Shultz Says Soviet Shot Down Airliner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today the Soviet Union tracked and shot down an unarmed South Korean airliner carrying 269 people. He said the United States "reacts with revulsion" and has demanded an explanation.

One of the passengers was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., chairman of the John Birch Society.

Shultz said the aircraft strayed into Soviet airspace and was tracked by the Soviets for more than 2½ hours. He said that as many as eight Soviet fighters were involved in the affair.

"At 1826 hours, the Soviet pilot" of one plane "reported that he fired a missile and the target was destroyed."

Shultz said that about an hour later a Soviet pilot reported seeing kerosene near the surface where the plane went down. He said there was "no excuse whatsoever for this appalling act."

Shultz told reporters at the State Department that President Reagan had been informed.

Shultz said that Richard Burt, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, summoned the Soviet charges, Oleg M. Sokolov, this morning to "express our grave concern" and to "demand an explanation."

Sokolov heads the Soviet Embassy here in the absence of Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, who is in Moscow.

Shultz also said there was no evidence the Soviets had warned the plane, although he said the plane that fired the missile "was close enough for a visual inspection."

He also said, "As far as we could see, there was no communication between the planes."

Shultz gave the following account of the events and aftermath of the downing of the plane:

1400 GMT, Wednesday (10 a.m. EDT), the airliner left from a refueling stop at Anchorage.

1600 GMT, noon EDT, the aircraft "came to the attention of Soviet radar" and was tracked constantly by the Soviets thereafter. It strayed into Soviet airspace over the Kamchatka Peninsula, over the Sea of Okhotsk and over Sakhalin Island.

1812 GMT, a Soviet pilot reported visual contact with the airliner.

1821 GMT, the Soviet pilot reported the plane at 10,000 meters.

1826 GMT, "the Soviet pilot reported that he fired a missile and the target was destroyed."

1830 GMT, the Korean aircraft was reported by radar at 5,000 meters.

1838 GMT, the Korean plane disappeared from radar screens.

Pentagon sources said the fighter that shot down the Korean jetliner was a MiG-23.

The Korean plane, a Boeing 747, was bound from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul, South Korea, when it dropped off Japanese air control radar, Pentagon sources said earlier.

The Japanese asked for U.S. help in searching for the plane and two patrol aircraft were sent aloft from Misawa Air

Congressman Is 'Missing'

By JAMES ROWLEY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Georgia congressman on board a South Korean airliner that was shot down

by a missile-firing Soviet warplane took the flight only because he missed an earlier

plane by a few minutes, an aide said today.

Rep. Larry McDonald, a Georgia Democrat and chairman of the conservative John Birch Society, was flying to South Korea as part of a congressional group attending a celebration of the 30th anniversary of the U.S.-South Korean mutual defense pact.

The Korean Air Lines flight had been due to land in Seoul at 4:53 p.m. EDT Wednesday. This morning, Secretary of State George Shultz announced that the Boeing 747 carrying 269 people had been shot down by a Soviet MiG-23 jet fighter.

In Atlanta, McDonald's press aide, Tommy Toles, said his boss missed a KAL flight from New York Sunday night by "three to four minutes."

The congressman's connecting flight from Atlanta was rerouted to Baltimore because of "a terrible storm" over New York.

By the time the rerouted flight finally landed at New York's Kennedy International Airport, "the terminal was flooded with all sorts of water problems. By the time he was able to get his baggage, he missed it by three or four minutes."

Leading the congressional delegation is Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who, along with others in the group, were taking on separate flights.

Both Helms and Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, were flying out of Los Angeles Tuesday night, aides said.

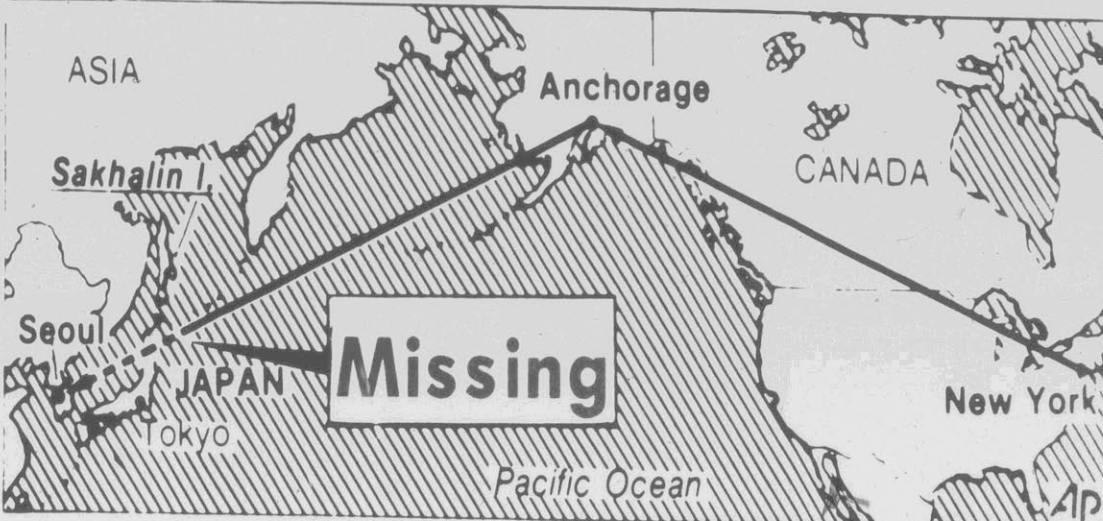

The trip is sponsored by the U.S. Institute of American Relations and the Asiatic Research Center of Korea, according to James Kanouse, an aide to Rep. Carroll Hubbard, D-Ky., who was also traveling to Seoul for the three-day conference that was scheduled to begin today.

Helms was appointed President Reagan's personal representative to the conference, said Claude Allen, a spokesman for the senator.

A doctor who first elected to the House in 1974, McDonald beat Republican David Sellers by capturing 61 percent of the votes in 1982.

A native of Atlanta who now resides in Marietta, Ga., McDonald, 48, was graduated from Davidson College in North Carolina and obtained his medical degree from Emory University. He served in the Navy from 1959 to 1961 as a physician and flight surgeon.

McDonald's wife, Kathryn, and the couple's children are staying at the Atlanta home of the congressman's mother, Smith said. None of the congressman's aides was with McDonald, Smith said.

Enrollment

East Carolina University has a record enrollment of on-campus students of 13,358 for the fall semester, Registrar Gil Moore announced today.

The 1983 fall semester exceeds by 44 students last year's total of 13,314.

ECU officials had predicted enrollment would remain steady despite recent state tuition increases. Moore said he was "very pleased to announce the record enrollment."

The total includes 221 students in the school of medicine.

Clashes In Three Cities

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Thousands of Solidarity supporters clashed with police in three Polish cities on the third anniversary of the outlawed labor union.

The protests were the most widespread in Poland since martial law was lifted in July, although the government news agency today claimed they were a failure.

Several people were reported injured in the street battles Wednesday in Gdansk, Nowa Huta and Wroclaw, but there were no firm figures. Less violent demonstrations were reported in Warsaw, Czesochowa, Lublin, Poznan, Krakow, Lesnica and Olsztyn.

Solidarity chief Lech Walesa laid a red and white bouquet at a workers' monument outside the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk where Solidarity was founded on Aug. 31, 1980. Martial law authorities outlawed the union on Oct. 8, 1982.

A police cordon stopped about 2,000 supporters from escorting Walesa to the monument.

First Clash With Philippines Police

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A student was killed by gunfire and 18 people were injured as hundreds of youths hurled rocks, bottles and homemade grenades at police after the funeral of slain opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

The first political violence since Aquino's Aug. 21 assassination erupted near the presidential palace Wednesday night, about the same time that thousands of mourners gathered to witness Aquino's burial after an 11-hour funeral parade that attracted an estimated one million onlookers.

Today, as calm was restored, opposition politician Salvador Laurel called for the resignation of President Ferdinand E. Marcos and the formation of a caretaker government to investigate Aquino's murder and to call general elections.

Laurel, leader of a 12-party anti-Marcos alliance, said Marcos' resignation would be the only way to avert further violence following Aquino's death. It was the second time in two days he has made the demand.

Speaking to civic club luncheon, Laurel said a caretaker government should be composed of "the most respected citizens" who would not run in any elections that would be called. He said an interim government also would free all political prisoners and rewrite the Philippine Constitution.

In Istanbul, Turkey, an aide to Finance Minister Cesar Virata said Wednesday he could not "preclude the possibility" of involvement by a member of Marcos government in the assassination.

Groundbreaking Held For New Water Plant

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held late this morning for Greenville's new 10.5 million-gallon a day wastewater treatment plant, located on a 200-acre site north of the Tar River and east of the Eastern Bypass.

Completion of the $10.4 million facility is expected in early 1985.

Mayor Percy Cox told those attending the ceremony that the "Greenville Utilities Commission has done a great job in providing for the present and future utility needs of our city. The (City) Council joins me in commending them for a job well-done."

Cox said even though "adequate utilities are essential for any community growth, there are many other city services that must be provided to attract new industries and new citizens to our community.

Greenville, he said, has a solid base of services available, including fire and police protection, streets, sanitation, recreation and library, "to name a few."

According to Cox, "A major effort today within the city of Greenville's area of responsibility is planned, orderly growth. We are spending countless hours in research, study, discussion, meetings, hearings and similar activities to develop long-range plans that will insure that Greenville is just as attractive to newcomers in the year 2000 as it is today."

Cox said the city welcomes newcomers and stands ready to "integrate them into our community — not as partial citizens but as full-time citizens."

"We firmly believe that Greenville has more to offer newcomers than any other city in the state. We are proud of our community and we want to share it with others," he said.

Cox closed by saying the city welcomes the opportunity to talk with industries "seeking a new home," and "we are ready, willing and able to discuss with any good prospect the advantages of locating in Greenville."

Special guests at the groundbreaking included industry-hunters from the N.C. Department of Commerce as well as other industrial developers.

The new sewer plant will use the Schriber process, which is a low load, counter current, aeration process, which offers the widest operational flexibility and the lowest energy and maintenance cost of any available system which would meet the city's needs.

For optimum energy efficiency, all of the pumps and motors to be used in the plant were purchased on the basis of a "life cycle-energy use analysis, according to GUC Director Charles Horne. He also said a microprocessor control system will be used to monitor the oxygen levels within the treatment process and will operate the combination of aerators that will provide maximum energy efficiency.

Horne noted that sufficient space is available at the site to double the capacity of the plant in the future.

The new facility is being financed with $1.1 million in local money, a $1 million grant from the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, and $8.4 million from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

FOOD LINE SOUNDOFF

I was in the line at the Pitt County Office Building to get cheese, rice, flour, etc., Tuesday by 7:30 a.m. It was already winding around the building when I got there. The line moved forward very, very slowly because there were thousands of people and so many of those people chose to be completely inconsiderate of others and break in line. I know those administering the program have a tremendous chore and I know the people who were there needed to be there; otherwise they would not have put up with the long wait in the hot sun. However, I appeal to those who must use the food giveaway program to think of others as well as themselves and wait their turn. And I appeal to the program administrators to seek to devise a way to either see that those who try to break in line are dealt with or, better still, to come up with a way to segregate the group somehow according to days — perhaps by age — like 70 and older the first day, 65-70 the second day, etc. There must be a better way! A.M.

Extension Service Chairman Leroy James said that the mass of people there Tuesday made the situation virtually impossible to control. As chairman of the department charged by the county commissioners with administering the giveaway program, he said he will take your suggestions under advisement and also will talk to the sheriff about more officers to monitor behavior down the line. There was an officer where the line entered the building, he said, but apparently the problem area was further back.

Anyone else having suggestions about how the program can better be streamlined is invited to contact James.

Bethel And Simpson Planning Focus CD Funds On Housing

Rehabilitation work on substandard housing will be one of the focus areas for funds approved this week for Simpson and Bethel under the Community Development block grant program for fiscal year 1983.

The governor's office announced that Bethel will receive $734,260 while the village of Simpson will get $714,835 under the program administered by the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Ricky McGhee of the Mid-East Commission said that Bethel plans to use its CD money for home rehabilitation, some demolition, property acquisition and disposition, and some storm drainage work in a target area that includes parts of Main, East, Church, Gray, Martin and Elm streets.

McGhee, who is administering Bethel's on-going CD program, said the town plans to budget $564,000 for the rehabilitation of 47 homes, demolish about six old structures at a cost of $3,000, spend $44,800 on acquisition, allocate $22,500 on relocation activities, and spend $12,760 for drainage work. He said $1,200 is also designated for property disposition activities.

McGhee noted that the 1983 grant, which will fund a two-year program, represents the third designated for Bethel. The town received CD allocations in 1978 and 1981.

Simpson Mayor Galloway C. Thompson said the village intends to undertake rehabilitation work on substandard houses in an impact area that includes Thompson, Virginia, Wilson, Queen, Moore, Tucker and Gatlin streets. In addition, eight substandard homes that cannot be rehabilitated economically will be demolished and the occupants will be relocated, using CD funds.

Drainage work is scheduled throughout the impact area, the mayor said, with paving scheduled for parts of Thompson, Wilson, Virginia and Tucker streets. Plans also call for expansion work in the park and recreation areas, he said.

Thompson said work on the 18-month project is expected to begin around the middle of October. The village received a $294,300 grant in 1977, he noted.

After purchase by the Hope Foundation in 1966, the property was restored. Its furnishings, comprising a major collection of north-eastern North Carolina furniture, were selected with use of Stone's estate inventory as a guide.

The symposium is designed for those with a personal or professional interest in colonial era decorative arts. Further information is available from "Decorative Arts Affair," Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Dear Abby Reader Lost Keys And More

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Still Upset," warning people against carrying priceless pictures and souvenirs in their purses, prompts this letter.

I learned another lesson the hard way. I lost my key ring. On it I had attached my name, home address and telephone number, thinking if my keys were lost, the finder would return them to me. Wrong! The "finder" beat me home and cleaned me out before I was able to get there. Print this, please. It might wise up some other dummies.

DUMB IN MUNCIE, IND.

DEAR ABBY: This June was our 15th wedding anniversary. My husband told me he was so busy that I should just go and buy myself something. (Was I supposed to buy my own card, too?)

Two days later, my boss asked me to run an errand for him on my lunch hour. I nearly rear-ended the car ahead of me when I saw my "too busy" husband getting out in front of a very nice restaurant with a woman he works with.

When I asked him about it that night, he became furious and accused me of "spying" on him. (In broad daylight on a busy street — this is "spying"? Then he said he took her to lunch to celebrate her 10th year with the company. I can't describe my hurt.

Abby, he didn't forget our anniversary. It just wasn't important to him. Later he said he was sorry and wanted to make it up to me by hopping in the sack. He got angry when I couldn't respond. I didn't feel I was made love to — I felt used.

I'm tired of being married to this thoughtless, insensitive man. He won't change. Am I a poor sport for wanting to throw in the towel?

FED UP IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR FED UP: No. Just be sure it's what you want to do. But first give counseling a chance — it could save your marriage. If it's hopeless, then throw the towel in — and your "too busy" husband out.

DEAR ABBY: I'm only 25 years old and have been married three times. My first marriage lasted three years. My second marriage ended after only 30 days, and I am now in my third marriage to a man I do not love.

I am expecting a baby any time now, which, by the way, does not belong to the man I'm married to. Now all of a sudden the man who fathered this child (I love him dearly, Abby) wants to marry me. The problem is the man to whom I am married believes that marriage is for better or for worse, 'til death do us part. Well, I don't want to wait that long. Besides, I want better, and better for me is to get out of this marriage and marry the man I love.

What should I do, Abby? Take a fourth walk down the aisle with the man I've loved since high school, or remain trapped in a loveless marriage?

A 12-YEAR-FAN IN FLORIDA

DEAR FAN: I think you've already made your choice. A marriage usually stands a better chance when you're married to the one you love — especially when he's the father of your child.

Problems? Everybody has them. What are yours? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Measuring Cut Wood

Many people are not aware that a cord measure of roundwood is actually greater than the cord measure of split and cut firewood which is processed. When a stand cord of wood, 4-foot by 4-foot by 8-foot 4-foot sticks is cut and split, it will stack into a smaller pile, says forestry resource management specialists at N.C. State University.

Shoes For Kids Should Fit Properly

Back to school means new shoes. "Even if last year's school shoes still look good, be sure to check the size. Young feet grow rapidly," says Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist in charge, N.C. State University.

Fit, not durability, is the most important consideration when buying children's shoes. Most children outgrow their shoes before they wear them out because their feet grow so rapidly.

"Your child's feet can grow as much as three sizes in just a few months," points out Dr. Tutterow. Check the length of his shoe. Have him stand and press the end of the shoe with your thumb. There should be one-half to three-quarter inch between his longest toe and the end of the shoe.

Examine the shoes for evidence of wear and look at the child's feet when he first removes his shoes and socks. Pink or red spots on his feet may mean his shoe is too tight or too short.

"Get your child off to a good start with a pair of well-made shoes that protect his feet from the pounding they take on hard cement sidewalks, playgrounds and tile floors," she says.

Moose Have Convention

The annual convention of the N.C. Moose Association was held during the weekend at the Holiday Inn Four Seasons in Greensboro.

Change Must Come

American Telephone and Telegraph employees are back at work after approving a contract that gave them salary increases and new benefits.

The employees went back to work after the strike ended Sunday when contract agreements were reached with all Bell subsidiaries.

The strike was significant in that the system for the most part kept operating, due to the automation that has been introduced. Indeed, that is much of what worker concern was all about: that is the protection of jobs which are being eliminated due to automation and other changes in the industry.

The contract with the Communications Workers of America calls for a 5.5 percent increase for employees of longer than five years. There will also be annual wage increases of 1.5 percent in 1984 and 1985, along with cost of living adjustments at 75 percent of inflation. There are also provisions for job security as automated equipment takes over much of the work.

While we are happy to see the strike settled and workers back on the job, the new contract could mean more inflation for the nation with its inflation-feeding cost of living adjustments. Job security provisions could mean the phone companies will have to keep unneeded employees on the payroll with the bill ultimately being paid by the customers.

The negotiators wrestled with difficult issues, which will also affect other American industries. No one wants to lose his job to a computer but changes in the workforce will be necessary as new technology comes about.

A Good Day's Work

The state Legislature acted quickly to correct the disclosure law which law enforcement officers felt would force the identification of confidential informers.

The law as it stood would have meant that law enforcement sources of information could have soon disappeared.

It was a matter of great concern to chief law enforcement officers whose forces depend on confidential information in investigating crimes.

The matter was handled in a one-day session last Friday. It was a good day's work for our legislators.

Bracket Creep

NEW YORK (AP) — Your federal taxes have been cut by more than 20 percent over the last two years, right?

Well, yes, but no. At least that's the answer you'll get from Stephen A. Meyer, senior economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Writing in the bank's bimonthly Business Review, Meyer says there's more to the story than just the 5 percent tax reduction in late 1981 and the 10 percent cuts that took effect at midyear in 1982 and 1983.

He points out that Social Security taxes continue to rise, and that the persistent phenomenon known as "bracket creep" is still with us.

Largely because of these two factors, Meyer says, "for most families with constant real income, the share of income taken by federal taxes will RISE, slightly, from 1980 to 1984."

In 1980, a worker's share of payroll taxes for Social Security was 6.13 percent of wages up to $25,900. This year, it is 6.7 percent of wages up to $35,700, and it is scheduled to keep climbing in the years ahead.

Meanwhile, although inflation has slowed, it has not stopped, and neither has bracket creep. "Because the U.S. has a progressive income tax, the marginal tax rate — the extra tax paid on an additional dollar of income — rises with taxable income," Meyer observes.

"The tax code does not recognize the difference between nominal (current dollar value) and real (constant purchasing-power) income, however."

"As a result, inflation causes bracket creep: If incomes rise just fast enough to maintain constant purchasing power in the face of rising prices, families are pushed into higher tax brackets. Consequently their tax payments grow faster than their incomes.

"Bracket creep also means that the share of income going to taxes rises automatically with inflation. Bracket creep raises the real receipts of the government just as if Congress had voted a tax increase."

About all the recent tax cuts have accomplished, Meyer says, is to put a temporary damper on the steady growth of the tax burden. From 1974 to 1980, according to Census Bureau statistics, the amount of pretax income that went for federal and state income taxes, property taxes and Social Security taxes grew from 19.9 percent to 23 percent.

The existence of bracket creep has not gone unnoticed in the government. The act of Congress in 1981 that provided for the tax cuts also calls for the introduction in 1985 of "indexed" income tax rates — to be adjusted for changes in the consumer price index. Full indexation would eliminate bracket creep.

At the time the bill was passed, indexation got comparatively little attention. Advocates tended merely to mention it in passing while they waxed enthusiastic over other provisions of the program that went into effect right away. Opponents didn't protest too vigorously, apparently reasoning that there was plenty of time to try to get it repealed.

Now that 1985 is drawing nearer, however, the debate over indexation is starting to heat up, and calls for repeal are being raised. Critics of the idea contend it will aggravate the already severe problem of the federal budget deficit.

Proponents argue, among other things, that if Congress wants to keep raising taxes it should be forced to vote the increases rather than getting them via the present back-door route.

The outcome can't be predicted with certainty. But it grows more evident with the passage of time that the recent tax cuts had less impact on Americans' personal finances than most experts thought they would. Indexation, by contrast, looms larger and larger as one of the most important elements in all the tax legislation of recent years — if it ever takes effect.

WASHINGTON — Auto industry analysts couldn't pinpoint last week why new car sales increased for the 11th consecutive reporting period. Favorable interest rates and improvement in automobile quality were the most common explanations.

One possible factor, however, may never show up in Detroit's official analysis: Car buyers in many states now enjoy statutory protections from new cars that are little more than

WASHINGTON — The story of the Boeing Co. and the plastic stool cap is an ugly story, but it is a factual story and the facts add up to outrage. The facts come from The Washington Post, which published them a week ago. The outrage is my own.

The Post's expose, by staff writer Barton Gellman, ran to 2,000 words. It was a model piece of straightforward reporting. Let me summarize.

In the cockpit of the giant AWACS radar plane is a small blue and gray stool. Ordinarily the stool is folded into a bulkhead. The stool is provided for the plane's navigator to stand on if he has to reach a periscope in order to check his bearings. This rarely happens.

The legs of the stool have plastic caps on the bottom. The caps, fabricated of white nylon, are intended to keep the stool from wobbling on those rare occasions when the stool is put to use. A matchbook, a well-folded handkerchief or a borrowed billfold would serve as well.

One day this past January a crew chief at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma, Charles R. Kessler Jr., noticed that caps were missing on two stools in planes under his care.

He requisitioned replacements. His order went routinely through the Pentagon's purchasing system. The system's computers reported the item could be supplied only by the Boeing Co. Confirmation of the order went back to Oklahoma. Kessler happened to see the paperwork. He hit the ceiling.

The plastic caps were priced at $1,118.26. Each.

Kessler went to his superiors. His superiors went to their superiors. A considerable flap ensued. The Department of Defense insisted the incident was a fluke. A spokesman for Boeing said the company "felt chagrined," for the price was "obviously too high." Kessler got a commendation and a bonus. A mechanic put the caps on the stools. End of story.

But not end of story. The Post's man dug out a statement Boeing had prepared in 1981 to justify its bill for providing three of the plastic caps at that time. The material costs were 78 cents, or 26 cents for each of the nylon cubes. According to Boeing, it took nearly 50 hours of "production labor" to manufacture the three caps. Another eight hours of labor were required for "inspection." Fringe benefits, tools, overhead, state and local taxes, and a "profit fee of 15 percent" ran the total to $2,749.65, or $916.55 each. By 1983, owing to internal surcharges added by the defense supply system, the price had swollen to the $1,118.26 that caught Kessler's eye.

The failure of the Defense Department to detect this highway robbery can be explained. Items are ordered not by physical description but by number. Kessler had requisitioned Item 27 from Figure 205-03-13A in a parts catalog. This translated into National Stock Number 5340-01-040-4512. The purchasing officer didn't know whether he was ordering a stool cap or a stomach pump.

Boeing's conduct also can be explained, but it cannot be excused. The explanation lies in greed, sheer greed. Knowing it was dealing with Uncle Sucker, the company designed a fancy cap that would have been needlessly expensive at $2 each. Let us be generous, and throw in all the proportionate costs of overhead, use of tools and fringe benefits, and call it $10 per cap.

I do not use the word "outrageous" more than three or four times a year, but the word applies here. For Boeing to have inflated the price of this item to more than $900 — by its own 1981 statement — is flatly outrageous. The company would have us believe that an inspector spent two hours and 40 minutes examining each of these stool caps. Who would believe it? That part of the statement is beyond belief. With sales last year of more than $9 billion, Boeing must be ranked among the great companies in this nation. Great companies ought not to make statements that are beyond belief.

As editor and columnist, I have spent a good part of the past 30 years defending capitalism, the marketplace, the free enterprise system and the integrity of American business and industry. The case of the plastic stool cap shakes a man's faith. If Boeing could get away with so gross a swindle, what are we to surmise of other companies on other contracts? Let us sound applause for the Sergeant Kesslers of this world, but for the Boeing Co. let us cry shame.

To the editor:

My husband, the late Col. A E Dubber was an enthusiastic supporter of the new medical school. When he realized that his illness was terminal, he arranged in his will for his body to be donated to the school. In lieu of flowers, he asked that contributions be made to the new wing in Pitt Memorial Hospital. There is now a room furnished in his memory.

When he died soon after midnight we called the medical school and within the hour two men from Norcott Funeral Home came for the body. These men were extremely kind and helpful.

Recently I received a call from Carlton Smith Jr., curator of anatomical materials of the medical school, advising me that my husband's ashes were now available for burial and he brought them to my home.

There is a great need for bodies in medical schools and I hope that more thought will be given to this need.

Col. Dubber will be buried with military honors in Arlington National Cemetery some time in October.

Some men seek greatness by design. Some men seek greatness by their love of power. Some men seek greatness by their political maneuvering.

Some men obtain greatness by their concern, love and service to their fellowman. Money and power have nothing to do with their dedication. There has never been any man that fits this better than the late Dr. E. Burt Aycock — truly he gave his life for his many patients and friends.

To the editor:

Last Friday your editorial "Do It Now" was an important message concerning the need for all of us to consider giving to help others in time of crisis or extended need. The Red Cross does depend on us.

Recently there have also been some television messages outlining the mission of Greenville's Real Crisis Center and the need for us to support its work.

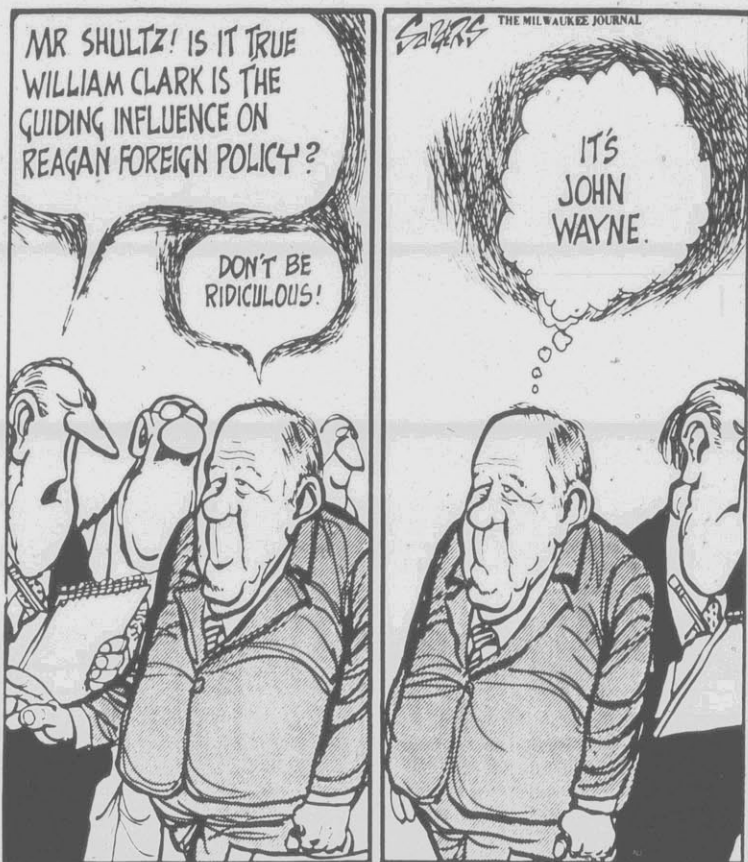

The missing message is that these agencies so vital to the well-being of our community are two of 26 agencies supported by the Pitt County United Way.

The Pitt County United Way is launching its annual campaign this week and must raise $585,200 in order to support the budgets of its many member organizations.

The point is that each member organization has an important mission in serving those in our community needing our help and that your one gift to the United Way can make a difference. Further, by supporting the United Way, we avoid the exhausting task of each of these agencies, conducting a separate fund-raising drive. So, I agree — Do it Now. Do it the United Way.

Space Farming Lies Ahead

RALEIGH — It is the year 2010 and, in the space station USS North Carolina, astro-farmers are happy to be in orbit. Down on earth, the summer drought is reminding oldtimers of the heat wave of '83. Once again, farmers are complaining that late summer thunderstorms aren't enough to save the corn crop.

But, onboard the Carolina, there are no such problems. Rain, light and heat are all controllable on the space station farm. Every day, enough vegetables and grain crops mature right on time for dinner.

Dr. C. David Raper, soil scientist at N.C. State University, is one of a couple dozen scientists around the country helping NASA prepare dinner for the space stations that will begin orbiting the earth in the 1990s. The research is in its earliest stages now, simply at the point where scientists are looking for the right questions to seek answers for. A layman's sketch of the spaceship farm is available, however.

About 14 square meters of farm space will be needed to produce enough food for each person traveling aboard the ship. Beans, soybeans, peanuts, lettuce, carrots, tomatoes, potatoes, wheat, green peas, almost any vegetable, will be farmed. Meat, most likely, will have to be shipped up from earth. Because the environment will be controlled, the crops will be harvested year-round. "Conventional farmers place a lot of emphasis on getting the maximum yield from a crop," Raper said. "But a farmer in space will be concerned with getting a steady, reliable yield." Without droughts, floods and heatwaves, the astro-farmer will be able to produce two to three times more, per year, than his counterpart on earth.

The typical space station, Raper said, will have food-producing capacity above that of what is needed. The farm will produce somewhat below 100 percent — but at a level that will feed everyone. Then, if something goes wrong with the equipment being used on the farm and production time is lost, production can be increased when the equipment is fixed to replenish any drain on reserves.

The farmer will also be responsible for producing the oxygen that station workers will breathe. The farm plants will produce oxygen from water and the carbon dioxide gas produced by humans. There are chemical processes that will produce oxygen for a spaceship but the agricultural process is preferred because it fits in with the space station's recycling strategy.

Raper says the spaceship crew could begin partially feeding itself with some leaf vegetables within several weeks of launch. Larger plants like wheat and soybeans would need three or four months to start producing.

Astronauts now eat specially formulated foods carried into space from earth. Raper says that such foods would prove more costly, in the long run, than food actually produced aboard the space station. Setting up a farm in space would involve a large initial investment. But, economists now think the lower cost of the food would, within five to seven years, make up for the initial investment.

When can we expect to see orbiting space farms? Raper says we'll see the first experiments being carried out in space by the end of this decade. During the 1990s, space vehicles will gradually begin to rely on their own gardens for some of the crew's food. But the next century, everything but the meat should be a product of space.

For North Carolina farmers who've cursed the drought this summer, it might be a little bit of consolation to know that someday, somewhere in outer space, farming is going to become a sure bet.

Strength For Today

Have you ever sat and listened to the pealing organ in a church, or to a large chorus rendering some mighty anthem, or to a symphony orchestra interpreting the wonderful compositions of the old masters? If so, have you thought of what a blessing God has given us in music?

Suppose he had left us without music. Suppose nothing but the sound of our own voices, the raucous turmoil of the world, the explosive reports accompanying catastrophe were the only sounds we ever heard.

How dismal life would be!

Anyone reading the Bible must be impressed by the assurance given us that one of the outstanding blessings of heaven will be its music. We think of the music of this world as inspiring; what of the day when we enter that realm in which there is no disharmony, where harmonies as yet undiscovered by us flow out of the peace and love of God?

Praise the Lord for his goodness and mercy — and his music.

'Lemon' Laws May Be Helping

lemons. While the proliferation of "lemon laws" might seem bitter-sweet news to Detroit, it could speed the auto industry's recovery.

On Jan. 1 car buyers in California and Connecticut gained easier access to refunds or replacements if cars fail to perform as promised. Since then, 14 other states have passed similar lemon laws, and at least 10 others may follow suit by the end of the year.

While most car purchasers won't drive away with lemons this year, many inevitably will. If, as the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety estimates, even only one in 1,000 cars is irreparably defective, Detroit could produce 6,000 or 7,000 lemons this year.

According to John Woodcock, the state legislator who drafted Connecticut's new law, the lemon can suffer from many maladies: vibrations wind noise, roof leaks, engine and dashboard fires and losses in electrical power and oil pressure. "It's a whole litany of problems," woodcock told our reporter, Michael Duffy.

Some state laws are tougher than others. Connecticut's manufacturers are required to replace any new car that remains a problem after four trips to the repair shop stays out of service for 30 days during the first year of ownership. Defective cars also an option.)

Minnesota, meanwhile, mandates replacement in the event of a safety hazard in the car's design; New York extends protection through the second year of ownership.

While Congress has long guaranteed the replacement of products after "reasonable" attempts at repair, the new state laws reduce the road for costly legal assistance.

Prepare Final Report On Nat'l Guard Allegations

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Department of the Army started investigating allegations about the North Carolina National Guard before a special state legislative committee could seek its help, officials say.

A draft report by the Select House Committee to Study the Operations Governing the N.C. National Guard seeks federal help in probing charges of misuse of military aircraft and in determining whether federal employees were on leave when they participated in a golf tournament.

The report, approved last Wednesday, is being prepared for distribution soon to the General Assembly, House Speaker Liston Ramsey, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, Gov. Jim Hunt and each unit of the Guard.

But the Inspector General's Office in Washington already has begun a probe. State Senior Deputy Attorney General Andrew Vanore acknowledged Tuesday that an Army investigation was underway. He said Wednesday he heard about the probe weeks ago.

"It was as natural as day follows night that because of the publicity received from the House committee hearings that the inspector general of the Army would have to also look into it," Vanore said.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, vice-chairman of the House committee, agreed that the federal investigation is a natural outgrowth of his committee's actions. He said several members of the committee have been contacted by the Army but he refused to comment further.

Rep. Murray Pool, D-Sampson, who also has been contacted, spent several hours with a representative of the Inspector General's Office discussing the committee's work and he was told the investigators would return next week.

Pool said if the federal officials had not begun the investigation, he was prepared to take a packet of information collected by the committee to Washington.

Administration officials said they would supply the Inspector General's office with the same records they gave the legislative committee.

Ramsey named the special committee after eastern legislators received complaints about favoritism from Guardsmen angered by the method of selection of a commander for the battalion in the Wilmington area.

The committee met several times with Vanore, Maj. Gen. William E. Ingram, the state adjutant general who retires in October, and Heman Clark, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety which oversees the Guard.

The committee recommends that:

— Promotion procedures be reviewed, partly because the adjutant general may approve or disapprove promotion recommendations, lending credence to the charges of favoritism.

Clark, in a letter responding to the report, said the promotion "was challenged through political channels and in my judgment ... was amplified beyond the usual level of discontent."

He suggested that if a review is conducted, it be performed by an impartial group consisting of representatives of the Army, National Guard, Army Reserve officers and civilians.

— Clark request a written report from the State Bureau of Investigation on the results of a probe into misuse of concrete in Butner, that he take corrective action and write a more specific policy on using excess materials.

The recommendation focuses on two Crime Control employees who received concrete left over from a Guard rifle range in Butner. There were allegations of misusing state property but Clark said the company gave the two men free concrete after giving the state all it had purchased.

He said, however, that state workers should not accept free gifts because of the appearance of a payoff.

Clark said SBI records cannot be made public by law. He said the two men who received concrete have been reprimanded and asked to purchase an equal amount of concrete for public use at Butner.

— Clark should get an interpretation of any disputed parts of the law on Guard pensions and should require those illegally receiving the pension to repay the money.

The committee found that Ingram and eight others were receiving a pension at the same time they were receiving a salary and it was unclear whether that was legal.

Clark's office requested an attorney general's opinion which indicated that the Guardsmen were not entitled to both the pension and salary. They have been ordered to repay the money.

— Written rules should be adopted on using leave time to play in Guard sponsored recreational activities.

The committee learned that a number of federal and state Guard employees were playing in a golf tournament during workdays. The panel said it could not determine whether the men played during duty hours.

Ingram issued a policy in April to make sure all Guard workers participating are on leave.

— Clark should receive a record of all flights of the adjutant general to determine if they are proper.

The committee questioned the use of military planes for taking Guardsmen to a bowling event in Tennessee and to the funeral of Ingram's father-in-law and stopping the plane in Nags Head, where Ingram has a cottage.

Ingram said he did not know about the trip to Tennessee and to his father-in-law's funeral until after they happened. He said the other flights already were scheduled for training.

Married Couple Found Dead

WALLBURG, N.C. (AP) — A married couple was found shot to death in their Davidson County home Monday in what law enforcement officers described as an apparent murder-suicide.

Kenneth Joel Smith and his wife, Sophia, described by neighbors as being in their late 40s, were found lying in the dining area of their brick home. Capt. Billy Nail of the Davidson County Sheriff's Department said Mrs. Smith was shot twice with a .357-caliber pistol and Smith was shot once in the head.

According to neighbors, Smith had been plagued with poor health in recent years.

Seven Hurt By Chlorine

KNIGHTDALE, N.C. (AP) — Seven people were slightly injured when a chemical storage tank at an electrical equipment manufacturing firm ruptured, forcing the evacuation of 125 workers, authorities said.

The chlorine gas leak came late Wednesday from a ruptured line in a pressurized cylinder containing 120 pounds of chlorine in a storage room at the Square D plant, said Knightdale Fire Chief George Gupton.

"It was very lucky that no more people were injured, because this was one of the most dangerous situations I've seen," said Gupton.

Firefighters wearing breathing masks found a white gas cloud filling the northeast corner of the plant when they arrived. They took the cylinder outside, where it finished expelling the toxic gas, Gupton said.

Seven people, including at least one firefighter, were treated at Wake County Medical Center after inhaling fumes, but no one was seriously hurt, Gupton said.

Terry Rodabaugh, plant personnel manager, said the "minor" leak was discovered about 9 p.m. after workers smelled chlorine fumes.

He said the chemical was used in small quantities for a number of purposes including waste treatment. Electrical equipment is manufactured at the plant.

The company's third shift, scheduled to begin at 10:30 p.m., was canceled but today's first shift was expected as usual.

N.C. SHP Gearing Up For Labor Day Traffic

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Highway Patrol Capt. Carl Gilchrist, commander of Troop A, today announced plans for a 23-county special emphasis program over the Labor Day weekend in an attempt to curb traffic accidents.

Gilchrist said "all district first sergeants will assign their troopers to high-accident frequency areas" with emphasis placed on "the drinking driver, speeders, pedestrians and other accident-producing, hazardous moving violations." He said troopers will be assigned to "main roads and beach access roads at the beginning and end of the weekend, and to other problem areas during late night hours."

Labor Day weekend, which traditionally signals the end of the summer vacation period, "has become a particularly dangerous time," the officer said. However, last year, Troop A experienced only one traffic death, "a record which will be hard to beat," he said.

According to Gilchrist, all the troop's equipment, including "the new Ford Mustang cruisers, the radar and Vascar (speed detection) units, and breath-testing equipment will be used to attempt to make our highways a more pleasurable and safer place to travel this Labor Day weekend."

In addition to the dangers of the holiday weekend, the end of summer vacations also signals the return of school buses to the highways.

"A great responsibility lies with the motorist in being especially alert for these buses and their precious cargo," as well as for children waiting beside the roadway for buses and children walking to and from school, Gilchrist said.

"Pedestrians make up a large percentage of the fatality total," Gilchrist said.

"Persons walking on a roadway without a sidewalk are required by law to walk on the left facing traffic and yield to all vehicles."

"When walking at night," Gilchrist said, "people should wear light-colored clothing and should carry a flashlight."

He said the number of accidents and fatalities in District V, which includes Pitt and Martin counties, is up for the first six months of this year.

He said from Jan. 1 through the end of June 1982, there were 539 traffic accidents which resulted in seven deaths. The figures for the first six months of 1983 show troopers investigated 609 accidents which resulted in 14 deaths, including two pedestrians.

Decline Accept Library Bldg.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The $26 million Walter R. Davis Library at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has been completed eight months later than scheduled, but university officials refuse to accept the building because of a dispute with the contractor.

The controversy involves 35 anodized aluminum windows that were repaired instead of replaced by the contractor, T.A. Loving of Goldsboro, after the aluminum finish was damaged last winter.

The windows were damaged after water seeped into walls and onto window heads during the winter. It is thought the water washed limestone from mortar used in the construction onto the windows, damaging the finish.

The contractor hired a custom refinishing firm to recoat the windows with aluminum paint instead of replacing them, according to Charles W. Davis Jr., consulting university architect for the project.

Governor Is Up, Walking

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt was up and walking Wednesday in Wake County Medical Center, less than a day after doctors removed his gallbladder in a 45-minute operation, said Hunt spokesman Gary Pearce.

Pearce said Dr. Larry Tyree, the governor's personal physician, said Hunt had been walking around since Tuesday evening.

"Dr. Tyree says he is doing great," Pearce said.

Hunt's gallbladder was removed Tuesday morning and doctors said the 46-year-old, two-term governor would remain in the hospital for about a week. They said he would be asked to take another three weeks off but they acknowledged it would be difficult to keep Hunt from resuming a full schedule.

Hunt's appendix was removed last February after he developed appendicitis. It was learned at that time that Hunt had gallstones and needed his gallbladder removed.

He entered the hospital Sunday and had tests performed Monday but doctors said they have detected no other physical problems.

Waste And Health In N.C. 2000 Recommendations

By MARY ANNERHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina should ban burial of some hazardous wastes and encourage industry to recycle or reduce others, says a report prepared for a commission planning the state's future.

The recommendations are contained in one of six studies done by government task forces for the Commission on the Future of North Carolina, which has urged state officials to avoid hazardous waste landfills. The reports were scheduled for review by the state Goals and Policy Board today and Friday.

Topics covered by the reports include management of toxic substances and hazardous wastes, health care for older adults, health care costs, health problems for children, assistance for business and industry and water resources.

Perhaps the most controversial reports focus on hazardous wastes and children's health.

The waste task force reports that existing federal regulations for hazardous waste management are inadequate. It urges the Governor's Waste Management Board to prepare economic incentives to draw industry away from landfills toward recycling, treatment and reduction of waste.

It also urges the Legislature to require annual reports from generators, treaters, storers and disposers of hazardous waste and to prohibit landfilling of certain kinds of hazardous wastes.

The General Assembly considered comprehensive changes in hazardous waste laws but failed to agree on them before the session adjourned.

The children's health task force notes a myriad of problems for children in low-income families. It says that almost 50 percent of preschool children in 1970 and 1971 had inadequate diets and almost half of those children had failed to reach a normal height.

The task force recommended as its top priority that Medicaid be expanded to cover children in financially needy two-parent families. It noted that Medicaid tends to cover single-parent families only.

The six reports can be accepted, rejected or modified for inclusion in the annual report for the Goals and Policy Board to be completed in November, said Doris Guppton, assistant director of the board.

She said about 20 citizens, officials and technical experts were appointed this spring to each of the six task forces, which were overseen by the Department of Administration. The groups drafted recommendations based on the N.C. 2000 Commission's work and the proposals were reviewed by larger groups of about 125 during one-day seminars in July and August.

"We weren't reinventing the wheel," Ms. Guppton said. "We were taking what had already been developed in two years."

She said the purpose of the groups was to "focus a little more narrowly on what the N.C. 2000 recommendations were on these six specific issues which the governor directed the Goals and Policy Board to look at with the hopes of implementing some of the recommendations."

The board's purpose will be to monitor implementation of the task force recommendations.

"This (the recommendations) is not static," she said. "It is something meant to be ... a working, living, breathing kind of thing. Nothing says we can't go back and rethink it."

Among the task forces' other recommendations are:

- Provide courses on parenting skills in secondary schools and offer more home visits by health providers to prevent child health problems.

- Broaden third-party coverage of prenatal care and expand screening programs for metabolic and genetic problems to improve the health of mothers and children.

- Repeal the state law that permits corporal punishment in schools and increase services for abusive and neglectful parents.

- Develop single-parent support groups and assure access to day care services to help children of divorced parents.

- Pass legislation requiring employers provide workers information on hazardous chemicals used on the job.

- Establish a business assistance information clearinghouse and a business development center.

- Provide incentives for local governments to prepare minimum water resource plans to make sure they are prepared to meet future water needs.

Plan Rites For Slain Marine

By The Associated Press
Relatives of slain Marine 2nd Lt. Donald Losey prepared today for the return of his body from Lebanon, while the third-ranking U.S. Marine Corps officer said he would attend next week's funeral in Winston-Salem.

Losey's body was scheduled to arrive at Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point Regional Airport early this afternoon, accompanied by a Marine honor guard. Losey and Staff Sgt. Alexander M. Ortega were killed earlier this week during an exchange of gunfire between U.S. peacekeeping troops and Moslem militia in Beirut.

The Marines announced Wednesday that Lt. Gen. D'Wayne Gray, Marine Corps chief of staff, will attend a service Sunday for Losey, 28, of Winston-Salem. Gray also will attend next Tuesday's funeral in Parkcrest, Pa., for Ortega, 25, of Rochester, N.Y.

The bodies of the two

Marines were returned Tuesday to the United States. Air Force Col. John A. Doonan, a Roman Catholic priest and chaplain at Dover, Del., Air Force Base, met the plane and prayed briefly.

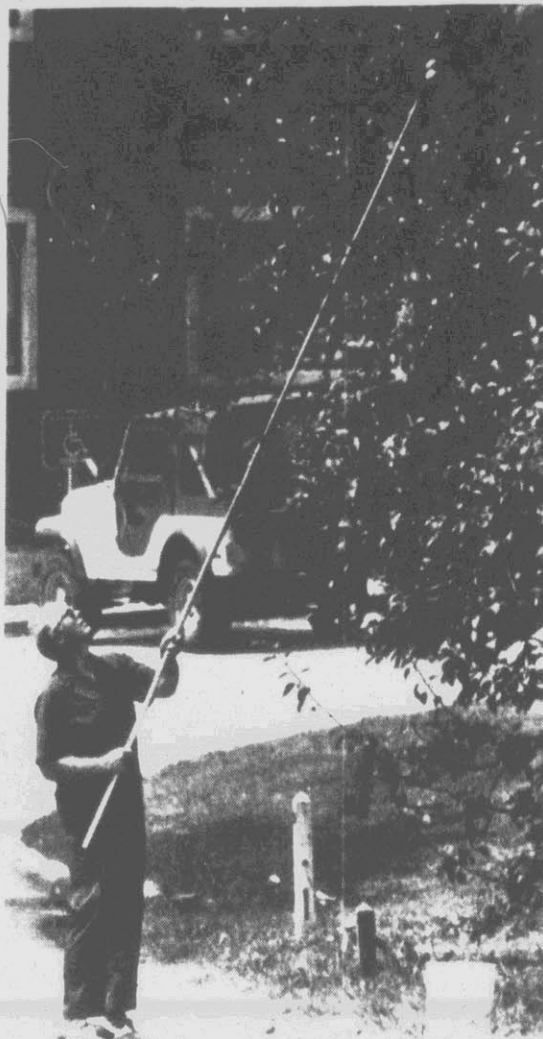

Losey's funeral will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at New Friendship Baptist Church near Winston-Salem with burial in Oaklawn Memorial Gardens.

A military memorial service for both men will be held at 10 a.m. Friday in the Camp Geiger chapel at Camp Lejeune in Jacksonville, said Marine spokesman Lt. Craig Fisher.

Marine officials on Wednesday released a statement by Ortega's widow, Robin Ortega, who lives in Jacksonville. She had declined to be interviewed since her husband's death.

"My husband, Alex, was always infuriated by the comments of unthinking and distraught family members of servicemen who had been victims of world conflicts," her statement said.

"He has asked those of us who are close to him to promise that we would not presume to make statements

Ex-Principal Sues For Job

WENTWORTH, N.C. (AP) — Former Madison-Mayodan High School Principal Philip Johnston has filed suit in Rockingham County Superior Court asking that he be reinstated.

Johnston, 53, had been high school principal for 13 years when school superintendent Charles Stenenda reassigned him, effective July 1, to the vacant principal's job at Madison-Mayodan Middle School.

Johnston's suit claims that transfer caused him to lose his reputation in the community because the middle school is much smaller than the high school.

Applicability Of War Powers Act Is Under Debate

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Democrats and at least one Republican are demanding that Congress have more say about whether U.S.

Marines stay in Lebanon, while a GOP leader says he sees no reason to limit the administration's power to keep them there.

"Sectional violence in that sad country now threatens to rekindle total civil war," Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., told President Reagan in a letter Wednesday. "I urge that you ... involve the Congress in the difficult and crucial decisions that must be made."

The administration has refused to invoke a provision of the War Powers Act that requires the president to withdraw troops from a war zone within 60 days, with a possible 30-day extension, unless Congress authorizes them to stay.

Secretary of State George Shultz defended this decision in a news conference Wednesday, although conceding "there is always a question about the situation you go into when you are equipped for combat."

Under the 1973 law, the president must consult with Congress before dispatching troops equipped for combat. The 60-day timetable is invoked if they face hostilities or the threat of hostilities.

Shultz said this part of the law had not been triggered because there was no "concerted effort to single out the Marines and to target them." He said they were caught up in "generalized violence."

Byrd, however, said, "American forces are clearly involved in hostilities within the meaning of ... the War Powers Resolution."

Making the same argument were Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and candidate for the Democratic nomination for president; and Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., one of the authors of the act.

Mathias, also a Foreign Relations Committee member, predicted that "there will be a confrontation directly on the war powers question" unless Reagan agrees to the 60-day timetable. Mathias asked the president to do so in a letter Tuesday.

However, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., president pro tem of the Senate and second-ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "I will continue to monitor the situation but at the present time I see no reason why the limitation period prescribed by the War Powers Act should become effective."

Rep. Larry Winn of Kansas, the ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Middle East, said he was "not adamantly opposed" to invoking the limitation period, but believed the best approach was for the president to allow congressional leaders to participate in his decisions about Lebanon.

Two Marines have been killed and 14 wounded in artillery attacks from radical Moslem militiamen.

In a report to Congress, Reagan has said the continued presence of the Marines was needed to assure the integrity and independence of Lebanon. He promised to keep Congress advised of further developments.

Byrd said Reagan's report "gives cause for grave concern" and "does not contain any information about whether or not there is any probability that additional U.S. combat personnel may be needed."

Zablocki said, "In his latest communications to Congress on the Marines in Lebanon, President Reagan has failed to give a realistic assessment of the dangers they face or to comply with the requirements of the War Powers Resolution."

Byrd, Zablocki and Mathias all stopped short of demanding withdrawal of the Marines.

However, Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., a senior member of the House Armed Services Committee who usually supports the administration on foreign policy, said, "We should withdraw them."

"This is probably the one area on which I have opposed the president," Stratton said. "This is just a lousy way to use a topflight combat organization and the idea that in a few months there will be peace and stability in Lebanon is absurd."

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, opposed withdrawing the troops while arguing that the 60-day deadline should be invoked.

"We don't have a choice of whether to stay in or pull out, but to go beyond that and argue it is not hostilities is a mistake on their part," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Lowell, Mass. "If this isn't hostilities, I am not sure what would be."

Asked what Congress could do about the situation, Tsongas said, "As long as the Republicans control the Senate, the answer is not very much."

Allergy Victims Said Suffering

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hay fever sufferers have had more trouble than usual this summer because pollen has flourished in the exceptionally hot, stagnant air, physicians say.

"Hot, sticky weather is uncomfortable (for allergy sufferers)," said Dr. John T. Klimas, a Charlotte allergist. He said the pollen level usually falls during mid-summer, but this year the weather and air pollution have kept victims sneezing.

"I know my wife has had more hay fever than in a long, long time," said Guy Jones, who heads the crop-science department at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Much of hay fever is caused by ragweed, or artemisiaefolia, and its giant cousin trifida. They produce pollen, the yellow, powdery male sex cells of flowers. Ragweed is especially prevalent during summer months.

A grain of ragweed pollen under a microscope looks like a cocklebur, and once it settles in the nose it tends to stay there, said Jones.

When the temperature exceeded 95 degrees, it killed pollen grains in corn, soybeans and other crops, said Jones. Thus, pollen was floating dead in the air instead of functioning in the plants' reproductive cycle.

Now that fall, which doctors call the real allergy season, is almost here, allergists say they don't know what to expect.

"I've noticed some healthy ragweed," said horticulturist Ted Caudle of the Mecklenburg County Agricultural Extension Service. "And with this recent rain ragweed is growing like gangbusters. I believe there will be a heavy shed of pollen."

Jones said ragweed is the main culprit in hay fever. He said a grain of ragweed pollen under a microscope looks like a cocklebur, meaning that once it settles in the nose it tends to stay there.

Jones said since ragweed pollen is so light, it can travel great distances which means allergy sufferers can't get away from it.

Disbarred A 2nd Time

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte lawyer B.R. "Bernie" Batts was disbarred Tuesday — for the second time in his 23-year law career — and given a suspended three-year prison term on charges of embezzling nearly $33,000 from clients.

"It will be a considerable time before he ever practices law again, if he ever does," defense attorney Keith Stroud told Mecklenburg Superior Court Judge Kenneth Griffin before sentencing. "He's going to have to make it on his wits."

Stroud said Batts' compulsive gambling created a financial crisis that led his client to take money — primarily insurance settlement funds — from several clients in the past two years.

On Monday, Batts, 50, pleaded guilty to five charges of embezzlement and one charge of writing a worthless check of $3,000. Under a plea arrangement, Batts agreed to repay a total of $43,018.32 to 11 clients and lenders from whom he either embezzled money or to whom he gave checks written on a closed bank account.

Batts, who declined comment, previously was disbarred in January 1972 for mishandling a client's money, North Carolina State Bar records show. But he regained his license through an application for reinstatement in mid-1976.

Focus On Far-Flung U.S. Military Commitments

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The death of two U.S. Marines in Lebanon has focused new attention on America's far-flung military commitments and led to congressional questions about whether the Marines should be on the front lines in the war-torn Mideast nation. In fact, American troops are on the front lines around the globe. America has 2.1 million men and women in its armed services and while most of them are in the United States, they are also based in 121 other nations. There are 517,000 troops overseas, almost 25 percent of the Pentagon's uniformed strength.

The biggest contingents are in West Germany and South Korea — American troops never came home after World War II and the Korean conflict.

Most of the U.S. troops in Europe and the Pacific are part of multi- and bilateral defense organizations such as NATO for the defense of western Europe, ASEAN for defending U.S. allies in the western Pacific, and U.S. commitments to the defense of Japan and the Philippines.

The overseas troops are stationed at wide-ranging U.S. installations, run in some cases by the United States alone and in others in conjunction with the host nation.

In the Philippines, for example, negotiations were completed earlier this summer for continued U.S. use of a pair of Air Force and Navy bases which anchor the American military presence in the Western Pacific.

The overseas installations are part of what defense experts say is one of the biggest western advantages over the Soviet Union and its allies — a "forward basing system" that puts American troops and weapons within range of most of the globe's potential trouble spots.

While thousands of U.S. soldiers are stationed in West Germany and South Korea, only one Navy man is in Fiji and one other as part of a British base at Gibraltar. In addition, the Air Force has a lone airman in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Most of the 121 nations where the Pentagon lists troops have only a handful who spend their tours attached to the local U.S. embassy or small radar and tracking stations that monitor the troop and plane movement of potential enemies.

Of the four services, the Army has the largest overseas deployment. Of its 781,000 troops, 209,000 are in West Germany, the equivalent of five of the Army's 16 active divisions. Another 28,000 troops are based in South Korea and the Army has a major Central American command of about 7,000 troops in Panama.

Gen. Edward C. Meyer, who retired earlier this summer as Army chief of staff, often said that the Army, with 33 percent of its force overseas, had the largest percentage of its troops stationed away from the home country of any nation since the Roman Empire.

The Air Force has about 121,000 of its 591,000 troops overseas, including 38,000 in Germany and another 24,000 in Great Britain as part of the NATO alliance. But the Air Force also has 25,000 troops in Korea and Japan.

The Navy also operates a string of overseas bases, particularly in NATO nations, the Philippines and Japan. America's 13 aircraft carriers and their battle groups normally operate far from home, in contrast to Soviet naval forces which traditionally have remained relatively near the Soviet Union.

While Monday's shooting dramatizes the dangers faced by the 1,200 Marines in Lebanon as part of a multi-national peacekeeping force, another 800 U.S. troops — mostly Army — are also part of a Mideast peacekeeping force. They are in the southern Sinai desert, patrolling to prevent incidents between Israeli and Egyptian soldiers along the border of lands recently returned to Egypt.

Confirm Woman Is Strangling Victim

WILLIAMSTON — The identity of a body found in a Martin County creek on Aug. 15 has been confirmed as that of 50-year old Mrs. Louella Moore Wynn of the Church's Cross Roads community. The cause of death has been established as strangling.

In a meeting in Williamston Wednesday with members of the victim's family and law enforcement officials, Dr. Stan Harris of Greenville, the regional medical examiner from Greenville, informed family members of positive identification based on an autopsy.

Harris listed strangling as the cause of death. He said the hands of the victim were bound. Mrs. Wynn's body, placed in a large plastic bag, was discovered by an elderly man probing for bottles in shallow water of Tranter's Creek at a point near Roberson's Bridge.

The place where Mrs. Wynn's body was located is about five miles from the Wynn family home between Church's Cross Roads and Bear Grass. Mrs. Wynn was reported missing on April 8.

Identification of the body ends an ongoing effort by local and SBI officials to locate the whereabouts of Mrs. Wynn. Officials are now carrying on an investigation in an attempt to get leads on the case.

Mrs. Wynn is survived by her husband, Bryant Wynn, a daughter, Sarah Wynn Haislip of Washington, and two sons, Joseph Douglas Wynn of Williamston and Benjamin Ralph Wynn of Cullowhee.

Avers Taiwan Violates Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, says Taiwanese fishing boats that catch Alaska salmon in the North Pacific are violating U.S. laws and the International North Pacific Fisheries Convention.

The Taiwanese fishing boats have caught between 5,000 and 7,000 metric tons of Alaska salmon in nets, Stevens said in a letter sent to Secretary of State George Shultz. Use of nets to catch migrating fish is considered an unsound harvesting method, Stevens said.

Stevens asked Shultz to obtain assurances from Taiwan that the fishing would be halted, and to persuade the Japanese government to close its markets to the ocean-caught Alaska salmon.

Insists Most Aid For Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., is disputing President Reagan's assertion that most U.S. aid to Central America is spent on economic and humanitarian programs.

In a written statement, Proxmire said that 55 percent of U.S. aid to the troubled region is used to finance military or security programs.

Reagan recently accused the news media of inflating the importance of military aid to the region. "You wouldn't know from some of the coverage that the greatest portion of our aid to Central America is humanitarian and economic assistance," he said.

Police Often Called For Odd Service

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Police are best known for law enforcement, but spend more time on services as diverse as rescuing a bird to convincing an elderly woman that the Soviets really aren't pointing tanks at her house.

Patrol Officer Bill Nock of the Hendersonville Police Department says he once held up traffic, blue lights whirling, in order to remove a baby bird from the street.

The task of easing the fears of the paranoid woman went to patrolman Eddie Watkins.

"We spend about 15 percent of our time catching bad guys and about 85 percent of our time doing miscellaneous services," says Police Chief Larry M. Hesser.

Sometimes those "services" get downright bizarre, he acknowledged.

Lt. Donnie Parks, also of the Hendersonville Police Department, said he once had to "exorcise" a woman's house.

"She believed she had witches in the walls. I'd tell the ghost to leave the house and I'd kick the wall," said Parks.

Police gave the woman a bottle of water they called "whisper witch" and told her to sprinkle it about when she heard the witches. When the bottle was empty, she called the police for more.

Hesser told of a policeman elsewhere who sprinkled gold fingerprint dust and said a few "abracadabra" words to soothe a woman who believed her neighbor had placed a hex on her.

"To them it's real and there's nothing you can do to change that," Parks said.

Other law enforcement agencies also are called on to do unusual things. "It's part of the job," said state Highway Patrol Sgt. C.H. Pitts.

State troopers often are flagged down by people who need directions, Pitts said.

"People expect the Highway Patrol to know everything about North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee," he said.

Patrolmen are asked so often to help change tires that they take a special course in "the techniques of changing tires to prevent back injuries." Many people with flats have no jack or spare tire, Pitts said.

Andy Orr, chief deputy with the Henderson County Sheriff's Department, said ridding houses of rattlesnakes and helping people who are locked out of their cars are some of the tasks his department has undertaken.

"We are always getting requests to quiet neighbors' dogs down," he said. Those calls are referred to the dog warden.

Orr said officers aren't under legal obligation to perform many of the services they do. "It's just trying to be helpful, courteous to people," he said.

Hesser said some police departments are cutting miscellaneous services because of a lack of manpower and money. But law enforcement officers in smaller towns probably won't change, he said.

"Our policy is if people call for a police service, we will render that service if at all possible," he said.

"You've got to have a sense of humor, good judgment and compassion that allows you to empathize with people, not the attitude 'I can't do anything about that.' You don't just leave the person there with the thought of having no solution or help."

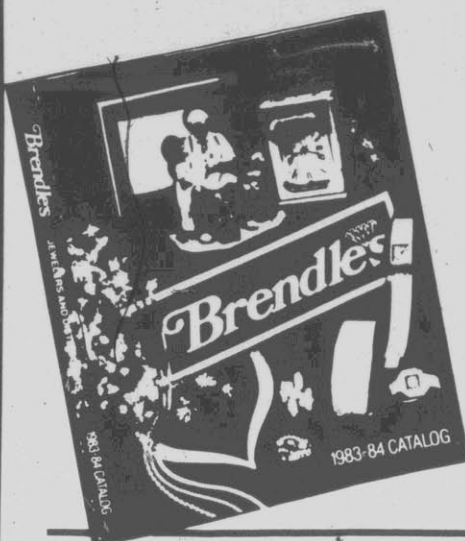

Report Quad 'Turned Corner'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The weakest of four quadruplets born Aug. 2 at Wake Medical Center appears to have "turned the corner" toward improvement, a doctor said Tuesday.

In a progress report on the still unnamed infants born to Margaret and George H. Harvey of Raleigh, Dr. George Thullen wrote that the smallest and sickest of the four "still has a long way to go, but for the first time, it appears she is going in the right direction."

Two of the four babies are breathing without the help of a respirator.

Rampants Open Against Tough Cards

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

At the start of last season, Rose High School's Rampants faced Jacksonville in the opening game. The Cardinals jumped out to an early lead, only to see the Rampants rally to go ahead. A late touchdown drive by Jacksonville, however, pulled out the game, 23-22.

Jacksonville went on to win the State 4-A championship that season, putting together a 14-0 record. Rose, meanwhile, went 7-5, finishing second in the Division II 4-A playoffs.

Tomorrow night, the Rampants and Cardinals meet again, in an 8 p.m. contest in Jacksonville. Rose will be opening the season, while the Cardinals will be going after their second win, having beaten White Oak 34-0 last weekend. Jacksonville, with that win, now has the state's longest active winning streak at 15 in a row.

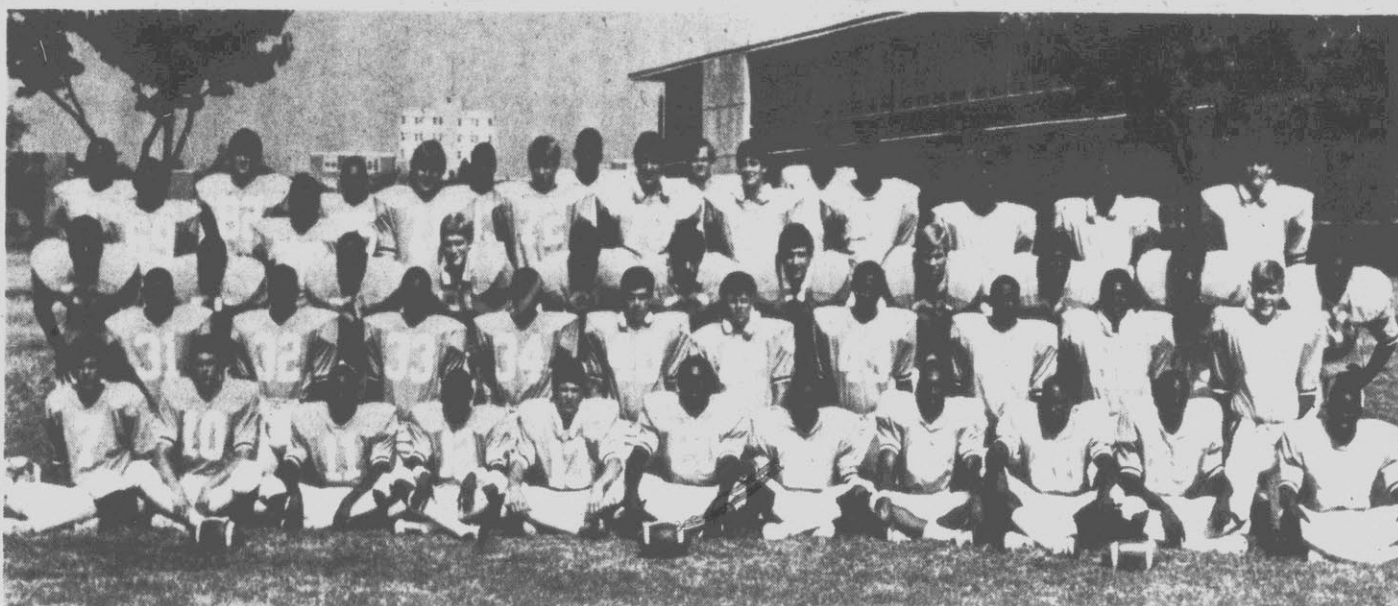

"They are awesome defensively," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said of his first opponent. "They have no weak spots anywhere. We will probably have to play our best to beat them."

"It's a great advantage for them to have already played a game. It's better to play than practice."

Vincent also noted that each of the Rampants' three pre-conference foes, Jacksonville, New Bern and Eastern Wayne, shut out their opponents last week in their openers.

Rose comes into the season having been picked by the other Big East coaches to finish second in the league race, and Vincent thinks that the Rampants can, indeed, be among the leaders in the conference this year, despite the fact that only one starter returns on offense and just two on defense.

Northern Nash got the nod for the top spot in the league in the coaches' poll, and Vin-

Rose High Rampants

"I think we can challenge if we can work out our kicking game and get some continuity on offense," Vincent said.

The kicking game may be one of the big problem areas for Rose, although Vincent said it has improved greatly in the last week. All of the kickers from last year's team are gone, but Arthur Brown

(5-9, 159, Sr.) has moved to the front in the punting department. He is being pushed, too, by Battle Emory (6-0, 190, Jr.). "We've really worked hard on our specialty game this past week and it's come a long way. I feel comfortable with either of these two kicking the ball."

Brian Bridges (6-3, 200, Jr.) will likely handle the kickoffs and placements. "He has a good leg. What our whole kicking game needs right now is game experience."

While that portion of the game may be untested, Vincent is anxious too to see what comes when his offense and defense take the field, since it also is relatively untested.

"You never know if you are really ready until you play," Vincent said. "We have had some intense practices this past week or so, and we've worked hard on polishing things up."

"Right now, I think we have the potential to be a good team," he added.

At any rate, only one starter off last year's offense returns, fullback Reggie Smith (5-11, 183, Sr.). Tyrone Smith (6-1, 170, Jr.), split end, also saw a great deal of duty last year and was the leading pass receiver on the team, but the Rampants will feature a whole new offensive line.

Emory will be handling the quarterback duties, with Todd Martin (6-2, 165, Sr.) as his backup. "Both of them can do the job," Vincent said. "Emory is a good roll-out passer and our quarterbacks have been throwing the ball well. We have two or three who can catch the ball well, and I think our passing game will improve as we go along."

Joining Smith in the backfield in a running position will be tailback Cyrus Blackwell (6-0, 180, Sr.). They will be backed up by Jeff Green, Charles Vines, Tom Moore and Lorenzo Daniels.

Roswell Streeter (5-11, 170, Sr.), who was all-conference as a defensive back last year, will take over at the slot-back position, backed up by Moore and Andre Jackson.

Smith will be at the split end position, aided by Robbie Deyton, Jesse Pratt and Brian Dillard. Billy Michel (6-4, 210, Sr.) will handle the tight end position, with Maurice Smith, Ronald Moore and Scott Rush in reserve.

Leading the line will be two tackles who saw some action last year, Bobby Casey (6-3, 231, Sr.) and Marvin Fleming (6-2, 222, Sr.). Robert Joyner (5-9, 207) will start at center, up from the junior varsity, while two other ex-JV players, Mike Walsh (6-0, 185, Sr.) and Churchill Thomas (5-11, 185, Jr.) will be at the guard spots.

In backup roles for the line will be Butch Haskins, Bill Zadeits, Bridges and Steve Wall.

On defense, the Rampants return two starters, tackle Marc Gatlin (5-7, 205, Sr.) and corner back Streeter. Gatlin, however, suffered a knee injury two weeks ago in the scrimmage game and has not yet returned to action.

Zadeits (6-2, 180, Jr.) and Thomas will handle the defensive end positions, while Charles Hill and Ronnie Moore will provide backup depth.

Bridges and Fleming will start at the tackle positions, with backup depth coming from other offensive linemen.

David Lineberry (6-2, 170, Sr.), who saw some action last year, will be at one of the inside linebacker positions, with Sterling Edwards (5-10, 240, So.) at the other one. Edwards will be the only sophomore carried on the varsity at the start of the season, at least.

Amos Edwards (5-7, 157, Sr.) and Edward Farley (5-9, 160, Sr.) will be at the outside linebacker spots, backed up by Tyrone Vines.

Streeter returns to handle one of the corner positions, with Marvin Barrett (5-11, 173, Sr.) at the other. Tony Johnson (5-11, 130, Jr.) will be at safety. Toby Fischer, Brent Langley, Jeff Roberson and Brown provide backup, and Tyrone Smith could also see action here.

"I think we are going to be good in the defensive line and in the secondary," Vincent said. "Our linebackers could be the best as a unit we've had in a long time once they get some experience."

Still, Jacksonville will be a tough team, and Vincent relishes in it. "We'd rather play the good ones. We find out where our weakness are in a hurry and have a chance to shore them up before we get into our conference play. We'd like to win, too, but the conference is the most important."

Jacksonville will provide a stiff challenge. The offense last week was led by Donald Hines who rushed 18 times for 105 yards, while wingback David Braxton caught five passes for 79 yards. Braxton is the only returning starter on offense.

The defense, which returns six veterans, is led by inside linebackers Tony Thompson and Cliff McCauley and backs Scotty Arnold and Johnny Ray Parker. The defensive line averages 220 pounds.

Following the Jacksonville game, Rose will open its "home" season next Friday, hosting New Bern in a game to be played at the D.H. Conley field.

Bowden Chases FSU Mark

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Sometime during the 1983 college football season Bobby Bowden should become the winningest coach in Florida State history.

Bowden, who has guided the Seminoles from mediocrity to the top ten during his seven seasons at FSU, is 59-22 and needs only four victories to surpass Bill Peterson, who was 62-42-11 in 11 seasons through 1970.

Bowden, 53, will get started on his quest at 7 p.m. Saturday night when the seventh-ranked Seminoles host East Carolina.

Since coming to Tallahassee from West Virginia in 1976,

Bowden and Florida State have established a mutual admiration society.

"If I go anywhere, it'll be on the seat of my pants," Bowden said in a pre-season interview. "They'll be kicking me out of here. I'm not volunteering. This is too nice a place."

Bowden often jokes that he decided to return to FSU, where he once was an assistant, after slipping on the ice in West Virginia.

Florida State and Bowden have an unusual five-year contract that makes it difficult and expensive for either one to end their partnership.

It automatically renews for another year each January, but the most unusual feature requires Bowden to pay the university five years of salary if he should leave early as well as requiring FSU to pay him for those years if he should be fired.

"I'm more interested in security than I am money," Bowden said.

He leaned back in a chair in his new digs, FSU's still unfinished $3.9 million athletic administration building, and added with a laugh: "They can declare you legally dead anytime they get ready."

But Bowden has been very much a lively item in the coaching market and his record shows why.

He has taken FSU to four bowls in seven years, including two Orange Bowl appearances and he is in the top-ten among active coaches with a .728 winning percentage during his 18-year career as a head coach. He has a 132-54 overall record, including 31-6 at Sanford and 42-26 at West Virginia.

He's been mentioned for other head coaching jobs just about every year he has been at Florida State. In 1979, he was a prime candidate for the Louisiana State job, but took himself out of consideration after his Seminoles defeated LSU, saying he had figured he ought to join the Tigers only if he couldn't beat them.

Last year, the Birmingham, Ala., native was mentioned as a possible successor to the late Bear Bryant at Alabama, but Bowden indicated early on that he wasn't interested in following a legend.

Earlier this year he rejected feelers from the new United States Football League entry in Jacksonville.

At one point Bowden, with his penchant for pro-style offenses, had toyed with joining the play-for-pay crowd, but not anymore.

"I still prefer coaching the college-age lad where all the players are getting the same amount — a full scholarship," Bowden said. "I think I'm more fit for that than I would be coaching a millionaire or a half-a-millionaire, knowing that his teammate may not be getting anything."

Bowden also has some unfinished business on the college level. He's still striving for that goal of all college coaches, a national championship.

He came close in 1980 when two 1-point losses were the only blemishes on the Seminole record. This year FSU again is expected to be a contender with 18 starters back from 1982's 9-3 squad.

But Bowden cited Joe Paterno, whose Penn State team won the national championship last season, as an example of the uncertainties of the quest for No. 1.

"He had about three undefeated ball clubs that did not win a national championship," Bowden said. "Then this past year when he probably was least expecting it ... he won it. So you never know."

ECU's aerial offensive attack is more potent than ever.

Senior quarterback Kevin Ingram is back to lead the Pirate air attack with a receiver corps that's the best the Pirates have ever sent downfield.

Norwood Vann, Ricky Nichols and Stephen Adams combined for 644 yards by air last fall in the Pirates' first 11 formation passing year. This year, they'll be more exciting than ever.

A leading pre-season magazine described the Air Pirates attack as "potent."

Return May Be Too Little, Too Late

By The Associated Press

To the Seattle Mariners and to his Milwaukee teammates, Pete Vuckovich looked like the same pitcher who won the 1982 American League Cy Young Award.

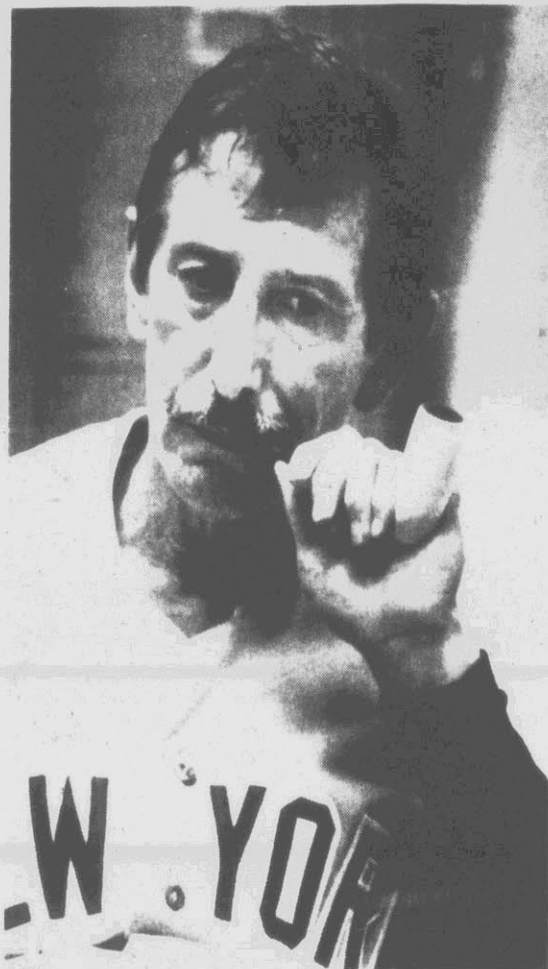

Vuckovich, sidelined the entire year with rotator cuff problems, made his first appearance of the season Wednesday and went five fairly strong innings.

Yet he got saddled with the loss as Milwaukee fell 4-1, raising the question of whether Vuckovich's return will be too little and too late for the Brewers.

"He threw as hard as he ever did," said catcher Ted Simmons. "He was really pumped. He was definitely ready to pitch."

The right-hander threw four scoreless innings before Pat Putnam doubled home two runs in the fifth.

Overall, Vuckovich allowed four hits, struck out four, walked two and hit a batter in throwing 85 pitches.

Suspended

New York Yankee manager Billy Martin smokes a pipe while talking to reporters about AL president Lee MacPhail's decision to suspend Martin for two games for "statements adversely reflecting on the integrity of the umpires." Coach Don Zimmer will handle the Yankees for their Friday and Saturday games in Seattle. (AP Laserphoto)

Martin Is Suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin failed for a second time in two tries this season to convince American League President Lee MacPhail that he had erred in suspending the New York Yankees manager.

Not even four lawyers, who helped Martin present his latest appeal, and the insistence of the Yankees manager that his constitutional rights were being violated could sway MacPhail, and on Wednesday he upheld the two-game suspension he imposed for remarks made about umpire Dale Ford.

Martin therefore cannot manage the Yankees when they play the Mariners in Seattle Friday and Saturday nights.

"I've appealed and I can't do anything else," Martin said Wednesday night in Oakland where the Yankees played the A's.

He said last week that if he lost the appeal, he would sue the league and Baseball

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for depriving him of his right to free speech, and though his comment Wednesday night seemed to indicate there would be no suit, he declared: "It's unconstitutional to take away a man's freedom of speech."

Martin had been warned by the league earlier this season that he would be subject to suspension if he continued to publicly criticize umpires rather than make his complaints to the league.

Roy Cohn, one of Martin's lawyers at the appeals hearing, questioned the directive.

Jacobsen Says He Can Win It

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Peter Jacobsen says a victory in the $300,000 B.C. Open golf tournament this weekend would not come as a major surprise to him.

"I think I've really got a legitimate shot," said Jacobsen, who finished third in the PGA Championship two weeks ago behind Hal Sutton and Jack Nicklaus.

Jacobsen's finishes at the B.C. Open include a second, a third and an eighth, and he said he likes the narrow fairways of the par-71, 6,966-yard En-Joie Golf Club.

"It's tight. You've got to drive the ball real straight. I think that's why Cal Peete won last year."

Calvin Peete stormed the En-Joie course a year ago with a tournament-record 265, and he is back to defend his title.

Peete ranks third on the Professional Golfers' Association money list this season with $301,845, and last weekend became the first black to earn $1 million in professional golf.

The tournament runs today through Sunday.

Also in the field is Nick Price, the South African who pulled an upset victory in last weekend's World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio.

Milwaukee's loss, however, dropped the Brewers 3½ games behind Baltimore — who clobbered Toronto 10-2 — in the American League East.

In other AL games, Chicago whipped Kansas City 7-3, Texas downed Detroit 5-1, Cleveland topped California 7-5, New York beat Oakland 6-4 and Minnesota at Boston was rained out.

Vuckovich, for his part, remained in the showers after the game and did not talk to reporters.

His manager, Harvey Kuenn, said "he looked like himself except for not being able to go the distance."

"From what I can tell, he threw the same as he did the last time we saw him," Putnam said. "He hasn't lost anything."

Putnam said he hit "a fastball away, the exact same pitch he'd gotten me out on my last time up" for the decisive double off the center field wall.

The blow came after Spike Owen singled and stole second before Ron Roenicke was hit by a pitch.

Simmons' ninth home run accounted for the Milwaukee run in the seventh inning off Bob Stoddard, 7-14. Mike Stanton went the final 1 2-3 innings for his sixth save.

White Sox 7, Royals 3

Rookie Ron Kittle blasted a three-run homer, his 27th of the season, as Chicago extended its lead in the AL West to 10½ games over visiting Kansas City.

The White Sox margin is the largest they've ever had since the team began keeping daily records in 1948.

Chicago won for the fifth straight time while Kansas City lost its fourth in a row.

Kittle's seventh-inning blast snapped a 2-2 tie and came off Dan Quisenberry, who came into the game a lot earlier than usual.

Quisenberry replaced Larry Gura, 10-16, after a walk and a single in the seventh. Floyd Bannister, 13-10, won his 10th game in 11 starts since the All-Star break.

Orioles 10, Blue Jays 2

Todd Cruz hammered a three-run homer to cap a seven-run first inning as visiting Baltimore won its eighth straight game.

The Orioles victimized Jim Gott, 7-12, and reliever Mike Morgan in their uprising. Gott pitched to six batters, retired none of them, and left with the bases loaded and down 3-0 after RBI singles by Eddie Murray, John Lowenstein and Ken Singleton.

Morgan gave up Rich Dauer's run-scoring groundout before Cruz blasted his 10th home run of the season.

Rookie Mike Boddicker, 12-6, held Toronto to four hits in seven innings. He has won six of his last seven decisions.

Baltimore has now won 16 of its last 18 and outscored its opponents 56-15 in the last three games.

Rangers 5, Tigers 1

Dave Hostetler belted a solo homer, his 10th, and added a run-scoring double to pace visiting Texas.

George Wright also hit a solo homer, his 15th, for the Rangers.

The home runs gave Texas an early lead and Mickey Rivers made it 3-0 in the fifth when he scored from second on Buddy Bell's infield single.

John Butcher, 5-5, gave up six hits and one run in 6 2-3 innings for the victory.

Glenn Abbott, 5-4, making his second start since being acquired from Seattle, took the loss.

Yankees 6, A's 4

Don Baylor and Rick Cerone each drove in two runs and Shane Rawley won his fourth consecutive game.

Rawley, 14-10, was given a 6-1 lead after 2½ innings as the Yankees scored four times in the third inning.

Cerone, Baylor, Don Mattingly and Omar Moreno singled home those third-inning runs in Oakland.

Indians 7, Angels 5

George Vukovich, who entered the game in the eighth inning for defensive purposes, singled home two runs with two outs in the 10th inning in California.

The Angels had tied it in the ninth on doubles by Daryl Sconiers and Rob Wilfong off reliever Rick Sutcliffe.

Sutcliffe, who was ejected from Tuesday night's game against the Angels after throwing brushback pitches, upped his record to 15-9 in his first relief appearance of the season.

Bench Delivers From His Old Spot

By The Associated Press
For the next-to-last time, Johnny Bench was where people have come to expect him to be — crouching behind home plate at Riverfront Stadium. And for the umpteenth time, Bench did what was expected of him — he delivered.

Bench was catching his first home game since April 29, 1981, in preparation for Sept. 17, when the Reds will honor him for his outstanding 17-year career in which he caught 1,741 games, the fourth highest total in major league history.

That the Reds beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 Wednesday night hardly seemed to matter. For one night, the clock had been turned back to the Reds' glory days of the 1970s. In other NL games, St. Louis beat Atlanta 6-3, Montreal edged San Francisco 4-3, Philadelphia nipped San Diego 4-3, New York battered Los Angeles 7-1 and Houston defeated Pittsburgh 4-1.

Bench caught one game in 1982 and one other this season. The area must have seemed strange to him, but he handled it well.

In the first inning, Ryne Sandberg tried to steal second. Bench, as he had done so many times before, gunned down the runner. The crowd erupted and gave him a standing ovation.

"Sure I was pumped up," said Bench. "I didn't want to look bad back there."

In the seventh, it didn't matter what position Bench was playing. His bat was needed as the game was tied 4-4 and there was a runner at second with two outs.

Paul Householder started the rally with a one-out double off Rich Bardi, 0-2. Warren Brusstar replaced Bardi and one out later, Bench singled to center for the go-ahead run.

Kelly Paris ran for Bench, who received another standing ovation from the crowd of 17,474.

Cincinnati Manager Russ Nixon compared the night to a Hollywood movie.

"It was almost as though Johnny wrote the script," he said.

Cardinals 6, Braves 3

The NL debut of Len Barker was less than successful as Ken Oberkfell and Dane Iorg led a 14-hit St. Louis assault. Oberkfell had four hits and three RBI and Iorg had three hits as the Braves lost their third straight at home and the sixth of seven.

Barker, who was obtained Sunday from Cleveland, left in the fifth inning after allowing 10 hits and three runs. Joaquin Andujar, 6-13, was the winner and Bruce Sutter picked up his 16th save.

Expos 4, Giants 3

Bill Gullickson won his career-high 13th, as the Expos scored the winning run on a throwing error by Giants' second baseman Joel Youngblood as he tried to complete a double play in bottom of the fourth inning.

Gullickson allowed six hits in 8 1-3 innings and struck out five. Jeff Reardon got his 19th save.

Trailing 3-2 in the bottom of the fourth, the Expos loaded the bases on a single by Al Oliver, a double by Tim Wallach and an intentional walk to Warren Cromartie. Doug Flynn hit a grounder to shortstop Darrell Evans, who flipped to Youngblood for the force at second. Youngblood threw into the Expos' dugout, allowing the winning run to score.

Phillies 4, Padres 3

Pete Rose snapped an 0-for-20 slump with a single over a drawn-in outfield in the bottom of the ninth to lift the Phillies over the Padres. With one out, Ivan DeJesus singled and Joe Lefebvre doubled. Rose was sent up to hit for Al Holland, 8-2. San Diego Manager Dick Williams decided to go against the percentages and allowed left-hander Gary Lucas to face the switch-hitting Rose instead of walking him and pitching to left-handed Joe Morgan. Rose lined a 1-0 pitch into center for the victory that moved Philadelphia to within one game of division-leading Pittsburgh.

Mets 7, Dodgers 1

Mookie Wilson hit a three-run homer and Mark Bradley an inside-the-parker in the fourth to lead the Mets over the Dodgers and Fernando Valenzuela. Mike Torrez, 9-14, went the distance for the Mets, allowing eight hits, striking out six and walking two. The Dodgers had taken a 1-0 lead in the top of the first on an RBI-grounder by Dusty Baker.

Astros 4, Pirates 1

Joe Niekro tossed a five-hitter and Dickie Thon picked up his league-leading 17th Game-Winning RBI as the Astros beat the visiting Pirates. With two out and the score tied 1-1 in the eighth, Bill Doran singled and moved to third on a single by Terry Puhl. Kent Tekulve replaced Rod Scurry, 4-8, and Thon bounced a slow roller down the third base line to break the deadlock. Phil Garner followed with a double. The Pirates' lone run came in the eighth when Dale Berra reached on an infield single, moved to second on a pinch-single by Lee Mazzilli and scored on two passed balls by John Mizerock.

Heels Open Year With Gamecocks

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Eleventh-ranked North Carolina opens its 1983 football campaign Saturday against a new-look South Carolina squad that Tar Heel coach Dick Crum acknowledges he knows little about.

The annual renewal of the interstate rivalry is the top attraction as the Atlantic Coast Conference season gets under way.

In other action, Duke and Virginia get an early start on league competition as they square off in Charlottesville. Clemson, ineligible for the ACC title as part of the terms of its probation, hosts Western Carolina at Death Valley. Appalachian State is at Wake Forest.

South Carolina's new head coach, Joe Morrison, cut his coaching teeth at Tennessee-Chattanooga and New Mexico, and the only way the Tar Heels were able to find out about his style was to look at films from those schools.

What the North Carolina found was a veer offense and a 4-3 defense, something South Carolina didn't use in 1982.

"We could look at South Carolina's films from last year to get an idea of their personnel," Crum said. "But we had to look at films of Tennessee-Chattanooga and New Mexico to get an idea of their offensive and defensive styles."

Duke and Virginia are looking to hold first place in the ACC at least temporarily, but the Blue Devils are hampered by injuries. Last week, they reported 26 people out of action because of bumps and bruises. Cornerback Johnny Hill is listed as doubtful, as is backup quarterback Ron Sally and reserve wide receiver Glenn Tillery.

Challenger Astronauts Flex Shuttle's Robot Arm

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts flexed the shuttle's robot arm in a successful weight-lifting test today after being awakened early to restore communications cut off for three hours by a ground computer problem.

Officials emphasized the crew could have been roused at any time to end the blackout, which they said did not jeopardize the mission. Challenger was "in perfect shape," they said, and no one was worried.

The arm test demonstrated the mechanical device has the muscle to hoist massive satellites and the beams and girders to build future space stations.

"It works like a champ," mission specialist Dale Gardner reported as he guided the arm to grapple a 7,460-pound package berthed in the cargo bay. Challenger and its five-man crew were humming along smoothly 184 miles above the globe.

Said Mission Control: "Challenger has demonstrated it can bench-press...

without benefit of steroids."

Gardner, working by remote control inside the shuttle cockpit, unlimbered the 50-foot robot's metallic muscles and gingerly lifted the package, moving it around and above the cavernous bay, careful not to hit other instruments there.

"It came out of the guides nicely; no problems at all," he said.

A television picture relayed to Mission Control showed the dumbbell-shaped aluminum and lead hulk gripped firmly in the "fist" of the Canadian-built arm.

The package is 20 feet long and 15 feet wide, with the weight concentrated on one end.

Commander Richard Truly deliberately fired the ship's jets to see how the motions affected the arm and its cargo. Reported Gardner: "We see some movement, some wiggle, but it's not much."

While the astronauts slept Tuesday, mission control received no data from Challenger for three hours because of trouble with a computer at the White Sands, N.M., ground station. The spaceship's radio had been set to communicate through an orbiting satellite, which in turn beamed the signal to White Sands.

Mission Control in Houston awakened the astronauts about 40 minutes early, when they were conveniently over a station, and told them to move a switch that shifted the craft from satellite to station communications.

"We could have awakened the crew at any time to make the switch, but the spaceship is operating so well, we saw no need to," said flight director Jay Greene. He said that had anything gone wrong, onboard detection systems would have alerted the spacemen.

Purpose of the arm test was to determine how well it handles an object with heavy weight and mass. It was a rehearsal for later flights when the device is to deploy and retrieve satellites weighing up to 65,000 pounds.

The results are of immediate interest to the 13th shuttle flight next April, when the bionic arm is to drop off a 10-ton scientific satellite and also rescue a 5,000-pound sun-study satellite which the crew will repair in space.

Later in this decade, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration hopes to begin building a space station, and the arm would be used in the assembly process as a series of shuttle missions carries up the various parts.

Although an object has no weight in space, it does have mass, and that is a direct function of its weight on Earth. Even in the absence of gravity, moving an object requires overcoming mass and inertia. The greater the mass, the greater the force required.

On two earlier flights, the arm maneuvered payloads with much less mass, and on Flight 7 in June, it was used to release and retrieve a 3,300-pound West German scientific satellite.

Gardner, assisted by mission specialist Guion Bluford, blocked out seven hours today and five hours Friday for the important exercise.

Truly and pilot Dan Brandenstein were at Challenger's controls to fire maneuvering jets at various times to test the reaction of the arm to these forces.

Dr. William Thornton, the house doctor, continued medical experiments that concentrated on the nervous system as he probed the mysteries of space sickness that have at least briefly bothered nine of the 21 shuttle crewmen who flew previously. There is no evidence that any of the present crew have experienced symptoms.

Another flight director, Brock Stone, told reporters communications through the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite should be restored later today. TDRS is not the main communications link for this flight and is only being tested for the next shuttle mission which will carry the European Spacelab.

Objection

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican United Socialist Party has denounced former President Richard Nixon's remark in his new book that Mexico is the "big enchilada" on the Soviet Union's Latin American "shopping list."

A statement issued Wednesday by the communist-led coalition party said Nixon's comment in his book "Real Peace: a Strategy for the West" was false and conveyed a simplistic view of foreign affairs.

Nixon wrote that if leftists win the civil war in El Salvador they will then look to Honduras, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Panama and eventually the Soviets' big enchilada, Mexico.

9 reasons why the Texas Instruments Home Computer is the smartest one you can buy.

1. It's easy to use.

All you do is take it home, plug in a cartridge, and you're ready to go. Why is it so easy to use? Because it's also one of the most powerful home computers in the world. And it's that extra power that makes everything easier. It lets us give you most of the instructions you'll need right on screen. In plain English, not computerese. It lets us give you more elaborate programs. And extra options like speech, which most home computers can never give you.

TI gives your child a headstart that could last a lifetime.

2. It's more accurate.

At the heart of our home computer is a powerful 16-bit microprocessor just like the ones found in expensive professional computers. Its 13 decimal digit accuracy far exceeds that found in such computers as Apple, Commodore and Atari, which use much less powerful 8-bit processors.

3. It can do wonders for your children.

No home computer can give your child more help than ours. We offer more easy-to-use educational cartridges, developed with more leading educational publishers, than any other computer in the world. Each one is designed to make learning fun. With a TI Home Computer, your child can get a headstart in school that could last a lifetime.

4. It can help organize your life.

A TI Home Computer can do many of the same things for you that professional computers do for businesses. It can help you make intelligent financial decisions. It can be the world's most efficient file cabinet. It can be your personal secretary. It can help you design a physical fitness program. Or a diet. Its uses are nearly unlimited.

More educational cartridges than any other computer in the world.

5. It makes it easy to learn to program.

Unlike some computers, our language, TI BASIC, is built in so there's no extra cost. And not only is it easy to learn, you'll also get a free programming manual. And when you start programming, you'll find that our computer is powerful enough to let you write longer and more useful programs than most other home computers. For example, ours is the only home computer that lets you combine color, graphics, animation, sound effects, music and speech all in a single BASIC program.

6. It lets you play games that challenge your mind, not just your reflexes.

When it comes to games, the power and sophistication of our computer let you play some of the most exciting arcade-style games you've ever seen. But that's just the beginning. We also give you a full range of games that let you and your children exercise your logic, strategy and problem-solving abilities. Once you try them, we think you'll find them the most exciting games of all.

7. We give you a free course.

When you buy a TI Home Computer, we'll give the family a free course in how to use it. To make sure you know how to unlock the full potential of your new computer. And to let you work with a wide selection of our software, so you can decide which ones would be most useful for you. To register for your free course, simply call our toll-free help number.

8. We give you a toll-free help number.

We don't just sell you a computer and wave goodbye. With our toll-free help number, you can call us with any kind of question at all. Before or after you buy. The number is 800-TI-CARES. Because we do.

9. We give you the longest warranty.

Most computers, even those costing thousands more, only give you three months. We give you a full year. We're the only ones who do this because at TI we have some of the toughest quality control standards in the industry.

And if that's not enough, how about...

'Kissinger Commission' Begins Taking Testimony

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Carter, who has said support for El Salvador's "bloodthirsty" regime shows gross insensitivity to human rights concerns, was among four former foreign policy-makers testifying today to President Reagan's Central America commission.

Carter was scheduled to make his closed-door appearance after the commission heard separately from former secretaries of state William P. Rogers and Dean Rusk and Panama Canal treaties negotiator Sol Linowitz.

The commission, chaired by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, is receiving recommendations on Central America policy from all former presidents and secretaries of state in carrying out its mandate to assist Reagan in formulating a long-term policy for the region.

In July, Carter accused the administration of reversing his policy by ignoring human rights considerations and extending military and economic aid to El Salvador, which he said was "one of the most bloodthirsty regimes, perhaps in the world."

He held the Salvadoran security forces responsible for the deaths of 30,000 to 35,000 of its citizens. Carter said his policy was to deny "substantial military aid" to El Salvador so long as politically-motivated murder continued.

Former President Ford, who testified to the commission on Wednesday, had a different recollection, contending that Reagan has built on policy established by Carter during his last week in office when the Salvadoran rebels launched a major military offensive against the government.

Reversing a ban on military aid, Carter authorized $5 million in arms and other equipment to help the government combat the offensive, which Carter spokesmen described as Cuban-supported.

Ford spoke to the commission after appearances by former secretaries of state Cyrus R. Vance and Alexander M. Haig Jr. All offered conflicting perceptions on the cause of the turmoil in Central America.

Vance said local social and economic conditions were responsible, disagreeing with those who blame weapons shipments from Cuba and the Soviet Union. He said there can be no lasting peace in Central America unless the "root causes" of repression and poverty are dealt with.

Vance said a political solution to Central America's problems is "clearly preferable" to a military solution, and he accused the Reagan administration of placing excessive reliance on the latter option.

Haig, meanwhile, blamed outside-inspired "violence, bloodshed, terrorism and so-called wars of liberation" for Central America's problems and said the United States will face "a far more dangerous situation" in the future unless it confronts Marxist movements in the region decisively.

Haig sounded much like he did during his 17 months in office when he recommended military action be considered to counter alleged Cuban and Nicaraguan support for the Salvadoran guerrillas.

Ford's assessment of the causes of Central America's unrest appeared to be between Vance's and Haig's. He suggested the turmoil there is a combination of both internal and external forces.

Kissinger acknowledged that the day-long testimony featured conflicting interpretations but said he was increasingly confident that the commission will be able to achieve a consensus by February, when it is scheduled to issue its report to Reagan.

Later in September, the commission plans to hear testimony from former President Nixon and former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie. With their appearances, the commission will have heard from all former presidents and secretaries of state still living.

Kissinger said the commission plans a trip to Central America, probably during the second week of October. The panel plans to visit Nicaragua and to meet with opposition leaders in all countries, he said.

Force Base in Japan and from Okinawa during the night, according to Pentagon officials.

The Korean jetliner was last heard from at 2:23 p.m. EDT Wednesday.

The United States responded to the downing by sending five F-15 fighter planes to Misawa, near the northern tip of the main Japanese island of Honshu, Pentagon sources said.

The MiG-23 is one of the Soviet Union's most advanced jet fighters. It is armed with air-to-air missiles code-named by NATO as "Aphid" and "Apex."

The Soviet fighter is capable of speeds in excess of 1,600 miles per hour and has a combat radius of up to 745 miles from its home base.

Earlier this week, Japan's defense agency reported that the Soviet Union had stationed more than ten MiG-23s on Etorofu Island, one of four former Japanese islands occupied by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II.

This island is about 150 miles east of the northernmost Japanese island of Hokkaido.

The last time anything like this occurred was in April 1978 when a South Korean Boeing 707 en route to Seoul from Paris over the North Pole with its course — the Soviets released 106 passengers and bodies of a Japanese and a Korean passenger, but detained the pilot and navigator for questioning.

Soviet officials in Moscow said later that the jetliner trespassed in Soviet airspace for more than two hours and ignored a variety of warnings, including tracer shells fired in front of it.

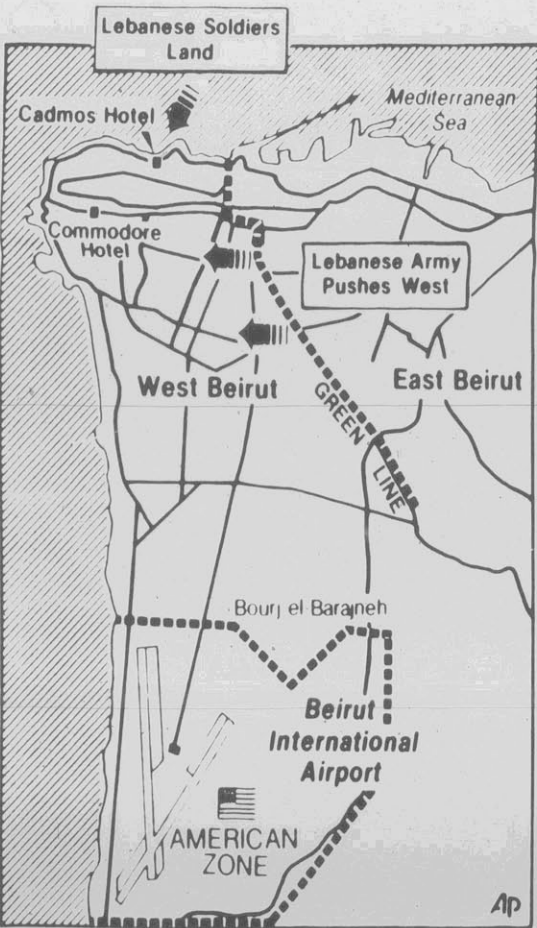

At least one shell hit the airliner, killing two of the passengers and wounding 13 others, two of them seriously.

Officials of Korean Air Lines blamed compass failure for what they called an accidental violation of Soviet airspace.

One Soviet source at the time said that Soviet radar stations had picked up the airliner over the Franz Josef region north of Novaya Zemlya, a major Soviet nuclear test site.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., called the downing "an outrageous breach of international law, a breach of any sense of just human respect." The Soviets, he said, "ought to get the condemnation of the whole world."

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the downing "would have a very negative impact as far as the arms control negotiations are concerned, and our total relationship with the Soviets."

COMBAT IN BEIRUT — Thousands of Lebanese army troops, backed by tanks and artillery, swept into West Beirut in three columns Wednesday, routing Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen in house-to-house combat. stand into "a fireball."

All that prevented the bombs from going off were faulty timers, police said Wednesday. They were found before any patrons could be admitted to the park, authorities said.

"We have absolutely no idea who did it," said Ken Foster, operations manager for Riverview Boat Lines, which runs the park. "We are at a loss to explain it."

But police officer Brett Anderson said, "We've got some leads and some thoughts on the investigation." He refused to elaborate.

The bombs failed to detonate because the gauge of wire used on each timer was too heavy for the delicate equipment, assistant Wisconsin Dells police chief Frank Schoeninger said.

All the timers stopped within 21 minutes of detonation, police said, one with only four minutes left. The bombs were set to go off around midnight Tuesday, police said.

"If they had gone off, they would have created a fireball, blown out the walls and destroyed the complex," said Michael Olson, member of a bomb squad that defused the devices after they were found.

Bonnie Bates of Reedsburg, an office worker at the park, discovered the first bomb when she heard ticking and saw a strange package near the park office door about 40 minutes before the park was to open.

Patrons were turned away during a search, which ended after investigators uncovered the fifth bomb more than three hours later.

Another park worker, Bill Farmer, found the third bomb when he tripped over it in the Haunted Mansion attic, police said.

Olson said the incendiary devices were sophisticated, "right out of the book."

The bombs were found near the park office, in the Haunted Mansion attraction and near a souvenir shop, all wood-frame structures.

The amusement park has known mischief as the summer tourist season winds down, but "nothing like this," Foster said.

Anderson said the bombs could have destroyed all three buildings.

"If they hadn't blown them up, they would have started them on fire," Anderson said. "To those three buildings, the destruction would have been maximum."

Shanks said each bomb, in a plastic knapsack, was made up of three-fourths to two pounds of smokeless gunpowder, a gallon can of gasoline, a kitchen timer and a motorcycle battery.

Police said Olson's bomb squad, requested from the Dane County sheriff's office by Shanks, dismantled four bombs and detonated a fifth. The dismantled bombs were turned over to the Treasury Department's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau laboratory in Madison.

Shanks said the park was considered safe by Wednesday afternoon. The park was closed today, but will reopen Friday, Foster said.

About 1,000 tourists visit the park on an ordinary day, he said.

The park is part of Riverview Park opposite downtown Wisconsin Dells, about 95 miles northwest of Milwaukee.

Council Vote To Decide On Art

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — The town council of this upscale mountain enclave will vote next Tuesday on whether a $190,000 fishing pole with a 50-gallon "tin can" dangling from the end is art — or not.

"I think it's sacrilegious to place a giant tin can in our stream and call it art, no matter who did it," said travel agency owner Jan Strauch, referring to the planned sculpture by Claes Oldenburg.

'Stopwatch' Proves A Feeble Parody

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If wicked parody is a sincere form of flattery, then "60 Minutes" deserves something better than HBO's feeble comedy special, "Stopwatch: Thirty Minutes of Investigative Ticking."

"Stopwatch" has its first of eight September showings on the pay-cable network Saturday night.

The 30-minute program can be viewed as another attack on the commercial TV alternative. HBO's raison d'être is that its movies and original programming are so superior to free TV that viewers will pay for them. But if you're going to lambast the competition, you had better be better.

"Our intention is not to downgrade network programming," says Iris Dugan, an HBO vice president for original programming. "Our intention is to offer things that can't be seen on the networks. Because we're a pay network, we can take more liberties."

"Our research says American audiences love us to take on the big guys, like the phone company and big business, and '60 Minutes' with its stopwatch, is both familiar and top-rated."

"Stopwatch" is tasteless and humorless, beneath the quality of HBO's other parodistic broadsides, such as "Not Necessarily the News," a witty, bull's-eye satire of network newscasters and the public officials they cover, and "Over Here, Mr. President," a sometimes amusing, if unrealistic, spoof of the reporters who cover the White House.

For years, CBS' "60 Minutes" weathered legal assaults and time-slot guinea pigs from ABC and NBC. In a sense, "Stopwatch" is another image attack, precisely because it is so rotten. If it were good, it could be considered a winking salute to a broadcast giant — a recognition that "60 Minutes" is so identifiable and important that it inspires terrific tomfoolery.

When Dan Aykroyd and Jane Curtin of "Saturday Night Live" mocked "Point-Counterpoint," which used to be a fixture on "60 Minutes," the edge was so sharp that it brought to mind the real minidebates between Shana Alexander and James J. Kilpatrick.

The same can be said for Joe Piscopo's scathing homage to Andy Rooney, the resident malcontent on "60 Minutes."

Here, except for some cosmetic copying — two actors who look a little like Mike Wallace and Harry Reasoner and a lot of tick-tick-ticking — "Stopwatch" rarely manages to put the personality, flair and methods of "60 Minutes" under the satirical prism.

For the most part, "Stopwatch" is a series of ludicrous reports, each with an overdrawn one-joke theme, that could have just as easily been spoofing

"That's Incredible" as TV newsmagazines.

The first segment is on a blind trainer of guide dogs. Once he bumps into the lamp, the point is made. The rest of the furniture-falling is redundant slapstick, made even more gratuitous by the Reasoner lookalike, Ron Ramsgate, who is played by Michael G. Kelly, repeatedly rolling his eyes and mugging for the camera.

Wallace's clone, Chris Mantok, played by Alan Oppenheimer, does a "hard-hitting report" about nuns boxing each other for recreation. This is more crude than clever, yet the intrusive laugh track gets a big kick out of it.

The investigative report on the Ministry of the Good-Looking is the program's single funny moment. A minister who claims to perform spiritual plastic surgery is exposed when a hidden camera uncovers that the woman with a new nose is actually a different woman.

Angry Arnie, played by Bill Kirchenbauer, is a less cerebral version of the fire-breathing editorialists on "Saturday Night Live." While John Belushi and Eddie Murphy parlayed clever writing and funny characterizations into full-scale fury, Angry Arnie merely runs over shoppers who block supermarket aisles.

The executive producer and co-writer of "Stopwatch" is Barry Levinson, who wrote the theatrical film "Diner." It's a risky business doing satire that falls flat. When the material isn't strong enough so that viewers will laugh at themselves, they'll only end up being offended.

HOW BIG IT IS! — Jackie Gleason's personal secretary, Sydel Spear, models one of the uniforms worn by Gleason in his role on the 1960s TV series "The Honeymooners". The uniform was rescued from mothballs by RALPH, the Royal Association for the Longevity and Preservation of the Honeymooners. When Gleason heard that the Brooklyn-based group's plans to buy a uniform at auction fell through, he donated this one. (AP Lasierphoto)

Virginia O'Brien Has Nightclub Act

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Nostalgia buffs and viewers of late, late TV shows will remember Virginia O'Brien, the deadpan singer-comedienne who was featured in 20 MGM technical color movies of the 1940s.

After almost 30 years of near obscurity, Miss O'Brien is making a comeback in a Hollywood nightclub singing songs from the old musicals in which she appeared — "Ziegfeld Follies," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "The Harvey Girls," "Thousands Cheer," "Two Girls and a Sailor" and "Lady Be Good."

Miss O'Brien appeared in supporting roles with such top stars as Judy Garland, Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton and the Marx Brothers.

Extend Contract For Gloria Loring

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gloria Loring has renewed her contract to star for three additional years in the daytime soap opera "Days of Our Lives" for Columbia Pictures Television.

David Martin, Miss Loring's manager, said the contract was in "six figures" and will provide Miss Loring with, "greater visibility as well as the freedom she requires to pursue her thriving nightclub career."

Terms of the contract, in addition to her work in "Days of Our Lives," provide for star billing in two TV movies during the three-year period and guest star appearances in at least five prime-time shows.

When Bill Vergis Goes He Takes His Animals

By MIKE BOYD

The Asheville Times
CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — When Bill Vergis goes to Africa later this year, he'll be taking his lion along. And his mandrill baboon.

It's all in a day's work for Vergis, who has been supplying animals for movies and television for more than 15 years.

The movie he'll be making is about a female Tarzan. One of the women from the television series Charlie's Angels, Tanya Roberts, will be the star. It's going to be called "Sheena," Vergis said.

Dan, the lion Vergis is taking with him, was the star of the MGM Grand Hotel review in Las Vegas for six years. Dan is relaxing these days at Santa's Land east of Cherokee.

Hearing Vergis' voice, Dan roused himself from a sound sleep, bounded over to the edge of his large cage and stood on his hind legs with his paws and face against the bars.

Vergis stepped over the rail and put his face against the wire for some very wet kisses while reaching through to scratch the big cat's face.

"Dan will attack me a couple of times in the movie," Vergis said. "Dan is rougher than working with a bear because when he hits you on the chest it's just like being hit by a truck."

"I got him as a cub from an animal farm in Florida. I'm from New York. I was planning on going to veterinary school, but college was so boring I just decided I wanted to do something else with animals," Vergis said.

Vergis also has trained bears. Bears are good at hiding their feelings and training them is challenging and dangerous, he said.

Vergis' day starts after breakfast when he leaves his mobile home a short distance from Santa's Land. Vergis calls to Gentle Ben, a 630-pound black bear from the movie and television series of the same name. Ben climbs into the back of the small, Japanese pickup truck and off they go.

Ben puts in a hard day at the office, sitting on a low wood platform on the front porch of Santa's Land watching the tourists come and go, and getting his picture taken.

There are some other big stars on the grounds, but most visitors are not aware of it. In the bear cage on the grounds of Santa's Land is Jady, a big female grizzly bear from the television show Grizzly Adams.

"They used four bears on that show," Vergis says as the big brown grizzly nuzzles his arm.

Vergis has offices in New York, Los Angeles, Miami and Las Vegas. But most of his animals are wherever he is. "I have offices where the big entertainment centers are. But I like to keep as many of my animals with me as I can."

Later, at Vergis' temporary home, he introduced some of the other members of the cast. There is a 20-year-old male black bear who doesn't work much anymore. "I keep him because he is a lot of company to Gentle Ben. They are good friends," Vergis says.

There are a couple of 2-year-old black bears being trained every day, hopefully stars of tomorrow. And there is Munchie, a 9-year-old wolf. Munchie is silver gray and looks a lot like a long, slender collie.

Movie fans who saw "The Wilderness Family" will remember him almost instantly. Munchie also had parts on Grizzly Adams and on a long list of other movies and television shows.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Small Flue-Cured Leaf Crop Spurring Demand

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Less flue-cured tobacco is failing to be sold at auction than had been expected because this year's crop might be the smallest since World War II, agriculture officials say.

"We fully expected a decline as soon as the upstake tobacco brought in more exporters," said John H. Cyrus, tobacco affairs specialist for the N.C. Department of Agriculture. "But we didn't believe it would drop as much as it did."

The Federal-State Market News Service reported that the amount of tobacco sold to the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. as of Tuesday declined by an average 6.4 percent on North Carolina's three tobacco belts compared to the same 20-day selling period last year.

Stabilization, which buys tobacco that fails to receive at least one cent above the federal price support level, took in a record 26 percent of the crop in 1982.

By the end of last week the figure stood at 27 percent, but increased sales this week brought a decline to 23.9 percent.

"I think we can look at it optimistically, considering earlier this year Stabilization had received up to 40 percent of the crop in some areas," said Fred Bond, director of the corporation.

Both Bond and Cyrus attributed lower Stabilization purchases and increased buyer activity to the overall reduction in the 1983 tobacco quota, overproduction last year and bad weather this year.

Cyrus said this year's crop probably will be about 17 percent smaller than previously estimated and that the 1983 crop probably will be the smallest in 40 years.

That has caused some buyers to fear a shortage of leaf for orders they must fill, said Bond.

"We're seeing a similar situation with burley tobaccos, even before the markets open," he said. "Rumors are that the burley crop could be 40 to 50 percent below last year."

The bidding:

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Two of the country's great players, Bob Hamman of Dallas and Eddie Kantar of Los Angeles, won the Life Master Pairs event at the recent Summer North American Championships held in New Orleans. Here's a reason why they did.

North's bid of two no trump compelled South to rebid three clubs. North's three diamonds was forcing and South opted to play in the no trump game.

West led the jack of spades, won by the king in dummy. Since declarer, Bob Hamman, could not afford to have East gain the lead to push a spade through the queen, he ran the jack of diamonds at trick two. When that won, he continued with a diamond to the nine and then the ace of diamonds. West discarded a card from each major suit on these two tricks, ending on the table, and then took the king of diamonds and the long diamond. That reduced all hands to three cards. In his own hand he kept the queen of spades and ace-queen of hearts. West realized that if he blanked down to the ace of spades and K-9 of hearts, he would be thrown in with the ace of spades for a lead from his king of hearts into declarer's tenace. So he craftily kept the A-5 of spades and the blank king of hearts.

But Hamman did not lightly come by his many world championship titles. He continued with a heart to the ace, felling the king and collecting 12 tricks for a superb result.

Jim Graham On Chicago Trip

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham will travel to Chicago Friday to make a pitch for federal disaster aid for farmers in drought-stricken areas of North Carolina.

Graham will represent Gov. Jim Hunt at a meeting of state and local officials.

The meeting was called by President Reagan to discuss the need for federal aid for areas where severe heat and dry conditions have heavily damaged crops.

Forty-five of North Carolina's 100 counties are expected to ask for federal disaster aid, mostly low-interest loans to farmers.

Generate Waste At High Volume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hazardous wastes are being generated by American companies at four times the volume previously thought, according to an Environmental Protection Agency official.

EPA estimates that 165 million tons of hazardous waste is generated each year by U.S. companies, according to an agency report scheduled to be released in November. But John H. Skinner, acting director of EPA's office of solid waste, said that the agency's latest estimate could be off by as much as 40 percent either way.

The increase in hazardous waste output has not alarmed EPA officials because the agency determined there is a larger number of storage and treatment facilities than had been thought to exist, Skinner said.

SWIMMING RECORD — Suzanne Heim, 25-year-old San Rafael school teacher, yesterday swam four times across the Golden Gate channel shattering both the men's and women's two-way records. She's shown here under the Golden Gate Bridge about to start her record swim. (AP Laserphoto)

It is estimated that the Amazon River basin and jungle supply half the oxygen on Earth.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the main language of Brazil?
WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — More adult men smoke than women, 40 percent to 36 percent.
