TRUCK AND TRAIN COLLIDE ... Christine Riddle of Ayden was injured Thursday when the truck she was driving collided with a Southern Railway train on Allen Road near Greenville, law enforcement officials said. According to Trooper Spencer Padgett, the truck was headed south and the train was headed east at approximately 35 mph. Damage to the truck was estimated at $2,000 and the train at $500. Padgett said this morning the accident was still under investigation and no charges had been filed. Warning lights were scheduled to be installed at the crossing this week. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Announce $950,000 Grant For Greenville

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville has been chosen to receive $953,000 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for modernization of public housing units, according to a spokesman from Sen. John East's office.

That is all well and good, but Greenville Housing Authority Director Joe Laney says he isn't really sure what the money is for.

"I'm just confused," he said. "I just don't know what's going on."

According to Laney, the GHA did apply for funds to finish renovating units at Kearney Park and to begin renovations at Meadow Brook. But the city had received communications from HUD saying that the department had decided not to approve GHA's initial request for $875,000.

"We put in a request for $360,000 to modernize the 17-year-old Meadowbrook public housing area and asked for an additional $515,000 to finish Kearney Park, but were told that the request was denied, that all we were going to get this year was $136,000 to upgrade energy efficiency at both the projects," Laney said.

"We received a letter from HUD that didn't come right out and say that we were disapproved, but we called and questioned them and officials there told us that the letter essentially meant that we were out of the running this year," Laney said.

Mike Harrell, special communications assistant for East, confirmed that the senator did receive word Thursday that a grant of $953,000 was approved to go to the Greenville Housing Authority.

"It is my understanding that the money will be distributed in two phases — $600,000 out of the 1983 fiscal budget which Greenville will be receiving directly, and $353,000 to come out of the 1984 fiscal budget," Harrell said.

Laney, who is trying to find out exactly what is going on, said he would be "more than surprised" if the grant actually did come through.

"It must be some mistake, or our information was wrong. I don't know. I wish I could be more enlightened on this subject, but I just can't figure out what's going on," Laney said.

Dorm Ordinance Action Deferred By City Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Action was continued Thursday night by the City Council on a proposed zoning ordinance amendment that would allow privately operated dormitories to be built under special use provisions on land adjacent to East Carolina University property that is zoned for office and institutional development.

The council, after holding a public hearing on the amendment, voted to continue the matter in order to have additional staff input and to study further the provision that creates new development standards for a dormitory.

Council member Janice Buck, in suggesting that the item be continued, said the council is trying to write an ordinance for future dormitories but has not had time to "really study" the new regulation and make a decision.

Jim Ward of Greenville said a proposed student condominium complex he is involved in here is the item that caused the council to consider the ordinance amendment. Ward said he has been working closely with the city staff in trying to put together a package for an 11-story complex at the corner of Cotanche and Seventh streets that would be aimed solely at the student population.

The developer said he is ready to start construction on 140 one-bed efficiency units of about 330 square feet each, with kitchen facilities, that would be available for purchase. He said no pool would be provided at the complex.

According to Ward, in meeting the required 75 parking spaces per bed, 160-170 spaces will be available, including over half on site and the remaining spaces across the street. Ward said the developers acquired the nearest off-street parking that was available.

Bill Clark of the local planning and zoning task force said the university is already having parking problems and the situation could be compounded if the students are housed contiguous to ECU. He said there is a tendency to have more than one student per room and it could create problems with parking.

Clark said the task force believes the city should require on-site parking for developments. He also suggested that a definition of a privately operated dormitory should be

Marine Beirut Base Is Rocketed Twice In Night

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marine zone at the international airport was rocketed twice during the night after President Ronald Reagan pledged "whatever support it takes" to shield American peacekeepers from attacks.

No new casualties were reported. Another barrage struck close to the international peacekeeping force's French contingent at its mid-city base. A French spokesman denied a local press report that the French aircraft carrier Foch retaliated by shelling artillery positions in the Druse-controlled central mountains.

Associated Press photographer William Foley today said the first rocket barrage came at about midnight and the second about 75 minutes later.

Nine rockets hit in the first attack and three in the second, sending the 1,200 Marines at the airport into bunkers and foxholes on each occasion, Foley reported.

No further attacks had occurred by dawn, but artillery fire could be heard in the mountains, where Christian and Druse militias have been struggling for control since the Israeli army withdrew to a new defense line further south last Sunday.

The rocketing came a day after the U.S. Navy frigate Bowen fired on and destroyed a Druse militia battery that had shelled the airport, where four Marines have been killed and 28 wounded since late last month.

In a telephone call to the Marines' commander, Col. Tim Garaghty, Reagan offered his condolences Thursday for the casualties and said: "I am determined to see to it that we provide you whatever support it takes to stop the attacks on your positions."

"Tell the Marines the entire nation is proud of you and the outstanding job you are doing under difficult odds," Reagan told Garaghty. The telephone call was reported in Washington by Larry Speakes, the chief White House spokesman.

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., said in Washington he would try to get Congress to block funding for the Marine contingent as of Nov. 1 unless Reagan filed a report acknowledging the Marines are in a combat situation and seeking congressional approval for their continued presence.

He contended Reagan had moved the Marine force into a war position without proper congressional approval.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party claimed in a communique issued in Damascus, Syria, today that its forces had captured the ancient Christian town of Beit-Eddin in the Chouf mountains and had laid siege to neighboring Deir Al-Kamar, the largest Christian town in the region.

The Druse forces were braced for "the final assault into Deir Al-Kamar any moment unless the (Christian) Phalangists surrender to avoid bloodshed," the communique said.

It pledged to spare the lives of thousands of Christian refugees who have fled to Deir Al-Kamar from other Chouf and Aley mountain areas overrun by the Druse in the past five days.

U.S. F-14 Tomcat jets from the carrier Eisenhower flew over Deir Al-Kamar Thursday.

TOYS ASKED

The Child and Adolescent Committee of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County has asked Hotline to appeal for donations of new or good used toys for a toy-lending program at Carver Library.

The purpose of the program, according to Brenda Gray, MHA executive director, is to make available to parents information on child development and to increase parent-child interaction through the use of educational toys. Those wishing to donate toys may take them to the Pitt County Mental Health Association office in the Coffman Building on Evans Mall, Greenville. For further information, call Mrs. Gray, 752-7448.

Food Prices Go Up, Pushing Wholesale Prices In August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, driven up by the first food price increase in four months, rose 0.4 percent in August, the government said today.

Food price hikes, largely the product of the summer's devastating drought and heat wave, were posted for vegetables, poultry, eggs and pork. In all, food prices rose 0.4 percent, matching the overall gain.

Experts had been predicting that the devastating weather would send food prices up next year, but the speed with which the increases are being felt shows just how severe the drought and heat have been.

Even with the food price increases, however, many economists say that the Labor Department's wholesale price calculation for all of 1983 may rise at its slowest pace since the mid-1960s. At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the new figures were "still in line with our inflation forecast for the year."

Indeed, prices for the first eight months of the year were flat. For the year ending in August, prices rose just 1.4 percent, their best 12-month showing since 1967. They had risen 3.7 percent in 1982.

This summer's weather was felt in a number of statistics in today's Producer Price Index for finished goods:

—Vegetable prices, reflecting withering damage to corn, bean and other crops, skyrocketed 16.5 percent, a dramatic turnaround from July's 11.9 percent decline.

—Poultry prices soared 5.1 percent after falling 2 percent in the preceding month. Indeed, million of chickens suffocated in the oppressive heat of July and August.

—Further evidence of the diminished hen population could be seen in egg prices, which rose 4.4 percent after falling 1.4 percent.

—Pork prices rose 0.6 percent after five months of sharp declines, an indication in part of pigs' susceptibility to unrelieved heat because they cannot evaporate moisture through their skin.

On the plus side, fresh fruit prices fell 5.6 percent. Fresh price declines were also posted for beef and veal, down 1.3 percent, a sharp cutback, however, from July's 4.8 percent drop.

As for beef and veal prices, which have been moderating as breeders liquidate their herds rather than pay high feed prices, many analysts expect higher prices in the coming months as the liquidation ends and the supply of cattle going to market shrinks.

Further gains are also expected for other food prices as the effects of the drought and heat spread. One economist, Kathleen Cooper of the Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said that food prices "are starting to take off."

Food prices overall had fallen 0.6 percent in June and, again, in July.

Soviet General Says KAL Plane On A Coordinated Spy Mission

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin charged today that the South Korean jumbo jet it shot down was on a carefully coordinated spy mission with a U.S. reconnaissance jet, and warned that Soviet defense forces will shoot again if necessary.

In an unprecedented news conference, the Soviet chief of staff, Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, said the decision to bring down the jumbo took 2½ hours during which 10 interceptors gave chase and 120 warning shots were fired.

"We dragged on our activities for two hours and a half and it was only when we were convinced we were dealing with a reconnaissance airplane totally ignoring our defense forces. What was left to us?" Ogarkov told a Western-style, question-and-answer news conference, a rarity in the Soviet Union.

It was the first time Ogarkov had met with foreign reporters, and illustrated Soviet efforts to still the international furor over the shooting down of an unarmed civilian plane with the loss of 269 lives.

He bristled when reporters continued to press him as to why an unarmed commercial plane was shot down even if the circumstances were unusual.

"It was a completely different type of plane, not a plane there in error. The Soviet Union honorably and justly fulfilled its obligations," he said.

"Anti-aircraft defense forces attempted to force the plane to land. A complete conviction was achieved that we were dealing with a reconnoitering plane," Ogarkov said.

He insisted the fighter crew and ground command had acted properly and legally, and warned, "In the future, if need be, they will also perform their combat tasks."

The South Korean airliner was shot down Sept. 1 by a Soviet air-to-air missile and all 269 people aboard perished, including 61 Americans. The catastrophe has aroused a worldwide furor and demands for a Soviet explanation.

After a series of government statements providing the Soviet versions of events, the Kremlin today arranged the extraordinary news conference that lasted two hours and was televised live abroad, but not in the Soviet Union. It provided the most detailed argument to date on why the Soviet Union insists it was justified in shooting down the airliner.

'Follow Baby's Own Urges,' Psychologist Tells Parents

By PAULA MAYNARD
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Having babies is back in style for career women, and families who can afford to have mom at home instead of at work are exceptions to be envied.

Figures from the U.S. Center for Health Statistics show births averaged around 3 million per year in the 1970s and are expected to reach 4 million before the end of 1983. More than 40 percent of the babies in this decade have been born to first-time parents.

Like home computers, babies recently grabbed the cover of Time magazine, another indication of the nation's newfound fascination with tiny tots. Unlike computers, babies don't come with sets of instructions.

Parents worried about bringing up baby sometimes enroll their offspring in programs designed to teach them to read before they learn to walk.

Sandy Jones, psychologist, author and consultant to a toy manufacturer (Fisher-Price), says "taking babies less seriously" is preferable.

"Follow the baby's own urges," she said.

Ms. Jones, who has four books to her credit, and a 10-year-old child, was in Kansas City recently to address a national convention of the La Leche League, a group that encourages breastfeeding.

"Babies used to be judged good or bad by how passively they would stay in their playpens," Ms. Jones said.

She expects great things of the current generation, nurtured by parents sensitive to their needs.

"I feel like something wonderful is happening," she said. "As one mother (at the convention) put it, 'These babies are full of themselves.'"

Toys have their role in "bringing the world to the baby," she said, fingering a panda puppet. That role should not be supplanted by cribside lessons with language and math flash cards, she said.

"Toys are not a substitute for parental involvement. Rather, they can be used to bring pleasure to children and to demonstrate to the baby that the adults are there to give care, love and support.

"At three months babies will cry simply because they are bored."

From birth to two years babies go through a complex process, without formal coaching, to absorb language, Ms. Jones said.

Any coaching on a parent's part to hurry a baby along "may be at a cost to what he's learning naturally."

"Parents instinctively raise their voices to the exact pitch that a baby hears and hold their faces the correct distance from the baby's — about 12 inches."

Films of parents and offspring show babies move in rhythm to the conversation they hear, she said, and they dance to any spoken language, but not to nonsense syllables.

Research has shown infants respond most readily to patterns similar to a human face, she said.

In "Good Things For Babies" (Houghton Mifflin, $12.95 hardcover, $6.95 paperback), Ms. Jones draws on her knowledge of infant development and extensive study of infant-injury reports as well as her own experience and interviews with parents.

"If there ever was a time for 'parent power' it is now," she writes. "Parents must lead the way to bring about change in safety standards for babies and young children."

The book contains a complaint form to send the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission if parents come across an unsafe product.

A special feature of Ms. Jones' philosophical, artfully illustrated care manual, "To Love a Baby" (Houghton Mifflin, $16.95) is a special section summarizing and excerpting from nearly 60 books and articles on baby care.

Topics include educating blind infants, the benefits of various labor postures, rocking waterbeds for premature infants, the role of mother-infant eye contact and what to do with a colicky child.

Finishes For Wood Siding
In recent years wood siding has become increasingly popular for the exterior of homes. When installed and maintained properly it will perform well for the lifetime of the building. However, if you are planning to use wood siding on a house or if you have wood siding and are going to refinish it, there are a few important points to remember according to N.C. State University Extension Wood Products specialists.

In a new home, the first thing you have to consider is the type of finish to use on the wood. There are three basic choices. Paints are best known. They form a film over the wood and give a uniform color and smooth finish. Stains penetrate into the wood more than paints. Solid stains give a uniform color but do not change the texture or roughness of the wood. The third choice is a semi-transparent stain. This colors the wood but shows the texture and grain pattern. Semi-transparent stains are good for solid wood siding such as cedar, cypress, or pine, and for the best grades of plywood. A solid stain can be used on rough sawn solid wood and plywood. Paint is a good finish to use on hardboard and other wood products

State In Mourning

The tragic destruction of a Korean airliner by the Soviet Union shocked the world — and it reached North Carolina where Gov. Jim Hunt has declared three days of mourning for the 269 people killed.

Flags are being flown at half mast through today and memorial services were held for two people on board who had North Carolian ties. A Duke University student and a sales representative from North Carolina were on the ill-fated flight.

The massacre reaches every corner of the world and it is brought home to those of us who live in North Carolina by the state-related deaths. As do all decent people of the world, our state should mourn the killings.

Tragic But True

Something is dreadfully wrong. A tired old joke about a paycheck being gobbled up by "withholdings" came true.

It isn't supposed to be that way.

Maybe you saw it (Sunday). A teen-ager's paycheck for a part-time job as a grocery bagger left one penny for him after deductions for taxes, Social Security, insurance, union dues and initiation.

Presumably he will eventually get refunds on withheld taxes.

An identical paycheck from the previous week totaled $3.08 after deductions.

The irony of it all is that the young man moved to Chicago with his parents from Romania last year to seek "a better life."

The employer was unnamed in the caption accompanying the picture of Titus Tomescue holding up his sole penny for a week's work — perhaps a diplomatic omission by the Associated Press — but if his employers aren't suffering from a severe case of embarrassment, they should be.

We wondered, too, if his union was concerned more about the small sums it collected from young Tomescue than what was left for his "take home pay."

If the news report is correct, something is dreadfully wrong.

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

Odds Are High

WASHINGTON — President Reagan may delay his second-term announcement to as late as mid-January in an attempt to keep all the suspense and gain maximum political leverage for his 1984 State of the Union address a few days later.

White House insiders who privately reported this development also told us that Reagan truly has not yet made up his mind, but that the odds are very much in his favor. Particularly noteworthy presidential intimates is the preference of Nancy Reagan, whose influence on her husband is profound.

The "key element" in Reagan's decision-making is his optimism. These intimates report. The president seems to believe that a damaged Republican chances for retaining office in the Senate as the result of Sen. John Tower's decision not to run for reelection. The worsening Senate outlook is having no influence over his own decision.

A peace offering from resigned Justice Department official Barbara B. Heller was drafted by the Reagan administration, with the oldest of political rituals — an unreturned letter — recall.

She photographed senior White House aide Michael K. Deaver at the Western White House to set up a peace meeting. Contrary to published reports that Deaver soon will see her, her call was ignored. While President Reagan's political advisers believe administration spokesmen blundered when they referred to her as a "low-level munchkin" last seen wearing a "bunny suit," they want no highly publicized further contact with her.

A footnote: In the absence of detente with Deaver, Honegger is expected to trash Reagan on the Phil Donahue television show. Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter who is consulting the Republican National Committee on her father's political problems with women, turned down a spot on the Donahue show. She has no interest in a coast-to-coast debating series with Honegger.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, so conservative a Democrat that Ronald Reagan's political advisers actually considered him as a running mate in 1980, is a leading prospect to be Walter F. Mondale's vice presidential choice in 1984.

Mondale's managers believe the 55-year-old former vice president's running mate must come from the South and must be relatively young to provide contrast with Reagan, 72, and Vice President George Bush, 59. That probably rules out such respected southern senators as South Carolina's Ernest Hollings, 61, and Arkansas' Dale Bumpers, 58.

The 45-year-old Nunn's drawback is that he does not come from one of the two high-population Southern states: Texas and Florida. The Mondale inner circle is seriously interested in 46-year-old Gov. Bob Graham of Florida and 43-year-old Gov. Mark White of Texas.

Campaign strategists for President Reagan's expected re-election drive have run into major intra-party struggles in two key states: Illinois and New Jersey.

The contest in each state is over which Republican leader or faction should run the Reagan campaign. In Illinois, the bitter fight pits Gov. James Thompson, not a Reagan-for-president man in 1980, against state Rep. Don Totten, the state's leading Reaganaut. In New Jersey, the contenders are Gov. Tom Kean, a moderate, and Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, a key and early Reagan backer four years ago.

Although governors usually have automatic claim, the long intimacy between the president and his earliest supporters in Illinois and New Jersey may force campaign strategists to find some compromise. That could mean finding an acceptable alternative.

Copyright 1983 Field Enterprises, Inc.

WASHINGTON — Presidential counselor Edwin Meese had assured White House staff members and reporters in California that Thursday, Sept. 1, would be another uneventful day for a vacationing Ronald Reagan.

Meese announced, as consolation, the special screening of an unreleased film, "The Final Option," at 10 a.m. Thursday. "This highly-acclaimed film on the subject of terrorism," Meese wrote in a memo, "is being made available to all of the traveling party and their guests without charge."

Unfortunately, real-life terrorism spoiled the special preview. A downed Korean jumbo jet and the demand for a quick response prompted Reagan to end his summer holiday two days early.

In fact, any one of several international incidents or developments last week, all indicative of a tenuous global stability, could have compelled Reagan's early return from Rancho del Cielo.

Natives of Rochester, N.Y., and Winston-Salem, N.C., became the first U.S. Marines to die on international peacekeeping duty in Lebanon. Their comrades, of whom 14 suffered injuries, responded with real bullets against Moslem factions that might have been responsible. Now the Pentagon has positioned another 2,000 Marines off the coast of Beirut to "assure the safety" of those on shore. Though the U.S. has been drawn into the fratricidal conflict, Secretary of State Shultz said that the Marines' role is unchanged.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin turned over leadership of his Herut party to Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, his hawkish equal, assuring that Jewish settlements on the West Bank would continue to increase. (According to the world Zionist Organization, the number of West Bank Jews is expected to more than double over the next two months.)

Benigno Aquino was finally buried, 10 days after his assassination on the tarmac at Manila International Airport. More than 1 million Filipinos joined in the funeral procession; undoubtedly many more mourned in absentia. So far, Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos has tried to disavow any role in the death of his chief political rival. Yet most of his country seems unconvinced. Reagan, who likes Marcos as much as the Pentagon likes its Philippine military installations, hasn't changed plans to visit Manila next November.

Widespread and broadly-based demonstrations against Pakistan's autocrat, Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, entered their third week. Organized by the Movement to Restore Democracy (MRD), the anti-government actions have resulted in thousands of arrests and injuries. Though Zia has promised elections in 1985, his opponents have heard such promises before. Even the powerful Islamic party, once a government supporter, has called for an earlier return to democracy. Zia and Marcos have at least one prospect in common: numbered days.

Perhaps the same could be said for Sen. Augusto Pinochet, chief of Chile's ruling junta. Now the middle class is on his back, fed up with high prices. Measures to curb anti-government activities have only fanned the often violent passions of a country restless after 10 years of military reign. Assassination has struck both left and right, including Santiago's regional military commander, Gen. Carol Urzua, last week. Though the opposition Democratic Alliance may yet call off mass protests scheduled for Sept. 8, national reconciliation seems a distant dream until Pinochet goes.

Concern continues for the health of Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova. Elected in November 1981, Cordova has served Reagan well as a symbol of Central America's potential for democracy. Yet the 55-year-old former physician recently underwent heart surgery, giving fuel to predictions about an early return to military rule. With U.S. military activities expanding in their country, many Hondurans are unlikely to appreciate a coincidental power shuffle.

One could go on. South Africa, El Salvador, Chad and Peru (not to mention west Germany and Poland) were beckoning American responses last week, too, if not as dramatically as some other countries.

So welcome back, Mr. President. With all the time bombs threatening stability around the world, one might wonder why anybody would want to be president in 1985.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Hal McKinney, I read your Public Forum letter Monday and would like to join you in revulsion at the slaughter of those 269 unsuspecting passengers. Might you join me in horror at the targeting of 269 million Soviet citizens, hostages threatened with massacre in case their government or their computers move to massacre us?

If so, you and I, united in feeling, could consider together important differences in the two cases, differences among wartime and peacetime and cold wartime environments, among truth and lying and secrecy. We would remind each other of the contrast between freedom and tyranny. (Does this contrast mitigate massacre?) To explain our deadly nuclear posture, we might discriminate between thrust and response — between a first-strike massacre and a second-strike massacre — also between slaughter and blackmail threat of slaughter — between explicit and implied threats — between a continuing threat and a threat that is being reduced as rapidly as humanly, socially possible.

The explanations are weak. There is vast difference between targeting a plane and a city; between a confused military (i.e., barbaric, satanic) network with a Soviet SU-15 pilot triggering chemical explosives and such a network with a U.S. Trident commander triggering hundreds of Hiroshimas; between an Eastern heir of czars and saints and a Western inheritor of Anglo-Saxon law.

Yet, at least, the difference between potential and actual is decisive. Nuclear holocaust could happen. Korean plane deaths did happen. Therefore, last Saturday at the post office, the Greenville Peace Committee (to which you referred) held, for public view and consideration, several signs. Some messages witnessed to the remarkable sacrificial Fast for Life, one being, "There's Still Time," and another, "Bread, Not Bombs." One sign noted "269 Innocents: Dead" and called for justification, recalling Nuremberg and My Lai. One poster said, "Bring Soviet Killers to Trial."

Welcome Back, Mr. President

—Art Buchwald—

A Ceremony Of Pretense

I met a man the other day who has a very interesting job. He renegotiates loans for Third World countries. A loan renegotiator is not to be confused with someone who gets a nation a loan or collects one. He goes to work after a country has the loan and can't pay it back.

We shall call the man Jean Valjean, and he works for the Credit Bearnaise. He told me, "A loan renegotiator is the most important figure in the banking world today. Without him the monetary system would go under."

"How do you renegotiate a loan?" I inquired.

"You renegotiate a loan by not paying it. The service you perform is to come up with a legitimate reason why a country cannot repay a loan to a foreign bank."

"Does it have to be a good reason?"

"Of course it has to be a good reason. Everyone knows long before the payment date that the Third World country can't pay its debt. But you still have to go through the ceremony of pretending it's a surprise to all parties."

"Could you give me an example of how you renegotiate a loan?"

"At the moment I just renegotiated a loan for the South American country of Santa Busta. Santa Busta is a Third World country that owes $1 billion to a consortium of Western banks."

"Why did the banks loan her that kind of money?"

"Because she was willing to pay two percent more for the loans than other countries. Besides, at the time, Santa Busta was getting $4 a pound for mining raw Velcro, its only natural resource."

"What did Santa Busta do with the billion dollars?"

"Some of it went for roads, some of it for scotch whiskey, some of it went to pay for tear gas, and quite a bit of it wound up in numbered Swiss bank accounts belonging to Santa Busta politicians in power."

"Okay, so the money was well spent. Why can't they pay it back?"

"Last year the price of raw Velcro tumbled to 10 cents a pound and the country went bankrupt."

"So that's when you were called in to renegotiate the loan?"

"Right. Both Santa Busta and the consortium of banks asked me to come up with a plan that could justify them not paying the loan back. I talked Santa Busta's leading families into announcing a tough austerity program, which they were more than happy to do, since most of them live in Florida. Then I went to the banks with the austerity program, and asked them to renegotiate the loan by not demanding principal for seven years. The banks accepted this providing Santa Busta pay interest on the loan."

"Where could Santa Busta get the money to pay the interest?"

"I persuaded the consortium to loan Santa Busta the funds to meet the interest payments."

"Why would they do that if the country was bankrupt?"

"The consortium had to do it so they could keep the Santa Busta debt on their books as a viable loan. If Santa Busta couldn't pay the interest, the banks would have to tell their stockholders that a major loan client was in default, and then everyone would be in the soup. As far as the banks were concerned it was just an accounting transaction. They put the interest money they loaned to Santa Busta in one computer and transferred it to another computer in the same office. Now everyone can be relaxed until the loan comes up for renegotiation next year."

"I can now see the value of what you do. What do you get paid for this sort of thing?"

"A nice percentage of the loan, which the banks are only too happy to pay anyone for getting them off the financial hook."

Computer Living Isn't Easy

anyway, we don't sell computers anymore."

She gave me the names of several computer stores which handle my brand and I began calling. The first problem with computer stores is that no one speaks English. I don't mean they converse in the technical language of Fortran and Cobol. I mean they speak Pakistani or Zimbabwean or Cantonese. If you've got any doubts that Americans are lagging behind in the computer race, just visit a computer store. It looks like the only people qualified to sell them are foreigners.

Imagine trying to understand the complexities of one computer talking to another computer via telephone lines when the guy who's doing the explaining comes from Egypt and the guy doing the listening flunked Latin, Spanish and German. His name was Abdul and he had a wallful of degrees from some place like Yale but he didn't understand the rather simple proposition that I didn't know a thing about how a computer works. I know how to make this computer work. But I don't know why it does what it does.

So he sent me to their other store. The guy there was from America. Maybe even Raleigh. But he didn't know anything. He got me all excited about a machine Abdul had suggested. It would do everything I wanted and it was affordable. "Oh, but it doesn't hook up to your machine."

You know, you don't appreciate the U.S. Postal Service until you try to replace it.

Rose Chosen For Special Program

J.H. Rose High School has been selected as a site for one of eight model mathematics-science programs in North Carolina for the 1983-84 school year.

The model programs, which will feature expanded math and science curricula in one school in each region, stem from Gov. Jim Hunt's push for stronger emphasis on mathematics and science.

Through the resources provided in the program, science and math teachers will have the time and resources to do projects they have wanted to do.

Included in the program will be a greater emphasis on calculators and computers, additional materials and books for science independent studies and research, financial support for student and teachers in competition, teachers' participation in professional organizations and the development of several new courses.

The proposed budget for the two-year program is $30,000 for the 1983-84 school year and $29,375 for the next year. These figures include state-appropriated funds, a Reynolds Foundation grant and matching funds appropriated by the Greenville School Board of over $13,500 for both years.

Rose was chosen for Region 1, which includes 17 school systems.

Jury Selection Continues

Jury selection continued today in the trial of Dwight Parker, 23, of Newark, N.J., on charges of murder and armed robbery.

Parker is charged with first-degree murder and armed robbery in connection with the deaths of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs, 31, of Gritton, and Anthony Ray Herring, 27, of Goldsboro.

The bodies of Thorbs and Herring were found, weighted down by concrete blocks tied to their legs, in the Tar River several days after they had been reported missing. They were allegedly killed on Feb. 18.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. is presiding over the special term of Superior Court.

Pitt Schools Air 'Viewpoint'

The Community Work Experience Program will be the topic of this week's "Pitt County Schools Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations.

Host Barry Gaskins will talk with Steve Hemmerlee, social worker with Pitt County Social Services.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WITN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHB-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 8:30 a.m. WRQR-FM, 1:06 p.m. WNCT-AM, and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

For further information contact Pitt County Community Schools at 752-6106, extension 249.

Women Charged With Shoplifting

Two Washington, N.C., women were placed in the Pitt County Jail Thursday on charges of shoplifting from the J.C. Penney's Store.

The charges were filed against Teresa Anne Barnes, 19, and Carolyn Hines, 28. Ms. Hines also was charged with assault on a complaint filed by George K. Saleeby, a representative of the store.

Saleeby said he tried to stop two women after he saw them attempt to leave the store with pants and shirts without paying for the merchandise. Six garments valued at $92 were recovered.

Ms. Barnes' bond was placed at $500; Ms. Hines' at $750.

Applications Being Accepted

The Pitt County Community Schools Advisory Council has begun accepting applications for capital outlay monies. The funds are made available from Pitt County Commissioners and are to be used specifically for the development of recreational facilities on school property.

The advisory council will review and approve applications on merit and community needs and the monies will be allocated on a 50-50 matching basis. In-kind services, donations and labor can be included in the community share.

For further information contact the Community Schools office by Sept. 19 by calling 752-6106 or writing 1717 W. Fifth St., Greenville, N.C. 27834.

School Board Kills A Felon's Contract

PLEASANT PLAINS, Ark. (AP) — The school board in this small town "folded under pressure" when they voted to rescind their decision to hire a newly released felon as school superintendent.

The board voted 3-2 on Thursday to rescind its unanimous Aug. 25 decision to hire former state Rep. Doug Adams, imprisoned for seven months for illegally obtaining more than $156,000 from a Horseshoe Bend bank where he was president.

Adams, 41, left the meeting before the members voted. When they did, there was applause from some in the crowd of about 200.

"Just naturally, I was disappointed," Adams said later. "I asked the teachers if they saw any resentment among the students, and they said they didn't. I also talked to the principal, and he said he couldn't tell any difference" from other years.

"I believe a lot of people were misled by gossip and rumors that were spread around," said Jeri Kuykendall, who supported Adams.

"A lot of people who are good people and think they're doing the right thing have been misled by just out-and-out lies."

After the vote, Adams' supporter Barbara Kuykendall said: "I could cry. I think they folded under pressure."

"I'm greatly disappointed in them," supporter Amy Beth Conder said. "If he was good enough for their decision three weeks ago, he's good enough now."

Adams, released from prison seven weeks ago, said he had no immediate plans and didn't know whether he would take legal action to get his job back. He said all he knew Thursday night was that he wasn't going to work today in Pleasant Plains, a town of 285 people about 70 miles northeast of Little Rock.

Crawford mildly scolded the audience for their applause, but said his vote to rescind the contract was "in the best interest of this community and its children." He declined further comment later, saying "It's a personnel problem."

Novelist To Make Appearance

Greenville novelist Ovid Pierce will make a rare public appearance in downtown Greenville Saturday where he will be the guest at an autograph party hosted by The Book Barn at 114 E. Fifth St.

From 11 a.m. until 4 p.m., Pierce will autograph copies of one of his novels, "On a Lonesome Porch," which has been republished by the Briarpatch Press of Davidson. It was originally published by Doubleday.

For the Briarpatch Press printing, Pierce has written a new preface. The book itself has been completely reset. The Briarpatch copy, a hardbound edition, is priced at $12.50.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day that you can best concern yourself by studying how effective you are being in doing your daily chores and duties and in thinking up ways and means to put in motion a better campaign of action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze business affairs well and know what should be done in order to improve them so that you can gain greater profits.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A partner can be quite stubborn today so try to be understanding and come to a better agreement. Get into every angle of deals.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Ideal day to handle that myriad of little chores around the house so that all will be in fine order there.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You will be swamped by details today, so be patient. Then spend time at home relaxing tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) There could be a quarrel at home today if you do not try to understand the other person's viewpoint. Get bills paid quickly.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Being particularly careful in motion is wise today, otherwise you could have trouble. Also do not criticize others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your financial position and put in economy measures wherever possible. Then get into that repair work on your home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to have your way in all things but you had better be more tactful otherwise you can lose a benefactor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do something constructive about an annoyance of long standing and get it behind you cleverly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A loquacious friend can be of help to you today, so contend with all the talk and gain what you desire.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some new ambitions have to be studied very well so that you don't get into trouble after you have gotten into them.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those interesting young persons who is able to come up with the truth where puzzling and confusing matters are concerned, so slant the education along investigative lines and there can be much success during the lifetime.

Target Met By A&T U.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T State University's nursing program has achieved the 70 percent passing rate it was ordered to attain in order to keep its accreditation.

The program would have been closed after this year if the school failed to meet the mandate imposed by the N.C. Board of Nursing in 1981.

A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort said Thursday 78.9 percent of A&T graduates taking the test for the first time in July passed — largely because of program changes in the nursing school. That passing rate raised the total passing rate to 71 percent.

The mandate followed several years of extremely low passing scores culminating in a 1981 passing rate of 28 percent.

"We have been able to accomplish this by revising the nursing school's retention standards and by providing programs to strengthen the students, such as a special review session," said Fort, adding that changes also have been made in the curriculum.

However, the 71 percent rate doesn't include five A&T nursing graduates who took the exam in other states, which the nursing board will count in determining whether to close the nursing school.

Nursing board officials would not release the two-year overall passing average, but said the rate would be made public today.

Dixie King, the nursing board's business administrator, said the board is expected to decide at its meeting later this month in Wrightsville Beach whether A&T's nursing school will remain open.

Life As It's Lived

Parents Cannot Win If 'Dukes' Set Guidelines

By GAIL MICHAELS

The "Dukes of Hazzard" has permanently warped Zachary's attitude toward traffic. He has seen the show only twice, the last time at least four months ago, but he was so enamored at its stunts that he still talks about them.

"I wish our car would fly," he said wistfully one day as we were playing with his Hot Wheels service station.

"Cars don't fly."

"The 'Dukes of Hazzard' car flies," he told me. "It flies fast — zoom — and then comes down wham!"

"It just looks as if it flies. It doesn't really, believe me."

"Yes, it does. It's a special car."

"No, it's not," I insisted. "Somebody probably drives it up a high ramp that you can't see on television, and when the car gets to the top of the ramp, it can jump over the car on the ground."

He just looked at me as if I were crazy and dropped the subject.

But several days later, when we were waiting to pull out of a supermarket parking lot onto a major thoroughfare, he commanded from his carseat, "Go on!"

Phillip was driving. "I can't go on, or I might run into another car."

"That's OK. Go ahead and crash it."

"I can't."

"Why not?"

"Because if I did, someone might get hurt. We all might have to go to the hospital."

Zachary pondered that piece of information until we were on our way once more. "Now go fast," he said.

"I can't go any faster than I'm going now. It's against the law."

I groaned. "Here we go."

Sure enough, Zachary asked, "What's the law?"

Phillip seemed certain that he could field this question. "The law tells us what we can and cannot do."

Zachary looked around. "Is Mommy the law?"

"No, Mommy just tells you and Meg what to do. The law tells us all what to do."

"How?"

"Well, see that sign? That sign tells me how fast I can go."

Zachary waited a few minutes before speaking again. "I don't see any laws any more. Now you can go fast."

I would have given up, but Phillip remained calm and instructive. "Just because you can't see the law doesn't mean that it's not there."

Zachary's eyes widened. "Is it a ghost?"

"No, it's a set of rules, like Mommy's rules for you, except that everyone has to obey those rules so that we can all live peacefully together."

"What if you don't?"

"Then a policeman might stop the car."

"Will he shoot us?"

"No, but he will make us pay money for disobeying the rules."

"But he might not know."

Meg felt compelled at this point to put in her own two cents worth. "It's like jumping on the bed. Do you do that just because Mommy's not in the room?"

"Yes."

"Well, you're not supposed to," she said.

"That's right," Phillip added. "Laws are made to protect us, and we obey them all the time because we don't want anyone to get hurt. Now do you understand?"

"I guess," Zachary muttered.

Phillip's self-satisfaction at this victory was almost nauseating. He continued to smirk until we pulled up behind a car that was signalling to turn.

"Go on," Zachary said.

"I can't. The car is in front of me."

"Then jump it."

Reagan Asks Discriminatory Statutes Be 'Erased'

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is asking Congress to amend 47 "obscure and somewhat inconsequential" statutes that are sexually discriminatory, but is delaying action on 18 more substantive laws.

The plan announced Thursday prompted several women — including former Justice Department aide Barbara Honneger — to declare that the proposed Equal Rights Amendment is still needed.

The White House announcement came after Reagan conferred with his Cabinet and was copied with release of a 50-page memorandum from Attorney General William French Smith, some of it maintaining that Reagan's political problems with women are because they don't understand what he is doing.

The 47 laws Reagan wants changed are to be added to a bill introduced last February by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., originally intended to change about 100 examples of outmoded laws in the U.S. Code.

Sheila Bair, counsel for Dole on the Judiciary Committee's Constitution subcommittee, said the legislation is intended only to clean-up the federal code and not to tackle substantive issues.

And after the meeting, William Bradford Reynolds, assistant attorney general for civil rights, agreed that most of the changes in the 47 laws that Reagan seeks to have Congress rewrite would be largely cosmetic.

Examples of the changes backed by Reagan:

- Making sex-neutral the law which now gives preference to fathers over mothers and brothers over sisters in deciding who receives the personal possessions of deceased military personnel.
- Allowing a divorced husband, not just a divorced wife, to be eligible for an annuity.
- Extending Navy commissary privileges to "surviving spouses," not just widows as now written.
- Striking "and a gentleman" from the military law that now says commissioned officers may be convicted of conduct "unbecoming an officer and a gentleman."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said several proposals for substantive changes in pension, insurance and retirement laws will require further study.

In his memo, Smith said the 47 laws the administration proposes to change "define the persons they affect by terms reflecting gender ... rather than by sex-neutral terms. ... Although many of these laws are obscure and somewhat inconsequential, their continued existence in the U.S. Code could adversely affect some women."

Eighteen other laws under consideration, Smith said, "make distinctions among men and women that are more substantive." He recommended that 11 of the 18 be changed to eliminate the sex bias, but Reagan decided against Smith's recommendation and said the 11 would remain on the books, according to Speakes.

They include such laws as ordering that the director of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau be a woman, and that one of eight national officers of AMVETS be a woman.

Both Reagan and the Justice Department agreed the remaining seven laws should not be changed even though they are protective of women. These include laws that ban women from combat in the armed forces and exempt them from registering for the military draft.

Although the White House says the plan announced Thursday is Reagan's alternative to the ERA, critics said it cannot substitute for the ERA since the laws to be changed are mainly cosmetic.

Kathy Wilson, president of the National Women's Political Caucus, said Reagan's approach to ending sex discrimination was so piecemeal that "we'll all be in our graves" by the time it is finished.

Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, told NBC News that "we also need to go a step further and change the nature and substance of existing federal statutes which I think penalize women and do not reflect the role that women play in today's society."

"The president's response is pathetically inadequate," said Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women. "He has not said or done anything that addresses the systematic discrimination of women."

Ms. Honneger, who was working for the administration to change the laws but quit after accusing the president of dragging his feet, told NBC: "Unfortunately, the record of Ronald Reagan himself, adding statutes to the federal books which actively discriminate on the basis of sex, is the best proof we have that you also desperately need an Equal Rights Amendment."

Reagan's meeting with the Cabinet Council on Legal Policy was prompted by criticism from Ms. Honneger, who worked on the 2½-year project to identify discriminatory laws. She contended the project was worthless because no laws had been changed.

In his memo, Smith maintained that many of the president's problems with women stems from a perception that, since Reagan opposes the ERA, he does not care about the plight of women.

"By claiming that the ERA is the benchmark against which all other anti-discrimination measures must be tested, the administration's opponents have charged that our position to the ERA represents a fundamental antipathy towards all efforts to eliminate sex discrimination," the attorney general wrote.

"Unfortunately, many now begin their analysis of the administration's record with the assumption that we oppose women's rights. The correction of this misperception will not occur overnight," said Smith, adding that an important first step would be "giving a full account of what the administration has accomplished."

Senate Contest In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Democratic leaders may virtually concede Republicans the Senate seat left vacant by the death of Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington unless state Democrats can get together on a single candidate.

Dan Evans, a three-term former governor, was designated to fill the seat temporarily Thursday by Republican Gov. John Spellman and seems certain to be the GOP candidate in November's special election to fill the remainder of Jackson's term, which expires in 1988.

The hangup for Democrats is that the election may be a free-for-all — with no party primaries to cull the field. Unless they can agree on a single candidate, Democrats could see their candidates split the Democratic vote and give Evans an easy victory.

A state attorney general's opinion issued this week sets up a system under which the candidate who gets the most votes will be declared elected — even if it is not a majority.

Democrats have asked the state Supreme Court to order a special primary election Oct. 4, and the court tentatively scheduled a hearing for today.

"We are going to watch the situation very carefully because our main goal is to win back the Senate," said J. Brian Atwood, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. "If the Democratic party can't agree on a candidate it is going to be problematical whether we can win that race. We think it is essential that that happen before we make any commitment."

The organization Atwood works for decides how to parcel out money available at the national party level for senatorial campaigns.

National Republicans, on the other hand, have no doubts about what they will do.

Ceci Cole-McInturff, communications director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said it "will certainly be active in the race" on behalf of Evans. She described him as "unique in his stature" in the state.

Democratic candidates known to be considering the race include Reps. Norman Dicks of Tacoma, Mike Lowry of the Seattle suburb of Mercer Island, Seattle Mayor Charles Royer, State Sen. Jim McDermott of Seattle and Don Bonker of Olympia.

Jackson, 71, died Thursday of a burst blood vessel after more than 42 years in Congress.

Evans will be sworn in on Monday, when Congress returns from its August recess. His appointment gives Republicans at least a temporary 55-45 margin of control in the Senate.

If he wins in November race, Democrats would have to make a net gain of six seats to regain the dominance that they lost in 1980.

Atwood conceded the new lineup would make it more difficult for the Democrats to recapture control, but said he still believes they have a 50-50 chance.

Bicyclist Is Hit By Car

A bicycle and a car collided on East Tenth Street Thursday at 1:10 p.m.

The bicyclist, identified as Brian Shill Schweickhardt, 39, of 1200-B E. 14th St., was reported injured and taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. His bicycle was struck by a car driven by Peggy Hardison Noble, 29, of Route 1, Kinston, who told police she was making a right turn onto 10th Street from the ECU parking lot near the College Hill Drive intersection and did not see the bicyclist approaching from the west in the westbound lane until after she had heard the crash. No charges were made.

A two-car collision was reported at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and 14th Street at 4:30 p.m. The drivers were identified as Willie C. Staton of 1206 Colonial Ave. and Braxton Earl Gray, 23, of 700 W. 14th St. Damages were estimated at $100 to Staton's car and $300 to the one driven by Gray. Gray was charged with having no operator's license and a stop light violation.

Stalvey Milton Horton, 63, of 309 Manhattan Ave. was reported injured and taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital Wednesday afternoon after a rear-end collision at the intersection of Evans and Howell streets. Horton's vehicle was reportedly stopped in the intersection waiting to make a left turn from Evans onto Horton Street when it was struck from the rear by a car driven by Steven Craig Clower, 24, of Oak Street.

Damages were estimated at $150 to Horton's car and $100 to Clower's. Clower was charged with following too closely and failing to render assistance.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE LOWLY MULE

THE LOWLY MULE WAS HIGHLY PRIZED BY KINGS, WARRIORS, AND THE POPULACE. IT WAS USED BY THE ISRAELITE MEN-OF-ARMS AS A RIDING ANIMAL WHEN GOING OUT TO MEET THE FOE. IN FACT THE FIRST MENTION OF A MULE IN THE BIBLE IS IN II SAMUEL, (13:29) WHEN ABSALOM MURDERS HIS BROTHER AND ALL THE PRINCES AROSE, AND EVERY MAN GOT HIM UPON HIS MULE, AND FLED. THE NEXT MENTION OF THE MULE IS IN II SAMUEL, (18:9) WHEN THE SAME ABSALOM GOES TO HIS DEATH RIDING UPON A MULE. FROM THE DAYS OF DAVID ONWARD WE FIND NUMEROUS REFERENCES TO THIS BEAST BUT NONE BEFORE.

Pirates Seek Respect From Wolfpack

Jeff Pegues

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's been a week of ballyhoo and build-ups, of poor-mouthing and anticipation. Saturday night at 8:12 p.m., all the talking is over and the business at hand begins. East Carolina, loser in a 47-46 scoring battle with Florida State, takes on home-standing N.C. State in the Wolfpack's opener. The game will be telecast nationally over Atlanta's WTBS.

Ever since last week's Pirate surprise in Tallahassee, where the Pirates came within a fumble of beating the nationally ranked Seminoles, Wolfpack Coach Tom Reed, in his first year with the school, has been singing the blues to the press and fans about how his team won't be able to stay on the field with the Pirates.

"We have an untested quarterback," he moans over junior college transfer Tim Esposito. Esposito threw for over 3,000 yards back in California before coming to N.C. State. Untested against Division I-A NCAA teams, true. Unproven, well, maybe not quite so true.

State also brings in one of the country's top running backs in junior Joe McIntosh.

In 20 games in red, McIntosh has rushed for 100 or more yards on 12 occasions, rushing for 1,190 as a freshman and adding 780 last year despite injuries. He carries a 4.9 per carry average.

Fullback Vince Evans is also no slouch, having the ability to break one open from his fullback spot.

"They are big up front on the offensive line," ECU Coach Ed Emory pointed out. "(Joe) Milinichik (6-5, 275, So., tackle) is as good as there is. Their center (Dean) Shavlik (6-2, 239, Sr.) is an outstanding player. I really feel they will be a potent offensive team. And they've got to be licking their chops at the number of points and yards we gave up at Florida State."

Defensively, Emory feels that State is better than the Seminoles. "Dwayne Green (6-1, 195, Jr., free safety) is as good as there is in the state," he said. Vaughan Johnson (6-4, 230, Sr., inside linebacker) is another potent weapon in the Wolfpack arsenal.

At the same time, Emory is glad the Pirates are playing the Wolfpack after the FSU contest. "Getting ready for someone with less rivalry might have been difficult," he said. "We were down after the loss, but we've picked up quickly knowing who we are playing."

Emory also feels that there is pressure on the Pirates to win, to show that their output against the Seminoles wasn't "a fluke."

Another problem Emory faces is the lack of knowledge about what the Wolfpack can do. He's familiar with most of the players, certainly, and he knows Reed's philosophy, but how they will blend together is the uncertainty. Also, Emory points out, State has had all spring and summer to prepare for the Pirates, one of the few option teams the Wolfpack will face.

And, of course, the Wolfpack has seen the Pirates. Reed personally scouted the Pirates in Tallahassee.

"They will definitely be ready to play, and I think we will be, too. I'm excited about being on TV and getting some national exposure," Emory said.

In one way, the Pirates might have one advantage over the Wolfpack. Last year's action-packed game was decided, many felt, on the fact that State had a game under its belt and the Pirates were playing their first game. This year, the roles are reversed.

Whether that will tell the tale will not be known until late Saturday night.

Braves, L.A. Both Win

By The Associated Press

For the Atlanta Braves, the victory was a little like a scraggly fish. It wasn't pretty, but they sure weren't about to throw it back.

The Braves, who open a crucial three-game series to-night in Los Angeles, stayed two games behind the National League West-leading Dodgers Thursday night by outlasting the San Francisco Giants 12-9.

Atlanta did it after handing the Giants six unearned runs in the first inning and trailing 7-3 after two. They got clutch relief pitching from Gene Garber and mounted a 20-hit attack that included two home runs and four RBI by Dale Murphy and five hits and three RBI by Rafael Ramirez.

"At this time of year, all games are important," Brave

Manager Joe Torre said after a game that left him exhausted and drained in the locker room. "But there's no question this win tonight was big. It was important because we came from behind to win after losing a tough one Wednesday night."

The Atlanta-San Francisco game took three hours, 28 minutes, meaning that the Braves knew early they would have to keep pace with the Dodgers, who topped the Cincinnati Reds 5-2. Bob Welch won his sixth straight game and Mike Marshall had a three-run homer to lead Los Angeles.

winning one game at a time, but we've got to go into Los Angeles thinking sweep," Torre said.

Dodgers 5, Reds 2

Marshall, one of the Dodgers' highly touted youngsters, was a disappointment earlier in the year. But with help from hitting instructor Manny Mota, he has broken out recently and now has 16 homers and 58 RBI.

Seven of those RBI have come in the last two games. His 10th-inning grand slam gave Los Angeles a victory Wednesday night, and on Thursday his three-run shot was the difference.

"Before I was leaving a lot of runners in scoring position," he said after Thursday's performance. "Manny stuck with me when a lot of other people would have quit. I just kept working."

Welch, 14-11, pitched eight innings in the Dodger victory, allowing only one run — which he balked home — and four hits. Tom Niedenfuer surrendered one run and three hits in the ninth before Steve Howe came on to retire Cesar Cedeno and post his 17th save. Astros 3, Padres 2.

Denny Walling drove in George Bjorkman with a tenth inning pinch-hit double that gave Houston the victory that ended its four-game losing streak. The Astros remain on the fringe of contention, seven games behind the Dodgers.

"We have to do a lot of things right to win since we don't have a game breaker," said Walling, who now has eight hits in his last 13 pinch-hitting appearances, including a double, two triples and two home runs. "We play sound fundamental baseball and that's what keeps us in the game."

The Astros may not have a game breaker, but Manager Bob Lillis thinks Walling comes close as a pinch-hitter. "That's his role all the way," said Lillis. "I wish we had a whole bench full of guys like him."

In the initial baseball All-Star game in 1933, each side had a player who was a manager during the regular season. They were Bill Terry for the National League, who managed the New York Giants, and Joe Cronin, shortstop, who was the skipper of the Washington Senators.

Rose, A-G JVs Both In Wins

NEW BERN — The Rose High School jayvees needed three long touchdowns to take a 20-0 victory over New Bern Thursday.

Ervin Best connected on a 54-yard pass to Dwight Smith in the second quarter to put the Rampant Cubs on the board. Later in the same quarter, Joey Hallow scooped a fumble and ran 70 yards for another Rose touchdown and a 14-0 edge.

Sherry Frank ran 18 yards in the third period for the final score of the night.

Moe Matthews, Todd Morris, Brian Walsh and Van Alston led the Rose defense, while Best, Smith and Mark Elmore excelled on offense.

The Rampant Cubs, now 1-1 on the season, host Eastern Wayne next Thursday.

RICHLANDS — Ayden-

Grifton's junior varsity football team romped to a 20-0 victory over Richlands High School last night in its opening game of the year.

Early in the first period, Alex Chapman scored on a seven-yard run, then added a two-point conversion to give the Baby Chargers an 8-0 lead.

Timmy Best took a 78-yard pass from Danny West early in the second period and that ran the score out to 14-0.

The other score came on an 89-yard pass from West to Shawn Farmer in the closing minutes of the second period.

There was no scoring in the second half.

The win leaves Ayden-Grifton with a 1-0 record, and the Chargers host North Lenoir next Thursday.

Jesse Hooker led the A-G rushing with 94 yards, while Best had 64 yards rushing and 98 receiving. Quarterback West rushed for 26 and threw for 187 yards on the day.

Ayden-Grifton 8 12 0 0-20

Routes, Rules For Stadium

RALEIGH — N.C. State athletic officials issued a reminder to fans planning to attend this weekend's game between East Carolina and the Wolfpack that, by state law, no alcoholic beverages are permitted in Carter-Finley Stadium.

Other items that are banned include umbrellas and drink coolers.

Fans are also advised to arrive as early as possible because of the crowd of over 50,000 expected for the contest. The traffic problem is usually worse for opening games because of less familiarity with proper routes to the stadium.

Those coming from the eastern part of the state can utilize the new section of the beltline and follow it around to Wade Ave., travel east on I-40 into the backside of the stadium, following the same route when leaving.

Williams May Miss

East Carolina football coach Ed Emory says he's not sure whether star kick returner Henry Williams will be able to play during the Pirates' clash at North Carolina State Saturday night.

"We are concerned at this point about Henry's availability for our game with State," Emory said Thursday. "Henry has not practiced all week due to a bruised knee he received in the Florida State game."

Williams made touchdowns on a 56-yard punt return and a 99-yard kickoff return last Saturday in the Pirates' contest at Florida State.

Already this week ECU lost its starting center John Floyd, Floyd, who underwent an appendectomy, has been released from the hospital.

Orville Prescott - The New York Times

"For sheer suggestiveness of style and limpid beauty of expression On a Lonesome Porch is remarkable. Each sentence, almost each word, of its tightly compressed and exquisitely wrought prose is charged with emotional tension. There is a meaning in every phrase and idea here beyond the explicit meaning of the words. Rarely do intangibles of thought and feeling seem to fill the very atmosphere of a book with so rich a fragrance. Without being a bit fancy, On a Lonesome Porch comes as close to true poetry as prose ever does."

The first week is over and we have a little better idea of what's going to happen in the upcoming football season. Of course, there are still a number of teams that will be playing their first games this weekend — among them the Wolfpack of N.C. State which hosts East Carolina Saturday night.

Our panel last week turned in a pretty good record for the most part. There is currently a three-way tie for the top between Vickie Spivey, Tom Baines and Joe Jenkins.

Who? — Yep, Joe Jenkins managed to hold onto a share of the lead. Now, we wonder how long that will last.

All three turned in 8-4 records, while this writer had a 7-5 mark. Jimmy DuPree and guest picker Rick Scopus each were 6-6.

Our guest this week is Bob Roller, the new assistant in the Sports Information Office at East Carolina. Bob is a graduate of Virginia Tech, so it's not hard to figure who he picked in the Hokies' game against Wake Forest.

First, a look at the high school games. Our record last week was 6-2, bringing us to 9-3 on the season.

Conley and North Pitt clash in a cross-county game, and not only are the Panthers looking for their first win, they'd also like to score a few points. They've been shut out twice. Conley is coming off a victory, and that might be the thing the Vikings need to snap the Panther win streak against them. We're going with Conley, 13-7.

Farmville Central, after a tough loss last week, faces strong Bertie. The Jaguars need more offensive punch than shown last week, and they must continue to play good defensive ball against a club like the Falcons. Bertie may be one of the better 3-A teams in the state again, and we pick them, 21-7.

Richlands invades Ayden-Grifton, where the Chargers are looking for their first win. The Chargers lost their quarterback in their loss to Roanoke last week, but we think they'll bounce back in this one. Ayden-Grifton to win, 20-6.

In other area games, it's Perquimans over Chocowinity, Jamesville over Belhaven, North Lenoir over Greene Central, Washington over Roanoke, and Williamston over Plymouth.

The panel, as usual, looks at the two area games of interest, Rose and East Carolina.

The Rampants play host to New Bern, a team that is 1-0-1 on the year. Rose is coming off a big win over Jacksonville, but has had only three days to prepare after playing Monday night. Rose is given the nod by the panel, 6-0.

East Carolina travels to N.C. State to face the Wolfpack in its first game of the year. The Pirates looked awesome on offense against Florida State, but is that the real East Carolina? Is State as weak as new coach Tom Reed would have us believe? We're still uncertain about the first question, and we don't believe the Pack is all that bad. The panel has a little division here, with Tom Baines holding out for the Wolfpack in a 5-1 ballot.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Boston College; Alabama over Georgia Tech; North Carolina over Memphis State; Virginia Tech over Wake Forest; Southern California over Florida; Indiana over Duke; Maryland over Vanderbilt; Virginia over Navy; Houston over Miami, Fla.; and LSU over Florida State.

Lendl, Arias Win Matches

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl ousted Mats Wilander 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 in quarterfinal action in the United States Open Tennis Championship. Jimmy Arias, the No. 9 seed staged a major upset by eliminating fourth-seeded Yannick Noah of France, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5.

In the men's semifinal doubles Peter Fleming and John McEnroe defeated Pat Cash and John Fitzgerald of Australia, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-5).

Dotson's Four-Hit Pitching Leads 8-5 Chicago Victory

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox pitcher Rich Dotson is a hard man to please.

Even though he gave up only four hits in eight innings Thursday night, he wasn't happy with his performance in Chicago's 8-5 victory over the California Angels.

"I don't like what went on and I don't like getting behind the hitters," said Dotson, 17-10. "I didn't have the location I would have liked. I was not pleased with my performance."

Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa agreed and said the right-hander was having trouble right from the first inning.

"I thought he struggled most of the game," LaRussa said. "He was rushing at times."

In the only other American League game Thursday, New York downed Milwaukee 6-5.

Dotson said that despite a strong offensive effort — including consecutive home runs by Harold Baines and Greg Luzinski during a five-run third inning — the main reason Chicago won was because of several sharp defensive plays.

"I gave them the opportunity to get a lot of runs, but we had some great defensive plays," he said.

One of those plays came from center fielder Rudy Law, who made a diving catch of a sharply hit line drive by Fred Lynn. Another came from first baseman Greg Walker, who robbed a sure hit from Bobby Clark with a leaping grab of another liner.

Dotson walked five and struck out two in seven-plus innings of work. He departed in the top of the eighth after yielding a walk and a double.

For his part, California Manager John McNamara had little to say about the game, except to admit that his injury-plagued team has been suffering most of the season.

"Have you followed us this season?" he said. "Then you know how many players we've had on the disabled list. I think that speaks for itself."

However, McNamara brightened when asked about the brief comeback his team staged in the eighth inning, when it chased Dotson and managed to score four runs on four doubles.

"This ballclub doesn't quit," he said.

Chicago scored twice in the first inning when Baines, who had doubled, and Luzinski, who had walked, scored on Ron Kittle's single.

With Kittle on first and Walker on third, Chicago pulled a double steal with Walker scoring and Kittle taking third on a wild throw by California catcher Bob Boone.

The Angels scored their first run in the third when Rod Carew walked and later scored on a single by Doug DeCinces.

But the Sox added five runs in the third inning when Carlton Fisk led off with a single and scored when Baines belted his 14th homer of the season into the bullpen in center. Luzinski followed with his 28th home run, also to center.

The blasts chased losing pitcher Mike Witt, 7-12, and brought in Steve Brown, who walked Walker. Vance Law followed with an RBI double and scored on Scott Fletcher's single.

The Angels closed within 8-5 with four runs in the eighth. Gary Pettis led off with a walk and scored on a double by Rod Carew. Guy Hoffman then replaced Dotson and got an out before DeCinces and Lynn doubled. Brian Downing then doubled off Dennis Lamp for the game's final run.

Yankees 6, Brewers 5

Don Baylor and Bert Campaneris knocked in two runs apiece to stake starter Bob Shirley and New York to a 6-2 lead, and then three relievers hung on to preserve the victory in Milwaukee.

Singles by Roy Smalley, Don Mattingly and Campaneris broke a 2-2 in the third inning and Baylor's two-run double and Smalley's RBI single made it 6-2 in the fourth against Mike Caldwell, 11-10.

But the Brewers, who were out 15-8, rallied for three runs in the eighth against George Frazier and Rich Gossage. Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper each singled home one run and Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly drove in the third.

In the bottom of the ninth, the Brewers put runners on first and second with one out before Gossage retired Yount and Cooper to earn his 19th save.

Shirley, 5-6, got the win, while Rudy May also relieved for the Yankees.

49er Interceptions Kill Vike Game Plan

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Interceptions helped decide the game, including one that wasn't caught.

The San Francisco 49ers intercepted five passes and wreaked havoc on the Minnesota passing game all night. But 49ers quarterback Joe Montana said one of his passes should have been intercepted on the first series of the game and that made the difference when it wasn't caught.

"That was the breaking point. When they didn't intercept that pass in the end zone, things turned our way after that," said Montana, who threw a career-high four touchdowns in the first half and combined with his defensive secondary to lead a 48-17 blitz of the Vikings Thursday night. It was the most points scored against the Vikings since 1963.

It was safety John Turner standing in the end zone with the ball bouncing off his hands on that play. Montana was laying on the ground, wincing in pain from a groin injury. But the ball hit the turf and Ray Wersching kicked a 38-yard field goal.

The Vikings failed to move the ball and a rejuvenated Montana threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Clark on the next series and the 49ers had a 10-0 lead.

Minnesota came back with a touchdown on a 1-yard run by Ted Brown but Wersching added another field goal and San Francisco was up 13-7 after one period.

"The injury bothered me but after the field goal the adrenalin was flowing and you don't think about it," Montana said.

Then came the fateful second period.

"What happened? It's tough to say," said Montana, who completed 17 of 24 passes for 216 yards. "When the momentum starts going one way, it's tough to stop."

It was impossible for the Vikings to stop Thursday.

In other NFL action this weekend, it's Dallas at St. Louis, Pittsburgh at Green Bay, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Washington at Philadelphia, Buffalo at Cincinnati and Cleveland at Detroit.

Also, it's the New York Giants at Atlanta, Seattle at the New York Jets, Houston at the Los Angeles Raiders, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Rams, New England at Miami and Denver at Baltimore. Kansas City will host San Diego in Monday night's game.

A little more than four minutes into the second period, San Francisco had put three touchdowns on the board and added another for good measure five minutes later.

A fumble of a handoff between Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer and running back Darrin Nelson with 19 seconds left in the first period set up the first touchdown. Safety Dwight Hicks recovered on the Minnesota 21 and six plays later Montana threw his second touchdown pass of the game, to Earl Cooper, 2 yards over the middle.

Twenty-three seconds later, the 49ers struck again. San Francisco cornerback Eric Wright intercepted his first of three passes and ran unobstructed 60 yards into the end zone.

"I just hoped if I gambled wrong, the safety was back there to back me up," Wright said.

It took only 29 seconds for San Francisco to get the ball back. This time cornerback Ronnie Lott intercepted a Kramer pass and returned it 22 yards to the Viking 14. Three plays later, Montana found Freddie Solomon in the end zone from 14 yards out.

A strange turn of events set up the 49ers fourth touchdown of the period and sealed the Vikings' fate. After being stopped at their own 22, the 49ers were forced to punt. But after a bad snap, punter Tom Orosz was forced to pick up the ball and run. He picked up 23 yards and gave San Francisco new life. Montana came right back with a 49-yard bomb to Mike Wilson and 6-yard scoring pass to Tyler, who rushed for 107 yards, gave the 49ers a 41-7 lead.

"It was Murphy's law out there tonight," Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said. "Whatever can go wrong will go wrong. You could drive yourself crazy looking for a reason why we got beat tonight. We got beat, clobbered. You name it."

"But their execution was flawless."

"We had an excellent game and Minnesota was off," 49er Coach Bill Walsh said. "We got good field position, so we could attack."

Clark said Walsh might have had an idea about the outcome before the game.

Martin Wins Putt Tourney

Jimmy Martin won the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at Greenville Putt-Putt last night.

Martin put together rounds of 35 and 35 to finished two under par for the tourney. Darrell Cox was second with a one-over 73, three strokes off the pace.

DHC, FC Take Opening Wins

PINETOPS — D.H. Conley's Valkyries fought back twice to take a pair of volleyball victories from SouthWest Edgecombe yesterday, 2-1, 2-1.

SouthWest took the opening game of the first match, 15-4, only to see the Valkyries fight back to take a 15-1 win in the second game and a 15-11 victory in the third to take the match.

SouthWest again got out on top in the second match with a 15-9 win. Again, Conley rallied, 15-7 and 15-10, to gain the win.

Karen Barrett and Michell Waters were the leading hitters with 10 second hits each, while Lisa Mills had six.

Now 2-0, the Valkyries host Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday in their first home match of the year.

Conley opened its 1983 volleyball season with a pair of 2-1 victories over Rose High School yesterday.

The Lady Jaguars won the first game of the opening match, 15-6, then saw Rose even the score with a 15-13 victory. Farmville rallied, however, for a 16-14 win in the final game.

Polly Worthington led Farmville with nine serves for points in the first game and six in the third. Donna Lambing led Rose with 13 in the third game.

In the second match, Farmville again won the first game, 15-5, only to see Rose rally for a 15-10 win in the second. Farmville then took the rubber match, 15-9.

Worthington again led Farmville with five serves in the first game and six in the third.

Farmville travels to the School for the Deaf on Tuesday, while Rose is host to North Pitt.

Another Step For Womenkind In Presentation By HBO Sunday

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Since the earliest days of television, when the Lone Ranger had Tonto and Hopalong Cassidy had Gabby Hayes, male leads have enjoyed the support and companionship of sidekicks — pals with whom they could chew, spit and chase bad guys.

If the networks granted a dramatic series to a woman, such as an Angie Dickinson on "Police Woman," she also was given a male confidante (in that case, Earl Holliman) who offered physical protection and ratings security.

The thinking, then, was that male viewers wouldn't watch women doing "man's work" on their own.

One of the first breakthroughs was "Charlie's Angels," a show that proved popular with men, so long as the women wore bikinis with their holsters. The next major advancement was "Cagney & Lacey," which was about two detectives who shared their cases and their problems.

On Sunday night, HBO takes another small step for womankind with "Between Friends," an original film about two divorced, middle-age women whose camaraderie is unique to the youth-crazy TV world. Give HBO credit for courage, and for the dynamic casting of Elizabeth Taylor and Carol Burnett.

This melancholy film will be seen on HBO seven more times this month. According to executive producer Marian Rees, the three major networks turned down "Between Friends," even with the casting of Miss Taylor and Miss Burnett, claiming the film would not appeal to younger viewers.

The fact is that "Between Friends" will appeal to anybody looking for a thoughtful film about loneliness and the sacrifices and compromises two women make to avoid it. These characters, although not as interesting as Jill Clayburgh's Erica in "An Unmarried Woman," are believable and identifiable in their dilemmas, methods of coping and gradual acceptance of themselves.

Miss Burnett plays Mary Catherine Castelli, who's running away from middle age and running to a number of married men. Known for her comedy roles, Ms. Burnett heats up the screen with a cool sexuality.

Miss Taylor, on the other hand, plays the more matronly Deborah Shapiro, a self-proclaimed Jewish princess and boozier, who hates her empty home, her empty life and her humiliating relationship with a boorish suitor. Her goal is to meet "an attractive man who's sown his wild oats."

The odd-couple relationship of Miss Burnett and Miss Taylor works, and so does "Between Friends."

Tonight, ABC goes for the more typical buddy-buddy arrangement in "Lottery." This new series stars Ben Murphy, as the man who dispenses million-dollar checks to international sweepstakes winners, and Marshall Colt, as the IRS agent who arranges for Uncle Sam's fair share.

It's like ABC's other dream shows ("Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island"), with three different fantasy stories unraveling together. While those shows are pure puff, "Lottery" shows signs of being entertaining. The charm of "Lottery" is that of Murphy playing devilish bon vivant Patrick Flaherty, who sports a bowler on his head and an Irish brogue in his throat. Colt, as Eric Rush, merely stands around and shows his teeth a lot.

Tonight's story, the serious part, involves a scheming sister and her fiancé who try to cheat her retarded brother out of his winnings. The comical segment, often funny because of guest stars Allen Goovertz and Renee Taylor, deals with a dud wheeler-dealer who keeps ducking Flaherty and Rush, thinking they're going to put him in jail. The message story, which is weak, is about the dangers of newly acquired riches and overindulgence.

Coming at a time when millions of Americans hitch their dreams to paper-thin chances in state lotteries, ABC hopes "Lottery" will be effective counterprogramming against CBS' high-rated "Dallas."

The get-rich-quick theme has been done before on TV. In the 1950s, CBS cashed in on "The Millionaire." In 1979, NBC had the soon-forgotten "Sweepstakes," which also was on Friday nights, and, according to NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, "made 'Dallas' what it is today."

Beverly Hills Trying To Halt Tours Of Celebrities' Homes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Celebrity watchers may soon be without a pastime if the city succeeds in its effort to banish the tour buses that for 50 years have provided guided peeks at the homes of stars.

The buses are still rolling up the palm-lined boulevards, thanks to a temporary restraining order obtained by their operators after a change in state procedures allowed the city to begin regulating them.

But that order expires Sept. 28 and the ban could stick unless a judge decides to issue a preliminary injunction.

The battle of the buses began June 18, when the California Public Utilities Commission stopped licensing tour buses and jurisdiction over the buses switched from the state to the municipalities.

That left the city of Beverly Hills free to evict the buses under a 1965 law barring vehicles weighing more than 6,000 pounds from all but certain designated "heavy traffic" thoroughfares.

Movie stars' homes are typically in quiet, secluded areas, not on the "heavy traffic" streets. So police began ticketing the buses.

Four bus companies sued Aug. 29, claiming police harassment that allegedly included escorts out of town and threats to arrest drivers and impound the buses.

Superior Court Judge Leon Savitch issued a restraining order the same day barring police from ticketing or otherwise interfering with the buses.

Bus company officials declined to discuss the lawsuit with reporters, but Starline Tours vice president Fred Sapir said the Beverly Hills tours were "very popular."

IN BENEFIT CONCERT — Big Boy Henry is one of the performers to play in a live benefit show beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday at the Attie Night Club downtown. Other performers will include the Rutabaga Brothers and Lemon Sisters, Lightning Wells with the Sting Rays, Jazz Plus and Proteus. Proceeds from the event will go to public radio station WSPB, a non-profit radio station providing a forum for news, information and music to northeastern North Carolina.

Judge Says Propaganda Label Was A Violation

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. government's attempt to label as political propaganda three Canadian films on nuclear disarmament and acid rain was unconstitutional, a federal judge has declared.

The disclaimer required by the Justice Department violated First Amendment guarantees on freedom of speech, said U.S. District Judge Raul A. Ramirez in an opinion released Thursday.

To characterize a particular expression of political ideas as "propaganda" is to denigrate those ideas," Ramirez wrote.

An uproar arose in February with the disclosure that the Justice Department required the disclaimer for "If You Love This Planet," about the medical consequences of nuclear war, and "Acid From Heaven" and "Acid Rain: Requiem or Recovery."

"If You Love This Planet" won an Academy Award in April for best short subject. All three films were produced by the National Film Board of Canada.

Ramirez, given national jurisdiction in the case, already had issued a preliminary injunction in May stripping the disclaimer from the films. He said it unfairly stigmatized the films and identified those who exhibited them as distributors of distorted information on behalf of a foreign government.

The disclaimer, authorized by Congress in 1942 in an amendment to the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, says the work was prepared by a registered foreign agent and its contents are not necessarily approved by the U.S. government. Distributors must report the names of theaters and television stations so labeled.

Attorney John G. Donhoff, who argued the suit which was filed by state Sen. Barry Keene, said Ramirez' ruling "means that the First Amendment does not apply just to materials produced within this country."

Auditioning For N.C. Movie

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of people jammed a Ramada Inn during the first day of auditions for the movie "Firestarter," part of which will be filmed in Hendersonville and Lake Lure starting Monday.

Auditions already have been held in Wilmington and will continue in Atlanta.

Robert Harris, unit publicist and spokesman for producer Frank Capra Jr., said 66 local people will be hired for "some fairly visible parts."

Household Antiseptics Posing Water Threat

By MARY ANNERHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A chemical commonly found in household antiseptics, deodorants, mouthwash and air-conditioning units has turned up in North Carolina streams and may threaten aquatic life, state officials said Thursday.

"The data and information... clearly indicate that many of the active ingredients are extremely toxic to aquatic organisms," a report submitted to the Environmental Management Commission said. "The information obtained raises several questions and concerns about product registration, labeling and product use."

The chemicals, known as biocides, inhibit the growth of organisms. Their presence in state water supplies was detected last November.

"The investigation has dealt only with aquatic life," said Lee Fleming, head of the water quality section in the state Division of Environmental Management. "To date we have not found any effect on humans. There has been no identification of contaminated streams."

A survey of 1,466 potential users of biocides, coming on the heels of the detection of biocides in water, showed that 30 percent of those responding used 220 biocidal compounds. Of the biocides, about 90 percent had labels warning against discharge of the toxic chemical in water.

The companies surveyed included textile mills, mattress manufacturers, pulp and paper mills, pharmaceutical companies, paint manufacturers and leather industries.

In addition, 14 publicly owned waste water treatment facilities were identified as receiving the chemicals. However, only the water treatment plant in Graham could be identified as having detectable levels of one ingredient of biocides. There were also nine cases where the chemicals were being discharged to surface waters in violation of label restrictions.

CONDUCTS EXPERIMENT ... John Hardee, who was a second-grader at Sadie Sautler School last year, tries to push two repelling magnets together as a part of an experiment designed by Dr. Marshall Helms.

Retired Professor Helps In Greenville City Schools

Even though Dr. Marshall Helms, a former East Carolina University physics professor, retired from teaching 11 years ago, he is still spending a lot of time in the classroom. As a volunteer, he has given talks, shown slides, participated in debates, and taught special classes for the Greenville schools.

"During the past school year, he taught Pat Hamby's class of second-graders at Sadie Sautler School about magnetism."

"I became interested in helping one student at Sadie Sautler and then progressed to the whole class," Helms said.

Wendi Allen, director of special projects for Greenville schools, talked Helms into teaching the students. She said he was reluctant at first to teach second graders because they were younger students than he was accustomed to teaching.

After Helms agreed to teach the class, he designed experiments for the children to do and had them make compasses out of plastic cups.

"I did about 22 experiments with magnets with them and they took some magnets home to experiment with. I was surprised at some of the things they tried to see if the magnets were attracted to," Bobby pins, paper clips, notebook binders. It's little discoveries like this that show initiative and growth of the mind," Helms commented.

Helms said the students' teacher thought that making compasses would be too complicated for them and would take more than the hour allotted for the class. Helms wanted the children to make magnets, so he prepared the necessary items beforehand.

"I spent 25 to 30 hours preparing for the class. I had to make a bunch of prints from a compass rose I had at home. I had to drill holes in the tops of the cups and thread needles — one for each child and there were 26 children," Helms said.

All the children had left to do was cut some paper, fasten thread to the paper with tape and magnetize the needle by rubbing it the correct way across a magnet.

"I thought it would take 20 minutes, but it took 55. The kids don't have the dexterity like the college students I taught," he said.

Helms said he made the children conduct all the experiments themselves and "I told the children that I was the scientist and they were the technicians who had to figure out the experiments for me."

Helms said he hopes to keep doing volunteer work in the schools because he has a lot of fun with it.

Dr. Helms typifies the unique contribution senior citizens can offer the children in our schools.

Mrs. Allen commented,

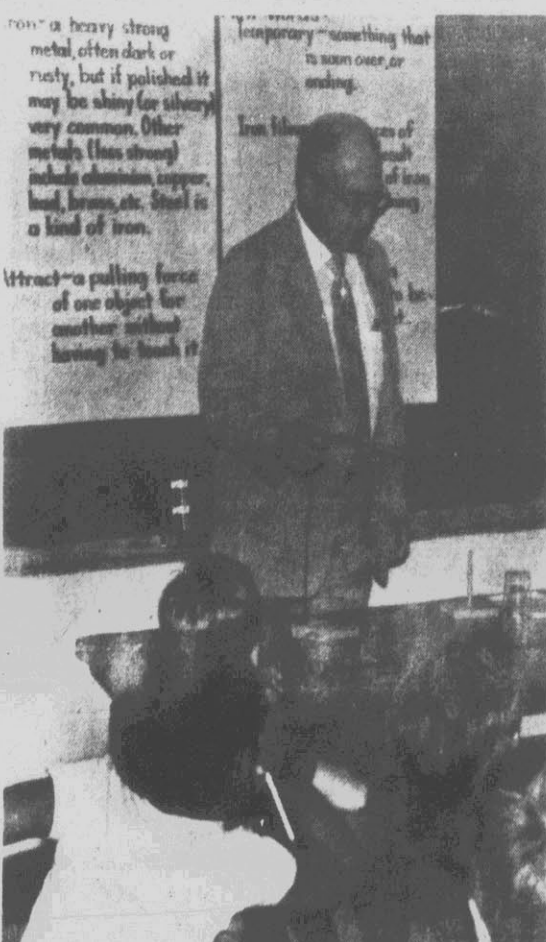

"To the children, he represented a professional in his field and was respected, but he was also a grandfather figure to be loved. Teachers and students have both benefitted from his unselfish commitment," she said.

Helms has been a resident of Greenville since 1948 and lives with his wife, Christine Wilson Helms, who is also an active volunteer for the school system.

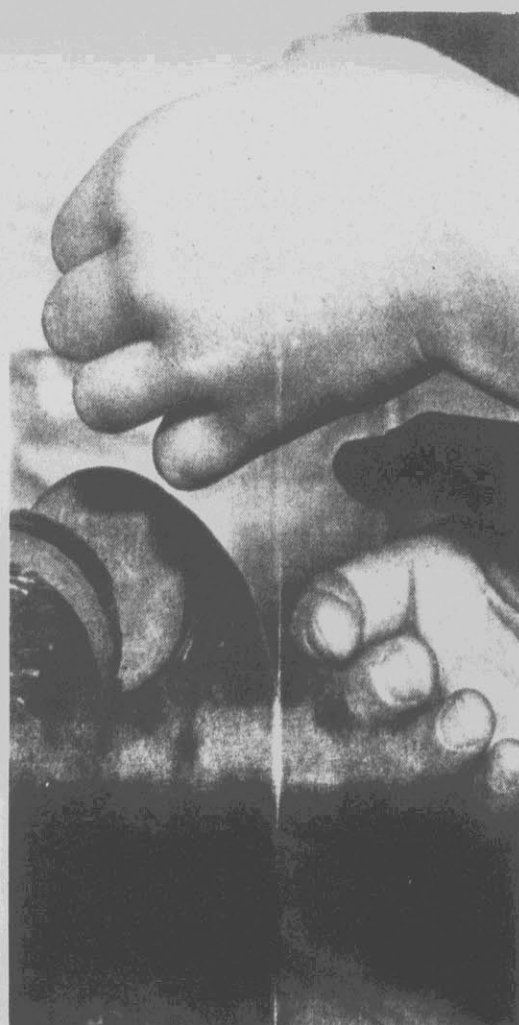

He is active in the American Legion, Pitt County Historical Society and is a member of First Presbyterian Church, where he is a part-time Bible school teacher. He has also been active in the Flynn Christian Fellowship Home for Alcoholics.

Senior citizens will be recognized at a coffee Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the auditorium of Wahl-Coates School on East Fifth Street. All senior citizens may attend.

Aeroflot, The Biggest - Maybe Worst, Airline

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, is nothing if not big — flying more than 330,000 people a day to places as far-flung as Brazzaville and Kuala Lumpur.

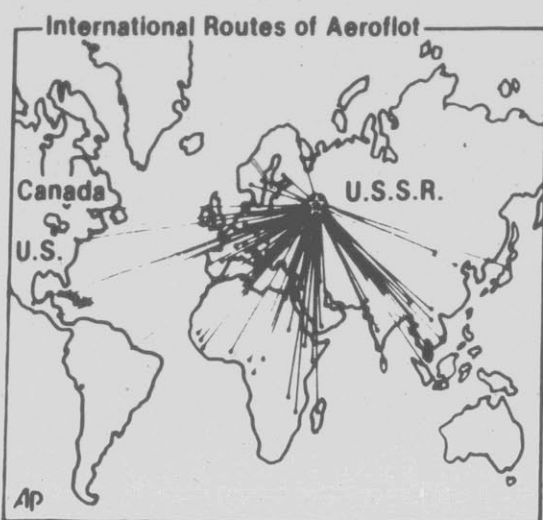

But except for schedules and fares, other information about the carrier, an important hard-currency earner for the Soviets, is guarded like a state secret.

Little wonder. Its estimated 1,500 planes are believed to sit ready for military duty in case of war. In the United States, approximately 300 commercial aircraft, under the Civil Reserve Air Fleet, are available for the same contingency.

And all of Aeroflot's pilots are said to be air force reservists. Its head, 60-year-old Boris P. Bugayev, is an air marshal who runs the ministry of civil aviation.

The West is looking for sanctions it can impose on the Soviets following the downing Sept. 1 of an unarmed South Korean airliner by a Soviet fighter, killing 269 people. The United States had already canceled Aeroflot landing rights two years ago to protest the imposition of martial law in Poland.

Canada told Aeroflot officials Monday that the airliner's flight to Montreal couldn't land there for 60 days and that its refueling privileges at Gander, Newfoundland were restricted. Aeroflot regularly stopped there en route to Havana. Now the carrier will have to ask permission for each Cuba-bound flight.

There has been speculation that airport workers at some of the 90 other foreign cities served by Aeroflot might protest the shooting down of the KAL Boeing 747 by refusing to service Aeroflot planes.

The International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations has authorized its member pilots to stage a 60-day boycott of flights to Moscow, but a final decision has been left to the individual associations.

The United States flag carrier, Pan Am, stopped flying to Moscow in 1978, saying the route wasn't profitable.

Aeroflot, the Soviet Union's only air carrier, claims to be the world's largest airline.

As the most visible Soviet representative abroad, Aeroflot and its offices have been easy targets for people angry at the Soviet Union.

Minority groups protesting Kremlin treatment of their countrymen inside the Soviet Union have frequently bombed, burned or broken the windows in Aeroflot buildings abroad.

Its offices in Washington and New York have been hit frequently and so have those in most European capitals and Japan.

In November 1981, the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board suspended Aeroflot flights for one week after the carrier overflew unauthorized areas. State Department officials called the violations "deliberate."

The Soviets blamed the incident on Canadian and U.S. air traffic controllers. Under a U.S.-Soviet agreement, Aeroflot was required to fly along an ocean route between New York City and southern Maine. Instead, two flights on Nov. 8 flew over New England, an area that included military facilities.

Aeroflot's safety record also stands in question. The most spectacular Aeroflot crash came in 1975 at the Paris Air Show when a prototype of the sleek, needle-nosed TU-144 supersonic liner crashed into a nearby neighborhood. The plane was taken out of regular service in mid-1978 after less than a year of regular service.

The airline can't avoid publicity when its planes crash abroad, but the majority of crashes inside Soviet borders usually go unreported. One was reported within the last week.

Flying the carrier within the Soviet Union can be a trying experience. Delays of hours — sometimes days — occur and passengers are seldom told why, let alone put up at hotels or fed at the airline's expense.

Said one Western airline representative in Moscow: "If I can't get there by train, I don't go."

The airline has had some publicized rows with its passengers.

In 1971, 41 passengers trying to fly from Great Britain to Malaysia staged a sit-in aboard an Aeroflot jet in London to protest what they termed a three-day "nightmare."

First their London-Moscow flight was diverted to Warsaw. Then they reached Moscow too late for a connecting flight. They weren't allowed to stay in a hotel and were left to spend the night at the airport without anything to eat or drink.

In the morning, the group was flown back to London where they refused to get off the plane until Aeroflot booked the passengers to Kuala Lumpur on a different airline.

In 1979, the airline became embroiled in the defection of ballet star Alexander Godunov to the United States. His wife and fellow Bolshoi dancer Ludmilla Vlasova was with him on the American tour and chose to return home.

When an Aeroflot jetliner tried to leave Kennedy International Airport with the ballerina aboard, American officials stopped it, demanding an interview with the ballerina outside the jet. She refused and, along with her fellow passengers, sat in the plane for 70 hours before it was allowed to leave.

Concerned Over Wild Animal Confrontation

By ROBERT C. UNRUH
Associated Press Writer

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Its geysers, mountains, rivers and thousands of wild animals attract 2.5 million tourists annually. But the rules for Yellowstone National Park say look from a distance, and never, ever touch the animals that populate the park.

More and more tourists aren't following the rules, and confrontations between man and beast are a growing worry for Yellowstone officials.

In July, a French tourist was gored by a bison bull when he tried to have his picture taken with the shaggy creature. Alain Jean-Jacques Dumont suffered a ruptured stomach, damaged spleen and colon and four broken ribs. He died Sept. 2 in a Salt Lake City hospital.

It was the first fatality at the park involving a bison in 11 years and only the second since the park opened in 1872, authorities at Yellowstone said.

"It is a matter of some concern that park visitors are simply not sufficiently aware that wild animals are not the docile little creatures depicted in cartoons, television shows and movies," said Duncan Morrow, a park service official.

The most frequent cause of death in the nation's 334-unit national park system which attracts 245 million people annually is automobile accidents, followed by drownings and falls. But anytime humans and animals come in close proximity, there can be problems.

If Uncle Fred and Aunt Martha were to put their grandson up on a cow on somebody's farm, they run the risk of injury," said Mike Baugher, a public information officer for the National Park Service's Denver office.

Of the three bison incidents in Yellowstone this year, the first involved a German tourist who got too close and was knocked down. Two days later the same animal gored a visitor from Colorado.

"There is a great tendency of people not to realize that it is the human who is the visitor in the animal's natural habitat, rather than the reverse," Morrow said.

A change in policy in the late 1960s that closed dumps in Yellowstone cut the number of incidents involving bears and humans by 90 percent.

For years before that bears caused injuries and some fatalities in national parks, especially in Yellowstone where they begged at car windows and scavenged campgrounds for morsels. From the 1930s, four or five dozen incidents were reported each year, according to the Park Service.

But in the 1970s as the bears moved into more remote areas, tourists' attentions turned toward buffalo, elk and moose, all of which are "wild, unpredictable and potentially dangerous," according to a special brochure given to passengers in each entering vehicle.

Joan Anzelmo, a Yellowstone spokeswoman, said statistics for bear incidents over the last five years have remained virtually static at the park — at one to two minor injuries per year. Although statistics are not kept for everything, she said other types of incidents have followed the same pattern.

But she did predict more problems in the future, as more and more visitors crowd into wilderness areas made smaller and smaller by encroachment of neighboring developments.

"As visitation increases and as it becomes rarer and rarer for people to see animals in a wild situation, the greater the potential," she said.

Still, there are bear incidents. On June 25, 23-year-old William May of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., was camping in the Gallatin National Forest, just outside of Yellowstone, when a bear dragged him from his sleeping bag and mauled him to death. The bear was trapped and destroyed.

A female grizzly bear, caught rummaging through garbage outside the Yellowstone Park limits this summer, was captured for research and will be put to death because there is nothing else to do with her, Montana wildlife Director James Flynn said last month.

Officials said the bear had no history of violent behavior but authorities worry that as a mother with two cubs, the bear could eventually attack an unwary tourist. And park officials say the animal was teaching its cubs to forage in dumps.

Morrow said that most injuries still caused by people who do not give the wild animals a wide enough berth.

"My car weighs less than a fair number of the larger wild animals that are present in big Western parks," he said. "The average visitor has no doubt he will not stand in the way of a car. They don't understand these larger animals ... can do a great deal of damage."

'Black Boxes' Contain Facts

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two "black boxes" which may reveal what happened before a Korean jumbo jet was shot down by the Soviets are most likely still in good shape — wherever they are in the Sea of Japan, says a U.S. aviation technical expert.

"If the boxes could be retrieved right now, they'd probably have good data on them," said Carol Roberts, chief of laboratory services for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington. "Recorders that have been in the water a week are no problem at all."

But the Soviet Union has refused to allow Japan or the United States to conduct searches in its territorial water for the wreckage. And reports from Japan indicated the Soviets had nearly doubled the number of vessels operating in the area.

The black boxes on a Korean airliner that was forced to land after straying over Soviet territory in 1978 have never been turned over by the Soviet government.

The 25-pound boxes, which together cost $30,000 to $50,000, sit side by side in the tail of an aircraft and hold two highly sensitive recording devices tested for a variety of crash scenarios. Most are built to withstand a shock equal to 1,000 times the force of gravity.

The Soviets have not said where the missile or missiles struck Korean Air Lines Flight 007, carrying 269 people, and that could determine the condition of the boxes.

"If the missile hit the engines of the airplane, it probably wouldn't have all that much effect on the recorders," Ms. Roberts said. If the missile struck the tail, she said, "conceivably there could be some damage to the recorder. But they are built to withstand a lot."

The flight data recorder contains 25 hours of information on the aircraft itself, including altitude, airspeed, heading, acceleration, pitch attitude, roll attitude and at least 12 other factors.

The voice recorder contains the last 30 minutes of cockpit conversations, which in the case of the Korean 747 may provide a record of communications from the KAL pilot not picked up by ground control in Japan.

Each box carries an underwater locator beacon that can be monitored from the surface for 30 days, even if the boxes are at a depth of four miles. Although often called "black boxes," they are actually painted orange to make them easier to locate.

Salt water penetrates the boxes, equalizing pressure, and the effect of corrosion is minimal. They are designed to survive in seawater at least 48 hours, but most survive much longer, Ms. Roberts said.

When an Air India 747 went down in the Arabian Sea several years ago, the flight data recorder was recovered in excellent condition two weeks later.

The voice recorder, recovered a month after the crash, had some damage to its plastic tape and was ruined in some spots.
