Monitor's Anchor Raised; Photos Taken

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Divers today recovered the 1,300-pound anchor of the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor and took the first clear videotape pictures of the warship on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean 230 feet deep.

"They just had a quick radio message that the anchor was recovered," said Dina Hill, project coordinator for East Carolina University, as the divers overcame weather problems that hampered their efforts last week. She quoted Jack Lacovey, public affairs officer of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration as saying, "Be advised that the anchor is on the deck."

Earlier today, a submersible vessel from the research ship

Johnson circled the Monitor making videotapes to lay the groundwork that could lead to salvaging the ship's cheesebox-shaped turret and guns.

"The anchor recovery is secondary to getting videotapes of the ship and its turret," said NOAA spokesman Jack Stringer.

Officials said divers took advantage of 15-foot visibility to take videotapes of the wreck. Last week visibility was limited to 5 feet.

Last Thursday, gusting winds and high swells prevented divers from retrieving the anchor. They had brought it part of the way to the surface on Wednesday, but it fell back to the ocean floor 230 feet deep when the flotation bag burst.

They also plan to take core samples of the ocean's floor in the area.

"What they want to do is make sure the turret is safe; that the ground around the base of the turret is stable," he said.

The findings will help determine if the 9-foot-high, 21-foot-diameter turret and its two guns can be salvaged.

The Monitor is lying upside-down on the turret. Some scientists hope a supporting structure might be built to hold up the hull so the turret can be removed.

The Monitor, which was discovered 10 years ago, sank in a storm in December 1862 while being towed to blockade a Southern port.

The sinking was almost 10 months after the ship engaged the Confederate ironclad Merrimack in a battle in Hampton Roads, Va. Neither ship won the battle, but the fight marked the end of the era of wooden fighting ships.

Meanwhile, university historians plan to investigate the possibility that five of the Monitor's 16 crew members who died in the wreck may be buried near the Hatteras Lighthouse.

Amateur historian Don Austin says he thinks the sailors are buried under a pile of granite rocks he discovered two years ago.

U. S. Marines Under Fire In Beirut; Two Are Killed

By MONA ZIADE

Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem shelling killed two Marines in Beirut today, the first combat deaths of U.S. troops in Lebanon, and the Marine contingent silenced the Shiite militia batteries with 40 minutes of artillery, mortar and helicopter gunship fire.

Six other Marines were wounded and a Marine Cobra helicopter took four rounds of small arms fire during the second day of fighting between the Lebanese Army and the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems that again spilled over onto Marine positions around Beirut's international airport.

Police reported 14 Lebanese killed and more than 100 wounded, including 34 government troops Sunday and Monday.

The official Radio Lebanon said the government ordered the army to halt all operations against the militiamen at 12:30 p.m. so Amal leaders would release all captured soldiers and armored personnel carriers.

Witnesses said militiamen shouting "Allah Akbar" (God is great) captured 24 soldiers in two armored personnel carriers after a two-hour battle in a Moslem neighborhood.

Another witness said Beirut's main police headquarters in Moslem west Beirut was ringed by Amal militiamen, and five army armored personnel carriers were on fire around it.

Maj. Bob Jordan, a Marine spokesman, said the Amal shelling killed one Marine at his post and wounded seven, and one of the wounded men died an hour later.

Jordan said the Marines began returning fire with howitzers, mortars and Cobra helicopters "at approximately 11:55 a.m. on the numerous concerned positions that had been firing on the Marines."

"The Marines continued to fire for approximately 40 minutes and have effectively suppressed rockets and mortars that were firing on us," he said.

Jordan said the authorization to shoot back was given by Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, 45, of St. Louis, commander of the 1,200-man Marine contingent based at the airport in southern Beirut.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe of San Francisco said a rocket-propelled grenade exploded near a Marine position at the airport at 7 a.m. He said one rocket tore through the fence around the Marines' basketball court, another landed across the highway from the Marine headquarters and a third crashed just east of the Marine maintenance area.

AP correspondent Scheherezade Faramarzi reported from the Marine base that shelling escalated shortly before midday with an average of six to eight rounds crashing in and around the airport each minute.

AP photographer Don Mell, who was at the Marines' sector, said he saw a mortar shell hit Alpha Company position beside an airport runway. He said Marine vehicles took the casualties to Marine headquarters at the airport, where they were evacuated by helicopter to the U.S. Navy Squadron off the Beirut coast.

He said the Marines were on "Condition One," their highest state of alert, holed up in foxholes and bunkers.

The latest incident brings to three the number of Marines killed and 15 injured since the peacekeeping contingent first arrived in Lebanon 11 months ago. A Marine was killed when he stepped on a landmine last year.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., President Reagan expressed "profound sorrow" over the death of the two Marines.

The president, vacationing at his mountaintop ranch, was awakened with news of the Marine deaths by William P. Clark, his national security advisor.

Administration sources said the Lebanese government committed three Lebanese brigades to the battle against the Shiites.

Meanwhile, Lebanon's presidential palace was shelled as gunbattles and artillery exchanges flared throughout Beirut.

There was no immediate word on damage to the palace, which is about 500 yards from U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon's residence.

Space Shuttle Countdown Moving To Fiery Liftoff

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's countdown headed flawlessly today toward what should be the most spectacular launch in the 33-year history of this spaceport — a fiery nocturnal liftoff at 2:15 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

Thousands of people have been migrating into the area, filling hotels and seeking spots along river banks, beaches and highways to watch the first after-dark launching of a space shuttle. If clouds don't interfere, it should be a dazzler, lighting up the night sky for miles around the Cape and visible at least as a brilliant speck above the horizon for up to 450 miles away, from South Carolina to Cuba.

"Weather conditions should be good, and I think people will have a good show," Air Force Maj. Donald J. Greene, the Cape's chief meteorologist, told reporters today.

A thunderstorm rolled across the area this morning, and the forecast called for showers most of the afternoon. But Greene said the bad weather should clear in plenty of time to begin fueling Challenger's tanks in early evening. He predicted there would be thin scattered clouds at 25,000 feet at launch time.

Test director Gil Whittaker said if there was any lightning within five miles of the pad it could delay the start of fueling, "but we really don't think this will be a problem."

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration invited 45,000 guests to watch from special viewing sites at the Kennedy Space Center. Among them are several prominent blacks, here for the first flight into space by a black American astronaut, mission specialist Guion Bluford Jr. The list includes comedian Bill Cosby, musician Lionel Hampton and former basketball player Wilt Chamberlain.

Bluford, 40, one of four blacks in NASA's astronaut corps, is an Air Force lieutenant colonel with a doctorate in aerospace engineering. He is flying on the 39th U.S. astronaut flight, the eighth by a shuttle and third by Challenger, making the trip just two months after Sally Ride rode in the same ship as the first American woman in space.

AT&T Operators, Technicians Return To Work As Strike Ends

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer
"Welcome back" signs and a backlog of installation and repair orders greeted telephone operators and technicians as the bulk of them returned to work today, ending their three-week nationwide strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"Everybody's super elated," said James Prologo, secretary of a Communications Workers of America local in Columbus, Ohio. "As soon as you get a phone call at three o'clock in the morning, you know something's up. It was a great relief, just like a father hearing he's had triplets."

The strike ended Sunday when local contract agreements were reached between union negotiators and the last of 34 Bell System subsidiaries. Bell of Pennsylvania and Western Electric, said CWA spokeswoman Rozanne Weissman.

Most regularly scheduled personnel were back on the job Sunday, relieving harried supervisors who had been stretching to fill in during the walkout, and the rest of the CWA's 55,000 members were told to go back to work today at their normal starting times.

The CWA said the tentative nationwide contract provides an immediate 5.5 percent pay raise, or $30 a week, for employees who have been with AT&T for five years. In addition, Bell System employees will get 1.5 percent annual wage increases in 1984 and 1985, plus cost of living adjustments to cover 75 percent of inflation.

Law Enforcers Praise Discovery Law Change

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Local law enforcement officials seemed pleased today that the General Assembly amended the state's new discovery law to protect confidential informers.

"I think it was a wise move," Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said. "In fact, it was something badly needed in order for law enforcement agencies to continue to operate," particularly in the area of drug law enforcement, he said.

"The General Assembly has now untied our hands so we can go forward."

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said of the Legislators' action "I think it will help. It's better than it was. But we'd like to see it (the new law) repealed."

"The old law worked for a good number of years and we haven't had any problem with

"No, that isn't the reason," the radio quoted Begin as saying.

Throughout Sunday night and this morning, delegations called on Begin at his house and office to urge him to reconsider.

Shamir, 68, was viewed as the most logical candidate. Defense Minister Moshe Arens, although favored in polls, could not succeed Begin unless new elections were held because he is not a member of Parliament.

Shamir is a Begin comrade from the days when they fought the British and Arabs in an underground war for Israeli independence. He is regarded as more hawkish than Begin, having opposed the 1978 Camp David accords which provided for the return of the Sinai to Egypt.

Begin stunned his political allies and opponents by announcing in a few sentences that he intended to step down after six years in office.

Couple Marries On Sunday

Cynthia Earlene Hunt and Gary Wayne Adams were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in a ceremony performed in the Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Earl Hunt of Route 3, Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Jackie Wayne Adams of Route 2, Grimesland.

A program of organ music was presented by Nancy Landcaster, organist, and Earlene Stocks, soloist.

Cathy Cox of Route 7, Greenville was the honor attendant and Jackie Adams of Route 2, Grimesland was best man.

Bridesmaids were Robin Braxton, cousin of the bridegroom, and Joyce Williams. Angela Williams of Route 3, Greenville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The ring bearer was John Justin Williams, cousin of the bride. Ushers included Timothy Adams of Route 2, Grimesland, brother of the bridegroom, and Alfons Williams, cousin of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. For the double ring ceremony she wore a formal gown of white sheer organza over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline encircled with ruffles of rachel lace bordered in white satin ribbon. The sheer yoke featured ribbon lace outlined in ruffled chantilly lace. The bishop sleeves were styled in the ribbon lace trimmed in the ruffled chantilly lace. A border of ribbon lace enhanced the modified natural waistline. The full skirt and attached chapel length train featured borders of ruffled chantilly lace with a ruffle of the ribbon lace edging the hemline. Her two-tier veil was of silk illusion and she carried a bouquet of blue and white silk roses with blue streamers.

The honor attendant wore a floor length baby blue gown with a taffeta skirt with a ruffled neckline and bow trim. The waistline was set-in and it had caplet sleeves. She carried a lace fan with pink, blue and white roses.

The attendants were dressed similarly and their fans were identical.

The flower girl wore a floor length baby blue gown with white lace and ribbon. She carried a white basket filled with pink, white and blue flowers.

A reception followed the ceremony and was given by the parents of the bride.

Deloris Mills served cake and punch was poured by Robin Conway. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Pollard.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of D.H. Conley High School. She works at Cliff's Seafood House and he works at Phelps Chevrolet.

The couple will live near Greenville.

Fresh Red Plums Make A Fine Sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press NOD Editor
Europeans are accustomed to serving fresh fruit "as is" or poached for dessert. They also often use fresh fruit as a sauce for a mousse or some other sweet. Now Americans seem to be more interested than ever before in following suit.

We thought of this change recently when we came on a recipe for a lovely Red Plum Sauce — timely indeed in August, the last peak month for the fruit with which the sauce is made. At the end of the recipe (following), we've suggested some delightful accompaniments for the sauce.

When we tried this recipe, we used Santa Rosa plums. They are "conical in shape, purplish crimson in color and the flesh near the skin is yellow to dark red." They're very juicy and on the tart side.

Because Santa Rosas are clingstone plums, we used a sharp small knife and sliced into the pit so we could cut away the fruit in fairly thin wedges. Although we call for large plums, you may want to substitute those of medium size. If so, here's a handy table: 5 to 6 medium-size plums equals one pound. From a pound you should get 2½ cups sliced, 2 cups diced, 2 cups pureed, 3 cups quartered or halved.

RED PLUM SAUCE
6 large fresh red plums (about 1½ pounds)
1 cup sugar
1 cup dry red wine
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons cornstarch
Pit plums and slice fairly thin.

In a medium saucepan, stir together plums, sugar and wine. Over medium heat, stirring until sugar dissolves, bring to a boil; simmer until plums are soft — about 15 minutes.

Gradually stir water into cornstarch, keeping smooth; stir into plum mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until clear, bubbling and thickened. Chill.
Makes about 3½ cups.

RED PLUM SAUCE — A delicious accompaniment for many a dessert.

Serve as a dessert sauce over steamed custard, rice pudding, bread pudding or a compote of nectarines and blueberries; over frozen white chocolate mousse or peach upside-down cake; or use as a topping for butter-type sponge cake a la mode.

Homely Woman Longs To Have A Pretty Face

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just returned home from a consultation with my fourth plastic surgeon. I've always been a very homely woman, and my one wish is to be considered "pretty."

Surgeon No. 1 told me to learn to live with it. No. 2 called in his receptionist and told me I'd be prettier if I wore my hair like hers. No. 3 agreed with No. 1. And No. 4 told me that since I was already married, I couldn't have been too ugly.

Abby, I've been to make-up artists, hair stylists and I keep my weight down, but I'm still an ugly woman. I've raised a son and made a good home for my husband. Now I want to do something for myself. Don't tell me that beauty lies in the eye of the beholder. It doesn't. Ask any homely person.

Plastic surgeons have performed miracles with accident victims. Why won't they help me? Not one took the time to show me where improvements could or could not be made. All I get is a bill for telling me I should be satisfied with the way I am. Can you help me?

MISERABLE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR MISERABLE: If four plastic surgeons refused to accept you as a patient, they all must have concluded that regardless of what they did, they could never please you.

Massive reconstruction surgery is possible. Noses are reshaped, jaws are reconstructed, faces are lifted and peeled, etc. But it would require numerous surgical procedures (which are very costly) after which there is no guarantee that you would consider yourself "pretty."

A competent and caring plastic surgeon would have taken the time and effort to explain this to you.

DEAR ABBY: We live in Hawaii, which is about as close to paradise as a person can get without dying.

Of course, we pay for the privilege, as the cost of living here is the highest of anywhere in the United States. I'm sure a lot of people don't know this. That's why I'm writing.

We have many friends who come from the mainland to visit us, and they have no idea how expensive it is to feed houseguests and drive them around sightseeing.

Is there some way we can let them know this without making enemies out of our friends? Hurry your answer, as we are expecting guests in September, October, November and December.

NOT MILLIONAIRES IN HAWAII

DEAR NOT: Yes. Level with them. If they're good friends, they will offer to pungle up. If they're not, who needs freeloaders? Aloha!

DEAR ABBY: Talk about insensitive mothers-in-law, hear this: Twenty-three years ago, shortly after my husband and I were married, he took me to meet his mother for the first time.

Her first words to him were, "Is she pregnant?" "Of course not," said he. Says she, "Then why in the world did you marry her?" Nothing has changed since.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Knit a stunning new sweater for fall and winter combining the best of all worlds. The yoke and border designs are the traditional Fair Isle snowflake and tree motifs while the yarns combine the best of U.S. technology with the Swedish Flere Troder system of using multiple strands of thin yarns. This technique gives you a very lightweight yarn that works to the same gauge as knitting worsted and, although it is acrylic, has the softness of natural wool.

Directions are written for small (8-10), medium (12-14) and large (16-18). Any good quality knitting, worsted-weight yarn may be substituted, if you prefer.

To obtain directions for making the Fair Isle Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0828 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or, you may order Kit No. K-0828 by sending a check or money order for $22.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Please specify your choice of the following color combinations: dark and medium gray with white; brandy, cocoa and bone; earth tones; or sky and sea tones. The kit price includes shipping charges, instructions and "Miracle Thin" Flere Troder yarns.

Let's talk about decreasing knit stitches today. The most common method is worked by simply knitting 2 stitches together. Like most decreases, this leaves a slightly slanted stitch—in this case it has a left to right slant.

So you obviously need to know at least one other decrease method. The next most common one happens to be a right to left slanting decrease. In most knitting instructions this is usually abbreviated as SKPSSO. Translated, this means to slip 1 stitch from the left to the right needle, knit the next stitch and then pass the slipped stitch off of the needle, passing it over the knitted stitch.

For many years, I never used this decrease because, when used at the beginning of a row, it did not seem to match the "knit-2-together" decrease used at the end of the row. I found the solution when I tried slipping the stitch knitwise instead of purlwise and liked the result.

It is almost a cardinal rule in knitting that all slipped stitches should be slipped purlwise unless instructed otherwise—and nothing was ever mentioned in the SKPSSO instructions about how to slip the stitch. It's just one of those many things that the designers assume everyone knows.

For those who may not know what I mean by "knitwise" and "purlwise," let me explain. To slip purlwise, insert the needle into the first stitch on the left needle as if you were going to purl it, but do not complete the stitch—just slip it from one needle to the other. To slip knitwise, insert the needle into the first stitch on the left needle as if you were going to knit it but do not complete the stitch—just slip it from one needle to the other.

Still another variation of a right to left slanting decrease is the SSK or "slip, slip, knit" version. To do this, slip 2 stitches, one at a time knitwise, from lefthand to righthand needle. Then, insert the tip of the lefthand needle into the front of the 2 slipped stitches. You will notice that your needles are now in the proper knitting position, ready for you to knit these 2 stitches together.

Finally, you can achieve a right to left slant by knitting 2 stitches together through the back of the stitches. The effect achieved by each of these last three methods is very similar so I suggest that you try all three and choose the one you prefer.

DINNER FOR FOUR
Mushroom Chicken & Rice
Green Peas & Tomato Salad
Fruit & Cupcakes
MUSHROOM CHICKEN
The onion used helps the mushrooms taste savory.
2½-pound chicken, cut up
¼ cup unbleached all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup butter
1 large onion, cut in thin strips (about 1 cup)
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
Wash and dry chicken. Stir together flour, salt, pepper and paprika; coat chicken with mixture. In a 12-inch skillet melt butter; add chicken, skin side down, and over medium heat, brown—about 5 minutes; turn and brown other sides—about 5 minutes. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until tender—about 20 minutes. Remove chicken and keep warm. Add onion to drippings in skillet and, stirring often, brown quickly and lightly. Add mushrooms and cook quickly, stirring often, until wilted. Top mushroom and onion mixture with chicken. Makes 4 servings.

PICKLE STRIPS
A small batch to store in the refrigerator.
2½ pounds pickling cucumbers (each 3 to 4 inches long)
3 small onions, thinly sliced
1 large rib celery, thinly sliced
¼ cups sugar
2 cups white vinegar
½ cup water
2 tablespoons coarse salt
1½ teaspoons white or yellow mustard seed
Cut each scrubbed cucumber into 8ths lengthwise. Soak in cold water to cover for 3 hours; drain. In a large saucepan stir together the cucumbers, onion, celery, sugar, vinegar, water, salt and mustard seed. Stir over moderate heat until sugar dissolves. Bring to a boil; boil 5 minutes. Cover and let stand off heat until cool. Store in a container (about 1 quart) in the refrigerator. The chilled cucumbers should be crisp.

SUPPER FARE
Egg Rolls & Fried Rice
Bean Sprout Salad
Pineapple & Almond Cookies
FRIED RICE
A main dish that is on the inexpensive side.
3 tablespoons oil
1 large onion, chopped medium fine (about 1 cup)
1 large rib celery, chopped medium fine (about ½ cup)
2 large cloves garlic, crushed
1½ cups thinly sliced cooked pork strips
3 cups cooked rice
¼ cup soy sauce
8-ounce can water chestnuts, drained and cut in strips
In a 12-inch skillet, heat the oil; over medium heat stir together the onion, celery and garlic until slightly wilted—about 3 minutes. Add the pork, rice and soy sauce; stir until rice is heated through. Stir in the water chestnuts; cook, stirring, just until they are warm. Makes 4 servings. Pass extra soy sauce. (We used leftovers from a roasted fresh pork picnic shoulder.)

Help Is Needed

It is well known that the latter part of the summer has been dry ... so dry that crop yields are certain to be down in eastern North Carolina and throughout the nation.

Corn has virtually withered in the fields in many areas of the state and the thunderstorms and precipitation of last week were probably too late to do the corn crop any good.

The situation is not good and it is prompting calls for disaster designation in some counties.

Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham believes that as many as 60 counties might apply for the designation, which could mean low cost federal loans for distressed farmers.

Last week the Wayne County Commissioners decided to ask Gov. Jim Hunt to declare that county a disaster area if it is determined that damage to crops is severe enough to take that action. And Durwood Davis, executive director of the Wayne Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the disaster area designation probably would be needed. Davis cited a drastic change in conditions in the past two weeks and said there had been an increase in percentage of crop damage.

It has been a difficult year for farmers and gardeners as the more than adequate rainfall of earlier this year ceased in the midst of the growing season. Farmers are probably going to need all the help they can get to survive this year and disaster designation may assist.

Extraordinary Day

It was one of those horror days that movies are made of, but which simply don't happen in real life.

It did happen, however, for an Amtrak train on the way from Miami to New York.

The train hit and killed a woman on a trestle in Georgia. In South Carolina it hit an abandoned pickup truck stalled on the tracks. At Rowland in North Carolina, the same train hit a tractor-trailer stalled on the tracks. The train was derailed and 21 people were injured.

An Amtrak spokesmen called it an "extraordinarily coincidental string of things happening."

It was, to say the least, a difficult and unexplainable day for the Silver Meteor and the sequence of events might not be believable even in a movie.

Gender Mouth

No matter how hard President Reagan tries he just can't seem to satisfy the female constituency in the United States.

A few weeks ago he put his gender foot in his mouth again. He apologized to the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, who had been turned away from the White House after a long-awaited, scheduled tour, and then to show his heart was in the right place he told them, "I happen to be one who believes if it wasn't for women, us men would still be walking around in skin suits, carrying clubs."

This statement did not have the soothing effect the president hoped it would, and there was a lot of moaning in the audience.

The President went back to the White House angry and frustrated. "I've always loved the opposite sex," he told the staff. "But why don't they love me?"

"Mr. President," one of his people said, "Why don't we appoint a presidential commission to study the gender gap?"

"Why should I appoint a presidential commission?"

"Because it worked for Social Security, it worked for the MX, and certainly it's going to work for Central America. The best thing you've got going for you now, is every time you get stumped on an issue, you can appoint a presidential commission to study it."

"Okay, what do we call the commission?"

"The President's Blue Ribbon Panel on Closing the Female Window of Vulnerability."

"It has a nice ring to it. We'll appoint men from all walks of life, so they can't accuse me of stacking the panel in favor of my own conservative ideology."

"Since the commission has to do with women's problems, don't you think we should at least have one female on it?"

"That would be a mistake. If I appoint a woman to the panel I'll be accused of tokenism."

"Why not appoint two women?"

"Then I'll be accused of favoring the female view. I've done more for women than any president of the United States in history. But every time I appoint one, the militant groups criticize me for not doing enough for their sex. I'm sick and tired of the constant drumbeat that I'm insensitive to women's issues."

"This commission will still that drumbeat, Mr. President."

"How can you be so sure?"

"Because by appointing a presidential panel you are showing the American woman that you are concerned about the problem and want to do something about it. Once the commission makes its recommendations, then you can act on them."

"I'm not going to act on them if I don't like what the panel recommends."

"You don't have to, sir. The beauty of a presidential commission is that if you don't agree with the report you can stuff it in a file drawer and forget about it."

"That's what I'll do with it if they push for an Equal Rights Amendment. Do we have any candidates for the commission?"

"What about the golf pro at the Burning Tree Golf Club?"

"Isn't that the club in Washington that won't allow women in except once a year to buy Christmas presents for their husbands?"

"Yes, sir. I'm a member."

"Why do we need a golf pro from an all-men's club on a presidential commission for women?"

"Because the guys in the locker rooms should be heard from, too."

"Well, I want this gender gap put to rest once and for all. Start working on it right away. Now if you'll excuse me, I'm going to have lunch with my better half."

Institute Examines Role Of Women

RALEIGH — "You've come a long way, baby," the cigarette ad tells America's women. But women still have a long way to go if they are to pull even with men in the marketplace. That, at least, is the conclusion of a family policy organization based in Chapel Hill which held a conference on women's issues in Raleigh this spring.

There's no denying that the job opportunities open to women have greatly expanded in recent years. "Especially in the past decade, there has been a substantial movement of women into many male-dominated occupations," says the Bush Institute for Child and Family Policy in its recent summation of the spring conference.

The proportion of women engineers has increased 500 percent, of women lawyers 350 percent, of women administrators 150 percent. And there is good news for the future. "Current patterns of education suggest that while disparities in education and occupation between men and women may continue for some time, these differences will grow smaller as the 21st century approaches," the study states.

The study goes on to say that North Carolina is a leader in the drive to reduce educational disparities between the sexes.

That's where the good news for women ends, however. The institute reports that, on average, wages paid to women continue to hover way below those paid to men. Women, as a whole, earn between 59 and 60 cents for every dollar men earn, the report says. In 1980, only 10 percent of women working full time made over $20,000 a year while 47 percent of the full-time employed men made that much or more.

There is growing concern in North Carolina, and across the nation, that poverty is being feminized. With the high rate of divorce in this country, many women are being left with the responsibility to raise families on their own — or, at best, with a little alimony and child support. The Bush Institute study supplies a few disturbing statistics in this respect. Of the women who work, 90 percent do not have the luxury of choosing whether or not (they) would take a job outside the home ... they must support their families." And, of the women who work, 80 percent are in the lowest paying segments of the work force.

Women generally earn less because they work in jobs which pay less. Of all the secretaries in North Carolina, 99 percent are women. Of the doctors and lawyers only 15 percent, of engineers only 5 percent, are women.

Can the lot of women be improved? Obviously, some improvements are already coming. But members of the conference had two specific proposals which they think will speed things up.

First, the state of North Carolina should adopt a salary schedule based on the "comparable worth" philosophy.

That is, if the work done by a secretary is considered to be as valuable as that done by an equipment maintenance worker, pay the two the same. If the state, with its 180,000-member work force, adopts this philosophy, it could spread quickly to private business.

Second, the public schools should continue to encourage young women to pursue careers in areas which have been traditionally male dominated. Sex equity coordinators, who are currently being used in state high schools, counsel young women that they, too, can be lawyers and doctors. Those fields aren't reserved for men.

Lower salaries for women have always been justified on the grounds that men must support a family and women were merely supplementary income providers. Now, when many women have taken over the role of breadwinner, they're still finding themselves paid far less than men.

Cost Of Haste Comes Home

WASHINGTON — As the Kissinger commission on Central America gathered Aug. 11 for its National Security Council (NSC) briefing, Prof. Carlos F. Diaz-Alejandro asked a question that awakened the White House to the cost of haste, undue secrecy and political expediency behind his selection to the commission.

"If you say you're for democracy, does that mean you're for democracy in Paraguay and Guatemala?" Diaz-Alejandro asked. The briefer, NSC staffer Roger Fontaine, coolly replied that the U.S. government supported democracy everywhere. The provocative question, almost a reflection of Radio Havana, suggested what Chairman Kissinger may have to put up with from the Cuban-born Yale economics professor.

Senior White House aides have confided to us their hopes that the FBI will end the embarrassment by denying Diaz-Alejandro security clearance for secret material. But that seems doubtful, since nobody has challenged his loyalty. Rather, he is that rare breed of Cuban-American actively pressing for "normalization" of relations with communist Cuba. He has traveled there in that role (presumably with a Cuban passport). The public record reveals no word criticizing Fidel Castro.

Thus, as President Reagan has raced about the country wooing overwhelmingly Democratic Hispanic voters, that ethnic group's one Reaganite element — Cuban-Americans — was deeply offended. Beyond domestic politics, presidential aides frankly told us they fear Diaz-Alejandro's appointment may have violated the rule for Kissinger commission members laid down by national security adviser William P. Clark: Whatever their differing viewpoints on social and economic policy, they must be concerned about U.S. national security requirements in Central America.

Every administration official we interviewed quickly conceded that the Diaz-Alejandro appointment was a mistake. But the excuse coming out of the White House that it was a case of mistaken identity appears spun from whole cloth. Contrary to such reports, there is no other Cuban-American academic with even a vaguely similar name.

Rather, his selection was the product of a high-speed, closely-held process run by White House personnel chief John Harrington, who was instructed by Clark to find commissioners covering a broad spectrum of views but in substantial agreement on security questions. On a list of economists with Latin American experience sent him by the State Department, Harrington found Diaz-Alejandro's name.

A boost came from a Kissinger commission member with impeccable anti-communist credentials, Boston University President John Silber. He accurately commended Diaz-Alejandro as a distinguished economist specializing in economic development.

The name meant no more to Clark than it did to Harrington and was routinely approved by the NSC director. Common to all three men —

Clark, Harrington and Silber — is lack of Latin American expertise. But to prevent leaks, Latin American specialists in the State Department and on the NSC staff were not consulted. Nor were United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, who has played a leading role in Central American policy, or Henry Kissinger, the new commission's chairman.

A wider check would have revealed additional facts. A student in the United States when Castro came to power in 1959, Diaz-Alejandro became an American citizen in 19. His first public political statement came in 1978 when he joined the Cuban-American Committee for the Normalization of Relations with Cuba, petitioning President Carter to end the embargo.

He visited Cuba that year, seeking "dialogue" with Castro, joined the advisory board of the New York-based pro-Castro, pro-Sandinista magazine Areito and joined the Committee of 75, another Cuban group seeking detente. Castro insists that Cuban-born Americans entering his country use a Cuban passport (a practice frowned on by the State Department); but the mainstream Cuban-American community objects to anybody accepting such an indignity to return to the homeland, except for humanitarian purposes. Diaz-Alejandro has not returned our calls asking about the passport and other matters.

When his selection was announced, the Cuban-American National Foundation spent two weeks in a futile effort to learn his current views on Castro, then issued critical statements. At last, the White House was alerted to what it had done.

Strength For Today

Prayer is an acquired art. There are many people who pray more easily than others, but generally people have to learn to pray. And the learning process is not easy.

Jesus was a great healer but his disciples did not say, "Lord, teach us to heal". He was a great preacher and his apostles would be called upon to preach throughout the world, yet they did not say to him, "Lord, teach us to preach". What they did say was, "Lord teach us to pray."

And he taught them in what we have come to call The Lord's Prayer. The first petitions deal with spiritual matters, particularly things having to do with the glory of God. The last three petitions deal with daily bread, forgiveness and protection against temptation.

The Lord's Prayer is an outline of what every prayer should be. Daily bread — physical. Forgiveness — social. Deliverance from temptation — spiritual.

—Evans Witt—

Women Want The No. 2 Post In '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — If 1984 is to be the year of political clout for women in presidential elections, why not a woman for vice president?

That's the question being asked around Washington and elsewhere by some political activists, mostly women themselves.

Because President Reagan has made clear it will be a Reagan-Bush ticket if he runs in 1984, the quiet discussions have focused primarily on a woman vice presidential choice on the Democratic ticket.

But there is occasional, tentative talk — really just hopeful musing — about Elizabeth Dole for vice president on the GOP side.

For the record, about the only statement politicians will make is that of course a woman could be the vice presidential nominee.

And that is just a repetition of a familiar litany. Since 1972 at least, a woman has always been on the list of potential running mates put together by the presidential candidates.

However, those women have almost never received serious consideration for inclusion on the ticket.

The "gender gap" has changed all that.

Because polls indicate women have a more negative attitude than men toward Reagan, the Democrats attracted millions of women's votes in 1980 and 1982. Thus, how to woo the women's vote is a much-debated point for the 1984 elections.

One way to do that, some argue, is to run more women for office. Reagan came out strongly for that idea in his speech to a GOP women's meeting in San Diego on Friday.

And Sen. Richard Lugar, the Indiana Republican who heads the party's senatorial campaign committee, has pledged to do everything possible to get more GOP women in the Senate as one way to bridge the gender gap.

So why not a woman for vice president?

The idea immediately raises a series of questions and criticisms. Who would be that woman? Would it help the Democratic ticket or hurt it? Is the country "ready" for a woman in the No. 2 slot? The hope would be that a woman candidate would attract more of the votes of women than a male contender. But that's not at all certain. And a woman candidate would probably deprive the ticket of votes by those prejudiced against a female in high office.

Then, there is the question of which Democratic woman would fill the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Although the odds are against a woman becoming vice president or a black, such as civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, becoming president in 1984.

But those talking about these possibilities echo a similar theme: if women and blacks start working toward 1984, perhaps the color and sex barriers to the nation's two top offices will fall in 1988 or 1992.

Cocaine Glut

MIAMI (AP) — South Florida, the center of the national cocaine network, is being flooded with high-quality, low-cost cocaine and officials say the price drop slowly is spreading to other cities with active Colombian drug rings.

"They're overproduced," said Arthur Nehrass, commander of the Organized Crime Bureau, "like General Motors with too many cars."

Record seizures by federal, state and local drug enforcement agents have had virtually no impact on the enormous supplies as demand for cocaine remains high, officials said.

The supply of cocaine has increased in "virtually every sector of the Southeast United States," Phil Jordan, deputy chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration's cocaine desk, said recently.

The glut of cocaine since May — the result of what drug enforcement officials call "ambitious" coca cultivation three years ago in South America, has chopped the wholesale price of the drug in half.

DEA intelligence analysts said the price drop which began in Miami slowly is spreading to other cities with active drug rings, particularly New York, Los Angeles and Houston.

DEA estimates released last week said the price of cocaine in Los Angeles has dropped to $45,000 a kilo, while remaining high in other cities such as Chicago ($55,000 to $75,000 per kilo) and Atlanta ($55,000 to $60,000 per kilo).

"We're sure of two things," said DEA researcher John Bacon in Washington, D.C. "One, there is a declining price at the wholesale level in major markets, and two ... there's a glut in South America of all coca products — the coca leaf, the coca paste and cocaine hydrochloride."

Although coca production is illegal in Colombia, unlike Peru and Bolivia, drug informants are reported to have told police of new coca crops growing in eastern Colombia.

"The paste and coca base are rotting in Peru and Bolivia," Bacon said. "The Colombians have stockpiled all the raw materials. There's nothing in the world to stop them from producing at the rate they are now until the end of 1984, at the very soonest."

Lobbyists Spent Over $818,565

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The alcoholic beverage industry was one of the most active lobbying groups in the 1983 General Assembly, hiring 16 lobbyists and spending at least $39,000 to influence legislators, according to expense reports.

Reports filed by the Aug. 22 deadline show lobbyists spent at least $818,565 during the session, but most of the 513 registered lobbyists did not include their salaries in the reports.

Laws affecting alcoholic beverages were high on the Legislature's agenda.

The major act of the session was Gov. Jim Hunt's "Safe Roads Act," which raised the drinking age for beer and wine from 18 to 19 effective Oct. 1. Beer and wine companies tried to block the increase.

The North Carolina Beer Wholesalers Association spent $8,715 for a legislative reception at a Raleigh hotel. It included entertainment by the Little German Band and more than $200 worth of beer and more than $200 worth of wine.

The Miller Brewing Co. hosted a dinner for the legislators at a cost of $2,539.

Meanwhile, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. wanted lawmakers to adopt a bill requiring cars and light trucks to have front and rear reflectorized license tags.

The measure would have raised the cost of tags from $16 to $20. The company would have profited from the law, because it had won all contracts for reflectorized license plates in other states in recent years.

The company hired former U.S. Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., and a Raleigh law firm to lobby for it. And lobbyist Richard W. Brown of St. Paul reported spending $1,016 entertaining lawmakers from May through July.

The 18 lobbyists for the financial industry reported spending at least $27,911. The industry achieved several goals, including a law allowing banks to charge credit card holders up to $20 a year.

The 20 lobbyists for utilities reported spending at least $68,717, although few major issues directly affecting their industries were considered.

The auto industry's 13 lobbyists reported spending at least $23,852. Among their goals was a law to protect the territories of franchised dealers, which was passed.

The four trucking lobbyists and six railroad lobbyists together spent at least $21,355 on opposite sides of legislation to increase the legal weight limit for trucks.

No Damage

The Greenville Utilities Commission said today that no damage resulted from a thunderstorm Sunday, and said .17 inch of rain was recorded Sunday night and early today.

The high temperature Saturday and Sunday was 95 degrees. The low Saturday was a cool 64, while Sunday's low was 71. The temperature at 8 a.m. today was 73.

Friday's high was 88, while the low for the day was 64. No rainfall was recorded for the periods ending at 8 a.m. Friday, Saturday or Sunday.

The Tar River level stood at 5.9 feet Friday, 6.2 feet Saturday, and 6.9 feet Sunday.

At 8 a.m. today, the river level was 7.2 feet.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

QUACK DENTAL CURES

According to the American Dental Association, Americans spend an estimated $2 billion a year on health quacks and quack products. Denture (false teeth) construction and repair is one of the areas abused by quacks.

Dentures fitted by unqualified persons and mail order dentures, if not properly fitted, can damage mouth tissues. Some damage, such as excessive bone loss, is irreversible. Constant irritation from an ill-fitting denture, if continued over a long period of time, may contribute to the development of open sores and other serious lesions such as tumors.

Persons in extreme discomfort from the ill-fitting dentures tend not to use them. This is not only a waste of good money but could lead to shrinking gums which will make the fit even worse and eating without teeth can lead to digestive problems.

Poorly fitting dentures can cost you more in the long run when the damage they cause has to be corrected. For your health, comfort, pleasure and appearance, go only to professionals when it comes to your dental health.

Four Injured In Collisions Here

Four persons were injured and an estimated $10,150 damage caused in four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when a car driven by Mark Christopher Beason of 1C Courtney Square collided with a utility pole about 7:05 a.m. on Tenth Street, 20 feet west of the Hamilton Street intersection.

Beason, injured in the collision, was charged with careless and reckless driving.

Damage was estimated at $4,000 to the car and $100 to electric wires attached to the pole.

Kenneth William West Jr. of 413 Able St. was charged with following too close by police after investigation of an 8:22 p.m. collision on Arlington Boulevard, 410 feet west of the Commerce Street intersection.

Officers said the West vehicle, and cars driven by Rochelle Lynne Heath of 118 Stanton Drive, and Barbara Davis Gray of Route 6, Greenville, were involved in the mishap.

Damage from the collision was set at $200 to the Gray car, $2,000 to the Heath car and $1,500 to the West auto.

West was reported injured.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 8:31 p.m. collision at the intersection of Charles and Tenth Streets.

Drivers of the cars were listed as Tracey Michelle Mann of 215 Clement Dorm, and Joseph Martin Rogers of 409A Eastbrook.

Investigators charged George Harold Browne III of 115A Scott Dorm with jaywalking after he was struck by a motorcycle driven by David Nash Wilkins Love III of 1001 West 14th St., about 3:04 a.m. on Charles Street, 36 feet South of the 11th Street intersection.

Officers, who said both Browne and Love were injured, estimated damage to the motorcycle at $350.

Phillips Named To Authority

Donovan Phillips of Greenville, was appointed to the North Carolina Technological Development Authority by the General Assembly during Friday's special session.

Phillips' appointment was recommended by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

The Technological Development Authority was created by the 1983 session of the General Assembly to aid in creating new jobs through the use of technological resources.

Phillips, associated with Phillips Brothers Mortuary, is a former member of the Greenville City Board of Education.

Mental Health Perspectives

Parents, Teachers, Friends: Partners in Discovery
by Irene Prewett

School is beginning. Vacation is over. There are signs of relief and of expectation. It is great to get back in a routine on the one hand, but frightening to think of the many uncertainties and pressures that students, teachers, parents, and administrators face in these days of knowledge explosion and rapid technological and social change. Teachers wonder if they can meet the challenge. Parents feel outdated. Children are ambivalent; excited on the one hand about new dimensions of space and time and yet fearful and insecure in an environment that is not always harmonious.

'Good mental health depends on the ability to cope in uncertain situations. Children's coping skills are learned, often modeled after those of the important adult in their lives.

Learning does not just take place in the classroom, but in the home, on the bus, in the grocery store/wherever people meet and relationships develop.

It is necessary that parents, teachers, and community leaders find ways of communicating. After all we are partners in an uncertain world learning how to cope and passing our skills on to our children.

Please submit questions to Community Services, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonburg Rd., Greenville, or call 752-0119.

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM LEWIS
Agricultural Extension Agent

Fall is often the time of year when people begin to think about winter livestock feeding. There are many people in the Pitt County area who purchase hay to winter cows, calves and horses. When one purchases hay he should make a visual appraisal for the quality of the hay available. There are several factors which affect hay quality: plant maturity, texture, leafiness, foreign material, color and aroma. Plant maturity is probably the most important factor. Generally as a plant increases in age, it decreases in protein and energy and increases in fiber content. Hay texture refers to the stem size and pliability. Texture gives an indication of palatability.

Leaves are high in protein and energy. They contain two to three times as many nutrients as stems. All foreign material found in hay will alter the nutritive value of hay. Foreign matter, for example, can be weeds, bottles, paper, stalks, manure, etc. Color is a poor measure of forage quality since it can be influenced by fertilization and curing. Smell the hay for unusual odors. A musty or moldy odor indicates the hay was baled wet. Mold will be present on the leaves. Presence of mold eliminates the hay as a horse feed.

For further information concerning hay quality contact Miriam Lewis at the Pitt County - Extension Office. 752-2934.

Says Bogue Banks Need Third Bridge

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The state secretary of transportation says a third bridge is needed to Bogue Banks, but that North Carolina is best prepared to replace the two-lane drawbridge from Morehead City to Atlantic Beach.

William R. Roberson said Friday that funds were available for replacing the drawbridge at 24th Street in Morehead City with a four-lane, high-rise bridge on 23rd Street that could be completed by mid-1986.

There now are two bridges to Bogue Banks — the drawbridge at the eastern end of the 25-mile-long island and a high-rise bridge at the western end.

Roberson said a third bridge could not be built until the late 1990s, and it would have to compete with other projects for funding.

The Morehead City Town Council last week asked the state to drop its proposal for replacing the 30-year-old drawbridge in favor of building a third bridge closer to the center of the island.

The council has threatened to go to court to block construction of a replacement bridge. City officials said last week that they would prefer to take a chance on getting a new bridge at the western location and keeping the drawbridge open.

E.B. Aycock PTA Meet Set

Orientation dates for children preregistered for the Lutheran Church Nursery School at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church have been announced.

The 4 year old class will meet from 10-11 a.m. Wednesday. Those enrolled in the 3 year old program will meet Thursday from 10-11 a.m.

City Council Called Meeting Scheduled

A special call meeting of the City Council has been scheduled for Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

The council will consider an amendment to the city's hospitalization program and also revised hospitalization rates.

ECU Continuing ED Classes Announced

Eastern North Carolinians interested in resuming an old pastime or beginning a new one — in dance, music, sports, foreign languages, photography or genealogy — may find the help they need among the fall evening and weekend classes offered by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Classes and their beginning dates are "Basic NAUI or PADI Scuba Certification," Sept. 6; "Conversational German," Sept. 13; "Conversational French," Sept. 15; "Genealogical Research Techniques," Sept. 15; "Basic Sailing," Sept. 15; "Beginning Ballroom Dancing" and "Intermediate Ballroom Dancing," both Sept. 16; "Camera 1," Sept. 20; "The Dance Factory," Sept. 20; "Guitar," Sept. 20; "Mime," Sept. 28 and "Basketball Officiating," Oct. 3.

The fall non-credit class schedule also includes classes in computer operation, personal finances and self-improvement. Further information and registration materials are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville; telephone, 757-6143.

Sons Direct Chemistry Seminars

Sons of two East Carolina University faculty chemists are seminar directors in the Union Carbide Chemistry Seminar series.

Dr. Jonathan Caspar, a post-doctoral fellow at the California Institute of Technology, discussed his inorganic photochemistry research at a seminar Friday. He is the son of Dr. Myron Caspar.

Dr. Timothy Caspar, a National Science Foundation fellow in plant physiology at the Michigan State University Department of Energy, will be co-presenter with his father, also Dr. Myron Caspar, of a research report at the American

Program Starts Fourth Year

The Pitt County Hospital School Program began its fourth year Aug. 24.

The purpose of the program, according to teacher Barbara Close, is to provide teaching for hospitalized children to bridge the gap between the time they leave their home school and return to it.

Beds teaching is provided for children who are not ambulatory. Those who can be brought to a classroom in the hospital are taught there. The program is accredited by the North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction for children aged five to 18. It is funded by the department through the Greenville City Schools. All work completed is accepted for transfer.

Teaching is provided by Barbara Close and Roseanna Bicks Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

—In The Area—

Chemical Society meeting in Washington, D.C., on Sept. 1.

An ECU chemistry seminar will feature a presentation by Dr. Grover Everett Jr. of the University of Kansas faculty. He is the son of a faculty member who taught at ECU from 1955-1978. The Everett report will be presented at the school of medicine on Sept. 8.

ECU's weekly chemistry seminars are held on Fridays at 2 p.m. in 201 Flanagan Building.

Day Care Unit Recognized

The Pitt County Day Care Association has received a commendation from the North Carolina Day Care Association for being the first county association to become an affiliate of the statewide group. Betty Brown of Good Hope Day Care Center in Winterville is president of the 30-member Pitt group, formed two years ago.

Ed Warren Is Reappointed

Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville, has been reappointed to the North Carolina Council on Educational Services for Exceptional Children by House Speaker Liston B. Ramsely.

The council advises the State Department of Public Instruction on matters related to children with special educational needs.

15-Year-old Arrested For Theft

Greenville police Saturday arrested a 15-year-old local youth after he allegedly took $114.11 from C. Heber Forbes store on Evans Mall.

Chief Glenn Cannon said a jewelry store owner followed the youth to Sheppard Memorial Library where officers took him into custody following the 11:30 a.m. incident.

The youth was jailed pending further investigation of the case.

'City Hall Notes' Guests Announced

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Mac McCauley, assistant city attorney, and Sgt. Doug Jackson of the police department.

McCauley will discuss the city's noise ordinance and Jackson will talk about back-to-school and bicycle safety.

The program is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

Theft Of $700 Is Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the theft of $700 from a locker at the Spa of Greenville at South Park Shopping Center Thursday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Daniel Thomas Brew of 201 Whittington Circle told officers the cash was taken from a pocket of his pants which he left in an unlocked locker at the Spa. The thief left $45 in cash, Cannon said. The theft was reported at 2:15 p.m.

Police Search For Intruder

Police are looking for a man who entered a west Greenville home about 4:30 a.m. Sunday, sexually molested a 17-year-old girl and took $13 in cash, Chief Glenn Cannon said today.

According to the chief, the thief entered a bathroom window, fondled the girl, then took $13 from her purse.

The intruder then forced the girl to crawl on her hands and knees to her mother's bedroom in an effort to take money from her mother's purse.

However, Cannon said the victim's sister, sleeping in the room with her mother, awoke and started calling out, causing the man to flee.

The chief noted that there were 12 people asleep in the four-bedroom dwelling at the time it was entered.

Officers, using bloodhounds from the N.C. Department of Corrections, tracked the intruder several blocks from the scene before losing the trail.

Gong Show Presented At Greenville Villa

A "Gong Show" was recently presented at Greenville Villa Nursing Home by participants in the summer's Candy Stripe program.

There was singing, ballet, tap dancing and pom pom demonstrations by the girls in the dining hall of the facility.

The nursing home's Candy Stripe program for local children and teenagers to volunteer to interact with residents was started two years ago. It is coordinated by Terry Fuller, activities director.

"FOR AN HONEST SECOND OPINION, ASK PERDUE'S FIRST GROWER."

"When Perdue started looking for broiler growers in North Carolina, they called on me. They liked the Bertie County area and knew that I was familiar with most of the folks here through my work with the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. They wanted me to give them some leads on potential broiler growers. Perdue did a good job of convincing me it was a good investment, because I became the state's first grower!

That was eight years ago, and since then, they've really put a lot of money into this area. It's helped our economy a lot, and it's helped many individuals make a profit each year out of their farming operations. With all the changes I've seen in the other crop programs, it's nice to see a company like Perdue providing a good steady income. You can count on Perdue year after year.

With tobacco, peanuts and corn, the expenses keep growing faster than the market prices, and that's cutting the net incomes of a lot of farmers. With a Perdue house as a supplemental income, you've got something that doesn't require a major investment every year. And once you've paid off the house, as I did three years ago, profits start looking even better.

If anyone has second thoughts about getting with a poultry company, they shouldn't worry about Perdue. The way they have expanded in Bertie, Hertford, Halifax and surrounding counties, there's no doubt in my mind Perdue will be here for a long time to come."

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing—chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern supermarkets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. # Teen Computer Raiders Call It A Game

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Neal Patrick, 17-year-old honor student and computer raider, writhed in his seat as the airplane taxied for take-off.

Over the last few months, he had figured out how to use his small home computer to break into dozens of large, sophisticated government and business computer systems from New York to California. But now he couldn't figure out how to work his seat belt.

Finally fastened in, Neal was flown by NBC one night last week from his family's Eagle River, Wis., vacation home to Chicago for a television interview the next morning. He would also appear on CBS and ABC to talk about what he and six other young Milwaukee men did to trigger an FBI investigation and provide a big boost in business for computer security specialists.

The jet flights, the urgent calls from producers, the chauffeured limousines — it's heady stuff for a 17-year-old. But then, this is a heady 17-year-old.

He and his buddies, who range in age from 15 to 22, cracked codes that allowed them to tap into computers at the Los Alamos, N.M., government weapons research laboratory; Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York; Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles; the Milwaukee School of Engineering; Gafney-Cline Associates, an oil industry consulting firm in Dallas, and Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd., a Montreal cement manufacturer.

The young raiders are the fairly normal children of middle-class Milwaukee families, bright kids but by no means budding math geniuses. Neal said that before this, the most trouble he'd ever been in was a fight in the third grade.

Their raids apparently caused little or no damage to any of the computers they penetrated. But the fact that they did it at all — and on equipment widely available — shows how easily computer crimes can be committed.

The raids also show how the law has failed to keep up with new computer technology. For instance, there are questions about what, if any, crimes were committed. The federal government and most states have no specific laws aimed at people who invade a computer with no intention of stealing or changing anything.

What Neal Patrick and his friends did even requires a new use of language. Rather than saying they trespassed or broke into computers, both the young men and law enforcement officials say they "accessed" the systems.

The raiders are part of a group of home computer devotees generally known as "hackers," from the image of them peering relentlessly into their phosphorescent screens and hacking away at their keyboards into the wee hours.

Neal, the only one of the seven with immunity from prosecution, has been the only one of the group to speak out in public. And he agreed to answer questions, he said, only because an acquaintance who was not a 414 had claimed he was one of the group and said he was not remorseful. "We did it for curiosity, just plain curiosity," Neal said. "In hindsight, the illegality does not justify our curiosity. We'd never do it again, and that goes for all the members of the group."

For Neal, the story begins a year and a half ago. That was when his father Richard Patrick, who helps small companies set up manual bookkeeping systems, bought a modem for $300.

A modem is a device that allows computers to "talk" to each other via telephone lines. In this case, it allowed Neal to use the family's 3-year-old TRS-80 Model 2 home computer from Radio Shack to talk to other hackers on computer "bulletin boards."

The hundreds of computer bulletin boards across the country are full of messages left for individuals or posted for general viewing. A typical array of messages Neal could call up on the screen in his family's den might include the notice of a meeting for owners of a certain brand of computer, advice for using a certain piece of software and boasts about scores on certain computer games.

And sometimes, on some bulletin boards, there was information about how to access the room-sized "main frame" computers at universities, corporations and government agencies.

After receiving a $300 phone bill for the first month after the modem was hooked up, Richard Patrick laid down the law to his son: no more long distance calls to billboards in other cities.

Neal did not stop making those calls, however. Instead he charged them to "borrowed" credit card numbers other hackers routinely shared via the bulletin boards as a way to avoid telephone tolls.

The seven young Milwaukeeans first met "on the boards," corresponding back and forth by electronic messages. Their keyboards struck responsive chords in each other as they shared tips on hardware, software, what movies to see and what magazines to read. Mostly, though, they shared an unspoken dedication to this technology that allowed them, without leaving their bedrooms or dens, intercourse with a challenging new world.

A few months ago, the seven agreed to meet face to face. They began gathering every couple weeks or so at homes or in pizza joints where they could exchange unlisted corporate telephone numbers and secret passwords over sausage and mushrooms.

They began calling themselves "the 414s" after Milwaukee's area code, a joking reference to the Milwaukee youth gangs that take their names from the streets in their neighborhoods. The gang on 27th Street, for instance, is known as the "Two-Sevens."

Neal, president of an Explorer Scout post sponsored by IBM and specializing in computers, asked the other 414s to join the scouts. They all did. Their Explorer meetings became another place to exchange information, although they emphasize that neither the adult leader, an IBM manager, nor any of the dozen other scouts knew about the accessing.

Neal would not say exactly when it began. "It wasn't as thrilling as it was a matter of curiosity," Neal said of his first time. "Once you got into a computer, it was not as interesting as getting into it."

The 414s accessed a number of computers through the spring, but it wasn't until this summer, after school was out and the movie "WarGames" was released, that they began in earnest to see how many systems they could crack. The movie, about a young hacker who accidentally accesses the national defense computer and almost starts World War III, glamorized what the 414s were doing. Each of them saw the film at least once.

Sitting in the chairs where they did their homework and played spaceship games, it was hard for them to imagine they were doing anything wrong. Was it a game? Or was it real?

It became a symbol of status to be the first in the group to access a computer.

They used their modems to search entire area codes for telephones that would answer with the high-pitched welcoming whine of a computer that could talk to other computers. They often used the local telephone number of GTE Telenet Communications Corp., which provides telephone service for 150,000 authorized users of 1,200 computers across the country.

Once the 414s found a computer, usually at night when the regular daytime users were not at work, they experimented to find a password that would let them into the system.

Often the password was nothing more complicated than "test" or "system." Sometimes, they would type in "help" and the computer would tell them how to enter the system.

Once inside a system, they would merely "look around." Often, there was a "games" file, and they would wage intergalactic battles far more complicated than those they could play in video arcades or buy for their small home computers.

They also on occasion created "Trojan horse" files that recorded legitimate passwords. With legitimate passwords, they could access a system even after computer security specialists tried to keep them out by killing the simple "test" and "system" passwords.

Sometimes they programmed in the password "Joshua," which in "WarGames" had allowed the whiz kid to play thermonuclear war. Imitating another scene from the movie, they once left a message, "How about a nice game of chess, Dr. Falken?"

"It was all pure chance," Neal said. "There was no real attack on any single computer. There's no way to tell what computer you're accessing until after you access it."

Even then, they sometimes could not tell. He couldn't ask a computer where he was, Neal said, because any authorized user presumably would know. The 414s did not know they had cracked a computer with non-classified information at Los Alamos until the FBI told them. And they at first thought the Sloan-Kettering computer belonged to a medical supply house. Then hospital computer experts discovered the intrusions — an estimated 80 in all — and left messages begging the raiders to stop because they might destroy patient records. Gerald Wondra, 21, one of the 414s, telephoned hospital officials anonymously after they left a message in the computer asking the raiders to call. He refused, however, to promise to stop accessing. It continued until four weeks ago, when the FBI began calling on the 414s.

The 414s are still not sure how they got caught. Wondra's phone calls to New York may have been traced, or some other Milwaukee hacker may have heard about the accessing and tipped the FBI. Or it may have been through a special trace on a "Star Trek" game put into the Los Angeles bank computer just to attract the raiders.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 50.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 96 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 52.41 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is light for a good demand. Weights light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,775,000, compared to 1,796,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed small but widespread losses today amid disappointment over the latest report on the money supply.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 5.18 to 1,186.89 by noontime.

Losers outpaced gainers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Rates rose in the bond and short-term money markets after the report came out on Friday, and were mostly higher again today.

Xerox led the active list, down ½ at 44½ in trading that included two blocks of more than 100,000 shares apiece.

Other losers among the volume leaders included Ford Motor, down ¾ at 53½; Chrysler, off ¼ at 25¼; Exxon, down ¼ at 37½, and Dana Corp., ½ lower at 36¾.

Fractional declines of that order were typical throughout the list.

The NYSE's composite index fell 43 to 93.37. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .71 at 226.45.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 23.13 million shares at noontime, against 25.71 million at the same point Friday.

Coordinator

WASHINGTON — Hal A. Walker of Washington, and been named Area A coordinator for the Division of Emergency Management.

Walker was named to replace Col. David Spivey of Washington, who has retired.

Heman R. Clark, secretary of the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said, "We're sorry to lose Dave Spivey to retirement, but we are delighted that Hal Walker came along to replace him."

Walker, 35, joined the Division of Emergency Management a year ago and has been working as a nuclear civil preparedness planner.

Area A is composed of Pitt, Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrrell and Washington Counties.

Charge Trio With Fire

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Three young men have been charged with setting the fire that destroyed the Charlotte Jewish Community Center last week and investigators are checking a series of center-area burglaries.

Paul Joseph Rucker, 17, Sheldon Stearns King, 20, and Jimmy Durante Shannon Jr., 16, all of Charlotte, were arrested Saturday and held in the Mecklenburg County Jail in connection with the Thursday fire. Shannon was being held under $30,000 bond Sunday, while Rucker and King were held under $50,000 bond each.

Rucker, King and Shannon are charged with one count each of unlawful burning and two counts of storebreaking and larceny in connection with the center fire and an Aug. 21 break-in at the center.

They also are charged with one count each of storebreaking and larceny in connection with a Saturday break-in at a restaurant. Police say they are investigating a possible connection between that break-in and others at the restaurant and the Jewish Center this month.

The fire caused up to $1 million in damage to the community center's main building. The center was a gathering point for the city's 3,700 Jews.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction for Sunday, calculated by the Department of Physics of East Carolina University, was 74. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 74 percent of your hot water.

Enrollment Dips But Costs Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though enrollment in the nation's schools and colleges this fall will be down 1 percent from last year, the cost of education is expected to increase $15 billion, the Education Department says.

The department's annual "back to school" report released Saturday predicted that enrollment would be 56.7 million, 400,000 less than last fall's classroom total of 57.1 million students.

An estimated $230 billion will be spent on education during the coming school year, up from the $215 billion spent last year, the department said. Nine percent of the money will come from the federal government, 39 percent from the states, 24 percent from local governments and 28 percent from other sources such as tuition, private donations and endowment income, the department said.

More Grads In Labor Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proportion of college graduates in the adult labor force increased from 16 percent to 24 percent in the last decade, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In a report released Saturday, the bureau estimates there are 20.2 million college-educated members of the adult work force between the ages of 25 and 65 percent.

The unemployment rate for workers with college degrees was 3.5 percent in March compared to 16 percent for those without high school diplomas, the report said.

Jaguars Exhibit 'New Look' For 1983

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — The 1983 Farmville Central Jaguar football team has a "new look" of sorts. There's not a new coach, not a new field nor even a new uniform design.

But with only six starters returning out of 22 from a year ago, there are may new faces in the Jaguars' team portrait.

But head coach Gil Carroll remains optimistic about his young squad's chances this season as the Jaguars' opener against Williamston Friday night approaches.

"I'm glad we have four non-conference games at the start of the season," Carroll said. "Maybe that will give us a chance to have a better season. Our goal is to have a winning season, and if we get started with a win Friday that will get us going in the right direction."

With only four starters back on offense, junior Bobby Evans earned the starting berth at quarterback in the Jaguars' variation of the wing-T offense. Edward Davis (5-11, 195) will be at fullback, with Donald Tyson (5-5, 135) and Jeff Vail (5-7, 154) at halfback. Tyson will be the only senior in the Farmville backfield.

"We're young and small in the backfield," Carroll said,

"so I expect we'll use a lot of backs. It's very important for us to stay away from injuries."

Senior Nat Norris will be at wing and share time at halfback, while sophomore Dennis Tripp is expected to win the starting slot at end. Toronto Moye, who was moved from running back to end, has "made the adjustment pretty well and should play a lot" according to Carroll.

The Jaguars will rely heavily on the offensive line to protect the rookie quarterback and create openings for the young backs, and senior Taylor Walston (5-8, 205) moves from tackle to center to anchor the line. Senior guard Joe Steppe (5-9, 188) is the Jaguars' only other starter returning on the line.

At the other guard will be Jerome Daniels (5-9, 199), while Troy Hardee (6-2, 220) and Jeff Flake (6-0, 220) provide size at the tackle positions.

"We'll use a six-man concept up front in order to rest the players as much as possible while it's hot," Carroll said. "We can move Jerome around, and John Ford (5-9, 280) may play a lot at tackle."

"We want our young linemen to be aggressive; they've got to be mentally tough. We'd like to see them surge off the line and knock somebody down on every play."

"We've got to have 90 percent positive plays; we want simple plays with success."

Defensively, the Jaguars return only two starters, but senior tackles Ford and Chris Edwards (6-3, 250) provide a solid front line to build around. Daniels will be at nose guard, while Edward Davis can play either guard or linebacker.

Sophomore Dennis Tripp and senior Sammy Davis will be at the ends, with Steppe, Wilson Gaye and Evans at linebacker.

Senior Nat Norris returns at safety, and Tyson and Kent Hardy at cornerback in the secondary.

"Depth is going to be very important to us," Carroll said. "We'll be starting 18 different boys, so that'll be good for the kids to get game experience. It'll help out a lot in the fourth quarter on these hot nights."

"The key to our season is that each individual on the team can make a contribution and accept his role. I'm not saying that they should be content with being on the second team; we want competition for every position."

Carroll expects SouthWest

Edgecombe to be "vastly improved over last year," and he has a "lot of respect for Ayden-Grifton" as the teams to beat this year in the Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference race.

"SouthWest and Ayden-Grifton have a lot of experience in winning — they've been there before," Carroll said. "They have the veteran coaches in the league."

"SouthWest is a gutsy team; they play with a lot of emotion. We played them tough two years in a row, so I hope we'll do it again this year. But Williamston has a tough team, too. We're not going to take anyone lightly."

"Our kids are real enthusiastic about the start of the season; that could make the difference between winning and losing for us."

Farmville
Central

Johnny Eastwood, Roger Harris; (third row) Bruce Harris, Donald Tyson, Roland Allen, Daniel Dilda, Fred Dixon, Robin Tyson, Eddie May, Eric Baker, Calvin Tyson, John Ford, Tyrone Forbes; (fourth row) Edward Davis, Carl Harriss, Don May, Scott Lewis, Jeff Flake, Chris Edwards, Andre Vines, Mike Ellis, Kent Hardy, Dennis Tripp, Troy Hardee. ## Reserved Bradley Moves Up On LPGA Money List

DENVER (AP) — Pat Bradley stands fourth on the all-time LPGA money list with $1.1 million and has 12 victories to her credit, including two major championships.

But she's never been accorded the same stature as other stars of the women's golf tour, people like JoAnne Carner, Kathy Whitworth, Nancy Lopez, Beth Daniel and Jan Stephenson.

Bradley's quiet, reserved demeanor may have something to do with that, but if she has many more tournaments like the one she won here Sunday or many more seasons like the one she's currently enjoying, people will have to start taking notice.

Bradley outdueled Daniel in what the winner called a "classic battle," sinking a 15-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff to win the Columbia Savings Classic at Columbine Country Club.

Bradley and Daniel threw the best they had at each other, with each finishing Sunday's regulation round at 5-under-par 67 for a 72-hole total of 11-under-par 277. Daniel's birdie putt on 18 forced the playoff.

The players returned to the 15th tee for the start of the playoff. Daniel drove into the rough, bunkered her approach shot and blasted to two feet.

"It was a great bunker shot, but I didn't have to putt," said Daniel. That's because Bradley hit an eight-iron 15 feet from the pin and made the birdie putt. "It had a right-to-left break and I hit it perfect," said Bradley.

The victory, Bradley's third of the season, was worth $30,000 and boosted her from fourth to third place in money-winnings this season with $197,950 — the most she has ever won in a single season.

"Beth is rated as one of the top players. I'm working on it, and maybe this will help," said Bradley, 32, a Massachusetts native who now lives in Marco Island, Fla. "We had a classic battle. After she went birdie-eagle I thought my day was numbered. I'm thrilled to be the survivor."

Bradley, Daniel and Alice Ritzman began the final day in a three-way tie for the lead and were paired in the same group. Bradley toured the front nine in 4-under-par 32 for a 3-stroke lead over Daniel and a 4-shot lead over Ritzman.

Daniel cut the deficit to 1-shot on the 10th hole with a birdie while Bradley bogeyed. Then Daniel birdied the 12th hole and eagled the par-5 13th, moving 2 shots in front.

Montefusco's Debut Helps Yanks Win 7-3

By The Associated Press
The New York Yankees, searching all season for a good right-handed starting pitcher, got impressive early returns on their latest deal to find the elusive hurler.

John Montefusco, acquired from San Diego last week to help during the pennant race, made his American League debut a successful one with six strong innings Sunday in leading the Yankees over the California Angels 7-3.

"I wanted to make a good impression to show them they made a good deal," said the pitcher, dealt for two players to be named later.

In other American League games, Baltimore trounced Minnesota 11-4, Detroit rallied past Toronto 4-2, Chicago beat Boston 6-2, Texas nipped Kansas City 1-0, Milwaukee downed Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland defeated Seattle 5-2.

Montefusco — nicknamed "The Count" — allowed six hits, including solo home runs by Bobby Grich and Bob Boone in the fifth inning, while striking out five and walking one. He was relieved by George Frazier after developing blisters. Frazier went the final three innings for his fifth save.

The Yankees began the season loaded with left-handed starters and hoped that either Jay Howell or Doyle Alexander would become a good right-handed starter.

Neither Howell nor Alexander was consistent and Alexander was eventually traded to Toronto. The Yankees later acquired right-hander Matt Keough from Oakland, a move that hasn't worked out.

Prior to Sunday's game, New York's right-handed starters were 3-10 this season.

Montefusco, a National Leaguer for 10 seasons, was 9-4 with a 3.60 earned run average this year with San Diego. He says he noticed some immediate differences between the AL and NL.

"The strike zone seems smaller here," he said. "My first two American League pitches, I thought, were strikes but both were called balls. But things worked out well after that."

Tigers 4, Blue Jays 2
Chet Lemon's three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning continued Toronto's misery.

Dave Geisel, the third Blue Jays pitcher, took a 2-1 lead into the ninth, but left after allowing five hits over six innings.

Dan Ford and Eddie Murray each drove in three runs in Baltimore while John Lowenstein hit his 10th homer. Kent Hrbek hit his 11th homer and Gary Gaetti added his 20th for Minnesota.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 2
Greg Luzinski unloaded two monstrous home runs, had two singles and drove in four runs.

Luzinski's first-inning blast landed on the roof of Chicago's Comiskey Park and then left the stadium. That made him the first player to ever hit three balls out of the stadium, and he has hit all three this season.

Luzinski, who went 4-for-4, hit an upper-deck, two-run homer — his 26th — in the eighth.

Jerry Koosman, 10-6, gave up seven hits through seven innings.

Chicago now leads Kansas City by 7½ games in the AL West.

Rangers 1, Royals 0
Charlie Hough pitched a seven-hitter and Larry Parrish singled in the game's only run in the fourth inning to lead visiting Texas.

The victory snapped the Rangers' six-game losing streak.

Hough, 11-12, beat Kansas City's Steve Renko, 6-11, and Mike Armstrong, who teamed on a six-hitter.

Brewers 4, A's 2
Milwaukee scored all of its runs in the fourth inning in Oakland.

Jim Gantner and Robin Yount started the fourth with singles and Ted Simmons followed with an RBI double. Ben Oglivie's groundout drove in another run and Roy Howell and Charlie Moore delivered run-scoring singles.

Mike Caldwell, 10-9, yielded five hits over 7 1/3 innings.

Indians 5, Mariners 2
Gorman Thomas went 3-for-3 and Larry Sorensen pitched a seven-hitter.

Thomas and George Vukovich, who also had three hits, contributed run-scoring singles as visiting Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the fifth inning.

Sorensen, 8-9, led 5-0 going into the bottom of the ninth, but Al Cowens ruined the shutout bid with a two-out, two-run homer, his sixth of the season.

Appearance Money 'Over The Table'?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Stan Smith has his own remedy for the under-the-table payments that have become the current plague of bigtime professional tennis — put it all on top of the table.

"It's an idea that Ray Moore and I have and which we hope to put before the Council," said the former U.S. and Wimbledon titleholder, now at age 36 one of the elder statesmen of the money-laden, chaotic sport.

"Every effort has been tried to solve the problem. It's impossible. Maybe the only answer is to make it legal."

Smith, a product of the fast hard courts of Pasadena, Calif., and graduate of Southern Cal, is one of the founders of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP), the players' union, and has had an active role in the conduct of the sport while compiling an enviable record as a player.

"There's no doubt that top players are receiving appearance money at some of the tournaments because of their drawing power," he said. "That will continue until something concrete is done about it."

"The plan that Ray and I propose is that all players receive appearance money based on world ranking. That would be fair. The money could be paid on the spot or held as bonus to be paid in a lump sum at the end of the year."

Moore is a 37-year-old South African whose career has paralleled that of Smith.

Professional tennis, with some $25 million in prize money at stake in both the Grand Prix and World Championship Tennis (WCT) tours, is said to be in grave danger because of the practice of top players of demanding illegal appearance money from promoters.

Only a handful have the stature to do this — John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors, Ivan Lendl, Guillermo Vilas, Ilie Nastase and perhaps a few others. There is growing resentment among the 200 or so other players who contend the stars not only take a big part of the official purse but pad their bank accounts with under-the-table bonuses which reduce their own prize monies.

Promoters, meanwhile, say they are suffering financial strain from these double outlays. Some critics fear that the game, now wallowing in wealth from corporate millions, may deteriorate into empty exhibitions — or theatre — such as professional wrestling.

Smith can look at the scene with an unbiased viewpoint. He not only remains a formidable competitor but, as a bona fide tournament director in his own right, also can speak from the experience of the other side.

Long the playing pro of the Sea Pines Plantation in Hilton Head, S. C., Stan is launching this fall a tournament which he hopes will become one of the season's popular fixtures.

HOW IS IT APPLIED?
Thermo-Seal Elastic Roofing is applied over existing roof. Ideal for all installations. Thermo-Seal is a Fiber-coated Bituminous Resin with uniform high viscosity applied under high pressure 50% lighter than conventional roofing. Thermo-Seal follows the contour of existing roof, thereby retaining the original architectural design of the roof.
Granulated roofing granules are then pneumatically sprinkled, forming another, line of protection in your choice of colors. End result is a beautiful one-piece Thermo-barrier roof. No seams. No joints. Air and watertight.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED
The roofing business has also changed. No longer can we afford to haphazardly tear off and throw away a roof that can be resurfaced. With today's modern roofing products and equipment we can not only save a roof, we can make that roof more secure, more water tight, with more insulation value than it had the day it was installed and we can do it without a mess or it costing you an arm and a leg.

Taylor-Burnett Movie Producer Was A Secretary

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marian Rees had worked for Tandem Productions for 15 years when she realized she wasn't going to become a full-fledged TV producer there.

"It was before Norman Lear's consciousness had been raised."

That was 10 years ago and the world of television has evolved — just as Miss Rees has evolved since she entered the business 30 years ago as an NBC-TV secretary-receptionist trying to earn bus fare from Hollywood back to Iowa.

Over the years she has built a reputation as one of television's most prolific women producers. She now heads her own production company, Marian Rees Associates, Inc.

Since its inception in 1981, Miss Rees' company has delivered three films, including HBO's "Between Friends" starring Elizabeth Taylor and Carol Burnett, which will air next month, and CBS' "License to Kill," starring James Farentino and Penny Fuller, which will air in January.

In addition, three more films are in various stages of pre-production for HBO, NBC-GE and CBS.

Miss Rees said she feels no bitterness toward Lear's company. Her work there — and more recently as a vice president of development for EMI Television and the NRW Company — is where she gained the know-how to run her own company.

At Tandem, Miss Rees said, "I learned enough about the day-to-day business machinations... how to read a contract, a financial report, a production report."

All this taught her how to carry the overhead — mortgage her house, mortgage her insurance to meet the payroll.

"There is a distinction between those who say they are independent producers working through other companies and those who are truly independent — who assume their own financial responsibilities."

The 56-year-old producer said she stumbled into television in 1953. She wanted to use her degree in sociology, with minors in psychology and religion, from the University of Iowa to get a job at the United Nations.

"But I didn't speak five languages and any other qualifications didn't matter."

She went to California expecting to work with underprivileged girls. Instead, she took the job at NBC, as a secretary for "The Dennis Day Show."

She was there only a short time when she was asked to become Day's private secretary. Within a week, associate director John Rich asked her if she would be production assistant on the half-hour, weekly live show.

"He said he'd teach me everything I'd have to know," Miss Rees said. "It was terribly foreign to me, but I did well."

From there it was on to Lux Video Theatre and to the Kaiser Aluminum Hour.

Her first associate producer title came in 1959 on "An Evening with Fred Astaire," produced by Bud Yorkin. It won 11 Emmy awards.

Out of that coup, Yorkin and Lear formed Tandem and Miss Rees joined them, helping to develop two Emmy-winning TV series, "All in the Family" and "Sanford and Son."

She left Tandem in 1973. "I thought I should be made a producer and it didn't happen," she said.

"It was before Norman Lear's consciousness had been raised," the tanned, white-haired Californian said.

"In fairness, I didn't even make contractual demands on them. I left Tandem with no equity, with no real participation in the fruits of that company — and I'd been there 15 years."

Times have changed, she said. "It now is allowable for women to have self-motivating direction in their lives and not be dependent on the then-male dominated industry to give them the opportunity."

Her first job after leaving Tandem was with Tomorrow Entertainment, which produced "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" and "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," both seen on CBS when she was vice president and director of development.

At EMI she conceived and produced such programs as "Howard Hughes," "Special Olympics" and "One in a Million. The Ron LeFlore Story," which also aired on CBS. At NRW she was executive producer of the award-winning "Angel Dusted," starring Jean Stapleton on NBC, and "The Marva Collins Story," which won Cicely Tyson an Emmy nomination, for CBS.

Miss Rees first thought of making "Between Friends" six years ago when she read Shelley List's book, "Nobody Makes Me Cry," about two very different women in their late 40's who befriended one another at a time when both have gone through recent divorces.

The book did not make a successful transition to the screen until three years ago, Miss Rees said, when she asked Ms. List to rewrite one of the characters.

The movie is a moving story about friendship between women and the strength it can give them.

Miss Taylor plays a soft romantic who turns to the bottle in her despair at suddenly being alone. Miss Burnett plays a practical businesswoman who covers her loss by bed-hopping with married men.

Miss Rees said the two actresses became good friends during 25 days of shooting in Toronto. "They'd tape soap operas while they were working and then watch them in their trailers."

Miss Taylor told Miss Rees she knew she would "have Carol Burnett as a friend for the rest of my life."

Rough On Suspended Producer

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Working conditions are not good for George Crile.

The embattled producer suspended by CBS News from editorial responsibilities still goes to work every day. Crile's assignment is helping lawyers prepare CBS News' defense in the $120 million libel lawsuit filed by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the result of a documentary that Crile produced.

Facing cold shoulders and blank stares from colleagues isn't easy. Crile isn't likely to hobnob with the boys, join in the office football pool or sing carols at the CBS Christmas party.

"It's been rough for a year and a half," he says. "Most people tend to ignore you, they treat you like you've disappeared. They're embarrassed to come and talk to you, and you don't feel like corralling them and asking them to hear your defense. But I always knew the documentary was unassailable."

Some important people at CBS News, like Dan Rather, Mike Wallace and Bill Moyers, have offered Crile advice and consolation. But, Crile says, "The difficult thing has been my inability to have an internal forum at CBS."

"It's one thing to be misunderstood and not have your own defense in the outer world. It's another thing to be closed off in CBS and not be able to explain yourself to your peers. You want to be able to tell CBS people that there is a defense."

The documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy — A Vietnam Deception," accused Westmoreland of conspiring to falsify enemy troop figures during the Vietnam War. Months after the January 1982 broadcast, TV Guide charged that Crile had violated several CBS News procedures while preparing the film.

Then, CBS' own internal investigation accepted the validity of many of TV Guide's charges, although the report, prepared by CBS News executive Burton Benjamin, did not dispute the underlying substance of the broadcast.

Then, last June, after CBS learned that Crile had taped an interview with former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara without telling McNamara — another violation of CBS' guidelines — the producer was suspended.

Crile says his biggest mistake was accepting CBS' edict that he keep silent while Benjamin conducted his internal investigation.

"I blame myself for that vow of silence," he says. "There's no way I can justify sitting back silently. A reporter has to defend his work. But I was so convinced that CBS was going to attack TV Guide and blow them out of the water that I agreed not to talk..."

"It had disastrous consequences for me, CBS and the ability of the country to think rationally about the questions the documentary raised," Crile says. "A narrow attack on the process alone got misconstrued as an attack on the substance of the broadcast."

Some at CBS wanted Crile fired. But Van Gordon Sauter, president of the news division, perhaps fearing that such an action might damage CBS' defense in the Westmoreland lawsuit, decided instead to suspend the producer and shelve the documentary on Nicaragua on which Crile had been working.

When Crile learned of his suspension, he immediately went to Rather's office. Crile says Rather, Wallace, the correspondent on the documentary, Moyers and some others, have offered him moral support. As anchor of the "CBS Evening News," Rather lives in two worlds — day-to-day newsgathering with the troops and corporate decision-making with the generals.

"Rather's made a giant effort to show me that he stood by me," says Crile. "He called me when this thing hit and said he knew what it was like to be in trouble. He said he knew how cold and lonely it could be in a bureaucracy, that I was bound to feel isolated. He told me to get in touch with him if there was anything he could do — and he meant it."

Dalai Lama Still Not Satisfied

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The exiled Dalai Lama, spiritual leader of Tibet, says the Chinese have invited him to return to that mountain nation, but they "must do a lot more" before he would consider going back.

During a visit to Switzerland, the Dalai Lama, 48, said the Chinese, who invaded Tibet in 1956, recently improved the food situation there. At a news conference Sunday, he also said that the Chinese were allowing monasteries to be rebuilt which had been destroyed during the Chinese Cultural Revolution — and that they now wanted him to return.

He said, however, "The Tibetans are not happy or satisfied because despite some superficial changes, the so-called liberators brought much suspicion and distrust.

"Only once the people are satisfied and will have the maximum benefit will I consider returning," he said.

Need To Question Wounded Newsman

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A state medical examiner says he found nothing in an autopsy of Cumberland County Mental Health Director Billy Graham that was inconsistent with suicide, but police say their investigation hinges on an interview with wounded newspaper reporter Pat Reese.

Reese, 57, a reporter with The Fayetteville Observer, was shot in the face Friday during a meeting with Graham. He is on a respirator in the intensive care unit of Cape Fear Valley Medical Center, and is listed in stable, but critical condition.

Both men were shot in Reese's car about 2 p.m. Friday outside the Cumberland County Mental Health Center.

"I didn't see anything inconsistent with suicide, but I can't say conclusively," Dr. Robert Thompson of the state Medical Examiner's Office in Chapel Hill said late Saturday.

Fayetteville Police homicide detective Jimmy Cook, who is heading the investigation, said Sunday he planned to interview Reese today about the shooting. Cook said police still have not determined who owned the .38 caliber revolver found at the scene.

Thompson said his autopsy shows only one bullet entered Graham's body, dispelling earlier police reports that Graham had been shot twice.

"It was one shot to the roof of the mouth; there were no other wounds there," said Thompson, adding that the wound indicated that the gun was fired at close range.

Fayetteville Police Chief Danny Dixon said initially that Graham apparently shot Reese and then turned the gun on himself. But he later said police had no theories on the shootings since they believed Graham had been shot twice.

Benefit In Free Legal Indigent Aid

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — More than 230 indigent people have benefited from free legal services offered by the Mecklenburg County Bar Association since late January, officials of the program say.

About a third of the county bar's membership — 344 lawyers — have volunteered to provide free legal services to the poor and elderly.

"I'd rather be getting paid," Susan Sowell said. "But I have some extra time to devote. I couldn't do it (work for free) all the time. But there are people who need help and don't have the money to get it. They shouldn't be punished."

Last fall, the Mecklenburg Bar mailed letters to its more than 1,000 members, reminding them of their obligation to help the needy and urging them to volunteer for the program.

Lawyers like Julia Jones and Ms. Sowell responded to that call. Staff lawyers from such corporations as Duke Power Co., First Union Corp., BarclaysAmerican Corp. and Southern Bell also have volunteered.

"I have a strong feeling that professionals have a duty to use their knowledge and skills to help everyone in the community," Ms. Jones, 34, said. "Everyone has a responsibility to do what they can for their community. This is the way I can do it."

The Mecklenburg Bar's volunteer program is one of four in North Carolina, according to Linda Tucker, the N.C. Bar Association's director of pro bono activities. The others are in Wake and Durham counties and in Greensboro.

Plans also are under way to set up volunteer lawyer programs in Orange and Forsyth counties and the six-county area of Buncombe, Henderson, Madison, Polk, Rutherford and Transylvania counties.

In Wake County, about 220 lawyers — about a fourth of the local bar membership — have volunteered for the program, established last October, Tucker said.

Mecklenburg Bar officials hope the program will assist beleaguered federally funded programs for the poor and the elderly: Legal Services of Southern Piedmont Inc. and the bar-sponsored Legal Services for the Elderly.

Terry Roche, executive director of Legal Services, said his staff can handle only about 1,200 of the nearly 8,000 requests for its services each year.

The Legal Services staff traditionally has concentrated on cases involving federal assistance programs such as Social Security, Medicaid, public housing and welfare. The volunteer lawyers have been asked to help resolve consumer problems, including bankruptcy, and cases involving Social Security disability, child custody and child support.

When Mecklenburg's volunteer program first started, some lawyers were skeptical about how they could respond to needs in areas where they lacked expertise.

"Sometimes I feel frustrated because they (poor clients) have problems I'm not used to handling," said Ms. Sowell. "They think I'm an expert in all areas of the law and I can give them answers just over the phone."

Can Speak For Consumer Side

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles admitted he knows "absolutely nothing at all" about the oil industry, but he told 3,000 delegates at the World Petroleum Congress, "I do represent consumers."

In a speech Sunday which opened the congress, the 36-year-old heir to the British throne said oil reserves are limited and "those with imagination and foresight will no doubt set aside resources to develop new forms of energy to take the place of oil in the next century."

He predicted that in 50 years, the world might be addressing a conference attended perhaps by members of the oil industry who were "able to diversify into other forms of energy before it was too late."

Guns Of Washington Rally Aimed At Pres. Reagan

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the overall goal was "jobs, peace and freedom," speakers at a huge anniversary march to the Lincoln Memorial made clear their immediate target is creation of a "coalition of conscience" to defeat President Reagan if he runs for re-election.

An estimated 250,000 people gathered Saturday for a day-long rally that had two central themes: commemoration of the historic 1963 march that was climaxed by the late Martin Luther King's "I have a dream" speech, and a new call to arms for a wide-ranging agenda of liberal goals.

While most of the more than four dozen speakers paid homage to the martyred King, they also lambasted Reagan.

"We serve notice on you, Mr. Reagan, that we are not here to live in the past and to leave simply singing, 'We shall overcome,'" said Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"We are here because we are committed to the elimination of Reaganism from the face of the earth," shouted Hooks. "We've had enough of it. Reagan no more in '84."

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young stressed Sunday that the diverse coalition could be a potent political force next year.

"The numbers are there. We are already registering (black) voters at a phenomenal clip," Young said on the CBS program, "Face the Nation."

One of the loudest receptions went to the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a leader in black voter registration efforts and a potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

"Run, Jesse, run," chanted thousands after Jackson exhorted them to register. He noted that there are 3 million eligible blacks who have not registered to vote in eight southern states that Reagan carried in 1980 by a cumulative total of 192,000 votes.

While the focus was on political activism, most of the speakers remembered King as they endorsed an agenda that included the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, civil rights, Hispanic causes, gay rights, stricter anti-pollution efforts, help for the disabled, and a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

It was on Aug. 28, 1963, that King told a crowd estimated at 250,000 of his dream that one day racism would be replaced by justice and people would be judged individually rather than by color or religion.

King was slain five years later but his widow, Coretta Scott King, told the throng Saturday: "Martin is here today, too. I can feel it. I can sense Martin's presence."

"We still have a dream" was the slogan of the march, organized by more than 700 different groups around the theme "jobs, peace and freedom."

Referring to the 1963 effort that galvanized the civil rights movement, organizers said they hoped to create a new "coalition of conscience" to seek equality and justice for all people.

Pouring in off 1,500 chartered buses from around the country, the crowd began gathering early Saturday near the Washington Monument. After a morning rally, they set off in mid-day, 95-degree heat on a seven-block walk down Constitution Avenue to the Lincoln Memorial.

"Ronald Reagan, he's no good, send him back to Hollywood," said some of the marchers as they walked by the White House.

Chanting and singing under a wide array of signs and slogans, the crowd was good-natured.

Police reported few problems. There were about 20 arrests, mostly of unlicensed vendors. About 100 people were treated at first-aid tents for heat-related problems.

Reagan was not invited to speak, but he issued a statement Friday noting that although much has been accomplished in 20 years, much remains to be done. He termed King's dream a vision "that all men and women of good will, black and white alike, share with all their hearts."

AFTERMATH — Crowds start to thin out on the Mall in Washington Saturday after the "peace, jobs and freedom" march. Police estimate around 250,000 people attended the rally commemorating the March on Washington led by the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. twenty years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, AUGUST 30, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Be very practical in your attitude and get details attended to early in the day so your routines are more effective, after which you are able to go along with some dramatic changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Early handle those casual financial affairs of importance to you and then get ideas working by going to see this one and that one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to improve your appearance and health so that you can soon earn more money by being dynamic. Seek financial advice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early concentrate on gaining some personal wish that is important to you, then place your efforts in right direction.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have many career matters to work on, but work on that plan that can bring you desired wishes. Drive carefully.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A bigwig gives you good ideas that you should follow in order to have greater success in the future. Situations arise to your benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some new course of activity should now be thoroughly investigated and then let a bigwig help you to work it properly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handling practical matters is wise during the morning but later be broad-minded where the views of others are concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Finishing outside commitments can bring fine benefits to you and then you can keep the promises you have made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) First get that work ahead of you done efficiently and then get to work on clever ideas that you have. Don't irk a fellow worker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Pay compliments to those you truly admire and gain their good will and also gain your own secret aims. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle those small tasks at home that you know will please kin and then be with friends you like very much. Express creative ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Early handle correspondence and other type of communication and get excellent results, then add to prestige. Sort out new ideas.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a strong youngster who early will get involved in anything that is of a practical nature, so be sure to give courses along such lines, so that the career can start early and much money can be made. Stress religion and sports.

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A♦2 ♥954 ♦AKJ10952
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A. — You have only 14 HCP and a void in partner's suit, so it might seem that you should bid only one heart. But you will then find it impossible to describe your hand. Since you have a self-sufficient trump suit, the hand bids easier if you jump shift to two diamonds now.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AKQJ105 ♥KQ7 ♦8743
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Pass Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A. — If you feel you have to bid some number of spades, four spades is probably as good a bid as any. However, we have stressed on previous occasions that the right way to show a good hand in the balancing is to start with a takeout double, and we see no reason why we should change our minds now.

Q.3 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦7 ♥QJ98 ♦A1093 ♦K987
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ INT ?
What action do you take?

A. — It looks as if it's time to collect gifts from friendly opponents. East is going to find little or nothing in partner's hand, and it could be a blood-bath as he plays everything from his hand. Double, and double anything the opponents might run to.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

partner's capability, and your heart shortage suggests that the opponents have a good spot. Make it as difficult as possible for them to find it — jump to three spades. After a double, that action is preemptive; strong hands start with a redouble.

Q.5 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AJ854 ♥K1072 ♦83 ♥96
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?

A. — Don't let the vulnerability tempt you into passing — you have no reason to suppose that one spade doubled will fail, despite your trump length. Partner has asked you to bid your best suit, and you have a fair four-card major and a reasonable hand. Bid two hearts.

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦K92 ♥AKQ6 ♦K10932 ♦8
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A. — Had partner responded one spade, your hand would have been strong enough for a reverse. But now it has lost some of its attractiveness. Rebid two diamonds, and wait to see what action partner will take.
