Pitt Schools Calendar Revised At Bd. Meet

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
The 1983-84 county school calendar, in effect since Tuesday, has been revised by the Pitt County Board of Education to allow the annual Parent Conference Day to be held Oct. 17 rather than Nov. 11.

they feared a conference day, which has its heaviest parent traffic from 6-8 p.m., would draw low participation on a Friday night.

Oct. 17 is a Monday, a day school officials said they thought would attract greater participation than a Friday.

Bitter Soviet Propaganda Barrage Is Aimed At U.S.

By The Associated Press
More than 100,000 mourners jammed a Seoul stadium today to denounce the Soviet Union for downing a South Korean jumbo jetliner, and the Kremlin tried to deflect world outrage by launching a press campaign comparing President Reagan to a Nazi.

Australian pilots, meanwhile, agreed to heed a call by an international organization of commercial pilots to ban flights to Moscow, but there was little immediate response from pilots' associations in other nations.

"God will not forgive this deed," South Korean Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup told mourners, many screaming with grief, during the mass rally in Seoul. "Retribution and curse will fall upon them for the crime they have committed."

A statement read to the crowd said: "It is difficult to control our tears and keep from gnashing our teeth when we think of the last terrifying moments of the passengers and crew...An inhuman attack by Soviet planes using sophisticated weaponry...An attack during a time of peace and not war."

In Moscow, one day after the Soviets acknowledged shooting down the airliner with 269 people aboard, the government-run press unleashed a savage attack on the United States, comparing U.S. officials to Nazis and accusing Reagan of stirring up anti-Soviet hysteria.

One cartoon in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, showed Reagan swallowing a banner displaying a swastika, and a weekly paper accused U.S. officials of using the "recipe" of Nazi propaganda chief Josef Goebbels: "Tell lies, tell lies — something will stick."

Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was downed Thursday over the Sea of Japan after crossing Soviet territory on a flight from New York to the South Korean capital. The 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans, are presumed dead.

A Japanese Maritime Agency official said the number of Soviet vessels operating in the waters near where the airliner went down nearly doubled today, fueling speculation the Soviets may have found something in the area.

The official, Hiroshi Kishima, said 13 Soviet boats and one Ilyushin reconnaissance plane observed searching waters northeast of Moneron Island.

After ignoring or denying accusations that Soviet interceptors destroyed the Boeing 747, the Soviet government Tuesday admitted its jet fighters shot the jetliner down but said Soviet pilots believed it was a U.S. spy plane. U.S. officials say the Soviets knew the jumbo jet was a civilian craft.

The Kremlin placed total blame for the disaster on the United States but has offered no proof to back its charge that the plane was spying. The United States has admitted a U.S. spy plane was in the region but says it had landed hundreds of miles away when the jetliner was downed.

Tuesday's Soviet statement in Moscow came moments after the United States and Japan presented to the U.N. Security Council transcripts of a Soviet fighter pilot announcing he was rocketing the jetliner and then proclaiming: "the target is destroyed."

Pitt Commissioners OK Purchase Landfill Space

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Tuesday approved the purchase of 4½ acres of land adjacent to the county landfill for $2,250 an acre.

The property, also adjacent to a 5.33 acre tract bought by the board in April for $2,250 an acre, was owned by Ms. Rubelle Goins. The April purchase was made from Johnnie Moya.

The purchase of the land will make the landfill serve a longer period of time and will allow the use of some landfill property that otherwise would have been unusable.

The board also approved the purchase of special rigid cervical collars for all rescue squads in the county after Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner told commissioners that Pitt County Memorial Hospital emergency room physicians recommended that rescue units discontinue the use of "soft" collars. Joyner said new collars would cost $1,282.

Commissioners approved the purchase with the understanding that the squads would be responsible for replacing damaged or lost collars.

In other rescue-related business, commissioners approved a lease agreement with the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television which will allow the county to

Three French Peacekeepers Are Killed In West Beirut's Shelling

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shelling killed three French peacekeepers and wounded four in west Beirut today, informed sources said. French war jets scrambled from the aircraft carrier Foch to search out the source of fire in the Druse-controlled central mountains. A car bomb also killed six people, wounded 27 and collapsed a four-story building near a mosque about a mile south of the French compound, police said. The victims were not immediately identified and there was no claim of responsibility.

The French troops were hit in west Beirut's Kaskas neighborhood near the race-track. French authorities said one soldier was killed and two were wounded, but sources from the multinational force who requested anonymity said three were killed, including a colonel, and four wounded in two separate attacks.

French Defense Minister Charles Hernu warned in a television interview in Paris that the artillery batteries shelling the French headquarters in Beirut would be destroyed "if the firing does not cease immediately."

Associated Press photographer William Foley, reporting from the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport, said two Super Etendard jets scrambled to locate gun positions shelling Beirut. The Lebanese army command said the jets did not attack.

Foley said one French and one Italian destroyer moved to about 600-700 yards from the Beirut coast and were cruising just offshore from the U.S. Marine zone at the airport. He said one U.S. destroyer and a U.S. guided missile cruiser were farther north near the U.S. and British Embassies at the seafont Ein Mreisseh Corniche.

The new casualties to the multinational peace force came a day after two Marines were killed and three Americans and six Italian peacekeepers wounded when mortar shells blasted their zones on Beirut's southern flank.

The Pentagon identified the dead Marines as Cpl. Pedro J. Valle, 25, San Juan, Puerto Rico, and Lance Cpl. Randy M. Clark, 19, Minong, Wis.

Police today said the overall toll in the four-day-old war was 292 killed and 706 wounded, not counting the latest French casualties. They reported no major changes in ground positions in overnight fighting between Christian and Druse militiamen around Beirut's airport as well as in the embattled Chouf and Aley Mountains.

Lebanon's state radio said shells slammed into several Moslem-populated west Beirut neighborhoods in today's barrage, and warned residents to stay indoors.

The radio did not say who was shelling the Kaskas, Arab University and the Sportif neighborhoods, once strongholds of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas. The districts are now policed by the French contingent.

The French carrier Foch took up an offshore position facing Beirut on Tuesday while a U.S. amphibious force carrying 2,000 additional Marines headed for waters off Lebanon to back up the 1,200-man Marine contingent.

Sen. John East Feels Soviet Action Is A Lesson In Reality

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The shooting down of a civilian aircraft by the Soviet Union underscores the naivete of the arms freeze movement and points out the support that must be given to Pres. Reagan to provide for a strong national defense, Sen. John East said yesterday afternoon in a news conference.

Those who attribute good intentions to the Soviets, he said, hopefully have had a new lesson in realism. The MX-missiles and the B-1 bomber should be easier to fund now. "Up to now, it's been like pulling eye teeth," he commented.

He said he is glad the president has not seen fit to use selective embargoes and the like as a means of speaking out against the airliner's being shot down. In his opinion, he said, selective embargoes are "purely cosmetic, having no real meaning or value." Grain embargoes, he said, like that of Pres. Carter after the Afghanistan incident, are "swinging at the Russian bear and hitting the American farmer in the nose."

He said he hopes other nations will join the United States in restricting Soviet planes' landings and in other sanctions. "The Western World," he said, "must show it is not being buffaloes by such wanton action."

He said the timing of his news conference was purposely delayed, "because I don't like to shoot from the hip when all the facts are so murky. He said he thinks the Reagan administration "has worked hard to give a good accounting of the facts as they've become apparent."

Asked if he believes the Korean airliner's being shot down could have been a deliberate attempt on the lives of Sen. Jesse Helms (who was on the preceding plane) or Sen. Larry McDonald, who died in the incident, he said, "It's conceivable, but I wouldn't dare say. Perhaps no one will ever know. Both men are strong anti-communists who were on their way to Korea to help celebrate the alliance of South Korea and the United States against communism."

Should A Lady Call A Gentleman?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Sexual harassment has recently become a hot topic. This probably sounds unusual, but I am a sexually harassed male. I am 31, single and recently inherited a good business from my father. With this business I inherited an excellent office manager. She does a remarkable job, but she is aggressively pursuing me — if you know what I mean. She always manages to rub up against and touch me in a very familiar way. She's done just about everything but pin me down physically. She is 11 years older than I am, and I know she means business. I wouldn't dream of firing her because she's indispensable to my business. What should I do?

HIDING IN THE OFFICE

DEAR HIDING: C'mon. Don't tell me you either have to give in to this woman or risk losing her and having your business fall apart.

Tell her that a wise tailor never dances where he cuts the cloth, or you don't choose to fish off the company dock, or anything else that translates into "No."

And if she leaves, she leaves. Nobody is indispensable.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column about "Should a lady call a man?"

After I was divorced, I was invited to a Parents Without Partners dance. Toward the end of the evening, I met a very attractive gentleman, and as I was about to leave, he hurriedly wrote down his phone number and asked me to call him. I was quite surprised. At first I didn't want to call him, but I changed my mind and a few days later I called. I didn't tell him I wanted to see him — instead I made up some excuse. I think I asked if P.W.P. had any plans for the Fourth of July. He said he didn't know, but we could make some.

Well, we started dating on the Fourth, and a month later we were married. In two days we will celebrate our 10th anniversary. So, sometimes it pays for a lady to call a gentleman.

SADIE, MARRIED LADY IN ARKANSAS

DEAR SADIE: Congratulations. Although Parents Without Partners is a good place to meet prospective mates, its prime purpose is to introduce single parents who care about their children to others of the same mind.

DEAR ABBY: The vasectomized husband of "Loves Children," who refused to adopt because he was afraid of "bad genes," is using that as a copout.

We have three children. The first two were adopted, and the third is our natural child — an "unexpected surprise" after 17 years of marriage!

Our two adopted children are grown now and caused us very few problems.

The child of our flesh and blood is a high school dropout, has been busted twice for drugs, has had three automobile accidents, been fired from two jobs, and quit three because two were "too dirty" and the other one was on Sunday.

Now he lies in bed until 2 p.m. and watches TV all night. I am going to kick him out as soon as he is 19.

ALL FOR ADOPTION IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ALL: And I'm all for telling it like it is. Thanks for an honest letter.

Give Children That Old Soft Shoe, Pediatrician Tells Parents

NEW YORK (UPI) — A pediatrician says the best shoe styles for children are whatever will keep the footwear on their feet without sliding or rubbing against the heel.

High-tops are among the fashions that fill the bill, Dr. Andrew P. Mazey said in a recent speech. So are buckled or lace-up shoes.

High-tops once were thought necessary for ankle support. They are not, Mazey said — but they are a good choice for children who continually try to remove their shoes because high-tops are harder for a child to take off.

Besides, what some parents think of as weak ankles are a natural condition.

"All babies' ankles wobble until the muscles begin developing with exercise," Mazey said, and walking naturally is exercise itself.

The doctor is director of pediatrics at the Bronx Municipal Hospital Center and an associate professor of pediatrics at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

He spoke at a lunch sponsored by Wolverine World Wide, Inc., parent company of Hush Puppies shoes.

Another myth he'd like to dispell is that most babies appear to be flat-footed.

Some may have slightly flat feet, he said, but infants' arches often are hidden by a heavy layer of baby fat that disappears with age.

Because babies' shoe sizes can change every two or three months, it is tempting to use hand-me-downs.

Don't do it, Mazey said: "Each child's foot is shaped differently and each person has a different gait."

Shoes that have conformed to someone else's foot can cause chafing and blisters and may even lead a child to alter his natural walking pattern, Mazey said.

He also said special orthopedic shoes are totally unnecessary and potentially harmful unless the child has been diagnosed by a medical expert as having foot problems requiring them.

"Rigid shoes limit movement, which in turn inhibits the development of supporting muscles," he said.

"A toddler's foot is biomechanically sufficient to support his weight. Simply styled, soft-soled shoes offer enough protection for the normal foot and allow for comfortable movement."

Mazey said most pediatricians, podiatrists and orthopedists agree that simple, flexible-sole shoes are best for normal young feet.

Feet must flex naturally with every step. Toes are used for gripping and balance and, Mazey said, "shoes should encourage, not hinder, this movement."

Crepes or rubber soles help cushion feet and provide more traction than thin, smooth leather soles.

Supple leather uppers protect the feet from the elements and allow them to breathe. Leather also stretches and gives more easily and allows moisture to be carried away.

Mazey okays sneakers for play wear but warns against moisture build-up in them and other shoes of man-made materials. Trapped moisture can lead to foot odor and bacterial infections, he said.

A child who starts limping may be getting blisters, a signal that his shoes are too small. Limping or redness on the tops of toes and sides of the foot can also indicate too tight shoes, Mazey said.

Uneven wear on the inner or outer edges of soles may indicate foot or ankle problems that should be checked by a pediatrician.

When you buy children's footwear, Mazey said:

—Both feet should be measured while standing and, if one foot is larger than the other (often the case), shoes should be bought for the larger size.

—Make sure the shoe heels hug each foot gently.

—Check the toe box. Press down to see if there's about 1/2 to 3/4 inch of free space beyond the big toe.

—Don't compromise a wide foot by accepting a medium or narrow width in the next largest size.

Area Crafts Workshop Set

The Agricultural Extension Service is sponsoring its annual Area II Craft Workshop Oct. 4-5 at Old Ford Church near Washington, N.C.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide craftsmen an opportunity to learn a new craft and teach it to others. This year there are 19 different classes being offered including:

Braided rugs; calligraphy; dolls; chair weaving; crochet; hand-tied fringe; simoino patchwork; quilted patchwork vest; tatting; English smocking; pine straw weaving; cathedral quilting; egg basket; stenciling; wheat weaving; candlewicking; net/lace weaving or darning; sculptured lampshades; and square baskets.

The registration fee is $6 plus supplies. All registrations for classes must be made by Sept. 14. Call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 752-2934, extension 370, for pre-registration forms and additional information.

When the heels are lifted, the soles should flex and a crease form in the shoe just beyond the instep. You should see some gaping at the sides as the child walks, but the shoe should not gape when the child is standing still.

Sack Strength

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Shipping sacks can be used to hold such products as petfood, fertilizer, sugar or chemicals.

Because the bags need to hold as much as 50 pounds of fertilizer, for example, the paper must be strong enough to withstand abuse, such as being thrown off the back of a truck.

A recent development called Stress Kraft paper by St. Regis has allowed the company to use only two sheets of the paper in a bag rather than three sheets normally required of regular paper.

"The two-wall construction provides a stronger bag than the three-ply model," said Sanford G. Scheller, a St. Regis vice president.

MRS. JAMES MICHAEL HADDOCK

Haddock-Anderson Vows Exchanged

Terry Elaine Anderson of Maury and James Michael Haddock of Greenville were united in marriage at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Grimsley Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Tom Miller officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Bennie J. Anderson Jr. She is the daughter of Mrs. Magnolia Anderson of Maury and Bennie J. Anderson Sr. of Greenville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Iris Kimery of Greenville and Rayvon Haddock of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal white gown of polyester lustreglo and silk Venise lace. The gown was fashioned with a modified Queen Anne neckline outlined in sculptured Venise lace encrusted with pearls. Matching lace encircled the waistline and the long fitted sleeves with lace inserts closed with lace cuffs. The flowing skirt with a center insert of accordin pleats extended into an attached chapel train. Her walking length veil of silk illusion, bordered with appliques and edged with a rolled edge, was attached to a silk Venise lace capelet. The bride carried a bouquet of silk flowers.

Gayle Smithson of Scufleton, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Debbie and Kim Anderson, sisters-in-law of the bride, Dawn Wallace, niece of the bride of Kinston, Terry Letchworth of Lizzie and Lou Ray Haddock, sister of the bridegroom of Greenville. Each wore identical dresses of rose taffeta styled with a square neckline, two tiered ruffled sleeves and set-in belt accented with a bow and streamers at the waistline. Each carried a bouquet of silk flowers like those of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of pink polyester, princess styled with chiffon long sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom wore a street length dress of blue taffeta overlaid with chiffon with an A-line skirt. Both wore a corsage of red roses.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Berry Anderson of Shine and Ricky Anderson of Snow Hill, brothers of the bride, Ronnie Haddock of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Joe Tripp of Greenville and Danny Wallace of Kinston, nephew of the bride.

The ring bearer was Jeremy Anderson, nephew of the bride from Shine and the flower girl was Christi Carter of Kinston.

Nuptial music was presented by Wesley Letchworth. Vocalists were David Letchworth and Vickie Biagini, cousins of the bride. Cindy Spivey presided at the register and the wedding was directed by Martha Moye.

After the wedding a reception was held in the church fellowship hall and was given by the mother of the bride. Cake was served by Rosa Dail, aunt of the bride, and punch was poured by Glenda Anderson, sister-in-law of the bride.

The church and fellowship hall were decorated with greenery and mixed flowers in colors of rose, burgundy and white with lighted candles.

The bridegroom is presently employed at Haddock's Alignment and Tire Service in Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live near Snow Hill.

A rehearsal dinner party was given by the bridegroom's mother at the church fellowship hall.

A miscellaneous shower was given by Glenda Anderson, sister-in-law of the bride, at her home in Kinston Tuesday. The couple was also entertained at several showers and a dinner party.

A back and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Senior Citizens To Be Honored At Coffee

Senior citizens of the Greenville area are invited to attend a coffee in their honor Sept. 14 at 10 a.m. in the auditorium of Wahl-Coates School.

According to Carolyn Ferebee, community schools director for city schools, at the coffee, senior cards will be given which will permit senior citizens, 55 years of age or older, to attend Greenville City School activities such as athletic events, drama presentations and musical programs at no cost.

An opportunity will be given to ask questions about the schools of Greenville such as policy, procedures and practices.

Senior citizens interested in attending the coffee should call the following by Friday: Sarah Ashton, 752-2911, Imogene Dupree, 752-2685, Emma May, 758-1243, Robert McGinty, 756-3297, or Dorothy Franks, Greenville City Schools, 752-4192.

Persons needing information about the coffee should contact Ms. Ferebee at 752-4192.

Preschool Intellect

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Preschoolers may have more advanced communication and intellectual abilities than educators and psychologists have believed.

Lucia French, an assistant professor of education at the University of Rochester, has studied young children's "scripts" — their knowledge about repetitive everyday events such as getting dressed or eating dinner.

"When 3- and 4-year-olds talk about behavior that has become 'scripted,' or act out scripts when playing, their language appears more advanced than usual," French says. "They also demonstrate that they understand cause-and-effect and before-and-after, important achievements previously thought to occur around age 7."

"Teachers may be better able to foster preschoolers' intellectual development by building on 'scripted' knowledge," she says.

Nearly four in five young adults say religion plays an important part in their lives, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. According to a nationwide survey of persons 18 to 36 years old, 37 percent find religion to be a very important part of their lives, and 41 percent call it fairly important, the council says. Fifteen percent said religion was not too important to them, while 7 percent dismissed religion as not at all important to them.

Reasonable Growth

Once again East Carolina University has set a record in on-campus enrollment.

Early figures announced by Registrar Gil Moore show that there are 13,358 on-campus students enrolled for the fall semester. That is an increase of 44 students over the fall enrollment of last year. It includes 221 students in the medical school at the medical campus adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

University officials had predicted that enrollment would hold steady in face of a tuition increase enacted this year. Although the increase is slight, Moore said he was "very pleased to announce the record enrollment."

East Carolina University is developing in many areas now, particularly in the field of medicine. We cannot expect the huge annual increases that we once saw as a surge of young people descended on the nation's colleges and universities.

The local campus, however, can continue a steady and reasonable growth and at the same time it can seek out the best possible students and provide innovative and improving programs for them.

Emphasis Is Local

The General Assembly authorized North Carolina's counties this year to impose an additional half-cent sales tax, with 40 percent of the revenue going to public schools, but that is not enough to satisfy some school administrators.

The problem lies in restrictions by the General Assembly on funding for schools this year. Some educators, such as Greensboro Superintendent Ken Newbold, say the Legislature overlooked major priorities in its appropriations while tying the hands of educators in other areas.

Strings attached to the funds will prevent experimentation with new programs or the hiring of new teachers, according to Newbold. "They are destroying the local autonomy and control of the local school boards and superintendents to meet local goals and objectives," he said.

What Newbold, and the others, are actually saying is that the Legislature tied the hands of local school boards and superintendents to experiment with state funds. The emphasis is on state funds.

There is nothing in the restrictions imposed by the General Assembly to prevent local systems from experimenting with local funds. Again, the emphasis should be on local funds.

Teacher Demand

WASHINGTON — One of the more unfortunate corollaries to the nation's educational crisis is a looming demand for new teachers. Even as educators try to sort out local strengths and weaknesses, rising school enrollments are likely to require more than 250,000 new teachers by 1990 — twice the number of college graduates now expected to enter the field. As a result, quality could continue to decline.

Yet, as school districts open their doors this week after several months of fault-finding, officials in New Jersey are preparing to turn a bleak situation to their advantage. On Wednesday the State Board of Education in Trenton learned the details of a plan that would allow liberal arts graduates to enter the teaching profession without formal training. While approval may be months away, proponents believe that the back-door approach could improve teacher quality and boost the profession's appeal among recent college graduates.

In New Jersey, as in other states, various factors have contributed to doubts about educational quality and made solutions elusive. On one hand, while state population and the number of teachers have increased, school superintendents have seen school enrollments drop by a fifth since 1972.

Meanwhile, during the same period, New Jersey teachers have experienced a 20 percent loss in purchasing power, as local wage increases fell short of already meager national averages. As everywhere, low salaries have often made teaching a career-of-last-resort.

Worse yet, according to a recent report by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, intended education majors in New Jersey scored below both state and national averages on the SAT in 1982. (Education majors nationwide, similarly, earned combined scores which were, on average, 80 points below that of all college-bound seniors.) Historically, of course, the education major has ranked among the least rigorous of college disciplines.

C. Emily Feistritzer, the teacher educator who wrote the 120-page report, laid much of the blame for educational decline on education pedagogy. She told our reporter Michael Duffy that education majors spend too much time on methods and too little on their subject areas. Bob Hochstein of the Carnegie Foundation put it this way: "You don't become a good teacher by taking lots of education courses. You become a good teacher by being a good economist or a good historian."

Feistritzer and Hochstein reflect a growing consensus that the education major may be the biggest villain in the education crisis. Indeed, the pending New Jersey plan is an attempt to stage an end run around the education degree.

As proposed, liberal arts graduates would become eligible for a teaching license after completing a year's supervised teaching internship and passing a qualifying exam. Interested history, biology or French graduates could simply contact a local school district and apply for work like any other job-seeker.

RALEIGH — That must have been a pretty good party, in April 1979. The Charlotte City Council and the Mecklenburg County Commissioners, with a little help from the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce, threw a $7,500 reception for members of the Legislature. It was billed as an opportunity for local officials to lobby for local programs but one Mecklenburg taxpayer thought it was an unconstitutional waste of his tax dollars.

Charles Horne, the taxpayer, sued. He lost in Superior Court and he lost in the Court of Appeals. But, the N.C. Supreme Court has now agreed to take the case on discretionary review which is generally an indication that the highest court has some problems with the lower court's rulings.

Horne is asking the court to settle a simple question: Can government officials use taxpayers' money to lobby other government officials? Horne's case directly, concerns only the two local boards and the $5,000 in tax money they paid for the party. But, if the high court ruled in his favor, it could have ramifications throughout state government.

Joe Beard, Horne's attorney, says they are making three arguments. First, local officials are not allowed to spend tax money unless authorized by a specific statute. They say no statute authorizes lobbying by local officials.

Second, the use of public money is supposed to be limited to public purposes. They say this money was used simply to promote the political purposes of the local officials at the reception. Legislators should ascertain public sentiment on legislation directly from the public, not through the tax-sponsored filter of local government officials.

Third, they say Mr. Horne has been compelled, through mandatory taxation, to contribute to the support of viewpoints he does not hold. This, they say, is contrary to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

The local officials were there to lobby the Legislature on a specific bill. Horne did not agree with the stand the local officials were taking on that bill. Therefore, he feels he's been forced to support a viewpoint with which he disagrees. Beard says he doesn't deny local officials the right to lobby the Legislature, but they shouldn't be able to spend tax dollars to do so.

Sometimes the input of local officials is needed in the Legislature. Beard says that in those cases, local officials should be paid for their expenses for coming to Raleigh to testify. But, in this case, he notes that they weren't testifying. They were partying.

Beard's arguments, carried forward, would pose some nifty problems in Raleigh should they be accepted by the court. For example, could the N.C. League of Municipalities and the N.C. Association of County Commissioners be forbidden from lobbying? Cities and counties pay dues to those groups. In Arizona, a court ruled that a similar league couldn't lobby because its dues came from tax money.

Another possible problem: Could the governor continue to have a corps of lobbyists? Beard says yes, but in a limited role. When the governor's lobbyist is working on the budget or other specific programs the governor is required to administer, there'd be no problem. But, in other areas, like passage of the Equal Rights Amendment or approval of bond votes, where the governor is pushing something that is not "a function of the office of the governor," the lobbyist is probably not authorized, he said.

With Horne's suit, this party became a legal question. But, it is really a political question: Do we want to pay taxes for one bunch of politicians to wine and dine another bunch?

Public Forum

To the editor:

In our society "American" means good and "Russian" is synonymous with scum. Last week the destruction of a Korean airliner compounded our hate.

Let's review the mishap. The plane was 500 miles off course. Why? There are two possibilities.

First, there is the possibility of poor navigation. Sure, it happens, but we're dealing with trusted professionals who had years of experience. Accidentally off course by 500 miles? Possible, but not probable.

Next there's the possibility that the plane was there for a purpose. Perhaps to innocently slip in and take a few snapshots, perhaps not.

The fact remains that the plane was there, and when contacted by Soviet radio and ordered to land for a security check, refused with silence. Why did they refuse? Somebody knows, but not you or me.

If a Russian plane crossed our borders and when ordered for 3½ hours to land, refused, there would be a very fired-up crosssection of America.

If any of you think our government wouldn't sacrifice lives in the name of national security, research our CIA.

A Russian plane wouldn't stay airborne within 100 miles of Camp Lejeune or Cherry Point, passengers or not. Especially after repeatedly refusing to land, as it gradually approached one of our "hot spots."

Maybe if we didn't hate the Russians so much, we wouldn't see things with such a biased attitude. It's the same attitude that starts wars.

Hiring

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. businesses, encouraged by the economy's new vigor, plan to hire nearly 1 million people between now and the end of the year, a survey said Sunday.

Separately, two other reports said the economy continued to expand in August, though at a slower pace than in July, while companies increased their spending plans.

In its jobs report, the business information firm of Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said a survey in July of 5,000 businesses found that hiring plans have picked up since January, when survey results implied a full-year gain of about 2.5 million jobs.

The July survey results prompted Dun & Bradstreet to increase its estimate of job gains for the year to between 3 million and 3.2 million.

The firm said, however, that despite the added jobs, the national unemployment rate was likely to remain near 9 percent through the end of the year.

The Labor Department reported Friday that the civilian unemployment rate in August was unchanged from July's 9.5 percent. The rate peaked last December at 10.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Purchasing Managers said its survey of executives in charge of corporate purchasing departments showed that the economy continued to surge in August, led by gains in employment and industrial production.

The association said its composite index fell a bit, indicating that the economy was continuing to grow last month but at a slightly slower pace than in July.

The index, measuring changes in production, employment, inventories and other items, slipped to 63.6 percent from 67.1 percent. The trade group attributed the decline to seasonal factors, and said the August figure was "still strong."

A reading above 50 percent indicates a growing economy, while a lower reading means the economy is contracting, the association said.

Learning The Ropes

Labor Day is as good a time as any to reflect on how children learn about the capitalistic system. All my prejudices and experiences about free enterprise were formed when I was kid.

My first inkling of what American business was all about took place when I was 10 years old, and sold "Collier's" magazine every week at the Hollis, Long Island, railroad station. Business was pretty good (in those days you worked for premiums such as roller skates and bicycles as well as money). Then a large gorilla of a boy showed up with the Saturday Evening Post, and told me if I minded at the station while he was there he would burn cigarette holes in my arms. In later fantasies I stood my ground and defied him to carry out his threat. In real life I did what any smaller kid would do, and stayed away from the railroad station. This experience made its mark on me, and I have hated big business ever since, as well as bigness for its own sake.

My second job, at age 12, was to take a wagon and stand in front of the A&P on Jamaica Avenue offering to pull people's packages home for 10 cents a bag. I even put up a sign made from a laundry cardboard with a slogan, "We Deliver Everything But Babies." The manager, for reasons I never understood, made me take down the sign and told me to stay off his sidewalk.

My third job, at age 13, was delivering flowers on weekends and holidays for a society florist who owned concessions at the Hotel Roosevelt and Ritz Carlton in New York City. I never saw the people I delivered the flowers to because I had to use the service entrances of the Park and Fifth Avenue buildings. But I did get an opportunity to listen to their help. The experience confirmed my suspicions that it was much better to be rich than poor. But it also taught me that no matter how wealthy I became when I grew up, I would never be a hero to my help.

At age 14 I applied for a job as a mailroom boy after school at Paramount Pictures on Broadway in New York City. I noticed the personnel manager's name on the door was Mr. O'Connor. I walked in and told his secretary that "Father Murphy of St. Francis College in Brooklyn sent me."

Mr. O'Connor saw me and asked how Father Murphy was. (I could tell he was faking it.) When I said the good priest was fine and spoke warmly of Mr. O'Connor, I got the job. The lesson I learned from this encounter was that it is always better to lie in the business world to get a job than it is to be honest and thrown out into the street.

At age 15 I worked the summer in a hotel at Long Beach, Long Island. I started as an elevator operator, and then became the night clerk from midnight until 8 in the morning. My instructions from management were that if a couple came in with luggage, to charge them the regular rate for a room, but if they came in without luggage to double the rate. The people with luggage invariably complained about the rate, but those without luggage never argued with me. I discovered another valuable lesson about business. If you provided an urgent need for someone in the United States, price was never a problem for the person who desperately wanted it.

I don't believe I learned too much about the free enterprise system from my days in the Marine Corps, except for one lesson that still seems to hold true. When you get into a poker game, the guys with the largest stacks of poker chips in front of them can usually bluff the people with their tiny stacks out of every pot.

With all its faults, America is still a land of opportunity, especially if you learn the ropes when you're young. If you wait until you go to the Harvard Business School to find out how the system works, you might possibly make it in the real world, but you will have missed out on all the fun.

Strength For Today

Pride is at one and the same time a great virtue and a great evil. It is a virtue if it supports us with an immovable determination never to do anything mean or unworthy. It is an evil if it puffs us up, causes us to look down on others, and encourages us to put our trust in wealth and luxury.

We look at pride — one moment it is an angel, the next moment a devil with a cloven hoof.

For many people pride affects only the head and the eyebrows. It causes the head to elevate arrogantly and the eyebrows to be raised in disgust and derision.

But when pride comes to our hearts as a holy angel sent by God himself — these are the times when we remember our parents, our upbringing, our family honor, the right and wrong of life's issues.

Moreover, we are aware that the only justification for pride in ourselves lies in what we have contributed to those around us; not in what we have extracted from them. Then, with the blessing of God, we are too proud to do evil.

Reagan Finds A Public Mandate

long run. Put simply, there was really no effective way to respond. The tipoff was the immediate decision by Secretary of State George Shultz not to call off his meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Madrid next week.

At this writing, the jury is still out on how President Reagan will truly react — beyond predictably tough words flowing from the White House and Foggy Bottom. But there is no doubt about his opportunity, if only temporary, created by the extraordinary public outpouring of anti-Soviet sentiment across the ideological spectrum.

What his advisers did not realize in the first hours Thursday is that Reagan now has the chance to realistically spell out U.S.-Soviet relations as the foundation for a 1984 presidential campaign markedly different from what had been in store for him last week. The unifying surge of emotion is there for the president to exploit — if he takes a detour from detente.

The administration's slow response to the tragedy reflects inability to perceive this opportunity at first glance. The White House announced the president was going to finish out his California vacation through Labor Day as scheduled; then, he was going to come back Saturday; actually, he returned late Friday. But that still left him multiple opportunities for vigorous response.

The first test is whether Reagan finally will meet the challenge of Soviet cheating on various nuclear arms control treaties. One day before the Soviet attack on the Korean Airlines 747B, a top Pentagon official told us: "The Soviets are now cheating all along the margins." The president has on his desk precise examples of these violations, but for weeks has avoided going public with them.

Arms control violations would be, politically speaking, easy for the president to take on in the mood of revulsion that has swept this country and its allies.

Jury Selection Is Underway

Jury selection began Tuesday, and continued today, in the murder and armed robbery trial of Dwight Parker, 23 of Newark, N.J.

Parker, standing trial in Pitt County Superior Court, is charged with first degree murder and armed robbery in connection with the deaths of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs, 31 of Grifton, and Anthony Ray Herring, 27, of Goldsboro.

Thorbs and Herring were allegedly killed Feb. 18. Their bodies, weighted down by concrete blocks tied to their legs, were found in the Tar River several days after they had been reported missing.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. is presiding over the special term of court.

mount an antenna for the county's new ultra-high frequency emergency medical service communications system atop the center's tower off Evans Street. Cost of the lease is $50 a year.

Joyner said the new radio equipment should be installed and in use by early October.

The new equipment will serve squads approved to provide advanced life support services. The board also approved a resolution designating the week of September 18-24 at Emergency Medical Services Week in the county, to coincide with the state-wide observance of E.M.S. Week.

On recommendation from the county planning board, commissioners adopted a resolution asking for the snagging of the Tar River, from Tranters Creek to Tarboro, by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The planning board recommended the snagging operation because of the danger to boats caused by tree limbs and other debris in the water.

Commissioners approved a request by Bill Clark to have West Hills Town Homes, on Secondary Road 1204, included in the extra-territorial jurisdiction of the City of Greenville. Assistant County Manager Don Davenport told the board that the city's planning department approved of Clark's request.

The board set Sept. 23 as the date to sell the county's tobacco allotment.

The county has made money and saved taxpayers dollars by leasing the county-owned allotment each year. But new federal regulations require the allotment to be sold before the end of the year.

Leasing the allotment since the county acquired it more than a decade ago along with land for the Pitt County Memorial Hospital, has produced $220,614.47.

In other business, commissioners appointed Willie Pate as a regular member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Board and named Danny Jacobson as an alternate member.

Commissioners also reappointed Billy Elks, William Bilbro, Earl Keel, James Dallas "Dap" Roberson and Alton G. Haddock to seats on the county planning board, and reappointed Jimmie Hardee as county tax supervisor for a two-year term.

Four Collisions In Greenville Tuesday

An estimated $5,575 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when a car driven by Lily Laiha Tse of 2615 Calvin Way collided with a utility pole at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets about 5:05 p.m.

Officers, who charged Ms. Tse with failing to stop for a stop light, said the vehicle struck the pole when it swerved to avoid a collision with another car.

Ms. Tse and a passenger in the vehicle were reported injured in the mishap.

Cars driven by Albert Louis Whitehurst of Ayden and Henry Clay Nobles of Route 1, Ayden, and a truck driven by Robert Henry Coggins III of Route 4, Greenville, were involved in an 8:44 a.m. mishap on Dickinson Avenue, 75 feet east of the Truman Street intersection.

Police said Whitehurst was charged with following too close as a result of their investigation.

Damage from the wreck was set at $700 to the Whitehurst car, $200 to the Coggins truck, and $75 to the Nobles vehicle.

Anthony Bryan Gorham of Farmville, was charged with following too close after investigation of a 7:10 p.m. accident on Memorial Drive, 300 feet south of the Glenwood Avenue intersection.

Investigators said the Gorham car collided with an auto driven by Joyce Jarman Killingsworth of Kinston, causing $500 damage to the Killingsworth car and $400 damage to the Gorham auto.

Cars driven by Regina Lynn Hudson of Route 11, Greenville, and Ernest Little of 110 Woodside Road, collided about 4:50 p.m. on Evans Street, 125 feet south of the Deck Street intersection.

Damage was estimated at $500 to the Hudson car and $200 to the Little vehicle.

SEMINAR PLANNED

Holy Mission Holy Church will hold a special seminar on Christian marriage, dating and dress codes tonight at 7 p.m. at the church.

Participating will be Eldress Shirley Atkinson, the church pastor; Eve Rogers, chief family court counselor and a member of Holy Trinity United Holy Church; and the Rev. and Mrs. Carl Andrews of New London, Conn. The public may attend.

REVIVAL

Revival services will be held at Gateway Christian Center, 1606 Dickinson Avenue, today through Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Wallace Hefflin of Ashland, Va. will hold services tonight, Thursday and Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Thursday and Friday at 10 a.m.

Analysts Say Auto Sales Future Good

By JANET DENEFE
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — As 1984 models arrive to boost dwindling inventories, sales of U.S.-made automobiles, reported up 24.9 percent in August, will gain more strength, analysts said.

The six major automakers reported Tuesday they sold 530,960 cars last month, or 19,665 per day, compared with 409,411, or 15,747 per day, in August 1982. The 24.9 percent increase was based on the daily sales rate because there was one more selling day in August 1983 than the year-ago month.

"I think that the car sales will remain kind of lackluster — like these numbers — until production gets cranked up again and we begin to see some normal inventories out in the field," said David Healy, an auto analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

The August daily sales rate was the best for the month since 23,144 cars were delivered in August 1981.

Meanwhile, sales of imported cars rose 1.3 percent in August.

Imported cars sold at a record 209,471 pace in August, or 7,758 per day, compared with 199,012, or 7,654 per day a year earlier. The daily sales rate surpassed the record for an August of 7,658 in 1981.

Importers accounted for 28.3 percent of the domestic market last month, compared with 32.7 percent a year ago.

For the last 10 days in August, domestic auto sales for the six major U.S. carmakers rose 15.9 percent. Domestic automakers said 191,170 cars were sold between Aug. 21-31, compared with 164,916 in the period last year.

The daily sales rate of 21,241 was the best for the period since 27,259 cars were delivered in late August 1981.

John Hammond, an analyst with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said the 10-day sales figures represent an annual sales rate of about 6.1 million, down from about 7.4 million in late July. A surge in demand during April and May came "at the worst possible time" for carmakers, he added, because companies were winding up 1983 production schedules.

"They've had no choice but to reduce their inventory," he said. "In some cases, there's virtually no product out there to sell."

General Motors Corp. said it sold 112,095 cars in the United States in the final 10 days of August, a 10 percent increase from 101,867 in the year-earlier period.

Ford Motor Co. was up 18.4 percent, from 38,424 to 45,513.

Chrysler Corp. sold 22,161 cars in the period, up 19 percent from 18,637.

American Motors Corp. sales rose an estimated 167.3 percent, from 2,107 to 5,633.

Volkswagen of America, Inc., said its sales climbed a slight 0.2 percent, from 3,881

American Honda Manufacturing Co. Inc. reported 1,877 cars delivered. The firm did not make cars in the U.S. last year at this time.

Year-to-date sales for the six major U.S. carmakers total 4,442,778, a rise of 17.7 percent from 3,774,145 cars sold by this time in 1982.

So far this year, imports have sold 1,636,255 cars, up 9.2 percent from 1982's 1,497,839.

City Schools Close Early

Due to the continued high temperatures, the Greenville City Schools had an early closure Monday.

Early closure of the schools will continue on a day by day basis dependent on heat conditions and determination of the degree of discomfort factor in the non-air conditioned classrooms.

The decision for closure will be made by 11 a.m. each day. Parents are reminded that as long as the extreme heat continues, chances are that children will be coming home early.

When early closure is put into effect, it will be for all schools, including those that are wholly or partially air-conditioned. This is necessitated by requirements for scheduling bus transportation.

Arrest Made In Safe Case

Greenville police Tuesday arrested Tony Micah Sutton, 23, of Route 4, Greenville, and Steve Wendell Bazemore, 28, of Winterville, on safe cracking and second degree burglary charges, in connection with an August 6 incident at 407 Meade Street.

Capt. John Briley said this morning that entry into the Meade Street home of Alton Ray Thomas was gained through an unlocked door, and that a safe, containing $3,914 in cash, and a .38 caliber pistol, valued at $25, were taken from a bedroom.

The safe, Briley said, was recovered from a ditch in the All Pines section north of Greenville, last Friday.

Girl Scouts Schedule Training

Five training courses have been scheduled for September and October for adults who plan to assist leaders of the Girl Scout program.

"New Leader Training" is a two-part course required for leaders and assistant leaders. The course will meet Sept. 15 and Sept. 22, from 6:30 p.m. to 10 p.m., at the First Presbyterian Church on Heritage Street in Kinston.

"Introduction To Camping" will be taught at the Kinston Girl Scout Cabin Oct. 8, with a session on the outdoors at 10 a.m. and an overnight camping demonstration from 3 p.m. Oct. 8 to 3 p.m. Oct. 9. A fee of $3 will be charged to cover food. To register call 527-6677.

"Songs and Games" will be offered Oct. 18 from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., also at the First Presbyterian Church. This is open to all interested adults and no preregistration is needed. For further information about these programs and Girl Scouting, call 522-2278.

Hog Show And Sale Scheduled

The Pitt County Livestock Association will sponsor a market hog show and sale during the Pitt County Fair on Sept. 27 beginning at 7 p.m.

The show will include both youth and adult divisions. For further information contact Miriam Lewis at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 752-2934.

Colfax Opening 9th Store Here

Colfax Furniture Inc., which began operations with one store in 1966 in the small town of Colfax near Kernersville, will open its ninth store in a three-state area here Thursday, officials announced.

Max Garner, the company's executive vice president, said Colfax Furniture of Greenville Inc. will begin grand opening activities at 10 a.m. in its new facilities at Southpark Shopping Center.

Garner said Colfax, which he labeled a "true discount store," does not manufacture furniture but deals in market samples and special furniture purchases from manufacturers. He said Colfax sells no used furniture but markets new line selections.

The spokesman said the Greensboro-headquartered company, founded in 1966 as Colfax Salvage Co. by Jackie Landreth, will hire some local sales personnel to help staff the Greenville store. Barry Prochaska, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, will manage the facility, while Sherry Mallory will serve as office manager and bookkeeper.

"We feel Greenville has been neglected as far as its high growth potential is concerned," said Garner in noting the company's decision to open a discount facility here. "The eastern part of the state is the fastest growing part of North Carolina. We did not see a business here like ours. We see this as a growing area and we want to be a part of it."

Colfax will operate from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

The company distributes goods to its facilities from Greensboro, where it also operates a store. In addition to Greensboro and the new store here, Colfax has North Carolina units in Kernersville, Andrews, Asheboro and Reidsville, as well as two in Greenville, S.C., and a store in Newport, Tenn.

Ms. Landreth still serves as president and treasurer of the company, while Gail S. Jeffries is secretary. Garner joined the firm four years ago when the company operated two stores.

Rustlers Of Mushrooms

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Marlboro County Sheriff Jack Weatherly says he thought cattle rustling had returned to South Carolina when he got reports of people trespassing in cow pastures.

"But would you believe mushroom rustlers?" Weatherly says.

The sheriff Tuesday said he picked up two men and a woman from North Carolina last week. They had a pot full of mushrooms rustled up from the pasture.

Weatherly said he charged them with trespassing on the farm of Joe Dorgan and a magistrate fined them $108 each.

The sheriff said he has to arrest a dozen or more suspects each year when fall mushrooms begin to sprout in South Carolina's Pee Dee section.

The mushrooms are boiled down to a "tea" and mixed with Kool-Aid, Weatherly said.

"People who drink it are supposed to get some sort of buzz or high feeling," he said.

About 17 people were arrested last year for trespassing in the area's pasturelands, and all were picking mushrooms when they were caught.

"All of them were from North Carolina, too," Weatherly said. "One fellow was from Durham. He even had a map showing exactly which pasture was the best and what corner to look in."

Weatherly warned that the brewing of mushroom tea can have serious intoxicating side effects and can be dangerous if highly poisonous toadstools are picked.

"Someone's going to fry their brains drinking that stuff one day," Weatherly said.

Prayers Reported In 31 Percent Of N. C. Schools

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prayer is conducted in 31 percent of the schools in North Carolina, indicates a study released today by a national group that claims to monitor compliance with the Constitution.

People for the American Way, whose state chapter is based in Winston-Salem, today released a 23-page report on a study of educators, librarians and superintendents which indicates that daily classroom prayer is found in more than 18 percent of the state's schools and that an additional 15 percent offer silent meditation.

The report says organized prayer tends to be more prevalent in lower elementary grades and usually consists of daily devotionals. Bible courses are being taught in at least 15 of North Carolina's 100 counties, according to the report. Most of the courses are fully accredited and most offer only a fundamentalist version of Christianity, it says.

In some instances, the report says the salaries of the teachers are being subsidized or paid entirely by a committee of local ministers.

"The plain fact is that a disturbing proportion of North Carolina's public schools are conducting religious activities which are not reconcilable with the constitutional precepts of separation of church and state and the free exercise of religion," said Barry Hager, state director of the group, in a prepared statement.

The nonprofit, nonpartisan group was founded in late 1980 by a number of people, including television producer Norman Lear and former Republican congressman John Buchanan of Alabama. Buchanan is national chairman of the group now.

Hager said there are about 1,500 People for the American Way members in North Carolina.

In 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Constitutional requirement of separation of church and state meant schools could not prescribe religious rituals for students.

"We are aware that some school systems or individual schools use the Bible as a basis for the study of literature or history," said Tom I. Davis, a spokesman for the state Department of Public Instruction. "The state has taken the position that for local school systems it is best for them to make a decision how to handle this thing."

Davis said the state has made no survey of prayer in schools but has a list of course offerings in high schools which includes some Bible as literature or history courses.

In a telephone interview, Hager said it was appropriate to examine prayer in public schools because the U.S. Senate is considering a proposal on prayer in the classroom and because of the political power wielded in the Reagan administration by those supporting such legislation.

He said his group distributed surveys to delegates to the North Carolina Association of Educators state convention in April. It then mailed additional surveys to librarians, superintendents and science, English and health teachers selected randomly by computer based on NCAE membership population and their location.

In addition, teachers and administrators in one-fourth of the schools reporting religious activity were contacted by telephone or in person.

A total of 2,461 surveys were distributed and 465, or 18.9 percent, were returned. The responses came from at least 65 counties.

Questions in the survey were: "Is prayer conducted in your school?" "Is silent meditation conducted in your school?" and "Is there organized Bible study in your school?"

The National Education Association, the national organization which corresponds with the North Carolina Association of Educators, has taken a stand against organized prayer in schools. But Hager said he thought the responses from NCAE members would not be affected by that because so many teachers are members of the NCAE.

The report concludes that public schools already are involved in teaching religion to a greater extent than the public is aware, that some politicians and evangelists have exaggerated the effects of the Supreme Court decision in removing prayer from schools and that teachers have provided religious instruction although they know it violates the law.

The report says one Durham area teacher defended the school prayer by saying young children were "too young to be swayed one way or another." But one mother said her 5-year-old child is encouraged to be disrespectful of her religion by people whose beliefs are different.

Several principals and teachers said that while their practices probably violated the law, they would continue unless challenged by a parent.

"The understandable human reason why local administrators, teachers and parents may not tackle these situations is that to do so will make them the target of a highly vocal and strident minority which has successfully masqueraded itself as the moral-minded majority," the report said.

The group emphasizes that voluntary individual prayer should remain but says organized prayer cannot be voluntary. It also argues that the public school system is not the place for young people to be taught religion.

The report notes that North Carolina has a number of different kinds of religions — 56 different sects and major religious groups — and that fewer than half the state's residents officially belong to a church or synagogue.

The group recommends the Department of Public Instruction develop and recommend to the state Board of Education policies to guide all state schools in protecting and preserving constitutional guarantees. It urges the department to help local school systems shape courses in religious history or comparative religion.

It also recommends local school boards and superintendents probe their area's practices and take whatever steps are needed to bring the actions in line with the Constitution.

The 39 counties the study says have organized prayer are Alamance, Anson, Avery, Bladen, Brunswick, Burke, Cabarrus, Caldwell, Carteret, Catawba, Chatham, Cleveland, Columbus, Dare, Duplin, Durham, Franklin, Greene, Guilford, Harnett, Henderson, Iredell, Lenoir, Lincoln, Mecklenburg, Moore, Nash, New Hanover, Onslow, Perquimans, Randolph, Rockingham, Rowan, Rutherford, Stokes, Surry, Watauga, Wayne and Wilkes.

Charged In Boy's Death

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A New Bern woman and her boyfriend have been charged with murder after the woman's 8-year-old son died of a beating he allegedly received for discipline purposes, police said.

Vanie Smith Jr., 21, and Shirley Lee McCleave, 25, were charged with murdering Larry Eugene McCleave after the boy's body was found in a ditch Monday night, said Capt. Mike Warren, a Craven County sheriff's investigator.

Smith and Mrs. McCleave allegedly killed the boy at her home during a beating for discipline purposes, Warren said.

Mrs. McCleave reported her son missing at 9 a.m. Monday, according to records at the New Bern Police Department. The boy was last seen at 2:30 a.m. Sunday home in bed, according to the missing-person report.

New Bern police Capt. P.O. Rodgers, head of the investigative unit, said he hoped to interview several people Tuesday who heard the beating and saw the body being disposed of.

Rodgers also said he plans to follow up on claims that the boy had been abused before.

The boys father, Larry Wise, is in prison for selling drugs, according to District Attorney W. David McFadyen.

Soviet Admission Came Six Days After Incident

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's admission that its fighter interceptors "stopped the flight" of a South Korean Boeing 747 capped six days of confusing, vague and misleading reports by the government and official press.

But the statement, read over the evening news Tuesday, did not provide all the facts about what happened to the Korean Air Lines plane, and the government still insisted the United States, and not the Soviet Union, was to blame for the death of the plane's 269 occupants.

The official Tass news agency also never used the words "shot down" or otherwise directly stated that an Su-15 fighter used a heat-seeking missile to down the jumbo jet, as the United States and other Western nations have insisted from the beginning.

Here is a reconstruction of statements by the Soviet Union since the plane disappeared Thursday after flying over the Kamchatka peninsula, the Sea of Okhotsk and Sakhalin island:

Thursday, Sept. 1:

In the morning, a Tass news report from Tokyo said a South Korean 747 was "lost" 50 miles east of the northern Japanese island of Hokkaido, some 300 miles from where the jet is believed to have plunged into the Sea of Japan.

After Secretary of State George P. Shultz accused the Soviet Union of shooting down the 747 in what he called a "barbaric" act, Tass provided a longer, but enigmatic statement in the late evening.

"An unidentified plane entered the air space of the Soviet Union ... on the night from Aug. 31 to Sept. 1. The plane did not have navigational lights, did not respond to queries and did not enter into contact with the dispatcher service.

"Fighters of the anti-aircraft defense which were sent aloft toward the intruder plane tried to give it assistance in directing it to the nearest airfield. But the intruder plane did not react to the signal and warnings from the Soviet fighters and continued its flight in the direction of the Sea of Japan."

Many observers have said the statement seemed carefully phrased to set up later Soviet comments and arguments, and it served as the basis for subsequent official pronouncements on the fate of the plane.

Friday, Sept. 2:

After a daylong silence

during which diplomats pressed for information, the evening news and Tass said a bit more: The plane spent more than two hours over Soviet air space, allegedly flew without navigation lights and did not respond to radio signals from the Soviet anti-aircraft command.

The Soviets also said a fighter pilot "fired tracer shells as warning shots along the flying route of the plane." But it said nothing about what happened after that.

At this point, the Soviet Union began "building the central argument on which it has sought to avoid blame for the tragedy. This is that the plane allegedly was sent by the United States on a spying mission and that not only were the Soviets not at fault for what happened, they were within their rights to take whatever action they did.

The television news displayed an official map showing the international air route skirting the Soviet Far East. It also traced the plane's route over Soviet territory with a black line that ended ominously just south of Sakhalin island.

Saturday, Sept. 3:

Throughout the day, official news organs kept up their propaganda barrage against the United States, accusing President Reagan of using the furor about the plane to fan anti-Soviet feelings.

Again, in the late evening, another fact came out. The Soviet Union said a South Korean plane had been in its air space, but did not specifically link that craft with the "unidentified plane."

Sunday, Sept. 4:

The chief of the Soviet anti-aircraft command, Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov, conceded the "unidentified plane" and the Korean airliner were one and the same.

But he insisted again the Koreans flew without lights and that the interceptor pilot blinked his own lights and waved his wings to attract the airliner's attention. This was the first admission the fighter had visual contact with the plane, but Romanov said it looked like an American reconnaissance jet.

Monday, Sept. 5:

Romanov acknowledged the plane crashed and that there were "numerous" deaths. Official reports charged Reagan set up the plane and its passengers to provoke the Soviets. Press reports also began referring to an "airliner" instead of just an "intruder."

On the evening news, commentator Genryk Borovik provided the first solid hints that the Soviets had shot down the plane, saying the anti-aircraft forces had "fulfilled their duty" in protecting the nation. The Soviet Union, he said, was not to blame for "the death of the plane and the death of the people."

Tuesday, Sept. 6:

Pravda spelled out for the first time for most Soviets the U.S. charge that the plane was shot down. The Communist Party daily said Soviet forces could have shot the plane down if they wanted to, and never explicitly denied that is what happened.

A TV announcer delivered the news to the nation that the plane was downed by the interceptor pilot. But the statement still was couched in euphemistic terms.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said, "The Soviet statement is much too little and much too late." He charged that while the Soviets were "compelled by the weight of evidence to admit they shot down the Korean airliner," the statement was designed to "evade their full responsibility for the atrocity which they have committed."

Arrested In Girl's Death

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — A Rutherford County District Court judge Tuesday appointed an attorney for a Rutherford County man charged with stabbing to death a 12-year-old girl and attacking her aunt.

Bobby Lewis Sheppard, 21, made his first appearance in District Court before Judge Loto Greenlee, who assigned attorney Eugene Mitchell as his defense attorney.

Sheppard was charged Sunday with first-degree murder, first-degree burglary, taking indecent liberties with a child and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to inflict serious injury. He was being held in the Rutherford County jail under no bond.

Cynthia Sue Wilson, 12, was found dead with multiple stab wounds Sunday at the home of her aunt, Janet Dyer, 23, who was stabbed in the throat and was taken to Rutherford Hospital. She was later transferred to Spartanburg General Hospital in Spartanburg, S.C.

Sheriff's officials said a man burglarized a two-bedroom apartment just outside the Forest City limits at about 5 a.m. Sunday and attacked the girl and her aunt. Three other children, who were asleep in the apartment, were unharmed.

Sheriff's officials said they found Sheppard lying face down on the floor behind a door in his apartment. He was treated for cuts on his hands, deputies said.

Tossed Him Into The East River

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — When a woman boater invited a male acquaintance aboard her boat for a starlight dinner, the man apparently had something else in mind — so she tossed him into the Elizabeth River after he disrobed.

Nearly three hours later, a female police officer found the man walking along a main street, wearing only a plastic bag and searching for a telephone booth.

The woman had called out to the man after giving him the heave-ho Monday night, but there was no response, authorities said. She then notified police, who called the Coast Guard.

A Coast Guard search turned up nothing and the man apparently swam to shore, said police, who declined to identify either party.

The woman did not press charges and police took the man home.

SAFETY FUNDS

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The government has allocated nearly $100 million to rebuild unsafe classrooms following last month's collapse of an auditorium roof which killed 25 schoolgirls, officials report.

No Evidence On Soviet Claims

Victim's Revenge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A wallet snatch victim turned the tables on his assailant, quickly grabbing the man's billfold before he ran away, a sheriff's deputy said.

The attacker got nothing but identification papers Tuesday, but the victim got $33 and a driver's license, complete with photo, the deputy said.

"There it was, sticking out of his back pocket," said Raymond Ernesto Bogorquez, 38, of East Los Angeles. "I did not have time to think. I just grabbed it."

Bogorquez was walking on a bridge over the San Bernardino Freeway near East Los Angeles about 5 a.m. when a man accosted him from behind and stole his wallet, empty except for Bogorquez's identification, Deputy Dave Tellez said.

As the man turned to run, Bogorquez grabbed the man's wallet, which contained the $33 and drivers license, Tellez said.

"That's the hombre that stole mine," Bogorquez said when he looked at the picture.

The assailant "kept right on going," he said. "Never looked back. Evidently, he did not know I had it."

If and when that man is picked up by police, he'll get his $33 back, plus his wallet, after the courts have finished using it for evidence, Tellez said.

Housework Valued At $7 Per Hour

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Using a new method that calculates the lowest wage necessary to draw a housewife out of the home and into the job market, two Cornell University researchers have determined household labor to be worth about $7 an hour.

In their research, consumer economists Keith Bryant and Cathleen Zick did not use what is known as the "market alternative" method — which bases the value of household labor on what a woman would pay outside help to do it.

Instead, they used another approach, which they call the "opportunity cost" method.

"The particular measure we're using calculates the lowest wage it would take to get the unemployed housewife to start to look for a job," said Bryant. "If she can get $7 an hour (in the job market)," he said, "she's got to be worth at least that in the home."

Bryant pointed out that the $7-an-hour value does not apply to housewives with outside jobs. "For housewives already working, their housework is worth their salary on the job," he said.

The figure is based on data from an 11-state survey of 1,475 two-parent, two-child households conducted in 1977.

The study found housework for employed wives in two-child families to be worth between $5.11 and $5.84, and between $6.42 and $7.59 for unemployed wives. These compare with hourly figures of $4.32 to $5.41 and $4.36 to $5.06, respectively, using the market alternative method.

Bryant is a professor of consumer economics and housing in the New York State College of Human Ecology at Cornell. Ms. Zick is now an assistant professor of family and consumer studies at the University of Utah.

Lone Gunman Robbed Bank

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Asheville police were searching for a lone gunman who robbed a branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. shortly after noon Tuesday.

Police Det. Will Anarino said a man entered the bank carrying a rolled up newspaper and told the teller he had a pistol underneath. She gave him an undisclosed amount of money and he escaped on foot.

Anarino said the bank security camera got a good photograph of the suspect.

POLITICAL PRISONERS
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Military jails held 524 political prisoners last month, including 405 ordered jailed by President F.E. Marcos since he suspended martial law in 1981, a Defense Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

By DAVID ESPO and TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Soviet claims of repeated attempts to contact and warn a Korean jetliner that it later shot down are disputed by records made available by the Reagan administration.

A full transcript has not yet been released of conversations between the pursuing Soviet fighter pilots and ground control, and it is unclear whether American officials have such a record.

The most complete public evidence is a transcript, released Tuesday by the White House, of Soviet pilots' conversations covering a 46-minute period in which the plane was tracked, fired upon with a heat-seeking missile and destroyed.

Nowhere in the transcript does any of Soviet fighter pilots mention any effort to warn the crew of Korean plane. The lack of such evidence on the transcript is in keeping with repeated statements over the past several days by President Reagan, Secretary of State George Shultz and other administration officials.

But it is in direct contrast to Soviet assertions, including one on Tuesday in which the Kremlin admitted it had shot down the plane, which carried 61 Americans and 208 other people.

"The fighter plane made warning shots with tracer shells along the route of the intruder plane," said a statement by Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

Tass also said its fighter pilots tried to contact the plane on an international emergency radio frequency, but that the plane's crew "did not respond."

In fact, Tass said the Korean plane "did not obey the demand to fly to a Soviet airfield and tried to evade pursuit." There is no evidence of such a demand in the transcript released by the White House.

There are other discrepancies between the Tass statements and accounts provided by the Reagan administration.

For instance, Tass said there was no way the Soviet pilots could have known the plane was a civilian airliner, that the Korean airliner was "flying without navigation lights, at the height of night, in conditions of bad visibility and was not answering the signals."

But Reagan, in a speech Monday night, said the Soviet pilot had a "closeup view of the airliner on what we know was a clear night with a half moon. ... There is no way a pilot could mistake this for anything other than a civilian airliner."

And the transcript quotes a Soviet fighter pilot as reporting the airliner's strobe light blinking and air naviga-

Black Dollar Day Reports Are Mixed

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer
Black Americans heeding a call from the NAACP to demonstrate their economic power converted thousands of dollars into $2 bills and Susan B. Anthony dollars, but reports were mixed on how much of the currency was spent over the Labor Day weekend.

"I think our aim was accomplished," Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Tuesday. "Our aim is to make people aware of blacks' economic clout."

The NAACP, which has not yet received reports from all its 1,800 branches, asked blacks to go to banks last week and exchange money for the seldom seen $2 bills and Susan B. Anthony dollar coins. During "Black Dollar Days," which began last Thursday and ended Monday, blacks were to make purchases with the currency to show white merchants their buying power.

Participation was mixed even within cities, and local publicity seemed to play a large role.

In Los Angeles, four black-owned savings and loan banks that had promoted the event reported a high response Thursday and Friday.

One of the banks, Family Savings, converted $51,400 in $2 bills and $9,720 in Susan B. Anthony coins in the first two days, said Jane Campbell, a branch manager.

But major banks reported few requests outside their branches in Los Angeles and Oakland.

James Miller, co-manager of a K mart department store in southwest Los Angeles where about 90 percent of the customers are black, said the store was receiving $10 to $20 daily in the currency — "more than we normally have, but not a real large increase."

Baltimore's chapter of the NAACP had distributed flyers and contacted every major commercial and savings bank asking them to stock up on the currency. At Harbor Bank of Maryland, head teller Carol Williams said Tuesday that "at least 50 or 60 customers daily" were asking for an average $250 in the denominations.

Discount and department stores contacted in Baltimore reported little or no rise in the receipt of $2 bills or Anthony dollars.

In New Jersey, the NAACP rated the effort a success and said Tuesday it would be repeated during the Christmas shopping period. City National Bank in downtown Newark, the state's only federally chartered minority-owned bank, had ordered $40,000 worth of both currencies and had "quite a bit of request, but I don't think we ran out," said a spokesman who declined to be identified.

Some banks in Louisville, Ky., reported no requests at all for the coins and $2 bills. But the West Broadway branch of the First National Bank of Louisville distributed $6,000 worth after tellers reminded customers of the effort, said manager Rosella Laird.

"We had one customer we reminded and she got $320 worth, and then she came back later and got another $400," Ms. Laird said.

A K mart manager in predominantly black southeast Atlanta, who would not give his name, said the store collected 29 $2 bills by Monday, higher than normal. In Philadelphia, the Strawbridge & Clothier department store alone reported more $2 bills than usual, but Bill Smith, manager of a Super Fresh supermarket in mostly black north Philadelphia said the number had been unusually high.

Several major banks in black neighborhoods of Chicago said customers were requesting the currency through the weekend. However, a K mart store on the city's South Side reported Monday it took in only one $2 bill, down from its normal 15.

NAACP officials in Boston plan to extend the demonstration through the year, targeting the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority on grounds that it spends far less in the buying from black merchants than it takes in from black riders.

Pole School Is The Way To The Top

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
MARSHALL, Mich. (AP) — It looks like a spindly Stonehenge built to honor electricity, but the 15-acre field bristling with utility towers and wires is a school.

Its students are line workers for Consumers Power Co., who hope to rise to the top of a profession in which rising to the top is critical.

"The biggest hurdle they've got to overcome is the fear of climbing," said Morris O'Brien, a supervisor at the Electric Distribution Training Center. "You can't have a one-handed lineman, with one arm around the pole."

More than 300 of Consumers' 650 linemen, both trainees and veterans upgrading their skills, have attended the school since it opened four years ago. Before that, trainees were taught at the utility's regional offices, often on the job.

"It's a good place for people to make a mistake. They get a second chance here," Raymond Rayl, an instructor, said recently while supervising an eight-man crew of veterans practicing how to replace insulators on the utility's biggest line, which carries 345,000 volts.

For some initiates, the most important lesson is that they just aren't cut out for working around high voltage lines 45 to 90 feet or higher in the air.

"There's no disgrace to somebody who can't cut line work," said Rayl. But in one class, "we lost half the people the first day," said Clare Appel, the school's supervisor. "They realized that climbing a pole was not for them."

Still, up to 80 percent of the trainees — including one woman so far — complete the basic eight-week courses, according to Appel. And except for lots of splinters, there have been no injuries, the utility said.

The students spend most of their time on old wooden poles, digging in their spikes and leaning back against a strap that encircles the pole. Piles of wood chips are put around the base of the poles to cushion the landing for recruits who "cut out," losing their footing and sliding to the ground.

All but one of the practice poles and towers can be "energized," to let workers practice around lines actually carrying power. But new linemen work around dead wires.

For trainees, there is also practice in cherry-pickers — trucks with elevator arms and buckets to lift linemen into the air — and on underground cable boxes dotted around the field.

On a 90-foot steel practice tower, about 40 feet shorter than the real thing, the veterans working under Rayl's direction wrestle with wires, ladders and long poles.

The veterans are brought back to the school about 18 months to two years after they finish the basic course.

"It's a chance to review their skills on the towers," said O'Brien. "They don't have much occasion to work on the towers," which require little maintenance.

Appel said the instructors "spend an awful lot of time training for safety. The opportunity to hurt yourself is great. If they're not comfortable in this line of work, they're going to be a hazard to themselves and their fellow linemen."

Company spokesman Robert Wischmeyer said the utility hasn't had a fatal accident involving a worker on a pole since 1970.

In all it takes about five years to train a good lineman, but "once they learn how to climb the pole and do the work, it comes pretty easy," said Appel.

"There's a lot a lineman has to know and it's demanding physically," O'Brien said. "It (electricity) talks to you — at the higher voltage you hear that hum. And the poles sway when you get up there — that's disconcerting."

Eating Out Trend Seen Continuing

BY LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Americans are spending more of their food dollars in restaurants and a new report from the Agriculture Department says the eating-out trend will continue during the rest of the 1980s, with increased competition for consumers' appetites — and money.

The report comes from the Economic Research Service of the USDA and covers what the department classifies as "separate eating places." That includes fast-food operations, traditional restaurants, caterers, etc. It does not count places like school lunchrooms or restaurants that are only an adjunct to another business like a department store.

The report looks at the changes in the industry between 1966 and 1979 and includes predictions for the rest of the current decade.

According to author Michael G. Van Dress, an economist, the retail value of all food served away from home in 1979 was $102.4 billion. Between 1966 and 1979, there was an annual increase of 2.7 percent in the number of people served and an annual increase of 3 percent in real sales, adjusted for inflation.

Consumers' willingness to spend more of their food dollar away from home was triggered by rising per capita income, an increase in the number of multi-earner households, a trend toward smaller households, a more mobile populace and the national inclination to purchase greater convenience," Van Dress wrote.

He said real income probably will continue to rise in the 80s — meaning more business for restaurants. He also said, however, that rising costs for things like food, energy and labor "may lift menu prices, blunting sales somewhat. The expansion trend, especially in fast-food enterprises, may be slowed by a glut of establishments in some areas."

The economic conditions of the coming years could mean more outlets for the big chains and fewer individual operations.

Van Dress predicted that industry will respond to increased competition with price cutting and heavy advertising, including coupons and other promotions. He also said there would be more mergers and takeovers. "These methods favor corporate franchises and chains, which feature large advertising budgets, sophisticated marketing techniques and regional or national identities," Van Dress said.

The big news during the 1960s and 1970s was the growth of fast-food outlets. The number of fast-food restaurants jumped 76 percent between 1966 and 1979, while the number of traditional restaurants providing sit-down service dropped 6 percent.

"The trend toward more outlets featuring limited menus and fewer outlets with broader menus is expected to continue," Van Dress wrote, adding: "Farmers and manufacturers who produce ingredients that are frequently used in food by fast-food places, such as cheese, buns and pickles, should benefit, while those who produce commodity ingredients that are infrequently used, such as butter and fruit, may experience a softening in demand."

Van Dress said, however, that even the limited menus of fast-food outlets are adapting to changing tastes.

"The addition of the salad bar, with its variety of vegetables, the increase in breakfast offerings and the tendency of hamburger outlets to offer chicken, pork and fish items is changing the mix of foods served away from home," he wrote.

The food isn't the only thing that's changing. The equipment used to prepare it is changing as well.

There were only 3,800 microwave ovens in use in restaurants in 1966, Van Dress said. The number jumped 2,500 percent to 100,000 in 1979. Infrared ovens grew from fewer than 4,000 units in 1966 to 21,000 units in 1979.

Van Dress' report, "Dining Out: Separate Eating Places Keep Customers Happy, Suppliers Busy," is based on a sample of about 2,300 restaurants.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, hesitating after Tuesday's sharp rally.

Gainers led a 3-2 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.64 to 1,236.08 in the first half hour.

Analysts said Tuesday's outburst of enthusiasm was due in large measure to the surprise decline in the money supply that showed up in the latest report from the Federal Reserve.

The news raised hopes that the Fed might soon see fit to pursue a less restrictive credit policy, allowing interest rates to decline and providing fresh stimulus for the economic recovery.

But brokers said it appeared that open-market interest rates would have to come down further before the stock market could move on to new highs.

The Dow Jones industrial average reached its closing peak at 1,248.30 on June 16.

Today's early prices included General Motors, up 1/8 at 73 1/4; Merrill Lynch, up 1/8 at 45 1/8; and Zenith, down 1/4 at 34.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials jumped 23.27 to 1,238.72.

More than three stocks rose in price for every one that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume increased to 87.50 million shares from 59.30 million Friday.

The NYSE's composite index gained 1.56 to 96.84. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.77 at 235.24.

McGaughey expressed concern that the conference day was set a week before the first report cards are scheduled to go out on Oct. 24.

"My concern is that the teachers won't have enough to go on to have a good conference with parents," said Ms. McGaughey. "This is very early to be pinpointing difficulties for parents."

Teachers should have the first marking period grades averaged by Oct. 17, said school officials, and will be able to draw conclusions based on those averages.

The board also accepted a schematic design for the Pictolus School lunchroom/classroom addition presented by Dudley, Shoe & Hite, architects. The schematic calls for the cafeteria to be constructed on the east side of the existing school and two additional classrooms on the west side.

The tentative cost of the project, estimated by Dudley, Shoe & Hite, is $475,000. According to Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, $75,000 of that total will be for kitchen equipment and will come from the Food Services budget.

In other business: •Kay V. Whichard was reappointed to the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees for an eight-year term.

•Dr. West announced that Bethel Elementary School will receive the Governor's Award of Excellence Sept. 20.

•Assistant Superintendent Leck Keeter announced that beginning Oct. 1, as required by recent legislation, 25 cents per month will be deducted from each employee covered by the state's comprehensive major medical plan. In addition, the county will be required to contribute 25 cents per month for each employee covered. The legislation authorized the creation of a conversion reserve to be used as a subsidy to an insurance company providing conversion coverage.

wounded in Beirut yesterday, he said, "It's profoundly regrettable. I believe if our soldiers are going to be pulled into a protracted ongoing military situation, we need to rethink beyond the peace-keeping role for which they were sent. The Israeli Army is the third strongest army in the world (The U.S. and the U.S.S.R. are first and second) and they are capable of handling the situation there without direct American participation."

Council Sets Eight Hearings

Eight public hearings are among the agenda items scheduled for the City Council's 7:30 p.m. meeting Thursday at city hall.

The hearings will be conducted on: a petition by Bill Clark for satellite annexation of section five of Quail Ridge, located off 14th Street extension; four amendments to the city's zoning ordinance; a request by J. T. Manning Jr. to rezone 3.16 acres located adjacent to Alice Drive and Shanadoah subdivision from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-9 (residential);

An ordinance rezoning properties north of the Tar River and adjacent to N. Greene Street from floodway to floodway-conservation; and on a petition to close a portion of Tammie Trail that has never been opened for public use.

Other agenda items include: appointments to boards and commissions; consideration of an ordinance regulating and licensing transient and itinerant merchants and vendors; scheduling of a public hearing on a petition to close a portion of Pennsylvania Avenue, east of 14th Street and abutting the Sadie Sauter School property;

Consideration of bids for police and public works uniforms; tax releases and refunds; consideration of the 1983-84 fire protection fee; an ordinance amending the 1979-80 community development budget ordinance;

A request by Greenville Utilities to amend the water and sewer capital project fund and the sewer capital reserve fund; an ordinance adopting a supplement to the City Code; and consideration of an ordinance relative to membership in the Joint Municipal Assistance Agency.

Chamber Sets Conference

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will hold its out-of-town planning conference Sept. 20 and Oct. 1-2 in Williamsburg, Va.

According to executive vice chairman Jon Tingelstad of the chamber, the purpose of the conference is to discuss issues and develop the 1984 program of work.

The theme of the conference is "Together in '84" and discussions will focus on four main topics, including economic and industrial development, downtown area, business and health care and education, said Tingelstad.

Dr. Jeff Hockaday, chancellor of the Virginia Community College system, will be the speaker for the banquet.

The deadline for registration for chamber members is Sept. 14. For further information call 752-4101.

Bucs, Gamecocks Sign For 5 Years

East Carolina University will play the University of South Carolina's Gamecocks in football for five consecutive seasons, beginning in 1984, according to the school's athletic directors.

The Pirates will travel to Columbia, S.C., in 1984 to start the series, with the 1985 game scheduled in Ficklen Stadium in Greenville. The three final games of the series will be back in Columbia, in 1986, 1987, and 1988.

"We are just elated to sign this five-year contract with South Carolina," East Carolina Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr said. "It is very important to our program to have regional competition with major state universities such as South Carolina."

"The proximity of this game will afford our fans an opportunity to be in attendance on the road, which likewise is very important to our program."

The two schools have met only once in football, in 1977 in Columbia. That game was regionally televised by ABC, with the Gamecocks completing a successful rally in the final two minutes to win 19-16.

With South Carolina playing in Greenville in 1985, the Pirate schedule currently reflects Miami of Florida, Temple, Southwestern Louisiana and the Gamecocks at home. This obviously will be the finest home schedule in school history.

D.H. Conley, coming off a 13-12 victory over Jones Senior, and North Pitt, which suffered a 20-0 shutout at East Carteret, begin the quest for the "Pitt County Championship" Friday on the Panthers' home turf.

Both teams are in the process of settling with a new lineup after playing to a 6-6 tie in 1982. The Panthers will be looking for their first win of the season after also losing to Roanoke in the opener, while the Conley Vikings hope to improve their mark to 2-1. Conley lost to Greene Central 12-0 in its first game.

"We label it like a 'Hatfield and McCoy' shootout," said Conley coach Gerald Garner. "It's a good wholesome rivalry."

In other games around Pitt County, Farmville Central hosts Bertie and the Ayden-Grifton Chargers will have Richlands as their guests. Farmville Central, 0-1 on the season, lost a narrow 7-0 decision against Williamston Monday night, while Ayden-Grifton lost its opener to Roanoke 12-6.

Elsewhere, Chocowinity hosts Perquimans, Jamesville hosts Belhaven and Williamston hosts Plymouth. Greene Central travels to North Lenoir, and Washington's Pam Pack will visit Roanoke in other 3-A matchups.

D.H. CONLEY

"We're thankful for the win (over Jones Senior), especially the way we won," Garner said. "Traditionally, when a Conley team gets behind, it folds. But we came from behind and scored in the second half to win the game."

"That shows we have a little character. We held them on defense, but the big play is still haunting us. They scored on long runs that we should have stopped."

"The footing was atrocious even though the field was in excellent condition."

The Vikings have not beaten North Pitt in five years, but Garner hopes this year will be different.

"It was good to win, but Monday is a different day," he said. "We're not taking North Pitt lightly; their score versus East Carteret is not indicative of the kind of team they have. North Pitt is always emotionally high for Conley."

"I wish our players would take it as seriously as theirs do. They try to force turnovers. North Pitt has been hampered by not having the full lineup for any of their games."

"What we want to do is become a little more consistent. We have to stop the long plays and concentrate on what we do best. We haven't had any serious injuries so far, and there's no doubt in my mind everybody will be healthy for this game."

NORTH PITT

Panthers Coach B.T. Chappell is still waiting for his team score in 1982, but he believes North Pitt is a better team than the score's indicate.

"Every team we scrimmaged or have played is undefeated," Chappell said. "We're playing strong teams, and people have got to realize that."

"We have to overcome that we haven't scored, that we've had no success on offense. Mentally, (Conley) has the best shot of winning this year."

"Usually this is a very emotional game, and that concerns me — we're lacking emotion and confidence. But it's a quite a rivalry. Now that we're out of the conference it's not quite the same, but it's

Floyd Out 6-8 Weeks

John Floyd, starting center on the East Carolina football team, underwent emergency surgery for an appendectomy late yesterday, ECU officials announced last night.

Floyd had complained of lower abdominal pains early on Tuesday and Coach Ed Emory said at his weekly press conference that he feared it would be appendicitis. His fears were confirmed later in the afternoon after tests on Floyd.

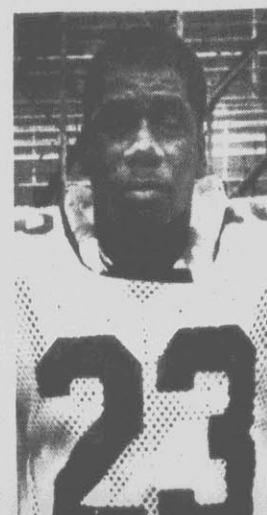

The 6-1, 265-pound senior from Fairmont, was the starting center for the Pirates last year and had retained his spot for this season, starting against Florida State last Saturday night.

If Floyd is able to return to action this year, his final under NCAA rules, it would be six-to-eight weeks into the season. He has already had a hardship year from the NCAA.

Expected to take over for him will be Tim Mitchell, a 6-2, 245-pound junior, who had been on the second unit.

Greg Murrill (6-1, 218) returns in the backfield, as does Mark Shivers. Shivers plays both running back and quarterback in Richlands' varied attack.

"They're explosive on offense," Sauls said. "They have as fine a group of running backs as we'll see this year. They're capable of breaking the big plays, and they'll be well prepared."

"The problems we have on offense we can't change. We just have to settle down into what we're trying to do. We hope to get our backfield together for this game."

AYDEN-GRIFTON
 When the Ayden-Grifton Chargers lost the game against Roanoke 12-6 Saturday, they also lost senior quarterback Doug Coley with a shoulder injury.

As a result, the Chargers will go with either Billy Wiggins or Shannon Peede at quarterback.

"(Coley) is one of our senior leaders," said Coach Dixon Sauls. "So I'm hoping we can make the adjustment. We only have a couple of days to get ready."

The Chargers face a test from a Richlands team coming off 20-13 loss to East Duplin, but the two teams haven't played in recent years. Joe Parker (6-0, 180) was Richlands' leading rusher in 1982 with 980 yards but missed the opener for disciplinary reasons.

"They have a number of players that play both ways. We hope to be quicker on offense than they are on defense."

Sauls saw several aspects of the Roanoke game his team must improve upon playing Richlands.

"We certainly have to improve our blocking — on the line and from our backs," Sauls said. "We have to score on goal-line situations. It's difficult to work on goal-line situations prior to a game because of the intensity involved."

"On defense, we have to have better team pursuit, and we have to work on not giving up big plays."

"But we never gave up; we kept fighting from behind even though we never established our running game."

"The errors we made are correctable, so I'm not that worried about our team at this time."

Emory: Pressure On Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ed Emory greeted the press at his weekly news conference in a good humor despite his Pirates falling, 47-46, to nationally ranked Florida State this past weekend.

"The kids started believing all the stuff they've been reading about how good they're supposed to be," Emory said jokingly.

Then, he turned more realistic and said that the Pirates will have to prove it all over this weekend when the play N.C. State over a nationally telecast showing over WTBS Saturday night.

"The pressure is all on us," Emory said. "If we go up there and play like a bunch of dogs, people will say it (the FSU game) was only a fluke. We have to go up there and win. One game doesn't make your program, but there is more pressure on us than N.C. State. It's (the game) for state pride, for state recruiting.

"If we win, we'll be the best team in North Carolina, 'cept maybe for one, and they won't play us to find out."

Emory said he was gratified by the progress shown by the Pirates in their game against Florida State. "But you can progress and still not win. I haven't seen any column in the statistics marked 'Moral Victories'."

"We went down there to win and I'm disappointed that we didn't. I thought that we were playing them at the right time and I said that we'd win on defense and the kicking game. I think it was obvious that we lost it there."

The Pirates were unable to stop the Seminoles most of the evening, and Emory said that was probably more of a tribute to the great play of the FSU squad.

"We didn't get pressure on the quarterback, and we had talked so much about not letting them have the big play, our backs played back on them and they threw in front of them. Our linebackers got tired too, and we didn't sub enough there."

"Then, too, (Kelly) Lowery wasn't one inch off target all night. I hope I never have to play against a quarterback who throws like he does again. We also thought that we could play with them physically up front, but we didn't. I don't think our defense played with great enthusiasm or intensity, too."

Emory laughed then, adding, "Conversely, they didn't stop us either. The defensive staffs are working hard at both places this week."

The kicking game let the Pirates down in a couple of places too. Sophomore booter Jeff Heath had two kicks blocked, one on a PAT and the other on a field goal. Either could have meant a difference in the game.

"We had a fourth year senior and a fifth year senior break down on those plays," Emory said. "On one, Norwood Vann didn't block inside, and on the other Earnest Byner didn't block inside. One of you guys could have gone through to block those kicks," Emory told the press.

On the opposite side of the ledger, however, Emory was extremely pleased with the offensive play. "Our game plan was outstanding and I've got to give Art Baker and the rest of the offensive staff a lot of credit. We were totally prepared. They only did one thing which we weren't ready for, and that was to line up a nickel back a little deeper than we had anticipated. But it was no big thing."

Emory said that the offensive line played well, and that Terry Long was "awesome," grading out nearly 100 percent. Redshirt freshman Tim Dumas, starting at one of the tackle spots, also drew Emory's praise.

"Our tight ends played very well, and I thought Kevin Ingram showed a lot of poise at quarterback."

But Emory was still displeased with some of the officiating calls, especially those on the interception that set up FSU's last touchdown, and the fumble that kept the Pirates from having a chance to win the game. "I'll be glad to show anyone the films of the game, and they can see that the ball bounced into the hands of the guy they gave the interception too. And Kevin still had the ball when he was down, but when he flipped over after the tackle, the ball came loose. But by NCAA rules, the ball was dead by then."

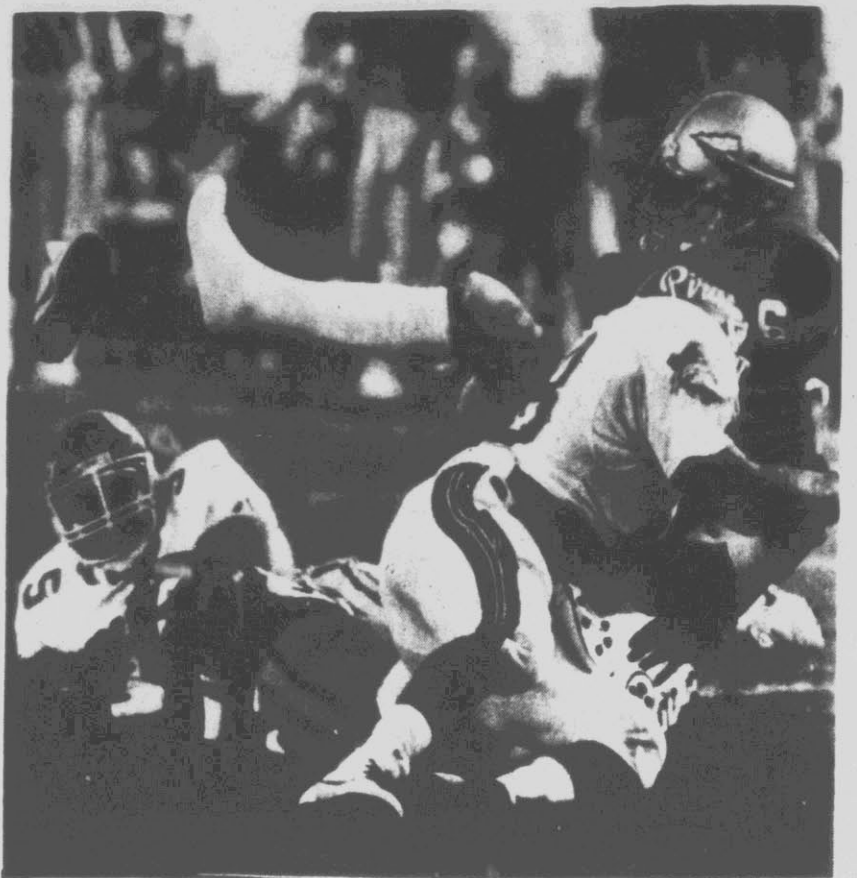

Emory noted that on the interception, two officials waved the catch off, but another called "catch."

"There were about seven critical calls in the game that went against us and every one was called by a Southern Collegiate Officials Association official." (A split crew of SCAA and ECAC-South officials was used in the game.)

"Still, the officials didn't block the extra point or field goal. They didn't play in the secondary or at linebacker. We've got to take care of those things ourselves."

Emory also said that those who say the option offense is dead had better look again. "I think the option offense gives us a chance to win. We can't line up like Southern California or people like that and go out and whip people. We have to use finesse, speed and quickness. And, too, now, the option is something people don't see much of, so it causes them defensive problems."

And the coach is hopeful that it will cause more than a few problems for a team in Raleigh Saturday evening.

Pirates In Race With Aid Of Newcomers

By The Associated Press

When it gets to pennant race time, the Pittsburgh Pirates usually rely on their veterans.

For now, though, rookies and reserves continue to keep the Pirates near the top of the National League East.

Rookie Lee Tunnell threw a three-hitter, extending his string of shutout innings to 28, and reserve Jim Morrison homered as Pittsburgh beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 Tuesday night.

The Pirates are one percentage point behind first-place Montreal in the jumbled division scramble. Philadelphia is in third, one-half game behind, and the fourth-place Cardinals are just 1½ games back.

"We needed a good ballgame," said Tunnell, whose team had lost three in a row, including a doubleheader sweep by the Cardinals the previous night. "I'm just happy I did what I was supposed to do."

Ken Oberkfell was the only St. Louis batter who figured out Tunnell, 8-5. Oberkfell singled three times for the only hits off the right-hander.

"It was too much Tunnell and not enough Obies, right," commented Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

In other NL games, Montreal bounced Chicago 8-2. Philadelphia beat New York 2-0. San Diego downed Los Angeles 8-3. Cincinnati routed San Francisco 11-1 and Houston at Atlanta was rained out.

Tunnell's 110-pitch effort resulted in his second shutout of the season. It was his third complete game.

The 22-year-old pitcher, who pitched seven shutout innings in his last start, admitted that his concentration occasionally drifted from the mound and the St. Louis batters.

"I was just thinking that if I weren't here I'd be making $1,200 a month teaching school," said Tunnell, who was a secondary education major at Baylor University. "I'm just grateful for the chance to play."

Morrison got a rare start in place of Pittsburgh's regular third baseman, Bill Madlock, who suffered a torn tendon in his left calf Monday night. Morrison responded with his fifth home run in the fourth inning off John Stuper, 9-10, and an RBI groundout in the sixth.

Expos 8, Cubs 2

Manny Trillo went 4-for-4, including a home run and two doubles, and drove in four runs to pace host Montreal.

Trillo's RBI double triggered a three-run first inning. He drilled his second homer of the season in the second inning, and Andre Dawson followed with his 29th home run.

Dawson's blast, off Dick

Ruthven, 11-11, gave him 100 runs batted in this season.

Charlie Lea, 14-8, won his seventh straight game, tying a team record for consecutive victories by a starter set by David Palmer. Lea allowed four hits in six innings. Scott Sanderson finished up for his first save, which was the second of his career.

Chicago's Leon Durham tore ligaments in his thumb trying to field Trillo's double in the first inning and is expected to be out of action for three weeks.

Phillies 2, Mets 0

The game in New York featured a matchup of rookie pitchers — Tony Ghefl of Philadelphia, making the second start of his career, and Ron Darling of New York, making his major-league debut.

Ghefl gave up five hits in 4 1-3 innings and did not get a decision. Reliever Tug McGraw went 2-2-3 innings to get the win and Al Holland got his 18th save as the three Philadelphia pitchers combined on a seven-hitter.

Darling struck out five of the first seven batters he faced, and went 6 1-3 innings in taking the loss. He gave up just one run — a bizarre one — and five hits before leaving with a pulled left hamstring.

The Phillies scored in the fourth when Joe Morgan walked, took second on a groundout and came home as Darling balked twice while Mike Schmidt was batting. Two errors by third baseman Hubie Brooks in the eighth inning led to Philadelphia's other run.

Padres 8, Dodgers 3

San Diego won for the seventh straight time in Los Angeles, trimming the Dodgers' lead in the NL West to one game over Atlanta.

Terry Kennedy drove in four runs with a home run and two singles and Luis Salazar also homered to lead San Diego. Tony Gwynn of the Padres singled to extend his hitting streak to 16 games.

Winner Ed Whitson, 4-7, gave up seven hits in pitching his second complete game of the season. He yielded only two hits in the first five innings.

R.J. Reynolds' first major-league hit, a three-run homer in the sixth, accounted for the Dodger runs.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-2, took the loss, the third consecutive defeat for Los Angeles.

Reds 11, Giants 1

A crowd of 3,562 at Candlestick Park saw San Francisco shortstop Darrell Evans make two errors that led to six unearned runs.

Dann Bilardello and Paul Householder each drove in three runs, pinning the loss on Atlee Hamaker, 10-9. Bilardello belted a solo homer, his sixth, while Householder had a three-run double.

Evans' first error led the way to four unearned runs in the second inning. His second miscue came during a three-run seventh.

The Reds scored their 11 runs on just eight hits.

Kittle Joins Luzinski On Comiskey Roof

By The Associated Press

Comiskey Park in Chicago is not necessarily known as a home run paradise. It just seems that way when Greg Luzinski and Ron Kittle bat.

Luzinski has already hit three roof-top jobs in left field at Comiskey this season. And Tuesday night, Kittle hit the roof to help the American League West leaders beat the Oakland A's 7-6.

"It was only a matter of time," said Luzinski of Kittle's spectacular shot. "He hit the facing up there earlier this year. With his power and stroke, if he gets a pitch in the right spot, he can hit it a long way."

Kittle homered in his fifth successive game. The blast was the 32nd of the year for the White Sox rookie and he became only the 20th player in the 73-year history of Comiskey to hit a ball on or over the roof. Only Luzinski, Ted Williams and Jimmy Fox have done it more than once.

"I knew it was out the moment I hit it, it was only a question of whether it would stay fair or not," said Kittle. "I've been feeling comfortable at the plate, I've regained my confidence and I made it count."

In other AL action, it was Baltimore 8, Boston 1; Milwaukee 6, New York 3; Toronto 6, California 4; Minnesota 5, Texas 3 in 10 innings and Seattle 3, Kansas City 1. Rain washed out the Detroit-Cleveland game.

Kittle's homer, his sixth in the last seven games, came in a two-run third off loser Chris Codiroli, 12-10, that sewed up the contest for the White Sox and reduced their "magic number" for winning the West to 11 games.

LaMarr Hoyt, 19-10, won his eighth consecutive game and matched his career high of 19 victories which led the AL last season. He allowed eight hits, including a pair of solo homers by Wayne Gross, but departed in the eighth. Four pitchers finished up, including Dennis Lamp, who notched his 12th save.

Orioles 8, Red Sox 1

In Baltimore, Jim Palmer gave up eight hits in 7 1-3 innings and Eddie Murray and Rick Dempsey hit two-run homers as the Orioles defeated Boston. The victory was the 12th in 14 games for the Orioles, the AL East leaders.

Palmer, 44, allowed the only Red Sox run in the fourth on a single by Carl Yastrzemski. The RBI by Yastrzemski was his 1,840th, snapping a ninth-place tie with former Boston great Williams on the all-time list.

Murray lined his 27th homer off Dennis Eckersley, 7-12, in the first, following a two-out single by Cal Ripken Jr. Dempsey's fourth homer, off Doug Bird, came after a two-out walk to Singleton in the seventh.

"I didn't get tired. My arm feels fine," said Palmer, working his way back from an injury. "But it's inconclusive. Anybody can win with eight runs."

Brewers 6, Yankees 3

In Milwaukee, Ted Simmons ripped a two-out, two-run triple in the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie and lead the Brewers over New York.

The Brewers set the stage for Simmons' hit when leadoff hitter Paul Molitor reached first on second baseman Willie Randolph's error. One out later, Molitor was forced at second by Robin Yount. But Cecil Cooper followed with a single and Simmons tripled to chase Yankee starter Dave Righetti, 14-6. George Frazier relieved and threw a wild pitch, allowing Simmons to score the Brewers' final run.

Simmons' hit made a winner of Brewer reliever Jim Slaton, 12-5. Slaton pitched three innings of three-hit relief, allowing a run on Don Baylor's eighth-inning homer. Pete Ladd pitched the ninth to earn his 19th save.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 4

In Toronto, George Bell and Cliff Johnson each drove in two runs to lead the Blue Jays over California.

Bell, who had three hits, clubbed a two-run triple in the first inning and Johnson had a two-run double in the fifth as the Blue Jays won their third straight game. The loss was California's fourth straight.

Doyle Alexander, 3-8, checked the Angels on six hits before being relieved in the eighth. The victory was his third straight after eight losses at the start of the season. Jim Aker, the third Toronto pitcher, picked up his first major league save.

Twins 5, Rangers 3

In Arlington, Darrell Brown delivered a run-scoring single in the 10th inning to lead Minnesota over Texas and snap a five-game losing streak.

Reliever Ron Davis earned his fourth victory against seven losses while Ranger starter Frank Tanana took his seventh loss against as many victories.

Tim Teufel led off the 10th with a single, moved up on a sacrifice and came home with the game-winner on Brown's single. John Castino followed with a single off Ranger reliever Victor Cruz and Gary Ward brought Brown home with a sacrifice fly.

Mariners 3, Royals 1

In Kansas City, Steve Henderson drove in one run with a fifth-inning double, then scored on a wild pitch to carry Seattle over slumping Kansas City.

Right-hander Bob Stoddard, scattered five hits over 5 2-3 innings to pick up his eighth victory against 14 defeats. Bill Caudill, the fourth Mariner pitcher, hurled the final 1 2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

It was the Royals' 10th loss in their last 11 games.

Davis Excels With Royals

Former East Carolina University outfielder Butch Davis was called up August 22 to the Kansas City Royals to replace injured veteran Willie Wilson.

Since joining the Royals, he has hit .250, 11-44, with four runs batted in.

Davis started the year in Class AA ball in Jacksonville, Fla., where he hit .317, with 14 homers, 63 RBI and 29 stolen bases.

He joined the AAA Omaha team July 8, and hit .316, with five homers, 21 RBI.

In his first at-bat in the majors, Davis cracked a ground-ruled double.

Hunt Trims Rose 5-4 In 1983 Net Opener

WILSON — Rose High

School's girls' tennis team opened their season yesterday bowing to Wilson Hunt, 5-4.

Hunt captured four of the six singles matches in hard-fought sets, then held off Rose in one of the three doubles matches to clinch the victory.

The Ramettes play host to Northeastern on Thursday in their first home match of the year.

they'll take it easy on us," Farmville Central coach Gil Carroll said after his team's loss to Williamston Monday. "But, I doubt it."

The Jaguars held Williamston's offense with the exception of a 57-yard touchdown pass, so Carroll's woes were caused primarily by the offense.

"It didn't look too good on film," he said. "There were too many missed blocking assignments. But they were typical first-game mistakes; we had an inability to block on gap assignments."

"(Tuesday) we worked on our passing game and blocking. Bertie's combination 60 defense. Bertie has an explosive offense with a quarterback who can run the football well. Defensively, they have an aggressive six-man front and usually bring six or seven on pass rush."

"We're still going to work on the fundamentals of our running game, but we're going to open it up and pass more this time."

The three days between games will not give the injuries suffered by Wilson Gay and Tyrone Forbes time to heal, but the Jaguars will have to make the adjustments.

"We have to have some breaks to win," he said. "They're the favorite. Turnovers will play a big part. Williamston fumbled five times, and we never came up with the ball. We've got to get on the ball when it's on the ground."

"We fumbled twice and managed to hang on, so we need to keep that up. We were fairly aggressive tackling on defense; we went out and stuck them early."

Shriver Faces Martina

NEW YORK (AP) — They are best friends, doubles partners and two of the top players in women's tennis. It's just that Pam Shriver keeps getting in Martina Navratilova's way.

One year ago, when Navratilova was supposed to win the United States Open Tennis Championship, her pal Pam destroyed the dream in the quarter-finals.

Now Martina is supposed to win the Open again and she's advanced a step closer this time, reaching Friday's semi-final round.

And there, waiting for her again, is Shriver.

Navratilova continued her straight sets march through the tournament with a 6-0, 6-3 destruction of No. 7 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany Tuesday. Meanwhile, Shriver, seeded fifth, upset No. 3 Andrea Jaeger 7-6, 6-3.

On the men's side of the draw, No. 2 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, No. 4 Yannick Noah of France, No. 5 Mats Wilander of Sweden and No. 9 Jimmy Arias completed the quarter-final lineup.

Lendl defeated No. 12 Johan Kriek 6-2, 6-4, 6-1; Noah eliminated 16-year-old Aaron Krickstein 6-3, 7-6, 6-3; Wilander finished Andres Gomez of Ecuador 6-2, 6-1, 6-2; and Arias won 12 straight games in the last two sets to down Joachim Nystrom of Sweden 6-3, 6-3, 6-0, 6-0.

In the men's quarters, Arias plays Noah and Wilander meets Lendl.

Shriver and Navratilova are entered in the women's doubles tournament at the Open and reached the quarter-finals of that competition with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Carling Bassett of Canada and Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina Tuesday night.

"You want to play well in doubles before you play her (in singles)," Shriver said. "Maybe she'll think you're playing great and be scared."

Navratilova, who has lost just two singles matches since Shriver beat her here last year, laughed at that. "You can't think about you better not give anything away in the doubles like 'God, I can't hit my forehand,'" she said.

Shriver is looking forward to the showdown with her friend.

"I like my chances here whenever I play her," she said. "She doesn't have good memories of me here and it tends to bring out the emotional side of me which helps me concentrate hard and that's when I'm at my best."

Navratilova has beaten Shriver three times since they last met at the Open. But none of those matches have been in the kind of setting they have at the National Tennis Center.

"I think I've won about six games, so I have to do something, especially on service," Shriver said. "But I haven't played her in a stadium where it's been a little windy and sunny. Those are the days I like to play Martina."

Shriver will be the underdog, of course, just as she was last year. In that match, Navratilova, weakened by a mysterious virus, was a three-set loser.

"I just didn't hit the ball hard enough to get it past her," Navratilova said. "I'm playing a totally different game now. I'm attacking more, coming in on my second serve more because my second serve is better."

Shriver agreed that Navratilova's game has improved.

"She's doing lots better," Shriver said. "She's not missing quite as many volleys."

Actually, their games are similar in many ways.

"It's going to be a foot race to the net because we have trouble passing each other," Navratilova continued. "You might see us staring at each other. We're going to be mixing it up and keeping each other guessing."

For Navratilova, the meeting with Shriver is no big deal.

"We're a team until we sit on opposite sides of the court," she said. "I'm not shaking in my boots about it and I'm sure she's not shaking in her boots about it. I was confident last year and I'm confident now."

Shriver and Navratilova positioned themselves for the showdown with straight-set victories against Jaeger and Hanika.

Shriver, annoyed by Jaeger's frequent complaints about the officiating, beat the No. 3 seed 7-2 in the first set tie-breaker and then dominated the second set.

Navratilova had no trouble at all with Hanika, one of only five players who have beaten her in the last two years.

Lendl has dominated the men's side of the draw much the way Navratilova has owned the women's side. Like Martina, he has not lost a set in the tournament and in four matches, he has had his service broken only once.

"I feel I am playing very well, but I don't know if it's my very best," he said.

Cosell Apologizes For Remarks Made During Monday Telecast

NEW YORK (AP) —

Sportscaster Howard Cosell, acknowledging that he referred on the air to Washington Redskins wide receiver Alvin Garrett as "that little monkey," has apologized for it and says the remark was "not remotely connected to racism."

Moreover, Cosell said Tuesday on his New York Radio show, "a little monkey" is what he calls his own grandson.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said Tuesday night that Cosell had called him to apologize for using the term during ABC's telecast Monday night of the game between the Redskins and the Dallas Cowboys.

During a replay of a Garrett pass reception in the second quarter, he said Washington Coach Joe "Gibbs wanted to get this kid and that little monkey gets loose, doesn't he?"

Lowery, who said at a Tuesday news conference Cosell's comment "was a slip that reflected a thought" and said Cosell "ought to be man enough to big enough to say 'I said it and I'm sorry.'" He was also critical of the "absence of blacks" on TV crews.

Tuesday night, Lowery said Cosell had called him and "told me over the phone that he regretted using the word and assured me and millions of people that he did not use the word in a derogatory fashion."

"I was satisfied by what he said to me on the telephone, but I do want to know what he said to the public," said Lowery, who said Cosell promised to send him a tape of the radio program. "If he said what he said to me, I'm satisfied."

Cosell was supported both by Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke said the team's management was "flabbergasted at the furor raised" over the comment and Garrett. The receiver said in a statement issued by the Redskins:

"I did not, and do not, take exception to anything he said about me in the broadcast last night. Matter of fact, I am pleased that he singled me out for such favorable attention."

Cosell said in his broadcast: "I respect and admire Alvin Garrett. I was bragging on him with affection and I used a word I use when playing with my own grandson."

Cosell enumerated a long list of black athletes who had been his friends, including the late Jackie Robinson, Muhammad Ali, Curt Flood, Willie Stargell, Joe Greene and Sugar Ray Leonard. "Jack Roosevelt Robinson was the greatest influence of my life," he said. "We worked together in the black ghettos of New York."

He also noted that he had spoken out for black managers, coaches and front office personnel in football and basketball and against holding boxing cards in South Africa because of the country's apartheid policies.

Cosell was also defended in a statement issued by ABC in the name of Boone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports.

"While the use of the word 'monkey' was an unfortunate one," it said, "taken in the overall context of Howard Cosell's superlative and continuing record of promoting harmonious race relationships — a position that he maintained long before any other prominent broadcaster — it should be obvious to all that it was not meant as any kind of a slur, but on the contrary within the framework of the sentence uttered was actually intended as an expression of affection."

During Monday night's game, Cosell and ABC officials at first denied that the comment was made. But later, a network spokesman said that a review of tapes showed "obviously, he did say it."

Robinson Joins Mountaineers

BOONE (AP) — North Carolina basketball player Lynwood Robinson has announced he's transferring to Appalachian State this fall, school officials say.

Robinson, a 6-foot-1, 182-pound junior from Mt. Olive, won't be eligible for the 1983-84 season because of NCAA transfer rules. But he will be able to play in the 1984-85 season.

"Lynwood Robinson is a great contribution to the Mountaineer squad and will provide greater depth," Appalachian State head basketball coach Kevin Cantwell said.

Robinson, a guard, did not score in the four games he played in for the Tar Heels last year.

Hunt Kickers Defeat Rose

WILSON — Rose High School's soccer team officially opened its season Tuesday afternoon, bowing to Wilson Hunt, 3-1, in the Wilson Soccer Tournament.

The loss knocked the Ram-pants out of the single elimination field.

The contest was a close one, with the score 0-0 at the half. Early in the second half, however, Greg Adams scored for the Warriors to give them the lead.

Rose came back about five minutes later scoring on a direct kick from the top of the penalty box by Lewis Robbins, assisted by Derek Leupen.

Hunt, however, regained the lead about two minutes later on a shot by Brian Newton. The other goal came with 26 seconds left in the game on a shot by Fielding.

Hunt took 14 shots on goal, while Rose had ten. Rampant goalie Greg Ward recorded five saves.

Coach Will Wiberg singled out the play of Jordy Smith, Clarke Stallings and David Jester in the contest.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, hosting Goldsboro.

Other first round scores in the tournament saw North-eastern top Beddingfield, 4-2; Wake Forest-Rolesville beat Kinston, 3-0; and Fike down Rocky Mount, 3-0. The four winners play today to reduce the field to two finalists:

Stop Smoking

Staton Wins Tournament

ROCKY MOUNT — Nelson Staton won the OIC's 35 singles Monday defeating Lionel Curtis of Raleigh 3-6, 6-1, 5-2 (retired).

The tournament was sponsored by the Occupational Industrialization Center and Coor's Beer. Gean McDaniels of Murfreesboro won the women's singles, while the men's open singles was won by Tony Johnson of Tarboro.

Upping Serve

Pam Shriver serves to Andrea Yeager during their women's singles match Tuesday at the National Tennis Center. Shriver upset the number three seed with a 7-6, 7-2, 6-3 defeat to move on to the semifinals in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships. (AP Laserphoto)

Farmville Board Endorses Increase For Sales Tax

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Following a public hearing, Farmville commissioners voted last night to recommend to the county commissioners that Pitt County join in a proposed state plan for a half-cent sales tax to be returned to the counties and municipalities within those counties.

If the county chooses to be part of the plan, 40 percent of whatever per capita proportionate amount is received by each municipality within the county must be spent on water and sewer capital improvements, the commissioners were told. This money will come in handy, they said, because the same legislation repeals the authority of the governor to call for statewide clean water bond election in 1983. Farmville, it was pointed out, has in the past relied heavily on clean water bond funds for its water and sewer improvements.

A public hearing to consider a request by Parker Oil Company for the rezoning of a lot from industrial to highway business was set for the October regular meeting of the board.

Mayor Walston reappointed Margaret Suggs to the Recreation and Parks Advisory Board, and appointed William Thomas Whitely to the Recreation and Parks Advisory Board and Pete Anderson to the Community Development Advisory Board.

In other business, the board:

- Approved the Utilities Department request to purchase a sand blaster.
- Heard W.A. Allen Jr.'s request for repayment for his expenditures for drainage work done in Middle Swamp which he maintains benefits the town. Mayor Walston said he would recommend that the request be denied, as he has stated in the past when he was a commissioner. The town never authorized the work, he said, and he does not feel that the town benefits from its having been done. Following the statement of the mayor's recommendation, Allen said he was "disappointed in the town for failing to take responsibility for the drainage of its property and disappointed that you don't recognize the service done the town."

• Heard W.A. Allen Jr.'s request for sewer connections on 264 Bypass. He was asked to put these requests in writing at which time a utilities commission will review them as to how they fit in with town policy.

Morgan, alternate commissioner.

- Accepted the building committee's recommendation that the town pay $1,400 to Rural Plumbing, contractors for work at the Community Center now under construction. The payment is being made by the town because the company was misinformed about tap-on fees of the town at the time it was working up its bid on the project.
- Transferred $5,000 from third year rehabilitation funds of the Community Development project to third year recreation funds for contingency purposes including the removal of a manhole adjacent to the community center.
- Approved purchase of $1,475.53 worth of electrical supplies from Rigby Electric Supply Company and $703.98 from WESCO.
- Confirmed the purchase of a half-ton truck for the Public Works Department from Messer Chevrolet at a cost of $9,500.87.
- Asked for bids on an electric typewriter for the town office.
- Authorized getting proposals from an architect for the remodeling of the town office, including the addition of an open-shelf filing system.

- Reiterated its April decision that an area in the middle of the Walter B. Jones Town Commons park be left open, in case a city

Pitt County Volunteers Rocognized Here Tuesday

VOLUNTEERS RECOGNIZED ...
Juanita Elks receives certificate from Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners in recognition of her selection as a 1983 Governor's Volunteer Awards nominee. Ms. Elks was one of 37 individuals and eight groups to receive certificates here Tuesday, and one of eight individuals and three groups scheduled to be recognized by Gov. Jim Hunt at a regional meeting Oct. 24.

Community volunteers in Pitt County were honored at a reception Tuesday afternoon by the Board of County Commissioners and the county's Involvement Council.

Highlighting the reception was the presentation of certificates to 37 individuals and eight groups in 11 categories who were nominated for the 1983 governor's statewide volunteer awards.

Governor's awards winners in Pitt County, who will be recognized at a regional ceremony in Williamston, on October 24, include: Howard M. Pyle for individual human service; Annie Marable Brown for individual community volunteer leader; Alice F. Keene for administrator/coordinator of volunteers; Elizabeth Shannon for youth volunteer;

Juanita Elks for senior citizen volunteer; James Thornton Hudson for disabled person volunteer; Shirley Morrison for school volunteer and Sheppard Allen Hill Jr. for one-on-one volunteer.

Group awards winners include: the Service League of Greenville for community volunteer organization; the Woman's Missionary Union of Oakmont Baptist Church for church/religious volunteer group; and Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. for business/industry volunteer involvement.

Nominees for the Governor's Volunteer Awards who received certificates at the reception included: for individual human service, Annie Marable Brown, James Harrigan, Mary Frances Morris, Doris E. Pleier, Albert Ray Braxton, Susu Aldridge, Chester Lilly, Zula Rouse, Todd Kittrell, William Whiteford and Jean Weaver; for individual community volunteer leader Hattie G. Thompson, Kenneth Pollard, Shirley Morrison and Dick and Zula Leggett.

For administrator/coordinator of volunteers, E. Ross Boyer, Etsil Sinclair Mason and Robert Earl Joyner; for senior citizen volunteer Polly Dail, Lee F. Williams and Lucille Sledge; for disabled person volunteer Thelma Curmon; and for school volunteer Dr. Helen Weaver, Nancy V. Anderson, Barry Lynn Adams, Elizabeth Shannon, Margaret Cone, James L. Goes and Edith Pope.

Group award nominees included: for community volunteer organization, The

Pitt Schools On Full Days

Pitt County Schools will not close early due to the near-100-degree temperatures, said Superintendent Eddie West, because most classrooms in the schools have air-conditioning.

"Ninety-eight percent of our classrooms are air-conditioned," said West, "and we feel because of that students need to be in school learning."

County students began the 1983-84 school term Tuesday, and according to West, the opening was a smooth one. "We had a very efficient opening day," he said.

First-day enrollment was 10,746, said West, down slightly from the 1982-83 opening day enrollment of around 11,000.

"Many students called in and there are significant numbers still working on farms," he said. "We anticipate enrollment being back to normal as soon as the late harvest on tobacco is completed."

First-day attendance is not a good indication of the year's enrollment, added the superintendent. "We'll have a much better idea after 10 days," he said.

Friendship Force of Greenville, the Knights of Columbus, the Pitt County Mental Health Center Carver Group, and the Pitt County Mental Health Association; and Trinity Free Will Baptist Church for church/religious volunteer group.

Statewide, one nominee from each county in each category will receive the Governor's Volunteer Award.

In opening the program, Charles Gaskins, chairman of the board of commissioners, told the volunteers that their service is invaluable. "What would the tax rate be," Gaskins asked, if the county had to pay for the many hours of volunteer work.

Betcha can't tell the difference!

GOP Eyes Senate Seat

HOMETOWN MOURNS — Nearly 2,000 people filled the Civic Auditorium in Everett, Wash. Tuesday night for memorial services for Sen. Henry Jackson. (AP Laserphoto)

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON AP — An early election to pick a successor to Sen. Henry M. Jackson gives Republicans an opportunity to strengthen their control of the Senate at a time Democrats are increasingly hopeful of regaining the dominance they lost in 1980.

Jackson, 71, a Democratic veteran of 42 years in Congress, died Thursday at his home in Everett, Wash. An autopsy revealed Tuesday that Jackson died of a burst blood vessel rather than a heart attack as had been widely reported.

Washington State Attorney General Kenneth Eikenberry ruled in Olympia, Wash., on Tuesday that the election must be held Nov. 8 rather than next year, when elections will be held for the seats of senators whose terms are expiring.

The winner of the election will serve the balance of Jackson's term, ending in 1985.

Republican Gov. John Spellman will make an interim appointment to serve until the election, and is expected to name a Republican. Most speculation has been that he will pick former Gov. Dan Evans or Rep. Joel Pritchard, who has announced he will not seek a seventh term in the House.

Spellman has declined to comment before Jackson's funeral today in Everett.

J. Brian Atwood, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said the expected appointment of a Republican senator from Washington "is going to make it a little more difficult, but I still think our chances are 50-50."

Republicans now have a 54-47 edge in the Senate, with Jackson's seat vacant.

But Democrats are hopeful of recapturing control because, for the first time in six years, there will be more Republican than Democratic seats at stake in 1984. Democratic hopes have also been bolstered by the decisions of Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and veteran Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas not to seek re-election.

Republicans feel they have a good chance of capturing the Washington seat in the special election, however, since the GOP has shown increasing strength in the state in recent years.

The state has had a Republican governor for all but four of the last 19 years and Republican Slade Gorton defeated veteran Democratic Sen. Warren G. Magnuson in 1980.

A GOP victory in Washington would lengthen the Republican margin of control to 55-45.

On the Democratic side, the race could attract a wide field of candidates, particularly since representatives would have an unusual opportunity to run for the Senate without having to give up their House seats.

Rep. Norman Dicks of Tacoma and Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle are among the most prominently mentioned as potential candidates. Other possible contenders include Rep. Don Bonker of Olympia, Rep. Mike Lowry of the Seattle suburb of Mercer Island and Al Swift of Bellingham, whose district includes Jackson's home town.

Some observers of the state political scene have suggested most of the other candidates might step aside if Rep. Thomas Foley of Spokane, House Democratic whip and dean of the state's delegation, decided to make the race.

However, a spokesman for Foley — Bill Furst — said the congressman has expressed no interest in seeking the post. Foley is less well known in the populous western part of the state than in the eastern district he represents, which has not sent anyone to the Senate in more than 50 years.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, noted that it will be "a contest of rather short duration" and said the committee would be "very active" in the Washington race.

Gorton is a member of the committee, which raises and distributes money for GOP Senate races.

One Republican source, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the attorney general's ruling probably increased the chances that former Gov. Evans would be appointed.

"With only two months for a campaign, the governor will be looking for someone with a statewide reputation," the source said.

A Democratic source, speaking on the same condition, predicted the Democratic field would probably be smaller than otherwise if Evans, who won an unprecedented three successive terms as governor, gets the appointment.

Another Democratic source said that if a well known figure such as Evans were appointed, "our people would have a hard time catching up in two months."

American Jobs From Japanese

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 292 companies in the United States with majority-Japanese ownership employed more than 65,000 workers at the end of 1982, according to a report by the Japan Economic Institute.

Japanese investors were represented in a total of 458 plants in operation or under construction last year, JEI says. California leads all the states in the number of Japanese-affiliated factories, with 124, followed by Alaska with 35, New Jersey with 24, Texas with 23 and Washington with 20.

Color television sets, stereo equipment, microwave ovens, integrated circuits, telephone equipment, bearings and machine tools are among the leading product lines for Japanese-affiliated companies in the U.S.

HELPING HAND — Bill Huber communicates by short-wave radio with World Relief workers in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to order supplies for refugees in remote Mocoron.

Relief Worker Keeps Supplies

On The Move

MOCORON, Honduras (AP) — The term "logistics nightmare" is no dream to 24-year-old Bill Huber, logistics coordinator of a massive refugee resettlement program centered around this village in a swampy jungle area, of northeast Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

He works for World Relief, the international relief agency charged with keeping alive the 13,000 Miskito Indian refugees who have fled the conflict in Nicaragua.

Huber, who grew up in Colombia as the son of missionaries, is accustomed to living and working in primitive tropical areas. But in his present job, he is also responsible for bringing 150 tons of food each month into some of the remotest, most inaccessible terrain in Central America.

"Anything that moves, I'm in charge of making sure it moves right," he explains. That means footpower, dug-out canoes, trucks, jeeps, all-terrain vehicles to plow through swamps and marshlands, a DC-3 to fly in supplies during the dry season and a 65-foot steelhull boat.

When refugees first began arriving in Honduras two years ago, "they had no possessions except what they could carry on their backs, sometimes not even that," Huber explains.

"The young single guys swam the river between Nicaragua and Honduras, and families crossed in dug-out canoes. But then everyone had to walk 37 miles through the jungle to reach Mocoron. By that time, they were in pretty sad shape."

As the numbers of refugees swelled to 13,000, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees established a camp for them and appointed World Relief to run it.

The agency had done relief work in Central America for years, and had administered relief programs for Southeast Asian refugees in Hong Kong, Thailand and the Philippines. But the sheer complexity of getting food and supplies to Mocoron made those operations seem easy, Huber points out.

"Mocoron is 49 miles away from the nearest port, Puerto Lempira, and during the rainy season the road is impassable for the last eight miles into camp," he says.

"Even four-wheel-drive vehicles get stuck. We tried to repair the road, but to do that we needed gravel from the river, and the roads to the river were also impassable."

Communicating by radio with World Relief staff in the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, camp administrators placed daily orders for flour, rice, medicine, fuel, tools and other supplies. These were trucked some 200 miles to the ports of La Ceiba or Puerto Cortez, then loaded on a boat for a 36-hour trip to Puerto Lempira. From there, supplies were trucked as close to camp as possible, and carried by refugees the last eight miles on foot.

Even though hundreds of refugees still seek shelter in Honduras every month, the refugee population in Mocoron has lessened drastically since January, when World Relief and the Honduran government began a program to resettle the Indians on their own farm plots in three areas in the surrounding countryside. But for Huber, the dispersal program has made logistics even more complicated.

"We're committed to supplying the refugees with food, seeds, tools and medicine until they're able to support themselves," he says. "The relocation sites are in remote areas of the jungle, and they're only accessible on foot or by dugout canoe. It takes from one to three days to get to them, even longer in the dry season when the boats run into stumps and driftwood."

So far, the resettlement program has been successful, Huber says. "I ran a kitchen for malnourished people, pregnant women and children in a refugee camp in Thailand a few years ago," he recalls. "Bad as the situation is for the refugees here, it's much, much better than it was over there."

Created Stench To Detect Leak

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — One of the major problems faced by the developers of liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) was to develop a stench so that leaking gas could be detected.

Karl "Hack" Hachmuth, a chemical engineer at Phillips Petroleum in the late 1920s, settled on the pungent, unpleasant odor of ethyl mercaptan, which today alerts consumers to gas leaks.

LPG is used for heating and cooking in rural areas and for fueling tractors, trucks and buses.

Sound Also Creates Image

NEW YORK (AP) — X-ray treatment is not the only way to find out what's going on inside the body.

A new technique called ultrasound uses sound waves instead of radiation to project an image.

An ultrasound picture, or sonogram, is created by echoes from the sound waves as they bounce off organs and tissues. However, the process is used as an adjunct to x-rays, and not as a substitute.

Mid-South Carrier Sale Is Announced

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Officials of Air Virginia say they've signed an agreement to purchase Mid-South Aviation, a North Carolina-based commuter carrier, by the end of the year.

Air Virginia will manage the day-to-day operations of Mid-South until the takeover is concluded, Curtis Coward, chairman and chief executive officer of Lynchburg-based Air Virginia, said Tuesday.

Coward said Air Virginia will control scheduling, route selection and joint-fare agreements with other carriers.

The purchase and management control agreements were signed Aug. 9 but not announced publicly until a press conference Tuesday in Pinehurst, N.C. Previously, officials would say only that the deal was in the works.

Air Virginia is purchasing Mid-South for cash, but officials declined to specify the amount.

Air Virginia has made partial payment, and the rest is "on schedule," said James Meals, president and chief operating officer of Air Virginia.

The acquisition "extends Air Virginia's route structure into the South in a ready-made fashion," Meals said.

"The two route systems fit together very well. It gives Air Virginia ready access to an already developed North Carolina market," he said.

"The acquisition will extend Air Virginia service to cities such as New Bern, Raleigh, Southern Pines and Pinehurst, all in North Carolina.

Air Virginia is about four times as large as Mid-South, Coward said.

In August, Air Virginia carried 19,900 passengers, compared with 4,500 for Mid-South. Coward expects Air Virginia to carry 205,000 passengers in 1983, compared with about 55,000 for the smaller airline.

Air Virginia currently flies to 12 cities in Virginia, North Carolina, Ohio, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey, and Washington, D.C.

Mid-South, based in Southern Pines, N.C., serves eight areas within the state.

Schools Closing Early Due Heat

By The Associated Press

Barely into a new school year, many North Carolina pupils are getting extra vacation time — compliments of a heat wave that officials say makes it hard to concentrate.

"When the temperature reaches 95 to 97 degrees, it's pretty difficult to keep the youngsters' attention," said Bob W. Gordon, superintendent of Pasquotank County schools.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported that of the 51 city and county school systems it checked, 29 said they had shortened the school day at some or all of their schools depending on the availability of air conditioning.

Of the 22 that didn't close Tuesday, 11 said they intended to close early today.

At least two systems, in Harnett and Bladen counties, had just opened for the year and had no plans to close.

"It is very unusual for that many (to close early), and very unusual for it to be this hot in September," said Tom I. Davis, spokesman for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Temperatures soared into the middle and upper 90s in much of the state Tuesday and little if any change was forecast for today. The National Weather Service said the sizzling heat was caused by a high pressure system centered along the Georgia-Florida coast.

The highs are 10 to 15 degrees above normal, forecasters said.

Davis said early closings would not disrupt bus schedules because most buses are driven by students. But he said they would cause problems in the classroom.

"Probably the biggest problem is that (early dismissal) causes the schools to have to cut the instructional day short, and the kids need this lost time," he said.

Many of the state's schools were designed for air conditioning, with narrow windows and sufficient insulation, but some systems can't afford to install it, Davis said.

Officials reported a few isolated cases of nausea and excessive discomfort, but apparently the heat caused no serious health problems.

Pupil Too Late In Gallstones Request

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A fifth-grader wanting extra credit in her health class asked Gov. Jim Hunt to help — by sending her some gallstones. Alas, the request came too late.

Hunt had his gallbladder removed last week, and "his gallstones are no more," said spokesman Brent Hackney. "But if he still had them she'd be welcome to them."

Carol Ann Humphries, 10, who attends Woods School in Mooresville, wrote Hunt after his Aug. 30 operation.

"In my health class we are studying about the human body and about gallstones," she wrote. "My teacher said if we could bring some gallstones to class we could get a bonus grade. I heard on TV about your operation and wondered if you might send me at least one of your stones since I don't have anyone else to ask."

Hackney said he suggested that Hunt urge Miss Humphries' teacher to give her extra credit anyway for taking the time to write the governor.

In a telephone interview, Miss Humphries said one of her other classmates was able to get an "A" in health by bringing in her grandmother's gallstones.

She said she wasn't afraid to write someone as important as the governor about her school project because "he believes in education."

Miss Humphries is the daughter of Dean and Gwen Humphries.

Hunt learned he had gallstones and would need his gallbladder removed last February, when doctors removed Hunt's appendix.

Hunt's doctors have asked him to take another two or three weeks of rest to recover from the operation. He returned home Friday night and has canceled his appointments for this week. Hackney said, however, that Hunt was doing some work by telephone.

Old P-38 First 'World Class'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The P-38, America's first "world class" fighter plane, was the first U.S. fighter to fly non-stop over the Atlantic to England. It was also the first to fly over Berlin on deep penetration raids in World War II.

Six of these historic planes are buried under the snows of Greenland following a forced crash-landing in 1942.

Pension Tapped For Alimony

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A schoolteacher freed from jail after having his pension tapped for alimony payments could now be out of a job.

Paul W. Lataille had been in jail since he refused six months ago to pay alimony to his ex-wife because he believes that divorce laws discriminate against men.

A state Superior Court judge ordered that $13,800 be taken from Lataille's pension for alimony and lawyer's fees owed to his ex-wife, who divorced him after 27 years and five children.

Lataille, a sixth-grade teacher, had asked the Lincoln School Committee for a three-month leave of absence and was given the entire school year off. But school officials said before his release that they might not give him the job back.

Of the many great players the United States has produced, Meyer Schleifer of Los Angeles is perhaps the least known. Although no longer a youngster, he demonstrated at the recent Summer North American Championships in New Orleans that his technique is still formidable. Watch him make a vital overtrick on this hand to win a board for his team.

West's double of one spade was not for penalties. It is known in the trade as a Negative Double, and is a takeout for the unbid suits. North showed values and then raised to game when Schleifer made an invitational jump rebid.

West led a diamond and declarer ruffed. The king and ace of trumps picked up the queen, and declarer continued with two more rounds of trumps. East could spare one heart, but he had to part with a diamond on the fourth trump. Next Schleifer cashed the ace-king of clubs, and East was forced to discard a second diamond. Declarer ruffed a diamond to prepare for his first end play, then ran the seven of hearts to East's jack.

East still had a diamond to escape the end play, but it only delayed his fate. Declarer ruffed the diamond SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more trusting of friends and they can help you if you don't act in such an independent way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go to bigwigs in a straightforward manner and gain favors from them that you need. Career affairs can work out well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You get lots of ideas today, but pick out the best and put them in motion without delay. Make new contacts.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Follow your intuition which is good now and put new ideas to work that can aid you in your interests.

Public TV Opens Door To Vintage Memories

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Public television opens the attic and trunks full of vintage memories come flooding out tonight in the documentary, "There Was Always Sun Shining Somewhere: Life in the Negro Baseball Leagues."

The broadcast, produced, directed and co-written by Craig Davidson, pieces together a sentimental portrait of black baseball, which was played strictly for love, since the players earned little fame and no fortunes.

On park benches, in stadium seats or on front porches, the underground stars of those segregated sports times joyfully tell their tales. Davidson calls his story-telling technique "oral history," and if some hard-to-understand dialects swallow some recollections, so be it. This is bona fide social history being spun.

James Earl Jones, the basso profundo behind "Star Wars" villain Darth Vader, narrates. He once starred in "Bingo Long's Traveling All Stars and Motor Kings," a movie about the Negro Leagues. The old-timers disliked the film's characterizations, and Davidson says Jones is setting the record straight here.

In the earliest days of baseball, the game was integrated. But following the failures of Reconstruction, the documentary reports, a color barrier was erected in the 1880s that didn't come down until Jackie Robinson joined the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947.

Black players had to look elsewhere to play, and they found it in the Negro Leagues and barnstorming exhibitions around the country. Sometimes they played doubleheaders and then a night game, returning after midnight to their mobile homes, otherwise known as buses. "Their World Series moved from city to city," says Jones.

Today's major league players would be well-advised to hear the Negro Leaguers talk about the good ol' days. They do so without a trace of bitterness or anger. One wonders what Cesar Cedeno of the Cincinnati Reds would think. He's the guy who went off in a snit when a plane's first-class section was full.

When stationary lodging was available, there was no such thing as a single room, much less a single bed. Three players shared the bed, says Ted Page. "You would turn on the lights, and the bed bugs would run for cover, so we slept with the lights on."

Page played on the Pittsburgh Crawfords, the Yankees of the Negro Leagues. With Cool Papa Bell and Jimmy Crutchfield, they formed one of the greatest outfield trios of all time.

Bell was a speedster. "He was so fast, he'd turn out the lights and be in bed before it got dark in the room," says Buck Leonard, a Hall of Famer from the Negro Leagues.

Leonard also likes to tell how his Homestead Grays heard about two talented players in Hattiesburg, Miss. Money was sent, but the players never got on the bus going north. The local constabulary found them and telephoned the Grays.

"We got 'em in jail. What do you want to do with them?" the police asked. The Grays' reply: "Put 'em on a bus."

Davidson, an independent filmmaker, spent four years and thousands of his own dollars tracking down footage and stories like these. He advertised in black newspapers for leads, and his best information came from the players themselves, who provided their own home movies.

"I felt akin to the Negro League players," he says. "I must have covered 100,000 miles, and in the beginning I was just striking out. The white press just didn't cover the Negro Leagues."

The one exception was the East-West Game, comparable to the major leagues' All-Star Game. It was played in the 1930s and '40s in Chicago's Comiskey Park, and eventually drew 50,000 fans, many of them white. "But," says Davidson, "the teams often had to pay white writers to cover the game."

Luci Johnson To Wed Again

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, divorced in 1979 from Patrick Nugent after 12 years of marriage, has announced she will be getting married again.

"We're deliciously happy," said the 36-year-old daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson describing herself and husband-to-be, accountant Ian Turpin of the Grand Cayman Islands.

The wedding will be at the LBJ Ranch later this year or in early 1984, Ms. Johnson said.

Turpin, 38, is director of trust operations of the Grand Cayman Islands' Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Actress Feels Days Numbered

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Actress Suzanne Rogers figures that after nine years her days on NBC's "Days of Our Lives" are numbered.

"I think it's time for me to make a move," Miss Rogers said Tuesday on the QUBE cable television program "Soap Scoop." "If I don't do it now, I'll be unhappy."

"It seems they don't want to improve the story lines of the older people that are on the show," said Miss Rogers, who plays Maggie Horton.

In a telephone interview from Los Angeles, where "Days of Our Lives" is produced, Miss Rogers said Sept. 23 will be her last day.

Miss Rogers said she's going to try moving into movies and prime-time television.

PRICE CORRECTION

The price of tickets for the Sept. 14 performance of the N.C. Symphony Orchestra is $7.50, not $5 as noted in the ECU Music Calendar in Sunday's paper. The concert will be in Wright Auditorium.

Record In Summer Box Office

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Moviegoers spent a record $1.5 billion at U.S. and Canadian box offices this summer season, with the biggest winner, "The Return of the Jedi," grossing almost a quarter-billion dollars.

"The summer business is 8 percent better than last summer's $1.39 billion, which itself was a record," said A.D. Murphy, Daily Variety's financial expert who also teaches future film executives at the University of Southern California.

"That represents a substantial rise, even considering the 7 percent increase in ticket prices," he said Tuesday.

Behind "Jedi," the runaway summer favorite, came surprise hit "Flashdance" and "Trading Places." "WarGames" was fourth and "Octopussy" fifth.

Here are the principal moneymakers of the summer, films grossing more than $30 million:

1. "Return of the Jedi," $232.3 million
2. "Flashdance," $87.5 million
3. "Trading Places," $80.6 million
4. "WarGames," $68.2 million
5. "Octopussy," $62.9 million
6. "Superman III," $62.5 million
7. "Staying Alive," $58.3 million
8. "National Lampoon's Vacation," $49.4 million
9. "Blue Thunder," $43.6 million
10. "Jaws 3-D," $42.3 million
11. "Porky's II — The Next Day," $33.9 million
12. "Risky Business," $33.8 million
13. "Twilight Zone," $32.6 million
14. "Mr. Mom," $31.5 million
15. "Psycho II," $30.8 million

Most of the films are still in release and some are expected to achieve much higher figures. For instance, "Mr. Mom" was the leading moneymaker over the Labor Day weekend, grossing $8.2 million in 1,362 theaters.

Runners-up over the four-day period were "Risky Business" with $6.3 million on 1,119 screens, "Easy Money" with $4.1 million (1,112) and "National Lampoon's Vacation," $4 million (1,248).

The Cinderella movie of the hot months was "Flashdance," which actually started its run in the spring but continued earning big money through Labor Day — $2.1 million over the weekend in 860 theaters after 144 days in the marketplace.

"Flashdance" was the real surprise of the summer," said Charles Powell, motion picture marketing consultant.

"It helped the Travolta movie ('Staying Alive') because of its popularity. 'Flashdance' proved that these are MTV (Music Television) times. It's not just a TV freak; you can build a full-length movie with them."

Powell noted that some of the "imitation 'Animal Houses' did well" while some of the sequels did not. Among the latter: "The Curse of the Pink Panther" and "Smokey and the Bandit III."

Among the other summer casualties: "The Survivors" (Robin William, Walter Matthau), $14 million; "The Man With Two Brains" (Steve Martin), $8.5 million; "Krull," $17 million;

"Stroker Ace" (Burt Reynolds, Loni Anderson), $11.4 million; "Dr. Detroit" (Dan Ackroyd), $10.4 million. "But the curse of Dan Ackroyd was overridden with 'Trading Places' by Eddie Murphy's immense popularity," remarked an industry expert who declined to be quoted by name. He cited Ackroyd's previous failures: "1941," "The Blues Brothers" as well as "Dr. Detroit."

A 46-year-old cartoon, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," almost made the top 15 of summer films. Walt Disney Productions figures it to earn $29 million in its sixth re-release.

The lesson of the 1983 summer movie season?

"The audience still wants

Big Money In Oil Lotteries Goes To Shady Crew

By E. O'NEIL ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans plied with promises of easy money to be made in a federal oil lease lottery lost more than $200 million last year to high-pressure sales companies operating just beyond the grasp of the law.

The lottery, run by the Bureau of Land Management, offers any American citizen who has the $75 entry fee a marginal chance to make money in the oil and gas business by winning the rights to lease federal lands.

But those who enter the lottery frequently spend a lot more than $75, with many gambling thousands of dollars with so-called "filing service" companies.

The filing companies charge about $300 per lottery chance, and officials estimate that in 1982 they raked in somewhere from $200 million to $300 million. The filing services demand the premium payment for "expertise" that securities officials say is of dubious value.

According to investigators in several states and federal agencies, the typical filing company "buys a WATS line and starts dialing." When a potential customer answers, the sales pitch usually comes out of a prepared script book.

Scripts obtained by The Associated Press promise the customer will win a lease and the lease will be valuable. Variations on the theme show up occasionally, but the emphasis is on assuaging doubts investors have about the chances of winning a lease and then making money by turning around and selling it.

The ideal pushed by the telephone drummers is to win lease rights in the lottery, pay the BLM rent of a dollar an acre and then peddle the lease to an oil company for a profit and a slice of the royalties on any hydrocarbons found.

The reality is something else.

First, the chance of winning the rights to a lease in the lottery are slim. Second, the leases won will likely be for essentially worthless parcels of 40 to 10,000 acres on the arid Western plains, land that major oil companies have already rejected.

The BLM cautions those seeking leases that "your offer to lease is strictly a gamble. Since a very large percentage (90 percent) of the tracts won are never drilled on, your parcel may not have any potential for oil and gas even if you win the drawing."

Last year, the BLM collected $102.6 million by selling more than 1.74 million chances on parcels of land it admitted were essentially "goat pasture." For the July 1983 lottery alone, the BLM collected $12,956,000 in fees.

Depending on which of several estimates from federal and state officials is accurate, filing service companies account for anywhere from one-third to two-thirds of the BLM's lottery sales.

While the BLM is straightforward in its assessment of an individual's chances of winning lease rights and the chances of making money on it — the agency says the chances in both cases are very slim — the filing companies usually promise success on both counts.

Federal Trade Commission investigators say that despite promises of success in the lottery, the filing companies seldom deliver, a fact that is almost never mentioned in telephone sales pitches. The result is that investors like Lloyd and Lelia Gutierrez of St. Bernard, La., buy into the program believing they are certain to win a lease and make a profit.

The Gutierrezes, a retired couple, lost their life savings by investing in the lottery through a Coral Gables, Fla., company.

Although the Gutierrezes have a tape recording of a salesman guaranteeing them a lease and a profit from the sale of that lease, Louisiana is powerless to act against U.S. Oil and Gas — it has no laws to deal with the situation. Only the FTC has taken action against the company and that was a civil suit demanding that it halt what the agency said were deceptive sales practices.

Enforcement difficulties were compounded by a 1978 federal court decision in New York that removed the filing companies from the supervision of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The decision essentially left enforcement of existing consumer protection laws to the FTC but gave the agency no powers to close filing operations that it felt were abusing the public.

State securities officials say they have taken over enforcement, but their efforts have been spotty and frequently ineffective.

Over the past five years, 11 state securities offices have filed cease and desist orders against lottery filing companies. The states — Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina and West Virginia — have had varying degrees of success with enforcement, but most officials say they feel the problem belongs under federal agencies.

State officials say one reason their efforts have had little effect is that companies hit with cease and desist orders frequently resurface under new names and resume sales in a matter of weeks.

"A lot of the times they'll just turn around and reincorporate and come back doing the same things under different names — same birds, just different names," said R.G. Tucker, chief deputy securities commissioner for Montana.

Tucker said his division investigated 20 concerns and concluded that all made fraudulent statements when selling their "expert services." He said one company had told an investor that only three other people would buy chances on the lot she was trying for. The company sold 900.

BLM records indicate the instance Tucker cited was typical. One West Virginia man who was told by a filing service salesman that only half a dozen people would be competing for a group of parcels was actually up against 3,419 competitors, the records show.

Lynn Engdahl, special assistant to BLM Director Robert F. Burford, said that although the agency disapproved of the actions of some filing services, it had no power to halt the practices.

"Our job description says to turn it over to the proper authorities," he said, "and that's what we do."

"We don't like the abuse of the system and when we see it, we turn it over to the appropriate authorities," Engdahl added. "Right now, that is the FTC."

The BLM has turned over for prosecution more than a dozen companies accused of fraudulent use of the lottery. The violations have included printing fake lottery registration cards, pocketing money from the sale of lottery filing services and false claims of BLM affiliation.

In those cases, however, the government was able to prove outright fraud.

Controlling the filing services has been difficult since the SEC lost its New York test case in 1978. A federal court ruled then that services offered by the filing companies did not amount to "investment contracts" because they were not selling anything of value, only chances to win something of value. This left the companies outside SEC purview.

Another case filed that year met the same fate, court records show. The SEC has taken little action since, although William Toomey, an SEC lawyer in Washington, said the agency still believed that the filing service companies should come under securities laws.

Because the court ruled against the SEC, individual states have had to try to develop their own approaches, under a welter of complex and frequently conflicting state statutes.

"It's a shame that we have to spend our resources and time investigating and prosecuting crime that really belongs to Uncle Sam," Tucker said.

Lloyd Gutierrez said he also wondered about the federal government's role in the sale of lottery chances by private companies.

"What I can't get over is how they get away with using the federal government like they do," he said. "It seems like it ought to be illegal."

Federal and state officials say that until filing companies stray into areas covered by consumer or securities laws, they will operate with few restrictions.

Place Priority On Employment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling current unemployment a "human and social tragedy of immense proportions," the U.S. Catholic Conference says recovery from the nation's economic ills is impossible without getting people back to work.

In a 1983 Labor Day statement, the action agency of the Roman Catholic Church said that with almost one in 10 American workers unable to find a job, unemployment remains "the nation's No. 1 economic problem."

"An economic system which does not have full employment as a major goal is basically flawed," said the statement, issued by Bishop Mark J. Hurley of Santa Rosa, Calif. head of a social concerns committee.

It cited troubling tendencies to regard high unemployment levels a "necessary part of our economy," but said the "very foundation of a just economy is the right to a job for all who are able and wish to work."

Unemployment rates of 8 percent or 9 percent, which optimistic economists now predict for the height of recovery, "would have been considered totally unacceptable in our society" only 10 years ago, the statement said.

Bullriding Champ Once 'Hard Hat'

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
ROCHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A laid-off steelworker took advantage of his free time to trade his hard hat for a cowboy hat, chaps and spurs — honing his rodeo skills to become a national bullriding champion.

The furlough "gave me the opportunity to pursue something I really wanted to get into. I got to devote full-time to bullriding," said Wayne Gilmore, 27, who returned to work in August after 13 months on layoff.

In November, the 5-foot-10, 145-pound Gilmore won the bullriding finals of the American Rodeo Association, a nationwide group that sanctions rodeos from Canada to Florida and has 1,000 competing members.

The bullriding finals pitted the ARA's top 12 money winners. Gilmore was 15th on the list, but he qualified when three others couldn't make the event.

He won $1,000 plus a gold and silver belt buckle ornamented with four rubies with his name engraved as bullriding champion. If he hadn't gotten furloughed, Gilmore doubts he would have qualified.

"I really got to go all out last summer. It got me right where I wanted. If I had been working, I probably wouldn't have earned enough money to make it to the finals," he said.

Gilmore began riding bulls three years ago and enters up to three different rodeos each weekend. At Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.'s Aliquippa Works, he works on a bull gang doing overhead crane repair. Even though he's working again, he still rides the rodeo circuit.

Being single and living with his parents, he can travel with his buddies, paying entry fees of $25 to $60 to enter rodeos all over the East, trying to hang on for an eight-second ride.

"You got to be part of the bull. You and him have to be one. You have to be loose," said Gilmore. "Eight seconds ain't very long, but it can seem like an eternity."

Gilmore grew up in a rural area north of Pittsburgh, but it's hardly cowboy country.
His introduction to riding came on a mechanical bull at a saloon.

A friend talked him into getting on the back of a live bull — a raging, twisting, bucking, snorting, thundering hunk that can weigh between 1,800 and 2,400 pounds.

He got dumped in a flash his first ride — "I didn't even make the first jump," he said — and then was stomped on the leg at a bullriding school.

But he kept coming back sitting in the chute, he can feel his rope tighten around his gloved hand whenever the bull takes a breath.

Every time you get on you put your life in your hands," he said. "The waiting before the ride is the worst part. I ask myself, What am I doing here? But after it's done and you make that eight-second ride, you can't wait for the next one."

However, a 10-hour drive to an event can end in split-second failure.

There are times when you go home broke. You say to yourself, "All this for nothing.
What a wasted trip. I should have stayed home," said Gilmore. "That's when you'd like to just crawl under the dirt and hide. It's no fun falling off."

He practices on a bucking barrel, which is a 55-gallon drum mounted on four coiled springs that simulates a bucking motion.

"I wouldn't get on a mechanical bull anymore.
There's nothing like the real thing," said Gilmore. "The only nice thing about those mechanical bulls is they don't chase you when you get off."

"I've come a long way in three years. It's just something that seemed to come natural," he added. "I'm not getting rich at it. It's something I really enjoy as a hobby."

And the idea of rodeo bullriding seems less bizarre to his parents now that Gilmore has survived over 150 rides.

"I tried my darnedest to talk him out of it. I pleaded with him. I just didn't want to see him get hurt," said his father, Lawson, who works for a dairy.

Lobbies For The Children Of Divorce

By RENEE HAINES-SAINE

Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)

— Armed with a toy box and seven years' experience dealing with troubled families, a judge is working to give children, often the unwitting victims when their parents split up, their say in divorce court.

Pulaski County Chancellor Judith Rogers has been on the bench of chancery court, commonly called divorce court, less than a year, but she has already taken steps to boost the awareness of children's rights in divorce cases.

She has demanded that a separate lawyer be appointed in each custody case to represent solely the children's interests. She has issued rules to protect children that parents must follow, backed up by the threat of jail or fines if broken. And she has offered pre-divorce workshops and follow-up surveys to smooth the way for broken families.

"My philosophy is, if you can't interact with human beings about the law, then how can you be human?" she said in a recent interview.

Ms. Rogers, 51, said she became a children's advocate during the last five years, while she was county juvenile judge. Much of her time in juvenile court was spent listening to youngsters in trouble, helping them cope with crises and quell their anger, she said.

After being elected to chancery court in 1982, she found that children often are ignored while attention is trained on the parents' problems. "Very often the children get lost in the property dispute," she said.

Children can't change things for themselves, she said, so she went about trying to help. "Children don't vote. If children voted, it would have changed a long time ago," she added.

Among her changes was demanding personal meetings with all the children involved in custody battles she handles. She keeps a toy box in her office for the younger ones and insists on talking with the older children alone, without their parents or parents' lawyers in the room, as she recently did with a suicidal boy who couldn't understand why his parents won't live together.

Ms. Rogers also began, in each initial custody hearing, spelling out rules that parents must abide by. For example, they are told: "Don't drink around your children and don't expose your children to your other emotional entanglements," she said.

Some of the innovations are borrowed from juvenile court, she said, such as appointing a lawyer for children. Drawing on the psychological counseling services available to juveniles, she recently proposed a system of pre-divorce custody mediation, less costly and more personal than the alternative of suing in court.

Ms. Rogers, whose husband is a psychologist, has three children of her own. She began working with families almost by default when she opened a law office in Little Rock 20 years ago.

"The only people who sought a woman back in 1962 were people who had people problems and didn't have very much money," she said. "The more I did it, the more I liked it."

As a juvenile judge, she said, she felt some procedures were cruel or unnecessary.

"One day, I said, 'Why do we keep all the kids locked up in cells?' and nobody had an answer," she said, so now juvenile offenders are kept in an open room.

Now she said she would like to see more coordination between the juvenile and divorce courts, with more shared services, and further changes in the chancery court.

But, as she noted, because all families are different and each case evolves over time, there are no final answers.

"There are periodic successes," she said.

He Writes In A Country Barred From His Books

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
BERLIN (AP) — In a small house in the woods outside East Berlin, a noted German author and former American citizen writes busily for a public that is forbidden to read his latest books.

It has been 10 years since anything new written by Stefan Heym has seen a printing press inside Communist East Germany. Still, he keeps at it, saying the "stupidity" of government censors "cannot last forever."

In the meantime, three of his novels have been best sellers in West Germany, and the 70-year-old Heym enjoys the rare status of living in the East while publishing criticism of the East German government and society in the West.

His recent books are banned in East Germany, but the public reads his works in volumes smuggled by visitors from West Germany.

Heym, a committed socialist, was lionized by authorities when he moved to East Germany in 1952 after 17 years in the United States, where he had become a naturalized American citizen. At the time, he denounced American society as "war-like" and "fascist."

But Heym has since earned the anger of East German authorities because of his outspoken criticism of the communist regime. Officials have denounced him, fined him, and finally tried to silence him by ignoring him.

"Today I am absolutely a non-person, an unmentionable, an untouchable," he said in an interview. "Of course everybody finds that ridiculous, and it doesn't hurt me. I must say."

The gray-haired, stoop-shouldered Heym, who has written 22 books, was born in 1913 in Chemnitz, which was renamed Karl Marx-Stadt after the formation of East Germany.

While he was a writer-in-exile in New York, Heym helped expose the activities of Nazis in America. His 1942 book about the Nazi regime, "Hostages," was an American best seller and made into a film.

Today he is a particular embarrassment to the East

German government although he does not oppose its economic system. He is critical of intolerance on the part of "the boys who run this country."

"I often wonder what Marx and Engels would say if saw this setup," he grumbled. "They would probably be moved to write another 20 volumes."

"Socialism does not mean censorship. Nobody, not Marx or Engels or anybody, ever said socialism means a muzzle," he said.

After he moved to East Germany, Heym moved into the house where he still lives today, in one of the special housing colonies built for the fledgling country's "artists."

In 1953, he was quoted as saying it was "impossible for an honest man to be an author in America," and he mailed the Bronze Star he had won fighting in the Battle of the Bulge to President Eisenhower.

But in 1956, he got into a public argument about the development of cultural life in East Germany with former Communist party chief Walter Ulbricht.

Then in 1959, the East German government refused to publish what later became a best seller in the West — "Five Days in June," a novel based on the workers' 1953 uprising in the Soviet sector of Berlin.

In 1979, Heym published another best-selling novel, "Collin," which deals with an East German author's guilt about his silence during Communist Party purges.

The East German government slapped Heym with a $4,000 fine for violating foreign currency regulations by publishing in the West.

He was also denounced as a traitor and an American, even though he gave up his U.S. passport when he became an East German citizen.

After all his troubles, Heym says he does not regret his return.

"The situation is hard, but it is bearable," he says. "I am not an opponent (of the East German system) ... I am critical."

"I stay here because it is a fascinating place to be for a writer. There are a lot of contradictions."

Another reason he stays in East Germany, Heym says, is to provide encouragement for other cultural rebels.

"If I leave, that is one less independent thinker here," he said.

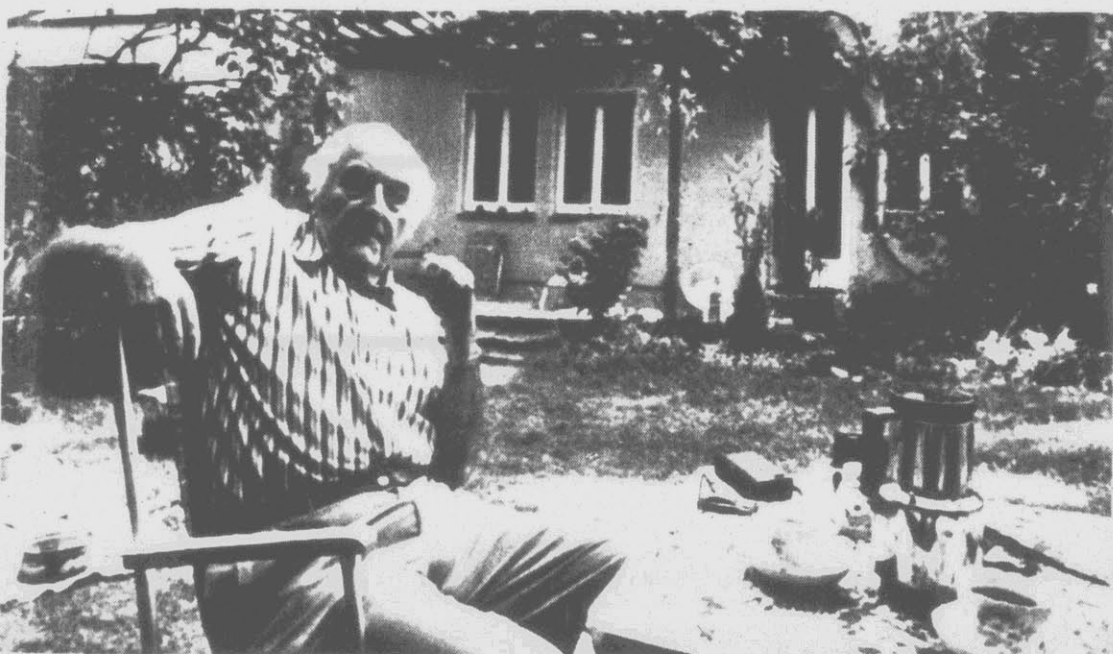

Heym said he has changed his opinion of the American people, saying "it is no longer true" that they are "war-like."

"There have been developments in the United States that made me feel sorry at the time that I wasn't there, such as the struggle against the Vietnam War," he said.

Meanwhile, his latest novel, "Ahasver," is to be published in the United States early next year under the title "The Wandering Jew." It's about a fallen angel who roams the world in an attempt to rectify the mistakes of creation. Heym says it's autobiographical.

AUTHOR STEFAN HEYM is pictured in the garden of his house in Berlin-Grunau during an interview. One of Germany's most noted contemporary authors, Heym's works hardly see an East German printing press; they have to be published in the West. (AP Laserphoto)

Airline Industry Not Benefitting From Recovery

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Wednesday, September 7, 1983 39

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

While the economy is on a sharp rebound, the nation's airlines still are struggling to end three years of record losses, and disappointing results so far have prompted renewed talk of fare wars after the summer travel season.

"In the face of a rather strong economic recovery, the airline industry is not participating," said Wall Street analyst Julius Maldutis, who watches the industry for Salomon Brothers.

The airlines historically have been among the first to prosper when the economy rebounds, but that was the rule before the government stopped regulating fares and air routes, opening the way for stiff competition among carriers.

During the first six months of the year the 11 largest airlines recorded operating losses of nearly $500 million, and some industry analysts say that with traffic not rebounding as strongly as had been expected in the third quarter, the carriers might have trouble breaking even for the year.

The industry had been banking on a solid second quarter followed by a prosperous summer travel season to help them end three years of losses. But on both counts there has been disappointment.

Although a few airlines showed surprising strength in the second quarter, the major carriers earned only $68 million from operations during the three-month period, half the amount in the same quarter in 1982 — a year in which the industry ended up losing $750 million.

The quarter was not without its winners and some startling surprises.

American Airlines, for example, led the pack with an operating profit of $57 million, substantially better than a year earlier. And Pan American World Airways, which has been on the endangered list for more than a year, shocked the industry by parlaying a cost-cutting campaign into a $49.7 million operating profit.

But those performances were more than offset by a $51 million operating loss at Delta Airlines, traditionally one of the most savvy and profitable carriers; a $27.5 million operating loss at struggling Republic Airlines; a $20 million operating deficit at Western Airlines, and worse than expected performances at a number of other carriers.

And in recent weeks industry experts have pulled back their expectations for the current third quarter as travelers appeared to be flying less than anticipated, costs began to edge upward and competition prevented airlines from scrapping discount fares as much as they had wanted. More than 80 percent of all travelers continue to fly on discount tickets, the industry estimates.

"It was thought that this (the third quarter) was the quarter that would show the first evidence of a solid recovery," said Alfred Norling, an airline industry analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co. "(But) every day it appears that is not going to be true."

The airlines' performance this year has been especially significant because it provides the first evidence of the industry's response to prosperous economic conditions since deregulation.

"This is a new experience for us," said Georges James, vice president and chief economist of the Air Transport Association, the industry trade group.

But while the airlines have been struggling, Wall Street analysts and airline executives say the carriers have turned the corner toward profitability.

"The industry is showing a recovery, but unfortunately it's not going to be as strong or as robust as was expected generally," said Maldutis.

Robert Joedike, who keeps tabs of the airlines for Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, sees a "measured turnaround" in progress, but one that could still leave the industry with a $200 million operating loss for the year.

"I'm satisfied we're in a cyclical upturn. It's just not taking off as fast as some

James said the ATA is still sticking to its prediction that the airlines would end the year with operating profits of $200 million to $800 million.

But, he added in a recent interview, "The fourth quarter is going to be the one that we have to watch closely to see if we're going to be at the lower or upper end of that range."

At the same time if fare wars again erupt — as some analysts believe they could — any hope of an industry-wide profit may be wiped out.

"I think the airline managements have their fingers crossed on what will happen (in fare discounts) after Labor Day," said Norling.

Mike Derchin, an airline industry expert at First Boston Corp., said some early signals of a renewal of fare wars already can be found, including recent cuts in Florida fares and Pam Am's lower trans-Atlantic fares that begin in mid-September.

Even without fare wars the losses of the first six months may be hard to overcome, said Derchin.

"It will take some doing now (for the airlines) just to break even for the full year 1983," he advised investors in a recent newsletter

EYE-TO-EYE — A rare golden eagle glares at a photographer as it perches on a sign marking the Cataloochee Creek Campground in Haywood County. The eagle is one of several released in Shining Rock Wilderness in the Pisgah National Forest as part of a federal restocking program. Officials hope the eagles will adapt and reproduce in the mountain area. (AP Laserphoto)

Sale ends Sept. 17

*In accordance with U.S. Dept. of Energy Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gal. per day of hot water usage by a family of 4 with 90°F. Temp. rise, with gas rate of 62.7¢ per therm and electricity rate of 7.63¢ per kilowatt hour (U.S. government 1983 national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our Power Miser 5 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric models from the cost of operating our standard 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric water heaters. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.
