BACK FROM SPACE — Astronauts of STS-8 egress from space shuttle Challenger at Edwards AFB, Calif., early this morning after returning

Challenger Lands In The Dark Of Night

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Challenger and its crew dropped eerily out of the darkness and settled safely on a brilliantly lit desert runway early today, ending six flawless days in orbit with the first night landing in the U.S. astronaut program.

Like an ancient ghost ship emerging from a fog bank, the 100-ton space plane appeared suddenly out of a star-filled sky just 80 to 90 feet above the runway, the blazing ground lights gleaming off the fuselage.

The crew, commanded by Richard Truly, included America's first black astronaut, Guion Bluford; the oldest person ever to fly in space, Dr. William Thornton, 54; pilot Dan Brandenstein, and mission specialist Dale Gardner.

Truly set Challenger down at 12:40 a.m. PDT in the center of a dazzling array of lights that turned the landing strip into artificial day. That was 53 minutes after the ship's braking rockets were triggered 137 miles above the Indian Ocean to start the astronauts on a fiery homeward dive.

Landing was smooth and right on the center line: Frosting on the cake for a mission that demonstrated the maturity of America's space transportation system. A flight director termed the flight "the best so far" in the shuttle program.

"Welcome back, great show," Mission Control radioed the astronauts as they rolled down the runway, kicking up a rooster tail of dust, transformed into a silvery veil by the xenon lights.

"Sure was fun; let's go do it again," Truly remarked.

Thirty-five minutes after touchdown, the space travelers, smiling and in good spirits, emerged from the craft and made a walkaround inspection, pleased that it looked to be in good shape. They then drove by van for a physical examination and a shower.

"This was just a fabulous mission, the cleanest mission yet...just superb," said Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, director of the shuttle program.

The return was in sharp contrast to earlier shuttle landings here. Six times in the past, the reusable ships have arrived in daylight, visible for several miles as they darted over the desert and then circled to zero in on the runway.

Challenger wasn't visible to observers here today until it was just above the runway, on its final approach. The craft has no exterior lights, and it seemed to come from out of nowhere, the blazing floodlights creating a fog-like atmosphere. The only evidence it was in the area had been two sharp sonic booms that shattered the darkness as the craft sped into the desert airspace.

The after-dark landing came as shuttle was on its 98th orbit, six days after being launched for the first time at night in a breathtaking departure from Cape Canaveral in Florida. The schedule was dictated by a requirement to deposit a satellite for India in the desired location.

Touchdown was on concrete runway 22, which has a long overrun into the hard desert sand. Six mighty spotlights, each throwing 800 million candlepower — equal to 650,000 floodlights — illuminated the area.

NASA barred the public from the landing site, for reasons of security and also because it knew there would be nothing to see until the ship was near the ground.

The astronauts were awakened at 8:03 p.m. EDT Sunday to make ready for re-entry. Wakeup music was a rousing John Philip Sousa march, "Semper Fidelis," played by the Marine Corps Band.

"You've got everybody marching around up here," Truly remarked.

During six days in orbit, the astronauts:

—Deployed a communications-weather satellite for India, the fifth commercial payload released for a paying customer.

—Ran hours of successful communications checks through a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite which is vital to future shuttle flights. TDRS is essential for the next mission, scheduled Oct. 28 when Challenger is to carry up the European Spacelab, a research facility.

—Lifted a heavy mass for the first time with the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm, demonstrating it is ready for Flight 13 next April when a 10-ton satellite will be released and the crew also will try to retrieve and repair another satellite that failed in orbit three years ago.

—Successfully separated live pancreas cells for the first time in space weightlessness in a pharmaceutical processing test that could be a major step toward conquering diabetes.

Truly, who flew on the second flight of the shuttle Columbia in 1981, said this eighth mission demonstrated how much the transportation system has matured since then.

During a news conference from space on Saturday, the commander recalled that on his first flight, "we were worried about the safety of the vehicle, the thermal protection system, the engines, those kind of things. We have graduated in a little over a year and a half to a system that's routinely deploying satellites, meeting our commitments to the customers."

"I think in this short period of time, for a vehicle this complicated, that's amazing," Truly stated. "We really have made great strides, and I think it's a great future for America in space."

Flight director Jay Greene termed the flight "the best so far" in the shuttle program. "It's a good vehicle. We're getting better and the machine's getting better. It's definitely operational."

Reagan Tonight Will Tell U.S. Response To Soviet

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will unveil in a nationally broadcast speech tonight steps, including restriction on aviation, against the Soviet Union in response to what he called the "barbaric, uncivilized, cold-blooded" Soviet destruction of a Korean passenger jet.

While speech writers were at work Sunday on Reagan's 15-minute address to be delivered at 8 p.m. EDT, word filtered down from the administration that a U.S. reconnaissance aircraft had been operating in the area where the Soviets first began tracking the Korean airplane, which carried 269 people who perished.

An administration source who spoke on only condition that he not be named said the presence of the plane, an RC-135 considerably smaller than the Korean jumbo jet, raised the possibility that the Soviets thought they were tracking the U.S. aircraft when they actually were pursuing the passenger jet.

A second Reagan administration official, who insisted on anonymity, said Sunday that the Korean aircraft and the U.S. spy plane never came closer than 75 miles and when they crossed paths, they were 300 miles apart.

However, at the time of the attack, the U.S. spy plane was 1,000 miles away, the source said. The airplane was on a routine mission checking for violations of the U.S.-Soviet treaty governing strategic nuclear weapons, the source said.

U.S. officials emphasized that after the U.S. and Korean planes crossed, the Soviets had approximately two hours to realize they were on the trail of a Korean airliner.

One administration official said Sunday that "it is possible" the jetliner was shot down after leaving Soviet airspace. "It was very close. It may have actually been a mile outside of their airspace when they shot it down," he said.

In Moscow, the Soviet anti-aircraft defense chief offered his country's fullest explanation yet of what happened last Thursday. Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov, however, did not admit to shooting anything more powerful than "warning shots with tracer shells."

But a Soviet source confirmed that a heat-seeking air-to-air missile destroyed the Boeing 747 airliner. The source, who refused to be identified, said President Yuri V. Andropov was not consulted by military officials who made the decision to shoot down the airliner.

While the Soviets officially declined responsibility for the plane's disappearance, Romanov said it may have been mistaken for an RC-135 spy plane that "seemed to be stalking under the cover of night above our territory."

"And there are no doubts that this was a deliberate action designed as a rude provocation" inspired by the United States, he said.

Allegations that the Korean plane was on an intelligence mission have emerged as Moscow's principal defense against claims that the jetliner was the target of an unprovoked attack by Soviet fighters.

Meanwhile, a Japanese newspaper reported Sunday that radar stations operated by U.S. and Japanese military authorities could not have warned the Korean airliner that it had intruded on Soviet air space.

Monitoring facilities do not always coordinate with each other and some only record their findings for later analysis, the mass circulation newspaper Asahi Shimbun said.

At the White House as late as Sunday evening there was debate over just what would be in the president's speech tonight. Aides said it was undecided whether the president would play a tape recording of the radio transmissions from Soviet fighter pilots moments before the Boeing 747 was lost in restricted skies near Soviet military installations last Thursday.

Lebanese Army 'Quite Prepared'

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army's success in routing gunmen from west Beirut last week indicates it is ready to face the Druse militias fighting Christians in the central Chouf Mountains, U.S. military officials say.

Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, commander of the 1,200-man U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force, says the Lebanese forces are "quite prepared" to move into the mountains now that the Israelis have evacuated the area.

He described the army's battle in west Beirut against the Shiite Moslem Amal group, as well as Druse and leftist militias, as "one of the toughest military operations that any force can face, and that's combat in urban or built-up areas."

"That is a very tough operation and considering all that and other factors, they were quite successful, I think," said Geraghty, whose Marines have been helping train the 33,000-man Lebanese army.

Military sources say the Lebanese plan to use the same units which swept through west Beirut on Tuesday and Wednesday for the move into the mountains. These include units of the 4th, 5th, and 8th brigades along with a helicopter regiment.

All have been trained by 111 U.S. Special Forces and Army Ranger advisers and are considered the elite of the Lebanese armed forces.

The Druse fear the army because its officers are Christians, who have been their enemies for centuries. Most lower ranking soldiers are Shiites.

About 10,000 Lebanese troops will be facing an estimated 2,500 hard-core Druse fighters, plus possibly several thousand more irregulars from villages scattered through the 235-square-mile area vacated by the Israeli army.

The Israelis pulled southward to their new frontline on the Awali river on Sunday. It was not immediately known when the Lebanese army would move into the mountains in full force.

U.S. Marines Shoot Back After Additional Shelling By Militia

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marines shelled by militiamen retaliated with mortar fire early today as civil warfare continued a day after the Israeli army completed its withdrawal from 235 square miles of Lebanese territory near Beirut.

Lebanese police said at least 51 people have been killed and 133 wounded in the sectarian fighting since Sunday, and Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said four Marines have been injured. He said the soldiers suffered slight shrapnel wounds from mortar and rocket-grenade blasts, and returned to duty after being treated on the scene.

At dawn today, Jordan said, the American peacekeepers fired a five-minute barrage of high explosive shells from 81-mm mortars at positions that had fired into the Marine zone at Beirut's international airport.

Fierce fighting between Christian and Druse militias continued today in the embattled Alej and Chouf mountains and in Christian neighborhoods of west Beirut, which were pounded by artillery from Syrian-controlled areas of the mountains.

The government ordered hospitals in Beirut and neighboring towns into a round-the-clock alert, cancelling leaves for surgical teams and emergency ward staff to cope with the influx of casualties, police said.

Jordan said the 1,200-man American contingent of the four-nation peacekeeping force in Lebanon has gone to "condition one" — the highest state of alert — three times since the new round Christian-Druse warfare erupted early Sunday, coinciding with the Israeli pullback. Last week, two Marines were killed and 14 injured by shelling.

After the daybreak mortar barrage, the Marines went to "condition two," a status that allowed them out of foxholes and bunkers, Jordan said. But Associated Press photographer William Foley said mortar rounds and small arms fire continued to stray into the area.

Foley reported the firing came from the neighboring Khalde area, where the Lebanese army and Druse militiamen were fighting. Army communiques said the army had captured a key intersection at Khalde and was poised to press southward into the territory vacated by the Israelis.

Christian and Druse communiques reported fierce fighting elsewhere on the Beirut-Damascus highway at Bhamdoun and at Souk El-Gharb, a town that houses the Alej region command headquarters of the Christian militia.

Hundreds of rockets rained down on mountain villages, and fighting in the suburbs also caught British, French and Italian peacekeeping forces in the exchanges. An Italian soldier was wounded.

A car bomb exploded in the southern suburb of Haret Hreik, killing nine people and wounding 10 others, police said.

Military sources in Tel Aviv, speaking less than a day after the pullback began, said Sunday it had been completed and all Israeli soldiers were positioned behind a new, more defensible line to the south at the Awali River.

Israel, which invaded Lebanon June 6, 1982, to wipe out strongholds of the Palestine Liberation Organization, remains in control of almost one-quarter of Lebanon occupied by 725,000 people.

During the pullback, two Israeli jet fighters strafed two Syrian T-55 tanks that approached the vacated territory, an army communique said.

More Settlements

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A government committee has authorized the establishment of two new Jewish settlements in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, the World Zionist Organization says.

The Ministerial Committee on Settlements decided to establish Ganim B, north of the Palestinian town of Jenin, and Otnie'l south of Hebron, Zeev Ben Yosef, spokesman for the World Zionist Organization, said Sunday. The organization plans to finance construction of the settlements.

He said the two were part of a five-year plan to establish 57 new settlements in the West Bank.

Ben Yosef said there are now 108 Jewish settlements in the West Bank with a total population of more than 30,000. The government hopes to raise that number to 70,000 by the end of the year when 7,000 recently completed housing units are to be occupied.

Notch-Year Babies Have To Tighten Belts

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: If you want to do a good deed, please print the following message:

If you are drawing Social Security and were born in 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 or 1921 (called "the notch years"), you are being unjustly penalized by receiving lower benefits than those born prior to and after the above-mentioned years. For example, if you worked until you were 65 before starting to draw Social Security, you are receiving about $100 less in your monthly check than those born before 1917 or after 1921.

A bill in Congress to correct this unfair situation (HR-5469) failed to make the committee and died at the end of the 1982 session.

If you are in this age group, write to your congressman requesting that this bill be reintroduced, or a new bill be introduced to correct this unfair situation.

NOTCH-YEAR BABY

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for an important message. I checked your facts, and they are accurate. Readers who do not know in which district they reside, or who their representative is, should look in their telephone directory under "U.S. Government." Listed there will be "Congress." Any congressional office will be able to tell you who your congressman is and how to write to him.

Your congressman is your elected representative. Let him know that you want this inequity corrected.

DEAR ABBY: I have just inherited some beautiful furs — a mink coat, a leopard jacket and a silver fox muff and hat. They are gorgeous! My husband is an animal lover and can't stand the sight of fur garments. He says it makes him both sad and furious when he thinks of the way the animals died.

Should I wear them anyway, or give them away?

TORN

DEAR TORN: Sell the furs and give the proceeds to your local animal shelter. And consider yourself lucky to have such a caring, sensitive husband.

DEAR ABBY: To "The Children," whose father has inoperable cancer and his wife refuses to tell him:

Our family was in exactly the same situation years ago. Mom refused to tell Dad, and we reluctantly went along with it. I will always regret that decision.

As a result, we all acted like nothing was seriously wrong with Dad. Meanwhile, he grew sicker and sicker. We created a false atmosphere of hope and optimism that was more painful than the real one.

No honest or meaningful conversations ever took place because no one admitted that there was anything wrong. I'm sure Dad knew he was dying, but he held back so as to prolong Mom's avoidance of reality.

What a terrible, terrible loss! We could have comforted each other, cried and hugged and spoken what was in our hearts and minds, but we didn't.

I'm glad you advise people to be honest with each other in such situations. It's the only way.

DRY SOCKET

Normally, following the extraction of a tooth, the wound in the jaw usually heals within a few days without complications. However, in every life, there is always an exception. One of those rare complications that can follow an extraction is known as a dry socket.

As the name (dry socket) implies, the clot that normally forms shortly after tooth removal, fails to develop or is lost. This leaves a bare and unprotected socket exposed to bacteria, saliva and food debris. The lining of the socket is sensitive and when bared to this irritating environment, a great deal of pain can develop.

About all that can be done is to keep the area as clean as possible and the patient as comfortable as possible with medication and place an anesthetic dressing into the open socket until nature develops a protective covering for the exposed socket.

The reason why a dry socket forms is not fully known. Some believe it results from a rapid bacterial action, others because of a fault in the blood clotting mechanism.

Accessories Change Mood Of Outfit

CHARLOTTE — Today's woman can extend and personalize her wardrobe by remembering one often overlooked aspect of dress — accessories.

That's a tip from veteran fashion consultant Pauline Lavitt, one of the many wardrobe and beauty experts who will be on hand for the Southern Women's Show Oct. 6-9 at the Charlotte Civic Center.

"Clothes are too expensive to throw them out each season," says Ms. Lavitt, owner of her own clothing shop and consulting business for 11 years in Hickory. "The countless variations you can create with accessories can change the mood of what you're wearing. We encourage women to take what they already own and update it by adding a belt, scarf, etc.," she says.

This fall, Lavitt looks for fedora hats, colored gloves and hose and scarves to be popular accessories. "We are seeing beautiful colored hose in jewel tones such as garnet and amethyst," she says.

Overall, fashion and beauty represents only one of eight categories at the four-day event. Experts on food, fitness, business, finance, travel and leisure, art and merchandise directed toward women will be among the show's more than 200 exhibits. The show is designed for the homemaker, career woman, student and parent.

Show hours are from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Oct. 6-8 and noon to 6 p.m. Oct. 9.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Looking for the perfect gift for the woman who has "everything"? This elegant woven ribbon clutch bag would be just the thing! Make it in creamy champagne beige for evening or dress wear year-round or Christmas red for the holidays. The bag is worked in simple brick stitch with double-faced satin ribbon on 7-mesh plastic canvas. This unique needlepoint creation, designed by one of my assistants, Chris Harrelson, gets rave notices from everyone who sees it. An "everyday" version can be made with yarn replacing the ribbon.

To obtain directions for making the Ribbon Purse, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-0904 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit N-0904R, containing all necessary materials and instructions for making the Ribbon Purse, by sending a check or money order for $23, or send $10 for Kit N-0904M, for making the same purse with yarn. For either, please specify your choice of champagne or red.

Have you ever tried combining needlepoint and beadwork on plastic canvas? Some really exciting effects can be achieved with a little imagination. In the pattern stitch illustrated today, you can substitute glass beads or pearls for the smyrna stitches, represented by the large Xs on the main chart.

In my opinion, this is best done on 10-mesh canvas, with multiple strands of a fine yarn used for the needlepoint stitches. You may decide whether to use a variety of colors in the yarn and beads, a single color yarn and multi-color beads or a monochromatic color scheme.

The lines and spaces on the graph charts represent the canvas ribs and holes. The bold black lines denote the straight stitches. Some of the stitches are charted as arrows to get you started. When this is the case, bring the needle up at the base of an arrow and take it down at the tip of the arrow. As the overall pattern develops, you will see that actual stitch direction is not that important in this pattern stitch. To make the chart easier to read, therefore, some of the stitches are just shown as straight lines.

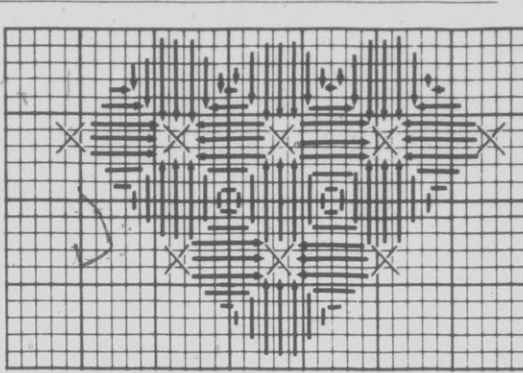

The easiest way to be sure that your pattern is centered is to make a smyrna stitch in the exact center of your canvas (or sew a bead in that space) and then work the surrounding straight stitches.

How would you use this beaded pattern? It is particularly striking for little decorator boxes for counter or dresser tops. How about one done in off-white with pearls and lined in white satin, for example? I'll bet that would bring a pretty penny at a charity bazaar. Or why not try Christmas ornaments, eyeglass or cigarette cases, evening bags or almost anything that strikes your fancy.

Once your imagination gets in high gear, you'll probably find many other pattern stitches that will be even more exciting with beadwork.

How to buy group health coverage.

Since the cost of health coverage has been rising much faster than other business costs, business people have to become much more skillful at evaluating competitive health-benefit proposals.

Here are some of the issues you'll want to consider.

Are the rate and cost containment strategies effective?

The cost of coverage is related directly to the cost of health services. Therefore, does the carrier have effective ways to contain both your group's need for health care and the price of that care?

For example, does the carrier have cost-containment agreements with area hospitals and physicians?

Can the carrier offer your employees built-in incentives to use medical services efficiently?

Is your carrier achieving the dream of paperless claims processing? We are.

Can the carrier offer options that reduce both the incidence and severity of illness? Membership, for example, in a health maintenance organization?

Does your carrier have cost-containment agreements with area providers? We do. And that's only one of the strategies that enabled us to save our subscribers more than $125 million last year.

Will the plan be affordable? Can you assume variable levels of risk?

Can payments be geared to your cashflows? Are a variety of financing arrangements available?

Will the service be rapid, accurate and trustworthy?

What is the carrier's reputation for prompt, accurate payment? For adequate disclosure of claims paid or denied?

To what extent is the carrier achieving the dream of "paperless" processing? Can claims be filed by computer?

Will your employees appreciate the coverage as a true benefit, the way having our benefit plan is appreciated, or will they take it for granted?

To prevent problems for you down the road, will your carrier make the plan's provisions perfectly clear to them?

Take advantage of us.

All of these questions should enter any evaluation of alternative group-health plans. The subject is complex, however, so please take advantage of our 50 years of experience. Just call your nearest service office, or write to: Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, Room 558, Post Office Box 2291, Durham, North Carolina 27702.

Why do we want you to become a better-informed customer? Because the better you understand health coverage, the more you'll prefer ours.

The better you understand health coverage the more you'll prefer ours.

Time For Concern

On this Labor Day the nation pauses to pay tribute to all who work at myriad jobs and, in sum total, make this country go.

It is fitting that we do. For most of us, we are paying tribute to ourselves for there are few who do not contribute something of their efforts. It may be in a factory, or office or hospital. It can be in volunteer labor or even in the home.

This year Labor Day is also a time for concern for the rather large number who are unemployed and, indeed, those who may become unemployed because of breath-taking changes in technology.

Our greatest concern today should be in finding the new jobs needed for those who want to work but cannot find positions and for those who may be displaced.

N.C. Commissioner of Labor John C. Brooks said, "Our state must not forget the suffering of the long-term unemployed and must use all available resources to ensure that all those people who want to work have the required training to take advantage of newly developed jobs. Our state has a good track record of responding to economic growth challenges, and North Carolina's work force is the primary reason why our state is so highly valued as a location for industry."

We trust North Carolina is on top of the problem. Certainly if answers are to be found our state will find them.

A Better Way

Last week's ordeal endured by many hundreds of people lined up for that food giveaway at the Pitt County Office Building won't be repeated, we're sure.

Once was enough for Extension Service Chairman Leroy James, too.

We've wondered why, after perhaps a score or so of uncomplicated, orderly food distributions, this particular one should have gotten out of control; and the only reason we can come up with is the unprecedented quantities of food to be issued drew an unprecedented number of qualified recipients.

The list included cheese, butter, flour, cornmeal, rice, milk and honey.

It was suggested that people should bring boxes and some means of transporting their goods.

The result was a totally unexpected turnout.

At any rate, whether it is accomplished by spreading out the distribution days by "categorizing" recipients for specific days ... as suggested by a critic in "Hotline" ... or by another system, there will be a better way when the next distribution date rolls around.

You can count on it.

Electronic Spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sophisticated electronic eavesdropping network enabled Secretary of State George P. Shultz to quote directly from conversations Thursday between Russian ground command and the Soviet fighter pilot who allegedly shot down an off-course South Korean jetliner.

Shultz's disclosures of details of the attack over Soviet territory north of Japan spotlighted a vital and shadowy arm of intelligence-gathering, one that involves powerful antennae, radars and space satellites rather than trench-coated spies.

If Shultz's account of the conversations and actions are accurate, they demonstrated the detail that electronic data collection can obtain.

While officials do not discuss the workings of this network openly, it is widely assumed that the Soviets are aware of the eavesdropping and actively engage in it themselves.

The result is that it is nearly impossible to hide aircraft movements or communications anywhere in the world.

But the United States and the Soviet Union regularly test each other's detection capabilities, such as when Soviet warplanes heading for Cuba occasionally penetrate U.S. airspace along the East Coast and prompt a scramble by interceptors

In the case of the Korean Air Lines plane, officials said, some material was provided by a U.S. Air Force electronic security unit on Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido. But they said a listening post operated separately there by the Japanese Self-Defense Forces was the source for a significant amount of the intelligence that made its way to Washington.

Alluding to this, Shultz's assistant secretary for European affairs, Richard Burt, said the material was "not just U.S. technical information" and had to be obtained and translated after the fact.

Two former top intelligence officials said Shultz may have revealed too much about U.S. monitoring abilities when he detailed the Soviet actions.

Stansfield Turner, former Central Intelligence Agency director, said he "was shocked by the amount of detail" that Shultz provided. This, he said, "certainly gave the Soviets a clear readout on just what those (intelligence) capabilities are in that particular area of the world."

Bobby Inman, a former National Security Agency director, also expressed some unease. But he said "he was pleased that the decision was made to announce what had occurred" rather than letting the word leak out.

"My experience has been that when the leaks are the source, the damage to sources and methods usually is even worse," Inman told ABC News.

The U.S. listening post in Hokkaido is one of a worldwide network — once estimated at more than 4,000 — developed after World War II and maintained by the military services and the National Security Agency, a super-secret intelligence operation based at Fort Meade, Md.

In recent years, the ground stations have been bolstered by surveillance satellites that are able to pick up and relay communications traffic and radar signals as they circle the globe.

The radio communications and other data are routinely tape-recorded by monitors and examined by NSA analysts to see if they have military significance.

Some of the U.S. listening posts, such as the one on Hokkaido, are near Soviet territory. One operated in Iran until Islamic militants overthrew the shah's regime in 1978, and others are in place in Turkey, another Soviet neighbor.

But officials have said that radar signals also can be detected from thousands of miles away.

WASHINGTON — August normally is the dullest month in our town. The Congress has gone home; the Supreme Court is shut down; the president is off on vacation and, by our parochial standards, absolutely nothing usually goes on.

When nothing is going on, something must be made to go on. And this August, what we contrived was: the Gender Gap!

The summer's most overblown story, in my own view, is the story of Ronald Reagan and the gender gap. By some regrettable foul-up in White House logistics, several bus loads of visiting women were turned away from the White House. The president apologized profusely, but some of the women didn't like his apology. Then a 35-year-old aide in the Justice Department, Barbara Honegger by name, leaped into print with charges that Mr. Reagan's efforts to rid the federal code of discriminatory statutes were a "sham."

Since then it has been downhill all the way. A three-day battle erupted in the local press over when and where, and under what circumstances, Ms. Honegger had worn a bunny suit. I kid you not. At the Justice Department, press chief Tom DeCair recklessly described Ms. Honegger as a "low-level munchkin," and so passed another day and night in solemn discourse upon the meaning of "munchkin." At the White House, acting press secretary Larry Speakes was questioned about the perception of a gender gap: "I think we have to articulate the agenda," Speakes replied. All the reporters wrote this on their slates.

Pfui! I see no reason to doubt the raw figures published by the pollsters. The data show that fewer women than men voted for Reagan in 1980, and there is some indication that the gap is growing. But I have not seen a poll limited to women who actually voted for Reagan in 1980, and this I would like to see. How many such women have firmly changed their minds? I suspect the number is exceedingly few. Whatever the reasons may have been that motivated large numbers of women to oppose Reagan in 1980, those reasons still exist. The president still regards the Equal Rights Amendment as unwise; the president still believes in upgrading our national defenses; the president still believes that billions of dollars can be cut from entitlement programs without significant harm to the poor.

What offended the impatient Ms. Honegger was that nothing had been done in the 98th Congress toward repeal or amendment of discriminatory statutes now on the books. But something had been done. At the administration's request, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas introduced a bill to deal with roughly 100 such statutes. The bill has been languishing in a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, but you can bet your best bunny suit that it will be hopping toward the floor this month.

This is the kind of thing the bill will correct: More than a hundred years ago, Congress passed a law dealing with the Southern Ute Indians. These Indians could be removed from their tribal lands "with consent of the majority of the adult male tribal members." The computers of the Justice Department searched and found that offending word, "male," and thus the discriminatory statute was kicked out for review. The Dole bill would repeal that law.

Now this may come as a terrible blow to the Barbara Honeggers of this world, but honestly, ma'am, the possibility should be considered that the president of the United States and the chairman of Senate Finance have had more important issues on their minds these past six months than the disfranchisement of female Utes a century ago. It is hard to conceive that possibility, I know, but let us try.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As I write this letter, I am outraged, as I believe every citizen of the civilized world should be. The news is still filtering in of the shocking premeditated murder of 269 innocent people, including a United States congressman and a number of other Americans, by the Soviet Union.

The hideous, barbaric act of blasting an unarmed civilian passenger airliner out of the sky must serve as a reminder to some and a warning to all that the Soviet communists are evil, deceitful and godless. They will not hesitate to use violence when it suits their purpose. It is obvious that the decision to commit this savage unwarranted attack came from high in the Soviet government, as do the flagrant lies with regard to the events that occurred.

No doubt, the apologists for the Soviet Union will come up with all manner of excuses and the liberals will continue to soft-pedal that communists are merely of a different philosophy and not really dangerous to the people or sovereignty of the United States.

The so-called Greenville Peace Committee and others of that ilk who seek to weaken this nation's defenses should carefully consider their objectives in the light of this international lawlessness on the part of the Soviets. I am sure they mean well, but they should ask themselves what kind of peace can be made with such a regime.

As I hear the news that Japanese ships heading toward the crash site on search and rescue missions were turned away by Soviet warships and think of these helpless victims and the families they leave behind, I am just sickened. If this horrible tragedy causes the American people to recognize the Soviet Union for what it really is, these people will not have died in vain.

Strength For Today

In a slave market centuries ago stood a sullen group of war captives being sold into slavery. Conspicuous among them were certain blond youths with fair skin.

A monk paused before the unfortunate group and inquired about their race and former abode. They replied they were Angles.

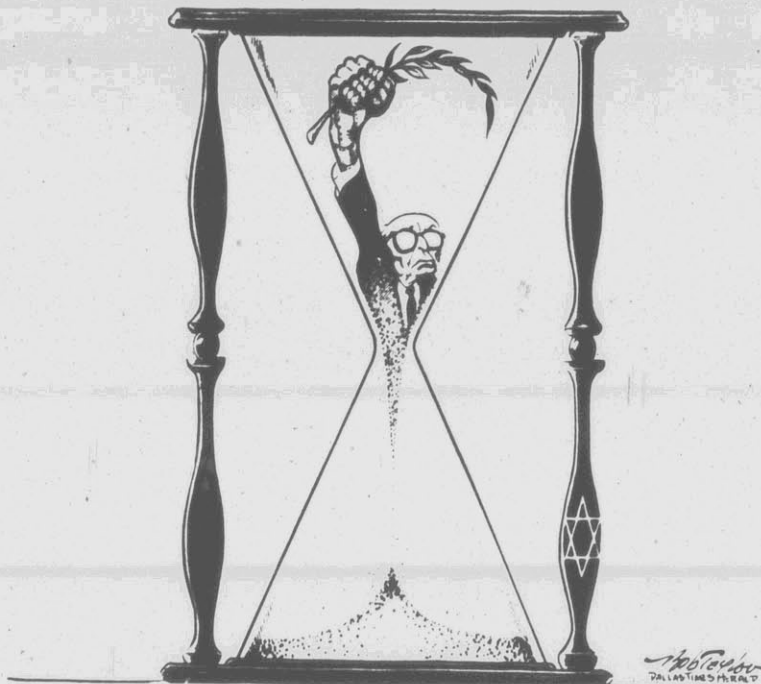

"Not Angles, but angels," said the monk, "for they have the faces of angels and should be co-heirs with the angels of heaven."

For the years the memory of these people remained in the monk's mind. Finally, when the monk became Pope Gregory I, he sent missionaries to Germany where the Angles and their neighboring tribe, the Saxons, were located. They were converted to Christianity and, after the fall of the Roman Empire, emigrated to Britain.

Whenever we question the value of Christian missions we should remember that the English-speaking people of today are the descendants of those primitive tribesmen who received their religion from missionaries.

Waste Disposal Could Be Issue

RALEIGH — In Times Beach, Mo., in Love Canal, N.Y., in hundreds of towns and cities across the country, the problems associated with improperly disposed hazardous wastes have come back to roost. People get sick, people have to sell their houses, voters get angry.

And, in hundreds of other communities, where problems have not yet arisen, people are scared. Scared that what happened in Love Canal and Times Beach might happen in their communities.

North Carolinians have shown the same concerns. In Warren County, the state faced massive civil disobedience as PCB-laden soil was dumped in a landfill. Anson County residents went up in arms when a private firm considered opening a hazardous waste disposal facility.

As the 1984 election campaigns get under way, the environment looms as an issue which might surprise some politicians in this state. Look at the polls the candidates are conducting and you'll hardly ever find the environment as the single most important issue facing a candidate. That spot invariably goes to either jobs or schools. But, if the candidates ask for the top four or five issues, the environment is almost always there.

A staffer for one Democratic candidate said that their polls show hazardous wastes as the sleeper issue of the coming year. "It's not just an aesthetic issue anymore. It's become a public health issue. And people get scared. Just look at where the issue has been raised. When the issue is raised, it really gets a response. It's a killer," the staffer said.

In the 1984 election, one statewide candidate stands to suffer the most from his stands on the environment. Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, is one of the most powerful members of the Legislature and a candidate for lieutenant governor. He is the architect of the "Hardison amendment," which prohibits the state from writing environmental regulations tougher than those promulgated by the federal government.

He is also the man blamed for the Legislature's failure this year to pass a comprehensive plan for handling hazardous wastes in North Carolina. The N.C. Conservation Council unaffectionately refers to him as "Hazardous Hardison."

To understand the problem the environment poses for Hardison, one has to understand the kind of campaign we'll have for lieutenant governor. In a year when North Carolina makes national history with its U.S. Senate race and when almost a dozen candidates are running for governor, the lieutenant governor's race will be struggling to get notice. With voters sifting through all the issues raised in other campaigns, the lieutenant governor's race could easily become a one-issue race. Manipulated correctly, hazardous wastes could be the issue with which to attack Hardison.

The issue also carries with it a good number of activists who would be willing to work for Hardison's opponents. With all those other races soaking up political workers, the prospects of several hundred or even a thousand committed environmentalists joining the camps of Hardison's two opponents, Bob Jordan and Carl Stewart, must be disturbing to Hardison.

Hardison says he's not worried. He says an objective assessment of his record would show he's taken responsible stands and that he is for a safe environment. The Conservation Council has a grudge against him that grows out of his opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment, he says. When it comes time to vote in 1984, Hardison says, few people will listen to the council.

The danger for Hardison is not that the 600 members of the conservation council get worked up on election day. The danger is that the council and the others candidates tap that underlying public concern about hazardous wastes and wrap it around Hardison's neck.

Directors Are Question Marks

NEW YORK (AP) — Where was the board of directors when all the financial troubles began — at Braniff, Wickes, Penn Square, AM International and Washington Public Power? At Chrysler, International Harvester and ...

Since boards exist to protect shareholders assets, questions are rising again — as they did in the 1930s and 1970s and in between, too — about the caliber of jobs they can do, or whether they can do their jobs at all.

In fact, says Prof. Eugene Jennings, Michigan State University professor and adviser to directors and managements, there are doubts that boards even have sufficient information with which to do their assigned tasks.

One of the problems, says Jennings, revolves around the subjective term "best judgment," which boards are entrusted to use in whatever actions they take.

Judgment, he observes, depends upon experience, meaning past policies and practices of an industry that offer guidance. But, he maintains, "in many industries in these turbulent times there are no landmarks."

Where, he asks, were the landmarks for Braniff's board when airlines were faced with the brand new experience of deregulation? And when public utilities were faced with outside restraints from environmentalists and others?

"Boards function best in a steady-state economy that presents few twists, turns and surprises," he comments. "But today there is no such consistency."

Left without landmarks, boards are further hamstrung by a heritage that prohibits moving against poor managements until it becomes obvious that shareholder assets are in jeopardy or about to be jeopardized.

Based on observations over three decades, Jennings believes that "unless the chief executive officer cannot be dealt with at all, most boards bend over backward to make sure management has their support."

In some instances, it seems, their hesitancy to act might be based on an information lack. Good judgment, says Jennings, requires not only experience but good information, and information is more than just data.

"Data are facts, but information is data that are relevant, which suggests some kind of end use, purpose or objective," he explains.

"Unless boards are privy to the actual goals and objectives of management, they can have lots of data and little information." And some managements, he has found, may have disguised their goals from the board.

Even if the agenda is clear, and corporate goals are open and understood, there still might be confusion about the board's role. "What is a weak board, what is a strong board?" he asks. "We haven't yet defined it."

One weakness the professor has observed is inherent in the board's group structure. It is called "levelling," a process of compromise and consensus in which a group produces a decision less wise than its individuals could make.

But however difficult it is for a board to function, says Jennings, it probably can do a better job if it becomes privy to the data used in strategic planning, which many companies now use to reduce uncertainty about the future.

"If boards are to have the necessary wisdom to change management before a situation becomes desperate they must have more than the data that most boards get a day or week before the board meeting," he says.

Even then, he believes, wise investors know that you cannot look to the board of directors to determine if shareholders assets are being protected. "You look for the quality of management rather than board quality," he says.

Does this mean that most boards are failures?

"I am not an apologist for boards," said the professor, who has helped managers pick boards and boards pick managers. "I am trying to place them in the proper perspective."

No matter how well constructed, and despite guidelines from the Securities and Exchange Commission, he said, boards cannot be relieved of the dilemma of seeking wisdom in uncertainty.

"There is," he said, "little wisdom to guide either managements or boards in this decade of radical change."

Researchers Say Test Can Reveal Depression

CHICAGO (AP) — Depression can be caused by low levels of an amphetamine-like chemical in the brain and the absence of that chemical can be discovered through a urine test, doctors say.

Depression, which can be masked by such disorders as alcoholism, loss of sex drive, marital discord, chronic pain or other behavioral problems, could be better detected in a urine test being studied at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, physicians said.

"We think this is a reliable test for depression that can lead to better diagnosis and better treatment," said Dr. Hector C. Sabelli, director of Rush's psychobiology laboratory.

Sabelli and his colleagues some years ago linked depression with low levels of phenylethylamine (PEA) in the brain. Tests on hundreds of people have shown that 70 percent of the depressed patients had markedly lower levels of PEA than healthy individuals, Sabelli said.

He said PEA levels in depressed patients increase toward normal ranges as medical treatment brings them out of their depression.

PEA is a substance that is constantly made and almost immediately broken down by the brain. PEA appears to trigger or sustain wakefulness, alertness, excitement and pleasure.

Sabelli said abnormally low amounts of PEA causes a lack of interest and concentration, loss of pleasure, forgetfulness, withdrawal from other people and other symptoms characteristic of depression.

Rush researchers have developed a way of tracing PEA by measuring a key breakdown product called phenyl acetate (PAA), which is excreted in the urine.

"These results suggest that low PAA urinary excretion may be a reliable marker for the diagnosis of some forms of unipolar major depressive disorders," said Sabelli.

The PAA urine test may not only be helpful in monitoring patient recovery from depression, but also in diagnosing people whose depression is camouflaged by another problem, he said.

"Many of these people are not being appropriately treated because their underlying depression has not been recognized," he said. "They may be getting sex therapy, marital counseling or long psychotherapy without getting better."

Researchers at Rush have recently found that certain dietary supplements may be able to increase brain PEA levels in some patients, Sabelli said.

Preliminary findings from a study involving 40 severely depressed patients showed that in 10 of them, depression lifted after they took dosages of phenylalanine, an amino acid, and vitamin B6, he said.

Widow Suing For Royalties

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The widow of a Wake Forest University law professor has sued a publishing company for royalties on a book her husband wrote but was later revised by someone else.

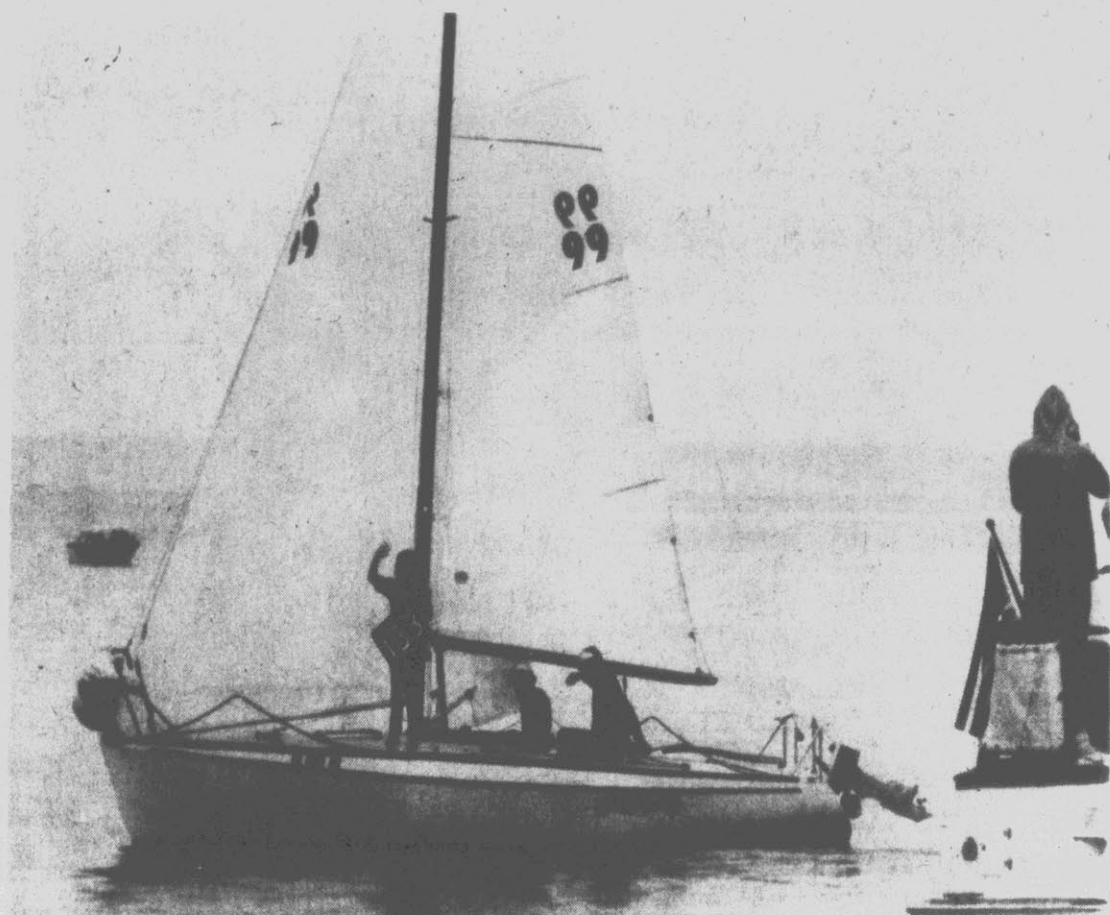

Alice J. Webster of Winston-Salem, widow of James A. Webster Jr., is asking for damages "in excess of $10,000" from The Michie Co. of Charlottesville, Va., for breach of the contract her husband had with the publishing company.

Webster, a law professor at Wake Forest for almost 25 years, died at the age of 51 in October 1978.

According to the suit, filed in early August, royalty payments to Mrs. Webster stopped in 1981, apparently because of a contract provision that "the author" would not receive royalties on any future editions of the book not prepared by him.

Paying Homage To Sen. Jackson

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — Dignitaries who knew him well joined admirers who knew only what he had done as thousands of mourners gathered to say goodbye to U.S. Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

About 2,000 people visited Solie Funeral Home in Everett as Jackson's closed casket was displayed for the public Sunday, the first of three days set aside for public viewing.

"I think it's important for our children to be here," said Kathleen Givan, who had never met Jackson but paid respects to the veteran lawmaker with her husband and two sons.

"It's important for them to know about this man. I just feel so badly for his family and for the whole country, too."

"He was a hometown boy, you know," said Ann Gaston, a spokeswoman for Solie Funeral Home. Most of the mourners were from the Everett area, she said.

The 71-year-old Democrat died at an Everett hospital Thursday night after suffering a heart attack in bed at his nearby home.

A public memorial service was scheduled for the Everett Civic Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, because it would be impossible to accommodate all who wished to attend a Wednesday noon service for the family and dignitaries, family members said.

Vice President George Bush will attend the service Wednesday as personal representative of President Reagan and as "a longtime friend" of the senator, Bush's office said.

Bush planned to fly from Washington to Seattle aboard Air Force Two Wednesday morning, and members of Congress and other dignitaries probably will be on the plane, the announcement said.

Another mourner who viewed Jackson's casket Sunday was Fe Macadog, whose stepbrother immigrated to the United States from the Philippines with the senator's help.

"My stepfather wrote Sen. Jackson when his son was having trouble immigrating," she recalled.

"A GOOD FARMER IS ALSO A GOOD BUSINESSMAN."

"I always do my homework before I make an investment. That's why I've got several business enterprises that are successful. And one of those is my Perdue broiler operation. Sure, I got into chickens before Perdue was in this area. So when they bought out the company I was with and offered me a contract, I wasn't sure what to do. I wasn't very familiar with Perdue, but I had heard that they were different. I soon realized that they really want a quality chicken. That means the company hopefully makes more money. And at the same time, the grower benefits too."

A quality-conscious company that makes poultry its only business. That's who I'm growing for now. That's a good thing to have going for you when retirement comes. Good cash flow, a good tax situation, including the investment tax credit which is a tremendous savings, and depreciation of houses and equipment. From that point of view, a farmer or businessman, either one, would do well to consider Perdue.

When I retire, my Perdue broiler houses will be my only business, and I look forward to it. There are some very nice things about it you can't find in other jobs. It's not back-breaking work and doesn't take a lot of time. A person could have a couple of Perdue houses and still be involved in other things.

It's A Great Time to Grow with Perdue. Perdue is into one thing — chickens. That's why our poultry products outsell all the others in the northeastern super-markets. The demand is increasing for our products, so we need more producers. Start growing with a growing company. Plastic Surgeon Attacks Injection Wrinkle 'Cure'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A drug used to erase skin scars and wrinkles works only a short time and may be harmful, says a plastic surgeon, but the maker of the liquid collagen says Dr. Erle Peacock Jr. is overreacting.

Peacock, of Chapel Hill, said he was astounded the federal Food and Drug Administration approved the substance in 1981, saying some studies indicate col-lagen's effects may last no more than four months and may trigger the immune system to act abnormally. Peacock said research has shown that collagen injections in rats produced a disease similar to human rheumatoid arthritis and that both rabbits and rats produce antibodies in response to collagen.

"No one has measured the anti-collagen antibodies in human beings and there is no proof that injections will hurt," he said, adding that Duke University Medical Center and the University of Michigan are studying whether patients face similar problems. Results of the study are expected in about a year, Peacock said.

Collagen Corp., manufacturer of the substance, says the liquid forms a "woven lattice-work" that lends structural support to the skin and "fosters the ingrowth of surrounding cells."

Peacock said many studies, including his own, have shown that solid collagen temporarily can perform that function, but that liquid collagen is rapidly digested and remains in the body no longer than three or four months.

Collagen Vice President Bruce Pharris, however, said tissue biopsies evaluated by the corporation and several universities show that patients' cells grow on the injected liquid. He said the corporation's product is a unique form of collagen unfamiliar to Peacock.

Dr. Sheldon Pollack, a Duke physician who treats patients with the corporation's product, said, "The fate of liquid collagen is still not known and is being investigated. It does go away after several months, but seem to temporarily restore something in the skin."

Maureen E. Brunner, director of consumer marketing for Collagen Corp., said the firm "does not hide the fact that the substance is biodegradable. People generally choose to have a touch-up from six to 24 months after initial treatment."

Pharris said there was little need for concern over the treatment, which has been used on about 200 patients at Duke since July 1981 at a cost ranging from $600 to $1,000.

He said studies show only 3½ percent of people injected with liquid collagen had adverse reactions including mild rashes or itching at the point of injection.

Responding to Peacock's charges that liquid collagen costs 6,000 times what the company spends to produce it, Pharris said it was costly to market.

"Our product must be pure, sterile, manufactured in a consistent way and meet exact specifications," he said. "The fibrous nature of this product must be correct or else the cells will not invade and take up residence on it. This step is key and very time-consuming."

While Peacock refuses to treat his own patients with collagen, many who have received the injections are pleased with the results.

No Navy Carriers Now On Persian Gulf Duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since the Iranian hostage crisis prompted a U.S. naval buildup in the Persian Gulf, the Navy does not have an aircraft carrier patrolling waters near the oil-rich region.

With the carrier Vinson's departure from the Indian Ocean in the last few days, U.S. naval power in the Arabian Sea-Persian Gulf region consists of a relatively weak force of two frigates and a destroyer, according to Navy sources.

Navy advocates say the "thinness" of the U.S. carrier fleet forced the Pentagon to leave the vital oil-producing region uncovered by carrier-based air power while the United States is flexing its naval muscle in the waters off Central America.

U.S. naval strength is being shifted to allow for a show of force along the Pacific and Caribbean coasts of Central America, Navy officials acknowledged Saturday.

While three carriers — the Coral Sea, the Independence and the Kennedy — have been assigned to participate in naval exercises off Central America, four others are in dry dock for overhauls or repairs.

The Forrestal, the Midway and the Constellation are being overhauled and the recently modernized Saratoga is having its leaky boilers repaired before it can return to active service this fall.

Of the remaining U.S. carriers, the Eisenhower is stationed off Lebanon to support U.S. Marines who have been attacked while performing peacekeeping duty. The Ranger, which recently ended a cruise off Nicaragua, is in the western Pacific and four others are patrolling U.S. waters, two in the Atlantic and two in the Pacific. Another carrier, the Lexington is only rated fit for flight training.

Even though several carriers now in dry dock are expected to rejoin the active fleet this fall, the Coral Sea is due to return to Norfolk, Va. for a 15-month overhaul, probably later this month.

Before the Shah of Iran's pro-American government was toppled in 1979, President Carter had favored making the Indian Ocean a neutral zone that would be free of naval fleets operated by the big powers. But the policy was scuttled in November of that year when Iranian revolutionaries mobbed the U.S. embassy in Tehran and took Americans hostage.

The U.S. naval buildup in the Persian Gulf region began later that month when Carter assigned the carrier Kitty Hawk to the Indian Ocean. The Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan in late 1979 prompted a two-year show of force to deter Soviet military action in the region.

Two carrier battle groups were stationed outside the Persian Gulf until the Reagan administration — citing budgetary constraints — cut the force to a single battle group in 1981.

JCs 'Frustrated' By State Publicity

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Leaders of North Carolina Jaycees say they're ready to put "Jamscam" behind them, but not without some parting complaints about the way the media and state officials handled the scandal.

Jamscam erupted in 1980 when it was learned that charitable funds raised through grape jelly sales had been misused to create fictitious Jaycee chapters.

Last week, the case ended with the dismissal of all charges against two former club officials and the sentencing of two others to six-month prison terms. Another former Jaycee is appealing his conviction.

"Three years we've put up with this nonsense," said Jim Godfrey of Southern Pines, current N.C. Jaycees president.

Godfrey complains that the state attorney general's office allowed needless delays in prosecuting the case, while the media gave front-page coverage to accounts of fund misuse but paid little attention to the repayment.

"They've dragged us through the mud," Godfrey said. "I don't know why the attorney general did what he did. I don't know why the media did what they did. It's totally frustrating."

Jay Eaker, press secretary for Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, said delays were tied to requirements of the investigation and said his office "acted properly and responsibly at every turn."

Jamscam began over three years ago, when some Jaycees began questioning financial records kept by Executive Director Maurice Wilson. At the time, the state Jaycees were pushing a native son — J. Harold Herring of Mount Olive — for national president.

Herring was running unopposed, backed by hundreds of new chapters of 20 Jaycees each. As it turned out, most of those chapters were fakes, their national dues gleaned from jelly sale funds diverted from the N.C. Jaycee Burn Center in Chapel Hill.

Felony charges were filed against Wilson, Herring, and former Jaycee officials Thomas Alsop, and Johnny Lee Fletcher. Wilson and Herring made plea bargains with the state, while a jury convicted Fletcher on one count. Charges against Alsop were dropped.

Jerry Wall, the club's executive director who replaced one of the men indicted on felony charges, says he's "just glad it's over."

Are Hangovers Healthy?
By Porter Shaw, Substance Abuse Program Director

Hangovers, according to researchers, may not be all bad. Recently a study of a thousand people demonstrated that those who don't have hangovers after heavy drinking appear more likely to become problem drinkers than those who do. The study at the University of New York, Buffalo, N.Y., states that about half of those categorized as heavy drinkers, or recovering alcoholics, reported that they did have hangovers in their recent drinking years. Some 23% indicated they never had a hangover.

While the study does not directly state that all heavy drinkers who fail to have hangovers will become alcoholics, the findings do suggest that those who do not have hangovers may be at greater risk for developing patterns which are associated with problem drinking.

California Prison Inmates Are Assisting In Natural Disasters

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — When entertainer Barbra Streisand's exclusive Malibu Colony home was ravaged by storms last month, prison inmates quickly surrounded it.

They weren't looting the place, just piling sandbags to protect it and other nearby celebrity-owned structures from further damage.

"The inmates weren't allowed inside," said Capt. Clifford Dysart of the Los Angeles County Fire Department. "They were outside sandbagging the houses."

And this summer, when fires burned thousands of acres throughout Southern California, inmates helped cut the fire lines.

About 2,500 of the state's 37,000 prisoners serve as emergency crews in disasters. And while other states use prisoners for community projects, California has the most extensive program using inmates to fight calamities, said Hardy Rauch of the American Correctional Association.

The work is tough and can be risky. "It is the most difficult part of firefighting," said Howard O'Brien, the California Department of Forestry's coordinator of the conservation camp program, referring to cutting fire lines. "It's usually the steepest terrain that bulldozers can't navigate."

The state has 32 camps, 29 in rural areas separate from prison institutions, and 60 women inmates were included in the program this summer, said Phil Guthrie of the California Department of Corrections. Rainbow Camp in San Diego County, currently used for men, will be occupied by women in October, he said.

During the day, the inmates are assigned to the California Department of Forestry or the Los Angeles County Fire Department. At night, the CDC resumes responsibility.

"The only inmates we don't take are arsonists, naturally, and sex offenders," said Lt. Bill Dieball, who heads the Prado Conservation Camp located next to the California Institution for Men at Chino. The sex offenders ban "basically has to do with the community and the fact that they work essentially without supervision."

Billy Fonville, 37, of Bakersfield, was convicted of first-degree murder when he was 24. He spent time in San Quentin, Soledad and Folsom prisons before moving to Francisco Conservation Camp near Saugus and then Prado, where he is awaiting parole in September.

"You really can't compare (camps to prisons)," said Fonville.

"There's a lot of violence inside the institutions," he said. "Everybody gets along (at Prado) exceptionally well. Soledad has a lot of riots. Here, there are none."

The camp's best feature is "just being able to walk outside, to walk around the grounds," Fonville said. "To me it's kind of an orientation to the streets. You can go to an officer here. Here you're treated like a human being. Inside, you're not."

The public also benefits, state officials say. While inmates live in a dorm instead of a small cell, the public has emergency crews on call 24 hours a day. They clean parks and clear fire breaks when there are no emergencies.

Dick Friend, a Los Angeles County Fire Department spokesman, said it would cost the county $16 million to duplicate the services provided by CDC prisoners in the county's four conservation camps, $15.8 million more than the county now pays.

Camp inmates receive $1.35 to $3.75 a day, depending on their jobs, plus 75 cents an hour for emergency fire and flood work, officials said.

There has been some apprehension about the program, especially after a Chino Hills couple and two children were killed in June. Kevin Cooper, an escaped inmate from the California Institute for Men, not Prado Camp, has been charged in the murders.

"To ease the feeling in the community ... we didn't work anybody in the Chino Valley for awhile," Dieball said. "We're now requiring that we have more supervision as well."

Some camp inmates do escape. In 1982, there were 71 escapes statewide and "virtually all were recaptured," Guthrie said. The all-time high was in 1972, when 179 escaped, and the low was 1975, when 40 escaped, he said.

"The trick in this is to pick people who would do no harm if they do get out," Guthrie said.

Both behavior and ability are scrutinized. "Everybody goes first to the Sierra Conservation Center in Jamestown (Calif.)," Dieball said. "That's where they go through training for about five weeks. They've already been reviewed by three or four levels before they get here."

"They all have to be able to work 12 hours fighting fires," said Capt. Don Kanallakan, superintendent of the Los Angeles County camp near Malibu. "We're getting the cream of the crop. They'll fight fires for eight hours and come back here and lift weights."

The black turpentine beetle is a frequent pest of pine trees east of the Mississippi River. The turpentine beetle most often attacks unhealthy loblolly or slash pines. It can infest healthy pines, but pines under stress are preferred. Freshly cut stumps often serve as a breeding site for the beetles.

The black turpentine beetle is the insect referred to as a "pine borer." The beetles usually attack the lower portions of the trunk. Sometimes the attacks occur as high up as 12 feet. Infested trees are characterized by large reddish to whitish pitch tubes on the bark surface. From a distance, pitch tubes may look like popcorn stuck on the bark of the tree.

The turpentine beetle in Eastern North Carolina finds acceptable trees to attack around new home construction sites. The reason why so many pines are killed after the attack of beetles is because the roots nearby are disturbed by heavy construction equipment first. Sometimes roots are removed directly by the heavy machinery, sometimes roots are crushed, or the soil is compacted near the tree. Trees that have lost portions of their root system are stressed and as a result, are much more susceptible to beetle invasion. Healthy trees are often able to "pitch out" pine beetles because they have a strong flow of sap in the tree. Where the pitch tubes are clear or white in color, the tree is holding its own against the turpentine beetle. When the pitch tubes take on a reddish color or have bits of sawdust in them, then the tree is in trouble. Where pitch tubes are noticed, sprays with the insecticide lindane may help. The lower portions of the trunk can be sprayed whenever pitch tubes are first noticed.

Merely spraying the trees is often not enough. It must be assumed that the tree is under stress due to other causes. Drought, flood, lightning, construction damage, disease or lack of space between trees make a tree more susceptible to insect attack. If crowding of pines is the problem, then thinning pines to allow more room is an obvious solution. Where there has been a loss of root system, then fertilization may increase root growth. Lightning is usually fatal to pines.

To stimulate new roots, fertilizers that are relatively low in nitrogen and higher in phosphorus and potash should be used. Such fertilizers as 0-10-20, 3-9-18, 5-10-10 are better than using 10-10-10 as a source of nitrogen such as "soda."

Black turpentine beetles are active through most of the warm parts of the year. They only affect pine trees, especially loblolly and slash pines and will not affect broadleaved trees. Where evidence of these beetles is seen at work, there is a good possibility that the affected tree is under stress and depending upon the severity of attack, may need removal.

At Least A 3-Way Race For Labor Commissioner

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Dick Barnes, D-Forsyth, has promised to enter the race for North Carolina labor commissioner today, setting up at least a three-way contest for the job in 1984.

Incumbent John Brooks said he plans to seek a third four-year term but has not scheduled a formal announcement. Former Labor Department employee Donald G. Wiseman of Cary already has announced he will run.

No Republican candidate has surfaced yet.

Both Barnes and Wiseman say Brooks has been unable to work with Gov. Jim Hunt's administration. Brooks said he has cooperated with Hunt on most issues and the exceptions have been given too much attention.

One of those exceptions concerned the Job Network program announced early this year by Hunt. The program was designed to tell the unemployed about job and training opportunities.

Brooks denounced the program as "a publicity campaign without substance" and maintains that he still knows of no one who has gotten a job through the program.

He also clashed with Department of Administration officials in 1982 about transferring building code inspectors and centralizing government computer operations.

Brooks challenged Barnes and Wiseman to document their claims about him and said, "Ninety-nine and a half percent of the time I have voted with the administration. I consider that a strong record of support. When I have reasons to raise questions I have a duty to do that."

"We have an incumbent who people throughout North Carolina are displeased with," Barnes said in a telephone interview. "The present commissioner has not wanted to participate with Hunt. I have been following this office for five or six years and watching very closely. I have been dissatisfied as (have) others throughout the state."

Barnes said the commissioner should be a mediator between the unemployed and industry. He says he's qualified because he was raised on a farm, served two terms in the House and one in the Senate and now works as business development officer for Citizens' National Bank in Winston-Salem.

Wiseman, a 56-year-old business consultant, says Brooks has not been open to new ideas and promises that he would open the doors of the Labor Department to more input.

"I feel John Brooks is beatable," Wiseman said. "It is very obvious if a state senator enters the race. I welcome that. It told me I was on the right track."

But Wiseman and Brooks have clashed themselves.

Wiseman became director of the state's Division of Occupational Safety and Health Administration in July 1979 and resigned in October 1981 after he differed with Brooks over shifting responsibility for a job safety program from the state to the federal government.

The three candidates seem to agree on which issues are of major importance to North Carolina.

Barnes, who once considered running for insurance commissioner, said the state must prepare workers whose jobs will become obsolete and that will require coordinating resources within the administration.

Wiseman, who announced his candidacy July 18, said another of his priorities is to retrain middle-age workers who will be turned out of jobs as industry becomes more modern.

Brooks, who said he will run on his record, said he wants to improve the apprenticeship program as the most cost effective method of training workers. He said he also hopes to expand health consultation services offered to industry under OSHA and to cross-train department workers to speed up investigation of job accidents.

Barnes was to announce his candidacy at a noon news conference in Winston-Salem and a 2 p.m. news conference in Raleigh. He rented a pavilion at the state fairgrounds for a $10 a ticket fundraiser.

Both Barnes and Wiseman acknowledged that any race against an incumbent will be difficult. They speculate it may take more than $250,000 to conduct a campaign.

Brooks, 46, was first elected as labor commissioner in 1976. During his tenure, he has opposed relaxation of cotton dust standards in textile mills and has sought to impose drinking and sanitation rules for farmworkers.

About 20 years ago, Wiseman worked on an auto factory assembly line, in construction and as an elevator mechanic. He was a member of the United Auto Workers and International Union of Elevator Constructors then.

He went on to become chief of the elevator inspection divisions in Michigan and Arizona and to lead the OSHA program in Arizona.

Baptists At Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — More than 10,000 delegates have arrived here for the 103rd annual meeting of the National Baptist Convention of America which begins today.

The 3.5 million-member denomination is the second-largest predominantly black Baptist group in the nation, behind the National Baptist Convention of America, U.S.A. Inc., a six million-member group that will meet in Los Angeles later this month.

The Rev. J.H. Jackson, a past president of the largest black Baptist group and pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago, will be the keynote speaker tonight at the convention's foreign mission board's fund-raising banquet.

On Tuesday, a 500-voice choir will "trace the progress of the black church from its embryonic stages to the present," said the Rev. Albert Chew of Shiloh Baptist Church here, host pastor of the eight-day meeting.

The main convention begins Wednesday morning with an address by last year's host pastor, the Rev. A.L. Johnson of Kansas City, Mo.

The convention president, the Rev. James Carl Sams of Jacksonville, Fla., will address the group Thursday morning. He has served as president since 1967 and is expected to be re-elected.

Conventioneers will discuss a change in convention structure, including adopting a new budget system.

Soviet Official Denies Missile Fired At Jumbo

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. congressman said a Foreign Ministry official here flatly denied today that a Soviet fighter shot down a Korean Air Lines jetliner with a missile and insisted the Soviets "don't know what happened" to the jumbo jet and its 269 passengers.

"It is my opinion after listening to Mr. (Sergei) Chetverikov, who gave the official line of the government, that that line is simply unbelievable," said Rep. William Grey, D-Pa.

Grey, in a meeting with Chetverikov, deputy director of the Foreign Ministry U.S. Department, said he specifically asked if the Soviet fighter which intercepted the Korean plane last Thursday fired a heat-seeking missile.

Grey said Chetverikov told him "that was not true."

A Soviet source said earlier that top Soviet military officials ordered a jet fighter to shoot down the airliner with a heat-seeking missile near the Soviet island of Sakhalin, north of Japan. The source, who insisted on anonymity, said the order was given without consultation with President Yuri V. Andropov.

The official news agency Tass published an account by Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov, chief of the Soviet anti-aircraft defense force, in which he said the fighter's pilot thought the Korean plane looked like a U.S. spy plane.

The Soviet Union has acknowledged only that it fired warning shots at the airliner and charged that it was on a spy mission.

Grey said he expressed doubts in his meeting with Chetverikov that a trained fighter pilot would be able to mistake a civilian plane for a U.S. reconnaissance aircraft and that he told the official he did not believe Soviet radar could not distinguish between the two types of planes.

Chetverikov gave no answer, Grey said. "I asked, 'Did you make a mistake?'" Grey said. But Chetverikov also did not answer that question.

The Soviet source told The Associated Press that Andropov returned to the capital on Friday to deal with the growing world furor over the attack.

The source, familiar with the chain of command, said the decision to fire was made because the military truly believed the plane was on a spy mission. He said the military had proof the plane was spying, but did not say what the proof was.

The source said the plane was not shot down until it was about to leave Soviet air space, after about two hours, because the military at first believed it could convince the airliner's pilot to land and thus retrieve whatever intelligence it might have gathered.

The Sunday Times of London quoted unidentified U.S. intelligence sources as saying they believed the attack order was given by army Gen. Vladimir Govorov, 59, a member of the Communist Party Central Committee and commander of the Soviet Far East region, after getting clearance from by deputy defense minister and marshal of aviation Alexander I. Koldunov, 59.

In the Tass report, Romanov said Sunday the fighter pilot waved his plane's wings, blinked the lights and tried to make radio contact with the South Korean plane before he fired warning shots.

He reiterated Soviet claims that the plane flew without navigational lights and "did not respond to all actions by our interceptor-fighter, whose pilot undertook for a long period repeated attempts to lead the intruder plane to the closest Soviet airfield."

Romanov, who gave the most detailed Soviet account yet of the encounter over the Soviet Far East, said the pilot thought the plane looked like a U.S. intelligence aircraft.

Romanov said the pilot was following rules that allow interceptors to fire "issued weapons" parallel to the course of an intruder.

Romanov said the plane's "outlines resemble much those of the American reconnaissance plane RS-135. Our interceptor pilot made warning shots with tracer shells along the course of the intruder plane."

Romanov apparently was referring to an RC-135, a modified Boeing 707 used by the U.S. Air Force for reconnaissance. The Reagan administration Sunday disclosed that a reconnaissance plane flew through the same area as the South Korean airliner, but was 1,000 miles away when the attack took place.

A spokesman from the Pitt County Sheriff's office said the drowning occurred in a pond near the intersection of U.S. 264 and Old Creek Road about three miles north of Greenville. Friends swimming with Barnhill said he apparently stepped into a deep hole. A call for assistance was received at 2:45 p.m., with The Greenville Rescue Squad reporting to the site. The spokesman said the body was retrieved within about 20 minutes.

The victim is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Barnhill of Rt. 1, Greenville.

Kush Finally Wins First Game With Colts

By The Associated Press

While five National Football League rookie coaches made successful debuts over the weekend, it was a long time coming and more for second-year coach Frank Kush.

Kush, whose Colts finished a dismal 0-11 last season, earned his first NFL victory Sunday as Baltimore had to go into overtime to defeat the New England Patriots 29-23.

Linebacker Johnnie Cooks went 52 yards down the left sideline for the winning touchdown after the Patriots' Tony Collins fumbled on the third play of overtime. It was the Colts' first victory since defeating the Patriots 23-21 on Dec. 20, 1981 and only the second in their last 25 games.

First-year head coaches posting victories were the New York Jets' Joe Walton (41-29 over San Diego), Atlanta's Dan Henning (20-17 over Chicago), the Los Angeles Rams' John Robinson (16-6 over the New York Giants), Philadelphia's Marion Campbell (22-17 over San Francisco) and Kansas City's John Mackovic (17-13 over Seattle).

Two other rookie coaches watched their teams go down to defeat — the New York Giants' Bill Parcells (to the Rams) and Buffalo's Kay Stephenson (12-0 to Miami).

Elsewhere in the NFL, Green Bay turned back Houston 41-38 in overtime, Denver edged Pittsburgh 14-10, Detroit topped Tampa Bay 11-0, the Los Angeles Raiders trimmed Cincinnati 20-10 and Minnesota defeated Cleveland 27-21.

The Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins entertain the Dallas Cowboys Monday night.

"This was a great team effort," Kush said. "We came back and showed a little poise. We had a lot of opportunities to collapse."

The Colts sent the game into overtime tied 23-23 on Raul Allegre's third field goal of the game, a 33-yarder with no time left. New England had forged ahead 23-20 on Robert Weathers' 9-yard touchdown run with 1:09 remaining in the fourth period.

Mike Pagel connected on TD passes of 5 yards and 16 yards to Bernard Henry to complete Baltimore's scoring.

Steve Grogan fired touchdown passes of 73 yards to rookie Stephen Starring and 50 to Stanley Morgan to give the Pats a 13-3 lead in the second quarter and John Smith kicked a 39-yard field goal in the third period for a 16-13 advantage.

Jets 41, Chargers 29

Running back Freeman McNeil rushed for 120 yards and two touchdowns, including the decisive TD on an 18-yard pass from Richard Todd with 6:43 to go in the game, to lead the Jets.

A TV timeout nullified a kickoff to the Jets before McNeil's TD reception. On the second kick, the Jets' Kirk Springs returned it 64 yards.

NBC producer Larry Cirillo said the play was started over because the referee allowed the kickoff before the network gave approval following a commercial break.

New York put the game out of reach with two minutes remaining when cornerback Johnny Lynn picked off a Dan Fouts' pass at the San Diego 23. Mike Augustyniak scored the insurance TD on a 1-yard run.

Todd, who completed 17 of 29 passes for 160 yards, also had a 26-yard touchdown pass to Wesley Walker. The Jets' other scoring came on Dwayne Crutchfield's 1-yard run and field goals of 32 and 27 yards by Pat Leahy.

Fouts completed 20 of 36 passes for 356 yards and was intercepted twice. He had two fourth-quarter touchdown passes — 29 yards to Bobby Duckworth and 33 to Charlie Joiner. Chuck Muncie, gaining 55 yards on 14 carries, scored on TD runs of 1 and 2 yards.

Falcons 20, Bears 17

Steve Bartkowski's 21-yard scoring pass to Alfred Jenkins in the fourth quarter lifted the Falcons to victory. The nine-year veteran quarterback, who completed 14 of 23 passes for 201 yards, also had a 23-yard TD pass to William Andrews in the first quarter.

The Bears had taken a 17-13 lead late in the third period on Anthony Hutchinson's 2-yard run. Atlanta came right back as Bartkowski moved the Falcons 81 yards on seven plays, capped by Jenkins' TD catch.

Chicago had rallied in the second quarter to move ahead

10-6 on Jim McMahon's 8-yard TD pass to Ken Mangerum and Bob Thomas' 29-yard field goal.

Rams 16, Giants 6

Mike Barber caught seven passes from Vince Ferragamo for 93 yards, two going for touchdowns, and the Rams' defense put a stranglehold on the Giants' offense in gaining the victory.

Ferragamo finished with 279 passing yards on 17 completions in 28 attempts and rookie running back Eric Dickerson, a first-round draft choice out of Southern Methodist, contributed with 91 yards on 31 carries for the Rams.

New York quarterback Scott Brunner had a long afternoon, with five sacks and three interceptions. The only bright spot for the Giants was the running of Rob Carpenter, who had 113 yards on 17 carries, including a 4-yard TD run that gave New York a 6-3 lead in the second quarter.

Chiefs 17, Seahawks 13

Coach Chuck Knox's debut with Seattle was spoiled as Bill Kenney keyed the Chiefs with 19 of 32 passing for 247 yards, including a 9-yard scoring pass in the first quarter to Henry Marshall.

Kansas City also scored on running back's Jewell Thomas' 18-yard pass to Carlos Carson in the third quarter and Nick Lowery's 19-yard field goal in the final period.

The Seahawks took a 3-0 lead on Norm Johnson's 35-yard field goal in the first period. Johnson added a 48-yarder in the third period and Jim Zorn completed an 18-yard TD pass to Curt Warner with 3:16 to play in the game.

Packers 41, Oilers 38

Jan Stenerud's 42-yard field goal with 9:05 left in overtime lifted Green Bay. Quarterback Lynn Dickey sparked for the Packers, completing a club-record 18 straight passes at the start of the game, and finishing with 27 completions in 31 attempts for 333 yards and five touchdowns.

Dickey's performance overshadowed that of Houston's Earl Campbell, who scored three touchdowns and rushed for 123 yards. Both players went to the sidelines late in the game. Dickey with back spasms and Campbell, a bruised knee.

Broncos 14, Steelers 10

Rookie quarterback John Elway got a rough reception by the Steelers, but veteran Seve DeBerg came to the rescue for Denver. Elway connected on only one of eight passes, was sacked four times for 26 yards and was intercepted once in the first quarter before going to the bench with a bruised right elbow.

DeBerg's 2-yard TD pass to Ron Egloff with 2:54 to play provided the winning margin. The Broncos' other points came on Sammy Winder's 1-yard run in the second quarter for a 7-0 lead.

Pittsburgh tied the game 7-7 at the half when Franco Harris scored from 4 yards out on a sweep and went ahead in the

Braves Victory Cuts Game Off L.A. Lead

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves just haven't been the same since third baseman Bob Horner broke his wrist against the San Diego Padres on Aug. 15. It obviously hasn't affected Dale Murphy of late, though.

Murphy, who usually bats in front of Horner, isn't seeing the best pitches since the Braves' slugger has been out of the lineup — but it hasn't stopped him from one of his hottest hitting binges of the season in the past week.

Murphy knocked in four runs with his 27th and 28th homers of the year, giving him 13 hits in his last 19 at-bats, to pace the Braves to a big 6-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday. The RBIs gave Murphy 13 in his last 14 games.

The victory, the Braves' sixth in 20 games since Horner was injured, snapped a six-game losing streak for Atlanta, which moved within 2½ games of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West. The Dodgers dropped a 3-2 decision to the Montreal Expos in 12 innings.

"I've just been trying not to be a burden with Horner out," said Murphy. "This isn't any time to give up."

In other National League action, Chicago outscored Houston 9-7; St. Louis nipped Cincinnati 5-4; San Francisco whipped Philadelphia 10-4 and

San Diego turned back New York 7-5.

Murphy's fourth- and sixth-inning home runs, driving in Claudell Washington each time, knocked out Jose DeLeon and handed starter Craig McMurtry a 4-1 lead that he and Gene Garber promptly dissipated.

Johnny Ray's third single of the game, a two-run job, highlighted a four-run seventh inning that put the Pirates ahead 5-4 before the Braves rallied for their winning runs in the eighth. Murphy triggered the rally with a single and scored on Chris Chambliss' double, and the winning run came home on an error by first baseman Lee Mazzilli.

Terry Forster, 3-2, got the victory with relief help from Steve Bedrosian, who posted his 19th save. Jim Bibby, 4-11, was the loser.

Expos 3, Dodgers 2

In Montreal, Tim Lincecum hit an RBI-single with none out in the 12th inning to lift the Expos over the Dodgers. Chris Speier led off the 12th with a double off Pat Zachry, 5-1, before scoring the winning run.

Gary Carter had tied the game in the eighth for Montreal with a two-out RBI-single. Reliever Dan Schatzeder, 5-2, pitched three innings of no-hit ball to earn the victory.

Pirates-NCSU Broadcast Slated For WTBS System

East Carolina University's annual showdown against North Carolina State will be telecast nationally on WTBS-TV, it was announced Sunday.

Kickoff time has been switched to 8:12 p.m. to facilitate the broadcast, which will cover the 50 states, Canada, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The telecast will be the most extensive coverage of a Pirate football contest according to Ken Smith, Assistant Athletic Director for Public Relations.

The announcement came from Atlanta office of Ted Turner's "SuperStation" and followed the Pirates' 47-46 loss to Florida State.

An additional 500 tickets to the East Carolina University-N.C. State football game to be played this Saturday at Carter-Finley Stadium will go on sale Tuesday at 8 a.m. at the Athletic Ticket Office in Minges Coliseum.

The tickets are for the grassy banks in the end zone and are $12. All reserved seats for the game have been sold.

The Quarterback Club will meet Tuesday at 5:30-6:45 in the Pirate Club Building.

There will be a charge of $3 per person for heavy hors d'oeuvres and beverages. Head coach Ed Emory will speak from 6:15-6:45.

"That's a big game for us and not just because the two teams ahead of us lost," said Raines. "We came from behind and it's important for us to win that type of ballgame."

"It's a good sign, a sign that we're starting to play well. Getting a big hit at the right time sometimes is all you need to get you going again."

Cubs 9, Astros 7

In Chicago, Carmelo Martinez hit a two-out, three-run homer in the eighth inning to lead the Cubs to a comeback victory over Houston.

Bill Doran had driven in four runs, three with a homer, to help the Astros take a 7-5 lead going into the eighth. But with one out, Dave Smith walked Keith Moreland and then gave up a single to Dan Rohn, before yielding to Bill Dawley, the third Astros pitcher.

Dawley, 6-6, struck out Jody Davis to gain the second out, but gave up an RBI-single to Jay Johnstone before grooving a 1-1 delivery to Martinez.

Warren Brusstar, 3-1, who worked 2-3 innings before Lee Smith came on in the ninth, gained the victory. The save was the league-leading 24th for Smith.

Cardinals 5, Reds 4

In St. Louis, Willie McGee singled home Lonnie Smith from second base in the ninth inning to lead the Cardinals over Cincinnati.

McGee's hit came off Cincinnati reliever Ben Hayes, 2-6, giving the victory to Jeff Lahti, 3-1. Smith opened the inning with a double, his second hit, and Hayes afterward walked Ozzie Smith intentionally to set up the game-winning blow.

Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, honored by fans during pregame ceremonies, slugged a three-run homer in a pinch-hit role to give Cincinnati a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning. The blow, Bench's 388th career homer, came off Cardinals' relief ace Bruce Sutter.

Skins Host Dallas For Packed House

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will be an early-season showdown as the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins host the Dallas Cowboys tonight before a standing-room-only crowd at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium and a nationwide television audience.

The game will be a rematch of last January's NFC Championship, won by Washington 31-17.

John Riggins, who rushed 36 times for 140 yards and one touchdown will start for Washington along with quarterback Joe Theismann.

Redskin running back Joe Washington, sidelined last year with bad knees, is back and will split duty with Riggins in Washington's single-back offense.

"The key to beating the Dallas Cowboys is to gain three or four yards on first down and not getting third-and-long," said Theismann.

Theismann, who was sacked seven times and intercepted three times by the Cowboys in a regular-season loss to Dallas, came back in the playoffs to lead his team to victory.

"They did things in the first game that they had never done before in a regular season like blitzing nine guys at once," said Redskin guard Mark May. "We changed things for the second game (in the playoffs). If they ever do it again we will be ready."

Tonight, the Redskins will be missing four starters from the team that stopped Dallas last year and then went on to beat Miami in Super Bowl XVII.

Guard Fred Dean has jumped to the United States Football League, defensive end Mat Mendenhall left camp this summer for personal reasons, cornerback Jeris White is unsigned and safety Tony Peters has been suspended by the league while he awaits sentencing on a drug charge.

May has moved into Dean's spot on the offensive line. Todd Liebenstein, who pushed Mendenhall during the summer, has taken over at left end.

Boxer Dies Of Head Injuries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kiko Bejines, a young boxer who captivated Southern California crowds with his aggressive ring style and boyish appearance, has died of head injuries suffered in a title fight.

Already a veteran of 41 pro fights, he was only 20.

Friends and relatives had kept a hopeful vigil at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center since Bejines was knocked out by Albert Davila in the 12th round of their World Boxing Council bantamweight championship fight Thursday night. But Bejines, the eldest of three boxing brothers from Guadalajara, Mexico, never regained consciousness.

He died Sunday morning of massive cerebral contusions, said medical center spokesman Tony Tripi.

On the same day, Bejines' wife, Rosario, went into a hospital in Guadalajara, where she was expected to give birth to the couple's first child.

Bejines, who carried a 37-3 record and the WBC's No. 3 ranking into the bout for the vacant 118-pound championship, had undergone 3½ hours of surgery on Friday, during which a team of surgeons removed a small portion of the frontal lobe of his brain and part of his skull.

The fighter had been hooked up to a respirator, but his heart was beating on its own until he died, Tripi said.

Bejines becomes the third fighter to die from injuries suffered in a championship bout in this decade and the second to die after a fight at the Olympic Auditorium in the past three years.

Ironically, Bejines and Davila were fighting for the title vacated by Lupe Pintor of Mexico. Pintor had fatally injured Welshman Johnny Owen in the 12th round of their championship bout in 1980. Owen died 44 days after he sustained head injuries in the bout.

The other fighter to die recently of injuries suffered in a title bout was South Korea's Duk Koo Kim, who died Nov. 17, 1982, four days after being knocked out by Ray Mancini in a light heavyweight championship match in Las Vegas, Nev.

According to Ring Magazine, Bejines' death was the 341st due to fight injuries since 1945.

Bejines had seemed to have the upper hand in the fight against Davila, a 29-year-old veteran from Pomona, Calif., who was the top-ranked contender with a 51-7 record. Bejines was actually ahead on points on two judges' cards and even on the other going into the 12th round, the final round scheduled.

Neither boxer, however, had been able to land any telling blows until Davila, known more for his skill than power, opened the 12th with a flurry of punches.

A sharp left jab followed by a hard right seemed to do the most damage, as Bejines stumbled backward and into the lower rope. The young fighter, looking dazed, attempted to regain his feet but sunk again to the canvas and referee Wildemar Schmidt called it off just 33 seconds into the round.

The 1983 football season opened with a bang Saturday, although there were also a few fizzles. Among the surprises were Duke beating Virginia, Appalachian State downing Wake Forest and Memphis State topping Mississippi. And one of the near surprises was East Carolina over Florida State. The Pirates came so close and in many ways outplayed their nationally ranked opponent.

There will be those, in the coming days, who will argue that Florida State was not up for the game, but was looking ahead to a meeting with Louisiana State next weekend. They will point to the two previous scores between the two schools.

Whether that is true or not remains to be seen, but we do feel that the Pirates should be given their due. They went up against a team that was very much favored and had the opportunity to come away with one of the major upsets of the year on the very first day of the season.

Breakdowns in a couple of areas meant the difference. Twice Jeff Heath had kicks blocked, once on an extra point and again on a field goal. That meant the difference in four points for the Pirates, and could have meant the game. Hopefully the area that broke down will be brought back to standard by this weekend.

The other key play came late in the game when Kevin Ingram ripped off good yardage down inside the Florida State 40 only to fumble when he was tackled. That turnover sealed the win for the Seminoles. Time remained for the Pirates to move the ball either in or to give Heath another shot at a field goal — and that would have been the game, we are sure.

The biggest question to be answered by both teams remains: were the offenses that good, or the defenses that bad.

The 46 points by the Pirates, by the way, was just three under the NCAA record for the most points in a losing effort.

The defense — if that is indeed where the problem is — must be shored up by Saturday when the Pirates play N.C. State. Then, if the offense is still in the same gear it was Saturday night, things could get a little warm for the Wolfpack.

One thing the State team will probably want to do is keep the ball away from junior college transfer Henry Williams. The diminutive Williams ran back both a punt and a kickoff return for touchdowns against FSU and after that they kicked away from him. Williams, who does flips in the end zone after each score, proved a valuable weapon in the Pirate arsenal.

Despite the loss, it was still a good beginning, one which promises much to come in the weeks ahead.

Lindsey's Victory Leads To Decision

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Lindsey had a tough decision to make. His wife, newborn daughter and final-round 68 in the B.C. Open made it a lot easier.

Lindsey blitzed the par-71 En-Joie Golf Club course with rounds of 71, 64, 65 and 68 to register a 16-under-par 268 and a 3-stroke victory Sunday over Gil Morgan in the $300,000 tournament.

"I have to admit I've had some doubts about staying as a professional golfer," said Lindsey, who was struggling to support his family on winnings of $8,700 through the end of June.

"Now I think I'll stick with golf," he said after collecting $54,000 for his victory. Lindsey, who was 96th on the money-winnings list last year with $45,979, had won a total of $76,513 since joining the tour in 1979.

Morgan, the B.C. Open champion in 1977, combined seven birdies with three bogeys to close with a 67 for second place, four strokes behind Lindsey.

"He played awful steady," Morgan said of Lindsey. "He deserved everything he got today."

One stroke back were Wayne Levi and John Adams, who had final rounds of 64 and 68, respectively. Don Pooley, the 1981 B.C. Open champion, and Mike Reid each shot 69 to tie at 10-under-par for the tournament.

Pat McGowan shaved four strokes from par in the final round to stand alone at 9-under for the tournament.

Lindsey, 31, of Palm Harbor, Fla., had never finished higher than a seventh-place tie on the tour — and said after Saturday's third round that he was playing "the best golf of my life."

Lindsey's top finish this year — an eighth-place tie at the Western Open — earned him about $10,000, which he said went to pay the hospital bills for his newborn daughter.

Morgan, one of the tour's most consistent performers, moved into fourth place on the money list with his second-place finish. He has two victories this year, the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open and Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

Peterson Takes One-Stroke Lead

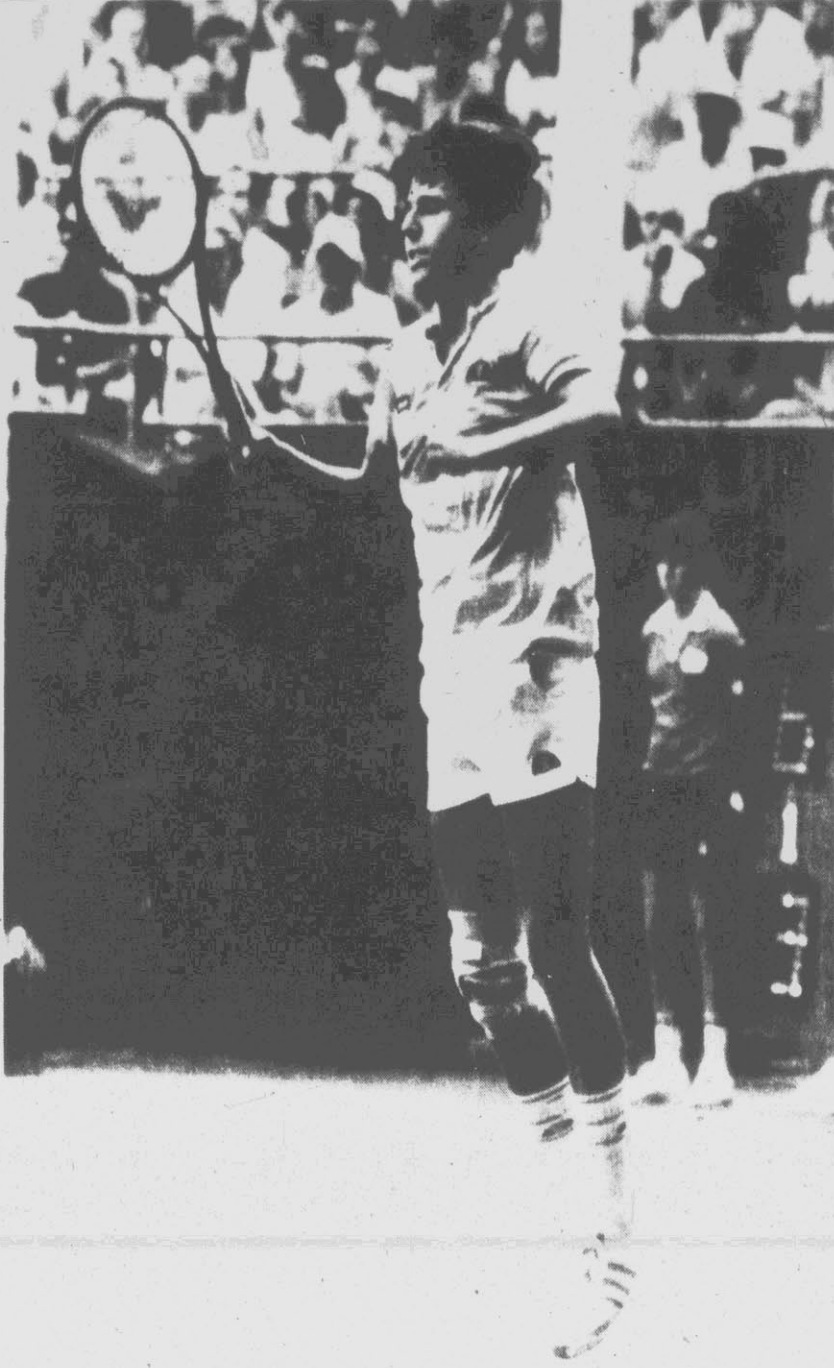

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — With her putting game in gear, tour rookie Lauri Peterson took aim at her first professional title in the final round of the $150,000 LPGA Rail Charity Classic.

The 23-year-old Phoenix, Ariz., resident used three late birdies in Sunday's second round to move one stroke ahead of a pack of four veterans in the 54-hole tournament. She wound up with a 2-under-par 70 in that round and a 6-under-par 138 overall.

"I'm going to give it my best shot," said Peterson. "My putter feels good and I made a few good putts to save par and it really kept me going."

After saving par with tough putts on several holes, Peterson reeled off three birdies in four holes on the back nine of the 6,281-yard, par-72 Rail Country Club.

She bogied the 18th hole, missing a 6-foot putt for par after depositing her approach shot just short of the green.

Groh Knows What Paterno Experienced

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
Wake Forest football coach Al Groh figures he and Penn State coach Joe Paterno have one thing in common. They've both suffered disappointing losses in season openers.

Paterno is leading the defending national champions, however, while Groh is in search of his first winning season in Winston-Salem. Appalachian State made Groh's quest even more difficult this weekend when it took a 27-25 victory over the Demon Deacons as senior linebacker Joel Carter returned two intercepted passes for touchdowns.

Elsewhere in the Atlantic Coast Conference, No. 11 North Carolina marched to a 24-8 victory over arch-rival South Carolina. Quarterback Scott Stankavage completed 12 of 14 passes for 145 yards and one touchdown, while tailback Ethan Horton rushed 29 times for 114 yards.

Duke and Virginia hooked up in an early league clash and the Cavaliers awakened their offense for a surprising 38-30 victory over Duke in Charlottesville. Clemson, in its first game under ACC and NCAA probation, crushed Western Carolina 44-10 as Mike Eppley threw three touchdown passes.

Wake Forest had taken a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on Duane Owens' 25-yard run. Carter's first interception return, in the second quarter, covered 48 yards and came after Groh yanked his first offense in place of the No. 2 unit. On the Deacons' first possession of the second half, Carter caught a Gary Schofield attempt and went 30 yards untouched.

Add two Billy Van Aman field goals and a 12-yard run by Cliff Reid and Groh came down with the same feeling Paterno had — or so he thought.

"I've always wondered how coaches like Joe Paterno felt. I think he and I had similar experiences this week," Groh said. "I don't know how he felt Jan. 2, but I know how he feels now."

Feeling understandably better was Mountaineer coach Mack Brown, in his first game as a head coach.

"To stay in the game, we felt like we needed to be excellent in the kicking game and keep from beating ourselves," Brown said. "We did not turn the ball over and that kept them on the other end of the field."

Stankavage completed seven straight passes en route to North Carolina's victory, but coach Dick Crum appeared more impressed with his defense, which didn't allow a first down until midway through the second quarter.

Sports Club To Hear Walden

Quarterback Johnny Walden of the USFL Boston Breakers will be the guest speaker for the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at the Ramada Inn at noon.

Walden had played in the National Football League before signing with the Breakers.

Seeded Players Fall As Field Narrows

NEW YORK (AP) — The seeded players' cakewalk through the United States Open Tennis Championship ended abruptly Sunday with three of them — Vitas Gerulaitis, Steve Denton and Wendy Turnbull — tumbling out of the tournament.

Gerulaitis, No. 15 in the men's draw, bowed to 16-year-old Aaron Krickstein, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. Denton, No. 13, fell to Andres Gomez of Ecuador, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. Australia's Turnbull, sixth-seeded among the women, lost to Andrea Leand 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

The other favorites prevailed on the sixth day of the $2 million tournament.

Top-seeded John McEnroe remained on his best behavior and eliminated Vince Van Patten 6-1, 6-2, 6-1. Second-seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia continued his methodical march through the field with a third straight three-set victory, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 over Jonny Levine.

Fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France advanced with a 5-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Eric Korita; No. 5 Mats Wilander of Sweden downed Ricardo Acuna of Chile 6-4, 7-5, 6-1; No. 9 Jimmy Arais eliminated Gianni Occhipinti of Italy 7-6, 6-1, 6-2; and No. 12 Johan Kriek fought off a two-set deficit and three match points to defeat Roscoe Tanner 6-7, 3-6, 7-6, 7-6, 7-6 in a match that went to tiebreakers in four of the five sets and lasted 3 hours, 43 minutes.

Among the women, No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd had an easy time eliminating Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-4, 6-0; No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia whipped Kathleen Cummings 6-0, 6-1 in 38 minutes; No. 10 Zina Garrison defeated Carling Bassett of Canada 6-4, 6-3; No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain defeated Terry Phelps 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; and No. 16 Kathy Jordan beat Terry Holladay 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Krickstein sprung the biggest shocker of the tournament, recovering from a two-set deficit to overthrow Gerulaitis, who began playing in the Open when the youngster from Grosse Pointe, Mich. was 4-years-old.

"In the first two sets, I was thinking too much about who I was playing. There was such a big crowd. I never thought it would happen," Krickstein said.

In the third set, he took a 4-0 lead and that's when he thought he might be able to win, despite the dream he had Saturday night. "I dreamt I lost," he said. "Straight sets."

Krickstein had only to think about his first-round experience in the Open to know that a two-set lead is hardly a lock. He was two-up on Stefan Edberg of Sweden but needed a fifth set tiebreaker to win.

Gerulaitis contributed to his own downfall with five double faults, the last one breaking his service and putting Krickstein in position to serve for the match.

"I was playing pretty good," the teen-ager said. "He sort of gave me a lot of double faults at the end. I had a few chances to break him and I was returning serve pretty well, too."

Next, Krickstein faces Noah, whose game seems to be improving as the tournament continues. "This is the best I've played so far," the French Open champ said after defeating Korita. "I'm pleased with the way I played."

So was Leand, who sent Turnbull home. "It was sort of a surprise and totally unexpected, said the 19-year-old, who advanced to the round of 16 for the third straight year.

"I think now it means more to me because I know what prices you have to pay in order to do well. I know if I want to do well, I have to do the hard work. Now it means more."

Next for Leand is Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina, who defeated Pam Teeguarden 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Lloyd struggled in the first set against Maleeva. "I was tentative and she was dictating the points," she said.

But Lloyd took charge in the second set. "It was a question of getting used to her game."

Today, Lloyd was to meet Jordan, who defeated her at Wimbledon earlier this summer.

Washburn Picks Pack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chris Washburn, a 6-foot-11, 250-pound center who was one of the heaviest recruited high school basketball players in the country, announced Sunday he will attend North Carolina State.

Washburn, a consensus high school All-America, spurned offers from more than 250 colleges and universities in deciding to attend N.C. State next fall. N.C. State is the defending NCAA champions.

Washburn, a native of Hickory, picked the Atlantic Coast Conference school over Kentucky and Louisville and Maryland, Virginia and Clemson of the ACC.

N.C. State head coach Jim Valvano said he was "extremely pleased" that Washburn selected the Wolfpack.

"There have been three great moments in my athletic life to this point," Valvano said. "Getting the job at State, of course, is one of them, and then winning the national championship last season."

"Now, with Chris joining the Wolfpack, that makes three."

Valvano said. "I think Chris is among the all-time big men coming out of high school. He can dominate as few have done."

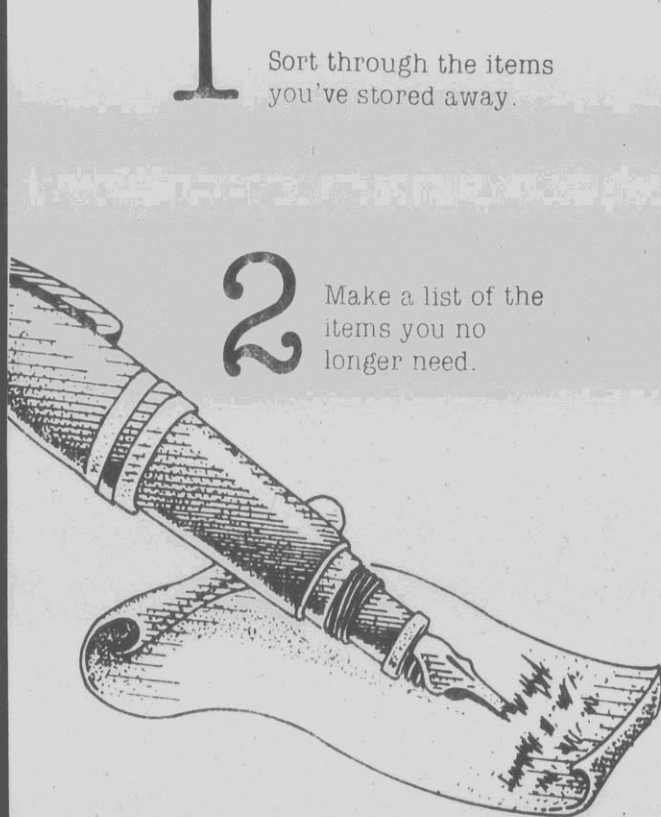

Washburn averaged 19 points and 11 rebounds last season to lead Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia to a 22-5 record.

Whitt, Jays Have To Wait For East Race

By The Associated Press
Ernie Whitt and the Toronto Blue Jays are done beating the teams they need to beat. Now they have to keep winning and keep watching.

Whitt cracked a dramatic three-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning, his second of the game, to give the Blue Jays a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Sunday.

The game marked the final time this season that the Blue Jays played a team from the American League East. Starting today, Toronto, in fifth place in the AL East, eight games behind Baltimore, will spend the remainder of the season playing AL West teams while all six other AL East teams play amongst themselves.

Whitt's game-winning homer, his 15th of the season, went 400 feet and hit the top of the center-field fence before bouncing over, to the delight of 43,156 fans.

"I was watching it all the way," Whitt said of his drive off Aurelio Lopez, 9-8. "I honestly didn't expect it to go out. I've never hit a ball out of center field before."

Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson contended the Whitt's ball shouldn't have been a home run.

"That was a pop fly in any other ballpark in America," Anderson said. "This ballpark is just a joke, the ball just shoots out of here. It was just a routine fly to center."

Countered Whitt: "Sparky's used to playing in Tiger Stadium where it's 440 feet to center. If the game were played in Tiger Stadium, he's right. But we're not there today."

In other AL games, Baltimore beat Minnesota 9-6; California downed Milwaukee 5-3; New York topped Seattle 4-3; Boston defeated Chicago 6-2; Cleveland tripped Oakland 9-2; and Texas nipped Kansas City 3-2.

Toronto's Dave Stieb pitched all 10 innings. The right-hander, 14-11, struck out a career-high 11 and escaped a bases-loaded jam in the 10th by striking out Enos Cabell and getting Chet Lemon on a fly ball.

Orioles 9, Twins 6
Baltimore continued to roll in Minnesota by combining some timely hitting with a lucky bounce.

John Shelby singled home two runs with two outs in the eighth inning, capping a three-run burst that broke a 5-5 tie against Ron Davis, 3-7.

Earlier, Eddie Murray belted his 26th homer and Tito

Landrum got his first on a drive that center fielder Darrell Brown appeared to catch, but then lost when he hit the wall and his glove — with the ball still in it — went over the fence.

Minnesota ended a string of 24 scoreless innings in the fifth on Brown's two-run single off Storm Davis, 12-5.

Baltimore has won 11 of its last 12 games, outscoring opponents 91-31 during that stretch.

Angels 5, Brewers 3
Don Sutton's bad luck continued when he faced former teammate Tommy John in California.

Doug DeCinces drilled a three-run homer, his 17th, to break open a scoreless game in the sixth. Sutton 7-12, has not won since July 14 and is 0-7 in nine starts since then.

John, 10-11, left with two outs in the ninth with the bases loaded and the Angels ahead 5-1.

Reliever Luis Sanchez walked Cecil Cooper to force home a run and another scored on a passed ball before Ted Simmons flew out to end the game.

The game marked the first time John and Sutton, who were together in the Los Angeles Dodgers pitching rotation for eight seasons, had opposed each other.

Yankees 4, Mariners 3
Ron Guidry had pitched nine consecutive complete games going into the matchup with the Mariners.

Guidry came within one out of getting another complete game, but still upped his record to 17-8.

The left-hander exited with two outs in the bottom of the ninth after Steve Henderson's second home run of the game, a two-run blast. Rich Gossage got the final out for his 17th save.

Henderson's eighth homer gave Seattle a 1-0 lead before New York tied it in the fourth on Don Baylor's RBI-double off Bryan Clark, 6-7.

Ken Griffey's sacrifice fly sent the Yankees ahead in the fifth and Omar Moreno singled home two more runs in the sixth.

Red Sox 6, White Sox 2
Bruce Hurst fared a lot better than a lot of other left-handers do against Chicago.

Hurst, 11-10, tossed a four-hitter and struck out eight to lead host Boston. Going into the game, the White Sox were 29-16 against lefties this season.

Tony Armas drove in three Red Sox runs with a triple and a single. Chicago rookie Ron Kittle hit his 30th home run.

Indians 9, A's 2
Cleveland again used a big inning to rally past Oakland and nemesis Steve McCatty.

Pat Tabler's two-run single sparked a five-run fifth inning as the Indians wiped out a 2-0 deficit.

On Saturday, Cleveland scored 10 runs in the top got the win Sunday. McCatty, 5-7, had pitched 19 scoreless innings against Cleveland this season before the fifth-inning uprising.

Rangers 3, Royals 2
Dave Stewart came within one out of his first complete game in the majors, and then watched as Texas held on.

Australia One Win From Finals

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Another victory will give the exotic-keel yacht Australia II the America's Cup challenge finals and a crack at sailing's biggest prize.

"We look forward to matching up tomorrow against Victory '83 hopefully in 16 to 20 knots of breeze," skipper John Bertrand Sunday night after a victory gave him a 3-1 lead over the rival British boat.

"We called for a race tomorrow even though we could have called for a lay day (no race), knowing that the breezes were going to be stronger."

Bertrand gave no indication of worry that his only loss in the finals to Victory '83 was in the same kind of weather — last Wednesday.

"When we came to the United States, we'd done a lot of work in medium and heavy air sail combinations," said the Aussie skipper. "That's why we were confident about that wind velocity."

"I would think the homework we've done over the last 12 months in medium to fresh winds will put us in good stead."

Bertrand commented after defeating Victory '83 by two minutes, 20 seconds, in winds of eight knots that gradually rose to 15 over the 24.3-mile course in Rhode Island Sound.

Australia II, with a secret keel shape kept hidden when it is not racing, led throughout the race, holding a 1:10 edge at the first mark.

The British yacht, sailed by Rodney Pattison and Lawrie Smith, cut six seconds on the second leg and six more on the third. But then the Aussie boat got hot and steadily moved ahead.

British spokesman Jim Alabaster said his crew is also looking for better luck today.

"I think it all goes to point to the fact that we do like a breeze a little bit more than eight knots," he said.

"We like 12 knots and upwards — 17 to 18 knots ideally."

The two are racing to determine which gets a crack at the historic Cup in the championship finals against skipper Dennis Conner and his new boat Liberty, named defender last Friday.

The finals begin Sept. 13.

third period on Gary Anderson's 31-yard field goal.

Lions 11, Buccaneers 0
Ed Murray's three field goals and an aggressive Lions' defense led by lineman William Gay propelled Detroit over the Bucs. Gay recorded 5½ of the seven sacks that were inflicted on Tampa Bay's Jerry Golsteyn and Jack Thompson.

Tackle Doug English sacked Golsteyn for a 7-yard loss and a safety midway through the first quarter.

Raiders 20, Bengals 10
Marcus Allen rushed for two first-half touchdowns and Chris Bahr had field goals of 38 and 39 yards for the Raiders.

The Bengals' Ken Anderson, who completed 26 of 35 passes for 226 yards, was sacked four times and fumbled once under pressure from the harassing LA defense.

Vikings 27, Browns 21
Ted Brown's three touchdowns, including a 10-yard scoring pass from Tommy Kramer for a 24-14 third-quarter lead, sparked the Vikes. Kramer, hitting 17 of 20 first-half passes, finished with 22 out of 33 for 198 yards.

Cleveland's Brian Sipe fired two TD passes, an 18-yarder to Ricky Feacher in the second quarter and 23 yards to Willis Adams with 2:35 to play in the game.

Dolphins 12, Bills 0
Uwe von Schamann kicked field goals of 33, 23, 36 and 50 yards to account for all the Dolphins' scoring. The Bills' Fred Steinfort missed on three field-goal tries.

The Blackwood brothers, Glenn and Lyle, picked off two of Joe Ferguson's passes that led to Miami scores.

Saints 28, Cardinals 17
George Rogers rambled for 206 yards, including TD runs of 76 and 1 yards, to power the Saints to only their third season-opening victory in 15 years of the franchise.

Both teams finished with reserve quarterbacks. New Orleans' Ken Stabler suffered a bruise knee on his first passing attempt and was relieved by Dave Wilson. And the Cards' Jim Hart took over for Neil Lomax at the half after Lomax suffered a bruised shoulder.

Wilson, completing seven of 11 passes for 121 yards, tossed a 35-yard TD pass to Kenny Duckett in the fourth quarter. The Saints' also scored on Wayne Wilson's 9-yard run in the first period.

The Cardinals' scoring came on Lomax' 11-yard pass to Doug Marsh in the first quarter, Neil O'Donoghue's 47-yard field goal in the second and Hart's 16-yard strike to Pat Tilley in the fourth.

Eagles 22, 49ers 17
Guy Benjamin's apparent game-winning TD pass to Dwight Clark with 11 seconds left in the game was nullified because of a holding penalty on Randy Cross and the Eagles held on for the victory in the season opener on Saturday.

Joe Pisarcik, replacing injured Ron Jaworski in the second period, guided Philadelphia to 16 points and a 22-10 lead in the third period. One was a 17-yard TD pass to Hubert Oliver.

Bestball Won In Playoff

Johnny Carrow and Lee Beacham won the Sunday Night Bestball Tournament at Putt-Putt Golf and Games.

The pair won a sudden-death playoff over Jake Loftin and Harold Modlin when Carrow made the second hole.

The two teams tied with combined scores 26-under-par 82 after three rounds of play.

A Number Of New Programs Due To Debut On Saturdays

By JULIANNE HASTINGS
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mr. T, Charlie Brown, Rubik's Cube and Tex Toadwalker, "the Lou Grant of Foggybottom Swamp," all will make their debuts on Saturday morning television in September in the networks' bid for the small-fry vote.

CBS is rolling out a total of five new shows for Saturday morning (the same number of new shows the network has slotted for its entire prime time schedule). NBC will introduce two new programs, and ABC will have three new series and three new "short-form" spots, which will air between the regular programs.

CBS' "The Charlie Brown and Snoopy Show" will be the Charles Schulz cartoon characters' first-ever TV series, although they first appeared on television 25 years ago in an automobile commercial and then went on to do 23 prime-time specials.

Also making the Saturday morning scene will be those immortal chipmunks, Alvin, Simon and Theodore, who will return to television on NBC Saturday mornings.

Sam Ewing, NBC director of Children's Programs, said he was particularly happy to have "Alvin and the Chipmunks" on the network because of producers Ross Bagdasarian and his wife Janice Karman's "commitment to nonviolent entertainment."

The characters first were created by Bagdasarian's father, Ross Sr., 25 years ago and were stars of "The Alvin Show" that ran in the early 1960s. Ross Sr. died in 1972 and Ross Jr. has been working on the characters' re-emergence as "quality children's characters" ever since.

For a man who's so happy about a new non-violent show on NBC, it might seem strange that Ewing is also delighted with Mr. T's Saturday morning debut. But NBC, from Chairman Grant Tinker on down, will always insist that there is no real violence on Mr. T's popular prime-time show, "The A Team," and that it's all just a silly caricature.

Besides, the Saturday morning Mr. T will be a gymnastics coach, not a fugitive from justice, and for most of the show he will be an animated character whose teenage team members get involved in mysteries.

The real-life Mr. T will introduce the program and then appear at the conclusion to point out the lessons that could be learned by watching the program.

CBS will have an hour-long program beginning at 8:30 a.m. ET Saturday that turned to popular videogames for its character ideas.

"Saturday Supercade" will feature "Donkey Kong," "Frogger," "Donkey Kong Jr." and "Pitfall" and "Q-bert" who will be presented on alternate weeks.

"This is not an hour-long commercial because the elements have only a thin connected line to video games themselves," said Michael Brockman, vice president of Daytime and Children's Programs, CBS Entertainment.

The "Frogger" segment will star "CBS' newest Saturday-morning ace investigative-reporter working on mysteries along with other employees of the 'Swamp Gazette,' Fanny Frog, Turtle Shellshock, the photographer who has a darkroom in his shell, and Tex.

ABC last year began airing network TV's first video character-turned-cartoon character, "Pac-Man."

Ewing said NBC "decided to leave the video games to ABC and CBS. Most of the things on their schedules we looked at and passed on them," he said.

When ABC put "Pac-Man" up against NBC's "Smurfs," Ewing said, "the little rascal initially edged us out (in the ratings), but then it fell apart. 'Smurfs' is still the No. 1 show," he said of the little blue characters who air for a whole 1½ hours Saturdays.

Among the new short-form spots that will pepper ABC's Saturday morning entertainment will be 4-minute segments featuring "Menudo," a popular Spanish rock group whose young members give bilingual lessons for learning English and Spanish.

"I'm tremendously excited about our short-form programs because I believe we have maintained our competitive edge but infused some enriching educational values that are even higher than those we've been known for in the past," said an obviously "tremendously excited" Squire Rushnell, vice president of long-range planning and children's TV at ABC.

Another of the spots will star "Cap'n O.G. Readmore," whom ABC describes as "a tap-dancing cat, an educated purrson with an inexhaustible enthusiasm for books and reading."

"He lives in an alley outside a library," Rushnell said, "and his message to kids is read a book and watch TV in your head."

The third new spot is "Zack of All Trades," a disc-jockey who introduces young people to a variety of careers.

As for the new full-length shows, Rushnell seemed proudest of "The Littles," an animated show about little people who live in the walls of big people's homes.

"The Littles" is probably going to be the most openly educational series that has been on Saturday morning for a long time," Rushnell said. "Certainly there have

Bikini-Ripping Prompts Fights On Calif. Beach

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Several men ripped bikini tops off women, prompting fist fights as "things got out of hand" after a beachfront swimsuit competition, police said.

"There was a little street justice," Huntington Beach police dispatcher Judy Young said today, explaining how the men who ripped the bikini tops from the scantily clad contestants were in turn attacked by other men Sunday afternoon.

The fist fights involved up to 200 people, but many of them were unrelated to the bikini-ripping incidents, she said.

"Just about everybody down there had been drinking," Officer Brian Gerald said.

Reinforcements from seven nearby law enforcement agencies helped local authorities quell the melee among some of the 200,000 visitors who jammed the beach, police said.

For two hours, more than 100 police tried to keep things calm after the bikini contest ended and "probably 15,000 people left at the same time from a very confused area," Sgt. Val Birkett said.

"People started getting excited. Things got out of hand," he said.

Police arrested six people for public drunkenness, Ms. Young said. No injuries were reported, Birkett said.

The crowds were drawn by the annual Ocean Pacific Pro-Surf championship and a street carnival as well as the bikini contest.

ABC's "Rubik, The Amazing Cube," will star a little cube with head and feet who has genie-like powers, and there also will be "The Monchhichis," a new tribe of little creatures who live on the tops of trees and are based on another commercial product, "Happiness Dolls."

Other new CBS shows include two animated dog stories: "The Biskitts," pint-sized pups who after the death of the good king must save their days-of-yore kingdom from his evil brother Max, and "Benji," the popular canine who in this new series links up with a 10-year-old alien prince, Yubi, and his C3PO-like robot Zax.

Concert Planned

The Stars of York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church will present Rudy and Cynthia McCrae Tyson in concert Sunday at 3 p.m. at the church.

Rudy is visiting artist at Bladen Technical Institute. A Greenville native, he studied at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and has done graduate work at North Carolina Central University. As a composer, he has performed with several groups, including Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes, Willie Pickett and Shashi Mouso. His latest composition, "Something Special" has been released by United Artists.

Cynthia has been singing since age six. She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and studied under Mary Lou Williams at Duke University. They have two daughters, Kenya and Kimberly.

'Against World'

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Throngs of Iranian pilgrims surged through the streets of the Saudi holy city of Medina on Sunday shouting "Death to America," "Death to the Soviet Union," and "Death to criminal Israel," witnesses reported.

"They were blaring death slogans against the whole world," observed one local resident in a telephone interview. Saudi police watched the protesters but did not intervene, a witness said.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A983 ♥J106 ♦5 ♣A9765
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♦ 1♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—In support of hearts, your hand is worth the equivalent of an opening bid, and partner must have a fair hand for his vulnerable overcall. We incline to a jump to four hearts, but we would not fault you if, because you have only three trumps, you chose the conservative jump to three hearts. If you bid only two hearts, we would bet that you still own the first dollar you ever made.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q98 ♥6 ♦AK10752 ♣Q73
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 1♦ 1♥
2♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—By making a free raise, partner has shown a hand which, for some reason, is better than minimum. (He could have passed with a bare 13 points.) You must upgrade your queen in partner's suit, and your singleton in the enemy suit is a golden asset. We would leap to five diamonds.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9854 ♥Q105 ♦7432 ♣82

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♦ Dble Pass 1♣
Pass 3♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—You don't have much, but consider partner's bidding. His double and jump in a new suit suggests a hand that can take almost nine tricks on its own. You have two trump honors and a ruffing value for him, so it would be cowardly not to raise him to game.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ5 ♥AKQJ6 ♦873 ♣AJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—If you had a fourth spade, the answer would be easy — you would jump to game in spades. Now you can't be sure of the best spot to play the hand, so you should jump to three clubs to create a game force. Should partner either take preference to hearts, rebid spades or bid diamonds, your next action is easy. If he raises clubs, you can correct to four hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ83 ♥Q1054 ♦1072 ♣84
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—We often find that players tend to respond on their stronger four-card suit. That is wrong! Bid four-card suits up the line. If you respond one spade you run the risk of losing a 4-4 heart fit should partner now rebid one no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K9 ♥A7 ♦AKJ965 ♣QJ3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 2NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—We vote for the practical action of a jump to six no trump. Your hand contains no tenaces, so there is no advantage in having the lead come up to it. Partner's hand probably has several tenace positions, and your side might gain a trick by having the lead come up to his hand. You have a balanced hand, and there is no reason why a diamond contract should play better than no trump.

Aim Effort At Dropouts

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A pilot program designed to keep potential dropouts in school has started in 32 middle and junior high schools across North Carolina, officials say.

The program will give seventh-grade students remedial instruction in basic academic subjects and also introduce them to a variety of vocational programs, including business and office skills, auto mechanics, carpentry, brick laying and plumbing.

"Past experience has shown that if you give the kids something they enjoy rather than making them study just English or ancient history, they'll stay in school," said Tom Davis, spokesman for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Davis said statistics also show that school systems with strong vocational systems have fewer dropouts.

"We have high hopes for it," Davis said. "If it keeps just a handful in school to graduate, it will be worth it."

The General Assembly allocated about $1 million for the project. Each school will receive about $31,000 for supplies, equipment, miscellaneous expenses and a part-time teacher.

Students selected for the program have either failed one or more courses, are too old for their grade level or are unable to do the work required for their grade level.

The students will remain in the program through the eighth grade. After that, each student will develop an individual academic plan for completing high school.

Saturday's Cryptiquip — OUR POOR MIXED-UP KID EX-PLAINED, I ALWAYS SLEEPWALK AND DAYDREAM.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: J equals L.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Chilean Regime Relaxing Some Of Iron-Fist Rules

By RICHARD BOUDREAU
Associated Press Writer
SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — For the first time since he seized power a decade ago, President Augusto Pinochet is letting prominent exiles come home and dissidents march in the streets.

When more than 1,000 party faithful staged homecoming rallies over the weekend for two prominent Christian Democratic exiles, police let the crowds march down Santiago's main boulevard shouting anti-Pinochet slogans.

A similar number of Socialists and Communists placed red carnations and heard anti-government speeches Sunday during a rally at the cemetery where Marxist President Salvador Allende was buried after Pinochet deposed him in the bloody coup of Sept. 11, 1973.

Chilean television, closely supervised by the military government, is showing these demonstrations. At least three weekly political forums have been revived by Pinochet's determination to continue a "dialogue" with his critics.

The relaxation is welcomed by a broad spectrum of Chileans, who say they are weary of authoritarian rule, battered by a 2-year-old recession that brought 30 percent unemployment and eager to rebuild what had been one of Latin America's strongest democracies.

"This is like Poland in the early days of Solidarity," said a young opposition activist. "We are being allowed our little 'spring.' But there is a feeling that when the monster is pushed too far, it will bite back."

The Democratic Alliance, which groups the Christian Democrats and four smaller non-Marxist parties, is seeking further concessions, including an abbreviation of Pinochet's term, which has six years to go.

Onofre Jarpa is expected to meet with Alliance leaders Monday in hopes of averting the protest, but the leaders say unrest over unemployment and repression of the previous demonstrations make it impossible to call off.

Drought To Hit Autumn Color

By The Associated Press
Record-setting heat and dry weather that are expected to cause crop insurance payouts of at least $66 million in North Carolina will deprive the state of its normal autumn colorfulness, officials say.

The estimate of crop insurance indemnity payments was made by R.T. Forrest, director of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. regional office in Virginia.

FCIC payments will be an estimated $35 million on tobacco, $10 million on soybeans, $4 million on corn and $2 million on peanuts, he said.

"We expect federal crop insurance payouts this year to exceed those of 1977 or 1980, both of which were years of very severe drought in North Carolina," said Forrest.

Mixed Reviews On Drunk Curbs

By The Associated Press
A sweeping crackdown on drunken drivers which takes effect Oct. 1 will disappoint those who expect it to be a cure-all, say members of the North Carolina legal community.

Convicted impaired drivers also face lost wages and loss of driving privileges.

The general public just doesn't understand," says Guilford County Chief District Judge Robert Cecil. "They think by passing all these new laws, they're going to get all the drunks off the road."

Because the new law does away with plea bargaining, people will be more likely to go to trial, said Martin Bernholz, a Chapel Hill attorney. As a result, attorney fees in DWI cases may jump from an average of $250 to as much as $2,000, he said.

The Safe Roads Act, passed by the Legislature this year, creates a new "driving while impaired" offense and eliminates plea bargaining. It raises the drinking age to 19 and sets guidelines for sentencing, requiring jail for flagrant violators.

Daisy and Cecil disagree over the General Assembly's intentions on jailing drunken drivers.

The law's biggest flaw is its failure to deal effectively with alcoholics, who often are repeat offenders, says Guilford District Judge William Daisy.

"I am not persuaded that the General Assembly wants me to incarcerate a person for as long as possible," said Daisy.

Cecil, however, said it's not possible to "reason with these people. You don't talk someone out of drinking. The only answer for these people with six, eight, 10 convictions is incarceration."

SBI Asked To Aid In Slaying
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to aid Rutherford County authorities in investigating the slaying Sunday of a 12-year-old girl.

Bobby Lewis Sheppard, 21, was charged Sunday with first-degree murder and burglary, assault with a deadly weapon inflicting injury and taking indecent liberties with a child, authorities say. He is being held without bond at Rutherford County Jail.

Cynthia Sue Wilson was found dead in her aunt's apartment early Sunday morning.

Her aunt, Janice Dyer, 23, was stabbed around the throat and was listed in stable condition in the Rutherford Hospital intensive care unit, authorities said.

Three other children, also Dyer's nieces and nephews, were in the apartment at the time but weren't harmed, authorities said.
