Tass Avers Reagan Trying Clear Self

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today accused President Reagan of making an "aggressive, hateful speech" about the downed South Korean airliner and claimed he was trying to exploit the tragedy to bolster his military policy.

The official Tass news agency also asserted the U.S. chief executive was trying "to absolve himself of responsibility for the provocation."

Radio Moscow said Reagan, in his nationally televised speech Monday night, "made bitter, slanderous attacks against the Soviet Union in a bid to arouse anti-Soviet sentiments in the American nation."

Reagan "stressed the need to further reararm America," Radio Moscow said in an English-language broadcast.

Tass, reacting to the Monday night speech, declared, "What happened was the U.S. president's undisguised attempt at absolving himself of responsibility for the provocation staged against the U.S.S.R., while at the same time leaving a 'loophole' for himself in case new facts, exposing its true organizers, come to light."

The Communist Party daily Pravda, meanwhile, told its public for the first time of the details of U.S. charges that a Soviet fighter shot down the Korean plane last Thursday. Pravda said Soviet forces "could have done so" if they deemed it necessary and did not explicitly deny the accusation.

The newspaper said "possible dangerous consequences of such a provocative flight were ignored," and spoke repeatedly of the risks of entering Soviet air space without permission.

It said the Kamchatka peninsula, transversed by the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 last week, is a closed area, "intrusion into which may draw the opening of fire."

The West, Pravda said, is "putting forward the version that

President Asks Strength To Deter More Brutality

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Reagan, avoiding tough economic sanctions in the wake of what he says "can only be called the Korean Air Line Massacre," called for U.S. strength to deter the Soviet Union's "inhuman brutality."

With a tough vote coming up in Congress on the MX missile and possibly others on U.S. military involvement in Central America and Lebanon, the president worked a reminder about the Soviets' "massive military build-up" into his nationally broadcast address Monday night.

"Until they are willing to join the rest of the world community, we must maintain the strength to deter their aggression," he said. Reagan, turning to Congress for a condemnation of the downing of the Korean jumbo jet that carried 269 people, decided not to delay arms negotiations, reimpose a grain embargo or try to halt high technology shipments to the Soviets.

In his speech, he sought to present the United States' case against the Soviet Union for what he said was "the savagery of their crime," and used a tape recording of a Soviet pilot reporting to a ground controller that "the target is destroyed" two seconds after a missile was launched.

At the White House this morning, spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed that the Korean plane "was very close if not out of Soviet airspace" when it was hit by one of two missiles fired by the Soviet fighter. Speakes said the United States did not know whether the first or second missile hit the airplane.

One administration official, who asked to remain anonymous, said Sunday that the plane "may have actually been a mile outside of their (Soviet) airspace when they shot it down."

Speakes said that the United States had moved search and rescue operations to the vicinity, and these units were still on duty in international waters of the Sea of Japan.

In Moscow today, the Soviet Union accused Reagan of making an "aggressive, hateful speech" about the downed South Korean airliner and claimed he was trying to exploit the tragedy to bolster his military policy. Radio Moscow, in an English-language broadcast, said Reagan "made bitter, slanderous attacks against the Soviet Union in a bid to arouse anti-Soviet sentiments in the American nation."

The Soviets have not said their fighter shot down the Korean aircraft as it emerged from restricted Soviet airspace near the island of Sakhalin in the Sea of Japan. However, on Monday, a Soviet commentator in Moscow said the jet fighter that intercepted the airliner "fulfilled its duty" in protecting the nation.

But Reagan said he was offering "the incontrovertible evidence that the Soviets were responsible" for the loss of the airplane.

"There was absolutely no justification, legal or moral, for what the Soviets did," said Reagan.

The president acknowledged that a U.S. RC-135 spy plane operated in the area where the Korean plane had flown before it was downed. But he said the plane was back on the ground, in Alaska, one hour before the Korean plane went down, and declared, "At no time was the RC-135 in Soviet airspace."

"The 747 has a unique and distinctive silhouette unlike any other plane in the world," Reagan said. "There is no way a pilot could mistake this."

A top U.S. official, briefing reporters on the condition that he not be identified by name, said the administration does not believe it can impose sanctions sufficient to change Soviet behavior. He suggested that the way to do that is increase the U.S. defense budget, and strengthen the economy and military alliances.

The reaction from Congress to Reagan's speech was generally favorable. Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate minority leader, said the speech was "tough in tone but restrained in actions." He said he favored the steps announced

Two U.S. Marines Killed In Beirut Rocket Attack

By FAROUK NASSAR

Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two U.S. Marines were killed and two wounded in a rocket attack at Beirut airport today, and Druse-Christian mountain fighting left 134 more dead and 345 wounded, authorities said.

The Marines died in a barrage of rockets and mortar shells fired from a Shiite Moslem neighborhood near the airport, U.S. spokesmen said. They were the third and fourth Marines killed in Lebanon in eight days.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said the Marines later fired two 155mm rounds at an artillery battery that had been "firing at us from south of the airport" at Beirut's southern flank.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the Marines will "just try to improve their defensive positions, and, of course, they are firing back..."

Meanwhile, Christian forces conceded the fall of the central mountain highway town of Bhamdoun to what they called Syrian and Palestinian-backed Druse attackers, the first major Druse victory in the fighting touched off by the Israeli army's pullback to the south.

Police said the latest casualties in the mountain fighting raised the toll to 216 killed and 561 wounded since Sunday when the Israelis evacuated the heights and redeployed to safer positions in the south.

Israeli officials in Jerusalem said Israeli forces have no intention of re-entering the Lebanese mountains unless Syrian or Palestinian forces move into areas captured by the Druse. Meanwhile, U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane flew from Beirut to Damascus in an attempt to get Syrian officials to put pressure on the Druse to stop the fighting.

"They (Druse) have entered Bhamdoun. They are committing massacres and crimes unprecedented in the history of humanity," said the Voice of Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party in admitting the fall of Bhamdoun, 12.5 miles east of Beirut.

Communicates from both warring factions claimed combatants fought hand-to-hand and house-to-house during the battle for the town. A Druse statement claimed the Christians suffered "hundreds of casualties," and that the Druse suffered 10 killed. It said no Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas were fighting with the Druse.

U.S. Businesses Hoping To Hire Near 1 Million

By ROBERT BURNS

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With the economy still showing signs of growing, U.S. businesses plan to hire nearly 1 million more people between now and the end of the year, a new survey shows.

The economy continued to expand in August, other reports show, though at a slower pace than in July.

The business information firm of Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said a survey in July of 5,000 businesses found that hiring plans have picked up since January, when survey results implied a full-year gain of about 2.5 million jobs. That prompted the firm to increase its estimate of job gains for the year to between 3 million and 3.2 million.

Despite the added jobs, however, the national unemployment rate was likely to remain near 9 percent through the end of the year, Dun & Bradstreet said Sunday.

The Labor Department reported Friday that the civilian unemployment rate in August was unchanged from July's 9.5 percent. The rate peaked last December at 10.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Purchasing Managers said its survey of executives in charge of corporate purchasing departments showed that the economy continued to surge in August, led by gains in employment and industrial

To Hear Tapes

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council was called back into session today to hear what the United States says are tape recordings of Soviet pilots attacking the South Korean jetliner that was downed over the Sea of Japan.

The tapes, to be introduced by U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, are 10 to 20 minutes long, said Irene Payne, an American U.N. mission spokeswoman.

President Reagan played a brief portion of the recordings during his national televised address to the nation Monday night.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick scheduled a news briefing after her speech to the 15-nation council.

Other delegates listed to speak at the council session were those representing Japan, the Philippines, Liberia, Sweden and Portugal.

When the debate opened last Friday, the United States and South Korea joined in demanding an investigation of last Thursday's incident and punishment of those responsible.

The Soviet delegate did not confirm that Soviet warplanes downed the Korean plane and called the U.S. allegations a "propaganda display."

In the White House transcript of the tapes, one Soviet fighter pilot reports, "I am closing on the target I have executed the launch The target is destroyed."

Even if the U.N. council votes in favor of sanctions against Moscow, the Soviets could exercise their veto power and nullify the vote.

Two natives of South Korea, both faculty members at East Carolina University, expressed concern today over the Soviets' action in shooting down a South Korean passenger plane last week.

Dr. Young-Dahl Song, an associate professor in the political science department at ECU since 1967, said he feels "deep indignation over the Soviet's behavior."

"My general feeling at this point is that it reminds me of the Korean War of 1950-53. Now the Russian government is gradually coming around to admitting it shot the plane down, but is trying to shift the blame to the U.S.

government.

"It's part of a scheme, I feel, to put the U.S. and South Korean governments in an embarrassing position. Initially, the Soviets were downright telling a lie, saying they did not shoot down a civilian plane, claiming there was no light, no way to tell it was a civilian plane."

"Everybody who lives in South Korea remembers how the 1950 war was started by the North Koreans. Even in those days, the Communist government was claiming that the war was started by South Korea and the U.S., which was a blatant lie, and they still maintain that position."

"This recent incident reveals the true nature of the Communists. They do not hesitate to lie officially even where there is an unlimited amount of incontrovertible evidence against it."

"What strikes me at this point, and it's something I feel people all over the world should be aware of, there is in my opinion no question of their having shot the plane down knowing what it was. It is the nature of their government, the Communist government, the same as it was in 1950."

Dr. Joong Ho Kim, an assistant professor in the math department at ECU, who has been with the university for two years, but who left his native Korea several years ago, expressed "unbelief for this horrible event. Even if the airliner was in Russian air space, it should have been forced down, not shot down. That could have been done."

"There is no way the interceptors could have misjudged the passenger plane for the American spy plane. It's twice as large."

"So far as future political action is concerned, I feel most strongly that international action must be taken that this type of incident or a similar one does not happen again. It's a horrible thing for so many people to die because of a political situation."

Dr. Kim and Dr. Kang both remarked they so far have not received word that any of those on the ill-fated plane were friends or relatives.

Button Collections Combine Art, History And Traditions

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Buttons.

Jacqueline Onassis collects them. So did the late French President Charles DeGaulle. And to M.W. "Freddie" Speights they are a "magnificent obsession."

Those seemingly insignificant clothing fasteners and decorations can put the collector in touch with history and art and traditions now long dead, Speights says.

Collecting buttons has become a way of life for the Houston resident.

These are hardly the plastic mass-produced buttons seen on modern dress.

Mrs. Onassis collects rare French enamel buttons. DeGaulle collected buttons from French Army uniforms. Speights collects all kinds — from an 18th-century button that features a woman's profile made of biscuit dough to elegant buttons bejeweled with carved ivory and precious gems.

What Speights calls "the wide world of buttons" has taken him from searches of a Houston garbage dump to formal trade shows in New York and Canada. He has earned more than 1,000 ribbons from the National Button Society and makes a living trading in the fasteners and other antiques at a Houston flea market on weekends.

Speights organized the Texas State Button Society, which has grown to eight chapters, and he edits a newsletter — the National Button Bulletin.

"Studying buttons really means studying art in miniature, and history and culture," the 59-year-old Texas native said. "They're one of the most important things in my life."

Speights became interested in buttons through pure chance. He was running a successful advertising and publishing business and thought collecting was a joke.

"I used to laugh at people who had hobbies," he recalls.

But business reversals jarred him out of his comfortable existence and led him, he says, to "discover a new way of life."

After holding a sale of odds and ends at a flea market one day in 1969, Speights happened to find a burned button in a garbage dump near his stall.

He cleaned the blackened bit of brass and discovered a rare button from an old Yellow Cab Co. uniform.

Speights said that first button had fascinated him and he returned to that dump, time after time, looking for more button treasures.

"Each time, the Lord washed me up a few more buttons," he said. "I started coming alive again — I had hope."

Speights said he had sold the first button for 5 cents, "and I was surprised to get that. Since then, I've been buying and selling buttons."

Each of Speights' buttons — and he has thousands — has a story of its own.

Some feature delicately painted portraits smaller than 1 inch in diameter. Others boast carvings of mythological figures, and at least 25 feature insects.

Many of Speights' buttons are from 18th-century Europe, a time when the ornamental was more important than the practical.

Although they are not signed, many of the portrait buttons were painted by famous 18th-century artists who were "moonlighting," Speights said.

Speights said buttons are "a new frontier" for collectors because clubs have been organized only recently, and because buttons are relatively inexpensive — he has swapped for many, and paid $200 for his most expensive investment.

Bridge Winners Are Named

Mrs. A.L. Roque and Mrs. B. Wright were first place, North-South winners in the duplicate bridge game played Saturday afternoon at Planters Bank. Their percentage was 618.

Others placing were Mrs. W.R. Harris and Mrs. J.M. Horton, second; Mrs. William McConnell and George Martin, third; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, fourth.

East-West: Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. Beulah Eagles, first with 622 percent; Mrs. William Parvin and Emma Warren, second; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew de Sherbinin, third; Mrs. Bernice Tayloe and Mrs. Clifton, fourth.

Club championship winners Wednesday afternoon included: Mrs. C.I. McClelland and Mrs. William Parvin, first with 592 percent; Mrs. Sybil Basart and Mrs. J.N. LeConte, second; Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, third.

Tied for fourth, fifth and sixth were David Stevens and William Connell, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew de Sherbinin with Mrs. J.S. Rhodes Jr. and Mrs. Roger Critcher Jr.; George Martin and John Sullivan, seventh; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb, eighth.

Club championship winners Wednesday morning were: Mrs. W.R. Harris and Mrs. J.M. Horton, first with 625 percent; Dot McKemie and Ray Gunderson, second; Mrs. Sibyl Basart and Dave Proctor, third; Lib LeConte and Bernice Tayloe, fourth; Gretchen Skinner and Edith Page, fifth; Eloise Gabbert and Beverly Maxon, sixth.

The Saturday afternoon game will be cancelled due to the Unit Grand National Paris Two-Session game in Goldsboro.

The instructor will be freed to concentrate on organization and content writing problems, according to Milton Teichman, Marist professor of English and project director.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There are several occasions in a person's life where new underwear is an absolute must.

And if you have to ask what they are, don't you even dare call yourself a mother.

Anything that has a new beginning is given status by new underwear. For instance, I have never known anyone personally who would consider marriage without buying new undergarments for each day of the honeymoon.

And who among us would have the courage to climb into a car on the first day of a family vacation unless everyone was wearing new? Even if you have the safest driver in the world, you're asking for it.

Probably the one clean underwear rule that baffles mothers everywhere is why do children have to have new underwear on the first day of school?

If you want to be simplistic about it, you can figure your mother dressed you in new underwear on the first day of school and you turned out to be a wonderful person, so why should you deprive your child of all the benefits?

But there is a deeper meaning. New underwear is cheap insurance against anything that can possibly go wrong on the first day of school.

Have you ever seen kids in brand new underwear who hang from their feet on the gym set? Of course not! The only ones who "go public with their panties" are little girls wearing raggy, dingy briefs with a pin holding the waistband together.

And what about the shy schoolgirl who stuffs her entire dress into her mouth? Ever see her underwear? I wouldn't dust the andirons with them.

And we all know who has an "accident" in which the final score is bladder: 2; restroom: 0. It's the boy who grabbed his father's boxer shorts and has a belt around them to hold them up.

You show me a kid in new underwear and I'll show you a kid with his knees together and his feet on the floor.

A child learns faster in new underwear, sits up straighter, has fewer cavities, eats a more nutritious lunch, is more courteous, can jump higher, is more aware of world peace and is usually more successful in life.

The status of what new underwear can do for them carries over into

PLASTIC...Vera Castellone displays her tupperware as Malcolm Kelso stands by. Kelso threw a tupperware party at the Pyramid Club in

New York and Mrs. Castellone did her demonstration. (AP Laserphoto)

A Nugget of Surbia Was Shown: Why? Tupperware Is America

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To the land of magenta hair and mutilated T-shirts, to a club that offers transvestite mud wrestling and African tribal music, Vera Castellone brought a little nugget of suburbia: a Tupperware party.

A Tupperware party at a dingy club on seedy Avenue A in Manhattan's East Village. A Tupperware party where some participants seem to have come from another planet. A Tupperware party for the New Wave.

"I love the product, so I enjoy demonstrating it," said Mrs. Castellone.

On this night, Mrs. Castellone brought with her from Long Island scores of Tupperware products and an indomitable will to sell; she was greeted by men wearing Mohawks haircuts, others in unorthodox costume, and a female impersonator who made hors d'oeuvres with processed cheese.

Mostly, Tupperware is sold at parties at private homes. In 28 years with Tupperware — she and her husband are now distributors for the New York area — Mrs. Castellone says the only club dates she's had were at yacht clubs.

Mrs. Castellone may never have set foot within a five-mile radius of the Pyramid Cocktail Lounge but for Malcolm Kelso, a 32-year-old native of Montreal, self-styled impresario of the bizarre, believer in Home Improvement Products and organizer of the Tupperware party.

"I always like to do something out of context. And I figure everybody needs Tupperware," said Kelso.

Mrs. Castellone, her blonde hair perfectly coiffed, wears a red suit with a button on the lapel displaying Tupperware's new theme: "You're in the company of friends."

"I did this because Malcolm and I are friends. I trust him," she said.

The man she trusts wore a lounge-lizard red blazer to the Tupperware party, along with a chain of tiny Tupperware containers draped over his bare chest. "You can put cocaine in them, diamonds, nickels, anything," he said.

"For me, Tupperware is America, and I love America," Kelso said in introducing Mrs. Castellone. The crowd applauded.

Mrs. Castellone climbed the stage to stand behind a table that appeared to support all of the Tupperware in the world.

"I hope you are comfortable here. I am. Ray is. The warmth of the friends that you make is more important than where you are. I certainly hope that by the end of the evening, we will be friends," she said, to applause.

She said she would not be able to demonstrate ALL Tupperware products ("Awww," moaned the crowd). She introduced her daughter, Claudia ("Hi, Claudia!" they exclaimed). She said she would help them figure the sales tax on their purchases ("How considerate," they said).

For the next hour and a half, Mrs. Castellone sang the praises of Tupperware and dispensed household hints.

She told them how to make cheeseburgers with the cheese on the inside; she explained that she cuts onions once a month and freezes them in miniature containers; she described how she seals each day's leftovers in separate containers, and then serves a "Saturday smorgasbord."

"Don't eat leftovers anymore," she said. "Eat planovers."

"Ohhhhhhh," said the crowd, numbering now about 50.

She explained the Modular Mates, the Chees-N-Butter Keeper, the Wondelier Bowl Set, the Servelier Set, the Pick-A-Deli Set. The audience was agog when she discussed the Crisp-It container, guaranteed to keep lettuce fresh.

"Anybody out there like wilted lettuce?" she asked.

"I don't mind if it's left out of the refrigerator overnight. No longer than overnight, but overnight is fine," said one man, his earring dangling.

As Mrs. Castellone entered the home stretch — the Pop-A-Lot Toy, the Shake Mates — a tall man wearing a blond wig and a quilted gold mini-dress walked in, kissed Malcolm and sat down.

Mrs. Castellone didn't miss a beat; her pitch ended, she drew an ovation.

"I want the soup and sandwich set," said the blond, who is named David Wickstrom but performs as Peggi. "I work a five-day week and I take my lunch, and I think it would be very convenient."

"It was one of the best Tupperware parties I've ever been to," said Stuart Anthony, 21, of Brooklyn. Anthony, who wears small orange glasses and his hair in a semipompadour, acknowledged he had attended only one other Tupperware party — when he was 6 years old.

"I think it was great, very funny," said a bare-chested, Mohawked man who identified himself only as Joey. "I'm not going to buy anything, though. I don't need any of it."

Indeed, Ray Castellone could not hide his disappointment at the business they did — about $200 worth. But he would do it again, he added.

"It was an experience," he said.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please print this again:

"DEAR ABBY: Do you know what it's like to:

"Walk down the street and have a total stranger say, 'You have such a pretty face, it's a shame you're so fat'?"

"Shop in a grocery store and have people watch to see what you put in your cart?"

"Walk into a restaurant and wonder if you'll fit into the booths or chairs? (Or worse yet, go to someone's home and pray there will be a chair that's sturdy enough to hold you?)"

"Squeeze into a theater seat and sit in agony during the entire performance while the sides of the seat dig into your thighs?"

"Lose out on a job for which you are highly qualified because of the way you look? (They never tell you that's the reason, but somehow you know it is.)"

"Be told that someone would like to date you if you would lose some weight?"

"Wonder if maybe you wouldn't be better off dead?"

"Well, I do. I know there is nothing you or anybody else can do about my problem, Abby, but it felt good to get it off my chest. Thanks for listening."

FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE

"DEAR MISERABLE: I know of two solutions to your problem. One is Overeaters Anonymous, P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504. It has chapters in nearly every city in the nation, and a more loving, caring, understanding and supportive group of people you could never hope to meet.

"The other is The National Association to Aid Fat Americans, Inc., P.O. Box 43, Bellerose, N.Y. 11426. This is a group of frankly fat people who have banded together for the purpose of helping the obese to accept themselves as they are. There is much to be said for both organizations.

"When writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope."

Abby, the above letter changed my life. I was also "Fat, Female and Miserable," so I decided to do something about it. I made a choice. I decided to quit trying to be something I was never meant to be: thin!

For 20 years I had tried every diet that came along. I lost and gained and lost and gained. Finally I could no longer handle the feeling of failure, so I went the other route and joined The National Association to Aid Fat Americans.

I have finally learned to accept myself as I am, and I've never been happier. Sign me...

cherished rights is the right to be ourselves, so congratulations. There's nothing wrong with being heavy — as long as you're healthy!

DEAR ABBY: Gary and I have been married two years. He says he loves me, but he isn't satisfied with my body. I'm not fat, but Gary thinks I need to firm up. He lifts weights and has a muscular body, and he wants me to have one, too. It takes time and a lot of work to firm up, but I'm trying.

Gary says he sometimes likes to sleep with other women just for their bodies — not to get serious with. I've been trying to understand his thinking, but it doesn't seem logical to me.

I married Gary because I loved him, and I want to stay married for life.

I will try to firm up my body to please him, but do you think I should give him permission to have other women in the meantime? What if I never firm up?

A NICE SIZE

DEAR NICE: Tell Mr. Muscles that there is nothing in your marriage contract that makes flabbiness a legitimate ground for adultery. Firm up for your health, but don't condone his cheating or it will be the beginning of the end.

DEAR ABBY: The photographer in Fort Myers, Fla., wanted to know why lovers always close their eyes while kissing. Obviously the purpose is to shut out other distractions so that the ecstasy of the moment may be full and complete.

I, too, am a professional photographer, but my problem is not whether couples close their eyes, but how to get them to shut their mouths! In recent years, it seems that more and more bridal couples try to "swallow" each other while kissing. This is in extremely poor taste (pun intended), especially in view of hundreds of guests.

Please print this, but don't use my name, as I'm still in business.

Editorials

A Reason Understood

Menachem Begin, at age 70, is stepping down as prime minister of Israel's multiparty government.

Now frail looking and withdrawn, Begin once was the war horse who led underground forces in terror tactics to move the British out of Palestine. Because of those terrorist activities, Begin was forced by former Prime Minister Ben-Gurion to remain in the political shadows for two decades.

Then, six years ago, Begin literally burst upon the diplomatic scene, winning the Pulitzer Prize for peace after the Camp David Accords put Israel and Egypt on a non combatant stance. His six-year tenure as prime minister, second only to that of Ben-Gurion in length, has been marked by repeated clashes with the Arab world, culminating finally in the invasion of Lebanon and the seeming inability by his government to return Israeli forces to their homeland.

It perhaps was the Lebanese invasion, and the resulting world opinion, that hurt Begin most. There were the massacres of civilians by Israeli-confederates in Lebanon that prompted an investigation and subsequent condemnation by an Israeli commission. Then, too, there was the personal loss suffered through the death of his wife last year, and the national loss of raging inflation that has hit 160 percent annually. He also has had two heart attacks.

Begin, according to friends, has given his explanation for resigning as: "I cannot go on any longer." It is a reason easily understood.

A National Loss

The death of Sen. Henry M. (Scoop) Jackson, D-Wash, has cost the nation one of its most effective leaders.

Sen. Jackson, twice a presidential contender, died of a heart attack last week.

Sen. Jackson's varied views on public issues probably reflected the prevailing mood of most U.S. citizens in that he was conservative on some matters and liberal on others.

His stands on helping the poor and on individual dignity could be classified as liberal. On the other hand he was a hard liner on the encroachments of the Soviet Union and communism in general, and correspondingly he was an advocate of a strong military establishment. He had been called the last of the cold war warriors.

The loss of Sen. Jackson is a major one for the nation.

Tentative Decision

WASHINGTON — A tentative decision has been taken by the Reagan administration that, though intensely dangerous to the U.S. position in the world, is believed by policymakers to be unavoidable: to attack Moslem artillery positions in Lebanon with aircraft from the carrier Eisenhower if necessary to protect the lives of U.S. Marines.

Administration officials privy to President Reagan's thinking are aware a protective blanket of carrier aircraft for the Marine peacekeeping force could antagonize Syria to the point of armed retaliation. The U.S. mood on Syria, however, is hardening. "If the Syrians think we will play patsy, they had better think again," one highly-placed official told us.

Beyond Syria, the prospect of sorties into Lebanon from the USS Eisenhower raises the ominous prospect of fulfilling the Soviet dream of turning all of Islam against the United States. In any direct U.S.-Islamic confrontation, Moscow correctly sees itself as the winner. Israel, America's strong ally against the Kremlin, is seldom troubled by and seeks to provoke U.S.-Arab hostility but cannot be cheered by a U.S.-Islamic global confrontation.

The tentative decision to use the Eisenhower's awesome air power to silence Shiite or Druze Moslem guns aimed at Marine positions in Lebanon's bloody civil war is understandable. No president can sit back and simply wring his hands when American Marines are losing their lives.

"Given the reality of Lebanon today," a senior Pentagon official told us "the U.S. is in a position that truly seems hopeless." The U.S. cannot pull out of Lebanon because of its pledges to President Amin Gemayel. It cannot count on Israeli forces to police Lebanon because Reagan has been beseeching Israel to withdraw ever since it invaded that tragic country. It cannot strengthen the small Marine contingent because that would only double the jeopardy.

That leaves air power from the Eisenhower's flight decks as the president's only option. The Navy planes are his sole means to counter rising political anger in Congress and to give himself a cover against charges that U.S. policy in Lebanon is now bankrupt and that this nation is helpless. But the risks are formidable, in terms of both Syria and the vast Islamic world beyond it.

Syrian President Hafez Assad's refusal to withdraw his forces from Lebanon on orders of the U.S. is regarded in the State Department as a humiliation, a slap in Uncle Sam's face. The fact that Assad is now viewed as the Arab world's dominant leader, thanks to his rebuff of Washington, has hardened hearts against him at the State Department.

Thus, the intent to apply U.S. naval air power is focused directly by U.S. policymakers on Syria. That explains why some U.S. policymakers, without producing direct evidence, are privately blaming Syria for the resumption of civil war in Beirut that has caught the Marines in the crossfire.

In turn, the prospective U.S. response conceivably could draw the Syrians into direct action against U.S. forces. Although the Soviet-controlled, sophisticated anti-aircraft SAM missile sites along the Syrian-Lebanese border almost certainly would not be used against U.S. aircraft, the Syrians have weapons of their own — including missiles — to turn against the Americans.

The reaction of Greater Islam to possible U.S. attacks on Moslems in Lebanon cannot be precisely predicted, but friendly Arab ambassadors here believe it could do irreparable damage to the U.S. No matter what the provocation, it would inflame anti-Americanism and boost Islamic fundamentalists who seized power in Iran and are to subvert pro-American regimes from Saudi Arabia to Egypt. The reverberations would extend beyond the Arab world to non-Arab Islamic countries now friendly to the U.S., such as Turkey and Pakistan.

Ronald Reagan understands these consequences. But the indecisive policies his administration has followed since the invasion of Lebanon have trapped the United States in a prison of impotence. The president is left no choice but to send the Eisenhower's warplanes into action if needed to save the lives of American fighting men, no matter how great the risks for the U.S. in the strategic Middle East.

WASHINGTON — Ralph Sampson, who last year played basketball at the University of Virginia, signed a contract the other day with the Houston Rockets. At about the same time, a writer in the Washington Journalism Review erupted in outrage at such network celebrities as Tom Brokaw and Dan Rather. The common theme was money.

The topic never grows old. Sampson signed for what the papers called a "reported $4 million, four-year contract." The young gentleman was not represented merely by an agent; he had a "negotiating team." With the assistance of legal and tax counsel, he evidently obtained a lulu of a contract. The Rockets will play an 82-game season. Sampson will average about $12,000 a night. Is he worth it? What is his value?

In the Washington Journalism Review, Marvin Kitman raises the same questions about stars of the media. Kitman had seen an item reporting that David Hartman would be paid $2.1 million a year for serving as a host on ABC's "Good Morning America." The last figure he had seen on Tom Brokaw's contract with NBC was $1.9 million a year. Ernie Anastos signed with a local TV station in New York to serve as anchor-man at $750,000 to $1 million over a five-year period. The million-dollar salaries of such stars as Dan Rather and Barbara Walters are common knowledge. Sportscaster Warner Wolf draws "close to $500,000" or five times more than Babe Ruth earned in his best year. "Where are our priorities?" asks Kitman.

"There is something incredibly wrong with a society that pays so much money to a person who reads a Teleprompter and asks some dumb questions — with authority. Teachers, nurses, those who care for the aged — they are the ones who should get the big bucks in society."

This has been the constant theme of Dr. Lois DeBakey in Houston. She is one of the most literate ladies in our land, a superb stylist, a lover of the language, a professor at Baylor College of Medicine. She bitterly resents the salaries that are paid to athletes and entertainers:

"Do these pros invest more time and money than physicians in education and training? Does their work require longer hours or more intelligence, skill or patience than medical practice? Is their performance more socially beneficial?"

These are nice rhetorical questions, but as I have argued before, they are irrelevant questions. So long as we preserve a basically free society, in which values are fixed in a free marketplace, it is pointless to contend that nurses "should" earn more than garbage collectors, that surgeons "ought" to have greater incomes than basketball stars. "Should" and "ought" have nothing to do with it.

Priorities and values depend upon factors that are wholly unrelated to ethics or morals or aesthetics. What is the demand? What is the supply? How many tickets will be sold, at what price, producing what margin of profit, if Valenzuela pitches or Ralph Sampson goes for rebounds? What ratings will a Hartman, a Brokaw, a Rather produce? How do these ratings translate into a per-second charge for network commercial?

It is not true, as I see it, that in an "ideal world" the brain surgeon would have the highest income, followed perhaps by other physicians, presidents of the United States, top engineers, trial judges, great teachers and so on. Such a neat arrangement of values might be "ideal," but it would carry an unbearable price — the price of a controlled economy. We have been down that road from time to time before. We know the disasters that accompany price fixing, rent control, wage control and the like. What regulatory body is wise enough to decree that Sampson is worth $1,000 a night, a heart surgeon worth $5,000 an operation? This way lies stagnation.

No. It seems to me far better, even at the price of what often is perceived as injustice, to leave the marketplace alone. Each of us functions in that marketplace. I once wrote that I willingly would pay $50 to see McEnroe and Connors on a tennis court; I might pay $25 to watch Valenzuela pitch. But basketball bores me; I would not pay 50 cents to watch Mr. Sampson, for all his acknowledged skills. I would mortgage the farm to own a piece of sculpture by Henry Moore; I wouldn't bid two-bits for a Jackson Pollock painting.

So it goes. If the marketplace of basketball says Sampson is worth a million a year, that's his "value." I wouldn't have it any other way.

Campaign Off To Early Start

RALEIGH — North Carolina has the nation's hottest U.S. Senate campaign. It's the New Right versus the New South with big money being raised for both sides. TV ads are already running 14 months before the election day and both camps are slugging it out with the other. The only thing the contest lacks are a pair of official candidates.

Everybody in North Carolina knows that Gov. Jim Hunt is going to challenge Sen. Jesse Helms for the U.S. Senate next year. So why won't the pair of them just come out and admit that they're running for the job?

On several occasions, Hunt has hinted that he's running. But, he and his aides continue to say that a final decision hasn't been made yet. He has a committee exploring his fundraising potential and Hunt insiders say he won't take the plunge until he is certain his camp can raise enough money to take on Helms.

Helms has been a bit more straightforward. On several occasions he's said that if he had to decide on that day, he'd enter the race. Still he hasn't announced and that has some folks in his camp scratching their heads.

Unlike the gubernatorial race, and other statewide campaigns, these two candidates have no great need to announce early. They don't need to establish name identification and neither should face any significant party primary opposition.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press aide, says there are several good reasons for Hunt to wait. The first is that he hasn't decided. The second, obviously, is the governor's recent surgery. The others are tactical reasons.

Hunt already has a job. With the duties of governor to look after, he doesn't have time to campaign, so why declare? If he declares himself a candidate now, he opens himself to charges that he's neglecting his duties during the final 16 months of his term.

Pearce also believes the voters don't want the campaign to start yet. "People will get sick of this. I think that's one thing that's already hurting Senator Helms with those ads he's running. People get sick of them."

Finally, there's the money problem for Hunt. He's expected to raise a lot of it but not anywhere near as much as Helms. Therefore, an announcement now and the early start of the campaign plays into

Helms' strength. Hunt would have to begin spending and he'd stretch himself too thin. The Hunt folks feel they're better off waiting and holding onto their money. They can do this because the polls show Hunt with a large lead. It's up to Helms to spend more now to try to narrow that gap.

Helms also has a job — one that keeps him out of the state. "The senator will want to announce at a time when he can spend some time here. Maybe a week," one source in his camp said. An announcement tends to fire up one's camp and Helms wouldn't want to miss the opportunity to put that momentum to good use.

But Helms, by delaying his announcement, is probably costing himself some money. As a National Congressional Club source explained, advertising rates for declared candidates are generally lower than those charged for issue advertising. Helms, who is advertising now, is paying the "issue ad" rate. And, on several occasions, his aides have been rejected or edited by broadcast stations. Stations have much less discretion to accept and/or edit ads from a declared candidate.

If Helms wants to make his announcement when he's got a full week to be home, that means he'll probably wait until Thanksgiving or later. Hunt might even wait a little longer. His folks really want to hold off as long as they can. A guess is that his announcement will come in December.

Strength For Today

Centuries ago missionaries went out from Rome to cover the wild tribesmen of Western Europe. It was said of these tribesmen that they were quite willing to be baptized provided their right arms were left unbaptized. With that arm they could smite their enemies and be as un-Christian as they wanted to be.

"They were perfectly willing that all of them be baptized and sanctified, provided one part of their body be left free to be used as they wanted to use it.

The idea of giving certain areas of our lives to the Lord and reserving other areas for ourselves is a common practice in the lives of many of us. Often people want to give their hearts to God provided it will not involve too much personal sacrifice or the renunciation of some deeply cherished weakness.

God is always ready to forgive our sins, but he is never ready to allow us to commit part of our lives to him and retain certain other areas for ourselves.

—Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer—

IRS Test Is 'Shocking'

Most adults probably suspect that their names, addresses, estimated incomes (calculated through home and car ownership figures, for example) and more are already recorded on numerous computer files, both public and private. In fact, more than a dozen companies routinely cull and sell such lifestyle data, covering almost every adult American, to retail houses, financial institutions and other marketing firms.

Like many mail-order companies or political fundraisers, the IRS would ingest commercially-available data into its own computers. Unlike the others, however, it wouldn't selectively target a market but simply match estimated income figures with each household's tax payments. Those households that seem to come up short by comparison would warrant further investigation.

Yet even today's computerized world presents the IRS with some inescapable questions: How and when will the government know that its newly-purchased information is sufficiently accurate? How will it respect the rights of a taxpayer flagged by under-or over-estimated income?

Meanwhile, if the IRS successfully sticks its nose into the private lives of average Americans, will other agencies, with other agendas, follow suit? As the Education Department has demonstrated in threatening to deduct student loan payments from the paychecks of federal workers who've defaulted on their student loans, computer listings can be useful tools when traditional channels lead nowhere.

Dr. Jack Davies, an infection control proctioneer and environmentalist at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, spoke about the impact of infectious and communicable diseases in the work place and Sara Krantz, a registered nurse who heads the department of epidemiology and environmental control at PCMH, presented information about communicable diseases.

The civic organization holds its meetings on the first Thursday of each month. Membership is open to businesses and individuals. The next meeting is scheduled for Oct. 6 at 12:30 p.m. at Greenville Country Club.

Freshman Reports Rape

Greenville police are looking for a man who forced a 17-year-old East Carolina University freshman behind an office at the University Professional Center at 608 E. 10th St. Friday night or early Saturday morning and raped her.

Acting Police Chief John Briley said the victim told investigators she was walking along 10th Street Friday night when a man came up behind her and grabbed her around the chest and face. The chief quoted the victim as saying her assailant forced her behind one of the professional center's buildings, undressed her and then assaulted her.

After the assault, Briley said the woman ran to a near-by restaurant where employees called police about 1:15 a.m. Saturday.

Briley said a near-by resident told of seeing a man standing in the area earlier, then seeing the same man running about the time police arrived at the scene.

Collision Investigated

Cars driven by Robert James Flanagan of 235 Churchill Drive and Cheryl Diane Minck of 621 Fletcher Dorm collided about 6:20 p.m. Monday at the intersection of Fourth and Hickory streets.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $1,500 to the Flanagan car and $400 to the Minck auto.

Housing Authority Session Canceled

The September meeting of the Greenville Housing Authority will not be held tonight due to lack of a quorum. The authority will meet again on Oct. 3.

Hit-And-Run Truck Sought

Greenville police are looking for a truck — and the driver — involved in a hit-and-run collision on Greenville Boulevard, 248 feet west of the Arlington Boulevard intersection about 6 p.m. Monday.

Officers said the truck pulled from a service station parking lot and collided with a car driven by Jane Lanier Brown of Winterville, causing $800 damage to the car, then left the scene.

Williamston Board Seeks Hearing

The Williamston Town Board has gone on record favoring a public hearing to receive comments on the proposed new one-half cent local sales tax. While not expressing direct support of the tax itself, board members said they believed the opinion of the public should be determined.

Earlier, members of the Martin County Board of Commissioners voted to not consider the tax proposal. The half-cent local sales tax can only be implemented by the County Commissioners by direct action or after a referendum.

Driver Charged With Possession

Charles Herbert Chauncey, 19, of Route 5, Greenville, was charged with possession of marijuana Sunday night after officers stopped a vehicle he was driving and discovered a half-ounce of marijuana inside.

Acting Police Chief John Briley said the arrest was made about 11:15 p.m. in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets.

Man Charged For Sex Offense

Greenville police reported today that Jonathan Chaffen Abbott, 25, of 409 Elizabeth St. was arrested Saturday on second-degree sex offense charges following an incident in an East-Greenville apartment.

Acting Police Chief John Briley said Abbott was charged after a man allegedly entered an apartment of a 19-year-old woman, forced her into a closet where he pulled her bathingsuit off and fondled her before leaving the house.

Bond for Abbott was set at $1,000.

City Radio Guests Announced

City Manager Gail Meeks announced that the guests on the "City Hall Notes" radio program this week will be Lucille Sumrell and Charles Vincent of the Recreation and Parks Department.

Ms. Sumrell will discuss the fall arts and crafts program and Vincent will preview the fall recreation schedule.

The program is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

Burglary Of Home Investigated

Greenville police are investigating a burglary at 402 East Fourth St. that was reported at 11:51 a.m. Sunday, Acting Police Chief John Briley said today.

Briley said an intruder entered the front door of the home of Brian Lamont Harris while Harris, his wife and daughter were on the second floor, and took $6 in cash, a calculator valued at $30 and three pocketbooks, valued at $54.

Two of the purses were recovered later Sunday in a dumpster at the Town Commons, Briley said.

Is it going too far to suggest that, in today's complex financial world, your bank's attitude could possibly make a difference? We don't think so.

In fact, at BB&T, we think attitude is all-important. We don't mean a superficial cheerfulness, a smile worn like a suit and as easily removed.

Attitude, for us, goes much deeper than that. It takes in the ability, and even more important, the willingness to commit our talents to meet your future goals as well as your current needs.

It rests on the integrity of a company that still believes it is driven by the needs of its customers, rather than its own corporate objectives. A company that realizes that the quality of its service is inseparable from the attitude of its people.

Come discover what a difference the right attitude makes. At BB&T, it's the very thing that makes us more than a bank.

Glen Cove And Soviet 'Truce'

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — This suburban city has called a cease-fire in its battle against a recreational retreat for Soviet diplomats, promising to protect the estate in the wake of unruly protests over the downing of a Korean jetliner, the mayor says.

Mayor Alan Parente revealed Sunday that he had promised 24-hour police surveillance of the Soviet Union's United Nations Mission retreat several hours after Korean demonstrators stormed the compound's wrought-iron gates that morning.

Parente said the negotiations that led to the assurances of police protection came during a meeting at the retreat, a 49-room mansion at a 36-acre compound.

"It's the first time I've ever been inside," he said. "I certainly had an uncomfortable feeling. I don't think I'm a person who's considered welcome there."

Parente's previous dealings with the Soviets have been adversarial. The mayor has demanded that the diplomats pay taxes on the exempt property, barred the Soviet staff from Glen Cove recreational facilities and charged that the compound is used for spying on Long Island industries.

The mayor met with two members of the Soviet ambassador's staff after some 70 Korean protesters, demonstrating against the Soviet Union's destruction of a Korean Air Lines jet with 269 people aboard, burst through the gates of the estate and marched up to the lawn of the mansion. Five police officers were slightly injured in the scuffle to crash through the gate.

Parente said the demonstration had angered the Soviets, and "they were going to protest to the State Department and the U.N."

The mayor said Glen Cove police will maintain surveillance of the estate "until the emotions die down."

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Happy with Challenger's "fabulous" flight and eager to do it again, the five shuttle astronauts rested at home today and tried to readjust sleep schedules turned upside down during their six-day mission.

The astronauts, who returned to earth Monday, praised their "wonderful machine" which now gets a breather as its sister ship, Columbia, prepares for a flight next month with a European research facility in

Faison Will Honor A Son

FAISON, N.C. (AP) — Faison residents are planning another celebration to honor the return to Earth Monday morning of William E. Thornton, the oldest astronaut and first North Carolina native to go into space.

Thornton, 54, who returned on the space shuttle Challenger, also was the second physician to fly on a shuttle mission specifically to study space sickness.

On Aug. 30, the day Thornton and his four fellow astronauts guided the shuttle on its eighth mission, Faison residents held a liftoff party. Residents told reporters then, "this is just a little party. Wait until you see the next one we're going to have after the trip."

Faison resident Ann Taylor watched Monday morning as the Challenger landed at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

"We were really thrilled that he had a safe landing," she said, adding that Thornton probably will come to Faison in a few weeks.

Mrs. Taylor said a party committee set up last week was working with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which is coordinating Thornton's activities for the next several months.

"We plan to have a big dinner for him with the whole town attending," she said. "We might have barbeque. William likes barbeque."

its payroll.

On the nearly flawless eighth shuttle flight, the Challenger's success with a variety of experiments and with launch and landing in darkness prompted the crewmembers to speak of a hopeful future for the space plane.

"It will be doing some very good work over the next 15 years," said mission specialist Guion S. Bluford Jr., the first American black in space, who said the flight was "a fabulous experience."

Said 54-year-old Dr. William Thornton, the space traveler, "It's a wonderful thing. More and more people will be going where we went in the future."

President Reagan, who welcomed the Challenger crew home with a telephone call, said the flight showed the shuttle "will be the dependable workhorse for all space applications."

Mission commander Richard Truly brought the 100-ton Challenger drifting out of the night sky to a featherlight touchdown at 3:40 a.m. EDT on a pool of light on a concrete strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. The flight started Aug. 30 at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"That was fun," said Truly as the spacecraft rolled to a halt. "Let's do it again."

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, boss of the shuttle program, called the flight of the Challenger "the cleanest mission yet."

The crew launched a communications-weather satellite for India, used Challenger's robot arm to move a four-ton weight about in space, completed a complex series of medical tests, processed live pancreas cells in a pharmaceutical process that may help conquer diabetes, and successfully checked out the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite that is vital to the Oct. 28 flight on Columbia of the European Spacelab.

The astronauts were welcomed at Edwards by a crowd of invited guests and again at the Johnson Space Center by about 300 fellow astronauts and space workers.

The astronauts start five days of debriefing Wednesday that conclude Sept. 13 with a news conference.

Reagan said the nighttime launch and landing showed the craft "is capable of operating under most any condition."

Reagan also joked that when the shuttle lands in California, "why don't you on the last lap pick me up on the way by Washington."

"Yes, sir," replied Truly with a grin, "we do keep promising that, don't we?"

"I don't know if we could get the South Lawn ready," said Reagan.

At ceremonies at Edwards, Truly called the Challenger "the real hero." He said the craft was in a hangar being prepared for a ferry ride Thursday or Friday atop a 747 jet back to the Kennedy Space Center.

Thornton, who made his first flight after 17 years as an astronaut, observed, "once in a while, life treats us even better than we think we deserve to be treated."

The other two crewmen, Dale Gardner, a mission specialist, and Dan Brandenstein, a pilot, thanked Johnson Space Center workers.

"Every time we put our hands on a switch ... it was with every confidence that it would work," said Gardner. He praised "the wonderful machine and the great training" the crew received.

Abrahamson said that Challenger experienced only 18 problems. He said most of his concern was over a malfunctioning toilet that has failed on each flight. Its design is to be reviewed.

The satellite launched for India was having difficulty Monday in deploying solar array panels that provide it with electric power. But its American manufacturer, Ford Aerospace, expressed confidence that it would begin working properly.

Extra Harbor Security For Soviet Cargo Ship

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coast Guard officials prepared extraordinary precautions for the unloading of a Soviet cargo ship in Los Angeles Harbor because of telephoned threats and plans for anti-Soviet demonstrations, a port spokesman said.

"Everybody's pretty goosey about anything that could lead to a violent situation where there could be international repercussions," Port of Los Angeles spokesman Lee Zitko said before today's scheduled unloading.

The exact time and location of the arrival of the ship, which remained at anchor three miles off Long Beach on Monday, were being kept secret, said Coast Guard Lt. j.g. Hale Simonds.

A 100-yard "safety zone" around the ship was planned during the unloading, he added.

The protective actions followed two telephone threats made against the ship last week, apparently because of the Soviet Union's downing of a South Korean airliner with 269 people aboard.

A Los Angeles television station notified the Coast Guard that a group calling itself the "Anti-Soviet League" had contacted the station and promised to conduct demonstrations if the ship was permitted to dock, Simonds said.

The Coast Guard precautions — outlined Monday by Simonds — included preventing Soviet sailors from leaving the freighter Novokuibyshevsk during the unloading.

He added that the company that chartered the ship would pay dockworkers overtime wages in order to get the ship unloaded and out of the harbor as quickly as possible.

A Coast Guard cutter maintained a protective vigil around the Novokuibyshevsk on Monday.

The 492-foot freighter is based in Leningrad. The lumber-laden ship was scheduled to unload and then take on a cargo of cotton and cardboard before proceeding to its unspecified destination.

The Coast Guard's Long Beach office received an anonymous call late Thursday from a man who said that "dock handlers working Soviet vessels will drop equipment in the water and on Russian officers."

On Friday, another unidentified caller said, "Pass this up and down the coast: Any Russian ships that are wharfed — there's going to be a lot of dead people. We don't want them in our ports."

Simonds said that representatives of the Crescent Wharf and Warehouse Co., which supplies dockworkers for the unloading of vessels, told Coast Guard officials that they "hadn't heard of any problems (with the longshoremen) but you never could tell."

David Cook, a spokesman for Williamson Dimond and Co., U.S. agents for Scan-Pac, the Scandinavian company that chartered the ship, declined comment Monday.

School Board Hired A Felon

PLEASANT PLAINS, Ark. (AP) — School board members who last month hired a felon as superintendent have become targets of a parents' group that wants to oust both the board and the superintendent.

The parents are circulating a petition calling for resignations from the five-member board, which "caused the whole problem by hiring a criminal" for the job, group chairman Raymond Morris said Monday.

Douglas Adams, the new superintendent, is a former banker who served seven months in a federal prison for obtaining illegal loans.

School board member Don Stewart said neither he nor any other member planned to resign. He said Adams had impressed the board with his public relations skills and contacts and "deserved a chance."

Streater Named Coordinator

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Steve Streater, a former University of North Carolina football standout who was paralyzed in a car accident, has been hired as state coordinator for Students Against Drunk Driving.

Streater, 24, began work Sept. 1 in the program, which is aimed at educating young people about the hazards of drinking and driving.

The Sylva native was hired by the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt.

In April 1981, just hours after he had signed a free-agent's contract with the NFL's Washington Redskins, Streater was left paralyzed from the chest down after his car overturned on a slippery road near the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

Charge Woman In Gun Death

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A Burke County woman was charged Monday with first-degree murder in the shooting death of her husband, Frankie Wilson Bradshaw, sheriff's officials said.

Burke County Sheriff's Sgt. David Penley said Evelyn Freshour Bradshaw, 41, of Morganton, was being held without bond in the jail pending a first appearance Tuesday morning in 25th District Court.

Bradshaw, 40, died of a single bullet wound to the head from a .32 caliber weapon, Penley said.

Grand Jury To Study Charges

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A special grand jury will convene Tuesday in Columbus County Superior Court to consider charges stemming from staged motor vehicle accidents and mobile home fires.

Court officials said the grand jury would be asked to consider more than 100 bills of indictment charging 10 or more persons with insurance fraud and arson.

President...

by the president, but he repeated his call for a suspension, at least temporarily, of the U.S. agreement to sell grain to the Soviet Union.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the president offered "the right response." And Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., said the president was "relentless in his forceful push for Soviet apology, payment to victims and international action which will embarrass and push the Soviets without inflicting equal harm on other countries."

One of the most conservative members of Congress, Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., was aboard the Korean airliner and his wife said, "I'm angry and I want some action."

Administration officials, anticipating opposition from conservative allies, defended the president's steps even before he spoke.

One said that Reagan had to avoid serious sanctions because "people get worked up about it and go back to being isolationists four or five weeks later. If you do what they demand, they'll give you your head on a platter for what you do in the heat of the moment."

Another source said that in debate among Reagan's top advisers, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger favored stronger measures against the Soviets, but Secretary of State George P. Shultz prevailed.

The 16-minute speech from the Oval Office, used tough language to characterize the downing of the aircraft.

"This crime against humanity must never be forgotten, here or throughout the world," he said.

Five times he used the word "massacre" to describe the reported attack in which all 269 people aboard the airplane were killed.

"Our immediate challenge to this atrocity is to ensure that we make the skies safer and that we seek just compensation for the families of those who were killed," Reagan said.

"It would be easy to think in terms of vengeance, but that is not a proper answer. We want justice and action to see that this never happens again," the president said.

"It was an act of barbarism, born of a society which wantonly disregards individual rights and the value of human life," he declared. "We shouldn't be surprised by such inhuman brutality" on the part of the Soviets.

He said he would ask the Congress, now ending its summer recess, to pass a joint resolution condemning "this Soviet crime."

"The United States will be making a claim against the Soviet Union within the next week to obtain compensation for the benefit of the victims' survivors," the president said. "Such compensation is an absolute moral duty which the Soviets must assume."

Among the steps announced by Reagan were:

— Cancellation of a transportation agreement, suspended for nearly four years already to protest the Soviet role in Afghanistan, which deals with future methods of transportation, bridge and tunnel construction, railroads, highway safety, transport of hazardous material, and civil aviation.

— The playing today in the U.N. Security Council of a complete tape recording of the Soviet pilots' reports to ground controllers.

— Reaffirmation of a previous order denying Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, of the right to fly to the United States. All Aeroflot flights here were canceled as part of the sanctions imposed after the crackdown in Poland.

— Suspension of talks intended to lead to the opening of a U.S. consulate in Kiev and a Soviet office in New York.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Defense Ministry has told female members of the armed forces to wear civilian clothes when they are more than three months pregnant.

The reason? Budget cuts have left no room to design military maternity wear, according to Defense Minister Alfred Vreven.

Soviet Air Travel Sanctions Will Require Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will need help from other nations and private organizations to carry out his call to exclude the Soviet Union as a "member of the international civil air community."

Reagan used a nationally broadcast address Monday night to outline a variety of actions against the Soviet Union in retaliation for "the savagery of their crime" in reportedly shooting down a South Korean jetliner carrying 269 passengers that strayed over Soviet territory last week.

Prominent among the actions were sanctions against Soviet air travel.

But the United States alone can do little to restrict the Soviet Union's commercial aviation activities through its national airline, Aeroflot. Only a suspension of landing rights and actions taken in cooperation with other nations could have a significant impact.

"We are cooperating with other countries to find better means to ensure the safety of civil aviation and to join in not accepting Aeroflot as a normal member of the international civil air community unless, and until, the Soviets satisfy the cries of humanity for justice," Reagan said.

Reagan limited himself to generalities during his address and administration officials have said talks are still continuing with other countries to determine what specific actions will be taken.

Reagan said the United States would continue its ban against allowing scheduled Soviet aircraft to land at U.S. airports and forgo renewal of other transportation agreements.

Hours before Reagan's speech, Canadian Foreign Secretary Allan MacEachen announced his country was suspending landing and severely restricting refueling privileges for Aeroflot for 60 days to protest Moscow's failure to fully explain its role in the destruction of the Korean airliner.

Transport Minister Lloyd Axworthy said Aeroflot planes would be allowed to make "odd, occasional" refueling stops at Gander, Newfoundland — apparently to be granted on a case-by-case basis.

Aeroflot has had two weekly round-trip flights between Moscow and Montreal, and uses the Gander airport as a refueling stop on flights to Havana, Cuba.

Aeroflot also flies to Mexico City, but without the ability to make the refueling stop in Canada it would appear that Aeroflot's North American operations could not be continued.

Aeroflot has been prohibited from landing in the United States since December 1981, action taken to protest the imposition of martial law in Poland. Reagan renewed that prohibition Monday night.

Pan American airlines and Aeroflot began flights between Moscow and New York in 1968. But Pan Am dropped the service in 1978 saying the route was unprofitable.

Aeroflot kept its twice-weekly flights to New York, and on to Washington, until the suspension in 1981.

Since last June, however, special unscheduled flights between the United States and the Soviet Union have been allowed to transport ambassadors and other dignitaries.

No U.S. carriers fly into the Soviet Union.

Given the existing absence of flights directly between the two countries, unilateral action by the United States against Moscow would have no impact.

Thus, the United States is seeking a coordinated international effort.

The Soviet government requires all citizens traveling outside the country to fly Aeroflot. Cargo and diplomatic pouches also are sent via Aeroflot.

"If you take that away, that means they're going to have to fly foreign flag, and that's going to be expensive" and a political "slap in the face," said a State Department official who asked not to be quoted by name.

The official added that the suspension of landing rights costs each participating country very little individually, but would have a great cost to Moscow.

Meanwhile, an airline industry source, also asking not to be identified, said an international union boycott of Aeroflot could be the most effective action of all.

"Union mechanics could give them (Aeroflot) a real problem," the source said. "If they couldn't come into London and Paris, two very important hubs for them, and be serviced, that could give them problems."

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland has indicated that such action is a possibility.

"The U.S. will support appropriate measures by international non-governmental groups in their efforts to isolate Soviet aviation," said a White House fact sheet distributed in connection with Reagan's address.

"Various labor organizations are already considering ways to restrict support for Aeroflot flights, such as ground operations and services," the fact sheet said.

Mice Near Love Canal Affected

NEW YORK (AP) — Field mice living along the Love Canal toxic waste site in Niagara Falls have half the life expectancy of mice living a mile away, according to a four-year study.

While the cause of the shortened life span has yet to be determined, the livers of the mice showed the typical response to toxic chemicals, according to a report on the study by John H. Christian, a professor at the State University of New York at Binghamton.

Homes built on top of the covered dump were evacuated in 1978. A 1982 federal study suggesting that the site was safe for humans has been challenged by other researchers.

Christian's report, in the October issue of Natural History magazine, said the mice also showed signs of damage to other organs.

Fasters Face Risk To Lives

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Four people entering the second month of a fast to protest the nuclear arms race could face a "life-risking crisis" within a week or two, a doctor says.

The four, who have lost 19 to 38 pounds apiece, have no plans to end the "Fast for Life" until they see significant movement toward nuclear disarmament, said protester Charles Gray.

Dr. Linda Hole is monitoring the four. Four people in Paris and three in West Germany also are fasting.

'Stability' Is Assured

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos told U.S. and local businessmen today that the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino has not impaired government stability.

The opposition has accused the government of complicity in the killing, a charge Marcos has denied. The opposition claims were followed by rumors that Marcos was dangerously ill and no longer in control of government.

"I understand some of our bankers are worried about the stability of the government. Let me assure you that the stability of the government is not an issue in this particular case," Marcos told the businessmen.

"We are running the government in accordance with the established policies. I am at the head of that government and the policies are properly established, worked out and implemented," Marcos added.

The businessmen included officers of the American Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines and a trade mission from the Filipino-American Chamber of Commerce in California headed by former Sen. S.I. Hayakawa. Portions of the meeting were aired on the government television's evening newscast.

Marcos pledged to seek the facts behind the Aquino murder and said, "We will determine what the truth is and we will then do what is right and proper."

Earlier in the day, opposition lawyers accused the Supreme Court chief justice of subservience to the government and asked the court to bar him from investigating the slaying of Aquino.

In a petition submitted a day prior to the start of formal hearings on the killing, the lawyers said an impartial investigation cannot be expected from Chief Justice Enrique Fernando, who "like a lackey," even holds First Lady Imelda Marcos' umbrella for her.

Northeast Topping Sun Belt In Per Capita Income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Frost Belt states of the Northeast posted heftier increases in personal income over the last four years than the faster-growing states of the Sun Belt, the Commerce Department says.

Paced by a 34.8 percent increase in Massachusetts and a 34.1 percent jump in Connecticut, the New England states showed a 33.7 percent increase in per capita income from 1979 to 1982, according to a report released Monday.

Per capita incomes in the Middle Atlantic region rose 32 percent, with increases of 33.7 percent in New Jersey, 33.6 percent in New York and 31.3 percent in Maryland. Personal incomes rose 39.7 percent in Oklahoma to pace a 33.4 percent increase in the Southwest region, which also includes Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

The Commerce Department attributed the Northeast's increase to a smaller-than-expected growth in population combined with an expansion of the manufacturing and service sectors of local economies.

Americans' per capita income rose 5 percent last year, up from $10,582 in 1981 to $11,107 in 1982, according to figures compiled by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis. Per capita income was computed by adding the income earned by all people divided by the nation's population.

Alaska was the nation's richest state with a per capita income of $16,257 while the poorest was Mississippi, where the average income was $7,778.

Personal income rose an average of 28.3 percent from 1979 to 1982, the Commerce Department said.

Eleven states, mostly in the Northeast and the West, had increases that were at least 7 percent above the national average. All six New England states had increases that topped the national average. Pennsylvania was the only northeastern state that did not enjoy a better-than-average increase during the period.

Even though Connecticut ranked second only to Alaska as the nation's richest state, the northeastern states were generally not ranked among the most wealthy. Despite the increases, Massachusetts was 10th, New Hampshire and Rhode Island 26th and 27th respectively, Vermont 38th and Maine 41st in a state-by-state ranking of personal incomes.

The five richest areas in 1982 were Alaska, $16,257; the District of Columbia, $14,550; Connecticut, $13,748; New Jersey, $13,089; and California, $12,567. The five poorest states were Mississippi, $7,778; Arkansas, $8,479; South Carolina, $8,502; Alabama, $8,649; and West Virginia, $8,769.

Employment growth in manufacturing, particularly the result of increased defense spending, allowed the West to remain the nation's richest region.

Per capita income fell during the four-year period in the Great Lakes states, where basic industries such as steel and automobile manufacturing were hard-hit by the recession. The growth of service and government jobs in the region was not enough to offset heavy layoffs among the region's manufacturers, the Commerce Department said.

The Southeast, which traditionally lags behind the nation in heavy industry, remained the poorest region, the report said. But several southern states posted big gains in personal income. Louisiana showed a 37.5 percent increase, which ranked third behind Alaska's 43.3 percent and Oklahoma's 39.7 percent.

A large population influx in the Rocky Mountain region, particularly in Colorado, offset income gains that resulted from growth in energy and mining industries.

Contract Is Approved By Chrysler And Union

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer
HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber called it "one of the nicest Labor Days ... in a long time," as the union and Chrysler Corp. agreed on a tentative contract for 56,000 U.S. workers in just five hours.

"I believe that when the contract is released ... it will be well received and will represent equity for our people," Bieber said Monday at a news conference after the five-hour bargaining session.

He would not elaborate, but said he was pleased with the talks.

"I think I'll remember this as one of the nicest Labor Days that I've celebrated in a long time," Bieber said. "It's fair to assume I'm happy tonight."

Details of the accord were not disclosed, pending a meeting of the union's 170-member Chrysler council in Detroit today.

Chrysler officials declined to speak with reporters Monday, but spokesman John Montgomery said the automaker would hold a news conference today.

Contract talks continued early today in Toronto between the Canadian UAW and Chrysler Canada Ltd. Those negotiations, on a pact covering some 10,000 Canadian workers, began Saturday and also focus on a pay raise.

The speedy agreement for U.S. workers was in marked contrast to the last attempt at negotiations in July. Then, three days of talks ended in failure after Chrysler offered an immediate raise of $1 an hour but refused to boost wages to equal those at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. over the length of an accord.

Bieber said he would not "want to go out on a limb" when asked if the new pact gives workers parity.

The UAW council — composed of union officials from

Ospreys Find Kerr Lake 'Home'

CLARKSVILLE, Va. (AP) — An Army Corps of Engineers wildlife biologist says he's "really excited" because two families of ospreys, protected hawks whose existence was threatened by pesticides in the 1960s, apparently have decided to make Kerr Lake their home.

"Finally we are being rewarded for doing something right in managing our environment," said John Fulton.

lake on power transmission towers near Clarksville and at Eagle Point earlier this year. By late July, each nest had two young birds.

While the population of ospreys has been increasing gradually in North Carolina, the sightings at Kerr Lake — or, as it's called in Virginia, Buggs Island Lake — are the first confirmed nestings of ospreys in Piedmont Virginia, Fulton said.

hunt, Fulton said he believes their presence on the lake has been established.

The young ospreys should return every year, but will not become sexually mature until their third year. Then they will find mates and build nests elsewhere on the 50,000-acre, man-made lake.

The decline of the osprey population in the 1960s has been attributed to the buildup of the pesticide DDT in the food chain. It caused the eggs of many fowls to become thin and brittle, drastically reducing their birthrates.

Because ospreys are on the protected species list, killing one carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

52 U.S. Chrysler facilities, including plants and parts depots — could vote to recommend that workers approve the pact, recommend against ratification, or not make a recommendation.

UAW Vice President Marc Stepp said ratification voting is set for Sept. 13.

Chrysler's current contract, which also covers 30,600 workers on indefinite layoff, does not expire until Jan. 14. But workers have been clamoring for a pay raise since the company announced record profits of $482.4 million for the first half of 1983.

Copter Crashes Near Volcano

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — A helicopter touring Mount St. Helens apparently had engine trouble before it crash-landed in a remote area 10 miles from the volcano, said a paramedic who helped airlift 11 injured passengers and the pilot from the site.

None of the 12 people was hurt seriously in Monday's crash, which occurred about 15 minutes into the 24-minute flight.

It is in the osprey's nature to become attached to a place. The big birds, often mistaken for bald eagles, migrate to Central or South America in the fall, but generally return to the same nest each spring.

"The young will imprint on Kerr Lake and will have to build new nests in the area," Fulton said. "Hopefully, the birds raised at Kerr Reservoir this summer will return in years to come to increase the population of these magnificent birds."

The parents should return to the same nests and reproduce annually, usually producing two or three eggs. They add more sticks from the shoreline to their nests, which sometimes grow to weigh more than a ton, and may use the same nest for more than 20 years.

The osprey's scientific name is Pandion haliaetus carolinensis. It grows to have a wingspan of 4½ to 6 feet and has a brownish-gray back, a white belly, a white head and a noticeable brown stripe from behind the eyes to the back of the neck.

"The voluntary comeback of these magnificent predatory birds to our area reflects well on all agencies, businesses and citizens concerned with managing the lands and water of southside Virginia."

"Hopefully, these birds will return to re-nest many years to come and provide sheer enjoyment for those who visit the lake and thrill in the sight of watching these magnificent birds plunge into the water and emerge with a fish locked in their talons."

The automaker's U.S. car sales have soared 26.5 percent this year compared with 1982 levels.

Chrysler workers granted concessions in 1980 and 1981 as the firm lost $3.27 billion from 1979 through 1981.

Chrysler workers now earn an average $9.85 an hour in wages, about $2 an hour less than their counterparts at GM and Ford. In addition, Ford and GM workers expect to receive about 40 cents an hour by next June in cost-of-living allowance payments deferred under concessions to the automakers last year.

Bieber said earlier Monday the union would seek $2.42 an hour more over the life of an agreement to achieve parity with Ford and GM.

When Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca called Bieber on Thursday to discuss reopening negotiations, "We discussed again our position and at the end of the conversation he invited us over here," Bieber said. "He said he wanted to make a proposal to us."

Pilot Harold Kolb told the paramedic and a hospital emergency room supervisor he was trying to bring the helicopter down when it dropped the last 15 feet and landed hard.

Several bald eagles also have been spotted at the lake, but Fulton said they haven't nested yet.

"Ospreys are much better fishers than eagles," he said.

He said he once saw one of the eagles take advantage of a young osprey. The eagle sat in a tree and waited for the osprey to catch a fish. When it did, the eagle attacked it, causing the osprey to drop the fish, which was scooped up by the eagle.

Stock And Market Reports

Hogs
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — There was no trend reported on the North Carolina hog market today due to the Labor Day holiday. Kinston 45.50, Clinton, Elizabethtown, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson unreported, Wilson 45.50, Salisbury unreported, Rowland unreported, Spivey's Corner 45.50, Sows: all weights 500 pounds up; Wilson 40.00, Fayetteville 41.00, Whiteville unreported, Wallace 40.00, Spivey's Corner 41.50, Rowland 42.00, Durham 39.00.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 54.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 53.12 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is light to moderate for a good demand. Weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,835,000, compared to 1,779,000 last Tuesday.

Hens
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was 1 cent higher. Supplies moderate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over 7 pounds at farm for Tuesday slaughter was 23 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a sharp and broad advance today as interest-rate jitters faded on Wall Street.

More than three stocks rose in price for every one that fell in the midday tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 8.64 points Friday, shot up another 13.21 points to 1,228.66 at noon.

Hopes rose for a respite from rising interest rates following a Federal Reserve Board report after the close of trading Friday of an unexpected $1.4 billion drop in the basic money supply, known as M1.

The third straight weekly decline in M1 dropped the measure of funds readily available for spending below the upper limits of the growth range the Fed has said can sustain economic expansion without rekindling inflation.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.08 to 96.36. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.78 to 234.25. Big Board volume reached 40.12 million shares a third of the way through the session, up from 28.08 million in the same period Friday.

Dow Chemical topped the active list on the NYSE, up ¾ at 36¾, in trading that included a block of 440,000 shares changing hands at that price.

Chrysler, which reached a tentative agreement Labor Day on a contract for 56,000 U.S. workers, gained ½ to 29½.

Advise Pay, Performance Link

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — America's employers could get a fuller commitment from their workers if they linked pay and other rewards directly to performance, a private foundation has concluded.

The Public Research

Foundation of New York, publishing the results of a three-year study of people's attitudes toward their jobs, found that less than one out of every four workers are giving their maximum effort.

The report, entitled "Putting the Work Ethic to Work: A Public Agenda Report on Restoring America's Competitive Vitality," was released Sunday. The foundation is a private non-profit research organization.

The study laments what it calls a "commitment gap" on the part of many workers, particularly those in the new technology, white collar and service oriented industries where workers, unlike those on assembly lines or in factories, have greater discretion in determining how hard they work.

The report focused on so-called "discretionary work" — or the amount of labor a worker puts in beyond the minimum amount necessary to avoid getting into trouble with the boss, being penalized or getting fired.

"The trend towards greater discretion on the job is outrunning present managerial practices," it said. "Our hypothesis is that incentive and managerial systems are out of sync with changing values and attitudes."

"As a result, the actions of managers blunt rather than stimulate and reinforce the work ethic," the report said, noting that "in a low-discretion workplace (such as a factory), such actions may not have been overly harmful, but in a high-discretion workplace, they can be fatal to effort and quality."

The foundation's conclusions and recommendations were based on interviews with some 850 randomly selected American workers. Among the findings were these:

—Only one worker in five, or 22 percent, said there was a direct relationship between how hard they work and how much they get paid. Close to two-thirds, 61 percent, said they want a closer link between performance and pay.

—Seventy-three percent say that job effort has declined because people frequently receive the same pay increases regardless of how hard they work.

—Roughly 52 percent of those surveyed professed "an inner need to do the very best job that they can," according to the study.

—Nearly 62 percent said they would prefer "a boss who is demanding in the name of high quality work."

Yankelovich, president and co-founder of the Public Agenda Foundation along with former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, said, "Most jobholders are just not convinced that their employers truly believe in high quality or optimum performance."

"Why should people work hard and live up to their work ethic ideals if others who are holding back receive just as much reward and recognition?" he asked.

Although the report faults management for failing to find ways to get more production out of people in those so-called "discretionary work" jobs, it also suggests that unions have given too much emphasis to negotiating rigid pay scales in workplaces where they represent employees.

Without specifically mentioning unions or collective bargaining strategies, the report's leadoff recommendation is to "tie remuneration directly to performance that enhances the efficiency and effectiveness of the organization."

The study also urges managers to "make sure employees share directly and significantly in the benefits of overall productivity gains."

And it calls for management to "flatten the hierarchy" by reducing sharp distinctions in pay and status that give workers the impression they are less important than managers.

president of the corporate purchasing division at Pfizer Inc., and chairman of the purchasing managers association, said the upward trend of prices in August "deserves watching," but added that "there is no reason for concern as yet."

In its report on capital appropriations, the Conference Board said the nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers increased appropriations by 3.9 percent in the second quarter, to $21 billion.

Appropriations, or authorizations to spend money in the future, are considered a leading indicator of capital spending.

The second-quarter gain included a 17.6 percent drop in appropriations in the oil industry. Appropriations by non-oil companies rose 14.7 percent.

Capital spending by the 1,000 largest manufacturers fell 0.8 percent in the second quarter, to $18.7 billion. The Conference Board, a business-sponsored research group, said the manufacturers are projecting a 12 percent drop in spending for all of 1983.

The only clear negative trend was in prices. The association said 39 percent of the purchasing managers reported higher prices — the biggest percentage of the year. By comparison, 33 percent reported higher prices in July and 28 percent in June.

Bailey
Mrs. Atholeen Dail Bailey, 74, died Monday. The funeral service will be conducted at 3 p.m. Thursday at Rose of Sharon Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. Reb Lancaster and the Rev. Charley Overton. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery near Williamston. The body will be taken from Wilkerson Funeral Home to the church at 1 p.m. Thursday.

A Pitt County native, Mrs. Bailey was a member of Rose of Sharon F.W.B. Church and had made her home in the Bear Grass community for many years.

She is survived by her husband, Seth Bailey; three sons, A. D. Bailey of Williamston, Seth Bailey Jr. of the home and Luther Bailey of Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Hilda Orr of St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. Shirley Corbin of Richmond, Va.; a sister, Mrs. Selma Bailey of Bethel; 14 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday.

Cox
Funeral services for Mr. Hubert Cox, 66, of 1201 Myrtle Ave., Greenville, who died Thursday at Pamlico Nursing Center in Washington, N.C., will be conducted Thursday at 2 p.m. at Mitchell's Funeral Home in Winterville by Bishop N.J. Evans. Burial will follow in the Branch Cemetery in Winterville.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucille Chancy Cox of the home; two sons, Donald Cox of Charlotte and Robert Cox of Moore Haven, Fla.; two daughters, Helen Cox of Moore Haven, Fla., and Brenda Cox of Salem, Ala.; two stepsons, Larry Wilson of Winterville and Wiley Chancy of Greenville; three stepdaughters, Mary Anne Mayo of Raleigh, Delores Harrison of Greenville and Rosa Lee Chapman of Ayden; four brothers, Odell Cox of Washington, N.C., Marvin Lee Cox of Greenville and Fred Cox Jr. and Samuel Cox, both of Norfolk, Va.; one sister, Mrs. Helen Pugh of Ayden, and 36 grandchildren.

The family will receive friends Wednesday from 8-9 p.m. at the funeral home.

Theorizes Creation Of Sun, Planets Was Rapid

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A University of California astronomer says he has evidence supporting a theory that the sun and its planets were formed in a single, furious wink of energy — as astronomers measure time — over 100,000 years.

Martin Cohen's theory, outlined in the latest issue of the Astrophysical Journal, differs from the traditional view of the birth of the solar system and commencement of life on Earth.

That view holds that the sun and its family of planets took millions of years to form, and that the Earth took millions more years to create an environment fit for life.

Cohen said his theories indicate that the birth pangs of the solar system ceased quickly, within 100,000 years, and that accompanying violent bursts of radiant energy quieted enough that planetary evolution could have begun in less than 10 million years.

A longtime student of young stars, Cohen said he has been observing for several years a class of young astronomical objects known as "T Tauri" stars, so called because many are found in the constellation Taurus.

Cohen said that in 1975, he used a telescope with infrared capability to observe a star nearly 500 light-years away called HL Tauri. He said it was surrounded by a thin disc of ice particles frozen to 150 degrees below zero.

Two years later, he said, he discovered a disc around

HL Tauri that contained a cloud of silicate grains — the same substance contained in glass and beach sand.

Further investigations, including sightings at 41,000 feet in an airborne observatory, showed that HL Tauri closely resembled Earth's own sun, he said. And it may have fragments revolving around it that have so far been invisible to infrared lenses, he said.

"In effect, they would be a T Tauri solar system, and because of the brief time the star and its planets have taken to form in the first place, that gives you much more time to make life," he said.

Evidence from Earth's oldest rocks indicate that this planet, and the rest of the solar system, are about 4.5 billion years old, Cohen said.

He said he plans further studies with infrared telescopes to try to prove his theory by detecting objects in the T Tauri solar system.

Bldg. Permits Near $4 Million

Permits valued at almost $4 million were issued in Greenville during June, according to state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

The commissioner said Greenville, which issued permits totaling $3,989,231, was one of 12 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population to exceed $3 million in construction activity for the month.

Brooks said the Greenville total included $2,240,525 for 56 single-family units; $284,700 for 18 multifamily units; $1,005,741 for 19 nonresidential structures and $458,265 for 57 additions and alterations. For the month, a total of 150 units were authorized here.

Pitt County issued permits totaling $4,088,631 in June, including Greenville's figure. The county total included $2,312,525 for 58 single-family dwellings; $284,700 for 18 multifamily units; $1,018,241 for 21 nonresidential buildings; and $473,165 for 61 additions and alterations.

Statewide, the 44 reporting cities authorized 4,197 new buildings permits during June. Brooks said the figure was up 20.5 percent from 3,482 last June, and slightly above the May total of 4,195. Estimated value of the units, at $152,793,737, rose 56.7 percent from last June's $97,530,719, and climbed 4.1 percent from $146,844,817 recorded in May.

Compared to June 1982, the average construction cost for a single-family home dropped 0.9 percent, to $42,360 from $42,755. The average fell 4.6 percent from May's $44,381, Brooks said.

Building values for June in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $343,500; Goldsboro, $1,575,805; Jacksonville, $3,210,954; Kinston, $573,000; New Bern, $690,131; Roanoke Rapids, $556,058; Rocky Mount, $4,182,736; Tarboro, $339,500, and Wilson, $1,124,403.

Police Shot Six Town Coyotes

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Six coyotes killed by police sharpshooters had become "domesticated" by the ease of getting food from neighborhood garbage cans, one of the officers says.

Coyotes had bitten a small boy and mauled a 2-year-old girl within the last week, prompting Sunday night's hunt in residential areas near the steep mountainsides where the animals lurk.

The six were shot as they appeared headed for residences, where "they probably would have taken a little walk through the condominiums," said police Sgt. Bill Trudeau.

He said the animals "go through the trash cans and feed themselves. I think the coyote just sees it as fairly easy pickings."

Rampants Score 18-10 Opening Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School converted two second half fumbles into touchdowns as Reggie Smith scored three times to lead the Rampants to an 18-10 victory over Jacksonville last night.

It was the season opener for Rose, while Jacksonville saw its record fall to 1-1 on the year. The defending state 4-A champions saw their 15-game winning streak, longest in the state, go by the boards in the contest. Randleman, the defending 2-A champ, now takes over, having won its 15th straight this weekend.

Rose, using a strong defense, held the Cardinals in check most of the way. Except for a few big plays, the Card were unable to move the ball consistently against Rose, finishing with only 89 yards rushing, 68 of those in the first half.

Smith, who had an outstanding evening, scored all three of the Rampant touchdowns, the first on an 89-yard dance down the sidelines on a punt return, giving Rose a temporary 6-0 lead. Later, he scored on two and one-yard plunges to erase a 7-6 Jacksonville edge.

The Cards' only touchdown came on a 21-yard scamper by Donald Hines, followed by the conversion by Craig Losito, who later kicked a 30-yard field goal.

"This was a real good victory," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said, adding, "that's an understatement."

Vincent said his Rampants played well at certain times, and didn't make the usual first game mistakes. "We didn't make nearly as many as I thought we would," he said.

Vincent had plenty of praise for Smith for his offensive effort, as he gained 84 yards on 16 carries, the last four of which came after he suffered cramps.

Vincent also liked the outside linebacking play of Ed Farley and praised the entire defensive secondary, which held Jacksonville to only six completions in 27 attempts. Roswell Streeter picked off two interceptions in the game.

But if there was a disappointment for the Rampants, it had to be in their kicking game. "We've got to work on our snapping," Vincent said.

Punter Arthur Brown found difficulty in getting the ball, kicking four times, and each time either having to pick the ball up, move to one side or another, or leap for the ball. On two other occasions, under a heavy rush, he had to scramble after a poor snap, and then had the ball go over his head on another, resulting in a 22-yard loss.

"I've worried about this part of the game all summer, and I'm still worried about it," Vincent said. "I just thought that we'd do better."

In the opening minutes of the game, the Rampants looked unstoppable — until they stopped themselves. Taking over on the kickoff at the 23, Rose drove down to the Cardinal four before Smith fumbled at the three. Cyrus Blackwell had rushes of 18 and 17 on the drive, while Smith had a 12-yard run in the series.

Rose got the ball back in good field position at the Card 41 following a short punt and moved to the 26 before stalling.

After Streeter intercepted a Jacksonville pass at the 29 three plays later, the Rampants turned it right back on an interception against Todd Martin at the Card 16.

Early in the second period, Rose forced Jacksonville to punt from its own 41, and Smith gathered it in on his own 11, cut to his left and picked up a couple of blockers. He broke a couple of tackles himself as he streaked down the sidelines, avoiding stepping out, to go 89 yards for the game's first touchdown. The PAT kick failed, however, leaving Rose up, 6-0, with 9:30 left in the half.

Following a Rose punt near the midpoint of the quarter, Jacksonville took over at its own 48 and moved to the 42 of Rose before a penalty pushed them back, and a fumble turned it over. Rose was forced to kick, however, but was penalized for being off sides. On the second snap, Brown was forced to run for it, failing to pick up the first down, turning it over at the Card 48.

On third and ten, quarterback Carl Marshburn hit David Braxton on a screen pass that went for 31 yards, down to the Rose 21.

On the next play, Hines took the ball over left tackle, then cut right and shook off several tacklers to go the final 21 yards for the score. Losito's kick with 1:20 left, put the Cards up, 7-6.

Early in the second period, however, the Cards fell behind for good. David Lineberry recovered a Hines fumble at the Card 33, and Rose drove in five plays. Battle Emory hit Tyrone Smith for 14 yards on first down, and two plays later, Reggie Smith broke away up the middle for 15 yards to the three. Two plays after that, he smashed in from two yards out, and Rose was back ahead, 12-7 with 8:06 left in the third. A two-point pass try failed.

On the first play after the kickoff, Jacksonville again fumbled and Farley recovered at the 14. After the Rampants lost nine yards on first down, Emory hit Streeter for a first down at the 2, and on third down, Smith went in for his third touchdown and Rose led, 18-7 with 4:29 in the third.

Late in the period, Jacksonville got a break when the center snap sailed over Brown on a punt try and the Cards took over at the Rose seven. However, on first down, Marshburn was knocked loose from the ball, but managed to recover it back on the 17. Two more plays netted only three yards and on the first play of the fourth quarter, Losito kicked a 30-yard field goal to cut it to 18-10.

Jacksonville had one more threat after recovering a Rose fumble at the 31, but fumbled it back two plays later. The Cards came back after that to drive from their own 32 down to the Rose 23 before a penalty and four incomplete passes turned it over.

Neither team had a threat after that.

Rose now has the task ahead of it of preparing for strong New Bern, 1-0-1 on the year, in just four days. The Rampants host the Bears in their "home" opener, to be played Friday night at D.H. Conley High School.

"I told the kids they have until 8 o'clock (Tuesday) morning to enjoy this one, then to forget about it," Vincent said.

White Rallies 'Pokes, 31-30

Bowled Over

Washington's Joe Washington holds the ball as he goes over the top of Dallas' Dennis Thurman (32) and runs into Rod Hill during second-half action Monday. Washington lost the game, 31-30. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Danny White and the Dallas Cowboys wrote a new ending to what was beginning to look like an old, familiar script.

For 30 minutes it was 1982 all over again for the Super Bowl-champion Washington Redskins before White rallied his team with three second-half touchdown passes and a 1-yard run for a 31-30 Dallas victory.

"It was kind of like two games out there. The first half, I don't think I ever saw a team play better than Washington," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

The Redskins, who whipped the Cowboys 31-17 in the National Conference championship last Jan. 22, took up on Monday night where they left off, opening a 23-3 halftime lead.

Joe Theismann ripped the Dallas secondary for 181 yards and a touchdown in the half. John Riggins ran for 64 yards and a score and Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 23, 30 and 39 yards.

White, who had completed just one of nine passes to that point, and the rest of the Cowboys were on the ropes.

"We had terrible field position in the first half. "It was embarrassing for our offense," said White.

Landry's halftime speech to his team included the admonition to be "cool" and "play with your heads."

"We felt we had to keep up the tempo the second half," said Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs. "We didn't want to go into a shell; we wanted to keep working the way we had been working. I felt the first five or six minutes of the second half, we couldn't let anything happen."

Gibbs' halftime talk was prophetic.

The Cowboys struck the first two times they touched the ball, wide receiver Tony Hill beating cornerback Vernon Dean on a 75-yard touchdown pass and then cornerback Anthony Washington on a 51-yarder.

"On the first play, we adjusted and had Vernon covering man-to-man but he didn't hear us because of the crowd noise. Vernon thought he was getting help inside and he was all alone out there," said Redskins coach Bill Walsh.

"The first pass to Hill was the play that turned it around," Theismann said. "It didn't kill us but it woke up the Cowboys."

The Redskins, trying to regroup, marched to the Dallas 14-yard line before the drive stalled on a 10-yard holding penalty against tight end Don Warren.

Moseley attempted a 31-yard field goal but was wide to the right, only his second miss in 27 attempts in the regular season dating back to 1981.

Moseley's miss was the opening the Cowboys needed. They marched 80 yards for the go-ahead score.

Tony Dorsett, who finished with 151 yards, including 77 on one play in the first half, picked up 27 yards in the go-ahead drive. He got 18 of them in one carry to the Washington 9 and Ron Springs ran it to the 1. White got the final yard himself, bootlegging it in around right end for a 24-23 Dallas lead with 6:59 to play.

Theismann, who completed 28 of 38 passes for 325 yards, tried to rally Washington — but cornerback Ron Fellows stepped in front of Charlie Brown, intercepted the ball and returned it 33 yards to the 4. Two plays later, White completed the Cowboys' scoring with a 1-yard pass to Doug Cosbie.

Theismann, who had passed 41 yards to Brown for his first TD of the season, passed 1 yard to Don Warren for his second one — but it came with only 10 seconds to play.

"The Redskins?" mused Dallas cornerback Dennis Thurman. "They've got to feel they were robbed."

Overton In New Record

PADUCAH, Ken. — Kristi Overton made her debut in the girls division at a record capability tournament and set a new pending trick record with a score of 6,270 points.

Kristi, 13, is the 1983 U.S. National Champion and holds the junior girls division records in slalom, tricks and jump.

White Sox Moving Toward Western Flag

By The Associated Press
Even though Tony LaRussa won't admit it, the Chicago White Sox seem to be marching toward the American League West crown. And more than 1.7 million people seem to know it.

The White Sox unleashed a 16-hit attack, including home runs by Carlton Fisk and Ron Kittle, to rout the Oakland A's 11-1 Monday. The victory gave Chicago a 13-game lead over second-place Kansas City in the AL West and was watched by 43,014 fans.

Chicago has now drawn 1,714,163 fans this season, setting an all-time attendance record for the city, and needs to average about 22,000 fans for its last 13 home games to reach the two-million mark.

"I figure we've got to win 14 more this month," LaRussa said, when asked if his team had sewn up the division.

"You guys won't get me to say that yet," he added. "No way."

In other AL games, Milwaukee downed New York 3-1, Boston blanked Baltimore 2-0, Toronto trounced California 7-0, Cleveland nipped Detroit 3-2, Texas beat Minnesota 7-3 and Seattle routed Kansas City 13-6.

Fisk knocked in three runs, including his 23rd home run, breaking the White Sox team record for homers by a catcher, set by Sherm Lollar in 1959.

"He (Lollar) played here a long time and I sure a lot of people would have liked to see him hold on to that record," Fisk said.

Kittle's two-run homer gave him 31 this season, the most by a White Sox player since Oscar Gamble hit the same number in 1977.

Floyd Bannister, 14-10, won his 11th game in 12 decisions since the All-Star break.

"At this point in the season," said Oakland Manager Steve Boros, "there's no doubt they are the best club in the division."

Brewers 3, Yankees 1
In Milwaukee, Mark Brouhard's three-run homer in the fourth inning was enough for rookie starter Tom Candiotti and reliever Pete Ladd.

Undefeated Candiotti won his fourth start since being recalled from Triple-A on Aug. 6. He held the Yankees hitless through 3 2-3 innings and scoreless until Don Baylor hit his 18th home run in the seventh inning.

Ladd relieved with the bases loaded and two outs in the seventh and struck out Willie Randolph on three pitches to end the threat. Ladd finished up for his 18th save.

Brouhard's home run, his third, came after Yankee starter Shane Rawley, 14-11, hit Robin Yount with a pitch and Cecil Cooper singled.

The game drew a crowd of 30,392, putting the Brewers over the two-million mark in attendance for the first time in their 14-year history.

Red Sox 2, Orioles 0
Bob Ojeda and reliever Bob Stanley cooled off Baltimore's sizzling bats.

The Boston pitchers held the host Orioles to five hits and were helped by four double plays. In 10 previous games, Baltimore had banged out 121 hits and scored 82 runs.

Ojeda, 8-7, gave up four hits in six innings. Stanley got his 27th save.

Jerry Remy and Jim Rice singled home Boston's runs in the fifth inning against Mike Boddicker, 12-7. Rice's run-scoring single gave him 109 RBI, tying him with Milwaukee's Cooper for the league lead.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 0

Jim Gott, a disaster in his last start, made up for it with a five-hitter for his first shut-out of the season.

Last week, Gott started against Baltimore and faced just six batters, getting none of them out.

This time, Gott, 8-13, was in "complete control in Toronto."

Damaso Garcia drove in four runs, two with his third home run of the season, to lead the Blue Jay attack. Garcia's home run, off Geoff Zahn, 8-11, capped a three-run second inning.

Toronto added three more in the fourth to chase Zahn, who entered the game with a 10-3 lifetime record against the Blue Jays.

Indians 3, Tigers 2

Cleveland ended Jack Morris' personal 10-game winning streak, though the Tiger hurler wasn't around at the end to see it.

Morris, 18-9, took a 2-1 lead into the eighth in Cleveland, but gave up Gorman Thomas' 20th home run to lead off the inning.

George Vukovich, who now has eight straight hits and 20 hits in his last 30 at-bats, then singled. Vukovich went to second on a sacrifice and scored on a close play on Mike Hargrove's single.

Morris, upset at home plate umpire Nick Bremigan's call, tossed his glove into the air and was ejected. Detroit Air-

Nebraska strengthened its hold on the top spot in the Associated Press' first regular-season college Top Twenty football poll, while defending champion Penn State slipped from fourth place to 20th.

The Cornhuskers, which ripped Penn State 44-6 in the inaugural Kickoff Classic last week, took 44 of 50 first-place votes and 993 of a possible 1,000 points Monday from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Nebraska had 976 points in the preseason poll.

Oklahoma, which opens its season this weekend at Stanford, received three first-place votes and 868 points for second place. Texas, which gets underway Sept. 17 at Auburn, got two firsts and 865 points for the third spot.

Auburn, which opens its season this weekend at home against Southern Mississippi, received the other first-place vote and moved from fifth to fourth with 757 points.

Notre Dame, which opens at Purdue on Saturday, rose from sixth to fifth with 659 points and Michigan, which hosts Washington State in its opener, climbed from 10th to sixth with 593 points. However, Florida State slipped from seventh to 12th after barely beating East Carolina 47-46.

Ohio State, No. 9 in the preseason poll, replaced Florida State in seventh place with 586 points. The Buckeyes open at home against Oregon on Saturday.

Tigers' Long Pass Tops Jags

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — Williamston broke the long pass; Farmville Central didn't. It was that simple.

Williamston quarterback James Ward connected with Larry Brown for a 57-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to give the Tigers a 7-0 victory over Farmville Central in the Jaguars 1983 season opener Monday.

"I knew we had to score first," said Williamston coach Harold Robinson, whose team is now 2-0 on the season. "I told them that it was going to be hot; that there wouldn't be a football atmosphere. It was easier for (Farmville Central) to get up for the game; it was their first game of the season."

"We were flat; we didn't play with any enthusiasm. Till we scored, we were out of the game. Farmville Central is young, and they were well coached. They did nothing we didn't expect — they just moved the football."

The Tigers fumbled five times in the game, but Farmville Central failed to recover any of the opportunities. The fourth errant ball came at the end of the third quarter when Williamston was driving for a chance to put the game out of reach.

Alfonza Willingham carried the ball to the right and lost the ball after gaining eight yards, but it was recovered by Tyrone Rhodes to keep the Tigers' drive going at the Jaguars' 18-yard line.

Brown bolted through the middle for eight yards then ran for three more for first-and-goal at the Farmville Central seven. Ward threw to John Conner in the end zone on second down, but Donald Tyson was called for interference to move the ball to the four-yard line for first down.

Willingham rushed through the middle for two yards, but the Jaguars stopped Brown for no gain. After a Williamston timeout, Donnell Griffin moved the ball another yard closer setting up fourth-and-goal at the one.

Williamston was called for illegal procedure to move the ball five yards back, and Ward was sacked by Jerome Daniels and Joe Steppe to give the Jaguars the ball on their own 16 with 8:49 left in the game. "It gives me a lot of pride to see our defense stop them like that," said Farmville coach Gil Carroll. "That was sort of a miracle after some of the plays we had had on defense."

The Jaguars quickly picked up a first down, then added six more yards on two running plays before almost surrendering the ball on third-and-four. Farmville quarterback Bobby Evans' pass was picked off by Brown, but the officials ruled there was interference before intended receiver Dennis Tripp had a chance for the catch.

The penalty moved the ball to the Jaguars' 47, and Jeff Vail picked up seven yards on first down. But a fumble by Evans which was recovered by Steppe resulted in no gain to set up third-and-three. Vail added another yard, but then illegal procedure on fourth down pushed Farmville five yards further back. An incomplete pass intended for Toronto Moye turned the ball over to the Tigers.

Williamston picked up a first down after two plays, but the Jaguars' again held to force the turnover on fourth-and-13 with 57 seconds left on the clock.

The Jaguars failed to connect on three passing plays, and James Streeter's fourth down pass was deflected in the secondary by Brown and Jesse Ward.

"We went with Streeter in the last series because he (is better with long passes)," Carroll said. "Evans is good on the short passes, but he needs to work on intermediate passing. As it turned out, we had a short look-in pass thrown in the dirt."

"But if it hadn't been for the long pass, the score would have been 0-0."

Farmville Central pushed inside Williamston territory on the opening drive of the game but stalled at the Tigers' 44-yard line.

Williamston missed a scoring opportunity in the second quarter after returning a punt to the Jaguars' 39. A pass to Brown at the 10 fell incomplete and a fumble on second down lost nine yards to silence the threat.

Evans connected on a 13-yard pass to Tripp and added a pair of 10-yard strikes to move the Jaguars to the Tigers' 15, but a fourth-down halfback pass by Moye intended for Kent Hardy fell incomplete to stop Farmville Central in the closing moments of the first half.

"The things we did well, I could have predicted before the game," Carroll said. "The heat tonight may have affected us more so than it did them, but that's not the reason we lost."

Farmville Central will host Bertie County Friday, while Williamston hosts Plymouth.

Opinions Vary On America's Cup Final

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Warren Jones believes his Australians will win the America's Cup this time — in seven races.

Alan Bond says the finals will be close.

John Bertrand says his boat, Australia II, has risen to a new peak of sailing performance in every kind of wind.

The three had their say Monday night after Australia II, the boat with the secret winged keel, won the challenger's place in the Cup finals starting Sept. 13 against the U.S. yacht Liberty.

The Aussie yacht sailed off to a three-minute, 19-second triumph over Britain's Victory '83 in Rhode Island Sound for a 4-1 record in the finals for challengers who began racing here in early June.

It also won them a silver trophy, the Louis Vuitton Cup, a 2½-pound silver mug with eight fins around the bottom, presented by a French luggage company which helped bankroll the challenge races.

"I think in the last week we have approached a new level of performance that has not been attained by Australian boats before," skipper Bertrand told a news conference.

"All I can say is that we are very satisfied with the performance of the boat in all directions of the wind and in all wind speeds," he added. "...I certainly look forward eagerly to Sept. 13th."

"These yachts will be very close," said Bond, the Aussie syndicate chief who is making his fourth try for the Cup.

"We think our yacht has reached somewhere near its performance capability and we're looking forward to some real fun racing with the Liberty guys," Bond added.

"Yes, I predict quite frankly that we will win 4-3," said Jones, the Aussie executive director, and that the races will run until Sept. 24.

Liberty and veteran Cup skipper Dennis Conner were chosen by the NYCC last Friday to be the American defenders.

A tumultuous celebration erupted at the dock under a huge Australian flag when the winning boat came in, including horn blasts from nearby craft, applause and cheers.

The crew got the traditional dunking in Newport Harbor, and the champagne flowed freely from the Vuitton Cup, plastic cups and straight out of the bottle.

A smoky southwest wind of about 10 knots was all the Aussie yacht needed in the race to take a lead of 1:18 at the first turn. It was never threatened seriously on the 24.3-mile course.

Victory '83, under helmsmen Lawrie Smith and Rodney Pattison, made up seven seconds on the second leg, a broad reach, and 32 seconds on the fifth leg, a run, but they were still far behind.

Australia II and Liberty are the survivors of seven foreign boats and three American entries which began racing trials in June.

Australia II dominated foreign racing here with a 48-6 record.

Victory '83 ended the trials at 32-22.

Australia II's keel has been targeted since she arrived and her crew has hidden the boat's underbody in plastic sheets when out of the water.

The NYCC made several unsuccessful efforts to have the winged keel ruled illegal during the summer, and announced Aug. 26 that questions about Australia II's design had been settled.

The Aussies said designer Ben Lexcen developed the keel in long study at the testing tanks of the Maritime Research Institute in Holland.

While the boats were racing Monday, NYCC cup committee member Richard Latham released a letter asking for a retraction from the Dutch station's research chief, Dr. M.W.C. Oosterveld.

The complaint centered on a meeting Aug. 24 of Latham with Dutch scientist Dr. Peter van Oossanen, who refused to sign an affidavit Latham prepared about the boat because it had errors.

Latham objected to van Oossanen's report to the Australians about the meeting, which was made public.

Latham contended his affidavit was correct based on earlier talks with van Oossanen, and a retraction was in order.

Latham's proposed affidavit said, in part, "Ben Lexcen was the team leader and maintained an office at NSMB (the Dutch lab) for four months. However, the project, from beginning to end, was a team effort and the results represent the combined talents and contributions of all members of the team."

America's Cup rules require that contender yachts be designed by nationals of the country they represent.

NYCC cup committee member Henry H. Anderson Jr. said in a telephone interview the Latham letter was to clear the air in view of van Oossanen's report to the Aussies.

"I think he is trying to straighten the record," Anderson said of Latham.

McEnroe Complains After Bowing In Open

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe's list of complaints was lengthy. There were some controversial line calls and there was some questionable scheduling. The crowd was hooting him and his shoulder was cranky.

But in the end, the top-seeded McEnroe agreed there really was only one person to blame for his sudden exit from the United States Open tennis championships.

Himself.

"I wish I had played better," he said Monday after bowing out to No. 16 Bill Scanlon 7-6, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3. "I'm not blaming anything on the umpires or the people or the scheduling committee. I have no one to blame but myself. He played the type of match he needed to win. I played the type that encourages you to lose. In the final analysis, I didn't play well enough."

That seemed a fair assessment of the situation after McEnroe dug himself too deep a hole by losing tiebreakers in each of the first two sets. Then he was unable to climb out of it against a fired-up Scanlon.

The victory sent Scanlon into the quarterfinals against Mark Dickson, who eliminated John Lloyd of Britain 6-7, 7-6, 6-0, 7-6.

In another men's quarterfinal settled Monday, defending champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 seed, meets No. 14 Eliot Teltscher. Connors advanced with a 7-5, 6-4, 6-1 victory over Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland and Teltscher beat Greg Holmes, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

On the women's side, top-seeded Martina Navratilova, No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 3 Andrea Jaeger, No. 5 Pam Shriver, No. 7 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain and unseeded

Iva Madruga-Osses of Argentina reached the quarters.

Navratilova eliminated Pilar Vasquez of Peru 6-0, 6-1; Lloyd defeated No. 16 Kathy Jordan 6-3, 7-6; Jaeger beat Bonnie Gadusek 4-6, 6-2, 6-1; Shriver downed Lisa Bonder 6-2, 6-2; Hanika beat Pascale Paradis of France 6-4, 6-1; Mandlikova eliminated No. 10 Zina Garrison 6-3, 7-5; Durie downed Anne White 6-3, 6-0 and Madruga-Osses beat Andrea Leand 6-1, 6-3.

The women's quarter-final lineup matches Navratilova against Hanika, Jaeger vs. Shriver, Durie against Madruga-Osses, and Mandlikova vs. Evert Lloyd.

McEnroe, just $200 away from his fine limit for the year, jostled with the linesmen and umpire Ken Slye of Washington over a number of calls.

"There were some pretty bad calls at key moments and people who say it will all even out in the end, I think that's baloney," he said. "Maybe overall in your career, but certainly not in this match. I think it was pretty one-sided."

And of Slye, McEnroe said: "He first missed a call that was about six inches out and then when a lot of people were yelling, he gave me a warning for a point delay, and then he missed two service calls. Other than that, he did nothing to hurt me in the first set."

Then there was the schedule. McEnroe had played late Sunday and was doubled back early Monday. "I think two matches in two days is a little tough," he said. "I didn't have enough time to prepare mentally for this match."

Then there was his sore shoulder. From a physical standpoint, he said, he was not at his best in this tournament. "I'm rarely at my best," he added.

Then there were the fans. McEnroe asked Slye to control the noise during points and when the umpire's announcement asked for no "oohs and aahs" during play, that's just what the sellout crowd at the National Tennis Center delivered.

Scanlon, the underdog, was clearly the fans' favorite, a fact that irked McEnroe, who is a native New Yorker.

"I'm not going to say that's the reason I lost the match," he said. "Being brought up 15 minutes from here, I get dumped on every time I play here. That's just the way the New York crowds are."

Did the crowd get what it wanted, McEnroe asked? "Absolutely," he said. "It's too bad it had to happen here. But the people seemed happy about it."

So was Scanlon.

"It was very satisfying," he said. "If you are going to have a big win, what more could you ask than beating the No. 1 player in New York City at the U.S. Open? The crowd was unbelievable and the whole setting was awfully satisfying."

The victory was the culmination of hard work, Scanlon said.

"It was a satisfying moment when I saw the (match point) shot go in and past him," he said. "That's what I've been working for. It's been a year-long project."

Scanlon said his victory was constructed around his concentration on the match's big points.

"You key on the big ones," he said. "Remember what you're supposed to do, making sure you step into the ball instead of standing back and playing reaction tennis. I stepped into his serve and put it where I wanted to, I didn't let him dictate."

McEnroe agreed.

"He played well and put pressure on me," he said. "I expected a tough match and I got it. I was not into the match the way I would like. It was very disappointing."

Scanlon's devotion to tennis has been questioned in the past.

"I used to have trouble with motivation," he said. "This is something I've been trying to ditch for three years now. I made a promise to myself that I would never give up in any match and devote myself to playing every match as if it were the U.S. Open."

The Party's Over

John McEnroe throws his hands up in frustration after losing to Bill Scanlon in the fourth round of the U.S. Open at the National Tennis Center in New York Monday. Scanlon defeated the top seed 7-6, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 to advance to the quarterfinals. (AP Laserphoto)

Allison Wins Southern

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Heat, humidity and the treacherous Darlington track defeated everybody but Bobby Allison.

Allison, who is making a strong run at the first Winston Cup championship of his Grand National stock car career, took an important step toward that title Monday by running off to a victory in the 34th Southern 500.

To gain his fourth victory of the season and fourth triumph in the Southern 500 — the oldest of all NASCAR superspeedway races — the 45-year-old grandfather had to survive strong challenges by a handful of competitors, as well as air temperatures that reached 97 degrees, track temperatures around 135 and strength-sapping 83 percent humidity.

The sun-baked crowd was estimated at about 65,000.

"Racing the other cars wasn't as tough today as racing the track," said the exhausted Allison. "The strain was there lap after lap after lap. This track is tough enough without the heat. There was no relief at all." But Allison ran without a slip through the 367-lap race over Darlington's narrow 1.366-mile oval, taking command for good just 26 laps from the end, two laps after his final pit stop.

Allison drove the Miller High Life-DiGard Buick Regal to a 9.38-second victory over Bill Elliott. The young Ford Thunderbird driver now has been a runnerup four times this season and eight times in his Grand National career without having won a race.

Allison won $45,050 from the total purse of $339,000, but most important to him was the fact that this was the first time in five races that he has finished ahead of and gained ground on two-time defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, the man chasing Allison in this year's title race.

Waltrip was a distant third, followed by pole-sitter Neil Bonnett, Terry Labonte, Buddy Baker and five-time Southern 500 winner Cale Yarborough. All of the top six finishers led at least one lap in the race.

Allison gained 15 points on Waltrip and now leads in the season standings by 56 points. He has led this season by as much as 223.

"We've tried not to let the point thing color the way we approach races," Allison said after the 77th victory of his Grand National career. "We're not going to go conservative and give this thing (the championship) away."

"But it was plenty hot out there today. I guess it was about as hot in my car as any race I can remember in recent years. But my crew responded and made a few changes to help get more air inside my car."

One thing crew chief Gary Nelson and his DiGard crew did midway through the race was to take an air chisel and make a small hole above Allison's head in the Buick's roof.

"That helped the air circulation inside the car a little bit. Any help was appreciated," Allison said. "It was so hot out there that I was even a little bit worried after the fifth lap of the race. So I just kept trying to pace myself and Gary kept talking to me on the radio. He was very encouraging."

Both Elliott and Waltrip were treated for heat exhaustion at the infield car center and released, and several other drivers, including Benny Parsons, 10-time Darlington winner David Pearson, Geoff Bodine and Lake Speed, needed relief during the race. "I got so hot and tired there at the end that I wasn't able to challenge Bobby," Elliott explained. "I got dizzy and tired and I was just holding on there at the end. That's the first time I ever wanted to get out of a race car, but I started thinking about it with 50 laps to go."

Waltrip echoed those sentiments, adding, "I felt like I was riding the space shuttle on re-entry those last 50 laps. It was real hot."

As for Allison regaining his momentum and beginning to pull away again in the points, Waltrip said, "There's still eight races to go. That's plenty of time if we finish strong like we have the last two seasons."

Allison averaged 123.343 mph in the race marred by nine caution flags for a total of 60 laps. There were several crashes, but no injuries.

Thurmond Rests Bullpen

By The Associated Press

Mark Thurmond wanted to give a rest to the San Diego bullpen. As a result, the Padres continued to give no rest to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I did all I could do to stay in there," the San Diego left-hander said after pitching into the ninth inning Monday night as the Padres defeated the Dodgers 5-2. "Our bullpen was tired so I did everything I could to give them a night off."

The victory in Los Angeles marked the ninth time that the Padres had defeated the Dodgers in 15 games this season and it cut their lead in the National League West to 1½ games over Atlanta. The Braves gained ground with a 7-5 decision over the Houston Astros.

"We had excellent defense tonight," said Thurmond, who was backed by three double plays. "The double plays took a lot of the pressure off."

In other National League action, St. Louis took a doubleheader from Pittsburgh, 7-4 and 7-6 in 10 innings, Montreal tripped Chicago 7-3, New York turned back Philadelphia 6-5 and San Francisco tripped Cincinnati 3-2.

Thurmond scattered six hits over eight innings. But after yielding a leadoff homer in the ninth by Pedro Guerrero and a single, Gary Lucas took over for the final three outs.

Terry Kennedy stroked three hits, including a home run, to pace the San Diego offense.

Fernando Valenzuela, 13-9, took the loss, giving up one run in the first inning and three more in the third before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. It was Valenzuela's third consecutive loss and third in five decisions against San Diego.

"It's always special pitching against the Dodgers. It's always special pitching against Fernando. But I can't worry about him. All I'm thinking about is their batters."

Braves 7, Astros 5

In Atlanta, Dale Murphy continued his hot hitting with three singles and Rafael Ramirez batted in three runs, including the game-winner, to lead the Braves over Houston.

Murphy singled his first three times up against Joe Niekro, giving him six straight hits and a 16-for-22 streak.

Winner Len Barker, who pitched in the American League eight seasons, collected his first major-league hit in his second at-bat leading off a clinching three-run rally for the Braves in the seventh.

"I had good stuff, stayed ahead of the hitters, kept within myself and wasn't at all nervous the way I was starting for the Braves for the first time," said Barker. "The big thing is getting the ball over the plate. That's been my big burden as a big-league pitcher."

Cardinals 7-7, Pirates 4-6

In St. Louis, Ken Oberkell singled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the eighth inning and pitcher Dave LaPoint followed with a two-run single, leading the Cardinals over Pittsburgh in the first game of their doubleheader. LaPoint, 12-8, took over in the fourth inning and blanked Pittsburgh on six hits the rest of the way.

Dane Loggins drove home Ozzie Smith with a sacrifice fly with one out in the 10th inning, giving the Cardinals their triumph in the second game.

Expos 7, Cubs 3

In Montreal, Al Oliver belted a grand slam home run in the sixth inning to lead the Expos over Chicago.

The Expos trailed 1-0 in the sixth when they loaded the bases with none out against Steve Trout, 9-13. Mike Proly relieved Trout and got two outs before giving up a gopher ball to Oliver, his second grand slam of the season, and seventh of his career.

Gulickson, 14-11, scattered eight hits in 7 2-3 innings before Bob James came on to pick up his third save. Gulickson is now 7-1 in his last 10 starts.

Mets 6, Phillies 5

In New York, George Foster belted a three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning to lead the Mets over Philadelphia.

Foster's 23rd homer followed Mookie Wilson's single off the shoulder of Phillies reliever Al Holland, 8-5, and Keith Hernandez's one-out single.

Jesse Orosco, who gave up two runs in the top of the ninth, boosted his record to 13-5 with his ninth straight victory.

Giants 3, Reds 2

In San Francisco, Joel Youngblood ended rookie Jeff Russell's no-hit bid with a leadoff double in the eighth inning and Dave Bergman followed with a two-run homer, lifting the Giants over Cincinnati.

Russell, making his fifth major-league start, yielded Youngblood's double on a 3-2 pitch. The sinking liner just eluded center fielder Eddie Milner, who tried to make a shoestring grab in right-center.

Bergman then connected on a 1-2 pitch, erasing the Reds' 2-1 lead. It was Bergman's fifth home run of the season and second as a pinch hitter. Russell, 2-2, finished with a two-hitter, having given up an unearned run without a hit in the fourth.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Movie Office Looking For 'Future Stars'

By LINDA GIBSON

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — One-legged men, grandmother types, twin teen-age girls and World War II sailors: William Buck needs them all.

Buck, manager of the state Motion Picture Office, is trying to register every Arkansas with a talent, an unusual ability or odd physical feature, experience in front of or behind a movie camera, or a simple yen to play a part in movies filmed in Arkansas.

His job is to attract to Arkansas as much motion picture business as possible. And when Hollywood knocks, he aims to be ready.

"Yesterday, someone called us looking for a campus with an Ivy League look. They said they had to have the pictures in L.A. tomorrow," Buck said in a recent interview.

"This is very typical. One of the first things they ask is, 'What's the talent pool in Brinkley, Arkansas?'"

Using the state Employment Security Division's computers, Buck is trying to prepare printouts listing the potential movie material in Brinkley — or anywhere else in the state — according to age, sex, race, talent, and every other feature of interest.

"This guy wears a patch; this person can ride a horse. You never know what you're looking for," Buck said.

For the TV mini-series "The Blue and the Gray," Buck said, "It was a big deal to find a guy with one leg. It would be nice if we could say, 'Oh yeah, here are six people in the Fort Smith area that fit that category' instead of going on TV and asking if there's anybody out there with one leg."

About 250 people have registered so far. "We've had little girls come tap dancing through the office," he said.

Buck also scouts locations, sometimes setting out on 1,200-mile, two-day hunts for the town with just the right look. That job, he said, can be hazardous.

"You go cruising through some of the back areas, people get real suspicious about what you're doing. They tend to be a little skeptical of these blue-jointed, bearded ones," he said.

Buck was almost arrested one Saturday afternoon several months ago when he pulled into a town of about 6,000 in eastern Arkansas to take pictures — front, sides and back — of the bank, a service station, the police department and jail. He'd barely left town before a police officer stopped him.

Sporting blue jeans and sneakers, driving his own car and carrying only his driver's license, Buck couldn't convince the officer that he was a state employee on business.

The officer had never heard of the state Motion Picture Office. It took several telephone calls back at the station, including one to the local Chamber of Commerce, to verify Buck's identity. Even then, the officer had doubts. "He told me I'd be in big trouble if anything happened in the next couple of days," Buck said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour," the first non-cable, hour-long nightly network newscast, remained stylish among network news broadcasts for its distinct lack of style.

Monday night's opening broadcast brought to mind a town meeting, where all manner of ideas and opinions could be heard. Like its predecessor, the 30-minute "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," this new program still emphasized dialogue and diversity of viewpoints.

To illuminate the latest developments in the Korean Air Lines tragedy that left 269 people dead, Washington anchor Jim Lehrer interviewed Richard Burt, an assistant secretary of state. Burt's responses fleshed out the day's developments leading toward President Reagan's speech to the nation later Monday night.

Then, to find out how the story had played around the country, editors from newspapers in Sacramento, Calif., Southbridge, Mass., and Grinnell, Iowa, were queried by New York anchor Robert MacNeil. With hook-ups like these, the broadcast will be making a conscious effort to move beyond the New York-Washington news axis.

The exchange of opinions and concerns on the program was given direction by the guiding questions from MacNeil and Lehrer, combining to raise most of the appropriate questions on the reported destruction of the Korean Air Lines jet by a Soviet fighter.

This discussion lasted some 20 minutes — nearly the entire length of the commercial networks' newscasts after commercials and promotional messages are subtracted.

Instead of news correspondents telling viewers what happened, as the commercial newscasts tend to do, the approach of the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" was to enlighten through interviews and discussion. The old one-from-column-A, single-format concept has been expanded and on Monday included a secondary story from Column B about labor, a smattering of the day's other top developments, and one mini-documentary on the Theater for the Deaf.

On Monday, Labor Day night, the secondary story examined labor's potential impact on the 1984 presidential election. Washington correspondent Judy Woodruff, formerly of NBC News, interviewed steel workers about the AFL-CIO's decision to endorse Democratic candidates before the primaries.

With that report as a backdrop, MacNeil and Lehrer then interviewed Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige and Sol Chaikin, vice president of the AFL-CIO.

The "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" is obviously comfortable with this interview-illumination approach to the news. Both anchors have easy-going styles that stress light over heat.

The broadcast, however, needs to better organize its other news stories. These additional reports are designed to make the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" a substitute for the commercial networks' newscasts and no longer just a supplement.

On Monday night, PBS' coverage of the Lebanon story from a British Broadcasting Corp. reporter was sketchy. Although the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" covered almost as much hard-news ground as the "CBS Evening News," CBS anchor Dan Rather's coordination of those stories was much easier to follow.

One break from tradition on MacNeil-Lehrer was the inclusion of two cosmetic "video postcards" — scenes of nature designed to separate the show's segments, which only served to jar the viewer. In the future, better identification of the different sections of the broadcast should make these scenes unnecessary. On Monday, viewers got a glimpse of a river and of romping buffalo.

The funniest moment on the first installment of "Thicke of the Night" on Monday night came five minutes from the end. It was a parody of movie reviewers Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel, but that's a long time to wait for laughs when the show started at 11:30 EDT.

This new syndicated talk-variety show stars comedian Alan Thicke, a successful Canadian talk show host who showed a quick, wry wit. As a comedian and singer, he's better than this show's format, a frantic kitchen-sink program that emphasizes racy sketches geared to the younger, stay-up-late audience.

As an interviewer, Thicke is stilted and uncertain whether to be serious or comical. He comes across as neither.

"Thicke of the Night," which has lured away a handful of network affiliates and many independent stations, will compete in this time slot against NBC's "Tonight" show and ABC's "Nightline."

"Thicke of the Night" is produced by Fred Silverman, the former NBC president.

Telethon Raises $30.7 Million

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joking about his recent double-bypass heart surgery, a fit-looking Jerry Lewis attracted nearly $30.7 million in pledges for muscular dystrophy research and treatment in his annual TV appeal for "Jerry's kids."

The comedian, still smiling after 21½ hours of fund raising at the 18th annual Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon, said research by the Muscular Dystrophy Association is partly responsible for his surviving a heart attack Dec. 31.

The telethon Sunday and Monday drew $30,691,627 in pledges, the third highest total in its 18-year history. Telethons in 1980 and 1981 surpassed $31 million.

Many celebrities in the 1983 entertainment extravaganza made references to the once chain-smoking Lewis' heart attack. He gave up smoking after the heart attack and today is reported in excellent health.

When co-host Sammy Davis Jr. tossed aside an unlit cigarette, saying he was trying to give up smoking, Lewis joked, "I can tell you how I did it."

"Yeah, but you always do things the hard way," Davis retorted.

About 100 celebrities participated in the telethon, which was broadcast live from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas with feeds from New York City and Atlantic City, N.J.

They included Ed McMahon, Wayne Newton, Tony Orlando, Andy Williams, Pearl Bailey, Larry Gatlin, Cliff Robertson, Dolly Parton, Merle Haggard, David Hartman, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Joe Namath.

Lewis said the MDA — the beneficiary of the telethons and his other volunteer efforts for three decades — has been contributing to cardiovascular research for 25 years. Although MDA conducts year-round fund-raising activities, the telethon is its major source of income in fighting neuro-muscular diseases.

The association supports a wide range of research projects, has 240 outpatient clinics, conducts MDA camps in 42 states and provides handicapped patients with transportation. The services are offered to victims of muscular dystrophy diseases at no cost.

Lewis has never said why he became involved in raising money for muscular dystrophy. "The fact that I care is all that matters," he said last week. "The reason is of no consequence."

Tayback Out Of Intensive Care

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actor Vic Tayback — Mel of Mel's Diner, Linda Lavin's hard-nosed boss in the television series "Alice" — is out of intensive care following triple bypass heart surgery.

Tayback, 53, underwent the surgery for 3½ hours Saturday at St. Joseph's Medical Center, has been moved to a private room, and is expected to remain in the hospital another week or so.

"He's in good condition today," said nursing supervisor Cheryl Stanner on Monday.

Although taping of 16 episodes of "Alice" was postponed four weeks to early October because of Tayback's operation, the first eight episodes for the fall season were taped last spring. There should be no interruption in the new shows, Warner Bros. Television has said.

Joan Jett Led Festival Sing

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Wearing a red and black jumpsuit, Joan Jett led thousands at the Electric Cowboy festival singing one of her big hits, "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" over the Labor Day weekend, although she concedes, "Some people think it's very unlady-like to sweat and run around on a stage."

"It's a natural body function," she says. "If you jump and run around like I do on stage you are going to sweat."

Performers at the weekend festival included Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, Cheap Trick, Joe Walsh, Mitch Ryder, Leon Russell, Gregg Allman, Johnny Van Zant and the Marshall Tucker Band.

"I'm very aggressive and determined," said Ms. Jett, who performed Sunday. "People always mix that up with being mean."

"I'll tell you what's really gratifying," she added. "I get letters from girls who say I inspired them, whether it's to pick up a guitar and play rock 'n' roll — or to go in and ask their boss for a raise. That's inspiring to me."

ABC Journalists Among Casualties

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two journalists working for ABC television have been wounded, one seriously, and two others were missing in Lebanon's battle-torn central mountains, a spokesman for ABC here said.

Ray Nunn, ABC bureau chief in Beirut, said Monday that Clarke Todd, 39, a Canadian resident of London, was wounded in the chest by shrapnel Sunday during a barrage by Christian militiamen on the Druse town of Kfar Matta 11 miles southeast of Beirut.

Todd, employed by Canadian television but on assignment with ABC, was taken to a Lebanese army clinic where he was reported in stable condition.

Another member of his crew, ABC soundman Nick Ludlow, 22, of London was wounded in the ankle by shrapnel. Nunn said, but made his way to the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's airport and was reported in good condition.

Two other members of the seven-man crew were separated by shelling from the others and have not been heard from, Nunn said. He would not identify them pending notification of their families.

Nunn said the crew was sent to Kfar Matta in the Chouf mountains Friday to report on the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the area, which began Saturday.

Within hours of the Israeli departure, battles broke out between Christian and Druse militias for control of the area.

On Monday, NBC television said a five-member crew, including two Lebanese drivers, had not been heard from since Friday when they left for the Druse town of Aley. The five crew members returned safely today.

Princeton Tries Assure Privacy

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Actress Brooke Shields wants no special attention at college — so Princeton University officials are making a special effort to chase away reporters and photographers interested in her move onto campus.

The 18-year-old actress, known for modeling Calvin Klein jeans and starring in the films "Endless Love" and "The Blue Lagoon," began the Ivy League school's week-long freshman orientation program Monday prior to the start of classes Sept. 12.

The university announced that it would respect Miss Shields' request to be treated "like any other student" without press conferences, photo sessions or other fanfare.

Water-Use Restrictions Are Again Applied In Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — With 25,000 thirsty university students in town and no rain in sight, water-use restrictions took effect today in Chapel Hill, where shortages are far from uncommon.

Since 1932, Chapel Hill has relied on the 220-acre University Lake for its water. When the University of North Carolina built the lake, the town's population was about 5,000 — half of whom were students.

Nowadays, the university uses one-third of the Orange County Water and Sewer Authority's daily consumption of 7½ million gallons. Officials want the consumption reduced immediately to 5½ million gallons per day.

OWSA executive director Everett Billingsley says that means strict adherence to the following conservation guidelines:

- Don't flush the commode after each use.
- Don't serve water at restaurants unless diners ask for it.
- Don't leave the spigot running while shaving or brushing teeth.
- Don't wash the car.
- Reduce use of dishwashers and washing machine.
- Install water-flow control devices on showers.
- Hold showers to four minutes.

The conservation measures will remain in effect until the lake is replenished; which probably won't happen any time soon, says Billingsley.

"A thundershower isn't going to do it for us," he said.

Water shortages are nothing new in Chapel Hill.

In 1968, a general drought led to strict bans on lawn watering and car washing.

In 1977, still another long, dry spell prompted cheerful "dirtiest dorm" and "dirtiest car" contests at the university and the digging of 20 wells so campus plants and shrubs would not be dependent on OWASA-supplied water.

The 1977 incident also led OWASA to devise a five-stage water conservation plan. Today's phase, step two, comes two weeks after OWASA urged customers to make voluntary water-saving efforts.

Billingsley hopes the fifth and final stage, water rationing, won't be necessary. "Heaven forbid that we'd ever have to go that far," he said.

OWASA is buying water from the Town of Hillsborough, 10 miles to the north, at a rate of 1½ million gallons per day. It has also drained 40 million gallons from its own emergency reserve, a once-abandoned stone quarry about five miles west of Carrboro that holds 220 million gallons.

OWASA plans to build a $13 million reservoir that would contain 3 billion gallons of water and hold shortages at bay for 50 years. That project, Billingsley said, has encountered bureaucratic delays.

Grandmother Says She Is Only Woman Police Chief For State

OLD FORT, N.C. (AP) — Frankie is Old Fort's police chief, a 47-year-old law enforcement veteran with experience as an officer and a deputy sheriff. Frankie is also a grandmother.

For four years, Frankie Poteat has been a familiar figure as she patrols the streets of this town of 880 in McDowell County some 20 miles east of Asheville. For 2½ years, she's been — to her knowledge — the only woman police chief in North Carolina.

"I didn't really want to be chief," Mrs. Poteat recalled in an interview. "But when they asked me if I wanted the job, well, what would you say? I said yes.

"For a while... some of the men officers resented having a woman boss. But now, it runs just fine. I've got a good group of guys." She looked away for a moment, then added significantly, "Some of those others aren't here anymore."

Mrs. Poteat says being a woman police chief doesn't cause as many problems as an observer might think.

"Well, I think being a woman is an advantage," she said. "You can arrest a man and he will go more willingly with you than he will with a man. I weigh 175 and I'm 5-10, and I've seldom had any trouble."

She added that she can handle a gun but has never shot at anyone.

Mrs. Poteat joined Burlington's police force in 1959, then was a deputy sheriff in McDowell County for 12 years before joining the force at Old Fort.

She managed to raise a family while advancing her career. Her husband, Roy Poteat, 52, travels extensively for a wholesale company. A daughter, Terry Briggs, 30, teaches school in Charlotte; another daughter, Pam Poteat, lives in Houston, and Suzie, 16, is still at home. The birth of Mrs. Briggs' son five years ago made the chief a grandmother.

Mrs. Poteat's force consists of four full-time and four part-time officers. She divides her work time between administrative duties and patrolling.

"Call me policeman, policewoman or police chief; I answer to all three, but it's not all that different being the chief."

"Police work gets in your blood. You can't be satisfied with anything else. You have to have dedication because the money's not there. The hours are not there. You can get a job anywhere paying more money."

She added that she's satisfied to work in a town where the most common law-enforcement problem is the domestic disturbance and traffic violation. There are seldom more than five or six arrests per week, she said.

"In Old Fort, everybody knows everyone else on a first name basis. And they expect you to know them, and all about them. Every morning, for instance, we call all the elderly and handicapped people in town who live alone. Just check up to see if they're all right. There are about 15 of them. It's all more personal here."

The town's smallness has another advantage, she said.

"When something happens, we can just sit here and pretty well figure it out. There aren't too many people who might have done it. We've got a choice few, and we can pretty well figure it out. In fact, we haven't got any unsolved cases now."

Peronists Name Their Candidate

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former Sen. Italo Luder today won the presidential nomination of the Peronist Party, the country's largest political force, for general elections scheduled Oct. 30.

Deolindo Bittel, former governor of Chaco province and current vice president of the party, won the vice presidential nomination at the party's national convention in a downtown theater.

The candidacies were announced early today by party spokesman Fernando Donaires. Donaires said the 663 national delegates on hand, out of a total of 707, approved the ticket by "acclamation," with a voice vote and show of hands.

Luder was virtually assured of the party's nomination Aug. 23 when the only other major contender, former Economy Minister Antonio Cafiero, renounced his presidential ambitions to pursue the party's nomination for governor of Buenos Aires province.

Luder's main rival in the elections will be Radical Party nominee Raul Alfonsín. The winner of the election is scheduled to take office Jan. 30, 1984.

Luder, 66, served as provisional president for five weeks in 1975 when then-President Isabel Peron took a leave of absence for health reasons. Mrs. Peron was ousted by the military on March 24, 1976.

She spent more than five years in detention and was convicted in March 1981 of misusing Peronist charity funds during her presidency. She was sentenced to almost eight years in prison and was barred for life from holding public office.

She was released July 7, 1981 after serving two-thirds of her term and traveled two days later to Spain, where she remains in self-exile.

President Gen. Reynaldo Bignone has promised that Mrs. Peron will be granted a presidential pardon soon.

A motion to recess the Peronist convention until the pardon was granted was presented Monday night but failed to draw wide support.

Mrs. Peron, who is still the nominal head of the party, is expected to return to Argentina once she is pardoned.

Outstanding Carolina Unit

CLAYTON, N.C. (AP) — The Clayton Service Area of the American Red Cross' Triangle Area Chapter has been named the outstanding blood services chapter in North Carolina and South Carolina for 1982-83.

At the Red Cross August awards banquet in Charlotte, the Clayton area received five awards — more than any other area in the two states, which include 58 chapters.

The honor was for overall achievement in blood services, blood collections above 100 percent of the goal for July and three donor recruitment awards.

IN VIET CUSTODY

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Vietnamese Embassy confirmed today an American and a Briton are in custody in Vietnam for violating territorial waters. The men have been missing since they set sail in June to hunt for buried treasure.

Flatlanders Are Invited

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mountain people have known for years that tossing a dead snake over a tree will make it rain.

But starting next month flatlanders attending Central Piedmont Community College will be able to brush up on the old lore of the hills.

Instructor Mary Herrera says she grew up listening to her "granny" tell stories about fireballs that appeared on the mountain after dark and chased "young-uns." She also learned mountain theories on medicine and healing.

She was told that pulling the legs off a granddaddy longlegs spider and swallowing the body alive would reduce fever. She also learned that tying knots in a dishcloth and throwing the cloth out the back door would get rid of warts.

"I've been around it all my life," says Ms. Herrera, 47. "It wasn't very important to me when I was young because it was such a common thing. Now I appreciate it."

"People where I grew up believed those things and, to a large degree, they worked," said Ms. Herrera. "I don't know if it was the power of suggestion or the fact that people's faith was so strong, but these things worked a lot of the time."

Choosing Contact Lenses

My daughter is 15 years old. She has gotten to the age where we are really considering getting her contact lenses. We are totally confused. There are so many different kinds of lenses that we don't know how to choose them. The price range is great. Although we want to have the best, we don't want to throw out money on fancy advertising gimmicks. How would you go about it? — Mrs. B.P., Ind. Dear Mrs. P.:

You are not alone in your confusion. Being bombarded by glamorous advertisements of one kind or another for contact lenses does not help to enlighten one in making a decision.

First I would be sure that your daughter is seen by an eye specialist, or ophthalmologist. The purpose of this visit is to be sure that there is no intrinsic problems that would affect the eyes if contact lenses were used.

The findings of the eye specialist will dictate the choice of contact lenses. That decision is made in each individual case. There is no universal rule for all people.

There seem to be definite advantages to the use of soft lenses. The most important one is that they can be worn for longer periods of time with greater comfort.

Soft lenses cause little or no mechanical irritation. Yet even these must be carefully chosen.

There is a tendency for manufacturers to produce long, long, long wearing lenses. Many eye specialists feel that there are potential dangers to these. After all, it just takes a few seconds to clean and replace them. It seems pointless to have a "foreign body" in the eye for any longer than is necessary.

I would suggest this approach to the purchase of lenses rather than one that's based entirely on the "temptations" that do not have the stamp of medical reliability.

My brother had a cyst of the lung removed. He is 34 years old and has been in fine health since the operation four months ago. I worry that maybe the doctor didn't tell us that this cyst was a cancer. Is a cyst ever cancerous? — Miss E.M.B., Calif. Dear Miss B.:

You can be certain that if there were any suggestion that the cyst was malignant, or cancerous, someone in the family would have been told about it. Such information is never kept as a secret by the surgeons.

Often these cysts are birth abnormalities. Frequently they are present without causing any symptoms. When they become enlarged and exert pressure on the surrounding tissue, surgical removal is necessary.

There is no reason why you should speculate about your brother's problem. Ask his surgeon and get the assurance that you up to now have not received.

N. C. Man Leads Religious Deprogramming Battle

By NANCY BROWER
The Asheville Times
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —

flourishing under the protection of the separation of church and state, according to an Asheville educator who has helped deprogram local youths.

"Cults have not disappeared. They have simply polished up their act. You don't see as many crazily dressed people as you used to. The Moonies are as squeakily clean Americans as you can imagine," said Jim McDonald.

McDonald was on the staff at Highland Hospital when he was sent by parents to kidnap an Asheville youth at a church run by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon in San Francisco. He estimated the number of children recruited from the Asheville area at between five and 10.

He said there are several characteristics common to cults:

— "A cult always has an earthly head, who supposedly has divine powers, either stated or implied."

— "Members usually live in groups. They have not gone through a soul-searching process before joining that group, as a Catholic nun or Buddhist monk would."

— "The group becomes the individual's support group and undermines family and friends, thereby making the members' allegiance to that group stronger than it ever was to outside groups. However, the support is superficial. In the beginning, the group tells you you are wonderful 16 hours a day. This is powerful stuff when all your family has been telling you is to clean your room."

— "Allegiance to the earthly head becomes as strong or stronger than allegiance to a Supreme Being."

— "Finally, there is no freedom of thought."

McDonald said most cults are also in the business of making money.

"Forming a cult is one of the quickest and cheapest ways to make money. You have an army of kids begging their food and sleeping in vans. They are on the streets begging or selling trinkets or flowers — or, in the case of the Unification Church, they are running businesses. What's more, properties owned by so-called churches are tax free," he said.

The Rev. Malcolm Mac-Cubbin, who as a Presbyterian minister also has taken youths from cults, said they use some or all of the following techniques for indoctrination:

— Lack of sleep.
— Love-bombing, an intense boosting of the ego with expressions of love.

— Diet control. Recruits are fed starchy food and little or no protein, which the brain needs to function.

— No free time alone to think. Constant discussion groups.

— Lowering of self respect, including identity change.
— Isolation or strange locale.

— Peer group pressure.
— Songs, chants, repetitious sayings, or rhythmic rocking. Intense memorization of writings of the leader or selected scriptures.

MacCubbin is now director of church relations for Warren Wilson College.

"Cults are not a religious problem," MacCubbin said.
"They are mental health problem."

Kay Gould, housemother at Warren Wilson College, said her 27-year-old son became a member of the Unification Church, beginning two years of torment.

He was a grown man who apparently entered the church of his own free will.

"To plot to kidnap my own son was against everything I ever stood for," Mrs. Gould said. "When it came right down to the wire and I had deprogrammers on hold, I still didn't want to do it."

She went ahead with the attempt.

"It was very successful, almost as if God had his hand in the whole thing. It could not have gone better," she said.

gramming by fasting for four days. It was not until a former friend and ex-Moonie was flown in that the friend could persuade him to break his fast. At the right moment, his friend asked him,
"Duane, what would you like to eat?" He answered that he'd like some tea and toast.

Gould said of the nine days of deprogramming, "He trusted his friend. He didn't trust us. It was counterproductive for me to show my face. We rented a Winnebago to take him to the rehabilitation center. By then, he was talking to me. He looked like a bewildered, helpless child.

It was a very hard time for all of us, for him, too."

That was in 1980.

"He was almost 29 by the time we rescued him. The older he got, the more it seemed I was interfering in his life. But, he was a very precious person to us. He had so much potential, but he was wasting it."

There is no point in parents rescuing a young person from a cult or mind-control group unless they are prepared to follow through immediately with deprogramming and re-integration into society, says McDonald.

He said deprogramming must be done in much the same way as the indoctrination, on an intensive, almost round-the-clock basis. However, in contrast to the in-doctrination's sleep deprivation and starchy diet, the deprogramming subject is allowed sleep and rest and provided a healthy diet with plenty of protein. Otherwise the principles are much the same.

Kay Gould, who has done a study of cult practices as part of her work at Warren Wilson College, outlined de-programming techniques in a paper on the subject.

Here are some of the elements of a classic depro-gramming:

— Discrediting the cult leader.

— Listing contradictions:
"How can he preach love when he exploits people?"

— Working toward and being alert to the subject's breaking point — the point at which he begins to listen to the deprogrammer; when reality begins to take precedence over ideology.

— The encouragement of self-expression. The point at which the subject begins to open up and voice some of his own complaints against the cult.

— Identification and trans-ference. When the subject begins to identify with the deprogrammers, to think for himself and to see himself as an opponent of the cult rather than a member.

Mrs. Gould stressed that there are abuses in the de-programming profession as in any other. She said parents should seek information and advice from other parents who have hired deprogrammers.

McDonald said the family that elects to rescue and deprogram its son or daughter will have to rely on others who have gone through the same experience.

"Organized religion, the medical and legal profession don't know how to combat cults. They are simply not geared for it," he said.

THE RC-135 AND THE BOEING 747 — Soviet sources have raised the possibility that the Korean Airlines 747 may have been shot at by Soviet Fighters because it was mistaken for a U.S. reconnaissance plane. Both photos have been printed to the same size scale to illustrate the differences. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — The
that was reported shot down by a Soviet fighter in the Sea of Japan was considerably larger than the Air Force RC-135 spy plane that the United States has said was also in the general area.

The RC-135 was developed from the Boeing 707 and is one of several military versions of that aircraft, the best-known of which are the KC-135 tanker plane and the E-3 AWACS. The military version of the Boeing 747 is known as the E-4, used only as an airborne command post.

In addition to being almost 80 feet longer and more than twice as heavy as the 707, the 747 has a distinctive bump near the nose for the pilot's cabin.

Following are general dimensions of the RC-135 and the Boeing 747-200, as described by Jane's All The World's Aircraft:
