Saber Rattling Gives Way

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Iran held 52 Americans hostage, candidate Ronald Reagan urged tough steps "that touch on the threat of force" to bring them back. Now, with more than 60 Americans killed by what the United States says was a Soviet-fired missile, the Reagan White House is steering away from saber rattling and talking instead of a "measured response."

The president, in a radio address Saturday, called on nations to respond "in a calm, controlled but absolutely firm manner" for the "murder" of 269 people aboard the South Korean airliner downed by a Soviet plane.

That recalled Reagan's warning, one week after taking office in 1981, as he welcomed home the freed hostages from Iran.

"Let terrorists be aware that when the rules of international behavior are violated, our policy will be one of swift and effective retribution," the new president said. "We hear it said that we live in an era of limit to our powers. Well, let it also be understood, there are limits to our patience."

The scope of the U.S. response to the downed Korean plane is still being framed.

No American troops anywhere in the world have been put on alert because of the deaths, the administration says.

A senior official said no thought is being given to postponing or pulling out of nuclear arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union because "the stakes are too high. We would not be serving our country or the world at large."

Likewise, said the official, who insisted on anonymity, economic sanctions are not being contemplated.

At the State Department, spokesman John Hughes said Americans would "be misled" if they expected the president would slap an embargo on grain on cancel the $10 billion, five-year sales agreement signed last weekend in Moscow.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president's foreign policy and national security advisers had presented him with "a range of options that focus on a measured response to this incident." He said no final decisions would be made before Reagan's meeting Sunday with congressional leaders and consultations with other countries "who share our outrage."

Speakes said the administration was searching for a plan to guarantee the safety of the skies "and allow a citizen to travel without fear of this kind of incident happening again."

So far, Reagan has limited the U.S. response to harsh and angry denunciations of the attack and demands for an explanation and an apology.

By his own words, Reagan previously had suggested he would deal harshly with adversaries in crises. Reagan's political rivals frequently accused him of being trigger happy and suggested that as commander in chief he would keep his finger too close to the nuclear button.

Sanctions Pending On Plane

Arms Talks To Go On

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, nearing a decision on American sanctions, said Saturday the Soviet Union must account for "the murder of innocent civilians" aboard Korean Air Line flight 007. Nonetheless, he said the "inexcusable act of brutality" would not interfere with arms reduction talks with Moscow.

"It is up to all of us, leaders and citizens of the world, to deal with the Soviets in a calm, controlled, but absolutely firm manner," the president said. A senior U.S. official said the U.S. response would probably focus on measures to restrict Soviet air traffic.

In his weekly radio remarks, Reagan continued the tough language he has used since last Thursday's attack on the Boeing 747 jumbo jet, but gave no hint about what steps he would take. His spokesman, Larry Speakes, called for restitution for the families of the 269, including 61 Americans, who were aboard the aircraft.

Discussions in Geneva are to continue, Reagan told reporters.

"I don't believe that (the airliner incident) should reduce the importance of continuing the talks that we hope will lead to a reduction in the number of nuclear weapons in the world," he said.

Ambassadors and diplomats from several nations, including Japan and South Korea, were called to the State Department for a briefing on the latest developments in the tragedy. The bipartisan congressional leadership was to meet with Reagan Sunday morning.

Disputes continued over just what happened last Thursday after the Korean commercial airliner wandered off course into Soviet restricted air space.

The United States has said that a Soviet fighter pilot fired a missile and shot down the unarmed jumbo jet. In his weekly radio address, Reagan said Moscow owes the world an explanation and an apology for "this murder of innocent civilians."

But the Soviet Union shunned responsibility for the plane's downing, moving closer Saturday to an out-

Candidates Set Light Pace For '84 Primary

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The primary election on May 8, 1984, is still months away, but Democratic candidates for governor are making their intentions known and beginning to drum up support.

Candidates who have announced their intention to seek the nomination include Charlotte Mayor Edward Knox, former state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, former Superior Court Judge Lacy H. Thornburg, former legislator Thomas O. Gilmore and Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten.

Lt. Gov. James C. Green and Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram have said they intend to run, while former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins has expressed an interest and is testing the political waters for support.

Although some of the candidates are definitely campaigning, Pitt County Democratic Chairman Kathryn Lewis said last week "there's just not been that much activity yet" locally. "Edmisten and Knox were in town last week, but there's just not been that much activity. I think it's gearing up now."

Speaking of the large field of potential candidates, Mrs. Lewis said, "I think each of those people has committed to run for governor and run a good race. When the primary is over, the gaps are going to close and the party will put its resources behind one good candidate.

"I just don't think the break in the party that a number of people have predicted" because of the large number of candidates "is going to happen."

Betty Speir of Bethel, former acting chairman of the state executive committee and currently first vice chairman of the state party, said of the campaigning: "It's not really crystalizing yet. I think for the most part people are sitting in the wings and waiting to join in" closer to the primary. "All candidates don't have their hats in the ring yet," she suggested, saying "until that happens, there will be no final decision made" on the part of many people.

"There'll be quite a change, a shifting around, between now and January," Mrs. Speir suggested.

Why is the campaigning starting so early? "With so large a field, they feel they have to start early to secure the necessary funds," Mrs. Speir said.

Israel Begins Pullback From Mountain Area

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel's long-expected pullback of troops from the central Lebanese mountains began Saturday as rival Christian and Druse militias exchanged artillery fire, witnesses and radio stations reported.

Convoys of Israeli soldiers began moving out of the embattled Chouf and Aley mountains "without coordination with the Lebanese army," state-run Beirut radio said.

Lebanon has objected to Israel's plan to move its forces south to more defensible positions, saying it could lead to a partition of the country.

Beirut radio reported artillery duels erupted Saturday afternoon between Christian and Druse forces in

Soviets Reject Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has rejected a U.S. request for a special meeting to discuss U.S. concerns that Moscow may be violating nuclear arms agreements, The Washington Post said in Sunday editions.

Unidentified U.S. officials quoted by the newspaper said the Soviets contend they are not violating past agreements.

The United States had sought a special meeting of the U.S.-Soviet Standing Consultative Commission to discuss the matter, but the Soviets suggested that U.S. officials could raise whatever concerns they had at a regularly scheduled commission meeting this month, the newspaper quoted its sources as saying.

The officials were quoted as saying the United States would do just that.

ECU Prepares Center For Writing

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Writing effectively is not a skill used only by journalists and novelists. It is an essential tool of life, a tool that can and needs to be sharpened to promote the clearest communication possible.

It is to this end that Dr. Patrick Bizzaro, director of East Carolina University's new writing center and associate professor of English, is dedicated.

"Right now is one of the most exciting times to be a teacher of writing, because the focus has come off grammar and is now centered on the process of writing and development of competent writers," he said.

Bizzaro, along with other faculty members and teaching assistants from the ECU English Department, will offer for the first time writing guidance for students in every department of the university this fall. Mini-workshops, with topics ranging from essay writing to grammar, writing anxiety, study skills and goal setting, are already being planned for the fall semester. They will be open to anyone who is interested.

Although the primary purpose of the center is to start freshman English students on the right foot, Bizzaro said there are plans to open the center to members of the Greenville-Pitt County community. "We ultimately hope to end up serving the whole community through a multipurpose center, perhaps within three to four years. It would also be nice to have a grammar hotline so people could phone into the writing center for help with grammar problems," he said.

Other services Bizzaro hopes to provide through the center include seminars for local K-12 teachers, workshops for businesses on written communications and a summer writing camp for school children emphasizing creative and journalistic writing activities. "This writing center has endless potential ... but I am realistic enough to realize that all this cannot happen at once," he said.

While help with all kinds of writing will be available through the center, Bizzaro said most of the work will deal with developing good, basic, down-to-earth writing skills.

"Most adults who haven't had extensive writing instruction are already at the point where they are ready to write about personal experience," he said. "We will help them with that, and then take them wherever they want to go, whether it be academic, creative, or functional writing skills used in the real world."

Bizzaro said the birth of the center and subsequent orientation days have been relatively trouble free. However, he did say he has had feedback from teachers indicating that some students feel being sent to the center suggests inadequacy in their previous training. "I hope that won't be a problem for long," he said. "This is not just a place for remedial or weak students. That simply isn't true. Everyone needs help sooner or later.

"More often than not, if a student has a writing problem it is because, in the past, it has been fashionable not to teach writing in the early stages of education. That's not their fault," he said.

Bizzaro, who joined the ECU faculty this summer, has taught writing at George Mason, Purdue and Miami universities. He has been co-director of the Virginia Community College System Writing Project and faculty writing specialist at Northern Virginia Community College, as well as a writing consultant to WNET-TV (New York); the New York publishing firm, Random House, and several school systems.

His publications include numerous poems and articles in literary and professional journals and three textbooks, including "Basic Writing: A Process Workbook," to be released later this year.

The writing center will open officially Sept. 15 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 8 a.m. to noon Fridays.

Wrecks Cause Heavy Damage

An estimated $2,400 damage resulted when four vehicles collided at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Forest Hill Drive. The drivers of the vehicles were Patricia Kelly Rogers of 260 Circle Drive, George Liles Stott of 203-B Bryton Hills, Kim Kountis Peddle of 800-A Verdant Drive and Nicholas Benson of 2111 Southview Drive.

No injuries were reported. Ms. Rogers was charged with an improper turn and Stott was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Estimated damage to the Rogers vehicle was $1,000, while damage to the Stott vehicle was placed at $400. Damage to the Peddle vehicle was $500 and damage to the Benson vehicle was $500.

Another accident occured at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street when a vehicle driven by Linda Evelyn Padgett of 122 Reade Circle collided with a vehicle driven by Willie Manning of Route 3, Greenville.

No injuries were reported and Ms. Padgett was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Estimated damage to the Padgett vehicle was $900, while damage to the Manning vehicle was $200.

An accident resulted at the intersection of 10th Street and Clark Street when a vehicle driven by William Watson Brown of 316 Rutledge Road collided with a vehicle driven by Joseph Barnhill of 106 Rocky Drive, which collided with a vehicle driven by James Alfred Evans of 2514 Dickinson Ave.

No injuries were reported and Brown was charged with failure to yield right of way.

Damage to the Brown vehicle was $2,500 and damage to the Barnhill vehicle was $700. Damage to the Evans vehicle was placed at $10.

Races ...

"It's going to be an interesting year."

"With such a large field, I see a fiercely competitive primary, and right now, I would be very reluctant to name a front-runner," Janice Faulkner, former executive director of the state party, said.

Now director of East Carolina University's Regional Development Institute, Mrs. Faulkner suggested that "depending on what happens to (Jimmy) Green, the governor's race may be a three-layered shakeout.

"For example, if fallout is a factor, the race could wind up with Eddie Knox and Lauch Faircloth on the top layer. If it's not a factor, it could be Edmisten and Green.

"The third layer," Mrs. Faulkner suggested, would be "the also-rans. And right now, I'm putting Tom Gilmore and Lacy Thornburg in that category."

Early campaigning, such as candidates are engaged in now, "wears everybody out, uses up resources, and doesn't settle anything," Mrs. Faulkner said. "It doesn't move any one candidate any nearer to victory."

Mrs. Faulkner said, too, that "none of the real power brokers" have openly committed themselves to any candidate. "They seem to be holding themselves out, or else their allegiancies are a well-kept secret."

"Power brokers," she said, are people like "Bert Bennett, Terry Sanford, Joe Grimsley, Jane Paterson ... who have been active in gubernatorial politics."

As for Pitt County, Mrs. Faulkner suggested that the "leadership is going off in all directions as far as I can determine. There is a base of support for Edmisten, Knox, Faircloth, and of course Green has a strong base here. So I'd say that it's being divided several ways and should make for interesting politics.

Israel ...

the mountain villages as the Israeli withdrawal began.

It said the Israelis set fire to their abandoned equipment and wooden bunkers as they pulled out of the Aley area.

A later broadcast said shells were exploding early Sunday in predominantly Christian east Beirut and in towns in the Aley mountains about 10 miles east of the capital.

It reported militia groups were taking over some of the abandoned Israeli positions in the Aley area.

An Israeli military spokesman told Associated Press reporter Christian Bustani that the Lebanese had asked for a third delay of the withdrawal, but Israeli officials decided not to wait any longer. The spokesman requested anonymity.

Bustani reported seeing convoys, including tanks and armored personnel carriers, moving down the mountains from the predominantly Druse town of Aley.

He said the Israelis put up earthen barricades at the Galerie Semaan crossing point between east and west Beirut to guard against sniping from the direction of mainly Moslem west Beirut. Israeli vehicles turned south, toward Sidon.

"What you just saw at Galerie Semaan is part of the security arrangements to secure the movement of our troops," the Israeli spokesman told Bustani.

"We have a large army deployed in the mountains. The operation will take time and needs security arrangements," he added.

Beirut radio's report on the pullback said, "Unofficial sources expect it to be completed within the next 48 hours, and there are contacts on a very high level to discuss the situation and avoid any tensions in the mountains."

Lebanese state television reported two members of Parliament were sent to U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon "to ask him to work to avoid the dangers of a partial withdrawal from the mountains," where Druse militiamen have vowed to keep the Lebanese army from entering. They accuse the army of siding with Christian militias.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman Nahman Shai said Defense Minister Moshe Arens met with Richard Fairbanks, a deputy to Robert C. McFarlane, President Reagan's special envoy. Shai said Arens told Fairbanks "Israel's army can no longer delay its redeployment."

He reported the two men met in the town of Deir El-Kamar in the Chouf mountains. Israel television quoted Arens as telling Fairbanks that Israel "regrets that the Lebanese government has not made more efforts to come to agreement with the militias in the Chouf."

In Washington, President Reagan met with the National Security Council about Lebanon. McFarlane returned from the Middle East for the meeting.

Israel is believed to want the withdrawal completed before the start of the Jewish New Year holidays on Wednesday.

Christian gunners in the Chouf stronghold of Souk el Gharb exchanged artillery and rocket fire Saturday afternoon with Druse militiamen in the neighboring town of Aitat, about seven miles southeast of Beirut, witnesses and radio stations said.

Sunday Opinion

Soviet Policy Should Bring Mass Outrage

Massacres have not been uncommon through the years of recorded history. We should be accustomed to hearing about them by now. But, thank God, the shock of such atrocities still numbs us.

And that was the feeling Thursday when Secretary of State Shultz announced that a Soviet jet, with its target in sight, intentionally fired a missile on an unarmed, civilian airliner that carried 269 people.

The Soviets are presumably a responsible people. The Soviet Union is one of this world's powers. Its people are the ones we are told repeatedly by anti-war demonstrators to trust; to disarm and let the Soviets know we mean peace, surely they will follow our lead.

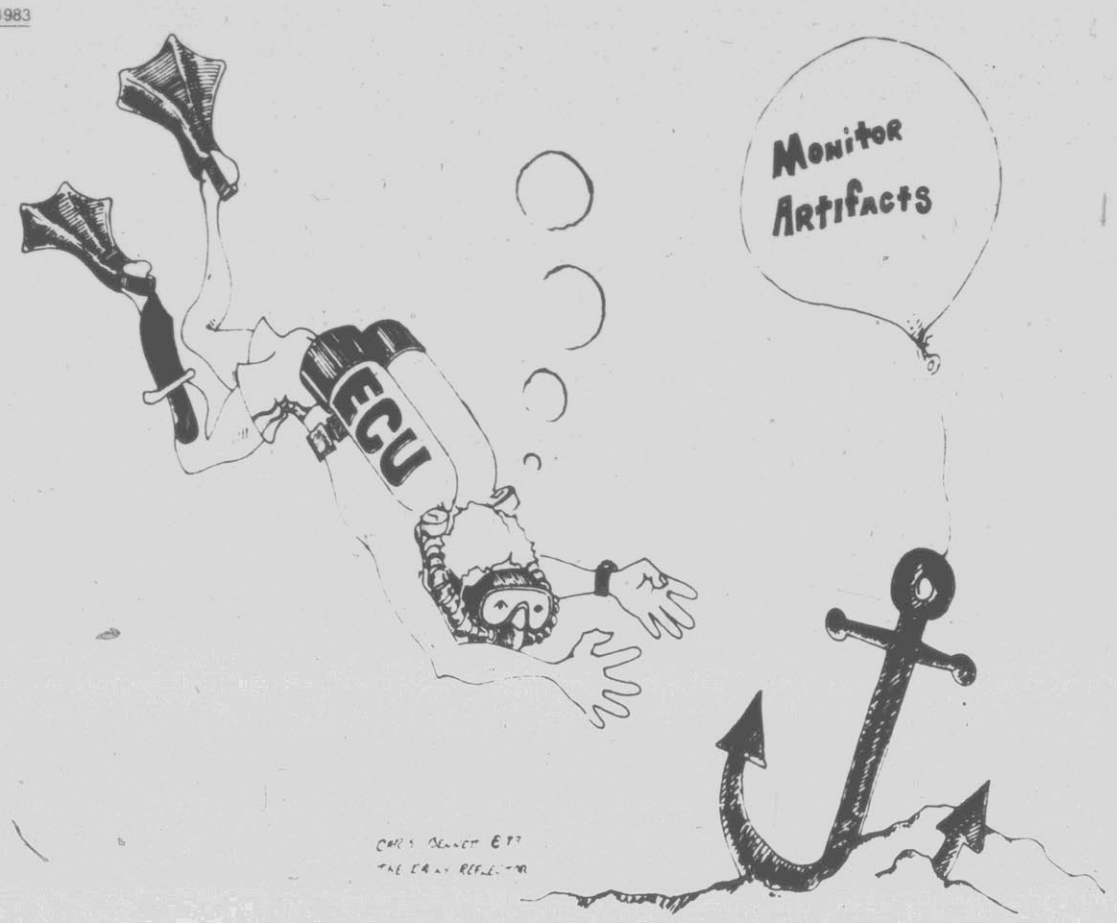

There has been nothing in the last 38 years, since World War II, to indicate the Soviet Union could be trusted. And the irrational downing of the Korean Air Lines jet, supposedly because it had passed over Soviet sea territory, assuredly reduces any dependence on Soviet interest in humankind.

World reaction was strong last year to the massacre of civilians in Iran. The Soviet Union's action in downing the KAL jet was even more atrocious. At least the Iranians knew what was happening; the Soviets apparently made no effort to contact, much less warn, the airliner although it was tracked for more than two hours.

National air space is important; its security should be firm. But there is a limit to how far unprovoked defense of that air space should go.

In this case there was no defense of national security interests. The Soviet fighters simply used the KAL jet for target practice.

Short of military destruction, world public opinion — if strong enough — appears to be the only thing that could affect Soviet policies. We sincerely hope the outcries never stop.

Monitor's Relics Need New Home At Coastal Site

Researchers, including those from East Carolina University, who raised the anchor of USS Monitor were laboring under handicaps such salvage operations should not have to face.

There was the contract time-limitation on use of the research vessel (which was over-ridden) and there was the uncertain weather off Hatteras. Combined, they made a difficult task even more difficult.

The real prize, of course, will be the turret.

The Monitor was a concept born of genius in warship design, devised more than 120 years ago and still serving (albeit much improved) to this day.

We would hope the turret, anchor and other artifacts retrieved from the Monitor are reunited at a suitable site on the North Carolina coast. It would be tragic for those treasures of the past to be dispersed among a half-dozen or so separate sites.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox paid the area a visit recently. It was during one of the times when temperatures soared above 100 throughout the state.

He commented that he opened a headquarters in Charlotte the day before. There was no air conditioning and he was soaked to his shoes.

Later he traveled to Rocky Mount, where there were nine rooms reserved for his party.

"Guess who got the room in which the air conditioning wasn't working?" he quipped.

He showed us a license plate on his car which goes a long way toward explaining why he has the time.

It read: "No clock, no phone, no address, no money, RETIRED."

Garner earned his retirement which came three years ago. He worked at the old Pitt General Hospital on Jarvis Street and moved to the old Pitt Memorial on West Fifth Street. "I made the first bed at Pitt Memorial in 1950," he recalls.

After 25 years with the hospital he worked with Medical Arts Clinic from where he retired. Now he works part time as a janitor for a doctor's office.

He admonishes those nearing retirement to face it with confidence. "I enjoy life fishing, working in the yard and I find a lot of friends at Krispy Kreme," he says.

He also does considerable church work at Phillipi Church of Christ where he is a deacon.

He says he recommends retirement but "always find something to do. Don't just sit in the rocking chair. I got a chance to do a lot of things I've always wanted to do."

Gardner says he has lived here all his life and has seen Greenville grow from "no where to a city."

His wife retired as a nurse's assistant this year and now "she can fish with me," he says.

They raised three children, all of whom finished college and are successful in their fields. There are also three grandchildren.

Paul O'Connor Offer

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has been offered a major cabinet position by a Democratic candidate for president. Too bad for Hunt, however, that the candidate seems to be having some trouble getting his name before the public.

Robery Leroy Melton of Texas, the presidential candidate, wrote to Hunt several weeks ago offering him the job of secretary of the interior if Melton is elected president in 1984. A couple of weeks later, he wrote Hunt again saying the job offer was still good but he needed a little help from the governor right away.

It seems Mr. Melton is in the Commanche County Jail in Lawton, Okla. He needs a letter of nice words from Hunt, Melton says, to get a driver's license in Texas so he can start campaigning once the "trumped up charges" he faces in Oklahoma are dismissed.

"We've got to get that boy a pardon," said Hunt's press aide Brent Hackney, tongue in cheek, "so he can get on the campaign trail."

Mr. Melton became quite impressed with Hunt a couple of years back while living in North Carolina. Actually, he was doing a seven-month sentence in a Salisbury prison unit for a crime he doesn't specify in his pencil-written letter.

You may not think Melton has much of a chance in 1984 but Melton does. He signed his letter "Robert L. Melton, president of the United States."

When the General Assembly came back to town on Aug. 26, it had only two bills to deal with. Both were criminal justice bills.

You might expect lobbyists for interests affected by the bill to come to the Legislative Building that day. But, you'd be surprised to see almost the entire lobbying corps there.

Lobbyists from utility companies, the N.C. Association of Educators, the farm bureau, the Citizens Association and a number of other industries were on hand. Why?

John Hicks of Duke Power said it's just good lobbying practice to be on hand, ready to say hello to people, even when you don't need them. A pair of lobbyists from the Citizens Association said the same thing.

But another lobbyist, who asked not to be named, said you have to be on your guard all the time: "This is open season and anything can happen. So, I'll just sith here and watch."

One group, the Farm Worker Ministry, used the occasion to get in a protest demonstration it missed having during the regular session. While legislators worked on the evidence discovery bill inside, the farmworker advocates protested the state's weakened anti-slavery bill outside.

Rep. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, says she won't run for lieutenant governor in 1984. Mrs. Cochrane, a moderate who is well-liked by colleagues of both parties in the state House, has been getting a lot of mention in Republican circles as a possible candidate. It's felt that a woman could really help balance a ticket headed by President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms.

Mrs. Cochrane said the idea to run for the Senate's top job was not her own. "It was other peoples' idea." She says she doubts she could establish the name identification to run a good campaign. And, even if she won, she doubts she could be very effective in a Senate controlled by the Democrats.

Within a few years, however, she thinks a woman will run and win the lieutenant governor's post.

Gene Wang Hunt Agrees To Sit For Formal Portrait

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Almost seven years after he took office, Gov. Jim Hunt is finally making plans for an official portrait required by state law.

"We hope we'll have him in with the portait painter in November or December," said Lawrence Wheeler, deputy secretary of the Department of Cultural Resources.

"He (Hunt) hasn't been putting it off, but he didn't see any urgency in doing it earlier," Wheeler said. "I have been working on it for six years."

Wheeler said a committee is screening a list of artists who have expressed an interest in painting the portrait. The group hopes to recommend several names to Hunt by late October so the governor can make the final decision.

State law requires the department to have a portrait painted at least six months before the end of each governor's term.

Hunt is the first governor to serve two successive four-year terms under the 1977 succession amendment to the state Constitution. His portrait was not done during his first term because he was campaigning for re-election when the six-month deadline came up.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's news secretary, said he was not aware of the arrangements for the portrait but Cultural Resources Secretary Sara Hodgkins had discussed the matter with the governor.

"I'm sure an official portrait is important and one will be done at the appropriate time," Pearce said.

Wheeler, who has been handling details of the project, said Hunt promised Mrs. Hodgkins he will do the necessary posing this fall.

"He said he would deal with it this fall. He knows it is not going to be a big demand on his time and he's perfectly willing to do it," Wheeler said.

"He doesn't really have to pose at all. Portrait painting is not done by sittings any more," he said.

The artist will need to spend two to three hours with Hunt making sketches, taking photographs and talking to the governor, Wheeler said.

Although an artist has not yet been selected, Hunt has made it clear he wants the work done by a North Carolinian.

About 30 artists have expressed an interest in the job, Wheeler said, and 20 have submitted portfolios to the selection committee.

"They run the whole range from the traditional to almost the surreal," he said, but declined to name the candidates.

"We want something that is a good work of art, first of all," he said. "If it breaks with the traditional mold of portrait painting and the governor agrees, that's all the better."

"The important thing is the portrait painter capture the governor and his spirit and so forth."

Portraits of past governors have generally featured traditional backgrounds and portrayed their subjects in dark suits, Wheeler said, but current techniques involve the use of brighter colors and more "non-traditional settings."

Former Gov. Terry Sanford is portrayed sitting down against an unidentifiable backdrop, while former Gov. Dan K. Moore was painted standing beside a desk with a cigarette in his hand.

James J. Kilpatrick Kuhn's Farewell Is Less Than Impressive

Bowie Kuhn delivered his departing statement the other day as commissioner of baseball, and Hugh A. Scott, a free-lancer in King City, Ore., kindly sent along an annotated copy of the work. Mr. Scott found Kuhn's farewell somewhat less impressive than the farewells of Pericles, George Washington, Robert E. Lee and Douglas MacArthur. That appraisal strikes me as wholly deserved.

Kuhn recalled the day early in August when he told the club owners he was not a candidate for re-election. "I crossed a bridge that day, a bridge that vanished behind me." It was an interesting turn of phrase. Bridges historically are burned to prevent a retreat, but a vanishing bridge is a new kind of bridge.

A new commissioner, said Kuhn, should be drawn from with in baseball. "I think he's there and can be cajoled, persuaded and entreated to take this glorious agony." The departing commissioner thus left three runners on second base. To cajole is to persuade, and to entreat is to persuade. All he needed was "can be persuaded." And what is to be said of the oxymoronic "glorious agony"? Jefferson called the presidency "that splendid misery," but "glorious" and "agony" are not exactly the words we would apply to the job of being a commissioner of major league baseball.

The problem that would accompany the hiring of an outsider, said Kuhn, "is that he will have to pick his way through a time-consuming period of wheel-spinning." Here the commissioner provided one of those wild pitches of prose composition known as the mixaphor. We pick our way through minefields, perhaps, and we spin wheels in mud or snow, but we do not pick our way through spinning wheels.

Kuhn has trouble fielding words cleanly. He would prefer a successor from within baseball, but many outsiders "have the necessary arsenal of talents."

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer March Shows Disunity Among Blacks

WASHINGTON — For many of its leaders, the "March on Washington" was a time to recall a rally that crystalized the civil rights movement.

For movement historians, however, the celebratory nature of the rally did not disguise a troubling parallel between then and now: disunity among black leaders. Just as major black organizations sharply disagreed over strategy and tactics at the time of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s memorable "I Have a Dream" speech, the Rev. Jesse Jackson's likely presidential candidacy has brought similar differences to the fore.

Only now, some of the players defend positions they once denounced.

In 1963, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was still America's most established black organization. While, during the late 1950s, the NAACP had initiated about 70 percent of all movement actions, it was still responsible for many of them (almost a third) in 1963. It counseled moderation for the civil rights movement, preferring litigation and lobbying to sit-ins and freedom rides.

Forbearance, however, was antithetical to the aims of such groups as the Congress on Racial Bquality (CORE), Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC). Led by men like King and Andrew Young of the SCLC and John Lewis of the SNCC, these unconventional organizations appealed to a restlessness among blacks and gradually assumed national leadership of the civil rights cause.

In 1983, divisions between moderate and "direct-action" forces are emerging again. Yet this time, former upstarts such as Young and Lewis are more willing than others — Jackson particularly — to work within the system of traditional party politics to further their goals.

Atlanta Mayor Young contends that Jackson's presidential aspirations would raise black expectations unrealistically. Lewis doubts the ability of Jackson and Co. to meet the organizational and financial obligations due a full-fledged presidential effort. Better only to register black voters, Jesse, and let the Democratic Party take over from there, they say.

Jackson, however, contends that such thinking is acquiescent at best and defeatist at worst. His alternative rests on formidable questions: Have blacks benefited from supporting white liberals, like Walter Mondale? Do they have anything to lose by denying Democrats their support at this stage?

Ego, of course, fuels the differences in outlook. As heirs to the King legacy, Young, Lewis and others understandably writhe at the sounds of "Run, Jesse, Run" and at Jackson's high visibility. As politicians, Young and Lewis, an Atlanta city councilman, are naturally jealous of Jackson's sudden political ascendancy.

But that jealousy also suggests the emergence of two black constituencies, each of which sees Jackson's possible candidacy in a different light. Many black leaders, including Young, have all but joined the "establishment" and thus speak to those blacks who at least have some confidence in the American dream. Meanwhile, Jackson speaks to the majority of blacks who, 20 years after the first march on Washington, have little more than memories. Jackson's audience is younger, poorer and restless.

That this group's enthusiasm could make Jackson's candidacy inevitable poses a political dilemma for Young, Coretta King and others who favor Walter Mondale. If, as would be expected, Jackson draws black voters away from Mondale only to assure the Democratic nomination of Ohio's Sen. John Glenn' these black leaders could all but sit out the general election and possibly the following four years.

Yet reluctance to support Jaokson, Lewis and others told us, could cost them even more political damage in the long run. That would reveal a black leadership that has grown old and out of touch with a new generation and which may be better suited to anniversary celebrations than speaking for all its oonstituents.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The retirement of Glenn Cannon as chief of police in Greenville is an event worthy of consideration by Greenville citizens.

His leadership has enhanced this city during a period of considerable growth from a town atmosphere to a city environment. The stability offered within the Police Department was extremely valuable. He moved the department into a status as a well-trained, modern agency. Even embarrassing events within the department were handled with professionalism, fairness and open scrutiny.

I am certain I speak for others when I commend Glenn Cannon for his valuable contributions to this city.

Helen Thomas — Mideast Wrecks Reagan Vacations

Everytime he has gone to California for a summer respite from his official White House duties for the past three years developments in the Middle East have interrupted his leisure.

In 1981, U.S. planes shot down two Libyan jets in Mediterranean waters. In 1982, in the aftermath of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, Reagan unveiled a peace plan for the Middle East and moved to send 1,200 Marines there as part of a three-nation peace-keeping force.

This year, Marines are at the barricades and being fired upon by various warring Moslem factions who are resisting consolidation of the country by the Lebanese army.

Despite the setbacks, and there have been many in the past year, Reagan insists that his peace plan is "definitely alive."

But, the U.S. policy is as confusing as Arab factionalism.

After the United States vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution calling the Israeli settlements on the West Bank illegal, Reagan delivered a radio speech last Saturday contending the settlements are "an obstacle to peace."

In recent speeches he also has spoken of the legitimate rights of the Palestinians.

But the United States also has joined Israel and Canada in boycotting a U.N.-sponsored conference on Palestinian rights which is currently under way.

Some observers believe Reagan reaffirmed U.S. support of U.N. Security Council resolutions dealing with the Israeli-Palestinian problem and territorial borders as a result of sharp criticism by Jordan's King Hussein in a Los Angeles Times interview.

"The settlements are illegal, that is the long and short of it," Hussein said and expressed shock and disappointment over the U.S. veto.

Many diplomatic observers have written off Reagan's peace plan because it has been stalemated by rejections from both the Israelis and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The lack of momentum in the peace process can be partly attributed to the administration's preoccupation with efforts to stabilise Lebanon and to help it to attain its sovereignty again with the withdrawal of Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian troops.

Those diplomatic efforts have run into severe problems and outbreaks of new fighting. Failure to agree to evacuate Lebanon has put an Israeli-Lebanese agreement on troop withdrawals currently on hold.

Syria has declined to recognize the agreement because it claims it was not consulted.

So far, all of the president's recent moves in the Middle East have been like putting his finger in the dike. From all indications, he has to sit down again and determine clearly what the U.S. policy is and what Americans are willing to do or not do in that region in pursuit of peace.

George Gallup — Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The 20th anniversary of the 1963 civil rights "March on Washington" finds an upbeat mood among white people in the nation, but continuing Pessimism among black Americans.

The proportion of whites who express satisfaotion with "the way things are going in their own personal lives" is now at 82 percent compared to an already high 77 percent recorded in November. Among blacks, the current figure is 50 percent satisfied today compared to 56 percent in the earlier survey.

Whites today also are considerably more satisfied with "the way things are going in the nation" — the other dimension explored in this mood barometer — than they were last fall, 39 percent compared to 24 percent in the earlier survey. Blacks, on the other hand, are as gloomy today as earlier, with 13 peroent now saying they are satisfied with trends in the nation compared to 12 percent in November.

These questions were asked:

"In general, are you satisfied or dissatisfied with the way things are going in the U.S. at this time?"

"In general, are you satisfied or dissatisfied with the way things are going in your own personal life?"

Views Of White, Black Teens Compared

A wide gap in satisfaction levels, however, is found between white and black teen-agers on satisfaction with trends in the nation, with twice the proportion of whites (43 percent) as blacks (20 percent) expressing satisfaction with the way things are going in the nation.

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,497 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period August 5-8.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidenoe that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Barrage Is Only The Start

TOKYO — Japan is braced for years of unrelenting pressure against rearmament in a Soviet campaign whose intensity points up the importance of Yasuhiro Nakasone's survival as the prime minister moving this country into the Western alliance.

His determination to increase defense spending in the face of the Soviet military buildup in the western Pacific has unleashed a ferocious propaganda barrage from Moscow, but that is only the start. The brass knuckles are KGB efforts to manipulate important factions in the Japanese establishment sensitive to pacifist and anti-nuclear themes. The campaign was triggered by Nakasone's talk about helping the U.S. 7th Fleet close off narrow passages in the Sea of Japan.

"It is bad, it is getting worse and it will last for years," one well-placed Japanese official told us, "but we can take it." The Foreign Office believes the Kremlin will realize in about five years that its threats won't work and will then seek detente. Whether that optimistic forecast proves accurate could well depend on whether Nakasone weathers the factional politics of the Liberal Democrats, the nation's conservative ruling party, and serves more than the commonplace two years for the unmemorable succession of recent prime ministers.

Unlike those predecessors, Nakasone talks about the Soviet arms buildup and its consequences in blunt, straightforward language. He recently warned in direct terms that increased Soviet naval and air strength in the western Pacific and more troops on the Soviet-occupied Kuril Islands to the north amount to an increase in the potential threat to Japan. That, he added, requires an increased Japanese defense capability. Along with his government's national security experts, Nakasone understands that for the past five years the U.S. by itself has not been able to guarantee this nation's security against expanded Soviet power.

That kind of talk, almost from the moment Nakasone took office in January, has triggered the Kremlin's unprecedented drive against him. Its overriding theme is to play on the deep-seated fear of nuclear war in the only country whose citizens have been killed by atomic bombs.

"Facts demonstrate that forgetting the lessons of Hiroshima and Nagasaki," trumpeted Tass news anaylst Askold Biryukov Aug. 2, "Japan's authorities throw the door wide open to these (U.S. nuclear) forces, dooming the country to the role of a hostage in the Pentagon's military adventures." That message, interspersed with attacks on revived Japanese "militarism," is drummed home repeatedly by Radio Moscow.

The Kremlin has a ready audience here in the Japanese Socialists and other opposition parties, intellectuals, substantial elements of the business community and especially the mass news media. Manichi (daily circulation: 6.9 million), which has called Nakasone's tenure "a period of anxiety," is quoted favorably by Soviet propaganda broadcasts for urging Japan to step away from U.S. strategic policy.

While massaging its friends, the Kremlin adds a prototypical intimidation. On Aug. 20 over Radio Moscow, Lt. Gen. Dmitry Antonovich Volkogonov warned that Nakasone's "recent words and specific deeds" are "dangerous for Japan and the world." His familiar conclusion: The U.S.S.R. cannot look on with indifference at the events which are developing."

Two days later, Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe embarked on a Japanese naval patrol boat for a first-hand view, peering through binoculars at Habomai, one of the four northern islands occupied by Soviet troops in the closing days of World War II and never relinquished. When a Soviet patrol boat came within two kilometers of the Japanese ship, Abe muttered about its "rude manners." But he also called for an expanded Soviet-Japanese dialogue on both diplomatic and cultural levels.

Abe's proposal, carefully worked out with Nakasone, was described to us by a government insider as "a counteroffensive" to the Kremlin's attack on Japan. But nobody expects it will soften the rude language from Moscow.

Rather, Foreign Office thinking is that it will persist for the next five years or so, a replay of the long Soviet propaganda offensive against west German rearmament a generation ago. Officials here believe this campaign of intimidation will fail and that when Japanese rearmament has become an established fact, the Soviets will enter serious negotiations for detente — just as they did with the West Germans.

Barry Schweid — Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he isn't abandoning his peace plan for the Middle East, but even a change in Israeli leadership probably won't salvage the year-old proposal for Palestinian self-rule.

Not only is the simmering war in Lebanon a deadly obstacle, but there simply isn't enough incentive for the parties — Arabs or Israelis — to give Reagan's most ambitious foreign policy initiative a chance to work.

Israel, which rejected the proposal immediately after it was announced last Sept. 1, is reluctant to take the risk that the Palestinian entity proposed by Reagan will evolve into a hostile, unstable state controlled by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The impending departure of Menachem Begin as Israel's prime minister is unlikely to ease anxieties over the upsurge in radicalism, and the administration is not inclined to pressure its jittery ally at this violent time.

The fighting in Lebanon, and the Syrians' beachhead there, also are bound to make Jordan more jumpy.

King Hussein's conservative regime, which worries about the ambitions of Syria, had already all but closed the door on the Reagan initiative before tensions rose in Lebanon.

The king yielded his claim to represent the Palestinians at the 1974 Arab summit meeting and is unwilling to assume the burden of negotiating for them without a green light from the PLO.

And Yasser Arafat's organization, which will settle for nothing less than a state, refuses to go along with an American president who has assured the Israelis he isn't calling for one.

Begin's leave-taking does not alter Israel's determination to protect its flanks, nor does it mean the Arabs can expect a pliant negotiating partner in Jerusalem — especially with Lebanon reeling.

Reagan tried not to sound discouraged in reaffirming his Mideast plan in his weekly radio address last Saturday. He said he remains committed to finding "a compassionate, fair and practical resolution to the Palestinian problem."

The Begin government wanted to deal with the problem through the 1978 Camp David agreement, which provides for five years of Palestinian autonomy under Israeli control to be followed by negotiations on a permanent settlement.

That approach still has widespread support in Israel, even though there are factions who would take a chance on a Palestinian state and others who would simply annex the West Bank and close the door on the Palestinians.

The administration's strategy was to work the Arab side of the street — ignore Begin's rejection of the Reagan plan and concentrate on inducing Hussein to accept it.

The theory was that if the Arabs agreed to negotiate, the Israelis' yearning for peace with their neighbors would force the government in Jerusalem to give in.

But the king, who boycotted Camp David, decided after months of dickering with Arafat that he could not negotiate on the basis of the Reagan plan either. In fact, he laid part of the blame on the United States, saying it should have dealt directly with the PLO.

Thinly veiled pleas by Secretary of State George Shultz that the Arabs repeal their 1974 decision and not let "radical elements" control the Palestinians' future have gone unheeded.

And unless the Arabs withdraw the PLO's representation rights and transfer them to Hussein it probably does not matter who is in charge in Israel so far as getting negotiations started — certainly not while Lebanon is enveloped in violence.

Still, Shultz, while acknowledging "it's a long, uphill struggle," said the Reagan initiative, the Camp David agreement and resolutions adopted by the U.N. Security Council in 1967 and 1973 "are very much on people's minds."

Shultz told reporters at a news conference Wednesday that "if you think about it, at all, where else are you going to go but to the ideas that are contained in those documents."

Donald Phillips — Blame

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has a way of collectively putting its foot in its mouth, chomping down hard and then blaming the press and the public interest groups for the resulting wound.

The classic scenario, of course, involves congressional pay increases and outside income limits.

Congress again and again acts like a thief in the night, skulking around and through parliamentary maneuvers to sneak temselves a pay raise. Then when someone flips on the poltical lights and they are left standing there sheepishly, they blame those who turned on the light.

It never occurs that one reason they are treated like thieves is that they act that way. There are good reasons to increase congressional salaries; why not do it openly?

The same thing is true of congressional travel.

Not all congressional trips are junkets. Rep. Leo Ryan of California was not on a junket when he was gunned down on an airstrip in Guiana. And I doubt that anyone dodging bullets in Lebanon would consider the trip a junket unless a lengthy stay in Paris accompanied it.

Some trips are clear junkets. Any trip by a lame duck is a junket. One committee actually spent weeks in South America studying the postal systems of countries with some of the world's greatest beaches and night spots. That's a junket.

But the destination does not necessarily make a trip a junket. The Interparliamentary Union meets in some of the world's great cities, but experience has shown that the congressmen who attend these sessions are serious about their work and come home with a greater understanding of the world and its needs, even if they do have a little fun while there.

The trouble is that Congress seems to treat all trips as if they were junkets.

Getting information on congressional travel, for instance, is deliberately made difficult. There is no central point to gather the information, and unless a congressman or a committee chooses to announce the trip, it is not certain that we ever will learn that a trip was made, much less its purpose.

There is no requirement that the trip even have a purpose.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — One hour and six minutes after a mortar shell blast killed two Marines and wounded 14 others in Beirut, President Reagan was awakened by a telephone call at his mountaintop ranch.

It was 1:55 a.m. Monday when Reagan learned of the first U.S. combat deaths in his administration.

From his vacation home in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president ordered that national security aides assemble in Washington shortly after daybreak to assess the situation and report to him.

At 6 a.m. on the West Coast, the president was updated by telephone.

About two hours later, Reagan talked by telephone with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, from 7:58 a.m. to 8:05 a.m. From 8:24 a.m. to 8:34 a.m., the president was on the phone with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

In early afternoon, Reagan held what the White House called a National Security Council meeting by telephone. It took place via a conference call over a secure line and involved Reagan at his ranch, national security adviser William P. Clark and counselor Edwin Meese III in Santa Barbara, and Vice President George Bush and Shultz in Washington.

The conference call lasted 14 minutes, from 1:14 p.m. to 1:28 p.m. Reagan ordered that the troop size and mission of the Marines remain unchanged.

There was another conference call on Tuesday, from 1 p.m. to 1:10 p.m., with the same cast as a day earlier, minus Shultz.

Reagan directed his advisers to "report to him on a regular and frequent basis," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

He said Reagan directed "that he be given especially detailed information on military action, particularly in event of any military action involving U.S. personnel, and that he be kept abreast of (U.S. special envoy Robert) McFarlane's diplomatic efforts."

The excruciating detail from Reagan's telephone logs, and other information, was volunteered by a White House determined to portray the president as actively involved in the crisis in Lebanon.

With American forces in Beirut positioned in bunkers, wearing flak jackets and helmets and returning fire with artillery and small arms as well as with rockets from a helicopter gunship, the White House did not want the commander in chief pictured as detached or unconcerned — criticisms that have been leveled at Reagan on other occasions even by some Republicans.

Nearly three years into the Reagan presidency, there is little chance of a repeat of the 1981 gaffe when a vacationing Reagan slept through an aerial dogfight over the Gulf of Sidra in which American warplanes shot down two Libyan aircraft.

White House aides later acknowledged it had been a public relations fiasco to let Reagan's uninterrupted sleep appear to be more important than a duel between American and Libyan forces.

The Beirut shelling shows that the White House has got the drill down well now, and is ready with the tick-tock recapitulation of where the president was and what he did when crisis erupts.

PCMH To Be Area Referral Center

Final approval is all that is needed before Pitt County Memorial Hospital becomes the emergency medical referral center for 25 eastern North Carolina hospitals, hospital officals say.

The go-ahead from the state Department of Human Resources, designating PCMH as a Level II Trauma Center, is expected in the near future.

Dr. E. Jackson Allison Jr., chief of emergency medicine at PCMH and chairman of the department of emergency medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said the designation should result in better corrdination of emergency medical services within the region.

"Although the Pitt Memorial-ECU medical center has been generally regarded as the emergency medicine referral center in the east for several years, occasional confusion has sometimes resulted in costly delays in moving patients to hospitals providing the appropriate level of care," Allison said.

Hospital officials are happy about being named a Level II center because it brings the region a step closer to the "total systems approach" to emergency medicine, according to Allison.

The designation is aimed at taking advantage of what emergency physicians such as Allison refer to as "the golden hour," the early moments when an accident victim's life may hang in the balance. "If somebody survives the initial injury," Allison said, "then what happens in the next hour has a great deal to do with the final outcome."

Level II is the second highest designation for a trauma center within the emergency medicine services system. Three other hospitals in the state are expected to be designated as Level II centers at the same time as PCMH — Charlotte Memorial Hospital, Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville and either Wake Medical Center or Durham General Hospital.

Three North Carolina hospitals now hold the highest designation for emergency care Level I — N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, Duke Medical Center in Durham and Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem.

Pitt Memorial falls short of classification as Level I hospital in just two respects, according to Allison. The hospital does not have equipment to monitor intracranial pressure, and a cardiopulmonary bypass pump used in research has yet to be approved for patient use.

"Our hospital was selected primarily on the basis of three factors," Allison said. "Its central location in the east, the availablity of resident physicians in both emergency medicine and surgery on a 24-hour basis, and the volume of visits to the hospital's emergency department.

The Level II designation should occur approximately at the same time construction begins on a new and expanded emergency department at the hospital — sometime this fall. Projections indicate that the number of emergency patients with multiple injuries will increase by 5 percent in the hospital's first year as a Level II center. Expansion is expected to be complete by 1985.

World Reacts To Downing Of Plane

By The Associated Press

The entire world reacted to the reported downing of a jetliner by a Soviet fighter, not just the major powers and the countries involved. Many comments were familiar — "horrified incredulity" was one — but others reflected regional politics.

Moscow's friends and clients either said little or followed the party line.

Singapore said Saturday that the "cynical indifference" exhibited by Moscow "raises the disturbing question as to whether the vast military apparatus of the Soviet Union is under any rational control."

A pro-government newspaper in Saudi Arabia condemned the downing of the South Korean aircraft. But it wondered why the United States was so "relentless" in its response while it was "not so angry" in 1973 when Israeli jets shot down a Libyan airliner over the occupied Sinai desert, killing 108 people.

East Germany called Western reaction to the loss of the Boeing 747, which went down Thursday in the Sea of Japan with 269 people aboard, a "crude anti-Soviet provocation" with "dark political purposes."

The official newspaper in Nicaragua, whose government the Reagan administration accuses of running weapons to leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador, published a brief article saying the plane was missing, but said nothing about it being shot down.

Communist North Korea had no comment.

There were some who stood firmly in the middle of the road. Mexico stressed the "need to determine" what happened "with total precision." Malaysia condemned the incident, but said it would await action by the U.N. Security Council, which began an urgent debate on the matter Friday.

Egypt expressed its regrets, but a Foreign Ministry official who refused to be identified said there would be no further comment because "this is something between the two giants and we will not get involved."

Some other comments:

SINGAPORE — Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan: "The cynical indifference with which the Soviet government has responded to international outrage is most disturbing.... The Soviet government reaction has undermined its credibility as a responsible superpower. It raises the disturbing question as to whether the vast military apparatus of the Soviet Union is under any rational control."

PERSIAN GULF: The Saudi newspaper Al-Madina: "The United States now is waging a relentless campaign against the Soviet Union's crime. This is no doubt a crime with dimensions difficult to assess on the human scale. But what the Jews did (to the Libyan plane) and what they are committing now in Lebanon and in the usurped Palestinian territory are exactly similar to the crimes of the communists." It asked why the United States was "not so angry" when Israel shot down the Libyan plane.

Newspapers in Bahrain and in Kuwait, the only conservative gulf state that has diplomatic relations with Moscow, held the Soviets solely responsible.

Plane Attack ...

right denial. In a statement by the official news agency Tass, the Soviets called U.S. claims "slanderous allegations." Moscow has said it fired warning tracers at the plane after its entered restricted space near Sahkalin Island; the Soviet statement suggested that the plane was on a spy mission using its civilian status as a cover.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp., quoting unidentified government sources, said analysis of radio communications monitored in Japan revealed that Soviet military authorities on the ground ordered its jet fighters to shoot down the airliner. Japanese officials either could not be reached by telephone or said they could not comment on the report.

The television network also quoted sources as saying Japan's Defense Agency had tape recordings of conversations from the fighters indicating the airliner was not given proper warning before it was shot down.

It said that just before the attack, one of the Soviet pilots radioed, "It is now within sight. We have approached within two kilometers. The plane is not yet aware of us. We will continue pursuit." There was no confirmation of the report.

The Sunday Times in London, attributing its information to unidentified U.S. intelligence sources, said that as the airliner entered Soviet airspace, messages were exchanged between forces on Sakhalin and regional headquarters at Chita, about 1,200 miles to the west, and later the volume of messages between Chita and Moscow grew.

These existence of these messages, monitored by a Japanese station, provide evidence that the attack was approved at the top level of the Soviet military, the newspaper said.

In Washington, the home telephone for the spokesman for the State Department did not answer and the telephone for his counterpart at the Defense Department was busy.

The New York Times, quoting unnamed senior U.S. intelligence officials in Saturday's editions, said the airliner tried to signal it would comply with established interception procedures before it was reportedly shot down.

"Soviet communications include conversations that indicate that the Korean plane either rocked its wings, flashed its navigational lights or took some other form of action to show that it knew it was in trouble," a senior American intelligence official told the Times.

But a top U.S. official, who insisted on anonymity, said he knew of nothing to indicate that the pilot of the Korean jet was aware he was in trouble or tried to signal his his distress to a Soviet pilot.

"I don't think he ever knew what hit him," said the senior official. In the last reported radio transmission, the pilot said he was on course, even though he apparently already was deep in Soviet air space.

In Tokyo, Vladimir Pavlov, the Soviet ambassador to Japan, said his country was making every effort to locate the missing aircraft, which went down near the Soviet island of Sakhalin, 50 miles north of Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido.

He said Soviet ships found debris from a crashed plane but did not connect it with the Korean Air Lines jet. He also did not confirm comments by unidentified U.S. officials who said the Soviets had recovered bodies from the area where the plane went down.

White House spokesman Speakes also said he could not confirm the report. He said the United States had requested that it be allowed to participate in the salvage operation, which it has not been permitted to do.

Japanese search boats were also barred from the Soviet waters of the north Pacific. Japanese officials said an oil slick 330-feet long that it spotted Friday was shown in tests to have no connection with the airliner.

Reagan's tough talk to the Soviets included support for the emergency session of the U.N. Security Council meeting that is now underway.

"The murder of innocent civilians is a serious international issue between the Soviet Union and civilized people everywhere who cherish individual rights and value human life," the president said.

"The evidence is clear," he said. "It leaves no doubt it is time for the Soviets to account."

Reagan continued:

"The Soviet Union owes the world a fullest possible explanation and apology for their inexcusable act of brutality. So far they flunk the test. Even now they continue to distort and deny the truth."

Civilian Gets Action From Pentagon Brass

By CATHERINE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LEMOORE, Calif. (AP) — Steward Z. Storms believes he would have been "branded a Communist and fired" if he did 20 years ago what he is doing today — blowing the whistle on money wasted by the military.

The civilian technician at Lemoore Naval Air Station, 200 miles southeast of San Francisco, went outside the military system to tell Congress about inflated prices on military spare parts.

Despite that break with tradition, he says, "Right now, I'm sure I have a lot of support in the Navy. ... I have seen no repercussions whatsoever. I don't see any foot-dragging or anything like that."

The Defense Department recently announced new purchasing procedures, and a Senate appropriations bill would apply new controls to military parts contracts.

"Within the time frame and knowing the military the way I do, I feel extremely comfortable with the progress so far," Storms said. "It almost seems like it takes forever when you're trying to make any changes in the military. I haven't seen any reluctance on the Navy's part to pursue this. They don't even try to defend it."

His March letter to Rep. Charles Pashayan, R-Calif., resulted in a report by the Defense Department's inspector general, which in turn generated a hearing on military waste by a House Armed Services investigative subcommittee.

Storms, 51, who retired from the Navy after 20 years and has been a civil service worker at Lemoore for nine years, thinks he might have been fired if he had done the same things years ago, but "waste is a dirty word now in government."

The most prominent example was diodes Sperry sold to the Navy for $110 that could be obtained for 4 cents through the federal supply system, or 10 for 99 cents at a local Radio Shack store.

Storms also noted a $1,191 repair bill for a pressure gauge that cost $234 new and a $1,730 charge to replace a $237 air filter.

He wrote President Reagan in August that "this is not an isolated incident caused by haste or because of an understaffed organization. This is an accepted procedure in all the armed services and with all the defense contractors."

Storms disclaims any effort to target individuals, the Navy or Sperry, saying he saw excessive charges among several contractors throughout his career.

"They're making a guaranteed profit on an inflated cost that does not exist. There's something wrong with a system that allows this," he said. "Everything is 100 percent legal, but it's a terrible waste of the taxpayers' money."

John Melchner, assistant inspector general for auditing, told the subcommittee in July that sloppy Navy purchasing practices meant the Navy paid $80,204 to Sperry for simulator parts that would have cost only $3,658 through the government's own spare parts stockpile.

The Pentagon investigation found that the Navy contracted with Sperry to find out what was available in the federal system and Sperry told the service the needed parts were available from the government. But the Navy went ahead and bought them from Sperry, Melchner said.

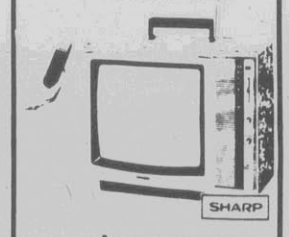

Ken Hancock, the Navy's auditor general, told the subcommittee that Navy officials told investigators it would have taken at least 10 people for the Navy to keep track of the federal inventory, and "it's easier to obtain money than it is to obtain personnel."

Storms said he wrote to Pashayan because "I got tired of watching these companies ripping off the government and the public.

"When I started this, I really gave myself very little chance to affect changes," Storms said. "There's been activity flying in every direction everywhere you look."

"Just perhaps we may see some legislation that will enable the military to write the proper type of contracts."

Three Share $18 Million

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Three people will divide more than $18 million in winnings, the largest jackpot prize in American lottery history, officials said Saturday.

Three players chose all six numbers drawn in Friday's Pennsylvania Lotto game and will share a total prize of $18.16 million. Each will receive $6.05 million to be paid in 21 installments of $288,300, lottery officials said.

The jackpot was the largest amount of money ever offered in a lottery prize drawing in the United States, said Pennsylvania Lottery spokesman Michael Keyser.

The winning numbers — 18-31-7-20-39-28 — were drawn Friday evening, capping a day of excitement across the state. Hopeful throngs packed bars to watch the drawing of the numbers on TV.

The winners must wait until Tuesday morning to collect their prizes because of the Labor Day holiday, officials said.

"I advise the winners to sign the back of their winning ticket in ink, put the ticket in a very safe location and call lottery headquarters ... first thing Tuesday morning," said lottery executive director Lynn Nelson.

Officials said 939 people picked five of the six winning numbers and won $1,285 each. Another 46,664 players picked four of the winning numbers and won $38.50.

Although winners will not be confirmed until Tuesday, a Philadelphia man claimed only hours after the drawing that he picked all six numbers.

Robert Kinsella, 24, a part-time mailer at Philadelphia Newspapers Inc., which publishes The Philadelphia Daily News and The Inquirer, said he was an instant millionaire.

"This isn't like Christmas, it's like dreaming about Christmas," he said.

Kinsella said he sold his 10-speed bicycle for $30 last week and spent $4 on the Lotto.

"I was at home watching the drawing on television," said his wife, Barbara, 21, who is expecting the couple's second child. "I thought I wrote the numbers down wrong so I ran next door to my neighbor's house and checked the number.

"I was shaking and crying," she said. "I'm scared of that much money."

A record 10.9 million Lotto tickets were sold during the week. Friday sales peaked at a rate of 1.4 million plays per hour, Nelson said.

The jackpot had not been won in four previous drawings — held every Tuesday and Friday — so the huge prize drew hordes of eager players to sidewalk windows and other lottery sales outlets.

The previous largest lottery jackpot was $11.2 million, won by 13 players in New Jersey last week. In Pennsylvania, a retired steelworker won $8.8 million in the Lotto in July, a North American record payoff to a single individual.

Murder Charge Filed In Series Of Slayings

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — A murder warrant was issued Saturday for a Missouri man in the slaying of an elderly widow, the first arrest warrant in 17 killings that have terrorized Will County residents this summer, authorities said.

State's Attorney Edward Petka identified the man as Donald Richard Lego, 51, whom he said had lived in Chicago and the Joliet area. The warrant was based on "hard evidence" developed by Will County sheriff's police and the state Department of Criminal Investigation, Petka said. He declined to elaborate.

Authorities are "reluctant at this point" to consider Lego involved with any of the other killings in the last two months, Petka said.

Petka said authorities have been looking for Lego since Friday and are "hopeful" he is still in the area.

Authorities have not linked Lego to two vehicles seen at the home of 82-year-old Anna Johnson the day before her body was discovered Aug. 26, Petka said.

Petka said Lego has a criminal record, including a 1961 conviction on armed robbery charges in neighboring Cook County. Lego was given a 25- to 50-year sentence for that crime, Petka said.

Mrs. Johnson, who lived near Joliet, was slain less than a week after four women were found bound, gagged and murdered at a ceramics shop on a busy street about three miles away.

Other slayings since late June include a series of rural roadside ambushes on July 16 in northern Will County that left five people dead, including two auxiliary deputies.

Officer Who Shot Youth Haunted By Flashbacks

STANTON, Calif. (AP) — A policeman still haunted by "flashbacks" to the day he mistakenly killed a 5-year-old boy holding a toy gun has retired from the police force, his father says.

Anthony Sperl, 24, is undergoing psychiatric treatment for severe depression, said his father, Timothy.

"He's doing all right," the elder Sperl said Friday, disclosing that his son retired last month. "... He still gets flashbacks. It's something he's going to have to learn to live with."

Anthony Sperl entered an apartment March 3 to investigate a report that its occupants had not been seen in several days. Inside, he found a bedroom door tied shut from the outside.

After shouting he was a police officer, he kicked open the door and — in the bedroom illuminated only by a television set — fired one round at a shadowy figure holding what looked like a gun.

Sperl was suspended after the shooting and later was placed on administrative duty.

The former officer has suffered mental anguish over the shooting and has not been able to find work, spending much of his time lifting weights and helping a friend build a home, his father said.

"It's difficult, because all his training and schooling was geared to police work," he said. "He doesn't know what he's going to do."

Sperl has declined any comment on the shooting on the advice of his lawyer, Richard Kreisler, who also refuses to talk to reporters.

An Orange County grand jury considered charges against Sperl and the boy's mother, Patricia Ridge, who had left the boy alone while she worked, but decided against issuing any indictments.

A $19 million wrongful death suit filed against the city by Ms. Ridge is pending. Sperl is seeking worker's compensation payments, saying he cannot work because of psychological problems caused by the shooting.

Suit Is Filed In Film Spat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — MGM-UA Entertainment Co. has filed a $960 million antitrust lawsuit accusing a major European film distribution company of price fixing and attempted restraint of trade.

Named as defendants were Taurus-Film GmbH & Co., of Munich, West Germany; its chief executive, Leo Kirch; and its U.S. business agent, prominent Los Angeles entertainment lawyer Milton A. Rudin.

The suit, filed Friday in U.S. District Court, accuses the defendants of conspiring to restrain trade and fix prices in the distribution of U.S. feature films, cartoons and television programs to television stations in German-speaking areas of Europe.

Tar Heel Doctor Says Age Isn't Obstacle For Travelers In Space

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger's house doctor said from space Saturday that any healthy person can safely fly in the shuttle and age is no obstacle. And, he said, he has found important clues to the space sickness that has afflicted so many astronauts.

"It's a very transient thing and not the dreaded thing that people might talk about sometimes," said Dr. William Thornton of Faison, N.C., as the astronauts held a space-to-ground press conference, the first in 11 years.

The five crew members, clustered in Challenger's cabin, appeared on television during the session, relaxed and in obvious good spirits. The shuttle was humming along 138 miles above the globe.

"I learned more in the first hour and a half on orbit here than I had by all the literature research I had done and all of the active work in the past year," said Thornton, at 54 the oldest man ever to fly in space. "I hope I will be able to add something to the solution to the problem because I believe it is very solvable."

Asked if he had turned up any clues to what causes space sickness, he replied:

"I would say, yes."

Thornton also said he saw no medical problems that would stop "private citizens in reasonable health" from flying on the shuttle.

Commander Richard Truly agreed with that, saying: "I do think in the future we can safely and easily fly private citizens in space with the proper introduction and preparation."

And, he added, that the current flight "probably would have been a nice one to have a passenger, a citizen, with us."

The news conference was the highlight of Day 5 of the mission, which also included spacecraft system checks, science and technology experiments and a third day of testing the shuttle's robot arm.

Harold Draughon, a flight director, said the 24-minute news conference was made possible by use of the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite. The TDRS, being tested on this flight, promises better communication than was possible through the old system of transmissions through ground stations around the world.

Draughon said, however, the conference would also have been possible through ground stations.

He said the weather looks good for the landing Monday, but if a weather problem should develop, the shuttle would stay in orbit a day or two.

Asked if they were ready to come home Monday, or whether they'd like to stay up longer, the five voted one by one to stay. Mission specialist Dale Gardner qualified that with, "as long as the food holds out."

Mission specialist Guion Bluford, America's first black astronaut, said his presence on Challenger should help other blacks to make the same journey. "That dream can be fulfilled, and there should be many other opportunities for blacks to fly in space," he said.

Truly said the flight had been "extremely successful," as he and pilot Dan Brandenstein reported on the almost-flawless performance of the spaceship. They said the nighttime landing — at 12:40 a.m. Pacific time at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. — should be no more difficult than a daylight touchdown.

Most of the questions — posed by reporters from six news organizations over a 24-minute period at 4 a.m. EDT — focused on space sickness, which has affected in varying degrees nine of the 21 astronauts on earlier shuttle missions. NASA and the Air Force, which is planning several military shuttle flights, have been concerned the illness could affect a crewman's ability to perform critical tasks.

Thornton, who was added to Challenger's crew to study these symptoms, declined to be specific when asked if his crewmates had suffered space sickness.

"We have seen a variety, a range of symptoms of adaptation, and that's fortunately what I came to study," Thornton said. He said symptoms on previous flights have ranged from "upset stomach to a drowsiness, a malaise to a slight giddiness."

He added: "I have every confidence that as time goes on with the results of this flight and others that will follow that we will be able to ameliorate most of these unpleasant symptoms."

Replying to a question about age and space flight, he said: "Well, we certainly don't stop life just because we've got a few years. It depends upon the conditions of the individual and that sort of thing."

He said he feels "somewhere about 30 and I would think that most of, a large part of America, is in the same situation. We should not count physical condition by the number of years, but look at the physiological age and the capacities of the individual."

NASA is working out arrangements to fly journalists, educators, scientists and other private citizens on future shuttle flights, and Thornton said he sees no reason they can't fly as long as they are in reasonable health.

Thornton also turned philospher when asked: "What do you see when you see the Earth from up there?"

"Frankly," he replied, "I see a pretty humbling experience. When you stop and think that this may be the only spot that supports life in at least five light years, and maybe more. It is a very unique spot indeed, and I think one that deserves very careful assessment of our responsibilities to it."

Added Bluford: "For me, I see a beautiful world one that has supported us not only on the planet itself, but also is supporting us in space, and I hope our contributions will make that world even more beautiful."

Challenger Will Make First Night Landing

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — This desert airbase will turn on a dazzling array of lights to greet Challenger's first night landing Monday, but the Edwards runways won't be seeing much of the shuttle in the future as NASA begins landing the ship routinely back in Florida.

Challenger, which roared dramatically into the night skies over Cape Canaveral, Fla., last week, is to return here at 12:40 a.m. PDT, after six days in space.

A night launch was required to get the shuttle into the right place at the right time to deploy a combination communications-weather satellite for India. And a night landing is inescapable because Challenger, as it orbits the rotating Earth, won't be over the United States in the daytime, said Garry Layton, shuttle project manager at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Dryden Flight Research Facility here.

Although darkness complicates ground operations for the landing, Layton said in an interview, "We are very much looking forward to this as a demonstration of that capability ... Then we will be able to give our customers better service."

The landing on the runway stretching out from the dry lakebed won't really be in the darkness. An hour before the landing, NASA engineers will turn on six mighty spotlights, each throwing 800 million candlepower — about equal to 650,000 floodlights — to transform 15,000 feet of the runway into a ribbon of artificial daylight.

"The fundamental idea here is to make sure that the landing area itself is basically a daytime operation from the pilot's point of view," Layton said.

Six of the first seven shuttle flights have ended on Edwards' dry lakebed or the associated concrete runway. The only exception was the third landing, when bad California weather sent the shuttle eastward for a landing at White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

The seventh flight was to have landed at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, where NASA plans to have shuttles landing routinely. But, again, bad weather made that impossible, so the spaceship was diverted to its familiar California site.

Layton said the "general philosophy" is to land the shuttle on Edwards' huge and forgiving lakebed when something new is tried, such as the night landing.

The next mission this fall is also due back at Edwards. It will mark the return to space of Columbia, the first shuttle which had been taken out of service for a series of modifications, many of them to accommodate Spacelab, the European Space Agency's reusable scientific station. With Spacelab in Columbia's cargo bay, the shuttle will have to land with far more weight than ever before.

Layton said that according to current plans the flight after Spacelab is to land in Florida early next year. After that comes the first flight of a new shuttle, Discovery, and "we're doing our planning as if they (new ships) will be coming down here," he said.

The last member of the planned four-shuttle fleet, Atlantis, should make its maiden flight in 1985.

He said the shuttle will probably be setting down in the California desert occasionally for some time to come. "We expect them here for weather problems (in Florida) and for unique missions."

Pillory was the practice of constraining the head and arms of a person in wooden stocks and subjecting them to public ridicule. It was used for the last time in England in 1830 as the punishment in a perjury case.

Titus Tomescu, 17, of Chicago holds up a penny — all that remains of his paycheck after payroll deductions. Working part time as a grocery bagger, Tomescu's check had the usual deductions for taxes, Social Security and insurance, plus a deduction — the largest — for union dues and initiation. An identical paycheck from the previous week totaled $3.08 after deductions. Tomescu, a high school honor student, moved to Chicago with his parents from Romania last year to seek "a better life." Historians Surprised U.S. Escaped Without Coup

By CHRISTOPHER DALY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The treaty formally ending the Revolutionary War marked its 200th birthday Saturday, and historians are still impressed that America thrived without problems common to young revolutions: a military coup or a "reign of terror."

"The Treaty of Paris ended the shooting war, but any revolutionary government knows that once you've defeated the foreign enemy, your real problems begin," says historian Charles Wood of Duke University.

The treaty, signed for the United States by Benjamin Franklin and John Adams on Sept. 3, 1783, was a great victory over Britain for the young republic, but it faced pressing problems. The treasury was bankrupt, inflation was rampant, hostile powers menaced the borders, and borrowers and lenders feuded over economic policy.

Similar problems have plagued nearly all other revolutions, but the United States survived without a military takeover, a "reign of terror" or a brutal suppression of dissent.

Wood said it might well have turned out differently.

"We need to be more aware how close we came to military dictatorship and those kinds of disasters," the Colonial-era specialist said in a telephone interview.

"Since we're now mostly anti-revolutionary or counterrevolutionary ourselves, we think of revolution as being a time of turmoil and discontent and craziness in the streets, but people inside a revolution usually feel they're in an exciting and creative moment of debate," Wood said.

About 200 people attended a ceremony Saturday in Boston's Old North Church commemorating the signing of the treaty. Besides granting independence, it set the Mississippi River as the western boundary of the nation.

The 3 million people in the 13 new states were far from united.

There were serious strains between North and South, debtors and creditors, farmers and townspeople. A weak central government — shuttling between Philadelphia, Princeton, N.J., and Annapolis, Md. — tried to manage finance, foreign policy and Indian skirmishes under limited powers granted by the Articles of Confederation.

One early threat came from the Continental Army itself.

"There was a feeling among officers ... that they should seize control," Wood said, citing the formation of the Society of Cincinnatus, restricted to officers and their oldest sons.

"The membership was to be hereditary, so they seemed to be setting up a quasi-military and financial elite. The foot soldiers in the war had a very different idea of what they had been fighting for," Wood said. "There was a serious debate over whether the Society should even be allowed. It seemed to have the potential for being linked into the political process."

James Henretta, a Boston University historian, said one reason America remained a nation of freedom was because it was "a very decentralized society — unlike, say, France, where the king's palace was at Versailles and the whole bureaucracy was run from Paris. In America, what do you capture to take control? That was the problem the British Army faced in trying to suppress the rebellion."

Henretta also noted all the colonies "had well-established institutions of representative government. (George) Washington, Adams and the others had all served in the provincial assemblies, so they were on guard against any kind of dictatorship."

America had few professional soldiers in 1783, Henretta added, and most of Washington's men were eager to get out and collect their bonus pay and 100 acres of western land.

Toll Takers Strike At Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — With thousands of motorists expected to cross the Golden Gate Bridge over the Labor Day weekend, toll collectors walked off their jobs Saturday in a demand for a pay raise.

Administrators took over the toll booths as the strike began at 6 a.m., and morning traffic, normally light on weekends, was running "very smoothly," said bridge Sgt. Ra[illegible]nd McGill.

But Golden Gate Transit District officials urged motorists to stay away from the span linking San Francisco to Marin County unless absolutely necessary. Spokesman Bruce Selby predicted the combination of holiday traffic and inexperienced toll takers would create delays.

Members of the Transport Workers Union of America Local 250-A voted 22-19 Friday to walk off the job. Two earlier tallies ended in tie votes.

The district has offered a 2 percent pay raise in the first year of a two-year pact, and 3 percent in the second, said Dave Smith, chairman of the local's bridge section.

"We'd like 5 percent each year," he said.

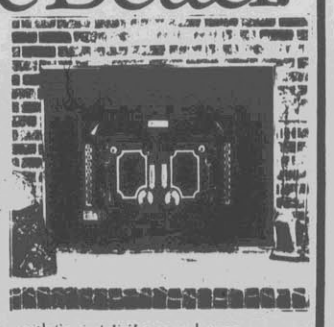

"The cost of living is so high in San Francisco. My rent goes up every year, and the phone rates are doubling. Two and 3 percent is just not enough," he said.

While the 46 toll takers are willing to returning to the bargaining table at any time, Smith said they would "stay out until we get what we want."

The toll collectors, whose contract expired July 1, earn up to $11.64 an hour, or $24,722 a year. The district's offer would raise that salary to $25,223 in the first year, and $25,974 the following year.

DERAILMENT — Overturned railroad cars of the B&O Railroad brust into flames near Murdock, Ill., after a derailment Friday night. The fire sent flames 1,000 feet into the air, keeping rescue workers back and raising fears that the town of 200 would be evacuated. (AP Laserphoto)

Age Of The 'Giants' Ends With Begin

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Begin era is over.

Six stormy years ended last week when Menachem Begin, his spirit dimmed by age, loneliness and exhaustion, finally seemed to have run out of fire.

His successor-designate Yitzhak Shamir is expected to continue on the strongly nationalistic course set by Begin. If the new leadership is different, it will be primarily a matter of style.

Israel will probably sound less pugnacious, less sensitive to every real or imagined slight. Shamir is a hawk, but a businesslike one who likes to think long and hard about his every move.

Begin's departure, reflected President Chaim Herzog, "brings to an end the generation of the founders. We are finished with the generation of giants. .. Today our people must struggle on without the leadership which that generation gave it when the state was born."

The question is whether Shamir wants to be a longterm premier and put his imprint on the country or whether he is a stopgap choice, operating in Begin's shadow until the country goes to elections and his party's two other heavyweights, Defense Minister Moshe Arens and Ezer Weizman, can get elected. Israel must hold elections in two years.

Both Arens and Weizman might have been contenders last week in the party voting for a Begin successor if they had been members of Parliament — a legal precondition for becoming prime minister.

But Shamir is no lightweight. As the operations officer of an extreme militant guerrilla underground in pre-independence days, then as a secret agent for his government and now with three years as foreign minister behind him, he has shown an ability to take big decisions and make them stick.

It took him only six hours from the time he was elected leader of his Herut Party until he summoned his potential coalition partners. A few more hours passed and he had their agreement in principle to endorse him. He said he hoped to be sworn in as premier this week.

Shamir, 68, was born in Poland, and his accession to power represents the continuity of rule by the Ashkenazi (European) immigrants who founded this country.

But Begin's resignation "opens an age of doubts and uncertainty," wrote Yeshayahu Ben-Porath, a political commentator, in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth. Comparing Shamir to Begin, Ben-Porath wrote "Shamir has no charisma. The idea of a mass leader and of speechmaking in the marketplace seem alien to his spirit."

Like his predecessors David Ben-Gurion and Golda Meir, Begin the leader was a true original. His character was forged by the anti-Semitism of his native Poland and hardened by the death of his family in the Nazi Holocaust. Then came 35 lean years as an outsider, first as commander of an extreme guerrilla underground army fighting for Israeli statehood against Britain, later as the perennial leader of the opposition and loser of seven elections.

His six-year term fundamentally changed Israel. His election in 1977 ended three decades of socialist, predominantly Ashkenazi, government and brought the Sephardis, or Middle Eastern and North African Jews, to prominence. The process was illustrated by the fact that Shamir's strongest rival to succeed Begin was Deputy Premier David Levy, a Moroccan-born Sephardi who started adult life as a poor construction laborer.

Begin's foreign policy was often strident and abrasive. He did not refrain at times from insulting the United States, Israel's main benefactor, although he said he always admired America as a great democracy and friend of Israel.

His hatred of Germany in particular and Europeans in general led to vituperative attacks on European leaders. Britain, which put a price on his head when he was fighting them in Palestine, was one of his pet targets.

Begin regarded his greatest achievement as the 100 Jewish settlements his government built in the occupied West Bank. Begin believes he has blocked any chance of a hostile Palestinian state arising in the West Bank of the Jordan River and that he has paved the way for the ultimate official annexation of the area to Israel.

Some of his admirers — and even critics — would argue that his greatest achievement was peace with Egypt.

Shamir Bids For Coalition

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir conferred with members of the ruling coalition Saturday night in a bid to keep the government partners united after Prime Minister Menachem Begin formally resigns.

Shamir was elected leader of Begin's Herut Party Thursday night. Herut is the senior party in the governing Likud bloc, and Shamir will become prime minister if the coalition forms the next government.

In talks Friday, Shamir quickly won endorsement of his leadership from the coalition's five other party leaders, but he faced demands from some partners that could split the coalition.

Shamir met Saturday with six coalition legislators who demanded he invite the opposition Labor Party into a government of national unity.

One of the six, former Energy Minister Yitzhak Berman, said on Israel Television that Shamir had agreed to the demand. He said Shamir could not expect the six legislators to vote for his government until he had convinced them he had given Labor the opportunity to accept the proposal.

The six, from the Liberal faction of the Likud and the Telem Party, are supported by Defense Minister Moshe Arens, according to Israel Radio. It said Arens was ready to concede his key ministry to the Labor Party if Labor agreed to join a unity government.

Derailed-Train Fire Burns Out Of Control

MURDOCK, Ill. (UPI) — A derailed freight train loaded with flammable materials burned out of control for a second day Saturday but officials said there was little danger of any more explosions.

The derailment Friday night touched off a fire and two explosions in the east-central Illinois coal mining village of 200. About 50 people fled, but they returned home early Saturday.

No injuries were reported.

Eight cars on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. train carrying propane gas, alcohol and sulfuric acid jumped the tracks in a sparsely populated area outside Murdock about 150 miles south of Chicago, police said.

A tank car carrying propane gas exploded with such force that "a major portion of the tank car landed a half mile away," a state police spokesman said.

The explosion of a flaming car containing isobutane sent up a fireball that could be seen from a highway 20 miles away, a witness said.

Only one or two cars continued to burn Saturday, State Police Sgt. Vernon Cook said. There was little chance the fire could spread, he said.

Police feared another major explosion might damage a 5,000-gallon ammonia tank near the scene of the accident, sending a toxic cloud over the town. But Cook said the danger of the ammonia tank being touched off had subsided.

"We don't feel the ammonia tank is any problem right now," Cook said. "The danger of explosion is greatly reduced."

Twins Meet For Convention

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Many dressed alike, most looked alike, some talked alike and a couple could even sing alike as members of the International Twins Association arrived for their annual convention.

"There'll be people from all over the world," said Jesse Blackman of Myrtle Beach, S.C., wearing the same pink suit and white deck shoes as her identical twin, Ellen Hargrave of Bennettsville.

Mrs. Blackman is a co-president of the group, which has a worldwide membership of more than 1,000. More than 150 sets of twins were expected at the convention, which runs through Monday.

The association, which celebrates its golden anniversary next year, was organized as a "non-profit, family-oriented organization to promote the spiritual, intellectual and social welfare of twins and multiples throughout the world."

"We have a cross-section of twins in all sizes and shapes," said Mrs. Blackman, a retired teacher. Attending are farmers, teachers, lawyers and businessmen, and even twin nuns and two twins both on their honeymoons.

Boyd Cornwell of Joplin, Mo., travels as an evangelist with his twin brother Blaine. They sing gospel songs to taped music.

"When we're up there together our expressions are so much alike it just freaks people out," Cornwell said. "Our voices are so much alike it sounds as though there's only one voice singing."

They grew up in Athens, Ohio, and both majored in physical education in college before going to Bible college and beginning their ministry.

Paul Stutz of Zurich, Switzerland is attending with his new wife, Lillian, while his twin brother Peter is honeymooning with his wife, Anita. None of the four speaks English.

"We're 68 years old and sometimes people who have known us all of our lives can't tell us apart," she said with a laugh.

Tobacco Prices Up Last Week

By The Associated Press

Grade prices and the quality of offerings were up in all three of North Carolina's tobacco markets this week, the Federal-State News Service reported Friday.

A record high weekly average was reported on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt.

In the Eastern Belt, both grade prices and quality of offerings continued to show improvement during the fifth week of auctions. The percentage of sales delivered to the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. dropped sharply. Volume of sales remained heavy.

Producers' sales opportunity during the week of Sept. 6-8 is 24,322,000 pounds, excluding 2,804,000 pounds in the Sandhills. No auctions will be held Monday in observance of Labor Day.

Gross sales for the week ending Sept. 1 totaled 30,662,003 pounds and averaged $188.59 per hundred — up $6.22 from the previous week.

Season sales were brought to 123,586,836 pounds returning $174.17 per hundred. At this time last year, season sales totaled 142,837,000 pounds and averaged $172.42.

Average prices increased again this week for virtually all grades. Gains ranged chiefly from $2 to $7 per hundred pounds, with the largest increases centering on unripe offerings. The practical top price remained $205, while selected sheets sold as high as $208. Most grades averaged from $4 to $16 above their respective support price.

In the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt, a fairly sharp increase in grade prices occurred during the fifth week of auctions. Quality of offerings improved also, while stabilization receipts decreased and volume of sales remained heavy.

Based on the latest crop estimate, 46.6 percent of type 13 tobacco has been sold. Producers' sales opportunity in the belt the week of Sept. 6-8 is 14,700,000 pounds. So far this season, a total of 23,713 pounds has been reported sold non-auction.

A record high weekly average of $188.45 was up $6.46 from last week's average and 5 cents above the previous record set during the fifth week of sales last season.

Prices increased for over three-fourths of the grades this week. The highest increases were centered on cutters and lugs — up $2 to $10 per hundred. Leaf made substantial gains of mainly $2 to $8, while primings and nondescript showed more losses than gains. The top average for the week was $211 for fine lemon cutters.

The Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp.received only 5.4 percent of gross sales for the week, and 19.0 percent this season compared to 27.8 percent during the same period last year.

On the Old and Middle Belt, conditions continued to improve. Grade prices and quality were better, and volume of sales was heavier, the news service said. Loan receipts remained at last week's level. Based on the latest crop estimate, 22 percent of the 1983 type 11 crop has now been sold. Producers' sales opportunity in the belt the week of Sept. 6-8 is 20,057,000 pounds.

Nearly all grade averages showed gains from last week. Heavy volume grades were up mostly $3 to $6 per hundred. The few losses were centered in the nondescript group. Practical top price was $205 per hundred with selected offerings selling up to $208.

NCAE Says Pay Rates Not Fair

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Out-of-state teachers hired by North Carolina school systems are being put higher on the salary schedule than in-state teachers with comparable experience, the state's largest teachers group claims.

"In some cases the out-of-state teacher is receiving up to $2,000 more than a North Carolina teacher with exactly the same certificate rating and the exact same number of years of experience," said Frances Cummings, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, in a statement received Friday.

The problem stems from the General Assembly's two-year freeze on advancements in the salary schedule it instituted in 1981. Teachers got no pay raise at all for the 1982-83 school year and about a 5 percent across-the-board pay raise this school term.

Ms. Cummings said the freeze means a teacher with seven years of experience in 1980-81 began on the schedule at Step 3 and has been frozen since then at Step 4, even though that teacher now has 10 years of state service.

But teachers with 10 years' experience who are entering the state are being put on Step 6 — the correct move considering their teaching background, but nonetheless two steps ahead of a North Carolinian whose advancement has been stymied.

Duke Project Will Eliminate Animals' Use In Some Tests

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Scientists next spring will be able to avoid needless killing of laboratory animals by simulating some experiments at a Duke University Medical Center computer facility, Duke officials announced Saturday.

University spokesmen said the National Institutes of Health have given Duke $2.4 million for a four-year program to set up the computer facility, the first of its kind.

"We are confident the system will eliminate a lot of unnecessary experiments and will help us use laboratory animals more efficiently and wisely," said Dr. Mailen Kootsey, the project director. He said it should be available to scientists by next spring.

The system's core will be two computers originally designed to simulate aircraft, spacecraft and weapons systems. Medical scientists will use the computers to test out hunches involving the complex relationships in animals' bodies, such as the ways drugs interact with membranes and electrical activity affects the heart.

"You have to have animal data as a basis for biomedical simulation," Kootsey said. "But once the computer models are operations, you can try experiments on the computer first and eliminate many animal experiments that wouldn't be valuable."

The computer resource will be connected to a national data network, allowing scientists to hook up with it from anywhere in the country by dialing a local telephone number. Scientists will have to apply for time on the computers, but Kootsey said most reasonable biomedical projects will be approved — and the service is free.

"The system is designed to be a communications hub for scientists doing simulations," Kootsey said.

"Sharing of computer programs and data will also be encouraged, eliminating duplication of effort. We'll also be holding classes to introduce the facility to experienced simulators and those who haven't used simulation before."

Two Ultralight Planes Crash

By UPI

A Virginia man was killed and another man was missing at sea in two accidents involving ultralight aircraft, the fragile gas-powered machines crafted out of aluminum tubing and sail cloth.

One of the victims was identified as Jeffrey Mawyer, 22, of Charlottesville, who died Friday night in a crash in Albemarle County, Va.

The other, who radioed a Norfolk resident on a citizens band radio that he was scared, lost, and going down over water, has not been identified. Coast Guard searchers called off their hunt Friday night.

The crash near Charlottesville occurred about 7:30 p.m. in a field in Albemarle County off of state route 795, Albemarle County sheriff's deputies said.

A spokesman said Mawyer was killed instantly when his ultralight crashed near Monticello Mountain about 7:30 p.m. Two witnesses near the crash were reported as saying Mawyer's craft lost power.

They said the tail of his ultralight struck a tall tree, causing the plane to nose-dive into the field.

Mawyer was pronounced dead at the scene.

The search for the other man, believed to have taken off from Nags Head, N.C., or Kill Devil Hill, N.C., was called off after no traces of him or his plane turned up.

Coast Guard aircraft and surface ships searched through rain and squalls unsuccessfully after a Tidewater resident, Mae Brandenberg, picked up his distress call on a citizens band radio.

She said the pilot told her he was in an ultralight with a four-cylinder engine and about four gallons of gas.

"He was lost," she recalled. "So the first thing I did was call the (Norfolk International) airport tower... then I called the Coast Guard. He was scared. He said he couldn't see the shoreline. He said he was completely surrounded by water."

Hunt Leaves Hospital

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt was released from Wake County Medical Center Friday night and will finish recovering from gall bladder removal at the Governor's Mansion, press secretary Gary Pearce said Saturday.

"He feels good. He's making good progress, but he is still sore from the surgery," Pearce said, adding that he did not know the governor had been released until early Saturday afternoon.

"I didn't think he was going to get out last night," he said. "I didn't check myself until today."

Pearce said Hunt's doctors recommended three weeks of recovery and that the governor would not hold any press conferences or public speeches until further notice.

"We had pretty much anticipated he would be out for the surgery about this time, so we kept his schedule clear," he said. "I expect it's going to be hard to keep him from resuming at least some of his schedule before those three weeks are up."

Suit Filed In Explosion

RALEIGH — An Alamance County man who suffered a broken hip in a Greenville apartment explosion that killed one student and injured several others has filed suit in Wake Superior Court.

Scott Cumby of Burlington is seeking $500,000 in compensatory damages and $250,000 in punitive damages for injuries suffered in the March 2 blast at Village Green apartments.

Manslaughter Charge Filed

ROARING RIVER — A Roaring River swimming pool operator has been charged with voluntary manslaughter in connection with the shooting death of a North Wilkesboro man.

Larry Church, 33, was charged in the death of Randy E. Welborn, 32. Church told deputies he was investigating a noise at the closed pool when a .22-calibre pistol he was carrying accidentally discharged.

Welborn was found dead with a gunshot wound in the chest. Authorities said items from the pool's concession stand were found scattered around Welborn's body.

Show Facility Dedication Set

RALEIGH — Dedication ceremonies for the new Western North Carolina Agricultural Center Show Facility will be held Friday in Asheville, state agriculture officials said.

The new facilities include an indoor arena with seating for 3,000 people. There will be permanent stalls for 400 horses, plus temporary stalls for 80 horses and an outdoor ring for small shows.

State Gains In Food

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina received nearly $24 million more in government-issued food last year than state farmers and processors sold to the government, the state Department of Agriculture says.

State farmers and food processors sold $10,254,653 worth of food to the government for food distribution programs, but the government provided $34,664,591 worth of food to eligible recipients in the state.

The state supplied canned sweet potatoes, canned apple juice, frozen chicken and turkeys, flour, peanuts and soybean oil.

Former Technicians Charged

RALEIGH — Two former health care technicians at Dorthea Dix Hospital have been charged with assaulting a handicapped patient at the state mental hospital, police said.

Leon Artis, 26, and Thurl Lee Marsh, 33, both of Raleigh, were fired in May from their positions overseeing violent and unmanagable patients in the Kirby Building. Criminal charges filed by the unidentified patient against the men were dismissed due to lack of evidence.

Artis is accused of hitting the patient in the face and body, while Marsh is accused of kicking the patient in the chest. The allegations of patient abuse led to a State Bureau of Investigation probe at the request of Dix officials.

Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said no other charges would be filed in the Dix investigation until the two cases are heard.

Murder Charge Filed

WINSTON-SALEM — A Winston-Salem man was charged Friday with murder in the shooting death of Rufus Anderson, police said.

Winfred Sylvester Pope, 21, was being held without bond at Forsyth County Jail. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Sept. 21 in Forsyth District Court.

Booze Goes Down Drain

DANBURY — Stokes County sheriff's deputies poured 85 gallons of moonshine down a storm drain after Sheriff Tony Blalock decided the confiscated liquor was no longer needed as evidence.

The illegal liquor was taken from Elmer Otto Williams Jr. and David Kelton Philpott, both of Henry, Va., on Aug. 10. Both men pleaded guilty to charges of transporting and possessing non-taxpaid liquor for sale.

Helms To Hold Hearing

RALEIGH — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will hold another hearing on drug smuggling and other related drug problems in Raleigh Sept. 9.

Helms has held previous hearings in Elizabeth City, Wilmington and Miami, Fla., in his role as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs.

Scheduled to testify in Raleigh are Dr. C. Everett Koop, surgeon general of the United States; Haywood Starling, director of the State Bureau of Investigation; Cuyler Windham, associate director of the SBI, and spokesmen for several anti-drug groups.

Aliens Being Deported

YADKINVILLE — The government is sending 41 illegal aliens from Yadkin and Forsyth counties back to Mexico.

Gary M. Knight, an investigator with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Charlotte, said he began making arrests Sunday at farms and migrant camps in the two counties. The migrants are being bused to Del Rio, Texas, and will be sent across a bridge to Acuna, Mexico.

Players See War-Like Contest As 'Game'

By The Associated Press

From their camouflaged clothing and pistols, you might guess the 12-man assault squad crawling in the North Carolina woods is on a military exercise. But to the paint-spattered participants, it's all a game.

"You get to be a kid again," said Tony Parrott, a Granville County deputy sheriff playing The Survival Game in a wooded area near Durham. "Everybody used to play this when they were children, and it's a good way of taking out frustrations."

The game pits two 12-man teams armed with paint pellet-shooting pistols against each other with the goal of capturing the opposing team's flag. Players struck by a pellet must leave the game, announcing, "I'm out" to keep others from betraying their positions with a needless shot.

On a typical day, teams will play three hour-long games. If a flag has not been captured at the end of the hour, the team with the most survivors is declared the winner.

The game has been criticized by the National Coalition on Television Violence as "another escalation of entertainment violence and a significant threat to democracy and peace." Other critics believe it is a tool used by the Ku Klux Klan and other survivalist groups to prepare for the Apocalypse.

But participants at a recent game — including technicians, a cook, an engineer and a female X-ray technician — said they played for the simple childish pleasure and adrenalin rush they got from sneaking around in the woods.

"I'm a kid at heart and I watch the movies on TV — John Wayne, Clint Eastwood, those types, you know?" said a Winston-Salem paramedic. "My job is rewarding and some people may think we're heroes, I guess. But this is my chance to be John Wayne; my chance, just me, to be a hero."

"You see real quick how unrealistic things are on TV," said David Flaugher of Raleigh, a design engineer. "Out here, you can't see anything. You're getting shot and you don't know from who or from where. It's nerve-racking sitting out there in the woods just waiting."

Dave Smith, a Raleigh flooring contractor who negotiated with a New Hampsire company for rights to the copyrighted game, said it is played in nearly all 50 states as well as in Canada, Australia, Africa, the Middle East and Europe.

"This kind of thing should be real popular with fraternities," he said. "I'd like to get it to the point where groups play as teams, maybe even form leagues."

Smith said he tries to screen players over the telephone to eliminate survivalist types who may take the game too seriously.

"We're trying to get away from that survivalist thing," he said. "The title of the game is probably a poor choice of words. We try to stay away from anything paramilitary or macho. There's no physical contact out here."

Smith paid $5,000 for the rights to the game, and charges each player $20 for equipment rental and game supervision that includes umpires who roam the woods in orange shirts.

Although the carbon-dioxide powered guns tend to jam and participants end the day dirty, sweaty and tired, most say the experience is worth the money.

"It's good just to get out in the woods, run around, sweat, get a little dirty," said Lap Hamblen, a commercial manager at First Citizens Bank in Durham.

"It's a good release," said Mike Clark, a Northern Telecom worker. "You can go out here and really get tired out. It goes back to cowboys and Indians, I guess."

Musicians Reject Proposal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Symphony musicians voted Saturday not to accept a contract proposal offered by management, leaving the upcoming season in question.

Musicians' spokeswoman Patricia W. Banko said no further negotiations would be scheduled until management proposes substantive changes. However, she said musicians were not on strike, adding that management had simply locked them out of rehearsals and performances.

"We feel that they have deliberately stalled negotiations," she said. "We really feel what is happening is by design, and that this has been their plan all along to string us along to the very end so we would be under such pressure that we'd sign anything."

Symphony Director Thomas H. McGuire announced Friday that the new proposal represented "some major efforts on our part to address many of their concerns." But Ms. Banko said she saw little change.

The latest proposal included a 4 percent raise and would continue to cover musicians' health and insurance benefits through negotiations, Ms. Banko said. Management had proposed to let benefits expire until a new three-year contract was reached.

Ms. Banko said the minimum salary is $450 a week for the 36-week season, while principal players receive $490 a week.

A health insurance package proposal would raise the deductible from $100 to $200 and split the cost of coverage for dependents, she said. Under the old contract, management paid all costs for dependents.

Ms. Banko said the musicians had proposed a 10 percent raise for the purpose of negotiations while management proposed a salary freeze. She added that the latest proposal failed to meet the musicians' major concerns over travel and work schedules, a commitment to growth in the orchestra, adequate provisions to prohibit job layoffs during the season and continuation of a dismissal review committee.

Seminoles Hold Off Pirates, 47-46

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

TALLAHASSEE, FLA — It was a long night filled with excitement for the East Carolina University Pirates, but in the end Florida State's potent passing attack led by senior quarterback Kelly Lowrey came away with a slim 47-46 victory at Doak Campbell Stadium.

Lowery connected on 28 of 35 passes for 322 yards, while Greg Allen carried the ball 33 times for 154 yards on the ground. Cedric Jones carried 17 times for 93 yards.

Pirate quarterback Kevin Ingram made his mark in the game, completing eight of 14 passes for 138 yards and running 13 times for 124 yards.

"But we are for real," said ECU head coach Ed Emory after the two teams set a new school record for combined single-game point total. "Don't question Florida State. We're good; this game will make them better and I hope we get better."

But Emory thought outside factors also played a role in the final outcome.

"(FSU Coach Bobby Bowden's) team fought its heart out and ours did, too" Emory said. "And then to have three officials decide the outcome of the game....

"There was at least seven calls made that were unbelievable."

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden was relieved to get the Seminoles' 1983 opener out of the way.

"I didn't feel like our defense was as bad as the score indicated," he said. "Just think, they had a punt return and a kickoff return for TDs. If it weren't for those, they would only have scored 39 points.

"I was impressed with their execution. Their kicking game was better than ours."

After ECU went to halftime with 30-27, the Pirates wasted no time adding to the first half score, as Williams raced 99 yards with the the opening kickoff with just 14 seconds elapsed. Heath's boot put ECU ahead, 37-27.

Florida State returned the kickoff to the 39, and Lowery crafted an 11-play drive topped with an eight-yard TD strike to Hassan Jones. The kick cut the ECU advantage to 37-34 with 11:05 left in the quarter.

The Pirates retaliated with Ingram passing to Walden for 36 yards before Heath split the up-rights from 21 yards for a 40-34 ECU edge at the 8:22 mark.

But Florida State, with Lowery mastering the passing game, moved 82 yards to take the lead on a one-yard run by Allen and the extra point. Lowrey connected on three passes for 39 yards in the drive, while Cedric Jones ran for 41 yards on four carries.

On first down, Allen gained two yards before fumbling. Jeff Pegues recovered for the Pirates at the FSU 34.

Ingram ran for eight yards and Walden gained four to set up first down at the 12. Byner picked up one and Ingram gained 10 before Byner raced in from one yard out to put ECU out front again. The pass attempt for the extra point failed, but the Pirates held a 46-41 lead with 12:02 on the clock.

Again Lowery took to the air when the Seminoles returned the kic off to their 28. He needed just six plays to move FSU 55 yards to the Pirates' 27 yard line with passes of seven, 13 and six yards to Wheeler and a nine yard strike to Wheeler.

A six-yard pass to Wheeler was followed by a six-yard run by Jones to the 15. A three-yard run by Allen and a six-yard blast by Snipes moved the ball to the six, but the Pirates' defense tighten on fourth down and forced the turnover.

On third down, Ingram's pass was tipped and intercepted by Eric Riley at the ECU 21-yard line.

Allen moved the ball 11 yards in three carries before Lowrey threw to Wheeler for the eventual winning touchdown. The pass attempt was incomplete on the extra point.

The Pirates had one more chance as they took over on their 23. Ingram gained nine on first down, but Walden was dropped for a loss of two yards on the next play.

Jones picked up a first down for FSU on a 21-yard break, and the Seminoles added two more to ice the game.

• •

ECU won the coin toss at the start of the game, and the Pirates elected to save their option after the coin toss and Hal Stephens recovered a Cedric Jones fumble eight plays later at the ECU 39.

Ingram completed a pass for nine yards to Ricky Nichols on the Pirates first offensive play of 1983. Earnest Byner bolted through the middle for a first down on the next play and added another first down with a four-yard run after Baker gained seven.

Ingram lofted a pass for Nichols in the end zone on first down, but Seminole cornerback Eric Riley batted the ball away. Ingram gained three on a keeper before throwing an incomplete pass to set up Heath's 51 yard effort. Heath split the up-rights for a 3-0 ECU advantage — the first time the Pirates have led the Seminoles in the three-game series.

Lowery connected with Weegie Thompson for first down strikes of 14 and 12 yards before a 16-yard pass to Tony Johnson moved the Seminoles to within scoring distance. Allen went over from three yards out for a 7-3 advantage.

The Pirates were caught for illegal participation on the touchdown run, and the 15-yard penalty was assessed on the kickoff. Kicker Barry Barco squibbed an on-side kick and Brian McCrary recovered for Florida State at the ECU 35.

Lowery connected again with Thompson, this time for a 23-yard strike on third down to the Pirates' 14. Allen carried twice for five and four yards before Lowery hit tight end Tom Wheeler for a five-yard touchdown with 4:34 left in the first quarter.

The snap on the extra point got away from Eric Thomas and the Seminoles held a 13-3 edge.

A 12-yard run by Jimmy Walden to the FSU 35 set up a scoring strike from Ingram to Norwood Vann with 2:32 till the end of the period. The Seminoles were caught for a personal foul on the TD pass, and Heath's extra point trimmed the margin to 13-10.

The Pirate coaches called for the patented "Bamm-Bamm" play on the kickoff. After rolling the ball 10 yards, Heath recovered the ball at the FSU 34 when the Seminoles were blown off the line.

Ingram passed to Nichols for 13 yards on the opening play of the drive, then ran the ball the final 13 yards into the end zone two plays later for and Heath added the kick for a 17-13 ECU advantage.

Lowery combined with Hassan Jones for first down tosses of 17 and 18 yards before completing a 21-yard strike to Thompson to the Pirates' 19. Allen ran for 11 yards to the ECU eight, then lost two. Allen then ran 10 yards to put the Seminoles out front 20-17 with a Hall kick.

Ingram completed a second-down pass to Williams for 24 yards, to the FSU 44-yard line, then ran for 12 more. A pass

Virginia Wins Battle Of QB's

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Wayne Schuchts outdueled Duke's Ben Bennett and senior flanker Quentin Walker scored three times, twice on long bombs from Schuchts, as Virginia's Cavaliers rolled to a season-opening Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over the Blue Devils.

Schuchts completed 10 of 21 passes for 275 yards and three touchdowns and Bennett, the all-time leading passer in the ACC, was 25 of 40 for 253 yards and also threw three scoring strikes.

The two teams treated a crowd of 28,947 in the first night game ever under newly installed permanent lights at Scott Stadium to a dazzling offensive show as they combined for 1,033 yards in total offense. Virginia had 542 yards and Duke had 491.

Virginia's 38 points was the most the Cavaliers had scored in a season opener since a 71-0 thrashing of Hampden-Sydney in 1946 and the most points the Cavaliers had tallied against an ACC foe since a 44-40 triumph over North Carolina in 1973.

The two teams combined for nearly 600 yards in total offense in the first half, each putting putting three touchdowns on the board for a 21-21 tie.

Walker was on the receiving end of pass plays of 65 and 80 yards from Schuchts and also had a 58-yard run on a reverse.

Virginia drew first blood, Walker getting behind two Duke defenders and hauling in a 65-yard bomb on the first play of the Cavaliers' second possession. Just 1$^{1}_{2}$ minutes later, Duke evened it, Bennett teaming up with flanker Gary Frederick for a 47-yard touchdown.

It didn't take Virginia long to snap the 7-7 deadlock. On the first play of the second quarter, Walker took the ball from tailback Howard Petty on a reverse and streaked 58 yards down the left sideline.

Duke pulled even again when Julius Gratham broke free for an 18-yard touchdown run one play after teammate Mike Grayson ran 37 yards.

An 18-yard pass from Schuchts to Bill Smith capped a 12-play, 67-yard Virginia drive and put the Cavaliers on top again, but with 27 seconds left in the half, Bennett and Gratham teamed up on a 4-yard scoring pass.

Virginia took the lead for good on its second possession in the third quarter, driving deep enough for Kenny Stadlin to boot a 37-yard field goal, the first of his career.

After Duke's Ken Harper missed a 36-yard field goal try, Schuchts hit a streaking Walker on the right sideline and the Cavalier senior, after avoiding a diving tackle attempt by Mark Moseley, waltzed into the end zone at the end of an 80-yard scoring play with 12 seconds left in the third quarter.

Harper cut Duke's deficit to seven with a 19-yard field goal with 11:42 to play, but Virginia came back to put the game out of reach by driving 80 yards in 11 plays for its fifth touchdown, Schuchts sneaking over from a yard out with 6:53 to play.

Bennett tossed his third touchdown pass of the night, hitting Frederick from 26 yards out with 4:27 left.

Heels Rip Gamecocks

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Eleventh-ranked North Carolina breezed to a 24-8 victory over South Carolina here Saturday night, led by the precision passing of Tar Heel quarterback Scott Stankavage.

Stankavage, who hit seven passes in seven attempts in the first half, put his team on the scoreboard with a 32-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Mark Smith on the Tar Heel's second possession. North Carolina led 7-0 after the first quarter.

The South Carolina offense sputtered and North Carolina went roaring ahead in the second quarter behind the running of tailback Ethan Horton and fullback Eddie Colson.

The Tar Heels had to settle for a 24-yard field goal, but the Gamecocks roughed place-kicker Brooks Barwick and North Carolina had a first down at the South Carolina 4-yard line.

Tailback Tyrone Anthony burst over on the very next play to give North Carolina a 14-0 lead with 9:41 left in the half.

In the third quarter, Stankavage continued his mastery of the Gamecock secondary, hitting wide receiver Earl Winfield for 18 yards and receiver Larry Griffin for 20 more. Stankavage plunged over from the 1-yard line to make it 21-0 after three quarters.

North Carolina added a 22-yard field goal with 11 minutes left on the clock.

South Carolina finally broke on the scoreboard with under five minutes to go in the game when quarterback Bill Bradshaw hit tailback Thomas Dendy with a 10-yard scoring pass. Bradshaw then threw to running back Quinton Lewis for the 2-point conversion.

But many of the 74,200 fans at a sold-out Williams-Brice Stadium were already headed for the exits.

But the powerful North Carolina defense, combined with an uneven performance by junior Gamecock quarterback Bradshaw, kept South Carolina in its own back yard much of the night.

Bradshaw hit 10 of 16 passes for 86 yards and a touchdown, but was sacked twice and threw for two interceptions that killed Gamecock drives. Bradshaw also had trouble running the offense and at one point had two straight option pitches bouncing on the turf, the second recovered by North Carolina.

The Tar Heels, meanwhile, presented a balanced attack led by Stankavage's 12-14 passing performance with 145 yards and one touchdown.

Tar Heel running back Ethan Horton led all rushers with 114 yards on 29 carries.

Gamecock running back Thomas Dendy exploded for several long runs in the fourth quarter and ended with 77 yards on 11 rushes.

The best individual Gamecock performance of the night may have been by punter Chris Norman, who booted the ball six times for a 45-yard average.

Eagles Nip 49ers, 22-17

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Backup quarterback Joe Pisarcik directed a second-half Philadelphia comeback and the Eagles escaped with a 22-17 victory over San Francisco after a 49ers' touchdown pass was nullified by a penalty in the closing seconds of Saturday's National Football League season opener.

Guy Benjamin, the 49ers' second-string quarterback, hit Dwight Clark in the end zone with 11 seconds remaining. But guard Randy Cross was called for holding.

Picarcik, who threw only one pass last season, took over Saturday after starting quarterback Ron Jaworski was shaken up in the second period.

Pisarcik completed a 33-yard pass to Mike Quick, setting up a 30-yard field goal by Tony Franklin that put the Eagles ahead 12-10 midway through the third period. Later in the quarter, he threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Oliver.

Joe Montana, the 49ers' starting quarterback, left the game twice after hard hits. Benjamin hit tight end Earl Cooper on a 73-yard touchdown pass play with 4:15 remaining in the game as the 49ers' cut Philadelphia's lead to 22-17.

Others suffering minor injuries in the game included Philadelphia rookie running back Michael Haddix, who scored on a 1-yard touchdown run to start the Eagles' 16-point third period.

Franklin also kicked field goals of 32 and 47 yards for the Eagles. The 49ers' got a 32-yard touchdown run by Tyler and a 23-yard field by Ray Wersching.

The teams, both 3-6 last season, played the opener before a crowd of 55,775. Candlestick Park was sold out, but there were 5,273 no-shows.

Appalachian State Stuns Wake, 27-25

AP Sports Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Senior linebacker Joel Carter returned two pass interceptions for touchdowns and Billy Van Aman kicked two field goals as Appalachian State pulled off a 27-25 college football upset of Wake Forest Saturday night.

The Mountaineers had claimed a 10-7 halftime lead on Van Aman's 54-yard field goal when Carter picked off Gary Schofield's first pass of the third quarter and went 30 yards for the score. Van Aman's conversion gave Appalachian State a 17-7 advantage with 12:25 left. Behind Schofield's passing and the running of Michael Ramseur, the Demon Deacons marched 80 yards in 11 plays and scored on Schofield's one-yard pass to Dan Dougherty with 8:27 left in the period. Harry Newsome's conversion cut the Mountaineer lead to 17-14.

After Van Aman's 29-yard field goal at the 1:12 mark broke the tie, Ramseur fumbled at his own 29 and James Howard recovered at the 33. Six plays later, Cliff Reid scored on a 12-yard run with 12:56 left to play, and Van Aman's conversion completed Appalachian State's scoring.

Schofield connected with freshman wide receiver James Brim on a 39-yard scoring pass with 1:14 left, then got a 2-point conversion on a pass to Dougherty.

Wake Forest attempted an onside kick, but the Mountaineers fell on it and ran out the clock for their second victory in the six-game series.

Schofield's third-quarter, 25-yard pass to Duane Owens made him the career passing yardage leader at Wake Forest, surpassing Jay Venuto's 5,056 yards. Schofield finished with 24 completions in 38 attempts for 288 yards.

Wake Forest went 17 yards in nine plays following the opening kickoff and scored when Owens took an inside handoff from Schofield and ran 25 yards around left end for his first career touchdown. Newsome's extra point gave the Demon Deacons a 7-0 lead with 11:18 left.

Appalachian State took the ensuing kickoff and marched to the Wake Forest 4, where they got a 22-yard field goal from Van Aman. But the Demon Deacons were detected offside and the Mountaineers went for the first down, only to fall short on Joyce's sneak.

Midway through the second quarter, Wake Forest's second-team offense took over and surrendered the lead. Quarterback Foy White's pass was picked off by linebacker Carter, who ran 48 yards untouched. Van Aman's conversion tied the score at the 8:52 mark.

Tigers Claw Western, 44-10

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — There were a lot of heroes Saturday on the Clemson football team, 44-10 victors over Western Carolina.

Quarterback Mike Eppley threw three touchdown passes and ran for another, while alternate quarterback Anthony Parete logged a 3-yard scoring run.

But Ford talked only of tailbacks Terrence Flagler, Stacey Driver and Kenny Flowers. Flagler carried the ball 22 times for 139 yards, while Driver added 48 yards on nine attempts. Flowers got the ball five times and finished with 30 yards.

"We had a lot of heroes and injury-wise we came out of the game in pretty good shape," Ford said. "I thought Flagler, Driver and Flowers ran extremely well.

"We ought to be ought to be real proud of our football team today. It played well early in the game by executing well. We had probably the least number of turnovers today that we've had this early in the season," Ford said.

"Offensively, we were rotten, absolutely rotten," Waters said.

"Our defense stayed on the field and they gave out. Then we tried to play without emotion. It is beyond me how we could play without emotion in front of 70,000-odd people," he said.

An experienced Gators offensive line provided excellent protection all night, though, and Peace completed 18 of 32 passes for 146 yards.

His 6-yard touchdown flip to Henderson gave Florida a 7-0 lead just 2:30 into the game and came three plays after Miami's Speedy Neal lost a fumble at the Hurricanes' 13-yard line.

Florida couldn't build on the 13-point advantage in the second quarter, but the Gators turned two Miami fumbles into field goals and Neal Anderson ran the final 8 yards of a 50-yard drive for a 25-0 advantage after three periods.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — N.C. Central quarterback Gerald Fraylon completed a fourth down pass in the final minutes of the fourth quarter to give the Eagles to a 21-17 victory over Livingstone.

Fraylon completed the one-yard pass to Robert Greene as N.C. Central trailed 17-14 with three minutes left in the game. Central tried to drive through the line three times for the score and resorted to the pass on fourth down.

The drive was set up by a 56-yard pass to the Livingstone one-yard-line. The drive took 2:18 and was completed in four plays.

Seminoles-

to Damon Pope to the 23 and a 15-yard run by Baker moved the ball to the FSU three.

Ingram dropped back and threw to Vann in the end zone, but the pass was ruled incomplete. Walden scampered over on third down to put the Pirates ahead 23-20 with 7:17 till intermission. Heath's kick was blocked marking his first miss in 29 attempts as a Pirate.

After an offensive pass interference call against the Seminoles set up fourth and 34 at the FSU 11, Louis Berry punted to Henry Williams. The speedy junior fielded the ball at the ECU 44 and raced to the end zone. Heath's kick gave the Pirates a 30-20 edge with 5:11 on the clock.

After first-down passes of 14 and 16 yards from Lowery to Hassan Jones, the Pirates were called for pass interference at their own five.

Cedric Jones carried the ball into the end zone on first down at the 1:30 mark. Hall's cut the margin to 30-27, and the Pirates held the ball to run out the first half.

Byner, Ingram and Baker each rushed for 35 yards each in the first half, while Ingram passed for 96 yards connecting on six of 10 passes.

The Seminoles held the statistical edge, as Allen ran for 86 yards and Lowery connected on 14 of 17 passes for 187 yards.

Florida.....28

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Wayne Peace completed his first eight passes, including touchdown flips of 6 and 2 yards to fullback Joe Henderson, as Florida rolled to a 38-3 season-opening college football rout of intrastate rival Miami Saturday night.

Peace, who completed an NCAA record 70.73 percent of his passes a year ago, used high percentage tosses to capitalize on an early Miami turnover and to pick Miami's defense apart on a 71-yard touchdown drive later in the first quarter.

The victory, before a record Florida Field crowd of 73,907, was the Southeastern Conference school's second in a row in a bitterly fought series the Gators lead 24-21. Miami had won four straight before Florida captured the 1982 contest 17-14.

One of Florida's big question marks heading into the game was Peace's health. The senior from Lakeland underwent surgery for a herniated disc in July and avoided contact in preseason workouts.

Pittsburgh.....13
Tennessee.....3

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dwight Collins ran a John Cummings pass 56 yards for a touchdown and Eric Shubert kicked two field goals Saturday night as Pittsburgh overpowered Tennessee 13-3 in a season-opening college football game.

The touchdown came with 7:58 remaining in the third quarter as a near-record crowd of 95,824 looked on. Shubert kicked the extra point.

The play was made on Pitt's first earned first down after a strong Tennesseee defense let the Panthers move only 27 yards before halftime.

Tennessee's only score was a 49-yard field goal by Fuad Reveiz in the second quarter. The power kicker missed a 51-yard attempt and lost a 57-yard attempt when the ball hit the crossbar.

Mississippi St.....14
Tulane.....9

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback John Bond hit Danny Knight with two big passes that set up first half touchdowns and carried the Mississippi State Bulldogs to a 14-9 victory over Tulane in their football opener Saturday.

Bond found Knight on a 37-yard pass on the Bulldogs' first play to set up Lamar Windham's 7-yard scoring run. Then, he passed 34 yards to Knight to pave the way for Henry Koontz' 11-yard touchdown burst.

The Mississippi State victory spoiled the Tulane coaching debut of Wally English, whose son, quarterback Jon English, played under a Louisiana state court order and passed for Tulane's only touchdown late in the fourth quarter.

English, playing in a backup role, moved to Green Wave 55 yards to the Bulldog 39 in the fading moments but cornerback Cookie Jackson killed the threat with an interception. Jackson fumbled after the play, but defensive end Carsno Mitchell rescued the ball for the Bulldogs at the 15 with time running out.

The Louisiana court is allowing English to play football pending a Sept. 12 hearing on the NCAA's contention that as a transfer student he must sit out a year before becoming eligible at Tulane. He earlier attended two colleges and two junior colleges.

The big plays by Bond and English were among the few bright spots for either offense but the Bulldogs also benefitted from a pressing defense that featured four quarterback sacks — two by linebacker Billy Jackson for 39 yards in losses.

Bond, with 98 yards on 8 of 15 passes and 14 yards rushing, pushed his career total offense production to 5,095 yards and became the first 5,000-yard performer for Mississippi State.

Air Force.....34
Colorado St.....13

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Halfback Mike Brown and fullback John Kershner ran for 131 and 130 yards, respectively, and each scored two touchdowns Saturday to pace Air Force to a season-opening 34-13 Western Athletic Conference football victory over Colorado State.

The Falcons' wishbone provided two big plays less than five minutes into the game to account for a 14-0 advantage. On the Falcons' third play from scrimmage, Kershner took a handoff and rambled 70 yards down the left sideline for a score.

Colorado State countered with its only touchdown of the first half on Troy Lindsay's 1-yard run, but that was as close as the pass-oriented Rams got. Air Force's Sean Pavlich tacked on a field goal for a 17-7 halftime lead, and Kershner and Brown scored on short runs in the second half.

Terry Nugent's 7-yard pass to a diving Jeff Champine late in the third quarter accounted for Colorado State's other touchdown.

Nugent completed 27 of 43 passes for 312 yards, but he was intercepted twice, once in the end zone by Air Force cornerback Dwan Wilson. Another Ram drive ended on downs at the Falcon 8.

So. Mississippi...32
Richmond.....3

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Behind a potent running attack keyed to junior tailback Sam Dejarnette, Southern Mississippi's Golden Eagles crushed the Richmond Spiders 32-3 Saturday night in the season football opener for both teams.

Dejarnette, picking up where he left off last year when he set a school rushing record of 1,545 yards, rambled for 150 yards on 18 carries and one touchdown. The score came on a 37-yard run in the third period, his only carry of the second half.

Southern opened the scoring late in the first period when quarterback Robert Ducksworth ran the final 14 yards of a 54-yard drive. Steve Clark added the first of his two extra points with 6:15 remaining.

Clark boosted the Eagles to a 13-0 lead with two field goals in the next eight minutes. The first covered 31 yards and the second 42 yards, the longest of his career and a stadium record at the time.

Richmond's Brendan Toibin eclipsed Clark's mark a few minutes later by hitting a 52-yarder with 1:51 left in the half, cutting the Southern margin to 13-3. The Eagles added two more touchdowns before intermission.

Eastern Kentucky21
East Tennessee...15

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — Tailback Terence Thompson rushed for 170 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as Eastern Kentucky defeated East Tennessee State 21-15 in the college football opener for both teams.

It was the Colonels' 32nd consecutive home victory and 14th straight victory over two seasons.

East Tennessee jumped out to a 13-0 lead and held a 13-7 halftime advantage. Eastern Kentucky scored with 16 seconds remaining in the half on a 9-yard pass from Greg Parker to Tron Armstrong.

Eastern scored on its first possession of the third quarter, with 10:42 leftin the period, on a 1-yard run by Thompson. The Colonels, taking a 14-13 lead, never trailed from that point. The touchdown climaxed a five-play, 69-yard drive.

Thompson bolted over from the 1-yard line with 9:11 to go in the final period following a 93-yard drive.

Eastern Kentucky, leading 21-13, took an intentional safety as the horn sounded the end of the game as Parker ran out of the end zone to prevent any chance of East Tennessee being able to catch up.

Australia Takes Lead In Challenge Finals

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The winged-keel yacht Australia II defeated British rival Victory '83 by three minutes, seven seconds Saturday in light winds, taking a 2-1 lead in the America's Cup challenge finals.

The two are in a best-of-seven race series to decide which is on the starting line Sept. 13 to race for the historic sailing trophy against defending champion Dennis Conner and his new boat, Liberty.

The boats are survivors of seven challengers which began racing in early June seeking the prize which the New York Yacht Club has held since it was first won in 1851.

Liberty was chosen for the 25th cup defense late Friday after defeating her last opponent, the veteran cup campaigner Courageous, in two final races in Rhode Island Sound.

There was a leisurely southwest breeze of about eight knots for Saturday's racing over a full 24.4-mile Olympic course.

Victory '83, with Rodney Pattison and Lawrie Smith sailing, showed strength late in the race Saturday when the wind shifted 15 degrees but could not catch the fleet Aussie boat.

Australia II, with a novel keel her crew keeps hidden, led by seven seconds at the start Saturday, by 1:41 at the first mark, and skipper John Bertrand had a whopping 4:55 edge at the third turn.

But the British yacht cut that to 3:40 on the downwind run, where Australia II has done poorly much of the summer. And they shaved 43 seconds more on the final tacking leg.

The America's Cup competition is sailed in 12-meter boats: aluminum-hulled vessels about 65 feet long, weighing 30 tons with a mast nearly 90 feet high carrying 1,800 square feet of sail.

Roanoke Nips Chargers, 12-6

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School used the big play to gain a 12-6 victory over Ayden-Grifton High School Saturday night.

It was the second straight victory for the Redskins, while Ayden-Grifton opened its season on the short end of the score.

Darius Hudgins got both of the Roanoke scores, on runs of 59 and 65 yards. The first came in the opening quarter, and the other in the closing period of the contest.

Ayden-Grifton got its only score in the second period when Kelvin Harris carried it over from three yards out.

The Chargers were hurt by first game mistakes and their inability to punch the ball in. Twice they failed on scoring attempts inside the Roanoke ten yard line.

Roanoke offered one other threat, in the first half.

Hudgins led the Roanoke offense with seven carries for 133 yards. Harris paced Ayden-Grifton with 21 lugs for 65 yards.

Roanoke will play host to Washington and Ayden-Grifton entertains Richlands in games on Friday.

Martina, Connors Take Easy Wins

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Jimmy Connors waltzed, Andrea Jaeger staggered and Guillermo Vilas fell Saturday in the third round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Vilas, the Argentine left-hander who was the last foreign player to capture America's premier tennis tournament, was upset by Greg Holmes, the reigning NCAA and Pan American Games champion, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

Navratilova, the women's top seed who is trying to win the only title that has eluded her, sped through Kate Gompert 6-2, 6-2; Connors, the defending men's champion and seeded third this year, eliminated Bruce Manson 6-0, 6-4, 6-0; while Jaeger, seeded third in the women's draw, outlasted Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-2, 6-7, 7-6.

Also falling on Saturday was ninth-seeded Andrea Temesvari of Hungary, who was upset by Pascale Paradis of France, the reigning French and Wimbledon junior girls champion, 6-4, 6-0.

Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland closed out the night by upsetting 11th-seeded Gene Mayer 6-1, 6-0, 6-0. Mayer came completely unravelled with a flood of unforced errors in the match, which lasted only 66 minutes.

Mayer held service in the third game of the first set before Gunthardt won the next 16 games to move into the round-of-16 where he will face Connors.

"No one in tennis is unbeatable," Jaeger said when asked about Navratilova. "You can't take anything for granted."

Vilas knows that only too well.

"I never saw him play (before)," the sixth-seeded Vilas said of Holmes, a student at the University of Utah. "It was a surprise to me because normally in the third round you get someone you know. I did not know how to play him..."

What Vilas got was Holmes, always attacking, always forcing the play with an unorthodox two-handed grip on both his forehand and backhand. The only other world-class player who plays two-handed from both sides is Gene Mayer.

"I tried to do different things, but it did not work," said Vilas, who is facing a one-year suspension and a $20,000 fine for allegedly accepting a guarantee to play at a tournament in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, earlier this year. "That's the dangerous part when you play a player you've played before."

Holmes ripped through the first set, breaking Vilas in the second set as he jumped out to a 4-1 lead. He held his service in the seventh game, then broke Vilas again in the eighth to wrap up the opening set.

The two battled evenly through the first four games of the middle set, both holding service. Then the 20-year-old Holmes ripped off the next four games and Vilas was down 2-0 in sets.

"He attacks all the time," Vilas said. "He was always putting on pressure and taking the balls on the rise."

Holmes started off the third set by winning the first two games, breaking Vilas in the second game. But Vilas broke right back, the first time in the match he had been able to solve Holmes' service.

The youngster then reeled off the next three games and was serving for the match with the third-set score 5-1. He reached match point at 40-30, then fell victim to the jitters, losing the next three points and his service as he failed to connect on any of his first serves.

Vilas then held service to narrow the gap to 3-5, although he had to stave off three more match points. In the ninth game, again Holmes had trouble with his first serve, although he took a 40-15 lead and had match point for the fifth time.

This time he got his first serve in and closed out the biggest upset so far of the $2 million tournament with a service winner.

"I was just trying to play my own game," Holmes said, "hit good approaches and come in. He hits with a lot of topspin and I was hoping he would hit them short so I could come in, which he did."

Connors, who played despite receiving a death threat earlier in the day, had no problems roaring into the round-of-16. Officials later said the tournament "took our normal procedures" and Connors left the stadium immediately after his match.

Jaeger was rolling along with a 6-2, 5-1 lead when Jausovec, a finalist at the French Open this year, began her comeback on the hardcourts of the National Tennis Center at Flushing Meadow.

"She started playing better and I made an unbelievable amount of mistakes," Jaeger said later. "I went for too many shots when I shouldn't have. I should have played the same way that got me to 6-2, 5-1. I rushed it too much."

Jausovec battled back to 6-6, then won five straight games, then took the tiebreaker 7-2.

In the third set, Jaeger fell behind, then pulled even at 4-4. The two traded service breaks in the 11th and 12th games to again go into a tiebreak.

This time Jaeger wasted no time, winning the first four points en route to a 7-1 victory.

The Temesvari-Paradis match, their first on-court meeting, appeared to be a veteran against a rookie. But Temesvari, the veteran, is two days younger than the French winner.

Eagle Helps Lindsey Take Four-Shot Lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Lindsey eagled the 12th hole, birdied the next two and "sort of put it on cruise from then on in" to take a 4-stroke lead Saturday after three rounds of the $300,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Lindsey's 65, coming a day after his second-round 64, gave him a 13-under-par 200 on the par-71 En-Joie Golf Club course.

"I've probably played the best golf of my life the last two days," said Lindsey, of Palm Harbor, Fla., who has never won an event in his five years on the Professional Golfers' Association tour and never led a PGA tournament before. His best finish was a seventh-place tie at the Walt Disney World Classic in 1982.

Victor Regalado collected four birdies and a pair of bogeys for a 69 that put him alone in second at 204, nine under par. Tied for third at eight under were John Adams, Mike Reid, Gil Morgan and second-round leader Don Pooley.

Pooley bogeyed the first hole and drove his ball into a water hazard on the second, finishing with a disastrous triple-bogey. But he recovered to finish the day just 1 over par.

First-round leader Mark O'Meara made the turn at eight under par, but fell back to 6 under on the back nine, 7 strokes off the lead.

Calvin Peete was not around to defend his 1982 B.C. Open title. He was disqualified Friday for signing an incorrect scorecard, but would have missed the cut anyway after a frustrating second round that included five putts on the sixth green.

Craig Stadler shot a par 71 to stand at 2-under-par 211 after three rounds. Lee Trevino was a stroke back at 212 after a third-round 70.

Lindsey said he adjusted his driving stance after Thursday's opening round, when he shot an even-par 71, and was standing about 8 inches closer to the ball than before.

"I'm not reaching for it like I was," he said. "I feel like I'm lined up right at the target with every shot."

Regalado, of San Diego, said he would try to slow down his game for Sunday's final round, hoping to break a string of bad finishes that has given him a final-round average of about 76.

"It's been killing me," Regalado said. "Instead of making a lot of money I haven't been making any money."

Perry Tosses 6-Hitter At Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Willie Aikens hit a three-run homer and Gaylord Perry pitched a six-hitter as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Texas Rangers 5-0 Saturday in the first game of a doubleheader and ended a six-game losing streak.

Perry, 7-13, struck out four and walked one in posting his 314th career victory and first shutout since 1980. It was his 53rd career shutout.

The Royals took a 1-0 lead in the second inning after Aikens got aboard on second baseman Wayne Tolleson's throwing error. He took third on Leon Roberts' single and scored on Don Slaught's sacrifice fly.

U. L. Washington led off the sixth inning with a single, moved to third on Butch Davis' sacrifice bunt and a groundout. After George Brett walked, Hal McRae hit an RBI single and Aikens' hit his 16th homer into the right-center field bleachers.

Danny Darwin, 7-11, was the loser. He gave up five hits and all five runs in the six innings he worked.

Twice the Rangers had runners on third with only one out but couldn't get them home. Buddy Bell got to second base in the fourth inning after left fielder Davis dropped his fly ball and moved to third on Mickey Rivers' sacrifice bunt. But Perry struck out Larry Parrish and got George Wright on a groundout.

Pete O'Brien doubled in the fifth but later was thrown at home trying to score on Jim Sundberg's fly to short-center to Pat Sheridan.

Detroit.....7
Toronto.....4

TORONTO (AP) — There's nothing more enjoyable for Detroit's Dan Petry than being on a winning team during the American League East pennant drive in September.

"This team's going good now," said Dan Petry, the winning pitcher in the Detroit Tigers 7-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Saturday. "We feel like, 'Come on, bring on the East.'

"It's not that I think we'll win them all but we'll play em hard."

The Tigers were led on offense by Lance Parrish and Chet Lemon, who each hit two-run homers.

"Against this club you always have to bear down and try as hard as you can," said Lemon, who belted his 22nd of the year in the fourth. "The Jays never quit. Even when we got up by five they didn't quit."

Parrish, who homered in both games of Friday's doubleheader, crashed a two-out homer off Jim Clancy, 14-8, in the first inning to give the Tiger catcher 24 homers and 99 runs batted in this season. The two-out homer came after Lou Whitaker reached base on shortstop Alfredo Griffin's error.

Lemon's home run capped a three-run fourth. With two outs, Glenn Wilson singled and scored on Cabell's bloop double. Lemon followed by homering on a 3-0 pitch.

Petry, 15-8, ran into trouble in the sixth after having held the Blue Jays to two hits, including Willie Upshaw's 22nd home run in the fourth.

Dave Collins and Rance Mulliniks walked to open the sixth, and a single by Lloyd Moseby loaded the bases.

Upshaw's forceout drove in one run and Jorge Orta's single made it 5-3. Petry escaped further trouble when Ernie Whitt grounded into a double play — the third of four double plays turned by the Tigers.

Upshaw singled home another Toronto run in the eighth before the Tigers added two runs in the ninth on Whitaker's sacrifice fly and Alan Trammell's RBI double, his second two-base hit of the game.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cal Ripken Jr. says playing on a veteran Baltimore team helps him. The second-year shortstop also does his share to help the Orioles.

Ripken went 5-for-6 with two home runs and two doubles as the Orioles belted six homers, including a grand slam by Ken Singleton during a seven-run third inning, in pounding the Minnesota Twins 13-0 Saturday.

"Seeing the way Eddie Murray handles himself and getting tips from Kenny Singleton has to help," said Ripken.

Ripken also says he is aided by the team's third base coach, Cal Ripken Sr.

"My father and myself, I talk baseball with him every chance I get. It helps a lot," said Ripken, whose 13 total bases and five hits tied team records. His two doubles gave him 38 two-base hits this year, tying Brooks Robinson's club record, as the Orioles also tied a team record with 39 total bases.

The six home runs were the most Minnesota has ever allowed in one game.

McGregor, who scattered eight hits, said part of the success of the American League East leaders is their ability to relax.

"This club has always been that way," said McGregor after pitching his second shutout and 12th complete game of the year. "They know how to relax. You bring a younster into that atmosphere and he learns. You can't dwell on the negative."

McGregor's effort, coupled with Baltimore's 1-0 victory over Minnesota on Friday night, extended the Twins' scoreless streak to 19 innings.

The Orioles have won 10 of their last 11 games and maintained their 3 1/2-game lead in the AL East over Detroit, which downed Toronto 7-4.

Baltimore hammered Schrom and reliever Len Whitehouse for seven runs in the third. Al Bumbry and Dan Ford delivered RBI singles and Ripken doubled home another run. Singleton then clubbed his grand slam, his 18th home run of the season, a 420-foot drive to left field off Whitehouse.

The Orioles then added four more runs with four solo homers.

Rich Dauer, who had four hits, banged his fifth in the fifth, Dan Ford drilled his ninth in the fifth, Joe Nolan belted his third in the sixth, and Ripken added his 23rd in the seventh.

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Ron Kittle belted a two-run homer, his 29th of the season, to help Rich Dotson to his 16th victory as the Chicago White Sox downed the Boston Red 9-6 Saturday.

The White Sox, far ahead in the American League West, jumped on Boston starter John Tudor, 10-10, for four runs in the first inning.

Dotson, 16-7, allowed three runs in the Boston first inning on run-scoring singles by Jim Rice and Rich Gedman and Tony Armas' sacrifice fly.

Dotson then settled down before giving up doubles by Glenn Hoffman and Rice in the seventh. Reliever Juan Agosto came in and gave up Reid Nichols' RBI single, cutting the Chicago lead to 8-5.

Julio Cruz had singled home two Chicago runs in the sixth and Kittle drilled his home run in the seveth. The homer came after third baseman Wade Boggs' second error of the game.

The White Sox made it 9-5 in the eighth when Rudy Law walked, stole his 63rd base of the season, went to third on catcher Gedman's throwing error and scored on Fisk's sacrifice fly.

Cleveland.....13
Oakland.....6

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The young Oakland bullpen received a major-league lesson in humility Saturday as the Cleveland Indians rallied for an incredible 10 runs in the top of the ninth inning to beat the A's 13-6.

As the Indians were sending 15 men to the plate in the 45-minute rally, impatient fans were chanting, "We want Gross," a reference to third baseman Wayne Gross, who earlier this season pitched 2 1-3 innings during a 16-5 drubbing administered by Minnesota.

Gross never made it to the mound Saturday, but a record six Oakland pitchers in one inning did.

"If you're an impartial observer," said A's Manager Steve Boros, "I guess it strayed from tragedy to comedy after awhile, but it never did for me. And for those fans who were chanting for Gross, his shoulder was bothering him, or I may have considered him."

The loss spoiled the 47th birthday of Boros, who said he was "Going on 60" during the inning. "I'm just going to go home and spend my birthday the way I planned, playing Crazy Eights with my kids. Crazy Eights might be an appropriate card game."

Cleveland outfielder Gorman Thomas, whose double drove in the inning's first run, and whose two-run homer closed the scoring, said it was the first time he ever had two hits in one inning, among other things.

"It's always nice to come back and win ballgames," said Thomas, who was batting .199 before the game and lifted his average to the .200 mark with his two hits Saturday. "I really can't concern myself with it (the average), but when I got below the .200 mark, my swing wasn't as free as it usually is. I was trying for too many base hits."

Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales was pleased to see the boom come back into Thomas' bat. Two other big hits in the inning, a three-run double by Toby Harrah and a two-run double by Pat Tabler, helped build the rally. But Corrales said pinch-singles by Chris Bando and Andre Thornton that tied the game and put the Indians ahead were the biggest hits.

"It was a wild one," said Corrales. "The two pinch hitters did their job, and then it never ended."

Oakland reliever Dave Beard started the inning, but walked Bake McBride and Tabler before Thomas doubled. Other Oakland pitchers in the inning included Tom Underwood, Ed Farmer, Curt Young, Bert Bradley (making his major league debut) and Jeff Jones.

"I told our guys to take pitches," said Corrales. "If he (Beard) wants to beat himself, let him beat himself, and he did it. He opened the gates. He's got a fine arm when he gets it over."

Trailing 5-3, McBride and Tabler opened the ninth by drawing walks and Thomas' run-scoring double finished Dave Beard, 5-5.

Reliever Underwood faced only batter, yielding a game-tying RBI single to Bando. Thornton then cracked a run-scoring single off Farmer, although Bando was thrown out after rounding second base.

Pirate Rally Keeps Braves On Skids

ATLANTA (AP) — Phil Niekro believed he was going to end the Atlanta Braves' six-game losing skid Saturday, but Manager Joe Torre yanked the veteran knuckleballer in the sixth inning while he was shutting out Pittsburgh on one hit.

In the seventh, pinch-hitter Mike Easler drilled a grand slam off Atlanta reliever Steve Bedrosian to cap a six-run rally as Pittsburgh overcame the Braves 6-2.

It was the sixth consecutive loss and ninth loss in 10 games for the faltering Braves.

Niekro had allowed only a bloop double to Dale Berra in the fourth, but had issued eight walks while striking out eight. He was lifted with one out in the sixth inning after walking Tony Pena. He had thrown 117 pitches and Pittsburgh stranded 10 runners throught the first six innings.

"He walked eight guys," Torre said, explaining why he took out Niekro. "You can second-guess me. That's OK," said Torre. "Niekro had good stuff but had thrown a lot of pitches and I felt it was time to get him and go with the best I had in my bullpen."

Niekro, however, disagreed.

"I don't know," he said softly when asked why he was taken out. "That's as basic as I can say it."

Niekro said he came to the park to win and "I was going to win. I just had a feeling."

"I walked a few and I was in and out of jams, but I cracked down when I had to, getting the outs and strikeouts. To me, I was pitching good. When I'm throwing good, I throw a lot of knuckleballs and a lot of pitches."

Atlanta led 2-0 before the Pirates rallied in the seventh against reliever Bedrosian, 8-8.

Marvell Wynne began the uprising with a walk, one of 12 walks issued by Braves pitchers, and scored on Bill Madlock's double, only the second Pittsburgh hit. Jason Thompson then walked and, one out later, Johnny Ray doubled, scoring Madlock.

Pena was walked intentionally to load the bases and pinch hitter Tom Orsulak struck out before Easler, batting for reliever Jim Bibby, 4-10, hit the first pitch over the center-field fence for his ninth homer.

The Braves twice off Rick Rhoden in the second on a run-scoring double by Chris Chambliss and Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice fly.

Chicago.....9
Houston.....3

Suffering from dehydration, Jenkins still managed to belt a triple — his first since 1972 — during a seven-run first inning and then hung on to pitch five innings to pick up a 9-3 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

"I definitely wanted to win. Victories have been very few this year, and I was glad to get that one," said Jenkins, 5-9.

Cubs catcher Jody Davis felt bad about his batting slump that had reached an 0-for-25 drought in Cincinnati Thursday night.

Since then, however, Davis has had eight hits in 10 at-bats, including two doubles and two singles against the Astros Saturday.

"I'm starting to relax again. For awhile there, I was trying to hit the ball too hard and too long," Davis said.

The triumph was the 283rd of Jenkins' career, tying him with Jim Kaat for 19th place on the all-time major league victory list.

After Houston took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first on Bill Doran's sevneth homer, the Cubs struck back in their half of the inning.

Ryne Sandberg started the uprising with a double off loser Mike Madden, 6-4, and scored when Bill Buckner followed with a single. A walk to Ron Cey and Keith Moreland's RBI single chased Madden.

Jody Davis then belted a run-scoring double off reliever Mike LaCoss and, after an intentional walk to Mel Hall, Larry Bowa lifted a sacrifice fly to center to drive in Moreland scored. Davis also scored on the play when catcher John Mizerock, after taking the throw to the plate, threw wildly to second in an attempt to get Hall.

The Cubs added two runs in the fifth on doubles by Davis and Hall and a pinch-triple by rookie Dan Rohn.

Kentucky Rolls By Chippewas

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Lawrence Lee rushed for a pair of touchdowns in the third quarter, one on a 63-yard bolt, and Kentucky defeated Central Michigan, 31-14 Saturday in the college football opener for both teams.

It was the first victory for Coach Jerry Claiborne at his Alma Mater. The Wildcats were 0-10-1 in 1982, during which they never scored more than 14 points in one game.

Lee's first score, a 2-yard dive with 4:45 remaining in the third period, broke a 14-14 tie.

He encored two minutes later after a Central Michigan punt, taking a handoff at the Kentucky 37 and dashing nearly untouched to the end zone.

Central Michigan had the early advantage and led 7-0 after Chippewa quarterback Ron Fillmore ran 4 yards for a touchdown with 46 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

Kentucky tied the game with 9:15 remaining in the half on a 32-yard scoring run by Tom Wheary.

Curtis Adams scored on a 5-yard run six minutes later to put the Chippewas back on top 14-7.

Kentucky's Chris Caudell ended the scoring on an 18-yard field goal with 8:05 remaining in the game.

Central Michigan's first score was a product of a Kentucky turnover, which was a familiar scenario in 1982 when the Wildcats led the nation with 50 turnovers.

Kentucky's first scoring drive of the season took just three plays, thanks to Wheary, a sophomore walk-on whose 32-yard run was the first carry in his career.

Central Michigan's second touchdown followed a bizarre 48-yard pass play in which the ball was tipped six times before falling into the hands of John DeBoer, who lugged it to the Kentucky 14. Curtis Adams scored two plays later from five yards out.

Jenkins completed four passes in Kentucky's final drive of the half, including the 18-yard strike to Massey.

Lee's first touchdown was set up by a 29-yard halfback pass from Tony Mayes to Joe Phillips.

Ragan Leads Last Qualifiers

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Ken Ragan came up with the fastest qualifying lap Saturday as the final 17 starting spots in Monday's Southern 500 Grand National stock car race were filled.

Ragan, from Unadilla, Ga., drove a Chevrolet Monte Carlo around the 1.366-mile oval at Darlington International Raceway at an average speed of 150.225 mph.

That was good enough to grab the 25th spot on the 41-car grid for the 34th Southern 500.

Jimmy Means, in another Monte Carlo, was next quickest Saturday at 149.931.

The top 24 positions had been filled in time trials Thursday and Friday. Neil Bonnett won the pole position Friday with a record Southern 500 qualifying lap of 157.187 mph.

Rose Tops Knights

Rose High School's soccer team gained a 5-2 victory over Greenville Christian Academy in an exhibition match Saturday afternoon.

Jordy Smith opened the scoring for Rose about five minutes into the match, but Greenville Christian's Chris Harris tied it up at 1-1 about three minutes later.

Ledwis Robbins put Rose into the lead for good on assists by Craig Ricks and Scott Davis. He later added a goal on a penalty shot for a 3-1 lead with 32 minutes gone.

With 30 seconds remaining, Harris again scored to cut the lead to 3-2.

Rose opens its regular season on Monday in the Wilson Tournament, while GCA begins its season on Friday participating in the Lynchburg Tournament.

Conley Rallies For 13-12 Victory

Almost Disaster
Conley defenders John Brown (21) and Chris Via (81) go up to try for an interception against Jones Senior Friday night. The ball bounced off their hands into the arms of Jones' Tyrone Franks (46), who went in for an apparent touchdown. The play was called back, however, because of an infraction by Jones. HOLLYWOOD — Conley Coach Gerald Garner said after the game that there is a surprise in every game.

Garner's surprise on a damp Friday night against Jones Senior was the play of freshman tailback Ricky Farrow, who came off the bench to spark the Vikings from a 12-0 deficit as the first half was winding down to a 13-12 victory by the time the game had come to an end.

Farrow scored the first of the two Conley touchdowns, on a three yard scramble, and gained a total of 68 yards on the evening on 13 carries. Conley seemed to be bogged down against the Jones Senior defense late in the half when Farrow, just into the game, broke away on a 39-yard romp, giving the Vikings a first down on first down at the Trojan 19 yard line.

"His long run got us going," an elated Garner said after the game. "It gave us some momentum. It was the big turning point in the game."

Indeed. After stalling Jones near midfield early in the second half, Conley drove down to the Trojan eight before an illegal blocking penalty stalled the drive. But after holding Jones once more, the Vikings drove for the go-ahead score with Leander Maye scoring on the second play of the final period, from seven yards out.

Foreign exchange student Magnus Westerberg's extra point slid through the uprights to give Conley the lead, and the Vikes never lost control after that.

Conley ground out 184 yards in offense, all on the ground, 106 of it coming in the second half. The Trojans, in contrast, had 148 yards in rushing and 12 passing, but only 30 of it came in the second half of play.

Two big plays did all the damage for the Trojans, who scored on a 64-yard sprint by Tyrone Franks and a 20-yard burst by Welton Loftin.

"We improved a lot over our first game (a 12-0 loss to Greene Central)," Garner said, "but we still have a long, long way to go. We made too many mistakes, had too many penalties and we still don't seem to know who's supposed to be on the kicking team."

Conley was penalized once for failing to have enough men on the field on an offensive play and several times were caught on punts running men on and off the field to get enough out there before a whistle was blown.

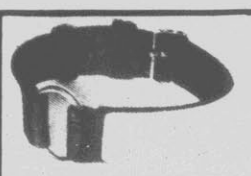

"I thought our defense played much better in this game," Garner added. "We had only a couple of breakdowns — two of them when they got those scores."

The Vikes opened up like they would dominate things, moving from their own 37 to the Jones 35 before failing to pick up a first down. Jones came back to drive from its own 26 to the Conley 44 before it had to punt.

After another exchange of the ball, Jones took over on its own 36. On the first play after that, Franks burst up the middle on a quick opener and found daylight almost immediately. From there it was a footrace as Franks outdistanced the Conley secondary on his 64-yard gallop to the end zone. Quarterback Vince Strayhorn, however, fumbled when he tried to go for a two-point play, and it stayed 6-0 with 1:21 left in the opening period.

The Trojans got a big break

Rose, Jags Delayed

Rose High School and Farmville Central, set for their opening games Friday night, had them postponed until Monday night by rains which swept through the area Friday afternoon.

Rose High will again journey to Jacksonville on Monday for a game to begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday night.

Farmville Central will entertain Williamston is another Monday night game, also set to start at 7:30 p.m.

Two other area games were rained out and were played on Saturday night: Ayden-Grifton at Roanoke and West Craven at Washington.

State's Longest Loss Streak Comes To End

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Running back Bobby Beale's six-yard touchdown run helped Swansboro snap a 22-game losing streak — the longest in the state — while North Carolina's longest scoring streak ended in weekend high school football.

Greensboro Grimsley's 10-0 win over Burlington Williams not only spoiled the coaching debut of Sam Story, but it was the first time in 84 games that Williams was held scoreless.

Meanwhile, Beale's first-quarter touchdown run accounted for all the scoring as Swansboro nipped Chocowinity 6-0. Beale gained 111 yards while fellow running back Troy Simpson rushed for 156 yards.

Louisburg now has the state's longest losing streak — 20 games, following its 23-6 loss to North Edgecombe.

Meanwhile, Roxboro Person halfback Troy Russell scored a school-record five touchdowns and rushed ror 147 yards as Person downed Halifax County, Va., 35-12.

In other action:

— Tailback Steve Salley rushed for 198 yards and scored two touchdowns to propel Fayetteville Douglas Byrd over Reid Ross 34-8 in the season-opener for both teams. Salley, who played wingback last season, scored on runs of four and six yards.

Byrd quarterback Brad Edwards passed to Donnell Woolfard for a nine-yard touchdown and connected with Scott Herring for a 15-yard score.

Byrd, considered one of the top 4-A teams in the state, held Reid Ross to just one first down and 16 yards total offense in the first half as it built a 13-0 lead.

— Wilmington New Hanover, also a top 4-A power, held Durham Hillside to minus 20 yards total offense en route to a 37-0 romp.

— Southern Durham won its second straight as it whipped Dunn 35-8 in a Triangle 3-A Conference opener. Tailback Darryl McGill gained 120 yards and scored three touchdowns for Southern Durham.

McGill has now rushed for 265 yards and scored four TDs in two games.

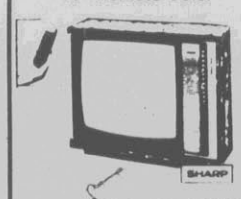

— Defending state 1-A champion Robbinsville opened its 1983 season with a 6-0 win over Swain County while 2-A champion Randleman routed North Surry 43-0 for its second straight victory.

— Brevard, the defending 3-A champs, rebounded from a season-opening loss to defeat Hendersonville 27-0.

— Chatham Central ended a 20-game losing streak with a 20-0 victory over Southwest Randolph.

A number of games were postponed because of rain Friday evening, including Greenville Rose's clash with defending 4-A champion Jacksonville. The game has been rescheduled for Monday.

Chocowinity Bows; Swansboro Skid Ends

SWANSBORO — Chocowinity High School opened the 1983 football season Friday night, and gained the dubious honor of losing to the North Carolina high school team with the longest existant losing streak in the state, Swansboro.

The 6-0 victory by Swansboro snapped a 22-game skid which extended back into the 1980 season.

The lone score of the contest came in the first period with 3:32 left when Bobby Beal broke away to score from 29 yards out. Swansboro had taken over the ball following a Chocowinity punt.

The Indians found themselves handicapped by not having played a game while Swansboro had one already under its belt for the year. That proved a big difference in the game.

Swansboro threatened on several other occasions in the game, but blew those chances because of penalties.

The Indians also came up with several scoring opportunities, dropping one pass in the end zone, and having a touchdown run negated by a penalty.

Roy Hooker led the Chocowinity offense with 97 yards on 14 rushes. Shawn Harding caught three passes for 24 yards, while Mark Smith hauled in two for 27 yards.

With the end of Swansboro's streak, Louisburg now holds the honor of having the state's longest loss string, bowing to North Edgecombe Friday night for its 20th straight defeat.

E. Carteret Blanks Panthers

BEAUFORT — Chris Johnson scored three touchdowns and led East Carteret to a 20-0 victory over North Pitt's Panthers Friday night.

It marked the second straight shutout loss for the Panthers, who were the surprise team of the Eastern Carolina Conference last year.

The Panthers, who never got their offense cranked up during the evening, suddenly found themselves without two key members of their starting lineup. Last week, quarterback Quentin Yarrell was injured late in the game against Roanoke, and has not returned to the team. Daniel Keel, who finished against Roanoke, worked all week at the spot, they was unable to make the game because of illness. Gentry Sneed, who had not previously played at the quarterback spot was forced into the position without preparation.

Keith Clark, a running back, also did not make the trip, as he was in a wedding Friday night.

Johnson's first touchdown came in the second period, as he finished up a drive with a five-yard run. Buddy Ebron added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

Later in the quarter, Johnson did it again, going in from 11 yards out this time. Ebron again added the kick to make it 14-0 at the half.

The final touchdown came in the opening seconds of the final quarter. Two plays into the period, Johnson broke away for 22 yards and the score, closing out it at 20-0.

Since 1900 three pitchers have won a total of 20 games pitching in both major leagues in the same season. They were Joe McGinnity, Pat Flaherty and Hank Borowy.

Liberty To Defend Cup

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The message was short Friday night: Dennis Conner and his yacht Liberty were in and John Kolius and Courageous were out as defenders of the historic America's Cup this year.

"I think everyone is relieved," said Conner, grinning.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of," said Kolius, his eyes red.

A flock of Canada geese flew southwest over Newport Harbor in the twilight as the New York Yacht Club brass brought their decision to the two contenders.

In the afternoon, Liberty had defeated Courageous two more times in sailing races in Rhode Island Sound.

The decision means the ruby-hulled Liberty will be on the starting line Sept. 13 for the best-of-seven Cup finals against the foreign challenger.

The opponent will be either Australia II or Britain's Victory '83, yachts that are now tied 1-1 in their seven-race final series.

"I would not underestimate either one" of the foreign challengers, Conner said, adding that the odds are for Australia II with its novel winged keel to win the finals.

"I think we all would like to race Australia," he added with a smile.

Conner, the California drapery maker who has been a factor in every America's Cup defense for a decade, said he will use the next 10 days to get a few new sails and tune them.

"John Kolius might have thought the decision was premature," the skipper said, "but it was just right for us because it helps us get ready ...

"We will continue sailing every day."

Conner, who won the Cup in 1980 with Freedom, said being chosen again "was sweeter because it was harder this time. I felt especially good for our guys."

Conner, dripping water after being thrown in with his crew in the traditional victory dunking, spoke quietly amid a wild scene around him of clamoring fans, braying boat horns, the firing of small ceremonial cannon and fireworks.

Kolius, the Texas sailmaker in his first Cup try, vowed he would return.

"We tried hard," he said. "I had the best crew and nobody worked any harder. We knew we were in trouble and we knew he (Conner) had the edge.

He said Courageous, cup winner in 1974 and 1977 and a contender in 1980, didn't quite have enough speed.

Liberty, winning the last straight races, wound up the final series with a 12-6 record, while Courageous finished at 11-9. The third aspirant, Defender, was eliminated last Saturday.

Knox In New Debut

By The Associated Press

Chuck Knox has done it twice before — in Los Angeles and Buffalo. On Sunday he makes his third debut as a new National Football League coach, this time with the Seattle Seahawks.

But Knox, who guided the Rams to five division championships in his five years with them (1973-77) and the Bills into the playoffs in two of his five seasons with them (1978-82), cautions the Seahawks' fans not to expect too much too soon from him or his rookie running star, Curt Warner.

"Too many fans think that just because we're here that everything's going to turn itself around," Knox said of the Seahawks, who have finished with losing records the past three seasons. "We're not going to do it overnight, but quality players like Curt Warner will get us going in the right direction."

They start off the season in Kansas City, where the Chiefs, too, have a rookie head coach — John Mackovic, previously an assistant in Dallas under Tom Landry and, before that, the head coach at Wake Forest.

Sunday's other openers are the Denver Broncos at the Pittsburgh Steelers, the New York Jets at the San Diego Chargers, the St. Louis Cardinals at the New Orleans Saints, the Green Bay Packers at the Houston Oilers, the Atlanta Falcons at the Chicago Bears, the Baltimore Colts at the New England Patriots, the Detroit Lions at the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the Los Angeles Raiders at the Cincinnati Bengals, the Miami Dolphins at the Buffalo Bills and the Minnesota Vikings at the Cleveland Browns.

Monday night's game is the Dallas Cowboys at Washington, a rematch of the 1982 National Conference championship game that propelled the 'Skins into Super Bowl XVII, where they beat Miami 27-17 for the NFL title.

The season got underway last night with Marion Campbell, Atlanta's head coach in the mid-1970s, calling the shots for the Philadelphia Eagles against the 49ers in San Francisco. Campbell replaced Dick Vermeil, who retired.

Two other new head coaches will be debuting against each other — John Robinson and the Rams against Bill Parcells and the Giants. Robinson comes from the college ranks — seven years at Southern California, one of which ended with a national championship. Parcells was an assistant under former Giants head coach Ray Perkins, who succeeded Bear Bryant at the University of Alabama.

The Jets (Joe Walton), Bills (Kay Stephenson) and Falcons (Dan Henning) also have new head coaches. Walton was the Jets' offensive coordinator under Walt Michaels last year, Stephenson was a quarterback coach under Knox with both the Rams and the Bills, and Henning was an assistant coach with the Washington Redskins.

Mackovic resolved an ongoing quarterback controversy by trading Steve Fuller to the Rams and giving the job to Bill Kenney — but Kenney will have top draft choice Todd Blackledge looking over his shoulder. And if things do start off well for the Chiefs, a 3-6 team last year, the fans may be yelling for the rookie from Penn State.

Robinson of the Rams has a running back even more highly touted than Warner — Eric Dickerson. He's so impressed with the rookie from Southern Methodist that he plans to go with a one-back offense.

Dickerson gained 128 yards in the final two exhibition games, when Robinson installed the one-back attack. "He deserves the ball a few times," his coach said with a grin.

Many fans will be following with interest the progress of the Broncos-Steelers game, where heralded quarterback John Elway of Stanford, the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, makes his pro debut. The Steelers are starting Cliff Stoudt in place of injured Terry Bradshaw. Under most circumstances, Stoudt would be in the spotlight, but Elway's presence makes him a bit-part player in Sunday's drama.

"That's all right with me," said Stoudt. "Everybody will be there to see what Elway is going to do. That's great — as long as we win the game."

Late Fumble Lets Bath Top Bullets

BATH — Jamesville High School opened its 1983 football season Friday night with a non-conference meeting with Tobacco Belt rival Bath, and Bullet Coach Jerry Godley was glad it didn't count in the standings.

Bath took advantage of a late fumble deep in Bullet territory to gain an 8-0 victory in the contest between the two teams picked to battle it out for the league title this year.

"We just weren't ready to play, no doubt about it," Godley said. "We couldn't hold onto the ball, and we took away every good break we had with a penalty." Jamesville lost three of six fumbles and were hit with eight penalties for 90 yards.

The lone touchdown of the game came with about three minutes left to play when Galen Braddy scored on a six-yard pass from Jeff Tutten. The play came on fourth and goal after the fumble at the ten. Michael Waters ran over the 2-point conversion.

Bath had threatened only one other time in the game, reaching the 12 before the Bullets held on downs.

Jamesville, in return, drove inside the ten on three occasions, only to fumble it away each time. On one of those drives, the Bullets had a first and goal from the one and fumbled it away on first down.

Godley said he didn't believe that Bath's having played a game made a difference in the game. "We just played horribly," he said.

Conley...

when Conley fumbled the kickoff and Harold Franks recovered at the Viking 25. Two plays into the second period, Strayhorn, facing third and 12 at the 27 appeared to hit Tyrone Franks for the score on a pass, but an ineligible receiver was downfield, and the touchdown was erased. The ensuing penalty killed the drive. On the aborted pass, Conley defenders John Brown and Chris Via both leaped high to bat the ball away, but it fell into the hands of Franks anyway.

With Conley backed up in a hole after the punt, Jones got it back in good field position at the 49, but failed to pick up a first down. Conley, however, again had to give it up in poor field position, with Jones taking over on the Viking 38 following a punt.

With the Trojans facing a second and nine, Conley was penalized for an illegal conference on the sidelines as an assistant coach talked with two players during an injury time out. That gave the Trojans a first down at the 22, and two plays later, Loftin skirted the left end of the line for the final 20 yards and the second Jones score. Again, a two-point conversion try failed and with 2:20 left in the half, Jones led 12-0.

On the first play after the kickoff, however, Farrow put in his appearance. Taking the ball on a pitch-out around the left side, he rambled 39 yards to the Jones 19. After a yard was lost on first down, quarterback Joel Cox kept for seven yards on the second down play and Farrow picked up a first down at the five.

Two plays later, he went over right tackle from the three for the score, and Conley was back in the game, 12-6 with 44 seconds left. Westerberg's PAT try was wide.

Early in the second half, Conley forced a punt and David Daniels returned the kick 39 yards to the 50, setting up a Viking drive that ended only when an illegal block cost a potential touchdown. From the eight, Farrow rounded the left end, rolling to the two, but the penalty put the ball back on the 22, and faced with goal-to-go, Conley elected to try and go to the air, but three passes, two of them on end-arounds, failed.

The Vikings got it back minutes later at the midfield stripe on a punt and pushed this one in. On second down, Donald Blackwell ripped off 14 yards to the 30, and three plays later Maye romped for 12 down to the eight.

Jones drove back to the Conley 44 before two losses forced a punting situation, and a poor snap on the try cost the Trojans the ball at their own 33. Conley was unable to take advantage of it, however, and turned it over on downs at the 29. The Vikes got it back in the closing minutes on the Jones 49, and ran it down to the 15 before time finally ran out.

C. Florida Tops ECSU

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Dana Thyhsen passed for 169 yards and three touchdowns in the rain Friday night to lead Central Florida to a 37-7 college football victory over Elizabeth City State.

The win snapped a 12-game losing streak for Central Florida and giving Lou Saban a triumphant return to coaching.

The victory, before a season-opening Tangerine Bowl crowd of 9,041, was also the Knights' first as a NCAA Division II school. The Orlando school moved up from Division III in 1982 but suffered through an 0-10 campaign a year ago.

Saban, whose 30-year coaching career includes stints with the University of Miami and Army in addition to the professional Boston Patriots and Buffalo Bills, was named head coach last December.

Thyhsen, a junior from Deland, completed 18 of 27 passes, including first-half scoring strikes of 6 yards to Lorenza Rivers, 8 yards to Brian Glasford and 4 yards to Jeff Froelich.

The Knights, who never led at halftime of a game last season, fashioned a 23-7 advantage by intermission and coasted thereafter.

Barnes Paces Beddingfield's Romp Over Greene Central

The loss evened the Ram record at 1-1, while Beddingfield climbs to 2-0 on the year.

"They were just too much for us," Greene Central coach Spence Grantham said. "The completely dominated the line play. They were too strong and quick for us."

Barnes got the scoring started in the first period, going in from a yard out. Neal Ferrell then kicked the first of six extra points in the contest for a 7-0 lead.

Beddingfield scored twice more before the first quarter ended. Barnes scored on a five-yard run and Sam Wells followed with a 51-yard ramble that raised the score to 21-0 at the end of the period.

Two more points came early in the second frame when Beddingfield got a safety. That came when Chris Kelly blocked a Ram punt and the ball went out the back of the end zone.

Later in the frame, Barnes added his third touchdown, on a one yard run.

Rodney Edwards scored on a 50-yard pass from Darren Bynum in the third period, and Maurice Mitchell scored on a two-yard run later in the quarter to up the lead to 44-0.

The final two points came in the last quarter, when Anthony Thompson was tackled in the end zone by Bobby Knight for a second safety.

Jerry Reuss Is Still Feasting On Expos As L.A. Wins, 4-1

By The Associated Press

Montreal is known as a good city to hit in, but the Expos almost always are left feeling hungry when they face Jerry Reuss of Los Angeles ... hungry for victories.

"I don't know," was how Reuss explained his mastery of the Expos aftrer he pitched a five-hitter and beat them 4-1 Friday night. "I can't seem to figure it out. I just seem to pitch well against them."

The victory made the left-hander 8-0 in his last nine starts, 2-0 this season against Montreal and 19-5 lifetime. He last lost to the Expos July 6, 1979.

From June 1 to Aug. 16, Reuss went 0-7 with a 4.01 earned-run average.

"I first realized there was a problem a little before the All-Star break," said Reuss. "For a while, it was all right once I loosened up, but for four or five games I just couldn't get the ball to do what I wanted it to."

"I'm surprised he doesn't beat everybody the way he handles us," said Tim Wallach. Montreal third baseman, after Reuss earned his fourth straight victory to even his record at 10-10.

Reuss' resurgence has been a big factor in the Los Angeles comeback, and his latest victory boosted the Dodgers' lead in the National League West to 2½ games over the Atlanta Braves, who lost 4-1 to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Elsewhere Friday night, Philadelphia edged San Francisco 5-3, Cincinnati blanked St. Louis 4-0, New York topped San Diego 7-3 and Houston nipped Chicago 6-5.

The Dodgers took advantage of a shaky first inning by Steve Rogers, 16-9, to jump to a 2-0 lead. Steve Sax lined a leadoff double into the rightfield corner, advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt by Bill Russell and scored on a double to right by Dusty Baker. Mike Marshall singled home Baker.

Sax drove in Greg Brock with a sacrifice fly in the fourth, and Pedro Guerrero made it a 4-0 game by whacking his 26th home run in the fifth.

Montreal got to Reuss in in the seventh. Andre Dawson drilled a leadoff double, moved to third when Gary Carter reached on an error by Guerrero and scored on Al Oliver's double-play grounder.

Pirates 4, Braves 1

Atlanta's Ken Dayley was tied 1-1, but was pitching a no-hitter after five innings when the Pittsbugh struck for three runs in the top of the sixth to send the faltering Braves their sixth straight loss.

After Brian Harper walked with one out, Bill Madlock broke up the no-hitter with a single. Both men advanced on a wild pitch, and Harper scored on a groundout. Parker then drilled his 10th homer.

John Candelaria, 13-8, gave up four hits over seven innings, then Kent Tekulve worked the final two for his 18th save. The Braves got their short-lived tie when Glenn Hubbard doubled, moved to third on an infield out and scored on a wild pitch.

Phillies 5, Giants 3

"I was a little surprised," said Ossie Virgil, who has been called on occasionally to catch, but hardly ever to hit.

But Virgil did pinch hit — with the Phillies trailing 3-1 with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom after ninth — and he homered off Garry Lavelle, 6-4, to keep Philadelphia tied with Pittsburgh for first place in the National League East.

San Francisco took a 2-1 lead on Jeff Leonard's two-run single in the seventh and added a run in the ninth.

Reds 4, Cardinals 0

In St. Louis, Frank Pastore tossed a four-hitter, his first shutout since August 1982, and boosted his record to 7-12.

Three St. Louis errors in the first three innings helped the Reds, who got only six hits. Gary Redus singled and scored on a passed ball in the opening inning against John Stuper, 9-9, and doubled home a run in the second.

Mets 7, Padres 3

Darryl Strawberry, the Mets hard-hitting rookie, backed the pitching of Walt Terrell, 6-6, and Jesse Orosco as he boosted his RBI total to 61 when he drove in four runs with his 22nd homer and a triple.

Strawberry, went 3-for-3 and scored twice, tripled to the left field corner at Shea Stadium to produce a run in the third and homered with two on in the seventh. Terrell also singled home a run to give him eight RBI for the season.

Astros 6, Cubs 5

In Chicago, Houston won its fourth straight game as Ray Knight broke a 3-3 deadlock with an eighth-inning single, and Terry Puhl drove in three with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

Knight's tie-breaking single drove in Jose Cruz. Phil Garner followed with a sacrifice bunt, and Lee Smith came in to relieve. Smith walked John Mizerock intentionally before Bill Dawley singled to drive in Knight and Bill Doran singled home Mizerock for a 6-3 Houston lead.

Puhl's sixth homer of the season tied the score 3-3 after the Cubs had jumped to 3-0 lead in the second. One of the runs came on an RBI triple by Dan Rohn in his first major league at-bat.

East Carolina's Quarterback Club, in which head coach Ed Emory goes over the previous week's game and scouts the upcoming one, will be held this year on Tuesday nights from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. at the Pirate Club.

A $3 charge is made for those participating, which includes heavy hors d'ovres and beverage.

Following the meeting, Emory will then adjourn to the Ramada Inn, where his weekly radio talk show will be held each Tuesday at 7 p.m. over WRQR radio. Guests are welcomed at that also.

Three Lose Medals

ALTENRHEIN, Switzerland (AP) — The International Cyclists Union has stripped three West German riders of medals won during last week's track championships for alleged doping violations.

The ICU said in communiques dated September 1 that Dieter Giebken, Fredy Schmidtke and Claudia Lommatzch lost their titles and were suspended from racing for one month.

The move followed discovery of miniscule traces of Ephedrine, used to help cold sufferers breathe easier, but banned by the ICU. German team officials said the substance is found in many cough medicines.

New Bradshaw Sees Steelers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Elway has been called the most exciting young quarterback since Terry Bradshaw, so it's only appropriate the Denver Broncos' million dollar rookie makes his pro debut Sunday against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Even more interest in the season opener was created when Bradshaw, owner of four Super Bowl rings, sharply criticized Elway for arm twisting the Baltimore Colts into trading him to the Broncos.

But when Elway is rocketing passes Sunday before a record 59,000 fans at Three Rivers Stadium, Bradshaw won't be returning them in kind. Sidelined by a sore elbow, Bradshaw is out and the duel is off. Cliff Stoudt, not Bradshaw, will be trading passes with Elway.

Stoudt will be making just the second start of his seven-year Steelers' career and, like Elway, will be starting a season opener for the first time.

"I feel comfortable," Stoudt said. "I've started all the pre-season games. I've been throwing passes to (receivers) Calvin Sweeney and Greg Hawthorne almost since the day I got here. I think they have confidence in me."

And Stoudt said the Steelers have confidence in a defense which allowed only 10 points in the last two weeks and a defense that has begun to take on the flash and flare of the old Steel Curtain days.

"They're keyed and they're flying high," Stoudt said of players including Gary Dunn, Jack Lambert, Tom Beasley and Mike Merriweather. "They don't want John Elway to beat us in his first time up at bat."

But the Steelers' coaches are concerned about Elway.

"He can do all the things a young Bradshaw could do," said assistant coach Woody Widenhofer.

"He is an exceptional talent," said Coach Chuck Noll.

A patchwork offensive line concerns Coach Dan Reeves, whose Broncos lost their pre-season finale to the Minnesota Vikings 34-3 as Elway was frequently roughed up.

"We're going into a real hornet's nest this week and we have to do a better job of stopping the blitz and avoiding sacks," Reeves said. "Because of all thr young guys we have in there, we're also concerned about being able to generate a running game."

The Broncos, 2-7 last season, ended 3-1 in the pre-season as Elway completed 38 of 76 passes for 430 yards, two touchdowns and four interceptions in beating out last year's starter, Steve DeBerg.

"I wanted to be the starting quarterback but I thought I was a longshot at first," Elway said. "I'm glad I'm starting now. I wouldn't learn that much sitting on the bench."

"Elway hasn't done nothing," said safety Rick Woods. "Just because he's the No. 1 pick doesn't mean anything. That just means he's a millionaire."

Pittsburgh has beaten the Broncos in their last three meetings, the last in 1979, when the Steelers won 42-7 in a Monday night game at Three Rivers Stadium.

Bob Griese of the Miami Dolphins was the first quarterback to successfully wear glasses in NFL competition. The glasses are on exhibition at the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

Hunters Beware of Baited Fields — According to Gene Abernathy, chief of the Division of Enforcement of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, many sportsmen and farmers are confused by what constitutes a baited dove field.

"Distributing salt or corn and other grains in a field for the purpose of attracting doves is considered baiting, and it is illegal to hunt doves in a baited area. Also, baited fields are closed to hunting for ten days after the bait has been removed because doves will continue to visit the area out of force of habit. However, many normal agricultural practices are very attractive to doves, and are not considered baiting — and farmers may use these practices to improve dove hunting on their farms. As long as a normal agricultural practice is being followed, it is legal to hunt doves in that area. If landowners are attracting doves to an area with methods that are not considered normal agricultural practices, then the area is considered to be baited — and hunting is illegal. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which prohibits baiting of migratory game birds (including doves), offers the following guidelines on what constitues baiting and normal agricultural practices."

•It is legal to hunt in an area where wheat has been top sown (tghe seed is evenly scattered on top of a prepared or unprepared seedbedc, and the seed may or may not be covered with soil) because this is a normal agricultural practice for this crop. Normal planting rates must be followed — a bushel and a half of wheat seed per acre is considered average — and information on planting rates is available from county extension offices. It is also legal to hunt in an area where wheat has been planted in the fall because this is a normal agricultural practice for this crop. It is illegal, however, to hunt in an area where several wheat crops have been planted in quick succession — say every several days on the same piece of ground — because this is not a normal agricultural practice, and would be considered baiting.

•It is illegal to hunt in an area where sunflowers and millet have been top sown — or planted in the fall — because these are not normal agricultural practices for these crops.

•It is legal to hunt in areas where portions of crops are being harvested throughout the dove season because this is considered a normal agricultural practice. For example, many farmers harvest strips of corn in fields during the dove season, and these newly harvested area offer excellent dove hunting. Planting the newly harvested strips with wheat would also be considered a normal agricultural practice. However, it would be illegal to hunt if corn or millet were added to the field because this is not a normal agricultural practice for these crops.

For more information on dove hunting regulations, a pamphlet entitled "Dove Hunting the Right Way" is available from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, Division of Wildlife Management, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh N.C. 27611.

Waterfowl Seasons Set — The Wildlife Resources Commission recently established seasons and bag limits for the 1983-84 waterfowl seasons.

The addition of a limited Canvasback season and the shortening of the season for black ducks are two major changes for this year. The seasons and bag limites are as follow:

Duck Season — Oct. 6-8, Nov. 24-26 and Dec. 8-Jan. 20. Limit — 5 daily may include no more than 2 redheads or 2 wood ducks.

Black Duck Season — Dec. 28-Jan. 20. Limit 1 daily.

Special Canvasback Season — For the first time since 1971 the Canvasback duck will be legal game in a portion of the coastal area of the state. The season will run from Jan. 10-20 and may include 4 canvasback a day. Only one hen will be allowed in that total.

Pryor Out To Foil Arguello

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Aaron Pryor, beset by out-of-ring problems, will try to foil Alexis Arguello's bid to make boxing history when they fight a rematch Friday night at Caesars Palace.

Pryor defended the World Boxing Association junior welterweight title when he stopped Arguello in the 14th round of an exciting fight last Nov. 12 at Miami and foiled the Nicaraguan native's bid to become the first fighter to win titles in four weight classes.

The rematch will be the 31-year-old Arguello's last chance.

"If I win or if I lose, I am quitting in December," he said. "December is a promise...I promise myself."

There was controversy surrounding Arguello's failed bid for a fourth title. Bill Miller, Arguello's advisor, complained that Pryor used an illegal substance during the fight. Panama Lewis, who trained Pryor, contended that he had mixed some Perrier with Pryor's water because the fighter had had diarrhea the day of the fight. No urinalysis was given the champion after the fight.

Lewis has had his license revoked by the New York State Athletic Commission when he was found the gloves of a fighter he trained had been tampered with for a fight in Madison Square Garden. Emanuel Steward, the trainer of Thomas Hearns, the WBA super welterweight champion and Milton McCrory, the World Boxing Council welterweight champ, will train Pryor.

Hearns was supposed to defend his title against James Green on Friday night's show, but the bout was called off because of an injury to Hearns' right hand. So at a news conference last Monday, it was announced that Pryor would replace Richie Giachetti, who had a fallling out with Pryor.

"I think Arguello is going to fight the fight of his life," said Steward. "And I think Aaron will have to fight the fight of his life."

Pryor's life outside the ring has been hectic. Besides splitting with Giachetti and having problems with a promotional contract with Sylvester Stallone's Tiger Eye Productions, Pryor has separated from his wife and still is involved in litigation with manager Buddy LaRosa.

Pr so we took extensive precautions and placed him in the hospital for obesrvation," said Harris, adding he considered the injury minor.

Six days before his last fight, a third-round knockout of Sang-Hyun Kim at Atlantic City, N.J., Pryor had gone to a hospital for tranquilizers for an upset stomach.

The victory over Kim was Pryor's seventh defense of the title he won on a fourth-round knockout of Antonio Cervants Aug. 2, 1980, and it made his record 33-0, with 31 knockouts.

The loss was only the second in 21 world title fights and only the fifth against 78 victories, 63 of the by knockout, for Arguello, who has held the WBA featherweight, WBC super featherweight and WBC lightweight championships.

The other title-fight loss came in 1974 when Arguello lost a 15-round decision to Ernesto Marcel in his first bid for the featherweight championship.

When Arguello, who lives at King's Island, Fla., won a 15-round decision over Jim Watt June 20, 1981, he became the sixth man to win championships in three divisions.

After the loss in November, Arguello publicly criticized Futch.

But later he publicly apologized, saying, "The biggest mistake in my life I think was blaming Eddie Futch for the result of the first fight. I know Pryor is a great fighter."

Bonnett Takes Pole Slot

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Neil Bonnett has things he wants to accomplish this year, but he can't help thinking about 1984.

The 34-year-old veteran of Grand National stock car driving won the pole Friday for Monday's $339,000 Southern 500 at Darlington International Raceway.

Bonnett took it away from Terry Labonte in record fashion, driving his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, sponsored by Warner Hodgdon's National Engineering Co., to a fast lap of 157.187 mph. That broke the previous Southern 500 qualifying mark of 155.739, set a year ago by David Pearson, and was just shy of the overall track qualifying record of 157.818 set earlier this year by Tim Richmond in qualifying for the TranSouth 500.

Labonte, who will start from the outside of the front row, posted his best lap of 156.636 Thursday in the rain-shortened opening session of time trials. Only 13 drivers managed to get onto the track before a steady rain curtailed qualifying until Friday morning.

Labonte, expecting conditions to be better Friday, predicted his speed would not take the pole. Bonnett made his forecast come true.

"I feel like it's a great accomplishment to win the pole here," Bonnett said. "This place is so tough to drive that anything is an accomplishment here.

"And that's as good a lap as I've ever run around here. I've gone fast before and almost knocked down some walls. But this lap was very comfortable. It was so smooth It didn't even feel fast."

Bonnett, currently driving for the RahMoc team of Bob Rahilly and Butch Mock, already is committed to drive next season for the newly merged team of Junior Johnson and California businessman Hodgdon.

Two-time defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, after a long period of speculation and rumor, recently signed a three-year extension of his contract with Johnson.

"Everybody on this team knows that I'm leaving at the end of the season, but we want to keep things on an even keel," Bonnett said shortly after wrapping up his third pole of the season. "Then again, I'm looking forward to next year.

"We've been doing a lot of experimenting with engine combinations since the middle of the season, and we've had some ups and some downs.

"You know that Junior's got the facilities to get things accomplished, particularly in the kind of research and development that we've been doing on this team (RahMoc). And I feel like one's going to complement the other with our two-car operation.

"But the operations are going to be run separately. Everybody knows Darrell wants more say in his deal. And Junior wants to develop a competitive spirit between the two teams (Waltrip and Bonnett). For sure it's not the kind of deal where we'll be teammates and go around with our arms around each other.

"And I've felt very comfortable with the RahMoc team," added Bonnett, who won the World 600 earlier this year at Charlotte, N.C. "I'd like to win some more races for them and help them prepare for 1984, whoever drives for them."

Dick Brooks, in a Ford Thunderbird, was the fastest qualifier of Friday's second session, which filled positions 13 through 24. Brooks was clocked at 154.559.

Bobby Allison, who currently leads Waltrip by 41 points in the suddenly heated battle for the Winston Cup championship, qualified 14th fastest at 154.491.

The last 16 spots in the race day lineup will be filled today in a final session of time trials prior to the running of the Komfort Koach 150 Darlington Dash race for late model sedans.

In other track activity Friday, Jack Ingram beat out Bonnett for the pole for Sunday's Darlington 250 late model sportsman race. Ingram had a fast lap of 152.630, while Bonnett was clocked at 152.026.

Hamlet Legion Bid Is Ended

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Edina, Minn., wears the "team to beat" tag here at the 1983 American Legion World Series following its second shutout of the tournament — a 17-0 shellacking of Chico, Calif.

Edina and Worthington, Ohio, were the only unbeaten teams left in the national tournament following Friday night victories. Worthington defeated San Mateo, Calif., 8-2, before Edina whipped Chico. The unbeatens were scheduled to meet Saturday night at 7:35 p.m.

In other contests Saturday, Boyertown, Pa., plays San Mateo at 1:05 p.m. followed by Chico and New Orleans at 5:05 p.m.

Edina tied a 13-year-old tournament record Friday night with 22 hits against four Chico batters. Pat Donohue, hitting No. 2 in the lineup, tied another tourney record with a 5-for-5 performance at the plate.

"Everything went our way tonight," said Edina coach Bruce Barron. "The balls all fell in. Chico did not do a bad job of fielding."

It was the second shutout in two nights for Edina, who beat defending champion Boyertown 4-0 Thursday.

A crowd of 2,724 watched Pat Egan hurl a six-hitter for the victors to follow up a four-hit job by Rob Wassenaar in the opener.

"I felt good out there ...," said Egan. "I had real good control even with the big lead."

Earlier Friday, centerfielder Kevin Ubert rapped three singles and drove in three runs to lead Worthington to its 8-2 victory over San Mateo.

Worthington took advantage of three San Mateo errors in the third inning and scored three runs on no hits. The Great Lakes champions tallied two more in the fifth on a single by Ubert.

In the loser's bracket, a two-run single by Marc Alderfer started a five-run eighth inning for Boyertown, as the Bears upended and eliminated Hamlet, N.C., 12-4.

Boyertown batted through the lineup and scored five runs in the wild eighth inning to put the game out of reach, 10-2.

In an earlier game, New Orleans scored four runs in the top of the ninth inning to complete a furious comeback and defeat Natick, Mass., 11-7.

Fast Teacher

McDaniel Teaches Quick And Easy Way

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

"Lucky" McDaniel says he can teach anyone to shoot a shotgun in less than half an hour with his proven method — instinct shooting.

You really have to see it to believe it.

According to McDaniel, the less experience the pupil has had with guns, the easier it is to teach his method.

"It's all a matter of letting your left hand guide the gun," McDaniel said. "People don't realize how good their hand-eye coordination is. There's no need for a second lesson — once you've learned my way, you never forget."

McDaniel is also proficient with a bow, blow-gun, slingshot, darts and a pool cue — the source of his nickname.

"It's all the same principle," he said. "You just follow the target and you can't miss."

McDaniel begins the lesson with the student shooting at a five-inch metal disk which he tosses in the air. Once the pupil is hitting the disk with regularity, McDaniel brings out a smaller target.

The next trick is one most of his students only dreamed of before the lesson began — hitting a flying quarter.

"They're really amazed when he tells them before hand where they'll hit the coin," said Steve Brown, who travels with McDaniel and assists with the lessons. "He's seen it done so much he knows the pattern. It has to do with the sub-conscience focusing on certain areas; it's different for every coin."

After becoming proficient at hitting coins, it's time to move on to bigger game — clay pigeons. The first one "killed" surprises some students, but the fun continues as McDaniel has them try multiple targets.

"It's funny to watch the way people react after the first time," he said. "There was a girl about a week ago that would shoot, throw me the gun, run back and slap herself on the tanny. That was really a sight."

Learning McDaniel's instinct shooting isn't cheap, but he said he's never had a complaint.

"Everyone I've taught is satisfied," he said. "I've been written about in virtually every town I've been in, but I've never had one adverse word written about me."

McDaniel and Brown see a lot of the country in the weeks prior to the opening of hunting seasons. After their stop in Greenville, the rest of the agenda calls for stops in Jacksonville, N.C., Jackson, Miss., Galveston, Houston, and Baton Rouge.

"We really see a lot of pretty places," Brown said. "There's a lot nice people we meet — he only associates with the best."

Brown will be returning to Auburn University this week to complete his degree in finance, and he hopes some of the people he's met in his travels will help after graduation.

"When we were in Michigan we met an oil executive who had just completed a multi-million dollar complex," Brown said. "He told me to give him a call when I start looking for a job. There's a few others."

Swede Takes Cycling Event

The 21-year-old Berglund, who finished 17th last year, edged out American Rebecca Twigg, Maria Canins of Italy and last year's world champion Amanda Jones of Britain.

"I was tired, but I got over it," Berglund said after the race on the rain-slick and steep course that climbs nearly 200 meters at points.

"I didn't see her," Twigg said of Berlung after the race. "I looked around and she surprised me."

Berglund's time of one minute, 38.17 seconds, was nearly equal to that of her competitors, but her wheel crossed the finish line slightly ahead. She and the other top finishers set the pace from the start of the 37.3-mile race.

The event opened in slight rain, but was expected to continue with men's amateur competition.

Jeannie Longo of France finished fifth, with Cynthia Olavarri and Connie Carpenter, both of the United States at sixth and seventh after a strong start.

The front pack was comprised of the world's top women riders. Twigg was last year's champion in the pursuit. Canins finished second in the 1982 road race in Goodwood, England.

Carpenter, the reigning champion in the pursuit, raced with the leaders most of the way, but lost time when she fell. She was not injured.

Jays, Tigers Split Pair

By The Associated Press

After producing 32 runs and 58 safeties in a hit-happy doubleheader, the Toronto Blue Jays and Detroit Tigers were like a couple of heavyweights who had punched themselves to a bloody draw.

The Tigers rallied from a three-run deficit in the opener of their Friday night twin bill in Toronto to take a 9-8 cliffhanger in 10 innings, then dropped behind 7-0 and fell just a run short in the nightcap which the Blue Jays won 8-7.

"The first one was a tough one to lose," said Jesse Barfield, who slugged two home runs in a losing cause. "Baltimore won, so we've got to put on a winning streak in a hurry. We can't lose any more, that's the bottom line."

Barfield and Detroit's Lance Parrish were two of the biggest guns Friday night. Barfield clubbed two homers in the opener, then keyed a four-run third inning with a two-run triple in the nightcap. Parrish hit a dramatic two-out solo homer in the ninth to send the opener in extra innings, then went 3-for-5 in the nightcap, including a two-run homer.

Elsewhere in the AL, Baltimore nipped Minnesota 1-0, Boston beat Chicago 5-1, Texas blanked Kansas City 7-0, Cleveland whipped Oakland 4-2, New York edged Seattle 5-4 and California stopped Milwaukee 6-5.

After Parrish tied the first game in Toronto with his homer in the ninth, Larry Herndon doubled in two runs in the 10th for the game-winning tallies. With runners on first and third and two out, Herndon slashed a double into the right field corner to score John Wockenfuss and Alan Trammell and make a winner of Aurelio Lopez, 9-7.

Then Barfield keyed the Blue Jays' second-game win with his big triple. Toronto starter Jim Acker improved his record to 4-1 with relief help from Dave Geisel, who posted his fifth save. Loser Milt Wilcox, 8-9, making his first start since coming off the disabled list, lasted just 2 2-3 innings.

Orioles 1, Twins 0

In Minneapolis, Ken Singleton hit a ninth-inning home run and Mike Flanagan pitched five-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings as Baltimore blanked the Twins.

Frank Viola, 7-12, took the loss, though pitching a five-hitter through eight innings.

"Everyone wants to be on the long end of a 1-0 game," said Flanagan. "You try to win them all but a 1-0 game is nice when it's over. It's not while it's going on, though."

Red Sox 5, White Sox 1

Rice drilled an 0-2 pitch by Chicago starter Jerry Koosman high into the screen in left at Fenway Park after a one-out single by Wade Boggs in the first. The homer was Rice's sixth in nine games, giving him 34 for the season, tops in the major leagues.

Then, after Koosman walked Boggs with the bases loaded to force in a run in the fourth, Rice poked his two-run single for his 105th and 106th RBI of the season.

Right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd scattered eight hits. Boyd evened his record at 4-4 while Koosman's record dropped to 10-7.

Rangers 7, Royals 0

Wayne Tolleson's two-run single triggered a four-run fifth and George Wright added a three-run homer to lead host Texas over Kansas City behind Charlie Hough's six-hitter.

Hough, 12-12, struck out seven and walked two in pitching his eighth complete.

Paul Splittorff, 10-7, was the loser, giving up seven hits in 6 1-3 innings and being charged with six runs. Splittorff left after Tolleson and Buddy Bell singled to put runners on first and second in the seventh. Wright's 16th homer came on the first pitch by reliever Mike Armstrong.

Indians 4, A's 2

High Step

Right-hander Lary Sorensen, 9-9, pitched seven innings to gain the victory. Bud Anderson came on in the Oakland eighth to pitch out of a jam and record his sixth save.

Yankees 5, Mariners 4

Ray Fontenot, 5-2, scattered eight hits before leaving with two on and nobody out in the eighth. Rich Gossage came on to post his 16th save.

Angels 6, Brewers 5

Ellis Valentine's two-run single the seventh snapped a 4-4 tie and carried homestanding California over Milwaukee. The rally came off reliever Rick Waits, 0-3, who was trying to protect a 4-3 lead.

"It was a pitch right over the plate and I had a chance to pull it," said Valentine of his game-winning hit. "Everybody wants a chance to do something."

Top Seeds Move On In U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending women's champion Chris Evert Lloyd breezed to victory over Alycia Moulton 6-2, 6-2 Friday night as the top four seeds moved into the third round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Top-seeded John McEnroe crushed John Sadri 6-0, 6-1, 6-4 and No. 2 Ivan Lendl battered Israel's Shlomo Glickstein 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 in men's singles, while Martina Navratilova, the women's top seed who is determined to win her first U.S. Open singles title, thrashed Louise Allen 6-2, 6-0 in 56 minutes. Lloyd is seeded No. 2.

Lendl, the Czech right-hander, ended the night by decimating his rival as Glickstein held his service in only the first game of the match, the second game of the second set and the third and seventh games of the final set.

The only seed to fall Friday was No. 15 Kathy Rinaldi, who was eliminated 6-4, 6-3 by Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina.

Fifth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, who says he doesn't stand a chance of winning this hardcourt tournament, won his second-round match by stopping Brian Gottfried 6-3, 6-4, 7-6, while Yannick Noah, seeded fourth, wasn't extended as he dispatched fellow Frenchman Jerome Vanier 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

A six-time winner of America's most prestigious tennis tournament, Lloyd broke Moulton in the third and fifth games of the opening set as she rushed out to a 5-1 lead. Moulton, who won a set from Lloyd in their last meeting two weeks ago in Toronto, lost her serve to begin the second set.

But she broke her opponent right back and held serve to take a 2-1 lead. She would not win another game in the match, which lasted just 50 minutes.

"The dangerous players left in my (half of the) draw are serve-and-volley rather than baseline," Lloyd said. This was a good tuneup for me."

McEnroe, while not close to the perfection he displayed in the final at Wimbledon in July, was too sharp for Sadri to handle. And while Sadri, who now has lost all seven of their meetings, anticipated McEnroe's shots well, the world's No. 1 player's game simply was too good.

The two first met in the NCAA final in 1978, with McEnroe winning three tiebreakers. This time, McEnroe rode his serve-and-volley game to the easy victory.

Other early winners Friday were fifth-seeded Pam Shriver, who upset Navratilova in the quarterfinals here a year ago; No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, 10 Zina Garrison, No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain and No. 16 Kathy Jordan.

In the men's draw, No. 12 Johan Kriek outlasted Lloyd Bourne 6-4, 6-1, 3-6, 2-6, 6-1 and No. 13 Steve Denton stopped Australian Brad Drewett 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Navratilova had more unforced errors than her opponent and fewer out-right winners. But the graceful left-hander broke Allen in the second, fourth and eighth games of the first set. In the second set, Allen, who battled gamely despite being outclassed in every respect, could only hold her own serve once, that in the fourth game.

"She didn't make too many errors," Navratilova said of Allen. "I had to win the points, she didn't give me anything. I knew I couldn't wait for her to make the mistakes. I had to force the action, which I like to do anyway."

After two matches here on the DecoTurf II hardcourts, Navratilova has dropped only four games.

"It doesn't matter how long it takes to win, just that you win," Navratilova said.

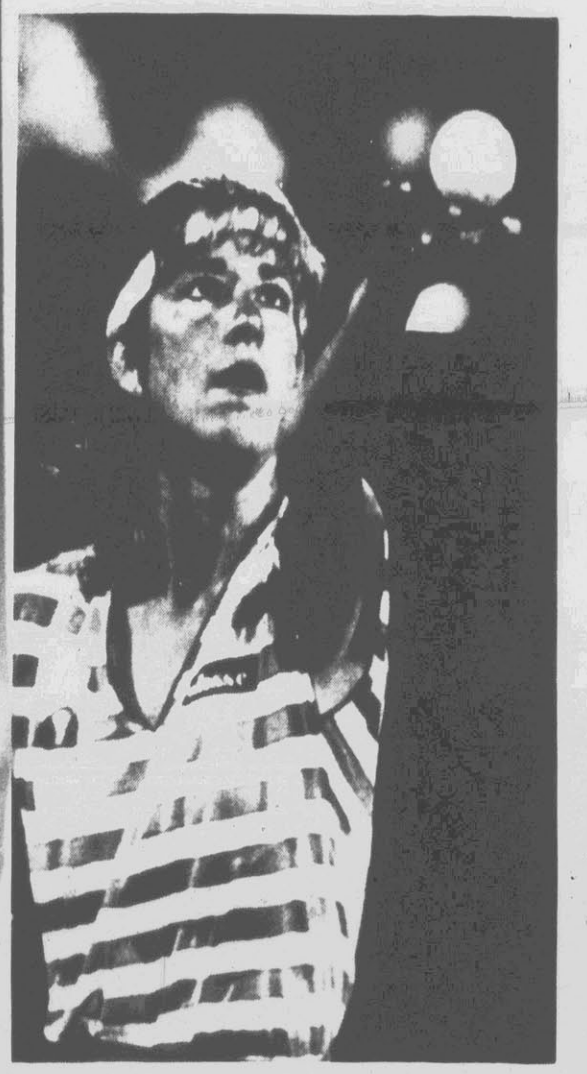

Wilander, who captured the French Open in 1982, used his steady baseline game to grab the first two sets off Gottfried, who is 12 years older than the 19-year-old Swede. But the veteran Gottfried, who was ranked No. 5 in the world in 1977-78, zipped out to a 5-0 lead in the third set.

The methodical Swede wasn't fazed, however, ripped off the next six games and was serving for the match.

Gottfried broke Wilander to send the third set into the tiebreak, then took a 3-2 lead, winning the third, fourth and fifth points. He wouldn't win another as Wilander took the tiebreaker 7-3.

Gerulaitis, who was ousted in the first round by Fritz Buehning here last year, attoned for that defeat, but had to struggle to do it. The blond New Yorker finally outlasted Buehning 3-6, 6-1, 7-6, 6-2 in a two-hour, 13-minute battle.

Shriver ousted Jean Hepner 6-4, 6-3; Mandlikova stopped Kathy Horvath 7-5, 7-6; Garrison eliminated Shelly Solomon 4-6, 6-0, 6-3; Durie downed Japan's Etsuko Inoue 7-5, 6-3, and Jordan defeated Peanut Louie 6-1, 6-1.

It's A Toss-Up

Chris Evert Lloyd, second seed in the 1983 U.S. Open Tennis Championships, tosses the ball for a serve during her match Friday night. Lloyd defeated Alycia Moulton, 6-2, 6-2, in a match that lasted only 50 minutes at the National Tennis Center. (AP Laserphoto)

Sigel Seeking Second Title

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Jay Sigel isn't exactly ancient, but the 39-year-old Philadelphia insurance executive, seeking a second straight U. S. Amateur Golf championship, yields nothing to the young corps of college kids he's facing.

Sigel already has shot down, in order, Bruce Soulsby of Ohio State, George MacDonald of South Carolina, Eric Peterson of Fresno State and recent Louisiana State graduate Roy Biancalana.

Next in line is 20-year-old tobacco-chewing Clark Burroughs, the tournament medalist out of Ohio State.

"The young kids don't have any respect for age" said Sigel. "Nobody's been kind to me, everyone has played exceptionally well. I'm surprised to be in this position."

Sigel needs two more victories to become the first to win the U. S. Amateur in successive years since Harvie Ward did it in 1955-56.

"I'm not rested and there's added pressure of being the defending champion," said Sigel. "There's less pressure on my opponents. If they lose, they can rationalize that they've lost to the defending champion. But I'm trying to do my best."

Peters Faces End Of Career In Guilty Plea

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Six months after celebrating a Super Bowl victory and after signing a $1 million contract, Washington Redskins' All-Pro safety Tony Peters is facing a prison sentence and the end of his athletic career.

Peters, charged with setting up a plot to sell cocaine in the Washington area, pleaded guilty Friday before U.S. District Court Judge Richard L. Williams to conspiracy to traffic in cocaine and a second charge of using a telephone to facilitate the felony.

In exchange for the guilty pleas, prosecutors agreed to drop seven additional, related charges.

The plea bargaining agreement does not require Peters to testify against others implicated in the case. For their part, prosecutors will make no recommendations to Judge Williams prior to sentencing.

Peters, 30, will face a possible 19 years in prison and $55,000 in fines when he is sentenced on Oct. 7. He is currently free on $50,000 personal bond.

The National Football League immediately ordered Peters suspended without pay pending the sentencing. A final determination of his NFL status will be made after the sentencing, said NFL spokesman Joe Browne.

Responding to the guilty plea, Redskin owner Jack Kent Cooke, who earlier offered to help pay Peters' legal fees, said: "I am saddened to hear that he admitted his implication in the matter. Knowing Tony as I do, I'm sure he will survive it. I know somehow he will overcome this adversity."

"I guess my reaction is the same as most of teammates," said Redskins player representative Mark Murphy. "I am surprised he changed his plea from innocent to guilty. But it was probably a wise move. They seemed to have an awful lot against him."

During the 30-minute court session, Peters showed no emotion as Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica described to the court Peters' involvement in setting up the drug sale last June and his subsequent payment of $3,000 for helping to consummate the deal.

Peters is the only one of the eight co-conspirator to have pleaded guilty to any of the counts.

Others named in the indictment were Peters' half brothers, Charles and Douglas Bray of Toronto, Ronald Wood of Capital Heights, Md., Jose Cebada of Corona, N.Y., and Thomas Valanidas of Port Republic, Md.

Also, William Howard Burns of Lusby, Md., and Jorge Alberto Robert, an Argentine national, the drug ring's alleged supplier.

Cebada remains at large. The rest have all entered innocent pleas before Judge Williams and are awaiting trial.

After eight years in the NFL, Peters came into his own last year, earning All-Pro honors for the first time and helping anchor a Redskins defense that brought Washington its first Super Bowl victory.

Seven months later, on Aug. 3, police led him away in handcuffs from the team's training camp in Carlisle, Pa.

Peters' suspension by the NFL raises to five the number of players suspended this season for activities involving drugs.

In July, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended Ross Browner and Pete Johnson of the Cincinnati Bengals, Greg Stemrick of the New Orleans Saints and E.J. Junior of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The players were suspended for the first four games of the regular season.

In testimony in federal court, Browner and Johnson admitted purchasing cocaine from drug dealers on numerous occasions.

Junior and Stemrick were arrested on cocaine felony charges in separate incidents. Each pleaded guilty or no contest to the charges and each was convicted earlier this year. Both players are currently on probation.

Prosecutors alleged that the conspiracy involving Peters began last year when a Canadian undercover agent bought cocaine from Charles and Douglas Bray. The Brays said the sample had been provided by Peters, the prosecution said.

According to the original indictment, On June 28, Peters allegedly introduced two undercover agents to Wood and the four men then discussed the sale of cocaine.

Wood and other defendants later made two cocaine sales to undercover agents, after which an agent paid Peters $3,000 for helping set up the sales, the indictment alleged.

Less than a week earlier, Peters had received a $40,000 signing bonus from the Redskins, the first installment on a four-year, $1 million contact.

A Pitt County native, Mrs. Jones resides on Route 2, Ayden, with her husband, Bruce, and their son. The family attends the King's Crossroads Free Will Baptist Church.

CASH DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Rose's Stores Inc. declared a cash dividend of 12 cents per share on common stock and Class B common stock, payable on or before Oct. 1 to stockholders of record on Sept. 16.

The directors also recommended that, subject to stockholder approval, both the common stock and Class B common stock be split three for one. The record date for the proposed split would be Oct. 31, with a payment date of Nov. 14.

A special stockholders meeting will be held Oct. 17 to consider the action.

BOARD MEMBER

Nancy Emory has joined the board of directors of Great Southern Finance Inc. of Greenville, according to Carl R. Woxman Jr., president.

Mrs. Emory, wife of East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory, was formerly the owner and president of United Credit Service of High Point which operated six branch offices in North Carolina.

CONVERTING PLANT

The Old Dominion Box Co. Inc. announced that its Kinston plant will be converted from rigid boxes to a corrugated sheet box facility.

Frank Buhler, president, said corrugated machinery is being installed and it is hoped production will begin by Oct. 1. He said is expected that 15 people will be employed when the plant is operating at full capacity.

The company, with 17 plants located through the South, is headquartered in Lynchburg, Va.

ASSETS PURCHASED

Heilig-Meyers Co., Richmond based home furnishings chain, announced the purchase of the assets of Joyce Home Furnishings Inc., which had been operating a furniture store in Madison.

Heilig-Meyers said the company now has 86 stores in operation with three additional locations being remodeled for openings this fall.

TELEPHONE COURSE

Jerry M. Grimsley, a local employee of Carolina Telephone, completed a three-day course conducted by the company at its Rocky Mount training center.

Grimsley is a PBX installer repairer in the installation and repair department.

CT&T conducts year-round schools to train new employees and to keep other employees up to date on new technological developments in telecommunications.

HAWAII CONVENTION

John, Mildred and Robert Causey of John's Flowers, Greenville, attended the 1983 convention of Florists' Transworld Delivery Association, held in August in Honolulu, Hawaii.

During the convention, they attended the FTD annual members' meeting, where association business was transacted and new national officers were elected.

The association is a co-operative organization, owned and operated by over 20,000 retail florist members in North America and South America.

RECORD TOTALS

Shoney's Inc. reported record revenues and earnings for both the third quarter and the 40 weeks ended Aug. 7.

For the third quarter, revenues increased 23 percent from $79,571,763 to $98,050,245 and net income rose 35 percent from $4,663,508 to $6,315,264.

During the 40 weeks, income from operations increased 30 percent to $17,080,950 and revenues climed 24 perpcent to $297,871,056. Shoney's said that because of one time nonrecurring gains in 1982, net income increased 21 percent to $16,936,404 from $13,953,943 a year earlier.

CONFERENCE SPEAKER

C.F. Riggs, systems engineer for the automation engineering group of Burroughs Wellcome Co., will be one of the guest speakers at INTERPHEX USA 83, the Pharmaceutical and Cosmetic Industries exposition and conference, set for Sept. 20-22 in New York City.

Riggs will discuss automation and computerization in the manufacturing of pharmaceutical products.

Restrictive regulations, guidelines and inspection procedures of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration governing the pharmaceutical and cosmetic industries will be one focus of the sessions at INTERPHEX.

EARNINGS REPORTED

J. C. Penney Co. Inc. reported second quarter income from continuing operations of $55 million, compared with $61 million in 1982. It said results for last year include a $13 million gain on the non-taxable exchange of shares of its common stock for a portion of its outstanding sinking fund debentures.

Excluding the non-operating item, operating earnings for the 13 weeks ended July 30 rose 13.5 percent to a record $55 million from $48 million a year ago.

For the first half, the department store and catalog chain's earnings were $113 million, compared with $116 last year. Excluding 1982's non-operating item, first half earnings rose $10 million from $103 million a year ago.

Second quarter sales increased 3.6 percent to $2,364 million from $2,281 million in 1982. Volume for the first half amounted to $4,482 million, an increase of 2.8 percent from $4,361 million in 1982.

ACTIVITY ROSE

The level of business activity in North Carolina continued to expand in July, according to the Wachovia Business Index, which registered 120.2, up 0.6 percent from the revised June figure.

The rise resulted from increases in building permits and in non-agricultural employment and a decline in initial claims for unemployment insurance. New business formations were down in July, but remained above 1982 levels.

The non-agricultural employment increase was boosted by gains in manufacturing and non-manufacturing sectors. Employment was up in textiles, apparel, furniture, construction, government and trade, while services employment decreased in July.

STOCK OFFERING

Park Communications Inc., (formerly Park Broadcasting Inc.) announced that it filed a registration statement, which has not yet become effective, with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering a proposed initial public offering of its common stock. WNCT-AM & FM and WNCT-TV are part of the corporation.

The company said it has filed for a one million share offering which consists of 800,000 primary shares and 200,000 secondary shares.

Proceeds from the proposed stock sale will be used for possible acquisition of various communication properties and for general corporate purposes.

The company, headquartered in Ithaca, N.Y., owns and operates seven television stations, seven AM and seven FM radio stations, and publishes 68 newspapers.

ART DIRECTOR

Adams & Longino Advertising Inc., Greenville, announced that Judson Poole has joined the firm as an art director, effective immediately.

Poole, who is from New Bern, was in the commercial art program at East Carolina University.

The advertising firm has a staff of six.

FORMED SUBSIDIARY

NCNB National Bank of North Carolina announced that it has formed a new subsidiary that will provide leveraged lease financing to companies making large capital equipment purchases of up to $100 million.

Peter Chalmers, a leasing specialist and senior vice president in the corporate finance division of the bank, has been named president of NCNB Lease Investments Inc.

The subsidiary will use a combination of NCNB funds and funds provided by institutional lenders to finance capital equipment and lease the equipment to other companies. The new effort will be headquartered in Charlotte.

TRW FIGURES

For the second quarter ending June 30, TRW Inc. reported higher sales but lower earnings.

Sales for the quarter rose to $1.41 bilion, a 4 percent increase from 1982's second period total. Earnings before taxes were $99.1 million, down 8 percent. Net earnings fell 14 percent, to $53.2 million.

For the first half, TRW sales totaled $1.79 billion, up 4 percent. Net earnings amounted to $93.8 million, down 11 percent.

PCE MEETING

The Coastal Plains chapter of Professional Construction Estimators will meet Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at the Kinston Holiday Inn, located at the intersection of U.S. 70 and U.S. 258.

Kirkland Says Labor Leaders Don't Want To Control Votes

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Saturday that while labor should unite behind a presidential candidate, the federation's top leadership has "no power and no wish" to dictate how millions of union members vote in the 1984 election.

President Reagan, meanwhile, invoked the name of the founder of the American trade union movement in his national radio address and said that while the unemployment rate is improving, "none of us can be fully satisfied until many more of our people can find work."

In his annual Labor Day address to the nation, Kirkland said labor's hierarchy must seek to unite the union movement behind a candidate in the White House sweepstakes.

"We have learned the hard way that to divorce ourselves from the (presidential nominating) selection process may sometimes deprive us of a clear and meaningful choice in the voting booth," he said.

Kirkland used his holiday to defend the AFL-CIO's 1984 political strategy, which breaks with the federation's traditional stance of neutrality during the presidential primary and caucus season.

He said, "The AFL-CIO makes no claim, has no power, and no wish to control or deliver the votes of any of the millions of proud and free working men and women who comprise our membership."

The AFL-CIO's general board, consisting of the heads of the federation's 96 affiliated unions, is scheduled to meet Oct. 1 in Hollywood, Fla., to decide whom to endorse. Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale seems certain to win the labor nod.

While Kirkland was defending the federation's political strategy, which is aimed at putting a Democrat in the White House, Reagan quoted union movement founder Samuel Gompers as saying that workers are entitled "to be full sharers in the abundance which is the result of their brain and brawn."

"Those words have meant a lot to me over the years," Reagan said. "One of the best ways to make sure that happens is to build a healthy, growing economy that opens up more and more opportunity to our people."

Reagan said that America "was built not by some small, privileged elite, but by the physical, mental and moral strength of free working men and women, people who asked for nothing but the chance to build a better future in a climate of fairness and freedom."

He noted that nearly 2.5 million people have found jobs since America's civilian unemployment hit a post-Depression peak of 10.8 percent. But Reagan also acknowledged that 10.7 million workers remained without jobs in August, when the jobless rate stood still at 9.5 percent.

"Now, I know that for many Americans on this Labor Day, life is still tough," he said. "None of us can be fully satisfied until many more of our people can find work."

But Reagan also asserted that "the economy is gaining strength, and that's good new for us all ... With your help and the help of a bipartisan group in the Congress, our efforts are showing good results."

In the Democratic Party's broadcast response to Reagan's speech, Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., said that on this Labor Day weekend "we should pause to reflect on the plight of those millions of men and women who are unemployed."

"Today President Reagan is taking credit for reducing the nation's unemployment rate," he said. "What could be more ironic? In effect he is saying he is reducing the suffering he caused in the first place."

Ford said, "Reagan's economic policy guaranteed both the recession and the high unemployment rate that followed ... Reaganomics, it turns out, was a dreadful miscalculation. And American workers and their families are paying for it."

Kirkland's holiday message, which was prepared and released well before Reagan's Saturday radio address, said: "This is the third year in a row that Labor Day statements from the White House have sounded empty and false to our ears.

"And therefore, this year we have taken back our holiday and renamed it Solidarity Day III, which workers are celebrating in their own way, in their own communities, from coast to coast."

The AFL-CIO has adopted the Solidarity name in recognition of the trade union struggle in Poland.

The National Right-To-Work Committee, an organization which opposes laws requiring workers to join unions in order to hold jobs, scoffed at the use of the Solidarity label.

The committee, in its own Labor Day statement, said "it is ironic that union officials would try to equate themselves with the situation in Poland, where they (the workers) want to join a union and end up suffering some of the kinds of abuses where (American workers) are forced to join a union."

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the nation's largest union, which is not affiliated with the AFL-CIO, also called for heightened political action.

Rate Hike Sought

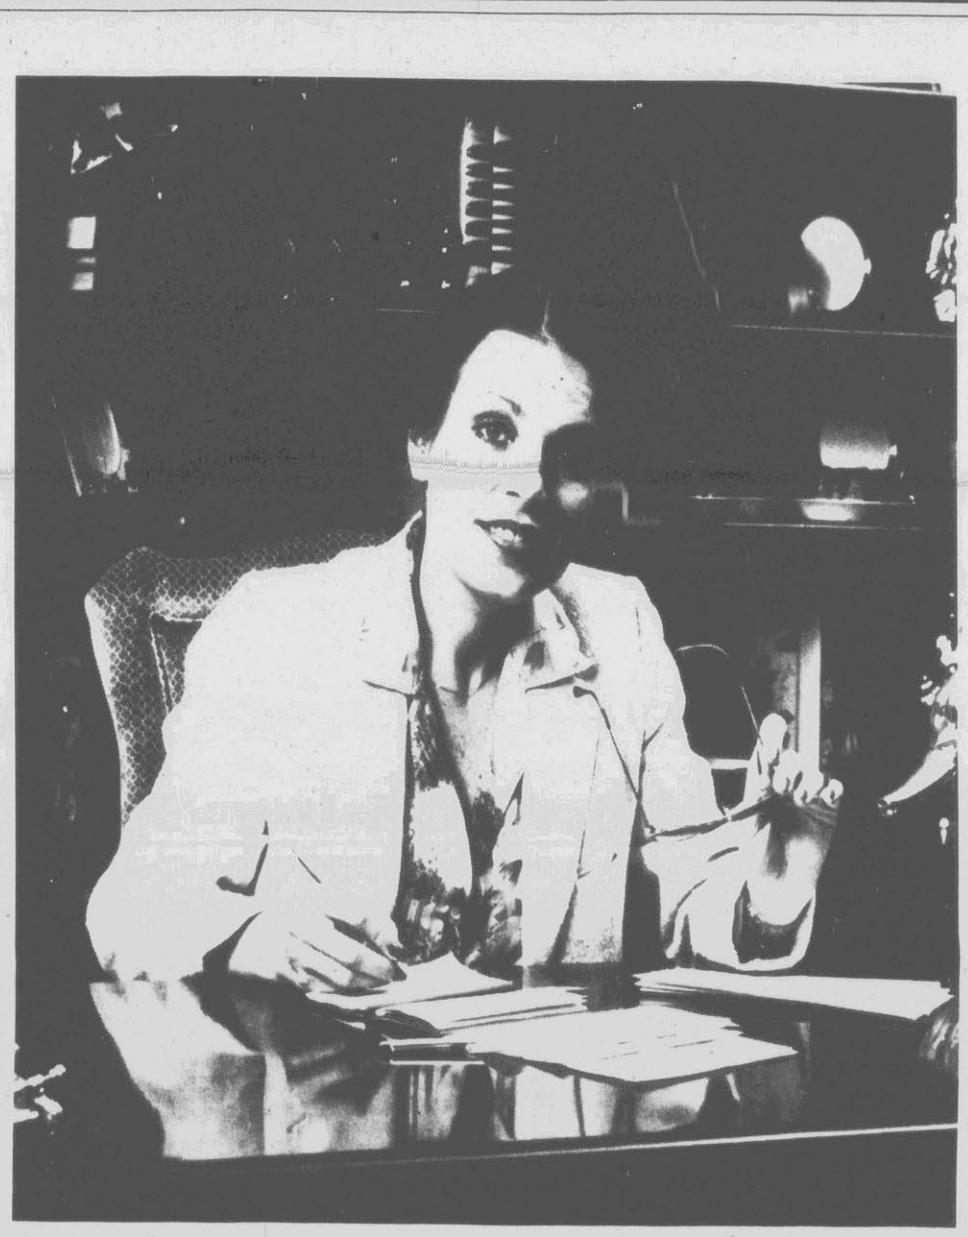

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Officials with Duke Power Co. say they need a large portion of a requested $136 million rate hike to help pay for costs of building a reactor at the company's McGuire Nuclear Station near Charlotte.

Duke Power Co. filed the rate hike request Friday with the state Public Service Commission.

The rate increase petition is the highest ever requested by Duke in South Carolina. Duke serves about 1.3 million customers in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"About one half of the request is to recover the South Carolina retail portion of the company's investment in McGuire Nuclear Station's Unit 2," said William H. Grigg, executive vice-president for finance and administration at Duke Power Co.

The utility company also has to pay debts on a nuclear reactor at the Cherokee Nuclear Station that was abandoned before it ever went into operation.

HUNGRY HARDHATS — An unemployed member of the United Steelworkers' Local 1397 in Homestead, Pa., leaves the food bank with his daughter. The food bank, restarted when unemployment reached such high levels in the industry, has been operating for a year thanks to benefits from rock concerts, cookbook sales, cash gifts and union donations. Futures Prices Climb

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Grain futures prices were mostly higher and soybeans were sharply higher at the close of trading Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Fears subsided on the floor about a possible embargo of U.S. grain exports to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the apparent downing of a Korean Air Lines passenger jet and prices recovered Thursday's loss.

Several soybean contracts advanced by the 30-cent limit, the same amount they fell on Thursday.

Sources at the floor said the incident was one factor in a selloff that pushed prices sharply lower on Thursday but Don Outland, a grain analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said few if any analysts believe that a grain embargo is likely or even possible.

"I view that as only a very minor factor in this market," he said, but acknowledged, "We're still dealing with some uncertainty about the U.S. reaction to the Soviets' stonewalling on their reply to charges that they shot down the jet," Outland said.

"We're biding our time as we await the production report, which is the most important factor," Outland said, referring to the Agriculture Department's monthly harvest forecast, which is to be released Sept. 12.

Trading also was subdued because of the three-day holiday weekend, Outland said.

Wheat settled ¾ cent lower to 2 cents higher with the contract for delivery in September at $3.85¾ a bushel; corn was 1¾ cents to 6¾ cents higher with September at 3.58 a bushel; oats were 3½ cents to 5 cents higher with September at $1.76 a bushel; and soybeans were 29¼ cents to 30 cents higher with September at 8.99¼ a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were lower on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Trading was light and there were few buyers in the markets. Sources at the floor said prices eroded gradually throughout the session.

Robert Saathoff, a livestock analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. said the supply of beef and pork has been increasing recently and demand has failed to keep pace.

He noted that pork loins on wholesale markets fell 4 cents a pound Friday, indicating a weak undertone in the markets.

And meat packers appeared to be well-supplied for the Labor Day weekend, which further reduced the demand for animals, Saathoff said.

Live cattle settled .37 cent to .95 cent lower with the contract for delivery in October at 55.55 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .55 cent to 1.13 cents low-er with September at 55.50 cents a pound; live hogs were 1.18 cents lower to .23 cent higher with October at 41.62 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .80 cent to 1.85 cents lower with February at 61.47 cents a pound.

Prices advanced slightly late in the session when the U.S. dollar weakened slightly against major foreign currencies, said Gail Levey, a metals analyst in New York with Shearson-American Express.

Gold settled $1.20 to $1.50 higher with the contract for delivery in September at $416.90 a troy ounce; silver settled 10.8 cents to 11.5 cents higher with September at $12.228 a troy ounce.

Interest Levels Drop As Jobless Rates Continue

By The Associated Press

Interest rates fell in reaction to a Federal Reserve Board report on the money supply, and the stock market rallied as the government reported that August's jobless rate held steady at 9.5 percent.

However, joblessness among black youths in the 16 to 19 age group soared from 47.6 percent in July to 56.8 percent in August, the Labor Department reported this weekend.

The nation's money supply fell $1.4 billion in the week ended Aug. 24, the Fed reported, immediately sending interest rates downward. The rate on six-month Treasury bills, for example, dropped to 9.40 percent from 9.54 percent. Bond prices rose.

The drop in the money supply — the third in as many weeks — was larger than most analysts had expected. As a result, upward pressure on interest rates is likely to subside, economists said.

"It means stable interest rates," said David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York-based government securities dealer.

The stock market, meanwhile, ended the week on a positive note, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rising 8.64 points to 1,215.45. For the week's five trading sessions, the widely watched market index gained 23.38 points.

In the commodities markets, grain futures prices rose as fears on the trading floor about a possible U.S. grain export embargo against the Soviet Union subsided. Grain prices had tumbled Thursday on fears that the United States might retaliate against the Soviets, whom the Reagan administration accused of shooting down an unarmed South Korean jumbo jet with 269 people aboard.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Hughes told reporters they would "be misled" if they expected the Reagan administration to embargo U.S. grain or cancel a $10 billion, five-year grain sales agreement signed last week in Moscow.

In its report on the labor market, the Labor Department said the August jobless rate was unchanged from July's 9.5 percent.

Yet a steadily improving economy furnished jobs for nearly 300,000 of some 400,000 unemployed Americans who renewed their search for work.

Because the number of newly unemployed — 109,000 — was less than a tenth of a percentage point of the 112.2 million-member labor force, the overall civilian unemployment rate remained unchanged after adjustment for seasonal factors.

Total employment in the civilian economy hit a record 103.2 million, and the unemployment rate would have declined significantly if there had been no significant surge in the number of job-seekers.

Joblessness for black male teen-agers hit a record 56.8 percent in August, although unemployment among adult black men eased from 18.7 percent to 18.4 percent.

"Clearly the implications of black youth unemployment are far-reaching: greater crime rates, more welfare dependency, and greater idleness and restlessness among these youths," said Maxine Bailey, executive director of Jobs for Youth Inc., a private research organization.

Jobless Steelworkers Depend on Food Bank

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The food bank has become a key ingredient for jobless steelworkers whose meals are paid for by rock concerts, cookbook sales, cash gifts and union donations.

"Something had to be done to help people," said Jack Conway, coordinator of the Presentation Food Bank in Midland, where a mystery woman known as Mrs. Calabash has donated $20,000. "Over the years, steelworkers have always been like that. They stick together. They help out their brothers and sisters."

The food banks were first used to help hard hats during the 116-day strike of 1959. They reappeared when the jobless rate among steelworkers, the best paid industrial workers in the world, hit its highest mark since records were first kept after the Great Depression.

The first one opened in March 1982 in the Monongahela Valley. Now there are 200 steelworker food banks nationwide and about 50 to 75 locals involved in the so-called "Rust Bowl" — the tri-state area around Pittsburgh.

"It's become a big business. It just gradually evolved. We're all buying time," said Gary Hubbard, spokesman for the United Steelworkers of America, which has seen membership drop 40 percent to 700,000. "There's no other industrial group that's been hit harder."

All sales of the urban folk song "Steel Mill Blues," written by college student Mike Pickering of Wellsville, Ohio, go to the USW food banks. The union has sold 25,000 records at $2 apiece and sent copies to President Reagan and each member of Congress.

Since last August, the USW has raised $110,000 through payroll deductions and other contributions. But most of the money comes from local ingenuity — carnivals, a cookbook and concerts. The local food banks use the money to buy food at 10 cents a pound from the Pittsburgh Community Food Bank.

In Homestead, USWA Local 1397 made $28,000 from two benefit rock concerts and other money from bingo games, raffles and benefit softball games.

In May 1982, the food bank fed 300 families. Now, about 1,000 families each month get milk, eggs, government cheese and butter, canned goods, pasta, bread, potatoes, cereal, and other staples.

"It's a supplement," said Jay Weinberg, chairman of the local's unemployment committee. "There's no way we could feed a whole family three meals a day. We give them something that can free up their money for utilities or rent. We're just trying to tide them over."

The Midland food bank opened last August after workers donated $92,000 in a deferred cost of living raise. The admission price for a union dance last October was a can of food.

But the real heroine is a white-haired woman in her 70s whose real name has never been made public. She is known only as Mrs. Calabash, the name used by the late Jimmy Durante when he ended his performances with, "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are." The steelworkers' Mrs. Calabash has donated $20,000 in the past year.

"She's pulled us out of some tight times," said Jesse Torres, co-director of the food bank.

Last July, USW Local 1211 in nearby Aliquippa began handing out $25 food certificates paid for by the payroll deductions of members who still had jobs. Money also came from a carnival where $1 bought three whacks with a sledgehammer at foreign cars. And a former resident who is now an Alaskan construction millionaire sent a $10,000 check in March.

China Firm To Build Plant

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Lenox China-Crystal Inc. has decided to build a $12 million plant in Granville County after receiving approval of $10 million worth of revenue bonds, officials announced Friday.

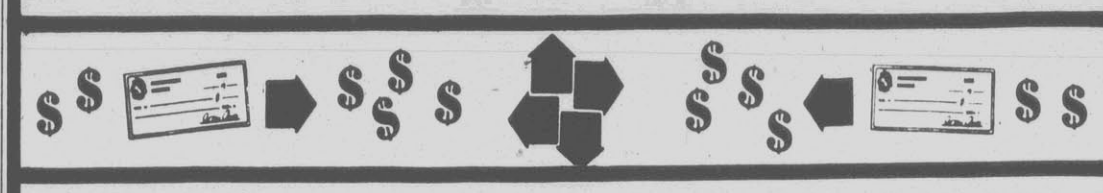

John K. Nelms, director of the Granville-Oxford Planning Commission said the firm plans to make gift items at the plant. Officials said the plant will employ 200 by 1985 and could expand to 400 employees if economic conditions are suitable.

The town of Oxford approved a zoning variance waiving the setback requirement on one side of the plant site and allowing an outlet store at the plant site to satisfy other Lenox requests.

Plant Layoffs Curtail 'Good Life' In Shelby

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Former employees of Fiber Industries' Shelby plant are still learning that the good life is fragile a year after major curtailments were completed last August.

Marty Goode, 29, and his wife both worked at the big plant. Pooling their salaries, they could afford just about anything within reason. They had a three-bedroom, two-bathroom brick house, a new car, truck and camper.

In November 1981, Goode's wife was laid off, and the following May he lost the job he had held nine years and seven months. He missed retirement benefits by four months.

The good life turned sour. As every job-hunting excursion led to another dead end, the Goodes were forced to sacrifice what they had spent years accumulating.

Car, truck and camper went first.

Then the marriage. Goode blames the separation on the pressures of lifestyle reversal.

"She got the house, but she rents it," he says. "I liye in a 10 by 40 mobile home and drive a used car with 100,000 miles."

Goode works part time in a Shelby gun shop. "I'm still trying to find something else," he says. "I've got applications out and taken a bunch of tests, but no one has really called me."

One of Cleveland County's largest employers, Fiber Industries had over 3,000 workers during the peak days of the early 1970s. In October 1981, the company announced polyester filament yarns would be discontinued at the Shelby and Greenville, S.C., plants by Dec. 31, 1982. The phaseout would result in the loss of 1,275 jobs at Shelby and 260 at Greenville.

In May, Fiber moved up the phaseout deadline from December to August 1982. At the same time, the company announced further yarn cutbacks would require the termination of an additional 285 staff, supervisory, clerical, laboratory, maintenance and hourly employees.

Twenty-four more jobs were eliminated in July.

The plant now has 750 emloyees working three shifts, seven days per week.

Former Fiber employees dumped in an already tight job market found the going frustrating.

Goode knows other couples whose marriages couldn't withstand the pressures.

"What I hate," he says, " is I can't rebuild my life. Without a job, I can't buy a new house. I can't get credit. I've been waiting 1½ years, and I can't do it. I had to borrow money from my dad to buy a used car. I felt like I was 18 again. If it wasn't for unemployment (compensation), I'd be hurting."

Goode keeps hoping. "It's just rough," he says, "But it's got to get better."

Eugene Vincent, 43, and his wife Annie, 41, of Route 2, Lawndale, stayed together through the hard times. He lost his job in Fiber's yarn texturing department on May 1 after eight years with the company. In July, Mrs. Vincent, a 10-year Fiber employee, watched her $7.40-per-hour job in the same department pass into extincton.

"We made a lot of changes, " she said. "There was a lot of tightening up."

The Vincents have three children ages 12 to 21. Two daughters returned to classes at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this week. They get financial aid and have income from in Chapel Hill.

"They have what they need," says Mrs. Vincent. "But it's hard on them when they see clothes they can't have, they see things and realize they can't get everything they want."

Odd jobs and unemployment checks have allowed the Vincents to make their house payments. "We got 23 weeks of unemployment and two extensions, " says Mrs. Vincent. "It was cut off on July 1."

Vincent now is a concrete finisher and finds occasional small jobs. "I'm looking for something else but I can't find nothing," he says. "I lay around the house. I've painted my mother's house and am about through with ours. It's frustrating sometimes."

"We've done a lot of praying over it, " says Mrs. Vincennt. "We have faith in the Lord and, so far, we've been able to manage."

The Fiber phaseouts had a major impact on the local labor market, says Michael Chrisawn, executive director of the Greater Shelby Chamber of Commerce.

"Luckily for us, they did it over several months, spread it out and gave us a little bit of time so other industries could absorb it, " he says.

Shelby's industial picture looked bright despite recession talk. Four or Five new plants had announced they would locate in the area.

"All of a sudden, bang, it hit us, " says Christawn. "One of the big effects was psychological. It was really sort of a sign to Shelby the recession had finally come. We had been cruising along."

With new industries helping cushion job losses at Fiber. "We came out even if not in the hole" Chrisawn says. "It made everyone very conscious of their jobs and ability to bring home the bread."

Farm Leaders Say No To Grain Restrictions

CHICAGO (AP) — Government-imposed grain trade sanctions in response to the apparent Soviet attack on a Korean jetliner "would be like shooting ourselves in the foot," according to a farm group official.

Jeff Gain, executive director of the American Soybean Association, made the remark Friday along with several other agricultural leaders who warned the Reagan administration against imposing such sanctions.

Robert Delano, president of the 3.2 million-member American Farm Bureau Federation, said that restrictions on grain trade, similar to the embargo imposed in 1980 after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, would be counterproductive.

Instead, Delano called for "an international approach" in response to the incident Wednesday that took the lives of 269 people.

"Unilateral action on the part of the United States, such as a grain embargo, which places an economic burden on one group of people, is not an effective form of retaliation," Delano said.

"In terms of any impact on the Soviets, it would be like shooting ourselves in the foot," added Gain.

Gain's group sent a telegram to President Reagan saying the group "shares deep concern and shock" over the incident but warned against "partial or unilateral embargoes which result in the burden of admonishment being borne solely by U.S. citizens."

Gain, citing the experience of the 1980 embargo, said restrictions on grain trade would prompt a long-term shift of Soviet purchases away from U.S. markets to other grain producers.

"An embargo is a signal to our competitors to move in and take over," Gain said.

Earl Butz, secretary of agriculture under presidents Nixon and Ford, agreed that any country imposing an embargo on a "universally traded commodity" hurts itself. Grain sales rather than embargoes, he said, represent leverage with the Soviets.

"I think we should sell the Russians every ton of grain they will pay for. I'd like to see the Russians extend their lifeline right into the middle of America so firmly that they wouldn't dare do anything that would jeopardize that lifeline," said Butz, a dean emeritus of Purdue University's agriculture school.

Don Loeslie, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the experience of the 1980 grain embargo indicates such actions don't work unless all major grain producers take part.

The comments came in response to declarations by congressional leaders, including Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, that the United States should consider canceling a new five-year grain sales agreement with the Soviets.

The pact requires the Soviets to buy a minimum of nine million tons of wheat and corn annually, and allows the purchase of an additional three million tons a year without further consultation.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, who signed the pact last month in Moscow, said Thursday that the United States should go through with the agreement.

The pact contains clauses that allow the United States to cancel only after a declaration of war or national emergency.

The Farm Bureau Federation, the nation's largest farm group, with headquarters in the Chicago suburb of Park Ridge, was calling for restrictions on Soviet landing rights at U.S. airports and curbs on Soviet access to U.S. technology as a response to the incident.

Grain trading on the Chicago Board of Trade settled down Friday after a steep decline in prices Thursday that analysts said was prompted in part by fears of grain trade restrictions against the Soviets.

The American T-Party Remains Strong

By INK MENDELSOHN
Smithsonian News Service

Public speaking is a lot easier than it used to be. Today, you don't even need a soap box. If you want to get something off your chest — simply put a T-shirt on it. Thanks to this ubiquitous topper, you can now wear more than your heart on your sleeve.

In more circumspect eras of American life, one's clothing — from high-button shoes to button-down collars — was not in the habit of announcing one's private feelings to the world. Today, Americans wear T-shirts to identifiy themselves to trupmet political preferences, to boast cultural connections and to make social statements. Quite often they wear T-shirts just for laughts — to share their sense of humor with the passing parade.

T-shirts are a serious business as well. According to Carl Piazza, editor of Impressions, the trade magazine for the imprinted sportswear industry, American T-shirt sales in recent years have totaled $3-5 billion annually.

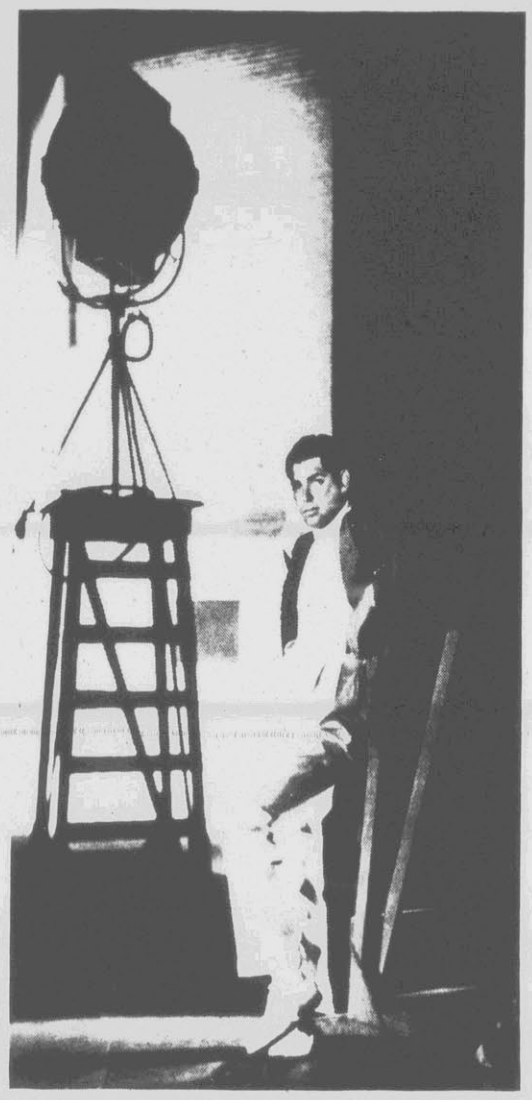

The T-shirt is the casual-wear garment of choice for millions of Americans of all ages, sizes, shaped and descriptions. Imprinted T-shirts of every conceivable design decorate the American landscape. People including historians at the Smithsonian Institution collect them. It's hard to imagine that this sartorial saga started with a plain-as-peeled-potatoes undershirt.

In the beginning it was for fatigue duties such as peeling potatoes that military men unofficially wore this useful garment. American soldiers were sent to France in 1917 to fight World World I in long sleeved wool undershirts. However a number of doughboys came home in the light knit cotton undershirts worn by French soldiers. American manufacturers eventually began producing quantities of sleeveless, knit cotton undershirts and some short sleeved ones in the "T" shape that gave the T-shirt its name.

The "T" was the shape of things to come but the favorite of men in the '30s was the sleeveless "athletic" shirt originally adapted from the top part of the tank swinsuit worn at the turn of the century. That is, it was the favorite until Clark Gable took off his shirt in the 1934 Academy Award-winning film "It Happened One Night" and revealed an undershirtless chest. Several years had to pass before undershirt sales in America recovered.

The T-shirt was truly launched by World War II when the U.S. Navy issued it as regulation underwear. Sailors, who called it a skivvy shirt, welcomed the comfort and practicality of a garment they could work in, sleep in and use to polish any offensively dull brass that might come under a superior's steely gaze. After the war, American men stayed faithful to T-shirts — as underwear — until, once again, a screen idol presented them with new possibilities.

Marlon Brando brought the T-shirt out of underwear drawers and put it into the closets of millions of Americans. As Stanley Kowalski in the 1951 film, "A Streetcar Named Desire," Brando's wardrobe was simple but effective — a T-shirt that showed off his muscles and a torn T-shirt that showed off his muscles even better. James Dean and Elvis Presley followed suit with basic white T-shirts that dazzled their fans.

Glorious technicolor dawned on the basic white T-shirt in the late 1950s. Southern California's drag racing culture took great pride in airbrush decorated cars done in flames, pinstripes and exotic lettering and a number of these automobile artists turned their airbrushes to the hot rodders' T-shirts as well. Bold, colorful and often outrageous these sprayed paint airbrush designs were the prototypes for many of today's heat transfer and screen printed T-shirt designs.

The imprinted T-shirts got an international boost when American actress Jean Seberg sported a trail blazing T-shirt touting the English-language newspaper published in Paris. When she wore her T-shirt with the words Herald Tribune headlined across the front in the 1961 French film "Breathless," the international set breathlessly snapped up the few that had been printed. Clearly, the T-shirt was mere underwear no long.

Underwear became outerwear with a vengeance. In the 1960s, millions of Americans fought for civil rights and against the Vietnamese War on college campuses and on city streets. These street soldiers had their own unifrom. "In the 1960s, T-shirts and jeans were the uniform of protest," Barbara Dickstein of the Smithsonian Institution says. As Dickstein, a museum specialist in the 20th century costume, observes, "We all wear clothing as a kind of uniform — a way of identifying ourselves to the rest of the world."

Edith Mayo, a political history curator in the Smithsonian's Museum of American History agrees and adds, "After the mid-'60s, T-shirts became a major form of political communication and expression — a politicial street medium much like the torchlight parades of the 19th century."

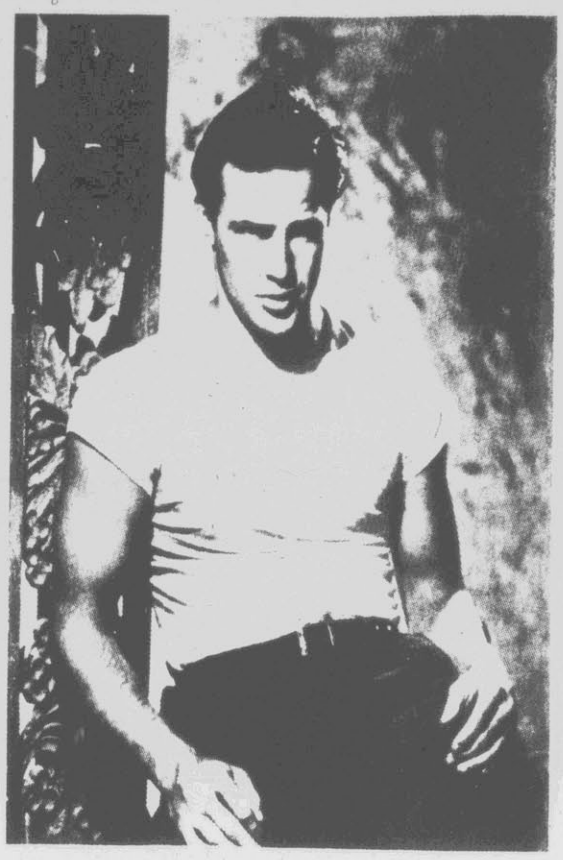

Imprinted T-shirts are wearable history — cloth chronicles of the recent past. Americans all over the country are not only wearing T-shirts but also collecting them. Some people attend auctions and acquire oldies such as an "Oz" T-shirt from the 1939 movie "The Wizard of Oz." And combine thrift shops, antique clothing stores and flea markets sometimes results in a find like one collector's 1948 Roy Rogers T-shirt. Other people rely on historical intuition and save gems, such as an Elvis Presley T-shirt featuring his greatest hits.

If you want to collect something, T-shirts are relatively inexpensive, easy to store and you can wear your collection. Unless you're a collector at the Smithsonian. There, Dickstein, Mayo and Ellen Roney Hughes all collect T-shirts but these artifacts are treated with the same meticulous care given to the Smithsonian's 100 million other objects.

Hughes, a museum specialist in the American History's Division of Community Life, has a favorite object in the History of American Sports collection — the T-shirt of Karren Stead. In 1975, when Stead was 11, she became the first girl to win the All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio. It wasn't until 1971 that girls were officially permitted to race in the Soap Box Derby, although Alice Johnson, her long golden hair hidden beneath her cap, came in second in the very first Soap Box Derby held in Ohio in 1933. "This T-shirt is a symbol of the growing achievement of women in American sports in the '70s," Hughes says.

Mayo collects T-shirts and other artifacts to chronicle American political and social issues, women's history and political campaigns. The earliest T-shirt in the Smithsonian is the "DEW-it-with-DEWEY" shirt created for the 1948 Truman-Dewey presidental campaign. It is a child's size as is the 1952 "Ike" T-shirt and a 1960 "KENNEDY FOR PRESIDENT" T-shirt imprinted with Kennedy's PT 109. There's another from 1974 in a child's lettering saying "WE'D VOTE FOR LBJ."

"Political gimmicks — buttons, household items, hankies, women's jewelry, children's toys — go back to the mid-19th century," Mayo points out. "Even before the vote for women, partisanship was a familly affair." Mayo attends political rallies and protest gatherings to collect the Smithsonian's T-shirts. Would she ask for the T-shirt off a participant's back? "I have done that once or twice," she admits.

A sense of social history guides Barbara Dickstein in collecting representative T-shirts like the early Rolling Stones concert shirt in the collection. "We don't collect fashion for its own sake," she says. "We collect what's in people's closets — clothing that is worn in everyday life in given periods of time. Today, just about everybody, at one time or another wears T-shirts."

Just about everybody, it seems, has a good reason to wear T-shirts. Some folks wear fabric leaflets like "Save the Baby Seals" T-shirt to communicate belief in a cause. Other people wear their "Picassos" and similar wash and wear masterpieces to express their love of culture. Tourists who have gone anywhere at all wear their "I Love Anywhere" T-shirts as defensive armor. The comedian, Chevy Chase, wears his "I'm Chevy Chase and you're not" T so you'll know who he is — and who you are.

Is the end of the T-shirt tale in sight? "The only constant in the history of clothing is change," Dickstein observes. "The eye becomes saturated and moves on." In the meantime, the T-shirt continues to reach new heights. The Challenger astronauts wore their Class of '78 TFNG (Thirty-Five New Guys) We Deliver" T-shirts in outer space. And President Reagan may or may not wear his T-shirt with the presidental seal in the White House. As for the rest of America, it's still Ts for 200 million as the great American T-party rolls along.

Chemise And Beads Are Fall Fashion Trend Says Rod Owens

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rod Owens rates as one of the world's top fashion influences even though his name never appears on a label.

Owens is a designers' representative, the liaison for the manufacturer and retailer, and ultimately the customer.

As a representative of some 50 designers-manufacturers, scattered globally, he knows well ahead of the consumer what styles are the leaders. And, in working with department stores and specialty shops, he knows what women want and what is selling.

"Beads make up about a third of our business," said Owens at his office-showrooms in the heart of New York's garment district. "We show beaded sweaters, beaded short dinner dresses, beaded long formals, beaded tops combined with other matebials.

"Women are wearing beads for all seasons. Beads are the big news of 1983-84.

"I don't know where women wear such finery, but they do."

Because of structure and sheer weight of the beads, most of the beaded dresses are chemise, or shift, shapes.

"I don't know what's supposed to be new about the chemise," said Owens, of a classic style revived for the next season by the likes of Yves St. Laurent of Paris, James Galanos of Los Angeles, and any number of other style leaders.

The chemise never went away. We've never been without it," Owens said of the easy-fitting style. "I think it holds because it's something every woman can wear.

"The very young can put on a low slung belt. Those faithful to Jane Fonda (actress and exercise book author) can wear a belt at the waist. The rest can wear it unbelted."

Most manufacturers do make an optional belt.

As for the gowns beaded from neckline to hem, they offer no problems in sitting. The well-made ones have an inner lining and most of the beads are hand sewn.

Owens said a major trend in fashion today reflects the Oriental influence. Japanese designers' casual, unfitted shapes in muted colors have become a major factor in ready-to-wear.

What surprises him, he said, is the steady sale of one category in his showroom — the so-called bubble dress for larger sizes. This is unfitted until it reaches the hemline, where it tucks into a border of stretch fabric. "It just isn't what I think of for the fuller figure," he said, "but many of these women have absolutely beautiful legs to show off."

Rod Owens came into the apparel business by way of Hollywood and the movies. His area was promotion, not design.

He worked with Helen Rose and her staff of designers for MGM studios and recalled with nostalgia the days when Greer Garson, Lana Turner, Elizabeth Taylor and Lena Horne wore Rose-designed costumes.

"But I got sort of bored with Los Angeles," Owens said. "Nothing ever was happening."

He moved to New York in the 1960s and at first did some designing.

As Owens promoted his fashions, other designers were watching and asked his assistance in promoting theirs. He became so interested in this facet of the apparel business he decided to make representing other talents his career.

"I'd always been on the selliing side, " he said. "My talent lay in that direction."

Today, he has two floors in the building, a spacious area, but at the same time divided so that each collection has its own niche and salesperson in charge.

He employs 25 salespersons, plus an office staff.

"We did around $25 million in wholesale last year," he said. "Each year the volume doubles."

The Owens operation collects a commission on sales — 12 percent on a new collection, 10 percent on an established one.

He represents designer-manufacturing firms in New York, Los Angeles, Puerto Rico, Japan, Hong Kong, Italy, Uruguay, London, West Germany, Mexico, India and "all over the United States."

Buyers come to his showrooms to order, and Owens also takes a "collage" of the various collections on the road, calling on the stores. Some major stores now have Rod Owens sections.

Of that popularity for beading, Owens said he gave his mother an overall beaded number for her birthday.

"She's 87," he said. "She wanted to wear it immediately."

Couple Weds In Candlelight Ceremony

Laurie Anne Logsdon and Walter Lee Hedgepeth were united in marriage in a candlelight ceremony Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Oakmont Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gordon Conklin.

The bride is the daughter of Joan A. Logsdon and Robert F. Logsdon, both of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hedgepeth of Farmville.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza over peau de soie especially designed by Eric Ennis for Le Couturier of Raleigh. It featured a Queen Anne neckline edged in alencon lace embroidered with seed pearls. Appliques of lace trimmed the bodice and natural waistline. Long tapered sleeves were also appliqued and gathered at the shoulder. Cascades of matching lace, motifs of alencon lace in the royal rose pattern and covered bridal buttons accented the back. Matching lace enhanced the skirt which was bordered in a scalloped pattern which extended into a cathedral train. A full length veil of silk illusion appliqued with alencon lace was attached to a Camelot cap of matching lace with pearls. The bride carried a cascade of white cushion mums and sweetheart roses with burgundy mums, English ivy and white satin streamers.

Barbara Logsdon of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of burgundy silk taffeta featuring a fitted bodice with a ruffled neckline. Puffed sleeves were edged with a matching ruffle and the gathered skirt was accented with a fitted cummerbund. She carried a nosegay of burgundy and white cushion mums accented with English ivy and lace streamers.

The attendants were De Lon Cannon of Greenville, Margaret Twine of Ayden, Kathryn Smith of Raleigh, Judy Padgett of Grimesland and Becky Dunn of Fountain, sister of the bridegroom. They wore gowns identical to that of the honor attendant and carried nosegays of cushion mums.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Richard Mooring and Mike Wainwright of Farmville, Doug Newsome of Raleigh, Eddie Leggett of Greenville and Eric Hause of Greenville.

Brandon Woodworth of Robersonville was ring bearer and Gena June of Greenville was flower girl. She wore a gown identical to

Gail Roberts Weds Dexter Ray Phelps

CRESWELL — Gail Elaine Roberts and Dexter Ray Phelps were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in St. Mark AME Zion Church here. The Rev. Clinton Brickhouse officiated at the double ring ceremony. The blessing was given by Johnny Roberts, brother of the bride of Washington, D.C. The ceremony was directed by Rita Leigh of Creswell and Eleanor Barber of Jamesville.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ethel Mae Roberts of Creswell and the late Edward Roberts. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps of Creswell.

A program of music was presented by Mrs. Barber. Judy Smith sang "Evergreen." Ondra Rodgers sang "Truly" and Gary Rodgers sang "Just The Way You Are."

The bride was escorted by her brother, William Roberts, of Philadelphia, Pa. She wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in re-embroidered chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace and encircled with re-embroidered chantilly lace. The bishop sleeves were fashioned of French chantilly lace and finished in cuffs of matching lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached semi-cathedral train were accented with a flounce of French chantilly lace edged in scalloped chantilly lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in matching lace attached to a Camelot cap overlaid in lace beaded with pearls. She carried a clustered bouquet of white carnations and roses accented with violet baby's breath.

Fannie Roberts Hines of Oriental was matron of honor and Hattie Roberts of Rock Hill, Conn., was maid of honor. Both are sisters of the bride. Bridesmaids included Addie and Kaye Roberts of Hartford, Conn., sisters of the bride, Angelene and Zillie Norman of Roper and Fawn Staton of Greenville. Junior bridesmaid was Oona Roberts, niece of the bride. Each wore a formal gown from Jordan's Design of violet taffeta with a flowing ruffled collar and a matching ribbon at the waist. The gowns were accented with a ruffle flowing across the A-line skirt. The matron of honor wore an orchid gown identical to the other attendants and the junior attendant wore a lavender silk gown with chantilly lace overlaid on the bodice. Each carried an arm bouquet of lavender carnations and baby's breath tied with white ribbon; the matron of honor's was tied with violet ribbon.

Larry Horton of Creswell was best man and ushers included William Phelps of Durham and Gerome Phelps of Creswell, brothers of the bridegroom, William Horton of Raleigh, cousin of the bridegroom, Grady Brickhouse, Michael Jones and Gary Roberts, all of Creswell. Junior usher was Tony Brickhouse of Elizabeth City. The ring bearer was Mikel Roberts of Hartford, Conn., nephew of the bride.

A buffet dinner was held in the education hall of St. John Baptist Church after the ceremony. Annie Brickhouse presided at the register and gifts were received by Belinda Blount, Genial and Debbie Phelps, sisters of the bridegroom. June Roberts, sister-in-law of the bride, served cake and punch was poured by Wanda Stewart of Greenville. Tea was poured by Carol Roberts, sister-in-law of the bride.

After rehearsal refreshments were served at the church. Several showers were given for the bridal couple.

The bride attended Creswell High School and received an associates degree in nursing at College of the Albemarle in Elizabeth City and B.S.N. from East Carolina University. She works at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended Creswell High School and College of the Albemarle where he received an associate degree in health and physical education. He is employed with Hardee's of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

Wedding Vows Spoken Saturday Afternoon

Elizabeth Leigh Ito and Brian Keith Hart, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at one o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church here. The Rev. Gerry Anders officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The couple were given in marriage by their parents, Takeru and Lois Ito of Greenville and George and Helen Hart of Battle Creek, Mich.

The bride wore a formal gown of dotted netting over taffeta designed with an off-shoulder neckline formed by a double tiered ruffle. The fitted bodice featured elbow-length puffed sleeves accented with satin ribbons. Satin ribbon encircled the dropped V-waistline from which fell the gathered full skirt. The bride wore a halo of white flowers accented with satin streamers. She carried an arm bouquet of mauve heather accented with miniature white carnations, baby's breath and greenery wrapped with white satin ribbons. She wore her mother's pearls.

Carolyn Sutton of Goldsboro served as maid of honor and wore a huckleberry gown of chiffon over taffeta with a double ruffle encircling the rounded neckline and low scoop back. She wore silk stephanotis in her hair and carried a wicker basket filled with silk flowers in varying shades of violet.

Brimesmaids were Mary Vick and Heather O'Neal of Greenville, Miki Ito of Wilmington, sister of the bride, and Carol Sisco of Battle Creek, Mich., sister of the bridegroom. Each attendant wore an aubergine or orchid gown styled like that of the maid of honor and carried similar flower baskets.

Bronwyn Ito, sister of the bride, served as flower girl and wore a white floor length gown of lace over taffeta. She carried a ribboned wicker basket and scattered flower petals.

MS. ELIZABETH ITO HART

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included David Hart, brother of the bridegroom, Larry Sisco, Richard Young, all of Battle Creek and Morgan Newman of Greenville.

Jenny Meador presided at the guest register.

A pig-picking was held at the home of the bride's parents after the rehearsal. Mrs. Bernard Vick entertained at a bridesmaids luncheon Friday afternoon at her home.

The bridegroom graduated with a degree in marketing from Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, Mich. and is employed as a territory manager by Kellogg's Sales Co. The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and is working toward an English degree at East Carolina University.

After a trip to Virginia Beach, the couple will live in Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by Becky Tyndall of Goldsboro. Susie Pair of Greenville sang "Through the Eyes of Love" and "The Lord's Prayer." Catherine Whaley of Grifton directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of champagne silk organza over peau de soie and the mother of the bridegroom wore a gown of pastel pink chiffon with a capelet. Both were remembered with corsages of white cymbidium orchids. The grandmother of the bride wore a gown of forest green chiffon with a corsage of white carnations and cushion mums.

The bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Judy Padgett and a kitchen shower and pounding given by Edna Hedgepeth, aunt of the bridegroom. A barbecue honoring the attendants and groomsmen was held at the home of the bride and an after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at Archies Friday evening.

The bride attended Pitt Community College and East Carolina University. She is employed by Metropolitan Life Insurance. The bridegroom attended PCC and is employed by A.C. Monk and Co.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

Center Should Provide Best Possible Care

Some 70 percent of North Carolina women with school age children and over half of those with children under six are in the labor force. Many of these women are struggling with the task of finding appropriate day care for their children.

"Most people want to find a family day care home or a day care center which provides the best possible care for the child. First, you must decide what you want out of a day care facility," says Fran Wagner, extension human development specialist, N.C. State University.

"Chances are you won't find a home or center that meets all of your criteria. Decide which ones are most important to you," Mrs. Wagner says.

Then find out what is available. The local department of social services has a list of registered family day care home and licensed day care centers. Newspaper ads and notices on neighborhood bulletin boards may also be helpful. Visit the homes and centers which are being considered.

"Enroll your child in the facility you like best but continue to make observations as you take in and pick up your child each time. Study his or her behavior. Does he or she seem to feel at ease there. Do you? If your child hasn't adjusted after a few weeks, consider looking elsewhere," recommends the extension specialist.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

WINTERVILLE — The wedding ceremony of Karen Lynn Watts and Douglas Lester Branch was solemnized Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Winterville Christian Church. The Rev. James H. Bussell Jr. performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Lester Branch of Winterville and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert King Watts of Canton. The bride is also the daughter of the late Dovia Hardin Watts.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Marci Watts Gunter of Waynesville was matron of honor and Mary Ann Watts of Asheville was maid of honor for their sister. Bridesmaids included Jean Elizabeth Watts of Canton, sister of the bride, Velma Ann and Elizabeth Branch Hines of Winterville, sisters of the bridegroom, and Susan Dyane Jarrett of Greenville.

MRS. DOUGLAS LESTER BRANCH

Paige Boydston of Canton and Jenny Webb of Charlotte, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. Laurie Ann Taylor directed the wedding.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen were Herald Hines of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Jack Gunter of Waynesville, brother-in-law of the bride, Jack Allen, Linwood Hines and Clevie Averette, all of Winterville.

Mrs. Roy Turnage was organist for the ceremony. Jan Webb of Charlotte, sister of the bride, sang "Love Me Tender," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer." Ronald Northrup of Greenville was guitarist.

The bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and chantilly lace. The gown was designed with a high neckline and a sheer round yoke accented with lace and seed pearls. The full bishop sleeves featured cuffs accented with lace and matching lace enricled the waistline. The flowing skirt featured triple rows of lace and flowed into an attached chapel train. She wore a wide brimmed hat overlaid with chantilly lace encrusted with seed pearls accented with a Dior bow and rolled edge lace appliqued veil. The bride carried a formal cascade of white butterfly roses, baby's breath and stephanotis tied with white satin and lace.

The flower girls wore long flowing gowns of white dotted swiss featuring a floral cummerbund accented with lace and stone blue flowers and ruffle skirt. Each carried a white basket of petals accented with stone blue and sonya flowers and streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a waltz length gown of huckelberry chiffon with a scoop neckline and the bridegroom's mother wore a formal gown of periwinkle chiffon over taffeta accented with a lace neckline. Both were remembered with white orchids.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the Ramada Inn. Goodbyes were said by Ann Hardin and Trudi Smathers of Waynesville, aunts of the bride.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is an administrative assistant for Franchise Management Corp. The bridegroom attended Pitt Community College and is employed by the Greenville Fire/Rescue Department.

Susan Jarrett and Laurie Taylor honored the bride with a miscellaneous shower. Mrs. Bernice Branch, Mrs. Donald Branch, Mrs. Curt Flanagan, Mrs. Phil Goodson and Mrs. Charles Simpson honored the couple with a floating shower. Mrs. R.B. Patterson, Mrs. Bud Chambers, Mrs. Ronald Boydston and Mrs. Donald Pressley honored the couple in Canton.

A bridal luncheon was given by Mrs. Milton May in Winterville. A breakfast was given for the couple Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Worthington Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Carl Worthington Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Max T. Worthington. A rehearsal dinner was given at the Ramada Inn by parents of the bridegroom.

Sutton-Jordan Vows Exchanged

FARMVILLE — Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday at 4 p.m. of Charieese Jordan and Bobby Sutton. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Elder H.L. Hill.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Glaster Jordan of Route 1, Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. George Sutton of Route 2, Walstonburg.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Victorian styled gown with a high neck of embroidered lace and organza styled with sheer Juliet puff sleeves. Pearls accented the sheer back of the drop waist skirt and extended into a cathedral train accented with satin ribbons. Her bridal hat was overlaid with schiffli to complement her gown. A waltz length veil was attached. She carried a bouquet of cascading lavender daisies interspersed with stephanotis, snowflake pom pons, white miniature carnations and baby's breath accented with ivy.

Joyce Branch of Forestville, Md. was matron of honor for her sister. Letitia Franklin of Columbia, Md. was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Lillis Cobb of Route 1, Farmville, Charlene Evans of Raleigh, Patricia Hardy, cousin of the bridegroom, and Judy Prayer of Greenville and April Sharpe of Greensboro.

Latise Suggs of Farmville, daughter of the bridegroom, was the junior bridesmaid and flowers girls were Kimberly and Stacey Branch of Forestville, Md., nieces of the bride.

The matron of honor wore a full length pink lustreglo gown which featured a matching embroidered point d'esprit lace jacket. Bridesmaids wore identical gowns in lavender. The flower girls and junior bridesmaid wore pink gowns of lustreglo with a bodice of sheer embroidered lace. The junior attendant carried white daisies with baby's breath and the flower girls carried pink pom pons with baby's breath and ivy.

The other attendants carried bouquets of white daisies accented with ivy and lavender baby's breath interspersed with pink and lavender mums.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Robert Epps of Richmond, Va., Ray Hardy, cousin of the bridegroom, Quantella Williams and James Sessoms, all of Durham, Rosevelt Hilton of Raleigh and Calvin Jordan, brother of the bride of Tampa, Fla. The junior ushers were Calvin Jordan Jr. of Durham and Tyrone Jordan of Farmville, nephews of the bride. Quentin Jordan of Farmville, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

A program of wedding music was presented by Sandra Dupree, pianist, and Larry Bland and Juretta Ruffin, vocalists.

The bride is a graduate of N.C. Central University in Durham and is employed by IBM Information Network in Tampa, Fla. as a programmer.

A reception was held after the wedding at Farmville Middle School. Rowena Newton greeted guests and Phyllistine Morgan presided at the register. Lois Dupree and Deneice Ross cut the cake. Dietra Bynum served at the bride's table and Audrey Vines received gifts.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Tampa, Fla.

Charlene Evans and Debra Taylor entertained at a bridal shower and a wedding shower was given by Phyllis Handford, Erma Hopkins and Belinda Sheeley.

MRS. BOBBY SUTTON

Bride-Elect Entertained

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hall Jr. and Carly Hall honored LeeEllen Jenkins at a lingerie shower at their home Thursday. The bride-elect will marry Robert Koenig of Greensboro Oct. 2 at the Ramada Inn.

The refreshment table was decorated with spring flowers and covered with a coral cloth with an overlay of beige which was gathered and tied with matching satin bows.

Ms. Jenkins was remembered with a corsage of white miniature carnations.

Mrs. Kenneth L. Jenkins, mother of the honoree, was a special guest.

COME FOR DESSERT
Fresh Plum Pie & Coffee

FRESH PLUM PIE

You may want to serve this a la mode.

- 1½ pounds ripe plums
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1-3rd cup cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- 1 tablespoon orange juice
- Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie

Quarter and pit plums — measure 1 quart. In a large saucepan thoroughly stir together sugar, cornstarch, salt and ginger; add plums, butter, orange rind and orange juice. Stirring constantly over medium heat, cook until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil; continue stirring and boiling for 3 minutes. Cool slightly. Line a 9-inch pie plate with half the pastry; form a high edge; add plum filling. Top with remaining pastry cut into strips, making a lattice pattern. Seal edges. Bake on rack below center of a preheated 425-degree oven for 10 minutes; continue baking at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Cool. (Catch spills by placing foil below pie plate as necessary.)

DINNER FARE
Golden Fillets & Potatoes
Green Peas & Salad
Blueberry Cobbler

GOLDEN FILLETS

Delicious, attractive and easy to prepare.

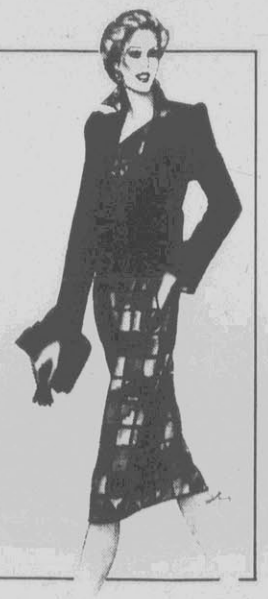

- 1 pound small flounder fillets (6)
- Fresh lime wedge (¼ of a medium lime)
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 small or medium scallion, minced

In a foil-lined jellyroll pan arrange fillets in a single layer. Sprinkle the juice from the lime wedge over the fish. With a fork whisk together mayonnaise, Parmesan and scallion; spread over fillets. Broil about 6 inches from high heat until fish is opaque when flaked with a fork and topping is golden — about 4 minutes. With a metal spatula, remove fillets to hot dinner plates.

On The Young Side

By CLAY DEANHARDT

The summer is over. School bells are ringing again and students are once more answering the call of their schoolbooks. On Aug. 24 the Greenville City Schools officially opened their doors for the first day of school.

The first three days of school were shortened because of the intense afternoon heat. At Rose the school day lasted from 8:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. instead of the usual 3:30. Last Monday schools resumed the full schedule and classes began in earnest.

Tuesday was sophomore orientation day at Rose with students coming for approximately one hour. They received their schedules and had a chance to find their classes and meet the teachers. This is intended to help cut down the confusion and tardiness of the first day.

New school years usually bring new teachers. J.C. Watford is the new instructor for general business, distributive education and fashion merchandising. C.H. Walton now teaches industrial cooperative training.

Other new teachers include: Charlie Allen, band director; Kim Gruber, technical drafting; Bill Kuykendall, math; Betty Marzoa, learning disabled and biology; and Madeline Wiggins, reading.

This year Rose is trying to organize an Academic Boosters Club. The club, made up of parents and other adults, would help raise money to support Rose High in academic competitions such as the Quiz Bowl and math contests as well as for other educational aids. The first meeting was held Aug. 30; however interested people are invited to join at further meetings which will be announced ahead of time.

BENNE WAFERS
(Sesame Cookies)

1 cup all-purpose flour M
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup (6 ounces) butter, at room temperature or cut in thin pats
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
¾ cup toasted sesame seeds, See Note

Thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder and salt.

Cream the butter, sugar and vanilla. Beat in the egg, then the flour mixture until blended. Fold in the sesame seed.

Line a cookie sheet with wax paper. Drop level ½ teaspoonfuls of the batter, at least 1 inch apart, onto the lined sheet.

Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until golden — 8 to 10 minutes.

Slip the sheet of wax paper with the cookies on it onto a counter; let stand until the cookies are cold. Remove cookies from wax paper with a metal spatula. Store in a tightly covered container.

NOTE: To toast sesame seeds, sprinkle them over the bottom of a 15 by 10 by 1-inch jellyroll pan. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven, stirring often, until golden — 20 minutes.

GIANT SQUID

BERGEN, Norway (AP) — The giant squid — villain of many a movie — has finally been seen alive.

One was captured recently, alive but dying, in a small bay near here. Hooked by a fisherman, the squid had tentacles 24 feet long and weighed 485 pounds. The creature has never been seen in its native habitat. Its existence is known through dead specimens.

Dear Abby

Nell Isn't Nellie —ell Isn't Helen

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here's a suggestion for Barbara, who dislikes being called "Barb":

My neighbor, Nellie, had a friend named Helen who insisted on calling her "Nell" after having been told repeatedly that her name was Nellie — not "Nell."

One day Nellie met Helen at the door and said, "Good morning, Hell!"

MARGARET, NOT MAGGIE

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have become sickened by all of your references to the "lord" and to praying in your answers to people who are in trouble.

Did you ever stop to think that some of these people whom you tell to "pray" and to "keep faith in the 'lord'" might be atheists? I'm sure these references would offend them, as they do me. Remember that there are people in this world who are strong enough not to need some imaginary being to cling to. Sign me ...

A HAPPY ATHEIST

DEAR HAPPY: John Stuart Mill (English philosopher, writer, member of Parliament) said: "It is conceivable that religion may be morally useful without being intellectually sustainable."

If your strength sustains your atheist convictions, fine. But others may need help from a higher power.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will soon celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary. When we were married we had no celebration; we just had a little hurry-up ceremony because I was pregnant at the time.

Now for our 25th, we're planning a wonderful reception where we'll renew our vows, and then take off for a month's dream vacation to make up for the honeymoon we never had. I went to work part time for two years and saved the money to help pay for all this. We have a good marriage and much to celebrate.

My husband wants to add to our invitations: "Instead of gifts, donations to our church would be appreciated." Abby, I never got any wedding presents — ever — and I would love some. My husband's "no gifts" attitude is making me feel guilty and greedy, because I really do want presents.

I feel that he deprived me of a big wedding 25 years ago, and now he's depriving me of wedding presents.

A DREAM COME TRUE

DEAR DREAM: What do you mean he "deprived you of a big wedding"? I assume you were a willing partner in the circumstances that deprived you of the big wedding you never had.

You needn't feel guilty or greedy for wanting presents. I say, let the guests give you gifts if they wish, and you make a donation to your church.

* * *

For Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages — send $2, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Amelia Earhart, the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, disappeared July 2, 1937, as she and her navigator, Fred Noonan, neared the end of a global flight. After taking off from New Guinea, the pair reported by radio that they were lost and running out of fuel. The plane did not reach Howland Island in the Pacific, and Miss Earhart was never heard from again.

Bridal Policy

A back and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three week, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Kids' Priorities

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) – High school students said the top priorities in their lives were the family, education and success, with wealth scoring low points, according to a survey conducted by Junior Achievement.

Nearly 600,000 high school students are enrolled in Junior Achievement programs, which focus on the private enterprise system, offering economic education programs for the students.

Kids' Behavior Problems Tackled

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) – Much of the treatment for children's behavior problems has been aimed at parents rather than at children themselves, a University of Rochester researcher notes.

"This implies – unfairly – that parents are to blame for children's tantrums, excessive arguing, social isolation, stealing, lying, or difficulty with rules," says David Bousha. A doctoral candidate in psychology, he is comparing the effectiveness of treating children, parents, or both children and parents.

In his study, therapists or parents trained by therapists are helping children set limits for their behavior as well as building children's self-esteem. "Clinical reports indicate that these techniques work, but we don't know which focus of treatment works best," Bousha says.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The unemployment rate in Hollywood is something like 85 percent, giving rise to some serious oonoerns about the state of the arts.

Where have all the jobs gone, you ask? You have only to look at television oommercials to know the answer. They've gone to dogs, cats and kids.

No one minded when cats danced the cha-cha-cha for chow or preferred one brand of litter over a rival product, but the other night I saw an adorable white kitten selling toilet paper. CATS DON'T EVEN USE TOILET PAPER!

And some ad man was reaching for it when a dog demonstrated a camera that even he could use for those once-in-a-lifetime pictures.

As for kids, they're hustling everything these days from cereal to cough syrup, from shampoo to computers. Even laundry soap, which formerly had been touted solely by elderly women, is now being huckstered by 10-year-old boys. And when was the last time a 10-year-old boy even washed his face with anything but a two-foot tongue?

I expect any day now for John Houseman to be replaced by a pit bulldog who will try to sell me securities.

Agents used to run around saying, "Get me someone like Lorne Greene or Bill Cosby." Now it's "Get me someone like Lorne Greene's dog or Bill Cosby's kids."

It's possible the stars have priced themselves out of business and that we are just beginning to see products through the eyes of animals and children.

Look for panting dogs that run up to Lee Iacocca and pant, "We only chase foreign-made cars. That's because we can't catch American-made ones."

Look for a child and her mother in a sandbox and one of them holds up her hands to her face and says, "One of us is only eight years old. The other one uses Oil of Olay. Can you guess which one?"

Or a cat who looks at a stack of dirty dishes and smiles, "You wanta talk scritches? I can tell you how to get rid of stubborn food stains without soaking."

Personally, I think it's a raw deal. Just because animals and kids work cheap, have no overhead and are cute, it's not fair to take jobs away from those who need them.

But show biz being what it is, tomorrow I'm going to have my cat's teeth capped, her tush lifted and get her an agent.

Women purchase approximately 80 percent of all consumer goods.

Two Artists To Join Their Talents In Marriage

WEDDING PLANS FOR ARTISTS ... Greenville artist Brian Blount, left, and his artist fiance, Heidi Hagman, pose on a "Dallas" television set with Heidi's parents, designer Maj Hagman and actor Larry Hagman. The two, now living in Santa Fe, N.M., will be married Oct. 29 in Malibu, Calif.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. — "Brian asked for my hand in the proper, old-fashioned way, asking my father for my hand in marriage," Heidi Hagman explained in a telephone interview Tuesday morning. "That was last November, when we were all in New York."

The marriage of the two artists, Brian Blount of Greenville and Heidi Hagman, formerly of California, now of New Mexico, will take place Oct. 29 at the Malibu, Calif., summer home of Ms. Hagman's parents, Larry and Maj Hagman. "This happens to fall on my 33rd birthday," Blount remarked.

The two have known each other for three years. "Aside from our mutual interest in art, we have a similar sense of aesthetics about many things," Ms. Hagman said. "We love to travel, and we find that the same things, the same places along the way will catch our attention, delight us."

"Travel and work, they're the foremost things for us," Blount said, "although work quite often doesn't leave the time for traveling that we'd like to have."

Ms. Hagman mentioned, "It seems most of our travels take us to New York or Los Angeles, as much of our traveling involves the art scene. But there's also a tremendous amount of creative work going on in the Southwest, in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Denver. I love living here in the Southwest, yet once in a while I need the atmosphere of a large place. I grew up in big cities, so basically I'm a big city girl."

Blount grew up in Greenville with his grandparents, Dr. Edgar and Antoinette Jenkins. They are both retired faculty members of the English department, East Carolina University. Blount's mother is Dr. Erolyn J. McAuley of Jacksonville, Fla., and his father was the late Herman F. Blount Jr. of Rocky Mount.

Ms. Hagman's father is a television actor who appears in the role of J.R. Ewing in the "Dallas" series. Her mother is a designer. Her grandmother is the well-known singer-actress Mary Martin.

Speaking about Miss Martin, Ms. Hagman said "she's on the road a great deal now, making charity appearances in support of trauma centers. She feels strongly that had it not been for the trauma treatment she received after an automobile accident in San Francisco, she would not be alive today."

For a couple of years, Blount lived in Mexico, trying to find his own approach to his personal art. When he left Mexico several years ago enroute to Los Angeles, he stopped in New Mexico and "realized this is where I belong." In the years that have followed, he has developed a highly original form of shaped, torn-edge art primarily employing pastels that has drawn considerable critical attention in exhibitions and in art publications.

Currently, he is having his largest one-man show to date, at the Elaine Harwich Gallery in Sante Fe. "I was ready for this opportunity," Blount said. "In fact, I had more paintings than could be exhibited in the show." Another possibility that Blount is pleased about "is that the king of Saudi Arabia has expressed an interest in possibly acquiring something of mine."

Ms. Hagman says, "Where Brian uses pastels, I paint in watercolors and oils. Most of my work tends to be huge paintings, many of them are paintings of flowers. I'm very much a realist." For some time, she was self-taught, then "I put myself through college, the Academy of Art in San Francisco, by working as a model and a janitor. I had my first show four years ago in California, and have had three shows since.

Blount and Ms. Hagman are in the process of fixing up a house and an adjoining building in Santa Fe to be their home and studio once they are married. "It's a small adobe house, 130 years old, in the historic district. Next to it is a large empty building which we will convert to an office and two studios," Blount explained.

One unusual touch to the wedding plans is that of invitations. "My mother and her sister are both designers, and my uncle has a glass factory," Ms. Hagman said. "So for our wedding invitations they have designed a beveled glass invitation, cut and polished, bearing our profiles sand-carved into the glass. This will be a memento for our wedding guests."

The two artists agree that the most important thing they have to look forward to as man and wife is the continuing rapport and support they share now as artist friends. "An artist needs encouragement and support," Ms. Hagman commented. "For us, this will be a continuation of what we have shared as friends."

Art As A Means Of Therapy

By LAURIE WATSON

CALGARY, Alberta (UPC) — The use of art to help people resolve their problems is as old as the Stone Age but professional therapists worldwide are relearning its value in giving the mentally and physically handicapped hope and self-respect.

In France, drama therapist Nancy Breitenbach uses creative makeup to help mentally handicapped children understand their emotions and form relationships.

In San Francisco, therapist Renee Emunah gives psychiatric patients a chance through acting to get out of their regular roles and find new strengths to deal with crises.

They are among a growing number of professional art therapists who use drama, music, visual arts or dancing to give the troubled or disabled a new lease on life.

"Art therapy is a means of tapping the unconscious," explains therapist Roberta Nadeau who directed the recent first world conference of art therapists in Calgary.

"Tremendoes things happen to the disabled under the influence of creative tools. The mentally handicapped learn self-respect. The elderly become more mentally productive and regain motor skills."

Her comment is not just professional.

Ms. Nadeau, 43, a victim of wife beating who is now permanently disabled, found painting was the key to maintaining her own mental health. She must use a wheelchair most of the time due to spinal problems.

"I looked at my own experience as a disabled person," says the fragile-looking woman who is working on a doctorate in arts therapy. "Without art, it would have been more difficult to hang on. Art was a means of achieving inner peace."

Ms. Emunah, who pioneered the drama therapy graduate program at San Francisco's Antioch University, says acting sessions can allow troubled people to regain self-respect as they try out new modes of behavior without undue sense of risk.

"Many patients have an unyielding, rigid sense of self," she explains. "It is only after playing and experiencing a large variety of roles and emotions that they feel they can encompass all these without losing control. They find they can function as complete human beings."

Drama therapy is several years old in Europe but relatively new as a mental health treatment process in the United States, notes Ms. Emunah. She founded Beyond Analysis, a community theater and support group for former psychiatric patients who produce original improvisational work.

Michael Edwards, director of the arts therapy program at Montreal's Concordia University, suggests art therapy may have its roots in early man's cave paintings. And early Greek society, he adds, used drama to put the audience in touch with themselves.

Ms. Breitenbach says her practise of encouraging mentally disabled children to make themselves up allows them to make crucial progress toward dealing better with others.

"In the beginning stages, a child tends to make up for himself. Then he starts taking into account that a person is going to be looking at him and then he starts doing it for that person. This is part of normal developmental process," she explains.

Ms. Nadeau says although arts therapy may not be widely understood and may clash with more standard medical treatment, it is increasingly being recognized as a professional tool.

But "doctors, unless they have a non-professional interest in the arts, are generally too overworked to take much of an interest in arts therapy," she says.

Arts therapists at the conference agreed they had common problems with a lack of university programs and uniform standards.

Training programs often spring up in isolated geographic areas where graduates are unable to find jobs. Some delegates believed graduates should be trained to teach both normal and special populations.

"Art therapists still don't have a slot to fill. We're still trying to justify our existence," says Ms. Emunah.

INVITATION TO JOIN

People who like to sing may join the Greenville Choral Society. The group meets every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Immanuel Baptist Church beginning Sept. 13. Voice placement is a must and an appointment may be made by calling 752-4137 and asking for the Greenville Recreation and Parks office.

Touring Program

HIGH POINT — As part of its touring program Outreach '83, the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival will present Shakespeare's "Othello," with the production to open in Winston-Salem at the Stevens Center on Sept. 7 and 8 at 8:15 p.m. It then moves to Greensboro's Carolina Theater on Sept. 10 at 8:15 p.m., and the final triad performances will be Sept. 15, 16 and 17 at 8:15 p.m. at the High Point Theater.

Following the High Point engagement, the festival will begin a three state tour which incudes Wilmington, Charleston, Sweetbriar, Va., Cullowhee, Boone, Asheville, Hickory, Davidson and Charlotte.

Malcolm Morrison will stage the play. Sets are by Bland Wade, costumes by Mark Pirolo and lighting by Michael Orris Watson.

Cast members will include Milledge Mosley as the Moor, Mary Hopeman as Desdemona, and Eric Zwemer as Iago.

For reservations or more information call the Stevens Center between 10 and 5 at 721-1945, the Carolina Theater between 12 and 5:30 at 275-2537, or the High Point Theater between 12:30 and 5 at 887-3001. Additional information may also be had by calling the Festival office at 889-1544.

Chinese Fashion Show Is Great Entertainment

PEKING (AP) — To the disco beat of "Dancing Queen," a woman in white jodhpurs and white boots flings a polka-dot cape over her shoulder, lunges, tosses her head and smiles triumphantly.

A dashing woman in a man-tailored, three-piece pinstriped suit strolls on stage with her briefcase, clearly an upwardly mobile young professional on her way to the office.

Young men in safari suits and baseball caps strut about swinging tennis racquets. The music rises to a whistle. Enter girls in skimpy white dresses and colored visors, flirting with the boys on an imaginary, once unthinkably decadent tennis court.

In an act of abandon, a girl skips on stage in a bright green and white blouse and matching skirt well above the knee. With swift, breathtaking deftness, she unhooks her skirt and flings it over her shoulder. She is wearing matching shorts for more fun in the sun.

The stars are 14 young men and women, the "fashionable dress performance team" of Shanghai. All are former textile workers chosen from among 30,000 candidates for their tall, beautiful bodies, good looks, hard work and correct socialist outlook.

They prefer to be called actors and actresses since "model" still has unsavory implications here. Hence, they do a lot of dancing and quaint, coy operaesque posing and pirouettes.

For China, these shows and accompanying sales are a high fashion event — and good entertainment — sounding the death knell for the Mao jacket and unisex proletarian shrouds.

For many in the audience, some of the Western clothes were too far out. "I would be ridiculed for wearing anything like knickers. They look silly — they are just for kids," says one 35-year-old. "The Western suits are nice for some occasions. Old Mao jackets are ug clumsy. What we need are new Chinese styles."

The clothes that drew the "ahs" and applause, however, were the traditional form-fitting chi-pao with high collars and slit skirts — once considered a sign of feudal society and bourgeois decadence. They were in simple printed cotton, in satin, brocade and velvet, embroidered, sequined and bejeweled. The audience was bedazzled as the models moved in a stylized parade to traditional Chinese tunes.

"Even if we wouldn't wear all these clothes now, still it's nice to think about and nice to know people won't drag you out and scream at you and tear up your Western clothes," says one 30-year-old Chinese office worker. During the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, she says, rampaging Red Guards entered her family's home and pulled bourgeois Chinese and Western clothes out of the closets.

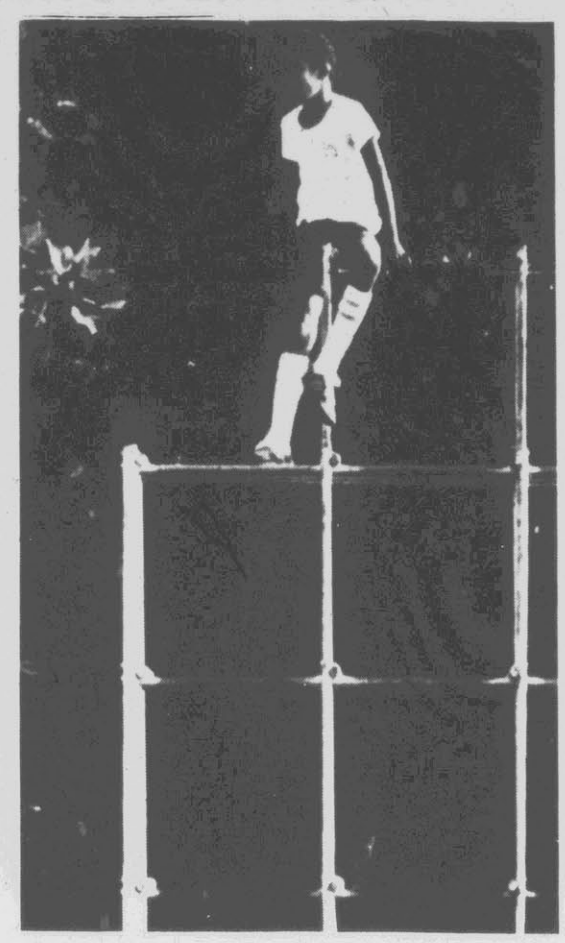

The widow of late President Liu Shao-chi was forced to wriggle into a tight-fitting chi-pao and totter on high heels before a crowd, public punishment for her sin of being a fashionable First Lady.

"Everyone wants to look nice," says Xu Zhenqing, the 57-year-old woman director of the modeling troupe. She says it was formed after French designer Pierre Cardin brought his fashions to China in June 1981, but couldn't find any trained models.

"Our job is to introduce the latest fashions to people and show them how to dress actively," Madame Wu says.

The French explorer Jacques Cartier reached Canada in 1534. Seeking a northern passage to the Spice Islands, Cartier and his crew sailed through the Strait of Belle Isle and explored the Gulf of St. Lawrence. By following the coasts of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, he made his way to Gaspe.

Few men owned even one pinstriped suit just a few years ago, but now some of them own several. Marvin A. Blumenfeld, the president of April-Marcus, a merchandising cosulting firm, says the pinstriped suit is now as popular as the navy-blue suit for "business and client meetings."

Down On The Farm As Summer Days End

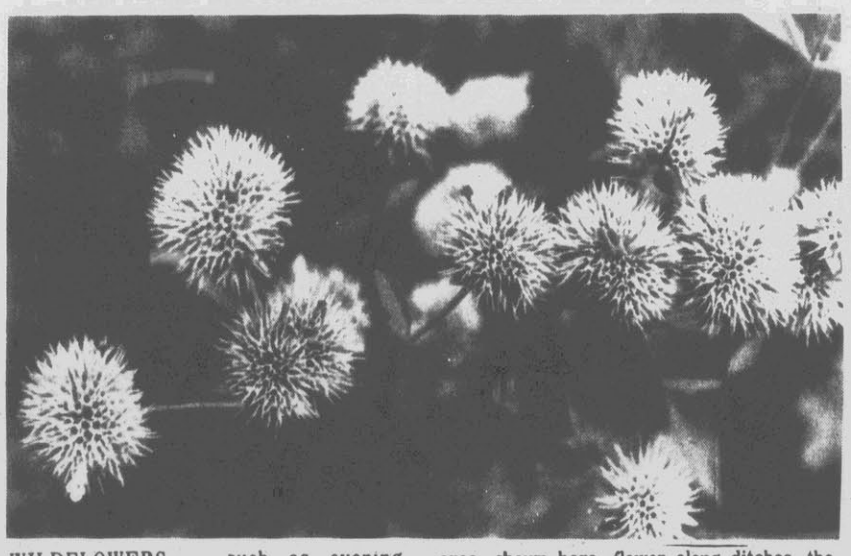

A Row Of Old Tobacco Barns

TOBACCO BARNS ... are a rural architectural mainstay in many areas of the South. First there were log barns, then wooden barns, and now the trend is to metal curing barns. The attractive line of partially vine-covered barns shown here are on the old L.O. Whitehurst Farm on County Road 1517, north of Stokes, now the home of the H.O. Whitehurst family.

THE LAST OF THE SEASON'S TOBACCO ... By the first week of September, most tobacco fields have been harvested. Occasionally, late planted tobacco does not get harvested until the first week or two in September.

Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

WILDFLOWERS ... such as evening primroses, passion flowers, goldenrod and the Marshallia, a rather rare wildflower in this area, shown here, flower along ditches, the edges of forests and roadsides during August and September.

The days of late summer on area farms fall in between the earlier, more hectic time of planting and cultivation and the coming days of a brief respite from the year-long hard work of being a farmer.

In late August and early September, farmers have behind them the harvest of cucumber and other vegetable crops, and for most, the harvest (putting in) of tobacco has been completed.

Ahead lies the time of harvest days for corn, soybeans, peanuts, sweet potatoes and, for a very few, cotton.

From April through July, farmers struggle diligently, through cultivation and use of weed killers, to keep cultivated fields clean of grass and weeds.

Once cultivation and spraying ceases, however, nature quickly reasserts itself, with the result that by early September grass, weeds and wildflowers grow up seemingly overnight, taking over any area in which the battle of control is not maintained.

Despite sophisticated mechanized equipment which has replaced the mule and plow farming of a few decades ago, most farmers still live by a sunrise to sunset routine, six, and when necessary seven, days a week.

It's a hard life at best, and when unfavorable weather coupled with the high prices of equipment, fuel, labor and fertilizer wipe out any hoped-for profits, it can be a disheartening way to make a living, no matter how dedicated a man may be to the land.

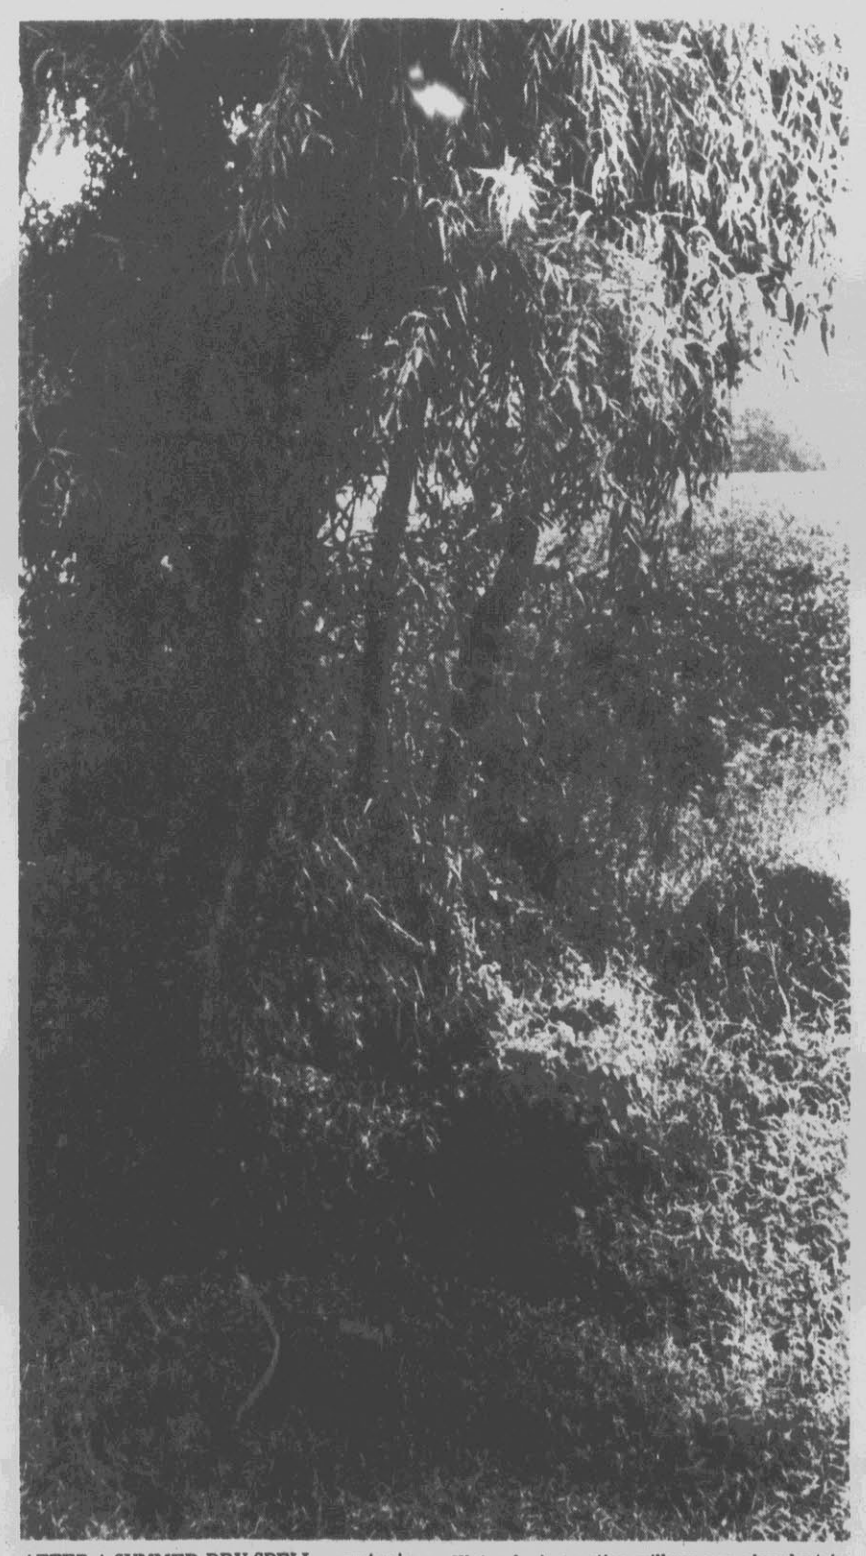

Yet, even in leaner years, there are many compensations in being a farmer. The joy of watching things grow, the satisfaction of being outdoors, and the changing seasonal beauty of the rural landscape are all part of what keep people down on the farm.

For young people (and for the young in heart) living on farms, late summer is the best of all times to enjoy choruses of cicadas, often known locally as locusts, when they fine-tune their lyrical shrillness in early morning and again at twilight hours. Grasshoppers too reach their peak population at this time and a walk through grass and weeds will arouse dozens of the creatures into fast-hopping action.

The photographs on this page represent a small cross-section of the varied attractions of farms and rural areas in late summer days that bring fruition to man's cultivation of the rich, productive land of eastern North Carolina.

CAROLINA COUNTRY ROADS ... in the peak of a season's foliage, are among some of the most charming roadways to be found anywhere. The scene here is a short distance outside Robersonville.

AFTER A SUMMER DRY SPELL ... water in small streams runs low, with the damp bedstream becoming densely covered with water weeds, shown here in the foreground. Water loving native willows are abundant in and along streams and ditches. A field of soybeans is in the background.

CORN FIELDS ... in the latter part of August lose their green color and turn to brownish-gold. Due to the erratic weather in the summer of 1983, most farmers in eastern North Carolina will have one of the poorest yields in years.

Chatham Boatbuilder Sees Industry Change

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Chatham County builder is developing molded plywood sailboat hulls he believes will revolutionize the boatbuilding industry.

"I think it's going to displace fiberglass construction," said Jace Hobbs, 29. "Cold-molded plywood is superior to fiberglass because of its stiffness, strength-to-weight ratio and fatigue factor."

Central to Hobbs' process is a single mold, shaped somewhat like a three-dimensional question mark, on which he molds curved panels that form the hull, deck and other parts of the boat.

Each panel forms one half of the hull and is glued onto a superstructure that forms the interior. No internal bracing is needed. The shape of the mold and superstructure are determined by a formula Hobbs developed through calculations and experimentation.

Hobbs said fiberglass had the edge beginning in the early '50s because people could be hired off the street to do the labor.

"But the best boats have always been made of wood veneer. My gig is to get big wooden boats into a production setting," he said.

Ordinarily, molded wood hulls are made by gluing strips of plywood to a frame. The process requires much labor to get the hull shape adjusted just right. Then the inside structure is built according to the outside shape.

"With my process, I can predict the shape of every part in the whole boat — hull, deck and centerboard," Hobbs said. "And I can make one finished panel ready to paint per day."

Factories using the process could probably save 40 percent in labor costs from the conventional cold-molded plywood method, he said. They could also save on material costs because less waste is involved.

The basic idea of shaping hull panels on a mold was developed by others, but Hobbs has refined the technique and calculated the shape of the mold so that all the parts will fit together precisely.

"It's designed to build a high-performance, sophisticated boat quickly," he said, adding that some primitive, unsatisfactory hulls resulted when others tried to use the technique before he refined it.

The mold is actually a section of an elliptical toroid — a doughnut shape with an egg-shaped rather than circular cross-section. Hobbs glues together two or three layers of veneer over the mold to form panels for all three hulls of a 28-foot trimaran.

The same mold can be used for other boats ranging in length from 14 to 35 feet, he said.

Hobbs helped build two other boats while experimenting with the process. One is now being used as a fishing boat in Guiana, he said.

Robby Robinson, associate editor of Sail magazine, said in a telephone interview from Boston that Hobbs' process "has a lot of potential."

"But setting it up as taking over fiberglass is premature to say the least," he said. "That's a fairly big claim."

But Hobbs said molded plywood is better than fiberglass for sailboats because it is stiffer, less flammable, better-looking and has more natural flotation, he said. It's better than ordinary wood because when epoxy glues are used, it will never rot.

The process is less suited for motorboats because most of them require flatter hulls, he said.

Hobbs said his system is designed to use readily available materials. He is building the panels of his trimaran from poplar veneer, which is widely used in North Carolina's furniture industry.

Amateur boatbuilders as well as the industry could benefit from the process, he said. Factories can mass-produce the panels and ship them nested inside each other to the builder, who could assemble them quickly.

"It's about as close to a pop-together project as boatbuilding comes," he said.

Hobbs, who is interviewing possible investors in the system, said the molding process has other applications, such as making domed houses.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day and evening when whatever has to do with the lighter side of life — pleasure, entertainment, romance and adornment problems can be the means by which most everyone can be successful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Show more devotion for the one you love and increase mutual happiness and then plan very constructively for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Situations arise that give you the opportunity to channel your capabilities in the right direction and get fine results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Put a little personal touch to any communication or letter writing and get better results than in the past.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) This is a good day for making collections or gaining other benefits, so get an early start on such and get good results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are radiant and magnetic today and can easily get your points across to others and be happy. Be as outgoing and social as you like.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show more devotion to your mate as well as your friends and get better results with them. Stop being so reticent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to gain more favor from those you consider to be your closest friends and deepen the relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to show others on whom you depend that you are loyal and a good worker. A raise could be in the offing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan that trip that can help you to expand or for some other good purpose. Go to some wise person for good ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Follow your intuition and you know best how to handle matters at hand and also work up new business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A bigwig will back you in some venture that is worthwhile and practical, if you approach wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make your surroundings more inviting and get an early start on this so that you can feel more satisfied and work better in them.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who can advance very quickly in the career and also have a happy personal life. One who can make the family happy during earliest years and should have a very fine deducation.

Ancient Relics Highlight Show

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) - A "magic" shirt belonging to the son of 15th-century ruler Mehmet the Conqueror and a 4,000-year-old recipe for sexual potency are among the relics of Anatolian civilization currently on display here.

The collection is part of the European Council's 18th biennial exhibition. Organizers say it spans 100,000 years of more than a dozen Anatolian cultures. On display is one of the first coins ever minted, from the boom trading towns of seventh-century B.C. Lydia.

Rare china, brocades, stone tablets and metalwork were collected from museums throughout Europe for the exhibit, which is open through Oct. 30.

Istanbul's St. Irene's Church, one of the first cathedrals in Christendom, houses much of the collection, offering viewers artifacts from the Stone Age to the end of the Byzantine era.

CRYPTOQUIP 9-3

SCB HSSB AXYFU-CH DXU FYHGTXWFU:

X TGITMN NGFFHITGD TWU UTMUBFTA.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE MUSICIAN CAUGHT A DOG BURYING HIS TROMBONE IN THE YARD.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals P.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

PRESIDENTIAL PEROGATIVE

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. North deals.

Time magazine has featured bridge only twice. One time was in 1957, when Charles Goren was on the cover of the news magazine and several hands were included in the feature story inside. The other was four years earlier, when Time decided to look in on the most famous game in the country — the weekly Saturday night game held by President Eisenhower in the White House.

The magazine carried this hand, on which President Eisenhower held the South cards. His partner was Oswald Jacoby, who needs no introduction to bridge players anywhere.

After Jacoby opened one heart, Ike showed his strength with a jump shift to two spades. Jacoby raised, and Ike ended in six spades when Blackwood revealed that an ace was missing.

West led a diamond, East won the ace and the President made his first good play when he dropped the king from his hand to preserve entries to the table. East shifted to the jack of clubs, and we quote the magazine:

"Eisenhower had considered the odds on the choices ahead of him: he could 1) finesse the queen of clubs (in which case he would have been down one); or 2) take the jack of clubs with his ace, then play out dummy's hearts hoping for a division of the opponents' hearts that would give him at least three heart winners. Odds were even on alternative No. 1, were better than five to one on alternative No. 2. Ike took with his club ace.

"Having made the crucial decision, Eisenhower had no further trouble. He drew trump, fortunately in two rounds, cashed dummy's top hearts, and ruffed a heart in his own hand. He got back to dummy with a diamond to ruff another heart, thus setting up dummy's last card in that suit. It was then easy to get back to dummy with another diamond in order to cash the last heart and discard the club queen on it.

"Score: six spades, bid and made."

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Life As It's Lived

By Gail Michaels

Phillip and I now avoid public appearances with Zachary because he is not yet civilized. For a while we deluded ourselves into thinking that we could achieve a breakthough, that we could eventually reclaim him from barbarism by continuing to introduce him to society at large.

But when it became apparent that society at large did not appreciate our efforts, we began to restrict his ventures into the outside world. Meg was enormously relieved, but my parents opposed our decision to cloister him.

"He never misbehaves when I'm around," my father said during our most recent visit.

"I think you probably just haven't been paying attention," Meg said.

"Oh, he's not so bad," my mother cooed. "He's a good boy for his Grandmommy.

He crawled up on her lap and gave her an affirmative kiss.

Mother dabbed her cheek with a Kleenex.

"Zachary's an awfully sloppy kisser," Meg told her, "and goodness is not his regular behavior, you can take it from me."

"Well, he is rather fiesty," Mother admitted later after Zachary sook his fist at Phillip, "but all he needs is a little gentle discipline."

"Is that what you were administering when you threw yourself on him so that Phillip couldn't spank him?" I asked.

"Force won't work on that child."

She has changed her tune consideralby since raising me.

Anyway, in an effort to disprove us, my father decided to take Zachary to the grocery store with him.

"Have you lost you mind?" I asked in a most repectful tone of voice.

"I promised him that he could ride in the jumpseat of my new truck today, and this is as good a time as any."

So away they rode, my father driving and Zachary strapped in right behind him bestowing his bald spot with many grateful kisses. Meg was sitting in the other jumpseat, gagging in all probablilty.

When they returned, I immediately asked how my son had behaved.

"I don't know why you insist on maligning this boy. He was an angel."

Zachary, slurping a red sucker, nodded.

"His little hand just began to tremble so when he saw the lollipops on the checkout counter that I couldn't resist," my father explained.

Meg rolled her eyes. "He didn't tremble. He grabbed."

Daddy then began to unload the groceries. He had bought a pound of ground beef, a bottle of apple juice, a box of Frosted Flakes, Pudding Pops, Pop-Tarts, chocolate chip cookies and a carton of ice cream.

"Does that solve the mystery of why Zachary was good?" Meg said.

"I suppose his hand trembled over those, too," Mother laughed, grabbing him and giving him a hug.

Mother smiled. "That's the nature of grandparents. We think you're perfect, too."

Meg sniffed, "Yes, but in my case, it makes some sense."

Business Courses Slated This Month

Three programs to help business personnel polish their communication skills will be offered in Raleigh and Greenville by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

"Increasing Your On-the-Job Speaking Skills," presented by Occupational Training and Development Inc. President Carroll S. Whitney, and "Increasing Your On-the-Job Writing Skills," by educator-communications consultant Dr. Bertie Carlyle Fearing, will be held in Raleigh at the North Raleigh Hilton Hotel.

The speaking skills program is scheduled for Sept. 21 and the writing for Sept. 22.

"Telephone Selling and Marketing" will be offered Sept. 22 at the Sheraton Inn in Raleigh and at the Ramada Inn in Greenville on the following day.

Further information about these and other programs for business and industry employees is available from the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, Greenville.

Top-Priced Homes Best Bet For Sale

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The best bet for homebuilders these days may be in the super-luxury category, where half-million-dollar prices attract rather than frighten would-be buyers.

Alvin Preiss, a consultant who is paid big fees to analyze markets and to design, develop and merchandise concepts, contends this is so because "the rich are getting richer and the middle class is getting poorer."

The super-luxury market, which benefits greatly from foreign money seeking a U.S. haven, is almost recession-proof, Preiss contends. At any rate, he says, "it's the last to feel the impact of recession."

In some areas, in fact, the topmost tier of the market felt little impact from the recession of 1981 and 1982, one of the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s. The super-rich just shrugged it off.

Other factors coincide with the demand for super-luxury homes, many of them condominiums and cooperatives.

In today's uncertain environment, says Preiss, builders no longer are willing to speculate on big tracts, which in the past took them deep into the suburbs. They have discovered the very developable "in-fill" site.

An in-fill, he explains, is a relatively small site near the inner city that was overlooked by developers, perhaps because it was too expensive in comparison with the vast empty spaces available to them in years gone by.

Such sites are perfect for the super-rich, in part because they offer accessiblity to the cultural, social and business life of the city. Besides, only the rich can afford them.

You can't just put up anything and expect to get a super-luxury price, however. "You want to be different but be in touch with reality," says Preiss, who has designed bathrooms bigger than living rooms.

As a professional marketer, Preiss asks himself who would live in the development being proposed. "I have research people to see what has been done. Then I decide how to do what nobody else is doing." You cannot get by with cosmetics, he advises. "No gimmicks," he warns client builders. "You make the product itself the promotion, instead of trying to make promotion the product."

You must seek uniqueness, says Preiss — that is, the housing must offer a distinctive lifestyle, such as that at Fisher Hill, just outside Boston and with a view of the skyline, where 38 apartments are being built on a 13-acre site, some in a restored mansion.

The possibility of tearing down the mansion and rebuilding a copy of it at lower cost was considered, but only briefly, says Preiss. A restored structure, he says, has grace. "Copying is fake." Besides, restorations are "in."

At Fisher Hill the lowest-priced apartment is $290,000; but money is no object in such a place, acccording to Preiss. More important, he says, are such things as the ambiance — the luxury — and the accessibility to community facilities.

For the rich, it is a venture in sharing, a cooperative.

Preiss concedes that "it used to be the poor who shared," but "now the rich do, too. ... It's smart to live with other people, and you can have facilities and services you could not have alone."

And in properly conceived super-luxury development you find that vital uniqueness, an eagerly desired quality that is a builder's protection, too.

"If you (the developer) have only what others have you go down with them," Preiss states. "In good times you don't have to be a genius; in bad times nothing works but the unique.

Bedroom Can Provide Good Personal Haven

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Some people live in every room of the home. To them, the bedroom is merely a place to get a good night's sleep.

But others find that no matter how large a house they inhabit, they always seem to gravitate toward the bedroom. It's the one room in the house in which they really relax.

Designer Gloria Vanderbilt puts herself in the latter category. Though she has several homes — each with a full complement of rooms — the bedroom is where she feels most comfortable. She says that for those who share her point of view, taking the time and spending the money to create a cozy haven in the bedroom is well worth the effort.

In an interview, the tastemaker, fashion and home furnishings designer offered some thoughts on how she achieved the goal in her own home and some advice for others who may wish to create a warm and romantic ambiance in the bedroom.

"I like softness underfoot in the bedroom. Though normally I prefer rugs to carpet, wall-to-wall carpet seems right in a bedroom," she said.

Another must is an easy chair — preferably one with an ottoman — so that she can relax and put her feet up in the bedroom without having to go to bed.

For one who works in the bedroom, as she does, bedside tables large enough to accommodate all the attendant clutter are a necessity. They provide a place for a radio — essential to her — and a lamp, books and other necessities.

In her own New York townhouse bedroom, two large red Chinese chests flank the bed at either side. She prefers nightstands to be at mattress height so she can reach over to get what she needs instead of having to reach up.

Nightstands are, however, not large enough to provide the necessary room for the accumulated magazines, books, correspondence and other paraphernalia that always builds up.

She has expanded the storage and work space with several additions, including a large antique magazine holder that rests near the bed on the floor, a long slender desk along one wall and a bench at the bottom of the bed. An old-fashioned wicker tray — the kind used for serving breakfast in bed — is kept handy and can be used as an eating or writing surface.

In order to be happy and comfortable, she says she — and most other people — need to be surrounded by mementos. In her own rooms, pictures her children made when young, framed and hung, and framed photos fulfill this role.

The bed is covered with patterned sheets and sometimes a matching comforter. When a blanket is in use, she often covers it with another patterned sheet.

How many pillows are right? Her beds tend to be piled high with them. She advises using "as many pillows as you need to be comfortable — and to me nothing is more comfortable than a pillow."

For the ultimate in romantic touches in a bedroom, include a canopy bed and lace curtains at the windows, she says.

Many people who know her best as a fashion designer will be surprised to know that Gloria Vanderbilt considers herself a home furnishings designer first — after her first love which is painting.

A paint brush may have been replaced by a roller for most jobs, but don't think it has gone the way of the dinosaur. Millions of brushes are still being sold and used, if only because many surfaces are not the large and flat kind where rollers are timesavers.

If you buy a good brush, with the emphasis on the "good," it should last indefinitely if it is cleaned and stored properly, with the emphasis on the "if." That goes whether you buy a brush with synthetic or natural bristles. Opinions differ on which is better if judged one against the other, but there is agreement that, in either case, quality is important. A cheap paint brush that may do for certain rough chores does a poor job when a good result is necessary.

To tell whether the brush you contemplate buying is good, bend back the bristles. They should snap back in a kind of crisp fashion. When you tug them, no more than one or two bristles should come loose. Another sign of a good brush is when the bristle tips have ends that appear to be split or flagged. Long bristles are better than short ones. You will be better able to tell the difference between good and bad bristles after you handle several brushes of both kinds and compare them close up.

Most painters believe natural bristles are better for oil-based paints, but that synthetic bristles are tops with latex paints. One thing is sure: A brush should be cleaned after use with its thinner — turpentine or mineral spirits for oil-based paint, water for latex, denatured alcohol for shellac, lacquer thinner for lacquer. Keep each brush solely for the finishing material for which it was first used. If you use a brush for shellac, for instance, mark it with an "S" and use it only for shellac from then on.

Once a brush has been cleaned, wipe it back and forth on a flat surface, preferably one covered with old newspapers. When the paint or other finishing product no longer appears to be coming off the brush, let the bristles soak a couple of hours in its solvent, then rinse thoroughly. During the soaking, the bristles should hang in the solvent and not be bent.

Occasionally, a brush can be suspended in a can or bottle of the proper solvent for a day or two, but no more. After that, the solvent may evaporate and leave the bristles in a messy condition. In storing a brush, the two most important things are to keep it dust-free and to see the bristles remain straight.

A brush should be held at a slight angle when applying the paint. Pressure should be moderate, since excessive pressure will not allow the paint to be spread evenly and will damage the bristles. When painting, work toward the wet edge of the paint previously applied. Don't overload the brush and don't try to spread the paint too much.

Give some thought to buying and using a brush suitable for the work you are to do. If you are to paint trim, for instance, you'll find the task a lot easier if you have a brush made especially for that purpose. Also, to avoid fatigue, always use a brush small enough to handle the job easily. A brush that is too large may feel all right at the start, but can become tiring after an hour or two of painting.

Some paints are flammable, some are not. Some emit harmful vapors, some do not. Be on the safe side. Provide plenty of ventilation every time, no matter which kind of paint you are using.

Q. Is it safe to buy pansy plants and set them out in the fall, or should I wait until spring to buy and plant them? (M. Edneyville)

A. Go ahead and purchase and plant pansies in the fall. Pansies are hardy, and planting in the fall allows the plants to become established before spring. Depending on the weather, you may have a few blossoms later.

Q. Can you give me some tips on exhibiting fruits and vegetables at the county fair? (M. Hendersonville)

A. All specimens exhibited should be typical of the named variety being judged. Each specimen should be as identical as possible in size, shape, color, freshness and degree of maturity as other specimens in the plate. Uniformity is a must in a winning exhibit. Entires should be in prime eating condition. Specimens should not be cracked or blemished. They should be free from insects, disease or mechanical injuries and mold. Excess soil may be removed from most vegetables with a soft brush or fine spray of water. Peppers and eggplant should be wiped with a damp cloth or a cloth to which one or two drops of salad oil has been added. Always make sure specimens are not injured in the cleaning process. Specimen size should be medium or slightly larger, or the size most commonly sold in grocery stores. Avoid large specimens because they indicate poor quality and over-maturity.

Q. — I plan to purchase a mobile home, but want to ask something about anchoring the home to the ground. I never knew this was needed, but the dealer says it is required. Since this is going to cost me more, I would like to know if it must be done? Is it necessary because the law says so or because the dealer says so?

A. — In your state, it is the law. Such homes must be anchored to the ground. Although the method of anchoring depends on several factors, you should make sure that, if you are being located in a mobile park, the system used is in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions as well as the legal regulations. It is quite possible, also, you would be unable to obtain a mortgage loan unless the home had the proper anchoring system. Some, in fact, may reduce the premium a bit if you are anchored according to both the insurance company's and the state's specifications. If none of this were necessary, you would still be wise to have your home anchored.

Q. — I will soon have to handle what is called a satin stain, something which I have never worked with in the past even though I have done some wood staining. Should I apply a sealer first, then the stain?

A. — Generally, this is best to get an even penetration. While some satin stain does not require a sealer, you most certainly need one if you are using one of the soft, open grain woods like fir or lauan mahogany. Stain on those woods "takes" unevenly, but the sealer will help to prevent that. As this department has been advising for many years, never use any stain without testing it first on some inconspicuous area. If the test does not suit you, remember you can control the intensity of the color by the manner in which you wipe off the excess stain and, if it is an oil stain, by the addition of a little turpentine or mineral spirits. The quicker the wipeoff, the lighter the stain. The shade will also be lightened by adding turpentine.

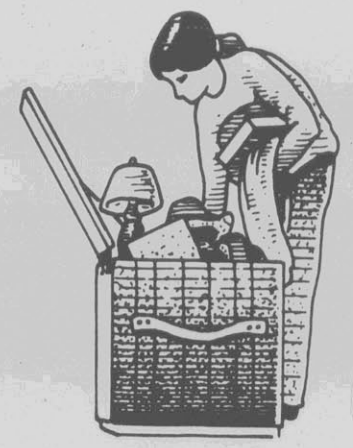

Q. — We had a discussion recently among three of us do-it-yourselfers on the merits and demerits of sanding by hand; that is, the kind where you use a wooden block or some other cushion for the sandpaper. We pretty well agreed about the advantages of sanding with an electric sander for most projects and the advantages of sanding by hand when an absolutely perfect sanding result is required. But we got into a hassle about whether there is any advantage to cross-sanding. One person said he had cross-sanded for years with good results, another said it often spoiled his job. Do you have an opinion?

A. — I do, but there has to be some qualification to my reply. Like your friend, I sanded for many years both across and with the grain, using the cross-sanding for the first sanding when the surface of the wood was particularly rough and much of it had to be removed. Things generally seemed all right, but in recent years I noticed a few times that some of the sanding marks showed a little after a stain and a clear finish were applied. After a talk with a professional wood finisher, I decided to sand with the grain no matter how many times the surface had to be sanded. The marks never again made an appearance, so I have since then come around to the conclusion that cross-sanding usually need not be used.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Hiss Recital Opens Season

Baritone Clyde Hiss will apear in recital at 8:15 p.m. Sept. 11 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. This recital opens the 1983-84 season of recitals and concerts on campus under the auspices of the school of music.

There is no admission charged and the recital is open to the public.

Hiss will be accompanied by pianist Timothy Hoekman, a member of the keyboard faculty during a leave of absence of Ellen Nagode. Last year, Hoekman filled the position of pianist Donna Coleman, who was on a leave of absence at that time.

For his program, Dr. Hiss has chosen 10 "Bibical Songs," composed near the end of Antonin Dvorak's life. These songs are based on passages from various Psalms from the King James version of the Bible.

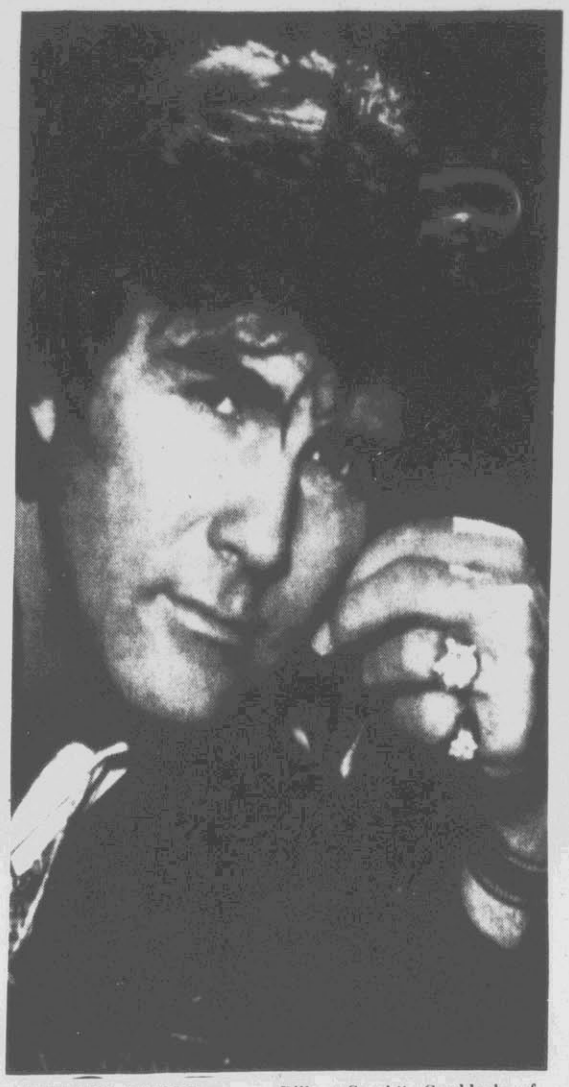

This group of Dvorak songs will be followed by four songs from Heine's "Dichterliebe" set to music by Robert Schumann; a song from von Weber's opera, "Der Freischutz;" and "Trois Chansons" by Chabrier.

Other works to be sung by Hiss include two songs each by Offenbach and Sullivan.

Hiss, a voice teacher at ECU and director of the Opera Theater, has sung numerous recitals, oratorios and concerts with various societies and orchestras in several states. Before coming to ECU, he was a faculty member at Mercer University and the University of Illinois.

Hoekman has had extensive solo appearances with orchestras in California, Michigan and Illinois, and in 1982 performed as a guest artist at the World's Fair.

Long Love Affair With Music

HAYLOFT SINGER . . . Billy "Crash" Craddock of Greensboro, as a youngster sang in a hayloft and made bows to an imaginary audience. Now he's a top country-rock singer with a sizzling concert show. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — As a child growing up in Greensboro, N.C., when country-rock singer Billy "Crash" Craddock wanted to sing, he'd head for the hayloft.

"I used to go to the barn and get up in the hayloft and pretend I was at the Grand Ole Opry," he recalls. "I'd get a broom and pretend it was a microphone and pretend I was Hank Williams, Little Jimmy Dickens or Ernest Tubb. I was everybody.

"I'd take my bows," he said. "I had a blast in that barn."

For the past 12 years, Craddock has been taking his bows as one of the steadiest singers — and flashiest performers — in country music.

Often compared to the late Elvis Presley and Tom Jones, Craddock has had such hits as "Rub It In," "Knock Three Times," "Easy as Pie," "Broken Down in Tiny Pieces," "Dream Lover," "Ain't Nothin' Shakin'," "Ruby Baby" and "Sweet Magnolia."

He put a country feel to Tony Orlando's "Knock Three Times" in 1971, setting a trend with a country-rock touch that is popular today by Alabama, the Oak Ridge Boys, Waylon Jennings and others.

"I feel I've had a lot to do with changing (country) music and bringing it up to date," said Craddock, who gives his age as "between 29 and 43."

He got the nickname "Crash" for the reckless way he played football as a 135-pound halfback in high school.

"One guy hit me on the rear end one time," he said. "We went into the huddle and someone called me 'Crash.' Then, when I went to Columbia Records, they wanted to establish a personality, so I went along with using it.

"It's a name you can't forget easily."

In the same way that his name is memorable, so is his hyperactive, high-energy show that has the reputation as being one of the best in the business.

"We try to touch everybody," Craddock said. "We do country, country-rock, country-pop, a lot of ballads and an old rock 'n' roll medley."

The medley usually includes "Happy Days," "Rock Around the Clock," "Great Balls of Fire," "Blueberry Hill," "Teen Angel" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On."

"Most of the country music fans today grew up with rock 'n' roll," he said. "We do it and people love it. I see the audience nudging each other."

He mixes in the ballads with a hymn or the moving "American Trilogy."

"We open with a bang, slow it down, speed it up, slow it down and then close with a bang," Craddock said.

He also will sing the Commodores' "Three Times a Lady" and dedicate it to the women in the audience from the men. On a lighter note, he will sing his hit "Rub It In" — but not the way he recorded it.

"It's not a dirty song, but we spice it up a little bit. But we don't get ugly. People like it."

He said he learned how to perform from listening and watching others at the Plantation Club in Greensboro, where he still lives.

"The club owner used to tell me to move more," he said. "I didn't move a lot then. This other guy stood on his head and tore the audience up. I realized I've got to move and use my talents.

"You watch Tom Jones and Presley and then you realize they used every inch of their talent," says Craddock. "People pay a lot of money and they want to be entertained. I'd like people to say they saw one fantastic show tonight.

"As I've often said, being mentioned in the same breath with Elvis Presley is a compliment. I don't try to be him or impersonate him. We have a lot of the same gestures and maybe I have the same charisma or something."

Because he lives hundreds of miles from Nashville and doesn't play strictly hard country music, Craddock is not highly visible in "the country music capital of the world." He thinks some recognition has eluded him.

ECU Music Calendar

The school of music at East Carolina University has announced its calendar of four events to be held during the month of September. Unless otherwise noted, all are free and open to the public and will take place at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

Surfing Competition Coming Up At Hatteras

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

BUXTON — They will begin arriving today to register and to make practice runs for the tough and exciting water sport competition that will begin Tuesday and continue through Saturday — and even later, if necessary.

The event is the annual trials and competition for those taking part in the Eastern Surfing Association championship competition, to be held in the National Park area near the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. A large number of surfing devotees from the eastern seaboard states south from Florida and north through Massachusetts are expected to be on hand for the competition.

"If the usual pattern prevails," a spokesman helping to coordinate the event said, "the heaviest registration will be from Florida and New Jersey."

From Tuesday through Friday, elimination heats will be conducted each day, beginning as early as seven in the morning and continuing until dark, weather and wave conditions permitting. "Hopefully, there will be waves high enough to give us top competitive conditions through Friday," the spokesman added. "If not, we may have to continue the heats on through the weekend. This we hope to avoid as many of the participants are young men enrolled in various colleges and universities, and we want them back in school as early as possible."

The competition will be divided into several categories — young surfers 6 years old and up; the junior division, men's and women's seniors divisions, and the masters division.

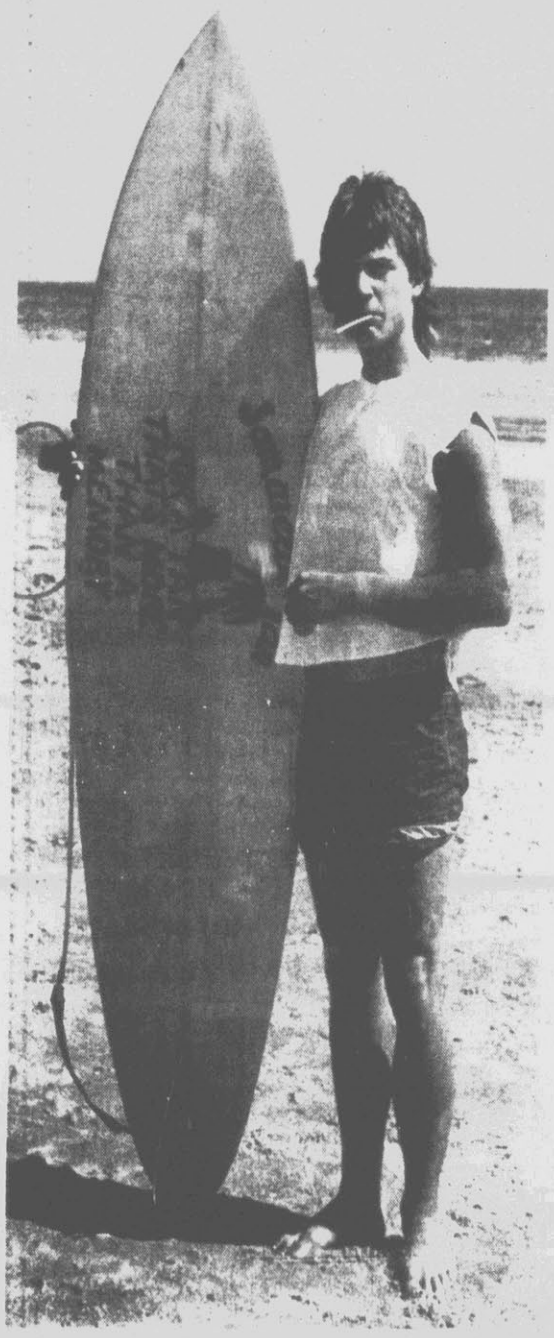

"Mostly, the competition will be male and will be young men in the college-age group," the spokesman added. A large number of trophies will be awarded.

Top winners in this Eastern Surfing Association competition will be eligible to compete in the upcoming national competition. Each year regional competitions are held prior to the national one. In addition to the Eastern event at Cape Hatteras, other competitions are being held for associations representing the Gulf Coast, California, and Hawaii-based associations.

In addition to the use of standard surf boards, some competitors will be pitting their surfing skills in categories for various long boards.

There is no admission charged.

Surfers interested in full details on the competition can contact either Gae or Toni Zindel at 995-5785.

POSSIBLE COMPETITOR ... Mike Fogt of Mebane, a freshman at East Carolina University and a devotee of surfing, is thinking of entering the Eastern Surfing Association championship competition which opens today near the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. Like many other collegiate surfers, his participation will depend on whether or not he can afford time away from his studies. Mike was photographed recently at the Fort Macon State Park Beach on a day when the water was too calm to practice his art. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Borneo Expedition Enters Crucial Stage

(Editor's Note: Previous accounts of the adventures of The Camel Expedition were carried in the Sunday issues of this paper on July 10 and Aug. 14).

BORNEO, Indonesia — A team of six Americans making "The Great Borneo Traverse" has entered a crucial stage in its attempt to cross the island.

Because of the remoteness of the location, word of the team's progress is slow in reaching the headquarters of the sponsoring firm, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in Winston-Salem.

The latest report received, dated July 31, reveals that, according to a diary compiled during the first 10 days of the trip, the team was preparing to enter an unmapped highland jungle and begin a 20-day hike to a government outpost at Longnawan.

"Now it's straight into 'the blank of the map,'" wrote expedition member John Long of Santa Monica, Calif. "We are heading for the headwaters of the Kayan River on which we plan to make the first descent. We now face a crucial section where our trust will be at times placed in the hands of some of the wildest-looking natives on the face of the earth. Our hearts are quickened!"

The adventure, an unprecedented two-month, 2,000-mile journey, is The Camel Expedition of 1983, sponsored by Camel cigarettes.

The central section of Indonesian Borneo the team is traversing lies on the equator east of Singapore and north of the island of Bali.

The progress report of the expedition was given to a native runner in a small village near the uncharted jungle highlands, and then mailed to the United States via Jakarta, Indonesia.

The expedition began on the west coast of Borneo on July 21 with a trip up the Kapuas River on the "Mata Hari," a 60-foot river steamer reminiscent of the "African Queen."

The boat was piloted by young boys who fed the team a variety of rice dishes cooked on board. The six Americans slept on the deck.

During a stop at one village, the local secretary (similar to a mayor) said the Americans were the first outsiders he had ever seen. Long observed that despite the oppresive heat, the natives remained dry while the Americans were perspiration-soaked.

"The locals flock around us for we're such an anomaly to their normal day. Intrigued by our novelty, they are forever shy but always friendly and hospitable," wrote Long, a noted rock climber and outdoorsman.

On the fourth night out, "We were treated to the wild theatrics of a jungle storm — thunder and lightning. The squall fires down with a vengence but lasts only 30 minutes. With little to no light, the pilot's prowess is soon proven, for much dangerous flotsam (usually logs) must be avoided."

On July 25 the team arrived at Putussibau, the last settlement of real size before the uncharted jungle. There they played a game of jungle volleyball — "with half the town as our raving witness."

The next day, the team loaded gear into dugout canoes and continued the journey up the Kapuas. "The river narrows to 100 yards and the surrounding jungle changes dramatically — great arching trees, precipitous terrain and the constant cacaphony of exotic jungle sounds. We stop at our first longhouse and a youth shinnies up a tree, returning with several green coconuts, the milk of which we guzzle with great relish. Hunch, haggard, tatooed old ladies slink around, earlobes dangling three inches, teeth stained blood red from the constant nibbling of betel nut.

"Young mothers thrash rice with heavy ironwood staffs. One girl dons full ceremonial regalia for our viewing pleasure — a brightly colored, four-piece garment complemented with flashy coins, trinkets and gold and silver braid."

That evening, in a six-house settlement called Metalunai, the team slept in an "eerie, thatched longhouse teetering atop dubious 10-foot stilts. A short perusal of the walls and ceiling discloses a full panoply of horrendous spiders. A long night."

"Fruit bats (flying foxes) with three-foot wing spans waft overhead; troops of monkeys swinging from trees at the 200-foot level; plus hornbills, kits, hawks and versicolored stork billed kingfishers skimming the rapids for prey," Long wrote.

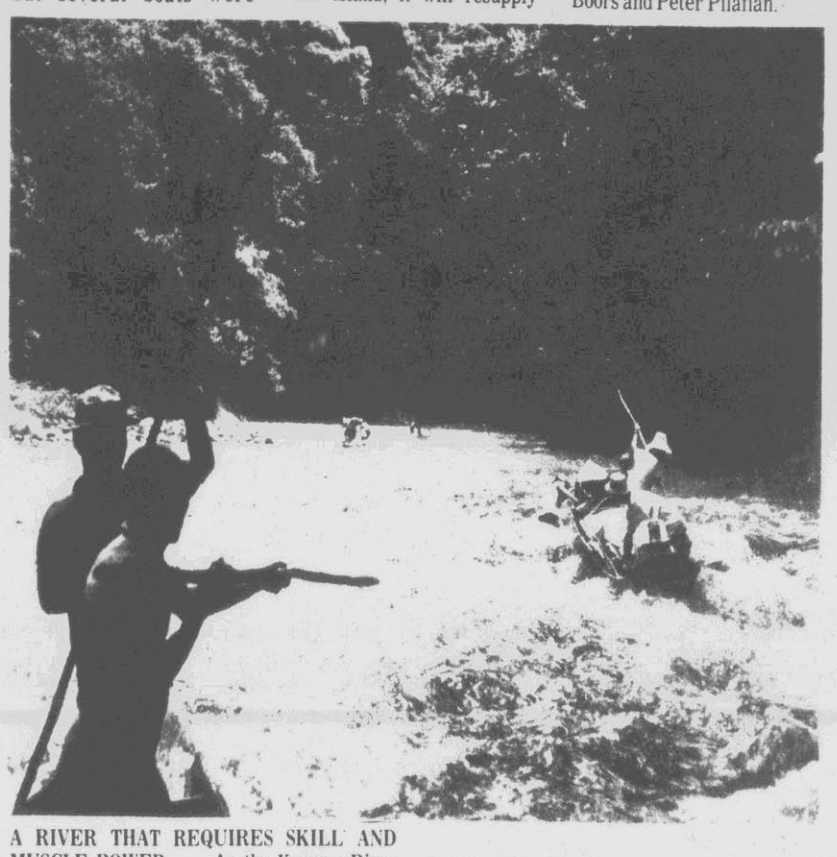

By July 30, team members, with the help of 20 natives, were engaged in a fierce battle with a tributary of the Kapuas as they fought upstream in their tiny boats.

"The rapids are twice that of the Kapuas," Long records. "Half the day is spent towing, heaving and muscling the dugouts through seething, waist-deep white water. The Punam boatmen are consummate operators, but several boats were swamped after unsuccessful attempts to shoot waterfalls — our cargo being saved only by diving into the white water and snagging the booty."

Long described the natives in one 10-house village as "impressively muscled and tatooed (the most interesting tatoo extending from the Adam's apple to mid-chest), always smoking clove cigarettes and chewing betel nuts."

Once the team reaches Longnawan in the center of the island, it will resupply and test the Kayan, which, natives told the team members, contains fearsome rapids so obscured by rocks and trees that on one has ever seen them. Natives call the rapids "Embun," meaning "mist that roars," because only the mist and the sound of the rapids can be seen and heard above the trees.

A RIVER THAT REQUIRES SKILL AND MUSCLE POWER . . . As the Kapuas River and its tributaries narrow, the expedition team members and their native assistants must pole dugout canoes upstream — a laborious and time-consuming manner of travel.

LONG RUN

NEW YORK (AP) — The longest-running show in New York City has been running for 33 years — for free.

It is seen by some 652,000 persons a day who pass through Grand Central Terminal.

Beginning Sept. 7, the 500th in the series, entitled "Reflections" — a rustic scene that is reflected in a body of water near Keene, N.Y. — will be displayed for six weeks. The photographs, measuring 60 feet wide by 18 feet high, are changed on an average of every six weeks.

Good Showing Made By Body Builders From The Local Area

Four local body builders, including a Bethel teen-ager, have made good showings in competitions held in Rutherfordton and Jacksonville recently. All are trainees at the Nautilus Shop, where Greenville-native Mike Harrington, the shop's operator, also trains and supervisors the body builders.

Harrington reports that, "at the Rutherfordton event held last weekend, the Carolina Classics, Reggie Selby of Greenville, a student at East Carolina University, placed third in the Junior Classic division for short competitors. David Pratt, who competed in the Junior Classic for tall competitors, placed fourth. David is from Ayden and is a recent graduate of ECU."

Just prior to the Carolina Classics, Nautilus trainees from Greenville also took part in the Eastern North Carolina Physique Classics. "In this event," Harrington said, "Clint Jordan of Rocky Mount, also a student at ECU, placed first in the tall class novice division, but lost in the finals in the pose-down with the top winner in the short division.

"One of our teen-age body builders, Pete Clark from Bethel, placed 5th in the teen-age division of the Eastern North Carolina Physique Classic. Before that, Pete placed fourth in the Mr. North Carolina Physique competition in the teen-age division."

Harrington said these good showings are "remarkable, considering that all four of these competitors have only been in training for four or five months. I believe we have a good chance of making even better showings in future competitions, statewide as well as regional."

'Little Beavers' To Honor Their Chief

ARLINGTON, Va. — As many as 1,500 veterans of the famed World War II Destroyer Squadron 23 — better known as the "Little Beavers" — will honor their commander — then captain, now Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, U.S. Navy retired — in ceremonies to be held Oct. 29 in the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Arlington, Va.

Burke led the destroyers through victories from the Solomon Islands to Truk and through two major surface battles, at Empress Augusta Bay and Cape St. George. It was the speed at which the squadron attacked and destroyed a more powerful Japanese force at Cape St. George that won him the famous nickname, "31-Knot Burke."

Admiral Burke served an unprecedented six years as chief of naval operations under President Eisenhower. The Navy has recently announced that the first ship of a new series will be named the USS Arleigh Burke (DDG 51), which is scheduled to join the fleet in 1989. Never before has a living person been so honored.

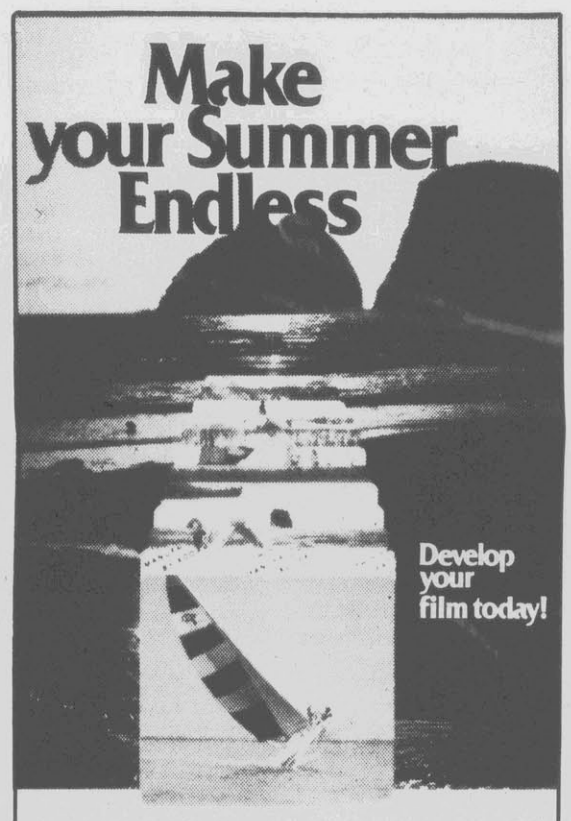

The ships involved in Destroyer Squadron 23 were the USS Charles Ausburne; USS Claxton; USS Dyson; USS Stanly; USS Foote; USS Converse; USS Spence, USS Braine; USS Thatcher and USS Aulick.

A Greenville, N.C., man, W.B. Whitehurst, a retired Navy commander, was a member of the squadron during World War II. Whitehurst will provide additional information on the ceremonies to any former Navy man. He can be contacted by mail at 102 Lamont, Greenville, or by phone, 756-4059.

A Promising Start For Area Magazine Series

The Original Washington and Beaufort County Magazine. Tom Williams, editor. Washington, N.C., A Williams & Co. Publication, Vol. 1, Summer 1983, paper, 66 pages, $2.95.

Several local writers have joined with editor Tom Williams in penning articles for this magazine, the first of several projected for future publication on other county-town areas of eastern North Carolina.

Predictably for a publication of this nature, much of the material is oriented to times past — nostalgia is popular with readers, and history buffs of lightweight, non-scholary material will certainly enjoy the spice and humor of some of the articles.

Contributor Edward L. Voliva gives a colorful account of the freight schooner Susannah, which operated in the Pamlico and Albemarle sounds in the late 1800s and early 1900s. It seems the builder and original owner of the boat, William Brinkley of Manteo, who completed the vessel in 1831, so loved his ship that he vowed that after his death any new owner who did not give it tender care would be haunted. Sure enough, this happened, but when Captain William Oliver Lupton purchased the ship, he refurbished it, loved it and the haunting ended.

Enumeration of the cargo carried on the Susannah during Lupton's long ownership is indicative of the local trade of those years — herring, Irish potatoes, wild ponies. The sad part of this story is that after the Susannah was purchased by a wealthy Yankee yatchsman, it has not been possible to establish what fate befell the carefully crafted boat captained with pride by two owners.

Variations on official histories and popular accounts of historic events provides the basis for Fred M. Mallison's article, "The Day the Yankees Came." Officially, Northern invaders coming by river vessels into Washington took the town without firing a shot — the rebel stalwarts from Georgia defending the port town gathered their arms and vanished from the scene. Unofficially, legend has it two young lads inadvertently earned $5 by giving the intruders a hot reception.

Some of the sailors on the Yankee ships that "took the town" saw and were intrigued by a humming-bird. One of the men, expressing a willingness to pay good Yankee currency for one, were delivered a covey of humming birds sealed with mud into their nests. The nest, of course, was a hornet's nest with the holes temporarily sealed until the enterprising lad could take their money and beat it.

Perhaps little known locally, exploration work is being carried out on a sunken vessel in the Tar River at a site just west of the Washington bridge. Writer Cindy Broome's article, "Relics of War: Divers explore the wreck of the Pickett on Washington's harbor floor," relates developments to date in efforts to discover as much as possible about the wreck, which may or may not be the Civil War gunboat, the USS Picket.

Artifacts recovered so far include bullets, spikes and pins, bottles, dinner plats, swords, rifles and coins. Salvage operations are extremely difficult due to the turbid quality of the water. Because of this, the work is very dangerous. In conjunction with salvage efforts, plans are being made to erect a museum to contain relics retrieved from the sunken vessel.

Two non-nostalgic articles: "What to Do? Try This Driving Tour of Beaufort County" by Wiliams; and "Walking Tour of Washington's Historic District" by Carolyn Stroud, give up-to-date suggestions for places to visit and things to do in historic Washington and throughout Beaufort County.

Other articles in the helpful category include information on arts organizations, a hunting and fishing calendar, and short articles on places of interest such as the Aurora Fossil Museum and the Belhaven Memorial Musuem.

There's interesting textual material in this first issue of planned area magazines. A greater number of photographs would have enhanced the publlication's visual aspect. One definite minus is the necessity to turn to several pages to read each article — a situation obviously necessitated by the cramped space remaining after the insertion of an abundance of advertisement.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

Improve your health, your body and your looks with the help of new books recently added to the library's collection.

Reader's Digest's "Eat Better, Live Better" is a commonsense guide to nutrition and good health which offers practical, east-to-follow advice. The editors have worked with doctors and nutritionists to give clear, specific answers to questions about family meal planning for a balanced diet, sources of nutrients, food additives and weight control.

It suggests no fads or gimmicks or quick-weight-loss diets but offers a way to understand nutrition and use it to take control of your own health. It can help you change your lifestyle, gain in looks what you shed in inches and add happy, healthy years to your life. "Eat Better, Live Better" gives you step-by-step guidance on how to do it and have fun in the process.

In "Surviving Exercise" Judy Alter offers a safe and sane exercise program. Fully illustrated, this clear, concise guide demonstrates the do's and don'ts of floor exercise. It contains a complete set of safe and sensible exercises from head to toe and steers you away from the harmful exercises that you might still try to do. It tells you when to do stretching exercises and when to do strenghtening ones and tells you how to judge every exercise for yourself in a way that builds you up instead of tearing you down. It's an exercise guide for everyone who needs a safe and clear introduction to exercise.

Susan Sommers tells you how to put time on your side in "Beauty After 40." She combines her own broad knowledge of beauty care with the insights of professionals in a variety of fields to create a comprehensive book on practical, authoritative beauty advice for women over 40. She looks at 40 as a psychological turning point rather than a physical one and says it's important to know how to counteract the changes we label as signs of age before they become irreversible.

Ms. Sommers focuses on achieving your full potential and explains the physical process in aging and the importance of attitude in determining how you look at any particular time. She shows you how to express a positive self-image in the way you look and dress and helps you gain more control over how you look.

She interveiws six of today's most exciting women over 40 and gives each of the women's special secrets and tips for looking and feeling great. She also offers fact-filled discussions of attitude, makeup, skin and hair care, body shaping and spas, complemented by a list of 50 beauty hints.

"Beauty After 40" can help you feel more self-confident and leave you looking and feeling better.

Author Taps Rich Vein in World War I Novel

Phoenix Rising. By Frances Patton Statham. New York, Fawcett-Columbine. 339 pp., paperback, $5.95.

The summer's almost over, and the reading has been easy. What better way to finish off the season than to lie in a hammock during the last heat wave, enjoying the breeze (if there's any) with another good book in your hand, such as Georgia author Frances Patton Statham's latest bestseller, "Phoenix Rising?" It is an historical romance (not too heavy, not too hot) that has enough educational material so you can feel slightly virtuous instead of guilty at reading such light material. Ms. Statham takes a touch of light romance, blends it together with the drama of World War I and the story of a woman's search for her brother and takes us to France during that period of our history.

The book is sprinkled with the kind of fascinating trivia that makes history come alive — tales of the gypsy horse traders of Georgia, the second "burning of Atlanta (did you know that city was almost destroyed by fire again during World War I? I didn't), the nickname the French gave our soldiers : "les sammis" — the sons of Uncle Sam.

In tapping this period, Ms. Statham has hit a rich vein. It is one of the areas least covered in historical novels, and for those unfamiliar with that day and time, this is a delightful way to learn a little bit of history.

"Phoenix Rising" begins with a dramatic encounter between Kenna Chalmers and Irish Fitzpatrick. She is an Atlanta socialite doing the unheard-of thing by training to be a nurse so that she can go to France to search for her brother, who has been reported missing in action. Irish comes from a line of gypsy horsetraders and is an officer waiting to be shipped out to France. Once he is there, we live some of the most exciting scenes in the book through his eyes.

There is an immediate attraction between Kenna and Irish, and the travails of their courtship are only one thread of the storyline. Kenna's search for her brother is another. She goes from adventure to misadventure — from her initial conflict with Irish to being kidnapped by a German prisoner of war (who has escaped from the prison camp in Atlanta), to an engagement to an overbearing officer, then to a mistaken abduction-attempted seduction in France.

Nor is she immune to the horrors of war, as the scene from which the title of the book was drawn reveals. She tells Irish: "That's when it really began to get bad for me. It was as if the entire world were intent on destroying itself — the phoenix bird consuming itself in its own fire. And every time I closed my eyes, I saw death. It wasn't God's will, Irish, for all those men to die — and women, too." And when she expresses concern for the future of France, he assures her, "They'll build. Your phoenix bird rose from its ashes. And the people will rebuild, too."

Another memorable scene is the gathering of our troops at Lafayette's tomb, and Pershing's words that become the rallying call of the American doughboys in France: "Lafayette, we are here."

Obviously, the fascination of the period has also entranced Ms. Statham, for the real meat of this book lies in the World War I scenes, the touch of romance serving as a lighter side dish. Ms. Statham's strength shows in the action scenes, and along the way, we are introduced to some unforgettable characters: the doughboys Ed and Seton, Cricket Soames, Steppie Hannon and the Vicomtesse d'Arcy.

Any good historical novel has two basic requirements: it must transport us in time and make it real, and it must tell a story that holds the reader's interest. This one passes the test — we live with the principal characters the excitement and tragedy of World War I, and it weaves a good story in the telling. "Phoenix Rising" is a good, guilt-free summertime "read."

HUGS AND SMILES — Janice Morgan of Montgomery, Ala., hugs her 14-year-old son, Troy, who was born with a birth defect called spina bifida. Troy was not expected to live past his second birthday, but has struggled through major surgery 24 times in the past 12 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Publicly Funded Recreation Center Helps Handicapped

By DIANA SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Doctors told Mike and Janice Morgan that their son, born with a birth defect called spinal bifida, would not live to see his second birthday.

They were wrong. The Morgans celebrated Troy's second birthday, watched him struggle through major surgery 24 times during the next 12 years — and prayed.

Like any other teen-ager, 14-year-old Troy now is eagerly looking forward to the time when he can get his beginner's license and learn to drive a car, which will be equipped with hand controls.

Mrs. Morgan said her son, who was once dependent on his family for most of his needs, is becoming independent. She credits the Montgomery Therapeutic Recreation Center and a wheelchair-bound volunteer named Donnie Sims, who wouldn't let her son quit.

"Montgomery is fortunate to have a center like this. It has completely changed his whole mental attitude," Mrs. Morgan. "Now he says, 'Gee, I can do anything I want to.'"

The center, one of only four such publicly funded centers in the United States, is devoted strictly to therapeutic recreation for children and adults. Sims also teaches an informal "independent living course" designed to help his wheelchair-bound students navigate physical and mental barriers.

"The first thing I teach is that 'can't' is not in my vocabulary," Sims said. "You can do anything you put your mind to. I just love kids, and I hate to see them get in that situation. . . After a while they'll just deteriorate to nothing."

The center, operated by the city, is modified to accommodate the handicapped. Most public recreation centers are not, Sims said.

It has an outdoor pool and a heated indoor pool, a gymnasium, a weight-lifting room, arts and crafts rooms, a playground and tennis courts. The gym contains brightly colored obstacles that Sims uses to teach parapalegics how to get up and down stairs and curbs. Blind children can play with a foam Frisbee that contains a beeper as a "homing device" and a volleyball with a bell inside. The center also offers aerobic dance classes and has a bowling league for the blind.

Carol Braswell, director of the center's aquatic program, said the recreational activities at the center help strengthen bodies, but more importantly, increase a handicapped person's self-esteem. Swimming helps a paraplegic child increase his upper body strength, but at the same time, the child also is conquering fears about water and experiencing a feeling of weightlessness and freedom of movement, she said.

"The psychological lift is tremendous. We concentrate on fun activities and leisure time. These kids are people first and parapalegics next. They're just like everyone else. They want to have fun."

Sims said he is frustrated by the attitude that handicapped people should be satisfied with "just existing, with just getting by. People don't understand that the handicapped don't have any recreational time. . .That's what makes this place unique."

Mrs. Braswell said between 1,800 and 2,000 children and adults use the recreation center each week during the summer. The center has eight regular employees and about 50 volunteers.

The center teaches the independent living course because hospitals usually don't teach the handicapped how to get from their wheelchairs to their beds or how to shift from a wheelchair to a car, she said.

The center accepts all handicapped people — victims of stroke, arthritis and accidents, children with Down's Syndrome and spinal bifida, the blind, the deaf and the mentally retarded.

Ellen Black of Georgiana drives her 7-year-old daughter Shannon, another spinal bifida victim, about 50 miles twice a week to the center. Mrs. Black and her husband, Jan, said the center has made a major difference in Shannon's life and theirs.

"When we asked the doctors about physical therapy, they just shrugged and said 'If you want to. It's not going to do her any good. Her legs will always be like a rag doll's.' They told us she would never sit up," said Mrs. Black.

Spinal bifida is a birth defect, an opening in the back where the spinal cord is not fully encased by bone. The damage varies when the nerves are exposed. Some spinal bifida victims are able to walk; others have paralysis.

Sims, a former paratrooper in Vietnam, lost the use of his legs in a motorcycle accident three years ago. The 36-year-old parapalegic drives, swims, plays tennis, rides horses and escalators. He wants to sky dive again. He just celebrated his two-month wedding anniversary and is the step-father of two children.

"I'm one of those type people who can't sit still," he said.

Sims said he began volunteer work because he wanted "to give people an incentive to do something for themselves."

Part of it stemmed from the death of one of his best friends, who also was a parapalegic. "Kenneth got hurt in 'Nam, and was paralyzed from the waist down," Sims said. "After the wreck, we got back together. He showed me a lot of things, how to do wheelies and get up and down curbs."

After his friend died, Sims said, "I went through a depression period. I got a leave of absence from my job and I went to Florida. Then I said 'You're not getting anywhere here. You're just feeling sorry for yourself.' When I got active doing things, I was fine."

Sims returned to Montgomery and started looking for volunteer work. "When I met Troy, I found my opportunity," he said.

"I get so much fulfillment out of it. I guess it's greed in a way, but if it's greed, then I want to be greedy for the rest of my life."

Climbers Find Expert Advice

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

MT. McKINLEY, Alaska (AP) — To the lonely climbers struggling up the serrated spine of North America's highest mountain, Frances Randall is as important as ropes, pitons and ice axes.

The 59-year-old expert mountaineer spends most of every brief Alaskan summer in a tent staked to a glacier a third of the way up the 20,320-foot peak. For nearly a decade, she has been the vital link in a communications network that tethers all McKinley challengers to the outside world.

Employed by three air taxi companies that have permits from the National Park Service to ferry climbers on and off the mountain, Ms. Randall is boss of "Kahiltna Base," the glacier landing field.

Using a variety of battery-powered radios and a portable telephone, Ms. Randall tracks climbers' progress, relays messages, advises pilots and mountaineers of the fast-changing weather and sounds the first alarm during emergencies.

It takes nerve and professional judgment to cope with disasters that occur without warning on the 3-mile-high mountain, which spawns its own high winds and treacherous whiteouts.

"This job is a real challenge in problem solving," says the windburned woman whose uniform includes black welder's goggles to prevent snow blindness, rubber knee boots, a down parka and an ancient straw hat that's slowly falling apart.

"When I first came here to work in 1975, there were only about 350 climbers that season," says Ms. Randall. "This year there'll be 700. Many simply don't have the experience to be here. Some get nervous breakdowns. I'll have people screaming from fear or shock. Some get sick. A few die.

"I have to help sort out those messes, keep panic from spreading, do my part to keep people alive. It isn't your average 9-to-5 job."

Ms. Randall has never taken the easy path. Before her divorce in 1970, she and her husband spent 10 years as full-time climbers. They scaled peaks throughout the United States and Canada, acted as instructors and advisers to foreign expeditions and claimed several first ascents in Alaska.

After the couple split, she headed north from Washington state and arrived in Fairbanks "in the dead of winter, with a dog, a cat, my skis, my violin, no job and no place to live."

She soon had a full-time job, a cabin and a chair in the first violin section of the Fairbanks Symphony Orchestra.

She now earns money to attend the University of Alaska by giving violin lessons and working as the orchestra's computer programmer and as a freelance musician.

Ms. Randall first stood on the summit of North America's crown jewel in 1964. "In the beginning, I'd stay a week, then a month, and now it's at least two months every season," she says.

Ms. Randall is critical of today's lack of requirements for those who attempt to climb McKinley.

"When we went up the mountain, we had to provide a doctor's physical, menus for every meal and past climbing history. A ranger inspected our food. We had to carry extra crampons, snowshoes, repair kits, four first aid kits, and attend a detailed briefing from technicians and doctors," she says.

National Park Service spokeswoman Joan Gidlund says the government dropped all requirements except registration in 1980 "because we could find no correlation between the requirements and who did or did not get in trouble on Mt. McKinley. There's no way to stop anyone from attempting the mountain. There are no fences, gates or locks. We simply tell people they're on their own."

In the past decade, more than 5,700 climbers have attempted the summit. Six percent needed to be rescued; 1 percent died on the mountain. The emergencies cost more than $200,000.

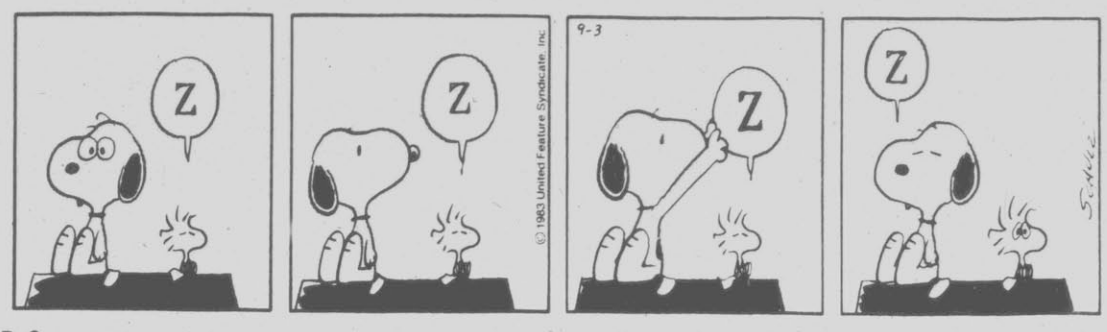

Ms. Randall is a tough and savvy veteran of the dangers of mountaineering. She minces no words with novices.

"I can tell when they're ready or not. I've been at this too long not to know when their gear is sloppy, or their bodies aren't in shape, or bravado is getting in the way of common sense," she says.

One day last June she laid the facts on the line to a climber whose expedition had just lost a member. The fatality was a woman who fell into a crevasse and broke her neck.

"So you want to walk back up that glacier and bring your gear down alone, through the same crevasse field, without any help or backup support, huh?" she barked at the obstinate mountaineer. "How much is that gear worth? Your life?"

Sales
Few sales positions carry greater prestige and earnings potential

As a Membership Sales Representative of The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, your "prospect list" includes every owner and manager of every business in the United States not already a member—right down to the one-person owner of the smallest business you can imagine on Main Street, USA!
Because from its Washington headquarters, literally across the street from the White House, the Chamber actively pursues the vital interests of the owners and managers of all businesses, large and small.
As a Membership Sales Representative, you can walk into any business and enjoy immediate recognition, present your "product" (which has NO competition), and explain your membership pricing structure which makes it possible to "close" on the first interview—no matter how large or small the business may be!
Simply by following the Chamber's well proven sales procedures (which you will learn during a three week training period on salary), you ought to be earning close to $25,000 in draw and commissions your first year, and $35,000 or higher in years three to five.
Territories now open include: Eastern North Carolina and vicinity. To learn more, and arrange a local interview, forward your resume in confidence to Mr. Art Wise.

'Whistler's Mother' Coming To The U.S.

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — When Whistler's mother is coming to visit, probably for the last time, and she's your responsibility in a $100 million venture, you tend to toss and turn at night.

"I'm not going to sleep well until this painting is back home," says Theodore E. Stebbins Jr., the John Moors Cabot curator of American painting at Boston's Museum of Fine Art.

He referred to James Abbott McNeill Whistler's "Arrangement in Grey and Black: Portrait of the Painter's Mother," better known as "Whistler's Mother."

Whistler, born in Lowell, Mass., painted it in England in 1871, and it has been hanging since 1891 in the Musee du Louvre in Paris, where it is regarded as one of France's national treasures.

It is one of 110 American paintings that will be exhibited in Boston, Washington and Paris as "A New World: Masterpieces of American Painting 1760-1910."

Stebbins chose the paintings in response to a request from the Louvre. The museum's officials originally wanted an exhibit of 19th century American paintings but insisted on including John Singleton Copley, who painted in the middle of the 18th century, so the show was expanded.

The exhibit includes works by 49 artists but focuses on 10, now considered to be major painters although most were less recognized in their times. United Technologies Corp. put up more than $1 million to finance it — "the largest grant ever given for (an exhibit of) American art," Stebbins said.

"I think it's probably the most valuable painting collection ever assembled, so there are special precautions of all kinds," he said.

Asked about security, he said, "There's nothing much I'd like to tell you if I can help it."

"It probably will be the last time it will ever come to America," Stebbins said of Whistler's famed painting, done in oil on canvas that measures about 4½ feet by 5½ feet.

Even when well-packed, he said, "The canvas vibrates and flips and shortens its life expectancy. It's not good for it."

The painting is one of three owned by foreign museums that will be in the exhibit. The others are a Winslow Homer, also from the Louvre, and a Whistler from London's Tate Gallery. There are 60 lenders, including 16 private collectors.

"It's amazing how many there are and how widely spread out across the country our American heritage is. It's reassuring," Stebbins said.

"She was a famous sexy beauty, maybe between the debutante of the year and the playmate of the year," Stebbins said.

The exhibit will be at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston from Sept. 7 through Nov. 13, at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington from Dec. 6 through Feb. 12, and at the Grand Palais in Paris, under auspices of the Louvre, from March 16 through June 11.

"Americans have viewed themselves as a tough-minded, pragmatic, realistic people, and their art has been viewed as the same — realistic and not very imaginative," he said.

"My view is that we're an extraordinarily romantic people. The idea of exploring a new continent and settling a new land is an extraordinarily romantic thing. The founding of a nation based on democracy is a romantic thing."

The artists were "painting the American dream," he said.

"I hope that what the people in both France and America will get is the feeling that: 'Gee, there IS an American art.' That would be the most wonderful thing," Stebbins said.

BACK TO THE STATES ... Workers carefully pack the painting of his mother by James Abbott Whistler at the Louvre Museum in Paris. The 1871 painting has been hanging there since 1891 and is now being shipped to the United States for exhibitions in several cities beginning Sept. 7 in Boston. (AP Laserphoto)

David Smith Show To Open At GMA

An exhibition of paintings by David Curtis Smith, visiting artist at Central Carolina Technical College, will go on view on Wednesday at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

Smith works in a realistic vein, in which his stated objective "is to crate a heightened sense of reality providing the viewer with a clarity of vision that may be overlooked or unseen."

Morganton Sets 2-Day Festival

MORGANTON — The second annual Historic Morganton Festival this year is scheduled for two days, Friday and Saturday. Billed as western North Carolina's largest street/crafts festival, events this year will include performances by U.S. Navy bands and an evening road race.

Streets in Morganton's downtown area will be blocked to traffic to give space to about 250 artisans from the area and from seven states.

The "Heritage" concert by the 24-member, Charleston, S.C.-based U.S. Navy Show Band will be presented from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday in the space adjacent to Morganton's old courthouse.

At 9 a.m. Saturday, two U.S. Navy Band Groups, the New Orleans Jazz Band and another ensemble, Tradition, will kick off the musical entertainments. Other entertainers to perform during the day include folksingers Etta Baker and Cora Phillips, the Morganton Community Band, the Western Piedmont Dixieland Band, Corn Rose — a country and western band — and a variety of contemporary, country, jazz and gospel music groups.

Racing events will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday and will feature races for runners of different ages.

Arts and crafts displays and demonstrations will be held in the downtown area on both days, with The Highlander Guild of Craftsement to be represented in 4,000 square feet of display booths.

Morganton is located at the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains, about an hour's drive beyond Charlotte. For more complete details on the festival, interested persons may call 704/437-8863 or 704-437-6996.

Art Classes Deadline Set

A 12-week session of drawing, painting and crafts will be offered at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St., beginning Sept. 13 and Sept. 15.

Linda Darty will instruct these after-school art classes and all supplies will be furnished by the museum.

Tuition per course is $20 ($25 to non-members of the Greenville Museum of Art Society.) Due to limited space, early registration is recommended. Registration deadline is Friday.

•Art I, ages 6-8, Sept. 13-Dec. 6, Tuesdays, 3:30 to 4:30 (no class on Nov. 22).

•Art II, aes 9-12, Sept. 15-Dec. 8., Thursdays, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., (no class on Nov. 24).

For more information and to register, call the museum, 758-1946.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — "Industries Involved in Education" is the theme of Kay Currie's Hospitaltiy House show today. The weekly program with hostess Currie airs each Sunday from noon until 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Today's guests, educators and businessmen, are all from the local area. They are: Jackie Garner, producer of programs for the John Cotton Tayloe School in Washington; Rann Carpenter of Texas Gulf, Don Barham of National Spinning, and Ken England, superintendent of the Washington schools.

Chrysler Show

Artists include Milton Avery, Charles Burchfield, Jean Debuffet, Max Ernst, Sam Francis, Charles Demuth and Franz Kline.

Busch Gardens Fall Schedule

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Busch Gardens, The Old Country, will be open only on weekends beginning this weekend and continuing through Oct. 30.

The park will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. today. Labor Day hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Beginning Sept. 10, hours will be 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays through October. The last day for the season is Oct. 30.

Free Art Classes

As part of its community services, the school of art at East Carolina University is again this year offering free art classes to children in the local area during the fall semester. Supplies for the classes will be furnished without charge by the university.

The program will include classes for elementary students in grades 4-6 and for junior high level students in grades 7-9.

Registration will be from Tuesday through Friday, and may be made by calling the school of art at 757-6665. Each class will be limited to 20 students, with enroillment on a first-come, first-served basis.

Classes will be held in Room 1342 in Jenkins Building and will be taught by art faculty members and art students. Opportunities will be provided for students to explore drawing, painting, printmaking and crafts.

For students in grade 4-6 classes will be held from 4 to 5 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Only one class weekly will be held for junior high age students — from 4 to 5 p.m. on Thursdays.

Art Grants Deadline

RALEIGH — Oct. 1 is the deadline for organizations seeking financial support from the North Carolina Arts Council for certain arts programs. The deadline applies to grants in visual aids, school prorams, new commissions and innovative projects.

The deadline applies to grants in the categories of Public School Challenge, Artists-in-Schools, Creative Projects, Visual Arts Exhibition Exchange and Special Projects. Grants apply to activities to be carried on between January through August 1984.

The Public School Challenge and Artists-in-Schools are the two categories through which the Arts Council supports arts programs in the schools.

Creative Project grants help artists find employment through support organizations commissioning new works; and the Visual Arts Exhibition Exchange grants helps galleries and museums originate and share quality exhibitions. Museum and galleries can apply for up to $3,000 to help share exhibits. The Special Proejcts grants apply to a number of different kinds of projects.

For full information and applications, contact: The Grants Officer, N.C. Arts Council, N.C. Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, telephone 733-2111.

Anne Bailey Comes Home To 'GH'

By Nancy M. Reichardt

According to Miss Bailey, "I love every crazy, frustrating minute of this overworked world. I've been at this (writing) my whole professional life, which is about 30 years," said Miss Bailey, who left her hometown of Memphis, Tenn., in the '50s to pursue her chosen career.

Miss Bailey has written for many of the "shows of the golden age" of the 1960s such as "Kraft Theater," "Studio One" and "Armstrong Circle Theater" (Miss Bailey won the coveted Christopher Award for writing the episode titled "The Narrow Man").

Her nighttime credits are also long, but "GH" is only Miss Bailey's second foray into soap opera writing. The first was her own short-lived serial "How to Survive a Marriage," which debuted on NBC in 1974. Before being appointed head writer of "GH" (Miss Bailey turned down the offer twice before acquiescing), she served as a consultant for ABC daytime. For fun, Miss Bailey likes to write opera librettos. "The Trial of Mary Lincoln," won her an Emmy Award.

How does she come up with interesting plot lines for "GH"? "The ideas come from all over," she says. "From public events, from observations of people and certainly from the intermix of the "GH" characters, who have very definite personalities and who are expected to do certain things. I try to keep on top of what's going on in the world, and various things will recommend themselves to a possible plot," according to Miss Bailey. "Every eight to 10 weeks we have a story conference where the ideas for future story lines are discussed, possibly combining several ideas, and then it's up to me to write it all up. We try to keep everybody a little off balance, hoping they'll look at the show to try to figure out the story line."

Declining to admit whether she has a favorite "GH" character she likes to write for, Miss Bailey says, "I enjoy writing for all the characters on the show. They all have specific personalities." However, she added with a chuckle, "I do get a tremendous charge out of the Quartermaines. They're delightfully ridiculous and funny and their feuding is so delicious."

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I have been a big fan of Linda Evans ever since she appeared in "Big Valley" and of course "Dynasty." I have looked everywhere trying to find an address where I could write to her. I'm hoping you can help me get in touch with her. TRACY HAWKINS, RALEIGH, N.C.

TO TRACY IN RALEIGH: You may write to Miss Evans in c/o "Dynasty," ABC Entertainment Center, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

DEAR MICHELE: I think that Joan Van Ark is both very attractive and a wonderful actress. Could you please give me some information on her? M.L., MOREHEAD CITY, N.C.

TO M.L. IN MOREHEAD CITY: Joan was born on June 16 in New York City and raised in Boulder, Colorado. In her senior year in high school, she met Julie Harris (Lillie Mae), who suggested that she apply for a scholarship to Yale Drama School. She was accepted and thus became the second woman

Miss Harris had been the first — and the youngest person to attend the school on scholarship. Her first major break into acting was a starring role on Broadway in "Barefoot in the Park." She has since appeared on Broadway in "The Rule of the Game" and "The School for Wives," for which she received a Tony nomination and a Theater World Award. When you see Valerie jogging around "Knots Landing," that's not just acting. Joan is a devoted runner who logs 7 to 10 miles every day. Some of her other favorite diversions include horseback riding, skiing and collecting antiques. She and her husband, KNBC News reporter John Marshall, have a daughter, Vanessa, 12, and live in North Hollywood. For further information about Joan and "Knots Landing," write to CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca., 90036.

DEAR MICHELE: I would like some information on Pierce Brosnan and Stephanie Zimbalist of "Remington Steele." Also, where could I write to them? ANGIE RAY, HIGH POINT, N.C.

TO ANGIE IN HIGH POINT: Born in Ireland on May 16, Pierce Brosnan was 11 years old when his family moved to London, England, where he now resides with his wife, actress Cassandra Harris, and two children, Christopher (7) and Charlotte (8). You may remember Pierce in his first U.S. role, Rory Manion, in the mini-series "The Manions of America" in 1981. One year later, he was signed for the current series.

Stephanie Zimbalist, daughter of noted actor Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., and granddaughter of world renowned violinist Efrem Zimbalist, Sr., was born in New York City. She attended high school at Foxcroft in Middleburg, West Virginia, and studied drama for a year at Julliard. She's appeared once opposite her father and claims she became interested in pursuing an acting career while working as a drama counselor at a summer camp. You may address correspondence to the cast and crew of "Remington Steele" in c/o NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Ca., 91523.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

JOHN STAMOS, Blackie Parrish on "General Hospital," has, in one year, set a record in popularity with viewers. If you have written to JOHN and have not yet received a reply — have patience. He receives over 3000 fan letters a week, meanwhile, you can console yourself with a new poster of JOHN that has recently been put on the market. (A modern day Greek god)

This is it! This is the week the new fall season begins on network TV. CBS kicks it off on Sunday with its "NFL Today" show — followed by an NFL (regional) football game — ABC picks up the ball with "Monday Night Football" (Cowboys vs. Redskins). On Tuesday ABC will preview its new Saturday morning cartoon schedule with a special. Football airs again on Thursday when ABC televises its "NFL Football Special" (49ers vs. Vikings). If your husband isn't home — tune in to NBC's new comedy "We Got It Made" (a "Three's Company" in reverse, with touch of "The Odd Couple" humor). Friday will be premiere night for ABC's "Lottery" (a take-off on "The Millionaire") and "Matt Houston" premieres his new season with a 90-minute special — you will double your pleasure on this one as "two" Matts are featured!

SOAP OPERA WEEK

'Search' searches for missing tapes

By Kimberly Redmond

"Search for Tomorrow" made soap history on Aug. 4 when the show was broadcast live for the first time since 1968. The shows had to be done by the "old" method after it was confirmed that the tapes of that day's episode were missing, and presumed stolen from the editing room at Reeves Teletape Theater in Manhattan, where "SFT" is taped daily.

"Two copies of the show, taped on July 22, were sitting in the editing room ready to be edited when they disappeared," said "SFT" executive producer, Joanna Lee. "There is no proof, but I am convinced it was a theft. The tapes were seen here at closing time, but they were gone the following Monday morning."

When questioned that the missing tapes were part of a publicity stunt, Miss Lee said, "If I had planned to do this I wouldn't have chosen that particular show. There were several others that I would have used. Our taping schedule was just too strenuous to afford us a time before Aug. 4 when we could have taped the entire show over."

At a studio party after the live broadcast it was announced that "SFT" would not "disappear" (as rumored) from the network's daytime lineup any time soon. NBC has renewed the soap through December of this year.

"I'm confident of the future of 'Search,' " said Miss Lee. "I believe we are now a new and exciting show and, in my opinion, we rank among the best of the daytime serials."

Speaking of "SFT," the show recently aired realistic birth scenes involving the popular character Liza Sentell, played by Sherry Mathis. In the story, Liza — who was eight months pregnant — and her husband, Travis (played by Rod Arrants), were on their second honeymoon when they unwittingly borrowed a sabatoged car. The car ultimately crashed causing Liza to go into labor. To add to the authenticity of the birth scenes, Sherry (who has no children) was coached on "birthin' babies" by Barbara Brennan, director of midwifery service at New York City's Roosevelt Hospital.

"My wife's delivery was even rougher than Liza's," says Arrants, "I stayed with her through 12 hours of labor."

On ABC's "Fantasy Island," Ricardo Montalban dresses up in his World War II garb in the "Lost Platoon" segment, to air Saturday, Sept. 10. The episode was the first ever directed by Montalban.

NFL Rivals Clash On Monday Night

The Dallas Cowboys will meet the World Champion Washington Redskins at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in the nation's capital on the season premiere of ABC's "NFL Monday Night Football." Sept. 5 (9 p.m.-conclusion).

This is one of the NFL's greatest rivalries. Last season, the Cowboys handed the Super Bowl Champion Redskins their only regular-season loss (24-10 in December), but Washington avenged that with a 31-17 win over Dallas in the NFC Championship game. This is a matchup between the NFC's highest scoring team in 1982, Dallas (which tied the Green Bay Packers with 226 points), and the NFL's stingiest defense, the Redskins, who allowed just 128 points.

Three of their previous meetings (all in Washington) have been televised on "Monday Night Football" — the Redskins won the first two games, with the Cowboys capturing the final evening matchup in 1980. Overall, Dallas is 11-11 on "Monday Night Football," and the Redskins are 12-6, including a 9-1 mark at RFK Stadium.

Later in the week, Larry Holmes, the undefeated heavyweight champion, will be making his 15th consecutive title defense when he squares off against unbeaten contender Scott Frank in a scheduled 12-round bout. NBC will air the fight on Saturday night (9-11 p.m.) from Harrah's Marina Casino Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J.

Holmes, 43-0 with 30 knockouts, is trying to become the only heavyweight in history other than the legendary Rocky Marciano to retire undefeated. His reign began June 9, 1978, when he won a 15-round decision over Ken Norton. Since then, the Easton, Pa., native has scored 11 knockouts but none after disposing of Gerry Cooney in June 1982. Following that bout, Randall "Tex" Cobb, Lucien Rodriguez and Tim Witherspoon all went the distance, leading some to believe that Holmes is slipping.

A rough, 25-year-old slugger from Oakland, N.J., Frank will assume the role of a real-life "Rocky" while trying to take advantage of the 33-year-old Holmes' apparently diminished speed and power. Frank's most notable victories have come against Chuck Wepner and Ron Stander. In March 1982, Frank battled to a 12-round draw with well-regarded Renaldo Snipes, who floored Holmes before succumbing in the 11th round of that fight in 1981.

Frank, who boasts 14 knockouts in his 20-0-1 record, is coming off a 10-round decision victory over Ken Arlt at Totowa, N.J.

Easy Task

To prepare for her upcoming scenes on "Search for Tomorrow," newcomer Jennifer Gatti took a lesson in Greek dancing. "It was easy for me to pick up the steps," she said. "My mother was a professional dancer for many years and we still take classes together."

THE AGE OF INSOLENCE: THOSE TERRIBLE TEENS

By Robert Coles

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send your question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — Coleco's WarGames home video game won't come out until October — if then — despite the movie's popularity, because the film's studio, M-G-M/UA, has been debating whether it's a good idea to let kids at home play "all-out thermonuclear war" as Matthew Broderick does onscreen. . . . The postponement of Mike Nichols's long-awaited Silkwood from summer release to Christmas is due either to "story problems in the editing room" or the director's longstanding penchant for perfectionism, depending on which inside source you want to believe. All insiders agree that the success of the movie, the true-life story of Karen Silkwood, the nuclear power plant employee who died in 1974 under mysterious circumstances, will not depend on title star Meryl Streep but on co-stars Cher and Kurt (Elvis) Russell. Both are expected to cement big-screen careers even if the film flops. . . . When Priscilla Presley shows up on Dallas this fall as Jenna Wade, a former girlfriend of Bobby Ewing, you'll be excused if you claim déjà vu. Yes, Morgan Fairchild played Jenna five years ago. . . . Fifteen actresses who played secretaries on television shows competed recently in a typing contest on identical Sierra 3500 typewriters for $10,000 in prizes (donated to the cause of juvenile diabetes). Di Di (Benson) Conn, Sally (Dynasty) Kemp and Debbie Rennard and Deborah Tranelli of Dallas quickly proved they were better actresses than office workers. But Julie (Capitol) Parrish managed 100 words in two minutes with only two mistakes and was offered a job by the president of Juki Office Machine Corp., which sponsored the key event.

—Robert Windeler

NEW YORK — Rocker Rod Stewart, constantly teased about what he'd do if suddenly confronted with his arch rival, David Bowie, assures us there's no problem. "There's no chance I'd ever get near enough to him to talk. He's always surrounded by about a dozen bodyguards." . . . The life of a piano man can sometimes hit a sour note. When Bette Midler and some friends popped into The Regency Hotel lounge, cocktail-hour pianist Jim Badger complains they chattered the whole time — loudly. On the other hand, when Gilda Radner stopped by, she was all ears. That's because, she later told Badger, she knows what it's like to work in bars and how deflating it is when people yak away. . . . On one of the city's steamiest days, model Jan McGill, soon to make her film debut in The Deal of the Century with Chevy Chase and Sigourney Weaver, walked into a restaurant wearing a black leather waistcoat. A tad broiling, Jan, wouldn't you say? She explains, "I just got it at Cher's garage sale and I'm so proud of it, I don't want to take it off." Cher's garage sale? McGill reports that Cher thinks these small private sales are a great way to clear her closets. Best sellers, says McGill, are underwear and black lingerie. . . . The movie and TV rights to actor George Kennedy's first novel, Murder on Location, have been bought by writer-producer Andrew J. Fenady for $100,000. The thriller deals with a series of murders in Mexico. Fenady will write the script; Kennedy will star. . . . Paul Dooley (the father in Breaking Away) tells why his portrayal of a wacky therapist in Going Berserk, the upcoming TV movie from the SCTV gang, is so together. "I've been in therapy since before I was born. Had I gone into it sooner, all my marriages [two] could have been saved."

—Anita Summer

Presley: The name's familiar, but didn't you used to be a blonde?

WASHINGTON — There must be an easier way to keep your name in the news. Several fire engines recently raced to the home of former Presidential candidate John Anderson. Upon arriving, the firemen found the smoke coming from an overloaded blender fighting to mix banana daiquiris for Anderson and wife Keke. No harm done — except to the daiquiris. . . . After an unsuccessful attempt to challenge Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in a squash game when the Arab leader was in Washington, Senator Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) was promised a match when he visited Egypt. As soon as he hit Cairo in May, Specter unpacked his favorite racquet and spent hours familiarizing himself with the Egyptian-style squash ball. But when he finally met Mubarak in his office, the President decided he would rather spend the hour talking politics than playing squash. A Specter staffer told her crestfallen boss, "He must have heard that you practiced."

—Kathleen Maxa and Jane Ottenberg

JAMESON PARKER

star of TV's Simon & Simon

I've heard that karate is your hobby. Have you ever used it in self-defense? —P.D., Owensboro, Ky.

Well, in a way. I was in the last seat of a bus, when a fight developed up front between some kids and a couple. The couple fled and the kids looked around for someone else to beat up. They saw me. As they approached, announcing all the terrible things they'd do to my anatomy, I put my feet up, spread my arms behind me and roared. They stopped and sat down without touching me. The karate philosophy — "first try nonviolence" — gave me confidence to deal with the situation. Oh, if you're wondering, our bus driver, like any good New Yorker, kept his eyes on the road, hands on the wheel and did not get involved.

LENA HORNE

Do you have any superstitions regarding your work? —W.F., Joliet, Ill.

I wouldn't say I'm terribly superstitious, but I don't believe in taking chances or tempting Providence by doing things I could just as well live without doing. For instance: no peanuts in the shells in my dressing room — that means bad luck. Also, I never put a hat on the bed. That's a Southern superstition — meaning death.

THERE'S REALLY NO MYSTERY ABOUT WHAT CAUSES FOOT PROBLEMS

Very simply stated, when you're born, each of your feet has 26 different bones held in balance and position by tendons, muscles and ligaments.

Once something happens to destroy this balance, (no matter what your age) it's irreversible unless you do something about them.

THERE'S REALLY NO MYSTERY ABOUT FINDING RELIEF

Right now, over 3,000,000 people are enjoying blessed relief they never thought possible . . . thanks to flexible Featherspring® Foot Supports.

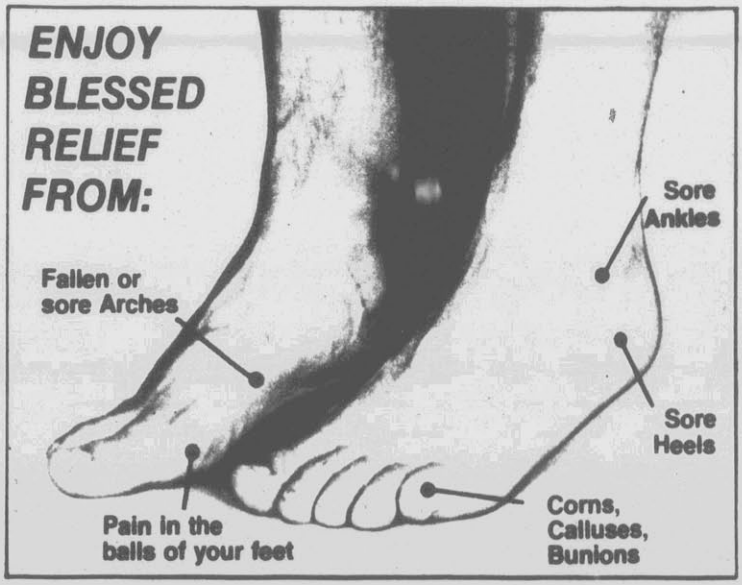

How do Feathersprings bring relief? Well, unlike costly special shoes, mass-produced arch preserves, or "Dime Store" gimmicks—hand-formed flexible Feathersprings actually restore and maintain 85% of the youthful, elastic support your feet had.

No matter how long you've had foot problems—be it 3 months or 30 years—the instant you slip a pair of Featherersprings in your shoes (one pair is all you'll ever need)—you'll be able to stand all day, walk, dance, even jog or run in total comfort.

THERE'S REALLY NO RISK INVOLVED IN FINDING OUT WHETHER FEATHERSPRINGS CAN RELIEVE YOUR FOOT PROBLEMS

We're so certain that Featherspring Foot S end your foot problems that if you're not comp fied . . . we'll refund your money in full .. questions asked.

Write us for full information, there's no obl no salesman will call. Just fill out and mail

FEATHERSPRING'S UNIQUE, 3-POINT FLEXIBLE SUSPENSION SYSTEM:

- Structurally realigns your feet restoring their balance.
- Allows your feet to flex normally in all

What people say about Feathers

"Received my wife's Featherersprings two days ago. They are super-neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore, knee is much better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing."
Dr. C.O.C. Tucson, Arizona

"I am so Feathe answer

". . . At the present time I sti erssprings and indeed they seven years of use."
G.M.

"Wish I had believed you ago." Mrs. W.C. F

THE AGE OF INSOLENCE: THOSE TERRIBLE TEENS

By Robert Coles

Most boys and girls experience a certain amount of turmoil as they enter adolescence. Suddenly the body begins to assert itself as never before. A child becomes a young adult: a woman, capable of bearing children; a man, able to set a pregnancy in motion. And just as the body begins to change, so does the way an adolescent perceives the world.

This is by no means an easy time for teen-agers — or for their parents. I once heard a girl of 16 from Atlanta, Ga., put it this way: "No matter where you live and what your father does to make a living, if you're a teen-ager, you're sweating it out."

What exactly was she sweating out? My wife, who was with me, asked her, and soon enough we got our answer. "I think it's life I'm sweating out," she replied. "learning to be a grown-up woman, not a kid. It's all different now — the way I look, the way I feel. I'm so body conscious it hurts! I hate being aware of myself all the time, but everything is different, so I guess it takes getting used to. That's what I mean by 'sweating it out,' I think.

"I'm sure that someday I'll forget how I feel, but when you're my age, everything seems to happen; and you just can't forget it all and go about your business! That's what I try to do sometimes, and of course I do manage to go to school and play tennis and eat and sleep, just like everyone else. But being a teen-ager takes getting used to, as my dear old grandmother says. I can't talk to my parents, though, thank God. I can talk to my grandmother, even if she is 75 years old! You'd think there'd be a big gulf between us, but she listens and doesn't seem horrified at all when I tell her my worries about sweating too much and needing special deodorants, and the pains I get with my period, and how I feel so ugly and strange and awkward, even if everyone tells me I look fine and act fine and I'm doing fine and all that. My grandmother is the only one who knows to say, 'It's hard, it just is.' When I hear her talking like that, I don't feel like some freak inside who's fooling the whole world by appearing to be 'fine, just fine' on the outside!"

Our young friend probably didn't mean to give my wife and me a formal lecture on the subjective side of adolescence. Still, we were delighted with her vivid, open-hearted, candid account of how it so often goes for teen-agers, even one as lucky as she, who lived in an extremely comfortable home, enjoyed a reasonably sound family life and had confidantes in her grandmother and (we later learned) a classmate, a young woman of the same age who was also, as they both put it, going through the "growing-up blues." Their ability to share secret thoughts with each other was helpful, indeed allowed them to see that what they were experiencing was not unique.

But even more helpful, my wife and I thought, was the sense of humor, the wry amusement she managed to summon — as in the phrase "growing-up blues." Once, a year later, when we saw her again, she even dared compliment herself this way: "If I couldn't see a pimple on my face and then laugh, I'd really be in trouble! You can't get too serious about yourself — your pimples and your troubles and your hard time staying trim and your conflict over what to wear. You have to learn to forget yourself, and the best way for me is to stop and give myself a big smile — I mean, smile and laugh at myself!"

Moreover, she was quick to remind us (remind herself!) that there are good times associated with growing up: places to go on one's own, knowledge and more knowledge to acquire in school, friendships to make, a developing sense of oneself as a particular person who has a range of possibilities awaiting — school, work, marriage, children.

And here's where it begins to get difficult for parents — when our children start searching and exploring these possibilities, getting ready to jump out of the nest. A teen-age boy who was a migrant worker told me a few years ago, "It's hard work, picking those crops, but it is work, and now that I'm older I don't have to stay so close to my family. I go into Belle Glade [Fla.] and I meet my girlfriend and we drink a beer or two and we're together. I feel sorry for my younger brothers and sisters: If there's a fight (and my mother and father fight a lot) those poor kids have to sit and listen or try not to listen. But I just walk away. I may not be able to depend on the folks like I used to, to say, 'I'm hungry' and expect a plate of food. I have to go out and earn my own living now. But I have my own life to live now, too."

He had no high school degree, but he had his own clear-headed manner of taking stock of the gains and losses that go with youth. He also had an eye for what truly matters, the essence of a given situation. He understood that adolescence is a time of departure. In the same way that he went off come evening to see his girlfriend, to have a few drinks, to rest and relax after hard work, others of his age living under more fortunate circumstances, and surely with better prospects, try to find their mode of expanding independence. In so doing, they evoke feelings of apprehension in their parents.

It is foolish to tell those parents: Don't worry, your son or daughter is merely going through a stage. Parents do worry; and often enough teen-agers count on that more than they will admit. The moral concern of their elders can, at times, make a big difference in the way they behave. Obviously, there are degrees of everything — degrees of worry and degrees of independence, degrees of parental constraint and degrees of youthful rebelliousness. And, also, the times do change — adolescence in 1983 is not the same as it was in 1950. Yet, teen-agers today are part of something quite universal and inevitable, and there is some comfort surely, in that fact: The demands of biology prompt the mind to respond with its own demands, including spells of moral and social reflection — and often rebelliousness.

Most teen-agers at one point or another find themselves disagreeing with their parents, their teachers and indeed, it seems, everyone who is older, who belongs to a generation that preceded theirs. To grow up is to discover one's own strengths, one's values and ideals. To grow up is also to search for and discover the basis for one's own personal authority. A streak of so-called rebelliousness can be a mark of a young person's developing independence — his or her willingness to be thoughtful and critical and to be a judge of things on his or her own. What a parent may consider rebellious a teen-ager may regard as the psychological equivalent of a growing physical confidence, a mental and emotional flexing of the muscles.

Of course it is hard for parents when our children begin to take matters into their own hands, take issue with us, find fault with this or that sacred cow of ours or, yes, begin to express in no uncertain terms some of the rebelliousness we ourselves have learned (just barely, sometimes!) to keep under wraps. At such moments we may want to demand that "they," those youths challenging us, stop doing so, revert to the relatively obedient and obliging habits of old. Yet, at such time we adults may well need to stop and think: Is the "problem" really theirs (one of rebelliousness), or is it ours (one of rigid authoritarianism and a self-importance that precludes respectful parental listening)?

No question, there are instances when young people lose control of themselves and drive adults crazy with worry and irritation. Rebelliousness sometimes masks a quite real and quite serious psychological problem. The best way for any of us to know when such a moment has arrived is by asking ourselves: Is there a rational basis for the rebelliousness, is the young person able and willing to say what he or she finds objectionable, to hear out others, older or younger, who disagree and to engage in a continuing conversation on the matter? As with any source of tension between human beings, the decisive criteria are reason and reasonableness: How much sense is there to the young rebel's critical posture, and how sensibly does he or she maintain it in everyday dealing with others? By the same token, how much sense, we parents ought to ask ourselves, is there in our own views, and with what good will and encouragement are we entering into discussion of those views with our youthful challengers?

We hear a lot these days about the physical aspects of adolescence and the emotional hurdles of the teen-ager, but rather less about youth as a time of awe and wonder and thoughtfulness, even though our finest novelists (Henry James, Eudora Welty, Elizabeth Bowen and James Agee, among many others) and our finest child psychoanalysts (Anna Freud and Erik H. Erikson) have again and again made reference to and tried to comprehend the moral energies that accompany adolescence: the considerable time and effort given to contemplation by young people. Yes, sometimes that inclination has to do with a kind of egoism at work, an aspect of the self-centeredness that a body bursting with growth prompts from a mind that is also newly developing its own capabilities. But it is best for parents not to interpret such developments, including the increased inclination to speculate, to question givens, to take issue with prevailing assumptions, as a bundle of psychopathology, soon to be "outgrown."

Many of us, after all, have good reason to remember our youth as a time of important intellectual and moral advancement. Then it was that we noticed not only ourselves, in all our multiplying complexity, but also others — those outside our homes whose lives mattered more and more to us. Then it was that we felt surges of idealism, pangs of doubt about (as it is put in the Bible) various "principalities and powers." Then it was that the exhilaration of youth — a new being, it can be called — prompted liberation as well as conflict. Now, as parents, the young remind us of what once happened to ourselves, even as they go ahead creating the new reality of another generation, another collection of disappointments and regrets, true, but also (one hopes and prays as a mother or a father) another store of hopes that will prompt the personal achievements of lives that have become, finally, focused, purposeful and productive. GETTING PERSONAL WITH

JOE PATERNO

THE IMPROBABLE DREAMS OF FOOTBALL'S DON QUIXOTE

If you ask Penn State football coach Joe Paterno which he is prouder of, winning his first national title last year or the fact that roughly 80 percent of his recruited players graduate, he'll surely say the latter. Long an outspoken advocate of college sports reform, Paterno was a model for the scholar athlete, majoring in English literature at Brown University while starring as quarterback on the football team. The Brooklyn-born Paterno planned on a law career until induced by his college coach, Rip Engle, to follow him to what was then considered "a cow pasture in the middle of Pennsylvania." Thirty-three years later, he's still there. In his 17 years as head coach, he's compiled an incredible 162-34-1 record, including three undefeated seasons and 15 Bowl trips. Paterno, who lives with his wife, Sue, and their five children (ages 10 to 20) in State College, Pa., relaxes by reading Greek literature and listening to operas (Aida is his favorite). In his campus office, Paterno, 56, talked with FAMILY WEEKLY's Eliot Kaplan about the changing morality of college athletics, why he keeps turning down the pros and his fascination with Napoleon Bonaparte.

Kaplan: You're often called an idealist, a romantic. In fact, your old high school once presented you a statue of Don Quixote. Aren't you getting tired of tilting at windmills? After all, the story of Don Quixote does not end happily.

Paterno: I know, I know. And it might not end happily for me, but I'm not tired of it. In fact, I'm probably fortunate that we won our national championship at a time when there are so many things going on that I can really throw my feet into, including Proposition 48 on academic standards [mandating minimum grades and test scores for incoming freshmen]. I think it's an exciting time for people who like to be involved, who want to change things, who want to make a difference.

Q: Coaching can be a very lonely life, and in many ways you've isolated yourself from your peers. Do you ever get lonely?

Paterno: For a while I did. I had very few coaches I would call on the phone or people who would call me and just talk. I've always been a very confident guy in my own ability and never really felt I needed anybody else to give me advice. But in the last two years, I think partly because I'm chairman of the coaches' committee of the College Football Association, I've gotten much friendlier with some of them. I think there's a little more appreciation of where I'm coming from and less of a "why doesn't he keep his mouth shut" kind of thing. And I have a great deal more appreciation and respect for some of their problems.

Q: How many people would you say know you well?

Paterno: Not too many really know me. Maybe it's because I'm on the run all the time, but I don't let a lot of people get close to me. I don't have a lot of close friends. I don't know whether my kids know me or not. I think my wife does.

Q: Your father died long before your coaching success. Do you ever feel you're depriving your kids of their father?

Paterno: Many a night I think about the good times I've missed with them because I've been working, and they're playing cards in the kitchen and I can't play because I have something to do. That's one of the few things I really resent about this job.

Q: Did you ever come close to quitting?

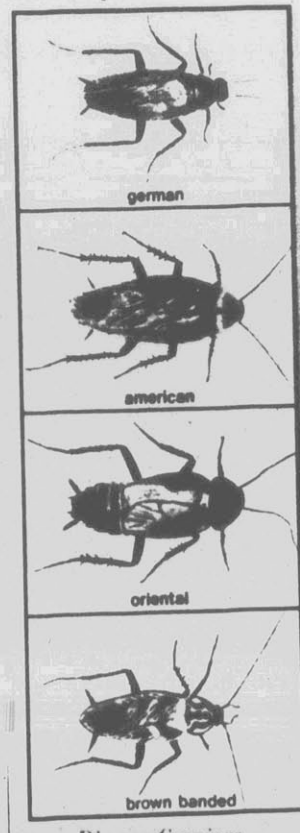

Paterno: After the 1979 season, I debated very seriously getting out of coaching. I was a little bit cynical. I didn't have the patience to handle some of the players, didn't appreciate their problems, was almost antagonistic toward some of them. Going home and saying, "Aw, those sons of b's," which I had never done before. I was just physically, mentally and emotionally drained, disturbed about some things and not pleased with the way I coached in the Sugar Bowl that past New Year's Day. A couple of things hadn't gone the way I probably should have made them go. [Penn State was stopped three times on the one-yard line and lost the national title to Alabama 14-7.] (continued on page 14)

As reported in news stories in the New York Times, Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, Miami Herald, Ecologist, Paul Harvey News .....

ROACH PRUFE, #1 in University Tests

In a report released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA and published by the ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The tests were conducted in heavily infested apartments and showed at the end of the 8 week test period that with a single application of ROACH PRUFE in each apartment, the roach population was reduced by an average 99.5%. By comparison, with the worst results were two widely recognized insecticides currently used in aerosols and applied by exterminators. They showed a 0% (no) reduction at the end of the 8 week tests.

Commenting in a letter, the University researchers stated: "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Disease Carriers

Odorless, Easy To Apply

Alan Brite, holder of 15 U.S. and foreign patents has just been awarded the first of 3 U.S. patents pending on ROACH PRUFE. Brite says: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies. They then carry the powder back into the walls spreading it among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls."

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

If ROACH PRUFE is not available at your local hardware store, the manufacturer will be glad to send it to you. To obtain a one pound container, just send a check or money order for $8.90, which includes postage. Add tax if you live in California. One pound covers up to a 9 room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 12 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90016. Copies of the University test are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

America's March

Now, the thrilling saga of the American Revolution through Official United States

Our freedom-loving forebears came to the colonies as subjects of the Crown, but soon discovered their distaste for tyranny and their love of liberty.

And each new generation marches to the "spirit of 1776," which explains the special significance of stamps commemorating our struggle for Independence. Of all the stamps ever issued, these are ones with particular historical importance—these are the stamps that are America!

Now, more than 100 mint-condition stamps—some of them over 50 years old—will be brought together to recreate America's March to Freedom!

The Postal Commemorative Society has obtained limited quantities of more than 100 important stamps, all relating to the American Revolution. Some of the stamps are recent, while others are more than 50 years old. The stamps are all in perfect mint condition—even those issued as far back as the 1920s or 1930s!

The stamps will be arranged on 40 magnificent 10" x 13" collector panels, by chronological sequence of events, and stamps on closely related themes will be displayed together on the same panel, even though they may have been issued half a century apart.

Stamps that many collectors take years to acquire!

For years, these have been stamps that serious collectors have sought to acquire.

America's March to Freedom will feature three stamps from the George Washington Bicentennial Issue of 1932. These will appear with the 1982 Washington commemorative stamp. The collection will also include two stamps commemorating Valley Forge—the first issued in 1928, and the second issued in 1978.

Many other old stamps will be featured, too. The 1929 issue honoring patriot Nathan Hale...a 1931 issue in honor of General Casimir Pulaski, the Polish patriot who lost his life leading a cavalry charge against the British...a 1937 stamp commemorating the 150th anniversary of the United States Constitution.

There will be stamps honoring patriots Paul Revere, Patrick Henry and Thomas Paine. Stamps honoring military heroes—the Marquis de Lafayette and Admiral John Paul Jones, and stamps honoring Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin.

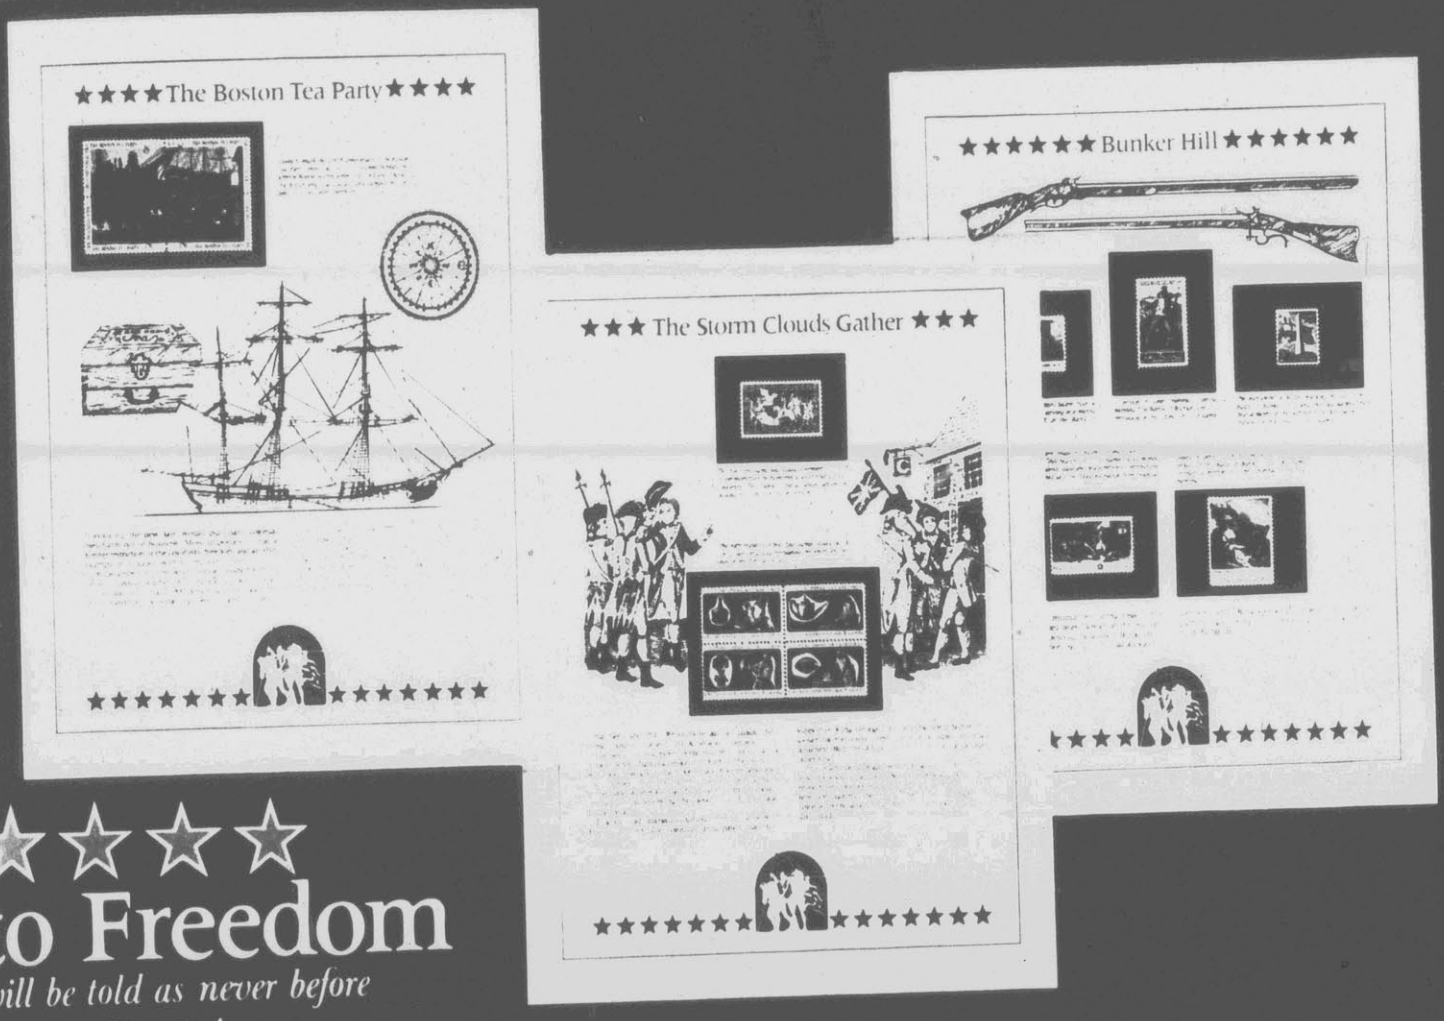

The collection will also include many stamps issued for America's Bicentennial. The 1975 stamps honoring the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill and depicting the Battles of Lexington and Concord. And the four 1976 stamps honoring the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

An expertly written narrative and superb illustrations will combine to enhance the meaning of the stamps.

If you did manage to obtain all these stamps on your own—from dealers or private collectors—you still wouldn't have a collection to compare with America's March to Freedom. Because the collection is much more than an assemblage of great American stamps. America's March to Freedom puts these stamps in their proper historical context in a way that's never been done before.

The stamps and the narrative work together. The narrative continues from panel to panel—explaining, exploring, and illuminating all aspects of the American Revolution and the subjects of the stamps.

The narrative will be accompanied by a wealth of illustrations—to illuminate the history of the Revolution. There are pictures from old books, newspapers, and historical broadsides. Plus newly-created art—commissioned especially for this collection.

★★★★★ to Freedom

will be told as never before
Postage Stamps!

You will receive a luxurious hardcover collector's album at no extra charge.

Each panel will include narrative, illustrations, and historical stamps all together. The stamps will be protectively encapsulated on the panels. And each panel will be protected against dust and fingerprints by a transparent vinyl display sleeve.

The panels, in their protective sleeves, will fit inside a luxurious hardcover collector's album. There is no extra charge for the album.

There will be 40 panels with mint stamps, narrative, and illustrations. In addition, there will be two special panels featuring 13 historic U.S. stamps representing the original colonies—a beautiful conclusion to the collection as a whole.

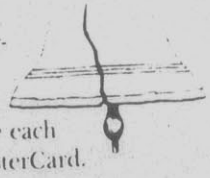

These final panels will also bear the new Treaty of Paris stamp—issued in September, 1983, the 200th anniversary of the treaty which concluded the war. This stamp—and this stamp alone—will be certified with an Official First Day of Issue postmark, authenticating the limited edition status of the collection.

Your original issue price of America's March to Freedom will be just $8.00 per panel (plus $.75 shipping and handling). This favorable price is guaranteed for each panel in the entire collection.

To reserve your collection, you need send no payment now. Simply return the attached Reservation Application. Your panels will be issued at the rate of two per month. As a convenience, you may have each shipment charged, as shipped, to your VISA or MasterCard.

America's March to Freedom will be limited to the number of collections certified with the First Day of Issue Postmark of the new Treaty of Paris stamp. Accordingly, reservations are being accepted on a strict first-come, first-served basis.

PEOPLE QUIZ

CAN FLARE-UPS AT HOME FUEL JOB BURNOUT?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Job stress has a direct effect on your self-esteem.
2. Ailments triggered by stress may be injurious to your health but are seldom life-threatening.
3. Stress resulting from unhappy life events presents the most serious threat to your physical health.
4. Lonely people are capable of dealing with stress better than other people.
5. A smoldering home life can produce job burnout.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the University of Michigan showed that the unhealthy symptoms of job stress range from psychological, such as chronic anxiety and low self-esteem, to physiological, such as high blood pressure. Job demands that exceed a worker's time or ability (overload) or insufficient supplies, resources or rewards to meet a person's needs can produce job stress.
2. False. Studies of the relationship between stress and life-threatening diseases, sponsored by the Medical Research Council of Canada, indicated that stress affects neurochemical, hormonal and immunological functions of bodily processes, influencing the susceptibility to serious organic disorders, which can definitely be life-threatening.
3. False. A team of University of California behavioral scientists examined the relationship between both major life events and daily hassles and a person's health. From a study of 100 people, the researchers found that the frequency and intensity of minor hassles correlated with physical illness. This relationship is stronger than that produced by traumatic life events, such as job loss, divorce, etc.
4. False. Southern Illinois University investigators studied how lonely and nonlonely people cope with stressful life events. They found that when loneliness increases in people so do physical and emotional problems, which result from stressful situations. Other studies also indicate a relationship between life stress and health problems in people unmarried or living alone.
5. True. A University of Texas study of job burnout, a debilitating psychological condition brought about by work-related frustrations that result in lowered productivity and morale, showed that the quality of your private life has a direct bearing on the chances of burnout — regardless of aggravations and hassles that may fill your work day. A negative change in your private life can promote burnout even if your work is relatively frustration-free. Introducing positive events into your leisure hours (new friends and relationships, interesting hobbies or various exciting pursuits) will buffer the impact of burnout. FW

New Foolproof Weight Loss System Features DiCellulite PL/20™ The Miracle Diet Tablet That Wasn't Expected Until the Year 1990!

by Paula Levey, President
National Health Products, Inc.

This is a long story.

If you read it all the way through, that's proof you're seriously considering losing weight. We've advanced the scientific timetable by half a decade to make it easy for you — so easy, we'll refund twice what you pay for this program if it fails you.

The basis of this program is a Miracle Tablet named DiCellulite PL 20.

In fact, DCP 20 plus your own commitment to lose weight, can wash fatty tissue right out of you even if nothing has worked for you before. Let me tell you why.

Seven EFFECTIVE Components — in ONE Tablet! Weight Loss Experts Say: "Here's the Magic Formula —"

DCP/20 -1 — An essential amino acid. This ingredient inhibits your appetite. You don't want to overeat because your hunger is satisfied as though you've had a large meal.

DCP/20 -2 — A fat mobilizer. This ingredient makes it easy for the fat to leave your body. You'll get rid of body fat easily, naturally, and without even knowing it.

DCP/20 -3 — A gentle diuretic. This ingredient maintains proper body water levels, preventing fluid buildup and the uncomfortable bloated feeling that goes with it.

DCP/20 -4 — A super energy lift. This ingredient controls your craving for sweets and helps you feel peppier (NO CAFFEIN — NO STIMULANTS!) — a double-barreled benefit when you're trying to lose weight.

DCP/20 -5 — A fat emulsifier. This ingredient literally attacks the cellular structure of fat. It helps melt away the fat globules that give you a pudgy, paunchy look.

DCP/20 -6 — A natural fiber. This ingredient is one you know well. It helps clean the digestive tract. You'll feel more alive than you have for years.

DCP/20 -7 — Essential "C". This ingredient is an important catalyst for the beneficial results of any diet program.

And That's Only the Beginning

DCP 20 is only half the story. National Health Products adds to the miraculous DCP 20 a weight loss system so simple, so basic, and so logical you'll wonder why it hasn't been this easy for you before. The DCP 20 System is so powerful in stripping the fat off your body we're not at all afraid to offer you twice as much as you've paid if it doesn't work exactly as we say it does, without hunger pangs or discomfort.

- How long has it been since you could wear the size you wore when you went to school?
- How long has it been since you looked in the mirror without thinking, "One of these days I'll get rid of these bulges"?
- How long has it been since you were able to grasp your waistline or thigh and not have a handful of flab?

Here's a suggestion. Circle these questions with a red pen or pencil, then look at them again two months after starting the DCP 20 Weight Loss System. Unless you have no commitment at all or deliberately try to scuttle your own progress, you'll be happier than you've been since, pound by pound and inch by inch, you lost the slim trimness you used to have — and can have again!

I promise you.

Paula

FOOD

PASTA THAT NEVER LEAVES YOU STRANDED

By Marilyn Hansen

Although some of us have it in our noodle that pasta is predominantly an Italian dish, as our good friend and cooking companion James Beard notes in his new cookbook, Beard on Pasta, "we find pasta recipes in nearly every country in the world." Beard offers a generous sampling of recipes in this easy-to-understand book. "I never get tired of pasta, any more than I get tired of bread," Beard writes.

Raeanne Rubenstein

The book is written in a casual, conversational style that invites you into the kitchen immediately to start cooking. Here are two recipes from Beard on Pasta.

PASTA ESTIVI

2 large ripe tomatoes, peeled and cut into sixths
1 medium onion, peeled and ringed*
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
Lots of freshly ground black pepper
½ lb. green noodles
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil, if available
Chopped parsley

1. Mix the tomatoes, onion, olive oil and vinegar. Sprinkle with lots of pepper, and let sit for at least an hour to give the rings a chance to lose their sharpness.

2. Cook the pasta in boiling water and drain. Spoon the cold sauce over the hot pasta, and sprinkle with fresh basil and parsley.

Makes 2 to 4 servings

PASTA CON QUATRO FORMAGGI

The only requirement for the four cheeses in this dish is that one of them be Parmesan. Author Evan Jones, in his World of Cheese, makes it with Bel Paese, Fontina, Gorgonzola and Parmesan. It's not traditional, but I like to use a goat cheese in this dish. It doesn't quite melt; it softens and becomes thick. But by all means go ahead and experiment. This is an excellent opportunity to use up all the leftover cheese in the refrigerator.

½ cup butter
1 lb. penne or ziti
¼ cup goat cheese, in chunks
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup grated Romano cheese
½ cup shredded Gruyère cheese
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan. Cook and drain the pasta and add to the melted butter. Then mix in the cheeses, one at a time, turning the noodles thoroughly as you go.

2. Serve very hot with lots of freshly ground black pepper.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

THE TEA DOES THE WORK

- DRINK BAI LIN WEIGHT REDUCING TEA
- LOSE FLAB, POUNDS, BULGES, INCHES
- WORKS FOR BOTH MEN AND WOMEN
- ANCIENT WISDOM SOLVES THE WEIGHT REDUCTION PROBLEM

You are about to read news of the most amazing way to lose weight in the history of weight control. For 2,000 years this little known weight reducing secret has kept people of the Far East slim, trim, attractive. Now this weight reducing wonder is available to the Western world, let it reduce your weight, let it enable you to burn away fat, flab, fluids. Imagine eating three full delicious meals a day then sipping a delicious cup of tea after each meal and losing fat and flab without strenuous exercises, fad diets, drugs, or chemicals. Read the exciting message below and be prepared to soon see a new thinner, trimmer, much more attractive you.

Think about it, have you ever seen a fat Chinese woman, an obese Chinese man? We are sure that in almost every case the answer is no. What is this Chinese secret of being thin, slim, almost never being overweight, bulging or unsightly? One out of every four people in the world is Chinese, how do the majority of these hundreds of millions of people stay thin and attractive?

They almost all do it without fad diets, diet doctors, health spas, or weight loss books. Read and take advantage of their amazing weight loss secret.

Consult your physician before starting this or any diet program.

UNIVERSITY TESTED

University scientists knew that Oriental people eat large amounts of rice, other starches, cooking oil and fattening foods that add pounds to body weight. Scientists wondered how these people stayed thin and slender, while eating the exact same foods that make you overweight, fat. Through scientific research these Far Eastern scientists set out to find this stay thin secret.

9 OUT OF 10 PEOPLE LOSE WEIGHT

Dr. Yong Piao Liu, famed microbiologist, who is acknowledged in the worldwide edition of Who's Who, conducted controlled laboratory tests to confirm the weight loss action of BAI LIN TEA. The weight loss results were then reconfirmed by consumer tests conducted by Shey Shing Tea Company, Ltd. The incredible results proved that 90%, 9 out of 10 people showed visible weight loss.

To achieve this dramatic weight loss all they did was eat regular meals and sip the tea. The name of the tea that achieved these dramatic weight loss results is Bai Lin (long life) Oriental tea and through this offering it is now available to you. It's amazing, but test results prove it is absolutely true. All you need do to lose weight is eat your regular meals and follow the simple Bai Lin Tea plan, you need do nothing more. The results of the M.D. Taiwan University test are available upon request.

HOW DOES BAI LIN WEIGHT REDUCING TEA WORK?

Fat cells which cause you to be overweight, are kept alive by water. Each packet of Bai Lin Weight Reducing Tea contains completely natural Theophylline which indirectly, but safely, removes this water causing fat cells to disappear, to vanish. When you rid your body of fat cells you slim down, disfiguring fat and bulges disappear. By the simple act of drinking Bai Lin Tea you put this fat loss process to work to produce its weight loss wonders for you.

GUARANTEE

Tea of the Bai Lin type has produced weight loss results for centuries. We are therefore able to make this unconditional guarantee. Purchase the supply of Bai Lin Tea that you desire. We suggest you take advantage of the multiple money saving discount offer. Sip the tea, if you do not immediately start losing weight, if you do not keep unwanted weight off return the unused portion within 30 days for a refund in full.

PATERNO

Q: How did you resolve those feelings?

Paterno: I took two days and went home to Brooklyn, just walked around the city, to get a feel if there was something else I wanted to do. I decided there were a lot of reasons why I wanted to stay in coaching — and I'm glad I did.

Q: Who were your heroes when you were a kid?

Paterno: My father and my high school coach, Vev Graham. I was a Dodger fan, so Jackie Robinson, Pete Reiser. And politicians. LaGuardia was a hero in our house. And guys like Napoleon, Caesar, Cicero, Alexander. They weren't heroes as I think you mean, but they had a great impact on me.

Q: Why conquerors like Napoleon and Alexander?

Paterno: I've always been one who liked the thrill of battle, and I've always felt there was some correlation between getting an army to do things — the organization and motivation — and getting a football team to do them. If I were a military leader, I hope I'd be a political animal as well as a military animal, like Napoleon and Alexander, who were great administrators — able to conquer yet keep an empire together.

Q: As an English literature major, what did you do your thesis on in college?

Paterno: Geez. . . the Romantic poets — Wordsworth, Byron and Shelley mainly. I can still quote them: "Poetry, the definition of poetry. The overflow of emotion, recollected in tranquility." Aw, c'mon, you're going to get me all nostalgic.

Q: Has the morality of college sports really gotten that much worse recently, or is it just publicized more now?

Paterno: I think we're starting to come out of it. Over the next couple of years we're going to straighten things out, because it just got out of whack. Everything got so big so quick. The worst were the academic abuses at some of the West Coast schools. If an alumnus wants to buy a kid a car to get him to come to your school, that's one thing, but when the university joins in, then you're eating away at the fiber of education. And that worries me. We're so cynical of all our institutions — business, government. If we ever want to start all over, we've got to start with the universities. And if people are cynical of those, you have no place to start over. You have anarchy.

Q: Let's suppose you're named head of the N.C.A.A. What would your plan for reform be?

Paterno: First, I'd throw out the book and start all over again. Because when that book was put together, amateurs were different than they are today. Everything is different. We didn't have the pressure of professional sports that we do now. We didn't have the pressure of agents, or television money, the pressure to cheat academically because you need an athlete who will make you big money on TV. It's much more complicated. We have too many rules now that are compromises on top of compromises on top of compromises.

Q: How is it going to advance the cause of college football for Penn State to play — and possibly demolish — Brown this year?

Paterno: It's not going to advance the cause of college football. I don't think that's the purpose every time you play. Tennessee backed out of a scheduled game with us very late. And the Ivy League was going from nine to 10 games, so we thought it was a good opportunity to make contact with their schools. I didn't want to play Brown because it's my alma mater. We went first to Yale, and Yale said no. Harvard said no; Princeton said no; Penn said no. So finally I said, call up Brown. I admire the fact that they are willing to give their kids a chance, to stick their neck out. As Emerson said, "You've always got to do what you're afraid to do." The Brown-Penn State game will probably get more attention than any Ivy League game in 25 years.

Q: What are your two biggest strengths?

Paterno: I'm not easily swayed; I make up my mind to do something and I'm disciplined enough to give it my best shot. I'm not sensitive to criticism or concerned with outsiders. I make a decision and stick with it. And I'm loyal; I'm not a guy who jumps around trying to make the best deal. I've been loyal to this institution, to my family, to my staff and to the people around me.

Q: How about weaknesses? 60 Minutes' segment on you was so glowing, a staffer later said, "We only do shows like that on guys who die."

Paterno: Probably I'm a little bit too impetuous and emotional. Sometimes I have a tendency to jump off and not give people a chance to explain. I don't back away and think about it a little bit. Also, I find myself wanting to win arguments for the sake of winning. I can take a holier-than-thou attitude.

Q: You've turned down numerous big-money pro coaching offers. Why — and is there anything that would induce you to go pro?

Paterno: There are new personalities; you have to completely rebuild the football team every two or three years. I enjoy that challenge. As for going pro, that could happen if — and some people consider this a feasible answer — we begin paying the kids to play. The minute that's the answer, I'd be out of here. I couldn't live with that. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

UPI

Josh Gibson: the black Babe Ruth.

ONLY THE BALL WAS WHITE

Until 1947 and Jackie Robinson, black baseball players of major-league caliber were forced to play on all-black teams. While the Negro Leagues are a blot on the nation's conscience, they're a vivid and heroic part of baseball history.

To preserve this legacy, film maker and former minor-league pitcher Craig Davidson has spent the past four and a half years putting together the joyous and moving documentary There Was Always Sun Shining Someplace. It will air Sept. 7th on your local PBS station. The documentary includes interviews with the players and rare film footage of the teams.

Veteran players talk about league marvels like catcher Josh Gibson, the incredibly powerful hitter who is supposedly the only player ever to hit a fair ball out of Yankee Stadium. He died at 35, some say of a broken heart, just months before Robinson integrated baseball.

Davidson says he was shocked at the men's lack of bitterness. "Their voices simply ring with the love of the game," he told us. Davidson got the title for his special from his interview with Hall of Fame third baseman Judy Johnson. When asked to sum up his life in the Negro Leagues, Johnson looked out the window and said, "You know, there were some good days and some sad days, too. But there was always sun shining someplace, and that's what we looked forward to — the big days, the best days."

LABOR'S LOVE LOST — OR NOT?

Looking for really challenging work? Spend your Labor Day weekend trying to figure out what these two surveys about Americans and the work ethic really mean.

First, Americans don't seem to be as enamored of the work ethic as they once were, according to a recent survey by social researcher Daniel Yankelovich. The study indicates that almost half the work force believes there is little or no relationship between how hard they work and how much they get paid. These workers say they "believe their employers will be the prime beneficiaries of any increased work on their part."

Movie Still Archives

Meanwhile, a study last year by the American Council of Life Insurance indicates that Americans hold the work ethic in higher regard now than they did six years ago. According to this study, 43 percent agree that people are just as willing to do a full day's work for a full day's pay, while 33 percent disagree — almost the reverse of a similar study in 1976.

COPPING A PLEA — DULLY

Hill Street Blues it ain't. In fact, banter between cops (in this case, traffic cops) and you scofflaws is downright banal.

A survey done for Hendron Inc., publishers of periodicals for police, finds that from the lips of the thousands of people stopped every day for different violations under different circumstances, comes this handful of responses: "Who, me?"; "Speeding? This car won't even go that fast"; and, "Are you sure you stopped the right car, officer?"

A request for a driver's license meets with similar witty repartee: "Why?"; "My what?"; or, "I just lost it yesterday," (usually preceding the mention of a close friend, relative or neighbor on the police force).

Most common parting shots: "I hope this makes you very happy"; "Where the [bleep] were you when they broke into my home last year?"; and, "I hope this helps you meet today's quota."

DOUSING THE IRE

It's going to be tough heading back to the office after the long weekend, so thank goodness for the Anger Banger. This new punch-pad desk accessory is designed "to absorb a lifetime of rage and frustration." Basically, it's just a foam pad inside a vinyl case. When you feel all that high-powered stress and frustration building up (it's 4:55 and your boss wants "to talk"), just snap it open and pound the foam. You can even customize your Anger Banger with a photo of your favorite nemesis.

HAPPILY EVER AFTER

Once upon a time there lived a beautiful girl named Adriana Caselotti. Her father was one of the most famous singing teachers in all the land. One day a man from the movie kingdom phoned Mr. Caselotti to ask his advice. The Walt Disney studios, the man said, were planning to make the world's first feature-length cartoon film. It would be called Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Did Mr. Caselotti know of any young girl who could sing beautifully and naturally, like a child? Adriana, 18, was listening in upstairs. "What about me, Papa?" she begged.

MCMXXXVII Walt Disney Productions

The young Adriana: still charming.

Adriana went on to win the role of Snow White over 150 young hopefuls, and Disney went on to create a truly classic movie. First released in 1938, the Academy Award-winning film was recently reissued for only the sixth time.

Now 67, Adriana told us she had no idea what Disney wanted the day she auditioned — she knew only to sound childlike. So she imitated cartoon character Betty Boop.

For Adriana, winning the part dwarfed all other opportunities: "After I got to be Snow White, I was very happy just being Snow White. I performed three times in the opera to please my family, and that was it. I never really tried for a career.

"I really feel as though I've been Snow White all my life. I'm not stupid or a nut or anything, but I still go around the house singing Snow White songs. It never ends."

WALT DISNEY'S DONALD DUCK

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Missing bag's strap. 2. Umbrella is different. 3. Hand is lowered. 4. Lounge's missing. 5. Radio's missing. 6. Bikini bottom is smaller.

Junior Whirl

- AGING PROCESS! Fill blanks with missing ages: 1. "When I was _____ I was just begun..." 2. "Sweet _____." 3. "Life Begins at _____."

4. The way to become a centenarian is to live to be _____. Answer in 1 minute.

- Sum Fun! If I divide the number of dollars in my wallet by two, three, four, five or six, there is one dollar over each time. What amount is in my pocket?

- Flower Patch! Find a flower in each sentence. 1. This soda is yummy. 2. Your hair is beautiful. 3. My house number is one zero seven two. 4. Harvard pans Yale.

- Riddle Me This! What days are best for getting a tan? Sun days. What mountains go "Quack, quack?" The Adiron ducks.

CLOSE-UP STUDY TESTS LIMITS

This story is said to have appeared in a college humor paper.

Student: "Professor, will you explain to me the theory of limits?"

Professor: "Well, young man, let's say you and your date are seated on a sofa. You move half way toward her. Then you move half way again. Continue this for some time, reducing the distance between you each time by 50 per cent. Theoretically, you will never reach her. On the other hand, you will soon be close enough for practical purposes."

HOOP LA! Will hoopster number seven cross the finish line, or will he take time out? We'll let you decide

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: AS ARN AND MUNGO ENTER THE AQUEDUCT NINIAN READIES THE OLD PEOPLE AND THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN IN THE HILLS ABOVE CASTLE ORR. THEY LAUNCH AN "ATTACK" TO DRAW ATTENTION, MOVING TO AND FRO WITH TORCHES, LOOSING AN ARROW NOW AND THEN, AND ALL THE WHILE, UNDER COVER OF FOREST, INCHING CLOSER TO THE CASTLE.

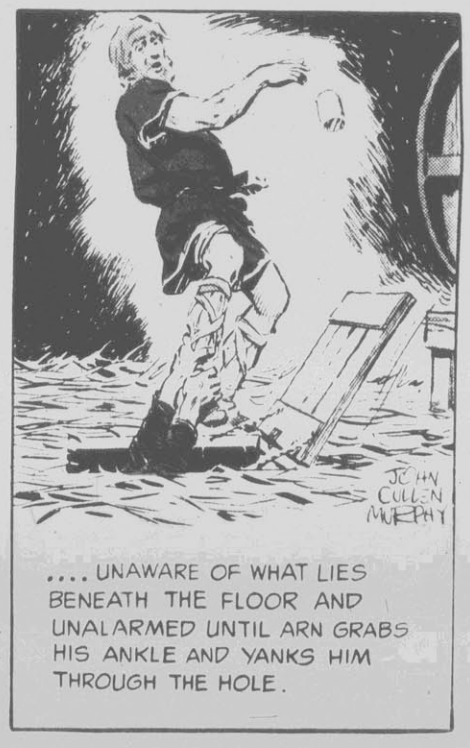

MEANWHILE ARN'S MEN HAVE PENETRATED DEEP INSIDE THE TUNNEL. THE AIR IS RANK AND THE SILT IN PLACES MANY FEET DEEP.

TIME AND AGAIN MEN SINK IN THE SLIME UP TO THEIR NOSES, STIFLING CRIES OF ALARM SO AS NOT TO GIVE THEMSELVES AWAY TO ANY SAXONS WHO MAY BE LISTENING. PROGRESS IS SLOW, BUT FINALLY THEY COME UPON THE SECRET CISTERN, NOW DRAINED OF WATER

ARN CLIMBS INTO THE ROOM ABOVE AND BOLTS THE DOOR. A ROPE IS LOWERED TO FETCH THE REST OF THE COMPANY. WHEN ALL ARE INSIDE ARN EXPLAINS THE PLAN ONCE MORE AND THEN DIVIDES HIS TROOP INTO THREE. "THE SAXONS ARE BRACING FOR AN ATTACK FROM NINIAN," ARN EXPLAINS. "WE WILL TAKE THEM FROM BEHIND, FOR GOD AND CAMELOT!"
