday, to test the cage system for future life science work in space. (AP Laserphoto)

Growth Of Job Fringes Brings Need For Experts

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — They were once "fringes," a petite dessert of benefits to the main course of wages.

But with benefit programs now accounting for 40 percent of some payrolls, the management of pensions and health care is a growing task for the nation's corporations — one, some experts say, for which trained people are scarce.

The experts say the surge of dental care and day care, free eye examinations and stay-well classes is part of a trend that has seen private sector "safety nets" grow faster than government aid for the disadvantaged.

Welfare programs, including food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children, rose 73 percent in dollar value since 1975, according to Leonard J. Hausman, a labor economist at Brandeis University. By comparison, job benefits have increased 221 percent.

"No one in the field calls them fringe benefits anymore," said Hausman. "People don't have a sense how these programs have grown."

Hausman said a U.S. Chamber of Commerce survey of 175 major companies has found that employee benefits, both current and future, rose from 25.5 percent of payroll costs in 1961 to 41.2 percent in 1981.

The chamber's survey estimated the nation's businesses paid $389 billion in benefits in 1981, about a third of the $1.2 trillion that went to employee compensation.

Robert Paul, vice chairman of the Martin Segal benefits and actuarial consulting firm, said only 20 percent of the U.S. workforce had health insurance in 1950 and only 10 percent had pensions. Today 95 percent are covered by health plans, and 65 percent can look forward to retirement benefits.

The programs have an enormous impact on the nation's economy. A Congressional Budget Office study found the non-taxable benefits would have netted the federal government $51.9 billion if they had been paid to workers in the form of salary.

The budget office estimates the tax savings will grow 80 percent more to well over $90 billion by 1988.

Because of the growth, the Heller Graduate School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare at Brandeis — a traditional training ground for public policy planners and managers — is introducing a course of study for future corporate and government managers who will handle employee benefits.

The program points to a developing demand for trained benefits managers in the corporate world.

"We are constantly recruiting people and training them on the job," said Paul. "What we need is a program that gives a master's (degree) of benefits management."

Although Hausman said benefit programs have grown because of worker concern with rising health costs and the impact of inflation on pensioners, those in the industry say many employees are not aware of the scope of their benefits.

Gerald W. Bush, the former vice president of human resources at Gulf Oil Corp., once held a series of retirement seminars for employees in their 50s. Nearly all expressed surprised at the size of their benefits.

"To a person, they all said, 'I wish you had told us this when we were in our 40s,'" Bush recalled. "They didn't realize their pensions were going to be as large so they put more money than necessary into savings. They missed opportunities to use their own money."

Bush said Gulf employed about 150 people to handle the company's various benefits plans. Few, he said, had any training for the job.

Margaret Gagliardi, a vice president at American Express Co., said she recently went through almost 1,000 resumes, looking for someone to run a health cost containment program.

"Very few people were trained to handle employee benefits," she said. "There is clearly an immediate need for education and training in this field."

Hausman sees the need for trained benefits managers growing with the benefits programs, which he says may come to resemble Chinese and Japanese plans that provide housing, food and recreation for workers and their families.

If that happens, Hausman envisions separate corporate divisions run by social managers who have nothing to do with making or selling a product.

Restaurant Suit Returns To Court

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — After failing to settle a dispute over their similar names, lawyers for Sizzler Family Steak Houses of California and Augusta-based Western Sizzlin Steak House Inc. have put the case back before a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Dudley H. Bowen Jr. earlier this month instructed the restaurant chains to negotiate a settlement. But the effort failed, and the lawyers returned to court Friday to conclude the hearing on the suit filed in 1980 by Sizzler Family Steak House.

The suit against Western Sizzlin Steak House Inc., Western Sizzlin Steak House Franchise Inc. and Western Sizzlin Inc. alleges trademark infringement, unfair competition, deceptive trade practices and with being in contempt of a 1968 court order.

Sizzler charged that Sizzlin chain owner Nick Pascarella of Augusta went to California in 1962 and copied the Sizzler restaurant located in Thousand Oaks, a Los Angeles suburb.

Sizzler lawyer William Poms argued that testimony showed Pascarella copied not only the name of the restaurant, but the style of the building, its menus and table settings.

"The signs are different, there are little differences, but they appear to be the same," he said.

Contaminant In City's Sewers

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A Perth Amboy chemical firm has dumped a suspected cancer-causing agent in that city's clogged sewers for years, and frequent sewer backups have spread the substance on roads and soil in a residential area, state environmental officials say.

The soil and roadway around eight or nine homes are contaminated by polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, and children should not be allowed to play there until a cleanup and sewer repair are completed, Health Commissioner Dr. Richard Goldstein said Thursday.

Goldstein blamed the PCB dumping on Witco Chemical Corp., which the state sued in January. Witco officials refused comment Thursday, but they have previously denied the allegations, state officials said.

Beans See Uneasy Recovery

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY

Sources at the floor said soybeans were under pressure because of confusion stemming from a Brazilian governmental order freezing exports of soybeans and soybean products under old contracts at prices that currently are below market.

Analysts said they thought the Brazilian government might rescind the order, a development that would leave exporters holding contracts for more soybeans than they could deliver and which would prompt selling.

Speculators sold contracts to beat the potential rush, sources said.

Trading was quiet at times during the session, primarily because once traders got out of the market they wanted to wait until the confusion over the Brazilian situation was cleared up, said Dale Gustafson, a grain analyst in Chicago with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Corn prices recovered from minor early losses, primarily on buying by exporters, which could indicate that the Soviet Union is buying U.S. corn, Gustafson said.

The recovery in corn was a factor in the late buying that helped soybean prices recover, Gustafson added.

Wheat settled ¼ cent lower to 3¾ cents higher with the contract for delivery in September at $3.87¼ a bushel; corn was 2¾ cents to 5½ cents higher with September at $3.60½ a bushel; oats were ¾ cent to 2¾ cents higher with September at $1.79½ a bushel; and soybeans were 2 cents to 10 cents higher with September at $9.33 a bush-el.

Hog prices were under pressure and a problem seems to be developing for producers because of an abundant supply, said Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express.

Levitt noted that the slaughter this month has been falling behind a pace that would liquidate market-ready hogs. Be-cause of the heat, he said, hogs have failed to gain their normal weight and producers may be holding back hogs from market.

As soon as the weather cools, Levitt said, producers are likely to have a large number of animals to market and that should drive cash prices sharply lower.

Futures prices already anticipate that development, he said, as the contract for delivery in October is $8 below the current cash quotes.

That seemed to pressure prices Friday, as cash quotes were steady but futures were lower, he said.

Cattle trading was light. Sellers were discouraged because cattle futures pr already are lower than c prices. But buyers were couraged as well because price of carcass beef wholesale cash markets fa to make an expected recov from weakness on Thursda

In addition, Levitt said, slaughter was heavy week, which will put a lo beef on the market next we Live cattle settled .18 lower to .47 cent higher the contract for delivery October at 57.70 cents pound; feeder cattle unchanged to .55 cent hig with September at 58.17 a pound; live hogs were cent lower to .08 cent hig with October at 42.87 cen pound, and frozen pork be were .22 cent to 1.05 lower with February at cents a pound.

Prices were lower in trading with selling speculators dominating market, said Howard Le a precious metals analy New York with Conti modity Services Inc. P recovered later.

Gold settled $1.40 to higher with the contract delivery in August at $419 troy ounce; silver settle cents to 14 cents higher August at $12.24 a troy oun

Blue Chips Hold Revived Interest For Wall Street

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After a long period in which stocks of small companies outshone the giants of American business, some Wall Streeters are professing a new interest in the big blue chips.

Their case rests partly on the belief that many blue chips are bargain investments simply because they have been out of favor so long.

But some of these observers also argue that participants in the market have underestimated the ability of old-line industry to bounce back from the recession.

John Westergaard at Equity Research Associates in New York, long known as a leading advocate of investing in small growth companies, now is talking of "the comeback of smokestack America."

"We believe that the 'rustbowl' has seen its worst, and that there will follow a great play in some of the traditional industries like autos and steel," Westergaard told his clients in a bulletin a few days ago. "And we are putting our money where our mouth is."

As it happens, he has recently launched the Westergaard Fund, a mutual fund specializing in "junior growth stocks and special situations," operating with a "contrarian" philosophy seeking out investments in places shunned by the majority.

The first stock bought by the fund, he reported, was U.S. Steel — certainly no junior growth company, but what Westergaard sees as "definitely a contrarian idea and a classic special situation."

Some increase in enthusiasm for the big-name stocks could well stem from the market's recent performance. While many smaller, more volatile issues have fallen markedly from their peaks in June, most of the blue chips have recorded only modest losses.

Investment adviser Yale Hirsch reports that his "Ground Floor index" of smaller companies fell 13.4 percent from late June to mid-August. Over that same span, the Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrials dropped only about 5 percent.

In the past week, the Dow Jones industrials lost 2.14 to 1,192.07. That compared with bigger percentage losses in such broader indexes as the New York Stock Exchange composite, down 1.12 at 93.80, and the American Stock Exchange market value index, down 3.85 at 227.16.

Advocates of smaller stocks point out that those issues rose much faster on average than blue chips did during the historic rally that began last August, and thus were logical candidates to be hit hardest by profit-taking. Hirsch's Ground Floor index soared 190.1 percent from bottom to peak, while the Dow Jones industrials rose about 60 percent.

Small, low-capitalization stocks have turned in better-than-average performance for a decade now, notes Wright Investors Service of Bridgeport, Conn. It acknowledges that "it would be rash to predict that this trend will not continue."

However, the money-management firm argues that "larger, higher-quality stocks are more attractive today on a relative basis than in many years."

The bottom 20 percent of stocks, ranked by marked value, listed on the Big Board, account for just 1 percent of the total market value of NYSE issues, Wright pointed out. In view of their size, the firm observed, "it is not hard to see how the crowding in of institutional funds has pushed these stocks to excessive prices."

Wright's analysts concluded: "Most indicators of value suggest that, relatively speaking, the high-quality, blue-chip sector of the market is the most undervalued. Small, speculative, secondary issues are seen yielding market leadership to higher quality stocks during the second year of the bull market."

Total Of N.C. Farms Declines

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The number of North Carolina farms is declining by about 3,000 a year and so is the acreage of the farms, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report.

As of June 1 there were about 85,000 farms in the state — down from 88,000 a year ago and 91,000 two years ago, the report said.

Mexico Using Oil Revenue To Prod Recovery

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — When financial wizards of the world's two most-indebted nations met with international bankers last week, Mexico was heralding a major recovery and Brazil was scrambling to avoid bankruptcy.

Brazil, which owes $90 billion, has seen at least 223 firms in the major city of Sao Paulo file special requests to head off bankruptcy this year, up 85 percent from last year. Mexico, which owes $85 billion, is tightening its belt.

Economists are not convinced they've seen the end of the crises that brought both countries to the brink of default. And they say financial default by either could provoke a world money crisis.

For the short term, however, Mexico is using billions of dollars in newly stabilized oil revenues to meet current debt payments. Brazil, which has no single major currency source, is foundering.

"Mexico is paying off the debt with its oil revenue," said one Mexican government economist. "The fact that we have oil and Brazil doesn't constitutes the main difference between the two."

But it was oil that provoked the financial problems of both nations, which share similar development problems.

Chronic poverty and unemployment plague tens of millions in each country. The two countries also face similar pressing problems of high inflation — about 80 percent in Mexico and 140 percent in Brazil — along with the constant threat that hunger and low wages could lead to violence.

Brazilian officials always nurtured the hope that a sudden discovery of major oil fields would lead to new wealth and solve the problems of poverty and underdevelopment. But higher oil import prices in recent years, combined with rising U.S. interest rates, halted the South American country's "economic miracle" of the late 1960s and early 1970s — in which Brazil borrowed billions to build an impressive industrial base.

Mexico found major crude oil reserves in the mid 1970s just as the world oil price boom hit. Former President Jose Lopez Portillo parlayed petrodollars into development projects, including major showcase industrial programs, highway planning and construction projects. International bankers loaned billions to Mexico, whose new-found power also brought some temporary economic independence from the United States, with which it shares a 1,760-mile border.

But Lopez Portillo, whose term expired last December, was blamed for overspending and allowing already institutionalized corruption to flourish. When oil prices fell and loans came due last year, Mexico — like Brazil — was unable to meet payment on its foreign debt, and it turned to the United States for billions in credits for food and loans toward future oil sales.

A Brazilian economist said his country is faring poorly because it did not take the drastic steps adopted by Mexico — belt-tightening spending and subsidy cuts that halted industry, drove food prices higher and limited wage increases.

"Mexico is apparently putting its economic house in order because it was forced into a violent recession," said Paulo Singer, an economics professor who is director of the Brazilian Center for Analysis and Planning, an independent research institute.

"Industrial production was practically paralyzed, the purchasing power of the majority of the people was sharply reduced and unemployment reached unprecedented heights," Singer said. "This was done at such a drastic rate that Mexico was able to quickly begin solving its balance of payments problems."

Brazil has also acted to limit wages and slow down production, but Singer said its slower pace of dealing with the problem was a crucial difference.

Prices Outstrip Wages In July

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American workers lost ground to inflation last month, the first time since February that wages failed to rise as fast as prices and one of a growing number of signs that inflation is once again on the rise.

The ravage of drought on crops combined with a revival of businesses in the economic recovery is a one-two punch that is expected to push prices higher in the months to come.

No one is predicting a swift return to the days when prices were surging at a double-digit clip and inflation was declared Public Enemy No. 1, but "the best of the news is behind us on inflation," said Joseph Carson, a senior economist at the investment firm of Merrill Lynch & Co.

Inflation, measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, peaked at 13.3 percent in 1979 and stood at 12.4 percent in 1980.

But this past week, the government said the pace of inflation had slowed down to 2.4 percent in the 12 months ended in July, the lowest rise in 17 years.

Part of the price for cooling off inflation was a severe recession spanning 1981 and 1982.

With unemployment high, making consumers cautious, and with a strong dollar lowering the cost of imported goods, U.S. manufacturers and retailers could not afford to raise prices. An oil glut and plentiful harvests helped hold down fuel and food prices.

In the early stages of the economy's recovery, business profit margins widened without the need to boost prices sharply, helped by the sharpest gain in productivity in nearly eight years.

The Labor Department said Friday that business productivity, a measure of the amount of goods and services produced for each hour worked, climbed at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.1 percent in the second quarter, the biggest increase since the 6.6 percent rise in the post-recession third quarter of 1975.

The productivity gains reflected cost-cutting moves made during the recession, which began paying off as businesses stepped up production to meet a rising demand for goods but maintained a cautious policy on rehiring workers who had been laid off earlier.

But the tide appears to be turning.

A survey this month of 250 forecasters among the 4,000 members of the National Association of Business Economists said they expected consumer prices to rise at a 4.2 percent annual rate in the second half of this year and at a 5.1 percent rate in 1984.

The government said this past week that consumer prices rose 0.4 percent in July, twice the increase of the previous month. Meanwhile, inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings fell 0.1 percent in July.

Energy prices have stopped falling and crop damage in the Midwest is likely to send food prices higher by early 1984, Carson said. Meanwhile, he said, raw material prices "have been advancing faster than the speed limit."

David Hale, chief economist of Kemper Financial Services Inc., an investment management business, said prices of raw materials other than food and oil have climbed 60 percent over the past three months.

And this past week, a half dozen leading steelmakers announced price increases averaging 7 percent for sheet and strip steel products used to make a variety of consumer goods.

Automakers, however, appear to be trying to limit price increases. General Motors Corp., the traditional price-setter in the industry, announced 1984 prices would be an average 2 percent higher, with prices lowered on some models.

Hale and Carson said one bright spot in the inflation outlook has been moderation in labor contract settlements. But unions that made concessions to ride out the recession are expected to be more demanding in the recovery.

"So long as wage growth remains moderate, the commodity price recovery by itself will not trigger a broad-based resurgence of high inflation and thus force the authorities to stop the recovery," Hale said in a recent commentary. "There is nothing permanent about the recent deceleration of inflation."

Self-Made Lawyer, Chesterfield Payton

Found Best Way To Win Court Cases

Chesterfield Payton has won many court cases, lost a few; but the biggest battle he's ever won is the one against himself when he stopped drinking at age 63 and "started really living."

Known throughout the state over his 47-year career as a drunk for his ability to represent himself in court, Payton, now a Greenville resident, says, "Somebody asked me not long ago to tell him the surest way to win a case in court. I told him, 'The surest way to win a case in court is don't have one up there.'"

And of his use of liquor, which he says was the cause of nearly all his brushes with the law, of the long interruption of his life with the woman he loves, and of the virtual waste of his tremendous intellect and ability, he said, "It's like jumping on a big man and having him whip you every time; yet and still you jump on him every chance you get. That's the way I was about liquor for a lot of years. I knew it was beating me out of everything good I could have in my life, but I kept on drinking anyway."

Started at 16

"I started stealing liquor out of the well behind my daddy's store when I was about 16 years old," he recalled. "My daddy always said, 'A wise man sells liquor and a fool drinks it.' He sold it. I drank it. I was a good student, so good that a Professor Blueford came all the way down here from Greensboro to tell me that if I would work hard at Pitt County Training School — that was the high school for blacks at the time, located in Grimesland — he'd see I went to college. But because of the habit I'd taken up, I didn't finish high school, much less go to college like I could have. I'd take a pint of liquor to school each day and get high while I was there.

"I left Grimesland, where I was born, soon as I was old enough to find out where I was, I jokingly told a judge one time. And it was about the truth. It was a hard life being one of seven boys and seven girls out there on the Grimes farm. I'd worked some days from sunup to sundown for 50 cents. I just knew I could make my fortune out in the world somewhere. I moved all the way to Greenville and started to work for Mr. Bob Humber, father of State Senator Dr. Robert Lee Humber. He ran a blacksmith shop here and I waited on him — went for things, handed him whatever he needed. He paid me $5 a week."

Seemed Natural Ability

Of his ability to act as his own attorney in court, Payton said. "Some people can play music soon as they climb up on a piano stool. I always seemed to just know what I could say to mix somebody up and win any argument or court case. It got to be something I did for fun and to prove how smart I was. 'Course, I wasn't really very smart. Or I would've made a lot more out of my life back then than I did."

His friend, Judge J.W.H. Roberts, said of him, "I've banned Chesterfield from every county in the Third Judicial District at one time or another. By nature he was a man of character, a gentleman, a very intelligent man, but he was a drunk and when he got drunk he'd be worrisome. In recent years, I've called on him to talk to young men also ruining their lives by drinking. He does it quite effectively."

"I was about 19 or 20 the first time I got on the wrong side of the law — my cousin had stolen some chickens," Payton said. "I didn't steal them myself, but I was with him and knew all about it, and was, therefore, just as guilty as he was. That was the first court case I ever pled and the first I ever won. I cross-examined the owner of the chickens as to how he could tell his black and white chickens from the neighbor lady's black and white chickens, whether he saw us take the chickens or not, and so on and so forth. I'd been watching how lawyers operated and how they worked things around so witnesses couldn't be sure. I proved to myself with that case I could do the same time and my life of defending myself in court had started."

Most of Payton's cases on behalf of himself were defense against public drunkeness and similar misdemeanors. Once, however, in a coastal county he was arrested for breaking and entering, but he got himself off by disproving that he broke into the house. "I don't think I did," he said. "I think the door must've been open and I just walked in, hung my hat on the newel post, and went upstairs and passed out. I really can't be sure. I was too drunk and that's what I showed in court. I got myself off."

In his younger years Payton was married to "the sweetest wife in the world." They had four children, he said, including twins, but all died in infancy. When he went to prison in 1940, his wife divorced him. "I spent all those 37 years afterward regretting and sometimes trying to find another woman like Bert," he said, but there wasn't one. Any time I'd try to court a woman, I'd usually pick out one that kinda resembled Bert and then I'd usually make her mad by calling her Bert. I never married in all those years and Bert was constantly on my mind. But she'd gone on with her life and, also, I knew how much she hated whiskey and I hadn't made up my mind to give it up."

The crime that sent him to prison and ended his marriage was the only felony with which he was ever charged — assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. For this he served eight years in North Carolina prisons "from the Blue Ridge to the Atlantic," he said.

"I was guilty," he said. "This fellow had beat me up so bad I was swollen up big as I don't know what and was in bed recuperating from my injuries. Then he came to my house looking me again. So I blowed his arm off with a gun."

"I got along well in prison," he said, "because I had manners and knew what kind of people to steer clear of. Manners take you a lot further than anything else in prison — manners and not getting friendly with the wrong people."

"Being nice" got him arrested in Raleigh one time, he said. "I had won me a bunch of money in a skin game in Durham," he said, "and I was feeling generous. I saw this woman with a big crowd of children and decided to buy each one of them a bag of candy. That woman called in two carloads of police and a motorcycle cop to arrest me. She had me charged with molesting her children. I pled my own case in City Court. I found myself before a judge that didn't like what he called a 'self-made nigger lawyer.' I knew I couldn't win before him, so I let him convict me and I appealed to Superior Court. There I argued that the woman didn't know what I was doing when I was giving the children that candy, because she was attending to errands of her own and wasn't even minding her flock. She had come back just in time to jump to conclusions. I made my point."

Once in the northeastern part of the state, he was arrested for public drunkeness and he said, as he was being arrested, he jumped and ran. "I ran," he said, "so I could beat that policeman in the courthouse. During cross-examination I asked, 'How far did I run before you caught me?' The policeman described how far and I came back with, 'Don't you know a drunk can't run that far?' I got off."

Worked, But Squandered

Over the years, despite his drinking, Payton was gainfully employed much of the time. "I never was lazy and I made a right smart of money," he said. "The only thing was I drank it all away. Once in a while I'd stay sober a while and save some money. But then I'd go on a binge and blow it all. I did everything from construction work to fishing to hotel bellhopping," he said. "In Ocala, Florida, I worked at a swank hotel all day, slept in a colored hotel down the street, and hit the bars every night. I was in Silver Springs in 1955 when there was so much to do about Esther Williams being there to film a movie."

The only time he ever hired a lawyer, he said he chose a good one. He retained Robert D. Wheeler, now chief judge of the 3rd Judicial District. "I had broke a court order," Payton said, "and I had sense enough to know I couldn't get myself out of that. Judge Wheeler got me off, though, and I paid him $75."

Looked At Self

It was in 1975, Payton said, that he took a long hard look at himself. "I saw a drunk," he said. "I saw somebody with no family, getting old with nothing. I'd always been made to go to church as a child, been baptized in the Tar River when I was 12, and I remembered what the Bible said about a wise man being able to change, but a fool never changing. I decided I'd prove I wasn't a fool. I quit drinking.

"It's been eight years now and you couldn't get me to touch a beer can, much less a whiskey bottle, for anything. I always knew liquor didn't taste good — otherwise you wouldn't need no chaser. It's got no appeal for me now. Ice cream and Pepsi-Cola are a whole lot more to my liking. I know I have to be a teetotaler and I've got myself so that's what I really want to be. I'm a sober man, a truthful man, a church-going man and a man who stays home every night. Life's so much sweeter now. I know who's in control of my life and it's not liquor."

Meatless Menu Can Be Tasty

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

I have never been fond of most health foods, despite the undeniable value of such fare. But recently I changed my mind.

The reason was a new book that contains 1,300 recipes — all without meat. ("American Wholefoods Cuisine," by Nikki and David Goldbeck. New American Library, 1633 Broadway, New York NY 10019. $17.95.)

The few dishes I have tried were surprisingly tasty, and some bordered on the gourmet.

Authors Nikki and David Goldbeck had been living on a diet of meat and anything else they liked. Then, in 1970, they decided to go vegetarian for a week. They liked it so much, they've been on it ever since.

I certainly would not want to go without beefsteak the rest of my life. But a meatless day now and then is a pleasant change.

Boredom does not prove a problem for the Goldbecks, nor do they find health books much help. "More often it was the time- and tongue-tested ethnic cuisines that held the basis of what we were looking for," they said.

They heeded a warning from the National Academy of Science to eat less fat, and very little salt-cured, pickled or smoky foods. But I did spot a couple of recipes containing hot pickled peppers and one with anchovies.

The real test comes in the main dishes where meat usually plays a star role. Pasta dishes please most people and this book goes in heavily for macaroni, spaghetti, linguine and lasagna dishes. Pizza also gets thorough treatment.

Egg dishes are a natural, and there are intriguing omelets and souffles.

Meat substitutes like rice cheeseburgers, bean balls and nut steaks turn me off, but there are many tasty offerings, such as this recipe for Pakistani Curry.

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon turmeric
½ teaspoon cumin
1 pound mushrooms, sliced
1½ pounds potatoes, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups fresh green peas
2 medium tomatoes, chopped
4 eggs
¼ cup minced scallion

Heat oil in 15-inch skillet and cook garlic and ginger about 1 minute. Add chili powder, turmeric and cumin and cook 1 minute more. Add mushrooms, potatoes, salt, peas and tomatoes. Cover and cook 25 minutes until potatoes start to soften. Carefully break eggs and place on hot vegetables, keeping yolks intact. Cover and cook until egg whites are set and yolks lightly cooked; about 10 minutes. Sprinkle with scallions and serve. Serves 4. ———

Good grooming may be worth an 8 to 20 percent increase in a woman's salary.

Avoid overdrying clothes. It wastes energy and can also cause shrinkage and excessive wrinkling.

Lawson-Edwards Vows Solemnized Saturday

Evelyn Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H.B. Dail of Route 1, Ayden, and John Redic Lawson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Redic Lawson of Route 1, Hayneville, Ala., were united in marriage in Faith Tabernacle Saturday at 2 p.m.

Elder Samuel D. Clemmons officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of organ music was presented by Roger Ingram of Ayden. Carolyn Jenkins of Cove City and Ingram were soloists.

Bridal attendants included Peggy Harper of Kinston, honor attendant, and Donna and Vertrille Dail of Kinston, cousin of the bride, Juanita and Sharon Lawson of Hayneville, Ala., sisters of the bridegroom, Patricia McLawhorn of Greenville, Judy C. Woods of Snow Hill and Von Chadwick of Cove City.

Michelle Moye was flower girl and Terrell Moye was ring bearer. Both are cousins of the bride of Kinston.

Checo D. Lawson of Montgomery, Ala., brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included Jamerilla Lawson and Rodney Dail, cousins of the bride, and Donnie Nobles, all of Kinston, Terry Wilson of Kansas City, Mo. and Kelvin Williams of Greenville. Junior ushers were Shelton Dail of Ayden, brother of the bride, and Bobby Lawson of Kinston, cousin of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of sheer organza, alencon and schiffli lace. It was designed with an empire waist accented with a band of floral lace. Matching lace covered the bodice. The high see-through neckline was fashioned with French net and a center schiffli lace design. It had a ring collar of alencon lace. The full, sheer bishop sleeves were adorned with appliques of floral alencon lace and featured lace cuffs with scattered pearls. The full A-line organza skirt was bordered with rows of lace and flounced organza which flowed into a chapel length train.

The bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Navy and the bride was employed at Procter and Gamble.

There are many wallpaper books and drapery samples for your approval. Come browse. Also, we have a great selection of carpet samples beginning at $8.50 a square yard. Whether your taste is traditional or contemporary, we have furniture and accessories that will satisfy your taste and budget. Visit our Interior Design Department soon. The welcome mat is always out for you.

Planning a Fall Party???...
If you're planning a fall party, let us suggest it be a wine and cheese party. All you have to do is to come by and let us help you. We will suggest wines, cheeses, crackers, and dips that will delight your guests. We have wine glasses to rent, also. For an evening of carefree fun, come to our wine and cheese shop and let us do the work and planning for you.

Microwave Demo...
Microwave cooking is fast and easy. Come by our Demonstration Booth in Housewares and let Mary Scutter show you just how much fun it is. She will be in our store on Saturday, September 17th from 11:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. to demonstrate General Electric and Hot Point Ovens. This is a great idea for a family gift.

Flowers, Flowers, Flowers...
We have a great variety of flowers in our Garden Shop—blooming plants, cut flowers, and silk flowers. Some are arranged while others await your taste and skill. We have bud vases and small arrangements which are perfect for those special remembrances. Also, our potted mums and gloxinias wrapped in foil with bow are priced at $7.88. For your added convenience, we deliver daily to Pitt Memorial Hospital and to local funeral homes. We take orders for corsages, too. Use your Belk Credit Charge plate. Just call 756-2355.

Ann Taylor Shop...
We've just added a new shop for you—it is an accessory corner by Ann Taylor located in our Ladies Shoe Department. There you will find the latest in sashes, belts and ties to complete your outfit. The fashion trend is to accent the waist and you'll find many exciting ideas in brilliant colors. We have created this shop just for you.

Couple Say Vows In Double Ring Ceremony

WINSTON-SALEM — Freddie Amanda McLawhorn and Kevin Joseph Klimt were united in a double ring ceremony Saturday at 5 p.m. The ceremony was held in Oldtown Baptist Church here with Dr. David Morrow officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry McLawhorn Sr. of Winston-Salem. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Klimt of Kansas City, Mo.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured an off-shoulder V-neckline and drop waistline. The neckline was defined by silk Venise lace accented with appliqued roses. The short sleeves were accented with tucking and appliqued rose leaves. The princess skirt was highlighted with silk Venise lace and the appliqued roses formed a matching spray enhancing the full skirt which extended into a cathedral train. Her waltz length white illusion veil was attached to a crown wreath overlaid with schiffli lace and re-embroidered with seed pearls and sequins. It had a Venise lace rose motif in back. The bride carried a nosegay of yellow and white roses with stephanotis and ivy entwined.

Yolanda McLawhorn of Winston-Salem, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of yellow taffeta featuring a single puffed sleeve attached to a slant-cut bodice. She carried a cascading bouquet of yellow and white daisies interspersed with yellow sweetheart roses.

The bridal attendants were Lisa Klimt, sister of the bridegroom, Laura McLawhorn, sister-in-law of the bride, and Elaine Voyce of Raleigh. They wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor and carried nosegays of yellow and white daisies.

Honorary bridesmaids were Debra Ange and Patricia Moore of Farmville and Tammy Malone of Raleigh. They wore formal yellow gowns with corsages of white and yellow daisies.

The brother of the bridegroom, Paul Klimt, was best man. Groomsmen were Larry McLawhorn, brother of the bride, Ron Troglione of Charlotte and Billy Mann of Raleigh.

Benjamin Tew, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer and Karen Tew was flower girl. She wore a yellow taffeta gown with puff sleeves and carried a basket of yellow rose petals.

Clara Williams presented wedding music and the Rev. Barry Carter of Winston-Salem sang "Longer," "You Light Up My Life," "Wedding Song," "The Bridal Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride's mother wore an apricot crepe mid-length dress with long sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected an ecru lace dress of mid-length with a ruffle yoke. Both wore white orchid corsages.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn West given by parents of the bride. Mrs. Eddie Tew, cousin of the bride, cut the three-tiered wedding cake and Mrs. Herbert Moore, aunt of the bride, poured punch. Mrs. Lyman Carraway, aunt of the bride, assisted.

A brunch was given by the bride at the Holiday Inn West on the morning of the wedding. A rehearsal dinner was held at Oh! Brian's Restaurant Friday evening given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The couple will live in their home on Lake Norman after a wedding trip to the Bahamas.

The bride graduated from N.C. State University and the bridegroom graduated cum laude from the University of Missouri at Rolla. He is currently employed by IBM of Charlotte.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I've had a real bad week.

My $28 Boston fern died at the age of three days. The air conditioning went out in my car. And after reading Linda Evans' new beauty secrets book, I had to face up to the reality that I will never look like Linda Evans.

It's not the first time I've plowed through these how-to-pull-yourself-together books and been disappointed. I've been lulled down the yellow brick road in books by Jane Fonda, Cheryl Tiegs, Arlene Dahl, Victoria Principal and Christie Brinkley.

The first thing that grabs me is the cover. Some women look at those bodies and say, "Why her, God?" I look at them and say, "Why not me?" That's the difference. I always think everything is possible through the library.

But inside, the advice is always the same: eat less, exercise more and spend more time on yourself. I don't want to take away from the habits of the stars, but I suspect most of them started pretty early being aware of themselves. I should imagine Linda Evans' first words to her mother when she was being bathed and swabbed in oil were, "You missed a spot!"

A staple of these books is always I-was-fat-once-and-unattractive-before-I-had-a-turning-point-in-my life. Again, there is a difference in interpretation. Fat to these people means a "snug 6." Fat to me is when you walk across the floor and someone says, "It's a good sound. Have you ever thought of recording it?" What you're dealing with here are women who have never bought a blouse unless they can button it all the way to the bottom.

The problem is I want to believe. For years, I used to get a clothing catalogue from a store in the east. They used a model who was one of the most stunning creatures I have ever seen. I ordered everything she wore. I sent everything back within a week.

It never occurred to me until someone pointed it out that she was eight inches taller than I was, weigh d 20 pounds less, had long black hair that was pulled into a bun, legs that started under her diaphragm, was black and looked smashing in reds and yellows and was a good 30 years younger. It's funny. I never figured out why I didn't look the same in those clothes.

Does that mean I will stop buying beauty books? Never. It just means I'm going through my usual period of deep depression.

You should have seen me after I read Miss Piggy's beauty secrets. It was three months before I could even look at a mudpack.

Pick Of The Produce Crop

Fresh fruits and vegetables may be good buys now but it still pays to shop carefully says Rachel Kinlaw, extension foods and nutrition specialist, N.C. State University.

Good quality fresh fruits and vegetables look fresh. Sometimes fruits and vegetables with bruises, cuts or spots of decay are offered at bargain prices. Look them over carefully, Mrs. Kinlaw says. "When you trim off the bad part, you may not have enough left for it to be a bargain."

It doesn't pay to buy more than can be used right away or stored properly. "Most fresh fruits and vegetables will keep in the refrigerator for 2-5 days. Apples, grapefruit, oranges, lemons, limes and melons should be refrigerated and used within a week or two. Onions, potatoes and sweet potatoes will keep for several months when stored in a cool, dry place," says the extension specialist.

Lisa Williams Weds Lt. Lovett

AYDEN — Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Lisa Yvette Williams and 2nd Lt. Andre L. Lovett Saturday at 3 p.m. Eldress Ollie Grace Harris, aunt of the bride, and Dr. Raymond Kelly Jr. of Baltimore, Md. performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of organ music was presented by Roger Ingram. Karen Thigpen of New Haven, Conn., Evetta Lawrence of Ayden and the bridegroom sang "Endless Love," "You Are So Beautiful To Me," "If," "The Lord's Prayer" and "My Tribute."

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lizzie Dixon Williams of Ayden and Freddie L. Williams of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Pearlene Randolph of Ayden.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown designed by Eve Museio for Milady. The gown was fashioned with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in a floral silk Venise lace beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice featured appliques of the beaded silk lace centered by an imported Brussels lace motif beaded in pearls. The long sheer Edwardian sleeves were fashioned in organza and English net accented with appliques of silk Venise lace centered with pearls. Ruffled chantilly lace also trimmed the sleeves. The full skirt and attached cathedral train were bordered in ruffled chantilly lace and scalloped Brussels lace. She wore a walking length illusion veil edged in matching lace trimmed in appliques of silk Venise and Brussels lace medallions attached to a headpiece appliqued in silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, lavender alstromeria and baby's breath tied with white and lavender bow with streamers.

Valarie Ann Booker of Fort Leavenworth, Kans., cousin of the bride, was matron of honor and Mary Ann Roundtree of Ayden was maid of honor. They wore formal gowns of floral matte taffeta in shades of orchid and cream styled with portrait necklines outlined in ruffled taffeta which extended over the fitted bodice in a wrap effect centered with a self-fabric rose at the waistline.

MRS. ANDRE L. LOVETT

Bridesmaids included Royella Michelle Nobles, Vernetha D. Dixon of Ayden, Lynette D. Chapman of Grifton and Tawana Gail Haggans of Washington, D.C., all cousins of the bride. They wore gowns styled identical to those of the honor attendants in mauve matte taffeta. Each carried a nosegay in shades of lavender, orchid and pink including statice, baby's breath, pixie carnations and alstromeria tied with lavender bows. They wore crowns of matching flowers.

Chante Colette Merritt of New Haven, Conn. was junior bridesmaid and wore a formqal gown of orchid matte taffeta styled with a double ruffle encircling the open neckline. A sash of matching fabric enhanced the waistline. She carried a nosegay and wore matching flowers in her hair. Flower girls were Darah Miller and Edwina Love, both of New Haven. They wore white formal organza gowns trimmed with lace and orchid ribbon and carried white baskets.

Corey Terrell Merritt of New Haven and Seadra Duncan of Greenville were acolytes.

Lynn Gore of New York was best man and ushers were Kenneth Randolph, brother of the bridgroom, Duane D. Dixon, brother of the bride of Ayden, Sheldon McCarter of Rocky Mount, Joe Edwards of Charlotte and Walter Parker of Greenville. The junior usher was O'mar Williams of Greenville, brother of the bride.

Ring bearers were Donye Spain of Ayden and Walter B. Council II of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal rose satin striped chiffon dress and carried a cymbidium orchid. The grandmother of the bridegroom selected a an ensemble in a coordinating color in the bride's color scheme and wore a cymbidium orchid. Grandmothers of the bride were given carnation corsages.

A reception was given by the mother of the bride at the Holiday Inn. Marian W. Jones presided at the guest register and guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Council of Greenville and Mrs. Johnny A. Wooten.

After a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla. the couple will live in Missouri.

The bride attended Atlantic Christian College in Wilson and was employed by the Town of Ayden. The bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Air Force and is stationed at Whiteman AFB.

A bridal luncheon was given by members of Les Gaylenetts Club at the Three Steers and a brunch was held at the Ramada Inn. A rehearsal dinner was given by the family of the bridegroom.

When purchasing a freezer, allow three cubic feet per family member if the unit will be used to store food from weekly shopping trips. Six cubic feet per person is needed when freezing meat in quantity along with homegrown fruits and vegetables.

Women Challenge Night Labor Law

By MARI NODA
Associated Press Writer

KASUKABE, Japan (AP) — A small group of women taxi drivers is fighting to abolish a 36-year-old Japanese labor law that prohibits them from working late night hours, when business is best.

"My monthly income dropped by 100,000 yen ($408) to almost half of what I used to make when my boss told me to stop working at 10 o'clock," said Sachiko Yokota, 47, a taxi driver in this Tokyo suburb.

She is one of 13 women drivers in the Tokyo area who are demanding that Japan's Labor Ministry change the law, which specifically prohibits minors and women from working between 10 p.m. and 5 a.m.

Established in 1948, ostensibly to protect women and minors from forced late-hour labor, the law exempts only a handful of jobs — such as nurses, superintendents of girls' dormitories and sardine and crab canners. The canners are exempt because crabs and sardines spoil rapidly and muct be canned as soon as possible after being caught.

The law has been criticized as outmoded and unnecessary in Japan's modern society, where women increasingly work for a living and where streets are relatively safe at any hour.

A report on the status of women from Prime Minister Yaushiro Nakasone's office last April cited the night-work rule as a primary reason that Japanese women have fewer job opportunities and lower salaries. In 1981, women on the average earned only 53.3 percent of what men received, a Labor Ministry study showed.

"Government livelihood assistance would give me 20,000 yen ($83) more every month than the reduced salary," said Mrs. Yokota, who supports an ailing husband and two children. "But who wants to be on government assistance if you are healthy enough to work?"

She said she decided to become a taxi driver after hearing male drivers in a local bar, where she once worked, talk about how much they earned. Already experienced at the wheel, she passed the exam for her license last December.

However, nobody told her about the law, she said in an interview.

"I assumed I could work all I wanted to."

Upon finding that she couldn't legally work the same hours as men, she appealed unsuccessfully to the local Labor Standards Office.

"So long as the law exists, we have to enforce it," an official there said.

Among Tokyo's 70,000 taxi drivers, only 40 are women, according to the Transportation Ministry.

Keetsu Saito, of the Tokyo Hired Taxi Association, attributes the small number to the long hours and the special license, which he said is "difficult to obtain."

Shigeki Yamauchi, president of Kasukabe Kotsu, Mrs. Yokota's employer, said that although he has only two females among his 102 drivers, women are as well suited for the job as men.

"You have to be a safe driver to be a good taxi driver, and Mrs. Yokota is one of our ace drivers on that account," he said.

Revision of the law is being considered in connection with a 1979 United Nations treaty on discrimination against women, according to Yoshiko Akamatsu, head of the Women and Minors Offices of the Labor Ministry. But she said any change must apply to the entire labor force, not just individual cases.

The U.N. Treaty Concerning the Abolition of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women was signed in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1980 by 75 nations including Japan, which has two years left in which to revise laws and present the treaty to the Diet, Japan's parliament, for formal ratification.

Dear Abby

Her Husband Needs Counsel

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband thinks the way to teach a child a lesson is to do to the child whatever the child does to you. "If you tear up something of mine that I worked for, I will tear up something of yours that you like."

So he took a knife and sliced the tires of our 5-year-old daughter's bike because she tried to get a fly out of our air-conditioner and accidentally bent the coils.

I told him he was guilty of child abuse and he needed counseling. He said I was the one who needed counseling.

That incident has changed my feelings toward him. Should I seek counseling with my children alone? Or should I give him an ultimatum — either he goes for counseling and learns how to be a proper father, or the children and I are leaving?

CLEVELAND MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your husband needs counseling, but don't give him an ultimatum or you might force a decision that would be unfortunate for all concerned. You and the children should have family counseling to learn how to handle a very ignorant, misguided and possibly unstable man. In time, it is to be hoped, your husband will join the family counseling session.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem and don't want to ask anybody else because it is too embarrassing. I have an 8-year-old son and I am not sure who his father is. It's either my husband or his brother. As you can probably guess, I had an affair with my husband's brother. He's now happily married, and there is nothing between us, but I have to know whether he is my son's father or not. My husband and his brother look a lot alike and my son resembles both of them.

How can I find out for sure without making any trouble? If my husband ever found out I was asking such a question, he would kill me, so please print your answer.

MY SECRET

DEAR SECRET: Please, do your whole family a favor and assume that your husband is the father of your son. In order to determine paternity you would need the cooperation of both your brother-in-law, who is now happily married, and your husband, who is happily without suspicions.

Leave it that way.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday my niece and I attended a lavish wedding. I was served an enormous steak and was able to eat only a small portion of it. It was especially delicious — too good to throw out — so I asked the waiter for a "doggie" bag and he obliged willingly.

When my niece saw me put the uneaten portion of my steak into the bag, she flipped her lid, saying it was outrageous and I had embarrassed her.

I told her it was done in all the best restaurants, and she said it was permissible in restaurants, but not at weddings.

Dear Abby, what is your opinion?

ROSE, BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR ROSE: It's permissible anywhere. Tell your niece to mind her own business.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "Curious in Fort Myers" asked why lovers close their eyes while kissing. Easy.

When one closes his eyes, the visual is eliminated, intensifying all the other senses. That's why we should keep our eyes open while having our teeth drilled.

MR. AND MRS. ANDREW HADDOCK

Couple Has Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Haddock, of Route 2, Ayden, were entertained on their 50th anniversary Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Dixon at a pig picking.

Entertainment was provided by the Swift Creek Cloggers for the 100 guests attending.

The couple's children, Alma Davis, Garland Haddock, Brenda Foreman and Pam Dixon, were host and hostesses for the event. The couple has eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Assisting in serving were Stevie Haddock, Ed Davis, Jimmy Foreman, Garland Haddock, Pam Dixon and Brenda Foreman. Alma Davis served cake. Geraldine Haddock presided at the guest book.

Mr. and Mrs. Haddock were married Aug. 26, 1933, in the back seat of a car in Pitt County.

Jean Darden Gives Talk On Monday

The Greenville Chapter of Professional Secretaries Internationl held its meeting Monday at Western Sizzlin. Jean Darden, assistant principal at J.H. Rose High School, was guest speaker.

She spoke on networking, highlighting statistics of North Carolina women in economy.

President Anne Harrington, CPS, welcomed Keegan Gabriel and Mary Moore as guests. She recognized Mary Kraczon, CPS, and extended congratulations on her recent attaiment of the Certified Professional Secretary designation.

A report on the N.C. Division officer/member orientation meeting held in Raleigh was given. Nila Bland, division director, told of the upcoming seminar for management and admistration personnel to be sponsored by the N.C. Division of Professional Secretaries International.

Plans were presented for the chapter's annual Bosses Night to be held Oct. 24. Members were reminded of the preparatory courses at Pitt Community College for the CPS exam.

Jo Gillin, president-elect, installed Shirley McArthur, Mae Parrott, Betty Shinn and Anne Stokes as new members.

SUPPER FOR TWO
Squid & Spinach Linguine
Tomato & Cucumber Salad
Fresh Peach Sundaes

SQUID & LINGUINE

My young friend, Susan McQuillan, made this for me after it was requested by a reader.

- 6 very small squid (½ pound)
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ¼ cup white wine
- Crushed dried oregano to taste
- Salt and pepper
- Spinach linguine

Cut off squid tentacles in front of eye. Pull out innards including the sac and the translucent backbone (sometimes called the "pen"). Wash thoroughly under cold running water. Slice crosswise into ¼-inch rings. In a 9- or 10-inch skillet over moderate heat, heat olive oil; add garlic and cook, stirring, until golden. Stir in wine and oregano. Add squid in a single layer. Simmer, stirring, until squid are opaque and cooked through — about 5 minutes. Season with salt. Serve at once over hot green noodles. Pass a pepper mill. Makes 2 servings. (If fresh squid is not available, use thawed frozen cleaned squid.)

SUPPER FARE
Cod Fillets & Potatoes
Green Peas & Mushrooms
Pear Crisp & Beverage

COD FILLETS

Fresh lime adds a fillip.

- 3 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 pound cod fillets, thawed if necessary
- 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- 2 teaspoons minced scallion
- 1 teaspoon grated lime rind
- ¼ teaspoon dried crushed thyme
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Lime wedges

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Melt butter in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking dish. Arrange cod in dish; turn to coat both sides with butter. Drizzle lime juice over fillets. Stir together scallion, lime rind and thyme; sprinkle over cod with salt and pepper. Bake in the 450-degree oven, allowing about 10 minutes per inch of thickness measured at its thickest part or until cod flakes easily when tested with a fork. Spoon pan juicec over each serving; garnish with lime wedges. Makes 3 servings.

If breakfast cereal has lost its crispness during the muggy Carolina summer, pour it into a pan and warm it in a 175 degree oven for about one hour.

No Rush To Feed Babies

Babies usually need no food other than milk until they are 4 to 6 months old. "Your pediatrician can guide you in introducing cereal and other semi-solid foods at the right time," says Sarah Hinston, extension foods and nutrition specialist, N.C. State University.

There is no advantage in rushing a baby into eating foods. In fact it may prove to be unhealthy in the long run. "Early introduction of semi-solid foods can lead to overweight infants," says Mrs. Hinton.

Stillbirths Represent A Very Special Loss

By LINDA WOLOHAN

CHICAGO (UPI) — The death of a baby shortly after birth or the failure of a pregnancy often can be harder on parents than the death of an older family member or friend, a psychiatrist says.

"The grieving process is very similar to what a person goes through when they experience the loss of an adult person — but this is much more intensive because of psychological issues that a pregnancy and wishes for a child entail," Dr. Gilla P. Davis said.

She is a Northwestern University Medical School psychiatrist and a psychiatric consultant at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Prentice Womens' Hospital and Maternity Center, a center for high-risk pregnancies. She tries to help men and women overcome grief if their babies are stillborn or die from other causes. Part of the therapy is a self-help group for parents who have experienced such perinatal loss.

If the grieving never takes place or is cut short, psychological and physical disorders may develop that make it difficult to resume normal family life, Dr. Davis said.

"A normal baby produces stress, but to have a baby that dies produces more stress," she said.

She said perinatal loss may be harder to deal with than other deaths because parents view that baby as an extension of themselves.

"When a couple wishes to have a baby, they deal with the unborn child as a reality. The unborn child is a part of that person's ego. When they lose that baby, they lose what was and what could have been — a part of oneself."

Wading through the grieving process for a baby is no less important than for an older family member or friend, she said.

"People may dismiss grief over the loss of a fetus because they assume not much has been invested in it," Dr. Davis said. "But attachment to an infant begins long before birth. When fetal movements begin in the fourth month of pregnancy, parents begin fantasizing about what their child will be like. By the last trimester, they've usually chosen names and started decorating a nursery."

A mother traditionally takes the loss of a baby much harder than the father because she has a much more intimate relationship with the fetus, Dr. Davis said.

After the death of a baby, the father is often given the task of consoling the mother, calling relatives and making funeral arrangements. In reality, the father needs just as much support as the mother, she said.

In the time right after the death — called the acute period of grieving — Dr. Davis and her colleagues try to explain to the father that he's going to be feeling differently about the loss than the mother. He is told not to try to rush her and to talk openly about his feelings.

"We give him permission not to go out and be a man," she said.

Dr. Davis said mothers are counseled the same way, but warned what it will be like to go home. It will be hard to go down the grocery aisle of baby food and diapers and it will be difficult to be with friends who have children, she said. It is normal to feel hostile at that time, she said.

She said a mother who has just lost a baby can often still feel that baby in her womb and hear it cry in what was to be the nursery.

Dr. Davis said the grieving process has been misunderstood.

"When a woman has a loss, well meaning friends and even the doctor will say it's for the best," she said. "The reality is that it's a significant loss — she needs as much support in the grieving process as if an adult died in her life."

The recuperative process can take up to one or two years, Dr. Davis said. Parents who experience perinatal loss and grieve normally will exhibit a number of characteristics, including insomnia, feelings of emptiness, loneliness, anger and guilt, weakness and exhaustion, disorientation and disorganization.

Abnormal grief behaviors include becoming super-busy without feeling a sense of loss, developing illnesses where there was no previous history, being severely depressed, or becoming self-destructive, she said.

To help cope with the death of a child, she suggested hospital officials:

—Encourage parental contact with the body;

—Offer the parents some remembrance of the baby, like a photo;

—Involve the mother in decisions about the newborn;

—Encourage a formal burial;

—Tell parents to expect a whole range of emotions, and that the mother will probably grieve longer;

Test Silk Before Its Cut

Before cutting into an expensive piece of silk, preshrink the fabric, recommends Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist-in-charge, N.C. State University.

"Home sewers can save about half of the retail cost by constructing a comparable silk garment at home, but the fabric must be properly prepared," she says.

To see if it is washable, purchase one-eighth yard more than needed. Cut this off and wash it in lukewarm water and mild soap. Rinse with cool water and press between two terry towels until the fabric is almost dry. Press with the iron set on wool-steam.

Then look at the fabric. Is it stiffer than the unwashed silk? Did it shrink? Does it look different? If the original and test fabrics look the same, the silk can be handwashed.

Pretreat washable silk using lukewarm water and mild soap. Place the fabric in the water and swish it around for a few minutes. Do not rub it. Rinse it; gently squeeze out excess water. Roll the fabric in terry towels and let it dry on a flat surface until just damp. Iron the silk.

If the fabric must be drycleaned send it to the cleaners and ask them to steampress the fabric.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Ira Temple of Foute 4, Four Oaks, announce the engagement of their daughter, Wanda Joyce, to James Francis Lalanne Jr., son of Mrs. Virginia Boren Lalanne of Chapel Hill and James F. Lalanne of Pinehurst. The wedding is planned for Oct. 1.

Vaudeville Star Reminisces On Short-Lived Stage Career

By RON KOEHLER

FREMONT, Mich. (UPI) — Geraldine Valliere's scrapbooks and diaries are full of memories of high times, the fame and thrills that came with a career in vaudeville.

The 87-year-old pianist was once the lead performer in an unusual all-woman four-piano act known as "Jerry and the Baby Grands." She worked with Milton Berle, Burns and Allen, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby — everyone who was anyone back then.

But what time gave, time took away.

Vaudeville died out and, after accompanying Major Bowes' traveling amateur show for a few years, Miss Valliere returned to this small western Michigan town to care for her mother.

"It's been a pretty lonely life after the excitement of traveling and meeting people in show business," she admits. "It was tough at first. All I know is music ... I can't even cook yet."

Her rise to vaudeville headliner was the stuff of which movies were made.

A small town music teacher, the daughter of a grocer, gets a job in Duluth, Minn., and works in her spare time as a theater pianist. She gains some local fame in 1919 by heading three other pianists in a piano quartet and, after appearing in Chicago, is booked for New York.

From there, the sky's the limit. Long runs at the nation's top theaters as Jerry and the Baby Grands, the piano quartet that came complete with a troupe of eight dancers and 6½ tons of equipment.

She even headlined a 13-country around-the-world tour that lasted from August 1929 to November 1930. Her quartet played the top halls in England, France, Germany, Australia and South Africa.

But the demand for a piano quartet that traveled with 13,000 pounds of gear in tow faded along with vaudeville.

After a couple of years with Major Bowes, she returned to Duluth — where a small confectioner had named a candy bar, the "Jerry Bar," after her — and then retired fo Fremont to care for her mother.

"My mother, right up until her last moment in life, said 'nobody ever had a daugher like you,'" she says. "I came home in 1941 to care for her after my father died ... and she passed away at 103.

"I never married, I never had time," she says, a bit wistfully. "Oh, I had my chances. My manager waited for me for 42 years ... he died in Florida,"

"I still hear from Milton Berle," she says. "I was his guest at the Lowell Showboat a few years ago.

"George Burns was one of my best friends ... George and Gracie were on the same show with me 30 some weeks one season. Kate Smith, Bob Hope, I worked with them all."

When she shows remorse, it is not over a lost career but bitterness toward the rigors of age.

"I don't play the piano any more," she says, rubbing her hands. "It's arthritis. I haven't played for two or three years. I just can't play well enough to suit myself — I always played fancy, not plain."

Show On Life Of Peggy Lee

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — About five years ago, a blonde, smoky-voiced singer from Jamestown, N.D., began her autobiography. Alas, she sighs, "'it began to be so long and tedious and" — she chuckles — "grim."

"It occurred to me to take bits out of it and do a musical instead."

The singer: Peggy Lee. The musical: "Peg," about both the bad times and the good times in her life and career. It's propelled by 29 songs, some her hits of yesteryear, others written for the show.

It's scheduled to premiere in November. And it'll be her Broadway debut in three respects — as a lyricist, co-author and star.

"I didn't intend to be in it at all originally," says Miss Lee, a shy, soft-spoken woman. "I was writing it for someone else to do."

That changed when she invited Irv and Margie Cowan, friends who own the Hotel Diplomat in Florida, to a party at her Beverly Hills home. Someone urged her to sing something from the work-in-progress.

"They loved it," she reports. "They said, 'We'd like to produce it.'" They summoned Broadway producer Zev Bufman to hear it. He also flipped and asked to co-produce it. All insisted she star.

"Naturally, we're only touching the highlights because I've lived a very active life and been around for a while," she says.

Once described by jazz critic Gene Lees as "the most consistently intelligent female singer of popular music in America," she's been around since the late '30s, when she broke in as a teen-ager, singing on small radio stations back home in North Dakota.

Her name was Norma Jean Egstrom then. Ken Kennedy, a program director on a station in Fargo, suggested she change it to Peggy Lee. And as Peggy Lee she became a star in 1941, when she cut her first hit, "Why Don't You Do Right," with Benny Goodman's band.

At last report, she had recorded 59 albums and 631 songs.

Songs like the finger-popping "Fever," the joyful "It's a Good Day," the sassy "Big Spender," the roaring Latino treatment of Richard Rodgers' "Lover" and the wistful "Is That All There Is."

A gifted lyricist, she also has collaborated Johnny Mercer, Duke Ellington, Victor Young and Broadway's Cy Coleman — the last a longtime friend who's working as artistic consultant on "Peg."

She's had a durable career, no question. But it almost came to a halt twice, the first time because of domestic bliss in the late 40s, when she was married to her first husband, the late Dave Barbour, and contemplated staying home with their young daughter, Nicki.

"I'd receive tremendous offers — when I think of it now it's really quite funny — but I'd politely say no to these fantastic offers and go back to my housework.... I loved every minute of it.

"Then one day I was asked to do a couple of sides with a group of jazz musicians, top guys, and I thought, 'Well, that'd be all right, I can get a babysitter.'"

Encouraged by her husband, she returned to the recording studios, resulting in "Black Coffee," an album now a collector's item. The marriage foundered in later years, with Barbour drinking heavily.

Then, in 1961, riding high, in heavy demand at the top clubs of Las Vegas, New York and London, she came down with double pneumonia and pleurisy. It forced her, she says, to include a respiratory machine as part of her backstage baggage for 10 years.

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Henry Moore is the most widely recognized sculptor internationally since Rodin, but much of his best work has been overshadowed by the monumental bronzes-with-holes which brood over American cities, parks and campuses.

The Metropolitan Museum has seen fit to remedy the one-sided view of the British sculptor's work by mounting a retrospective entitled: "Henry Moore: 60 Years of His Art," underwritten by the Gould Inc. Foundation.

Handsomely installed in the octagonal, many-vistaed Lehman Wing until Sept. 25, the show proves that some of Moore's best work is on the small side, carved by his own hands rather than cast in bronze. Curator William S. Lieberman quotes Moore as saying, "When required to make a work larger, I am always pleased."

These intimate sculptures are worked in many types of stone and in senseously grained woods; the pleasure they give does not rely on the impressiveness of monumentality. Some of the loveliest date fromm from the 1960s when Moore reduced his forms to the essence of an idea.

Having worked on his sculpture almost every day of his adult life except during World War II, when he concentrated on drawing, Moore has produced a huge number of works, 200 of which are in this exhibition. The earliest small sculptures seem to be influenced by African and pre-Columbian art, but by 1930 Moore had hit his stride with a stone madonna and child, a theme he has been exploring for the past half century.

The steady development of his studies of small-headed, big-limbed human figures, mostly sitting or reclining in poses of relaxed dignity, was interrupted briefly just prior to the war by a series of small stringed abstract figures. After the war he returned to figure studies on an increasingly large scale, and the show contains a number of small maquettes in plaster for monumental works cast in bronze, as well as monumental works themselves.

Early in the 1930s, Moore began to pierce his figures with holes that became larger with the years until his forms often seem to be fraes for his voids. Reachino a culmination in the recumbent figure in stone displayed at the New York World's Fair in 1938 (now in London's Tate Gallery), this style became the Moore legacy to the history of sculpture.

Moore remained a humane artist in a world hung up on pure abstraction, minimalism, and violent imagery, although his work can be described as interpretive abstraction. His group sculptures of caring, involved families and his return again and again to the theme of maternity provide an enduring statement of his involvement with his fellow man.

Among the many drawings in the show, some of the most interesting are studies for sculpture that prove Moore an exceptional draftsman.

The familiar drawings of Londoners in underground air raid shelters during the war are included, and so are the less familiar studies of coal miners at work in Yorkshire, where he was born into a coal-mining family. There also are some wonderful drawings of Stonehenge and studies of landscapes with twisted trees dating from the 1970s.

Moore has proclaimed that he is devoted to creating large-scale works because "size itself has its own impact, and physically we can relate ourselves more strongly to a big sculpture than a small one." He also has stated his preference for having his works displayed outdoors, especially in a setting of trees and sky.

Unfortunately, the Metropolitan cannot do this for Moore, but the Storm King Art Center in Mountainville, N.Y., has. Seven monumental sculptures and 11 smaller ones can be seen against a background of Catskill greenery for the rest of the summer.

Fellowship Show At Green Hill

GREENSBORO — The Green Hill Art Gallery on Sept. 6 will present the 1982-1983 North Carolina Arts Council Artist Fellowship Exhibition.

The exhibition is of work by the four North Carolina artists who are each the recipient of a $5,000 fellowship provided by the North Carolina Arts Council to four visual artists.

Following this initial showing in Greensboro (through October 2), the show will next travel to St. John's Museum of Art in Wilmington, and then go to the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh.

The exhibition is jointly supported by a grant from the N.C. Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

Green Hill Art Gallery, a non-profit facility, will have a name change effective Sept. 1 at which time it will be known as the Green Hill Center for North Carolina Art.

Demonstration In Weaving Today

WILMINGTON — Jo Anne Alford will demonstrate the art of weaving between 2 and 5 p.m. today at the New Hanover County Museum of the Lower Cape Fear, 814 Market Street, Wilmington.

A professional art instructor, Ms. Alford is a graduate of East Carolina University and studied weaving at the California Shcool of Arts and Crafts. She teaches locally and is a member of the N.C. Fiber Art Association.

The demonstration, fourth in a "Crafts in the Round" series, is open to the public and is free.

Archduke Ferdinand of Austria and his wife, Sophie, the heirs-apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne, were assassinated in Serajevo in 1914. The act precipitated World War I.

Success Rolls On For Author Frank Yerby

RIDING THE MULES — Vacationers riding mules make their way along Bright Angel Trail, a nine-mile trail that drops from an elevation of 7,000 feet to 2,400 feet on a steep, zigzagging trail. The strenuous journey takes two days. (UPI Photo)

Yerby says he makes more money from sales of his early books in Germany than from combined sales in all languages of his later, more thoughtful works.

And he will be remembered, if not financially rewarded, he says, for "The Dahomean," "Speak Now," "A Rose for Ana Maria" and "An Odor of Sanctity." There were 500 reviews in the English language for "The Dahomean" and only one was bad, he said.

Forty years ago, Yerby decided that the United States was no place for a young man whose list of ancestors read like the roll call of a small United Nations. So he went to France to raise his children in "a civilized country."

The 67-year-old author, a resident of Spain since 1954 when "fate" introduced him to Blanca Calle Perez, who became his second wife, seems to delight in a sort of bemused mysanthropy.

"You can call me a racist if you like — I dislike the human race," he says over a glass of bitters in the subdued bar of the Hotel Velasquez.

"But do not call me black," Yerby says. "That word bugs me. Besides, I have more Seminole than Negro blood in me anyway. But when have I ever been referred to as 'that American Indian author'?"

When he visited the United States was in 1977 for two weeks, it had followed a 26-year absence. He felt like a stranger in his native land.

During that visit, he attended a class reunion at Paine College in Augusta and later met some of the Southern white women and their offspring who had helped to make his early books best sellers.

"They'd come up to me, giggle and say, 'Oh that book, now that was a dirty one.'"

Yerby is impatient with many things. He did not like those who kept trying to introduce him to fellow American writer James Baldwin when both men lived in France. "If we had not been, uh, black, would anyone have thought it necessary?"

But he was a friend of another black writer, the late Richard Wright.

Another nagging issue for Yerby is William Styron's Pulitzer Prize-winning "The Confessions of Nat Turner." He will not forgive Styron — "one of my least favorite people" — for committing what he calls "literary dishonesty." He says Styron's book on Turner, a slave who attempted to lead an uprising in the South, is historically inaccurate and a "horrendous piece of racist information." But he said when he tried to write a novel that would set the record straight, no one was interested.

Styron's book was attacked by black intellectuals when it came out in 1967, partially because they found his Turner to be a contrived character speaking though the author's white voice.

But Yerby also thinks that Alex Haley's tracing of his ancestors in the best seller, "Roots," was pretentious.

Three of his books — "Foxes of Harrow," "Golden Hawk" and "Saracen Blade" — were made into films.

"Numbers one, two and three on the list of the worst movies of all times," he says. "They did me a bit of harm. I had nothing to do with the scripts, which were awful."

To make a living at writing, Yerby says, you have to make too many compromises.

"One of the problems a writer has, is that he is almost always subjected to the judgment of people who don't know what they're talking about," he says.

Yet he gives the impression, despite a slight heart attack several years ago, that there is nothing he would rather do.

He has just finished his latest work, tentatively called, "A Case for Danny Dolan," on his new word processor. The novel takes place during the Mexican-American War in the 1840s.

"It's the story of a man who sets out not to find the murderer and ends up making it impossible for the real murderer ever to be caught," he says.

Yerby smiles, enormously pleased with the idea.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Biographies are always popular with library users. Among the new ones at Sheppard Memorial Library are several which warrent special attention. "P.S. Jack Paar," the fourth book by Jack Paar, begins with his early years in radio, goes on to the time he spent as an infantry soldier entertaining troops in the South Pacific, to his short stay in Hollywood, and to the Tonight Show and its incredible success. The same air of high-spirited naturalness of the television show comes through in this book. He maintains his position as a master storyteller as he relates tales of his travels and friendships with Albert Schweitzer, Tallulah Bankhead, the Kennedys, and the Nixons. He claims to know everyone in show business and politics from the 1950s to the present. Although many strong opinions still surface in the book, Paar comes across as a gentle, questioning man fascinated with understanding and sharing the mysteries of human nature.

"Skywalking: The Life and Films of George Lucas" by Dale Pollock gives a detailed account of the career of one of the most successful filmmakers of all time with the films, "American Graffiti," "Star Wars," "The Empire Strikes Back," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," and now "Return of the Jedi" to his credit. Pollock duscusses George Lucas from his childhood as a typical California child who could even be described as an underachiever, through his college film studies, and his work with Coppola and Spielberg. In addition to the information about the man, Pollock gives details on the technical production, creative endeavors, economic expenditures, and marketing of Lucas' motion pictures. George Lucas, according to Pollock, is in the process of changing the direction of American film. He has turned his back on the studio system and predicts its eventual downfall.

"The Last Lion, Winston Spencer Churchill: Visions of Glory, 1874-1932" by William Manchester, the first volume of Manchester's two-volume biography, has two primary themes — the life of Winston Churchill and the death of the British Empire. It is a story of high adventure, bitter defeats, and inner strength of the man whose watchword was "never give in." This first volume gives an account of his birth to the early 1930s when it appeared that he was finished as a politican. He was the child of a beautiful, loose American woman and a gifted, unstable son of a duke. His early years were ones of miserable neglect. After his father's death, he set out for glory on battlefields in Cuba, India, the Sudan, and South Africa. He was elected to Parliament while Victoria was still queen. Shown in this book are the evolution and consequences of the character traits of Victorian virtues that made Churchill ideally suited to fulfill the difficult role of wartime leader. Manchester through his work with diaries, memoranda, government documents, private correspondence successfully pinpoints Churchill's distinctiveness.

Quarterflash Group Merges Elements Of Rock And Melody

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — With one platinum album and another soaring up the charts, Marv and Rindy Ross don't fight about music anymore.

The husband-wife team of the rock group, Quarterflash, are responsible for what has become the Pacific Northwest's most significant contribution to pop-rock music since the Kingsmen did "Louie, Louie" in 1963.

"It's been a real interesting evolution because his roots and my roots have very much merged," Rindy said of Marv, her high school sweetheart and husband of 12 years. "He has influenced me so much and I him as far as melody, so that what has resulted is a real nice compatible muscial feeling between us now. We don't argue anymore as far as the direction that we're going."

Their debut album in 1981, "Quarterflash," has sold 1.25 million copies. Their second release, "Take Another Picture," jumped 50 places on the Billboard chart in the first week after its release.

And the single from the second album, "Take Me to Heart," has been in the Top 20 for several weeks. It is regularly heard on AM and FM radio and is seen as a video on Music Television.

The group, a merger of two club bands from Portland, Ore., has been on tour since May, both as a headline act and an opening act for Linda Ronstadt and Rick Springfield.

The sound of the band is somewhere between the rock 'n' roll that influenced Marv and the folk music that Rindy grew up with.

"I kind of got bored with the low energy of folk music and Marv got interested in the melody aspect that folk music had," Rindy said. "I was more interested in the energy of rock 'n' roll, and it just sort of met midway. That's kind of what we're doing now, melodic rock 'n' roll."

Their former band, Seafood Mama, grabbed the attention of record company executive and promoter David Geffen when they performed the song, "Harden My Heart." He made Quarterflash his first new project in 1981, after having signed Elton John, Donna Summer and John Lennon and Yoko Ono to his record label in the 1970s.

But the pressure of a recording contract and moving away from the comfort of club performances took its toll on Seafood Mama. The group split, but Geffen kept Marv and Rindy under contract. They, in turn, were forced to find a band.

Eventually, four or five members of the band, Pilot, were chosen to round out Quarterflash. Guitarist-vocalist Jack Charles of Pilot is now second lead vocalist to Rindy.

The other members of Quarterflash are Rick DiGiallonardo on keyboards, Brian Davis Willis on drums and Rick Gooch on bass.

Rindy's saxophone playing, prominent in each of Quarterflash's single releases so far, has turned some heads.

"A lot of the feedback that I've gotten about playing the saxophone has been just that — 'Great, you play saxophone. Women don't usually do that.' I think that when you cross those barriers that people kind of like that," she said.

Quarterflash entered some different areas on the new album. Rindy has added some soprano saxophone play, and some of the songs have a harder, rock 'n' roll edge to them.

Between the two albums, "Don't Be Lonely," the flip side to "Harden My Heart," was included in the movie soundtrack of "Fast Times at Ridgemont High." Quarterflash also performed the title track to the film, "Nightshift."

"The first album was extremely moody and dark," Rindy said. "I think the second album feels different because we feel different. We are more positive at this point. I think the negativity that is expressed on the second album is more in terms of the pressure we're feeling.

"People are going, 'Ah, well, can they do it again? Is this a flash in the pan?' Critics love that one," Rindy said.

While advancing their music career, Quarterflash didn't discard the style that sold the first album and made "Harden My Heart" a rock 'n' roll standard.

"You have to in a way provide some sort of thread that will keep the people interested that liked your first album," Rindy said. "But if you don't show any growth or any new movement, I don't think it's good for the band and I don't think it's good for the record. It's just rehash."

State's Collection Of European Art Going On View Sept. 10

FROM THE EUROPEAN COLLECTION . . . "The Cliff, Etretat, Sunset," painted in 1883 by French artist Claude Monet, is one of the paintings from the varied periods and nationalities represented in the European collection of the North Carolina Museum of Art. A showing of European art will open on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 10 and 11, with a number of supplementary activities to be held in conjunction with the exhibition. (Photo courtesy N.C. Museum of Art)

RALEIGH — North Carolina's collection of European paintings, assembled in the early 1950s and formerly housed in a renovated building in downtown Raleigh that for years served as the State Art Museum, will go on view in the new North Carolina Museum of Art on Saturday, Sept. 10 and 11. The opening will include special tours, music in the galleries, informal lectures and films on European art.

With 16,000 square feet, the European galleries will house both the largest and most important of the museum's collections. The European works range from medieval sculpture of the 13th century through Impressionist paintings of the 19th century. The collection is particularly strong, however, in Italian Renaissance and Baroque paintings and Dutch and Flemish 17th-century works.

More than 90,000 visitors have viewed the museum's collections of American, contemporary and ancient works of art since the new building opened April 9. Additional areas will be completed and opened in 1983 and 1984.

On Saturday, Sept. 10, troubadour and folk music will be presented in the new galleries by Elise Witt at 11:30 a.m., and at 1 and 3 p.m. The North Carolina Symphony String Trio will perform in the galleries at 1 and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 11.

Museum director Dr. Peter Bowron will present an informal lecture, "New Spaces for Old Masters," at 2 p.m. both days in the auditorium. Bowron's talk will include a discussion on how paintings on view in the new galleries were chosen from the collection. Selections from the film series, "Civilisation," written and narrated by the late art historian Sir Kenneth Clark, will be screened in the auditorium throughout the day on Saturday and Sunday.

Half-hour tours of the new galleries will be offered by museum docent on both days. Special "discovery tours" will be organized for parents and children, with brochures to guide them through a series of games and activities which encourge a closer look at the works on view.

The European collection includes paintings by Old Masters who rank among the most important artists in history, some of whom are not widely represented in American museums. On view in the galleries will be works by Giotto, Botticelli and Raphael in the Italian collection, and by Jan Brueghel, Rubens and Jordaens in the Dutch and Flemish collection. British portraiture is well represented in the works of Gainsborough, Lawrence and Raeburn, while a wide range of French paintings includes works by Chardin, Claude, Millet, Monet and Pissarro.

The collection was formed in the early 1950s as the result of an historic one million dollar appropriation by the North Carolina General Assembly, the first state legislature in the country to expend public funds for an art collection. This appropriation was used by the State Art Commission to assemble a collection of 139 paintings, intended to present a survey of Western art. The legislative appropriation was matched by a gift of 71 Italian, Dutch and Flemish art works valued at one million dollars (at that time) from the Samuel H. Kress Foundation.

The collection has been further augmented by additional state funds and private gifts, most notably the Robert F. Phifer bequest, which provides an annual endowment to the North Carolina Art Society for the purchase of works of art.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays, and closed Mondays. No admission is charged. For more information, interested persons can call the museum at 919/833-1935.

GMA Sets October Tour To New York

A four-day, three-night museum and Broadway show trip to New York City from Oct. 31 through Nov. 3 is being sponsored by the Greenville Museum of Art, with reservations for space on the trip now being accepted.

The tour group will depart the museum, 802 South Evans Street, at 8 a.m. on Monday, Oct. 31, by charter bus. Brunch will be served on the bus.

After checking into the Hotel Milford Plaza, locaed at West 45th Street, the group will have a free evening to explore or rest.

On Tuesday, Nov. 1 a morning tour will be made of The Cloisters with the afternoon free for shopping and sightseeing. That evening the group will attend a production of "Katz," to be followed by dinner at Maxwell Plum's.

Activities scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 2 include a guided tour of the America's Exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and an evening performance of "My One and Only."

The group will depart New York at 9 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 3, with arrival in Greenville due that evening.

Cost of the tour is $315 ($300 to GMA members), based on double occupancy and a minimum of 40 people. The price includes all transportation by charter bus, round trip and inner city; hotel accommodations; brunch enroute; all museum admissions and tour fees; orchestra tickets to the two plays; taxes and luggage handling (luggage will be limited to one piece per person). The after-theater dinner is optional, and is an additional $24.50. The cost also includes administrative costs and a tax-deductible donation to the Greenville Museum of Art.

To reserve a space for the tour, payment is to be made to the Greenville Museum of Art by Tuesday, Oct. 4. A refund, less $25 administrative fee, will be made if written cancellation is received by Oct. 4. After that date, refunds will be made if a standby participant is available. It will be each individual's responsibility to obtain his/her substitute.

The museum reserves the right to withdraw without penalty the tour if there is insufficient registration and to make such alterations as may be desirable.

Museum Membership Drive Begins

The Greenville Museum of Art has initiated its annual membership campaign this month with the total membership goal set at 1,000.

Yvonne Deyton, chairperson of the Membership Committee, said that "considering the population of Greenville and Pitt County, a goal of 1,000 individual and corporate members is not unrealistic."

JOHN L. HOWARD . . . current president of the board of directors of the Greenville Museum of Art, says the museum "is an important asset to the Pitt-Greenville area." A membership drive, with a goal of 1,000, is now underway.

Membership dues are an important part of the museum's operating budget. Without local support in the forms of membership, along with city and county appropriations, the Greenville Museum of Art would not be able to offer the variety and number of services and activities to the public, according to Mary Anne Pennington, the museum's diector.

"The quality of life in this community is strongly affected by its cultural environment and the Greenville Museum of Art, which is the art museum for all the community, is an important asset to the Pitt-Greenville area," remarked John L. Howard, president of the museum's board of directors.

The museum cares for and displays a fine nucleus collection of regional arts and sponsors a schedule of year-round temporary exhibitions. The museum's education program includes the "Museum in the Schools" program, special interest workshops, and museum tours and art appreciation gallery talks.

Additionally, the museum offers a regularly scheduled series of related events throughout the year — The Best Lunch Ever Theater, lunchtime mini-concerts, the poetry forum, art classes for children and adults — all of which are partially supported by a Grassroots Grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

Other activities sponsored by the Greenville Museum of Art are the operation of the museum store which has for sale art and crafts created by local and regional artists, the annual Fine Arts Ball, and the annual spring Sidewalk Art Show. The GMA Guild of Volunteers staffs the museum store and the Docent Program. Membership in these two activities are open to all interested men and women.

Museum publications include a members' newsletter, exhibition announcements and a community calendar, as well as occasional catalogs for exhibitons.

President of the board of directors Howard, elected for a two-year term at the recent annual meeting of the board, is a Greenville native and executive vice-president and secretary of the Greenville Tobacco Company, Inc. Howard has a long history of public service, including two terms as a member of the Greenville City Council. Among several other positions he hold are those of chairman of the board of St. James United Methodist Church; president of the ECU Friends of the Library; and first vice-president of the North Carolina World Trade Association.

Howard, who attended local schools, UNC-Chapel Hill, and East Carolina University, is married to the former Parma Matthis.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the museum or desiring more information may call the museum, 758-1946.

New Shows At Waterworks

A "Mixed Media" exhibition is installed in the Murphy Gallery, consisting of work by Roy H. Drasites of Columbia, S.C., Mary Anne Keel Jenkins of Raleigh; and Jane Allen Nodine of Spartanburg, S.C.

A reception, open to the public, is being held at Waterworks from 2 to 5 today. The gallery's hours are 10 to 5 Mondays through Fridays, and 2-5 p.m. on Sundays. It will be closed Sept. 4 and 5 for the Labor Day holiday.

N. C. Symphony Will Perform Here Sept. 14

The East Carolina University Unions Artists Series Committee will begin its 1983-1984 season with a performance by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra and guest soloist Charles Treger, violinst.

The concert will be held in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 14. Tickets will be available beginning Wednesday, Aug. 31, and are priced at $7.50, either in advance from the Central Ticket Office or at the door prior to the performance hour.

Founded by Pulitzer Prize-winning Tar Heel composer Lamar Stringfield, the North Carolina Symphony, originally comprised of 48 volunteer musicians from 16 communities, performed its first concert in Chapel Hill in 1932. From those early days, the symphony has developed in size and scope, backed by supporters organized in 37 chapters statewide.

Last year, in its 50th anniversary season, the symphony's 73 full-time musicians traveled 22,000 miles within the state, appeared in performances in more than 120 communities, and performed more than 370 adult and educational concerts.

Gerhardt Zimmerman was named Artistic Director/conductor of the North Carolina Symphony in 1982. Formerly associate conductor of the St. Louis Symphony, Zimmerman has also been musical director of the Canton Symphony for three years. He has guest conducted many orchestras across the nation, and has performed several times with the National Symphony in Washington, D.C., including a special concert on the lawn of the Capitol with composer Aaron Copeland narrating his own "Lincoln Portrait."

Guest soloist violinist Charles Treger brings to the stage a background of varied experience. He has performed regularly from his repertoire of 50 concertos with such conductors as Abbado, Bernstein, Boulez, Ormandy, and Ozawa. Treger is also one of the founding members of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. His instrument is a "Hartmann" Stadivarius made in 1723.

CHARLES TREGER . . . violinist, will be the guest soloist with the North Carolina Symphony in a program at Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 14. Tickets, priced at $7.50, go on sale Wednesday at the Central Ticket Office, or can be purchased at the door prior to the performance hour.

Greenville Choral Society Sets Plans

The Greenville Choral Society, a community-based choral group, has announced its plans for their 1983-84 season.

Director Rhonda Fleming stressed that, although the group rehearses in Greenville, the choral society is open to any singer in eastern North Carolina. In past years singers have been drawn from Bath, Morehead City, Rocky Mount, and New Bern, as well as communities in the immediate vicinity of Greenville.

All singers are welcome to join. No audition is required, but voice placement is necessary.

The society is planning a full season of three concerts. The concerts will include a community "Messiah Sing" in December, a winter concert in January featuring a variety of shorter works ranging from the Bach motet "Lobet dem Herrn," the Lotti "Crucifixus" to a Gershwin medly from "Porgy and Bess," and a spring concert in April.

The choral society came into existence in September 1969 under the direction of Dr. Paul Aliapoulious. The choral group usually numbers around 75 members from a variety of ages and occupations.

The first rehearsal of the year is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Immanuel Baptist Church, 1101 South Elm Street. A party will follow the rehearsal. Rehearsals are every Tuesday night at this location and at the same time.

All members must meet with director Fleming for a brief voice placement at Immanuel Baptist Church. Appointments for voice placement are to be made by calling 752-4137 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., and asking to be connected with the Recreation and Parks Department.

Membership dues are $10 plus the purchase of music to be used. Music for the winter concert is $15 — the amount will be refunded to members upon return of the music after the concert. Members should bring their $25 (for membership and music) in cash or check to the voice placement session.

Travel Film Series Listed

The East Carolina University University Unions has announced the 1983-1984 Travel-Adventure Film Series. The film program is planned so that viewers can go around the world twice in five days of films.

Beginning in Egypt, the series moves to New York and an around-the-world cruise on the Queen Elizabeth II, then on to New Zealand, the misty isle of England, and then back to the United States for a visit to the American Southwest.

Each travel-adventure film begins at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Union, on the East Carolina University campus.

•William Stockdale's "Egypt — Open Borders," opens the series on Oct. 6 with a colorful visit to the ancient country steeped in exotic history and teeming with 20th century life today.

•The next stop, on Dec. 6, gets under way in New York City, as Doug Jones gets aboard the Queen Elizabeth II, the queen of luxury liners, to take viewers on "The Great World Cruise of the Queen Elizabeth II."

•After the cruise, travel-adventure film viewers on Jan. 23 will go half-way around the world to the land under the land down under, in "Discovering New Zealand" with Kenneth Richter.

•On Feb. 21, the next filmic journey will be with Bill Madsen, with an exploration of England's historic waterway, "The River Thames."

•The final tour of the 1983-1984 film season, on March 12, will take travel-adventure lovers to the wide beauty of the "American Southwest" with filmmaker Don Cooper.

Season tickets for the 1983-1984 Travel-Adventure Film Series can be purchased at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center by calling 757-6611, extension 266 and asking that an order form be mailed. Tickets can also be purchasee directly from the ticket office between 10 and 4 daily Monday through Friday. Individual tickets are priced at $12, and are $9 per person when purchased for groups of 20 or more.

Plans Announced For School Bands

Dottie Knight, director of Elementary Bands in the Greenville City Schools, has announced organization plans for the beginning of band classes for this school year.

Students who pre-registered last spring should obtain their recommended instruments from the school music dealer of their choice at this time.

Classes will begin in grades five and six at South Greenville and Wahl-Coates Elementary Schools during the week of August 29.

These instrumental classes are provided without charge to students in grades five through 12 in the Greenville city Schools. Mrs. Knight noted that this program offers all children the opportunity to have music training as a part of their school life.

Each year, a number of Greenville music students are being chosen for honors in the All-State groups, at Governor's School, and at the N.C. School of the Arts.

Parents needing additional information on the band program may attend a "drop-in" meeting at either of the following times and locations:

• Monday, 6 to 8 p.m., Wahl-Coates school, in the school cafeteria.

• Wednesday, 6 to 8 p.m., South Greenville school, in the music room, the first mobile unit behind the school.

LIBRARY GIVEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Paulette Goddard, the film star, has bequeathed to New York University's Bobst Library the contents of her late husband's personal library.

He was Erich Maria Remarque, the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," and this is the only substantial collection of his work outside his birthplace of Osnabruck in Germany.

Remarque was born in 1898 and drafted into the German Army during World War I where he served on the Western Front and was wounded five times. His experiences were the basis for his now-classic anti-war novel. He continued to write, and his novels continued to sell. During World War II, he escaped to Switzerland.

Gen. James Wolfe landed his British army on the banks of the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City June 27, 1759, and blocked off French shipping. After a 75-day siege, Wolfe led his men up the cliff to the Plains of Abraham where they defeated the forces of the Marquis de Montcalm and took the city. Wolfe, 32, and Montcalm, 47, were both mortally wounded in the battle.

A bomb destroyed the Tehran headquarters of the Islamic Republican Party June 28, 1981, and killed 72 persons. Among the victims of the blast were party leader Chief Justice Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, members of Parliament, and cabinet officials. The next day the Ayatollah Khomeini, Iran's spiritual leader, named Prosecutor-General Abdulkarim Musavi Ardebili to succeed Beheshti.

Dancer Richard Cragun In Demand As International Guest Star

BRINGING SUCCESS HOME — Little-known American ballet dancer Richard Cragun, who has cultivated success in Europe with his career, is bringing some of that renown home to the U.S. In a country where foreign roots are expected of ballet's best, Cragun is finding welcome in guest dancing appearances now in the U.S. and Europe as an emerging member of the international assortment of dancers considered the best. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Cragun has joined that small group of ballet dancers known as "international guest artists."

The star dancers in that group are in demand by ballet companies from Australia to Boston because they're good — and their names on the bill sell tickets.

Cragun, an American, is little known in the United States. But that's changing. His 21-year career, anchored in Stuttgart, Germany, and already expanded in Europe, is gathering steam here.

He was a guest star when Roland Petit's Ballet National de Marseille, France, performed in Montreal, Washington and New York this summer. He danced title roles in two full-evening ballets.

"I'm eager to stretch my career in whatever field possible," he says. "I'm thriving on new inspirations and fields. But it's not a question of me going out and looking. I've been sort of pulled out."

Most of the handsome, green-eyed Cragun's guest star appearances have been in Europe, as when Maurice Bejart choreographed his own interpretation of "Petrouchka" — Petrouchka becomes schizophrenic — and asked Cragun to dance it. He did the premiere with Bejart's tremendously popular company before an audience of 12,000.

"I like something with character and challenge, where the audience is less interested in what your legs and feet are doing than what your mind is doing," Cragun says.

He grew up in Sacramento, Calif., and studied dance there. His teacher realized he was gifted and told him to find a higher level of discipline and competition elsewhere.

He wanted to study in the Soviet Union or England and was accepted at the British Royal Ballet school when he was 15.

"I flew the coop," he says. "My family supported me my first year in London.

"It was a grueling year in London. They have elementary, intermediate and advanced courses. It generally takes a year for each. But time was pressing. Being a proud American boy, I wanted to earn my own money. I had taken my elementary course in California. I made an arrangement to take the other two years in one."

One of his British teachers then wrote to John Cranko, who had left the Royal Ballet to head the Stuttgart Ballet in 1961. Since Cragun was unable, as a foreigner, to join the Royal Ballet, she suggested that Cranko take him on her word. Cranko did.

"I was going on 17 when I joined Stuttgart in 1962," Cragun says. "I thought, 'Well, this will be a provincial company which will pay me a salary which I'll use as the financial means of getting on.'

"I didn't realize I'd meet Cranko the first day and my whole life would be changed."

A year and a half later, he received a letter saying the Royal Ballet's board had decided to accept him as the first American in the company.

He was thrilled. "But I realized how much John Cranko was developing my work and how blissfully happy I was. I chose to stay in Stuttgart. I even gave up on Russia."

In Stuttgart, Cragun immediately was cast with seasoned ballerina Marcia Haydee. "The question was, 'Can Richard cope doing 'Eugene Onegin' and 'Romeo and Juliet' with a dancer already on her way?'" The answer was yes. They became a team — offstage for 16 years and remain so onstage.

"I think we dance better together now than ever before," he says. "We know how each other feels about everything." Cranko died in 1973 and Miss Haydee now heads the Stuttgart company.

Cragun flew to the United States before the Marseille Ballet season to dance in a Jacob's Pillow memorial Near Lee, Mass., for dance writer Walter Terry. Terry's 22nd and last book was a biography of Cragun.

In the coming season, Cragun will dance in Cranko's "Romeo and Juliet" with the Paris Opera Ballet. He has had talks with Robert Joffrey. John Neumeier is creating a "Streetcar Named Desire" for Cragun and Miss Haydee for October for the Stuttgart Ballet.

He'll also take time off to rest.

"One of my favorite things is to get a bottle of wine with an artist friend and dive into each other's experiences and philosophies of where we belong," he says. "People often say I think too much. But you can not live and breathe ballet the whole time."

'Everyone Treats Me Like A Holy Relic'

NEW YORK — Disabled by a stroke eight years ago, Agnes de Mille, one of America's most versatile choreographers, is still alive and kicking, if only with one leg, reports Hilary Ostlere in Ballet News' September cover story.

Now in her mid-70s, de Mille is something of a legend for her works, ranging from the ballets "Rodeo" and "Fall River Legend" to dances for Broadway shows, "Oklahoma," "Carousel," "Brigadoon," all deeply rooted in the American tradition.

But more than just a choreographer, de Mille is also a TV personality, a literary figure and a born raconteur.

Attesting to her intense perception of life are her dozen books, three of them — "Reprieve," "American Dances," and "Where the Wings Grow," published since her illness.

When asked about what she is currently doing, de Mille answered Ballet News defiantly. "Nothing, I just sit here and everyone treats me like a holy relic.

"I've lost half my body forever," she says, but the stroke she suffered seems to have sharpened her rapier brain. Adding to her already long list of activities de Mille makes speeches, coaches, entertains, and takes care of her ailing husband of 40 years.

When once asked how to have a lively interesting old age de Mille revealed, "Start preparing yourself at the age of six. If you were a clod when you were young, you'll be a decaying old clod when you're old."

Playhouse Auditions Set

Singing and dancing auditions for the East Carolina Playhouse production of the rock opera, "Jesus Christ Superstar" have been scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday in the Messick Theater Arts Center on the ECU campus.

The auditions, to be held in Room 206, will begin at 7:30 p.m. on each of the two evenings.

A rock treatment of the Passion of Christ first opened on Broadway in 1971. The musical relates the last week in Christ's life, culminating in His crucifixion and His followers' search for meaning in His death.

There are 30 roles open for casting by director Edgar Loessin, with emphasis on a need for rock-style singers and musicians. Auditioning singers who can sing rock-style as well as traditional-style songs should bring music and prepare a song of their choice. An accompanist will be provided — no "a capella" singing will be accepted in auditioning. Dancers should bring rehearsal clothes and shoes, and will be given standard routines by the show's choreographer, Mavis Ray.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" will be the first production of the ECU Playhouse season and will be performed in McGinnis Theater October 5-8, and 10. ECU students, faculty, staff and area residents are all invited to audition.

For more details, interested persons are to call 757-6390.

William Dollar Had Varied Dance Career

William Dollar, born in St. Louis, Missouri in 1907, was one of the first major American male dancers trained almost entirely in the United States. A leading dancer in three companies in the 1930s and 40s, Dollar was a leading dancer first with the American Ballet, then Ballet Caravan and American Ballet Caravan. The latter two companies were the cornerstones of the New York City Ballet, formed in 1948.

Among dances for which Dollar won critical acclaim include "Transcendence," which George Balanchine choreographed especially for him in 1935, "The Fairy's Kiss" and "The Card Party," (later known as "The Card Game"), both in 1937. In 1940 he created the Wolf in "Peter and the Wolf" for the Ballet Theater, now the American Ballet.

Other high points in Dollar's career was choreographing "The Duel" in 1950, a work he had a year earlier staged as "Le Combat" for Roland Petit's Ballet de Paris.

After long years of being active in dance, both as a dancer and choreographer, in 1956 Dollar helped establish a state ballet school in Teheran, Iran, and in 1965 he was ballet master and guest choreographer at Teatro Municipal in Rio de Janeiro.

Billboard Tips New Nicky Harris Single Record

GREENVILLE MUSICIAN . . . Nicky Harris has just released his third single record, "Feels Like Love," which is currently being distributed nationally. Billboard has chosen the record as a Top Single Pick in the Country category of music.

Greenville musician Nicky Harris has just had a new 45-RPM single released, "Feels Like Love." The record was recorded at The Reflections Studios and mastered by Glenn Meadows of Masterfonics, both located in Nashville, Tenn. The record will soon be available in local record stores, and is being distributed to radio statins nationally.

Harris, a veteran of the southern club and concert circuit, has played shows with stars such as John Anderson, Tom T. Hall, and Johnny Paycheck.

On September 25, he is scheduled to perform at a "Picnic With The Stars" festival which will be held near Kinston and will also feature Ronnie Milsap, Gail Davies, and Gene Watson.

Top Country

8. "Puttin' on the Ritz," Taco
9. "Fascination," The Human League
10. "Stand Back," Stevie Nicks

Some of the regular places where Harris performs is the Carolina Opry House in Greenville, Jack's Music World in Rocky Mount, and Dillon's Club in Roanoke Rapids.

A native of Greenville, Harris graduated from Rose High School in 1968. At that time, he had already played in bands for four years. After graduation from high school, he fronted bands in the eastern North Carolina area for a few years at various localities throughout the South, playing one-nighters, three-nighters, in bars, at proms — whatever was available. He recalls being surprised that he and the other players actually made a living while being on that fast-paced musical run.

In 1978, and again in 1979, Harris was a semi-finalist both years in the American Song Festival composing competition. He has since recorded two singles on the then regional (now national) Carolina Records label — "Playing The Fool Again," and "Soul Deep." Both songs made regional charts, which has prompted Carolina Records to go national with the distribution of his new release, "Feels Like Love."

For his new record, Harris is backed up by two Nashville studio instrumentalists and for singing backup, the Kate sisters. On the road, his regular support comes from Timmy Tyson, drums; Woody Cowan, bass and backup vocals; and Catherine Styron, keyboard, saxophone and backup vocals. Ms. Styron will be succeeded October 1 by Dave Powers. In addition, three technicians travel with the band during performance.

This week, Harris was informed by Billboard, The International Newsweekly of Music and Home Entertainment, that "Feels Like Love" has been selected for listing in the August 20 issue as one of seven songs recommended as best bets in the Country category of Top Single Picks. In these selections, Billboard chooses songs on the basis "of superior quality" which they predict will hit the charts in the category under which listed.

Tickets are now on sale for this and five other entertainment series set for the 1983-84 season.

RALEIGH — A new name, NCSU Center Stage, has been given to the organization previously known as Stewart Theater on the N.C. State University campus. This year, for the first time, in order to identify programs being held both in Stewart Theater and in Memorial Auditorium in Raleigh, a decision was made to adopt the more inclusive name of NCSU Center Stage.

For the 1983-84 season, 28 attractions in six series of offerings have been scheduled. Dates, events scheduled, and ticket prices for each series are:

Capital City Series — In Memorial Auditorium.
(Tickets range from $35 to $60).
• October 21-22 — Maynard Ferguson and orchestra.
• November 6 — "Pump Boys and Dinettes," a musical play.
• December 4 — Jack Daniels's Original Silver Cornet Band Christmas Special.
• February 22 and 23 — "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," a musical.
• April 29-30 — Comedian Red Skeleton.

Dance Series — In Memorial Auditorium.
(Tickets range from $18 to $38)
• January 14 — Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlos, an all-male ballet troupe whose members impersonate female dancers.
• March 2 — Pilobolus, a modern dance group.
• March 31 — The Hubbard Street Dance Company, headed by Lou Conte.
• April 15 — The Pittsburgh Ballet Theater with a production of "Giselle."

Signature Series — Stewart Theater, NCSU
September 25 — The Acting Company in "The Cradle Will Rock."
• January 16, 17 — "Crimes of the Heart," the 1981 Pulitzer Prize-winning play.

Nearly four in five young adults say religion plays an important part in their lives, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. According to a nationwide survey of persons 18 to 36 years old, 37 percent find religion to be a very important part of their lives, and 41 percent call it fairly important, the council says. Fifteen percent said religion was not too important to them, while 7 percent dismissed religion as not at all important to them.

Amelia Earhart, the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, disappeared July 2, 1937, as she and her navigator, Fred Noonan, neared the end of a global flight. After taking off from New Guinea, the pair reported by radio that they were lost and running out of fuel. The plane did not reach Howland Island in the Pacific, and Miss Earhart was never heard from again.

Training Local Teachers For Outdoor Environmental Classes

IDENTIFIES ORGANISIMS ... Dr. Bob Wendling of the East Carolina University Department of Parks, Recreation and Conservation identifies organisms found in a pond at River Park North.

Text And Photos
By Angela Lingerfelt

This year students may be standing in pond water up to their knees and using mud sieves to find microscopic organisms instead of reading about them in their textbooks. At least that's what some area fourth, fifth and sixth grade teachers were doing recently at an outdoor education workshop at River Park North.

The workshop, entitled "Aquatic Environments," was held Aug. 19 at River Park North and was headed by Dr. Bob Wendling of the East Carolina University Department of Parks, Recreation and Conservation.

"The purpose of this program is to make teachers aware of this resource (River Park North) and to help them develop skills for giving outdoor education programs to their students," Wendling said.

In a morning session, the teachers were given a tour of the park's grounds, grasslands, pond areas and bottomlands. They were also introduced to the soon-opening River Park Environmental Awareness Center, which will include live animal displays and informative materials about wildlife and the park.

In the afternoon, the teachers collected small and large organisims from the park's ponds and identified them in microscopes. They then fit them into a food chain.

"We are learning how to use an untapped valuable resource that is located here in Greenville. The park is convenient for city and county schools and can be used when our classes study units on microorganisms, ecology or forestry," Jane Witort, a teacher at South Greenville School, said.

The workshop was sponsored by the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department, East Carolina University and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in cooperation with Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County.

"This is a great place for teachers to bring their students because it is the only place in Greenville with 360 acres of near-wilderness. We're trying to get teachers and students to learn by experimenting," Kelly Nagel, biologist at Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, said.

In addition to several large ponds and forest areas, the park also has equipment available for classes such as dip nets, seine nets, mud sieves, collecting jars and hand lenses.

"This workshop was beneficial to the students of Pitt County because it helped familiarize the teachers with the outdoors. The teachers can therefore give their students a better understanding of the outdoor environment," Howard Vainwright, park supervisor, said.

The workshop included activities such as taking temperature readings at different water depths, sifting out mud to find blood worms or beetles, catching fish in a seine net and catching water surface animals with a dip net.

According to Dr. Wendling, another workshop is tentatively scheduled for Sept. 21 and is entitled, "Food Webs in a Forest Environment."

River Park North, located on Mumford Road, is available for fishing, pedal boat riding, picnicking, hiking, wildlife observation and other outdoor activities.

LOOKING FOR BLOOD WORMS ... Rebecca Groom, teacher at South Greenville School, and Howard Vainwright look for blood worms with a shovel and mud sieve.

FAVORED TO WIN — Charlie's Angel captained by Charles Marr of New Bern leads the fleet in the 1981 Michelob Cup Regatta. He finished second in 1981 and 1982.

THE 6TH ANNUAL RACE - Four of the five previous winners will be returning to compete for this year's trophy.

September 3 on the Neuse

Regatta draws entries from five states

By GEORGE H. HALL

Who will win the 6th Annual Michelob Cup Sailing Regatta on the Neuse River, Saturday, September 3?

Will Thad Gerard of Washington and his Bandana-ed crew return to capture a second ship's bell first prize trophy? Can the Bath pirate, Wilton Smith aboard the Queen Anne's Revenge again outfox local Neuse River sailors? Or can Sallyeana Coyle of Durham and her bikini-clad, all girl crew aboard a Mirage 23 called Passions, distract crews of 150 other boats sufficiently to win the largest race for cruising sailboats in the Carolinas?

Charlie Marr of New Bern is the favorite. However, a local sailor has never won the event in all five of its previous runnings. Marr aboard Charlie's Angel, a Ranger 26, has come in second, twice. This July he captured the Oriental Social and the Hancock Creek Regatta on the Neuse River.

But, chance plays a big factor in this race and maybe one of the forty-five new entries, someone from Greensboro, Raleigh, Wilson or Rocky Mount, can beat the veteran Neuse River sailors.

The Michelob Cup Regatta is unique among sailing races. Besides its unique starting arrangement - the boats are performance rated before the race and the slowest start first, the fastest last - the event also has the reputation of being one of the largest floating social events on the East Coast. As one participant has noted, "It takes a lot of beer to run a sailboat race." The finishes have become widely renown for their spectacular color - most of the race is run with spinnakers. Among those who come to party, those who come for the joy ride and the excitement of participation also come some veteran hardnosed racers determined to win.

These factors combine. Ten days after the registration was opened in July, all berths were taken. Racers will come from five states and more than 1,000 people will be directly involved in the event.

The Regatta is actually a two day affair with most of the sailors arriving in Oriental on Friday. Lots of boat parties spontaneously erupt lasting to the early morning hours.

The scheduled first start, just off shore at Oriental, is Saturday morning at 10 a.m. The staggered starts last until about 11 a.m. The race takes three to four hours to complete. It's seventeen miles upriver around bouy marker 19 just off Fairfield Harbour then the leg North to the mouth of Broad Creek.

This leg Northward was added last year. Coming almost at the end of the race when the boats are bunched and jockeying for positions, it has added a new element of excitement. One veteran reported that the turn at marker 19 during last year's race was the most dangerous bit of sailing in which he had ever participated.

Fleet awards are given to the first 10 finishers in the race - the first being the Ship's Bell and Michelob Cup blazer. There are five class events with awards presented to the first five across the finish line in each class.

Saturday evening at Fairfield Harbour there is an awards dinner and dance for the participants. The dinner is served on commemorative Michelob Cup Regatta china.

Spectators are invited to watch from the shore or from their own boats, but cautioned to stay clear of the race path.

Weather day is scheduled for Sunday.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE COMIC HERO'S LIKELY PLACE TO SHOP: YOUR SUPERMARKET.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals A.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

This hand is from a 1974 World Championship match between North America and France. In one room the Americans made four hearts — in the other, the French went down six tricks.

The bidding shown is that of Bobby Wolff and Bob Hamman, who will soon be representing the United States in the 1983 World Championship. Even though three no trump is a laydown, North can't be blamed for preferring the 4-4 major fit.

Make the red queen in South's hand the queen of hearts, and the suit contract is much better.

On this auction, a club was a natural lead for West. Hamman won the ace, crossed to the ace of hearts and ruffed a club. He led a heart from dummy, taken by East's queen as West sluffed a club.

Instead of shifting to a spade, East persevered with clubs. Declarer won, crossed to the table with the king of diamonds and led another heart. East won and led another club. Declarer discarded a spade and the rest of the tricks were his.

In the other room, South opened the auction with a prepared bid of one club. Now a spade lead against four hearts became obvious. Declarer won, cashed the ace of clubs and came to hand with the ace of hearts. After taking a spade discard from dummy on the king of clubs, he continued with a low trump from his hand, in the hope of finding a 3-2 trump split.

Disaster. East drew all the trumps as West discarded his diamonds, and the defenders took the rest of the tricks with black-suit winners. Down six!

Nature's Show Of Color Slows At Georgia Park

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

LUMPKIN, Ga. (AP) — The walls of Providence Canyon are alive with the sound of rainbow-colored sand crashing to the canyon floor.

Nature has been playing its colorful symphony in the 250-acre canyon since 1850. But the passage of time has slowed its rhythm.

"The canyon is still alive, but it has slowed considerably," Providence Canyon State Park Superintendent Robert Baxter said. "Huge masses of earth still come crashing down, but only occasionally."

The slides — some involving as much as 50 tons of earth — are "not as hazardous as they would seem," Baxter said, because the sandy soil fans out as it makes its descent.

"It's a beautiful thing to see," he added. "The sands are every color of the rainbow, and when they come filtering down, they look like a geological kaleidoscope."

Signs are posted throughout the 1,100-acre park surrounding the canyon, however, warning visitors to stay away from ledges. The signs are most prominent at the rim of the canyon, which measures 150 feet deep.

Kudzu and honeysuckle have been planted in some sections of the canyon since the park opened in 1971. For the most part, though, the soil erosion has slowed of its own accord.

Wildflowers also help hold the canyon at bay. They include the rare and endangered Plumleaf Azalea, which is found naturally only in this part of the South.

"The canyon has pretty much bottomed out," Baxter explained. "The surface water has finally washed down through the sands to the hard clay bottom, which millions of years ago was the ocean floor."

Fossils displayed at the park attest to the area's oceanic history. But the history of Providence Canyon, once known as Georgia's "Little Grand Canyon," is a mixture of fact and local legend.

"Some folks like to say the canyon followed the hunting trails left by Indians," Baxter said. "But anyone who knows anything about Indians knows they didn't leave trails when they were hunting."

Others say the canyon formed from rainfall from the eaves of the house built in 1825 by the Rev. David Walker Lowe, one of the area's first settlers.

"I don't like to throw water on legends, but the Rev. Lowe's house was located about 100 feet away from the canyon's rim," Baxter said. "So how could the canyon start that far away?"

The best explanation, Baxter said, is that the farmers who settled this area of southwest Georgia "probably picked the worst place in the world to try to farm."

"There's plenty of good farming land all around here," he added. "But the soil here is extremely sandy, and over the years, it just washed away."

The canyon probably began as three or four ditches no more than five feet deep each, Baxter said. Most of the erosion probably has occurred since 1850.

Downtown Memphis Lacking Business

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Downtown Memphis is enjoying a resurgence with new hotels, offices and apartments, but the retail businesses that fled to the suburbs in the 1960s haven't returned.

And an observer strolling along Main Street, which was turned into a pedestrian mall five years ago, is confronted by empty storefronts and shops catering to low-income shoppers.

"We don't have any high-quality retail shops on the mall," said John Dudas, director of the Center City Commission. "Most of the revitalization didn't take place on the mall. It really has lagged behind the rest of downtown."

Renovation of downtown buildings — for office space and apartments — has moved at a brisk pace in recent years, however, and a $44 million hotel is being built at the north end of the 10-block mall.

The 450-room Peabody, once one of the South's fanciest hotels, was renovated in grand style. It reopened downtown in 1981 after sitting vacant for several years.

Mud Island, a $63 million tourist park, opened on the downtown riverfront last year, and an entertainment district along three renovated blocks of Beale Street will open later this year.

The Beale Street renovation, financed by local government and private developers, will cost $22 million.

The old Orpheum Theater is being renovated for musical variety shows, and Beale Street Landing, a $15 million project on the riverfront, will house four restaurants, 20,000 square feet of retail space and a parking garage.

Until the late 1970s, few people lived in the central business district, but Dudas said the downtown core will have 2,000 permanent residents in the next year.

"Right in this little area, we've got a pretty good community where there was nobody six years ago," said architect Jack Tucker, a pioneer in the movement to revitalize downtown.

Tucker and several friends renovated an old building to make four condominiums and a small shop.

"I like to be able to feel an identity with where I am," he said. "In the suburbs, you could be anywhere."

But he said financing for his project was hard to get, even though the whole thing cost about $250,000. Two local banks split the deal, since downtown investment was considered a bad risk at the time.

"It was tough even getting people to talk with us," Tucker said.

Brevard Is Mecca For Musicians

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the Brevard Music Center like to call their summer program "the vacation with a purpose."

Every summer, more than 300 youngsters from all over the country bring their instruments to the center to learn to make music together. Included in the educational package are spectacular views of the surrounding Blue Ridge Mountains, outdoor concerts under the stars and practice sessions on the grass or beside a lake.

"We're different and that's what attacts the people," said Frieda Woodruff of the center's public information office. "Our music schedule is intensive, but it's very enjoyable."

The center, located in the small western North Carolina town of Brevard in Transylvania County, was founded in 1936 at Davidson College as a summer camp for boys. It is currently affiliated with Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C., and is a state-chartered, non-profit educational institution.

The center has gained a reputation as an educational and performance mecca for musicians and has attracted such guest artists as Van Cliburn, Peter Nero, Phyllis Diller and Marilyn Horne.

Concurrent with the summer camp, the center presents an annual music festival. The series of more than 40 musicals, operas, symphonies and choral programs attracts thousands of people every year.

About 325 students and 120 faculty members begin seven weeks of classes at the center in early July. In addition to teaching, the center presents shows and concerts every week.

This year, the center celebrated its 47th season with six operas plus its first full-length ballet. The shows featured such internationally known performers as guitarist Carlos Montoya, Metropolitan Opera star Gianna Rolandi and pianist Jorge Bolet.

In most of the productions, the students are the stars.

"It's hard work getting ready for a production every weekend and concerts during the week," Miss Woodruff said. "Often, a summer here will help a student decide if he wants a career in music or not."

The sound of music drifts across the 179-acre campus 24 hours a day. Students practice their music under the trees, in rustic, private "practice cabins" and in open-air auditoriums with names like Harmony Hall.

Dr. Henry Janiec, artistic director, has divided the center into three teaching divisions: the Transylvania Music Camp for boys and girls ages 12 to 18, the advanced division for college students, and the Division of Special Studies for students seeking advanced or special class instruction. The center also has 10 major performing organizations, including a wind ensemble, a chorus, a concert band and chamber groups.

Every student receives at least one private lesson a week. Special master classes, taught by guest artists, are open to the students.

"The education and advancement of our students is our primary task and goal," Janiec said. "It is what we are all about."

Students, who pay $995 for the summer session, live in cabins scattered over the campus. They eat in the center's cafeteria.

"Running a campus this large, with 129 buildings of various sizes, isn't easy on any budget," said treasurer James F. Moloney. "But we pride ourselves on the quality of our faculty and students and what we do here. We feel the quality that we insist on keeps the good people coming back year after year."

According to Miss Woodruff, Brevard Music Center alumni are frequent guest artists.

"That's the great thing about the center: it turns out great musicians, then keeps attracting them back to inspire other young people," Miss Woodruff said. "Inspiration is one thing the center is all about — inspiring people to be great musicians. We think we're great at doing that."

Union Jack Marks Florida Cemetery

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — The Union Jack seems out of place flying over the Oak Ridge Cemetery, but to residents of this quiet Central Florida cattle town, it honors the burial place of 23 British airmen who died in World War II.

In two precision rows shaded by ligustrum trees are the graves of the young Royal Air Force pilots who perished between 1941 and 1945, either at two small airfields here or at one near Clewiston, 75 miles to the southeast.

The British cadets came to Florida in 1941 under an agreement between England and the United States to allow six British flying schools to operate in this country, says George Lane Jr., president of the local Rotary Club.

Primary training in PT-17s began at Carlstrom Field south of the city and Dorr Field on the east perimeter in June 1941. The two bases had been the U.S. Army's main Southeastern aviation training centers in World War I, and remained closed for years until they were reactivated when the war in Europe worsened.

"Three months later, the British set up advanced pilot training at Riddle Field near Clewiston," adds Lane. The RAF shared Carlstrom and Dorr fields with the U.S. Army Air Corps, but had Riddle to themselves, where the aviators flew BT-13s and AT-6s.

In the four years RAF cadets trained in Florida, 23 airmen died — 19 in aircraft crashes, two in auto accidents, one by drowning and one from meningitis.

Richard H. Wood, chairman of the British Cemetery Committee here, explains that because English tradition requires their military be buried where they die, British authorities arranged for a burial site at Oak Ridge Cemetery. Five lots were provided.

When the war ended in 1945, the airfields were closed and the U.S. government sold both to Florida on Dec. 4, 1949.

Dorr Field eventually became the DeSoto Florida Correctional Institution, a medium-security prison, and Carlstrom was converted into the G. Pierce Wood Memorial State Hospital.

Living, Family Rooms Angled For View

By Jerry Bishop

Framed by a redwood balcony, this natural stone and shake shingle design sets living room and family-dining room on an angle and indulges them with windows to capture the view. Sliding glass doors open both rooms to the balcony, and a wood-burning fireplace further equips the family room. Quick meals are possible in the large kitchen, which also allots laundry space. Closeted foyer presents a gracious entrance and all but eliminates cross-traffic through rooms. Four bedrooms and two compartmented baths provide ample sleeping quarters.

Confidence Helps In Arranging Home Interiors

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

When Vicki Wenger, an interior designer, went on early-morning television in Washington to discuss decorating she invited viewers to write in for free advice.

Most of the 217 individuals who took advantage of the offer sent letters in which the world "help" — often with an exclamation point after it — was included, she said.

This experience indicated to her that many Americans recognize their homes could be more attractive but don't know how to manage the trick on their own.

That, of course, is what the interior design profession is there to do, but some people are intimidated by designers.

"They are afraid they will end up spending too much money," said Ms. Wenger, a member of A.S.I.D. and owner of the business, Beautiful Spaces Inc., in Washington, D.C.

However, people are not as helpless as they may think when it comes to questions of decorating, she said. What they need is some confidence and a knowledge of the basics.

She has devised a method for laymen that can help. It involves measuring a "problem" room, indicating what furniture and accessories are already there, and putting it all down on paper, along with a written description of the major problem and the budget available to fix it.

Though she offers the service for a fee, individuals can accomplish some of the goals by doing them on their own.

To do so will require quarter-inch graph paper, a set of commonly-available templates that can be cut out to represent furniture and architectural elements, and a yardstick or tape measure.

After plotting the room as it exists and entering the measurements on a piece of paper, a plan of the room is drawn to scale on the graph paper, and the paper templates representing the furnishings are placed on the plan.

Answering a questionnaire which seeks information on window treatments, floor coverings, color scheme and decorating problems completes the process, although those using her service are advised to supply photos of their room as well.

Even without professional decorating advice, engaging in such a process is likely to produce excellent results, she said. At the very least, it will provide accurate information on what is on hand and room dimensions. It also forces a realistic appraisal of the problem and budget limitations.

Garden Clinic

Q. Is it all right to cut the lower branches off a Southern magnolia? (V.M., Siler City)

A. The natural form of the Southern magnolia is conical and low branching. I recommend not cutting the lowest branches off. The magnolia's dense shade and fibrous root system make it difficult to grow grass under the tree. Also, the lower brances will hide the fallen cone-like fruits and leathery leaves.

Q. Can I eat peas and beans that dried on the vine? (K.G., Battleboro)

A. Yes. You'll need the peas for New Year's Day and dry beans come in good anytime. Usually, moisture and high humidity make it difficult to dry these on the vine. Weather this summer has dried a lot more than peas and beans. This time use the dry weather to your advantage; harvest and enjoy.

Q. What is meant by the term 'gibbing' camellias? (K.H., Handerson)

A. Gibberellic acid is sometimes applied to camellia buds to hasten flowering and increase flower size. Applying this material to camellias is called 'gibbing.' Gibbing will hasten flowering so that blooms are produced before hard freezes have a chance to damage buds. Another benefit is larger flowers that tend to remain on the plant longer. Tha major advantage is that many outstanding varieties that are usually damaged by late frosts in the spring after buds have swelled and started opening can be brought into flowering and escape damage. Buds must be treated individually. Only a drop of commercially available gibberellic acid in a water solution must be applied in the base of a vegetative bud near a flower bud. Flower buds are usually plumper and rounder than smaller, pointed vegetative buds.

To apply the gibberellic acid, twist out a vegetative bud next to a flower bud and put one drop of the solution into the cavity where the bud was attached. Gibberellic acid should be applied from late August to early October. Treating a few buds at weekly intervals during this time will produce flowers over a longer period. On small plants it is best to treat less than 20 percent of the buds. Since gibbing usually causes the vegetative buds on treated stems to make abnormal growth in the spring, it is best to cut treated flowers for use in floral arrangements.

Q. I've heard that pecan trees are heavy feeders, meaning they need a lot of fertilizer. Is this true? (C.B., Carthage)

A. Yes. One reason is that pecan trees are usually grown on light, sandy soils from which fertilizer, especially nitgrogen and potash, leach easily. A bearing pecan tree needs about four pounds of 10-10-10 fertilizer per inch of trunk diameter measured one foot from the soil line. For example, a tree 20 inches in diameter would need 80 pounds of 10-10-10. If this amount of fertilizer does not produce at least six inches of new terminal twig growth each year, apply additional nitrogen. Apply the fertilizer in late January or February, or four to six weeks before bud swell.

Q. How severely should I prune my roses, and when is the best time to prune them. (W.B., Davidson)

A. Prune the weaker growing varieties lightly and the vigorous growing varieties more severely. Generally speaking, three to five of the strongest canes should be left and cut these back to 16 to 24 inches. Prune the plants in the early spring about the time growth starts. Climbing roses that bloom only in the spring should be pruned immediately after flowering. Climbing hybrid teas that bloom throughout the season should be pruned just before growth starts in early spring.

Interest Rates Cut Into Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — A real estate trade group says rising interest rates led to a 4.4 percent drop in resales of single-family homes in July.

Thursday's report from the National Association of Realtors said resales fell last month to an annual rate of 2.81 million units from a revised 2.94 million th previous month. The group had previously reported June sales at a rate of 2.93 million.

Even with the decline last month, such sales were 47 percent above July last year, it said.

Last month's decrease was the first since February and followed "a very small" 1 percent increase in June, the report said.

"The slowing is a direct response to the rise in mortgage interest rates over the past 90 days," said Jack Carlson, the association's chief economist and executive vice president said.

He noted that conventional mortgage rates had been declining toward 12½ percent during the second quarter, but now are at about 14 percent.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

When there is mildew anywhere inside or around your house, it means that simple plants called molds are growing there.

These plants belong to the group known as fungi and cannot grow unless there are high temperatures, excessive moisture, dirt, poor light and very little ventilation. Take away those five elements and the molds that cause mildew to thrive will quickly die. Ignore the presence of those factors and you will soon find unsightly growth, a musty odor and, eventually, considerable damage.

Continual vigilance is the price of an absence of dampness. Once you detect high humidity, decide how to get rid of it. While leaks in a house, attic or basement are sometimes responsible for wetness, the most likely cause is condensation. This occurs when warm, moist air settles on a cool surface, such as a water pipe, window, toilet tank or wall.

The high humidity inside your house is often the result of living. Every time you cook, wash, take a bath or even breathe, you are adding moisture to the air. When it builds up excessively, the moist air seeks to escape.

In many modern, airtight (actually, no house is airtight) homes, it settles on cool surfaces and condenses. But, in its search for drier air, it often goes right through building materials until it reaches the paint on the outside of the house, at which point it begins to push against that paint. The result is the kind of blistering and peeling you sometimes see on an outside wall where a bathroom or kitchen is located.

The easiest way to solve the problem of moisture buildup is to provide ventilation. A kitchen needs an exhaust fan. So do some bathrooms, although simply opening a window a trifle sometimes is the answer. Any time you take a bath or shower and find the medicine cabinet mirror all steamed up, you know the moisture is still in the room and should have been given a way to exit.

The same principle applies to elimination of excess moisture wherever it is found, be it in the attic or basement or anywhere else. Provide ventilation, even forced ventilation if necessary.

One way to handle the problem when it exists everywhere in the house is with the use of vents installed in the outside walls. When it isn't practical to allow the moist air to leave the premises, it must be trapped, which calls for the use of a dehumidifier. In small areas, such as closets, there are moisture absorbents, such as silica gel, activited alumina or calcium chloride, that can be used.

You can improve the situation inside a closet by keeping the doors open, using louvered doors, hanging clothes loosely so that air can circulate around them and being certain the clothes are dry and clean.

Musty odors in cellars with dirt floors can be eliminated by sprinkling them with chlorinated lime, sometimes called chloride of lime or bleaching powder. The chemical can be swept up when the odors are gone. On concrete floors and on tiled walls and floors in bathrooms, scrub with a dilute solution of sodium hypochlorite or other chlorine bleach.

Pour ½ to 1 cup of household bleach into a gallon of water. Scrub, quickly rinse with clear water and dry. The windows should be kept open while all this is going on. When scrubbing plastic or asphalt tile, work quickly to avoid spotting the surfaces.

You can avoid mildew in soiled clothes by not putting them into the hamper while they are wet. Let them dry first. If you are sprinkling clothes preparatory to ironing, sprinkle only as much as you can iron right away.

When storing leather goods, apply a wax dressing ahead of time. You can also use a low-pressure spray product formulated especially to prevent mildew, but test it first on a small area to be sure it doesn't change the color of the leather.

Summing it up, if you want to keep something from becoming mildewed, make sure it stays dry, clean and not too hot and that it has plenty of light and air.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have a vacation home in an area where there are mountains. My house uses water pumped from our well. Recently, there was a heavy thunderstorm. When we could not get any water, we discovered the circuit breaker to the well's electric pump had gone off. Each time we turned it on, it instantly went off again. We were told this was caused by a short circuit in the electric pump equipment which probably was caused by lightning. We also were told we would need a new electric pump. Can I replace the pump myself?

A. — Probably not. Sometimes even a plumber might not be able to handle this job unless he has the necessary equipment. A crane or boom truck is required to raise the pump safely. When a similar accident occurred at our place, a professional workman was lowered into the well opening onto a metal platform where the pump was located. After the pump was raised by the boom, along with a 21-foot length of pipe, it was decided to replace the entire 126 feet of pipe because it was so rusted and corroded. Plastic pipe was used in its place. A new pump was installed and everything was OK again. No matter what the extent of your knowledge or skill, such a project calls for the proper equipment, adherence to code regulations and workmen who do that kind of work every day.

Walnut Trees Point To Future

By THOMAS S. WATSON
Associated Press Writer

FISHERVILLE, Ky. (AP) — R.E. Peterson believes too many people are using America's natural resources without offering something in return, and that's why he's growing more than 6,000 black walnut trees.

Peterson, 66, has perhaps the largest private crop of black walnut trees in Kentucky. Dr. Henry Smith of Owensboro might have more but the margin would be small.

Peterson's trees in eastern Jefferson County cover 35 acres, while Smith's crop in Hancock County is on a 40-acre tract. The size of the crop, though, depends on how many trees are being grown and Smith says Peterson's may be larger.

Black walnuts are also grown experimentally on unused property at both Fort Knox and Fort Campbell, and Peabody Coal Co. has planted many trees in reclamation areas of western Kentucky, Smith says.

"I enjoy working with the trees," Peterson says. "It's a year-round job, pruning them in the spring, spraying and mowing all summer."

The walnut trees, when fully mature after about 40 years, would be worth 90 cents a board foot for saw logs and $4.50 a board foot for veneer, says Robert Wise, a forester at the state Division of Forestry's Elizabethtown office.

Peterson, a retired builder, would be 95 when his trees reach maturity, but he views them as an investment that could be sold long before then if necessary.

He sought advice from the state for planning his black walnut farm after crops, under a previous owner, failed because of flooding on Floyds Fork Creek, which runs beside his property.

The soil is perfect for growing walnut trees because of its richness, ability to hold moisture and drainage. Occasional flooding hasn't bothered the trees, Peterson says, except for minor damage from drift. The real dangers to the trees are insects, disease, fire and winds.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, AUGUST 28, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is not good for you to get all worked or stirred up about some condition of which you can do little but later you find a more sensible and rational influence.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your personal desires but don't do anything about them as yet and later study any financial problems that you may have.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't get upset over a secret worry and later you can do the things that bring you greater benefits. Watch your temper.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You could have an annoying time with another individual, but that is soon over and you can plan the future more intelligently.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Steer clear of an argument with a bigwig. Then you know how to get your personal wishes very easily.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Try to understand the highest concepts so that you can apply them wisely in your daily life. The evening is fine for relaxing.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look on the bright side of things in connection with one you like and later you can be off to interesting matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't permit a thoughtless word from a partner upset you and you soon can re-establish harmony between you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A duty you have to do is not to your liking, but get it done anyway, then later you can confer with experts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to cheer up the one you love and then you can get into whatever tasks are ahead of you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get rid of that grumpy mood and get into outlets that give you pleasure and are profitable as well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handling some communication that is not pleasing to you in a very conservative way is best. Confer with allies.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Concentrate on personal goals and forget financial tension and later you can be with good friends you like.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those interesting young persons whose sweetness will bring harmony and love at home and wherever he, or she goes in early life, but upon reaching adulthood will become very active.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is your time to get into the various practical details and matters of a very financial nature, and it is urged that you do get in touch with mundane minded persons to add to success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to become more successful and gain advice from experts that will be most helpful to you. Don't break promises.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Early make those appointments for recreation and tonight all works out just fine. Then get busy improving appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Have the secret discussions necessary so that your life becomes more safe and secure. Steer clear of men who are too demanding.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get in touch with friends who can help you gain better social status and pleasures and forget business matters.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can handle worldly matters today, but tonight avoid spending money for recreation. Show that you can please those in power.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study those periodicals that can bring you the information you need so that you can have greater advancement. Express kindness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study the best method for paying your bills so that creditors are pleased and satisfied. Then be careful in motion and avoid acidents.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Have that discussion with a partner that can lead to greater productivity in the days ahead. Be clever and invest wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get your work organized so that higher-ups will give you their OK and more benefits. Don't try to force your ideas on others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get every phase of your life organized in a most intelligent way and be very practical and down to earth. Be active today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show kin that you are devoted and care for their well being, then forget those who gossip. Daytime is best for entertaining at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into the details of any correspondence or other communications you have and get good results. Visit friends today.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who will always look at the practical side of things so be sure to plan for a good education so that there can be much success during the lifetime, especially in the field of business.

1. 408 CANDLEWICK DRIVE

This custom built home built by Carolina East Construction has 1884 square feet of heated space and 984 square feet of garage and porch. It includes 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, eat-in kitchen, formal dining room, den, formal living room, laundry room and sun deck. Some of the features are 1XL factory cabinets, open foyer, space saver microwave oven, skylight, Andersen windows, Peachtree insulated doors and masonry fireplace. This energy efficient home exceeds E-300 requirements. Price $96,200.00.

2. GREENWOOD FOREST

A beautifully wooded setting enhanced by lavish landscaping and brick walks creates an inviting atmosphere to this truly authentic Williamsburg style home as captured by builder Myles Cartrette, Cartrette Construction Co. in 1215 square feet.

Wood mouldings and textured wallpaper compliment the flush mounted fireplace with marble hearth in the great room. The formal character of the home is pleasantly interrupted by the country kitchen highlighted by a built-in china cabinet and mobile work island. A single french door lights the dining area and provides access to the 16 x 16 deck flanked by chippendale railings. The decor of the 3 bedrooms and 1½ baths provides a feeling of old tradition in a new home. As an added bonus, an office-work area that reflects the styling of the home was built on the rear corner of the lot. $68,500.

5. 232 BETH STREET

Seeing is believing the space in this contemporary ranch with over 1700 square feet. Excellent floor plan offering nook and formal dining. Access to deck from dining area and great room. Large master bedroom with separate powder room, bath and walk-in closet. Well decorated and energy efficient, fully appliance kitchen with self-cleaning oven. Come see how spacious 1700 square feet can be and enjoy country living in Cherry Oaks. Offered in the mid $70's with fixed rate financing.

6. LEXINGTON SQUARE TOWNHOMES

Townhouses are not all alike. Let us show you the things that make a difference. We are located on Oakmont Drive which is convenient to both town and campus. Our two and three bedroom units are insulated to E-300 standards and have heat pumps for heating and cooling. We offer a variety of insulated window styles, french doors, deluxe appliances, crown molding, attic storage and large patio with privacy walls. Buyers are given an opportunity to choose their own cabinet stain, counter top colors, wallpaper, carpet, vinyl, and all interior paint colors.

Come by and take a look. We think you'll like what you see.

7. & 8. CYPRESS CREEK TOWNHOMES

Individually owned townhomes have gained significantly in popularity. W.G. Blount & Associates is currently developing custom designed two and three bedroom townhouses in a completely private wooded setting just off East Arlington Boulevard.

Both the two bedroom and three bedroom homes will be featured in the 1983 Parade of Homes. These townhomes offer superior utilization of space, surrounded by gently rolling terrain and mature trees.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

There are two kinds of ice cream eaters in this world, the fastidious and the slovenly. There is nothing in between. I have seen a 2-year old enraged with dripping chocolate. Zachary's best friend always orders strawberry even though chocolate is his favorite because, he says, the chocolate is usually "more melty" and thus more likely to make his hands "sticky and icky."

Such drawbacks never seem to bother Zachary and Meg, although their trips for ice cream invariably are followed by hair washing and showers with excessive scrubbing and special attention to fingernails, underarms and navels. This holds true whether they are wearing shorts or snowsuits.

Of course, I would be unfair were I to indict ice cream alone. My kids are sloppy eaters, period. I applaud them for being especially careful if they get half of what they're served to their mouths. I have often broached the subject of covering my kitchen floor with a plastic drop cloth, but so far Phillip is against it. That's why my originally vanilla floor is usually closer to neopolitan.

Phillip and I have tried to alter the children's eating habits, but in spite of frequent reprimands, Meg still continues to pinch bread and pizza into crumbly little pieces before she throws it at her mouth as she leans as far back in her chair as possible. And Zachary still insists on peeling the eyes off his black-eye peas and discarding them some place where they can't look at him.

I don't allow them to eat watermelon within 10 feet of the house. At that distance, the only way to distinguish them from the food is by the rinds. After they finish eating, I turn the hose on them.

It's really too bad that the managers of the typical ice cream parlor don't provide a similar alternative. But they don't. They even frown upon holding kids under the water fountain. Most do deign to dole out, with exaggerated stinginess, a few skinny paper napkins. But wiping down with a napkin is like polishing silver with a Band-Aid.

I have repeatedly asked Meg and Zachary if the ice cream tastes sweeter or richer when they bury their faces in it. I have wondered aloud about the purpose of the long, loving licks that never quite catch the rivulets cascading over the cones.

They never have an answer. But Phillip does. He started ordering their ice cream in cups. "You can't bite the bottom out of a cup," he explained.

This didn't deter Zachary from getting it in his ears, nor did it staunch the flow into those attractive gaps in his overalls. At one point he did seem to remember his appearance because he put down his spoon, wiped his hand on Phillip's leg, then ran his fingers through his hair.

Although he made very little fuss about having a cup instead of a cone, he was disturbed by the inevitable few drops remaining in the bottom when he finished. He picked up the cup in preparation for lapping up the residue, but Phillip stopped him.

"No, no. We are not dogs."

"No, I am not a dog," Zachary said solmenly. "I am a nice soft kitty cat. Meow. Meow." And he dove for the cup.

So Zachary licked his hands.

"Well," I said, "you have to admit that it's more effective than napkins."

Florence Dental Clinic Attracts Hundreds Daily

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — Out-of-staters swarm to the South Carolina coast each summer in search of sun and surf, but hundreds come looking for something that doesn't show up on any list of conventional tourist attractions — new teeth.

They head for the Sexton Dental Clinic, a nondescript cluster of brick and cinderblock buildings where six dentists and 45 helpers can measure a patient in the morning and deliver dentures the same day.

Outside in the parking lot, patients and their families lounge in cars and campers with license tags from Arizona, Texas, Ohio and Connecticut as they wait to be fitted. Dozens more line the big waiting room inside.

"There's a lot of other clinics now, but we're still the largest that I know of," said business manager Lee Williams, grandson of the late founder, C.L. Sexton.

When Sexton moved his dental practice to its present location 30 years ago, his was the only place in the country with an on-site denture lab and same-day service at rock bottom prices. Competitors branded it a "denture mill."

"He kept his prices down because he was making what he considered a fair profit," Williams said. "He was ostracized from the dental community."

With no advertising but word-of-mouth, the practice ballooned to 150 employees and as many as 500 patients a day.

By the time Sexton died in 1975, the clinic was adding the last of its 30-plus examining rooms, and it held an option on land on nearby Interstate 95 for a glittering, multistory building and adjacent motel.

"We let the option drop shortly after Dr. Sexton died, and I'm glad now that we did," Williams said.

That's because the late 1970s saw a dramatic plunge in business as other dentists began adopting some of Sexton's ideas, more companies began offering dental insurance to employees and travel costs skyrocketed.

The clinic actually pulled out of one building it occupied across the street from the main complex and now serves about 100 patients daily with a payroll cut by two-thirds. But Williams remains optimistic.

"We're really improving again now," he said. "It's picking up. The other dental services we've added are helping."

'The Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon'

By JAY BOBBIN

Labor Day traditionally marks the end of the summer season, but it also signals an event that unites approximately 200 television stations as a special "Love Network." It's the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon to benefit the activities of the Muscular Dystrophy Association; this year's edition begins from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas on the evening of Sunday, September 4 and continues for 21-and-a-half hours, with hourly cutaways to the stations for locally produced segments. Prominently featured during the program will be 1983's National Poster Child, Christopher Rush.

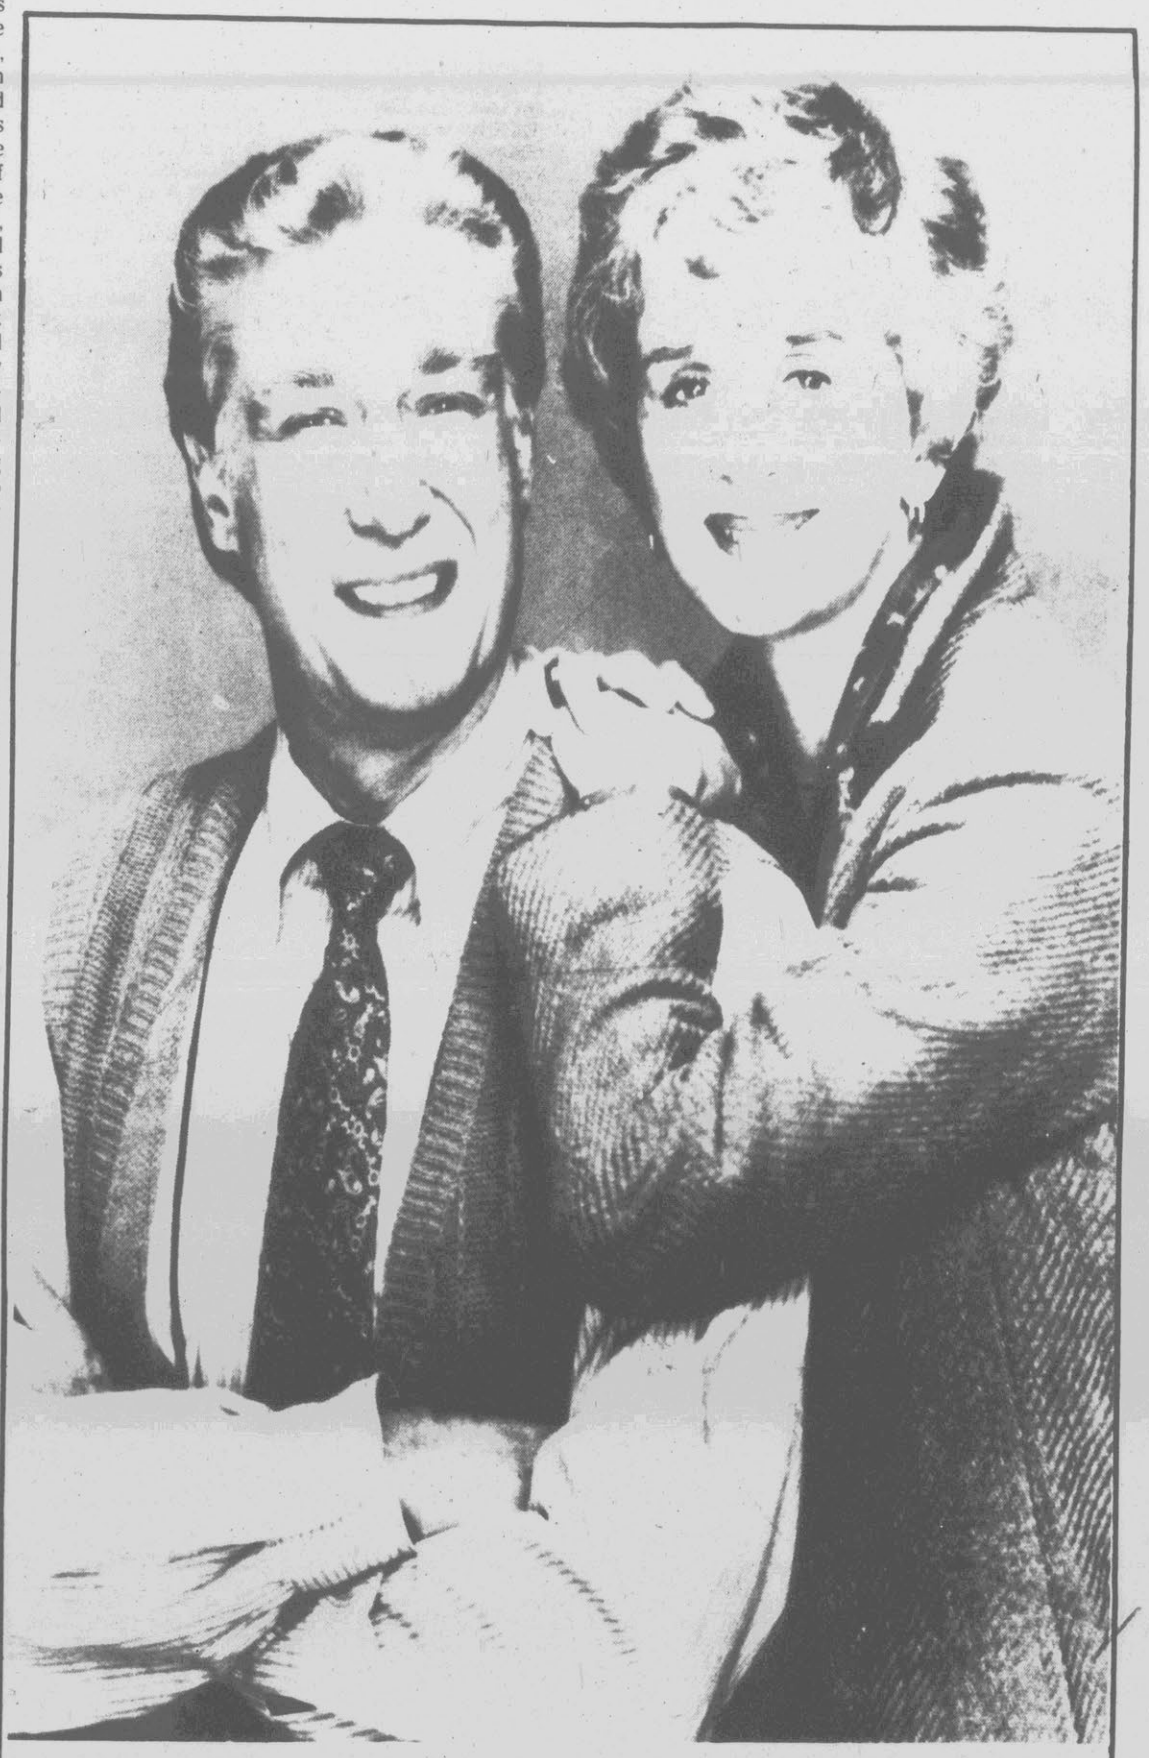
The special features close to 100 celebrities this year, but there are several factors that figure importantly in the broadcast on an annual basis. One of the foremost is "Tonight Show" regular Ed McMahon, who co-hosts the program with Lewis, and this year's telethon marks his 15th time in that role. He also provides viewers with a necessary constant in the midst of all the activity: "They think of me as the anchorman, the guy who's gonna keep it all rolling. No matter what Jerry or anybody else does or how crazy they get, I'll be there to pull the reins a little bit and say, 'Here's where we're headed.' The people at the MDA know that, and sometimes, they'll signal me to take over if Jerry's into something that he can't get out of easily himself."

A vice president of the Muscular Dystrophy Association and a member of its Board of Directors, McMahon recalls when the telethon "was carried on just a few stations in New York State." Now that the event has grown to such huge proportions, he finds himself in another position: "I have to say goodbye to the audience in the theatre every hour, because there are so many people trying to get in. Though they're usually not too pleased, I ask them to go home and watch the rest of the telethon and make their contributions. I do 21 warm-ups during the course of the telethon, one for each audience. You don't see that on the air, because that's the time we cut away to the local stations, but the crowd is just going gangbusters by the time we're back on. Believe me, at 3:00 in the morning, that's not easy!"

Actually, McMahon may get more of a chance to rest this time than in years past: Casey Kasem, emcee of the popular syndicated radio show "American Top 40," will also be sharing the hosting duties in Las Vegas. In his first appearance on the telethon last year, Kasem learned what he was in for: "After Jerry introduced me, none of the microphones seemed to be working! There were four of them in front of my face, so I could barely see the cue cards anyway; then, Jerry came over and started doing some funny stuff in his own inimitable way. Between trying to ignore Jerry, look through the microphones and read my lines, we somehow made it work. That's what happens in a live telethon, and that's what makes it so exciting, not knowing what's going to happen from moment to moment. You can never fully prepare for it."

Behind the scenes, though, Kasem has involved himself in related activities that have indeed prepared him for his telethon role. "In the past year, I've been very involved with the Maxwell House-MDA Walk-Alongs, of which I'm National Chairman. I've appeared in Chicago, Miami, Los Angeles and New York City in recent weeks, while those events were being staged. I've also participated in the Houston MDA Kickathon, a one-day event that pulled in about $100,000 last year. Additionally, I've been active in national meetings in Miami and L.A., and I've been asked to join a special board of corporate executives of major companies." Kasem's easily recognizable voice has led to numerous requests for telethon appearances during 1983, but he opted to concentrate on the MDA effort "because of the impact that Jerry has, and because it's singularly so effective."

Despite all the glitter and glamor, the obvious intent of the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon is to raise funds to combat muscular dystrophy and related diseases. Since that point is not lost on the performers, they don't intend to have it lost on the audience. "In the limited amount of activity I've had with the MDA in the past year," says Kasem, "I've gotten a good idea of Jerry's dedication and what a miracle worker he truly is. It isn't an easy task; what I've done, you could multiply a thousand-fold and get an idea of what Jerry's gone through for many, many years. It's far and away above the call of duty."



Richard Mulligan and Barbara Barrie star as husband and wife on ABC's limited-run Thursday evening series "Reggie."

ONE CHANNEL GIVES YOU A SELECTION. TWO GIVE YOU A CHOICE.
HBO SHOWTIME

Too many people who subscribe to cable television aren't getting all they should out of it. Because they limit themselves to one commercial-free pay channel for movies and entertainment.

With any one of these channels they get terrific entertainment. But they don't get the freedom to watch what they want when they want.

GET A LOT MORE OUT OF YOUR TELEVISION.

When you add more than one pay channel to basic cable service, your choice of programming becomes virtually limitless. you can watch movies whenever you want, news whenever you want, even sports whenever you want.

In fact, on some days you may be able to choose between 2 or 3 showings of current movies. Or watch a sports event, a special and a movie on the same evening.

So don't cut yourself off from the full enjoyment of cable. Call your local cable operator and give yourself a choice. After all, choice is what cable television is all about.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I have been watching the show "Fantasy" for quite awhile now, but I keep missing the address. Please tell me something about the show and give me an address where I can write them about my fantasy. JAMES WRIGHT, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO JAMES IN FAYETTEVILLE: "Fantasy," a unique daytime series on NBC, offers viewers a chance to see their own dreams become a reality. "Fantasy" is not just limited to the NBC studio where the show is taped. The producers and staff have made it their business to reach all over the USA to fulfill some of the wishes expressed by the thousands of letters received each week and that work is done by the "Fantasy" truck, a rainbow-hued, 20-foot-long tractor and trailer. By this summer, the truck will have visited all the states on the mainland. Hosted by Peter Marshall and Leslie Uggams, "Fantasy" is produced by Merrill Heatler Productions and Earl D. Greenburg Productions. Write for your fantasy in c/o "Fantasy," NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Ca., 90027, and if you see a rainbow colored truck in Fayetteville, watch out!

DEAR MICHELE: I think Joyce DeWitt is a great actress. I would like some more information on her and her address. ROBBIE TYNER, CARTHAGE, N.C.

TO ROBBIE IN CARTHAGE: Born in Wheeling, West Virginia, on April 23, Joyce DeWitt is one of four children. Raised in Speedway, Indiana, Joyce developed a keen interest in studying old movies on television. As Joyce puts it, "Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn were terribly responsible for my becoming an actress." She worked extensively with a drama coach while in high school and performed in many amateur productions. Ms. DeWitt then enrolled at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana, and graduated with a B.A. degree in theater and a teaching credential. Working the Indianapolis dinner theater circuit, Joyce directed, staged and starred in several plays and musical revues before heading to Los Angeles to enroll in the U.C.L.A. graduate school. Joyce is single and lives in the Southern California beach area. Off-camera her interests include dancing, singing and music. I suggest you write to her in c/o the series, "Three's Company," ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND/PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' c/o This newspaper, 322 East Broadway, Hopewell, Va. 23860.)

Lee To Cohost

Michele Lee, star of "Knots Landing," has agreed to cohost with former First Lady Betty Ford, her Annual Conference on Alcoholism at the Annenberg Center. "Knots Landing," this season, will focus on a problem similar to the one faced by Mrs. Ford in the past.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

The popular daytime series "As the World Turns" will soon be taking its viewers to an adventure on the high seas. Special sequences are currently being taped aboard a regularly scheduled Home Lines Cruise ship to Bermuda. The remote scenes will feature series regulars MEG RYAN, FRANK RU YEON and SCOTT BRYCE as their characters board the ship on the trail of stolen coins. Intrigue, romance and suspense will keep viewers tuned-in when the special segments begin to air on Sept. 12.

Ever see a strutting peacock? NBC's peacock, whose tail feathers have been dragging in the No. 3 spot, has come to full bloom. NBC received 133 Emmy nominations for prime-time and late-night series (eclipsing CBS with 73 and ABC with 68). The Emmy Awards, given by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, will be telecast live Sept. 25 — Oh, yes — they will be on NBC.

ROCK HUDSON should be very pleased with ELIZABETH TAYLOR's "thank you." He very graciously offered her the use of his New York penthouse during her performance in "Private Lives" on Broadway. She, in turn, is having his library, bedroom and bath completely redecorated. (Hope he likes the colors.)

ASK ME ABOUT TV

Mark Hamill

By Val Carew

MARK ONE — I really loved Mark Hamill in "Return of the Jedi." What other movies has he been in? Is he married? — L.M., Stamford, N.Y.

Mark was in the first two "Star Wars" movies as Luke Skywalker, and he was also in the film "Corvette Summer" in 1978. During the 1974-1975 TV season he appeared in a series called "The Texas Wheelers." Most recently, Mark played Mozart on Broadway and in Los Angeles in the play "Amadeus." He is married and a father.

ANYWHERE U.S.A. — Where in New York is Port Charles located? That's the setting for the stories in "General Hospital." — Mrs. E.U., Spring Hill, Fla.

Priscilla Barnes

PRETTY PRISCILLA — Was Priscilla Barnes in any other series before joining "Three's Company"? — J.A., Las Vegas, Nev.

Yes. She was on the 1978 series "The American Girls," where she played reporter Rebecca Tomkins.

DOUBLE HEADER — Is it true that Herve Villechaize is off "Fantasy Island" because he had a run-in with Ricardo Montalban? — A.M.B., Flagstaff, Ariz.

Herve is off "Fantasy Island" because his salary demands were too great. He has been replaced by Christopher Hewitt, who is quite dapper and debonair.

CAR 54 — What were the names of the officers on "Car 54, Where Are You?" — A.J.E, New York.

Joe E. Ross played Gunther Toody, with Fred Gwynne as his partner, Francis Muldoon. The sitcom ran on NBC from Sept. 17, 1961 to Sept. 8, 1963.

(Do you have a question about TV? Write Val Carew at 200 Park Avenue, Room 602, New York, NY 10166.)

Leonard Nimoy (l.) and William Shatner (r.), who worked together in the "Star Trek" series and movies, are reunited on the Saturday, Sept. 3 rebroadcast of ABC's "T.J. Hooker." Nimoy portrays a long-time buddy of Sgt. Hooker (played by Shatner).

Throughbreds Run For The Money

The world's richest thoroughbred horse race — the Budweiser Million — featuring the cream of the crop in international racing, will be televised by NBC Sports, Sunday, Aug. 28 (5-6 p.m.), from Arlington Park in suburban Chicago, Ill. This will mark the third consecutive year that the network has aired the mile-and-a-quarter turf classic, which offers thoroughbred racing's richest first-place prize — $600,000.

Three weeks ago, the Arlington Park International Panel of expert handicappers from England, France, Ireland and the United States made its selection for the starting field of 14 horses out of over 250 original nominees.

The field includes: John Henry, whose victory in the inaugural Million in 1981 helped him win that year's Eclipse Award as Horse of the Year; The Wonder, trained by Charles Whittingham, the trainer of last year's Million winner, Perrault; Erin's Isle, another Whittingham-trained horse, which won the mile-and-a-half Hollywood Invitational Turf Handicap in May; and Be My Native of England, runner-up to Perrault last year. The panel also named 10 horses as alternates should any of the 14 original selections be scratched.

The most notable pre-race development thus far has been the reemergence of John Henry. Inactive since November 1982, the spirited 8-year-old gelding returned to the turf July 4 and pulled off a surprising win in the mile-and-an-eighth American Handicap at Hollywood Park (Calif.). It was the first ride aboard John Henry for jockey Chris McCarron.

A victory in the Million would carry extra significance for John Henry, clearly the sentimental favorite with the worldwide racing audience. By capturing the $600,000 first prize, the indomitable gelding would become the first race horse in history to win more than $4 million in career earnings.

Among the other thoroughbreds in the starting field are (in alphabetical order): Diamond Shoal (Eng.), Hush Dear (U.S.), L'Attrayante (France), Majesty's Prince (U.S.), Muscatite (Eng.), Nijinsky's Secret (U.S.), Thunder Puddles (U.S.), Tolomeo (Eng.), Trevita (U.S.), and Wassl (Eng.)

'Sportsman' Guest

Pamela Bellwood will guest host a segment of ABC's "American Sportsman." Filmed on location in northern Manitoba in Canada, it is the site of Canadian studies of the Beluga whales. Pamela will be diving with them to take measurements and study their behavior.

Join The 'Navy'

Maud Adams and Jill St. John have joined the cast of the new CBS series "Emerald Point, N.A.S." (formerly named "Navy"). Jill plays the wife of an ambitious Naval officer and Maud is the wife of a sailor who is missing in action.

PITT COUNTY SCHOOLS

1982-83 COMMUNITY REPORT

RESPONSIVE-TO THE NEEDS OF THE

Pitt County Schools is indeed responsive to the needs of the children whom we serve. Members of the community serve the students of this county in many capacities. Members of the Board of Education, parent organizations, school volunteers - all are people who respond to provide needed services for our young people. In addition, the professional staff of Pitt County Schools is responsive to both the individual and collective needs of our students.

Pitt County Surveys Community To Determine School Needs

To assist in the planning of future educational programs and services for Pitt County youth, citizens and school personnel identified and prioritized areas for focus during the next five years. This thorough process has provided an information base for setting objectives and measuring results as a school system. This process will result in efficient and effective delivery of service to Pitt County youth.

A Message From The Board Chairman

Dear Friends Of Education:

The Pitt County Board of Education is extremely proud of the accomplishments of the school system during the 1982-83 school year. Parents, students, personnel, and members of the community have all worked together to create a school system that serves, touches, and teaches all students. The total school system and communities have made this a year of accomplishment-accomplishment in academics, extracurricular activities, and athletics.

On behalf of the Board of Education, I extend my sincere appreciation to everyone who made this a year of growth for education. By combining our efforts and promoting education, we have served the individual student in our school system and contributed to the future of Eastern North Carolina.

It is with great pride and optimism that we face the 1983-84 school year. With continuing support from the community, the endeavor of our students, and the work and foresight of our professional staff, Pitt County Schools will provide quality education for all our students.

Sincerely,

Mark W. Owens, Jr.

Chairman

A Message From The Superintendent

The purpose of an annual report is to inform citizens regarding the status of education in their schools. Those of us who have the privilege of working for you in the Pitt County Schools recognize a responsibility to keep you abreast of how your tax dollars are being used and to provide you with information that will allow you to determine the effectiveness of that use. It is with this purpose in mind that we bring you a report on emphases within the Pitt County Schools during the 1982-83 school year.

The accomplishments of the school system are numerous and reflect a true partnership between schools and community to provide educational excellence.

The theme of this publication is "The Three R's: Responsive, Resourceful and Ready." These words are indicative of the partnership between the school system and community. Each has been mutually responsive to meeting the academic needs of the youth of Pitt County. The schools and community have been jointly resourceful in providing exemplary educational programs. The schools and community have combined talents ready to meet the challenge of the future. With this hand in hand effort, education in Pitt County will continue to provide programs of excellence while meeting the challenges of the future.

After reading this report, I am confident that you will feel a deep sense of pride in both the school system and community. The accomplishments, events, and programs which are noted are a small indication of the many outstanding happenings of the school year.

Sincerely,

ADVISORY COUNCILS-COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

Pitt County Schools' Advisory Councils play an important role in the affairs of the Pitt County Schools. The awareness and sensitivity to pupil needs that insightful Advisory Council members provide help to foster positive school-community teamwork.

The Councils also serve to maintain a line of communication with the Board of Education in an effort to better meet the educational needs of the students of Pitt County Schools.

Advisory Councils meet monthly from August to May and June and July as necessary.

For further information about your local school Advisory Council contact the Office of the Superintendent or your local principal.

THANKS

The Pitt County Board of Education would like to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of the local advisory council members for a job well done during the 1982-83 school year. We would also especially like to recognize the chairpersons of each local school advisory council. They are as follows:

Elbert Buck, Ayden
Frances Tucker, Grifton
Mayhew Buck, D.H. Conley
Robert Halstead, Jr., Chicod
Mayhew Buck, G.R. Whitfield
Cathy Bullock, Winterville
Barbara Owens, Farmville
Frank Barrow, Falkland
Donald Robinson, North Pitt
Willie Wallace, Belvoir
Brenda Lewis, Bethel
Donald Robinson, Pactolus
James Dallas Roberson, Stokes
Sidney Scott, Wellcome

COMMUNITY SCHOOLS

The Community Schools Staff works closely with twenty schools and one activity center in the Pitt County System in order to maximize the use of public school facilities and increase citizen involvement within the schools. This overall objective is pursued through three major areas: public information for the entire system; a full-time volunteer program; and assistance with program development and implementation. Major emphasis is placed on an interagency approach to determining needs, and developing avenues for meeting those needs. During the past year school facilities were used more than 10,356 hours with a total participation of 171,502.

Through the public information area, good working relationships have been developed with local newspapers, radio and television stations. As a result, the Pitt County Schools have received extensive coverage during the past year. The program currently operates a weekly radio show on six local radio stations, as well as assisting in coordinating guests for Education Spotlight aired during Carolina Today on WNCT-TV. The Broadcast; a newsletter for parents, and Newsbreak; a newsletter for school personnel, have been distributed during the past year. Advisory Council members are kept informed each month by Previews, a notice of the Board of Education agenda.

In addition to keeping the public better informed about the schools, the Community Schools Program has solicited more citizen involvement through the overall volunteer program. Volunteers have served as tutors, library aides, clerical assistants, chaperones, resource leaders, and in many other capacities. In 1982-83 over 472 volunteers gave over 10,000 hours to the students in Pitt County. This involvement has developed into a major resource for the school system.

The third major area of the program has involved program development and implementation. The Community Schools staff has worked cooperatively with Pitt Community College, the Agriculture Extension Service, Sheppard Memorial Library, recreation departments throughout the county, and various other agencies to determine needs and then develop programs to fulfill those needs. Many programs both short term and long term have been made possible through cooperative efforts, involving both human and financial resources.

The Pitt County Community Schools Program is dedicated to maximizing the resources of the system in order to better serve the total population, as well as utilizing the vast resources within the community to improve the quality of education.

Parent Organizations are important to any school. The slide above was purchased by one such group at H.B. Sugg School in Farmville. On the slide, are members of the group with the principal and the manufacturer testing out the new equipment.

ADOPT-A-SCHOOL

As a part of the overall Community Schools Volunteer Program, the Adopt-A-School Program has provided a very successful avenue for community involvement within the schools. Through this program, businesses, civic groups, churches, individuals and other community groups actually adopt one or more schools and thereby pledge their support to the school. This support has been in the form of volunteer hours, donations of materials, professional assistance, financial support and many others. Adopters for 1982-83 were

RESOURCEFUL — PEOPLE AND

The people and programs of Pitt County Schools are resourceful people and programs. The administrative staff, teachers, and auxiliary personnel are continually searching for ways to make the most of every minute of instruction and services. Through creative leadership, time management, and cooperation with community and educational agencies, Pitt County Schools' students are given the very best.

FIRST FOREIGN LANGUAGE FAIR

On April 20th Pitt County Schools held its first county wide foreign language fair for second and third year students studying foreign language in the Pitt County high schools. The Foreign Language Fair which involved viewing a slide presentation by natives of foreign countries, competition in areas such as food events, culture exhibits and art, poetry recitations and dramatic interpretations, costume contests, dance presentations and vocal and instrumental presentations was a big success. Approximately 160 students attended the foreign language fair held at D.H. Conley.

The program, which was coordinated by the Pitt County foreign language teachers, had as its major purpose to promote and enhance the study of foreign language in the high school curriculum. Prizes were awarded and community volunteers, including professors of foreign language at East Carolina University, assisted in the judging of all events.

Pitt County Schools looks forward to continuing to hold a foreign language fair in the 1983-84 school year.

SAT TRAINING WORKSHOPS

On Saturdays in November and December of 1982, for the second year, a county-wide SAT Training Workshop was offered to the seventh grade students who qualified to take the SAT as a part of the Duke Talent Identification Program. In February and March, 1983, the SAT Training Workshop was offered to all county juniors and seniors who were registered to take the SAT. Drs. Charles Coble, Bertie Fearing, Katye Sowell, and George Weigand conducted the workshop sessions.

The purposes of the training workshop were to acquaint students with test-taking procedures and a "testing environment:" and to encourage the students to review verbal and mathematical skills and concepts.

THE GIFTED AND TALENTED PROGRAM

The program for gifted and talented students is provided in the elementary, middle and high schools. A student in this program is one who is achieving well above average as indicated by achievement tests, grades and other measures of ability. Eleven teachers were employed during the 1982-83 school year to serve the five hundred sixty-six Pitt County Schools students identified as gifted.

Pitt County's gifted students participated in enrichment activities, traveled to various locations, and expanded their knowledge in subject areas such as Math, Language Arts, Science and Social Studies. Working with microcomputers was also a part of the learning experiences of many of the gifted students.

Gifted students in all four high schools participated in Project EXODUS. Selected juniors and seniors were given the opportunity to develop life and career goals through association with professionals within the community.

LANGUAGE ARTS

The Pitt County Language Arts Program is designed to teach communication, skills of reading, writing, speaking and listening through the subject areas of reading, spelling, language and handwriting. A major emphasis in the total curriculum is on reading and the instruction of writing. Supplemental reading is required and recommended reading lists give the students the opportunity for enrichment. In the high schools, four units of English are required for high school graduation. The high school program offers electives in such areas as composition, drama, speech and foreign language. The foreign language program throughout the county includes the instruction of Latin, French and Spanish.

The four through eight reading program is centered around a basal skills textbook and a basal literature text. Each student enrolled in grades 1-8 has an individual progress folder, which is a skills checklist that corresponds to the reading series. This chart includes testing information on periodic, pre and post-tests and overall cumulative tests for each level of the textbook.

Writing has received a major emphasis in the Pitt County Schools over the past three years. A writing in-service taught by Dr. Tom McClennon, Professor at Atlantic Christian College, provided the basis for in-service in each school. Furthermore, Pitt County Schools has developed a K-12 writing curriculum which was revised in the spring of 1983 and will be implemented in the Pitt County Schools during the 1983-84 school year.

CULTURAL ARTS

The cultural arts program includes programs in visual art, music, drama, and dance. Through the arts, students are provided avenues to create and to explore the limits of their abilities. Diversified art forms and modes are provided to create meaningful, aesthetic learning experiences. Course offerings include visual art available to all students, at every level, through regular classroom teachers and/or art specialists; music, both vocal and instrumental instruction, drama activity, including the reading, viewing and performing of authentic expressions and physical activities common to all people; and dance providing avenues for personal growth through healthful experiences for mind and body. Students gain experience through various performances and shows and competitions.

MEDIA PROGRAM

The Pitt County Media Program, which has been recognized nationally with the John Cotton Dana Public Relations Award and the Distinguished Administrators Award, has continued to provide quality services to teachers and students during the past school year.

The school system was represented in the fall by two media coordinators who gave presentations at the state media conference. Media Coordinators attended the winter media conference and the Children's Literature Conference at East Carolina University. Inservice provided on the Performance Appraisal System gave the Media Coordinators an insight into the evaluation process which will be used with them during the coming school year.

Highlights of the school year for the media program included special activities to salute Children's Book Week, North Carolina Heritage Week, Black History Week and American Education Week. Students from several schools enjoyed ghost stories told to them by Nancy Roberts, a well-known North Carolina author, while students at W.H. Robinson Primary were entertained with stories by Jackie Torrance, a nationally acclaimed story teller.

During the coming school year, middle school media coordinators will include the use of microcomputers in the total media program. Students will have an opportunity to utilize programs designed to enhance learning in academic areas as well as try their skills at video games.

The media staff will continue to seek excellence in the overall program and to work toward the major goal of creating life-long users and appreciaters of books and other media materials.

SCIENCE

The science program in Pitt County Schools, K-12 is taught sequentially ranging from the general in the lower grades to the more specific in the upper grades. Four categories of objectives pull the program together throughout the grades: knowledge of science; skills in science; the investigative nature of science; and the attitudes, interests and appreciation of science.

Although science is taught in K-1, formal instruction (textbooks) begins in grade two. Students study biological, physical, and earth-space science in K-3 with emphasis on building attitudes, process skills, observation, classification and prediction.

Student grouping for science in grades 4-8 is based on results of the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills which is administered in the spring of each year in grades 3-8. A county developed differentiated curriculum based on the State Department of Public Instruction's Competency Goals and Performance Indicators serves as a foundation of science instruction for the three strata into which each grade is divided.

State adopted and supplementary texts, laboratory equipment, human resources, audio-visual aids, field trips, and various forms of assistance supplied by business, industry, educational and other community institutions are some of the more commonly used resources in the county classrooms.

Through the leadership of Burroughs Wellcome and the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and other industries, RECAST provides service to 15 middle and high schools in the county. RECAST (Regional Eastern Carolina Affirmative Student Training) encourages students who have evidenced potential in science and math, to pursue education and perhaps careers based on these activities. Through the RECAST meetings at the school, industry volunteers expose these students to the availability of math/science careers within the Eastern Carolina Community. Good rapport and liaison with teachers, counselors, and industries help insure and maintain interest in science, math, and technical pursuits.

Each school having grades 4-12 has a local science fair in the spring. Scientific procedure is stressed at each grade level. Winners are announced in each school and these winners then participate in the East Carolina University Science Fair.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Middle Schools

All eight schools offer a Pre-Vocational program of Occupational Exploration to students in grades 7-8. Occupational Exploration deals with the groups of related job fields, occupational guidance, and information about the world of work.

High Schools

With assistance from guidance counselors and teachers, students choose from a comprehensive Vocational Education program designed to inform and prepare each student for employment and/or continued advanced technical education. There are three levels of Vocational Education skills preparation courses offered:

Level I. Introductory skills
Level II. Advanced skills for specific content area
Level III. Specialized skills for specific content area

Each student must complete a Level I course or pass a competency skill test before enrollment in a Level II course; therefore, in order to complete an entire program area, a student must begin by the tenth grade.

| District competition: | In state level competition: |
|---|---|
| 21 - 1st place | 2 - 1st place |
| 19 - 2nd place | 8 - 2nd place |
| 10 - 3rd place | 2 - 3rd place |
| 6 - 4th place | 1 - 4th place |
| 13 - Received recognition | 19 - Received recognition |

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Pitt County Social Studies Program has been in the planning process during the 1982-83 school year in order to implement the new North Carolina Social Studies Curriculum during 1982-83. The primary goal of the new social studies curriculum is to give each student experiences necessary for the obtainment of knowledge, skills, and attitudes necessary to become an effective and contributing citizen in an interdependent world.

In order to accomplish this goal the new North Carolina Social Studies Curriculum has the following focus:

- Kindergarten: Individual and Group Relationships
- Grade 1: Home and School
- Grade 2: Neighborhood and Local Community
- Grade 3: Communities Around the World
- Grade 4: North Carolina: The Land and Its People
- Grade 5: The Western Hemisphere: The United States, Canada and Latin America
- Grade 6: The Eastern Hemisphere: Europe and The U.S.S.R.
- Grade 7: Eastern Hemisphere: Africa and Asia
- Grade 8: North Carolina: History of American State
- Grade 9: Economic, Legal and Political Systems in Action
- Grade 10: World Studies
- Grade 11: U.S. History
- Grade 12: History and Social Studies electives

CLOSEUP

The four Pitt County high schools have continued participation in the CloseUp Program on the local, state, and national level.

CloseUp, a program of direct student involvement with governmental officials, is designed for students to have the opportunity to learn first-hand about what is happening in their government. CloseUp Pitt County was the first local CloseUp program held in the nation. The 82-83 program was held on November 4th and 5th, 1982. The program included speakers from the District Attorney's office, the parole office, and the sheriff's office. Also included on the program were representatives of the Economic Development Commission, social services, the Pitt County Board of Education, the tax department and a representative from the county manager's office. County Commissioners spoke to the group in small group sessions. The final event of the second day was a panel of mayors or town advisors from Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Grifton, Grimesland, and Winterville.

Competitive Grant Received To Implement Teacher Performance Appraisal System

The Pitt County School System was one of seven units in the state to receive a competitive grant to implement the state mandated performance appraisal system. With a grant of $39,000.00, Pitt County targeted its beginning (first and second year) teachers for assistance in meeting the standards of the Teacher Performance Appraisal System. A series of inservice programs was developed for the beginning teachers. These programs focused on the role, rights, and responsibilities of the teacher in the performance appraisal process; how to set, achieve, and measure long range, short range, and daily lesson goals; how to communicate effectively with students, parents, and administrators; and effective teaching practices. Other workshops were designed specifically to assist principals and assistant principals in the teacher support process. During the fall of 1982, Dr. George Redfern, a nationally recognized authority on personnel and evaluation, worked with principals and beginning teachers in the development and use of professional improvement plans.

PROGRAMS!

Math

The Pitt County Elementary Mathematics Program is a skills continuum for grades K-8. Three different strata have been established at each grade level in order to meet the appropriate educational levels of the students.

Students in each stratum study math objectives that are most appropriate to their educational needs. The teachers monitor the mastery of these objectives on the group profile sheets. The D.C. Health Math series is the basal text used in the program. The objectives on the strata sheets have been correlated with the D.C. Health Math series, the California Achievement Test and Diagnostic Math Inventory. This correlation helps teachers to locate the Pitt County Math Objective in the basal text and makes them aware of the objectives tested on the California Achievement Test and Diagnostic Math Inventory.

The math objectives listed on each strata sheet are coded to alert the teacher to those objectives which are emphasized and needed for mastery in accordance with Pitt County Promotion Policy.

A precompetency math test is administered to all seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth graders in an effort to provide the teachers with a profile of skill strengths.

The SRA Criterion Reference Test is used in the fourth and fifth grades as another tool to help teachers assess individual and group needs in math.

In order to better prepare students for college an accelerated math program begins at grade 6. The students who qualify for this program complete 3 years of math in the sixth and seventh grades and then enroll in algebra I at the eighth grade level. This enables a student to take algebra II, geometry, advanced math, and calculus at the high school.

The Pitt County High School Mathematics Program provides curriculum for the student who may terminate his formal education at the high school and for the student who desires to further his education. Courses include General Mathematics, Algebra Prep, Consumer Math, Basic Math I & II, Developmental Competency Math, Algebra I, Algebra II, Geometry, Advanced Math, Algebra III, and Calculus.

Math Contest

Pitt County students participate in several local and state math contests. These contests foster competition and encourage students to excel in academics.

A high school math contest is held in March to help students gain experience before the regional math contests at East Carolina University, Atlantic Christian College, or Elizabeth City State University. Approximately 180 students participate in the local contest.

Awards are given for 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and Best Team in each division: algebra I, geometry, algebra II, and comprehensive. An overall Best School Award is given to the school which has the highest mean average of all divisions.

Over 130 students from Pitt County's eight middle schools participate in the middle school contest. Awards are given for 1st, 2nd, 3rd, Best Team and Best School in seventh and eighth grade math. Plans are to extend math competition into the sixth grade for the spring middle school math contest.

Awards were given to Grifton Elementary and A.G. Cox in the algebra I competition of the high school math contest. North Pitt High School and D.H. Conley received the awards in the algebra II division. All awards in the geometry division were received by D.H. Conley High School while North Pitt High School, Farmville Central High School, and Ayden-Grifton High School took the awards in the comprehensive division.

After this math contest, students return to the schools and have study sessions with the problems on the high school math contests. This prepares them further for regional and state competitions. Grifton Elementary, Farmville Central High School and North Pitt High School had winners at the East Carolina University Math Contest. A.G. Cox, North Pitt High School and Ayden-Grifton High School had winners at Elizabeth City State University.

Transportation: Precious Cargo

The Pitt County Transportation Department serves both Pitt County and Greenville City Schools as well as the operation of all other county vehicles.

During the school year 168 buses serve Pitt County Schools. Last year these buses travelled over 1.6 million miles of Pitt County roads. These same buses transported over 7,115 students to and from school each day.

A structured safety program is constantly in play to inform students and parents about proper safety precautions while riding a school bus.

Proper daily maintenance of buses during the school months adds to the safety of school bus transportation. During the summer each bus is again thoroughly serviced before being put back on the road in the fall.

Extensive training for student and adult bus drivers ensures a total transportation program dedicated to safety. Participation in an annual School Bus Rodeo is an added feature to test the skills of our drivers on a competitive level.

Maintenance, Training, and Safety are all integral parts of the Pitt County School Bus Program.

Project Exodus:

Pitt County Schools' Program For Gifted Students Goes Above And Beyond The School Walls Into The Community

Project EXODUS, Pitt County Schools' program for gifted high school juniors and seniors, has received wide-spread community support. The program has two phases. During the fall semester, students participate in a guidance phase in which self-awareness, self-investigation, decision-making, and communication skills are emphasized. In the spring semesters, selected students become eligible to participate in the mentor phase. Professionals within the community serve as mentors or career models for the students. Each student participant spends one afternoon each week for six weeks with two different mentors.

As a mentor, the professional gives the student a description of his/her career and how it relates to the world of work; provides a definition of the job he/she does and advantages and disadvantages of the career; and describes how the career affects family, leisure time, active citizenship, and life-long goals.

Pitt County Schools extends appreciation to the individuals and organizations that made Project Exodus a successful program for gifted students in 1982-83.

Child Nutrition Programs Serving All Children

The Pitt County Child Nutrition Program consists of twenty on-site school cafeterias that provide nutritional lunches each day. The cafeterias offer a choice lunch program in kindergarten through the twelfth grade, with some schools offering salad bars and a la carte lines.

The breakfast program is offered in fifteen of the twenty schools with a choice in menu items and students are encouraged to participate.

The programs are supervised and managed with each cafeteria having one manager. Fourteen of the cafeterias have assistant managers. The cafeteria managers, assistant managers, and employees are kept up-to-date through workshops, inservice training, and on-the-job training. There are 143 employees in the Child Nutrition Program in the school cafeterias in Pitt County.

The Director of Child Nutrition supervises and administers the program and also works with students who are on special diets. The Child Nutrition Staff has established and maintains a Nutrition Education Resource Center that is equipped with educational materials for use by the schools. Three of the elementary schools have participated in the state Nutrition Education Program under the direction of the central office. They have equipped their resource centers with equipment for classroom activities in cooking, food preparation, and nutrition education.

The Child Nutrition Programs operate on a two million dollar budget. Program revenues are earned from paying students and adults, federal reimbursement, a la carte sales and allocations of state aid for supervision.

During the 1982-83 school year, the Pitt County Child Nutrition Programs participated in a pilot project directed by the Food & Nutrition Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to establish procedures that assure the collection of accurate information on the Free & Reduced Lunch Applications. Pitt County was one of five units in North Carolina to take part in the income verification study.

The goal of the program is to provide each child with a well-balanced meal which supplies one-third of the child's recommended daily requirements. The Child Nutrition Program is operated on a non-profit basis and is educationally and economically sound.

The Child Nutrition Program is constantly striving to ensure that every school child has available daily in pleasant surroundings an attractive, well prepared, nutritious meal. The program also strives to reinforce teachers' activities which promote the formation of sound eating habits and patterns.

Exceptional Children

With a total operating budget of approximately $1.6 million plus five locally paid positions, Pitt County Schools provided services to 2,183 exceptional children during the 1982-83 school year. A staff including sixty teachers, seven speech therapists, a half-time audiologist, a homebound teacher, a physical therapist, a half-time occupational therapist, twenty aides, four psychologists, a secretary, and a coordinator served the following student population.

| Exceptionality | No. Of Students |
|---|---|
| Mentally Handicapped | 438 |
| Emotionally Handicapped | 92 |
| Learning Disabled | 660 |
| Speech and Language Impaired | 388 |
| Hearing Impaired | 24 |
| Physically Impaired | 15 |
| Gifted | 566 |

Pitt County's exceptional children participated in the Very Special Arts Festival, Special Olympics and the Boy Scout Gold Rush. Several students represented the county in state competition for Special Olympics.

Teams were trained from eight schools to implement the School Based Staff Support Team concept in their school. The goals of these teams are to provide support to students by assisting teachers with various techniques for working with exceptional students and to reduce the number of inappropriate referrals to school psychologists. Ten additional teams will be trained during the 1983-84 school year.

The staff of the exceptional children's program participated in a field testing of the Program Quality Evaluation for the Division of Exceptional Children of the State Department of Public Instruction. The field testing consisted of reviewing student records, conducting surveys of special and regular teachers, students, parents, administrators and support personnel and compiling the data to analyze the quality of the Pitt County Exceptional Children's Program.

The exceptional children's program received recognition at the Fall conference held in Winston-Salem when the Speech and Language Program was presented in the Poster Session. Three of the county's therapists were present to answer the many questions which were directed to them concerning the program.

The Pitt County Staff worked cooperatively with other agencies to provide a full range of services to exceptional children. The psychologists and coordinator met regularly with the Child Services Staff of the Pitt County Mental Health Center to address various means of meeting the emotional needs of the students. The Interagency Child Service Team, which includes representatives from various agencies which provide services to special needs of students worked toward identifying, prioritizing and studying areas of major concern. Reports of these concerns and strategies for improvement were presented to Commissioners and agency directors in May. Contracts were made with local Child Development Centers to provide services to those students who could not be appropriately served in the schools.

Pitt County will continue to strive to improve service for children with special needs. Goals for the 1983-84 school year include: improving the gifted and talented program through the use of special materials and developing curriculum guides, expanding the program for emotionally handicapped students, providing staff development to teachers in all exceptional areas, and implementing School-Based Staff Support Teams County wide.

READY-TO MEET THE CHALLENGE OF

The future of the students currently enrolled in the Pitt County School System is the constant focus of the educational program. Curriculum planned for students in kindergarten in 1983-84 must be applicable to life in the year 2.000. For this reason, Pitt County Schools keeps the future population of Pitt County, the need for utilization of technology in both curriculum and management and the future building needs of the school system in mind in its day-to-day planning. Pitt County Schools certainly focuses on the traditional three R's-Reading, Writing and Arithmetic; however, the system also realizes that the three R's of tomorrow may need to be expanded.

The North Carolina Scholar's Program

The North Carolina Scholar's Program is a new program which was approved by the State Board of Education on March 2, 1983. The Scholar's Program is designed to encourage high school students to pursue a well balanced and vigorously challenging high school course of study. Two plans by which a student may choose to achieve the honor of being a North Carolina Scholar are available to students. These two plans are:

Plan A

| Program Area: | | Units |
|---|---|---|
| English | | 4 |
| Mathematics | Algebra I, Geometry, Algebra II, one math beyond Algebra II | 4 |
| Social Studies | U.S. History, Government Economics, World Cultures (prior to 1987, U.S. History plus two elective units) | 3 |
| Foreign Language | two levels of the same language | 2 |
| Health and P.E. | | 1 |
| Vocational Education | | 1 |
| Arts Education | | 1 |
| Total | | 22 |

Plan B

| Program Area: | | Units |
|---|---|---|
| English | | 4 |
| Mathematics | Algebra I, Geometry Algebra II | 3 |
| Science | Biology, Chemistry, Physics (or in lieu of physics, one other advanced science) | 3 |
| Social Studies | U.S. History, Government Economics, one additional Social Studies (prior to 1987, U.S. History plus two elective units) | 3 |
| Health and P.E. | | 1 |
| Vocational Education | | 1 |
| Arts Education | | 1 |
| Total | | 22 |

Pitt County students who pursue the North Carolina Scholar's Program will be honored by a seal of recognition attached to the graduate's diploma. In addition, application forms and transcripts which are sent to colleges and universities during the senior year in high school will have a special indication that the student is a North Carolina Scholar. Pitt County Schools is proud that its high schools will be promoting excellence in education by observing the new North Carolina Scholar's Program and making this honor available to the Pitt County students.

Computers: Today and Tomorrow

The administrative use of computers in the Pitt County School System has been primarily targeted in past years to financial management, budgeting, reporting, accounting, and payroll functions.

With the coming of the 1983-84 school year, services will be expanded in the financial area as the school system moves into program budgeting. Student accounting including such areas as report cards, registers, and testing will also be covered by computer services for the first time in 1983-84.

In exploring the future, computers will be very much a part of almost every facet of school administration, involving instruction, personnel, finance, transportation, maintenance and other support services.

Pitt County Schools' major goal in moving toward more extensive use of computer technology is mainly to allow more time for teachers to teach, in turn providing better instruction for Pitt County's children and a more cost efficient system to facilitate these goals.

Computers: The Instructional Tool of the Eighties

There are many educational uses of computer technology. Computers can deliver instruction to students (computer assisted instruction) and support school administration in areas such as scheduling, grade reporting, attendance and accounting. Data processing and basic programming prepare students for the technological revolution. Computers may be the subject of instruction (computer literacy) or may support teachers in providing effective instruction (computer managed instruction). Pitt County Schools initiated its program to meet the challenge of the computer revolution.

Some instruction in computer programming is an essential part of developing computer literacy. It takes a substantial amount of computer programming to develop a functional skill level in writing programs. Thus, computer programming is a brief course in junior high school, while computer programming to develop a useful skill level would be incorporated in a year-long high school computer science course.

Each of the four high schools in Pitt County has a minimum of three TRS-80 Model Computers which are used in the Computer Science I & II classes. Enrollment in these classes is open to juniors and seniors. To insure individual instruction and maximum time on the computer, class size is maintained at approximately fifteen students. Students learn to write programs in BASIC, a computer language designed to meet the needs of both the precollege and college student. COBOL is designed to meet the needs of business processing programmers and is introduced to students in their second year of computer science. TRS-80 Model III's are also used by the business department for instruction in word and data processing and accounting.

In February of 1983, Pitt County purchased eight Apple II Plus microcomputers and later joined MECC, Minnesota Educational Computer Consortium. Membership with this institution provides the schools with approximately one hundred programs in most subjects, grades, and ability levels. Teachers will use the programs to enhance instruction.

In the fall of 1983, schools will begin a three phase computer literacy curriculum in grades 6-8. Every student will be instructed by the media specialist in the basic functions and operational procedures of the computer. At the end of the instructional period students will be given a computer literacy test. Students who receive qualifying scores will become licensed. A license will give students the privilege of using the computer and the MECC instructional programs or developing skills for obtaining a more advanced license in two optional levels of skills with computers: computer programming and graphics. Students are encouraged to develop their computer interests and teachers will assist students in finding resources to meet their objectives. Teachers may also use the computer in the classroom or schedule classes into the media center to supplement instruction.

Computer technology is in its infancy, but has already proved to be a powerful and effective instructional tool. Expansion of the numbers of micro computers and available software is a goal for Pitt County Schools.

THE FUTURE!

Scholarships Awarded To Graduates

Pitt County high school students from D.H. Conley, North Pitt, Farmville Central, and Ayden-Grifton were awarded approximately $250,000.00 in College scholarship monies during the 1982-83 school year.

Testing Data

The Pitt County School System administers standardized achievement tests to all students in Kindergarten through grade 9 in the reading and language arts areas as well as mathematics, science, and social studies. The most recent test results reveal that the Pitt County Schools are at or above national norms in every subject in grades K-8. Intellectual assessments are made of children in grades 3, 6, and 9. Systemwide research studies are constantly being implemented to evaluate programs, procedures, and policies of the school system. The data is used to contribute to an even more effective instructional program in each of the schools.

1983 Annual Test Compared To First Year Results ***

| GRADE | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| READING | +1 | +7 | +8 | +6 | +7 | +8 | +11 | +12 | +11 |
| MATH | +2 | +6 | +9 | +6 | +9 | +11 | +10 | +14 | +14 |
| LANGUAGE | | | +14 | +13 | +16 | +22 | +22 | +26 | +22 |
| SCIENCE | | | +13 | +11 | +6 | +16 | +11 | +22 | |
| SOCIAL STUDIES | | | +11 | +8 | +8 | +8 | +8 | +20 | |

Pitt County Schools test students in science and social studies to monitor progress. Testing in these two areas is above and beyond state requirements.

*First year testing for grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 9 was 1978. Grades 4, 5, 7 and 8 were first tested in 1979.

TEACHER CERTIFICATION

35% G Certificate-Professionals holding G certificates have attained a Master's degree, an Educational Specialist degree or a Doctorate.

65% A Certificate-Sixty five percent of the professional staff of Pitt County Schools have an A certificate. Many professionals with A certificates are currently pursuing Master's degrees.

Capital Improvements: 1983-84

Two major capital outlay projects were initiated during the Pitt County Schools' 1982-83 school year.

Construction on the long awaited new Ayden Middle School began with a ceremonial ground breaking (Picture above) The approximately 2.4 million dollar project will replace the plus 50 year old school presently in use.

In addition, Chicod School will get a new lunchroom during the 1983-84 school year. Construction of the estimated $350,000.00 project will begin soon with a completion date set during early 1984.

Increased Graduation Requirements

Students entering the 9th grade in the 1983 school year will be graduating from high school in 1986-87, and will be the first class to graduate from Pitt County Schools under new graduation requirements. The new graduation requirements for entering 9th graders are.

English-4 units
Science-(biology and a physical science)-2 units
Social Studies-(American History and Government/Economics)-2 units
Mathematics-2 units
Physical Education and Health-1 unit
Electives-9 units
TOTAL-20 units

This increase in graduation requirements reflects an additional two units for graduation. Also, included in the new graduation requirements is a required course in government and economics.

Microfilm: Saving Time and Space

Pitt County Schools, during the 1982-83 school year began the task of placing all inactive student records (records of those students who have graduated or left the system) on microfilm. The microfilming of these records will take approximately four years of summer work. When the microfilming is complete, some of the advantages will be

1. All records will be protected against accidental destruction because a duplicate copy is stored with the Division of Archives in Raleigh.
2. Storage space will be reduced by over ninety percent. At this time each school has approximately twenty filing cabinets stored in the vaults. All of this space will be freed as these records will be housed at the central office.
3. One person in the central Office will handle all requests for records. When housed at the school it takes at least four people to handle these requests.

Project Newborn

A new program will be initiated by the Pitt County School during the coming year. Parents having newborn babies will be contacted shortly after the baby's arrival. Through various channels, information will be shared with parents related to the importance of the special care that needs to be given during the early formative years of a child's life. By making early contact with the home, Pitt County Schools hope to enhance the working relationship between home and school and provide new parents with vital information about child growth and development.

Tips for Parents Before Kindergarten

Give a rich background of experiences by taking your child on short trips to the library, the park and different kinds of stores. Encourage independence by teaching your child to do simple chores such as putting toys away and hanging up clothes, completing a project started, making some of his/her own decisions such as what to wear and what to eat, and by moving about freely within the neighborhood. Encourage your child to listen and follow simple directions, show consideration for others and show respect for responsible authority. Listen courteously to what your child has to say and give lots of sincere praise for tasks well-done.

By the time school begins, your child should be able to give his/her address, telephone number, age, and birthday. It is also good for him/her to know where you work.

Those last couple weeks before school starts build excitement and enthusiasm for school during your conversations. Share ideas of new friends, interesting activities that will be done and how grown up they will be. Shopping trips for clothes and school supplies are always exciting, so take your child along.

During the first couple of weeks of school a good night's sleep will be especially needed to be fresh and ready for each new day. After the school day, ask what was interesting, new or exciting. Give your child time to share. These will be different days and a need for adjustments. For many children this is a real "giant" step. Bridge this step between home and school with your interest, care and support.

To enter kindergarten your child must be five years old on or before October 16. North Carolina State Law requires that all children present a birth certificate to school officials before they can be enrolled in kindergarten.

Immunizations Required To Enter Kindergarten

1. DTP-diphtheria, tetanus, and whooping cough-three doses
2. Oral poliomyelitis-three doses
3. Measles-red and German-one dose

Strategic Reasoning-A New Program For Gifted Students

The future direction of the Gifted and Talented Program has received major emphasis during the past year. As a result of program analysis students identified as Gifted and Talented in Grades 6-8 will be involved in a new program, The Strategic Reasoning Program, in 1983-84.

The Strategic Reasoning Program is designed to increase intellectual development by using six problem-solving techniques in a systematic and rigorous training of the logical processes of thinking. Techniques included are thing making, qualification, classification, structure analysis, operation analysis, and seeing analogies.

Within Strategic Reasoning, conscious application and transfer are sequentially developed through exercises contained within three separate but complementary instructional strands: non-academic, academic and real life. These exercises improve intellectual proficiency by guiding the student through easy material, progressing to a moderate level and ending with a difficult level.

Strategic Reasoning is a three-year program which includes teacher strategies for developing the higher level thinking skills of decision making, sequential thinking, creative thinking, critical thinking, problem solving and analytical reasoning.

The implementation of this program in Grades 6-8 will provide quality instruction and will result in the development of the creative thinking process for gifted and talented students.

OFFICIAL RULES

1. To enter the sweepstakes:

Complete an official entry form, available at any participating Flex retail store, and deposit it in the special sweepstakes entry box at the Zales store nearest you in your state. If you're a resident of Connecticut (CT) or West Virginia (WV) and wish to enter your state's sweepstakes, mail as follows: CT – "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," PO. Box 1001, Medford, N.Y. 11763; or WV – "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," PO. Box 2510, Medford, N.Y. 11763.

If you do not wish to visit a Zales store; or you are a resident of the District of Columbia, a national sweepstakes random drawing will be held to determine two additional Grand Prize winners. To enter, print your name, address and zip on a plain 3" × 5" piece of paper and mail to: "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," PO. Box 3333, Medford, N.Y. 11763.

If you are a resident of Ohio (OH) or Wisconsin (WI), you may also enter by printing your name, address and zip on a plain 3" × 5" piece of paper and mail as follows: OH – "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," PO. Box 4009, Medford, N.Y. 11763; or WI – "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," PO. Box 1711, Medford, N.Y. 11763.

2. Entries must be deposited at local Zales stores by October 31, 1983, or if sent by mail sent separately, postmarked by October 31, 1983 and received by November 15, 1983.

3. All entries from Zales stores, and those sent by mail from CT, WV, OH and WI, will be entered in the sweepstakes for their state. Fifty random drawings will be held to determine winners, one in each of 48 states and 2 in the national sweepstakes. Drawings will be conducted by Lee Krost Associates, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Odds of winning determined by the total number of eligible entries received. All prizes will be awarded. We are not responsible for lost, late or misdirected mail or illegible entries.

4. Sweepstakes open to residents of the 48 contiguous United States and Dist. of Columbia only. Void where prohibited, taxed, or restricted by law. All Federal, State and local laws apply. Taxes, if any, are the sole responsibility of the winners. Employees and their families of Revlon, Inc., Zales Corporation, Lee Krost Associates, Inc., their advertising and promotion agencies, suppliers and printers of sweepstakes material are not eligible. Only one prize to a family, organization or address. Winners will be notified by mail, and will be required to execute an Affidavit of Eligibility and Release within 30 days of notification. In the event of non-compliance within this time period, alternate winners will be selected. In the case of minors, prizes must be accepted by parent or legal guardian. Prizes non-refundable, non-transferable, not redeemable for cash, and no substitution allowed.

5. To obtain a list of prize winners, send a stamped, self-addressed #10 (9½" × 4⅛") envelope to: "Flex/Zales Diamond Royale Sweepstakes," Winners List, P.O. Box 815, Medford, N.Y. 11763.

6. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.

Entries must be submitted by October 31, 1983.

PAUL ANKA

I heard you recently formed your own film company. Are you giving up singing for acting? —L.M., Saginaw, Mich.

I'm branching out into acting. I know the dangers of what I'm going to do, though. Many singers think their popularity will carry over into acting. It doesn't work that way. Even if they were offered to me, I wouldn't play leading men — just character parts. No musicals. I'm interested in domestic dramas like Kramer vs. Kramer, Ordinary People. At 42 I suppose I'm still young. And certainly I haven't been overexposed in front of the cameras. The last time I was in a film was 1962 when I did a cameo in The Longest Day. The only thing since was an episode of Kojak.

So many stars these days seem to shy away from big parties. How about you? —D.I., Rye, N.Y.

I adore them. I like making noise and dancing. Enormous gatherings of people can be broken into two groups, business and pleasure. Hollywood parties are really business meetings. But whichever kind of party I'm at, and whoever is there, I have a terrific time. I go out determined to enjoy myself, and there's no way anyone can stop me.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — Former California Governor Jerry Brown, who narrowly lost his state's bid for the Senate last year, is gearing up another Senate campaign — for North Carolina. Brown, who has been quietly furthering his global education by meeting with Mexican manufacturing moguls, French President Francois Mitterrand and German leaders in Bonn, is helping his old ally N.C. Governor James Hunt in his race to topple right-wing incumbent Jesse Helms in 1984. Brown's Political Action Committee has begun a series of fund raisers in Beverly Hills, San Diego, Palo Alto and San Francisco that are expected to raise over 100,000 anti-Helms dollars....The Knight Rider car from NBC's series of the same name has been subliminally helping Pontiac sell its Trans-Ams faster than they can be made. Now it's going to become official: Series star David Hasselhoff will hawk the Trans-Am at auto shows and in commercials starting next month....Star Trek III: The Search for Spock, scheduled for a Christmas 1984 opening, will be technically more ambitious than its two predecessors, but, says co-star/director Leonard Nimoy, its theme will still be "what friends do for one another; that's the key." The picture will have E.T.'s Oscar-winning sound mixer, Gene Cantamessa, and much of the crew from co-star William Shatner's TV series, T.J. Hooker.... Believe it or not, a sequel is now planned to Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. What's that, you say — Butch and Sundance died in Bolivia in the finale of this 1969 classic? Well, screen rights have been bought to Whadda We Do Now, Butch, a British novel that has the duo faking their death and escaping to Europe, where they encounter Mata Hari, Winston Churchill, Kaiser Wilhelm II and detectives from Scotland Yard.

—Robert Windeler

Butch and Sundance meet their end. Or do they?

NEW YORK — "I feel like a spring chicken," says Richard Burton, 57, since marrying wife No. 5, Sally Hay, 35....At the recent 96th birthday party of Broadway's legendary George Abbott, now directing On Your Toes, actress Dorothy Loudon, 49, was asked how she sees herself at 96. "In a rocking chair," she said, "sitting by the phone, waiting for George Abbott to call and offer me a job."... Roger Moore, 55, says he plans on staying in Bond-age "at age 80, even if they have to push me on the set in a wheelchair." And the stunts? "I'll do them myself," he assures. "And I'll also do my own lying."...Rockers Kevin Cronin and Gary Richrath of REO Speedwagon are co-anchoring the NBC radio news show Rock Report. It's neither money nor ego motivating them. "We want to prove," says Cronin, "that musicians can read."...The remake of Francois Truffaut's The Man Who Loved Women is turning into a family affair. Blake Edwards directs, wife Julie Andrews stars and now daughter Jennifer, 26, will play a prostitute. Burt Reynolds, of course, plays the man possessed....Local radio star Pegeen Fitzgerald says she simply could not survive without her dishwasher. It's not the threat of dishpan hands that worries her. It's that perennial New York City bugaboo: storage space. "I arrange my hats on the top shelf of the dishwasher," she explains, "where they don't crush."

—Anita Summer

Life with Sally has Richard clucking.

WASHINGTON — Hard-driving lobbyists and lawyers are racing to sign up for D.C.'s latest luxury, a limousine that can key them in on vital information while speeding at 60 miles an hour. Starting this fall, Air Brook Limousine Service, operated by lawyer-entrepreneur Fred Daly, will offer a limo featuring a computer and computer operator. Biographical data on Congressmen, the status of legislation and even Washington restaurants and prices will flash up on the screen at a touch of a finger. Minimum cost: $500 per day....Freshman Congresswoman Barbara Kennelly (D-Conn.) made Congressional history recently, becoming the first woman to enter the 12-year-old Congressional Golf Tournament. Putting through a foot of water during a torrential rainstorm, she came in 65th out of 80 Congressional duffers. Kennelly says she was inspired to play by her father, John Bailey, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee. "My father insisted I learn to play golf when I was very young," she says. "He told me, 'Play golf!' He didn't say go into politics."

OH, BOY!

THE TRUTH ABOUT OLDER WOMEN AND YOUNGER MEN

BY STEPHANI COOK

I met Jason in 1979, when I was 34, in a class I was auditing to keep my brain from turning to mush. For that first class I had chosen a seat near the back of the room, carefully keeping my distance from all the noisy young people, hoping no one would turn around and wonder what an "old lady" like me was doing there. Jason was a little late. For a minute he stood by the door, glancing around, deciding where to sit. He looked about 14, although he was quite tall and had already filled out in the way guys do when they get to be 17 or 18. His hair — when he took his hat off — was clipped short on the sides and was a tumble of dark curls on top, a style familiar enough now, but oddly old-fashioned looking in '79.

After taking a minute to scan the room, Jason headed right for me and sat down in the next seat. I couldn't imagine why. He struck up a conversation and I found out he was cordial, charming, very bright . . . and a college freshman.

Jason sat next to me every class after that. I decided to think it an accident at first and a weird reflex the next few times. Maybe he was homesick. He was very interesting to talk to, better read than almost anyone I knew, refreshingly open and frank and had that marvellous sense of wonder that children have before they learn to be disappointed. After some initial discomfort (I felt very conspicuous; what was he talking to me for?), I relaxed, lulled by the feeling that he wasn't a "man" (and therefore not a threat), that he wasn't "after me," that he was just some lonely child, abandoned to his college education, who missed his family and was looking for a mother substitute.

Then one night he called and asked me to join him for an old movie. I was short on the phone: No, sorry, not this week (not ever, I thought to myself). Jason was philosophical, unbent. O.K., he said cheerfully. See you in class.

But as soon as I hung up I was sorry about how rude I'd been. I picked up the phone and called Jason back. I invited him to have dinner with me after the class next week. (I had to eat, after all. That was harmless enough.)

press the relatives. I felt like I needed a walker.

We had a lovely time at dinner. He was direct, funny, warm. I almost forgot he was half my age. As we had coffee, he reached across the table and took my hand, stroked it. It had honestly not occurred to me until that moment that all this time — while I was distracted by the difference in our ages — Jason had been putting the make on me. He raised my hand to his lips and kissed my fingertips. No question about it: Jason was making a pass.

David McGough/DMI

Raquel Welch, 42, wed André Weinfeld, 36.

I fixed him with a sympathetic gaze, took a deep breath and said, "Jason, do you know how old I am?" He leaned forward across the table, his eyes sparkling with what was clearly mischief. . . and other things I didn't want to think about. "Why?" he asked kindly, as if I were dense and had to have this explained to me. "Are you all hung up about age or something?"

Well, I was all hung up about age . . . although that didn't stop Jason, and finally didn't stop me either. What I found was what I had suspected: That in spite of his age, Jason was a considerable man — sophisticated, generous, sexy — and in every respect as adult as most men my age and plenty more who are older. In addition, he had qualities that seem to be in short supply in men over 35, who, while often wealthier, more powerful and successful than the younger ones, tend to be angrier and more domineering, competitive, selfish and (ironically) insecure than younger men.

Jason was the first younger man I dated but hardly the last. Though I haven't really thought of myself as part of a trend, apparently I am. According to Bette Ziegler, co-author of Older Women — Younger Men, relationships involving an age gap of seven or more years have been increasing in the past few years. Though we're more apt to notice the relationships involving a big age gap, more and more women are also getting involved with men who are younger by just a few years. The most recent data from the National Center for Health Statistics show that of the 448,000 marriages in 1979, 19 percent of the brides were older than the grooms. The older woman/younger man relationship, says Ziegler, is one that most women never seriously considered, unless they were famous or beautiful. But for the woman next door, it has become a viable option in today's mating game, where women outnumber men 11 to 10. Says Ziegler: "Women have started to ask, 'Why should age be a restriction?' They're concerned with, 'Do I like him? Is he someone I could have a good relationship with?'"

"Younger men have grown up in a different world. They're not as fearful of being open and sensitive."

Of course, it takes two to tango, and there's obviously a growing responsiveness among men, a lifting of the taboo against getting involved with an older woman.

It is the emotional openness of the younger man that is most mentioned as a basis of attraction by older women who have developed relationships with younger men. Anya Luchow, Ph.D., a psychologist in New Jersey, attributes this openness primarily to changes in our culture. "Younger men [today] have grown up in a different world," she explains, "where there is considerable pressure on them to see the male role as one that includes emotional sensitivity and openness. Also, women perceive younger men to be more open and reward that behavior." Older women speak of the honesty and enthusiasm they see in younger men, of the simple fact that they really seem to like women as friends, coworkers and lovers and of how encouraging these men are about female independence.

"This particular generation of younger men is the first to be educated with women who share their classrooms, jobs and status, and they see their presence — as well as competition with them — as perfectly natural," points out Ellen Frank, Ph.D., assistant professor of psychiatry and psychology at the University of Pittsburgh.

A New York City corporation president, who at 42 is divorced from one younger man and now involved with a man of 34, says, "Younger men are more supportive of women who work. They aren't intimidated, so it's easier to be feminine with them. They just accept us as we are." An actress — also 42 — says of her fiancé, who is 26 (they have lived together for four years): "He doesn't expect me to give up my life for him. Older men are opinionated, self-serving. I was always fighting for myself." A dental hygienist who lived with a man seven years her junior for five years (he eventually married another woman her age), and who still prefers younger men to older ones, explains that, "Older men need ego boosting; all your energies go toward making them feel good, dealing with their anxieties, especially their sexual anxieties. Young men are so much easier, so spontaneous, irreverent . . . and they still have dreams — they are not defeated or resigned. They're like green wood: flexible."

Women who date, live with or marry younger men do have anxieties, however. The actress speaks for all of us when she observes that, "You worry about what people think." Clearly, we have little or no concern when a man dates a woman four, 10 or even 20 years younger — it is "natural" and "appropriate." But a woman with a lovely young man on her arm is seen as some sort of harridan who is being "used," and the man with her is assumed to be "out for something," confused about his sexuality or masculinity or just plain confused.

Globe Photos

It is in the reflexive acceptance of this old bias that we see how far we have not come. The days should be past when a woman is valued only for her youth and her beauty, just as they should be past for a man to be valued for the money or status he can confer on a woman.

While this turning of the tables makes observers nervous (particularly many male observers), the area of greatest threat is neither in the status nor in the independence of women who choose younger partners, but dark rumblings about the sexual aspects of the relationship. Just what are the two of them doing that makes them happier with each other than they would be with more "appropriate" partners? It is offensive to many people to have to acknowledge an older woman's explicit sexuality. In terms of sex drive, however — whether biologically or culturally determined (with a woman's augmented sense of self and security as she gets older) — a younger man is often a much better match for an older woman than someone her age and vice versa. Research shows that a woman can't expect to reach her sexual peak until around 35, while a man's sexual interest may begin to fall off around 30 after his peak in the late teens.

All the women to whom I spoke, while refuting that it was primarily sex that was either the initial basis for the relationship or responsible for holding it together, gave glowing reviews of their partners. Says one woman, "For the first time I'm with a man who wants sex as much as I do." They all agree that, in general, younger men are more energetic, creative and generous lovers, less threatened by a woman's sexual aggressiveness and seemingly less aware of the physical changes of aging than are older men (who perhaps have concerns about their own aging).

This certainly doesn't mean these relationships are problem free. "There can be several danger areas," states Ziegler. "The woman earns more than the man, and that can be a potential source of tension. Or there can be potential for difficulty with colleagues if a professional woman takes a younger man to a business function. In some cases the woman already has children, which means adjustments are called for. And then there's the social life: Whose friends do you spend time with?"

Women who want partners today are going to have to look to the whole field of men. As a woman ages, she will find fewer and fewer available older men, and as the corporation president says, "There's no reason to be prejudiced against a guy just because he's younger." Age, the women agree, is subjective and, after 30, less a function of chronology than experience and compatibility. Most single women over 30 are not looking for someone to take care of them (they are used to taking care of themselves); instead, they are looking for a full partner, an equal with whom they can share their lives, interests and values without competitiveness and without the sense that their needs are secondary or inferior. These women have a strong sense of self, and, as one of them says, "the basis of attraction with a younger man is different; you really have to want each other to make it work. The reasons for choosing each other are more . . . authentic."

You couldn't prove them wrong by me. FW

FOR THIS LADY RACER, LIFE IN THE FAST LANE IS NO DRAG

By Norm Froscher

In the time it takes you to read this paragraph, Shirley Muldowney has done her job — better than anyone else ever has.

The top drag racer in the world, Muldowney has already pulled the parachute release on her 24-foot needle-nosed car, after covering a quarter of a mile in six seconds or so. Of course, she was traveling 200 to 250 miles an hour, burning every gallon of her fiery nitromethane fuel.

The grandstands have shaken, the noise has become deafening and she has faced death for each of those six seconds.

Shirley Muldowney calls this home.

And she rules the roost. Muldowney has won 16 national-event titles in her nine years on the official circuit and, at 43, when many of her male colleagues are winding down, she will be gunning for her fourth world championship at drag racing's premier event: the Indianapolis Nationals on Labor Day. No other drag racer, not even the sport's legendary Don "Big Daddy" Garlits, has been able to win more than one.

If you say "woman race-car driver" to the average sports fan, most likely he'll respond "Janet Guthrie," the Indy 500 racer whose top finish was ninth in 1978. Muldowney has toiled in relative obscurity, her exposure not nearly equaling her achievements.

But all that could change when a movie based on her life, Heart Like a Wheel, is released next month. The film, which could be categorized as a female Rocky, stars Bonnie Bedelia, a dead ringer for Muldowney.

Consider what it was like back in 1965 for a 5-foot 4-inch, 110-pound brunette to break into a previously all-male sport. As recently as 1977, her first championship year, Garlits would refer to Muldowney only as "that girl." Even after she raced to the head of the class, she couldn't get the big-money corporate sponsorships, sponsorships often landed by lesser male drivers. It wasn't until 1981 that she finally cut a six-figure deal with Pioneer Stereo.

"I think I've made it easier for other women in all forms of racing," says Muldowney. "I took a lot of bumps years ago. But it still won't be easy for another woman. It's not only the drivers but the track operators and the promoters who must be convinced. I still face it today."

Just to rattle the guys even more, she paints her car shocking pink. "It isn't just to rub them," she once said, "but if it does — fine."

The sport of drag racing began on abandoned post-World War II airstrips and deserted back roads across America. Shirley fell in love with it as a teen-ager in Schenectady, N.Y. The daughter of Tex and Mae Roque, Shirley grew up on the "wrong side of the tracks." Tex was a boxer and when his daughter was teased in school, he taught her to fight back, to take care of herself. At 15 she began sneaking out in her pajamas to go hot-rodding with boyfriend Jack Muldowney in his Rebel Without a Cause Mercury. One day Jack let Shirley take the wheel, and she was hooked. (She married Jack at 16 and was divorced from him 15 years later.)

Despite her independent streak, Muldowney seems a prime sufferer of the "Cinderella Complex." It wasn't until the last few years that she became boss of her operation. A man was always in charge. First Jack, then Conrad "Connie" Kalitta. Theirs was a most stormy romance, as volatile as the fuel in their machines. Kalitta was Shirley's agent, crew chief, confidante. He billed her as "Cha Cha Muldowney" and pushed her to pose in a halter top and pink shorts. They

Cups & Saucers of the World's Great Porcelain Houses

For the first time...25 exquisite cups and saucers – each designed and produced by one of the world's great porcelain houses exclusively for this collection!

Of the porcelain objects available today, many collectors find cups and saucers most appealing. And no size is more sought after than elegant demitasse cups and saucers. They are beautiful, convenient to store and display, and relatively modest in price. Best of all, they can be used as well as admired.

Now, for the first time in collecting history, the Danbury Mint makes it possible to acquire 25 cups and saucers from 25 of the world's great porcelain houses. It will be the collection of a lifetime come true – yours at surprisingly little cost and without the slightest inconvenience.

You could not assemble this collection any other way.

Even if you could journey around the world on a quest for fine porcelain, you could not acquire these especially desirable pieces. For each of these cups and saucers will be available only in this collection, and only from the Danbury Mint.

To make the collection, each porcelain house has been given free rein to produce a cup and saucer that will epitomize its distinctive style and time-honored traditions. Consequently, the collection will have exciting diversity.

A collection rich in history and tradition.

Wedgwood® will produce a cup and saucer in its beautiful Blue Jasper Ware, which Josiah Wedgwood himself invented in 1774. Bing & Grondahl, of Denmark, will produce a cup and saucer with its renowned blue underglazing that has been popular for over 75 years. Haviland, of Limoges, France, has chosen a pattern and shape nearly identical to the combination which won a medal for beauty at the 1900 Paris World's Fair. Rosenthal, of West Germany, has gone back to the 18th century for its lavishly ornate cup.

Royal Doulton, Royal Worcester, Spode and Aynsley, all of England, and Ireland's Royal Tara, will each produce a cup and saucer in fine bone china – known for its strength, lightness, and remarkable translucence.

Noritake, of Japan, will produce a cup and saucer with flowers outlined in 24kt gold. Pickard, of the United States, will make a cup and saucer the same shape as those in a service used by the Secretary General of the United Nations (the pattern will be different, however, in keeping with the exclusivity of this collection).

A magnificent display cabinet – at no added cost.

Each collector will receive a magnificent wood wall cabinet to display the entire collection. There will be special grooves in the shelves so that each saucer can stand securely behind each cup, in full and splendid view. The cabinet will be hand-stained and will come pre-assembled, ready to hang.

A favorable price...a convenient acquisition plan.

Considering the exclusivity of this collection and the fame of the porcelain makers involved, the price should come as a most pleasant surprise. The original issue price is only $35 for BOTH pieces, and this favorable price is guaranteed for the entire collection.

No payment is needed now. Simply complete the reservation application and return it promptly. You will receive your cups and saucers at the convenient rate of one set every month, and you will be billed separately for each shipment. As a further convenience, you may have each cup and saucer charged, as shipped, to your VISA or MasterCard.

Satisfaction guaranteed.

In the unlikely event you receive a cup and saucer you are not delighted with, you may return them within 30 days for replacement or refund. And you may cancel your subscription at any time.

To be among the fortunate few who own this collection, please send us your reservation as promptly as possible. This is an opportunity not to be missed!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

Ike Berger Today.

Introducing IKE BERGER Olympic Champion

Olympic Gold medal winner (U.S. team) weightlifting • World Champion (three times) • Pan American Games Champ

IN JUST 7 SHORT MINUTES A DAY with the amazing SYNOMETRICS (scientific concept of ISOMETRIC + ISOTONIC) . . . the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab with proper caloric reduction . . . to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS™... the new EASY speed method for figure beauty

What is SYNOMETRICS? You've probably heard about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics for years. Each method has its own believers and supporters. I used BOTH methods in my daily training. Finally, I developed a special exercise unit that employed BOTH methods AT THE SAME TIME in one device. The effect was simply amazing. I was able to keep in trim, slim shape in only a fraction of the time I previously needed!

The Science of SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is... a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now... build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

What is the SPEED SHAPER?

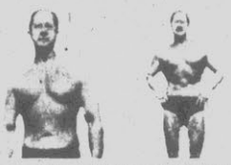
Ingeniously designed, in an amazingly compact slimming & shaping discovery. • No doorknobs needed • Adjust tension to your own needs, for any age • Slip into pocket or purse (5 oz.)—fits anywhere!



"I'm over 50 and I thought my fat and flab was with me for life... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days. In fact results came so fast I had to cut my daily 7 minute workout to 5 minutes to slow down the slimming process. It's the most amazing method I've ever tried... and I've tried just about every gadget and gimmick."

MULDOWNEY

were paired against each other in Funny Car match races. (Funny Cars carry the same nitromethane fuel as dragsters but have fiberglass bodies and look more like something out of Detroit.)

It was in Indianapolis on Labor Day 1973 that her Funny Car caught fire. It was her fourth fire and the worst. Her goggles were burned into her face and her eyelids melted together.

"But I only stayed in the hospital overnight," she remembers proudly. "I was out the next day, bandages and all." (Plastic surgery took care of the scars, but Muldowney remains obsessed with hiding behind sunglasses.)

She and Kalitta soon parted ways. Today, with the movie finished and Beau Bridges's portrayal making him look less than flattering, the normally voluble Kalitta has suddenly clammed up. "We had a lot of fun together," he's said before. "A lot of heartaches and hard times, too. Shirley is a classy lady. But I'm telling you, she's a two-sided coin."

In truth, the only male who's been a constant in her flip-flop life is her son, John Jr., now 25. Since moving to Mt. Clemens, Mich., with her in 1972, he's worked in her crew team. (Rahn Tobler heads that crew. Tobler, 29, has assumed many of Kalitta's former roles — on and off the track. Except there's no more fighting. Shirley prefers not to talk about her private life.)

Shirley and John have been through so many miles, triumphs and tears together that theirs is a unique mother/son relationship. "I love John, but I also like him very much," she says. "He's special, a warm friend as well as a son. Many people have helped me, but John's in a class all his own."

Of course, John has seen his mother in a way few sons do: on the road at least 40 weekends a year, defending her against sexual slurs from the stands and knowing that every time he straps her into the car, it could be the last.

The car has four times the horsepower of an Indianapolis 500 auto, 40 times as much as your average compact car. Two huge (10 feet in circumfer-

As the two cars creep to the starting line, the Christmas-tree string of lights on the track moves from red to yellow to green. In that four-tenths of a second from yellow to green, the race is won or lost. Too fast and the driver will be disqualified. A millisecond too slow, and he or she will literally be left in the dust. Clutch, shift and throttle — all in a few seconds. Six seconds is considered a super run, and Muldowney has had more sub-six-second runs (140 plus) than any driver in history.

And she's not stopping now; she plans to race on indefinitely. Her chief competition next week should be Gary Beck or Richard Tharp, who years ago threatened "to punch her out."

"They don't like being beat by a woman," says Shirley. "It really gets to them."

Tharp likes to tell this story, a story he claims "says all you need to know about Shirley": "One time me and Garlits were standing around together at a race, just sort of leaning against the truck and talking, and Shirley comes up to us. She was mad about something. She points her finger in our faces and shakes it and shouts, 'You bleep-bleepers better start treating me like a lady!'"

Could be that's why the lady is a champ. FW

HOW LAYOFFS WORK AGAINST MARRIAGE

By Norman Lobsenz

When a husband is out of work, the economic squeeze is bad enough. Now recent findings indicate that the emotional pressure of unemployment is equally hazardous and could put a great strain on a marriage.

The findings in question come from studies on unemployed men. A study by Johns Hopkins University researchers shows that every 2-percent increase in unemployment leads to a 2-percent rise in cardiovascular disease and other stress-related ailments among men. Another study, done at the University of Michigan, shows a 3-percent increase in admissions to mental hospitals and a 4-percent jump in the suicide rate among unemployed men.

Wives also experience stresses as they try to give both emotional and financial support to unemployed husbands. Sociologist Louis Ferman, of the University of Michigan, has found that a growing percentage of the women showing up at mental-health clinics have unemployed husbands. Most of these women had been working as well as carrying a heavy load of domestic responsibilities when their husbands were laid off. After the layoffs, these women were expected to shoulder the additional burden of "having to stroke and comfort the male victim" of the economic recession, Ferman observes.

The combination of increased mental stress and reduced income is sometimes too great a burden, and a marriage subjected to this pressure could end in a divorce.

VIOLENT TV IS A KID'S NIGHTMARE

Are older children more likely than younger children to be frightened by violent television shows? In a survey of second-grade and sixth-grade youngsters, psychologist Edward Palmer of Davidson College (North Carolina) found that the younger children have more frequent nightmares after watching scary programs. Even so, nearly half of them say they "like" such shows. Boys "like" them much more than girls do.

Significantly, children police their own TV viewing better than their parents do. In more than half of the families the parents never control what the youngsters watch, yet among younger children, seven out of 10 say they frequently avoid watching scary programs. About one in four of the second graders say they are often "sorry" they watched a violent or frightening show.

Still, with the large number of scary or violent programs shown on television today and their powerful effect on younger children, supervision is necessary, says Professor Palmer: "Parental concern and involvement in discriminating viewing have never been more critically needed than they are today." FOOD

SOUPER COOLERS FOR SUMMER

By Marilyn Hansen

There's nothing nicer on a hot summer day than a bowl of fresh cold soup. It will not only cool you off, but lift your spirits as well. Here are a few to sample. Besides being just plain delicious, these chilled marvels are good for you — having generous amounts of vitamins and minerals — and what's more, they're quick to make and serve.

TOMATO AND CUCUMBER COLD SOUP

2 cups tomato juice
1 large cucumber, peeled, seeded, chunked
½ teaspoon salt or to taste
Dash Tabasco
1 cup sour cream
½ cup coarsely chopped chutney
2 tablespoons snipped chives or green onions

1. In blender container or bowl of food processor using metal chopping blade, place tomato juice and cucumber. Process until fairly smooth. Add salt, Tabasco and sour cream. Process just until blended. Cover and chill.
2. Whisk before serving. Ladle into chilled bowls or mugs, and top each serving with a heaping tablespoon of chutney and a generous sprinkling of chives.

Makes 3 cups

PEACH-GLOW COLD SOUP

1 cup yogurt
¼ cup orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
Peach slices
Mint sprigs

1. In blender container or bowl of food processor using metal chopping blade, place peach chunks, yogurt, orange juice and rind. Process until very smooth. Cover and chill.
2. Ladle into chilled bowls or short wide glasses. Top each with a slice of peach and a mint sprig.

Makes 2½ cups

MELON-PINEAPPLE COLD SOUP

1 cup seeded melon chunks: cantaloupe, Persian, honeydew or watermelon
1½ cups pineapple chunks
1 cup yogurt
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint leaves
Pineapple sticks

1. In blender container or bowl of food processor using metal chopping blade, place melon and pineapple chunks. Process until liquefied. Add yogurt and process just until blended. Cover and chill.
2. Ladle into chilled soup bowls or mugs, top with a sprinkle of mint leaves and garnish with a pineapple stick.

CUCUMBER-BUTTERMILK COLD SOUP

2 cups buttermilk
1 large cucumber, peeled, seeded

Country Marcn

½ teaspoon salt or to taste
¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons snipped dill
1 cup sour cream

1. In blender container or bowl of food processor using metal chopping blade, place buttermilk, cucumber, salt and ¼ cup of the snipped dill. Process just until fairly smooth. Cover and chill.
2. Ladle into chilled soup bowls or mugs. Top with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkle of snipped dill.

Makes 3 cups

RED PEPPER-CHILI COLD SOUP

1 jar (7½ oz.) roasted red peppers and liquid
1 medium-size cucumber, peeled, seeded, chunked
1 cup beef or chicken broth
3 cups sour cream
½ teaspoon salt or to taste
½ teaspoon chili powder
3 tablespoons seeded, chopped green chilies

1. In blender container or bowl of food processor using metal chopping blade, place red peppers with liquid, cucumber and broth. Process until smooth. Add 2 cups sour cream, salt and chili powder. Process until blended. Cover and chill.
2. Ladle into chilled soup bowls or mugs. Top each serving with a dollop of sour cream and sprinkle chopped green chilies on sour cream.

Makes 3 cups

EXPLORING THE WORLD — AND MAN'S LIMITS

Explorer Goddard and friend

One rainy Saturday afternoon in 1940, when John Goddard was only 15, he made a list of his goals in life, which included the following: "...explore the Nile River, the Amazon River, the Congo River; climb Mount Everest, Mount Kilimanjaro, Mount Fuji; photograph Victoria Falls; retrace travels of Marco Polo and Alexander the Great; explore underwater the Red Sea; land on and take off from an aircraft carrier; write a book; run a mile in five minutes; read the works of Shakespeare, Plato, Aristotle...."

In all, Goddard, now an anthropologist and lecturer living in La Canada, Calif., listed 127 things he wanted to do in the course of his lifetime. Forty-three years later, he has less than a dozen goals to reach.

When I was a little boy, I decided I was going to be an explorer, long before I actually understood what that entailed. Going to the jungles and living with primitive peoples and being out in nature — to me those were the most exciting things I could think of, and the desire to do them has never left me.

I decided that there were certain things an explorer would have to do if he were going to meet with any success in his profession. One of those things was to develop a strong body. Another was to learn as much as possible. Another was to get to like everybody and everything.

After I'd made my list, I started with things that could be done locally. When I was 15, I climbed Mount Baldy, which is a 10,000-foot peak in southern California. Then when I was 16 and had put together a little money, I went to the Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia and then to the Everglades of Florida, where I began studying the Seminole Indians; they were the first tribe I got to know closely.

When I go to study these tribes and peoples, I live very simply. That's why I've been able to be accepted. I carry my own pack or paddle my own boat. And they think: He's one of us, he's just a friendly stranger.

You have to share with people, live as they live. You can't be squeamish about little things. Very often foods that have been offered to me, for example, are not dishes that would be appetizing to most Americans. Like fried locusts. Yet they aren't too bad; when they are fresh and cooked in a certain way, they have kind of a pleasant nutty flavor. There was one food offered me in Kowloon [China], however — it's a great Chinese delicacy — unborn mice dipped in honey and rolled in sesame seeds. That was a little too much.

Going into a primitive village and observing the flow and rhythm of life there always leaves me spiritually refreshed. I think the life has more quality than we are able to achieve, even with all our affluence, because the people there get right down to the fundamentals of human contact and relationships.

If I had to name my greatest accomplishment, I suppose it would be the exploration of the Nile River. I made the voyage in a kayak with two companions. We were the first men in history to explore the entire length of the Nile.

We were charged by elephants and hippos. We were attacked by Egyptian river pirates and shot at. We were put in prison twice as spies. We ran violent rapids in our kayaks.

We also contracted terrible diseases like malaria and dysentery. There were some times during the malaria that I was so weak I could scarcely get out of my sleeping bag.

Now, if I had been home I would have gone to the hospital and hardly moved for two weeks. You feel sorry for yourself, you feel the body is just going to crumble. But the brain can control the body to a tremendous degree, so if you are absolutely determined that you are not going to let your mind fill up with fear and discouragement and self-pity, then you can get through sicknesses and the crises of life very well.

There's a wellspring of determination in each one of us, and if it's tapped, you feel almost invincible. You feel: I am going to do this. And even if everyone tells you it's impossible, you are going to prove that it isn't. It's not an egocentric thing at all. It's just a feeling that you are a human being. You've learned what the human mind and body and spirit can do — and you do it. —John Goddard

IMPORTANT SAFETY ANNOUNCEMENT TO OWNERS OF HONEYWELL BATTERY-OPERATED SMOKE DETECTORS.

Safety is important to us at Honeywell. Therefore, we want you to be aware of a problem we have learned about in some Honeywell battery-operated smoke detectors, and what we're doing to correct it.

Honeywell is recalling certain problem units which will not sound the alarm when smoke is present. Our earlier announcement of this recall was widely publicized, but we wanted to take another opportunity to urge you to check your smoke detectors.

Remove the cover from your smoke detector by pulling on the tab at the edge. Inside the smoke detector, locate a piece of gray cardboard with printing on it. Look at the number codes on the sides of this cardboard piece.

If the first five characters of the unit's model number are TC89B or TC89C, and the date code is ANY NUMBER FROM 7601 THROUGH 7820, the detector should be carefully checked for proper operation (see below).

There is no problem with smoke detectors bearing date codes of 7821 or higher.

How to tell if you have a problem smoke detector.
A problem smoke detector will not sound an alarm when smoke is present even though the test button may work.

So, in order to find out if you have a problem smoke detector, you'll have to create smoke. Light a candle, then blow it out and hold it up allowing the smoke to drift past the smoke detector.

Consumers should cease using broom handles or similar objects to push the test button on Honeywell Smoke Detectors.

What to do if you have a problem smoke detector.
If your smoke detector does not alarm when smoke is present, and you have a good battery...CALL HONEYWELL TOLL FREE AT 800-328-8194 (IN MINNESOTA, CALL COLLECT (612) 931-4266) to determine if your smoke detector is covered by the recall, or to ask questions.

Because smoke detectors are important for a family's safety, we urge you to replace non-working smoke detectors immediately.

Honeywell also strongly recommends the use of smoke detectors and further recommends that you regularly test your smoke detector, regardless of brand*, to ensure proper operation.

At Honeywell, product reliability is important. Please examine your Honeywell battery-operated smoke detector today. Thank you.

BLOOMING GOOD IDEAS FOR DECORATING YOUR HOME

By Nancy Sweid

Instead of waiting years for a tree to grow from a seed, create your own tabletop tree in minutes. Not only will it flourish year-round, but you can also make it sprout earrings or candy in place of leaves.

The easy-to-make wire tree is most versatile. Each branch has a hook-shaped end that can hold anything you'd like to hang on it.

You can show off a child's growth with a new photo on every branch. Hang colorful plastic disks, cut from margarine lids, to hold and display earrings. Or make a tree bearing gumdrops for your next children's party. Children can make trees, too, with pipe cleaners instead of wire.

It's easy to make a soft sculpture tree with a little brown and green felt surrounding the wire. Add a bird or a butterfly for an unusual centerpiece. And if you make the family tree on a flat surface, it can be framed to hang on a wall or stand on a table.

The changing-seasons tree will keep you busy if you like to sew. A tree for each season is sketched on blue felt and stitched. Green leaves decorate the summer tree, gold and yellow for autumn, blossoms come out in spring and winter brings the snow. You can hang each plaque separately for the appropriate season or arrange them together for a beautiful display of the changing seasons.

Detailed instructions for tree crafts, along with illustrations and photos, are included in the booklet "Trees for Any Reason" (#367). For your copy, send $2 plus 50 cents for postage and handling to:

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Teresa Anderko

SPLENDOR ON THE GRASS

If, like many fans, you're convinced you can do a better job running your favorite baseball team than the guy now in charge, you'll envy Roger Kahn.

With two partners, Kahn, author of The Boys of Summer, the classic work about the Brooklyn Dodgers, recently bought a majority share in the Utica Blue Sox, an unaffiliated minor-league team in the New York-Penn League. His personal odyssey as owner, along with the struggles and triumphs of his young team, will be the stuff of his next book, due out in 1984.

So far, Kahn says, the players have been quite receptive to baring their souls. Kahn encourages them after every home game by opening up the concession stand once the fans have left and allowing the players two beers and precious time to kibitz.

Bill Veeck, Branch Rickey and Walter O'Malley are the owners he hopes to emulate, adding, "It's not in my personality to be a Steinbrenner. I won't embarrass my manager [Jim Gattis] in front of my players, though if things go too badly I might storm into the clubhouse and kick a few chairs."

As a baseball mogul, Kahn, 55, is learning things he never even considered from the box seats or the press box, namely, "the endless, voluminous details in just getting a game started." And while fan Kahn would complain about the price of hot dogs and soda, owner Kahn now admits, "I say, 'Hey, put more ice in that Coke; ice is cheaper.'"

The Blue Sox could very well be in first place when the regular season ends this week, but either way Kahn has picked the perfect team for his needs. His players can always help him out in a pinch because they lead the league in one important category: most college journalism majors (3).

INSCRUTABLE COMPUTABLES

You think you've got a tough job — how would you like to be a Chinese data processor faced with the task of computerizing a language in which each of 50,000 characters represents an idea rather than a sound?

But technology marches on. I.B.M. started things off with a keyboard that can represent more than 2,000 characters. Then Wang Laboratories came up with a new coding system that operates in Mandarin and Japanese and can handle 10,000 characters by assigning each a six-digit ID number, matched to the character's shape. And now there's word that Cornell University has come up with a further-expanded keyboard system.

It may all sound like Greek to you, but somewhere in China a computer programmer is smiling.

A BEST SELLER FOR BOWSER?

Success breeds limitation in the publishing world; lately you might conclude that only bizarre cats can make the best-seller list. Dogs, who in fact significantly outnumber cats as American pets, seem more like underdogs.

But now the dog will have his day. Novelist Jerrold Mundis has edited a handsome volume, The Dog Book, which features some of the best writing about man's best friend. There's James Thurber's comedy classic "The Dog That Bit People," E.B. White's ode to dog obsessions and John Steinbeck's challenge to dog myths.

The relationship between dog and man is unique for two reasons, explains Mundis, who has bred and trained German shepherds for 15 years. One is the dog's intelligence. Also, the pack-oriented dog happily considers its new human family to be its surrogate pack. "There is a mutual and abiding altruism which is based on loyalty, even love," says Mundis. "There simply isn't any comparable bond between two species in all the natural world."

As philosopher Blaise Pascal once wrote, "The more I see of men, the more I love my dog."

WHERE HAVE YOU GONE, FRED MACMURRAY?

It was one of those happy instances of life imitates art when we called Fred MacMurray. He was just getting ready to take his granddaughter to the park. And later in the day he was expecting a visit from his daughter and her husband. It all sounded so much like a scene from My Three Sons, we wanted to ask what Uncle Charley was cooking up for supper.

For 12 seasons the all-knowing Steve Douglas on TV's My Three Sons, MacMurray bowed out of show business in 1976. "Now I lie around the house a lot," he laughs. "I work in the garden. I have a little studio in the house where I paint in watercolors. I go out on an awful lot of charity golf tournaments. I'm a pretty bad golfer, but that doesn't seem to make a bit of difference."

Movie Still Archives

MacMurray, who turns 75 on Tuesday, was once the highest salaried actor in America, back in the 40's. And though he had some meaty roles in Double Indemnity, The Caine Mutiny and The Apartment, he made his mark in light comedies, sitting on a park bench with someone like Claudette Colbert, discussing the merits of peanuts versus popcorn. "I liked those scenes where the guy would just have to say 'Hi' in a certain way to show he was in love," he remembers. "I played those scenes best.

"I'm a simple man," he says, "still shy, still no good in front of people. I can't imagine what it would take to make me go back to work. Luckily, I've saved a little money, so I don't have to. I'm a family man, and that's about it."

Today that family includes his wife, former actress June Haver, four children (sorry, three daughters) and five grandchildren. He and June live in a large colonial-style home in Los Angeles originally built for Nelson Eddy. "If I could wish anything differently," he says, "I'd wish I were as good a father as I was in the show. I can't tell you how many kids over the years who watched that show have come up to me and said, 'I wish you were my dad.'"

TULIP BULBS 50 for $2.98

FLAMING MIX ASSORTMENT!

BARGAIN PRICED-100 for $5.85 -200 for only $11.50

Tulips bloom in all their graceful splendor and brilliant color in spring . . . but they must be planted in fall! Our once-a-year offer features healthy, hardy planting stock bulbs (2¼-3" circ.), priced so fantastically low it is truly amazing. Better yet, you get a beautiful flaming mix assortment: brilliant reds, glistening whites, bright yellows, deep purples, gorgeous two-tones, etc. Best of all, you pay only 6c a bulb . . . 50 for only $2.98, 100 for $5.85, or order 200 for just $11.50 and really save! At this unbeatable low price, you'll want all you can get. Easy planting instructions included with every order. Send today! We will rush your order in plenty of time for you to get your fall planting selections in the ground.

EVERY YEAR THEY BLOOM AGAIN . . . *Without Replanting!

Tulips are so popular, of course, because they bloom year after year without replanting, no need to take them up. Given proper soil, care and with normal growing conditions, these bulbs will develop into larger size bulbs the first year's planting. In fact, we guarantee many blooms next spring, normal bloom the second season and many years thereafter. Don't pass up this once-a-year offer if you like to watch tulips grow and bloom in breathtaking color!

FAMOUS "NO FAULT" GUARANTEE - *FAST SERVICE!

Every item you order is protected by our famous "No Fault" guarantee. Each selection we ship is exactly as advertised . . . vigorous and healthy, tagged for easy identification, well packed for arrival in good condition. We guarantee prompt shipment, no waiting around week after week for your order. You must be satisfied on arrival or you may return within 15 days for full refund, including any postage you sent. Every selection must develop and flourish or we will replace it free (3 year limit).

FREE
6 DUTCH IRIS
Bonus for orders received by November 1. Imported from Holland. 6-7 cm. Orchid-like flowers bloom every spring.

● WORD PLAY! Anagram-wise — that is to say, by rearranging letters — it can be said about EDITORS that they are "SO TIRED." Similarly, it might be said about PIRATES that they are equipped for a " ." Fill blanks. (Other answers are possible.) "SEA TRIP"

● Sum Fun! Arrange the digits 1 through 9 in such an order that the first three will equal half the second three and one-third of the third three.

Arrange them thusly: 219 438 657

● Easy as Pie! There is a simple way of slicing an apple pie into eight equal slices with but three cuts. How can this be done?

Divide the pie in quarters with two cuts, stack the slices and cut through the stack

● DOG DAZE! What dog gets the most lickings? The lolly-pup. What dog is seven feet tall? The Hound of the Basketballs. What dog has no beneficiaries? The Mexican heir-less.

JUMP-FOR-JOY SOLITAIRE!

Nine numbers are arranged in a square (above). One number jumps over another and the number jumped leaves the board. Jumps may be made across, down, up, or diagonally to any vacant square, and the jumper may continue to move until no further jumps are possible.

One solution: Jump 5 over 8, 9 and 1, jump 7 over 4 & over 2 and 7, 3 over 6

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

SOLITUDE

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Soul, die!

Our Story: ON AN AUGUST NIGHT, SOON AFTER A FULL MOON, THE VILLAGERS DEPART ABBEY ORR. ALL HAVE A PART TO PLAY. THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN AND GRANDPARENTS FOLLOW NINIAN TO THE HILLS OVERLOOKING THE SAXON STRONGHOLD. ARN AND MUNGO LEAD THE REST TO THE RIVER GORGE WHERE THEY READY ROCKS AND TREES.

WHEN ARN GIVES THE ORDER, SCORES OF TREES AND MANY TIMES MORE BOULDERS PLUMMET INTO THE GORGE, DAMMING THE RIVER THAT FLOWS BY CASTLE ORR. AS THE WATERS RISE BEHIND THE BULWARK, ARN ORDERS HIS MEN DOWN INTO THE VALLEY BEYOND ON FOOT.

THEY LIE AMONG THE RIPENING WHEAT AS THE RIVER BEFORE THEM RUNS DRY. BELOW THE SPOT ARN HAD MARKED, THE RECEDING WATERS REVEAL AN UNDERWATER AQUEDUCT. ARN EMPTIES HIS POUCH IN THE MOONLIGHT AND EXAMINES THE SEAMSTRESS'S WORK. HE IS PLEASED.

HE DONS THE STRANGE GARB AND CHALLENGES THE SAXONS: "GIVE UP, OR WE SHALL PASS THROUGH YOUR WALLS AND DESTROY YOU." IN REPLY....

... ARN RECEIVES CRUDE INSULTS AND A BARRAGE OF ARROWS. HE STRIDES CALMLY AWAY, AS IF WEAPONS FASHIONED BY MERE MORTALS COULD HARDLY HARM HIS SACRED PERSON. BUT HE IS HAPPY TO REACH THE RIVERBED'S SAFETY. THE AQUEDUCT IS COMPLETELY VISIBLE NOW, AND AFTER A MOMENT'S REST ARN LEADS HIS MEN INTO ITS BOWELS.
