Gunfire Strikes Marine Camp As U.S. Jets Scramble Again

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shellfire hit the Marine compound at Beirut airport Saturday and U.S. jets thundered over the Chouf mountains, where Druse fighters were said to have massacred 64 Christian villagers. Fears mounted for the safety of as many as 40,000 other Christians trapped by Druse militiamen.

Beirut television reported that 70 carloads of Christian refugees from the mountain fighting demonstrated in front of the residence of U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon demanding American intervention to halt the bloodshed, which blew up after the Israelis pulled back from the Chouf a week ago.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, spokesman for the U.S. Marine contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force, reported no casualties from the latest shelling. He said the jets — two U.S. Navy F-14 Tomcats from the carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower — scrambled to reconnoiter and demonstrate force.

The U.S. jets first took to the skies over Lebanon Wednesday along with French fighter-bombers after U.S. and French positions were shelled in west Beirut. Four Marines were killed Monday and Tuesday, and two French peacekeepers were killed Wednesday.

The U.S. frigate Bowen opened up with its five-inch guns Thursday after the Marine compound again came under fire from Druse batteries. It was the first use of American Navy firepower since the Marines landed a year ago. The Tomcats also flew over the Chouf Thursday.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said Saturday that 64 more Christians were "massacred" by the Druse in the overrun Chouf village of El-Bire, 15 miles southeast of Beirut. The Druse Progressive Socialist Party said those killed in El-Bire were Christian militiamen.

Laure Speziali, director of the Beirut office of the International Red Cross, said army sources told her 64 bodies had been found in the village. But she said the Red Cross was unable to reach the town to check the massacre claim, one of several made both by Christians and Druse in the past week.

She said Druse fighters turned back two Red Cross

Fighter Pilots Go On Soviet TV

Soviet Pilot Says Jet Refused To Turn Aside

By STEVEN R. REED
UPI Writer

The Soviet fighter pilot who shot down the Korean airliner with 269 people aboard said Saturday he flashed his lights, fired tracer shells and finally "terminated" the jumbo jet, convinced it was on an enemy spy mission.

In Washington, President Reagan delivered his harshest attack yet against the Kremlin, accusing it of a engaging in a "massive coverup" and reseving for itself the right "to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat" to attain world communism.

In a rare broadcast, Soviet television aired interviews with three Russian pilots who chased and destroyed Korean Air Lines Flight 007 in Soviet airspace after a 2½-hour chase over the northern Sea of Japan Sept. 1.

"I flew toward the intruder and flashed the lights," the pilot of the lead Sukhoi SU-15 interceptor said in describing the final minutes before the Boeing 747 was destroyed with two air-to-air missiles.

"It should have noticed them," he said. "But there was no response to the signal."

"I fired four tracer shells right next to him but there was no reaction," he said. "If we could have landed him at an airport we could have discovered everything behind this.

"But he continued to fly on the same course, at the same height, and I received an order, a precise and definite order," he said. "After I was ordered to terminate the flight, I fulfilled the order."

"Without any hesitation someone else would have done the same thing and would not have let the plane get away," said the pilot of the second SU-15 that followed behind the lead interceptor.

Soviet television broadcast the interviews, accompanied by film clips of interceptors scrambling and views of a radar command room, a day after the Soviet army chief of staff told Western reporters the decision to shoot down the plane was "not an accident or an error."

Pilot

A Soviet pilot, shown above on British television, was introduced by a Soviet announcer Saturday as the pilot who shot down the Korean airliner near Japan. The pilot said in the interview that the KAL jet refused to follow his instructions to turn aside or to land. "After I was ordered to terminate the flight, I fulfilled the order," the pilot said. Second Body Found

TOKYO (AP) — A fisherman has found a second body that washed up on Hokkaido's northeastern coast and a police spokesman said Sunday it could be one of the 269 people killed when a Soviet jet fighter downed a South Korean jumbo jet.

The spokesman in the city of Abashiri said the face was missing but a lock of auburn hair on the back of the head indicated the body was that of a white woman.

Specialists began examining the corpse to determine if the victim had been aboard the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 shot down Sept. 1 when it strayed into Soviet air space.

Abashiri is about 40 miles east of the location where the unidentified body of a child was recovered last Thursday from the Sea of Okhotsk by Japanese fishermen.

Officials said about 200 objects and aircraft pieces from Korean Air Lines Flight 007 have been found by Maritime Safety Agency patrols, police and local volunteers in Japan's northern waters and beaches.

The material was mostly small pieces of airplane metal and plastic, they said, but also included clothing, a man's white sneaker, two different women's shoes, an empty handbag, film — including at least one roll of undeveloped color — bottles, plastic containers and other items.

More than 1,000 police officers and civilian volunteers, aided by eight aircraft and a small fleet of patrol and fishing boats, were in the search after pieces of the Korean jetliner's tail section first turned up on Thursday.

The 269 people aboard the jetliner were presumed killed in the crash into icy waters off Sakhalin Island.

HUD Grant Is For Real

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Friday was a confusing but ultimately satisifying day for Joe Laney of the Greenville Housing Authority. What he thought was a mistake, turned out to be a $953,000 surprise for Greenville.

Early Friday morning, a spokesman from Sen. John East's office informed The Daily Reflector that Greenville was to receive a grant of $953,000 from HUD for modernization of public housing units. Laney later said he did not know anything about the grant and felt that it might be a mistake.

An official of the Greensboro office of Housing and Urban Development offered the opinion that the announcement was a mistake, saying: "Greenville is just not being considered for that amount of money; there wasn't enough to fund everyone this time around."

"Frankly, I thought there must have been an error, because our first request for $875,000 was turned down in the early stages," Laney said.

There was a mix-up, but not about where the money was going, according to Mike Harrell, special communication's assistant for Sen. East, who eventually confirmed the grant late Friday.

"One of the problems was that staff members were on vacation during the Senate recess, so I think this was a situation where Mr. Laney and the others involved could not be contacted," Harrell said.

He confirmed that Greenville's initial grant request was turned down, but was reconsidered after a subsequent $136,000 bid was submitted.

"We were told by HUD officials that the request for $875,000 was denied, so to speak, and to put in another bid — enough to cover basic upgrading of energy efficency at Kearney Park and Meadowbrook (housing projects). So I was sure there was a mix-up somewhere," Laney said.

Greenville's final $136,000 application for comprehensive energy improvements to Kearney Park and Meadowbrook was expected to receive approval by the end of September, Laney said. "Our understanding was that we had a good chance to get the $136,000, but nothing's final until you get the HUD letter in your hand," Laney said.

"HUD initially did not have the money to cover Greenville's request for funds to support modernization. But when the second bid came through, it turned out that the funding would be available if done in a two-part situation — $600,000 out of the 1983 fiscal budget which Greenville will receive directly and $353,000 to come out of the 1984 fiscal budget," Harrell said.

Biking Efficient, Less Expensive Travel

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A machine that has been around since 1818 and has grown in popularity every year since must have something going for it. This machine, inexpensive and easily mass-produced, is said to be the most efficient means ever devised for converting human energy into propulsion.

The machine? The bicycle, of course.

Often viewed in the past as a child's toy, the bicyle has grown so popular that a businessman furiously pedaling down the street, coat tails flapping, with a briefcase tenuously balanced across his handle bars is not an uncommon sight. Backpacking students, mothers with toddler attachments on their bikes and cycles built for two also make use of the roadways.

"There are a lot of people who use bicycles for commuting purposes. In fact, we encourage people to ride to work or just take a ride down a country path," Greenville Bike Ways Committee Chairman Shirley Morrison said.

The Greenville Bike Ways Committee, composed of city residents appointed by the City Council, looks after safety and recreational interests of bicyclists in the area. "We are responsible for signs around the bikeways on Red Banks Raod and Arlington Boulevard as well as going into the schools to do safety programs and arranging recreational activities like the upcoming Bike Along '83," Ms. Morrison said.

While plans are not complete for Bike-Along '83, Ms. Morrison said that it would be a family-type outing held in conjunction with Gov. Jim Hunt's statewide fitness program in early October. "We will shortly put out information on Bike-Along but, in the meantime, we welcome public response and attendance at committee meetings," she said. The committee meets every month on the fourth Thursday in City Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Bicycling, as romantic as the old songs make it seem, is subject to traffic laws and does have safety drawbacks. According to Greenville Police Sgt. Doug Jackson, bikers are subject to the same traffic hazards and laws as automobiles. "Bicycle riders can get a ticket for failing to stop at a stop sign or light, riding on the wrong side of the road, driving while impaired, and unfortunately are just as, or more, vulnerable to being injured on the roads," he said.

Neurologist Participates In Study

Dr. Jerome S. Haller, director of pediatric neurology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, is participating in a major new study of Reye Syndrome, a little understood disease usually striking children.

Haller said the project, which will involve research at 16 hospitals, was funded in July with a $386,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health. The study is expected to continue for two years.

First identified in 1963, Reye Syndrome is still something of an enigma to physicians. The cause of the syndrome is unknown. However, it normally occurs in children who have had common viral infections within the previous few days. The disease results in liver and brain dysfuntion and may lead to coma, swelling of the brain and death.

About 400 cases of Reye Syndrome are reported each year, with a mortality rate of approximately 20 percent.

The new study centers on the efficacy of two different methods of treating the buildup of intracranial pressure often associated with the disease, according to Haller. The more traditional treatment involves the use of the drug mannitol to relive pressure on the brains of comatose patients with Reye Syndrome. Mannitol is a hyperosmolar agent, meaning that it draws water out of the brain.

The second treatment under study involves the use of barbiturates in comatose Reye Syndrome patients. The therapeutic effects of this relatively new treatment are not fully understood, Haller said, but it is known that use of barbiturates in these patients serves in several ways to improve brain function.

Patients included in the project will be divided into two groups — those treated for intracranial pressure with mannitol and those treated with a combination of mannitol and barbiturates. Haller said the study will provide the researchers with the first scientific comparison of the two treatments, their strengths and weaknesses.

A secondary goal of the project will be to establish a national Reye Syndrome tissue specimen bank to facilitate future research projects.

Haller will serve as the project's neurological investigator, coordinating data collection and follow-up study related to neurological issues. The project will be based at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond under the direction of the chief investigator, Dr. Wallace F. Berman, a pediatric gastroenterologist.

Associated with the ECU School of Medicine since September 1982, Haller also serves as medical consultant for the National Reye Syndrome Foundation based in Michigan.

Speight Hosts Democratic Faithful

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — Several thousand Democrats gathered at Emerald Isle Saturday to eat, drink, make speeches and size up support for 1984 political candidates.

Alcohol Board of Control chairman Marvin Speight of Farmville, host for the gathering, said he had prepared for 5,000 guests. He said he cooked 2,500 pounds of pork, 500 chickens, 1,100 pounds of fish and had 15,000 soft drinks on hand.

It was the ninth such event Speight has held in the past 11 years. He said he did not hold the event for the past two years because of a lack of political interest.

The event attracts mostly party regulars and contributors, but there were about two dozen candidates for various offices present Saturday.

"It gets people juvenated a little bit," Speight said. "It gets them out and gets them working."

"The uncommitted leaning to Rufus will look around and say it looks like everybody will be for Rufus," Smith said.

A band stopped playing long enough for each of the candidates to give a two-minute speech. Among the candidates who have yet to announce but who made speeches were former East Carolina Chancellor Leo Jenkins, state Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, and Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg. Edwards and Helms are candidates for attorney general and Jenkins for governor.

The other candidates included contenders for lieutenant governor, labor commissioner, state school superintendent, Congress and state auditor.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said he was glad to have the time to get together with old friends. Gov. Jim Hunt sent adviser Joe Pell as his representative.

"The sad thing about people getting hurt, even killed, is that it mostly happens to students and adults. The little kids do what we ask them. It's the old ones who should know better that just flat won't listen," Jackson said.

Just as sporting, recreational and consumer aspects of biking have grown, so has trade in stolen bicycles, Jackson said. "People can go to different parts of Greenville and get a cheap bike any time they want. In fact we recovered three stolen bikes last week from kids who paid Johnny Somebody down on Doe Street 16 bucks for a stolen bike."

Jackson said bicycle owners can help stop bike thefts by making sure their bikes are registered at City Hall or engraved with an approved identification number, such as a driver's license number. Clerks at Greenville's City Hall will register your bicycle free of charge any weekday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. All you need to bring is a copy of the bike's serial number, proof of purchase and a description including color, scratches, seat style or any other unique characteristics.

Bicycle Post manager Lynn Dail said bike owners can also protect their property by using one of the "virtually indestructable" locks now on the market. "These locks are generically referred to as U-locks. You can cut them, freeze them, beat them with a hammer and they still won't open," he said.

Dail also recommends detatching quick release wheels and locking the wheel up with the frame of the bike.

Pair Charged In Break-In

Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Harvey Hardy arrested two men early Saturday for allegedly breaking into and entering the Department of Corrections Eastern Area Office in Greenville.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, Hardy was on night patrol when he saw activity inside the office. "Deputy Hardy noticed that the doors had been broken open and saw movement inside the building, so he waited behind a tree and when the men came out, he arrested them," Tyson said.

Ernest Sutton Bell of Route 1, Ayden, was charged with breaking and entering and larceny and possession of a .38-caliber pistol. Michael David Rogers of Kinston was charged with breaking and entering and larceny.

Both were being held in lieu of bond at the Pitt County Jail. Bail for Bell was set at $1,500 and $600 for Rogers.

A probable cause hearing will bed held this week.

Tropical Storm Heads To Sea

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Chantal whipped into shape southeast of Bermuda on Saturday, but hurricane forecasters said its 40-mph winds threatened only shipping.

Chantal, the third named storm of the 1983 Atlantic hurricane season, was expected to skirt past the east coast of Bermuda on Sunday, but forecaster Gil Clark said the mid-Atlantic island was on the weak side of the storm and unlikely to be buffeted seriously.

At 9 p.m. EDT, Chantal was centered near latitude 31.5 north and longitude 63.5 west, or about 100 miles east southeast of Bermuda. It was moving to the northeast at 8 mph.

"It's just barely tropical storm strength," Clark said. "It's a very small storm, also, so the threat is more to shipping. It's headed out towards the open Atlantic."

Although sustained winds were 40 mph, gusts were stronger in the squalls. Small craft were warned to stay in port.

"Conditions are favorable for further strengthening during the next 12 hours to 24," Clark said.

Chantal got its start as a tropical depression at midday Saturday and became a minimal tropical storm when its sustained winds passed 39 mph. When the winds reach 74 mph, a tropical storm becomes a hurricane.

"Normally things like this don't happen this fast; so I guess that's why some people are having trouble understanding," Harrell said.

Laney, who said Friday that he'd be surprised if Greenville actually was getting the money, said Saturday morning that this was one of the best surprises he and Greenville have ever received.

"Now we'll be able to complete Kearney Park, which was not possible before, and start on real essential energy-saving improvements like replacing hot water heaters, windows and doors and upgrading insulation at Meadowbrook," he said.

The local Druse leader, Sheik Mohammed Abu Shakra, said the Red Cross could enter only when Christian forces free 30 Druse women he claimed were taken prisoner after an alleged massacre of Druse civilians in the nearby town of Kfar Matta.

Nearly 200 pieces of the jet were retrieved from the northern Sea of Japan. The search was stepped up after the discovery of the badly mangled body of a child believed to among the 269 victims of the attack, including 61 Americans.

In Washington, Reagan stepped up his attacks on the Soviet Union after Moscow bluntly refused to apologize for shooting down the plane.

"They've stonewalled the world, mobilizing their entire government behind a massive coverup, then brazenly threatening to kill more men, women and children should another civilian airliner make the same mistakes as KAL 007," Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast from the White House.

The Russian pilots interviewed by Soviet television comments echoed the official Soviet account that the fighters shot down the plane on orders of a regional commander after all levels of the Soviet comand reached the "total conviction" that the airliner was on a spy mission.

"After observing the maneuvers of the plane, I became convinced it was either a spy plane or a different kind of bomber," said the Su-15 pilot.

The pilot of the lead jet said he assumed the unidentified intruder plane was "an enemy flying on a spy mission."

Both men are based on Sakhalin Island, from which six of the 10 SU-15s and MIG-23s were launched.

A third pilot, interviewed separately on the tarmac of a Kamchatka peninsula from which four fighters were scrambled, said the intruder plane was flying without any navigation lights when he pursued it.

"The plane was completely dark," he said. "There were no signs of illumination on the aircraft." U.S. officials have denied the charge, pointing to radio transcripts of the pilots saying the 747 flashed its lights.

Plane Disaster Points Up Lack Of Concern

We have looked in vain for some kind of official Russian word of pity or sympathy for families of the 269 people who died in the shooting-down of an airliner in the Sea of Japan.

There has been none.

Not one word of concern in reports available from Tass and Izvestia, not one word of sorrow for the tragedy by Soviet government officialdom; it has been an inhuman spectacle.

It is all but impossible for the civilized world to believe any government could withhold from relatives and concerned observers a report of the massacre for six whole days, resorting to evasions, denials and finally "blaming" the United States for the crime.

Only when irrefutable proof of taped radio messages and radar surveillance was introduced did Moscow finally admit the airliner was "brought down" into the sea by its fighter plane. Even then, the warped minds had to cite it as a warning to all other people who might trespass across the Soviet borders.

The hysterical tactic of blaming others continues, but the fact remains, those civilians were killed on order of an unnamed officer representing the regime in the Kremlin.

An apology is unexpectable. Compensation to survivors of the victims is unexpectable.

The low value placed on human life by communism is attested to by innumerable incidents inside and outside the Soviet Union; but people tend to forget. The reminder was timely, if horrifying.

It's a dangerous world out there.

Careful Planning Needed For Area

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual out-of-town planning conference the weekend of Sept. 30 and Oct. 1-2 at Williamsburg, Va.

Executive Vice Chairman Jon Tingelstad said the conference is designed for discussion of issues and development of a 1984 program of work.

Topics of discussion will be economic and industrial development, downtown area, business and health care and education.

The chamber, which is made up of business and professional leaders of the community, can make important contributions in the areas which will be discussed.

The community's best minds are needed to offer suggestions on the ways in which local development will proceed. We hope the chamber conference will produce some of the guidance which will be greatly needed as our area develops.

Sunday Morning Notes

People who grow up in Greenville often travel some distance to make their homes and pursue careers.

Their roots are here, however, and most have fond memories of people they knew back home.

Harold Sugg was one who grew up in Greenville. He followed a career in journalism and is a former editor of the editorial page at The Roanoke (Va.) Times and World News where he writes a column.

He recently noted the death of another Greenville person, Marietta Northrop Morgan in Asheville. He remembered and he wrote in part:

Now why on a mundane Monday would I start an essay on poets and poetry? It's because I have had the experience of recognizing, too late, that I once lived next door to a poet. When she was 6, I was 30; when she was 16, I was a middle-aged relative (in the second-cousin range) who had moved away and visited briefly about four times a year. We lived on the far perimeters of each other's existence.

Marietta Northrop Morgan, age 43, and the mother of three, died in Asheville last spring after a battle with cancer that had gone on for two years and a half. She had planned her funeral service and on the leaflet for the service, I found this paragraph:

I want a celebration of my life. I have enjoyed living it, have enjoyed my blessings and have tolerated my losses and disappointments with grace. I'm as bad as a lot of pilgrims and as good as others. I am very human — or was. With reluctance, I give up my humanity.

"With reluctance, I give up my humanity." Anyone who could write a line like that, I thought, had the insight of a poet. So when I called upon her mother, I inquired: Had Marietta written other things? She had, indeed — a folder of poems, paragraphs and essays large enough to make a slender volume. It would be of local and probably of regional interest.

I am not talking here about a Yeats or an Eliot, or someone with the output of Elizabeth Browning or Emily Dickinson. I am talking about a beautiful young woman, wife and mother who blessed her toils and ultimately her death with rare insight and a gift of phrasing. The gifts were buttressed by character: While dying and knowing she was dying, she organized a volunteer group, "Pathways," to visit cancer patients who did not have families and friends near enough or able enough to provide steady comfort.

Marietta Morgan was not unknown in the Roanoke Valley. She married Dr. William Watson Morgan of Asheville, a specialist in children's surgery. Dr. Morgan's work was featured in public television rebroadcasts of "Lifeline" on Tuesday nights, Aug. 2 and 9. In the opening shots at a riding ring, not in a hospital, there was a brief glimpse of a blonde companion of Dr. Morgan who looked much like the little blonde girl next door to me in Greenville, N.C., 35 years ago.

A lesson of this, I suppose, is that all around us are potential heroes and heroines. When their qualities emerge, we are pleased, of course, but wonder why we had not seen them in advance. The inquiry would take an essay by itself. Briefly, it is possible that we fail to spot potential greatness in children, and in adults, too, because we are so busy, busy, busy on Mondays. And on other days.

Trees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The death of Henry M. Jackson and the decision by John Tower not to run for re-election means a shakeup in the Senate Armed Services Committee that could open a path for Pentagon critics to cut down some of the big trees in President Reagan's military budget.

For decades, Tower and Jackson were two of the main Senate hawks on military and national security issues and were among the Pentagon's most consistent supporters in Congress.

Since Reagan's inauguration, Tower has been the Republican chairman of the 16-member armed services panel, and Jackson its senior Democratic member. They forged a partnership protecting big, expensive weapons like the B-1 bomber, the MX intercontinental missile, and nuclear aircraft carriers.

Only when defense measures reached the Senate floor were there serious attempts, usually by Democratic liberals, to scuttle weapons.

Earlier this week, Tower termed Jackson's death "a devastating blow to our efforts in the Congress to maintain an adequate defense establishment."

"I regard Scoop as far more irreplaceable than I am," said Tower, who stunned politicians in Texas and Washington by announcing last month that he would not seek re-election after 22 years in the Senate.

Next year's congressional elections could easily shift control of the Senate from Republican to Democratic and, if that happened, the chairman of the committee likely would be Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a staunch supporter of the Defense Department although not of Jackson's dimension.

But election of a Democratic Senate almost certainly would be portrayed by some as a mandate for lower defense spending, and other members of the panel likely would push hard to stretch out many of Reagan's weapons programs, and to kill others like the B-1, and the stockpiling of binary nerve gas.

Among the Democratic defense critics on the committee are presidential candidate Gary Hart of Colorado, Carl Levin of Michigan, Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico.

Hart has made military reform a major element in his campaign. In August, Hart and a handful of liberal allies filibustered against the MX missile, delaying a final vote for two weeks. An angry Tower accused Hart of using the issue in an attempt to revive a dying presidential campaign.

It is true that 82-year-old Democrat John Stennis of Mississippi — a consistent Pentagon ally, a former chairman of the panel, and a power in the Senate — also is on the committee and could become chairman if Democrats regain control. That seems unlikely, however, because to do that, Stennis would have to surrender his claim on the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee.

Nunn is well-respected in the Senate as a defense specialist, but does not carry Jackson's clout and as chairman of the committee would face strong challenges from less senior members like Kennedy, Hart and Levin.

If Republicans retain control of the Senate, the armed services committee most likely would be taken over by Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, once the voice of American conservatism who has had had a series of serious health problems in recent years, including triple heart bypass surgery.

Although a firm supporter of a sharp defense buildup, Goldwater, 74, likely would be less vigorous than Tower, 57, who was known for aggressively beating back any attempt to whittle away at the defense budget on the Senate floor.

There also is a chance the new chairman could be Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., an unwavering member of the conservative pro-defense bloc in the Senate. But Thurmond is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, a post he would have to relinquish if he chose to become the Senate's chief defense expert and legislator.

Of course, the nation's defense policies ultimately will be shaped more by the 1984 presidential campaign than inside Senate changes, and the election of a Democratic president almost certainly would bring reversal of many of Reagan's priorities on how the Pentagon should spend the money it is given.

Testimony Links Baker To Papers

WASHINGTON — While White House chief of staff James A. Baker III was vacationing recently, he was pushed closer to the Carter briefing book affair by two days of testimony from a low-echelon 1980 Reagan campaign aide.

Mark Ashworth, who ran the duplicating machine at the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign headquarters in suburban Virginia, spent 14 hours Aug. 29 and 30 testifying before investigators of Rep. Don Albosta's House subcommittee. In the process, he identified copies of material from President Jimmy Carter's briefing book for his campaign debate with Ronald Reagan that he duplicated, he said, at the orders of Baker's subordinates.

Specifically, Ashworth told the investigators that he had duplicated Carter briefing material on four separate occasions in September and October of 1980 and that his understanding on three of those times was that he was making copies for Baker.

That is scarcely the "smoking gun" that nails Jim Baker. But it could be used by his foes to contest the powerful chief of staff's contentions that, as candidate Reagan's debate coordinator, he had only a fleeting connection with the Carter briefing material. We were unable to reach Baker for comment.

D.C. Amendment Faces Certain Death

WASHINGTON — A notably insignificant anniversary slipped by the other day, and I mean to apologize for overlooking it. Aug. 22 marked the fifth anniversary of the approval by Congress of the proposed District of Columbia amendment to the Constitution. All my brother pundits seem also to have let the occasion pass without comment, but the matter is not without interest.

Five years ago, by the margin of a single vote in the Senate, Congress proposed this amendment: "For purposes of representation in the Congress, election of the president and vice president, and Article V of this Constitution, the District constituting the seat of government shall be treated as though it were a state."

A second section of the resolution provides: "The exercise of the rights and powers conferred under this article shall be by the people of the District constituting the seat of government, and as shall be provided by the Congress."

The first section is clear enough: It would give the city of Washington, D.C., two members of the U.S. Senate and one member of the House of Representatives. The second section has all the clarity of a hot fudge sundae; the sentence reads as sensibly backward as forward, but this is of no particular consequence because the amendment is a dying duck anyhow.

This is the record of ratification: Three states ratified in 1978 — New Jersey, Michigan and Ohio. Four more ratified in 1979 — Connecticut, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Minnesota. Two came along in 1980, Maryland and Hawaii. In 1981, Oregon ratified. In 1982, Maine and West Virginia joined the inglorious parade, and in May 1983, Rhode Island brought up the rear. That makes 13. Unless 25 additional ratifications are secured by August 1985, the amendment will be certified dead. The chances of achieving those additional 25 states are roughly to be equated with Seattle's prospects for winning the World Series.

I cannot quarrel with the predicate on which the resolution rests. The present situation is indeed unfair and unjust. Residents of the District of Columbia pay the same federal taxes that others pay; they are subject to the same requirements for military service; they are affected by every act of Congress as we all are affected — but Washingtonians have no representation in the writing of these laws. They are citizens, but they are second-class citizens. It isn't right.

But the solution, I submit, is not to be found in adopting this clumsy amendment to the Constitution. Washington, D.C., is not a "state." It cannot be transformed into a state by declaring that for certain purposes it "shall be treated as though it were a state." Washington is a city of some 637,000 inhabitants. To many of us, it is ludicrous to propose that any city should have two members of the Senate. No way. The answer lies in conveying most of the city, apart from a non-residential federal enclave, back to the state of Maryland whence it came. That idea is regarded with horror by Maryland politicoes, and there the matter rests.

The D.C. amendment will go to its grave as the seventh proposed amendment to be approved by the Congress but to be rejected by the states.

We are just not very enthusiastic about altering the supreme law of the land. With all its imperfections — and it most surely has some imperfections — the Constitution has served us amazingly well. We can get along without the D.C. amendment, and so we shall.

To the editor:

It is ironic that the first in the series "No Place to Hide" on domestic and international terrorism will be aired on Ted Turner's Super Station, WTBS, Atlanta, on Sept. 11, at 8:05 EST and again four hours later. This is an ambitious attempt by the Western Goals Foundations to bring the facts to the general public in a series of television-quality documentaries. Congressman Lawrence P. McDonald was chairman and president of the foundations. On Sept. 11 there will be memorial services in Washington, D.C., and Marietta, Ga.

He was much more than the congressman from the 7th Congressional District of Georgia. He was a fine surgeon (third generation of doctors) before going into politics in 1974. He was an outstanding and outspoken conservative, not only in this country, but in all the western world. He was a real patriot who believed that education was his total strategy and truth his only weapon. He used the following on all material going out of Western Goals and Western Goals Endowment Fund: "... so to rebuild and strengthen the political, economic and social structure of the United States and Western Civilization so as to make any merger with totalitarians impossible."

To the editor:

The article which appeared in this paper on Sept. 6 about deprogramming presented it as an "intensive counseling" process, when really this practice is a frontal assault on the first amendment to the Constitution. I think three points need to be clarified.

First, the article makes no mention of how much money the deprogrammers are pulling in. I know where the parents have had to take out a second mortgage on their homes to pay off the deprogrammers. Perhaps Mr. McDonald offers economy rates to the parents he supposedly helps.

Second, the article is too soft on the techniques used by deprogrammers. Deprogrammers lock a person up, subject him to constant verbal and physical abuse, and rip away his sense of individuality. Contrary to what Mr. McDonald says, sleep deprivation is used by deprogrammers. I would even say that deprogramming closely parallels the brainwashing methods used by communists on American POWs in Korea.

Third, I wonder why Mrs. Gould's 27-year-old son joined a nondenominational group in the first place. Would kidnapping, forceful detention and the deprogrammers' shoving thier opinions down his throat really address the inner needs of Mrs. Gould's son? If Mrs. Gould could not raise her son to be able to think for himself at the age of 27 or 29, why is she a housemother at Warren Wilson College?

Deprogramming eats away at our freedom of religion like gangrene. The practice of denying a man's freedom to worship God according to the dictates of his own heart is a pernicious undermining of the principles upon which our country was founded.

To the editor:

For almost 400 years, the people of northeastern North Carolina, primarily farmers, foresters and fishermen, have lived and worked in harmony with our natural resources. This area has never enjoyed the economic opportunities of the rest of North Carolina. Our high unemployment and lack of a diversified economy attest to that. Now we have an opportunity to gain the benefits of an abundant natural resource — peat.

However, a few environmental fanatics and get-rich-quick lawyers have convinced some in the fishing community that our peat-to-methanol project is going to "destroy the entire fishing industry." Ridiculous! They have no scientific basis for making such claims. This is not a criticism of the many responsible members of the bar or rational environmentalists.

To date, Peat Methanol Associates, a partnership of reputable companies, has invested more than $15 million in engineering and environmental studies and planning for this project, all in accordance with federal, state and local laws and environmental regulations.

Those of us who have followed the $540 million project from the beginning know the truth. It can and will be done without harming the environment or any existing industry, including our fishing. This project will actually enhance environmental quality.

Our most farsighted elected officials are aware of the need and benefits of the environmentally sound, orderly development of some of our peat resources. This area desperately needs this project. Already PMA has received more than 1,700 unsolicited applications from area residents for the 1,175 construction jobs and 350 permanent jobs that project will provide. More are coming in daily. Scores of area businesses are contacting PMA to provide goods and services.

The taxes, spin-off industries and other benefits will be tremendous for eastern North Carolina. Let us not allow a few people to destroy this great opportunity.

Events Test Reagan's Foreign Policy Skills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's skills in foreign policy are undergoing a severe test.

He has a major superpower confrontation on his hands with the Soviet Union. And he is in danger of getting the United States bogged down in the quicksand of Lebanon where religion and power politics are exploding at gunpoint.

In the case of battle with the Soviets, Reagan clearly has the upper hand and the world with him in his scathing condemnation of Moscow for the shooting down of a commercial Korean airliner.

The president has been long on rhetoric and short on action, a fact which displeases his conservative constituency, but wins points among the moderates and the liberals who might have thought he was trigger-happy.

Reagan's denunciation of the Kremlin comes easy. He has had years of practice and earlier this year called the communist state the "focus of evil" in the world. Since the downing of the jetliner, the president has let loose a barrage of adjectives that rarely, if ever, are used in polite diplomacy.

He has called the Soviets "barbaric ... uncivilized" and condemned them for their "horrifying ... terrible ... crimes against humanity."

Reagan's retaliation has been restrained: stopping some cultural and diplomatic negotiations, and hoping to block landing rights for Aeroflot, the Russian airline, around the world.

Otherwise it's business as usual, except for a new climate that has been created that adds to world tensions.

The president has sought to galvanize the world's outrage against the Soviets and he has been successful. "It is not the United States against the Soviet Union; but the world against the Soviet Union."

He may be effective in isolating the Soviets, but may also add to their paranoia in dealing with the West.

There is no question that Reagan is winning the battle of world opinion and he has put the Soviets on the defensive. Some aides see pluses in the fallout, including the possibility that the reaction of the world will help Reagan in his bid for MX missile funding and other controversial defense programs.

They also see an easier road for the United States when it begins to deploy Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe starting in December to offset Russia's powerful SS-20 rockets.

In the Middle East, the picture is more complicated with the United States in the middle. With Marines suffering casualties in Beirut firefights, questions are bound to arise when Congress returns next week on whether there should be American involvement if a civil war erupts in Lebanon.

Reagan has vowed to stick it out, to keep the Marines in Lebanon and to back up the neophyte government of President Amin Gemayel in seeking to unify a country torn by warring factions and the occupation of two major armies — Syrian and Israeli.

Some 1,200 Marines are in the multinational peace-keeping force that is coming under fire. Offshore are 1,900 more troops on amphibious units backed up by the 6th Fleet.

If there is much more bloodshed, There is bound to be a clamor to pull out the American forces. Some lawmakers, including Speaker Thomas O'Neill, believe that he should invoke the section of the War Powers Act that provides for a congressional debate on whether American troops should be withdrawn if they are in hostilities or face imminent hostilities.

Other congressional leaders believe that the United States must remain in Lebanon and to provide the diplomatic and military muscle for Lebanon to become an independent soverign nation again.

But that will take some doing, and it will involve Reagan's total talents as stateman and commander in chief.

Classic Performance

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a classic Ronald Reagan performance — or was it?

There was the president of the United States, offering his typically tough talk directed at the Soviet Union.

Shunning the graphics that he often uses to illustrate a televised speech to the nation from the Oval Office, Reagan opted instead for a dramatic tape recording as he reported the radio transmissions of Soviet pilots shadowing and then attacking a Korean Air Lines 747 jetliner.

But how often does a presidential speech draw praise from liberal Democrats and sharp criticism from his longtime support in the ranks of the conservatives?

That is what happened in the wake of the president's speech Monday night outlining the limited sanctions he has decided to pursue in response to the Soviet role in the catastrophe. The Soviets on Tuesday admitted that one of their pilots fired the shots that destroyed the airplane carrying 269 people, all missing and presumed dead.

With few options available, Reagan administration officials labored all weekend to find concrete measures they could pursue to respond to the attack and give body to their frequent words of outrage.

But Reagan had a dilemma on his hands. In 1980, he said the U.S. response was inadequate when President Carter imposed a grain embargo and tried to organize a boycott of the 1980 Olympic games in Moscow in the wake of the Soviet military moves into Afghanistan in December 1979.

The United States has just completed a renewed grain sale agreement with the Soviet Union, and any disruption of that contract was ruled out this past weekend. The president had just backed off the restrictions on the shipment of U.S. equipment for a Soviet natural gas pipeline, and that, too, could not be an element in his response.

In fact, it was felt the best response would be an international one, and not one clearly engineered by the United States.

Citing the problems Reagan encountered with France and other allies when he tried to impose the restrictions on the pipeline shipments, one administration official said "his whole point is the United States tried to act unilaterally and it didn't work."

"We don't have an American plan we're trying to ram down people's throats," said this official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Perspective Doesn't Jibe

NEW YORK (AP) — Beware inflation.

That warning, issued day after day in myriad ways by those ubiquitous "economic observers" who reside in government, business and academe, seems to apply not just to the present and future but to the past too.

This conclusion is reached by the mmerce Department announcement on Labor Day that per capita income of Americans last year rose 5 percent to $11,107 from $10,582, an improvement almost anyone can figure to be $525.

But the calculation is rather meaningless, because in reality per capita income didn't rise at all. It probably fell instead, as indicated by the 5.8 percent inflation rate that prevailed in personal consumption expenditures.

This sort of thing goes on all the time, of course, producing a perspective on things that just doesn't jibe with that good old seat-of-the-pants indicator known as the wallet, and adding confusion to an already confused scene.

There is, almost all economic observers agree, sufficient confusion about the probabilities of inflation in the future, without adding that of the past.

The future is filled with mystery, as is suggested by the approaches used to determine what inflation might reside out there. Some observers study the amount of money in circulation, others study wage gains, others look at commodity prices. And others scoff at all such practices.

But one indicator, the rate of productivity, is generally viewed as a fairly solid barometer of things to come. If production efficiency falls, inflation ensues. If it rises, it appears to put a cap on inflation.

If that is so, there is really some good news about inflation, because second-quarter productivity rose at the relatively strong rate of 4.1 percent, double the rate of the first quarter, and the zero rates of years gone by.

But having agreed on productivity as an inflation-indicator, confusion sets in again. What makes for increases or declines in productivity? If you name fewer than a dozen reasons you haven't named a quarter of them.

Lower wage settlements and lower taxes usually improve productivity. But what role do patent laws play? And Civil Service laws, and the level of employee training and government regulation and worker attitudes?

It would take a White House conference on productivity just to clear the air — and, of course, help learn something about controlling inflation — and just such a conference is scheduled for September 22 and 23 in Washington.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — One of the more dramatic developments in the political scene over the past quarter century has been the growing willingness of the electorate to say they would vote for a Catholic, a Jew, a woman, or a black for President.

In 1958, 68 percent of the public said they would vote for a well-qualified man if he happened to be a Catholic. Today the proportion is 92 percent.

In 1958, 62 percent indicated they would vote for a qualified Jewish presidential candidate. The current figure is 88 percent.

In 1958, 52 percent said they would have no trouble voting for a woman for president. In the latest survey 80 percent express the same view.

In terms of their willingness to support a black man for president, the proportion vaulted from 38 percent in 1958 to 77 percent in 1978, a level maintained in the current survey.

While the barriers of race, religion and gender have fallen dramatically during the last generation, the survey offers evidence that not all political discrimination has disappeared. Only 42 percent of respondents, for instance, say they would be willing to vote for an atheist for president, while still fewer — 29 percent — would support a homosexual. Although it lacks majority backing, the concept of an atheist for president has grown far more acceptable now than it was in 1958, when merely 18 percent of respondents indicated they would be willing to vote for an atheist.

The question of a homosexual for president was not asked in 1958. Five years ago, 26 percent said they would vote for a homosexual, statistically indistinguishable from the 19 percent who now express this opinion.

The questions were asked:

"Between now and the political conventions of 1984 there will be discussion about the qualifications of presidential candidates — their education, age, religion, race and so on.

"If your party nominated a woman for president, would you vote for her if she were qualified for the job?

"If your party nominated a generally well-qualified man for president and he happened to be a black (Catholic, Jew, atheist, homosexual), would you vote for him?"

The table below shows the latest findings and the trends since 1958 in the proportions of Americans who say they would vote for a member of each of the groups studied:

Jew	88	82	62
Woman	80	76	52
Black	77	77	38
Atheist	42	40	18
Homosexual	29	26	NA

Opposition From Older, Less-Educated

In the case of each of the groups studied, greater opposition in the current survey is found on the part of older Americans, those with little formal education and, to a lesser degree, Southerners, as shown in the tables below.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,517 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period April 29-May 2.

Family Members Are Taking A Beating

RALEIGH — Volunteers who regularly brought food to the elderly woman noticed that she was often bruised. When they expressed their concerns, she'd always make excuses, something like, "I fell down." But, finally, when a volunteer strongly advised that she see a doctor for treatment of what looked like a broken arm, the elderly woman broke down in tears. No, she hadn't been falling, she admitted. Her live-in son had been beating her up.

Janet Mason, an Institute of Government researcher, tells that story in the latest issue of Popular Government magazine to demonstrate that family abuse isn't restricted to children. The elderly and disabled, it appears, are taking a beating also.

There is no central source of statistics on the abuse of the elderly. (A central registry for child abuse shows that between July 1981 and June 1982 there were 11,000 cases of child abuse confirmed in the state.) Ms. Mason uses other statistics, however, to indicate the size of the elderly abuse problem. During one quarter of 1982, county social services departments found it necessary to provide protection to 940 disabled adults. If that figure can be stretched over a year, that's 3,760 a year. Of the 940 abused adults, 595 were women, and 345 were men, more than half were over 65 years of age, 655 lived independently and 187 lived with another family member or guardian.

Ms. Mason's figures probably fall far short of the extent of the elderly abuse problems in North Carolina. Many old folks, like the 80-year-old woman living with her son, don't report their problem. Like that woman, they're afraid, or maybe they're too humiliated. There are probably dozens of reasons why they don't seek help.

In the area of child abuse, the Department of Human Resources has estimated that we're hearing about only one-fifth of the problem. "Probably an even lower percentage of disabled adults in need of protective services is reported," she writes.

If people are too young, or too old, or too weak, or too afraid to report that a family member is abusing them, then there is still another way for the authorities to learn of the problem and to offer help: friends and neighbors. In 1973, the Legislature decided that our moral obligation to help a weakened person in such a situation should be expanded into a legal obligation.

State law says that anyone who becomes aware that a child, an elderly adult or a disabled adult is being abused, must report that abuse to the local social services department. If they don't, they open themselves to criminal and civil prosecution.

In the past 11 years, 181 children, and an unknown number of elderly and disabled adults, died from abuse or neglect. For some, a phone call from a neighbor or a friend might have been a lifesaver.

Hatfield May Be Next To Retire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Howard Baker was first. Then came John Tower. Mark Hatfield may be the next Senate Republican to announce his retirement, further weakening GOP chances of retaining control of the Senate in the 1984 elections.

With only a fragile 54-46 majority, Senate Republicans need to keep as many incumbents in the race as possible to prevent a Democratic takeover that could be disastrous to a second Reagan administration.

As chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Hatfield, 61, of Oregon, is the only leader of a major Senate committee who has not indicated yet whether he will seek re-election in 1984.

The 17-year Senate veteran is known to be considering retirement, but undoubtedly will come under pressure to run again by his Republican colleagues who are fearful of losing control of the Senate.

"He is still weighing his options," a Hatfield spokesman said. "He has indicated he will announce one way or another in the fall."

Hatfield — a deeply religious man — is growing tired of life in the Senate. In the past two years, he has repeatedly fought attempts by the White House to cut federal benefit programs while increasing the military nuclear arsenal.

He also is the co-sponsor of the nuclear freeze resolution, with none other than the conservative Republican's anathema — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

As a result, even though he holds a strong position among Senate Republicans and is respected by most of them, he is not warmly embraced by the White House. And the disaffection is well known.

If Hatfield chooses not to run again, look for Democratic Reps. Les AuCoin, Denny Smith, and Jim Weaver to jump into the race. Another possibility is former Portland Mayor Neil Goldschmidt, secretary of transportation under President Carter.

Dr. CHARLES SCHWARTZ

ECU Dean To Leave Position

Dr. Charles F. Schwartz has resigned as dean of the East Carolina University School of Music but will remain on the faculty as a tenured professor. His resignation becomes effective July 1, 1984.

Dr. Angelo A. Volpe, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said he accepted Dr. Schwartz's resignation with regrest but that he "respects his decision and undertands Dr. Schwartz's desire to return to full-time teaching and creative activity."

Formerly dean of the school of fine arts at California State University in Long Beach, Schwartz became dean and profesor of the ECU School of Music July 1, 1981.

Schwartz had also been dean of the conservatory and professor of music at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., from 1972 to 1978 and was director of choral activities and associate professor of music at the University of Minnesota for eight years.

Mugabe Pays Visit To Young

ATLANTA (AP) — Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, who began a visit to the United States with a stop in Atlanta on Saturday, said he hoped his trip would be viewed as an effort to improve Zimbabwe's relations both with blacks in this country and the U.S. government.

"We have been with (the United States) for a long time. They are our friends," Mugabe said at a brief news conference at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport following his arrival.

"We don't see any area in our bilateral relations where we differ. We will continue to enjoy assistance from the United States and, therefore, the relations are very good," he said.

Mugabe said his visit to this country began in Atlanta to recognize the "contribution made by (Atlanta Mayor) Andy Young to the end of our conflict."

He referred to the role of Young, then a United Nations ambassador for the United States, as a peacemaker in helping to end the civil war between Mugabe's supporters and the ruling white government of the country, then named Rhodesia.

"I hope that our stay here will be recognized as an attempt by us to be closer to not only the United States, but to the blacks in the United States as well," Mugabe said.

His meeting with Young was a reunion between two friends who first met at a party and went on to help shape a nation.

Before Mugabe's arrival, Young discussed the man he called a "good friend," and recalled how they had worked — Young at the United Nations, Mugabe leading demonstrations in South Africa — for a peaceful solution to civil war and the birth of Zimbabwe.

"To be candid, I met Robert Mugabe at a party," Young said. "It was a typical African party, very formal, at the Tanzanian ambassador's house in Mozambique.

"I saw this lovely lady standing in a corner, all alone, and that's who I went up to talk to. She said, 'I'm Sally Mugabe.' And I said, 'You're not related to that awful terrorist Robert Mugabe, are you?'

"And she said, 'He's my husband.' And just then, Mugabe leaned over and said, 'Young man, in Africa, before we speak to the wives, we meet the husbands.' And he laughed ... and we became good friends."

That was in 1977, when Young was serving as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations in the Carter administration. Mugabe's ZANU party was working for majority rule in white-controlled Rhodesia, which became the independent state of Zimbabwe in 1980, with Mugabe as its prime minister.

Young had helped the Carter administration develop policy guidelines that called for maintaining economic sanctions against the southern African nation despite the election of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black, as prime minister, in 1978. The settlement that had led to Muzorewa's election was rejected by Mugabe's guerrillas and by nearly every other African nation.

Austria Receives Visit By Pope

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II, speaking from the square where Adolf Hitler harangued a huge crowd 45 years ago, issued an appeal Saturday for human rights, peace and tolerance to Austria "and its neighbors to the north, east, south and west."

The pope, clad in white and gold vestments, spoke from a podium in front of the former imperial palace shortly after arriving for a four-day visit to this neutral country, a traditional refuge for thousands fleeing the Soviet bloc.

In a suburb, about 500 people protesting the papal visit — the first in 201 years — attended an "alternative" rally where they derided the pope as "John Paul Superstar."

The 63-year-old pontiff appeared slightly flushed under a burning sun as he recalled dark days in European history and alluded to a troubled present.

"Nobody can be oblivious of the fact — a fact which deeply affects us all —that the common history of Europe is marked not only by glorious achievements, but also by dark and terrifying events which are incompatible with the spirit of humanity and the Gospel of Jesus Christ," the pope said to a crowd estimated by police to number 130,000.

It was the largest assembly in Heldenplatz, or Heroes Square, since Hitler appeared on a balcony of the former palace to declare Austria a part of the Third Reich.

About 400,000 people crowded into the square and neighboring streets after Hitler occupied Austria in 1938.

Nurses in light blue uniforms wandered among the crowds with large jugs of water, or fashioned paper hats to protect the elderly people in the audience from the brilliant sun. Temperatures in the high 80s sent dozens to a nearby Red Cross station.

Talk Show Will See Changes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alan Thicke, whose new late-night television show was ballyhooed as the competition's answer to Johnny Carson but was largely panned as it debuted last week, says the program will undergo some changes before it resumes taping.

Thicke, the soft-spoken host of "Thicke of the Night," said in an interview the first order of business was to calm down the show's frenetic energy level.

"We've got to bend the format of the show to suit me, not bend me to suit the format," he said.

The syndicated talk show, which opened last Monday, was produced by Fred Silverman, Carson's ex-boss and former star of network programming at CBS and ABC.

Peter Bunzel of The Los Angeles Herald Examiner called one of Thicke's interviews on the show "dreary" and another "pointless" and said the program "has a long way to go before we start humming its host's name."

Daily Variety's Dave Kaufman wrote, "Thicke has a nice style, but was mired down in some inane shticks which engulfed him."

A 3.0 rating is considered necessary to survive in late night, but the curiosity factor in Thicke's first-night audience must be considered as an inflationary influence on that night's ratings.

Live Audience Sees News

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A Dayton television station is trying a new approach in the competition for viewers — inviting them into the studio to watch the evening news in person as it's broadcast.

"Basically, it's public relations," said WDTN-TV news director Steve Olszyk. "We've probably got the best newscast in town, but we've got to get people to look at it. This is one small way to get people to take a look."

Olszyk, who came up with the idea, described the station as a "mediocre No. 2" behind traditional ratings leader WHIO-TV.

Invitations are mailed to 50 people for each night's 6 p.m. newscast, and each invitee is asked to bring a friend.

Only about a dozen people have shown up each night, station officials said. On last Tuesday's opening night, 10 reporters showed up to watch 11 people watch the news.

"It shows we have to work on the system a little bit," said Olszyk.

Invitations are sent to targeted sections of the station's viewing area. Olszyk said most of last week's invitations were sent to people in the Springfield area, about 40 miles away.

That distance might be the reason for the first week's low turnout, said anchorman Jack Hicks."

"I think by next week when we start moving in closer to the Dayton area, we'll get more people," Hicks said. "The station has received calls from people who wanted to buy the tickets."

The studio audience is never seen on camera, and Olszyk said they are never mentioned on the air. Spectators also are encouraged not to make any noise or react to the news.

"Most of them have never been inside a TV station before, so they're intrigued," he said.

The City Control can designate certain areas of Greenville as controlled residential parking area. For more information, call 752-4137. Ask for Engineering.

Ancient Skullbones Form Basis For Likeness Said To Be Of King Philip II

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — British experts working with ancient skullbones from a royal tomb have constructed what they believe is a good likeness of the battle-scarred face of King Philip II of Macedon — father of Alexander the Great.

Their portrait sculpture of a rugged warrior with a livid scar in the right eye socket was presented Friday evening at an international conference attended by more than 1,200 leading classical scholars.

"We don't claim this is a 100 percent likeness, but we think it's as close as you can get to how King Philip looked shortly before his death," Dr. John Prag, Keeper of Archaeology at Britain's Manchester Museum, said in an interview.

The new research is expected to help convince some scholars who still doubt that the tomb found in 1977 in Vergina, Greece, truly is the last resting place of the king who unified the Greeks in the 4th century B.C. and forged one of the greatest armies the world had ever known.

The stone tomb chamber found beneath a 30-foot-high earth mound was crammed with gold, silver and ivory, including the solid gold funerary casket that contained cremated bones showing damage to the right eye.

According to ancient historians, King Philip's right eye was gouged out by an arrow while he was besieging the northern Greek city of Methoni in 354 B.C., 18 years before he was assassinated.

"The bone damage was compatible with a wound caused by a missile striking from above," said Richard Neave, a medical artist from Manchester University who applied forensic techniques to rebuild the skull.

"This is scientific confirmation of my conviction that King Philip was the occupant of Tomb 2 at Vergina," said Professor Manolis Andronikos, the Salonica University archaeologist who excavated the tomb.

Neave took plaster casts of the burned skull pieces which were used as the basis for the reconstruction.

"They revealed bone damage to the right eye socket and cheekbone caused some time before death," Neave said in an interview.

The artist rebuilt the soft tissue of the face in clay, using standard proportions established for depth of facial tissue, and produced a wax cast, made up in South European skin and hair tones.

"It's not the serene idealized ancient portrait of a great king, but what Alexander the Great's father might have looked like after a day's hunting," Prag said.

Ancient portraits of Philip, in marble or clay, show a bearded hero with a thick neck and fleshy features, and only a nick above the right eyebrow refers to the eye wound, Prag said.

Philip is written of as a charming, hard-drinking soldier, an unwearying commander in the field, who fought like a lion and was quite disfigured with old wounds by the time of his death.

He was king of Macedon — now northern Greece and southern Bulgaria and Yugoslavia — in the middle of the fourth century B.C.

Philip unified the often distrustful and divisive Greek states and built a powerful fighting machine with the aim of conquering Asia Minor. But he was assassinated at his daughter's wedding feast in 336 B.C on the eve of his expedition and it was left to his son Alexander to lead the Greeks against the Persians and found an empire that stretched from northern Greece to India.

King Philip was killed in Aigai, capital of the Macedonians. He was in is mid-40s when he died.

Andronikos, discoverer of the tomb, is convinced the village of Vergina was the ancient Aigai. Experts date pottery found in the tomb to between 340 and 300 B.C. Some archaeologists claim Philip's nephew, Philip Arridaios, who was buried in 316 B.C. was its occupant.

"But Philip Arridaios, the historians tell us, was sickly and mentally deficient," Prag pointed out. "Nobody records that he was ever in battle or received an eye wound."

Madrid Meeting Ends On Optimistic Note

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The European Security Conference is over after 34 months of East-West sniping, punctuated by Polish martial law, the Soviet Union's incursion into Afghanistan and its destruction of a South Korean jetliner.

But government leaders and diplomats from the 35 participating states — all of Eastern and Western Europe but Albania, and the United States and Canada — still consider the so-called Helsinki process a landmark in postwar efforts to lay down a code of international behavior.

"For the past three years Madrid has been the city of hope where in a world fraught with tensions, a dim, fragile but fervent light has continued to burn for a future of peace and liberty for all peoples."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said that while he was disappointed with the outcome of the conference "it is an effort that must continue because it embodies the most basic interests, deepest convictions, and highest hopes of all the peoples of Europe."

He said, "Though this conference is coming to a close, our concern for human rights is enduring..."

For the West, the human rights provisions of the so-called Final Act, signed in Helsinki in 1975, are the most important.

Then-Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who had been promoting a Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe for several years, wanted a statement from the West which in effect recognized the Soviet takeover of Eastern Europe after World War II.

This is included in a clause of the Final Act which says "The participating states regard as inviolable all one another's frontiers..."

But in exchange for the West's concession, Brezhnev had to agree to a series of human rights provisions, including "fundamental freedoms...The freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief."

At the Madrid conference, called to review how the 35 nations have observed the provisions of the Final Act, the West accused the Soviet Union of violations of the human rights provisions, while the Soviets and their allies argued that this constituted unwarranted interference in their internal affairs. Interference in internal affairs of participating nations is prohibited by the Helsinki accords.

Because of this impasse, little was realistically expected from the Madrid conference.

But it succeeded in tightening up the Final Act with a commitment to cooperate to combat international terrorism and to assure freedom of religion.

The Madrid final document also provides for the formation of free trade unions, but "within the existing legislation of poarticipating states."

Even Gourmets Like Hospital Restaurant

HOUSTON (AP) — Lunch at Chez Eddy costs an average of $13.60, but a lot of customers think the price is worth it. The kitchen uses only the freshest of ingredients. The sophisticated menu lists dishes with delicate sauces.

Houston City magazine said it "might be the best restaurant in Houston."

Without a doubt, the magazine said, it is "the best restaurant in a hospital anywhere."

That's right, a hospital.

And because it is operated under the auspices of the Sid Richardson Institute for Preventive Medicine, which is run by Methodist Hospital, the food must not only be good, it must be made with very little salt and no butter.

That presents a basic problem for a chef.

"When you take out the salts and the fats, you take away a lot of what gives food its taste," said John Adams, assistant administrator for the institute.

But Adams and general manager Lois Johnson say reviews like the one in Houston City magazine are evidence that the team of chefs that took on the task of the developing the restaurant's recipes three years ago has overcome its handicaps.

Officials of the Sid Richardson Institute, an organization that tries to prevent illness, set tough limits on sodium, animal fat and cholesterol content. Doctors and patients at the institute are highly conscious of the harmful effects those substances have on the cardiovascular system.

Chez Eddy's customers now include drop-ins, as well as doctors and patients in the Sid Richardson program, an exercise and diet plan run by the hospital.

About 65 customers pay an average of $13.60 apiece for lunch at Chez Eddy each weekday, Adams said. The restaurant — named for Houston oilman Edward Scurlock, who formerly owned the land on which the building stands — serves about 35 at dinner, he said. The institute and restaurant are located in an office building known as Scurlock tower across the street from the hospital.

The kitchen staff compensates for the salt limits by flavoring food with stocks — boiling bones and draining off water, leaving a residue with a slight salt content. Cooks also substitute margarine for butter and various light sauces for cream sauces.

"It's tough," chef Anthony Chin said. "You have to give up a lot. In the kitchen, it's very hot and people tend to get frustrated."

Chin said he and his colleagues worked about a year to concoct a menu that satisfied them, an achievement he said they reached by "doing a lot of trying and messing it up."

Adams said the patience paid off. Officials of Chez Eddy are looking for a publisher interested in a cookbook based on the restaurant's recipes. They also offer cooking classes.

There also has been talk of franchising the restaurant, Adams said, though that presents the danger of "losing control of the quality."

"We opened this restaurant with the concept that you can eat a healthy meal, a very fine meal, without sacrificing taste," Adams said.

Moreover, a patron can have a soup (leek and watercress, for example), entree (sirloin steak, say, or perhaps lobster), two vegetables and dessert (maybe custard, crepes, or a glacee) and still leave having consumed only about 700 calories, Ms. Johnson said.

Forest Fires Hit Montana

LAME DEER, Mont. (UPI) — Hundreds of fire fighters and scores of ranchers and other volunteers struggled Saturday to control two giant range fires that burned at least 41,000 acres in southeastern Montana.

"Some pretty good stands of timber" were destroyed, said a spokesman for the Bureau of Land Management, but no buildings or other structures were damaged and no one was injured.

"It's been a real safe operation," said John Russell, who is coordinating the effort using nearly 900 fire fighters.

The 25,600-acre Custer Creek Fire on the Crow Indian Reservation was contained early Saturday, but officials were concerned about the 16,000-acre Rye Fire, along the northern border of the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, which Russell said would not be controlled before Monday morning.

"It's the only real active fire we still have," Russell said of the Rye Fire. "Everything else looks pretty good."

Cooler weather pushed into Montana Thursday and by Friday afternoon temperatures held in the 70s. The weekend forecast called for scattered showers with some wind and high temperatures in the lower 70s. Temperatures had been near 100 degrees earlier in the week.

Lightning from summer-afternoon thunderstorms had triggered numerous fires in the parched plains and rolling hills of eastern and central Montana. Most of the fires were contained to fewer than five acres.

Proxmire Challenges Statement On Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., is challenging Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's charge that banks, not federal deficits, are responsible for high interest rates.

Proxmire, ranking Democrat on the Senate Banking Committee, said Saturday the administration is blaming banks for the current climb in interest rates because it is "politically convenient."

"As secretary of the Treasury, he has borrowed $400 billion just to finance the federal government's insatiable appetite for money," Proxmire said in a statement released by his Washington office.

Regan, speaking Thursday to the Chemical Manufacturers Association, said that banks "have not yet realized that ... interest rates are too high relative to the rate of inflation."

William H. Kennedy, president of the American Bankers Association, said Friday the difference between what banks must pay to savers today — 9.5 percent to 9.8 percent — and what they are charging for loans — an 11 percent prime rate — is unusually small. Kennedy said rates will come down "only when savers and investors become convinced that they will not be burned again by inflation and when they are willing to accept lower rates for their savings."

Allen Sinai, chief economist for the New York investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., said Friday that "deficits are the No. 1 culprit for excessively high ... interest rates."

Regan had challenged the theory that government deficits cause high borrowing costs, saying "there is simply no empirical evidence" that they do."

Proxmire charged that Regan "is now at the point where he is borrowing an average of $1 billion a day. I know it is politically convenient to blame the banks or the Federal Reserve for keeping interest rates too high."

Four Meetings Scheduled On Educational Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell announced Saturday the sites of four regional meetings to discuss implementation of tougher standards in U.S. schools.

At those meetings, educators, parents, and civic leaders will discuss a blue-ribbon panel's recommendations that schools should be more demanding of students and that teachers must also be better prepared.

The forums, which will focus on the National Commission on Excellence in Education's report, "A Nation At Risk," will take place in Philadelphia on Sept. 20, Athens, Ga., on Sept. 23, Kingsport, Tenn., on Sept. 30 and Renton, Wash., on Oct. 3.

That commission, which Bell appointed, warned in a widely circulated report last April 26 that the nation's schools were facing "a rising tide of mediocrity."

Bell's department held seven regional forums earlier this year, including one in Minnesota attended by President Reagan. Bell said a twelfth will be held next month at a site still to be selected, and that he then will convene a two-day national conference to discuss school reform.

Bell's department is inviting politicians, educators, and parents from surrounding states to attend the sessions, in which the education secretary and several commission members will participate.

Court Halts Plan To Develop Areas

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A federal judge has issued a preliminary injunction barring the Interior Department from allowing development on 1.5 million acres of federal land in 10 Western states.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence Karlton issued the order Friday in a suit filed by six environmental groups.

At issue is whether Interior Secretary James Watt violated federal laws last year when he issued an order dropping the public lands from a wilderness inventory compiled by the Bureau of Land Management.

The environmental groups question whether Watt gave adequate opportunity for public participation before making his decision, whether environmental impact statements were needed and whether Watt violated other environmental restrictions and rights to appeal.

Robert Dreher, an attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, said the case centers on "split estate" land owned by the Bureau of Land Management.

Most of that land was traded to the government by railroads that received it as land grants during the 19th century. The railroads traded the land for other acreage, but retained mineral and other rights.

The land covered by the suit is in California, Utah, Arizona, Oregon, Nevada, New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Colorado.

House numbers are assigned by the Engineering and Inspections Department. To verify an address, call this Department at 752-4137.

Congress Returns On Monday

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns from a five-week recess to confront an autumn of hard choices about the Soviet Union and the Mideast, and a legislative stalemate over trimming bulging budget deficits.

The recess ends with the House and Senate reconvening at noon Monday. While they were gone, legislators unleashed a torrent of angry rhetoric against the Soviet Union after one of its interceptors shot down a South Korean jumbo jet Sept. 1, killing all 269 people aboard, including 61 Americans. Among the passengers was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

Initial legislative reaction to the incident will be largely symbolic, with leaders in the House and Senate preparing — in cooperation with President Reagan — resolutions condemning the Soviet action.

The long-term impact of the attack is more difficult to determine.

"The principle effect has been to restate the determination to stay militarily strong ...," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. "It will enhance the chances for passing the general military budget."

Nevertheless, Baker added, arguments over separate elements of the defense budget — such as the MX missile and the B-1 bomber — will continue.

"It (the Soviet attack) will not automatically mean all these things will be disposed of. Some of them just won't pass. I can think of one or two that are in trouble and still will be in trouble," Baker said.

Another concern facing returning legislators is the continued civil war between religious factions in Lebanon and the lack of say from Congress in the deployment of U.S. Marines there.

Congressional sources have said Reagan's allies in the Republican-controlled Senate are preparing legislation that would approve the presence of U.S. troops in Lebanon.

The effect of such a measure would be to relieve the administration of pressure under the 1973 War Powers Act that would limit the stay of the Marines to a maximum of 90 days unless Congress approved.

The sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the idea of legislation authorizing the troops to remain in Lebanon surfaced during a Sept. 4 White House meeting during which the president briefed bipartisan congressional leaders on the Soviet attack on the South Korean jetliner.

Administration critics have not given up, but it is unlikely that congressional critics will have success in blocking recent administration moves to step up the U.S. presence in Central America.

Meanwhile, Congress and the White House are faced with a legislative gridlock over how to reduce budget deficits.

Before the recess, Congress postponed the deadlines it had set for itself to achieve budget savings called for in the budget blueprint enacted earlier this year.

Reagan Hearing Better

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — President Reagan has told officials of Starkey Laboratories Inc. that he is pleased with the firm's tiny hearing aid, which he began wearing about two weeks ago.

"The president has reported back to us that he was doing fine and that it's nice to have a hearing aid. He said he liked the sound and it helps him hear better, which is good," said Dale Thorstad, vice president of the suburban Minneapolis company.

Reagan, who suffered a partial hearing loss years ago during his acting career when gun blanks were fired near his right ear, was fitted for his hearing aid Aug. 22 in Los Angeles, during his California vacation, but he did not wear it publicly until last Wednesday.

The president is using a new hearing aid called a canal-type.

"It's very, very small. Instead of filling the entire ear, it takes up just the canal portion of the ear and the rest of the ear is left open," Thorstad explained.

Canal-type hearing aids have been available in the United States for only about 1½ years, he said.

"It was introduced on a very, very small scale in Europe about four years ago, basically for people who didn't want to be conspicuous, who were very conscious of not having anything show," Thorstad said.

Early Presidential Race Brings Mild Interest

By DONALD ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The end of summer raises the possibility a few Americans other than professional politicians and reporters will start taking a serious look at the 1984 presidential race — just as the Democratic struggle shifts from back room politicking to center stage competition for primary and caucus votes.

Those who haven't been paying attention up to now may be surprised to learn that — officially — six Democrats are running against exactly one Republican — perennial campaigner Harold Stassen, who announced on Friday.

But at least one other Republican — this fellow Reagan — is thought to be interested.

In advance of the first caucus, a new round of straw polls, an October debate in New York City and endorsements from organized labor are spurring the Democratic contest into faster clip as fall approaches.

"This damnable joint-appearance phase," was how a top aide to Sen. John Glenn described the new emphasis of the campaign.

Until now, the six candidates and their staffs have concentrated on building organizations, raising money and trying to convince other politicians that they are legitimate contenders for the nomination and would have a chance to beat Ronald Reagan in November 1984.

But the summer proved a cruel season for the presidential ambitions of Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado, while it offered Glenn and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale hope that the race will narrow quickly to the two of them.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina got a glimmer of encouragement far from his native South and former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida continued his dogged effort to climb out of his darkhorse position.

And while the Democrats scrambled, a Reagan re-election began to take shape with plans under way to shut down the White House political office next month and replace it with a Reagan campaign committee under the day-to-day supervision of Ed Rollins, who has been running the White House political office.

The president refuses to say whether he will seek re-election, but his loyalists already are signing up for 1984 under the assumption he will run.

Democrats George S. McGovern and the Rev. Jesse Jackson may soon join the announced candidates.

"There were two significant things that happened over the summer," said Sergio Bendixen, manager of Cranston's campaign. "One was the July 15 financial report and the other was the AFL-CIO endorsement. Both of those hurt us."

Financial reports filed with the Federal Election Commission in mid-July showed Hollings, Cranston and Glenn were sliding deeply in debt while the Mondale, Glenn and Askew campaigns were running in the black.

Cranston is preparing a television appeal for money and Bendixen claimed the next financial report to the FEC, due Oct. 15, must prove "that we've turned the corner financially and that we're going to be able to compete."

Bendixen expects the Cranston campaign to be $1 million in debt by Jan. 1, 1984. But that is when the candidates get their federal matching funds and the California Democrat's share should be more than enough to erase that debt. The problem is whether he'll have enough left to compete effectively in the crush of early primaries and caucuses next March.

Hollings campaign manager, Billy Keyserling, said, "Money is very difficult because we're being measured now not on content, but on name recognition."

Friday Defends Ban On Records For Consulting

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina System President William C. Friday has defended his decision prohibiting public inspection of some records about outside consulting work by faculty members.

He told the UNC Board of Governors Friday his decision was based on advice from the state Attorney General's Office, which he said told him that disclosing the records could carry a criminal penalty under state law.

"It's just disruptive to have this kind of thing going on," Friday said.

At Friday's request, the board's Committee on Personnel and Tenure agreed to meet Oct. to review the policy on allowing professors to do paid consulting work for private industry.

In other action, the board approved 161 new programs, including an undergraduate communications program at N.C. A&T State University and a doctoral program in communications disorders at UNC-Greensboro.

A five-year plan includes proposals for 11 baccalaureate programs, seven master's programs and one doctoral program. It also calls for withdrawing some programs, including two baccalaureate, five master's and one doctoral and discontinuing four baccalaureate and one master's program.

The five-year plan reflects "a stable enrollment pattern" and "moderate but steady improvement" in UNC's rate of enrollment, including a 2.5 percent increase at the system's 16 campuses.

"The trend toward proportionately larger enrollment by women, part-time students and older students is expected to continue through 1986," a report on the plan says. "While there have been significant advances in some areas of educational opportunity, much remains to be done."

North Carolina ranks 47th nationally in percentage of high school graduates and 43rd in college graduates, according to a report presented Friday to the UNC Board of Governors

According to a UNC survey of the class of 1979, 73 percent of its graduates were from families with median incomes of $30,000 or less, 45 percent from families with incomes of $20,000 or less and about 17 percent from families with incomes of $15,000 or less.

Area Debutantes Presented To Society

RALEIGH — A small cheering section, complete with clapping, was heard Friday night at the Civic Center here. The occasion was the announcement to debutante No. 71, that her gloves had been delivered in time for her presentation to society at the annual North Carolina Debutante Ball.

Phyllis Elizabeth York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Wesley York, was the leader for this year's ball. She was escorted by James Bell Black II, chairman of the ball. She started forming the traditional cartwheel figure and was followed by the 223 debutantes and their marshals.

Greenville debutantes included: Elizabeth Ann Longino, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Henry Longino; Louise Carmen Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marvin Taft Jr.; Melissa Ruth Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Holston Taft Jr.;

Eliza Felton Norfleet Taylor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor; Katherine Stewart White, daughter of Mrs. Katherine Shipman White and Thomas Jackson White III; and Virginia Adams White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alexander White Jr.

Williamston debutantes were Serena Chesson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wilson Chesson and Ann Clark Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ramsey Davis Jr.

Wally Hinkamp and his orchestra provided music for the presentation. The official welcome to the 57th ball was extended by the Honorable Dan K. Moore. The formation of the Terpsichorean Club figure followed.

The North Carolina School of the Arts Jazz Ensemble and the Fantastic Shakers played for the dance at the Carolina Country Club immediately following the presentation.

Three groups — Northtower, the Waller Family and the Jerry Butler Show — provided music for dancing Saturday morning at the Carolina Country Club. Shortwave and the Waller Family teamed up for the entertainment Saturday night at the Radisson Plaza.

The activities started Thursday for the debutantes, their families and marshals. After the registration and a rehearsal session at the Civic Center, a cocktail party honoring the debutantes and their parents followed during the evening. The mothers of the girls were honored at a brunch given by Mrs. William Christian Olsen, honorary chairman, Friday morning. The debutantes and their fathers attended a brunch at the Angus Barn.

For her presentation, Britt Aycock was dressed in a Bianchi original gown by Priscilla of Boston. It featured a high collar of alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls with a molded lace bodice. The skirt was of white chiffon.

A gown of white chiffon was selected by Miss Longino. The sleeveless scoop neck bodice of English net was appliqued in re-embroidered alencon lace with accents of pearls and iridescent sequins.

A white gown of moire taffeta over a lining of matching taffeta was worn by Lou Taft. The gown featured a fitted pearl dotted bodice which was sleeveless. It was highlighted at the drop shouldered neckline by matching bows. The skirt was gathered.

A Bianchi formal gown with cap sleeves of white English net and re-embroidered alencon lace was worn by Ruth Taft. The sculptured scoop neckline and fitted lace bodice was trimmed with clusters of seed pearls and opalescent sequins. The bouffant skirt was embroidered in pearls and sequins encrusted on alencon lace.

Miss Taylor wore a formal gown of white moire. The bodice, fashioned with a scoop neckline extended into a fitted midriff which joined a bouffant skirt. The full French pouf sleeves of white Venise lace were edged with lace ruffles at the shoulder.

Katherine White selected a formal gown of white chiffon over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an open sculptured neckline and short cap sleeves. The fitted bodice was appliqued in imported re-embroidered alencon lace beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The chiffon skirt was gathered and featured an open draped panel.

Virginia White wore a formal gown of matte taffeta over peau de soie designed by Lila Broude for Mendicino. The sleeveless gown was fashioned with an open sweetheart neckline outlined in imported re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with seed pearls. It had a dropped waistline overlaid with alencon lace encrusted with pearls.

Miss Chesson wore a formal gown of white silk organza and Venise lace. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline defined with Venise lace. The bodice had a sheer yoke in the back with covered buttons to the waist. The short sleeves were of Venise lace.

A gown of white chiffon over taffeta was worn by Miss Davis. The bodice was of white lace over chiffon with a high neckline of lace and a bertha of lace. The gown had a gathered skirt with a sash of white satin ribbon. Rosettes accented the back streamers.

State Hospitals Find Treatment Gap Now Exists

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A psychiatric patient, judged by local authorities to be potentially dangerous to himself and to others, was recently transported from the Wilson County Mental Health Center to Cherry Hospital for treatment.

Once there, say Mental Health Center officials, the patient was denied admission to Cherry Hospital because he had been drinking.

Joe White, director of the Wilson-Greene District Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substances Abuse Program, said the incident exemplifies a serious treatment gap created by financial slices in the state mental health program.

White said the gap has left his center with no place to refer inebriated psychiatric patients even though they legally qualify for involuntary commitments.

Until July 15, Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro was the facility for all involuntary commitments, including cases involving alcohol abuse, from the Wilson-Greene area.

But then Cherry's alcohlism treatment program ended.

White said the situation is potentially dangerous.

"They fight, they resist, they don't want to go, they're combative, and they get up and run the minute you leave them," he said. "And many are on the brink of dying from too much alcohol in ther systems."

Phil Mooring, director of substance abuse for the Mental Health Center, says facilities that handle involuntary commitments must be licensed and there are no such facilities in the Wilson-Greene area.

Many patients of this type end up in the emergency room of Wilson Memorial Hospital, but the hospital holds no license for involuntary commitments, so its physicians cannot hold a patient against his will.

George Adams, mental health director for the state's eastern region, said the closing of the program at Cherry Hospital was Cherry's response to a decision of the state Department of Human Resources that the state's psychiatric hospitals slice their budgets to come up with a $6.1 million appropriation the General Assembly had allotted community mental health programs.

The catch was that the appropriation must come from the division of mental health's existing programs.

"When you pull out $6.1 million, something has to go," Ben Dixon, assistant director for the division of mental health's alcohol and drug services, said Wednesday. "The community programs will have to pick up the slack."

But according to White, the $41,192 that the Wilson County Mental Health Center received as its share of the appropriation served its purpose by replacing discontinued federal block grant funds.

Nothing was left for supplementing community alcohol treatment services to compensate for Cherry's closing of its detoxification center.

Help may be on the way, Adams said.

"We didn't have the luxury of phasing out the detoxification program, but we now have a task force working," he said.

A plan, which must be submitted to the state mental health office by Sept. 16, will involve a proposal for reallocating money to enable communities to establish agencies to deal with detoxification.

As for any disagreement about inebriated psychiatric patients being admitted to Cherry, Adams said that was a matter that must be negotiated between Wilson County's local physicians and the staff of Cherry Hospital.

Dorothea Dix Hospital, a state psychiatric hospital in Raleigh, closed its detoxification center years ago, Dixon said, but the facility still admits alcohol patients whose primary diagnosis are psychiatric.

"That's what Cherry's going to have to do," said Dixon. "That's our tentative plan."

Green's Dismissal Bid Denied

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The government has rejected claims by defense attorneys for Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green that bribery-related charges against him should be dismissed or modified.

Special prosecutor James L. Blackburn filed documents last Thursday in response to motions filed last month by defense attorneys Howard F. Twiggs and Wade M. Smith. The attorneys will argue the motions in Wake Superior Court Wednesday before Judge James M. Long of Pilot Mountain.

The defense had asked that five charges of bribery and conspiring to bribe be dismissed on the grounds that the indictment failed to clearly state the nature of the criminal offenses Green is alleged to have committed.

The indictment charged that Green conspired to receive a bribe, accepted a $2,000 bribe, twice consented to receive a bribe of $10,000 a month and once consented to receive a $2,000 bribe. Consenting to receive a bribe and actually receiving a bribe fall under the same North Carolina statute.

In exchange for the money, the indictment said, Green agreed to help undercover FBI agent Robert J. Drdak and others to influence several state and local agencies. Drdak was posing as an underworld figure interested in opening a bar in Columbus County from which he would run gambling and drug operations.

Blackburn countered defense objections, saying the indictment was "clear on its face that the acts to be done included assisting with, influencing and manipulating the bureaucratic process."

Blackburn also defended wording in the indictment that was challenged by defense attorneys as accusing Green of more than one offense in each count.

Tobacco Auction Prices Rise Again

By The Associated Press

Flue-cured tobacco prices rose last week on North Carolina's three tobacco belts, the Federal-State Market News Service reported.

On the Eastern Belt, gross sales for the three-day week totaled 23,755,202 pounds for a record high average price of $193.90 per hundred — up $5.31 over last week. Season sales were brought to 147,342,038 pounds returning $177.35 per hundred.

Stabilization received only 4.6 percent of gross sales this week. Receipts under loan for the season were 23.2 percent, compared to 36.7 percent at this time last year.

On the Old and Middle Belt, 19,455,313 pounds were sold for an average $179.03 per hundred — up $6.30 from last week.

Hannon Announces For Governor

GREENSBORO — Robert L. Hannon has announced as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. "I'm planning for the runoff," Hannon said. "I think I've got the primary locked up. But the runoff might be tight."

Hannon, 68, proposed a platform of racial and sexual equality, expanded job opportunities, improved housing, expanded health care, stable Social Security and pension programs and improvements in public education, environmental programs and crime control.

"I stand for and will support all policies, practices and programs designed to improve the quality of life of blacks, the poor and our society as a whole," he said.

He proposed raising minimum teacher salaries to $20,000 a year and paying for the increase through boosts in the tax on liquor, beer and wine.

Hannon, a former teacher and administrator at Fayetteville State University, said he opposes proposals to lengthen the school year and institute a merit pay system for teachers. He called merit pay "hidden discriminaton."

Hannon said he expects to spend $100,000 in his campaign — $50,000 on the primary and $50,000 in the primary runoff. He said his fund-raising efforts are just beginning.

Martin Supporters Criticize Letter

RALEIGH — Republicans who support U.S. Rep. James G. Martin for governor are complaining that the National Congressional Club helped a former Republican official with a letter questioning his electability.

Martin supporters charged that the letter, which was mailed to Republicans across the state and pushes William W. Cobey Jr. for governor, could re-ignite old wars with the conservatives allied with Sen. Jesse Helms' club.

"It is opening old wounds and splitting the state again," said Margaret King of Charlotte, who has managed most of Martin's past congressional races.

Martin, a six-term congressman from Lake Norman, announced his candidacy in August. Cobey, who has not announced, has won the endorsement of club chairman Tom Ellis. The other major candidate is Sen. T. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba.

Vodka Taken From Shelves

RALEIGH — Some North Carolina retailers are removing Soviet vodka from their shelves in the wake of last week's shooting of a Korean jetliner, despite no action by state Alcoholic Beverage Control officials.

The North Carolina Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission has rejected a plan to forbid sales of the vodka because they say a boycott would have little impact on the Soviet economy.

Durham County Alcohol Control Board members voted last week to prohibit the sale of Russian vodka in the county. State ABC officers have told county ABC officials the decision to ban vodka sales is up to them, county board chairman Charles H. Lewis said Friday.

Driver Draws Another Conviction

GREENSBORO — A Greensboro man with five previous drunken driving convictions was given a four-year prison term Friday for convictions on seven more charges involving alcohol. David Bolen, 28, was found guilty of driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while his license was permanently revoked and transporting an open alcoholic beverage in each of two incidents in June.

Bolen also was convicted of driving left of center in an incident June 10, in which the pickup truck he was driving struck a car driven by Mark Lineberry, 18, of Greensboro, leaving Lineberry seriously injured. Bolen could be eligible for parole in less than a year.

WF Trustees Elect Chairman

WINSTON-SALEM — Weston P. Hatfield, a Winston-Salem lawyer, has been elected chairman of the Wake Forest University board of trustees.

Hatfield's election Friday came as the board said goodbye to James Ralph Scales, who will step down as university president at the end of the month to resume teaching. Scales will be succeeded by Thomas K. Hearn, an administrator at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

Hatfield, whose one-year term will begin on Jan. 1, will succeed chairman C.C. Hope Jr., a banker from Charlotte and state secretary of commerce.

Nurses' Passing Rate For '83 Exam Shows Slight Decline

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Almost 90 percent of North Carolina nursing program graduates passed the state nursing examination in July, according to the North Carolina Board of Nursing.

Of 1,580 graduates who took the exam, 1,400 passed, said Dixie H. King, business administrator for the board. East Carolina University graduates passed at the rate of 88 percent — 64 out of 73 taking the exam.

The passing rate of 88.6 percent is slightly less than the 89.3 percent of graduates who passed the exam last year. Of 1,681 candidates last year, 1,501 passed.

Graduates of the nursing programs at nine campuses of the University of North Carolina posted an average passing rate of 86.6 percent, including 100 percent of the nursing graduates at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and of Winston-Salem State University.

At N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro, which has been on probation under a Board of Nursing policy, 15 of 19 graduates who took the exam — or 78.9 percent — passed.

Raymond H. Dawson, UNC vice president for academic affairs, said he hopes the results mean that "A&T is out of the woods." The Board of Nursing will revie A&T's status at its Sept. 22 meeting.

Here are the other UNC campuses with nursing programs, the number of their graduates who took the test, the number who passed and the passing rate:

— N.C. Central University, 12 of 17, 71 percent.

— UNC-Chapel Hill, 118 of 131, 90 percent.

— UNC-Charlotte, 55 of 66, 83 percent.

— UNC-Greensboro, 85 of 94, 90 percent.

— Western Carolina University, 36 of 50, 72 percent.

The passing rate declined at NCCU in Durham and WCU in Cullowhee. NCCU's rate in July 1982 was 92 percent and WCU's rate was 93 percent.

"Central and Western both look disappointing," Dawson said, adding that he did not know the reasons for the decline.

Schools Gain On Bull Market

By The Associated Press

North Carolina universities investing in the stock market say they are getting higher returns than they have in more than a decade.

"In my experience, since 1971 ... this will be the biggest year ever for colleges and universities," said Abbott Wainwright, director of business affairs for the National Association of College and University Business Officers in Washington.

In 1971, the association began charting investments among U.S. schools. In the year ending June 30, one University of North Carolina fund had a gain of 69.1 percent and another at Clemson University in Clemson, S.C., had a 76.2 investment return.

That contrasts with an average loss of nearly 1 percent for fiscal year 1981-1982.

Some returns on the colleges' investments are "paper gains," meaning that the schools haven't actually cashed in and taken their profits. But the gains increase the value of the colleges' investments.

At many private colleges, which have freer spending policies than public institutions, profits already are flowing into student aid, faculty research and scholarship funds. The fund-raising arms of public universities tend to re-invest their money for long-term use and spend smaller amounts.

Wainwright said colleges and universities could make more money if they weren't bound by restrictions and conservative philosophies.

But nearly every collegiate investor, large or small, has profited in the bull market, said Ted Chandler, vice president and trust officer for NCNB National Bank in Charlotte.

"Everyone likes to make money and everyone likes to have his job go well," said Norman Miller, director of investments at UNC. "In this instance, I've been able to do both.

The largest private foundation at UNC, the Insttitution Development Foundation, had an investment return of 69.1 percent for 1982-83, he said.

The UNC Endowment, which was down 8.9 percent for 1981-82, had an investment return of 55.6 percent for 1982-83. The endowment's largest stockholdings include American Express Co., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Control Data Corp., General Motors Corp., IBM and NCR Corp. Its largest 1982-83 gain was 90 percent on stock in the Chrysler Corp.

The Duke University Endowment posted a 40 percent return for 1982-83 after suffering a "horrendous" gain of 2½ percent in 1981-82, said Louella Rutledge, assistant to the treasurer.

Among others, Duke has stock in Ford Motor Co., Motorola Inc., Union Pacific and Digital Equipment Co.

Ms. Rutledge said she believes the losses and gains will balance out to a comfortable average within a few years.

Chemical Makers Dispute Report

By The Associated Press

Officials of the company that makes bacteria-killing chemicals found in North Carolina streams have disputed the state's conclusion that the chemical is harmful.

Thompson Research Associates of Toronto said the findings by the state Division of Environmental Management were based on "shallow evidence" and that the product is safe when used as directed.

Company officials also charged that the division refused to give them a copy of the report of the division's investigation at a meeting in Raleigh Tuesday, two days before the report was made public. A division official said the report was mailed to Thompson Research officials Wednesday.

Russel Baker, vice president of a sales subsidiary of Thompson Reserach, said his business has been hurt by the division's action.

"For 30 years these products have been used in the state of North Carolina without any impact on fish and the ecology," he said.

Thompson manufactures and distributes a bacteria-killing compound — known as a biocide — called Ultra Fresh 300DD. It is used by some hosiery manufacturers to slow the growth of odor-causing bacteria in socks. The active ingredient in Ultra Fresh is tributylin oxide, a potent chemical also called TBTO.

Pirates Roll Past NCSU, 22-16

Ingram, Byner Key Final Scoring Drive

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RALEIGH — In a game in which the defense of East Carolina generally took a licking, it was a big defensive play by Calvin Adams that allowed the Pirates to claim a 22-16 win over N.C. State Saturday night.

Adams broke through to slam State fullback Vince Evans to the ground for a seven yard loss on fourth and goal with nine seconds remaining in the game, turning the ball over to the Pirates to run it out.

The final three minutes of the game couldn't have been written by the television writers for a wilder finish for the nationally televised game over Atlanta's WTBS.

A record crowd of 57,700, the largest at any football game in North Carolina history watched in dismay as both teams suffered turnovers — the only ones of the game — during those last few ticks of the clock, sending both sets of fans into near hysteria.

East Carolina, trailing 16-7 as the final period began, rallied on touchdown runs by Tony Baker and Earnest Byner to move out to a 22-16 lead with 7:10 left in the contest.

But State, which had been stopped only on a few occasions, rallied, driving downfield on several big plays. Vaunted runner Joe McIntosh made 12 yards on one and raced for 11 on another. On a third and 15 from the ECU 43, junior college transfer Tim Esposito hit McIntosh for 16 yards — just enough for a first down.

Three plays later, however, Mike Miller fumbled and Clint Harris pounced on the ball at the ECU 10. With 2:46 left, and the Pack with only one time out remaining, it would seem the door had been closed.

But no!

Two plays later, it was the Pirates' turn to turn it over as Byner coughed it up and Frank Bush recovered at the 18 with 2:09 to play.

Three plays moved it to the 13 where State used its final time out with 15 seconds to go. Esposito took the snap, rolled and pitched to Evans, trying to go around the left side where Adams roared through for the tackle with nine seconds left.

That, finally, did it.

State had struck first in the game, on a 34-yard field goal by Mike Cofer, but ECU came back when Norwood Vann covered a Stefon Adams fumble in the end zone for a 7-3 lead.

State then moved back out on a one-yard run by Miller, and added 34 and 24-yard field goals by Cofer for a 16-7 lead.

It was then that Baker scored from six yards out and Byner went over from five yards to seal it.

"We just never gave up," an emotionally high ECU coach Ed Emory said afterwards. "Maybe we were give out, but we never gave up."

Emory said the key may have been that the Pirates went to the trap offense in the second half and it opened the game for them. "Our defense and kicking game won for us. They kept giving us great field position with short kicks and never to (Henry) Williams." Williams did return several kicks, but was well covered by the Wolfpack.

"N.C. State was ready to play and I congradulate Coach (Tom) Reed on his game plan and the job they did. It was tough to go through a 47-46 game (last week against Florida State) and come back to this."

Reed was disappointed with the loss, to say the least. "It was a crushing loss. We didn't play well at the end, didn't execute."

Reed said the Pack got sluggish on defense after the third period. "The defense did come up with the big play when we needed it, we just couldn't put it into the end zone."

After State had moved out by 16-7, the Pirates started a drive late in the third period, climaxing on the second play of the final quarter on Baker's six-yard run. Ingram hit Baker for 10-yards on a pass and Byner broke away for 14 yards on another. Baker then took an 11-yard ramble to the six, setting up his taking a pitch out around the right side. Jeff Heath's kick made it 16-14, a two-point deficit.

The Pirates got it back on the 17 after a punt and moved it down field in 11 plays. Byner got 17 on the first play and Ingram later added 27 down to the State 21. After a first down at the ten, Jimmy Walden got five, and Byner took it up the middle for the final yards — and the lead.

ECU then went for two — padding the lead as much as possible, with Ingram taking in around the left side for the conversion.

While the Pirates came out of the dressing room with the same vim they showed against Florida State, it didn't take long for them to find out that the Wolfpack was a bit more difficult to run against than last week's foe, Florida State. East Carolina took the opening kickoff and drove it across midfield in just three plays, but then stalled at the 44 of the Pack and kicked away.

And the Pack came roaring back with its first score on the ensuing drive. From the 20, Esposito hit Phil Brothers for 15 yards, and later went to Miller for eight to the State 47. Three rushes produced a first down at the ECU 42, and the Esposito-Brothers combination pushed it down to the 33. McIntosh ran it nine moe yards to the 24 before Kenny Phillips sacked the State signal-caller back at the 34. A third down pass to Stanley Davis was just short and Cofer came on to boot a 34-yard field goal with 8 minutes left, as State took a 3-0 lead.

After an exchange of punts, the Pirates drove for the lead, scoring in just six plays — with just a little bit of luck along the way. State was hit by two 15-yard penalties to start the drive, a personal foul on the kickoff return and a face-mask call on the first play from scrimmage. That moved it to the Pack

Black's Punt Return Lifts Heels 24-10

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Walter Black said it was just a "basic punt return," but the 73-yard touchdown run keyed eighth-ranked North Carolina's 24-10 victory over Memphis State in college football Saturday.

"That was our basic middle return," said Black. "There was a good wall of blockers up the middle and I just accelerated.

"Those first few steps are when you make the most yardage," Black added. "You don't want to dance around."

Memphis State coach Rex Dockery said Black's return was "by far the biggest play in the game."

"I will have to look at game films to see what happened, but it appeared we just got blocked well."

Black, who returned six punts for 98 yards, took Stan Weaver's punt on the North Carolina 27 with just under two minutes in the third period, burst up the middle and raced up the right sideline. It was the first punt return for a touchdown by a Tar Heel since 1974 and helped North Carolina break a 10-10 halftime tie and raise its record to 2-0.

North Carolina coach Dick Crum said he was disappointed with the Tar Heels' five fumbles, two of which were lost, but lauded the special teams' play.

"In a close game, the kicking game can be the difference," said Crum. "I think that was the case today. We work on all of our kicking game a lot, each week, and it paid off."

Tailback Ethan Horton, who rushed for 137 yards, capped a seven-play drive with a 22-yard touchdown run with 12:55 left to play, his second touchdown of the day. He carried the ball on all seven plays in the 45-yard drive.

Horton gained 117 yards in the second half as the Tar Heels won their 14th straight home opener before 49,000 spectators.

Memphis State, 1-1, did not cross the North Carolina 45 in the second half and had only one first down and five for the game, while the Tar Heels finished with 29 first downs, including 11 in the first quarter.

The Tar Heels held the Tigers to 39 yards rushing, including just 13 in the second half, and 105 yards total offense. North Carolina finished with 416 yards total offense, 276 of it coming on the ground.

The Tar Heels took the second-half kickoff and drove to the Memphis 30, but Brooks Barwick's 47-yard field goal was wide with 9:40 left.

After North Carolina grabbed a 10-0 first-quarter lead, Memphis State took advantage of Tar Heel mistakes to tie the score at halftime.

The Tar Heels drove 59 yards in 11 plays on their first possession and scored on Horton's 2-yard run with 8:52 left. Barwick's conversion gave the Tar Heels a 7-0 lead.

Line Judge Is 'Very Critical'

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Wertheim of Lexington, Mass., was in "very critical condition" after being injured while officiating a juniors match at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships Saturday.

"He is in very bad shape," said Pauline Gramaglia, a spokeswoman at Flushing Hospital and Medical Center, who said Wertheim was in the cardiac intensive care unit.

Wertheim was the center service linesman for the title match in the junior boys division when he was struck in the groin by a ball hit by Stefan Edberg of Sweden, who eventually beat Simon Youl of Australia. Wertheim, who was seated, toppled over backwards in his chair and apparently struck his head on the ground.

Schofield Saved For Late Rally

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Wake Forest Coach Al Groh said he felt injured quarterback Gary Schofield "had only so many throws in him," so he held his ace out until the second half of Saturday's football game with Virginia Tech's Hokies.

So Gary Schofield came off the bench to spark a second-half touchdown drive that gave the Deacons a 13-6 victory over the Hokies, their first triumph since they beat Virginia Tech last year 13-10.

"He could not throw the ball yesterday (Friday)," Groh said of Schofield. "He has not thrown a pass since Tuesday."

Groh said Schofield "didn't have a miracle cure. He's just better than he was yesterday. We thought it was going to be a very close game and if we were to have a chance, we wanted to make sure he had whatever throws he had in him at the end."

Tech Coach Bill Dooley was unhappy with 163 yards in penalties.

"Some of the calls against us were unbelievable," Dooley said. "Every time I looked out there, they were throwing a flag."

But Dooley said "it was a day of mistakes for our side. We made enough mistakes to last a season."

Schofield, who did not play in the first half because of a back injury, took over in the third quarter. The scoring drive, covering 61 yards in seven plays, came on Wake Forest's fourth series in the second half.

Schofield hit three passes in the march. His 22-yard completion to Michael Ramseur gave the Deacons a first down on the Hokies' 23. Schofield hit Duane Owens three plays later from the 7 for the touchdown and Harry Newsome added the conversion to make it 13-6.

Until Schofield entered the game, the Deacons, 1-1, were unable to move the ball. Wake took a 6-0 lead on a first-quarter touchdown that came when Ronnie Grinton blocked a Tech punt. The Deacons' Scott Roberts picked up the ball on the Tech 14 and scored from there.

Tech, opening its season, tied the score on two field goals by Don Wade.

The Hokies' kicker hit a 19-yarder in the second quarter after a Tech drive that started on its 20 bogged down on the Wake Forest 2. Wade's second field goal came in the third quarter from 33 yards out after the Hokies stalled on the Wake 14.

Tech had three turnovers. Wake had only one miscue and 30 yards in penalties.

Martina Navratilova

Martina Finally Realizes Dream

NEW YORK (AP) — The dream came true Saturday for Martina Navratilova as she captured her first U.S. Open women's singles title with an easy 6-1, 6-3 victory over Chris Evert Lloyd at the National Tennis Center.

"You won't take the smile off my face for a long time," she said immediately after winning the only crown that had eluded her. "It's better than I expected."

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, who has yet to capture any of the Grand Slam titles, moved into the men's singles final earlier Saturday by eliminating ninth-seeded Jimmy Arias 6-2, 7-6, 6-1. Lendl, the No. 2 seed, advanced into Sunday's championship match against No. 3 Jimmy Connors, the defending champion, who rolled over No. 16 Bill Scanlon 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Appearing undecisive on whether to laugh or to cry, Navratilova screeched several times after she had won what she has on numerous occasions called her "most important goal."

"It's off my back," she said, referring to her failures in America's premier tennis event until this year. In her only other trip to the final, in 1981, she fell in three sets to Tracy Austin.

In contrast, Lloyd, who has won six times, suffered only her second loss in the final.

"She won it so many times," Navratilova told the crowd of Lloyd. "I'm glad she let me win it this year."

The victory was worth more than $620,000 for the Czechoslovakia-born left-hander who became a U.S. citizen two years ago. She received $120,000 for winning on the hardcourts here, and also collected $500,000 for winning three of the four tournaments that constitute the Playtex Challenge.

It also was her second consecutive Grand Slam title — she captured Wimbledon in July — and put her in line for another $1 million bonus if she can win the next two Grand Slam events — the Australian Open and the French Open.

Although Lloyd holds a 30-24 lead over Navratilova in their career meetings, Navratilova has won their last six battles and is 11-3 over the past three years.

"I'm still beating everyone in the world except one person," Lloyd said. "I still love to play and I'm still hungry. She was just hungrier than me. She had more to prove than I did.

"She's a better athlete, quick with her hands. She plays a versatile game. Her only vulnerability is mental. If she remains hungry and eager and doesn't lose interest, Martina could play great tennis for five or six years."

And it was great tennis Navratilova displayed in Louis Armstrong Stadium on Saturday as she demolished Lloyd in 63 minutes, her longest match of the 13-day tournament.

Navratilova rushed out to a 5-0 lead to begin the match, giving up only nine points in that stretch. Then Lloyd held at 15 before Navratilova brushed aside two break points to hold service and wrap up the opening set.

Always attacking, taking the net at any and every opportunity, Navratilova broke Lloyd at 15 to begin the second set, then held at 15 to take a 2-0 advantage. She looked invincible as she grabbed a 15-40 lead in the third game.

But Lloyd, one of the coolest performers on the court, fought back in the longest game of the match, a game that went to deuce three times before Lloyd held service.

The Fort Lauderdale, Fla., native then broke Navratilova and, when she held serve in the fifth game, she had a 3-2 lead, her first of the day.

But Navratilova — as graceful, as quick and as deadly as a leopard — held at 15, then broke Lloyd at love. It was only a matter of time before she would add her name to the list of U.S. Open champions.

That came in the 10th game, and she made it interesting, falling behind at love-40 for triple break point. But she just rattled off the next five points, the last coming when Lloyd's usually accurate backhand sailed long.

"I've waited for this a long time. I've worked for two years. I didn't want to wait another year," the winner said.

She said that before the match, while she was in the locker room, "I thought to myself, the time is now."

Lendl was even more devastating as he destroyed Arias in two hours. The methodical, efficient Czech right-hander fired 11 aces, and his deep groundstrokes usually kept Arias running from side to side.

Like Navratilova, Lendl began the match by breaking his opponent. He then broke the 19-year-old Arias in the fifth game and served out to capture the opening set.

Arias, who earlier this year won both the Italian Open and U.S. Clay Courts, fought back in the second game of the second set. But Lendl was equal to the task, saving four break points before holding his own service.

He broke Arias at 30 to take a 2-1 lead, but the teen-ager from Grand Island, N.Y., broke back in the sixth game.

Again, in the 10th game this time, Arias tried to take the lead, building up a love-40 lead on Lendl's serve. But Arias missed a forehand and Lendl followed a service winner with a smash, pulling to deuce. An ace gave him the ad, and he closed out the game with another service winner.

The two battled evenly through 12 games and moved into a tiebreaker. Arias took the first two points and, at one point, led 3-2. But Lendl then ripped off the next five points and took the tiebreaker 7-3, giving him a 2-0 lead in sets.

After Lendl saved three break points to capture the first game of the third set, the two traded service breaks. It was the only game Arias was to win the final set as Lendl advanced to the U.S. Open men's single final for the second consecutive year. So far this year, he has not dropped a set in his six matches.

"There is going to be a first time tomorrow (Sunday)," Lendl said. "I either win a Grand Slam or I lose a set. one of those two is going to happen."

Tide Sparkles In Perkins' Debut

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. (AP) — The Ray Perkins era began with a victory.

Fourteenth-ranked Alabama scored a quick touchdown Saturday after an early Georgia Tech turnover and went on to defeat the Yellow Jackets 20-7 in Perkins' debut as successor to the late Paul "Bear" Bryant, the winningest coach in college football history.

"How did I feel? I felt the same way I felt riding on the bus coming up here last night," Perkins said. "I was in HIS seat. It doesn't bother me if it remains his seat. Maybe it should. And today I felt like I was walking out on HIS field. I wanted to win this game more than any I've ever been associated with. I hardly slept last night."

After a pregame moment of silence and an invocation honoring Bryant by Steadman Shealy, a graduate assistant on Perkins' staff and quarterback of the Bear's 1979 national champions, the Perkins era began.

It took just 1:35 for Alabama to jump in front 7-0 on a 15-yard pass from Walter Lewis to halfback Joe Carter three plays after a Georgia Tech fumble.

"It was a defensive victory and a kicking game victory," Perkins said — ironically alluding to the way Bryant's teams won so many times. "The defense bent, but didn't break.

"The offense lacked consistency and a killer instinct, but showed a lot of character in keeping the ball late in the game when the defense was so tired."

Lewis, who played the entire game and completed 11 of 19 passes for 204 yards, conceded that he "had been thinking what it would be like with Coach Perkins on the sideline and Coach Bryant not there. I decided to just go and see for myself. I wish Coach Bryant had been there, but Coach Perkins did a good job."

Cornerback Stan Gay, one of the defensive heroes, said it was "not that much of a change. I was proud to play in the Liberty Bowl in Coach Bryant's last game and I'm proud to play for Coach Perkins. I hope he does as well as Coach Bryant.

"I miss him. I thought about him on the field. I thought about him all day. But I think Coach Perkins is going to be one of the greatest coaches in college football."

Alabama got an early break when linebacker Emanuel King sacked Georgia Tech quarterback Stu Rogers on the game's third play, forcing a fumble.

Tackle Randy Edwards recovered at the Tech 20 and the Crimson Tide was off and rolling, scoring on the third offensive play of the new regime.

Ricky Moore lost two yards and Carter rushed for seven before Lewis whipped a pass to Carter along the right sideline just inside the 5-yard line. Carter performed a swan dive into the end zone, freshman Van Tiffin converted and Alabama led 7-0.

A 39-yard field goal by Tiffin with 3:15 remaining in the first half made it 10-0. Tiffin booted a 45-yard field goal at 8:53 of the third quarter and barely two minutes later Todd Roper blocked a punt by Tech's Ron Rice and Stan Gay returned it 32 yards for a touchdown.

Georgia Tech scored with 12:34 left when Robert Lavette's 1-yard run capped an 84-yard, 15-play drive. It was the 27th career touchdown for Lavette, a junior, breaking the school record of 26 set by Eddie Lee Ivery from 1975-78.

Auburn ..... 24 Southern Miss.....3

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Bo Jackson scored a pair of touchdowns and Lionel James rushed for 172 yards on 16 carries to give fourth-ranked Auburn a 24-3 college football victory over Southern Mississippi Saturday night.

Jackson scored on a 10-yard run and on a 44-yard pass play from quarterback Randy Campbell, running the last 34 yards after the catch.

Al Del Greco added a 41-yard field goal and three extra points to cement the Auburn victory before 73,500 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a season-opening game at Auburn.

Southern Mississippi noseguard Jerald Baylis gave Auburn a few headaches, sacking the quarterback and breaking up passes.

But a stubborn Auburn defense — led by Donnie Humphrey, Gregg Carr and Pat Thomas — shut down Southern Mississippi's offense.

Tailback Sam Dejarnette, who began his career at Auburn but transfered to Southern Mississippi when Pat Dye became Auburn's coach in 1981, returned to Jordan-Hare Stadium. He was held to 37 yards on 14 carries in the first half and 46 yards on 18 carries for the game.

James, a senior, needed just two plays to get into the end zone, giving Auburn a 7-0 lead.

Southern Mississippi came back on a series of short runs by DeJarnette, his only consistent performance of the first half, that was capped when Steve Clark kicked a 38-yard field goal.

Pirates Rally By State...

34. After a first down at the 18, Ingram lost four yards, but from the 17 on third down, he hit Adams at the four. He fumbled on the hit but Vann was there to pounce on the ball in the end zone. Heath's kick with 1:17 left put ECU up, 7-3.

State then launched a long 12-play 80-yard drive to regain the lead, 10-7. A 24-yard spearing penalty boosted the drive along, and later a personal foul pushed it to the five. It took four knocks on the door from there before Miller dove over the middle of the line from just inches away. Cofer's kick was good with 11:24 left in the half.

After holding the Pirates, State got a field goal from Cofer, again from 34 yards after several times escaping from third and long situations. Early on, an Esposito pass to Brothers got 16 yards on third down, and a McIntosh burst of 41 yards cleared a third and 15 situation and moved the ball to the ECU 18.

But the Pirates held there and forced the field goal with 4:32 left making it 13-7.

The Pirates then got a crushing blow after driving back down the field to the 15, where on fourth and six, a 32-yard field goal attempt by Heath was wide of the mark with seven seconds left.

State then used the opening drive of the second half to add three to its lead. Helped along by a 15 yard penalty against the Pirates and a 35-yard jaunt by McIntosh, State moved to the two before electing to go for the kick and the 24-yard boot was good, making it 16-7.

It was several exchanges later that the Pirate offense finally got in gear and roared back to take the lead.

Byner led the Pirate rushing attack with 97 yard while Ingram added 84. McIntosh had 160 yards to lead all, his 13th 100-yard-plus game in 21 contests in State red.

"I feel we have been second class citizens for 50 years in these parts in football," Emory said, "but tonight is just the makings of a great season and future for our program."

East Carolina, now even at 1-1 will appear at home for the first time next Saturday, hosting Murray State, while N.C. State, 0-1, entertains The Citadel.

Hoosiers Run By Duke, 15-10

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Steve Bradley, unable to move the ball for much of the afternoon, became a runner instead of a passer Saturday to spark Indiana to a 15-10 comeback victory over Duke making Sam Wyche's Hoosier coaching debut a success.

Bradley gained 41 yards on three carries before pitching to Bobby Howard on an option play for the winning score.

"Bradley took it upon himself to make the game," said Wyche, who was given the job of rebuilding Indiana's football program in January.

Bradley, who completed 15 of 32 passes for 162 yards and one touchdown, also finished the day as Indiana's leading rusher with 62 yards in seven carries.

"I was very nervous at the start, but the coaches have brought me along slow," said Bradley, who was selected for his first start during preseason drills. "We were having trouble throwing the ball in the third (quarter), so we went to our clutch series, which was the option.

"On the first big run, it was a broken play and I just saw an opening. The second, I had an option and I just rolled out and took what I could get. We wanted to keep them guessing."

Duke Coach Steve Sloan was impressed with Bradley.

"For his first game, he did well," Sloan said. "Scrambling around there, he made two big plays."

Indiana hurt itself with 10 penalties that cost 95 yards.

"This is maybe the worst we will play. We had some things to get out of our system," Wyche said.

The Hoosiers drove 84 yards in nine plays to score on Howard's 8-yard run with 4:22 to play. Bradley, a 6-foot-3, 212-pound sophomore, ignited the drive by racing 21 yards on the first play.

Two plays later, after finding his receivers covered, Bradley tucked the football under his arm and gained 16 more yards. On the next play, fullback Johnnie Salters bolted up the middle for four yards.

Bradley later gained four more yards on an option play for a first down on the Duke thirteen. Howard picked up five before scoring on the next play.

Indiana had trailed then entire afternoon. Duke took a 3-0 led on a 45-yard fieldgoal by Ken Harper with 11:09 left in the opening quarter.

Senior quarterback Ben Bennett, who set a Memorial Stadium re ord wfor pass completions by an Indian opponent with 27, gave the Blue Devils a bigger lead on a 12-yard touchdown pass play to Joe Blunk. Harper then kicked the extra point, giving Duke a 10-0 lead with 4:46 left in the first half.

Lowrey, FSU Rally By Tigers

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) – Experience paid big dividends for 12th-rated Florida State and senior quarterback Kelly Lowrey in a come-from-behind 40-35 victory over No. 13 Louisiana State.

"Having a game under our belt really helped. I would have hated to face them once that quarterback had some experience," said Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden.

Lowrey ran for three touchdowns and passed for two more in the wild offensive show carried to most of the nation on ABC television.

The two ranked teams rolled up 1,026 yards total offense.

Lowrey, voted the game's outstanding player, brought the Seminoles to a 14-all halftime tie when he scored on a one-yard run as the clock ran out.

Bowden said that touchdown was a key to Florida State's copmeback and showed the value of having an experienced quarterback.

"We worked on the pitchout on that option all week and having an experience quarterback who could read the defense made the difference," said Bowden.

"We turned the ball too many times to an experienced ball club," said LSU Coach Jerry Stovall, whose team lost three interceptions and had suffered four quarterback sacks.

Tailback Greg Allen accounted for Florida State's other touchdown and finished with a game-high 201 yards in 22 carries.

Florida State, 2-0, trailed 14-0 but put three touchdowns on the scoreboard in a little over five minutes late in the first half and early in the third quarter.

A record crowd of 79,665 — plus a nationwide television audience — watched Florida State avenge last year's 55-21 loss to LSU. Saturday's loss also spoiled LSU's 1983 season opener.

Lowrey ran for touchdowns of 1, 1 and 8 yards, and finished with 19 of 31 for 233 yards passing — including touchdown throws of 16 and 20 yards.

Allen, last year's national scoring leader, got his only touchdown on a 28-yard run early in the fourth quarter.

Florida State's experienced defense, which gave up 46 points in the Seminoles' opener, picked off three of Jeff Wickersham's passes and, after the second quarter, frequently blitzed LSU's sophomore quarterback.

Sophomore tailback Dalton Hillard accounted for three LSU touchdowns, running 10 and 8 yards for two and recovering a fumble in the end zone for the other. He finished with 128 yards in 19 carries.

LSU picked up its final two touchdown within the final minute when Garry James scored on a pair of one-yard runs.

Southern Cal.....19

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Salisbury threw a 25-yard scoring pass to Timmie Ware with no time remaining to tie the game, then a bad snap on the conversion attempt cost ninth-ranked Southern Cal the victory Saturday as the Trojans tied No.18 Florida 19-19.

The Trojans marched 80 yards in the final 46 seconds to tie the score. Salisbury threw an incompletion on what appeared to be the final play of the game, but it was nullified because of a penalty against the Gators for having too many men on the field.

That gave Southern Cal one more chance. But after Salisbury hit Ware for the tying score, the Trojans muffed the PAT snap and the game ended as holder Tim Green threw a desperation pass that fell incomplete.

Florida now has a 1-0-1 record while the game was the first for the Trojans under new Coach Ted Tollner.

Bobby Raymond had kicked two of his four field goals in the final 2:06 to stake Florida to a 19-13 advantage. He hit from 18 yards for a three-point advantage, then from 39 yards for the six-point lead.

Both clubs were plagued by mistakes in the waning minutes of the contest as Raymond's final two field goals were set up by a fumble by Salisbury, then an interception of a Salisbury pass.

Earlier, the Trojans had been driving when Fred Crutcher fumbled the ball away at the Florida 32-yard line. The Gators came back with a march of their own that ended when Lorenzo Hampton fumbled at the Southern Cal 12.

Raymond provided the Gators' first six points with a pair of field goals in a 20-second span just before halftime. Florida trailed all the way until taking a short-lived 13-10 lead late in the third quarter as Hampton bulled up the middle on a 3-yard scoring run.

Frank Jordan's 45-yard field goal tied it 13-13 in the opening minute of the final quarter. The Trojans built a 10-0 lead on a 41-yard field goal by Jordan and a 16-yard touchdown pass from Salisbury to Fred Cornwell.

Bearcats Upset Penn State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The blackboard said it all for the Cincinnati Bearcats — "We beat Penn State."

The Bearcats stood around the board yelling and cheering about their 14-3 upset of the 20th-ranked Nittany Lions Saturday in college football.

Quarterback Troy Bodine led the Bearcats to two touchdowns 2:16 apart in the second quarter after a pair of fumble recoveries.

The upset, following a 44-6 defeat by Nebraska Aug. 29, represented the first time Joe Paterno had lost his first two games of a season since he became Penn State head coach 17 years ago.

"Coach Brown's offense can move the ball against anybody in the nation," Bodine said jubilantly after the game.

"Our philosophy is to take what the defense gives us and that's what we did. It was just a case of hitting the open receiver," he said.

Friday night, Paterno seemed to have a premonition of Saturday's outcome.

"We're not a very good football team right now," he said. "We can't seem to concentrate. We can't put four plays together in a row without a mistake."

Paterno didn't appear for his customary post-game radio interview.

Cincinnati, which gained 207 yards in the first half to 57 for the three-touchdown favorite Nittany Lions, took a 7-0 lead with 13:32 left in the second quarter on an 11-yard pass from Bodine to split end Bill Booze.

The Bearcats, under new head Coach Watson Brown, struck again with 11:16 remaining in the half on an 8-yard touchdown run by Don Goodman to make it 14-0.

Penn State's only score came in the third period on a 39-yard field goal by Nick Gancitano after a drive stalled at the Cincinnati 22.

Ohio State ran its halftime margin to four points on Rich Spangler's 29-yard field goal with 1:12 to play in the first half.

Irish Crush Purdue, 52-6

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Tailback Greg Bell ran for three touchdowns and caught one of quarterback Blair Kiel's two scoring passes Saturday as No.5-ranked Notre Dame crushed Purdue 52-6 in their season-opening college football game.

It was the most points scored by the Irish since a 69-14 victory over Georgia Tech in 1977 and the worst defeat of a Purdue team since a 48-0 loss to Notre Dame in 1970.

Bell, a 6-foot, 210-pound junior who played in only two games and scored one touchdown last year, staked the Irish to the lead on their first possession with a 9-yard touchdown reception from Kiel.

The Boilermakers, held to just one first down in the opening period, were unable to stop Bell's short power runs. An 18-yard pass from Kiel to Mike Favorite and consecutive runs of 9, 5 and 8 yards by Bell put the Irish at the Purdue 1-yard line, and Bell leaped over the line on the next play for his second touchdown with 4:18 left in the first quarter.

Notre Dame got the ball back less than two minutes later on a Purdue fumble, and five plays after that, Mike Johnston's 31-yard field goal as time ran out gave the Irish a 17-0 lead.

The Boilermakers held the Irish in check most of the second quarter, but Bell's third touchdown, a 2-yard run just 1:42 before halftime, capped a nine-play drive from midfield after Greg Dingens intercepted a pass by Purdue's Scott Campbell.

Bats Come Alive As Jays Down A's

TORONTO (AP) — There was nothing about his outing that pleased Dave Stieb, but for a change the Toronto right-hander was supported by some offense from his teammates and he came away smiling about the outcome.

After a brilliant first half, Stieb has struggled in the second and been victimized on several occasions by the Blue Jays' lack of productivity. On Saturday, he was given seven runs and it was enough to put down the Oakland A's 7-5 and improve his record to 15-11.

"One of the few times I get some runs and I pitch terribly," said Stieb. "Just once I'd like to put together a good outing with some offense.

"I just had nothing today," he added. "Mentally, I think I was down. I wasn't showing it, but I knew in the back of my mind I didn't have much to work with. I've done it in the past, it just seemed like today it was extremely difficult.

Dave Collins produced the winning run when he slapped a run-scoring single in the seventh inning to break a 5-5 tie.

"I was looking fastball and I got one," said Collins. "I just happened to get it."

Lloyd Moseby doubled with two out in the seventh and Collins followed with his single off Tom Underwood, 8-7, the third Oakland pitcher. The Jays added a run in the eighth when Tony Fernandez walked, moved to third on Damaso Garcia's single and scored on Rance Mulliniks's sacrifice fly.

Stieb went seven innings, striking out two and walking two before giving way to left-hander Dave Geisel. Randy Moffitt finished up to earn his 10th save.

The victory tied Toronto's team record for most victories in a season, 78, set last year when the club finished tied for last place in the AL East.

Jesse Barfield's two-run homer in the first, his 22nd, gave Toronto a 2-0 lead. But Oakland scored four in the third capped by a two-run homer by Dwayne Murphy, his 16th.

The Blue Jays tied it in the fifth on a run-scoring single by Rance Mulliniks and an RBI grounder by Cliff Johnson.

Toronto took a 5-4 lead in the sixth on Davey Lopes' throwing error on an attempted double play ball that allowed Collins to score. Mike Davis' seventh homer of the season in the seventh tied it at 5-5.

Cleveland.....8

CLEVELAND (AP) — Richard Barnes is used to being a starting pitcher, but his meal ticket to staying in the big leagues may be as a reliever.

"I enjoy starting but don't get me wrong, I'll do anything it takes for me to play at this level," Barnes, a 24-year-old left-hander said after gaining his first major-league victory with 6 1-3 innings of solid relief pitching in Cleveland's 8-6 triumph over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

"Mentally, it's time because I've been in Triple A ball since 1979. I just have to prove I'm ready physically," said Barnes, who surrendered only one run on six hits.

Barnes was recalled from Cleveland's top minor league club, the Charleston Charlies, earlier this week. He spent part of 1982 with the Chicago White Sox, dropping his only two decisions and picking up a save.

Carl Yastrzemski, who homered, doubled and singled for Boston, said Barnes "did well, especially against our right-handers. He threw a good, slow curve and turned the ball over."

Boston took a 2-0 lead in the first on Jim Rice's 35th home run, but Cleveland tied the game in their half as Harrah led off with his eighth homer and Gorman Thomas later hit a sacrifice fly.

Rice's sacrifice fly and a two-run homer by Carl Yastrzemski gave Boston a 5-2 lead in the third. It was Yastrzemski's 10th homer and the 452nd of his career.

But the Indians scored four runs in their half. Pat Tabler had a two-run homer, his fifth, then Harrah lined a bases-loaded single for two more.

Yastrzemski's double in the fourth tied the game, but in the sixth, Harrah drew a walk from reliever Doug Bird, 1-4, took third on Bake McBride's single and scored when right-fielder Rick Miller misplayed the ball for an error.

Minnesota 6
Kansas City.....3

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — For Tim Teufel, who had three hits Saturday as the Minnesota Twins topped the Kansas City Royals, 6-3, it's nice to make a contributions in the big leagues.

Teufel, recalled from Toledo on Sept. 4, doubled twice, singled, scored two runs and set up the eighth-inning insurance run with a sacrifice bunt to raise his batting average to .400 (8-for-20, including four doubles). "This was my finest game so far," he said. "It feels good to make plays and contribute.

"I was nervous when I first came up. Right now I feel comfortable and am playing like I did at Toledo."

Gary Ward, meanwhile, chipped in with four hits ain four at-bats. Since returning to the line-up on Monday after missing five games with a broken nose, Ward has nine hits in 20 at-bats and says, "I got to get back into the swing of things."

His new protective helmet, with double earflaps and a clear plastic face mask covering from his chin to just below his nose from side to side, will be worn "for the rest of my playing career."

Frank White's RBI double in the made it 1-1 in the top of the third, but Teufel led off the bottom of the inning with a single and eventually scored on Kent Hrbek's sacrifice fly to center, making the score 2-1.

Laudner's home run increased the Twins' lead to 3-1 in the fourth and Hatcher's second RBI single, off loser Eric Rasmussen, 2-5, in the fifth made it 4-1.

After the Royals closed to 4-3 with two seventh-inning runs on Motley's RBI triple and Slaught's RBI single, the Twins put the game away with Gary Ward's two-run single in the eighth.

Holmes Takes New Role In Boxing Ring

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Larry Holmes, who recently taped an appearance in the TV series "The Fall Guy," had another part to play on television Saturday night.

The 33-year-old Holmes was cast in his real-life role of World Boxing Council heavyweight champion, while 25-year-old Scott Frank was expected to play the "fall guy."

Holmes was an overwhelming favorite to successfully defend the WBC title for the 16th time in a scheduled 12-round fight in a 5,000-seat tent adjacent to Harrah's Marina Hotel and Casino.

NBA was to telecast the bout live from 9-11 p.m. EDT with the main event expected to start at 10 p.m.

Frank, the heavyweight champion of New Jersey, is unbeaten but his record is undistinguished. He did fight a 10-round draw with heavyweight contender Renaldo Snipes, but most of his opponents have been of the club-fighter variety. His record is 20-0-1 with 14 knockouts.

The challenger from Brookline, N.J., has been known to cut in fights. In fact, he got cut preparing for this fight and had stitches removed from a cut under his chin eight days ago.

Frank will earn $350,000 for his shot at glory.

Holmes, who already has signed to fight Marvis Frazier for $3.1 million on Nov. 25, was getting $1.5 million for this match, his third defense of the year. He went 12 rounds to beat Lucien Rodriguez in a one-sided decision on Mar. 27 at Scranton, Pa., and he scored a 12-round split decision over Tim Witherspoon on May 20 in Las Vegas, Nev.

The Witherspoon victory was the unbeaten Holmes' 43rd. He has scored 30 knockouts, but beginning with a 15-round decision over Randy "Tex" Cobb last Nov. 26 in Houston, the champion has gone the distance three straight fights.

Rogers' TD Boosts Maryland

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Maryland tight end Bill Rogers said he was only looking for a clutch fourth quarter first down but he wound up with a 43-yard touchdown that lifted the 17th-ranked Terrapins to a 21-14 college football victory over Vanderbilt Saturday afternoon.

"We were running a read screen ... Vanderbilt was blitzing their linebackers," Rogers said of the short pass he caught from quarterback Norman "Boomer" Esiason with 2:24 left in the regionally televised contest.

"Boomer made an excellent read and threw the dump pass to me. It was a crucial time for me to get the ball up field, and fortunately I was able to shake the linebackers," Rogers said.

Rogers took the short toss from Esiason, escaped two Vandy tacklers at the 40 yard line and rambled the remaining distance to the end zone to allow the Atlantic Coast Conference Terps to get their season off on a winning note.

The Southeastern Conference Commodores, also playing their first game of 1983, appeared to have the game under control with a second-and-goal situation at the Maryland 12 yard line only moments earlier.

Esiason and the Terps covered the 94 yards in just four plays with Esiason hitting wide receiver Greg Hill for a 47-yard gain on the drive's first play. The senior quarterback hit 17 of 31 passes for 269 yards with no interceptions.

After the touchdown, Page drove the Commodores to the Maryland 30, but his fourth down pass was intercepted in the end zone by Maryland's Clarence Baldwin.

The Terps tied the game in the fourth quarter on a 5-yard run by

Point Championship Measures Success

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip says "the measure of a season's success in Grand National stock car auto racing is when it's all over and you're the champion. That's how you judge. And I'm confident that we can achieve that before the season ends.

For the moment, Waltrip is 56 points behind Bobby Allison in his bid for a third consecutive Winston Cup point championship, but he has a chance to make up some ground in Sunday's Wrangler-Sanforset 400 at Fairgrounds Raceway.

Waltrip will start on the pole after hitting a fast lap of 93.069 mph Friday in his Chevrolet. It was well below his track record of 93.695 mph but well ahead of anybody else in the field.

Behind Waltrip were Terry Labonte at 92.312 mph in a Chevrolet and Geoff Bodine at 92.225 mph in a Pontiac. No one else in the field broke 92 mph.

Allison, the defending champion in the Wrangler 400 and winner of three of the last four fall races on the local .542-mile track, was sixth at 91.735 mph in a Buick.

"I really thought we had a shot at Darrell (for the pole)," Allison said. "We had picked up from practice, but we didn't make it."

Allison said Labonte "ran faster than I thought, but so did Darrell. I watched him, and it didn't look like he was running that fast, but he was just so smooth. He didn't slip once, got into the throttle easy."

Fleet power.

Tony Baker and Earnest Byner ran for almost 1,600 yards last year. This year, they're back with a crew of fleet, talented runners right behind them.

But the big, big story is the powerful offensive line averaging over 270 pounds and anchored by the third strongest man in the world... Terry Long.

All together, they add up to fleet power in an exciting ground game that compliments the passing air attack out of the "I" formation. A leading pre-season magazine described the Pirate fleet as "powerful".

Hall's Homers Power Cubs Past Cards, 8-5

CHICAGO (AP) — Mel Hall, whose two home runs paced the Chicago Cubs to an 8-5 win over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday, insists that he tries not to think about winning the National League Rookie of the Year award.

"I think about it, but I can't worry about it," said Hall. "If I get it, fine, if I don't..."

But Cardinal manager Whitey Herzog, after watching Hall drop his team a notch back in the National League East pennat race. was a convert.

"He'd get my vote," said Herzog who then hedged and said Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets was also a good candidate.

"If I had to pick one of them, I know who I'd pick. But I'm not telling you guys," he told a group of reporters.

Hall's second homer, his 16th of the year, came in the seventh inning and scored Bill Buckner, who had singled, to snap a 5-5 tie.

"You can't explain why you do so well, it's just something that is happening," said Hall, who had four hits, four RBIs, and scored three runs in the game. "You have days when you see every ball and you hit well. Everything I hit was fastballs."

Chicago Manager Charlie Fox had nothing but praise for his young center fielder.

"He's an outstanding young man," Fox said. "He has an outstanding future ahead of him. He's my kind of player — a pro who never complains."

Fox went further and said that since Hall was moved from the leadoff spot to number three in the batting order he's developed more confidence.

Chicago opened the scoring in the first inning when Hall doubled home Ryne Sandberg.

But the Cards scored one in the second on a solo homer by Ken Oberkfell, his third. And they got three more in the third on a homer by Mike Ramsey, his first of the season, and RBI doubles by Willie McGee and George Hendrick.

Hall's first homer made it 4-2 in the third, but the Cards extended the lead to 5-2 in the fifth on a triple by Ozzie Smith and a single by McGee.

The Cubs tied it in the sixth. One run scored on Ron Cey's fielder's choice, then Thad Bosley had a pinch-hit single that tied it.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Houston Astros Manager Bob Lillis' search for a fourth-starter may have ended at Candlestick Park Saturday.

Jeff Heathcock, a 23-year-old right-hander who was a non-roster pitcher in the spring, fired 7 1-3 innings of one-hit relief and posted his first major-league victory, 5-3 over the San Francisco Giants.

The Giants had scored twice off starter Bob Knepper in the second, cutting the Astros lead to 32, and had two runners on base with two outs when Heathcock took over.

Heathcock, working his second major league game, retired 22 of the 25 batters he faced and the only hit off him was Joel Youngblood's infield single in the sixth. He struck out three and walked one amd the only run he allowed came in the eighth on a walk to Dan Gladden, who stole second and came all the way around when catcher John Mizerock's throw sailed into centerfield.

"We've been looking for a fourth starter, and Jeff probably will get a chance Friday," Lillis said. "He's one of our top prospects, but I didn't expect the one-hitter.

Emory's Aerials Lead Rose By Bears

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

HOLLYWOOD — Battle Emory opened up the airways for a stymied Rose High School offense Friday night and helped the Rampants take a 28-14 victory over previously unbeaten New Bern in a 4-A non-conference battle.

When the Rampants found their ground game thrown for a loss in the early going of the contest, Emory took to the air, eventually completing eight of 16 passes for 167 yards, one of them for a touchdown. His other passes helped set up two other scores, two of them by Cyrus Blackwell on runs of three yards each.

The TD pass was a 49-yarder to Tyrone Smith, while Reggie Smith made the running game look respectable before it was over with a 92-yard jaunt down the sidelines for the final touchdown of the evening.

The Bears then got into the scoring act, with Thomas Carr scoring on a 16-yard run, and Anthony Grist crashing over from three yards away.

Both kickers had perfect nights: Brian Bridges going four-for-four for Rose, and Andy Huryn hitting both of his tries for the Bears.

"I thought we played well for about three quarters tonight," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "The offense didn't play well in the first period and the defense didn't play well in the fourth.

"But I was especially pleased with the play of the quarterbacks and the receivers. Emory had a real good night, something we had to have to win tonight."

Vincent, whose Rampants are now 2-0 on the young year, felt that the turnaround from having to play on Monday to playing again on Friday left the Rampants leg weary both early and late.

But he offered no excuses — and was angered — by the number of penalties his team collected. "There's no excuse for that," he said. "We just had too many (10 for 132 yards). I can understand being aggressive, but we can't have personal fouls. That's unnessary."

New Bern also fell afoul of the penalty flag, drawing 12 for a total of 129 yards. One of those penalties negated an early touchdown by the Bears.

The big New Bern defense shut down the Rose rushing game throughout most of the game. Rose finished with 167 yards rushing, but 143 of that came in the final period — 92 of that on Smith's run early in the period.

Neither team offered a threat until late in the first period when the Bears got the ball at their own 42 and quickly ripped off 12 yards on an option play to the Rose 46. But after reaching the 27, a penalty pushed them back and Roswell Streeter then intercepted Chris Atkins in the end zone on the next play.

With under a minute left in the period, New Bern got it back on a punt at the Rose 44 and drove down to the 24 before a penalty again hurt, and a 44-yard field goal came up short.

It was then that Emory went to the air, hitting Tyrone Smith for 33 yards to the Bear 47. Then, facing fourth and three at the 40, Emory hit Streeter for a first down at the 34. Another pass to Streeter netted eight yards, but it took another 12-yarder between the two on fourth and two to get a first down at the 14.

Blackwell got the first good yardage rushing, gaining 11 on the next play, then he cracked over left tackle for the final three on the following down. Bridges' kick was good and Rose led, 7-0 with 5:57 left in the half.

Rose quickly scored again, after forcing a punt to the Bear 49. On the first play, Emory threw the bomb to Smith, and Rose was suddenly up 14-0 with 3:06 left.

Rose then escaped the first half unscored on after a 61-yard pass play was called back. Quarterback Chris Atkins actually fumbled the ball as he made an errant pitch to Darryl Marshall, who picked it up and threw it to Carr, who went 61 yards for the apparent score. But it was called back due to an ineligible receiver being downfield on the play.

The Rampants took their first possession of the second half in for their third score. Taking over at the 27 after the kickoff, the Rampants gained a quick 34 on another Emory to Smith aerial. A 15-yard pass interference penalty moved it onward to the Bear 24, and two plays netted a first down at the 14. Blackwell got nine and Reggie Smith added two more for a first and goal at the three, with Blackwell again using left tackle for the touchdown.

With 8:59 to go in the third, Rose had stretched the lead to 21-0.

New Bern appeared to finally get its offense in gear again, driving from the 26 to the Rose 14, twice helped along by 15-yard penalties for personal fouls. But, on the first play of the final period, Grist fumbled and Marc Gatlin recovered for Rose on the eight.

After one play gained nothing, quarterback Todd Martin seemed to be ready to pitch but found no one there, then tossed to Reggie Smith, going to the left side. Smith quickly turned the corner and was off to the races, going almost untouched down the sideline on his 92-yard touchdown romp.

That made it 28-0 with 10:44 to go.

New Bern finally got it into the end zone on its next series. From the 33 after the kickoff, the Bears marched, overcoming a 15-yard penalty for a clip with a 16 and a 13-yard pass from Atkins to Carnell Wallace. Those were followed by a nine-yard burst by Grist and another of 12 yards, with a personal foul penalty tacked onto the end of the second run.

With the ball on the 16, Carr took an option toss around the right side for the final yardage and with 8:00 left, the Bears were on the board, although trailing 28-7.

New Bern's next drive, of 76 yards, also resulted in a score. Atkins hit Wallace for 47 yards on the first play after the punt, with only Streeter saving the touchdown by catching Wallace at the Rose 29. A pass interference penalty on the next down moved it to the 14, and five plays later, Grist pushed in from two yards out with 3:53 left.

Rose then controlled the ball, holding onto an onside kick attempt for the second straight time, running out the clock and moving to within the shadow of the goal posts again.

"They shut down our rushing game, but they gave up the passing game," Vincent said. "They tried to cover our receivers man-to-man, and that's a tough assignment.

"Our kicking game a very much improved tonight, too," Vincent said, after having watched near disaster in the Jacksonville game because of poor snaps.

The win kept the Rampants in the unbeaten column and sends them up against strong Eastern Wayne this Friday in a road contest.

Rams, Hawks Play To Tie

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central scored in the third period to knot North Lenoir and then held off a late Hawk drive inside the five yard line to preserve a 6-6 tie Friday night.

North Lenoir scored first, getting the ball on a fumble at the Hawk 40. Linebacker Anthony Thompson then sat out two plays with an injury, and North Lenoir broke off two big plays in the interim. Chris Wooten raced 20 yards on one play, then ran 38 yards to the end zone on the second, putting the Hawks into a 6-0 lead.

Thompson returned to the game, however, and eventually tied it up for the Rams, going in from two yards out to climax a long drive. It stayed a 6-6 after that.

The Hawks, however, came close to winning it in the fourth, driving to the three before turning the ball over on downs.

Greene Central lost a touchdown on a holding penalty, and had several other drives stalled by penalties.

"We were our own worst enemy," Coach Spence Grantham said. "We moved the football, but we kept hurting ourselves. Every one of the penalties against us came against the offense."

Thompson paced the Rams on both offense and defense. He rushed 25 times for 148 yards and was credited with nine tackles and seven assists on defense.

Wooten led North Lenoir's offense with 139 yards on 29 carries.

Knights Bow In Openers

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Richmond Christian Academy gained a 4-1 victory over Greenville Christian Friday in the opening round of the Lynchburg Invitational Soccer Tournament. The match was the official season-opener for the Knights.

That match was followed by a 6-1 loss to Lynchburg in the second game of the day.

In the opener, Richmond gained a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Bill Blevins, Scott Hall and Ron Custalow. Greenville Christian came back early in the second half with its only goal, by Chris Harris, but Richmond countered that on a goal by Paul Lindhurst for the final 4-1 margin.

In the second match, Lynchburg rolled up a 5-0 lead in the first half as Andrew Bell scored twice. Brian Freerkson, Jim Mendosa and David Worthington each scored single goals.

The lone GCA tally came in the second half as Tom Warburton scored on an assist by Joseph Martin. Lynchburg closed out the scoring with a goal by Freerkson.

Conley Hands Panthers 3rd Shutout

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — For the youthful North Pitt Panthers, it was another of those nights they'd rather forget. But for the Vikings of D.H. Conley, the victory over their cross-county rivals was long-awaited.

David Daniels returned punts for 87- and 43-yard touchdowns to lead D.H. Conley to a 20-0 shutout over North Pitt Friday. A one-yard run by quarterback Joel Cox capped a 65-yard, third quarter drive for the Vikings' other touchdown.

The win was the first by Conley in the annual matchup since 1979 and lifted the Vikings record to 2-1. North Pitt slides to 0-3 on the season with the loss.

"This is only the second time in the school's history that at this point of the year we've been over .500," said Conley coach Gerald Garner. "We still have a long way to go.

"We lack maturity, but a win on the road will help us mature."

Leander Maye led the Vikings with 74 yards on nine carries, with Donald Blackwell adding 53 on 10 rushes. Ricky Hines carried the ball five times for 64 yards for North Pitt, while Michael Taylor added 46 yards on 10 carries.

Panther quarterback Gentry Sneed connected on eight of 22 attempts for 74 yards, while Conley gained seven on its lone completion.

North Pitt's Alvin Grimes gave the Panthers a bright start, returning the opening kickoff to the Vikings' 38-yard line. But the Panthers failed to gain a first down on three running plays, and Sneed's first pass of the game was knocked down by John Brown to end the rally.

Conley lost yardage on its first possession, and the Panthers took over at the Viking 41. Again North Pitt failed to sustain a drive, and the end result of the punt proved devastating.

Timmy Brown lofted the kick to Daniels on the Conley 13-yard line, and the senior split end zipped through the coverage for a 6-0 Viking lead with 6:15 remaining in the first period. Magnus Westerberg kicked the extra point for a 7-0 spread.

Grimes returned Conley's kickoff 24 yards to the Panther 37, and three plays later Michael Taylor broke a 34-yard run for a first down at the Conley 17. Taylor was stopped in the backfield for a three-yard loss on the next play, but after an incompete pass Ricky Hines ran for eight yards.

The Panthers took too much time to set up their fourth-and-five play at the Vikings' 12, and a 35-yard field goal attempt by Tony Ross fell short for the turnover.

North Pitt rolled up 64 yards rushing in the first half compared to 34 for the Vikings, but the early punt return haunted the Panthers all night.

Daniels returned the opening kickoff of the second half to the Viking 35. Leander Maye ran for six yards on first down, then tacked on 32 yards on the next play to move the ball to North Pitt's 27-yard line.

Maye carried the ball for nine yards, and a penalty against the Panthers put the ball on the seven. Maye rushed for six more yards before Cox carried it over from one yard out.

Grimes' 34-yard kickoff return, a 13-yard run by Hines and a 14-yard effort by Keith Clark moved the Panthers to the Conley 30-yard line. A 15-yard penalty on a pass attempt and two more missed passes turned the ball over with 6:14 remaining in the period.

"The opening kickoff when they brought it back inside our territory had us in a state of shock. We were fortunate to stop them and go on to win."

North Pitt has failed to score in its first three outings, but Coach B.T. Chappell thinks his young squad has improved since its first outing.

"The biggest factor was our lack of ability to run the ball," Chappell said. "We just had a general breakdown of blocking by our backs. They're not blocking for each other; they're not containing on pass plays. That might be attributed to a little size difference — they're around 150 pounds trying to block people who are 190 to 200 pounds.

"Our execution will have to improve. They had the two kick returns for touchdowns, and in the second half they had a drive with the aid of penalties. Otherwise, the score should have been 0-0.

"We're young; of the 28 players we had dressed tonight, 18 had never played a a game for us before this year. They're just inexperienced; we hope they'll stick with us."

Conley hosts Farmville Central this Friday, while North Pitt has an open date before hosting Greene Central September 23.

Bertie Dumps Jaguars, 20-3

FARMVILLE — Curt White rushed for 137 yards and Ken Gilliam scored the eventual winning touchdown on a three-yard run in the first quarter to lead Bertie Senior to a 20-3 victory over Farmville Central Friday.

Bertie rolled up 257 yards on the ground, but a fumble at the Jaguars' 30-yard line set up the first touchdown of the night.

Steve Hayes' 11-yard run capped a 42-yard drive by the Falcons in the fourth quarter.

Farmville Central, now 0-2 on the season, managed just 46 yards rushing. Quarterback Bobby Evans connected on five out of eight passes for 66 yards for the Jaguars.

Ayden-Grifton Rolls Over Richlands, 16-6

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton scored touchdowns in each of the first two periods and went on to take a 16-6 victory over 2-A Richlands in the Chargers' home opener Friday night.

The victory enabled the Chargers to even their record at 1-1 on the season. Richlands is now 0-2.

Mike Dixon got the Chargers on the scoreboard in the closing seconds of the first period, scoring from two yards out. His touchdown climaxed a 74 yard drive following a punt. Billy Wiggins passed 13 yards to Malcolm Worthington on the key play of the drive, which ended with just 13 seconds left in the period.

Early in the second quarter, Ayden-Grifton got it back when Jackie Braxton recovered a Richlands fumble at the Charger 48. Worthington picked up 12 yards along the way before Wiggins hit Maurice Berry on a post pattern for the final 23 yards. Kelvin Harris ran over the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead that held the rest of the half.

Richland's only score came in the final period on a two-yard run by Greg Murrill. Two plays earlier, Mark Shivars had run ten yards to the 24, then fumbled the ball, which rolled on to the two before Richlands recovered. The score ended a 70-yard drive.

The final score was a safety for the Chargers, coming with 2:25 left. Charles Mitchell blocked a punt by Eddie Futrell, who went back and recovered the ball in the end zone, only to have Mitchell haul him down there.

Charger coach Dixon Sauls praised Wiggins, who took over the quarterback position after Doug Coley was injured in last week's opener with Roanoke. "He did an admirable job," Sauls said.

Worthington led the offense, rushing 14 times for 81 yards, while Harris had 16 carries for 79 yards. Mitchel was cited for his defensive play. Not only did he block one punt, but he deflected another.

Nettles Proving Folks Wrong On His Play

By The Associated Press

At the age of 39, Graig Nettles feels like a born-again ballplayer.

"I think a lot of people didn't even expect me to play this year," says the veteran New York Yankee third baseman. "They expected me to fold when we got to the dog days. I think it's fun to prove people wrong."

Continuing to make his point emphatically, Nettles socked three hits, including a game-winning, two-run homer, to lead the Yankees to a crucial 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"I've been in his corner since spring training when they said he was through," said Yankee Manager Billy Martin. "That guy's been getting big hits for us."

The victory at Yankee Stadium came in the opener of a four-game series and trimmed Baltimore's lead in the American League East to four games over the second-place Yankees.

In other AL action, Chicago blasted California 11-0, Milwaukee edged Detroit 2-1 in the opener of a doubleheader before losing the second game 2-1, Oakland beat Toronto 7-5, Boston turned back Cleveland 6-4, Minnesota edged Kansas City 7-6 in 10 innings and Seattle stopped Texas 6-4.

Ron Guidry, 18-8, allowed seven hits while striking out five and walking two in his 17th complete game of the season for the Yankees.

The Orioles had tied the game 3-3 in the eighth on Gary Roenicke's two-run homer. But then Nettles, who had earlier slugged two doubles, belted his 19th homer. The blow came off Scott McGregor, 17-6.

White Sox 11, Angels 0

In Chicago, Britt Burns hurled a masterful one-hitter and Carlton Fisk, Tom Paciorek and Greg Luzinski hit successive homers in the first inning to lead the rampaging White Sox over California.

Burns, 9-9, retired the first 20 batters before Mike Brown spoiled his bid for a perfect game with a line single to center with two outs in the seventh inning.

The victory was the fifth straight for the White Sox, who reduced their magic number to seven for winning the AL West after Kansas City lost to Minnesota.

Brewers 2-1, Tigers 1-2

In Milwaukee, Cecil Cooper blasted a two-run homer and Moose Haas and Pete Ladd combined on a six-hitter as the Brewers beat Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader. It was the first appearance for Haas, 13-3, since Aug. 26, when he was rested because of a tired arm.

Detroit won the second game with an unearned run in the eighth when right fielder Charlie Moore misplayed Lou Whitaker's long fly ball. With the nightcap tied 1-1 in the eighth inning, Chet Lemon and Wayne Krenchicki singled off Brewer reliever Jim Slaton, 12-6. Lemon scored when Moore appeared to lose Whitaker's fly in the lights.

A's 7, Blue Jays 5

In Toronto, Mike Heath's RBI single capped a three-run Oakland rally in the eighth as the A's beat the Blue Jays.

Losing 5-4, the A's tied the game on Dan Meyer's RBI double. One out later, Heath singled to score the tie-breaking run and chase Jim Clancy, 9-15. Jim Acker then relieved for the Blue Jays and gave up a run-scoring double to Don Hill that gave Oakland its final cushion.

Red Sox 6, Indians 4

In Cleveland, Dave Stapleton drove in four runs with a homer and single, and Dwight Evans homered and scored three runs as Boston defeated the Indians.

John Tudor surrendered all four Cleveland runs on seven hits over the first six innings, before Bob Stanley blanked the Indians on three hits over the final three innings for his 28th save.

Neal Heaton, 10-5, was the loser.

Twins 7, Royals 6

In Minneapolis, Kent Hrbek led off the 10th inning with his second home run of the game to lead the Twins over Kansas City. Hrbek lined a pitch from loser Mike Armstrong, 7-7, for his 14th homer.

Said Twins Manager Billy Gardner of Hrbek: "He's got tremendous home-run power."

Mariners 6, Rangers 4

In Seattle, RBI doubles by Darnell Coles and Jamie Nelson keyed a four-run fourth that led the Mariners over Texas. With Seattle down 4-2, Pat Putnam doubled in the Seattle fourth and scored on Coles' two-base hit. Nelson's double then scored Coles to tie the game.

Harold Reynolds walked and Nelson and Reynolds moved up on a wild pitch by Mike Smithson, 8-14. Spike Owen's single scored Nelson to put Seattle ahead 5-4, and Phil Bradley's singled to score Reynolds.

Pryor KOs Arguello In Tenth Round

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — In this summer of sequels, Pryor-Arguello II lived up to its billing: a ring war as fierce as last year's Fight of the Year.

Superman and the Jedi returned with plenty of action for movie buffs, but fight fans reveled Friday night in Aaron Pryor's stunning show of power and speed and Alexis Arguello's gutsy finale.

Pryor, who stopped Arguello in 14 rounds in Miami last Nov. 12, again thwarted the popular Nicaraguan's quest for an unprecedented fourth title in their World Boxing Association junior welterweight championship clash.

Pryor knocked Arguello down 40 seconds into the fight, floored him in the fourth round and finally sent him into retirement with a torrent of blows in the 10th round of the scheduled 15-rounder.

Nine consecutive shots to the head, bruising lefts and rights climaxed by a crushing right to the chin, left Arguello thinking about death. He could have gotten up, but instead let referee Richard Steele count him out at 1:48 of the round.

"I was really hurt," said Arguello, who sat near the ropes with his arms draped around his knees and tears in his swollen eyes during the final count. "I don't want to risk my life, y'know. I got nothing I could do in the ring. I say 'that's it. I did my best.'"

Steele said he saw the end in the 31-year-old Arguello's face.

"He was just looking at me...telling me that he had enough with his eyes and his head," Steele said. "He was in shape enough to get up, but he knew that he couldn't go any further. If he got up I wouldn't have let him go on. I knew that he felt he was a beaten fighter."

Bobbing and weaving, the 27-year-old Pryor fired more punches in bunches in the second round before Arguello finally countered with a right that jolted Pryor. In the third, Arguello showed flashes of the man who was one of the dominant boxers of the 1970s, the former featherweight, super featherweight and lightweight champion who leaves the sport with a 78-6 record and 63 KOs.

But in the fourth, Pryor again set a devastating pace, with rapid-fire lefts and rights.

"My heart was there, my condition was there, my blood was there, but he was stronger than I am," Arguello said, making no excuses.

"When I went down the second time, I said to myself, 'What happened?'" Arguello said. "Then the next round, when I hit him with a couple of good shots, I realized that guy is really strong."

Arguello managed to recover enough to dominate the fifth through the eighth rounds, losing a point in the eighth for low shots.

"Although my body was in real good shape, I did feel those body shots," Pryor admitted.

Arguello began backing up in the 10th until Pryor had him against the ropes and then pummeled him non-stop. Videotape replays showed nine clean punches, lefts and rights from all angles, landing on Arguello's forehead, cheek and chin.

"I was trying to do something different (winning a fourth title) but I couldn't," Arguello said. "Boxing has been good to me."

Taking The Count

Bullets Rip Belhaven

JAMESVILLE — The Jamesville Bullets dominated play and shot down Belhaven Friday night in a non-conference battle between the two Tobacco Belt foes, 24-8.

The win was the first in two outings for the Bullets, while Belhaven was going down to defeat for the second time this year in as many games.

Jamesville went into the lead in the first period, scoring on a six-yard pass from Richie Ange to Tracy Peele. Matthew Moore then carried in the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

After receiving a punt in the second period, Jamesville marched again, this time with Carlton Rodgers scoring from 21 yards away. The PAT try failed, leaving the Bullets in a 14-0 lead that held through halftime.

The Bullets added a safety in the third period when an errant pitch out rolled into the end zone where Richard Whitley recovered for Belhaven, but was trapped there by a host of Jamesville tacklers. That upped it to 16-0.

Matthew Moore closed out the Jamesville scoring in the final period after Ange had intercepted a Belhaven pass deep in Bullet territory. Moore galloped 48 yards for the touchdown, then had enough left to make it into the end zone for the conversion.

Belhaven's only score came late in the game when William Freeman picked up a Jamesville fumble at the Bullet 37 and returned it all the way. Timmy Satchel added the PAT.

Jamesville returns to action on Friday, hosting 3-A Northwest Halifax.

Perquimans Tops Indians By 38-2

CHOCOWINITY — Lynwood Parker scored two touchdowns and led Perquimans County to a 38-2 victory over 1-A Chocowinity Friday night.

The Indians were unable to move the ball against their opponent, picking up only 104 total yards during the evening. Perquimans, in contrast, rolled up 295 yards.

Parker scored his first touchdown early in the game, after Perquimans received the opening kickoff. He went in from nine yards out with 9:10 showing to give his team an 8-0 lead.

Later in the period, after Perquimans had recovered an Indian fumble deep in Chocowinity territory, Richard Thach scored on a six-yard run, upping the lead to 14-0.

Chocowinity's only score came in the closing minute of the quarter when a host of defenders broke through to block a Perquimans punt, which rolled out of the end zone for a safety.

Parker came back with a second touchdown in the second period, scoring from 16 yards out. That upped the lead to 22-2 at halftime.

Perquimans added two more in the third period. Roy Hall scored on a 30-yard pass from Peton Reid, and Vincent Foster went in from three yards out to cap the scoring.

The loss dropped Chocowinity to 0-2 on the season. The Tribe will play host to Tobacco Belt rival Mattamuskeet on Friday.

Tigers Claw Vikings, 26-6

WILLIAMSTON — James Ward connected on a 69-yard pass to Tyrone Rhodes in the first quarter and ran 11-yards for another touchdown in the second to lead Williamston to a 26-6 victory over Plymouth Friday.

The Tigers drove 81 yards after a punt before Ward kept the ball to put them ahead 12-0 in the second quarter.

But the Tigers rallied for an 87-yard drive in the third quarter with Al Willingham moving the ball 53 yards on six carries before James Ward scored from six yards out.

Willingham finished the game with 115 yards on 15 carries, while James Ward connected on five out of nine passes for 135 yards. Donald Lyle led Plymouth with 51 yards on five carries.

Williamston, now 3-0 on the season, travels to Ahoskie next week.

Martina Rips Shriver To Gain Open Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd figured all the pressure in the United States Open Tennis women's championship match rested on the shoulders of Martina Navratilova.

"I've won the Open six times," reasoned Lloyd. "Martina's never won it. Nerves might enter into it."

Navratilova and Lloyd set up Saturday's dream match of the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds for the Open title with convincing straight-set victories Friday. Navratilova defeated her doubles partner, Pam Shriver, 6-2, 6-1, and Lloyd eliminated Jo Durie of Britain 6-4, 6-4.

In Saturday's men's semifinals, defending champion and third seed Jimmy Connors, seeking a landmark 100th career singles title, faced No. 16 Bill Scanlon, and No. 2 Ivan Lendl, who had not dropped a single set in the tournament, went against No. 9 Jimmy Arias.

Navratilova, beaten only once this year, continued her systematic destruction of opponents. She needed just 55 minutes to finish Shriver, continuing her string of straight-set victories and matches that lasted less than one hour.

Lloyd had a tougher path to the championship match than Navratilova. Although she, too, had not lost a set, she experienced more difficulty with opponents. Against Durie, she was up 6-4, 5-1 and then dropped three straight games before finishing off the match.

"It's harder every year mentally," Lloyd said. "The girls are playing a lot better. I don't have a lot of love matches to the finals like I used to."

Going into today's confrontation, Lloyd held a 30-23 career edge over Navratilova, but much of that margin was established early in Martina's career when she was less of a force in women's tennis. Navratilova had won their last five meetings, eight of the last nine and 11 of the last 14 since 1981.

Their rivalry has built since their first meeting in 1973 when Navratilova was a 17-year-old just beginning her pro career and Lloyd was emerging as the top woman's player on the circuit. Despite all the matches she's played since then, Martina remembers that first one, right down to the scores.

"It was in Akron, Ohio, on the USTA circuit. I played her in the first round and I lost 7-6, 6-3. It was 5-4 in the tiebreaker.

"From the first match on, I knew that I could beat her. I just wasn't good enough back then yet. I'm sure she didn't expect a tough match. I always thought it was a matter of time, that eventually, I would win."

By 1975, Navratilova had advanced her game to the point where she reached the semifinals of the Open. There, waiting for her, was Lloyd, en route to the first of her six championships in this tournament.

"I lost it on clay," said Martina. "It was 3 and 4 (actually 4 and 4). She just beat me. She ran me down. I couldn't keep up with her on clay. I was about 30 pounds heavier. She played a better match."

Lloyd remembered the match, too.

"It was 4, 4 or 4, 3. I think I got a good call and it turned the whole match around," she said.

Navratilova said it took her some time to catch up with Chris.

"I think she beat me about seven times before I finally beat her. If you take those two years, '73 and '74 when I wasn't a top player, off we'd be even. The last four or five years, I've definitely had the upper hand."

The last two years, Navratilova has been all but unbeatable and ranked No. 1. Lloyd, while recognizing Martina's accomplishments, rails at the suggestion that Navratilova already belongs among the game's all-time greats.

"They called Billie Jean King the best ever and compared her to Helen Wills Moody," she said.

Pena's Pitching, Hitting Top Atlanta

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves weren't worried about Alejandro Pena's bat, only his arm. How little they knew...

The Los Angeles right-hander did with his arm what Manager Tom Lasorda had hoped, blanking the Braves on three hits through seven innings Friday as the Dodgers opened a crucial National League West series with a 3-2 win, stretching their division lead to three games.

He also did the unanticipated — knocking in the first two runs of the game with a second-inning bases-loaded single off Phil Niekro, doubling his season RBI output.

Pena said of his pitching: "I was throwing pretty hard and had a good slider."

But he was just as proud of his hitting, though he didn't exactly rip the ball, bouncing his hit just over the 44-year-old pitcher's head and just beyond the reach of shortstop Rafael Ramirez. Nor did he do it off Niekro's specialty, the knuckleball.

"It was a fastball," Pena said, grinning. "I was very pleased."

There were important games in the East Division as the Philadelphia Phillies regained first place by half a game with a 13-inning, 4-3 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates. They got some help from the New York Mets, who ended the Montreal Expos' four-game winning streak with a 5-4 victory that knocked Montreal out of the top spot.

St. Louis, meanwhile, moved to within a game of the lead, a half-game ahead of the Pirates, with a 6-5, 10-inning win in Chicago.

In other games, Houston topped San Francisco 7-4 and San Diego downed Cincinnati 8-2.

The Dodgers' victory was not without travail. Tom Niedenfuer replaced Pena in the eighth and worked out a jam. But entering the ninth with a 3-0 lead, he gave up a leadoff home run to Dale Murphy, his 31st, then walked Chris Chambliss.

Steve Howe came on and surrendered a hit to Rafael Ramirez. Bruce Benedict was ejected for arguing, and Bob Watson got a run-scoring single before Howe retired the side with tying and winning runs on.

"It was a big, big game to win that first one," said Lasorda.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3

Hernandez lined a two-out single off loser Jim Bibby's glove to start the 13th-inning Philadelphia rally, then scored the winning run on Joe Lefebvre's single. And he pitched a perfect final three innings, facing the minimum nine batters, to get the victory.

"I've said it all along," said Manager Paul Owens. "We've got a pretty good bullpen. It showed tonight."

Mets 5, Expos 4

Keith Hernandez, who has 19 hits in his last 41 at-bats, broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning with a single that scored Mookie Wilson.

Tom Seaver, winning only his eighth game against 13 losses, retired 12 men in a row between the fifth and the ninth. Then he gave way to Jesse Orosco, who fanned Jim Wohlford and Tim Raines with the tying and winning runs on base to pick up his 16th save.

Cardinals 6, Cubs 5

Willie McGee's single in the 10th inning scored Ozzie Smith, to keep the Cardinals in the thick of the Eastern race and give victory to Bruce Sutter, 9-9, who surrendered the tying run in the ninth.

McGee said he had no idea what pitch he hit off Chicago reliever Lee Smith. "I just look at the ball, not a particular pitch," he said.

Astros 7, Giants 4

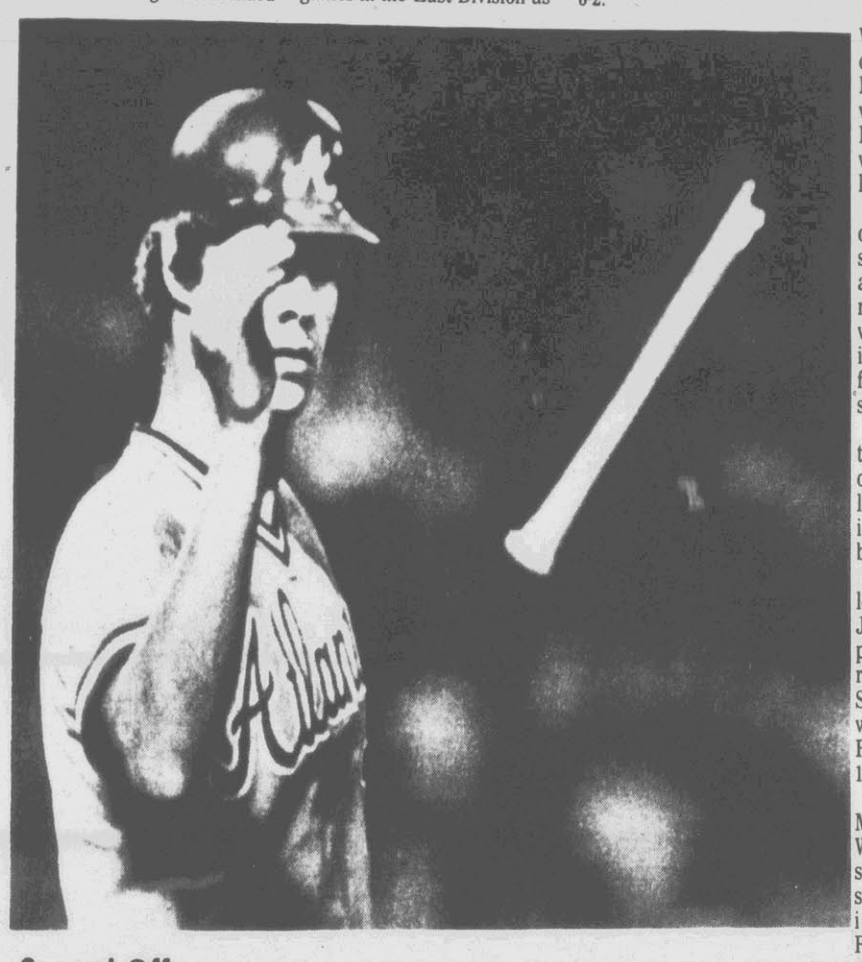
Phil Garner knocked in three runs, two on his 13th homer, and Joe Niekro surrendered five hits and four runs in 7 2-3 innings to run his record to 13-12.

"We still have a chance," said Manager Bob Lillis, whose Astros are 7½ games behind the first-place Dodgers. "It's important we do well here because the Dodgers and Braves are playing each other. If we win, we have to gain on somebody."

Padres 8, Reds 2

Tony Gwynn extended his hitting streak to 19 games with a broken-bat bases-loaded single that drove in two in a three-run San Diego fifth.

Andy Hawkins, 4-6, won his first game since being recalled from Las Vegas Aug. 27. Charlie Puleo, 5-10, was the loser as a substitute starter for Joe Price, whose shoulder stiffened as he warmed up.



Sawed Off

Atlanta Braves slugger Dale Murphy throws the handle of his bat after breaking it during the sixth inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers Friday night. Murphy hit a grounder to first and was forced out on the play, but he later hit his 31st homer of the year. (AP Laserphoto)

Pam Pack Tops Roanoke, 14-6

ROBERSONVILLE — Washington High School opened its quest for the 1983 Northeastern Conference title with a 14-6 victory over Roanoke High School that was, perhaps, easier than it looked.

The defense held Roanoke to only 93 yards in total offense, setting up the two scores with an interception and a fumble recovery. But penalties at the wrong time coupled with an interception and three fumbles lost cramped the style of the Pam Pack.

Roanoke however, suffered through a total of six turnovers, three each in fumbles lost and interceptions, and got its only score following a blocked punt.

Washington took the initial lead in the first period, after John Modlin intercepted a pass at the Washington 34 and returned it to the Roanoke 44. Six plays later, Ken Holly went in from 14 yards out and Rob Jackson's kick made it 14-0.

In the second period, Jeffrey Morning blocked a Washington punt and the Redskins took over at the Pack six. On third and goal, a pass interference call gave Roanoke another first and goal at the five, and on the next play Darius Hudgins went in. The PAT try failed, however, leaving it at 7-6.

There was no further scoring until the final two minutes of the game when Washington scored after Modlin again came up with a turnover, recovering a fumble at the Roanoke 43. Jeff Cox finished off the ten-play drive with a one-yard plunge that upped the score to 14-6 with 1:37 left in the game.

The loss was the first in three outings for the Redskins, who are now 0-1 in the Northeastern. The 'Skins travel to Edenton next Friday.

Washington is now 3-0 overall and 1-0 in league play. The Pam Pack has an open date on Friday, returning to action on September 23 hosting Edenton.

Jets Hope To Break Seahawks' Streak

By Associated Press

Jim Zorn and the Seattle Seahawks seem to bring out the worst in the New York Jets.

The Jets, impressive 41-29 victors over the San Diego Chargers in their National Football League opener last week, hope to snap a six-game regular-season losing streak against the Seahawks today in New York.

"We're going into this game with a very positive attitude," said Jets' defensive end Mark Gastineau. "If we turn this series around, maybe it'll show everyone we're ready to play this season. It will be a very positive thing for us to know that we can beat them,"

New York contained San Diego star quarterback Dan Fouts as well as anyone can expect, but Zorn's scrambling style contrasts with Fouts drop-back style.

"When he's hot, he can beat anyone on any given day," said Gastineau, referring to Zorn.

Last week wasn't one of Zorn's hotter efforts as Seattle dropped a 17-13 decision to Kansas City. However, the Jets have a way of improving Zorn's statistics.

The Pittsburgh Steelers gave the Denver's John Elway a rude introduction into the NFL last week, knocking the rookie quarterback out of the game with an injured right elbow in a game the Broncos won 14-10.

The Baltimore Colts would like to be just as rude to Elway, who spurned them after they made him their No. 1 draft selection earlier this year, forcing the trade to Denver.

Colts' owner Robert Irsay has labeled the game a must win for Baltimore, which edged New England 29-23 last week, although the players are taking a more moderate approach.

"I have no hard feeling against him (Elway)," said linebacker Johnie Cooks. "If he doesn't want to play with us, that's his problem."

The San Francisco 49ers crushed the Minnesota Vikings 48-17 on Thursday night.

"A lot has been said of the fact that the Patriots haven't beaten the Dolphins in the Orange Bowl since 1966," said New England Coach Ron Meyers. "As a team we can't let a statistic like that interfere with the fact that we have to play sound and mistake free against an always well-coached team."

The St. Louis Cardinals hope to derail the Cowboys on Sunday with veteran Jim Hart at quarterback instead of the injured Neil Lomax.

"The Cowboys are a good team, but their not infallible," said Hart. "They're not a bunch of giants who can't be felled."

The Bengals-Bills and Bears-Buccaneers games match teams that dropped season openers last weekend.

The Bills and Bengals both will be looking to generate a little more offense this week. The Bills were blanked by Miami 12-0 last week, only the 23rd shutout in the club's history, while Cincinnati was downed 20-10 by the Raiders, scoring a meaningless touchdown in the closing moments.

Rookard's TDs Lead Asheville By Erwin

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Halfback Lavoid Rookard scored three touchdowns and No. 2 Asheville held Clyde Erwin to 11 yards rushing en route to a 31-6 victory in high school football action Friday night.

The Cougars, 2-0, rushed for 247 yards as four backs gained more than 50 yards. Rookard finished with 56 yards.

Erwin quarterback Johnny Ducker hit 21 of 34 passes for 239 yards and one touchdown. Ducker's only interception was returned 51 yards for a touchdown by defensive back Julian Smith in the final period.

Fayetteville Douglas Byrd, tied for third in the AP high school football 4-A poll, blanked Terry Sanford 14-0 as Steve Salley rushed for 131 yards and Donnell Woolford added 112 yards.

Northern Nash used an 86-yard halfback option pass with 11 seconds to go to upend seventh-ranked Henderson Vance 27-21.

Halfback Jarrod Moody hit Gerald Sumler around midfield and Sumler raced the remaining yards for the score as Northern Nash evened its record at 1-1.

Meanwhile, Roxboro Person, tied for eighth in the state, slipped past George Washington of Danville, Va., 31-28 on Stan Hodgin's field goal with 9:08 left.

Hodgin also completed 14 of 23 passes for 259 yards and two touchdowns. He ran for a third score as Person handed George Washington its second straight defeat after having won 46 regular season games in a row.

Greenville Rose, which beat defending state champion Jacksonville Monday, downed New Bern Friday night 28-14.

Quarterback Battle Emory, son of East Carolina coach Ed Emory, led Rose, hitting eight of 16 passes for 167 yards, including a 49-yard touchdown pass to Tyrone Smith.

Rose running back Reggie Smith sealed the victory in the final period with a 92-yard touchdown run.

In the 3-A ranks, No. 1 Southern Durham downed South Johnston 28-14 for its third win in a row.

Meanwhile, SouthWest Edgecombe whipped 4-A Wilson Beddingfield 30-7 and ninth-ranked Concord beat Northwest Cabarrus 32-13 as halfback Scott Irby scored four touchdowns and rushed for 116 yard.

Irby scored on runs of 2, 2, 6 and 21 yards as Concord rushed for 319 yards.

Robbinsville, ranked No. 2 in the 2-A and 1-A class, beat Murphy 26-14 but fourth-ranked Swain County was upended by Tuscola 28-14 to drop to 0-2-1. The win extended Tuscola's consecutive-game scoring streak to 82, the longest in the state.

Randleman, ranked No. 1 in the 2-A and 1-A division, and Greensboro Page, ranked No. 1 in the 4-A class, did not play.

This year's regular two-day hunts will be held on December 9-10, 13-14, 16-17, 20-21, 23-24, 27-28, 30-31, and January 2-3.

A lottery drawing will be held at refuge headquarters on Monday, Oct. 3 at 1 p.m. to draw for both the youth hunt and regular hunts. Any application received by that date will be considered.

Hunters may also apply in person for the standby lottery before 5 a.m. on the day of each hunt.

In all other areas east of U.S. 1, the season will be closed.

Waltrip Confident In Winston Point Race

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip believes he still can overhaul Bobby Allison for the third year in a row and win his third consecutive Winston Cup Grand National stock car racing point championship.

"We're two different teams — the way we race, the way they (Allison's people) race," Waltrip said Friday after he won the pole position for Sunday's Wrangler-Sanforset 400 at Fairgrounds Raceway.

"We don't quit, don't give up on anything, keep after it until we get it," Waltrip added.

Did that mean he thought Allison and his team quit?

"I've seen sometimes when they threw up their hands and just walked away," said Waltrip, who hit a top speed of 93.069 mph in a Chevrolet while Allison was earning the No. 6 position with a speed of 91.735 mph in a Buick.

But Allison gave it his best shot Friday.

"It was good, but it wasn't good enough, was it?" asked Allison, who won both the pole and the race here last year. "It's a race setup, though, and we're ready to race, especially since we're starting a bit further up in the field than the 15th place we normally start."

Allison, who has won three of the last four fall races on the local .542-mile track, has some momentum coming into the event on the strength of his victory Monday in the Southern 500 at Darlington, S.C.

"I really thought we had a shot at Darrell," he said. "We had picked up from practice, but we didn't make it."

Rounding out the top five behind Waltrip were Terry Labonte, 92.312 mph in a Chevrolet; Geoff Bodine, 92.225 mph in a Pontiac; Tim Richmond, 91.916 mph in a Pontiac; and Morgan Shepherd, 91.813 mph in a Buick.

The first 20 spots were filled Friday with the last 10 up for grabs in time trials today.

Hot, Head-to-Head Collard Eatin' Competition Pits Champ Against Newcomer

The weather wasn't the only thing that heated up at the 1983 Collard Festival, held Sept. 6-12 in Ayden. The collard-eating competition was hot and brought thrills...and spills. Verbal competition between first-time contestant C. Mort Hurst (left) and four-time champion collard-eater D.A. Rodgers was tough before the contest but it got tougher after the gobbling began. Hurst, of Robersonville, downed nearly six pounds of collards along with three bottles of catsup before losing his...ah, lunch. Rodgers, who lost his title as Collard King in 1982, ate six pounds and kept them down to regain his champion status. Fifteen collard-lovers entered the contest. A collard-cooking contest preceeded the eating competition and was won by Debbie Buck.

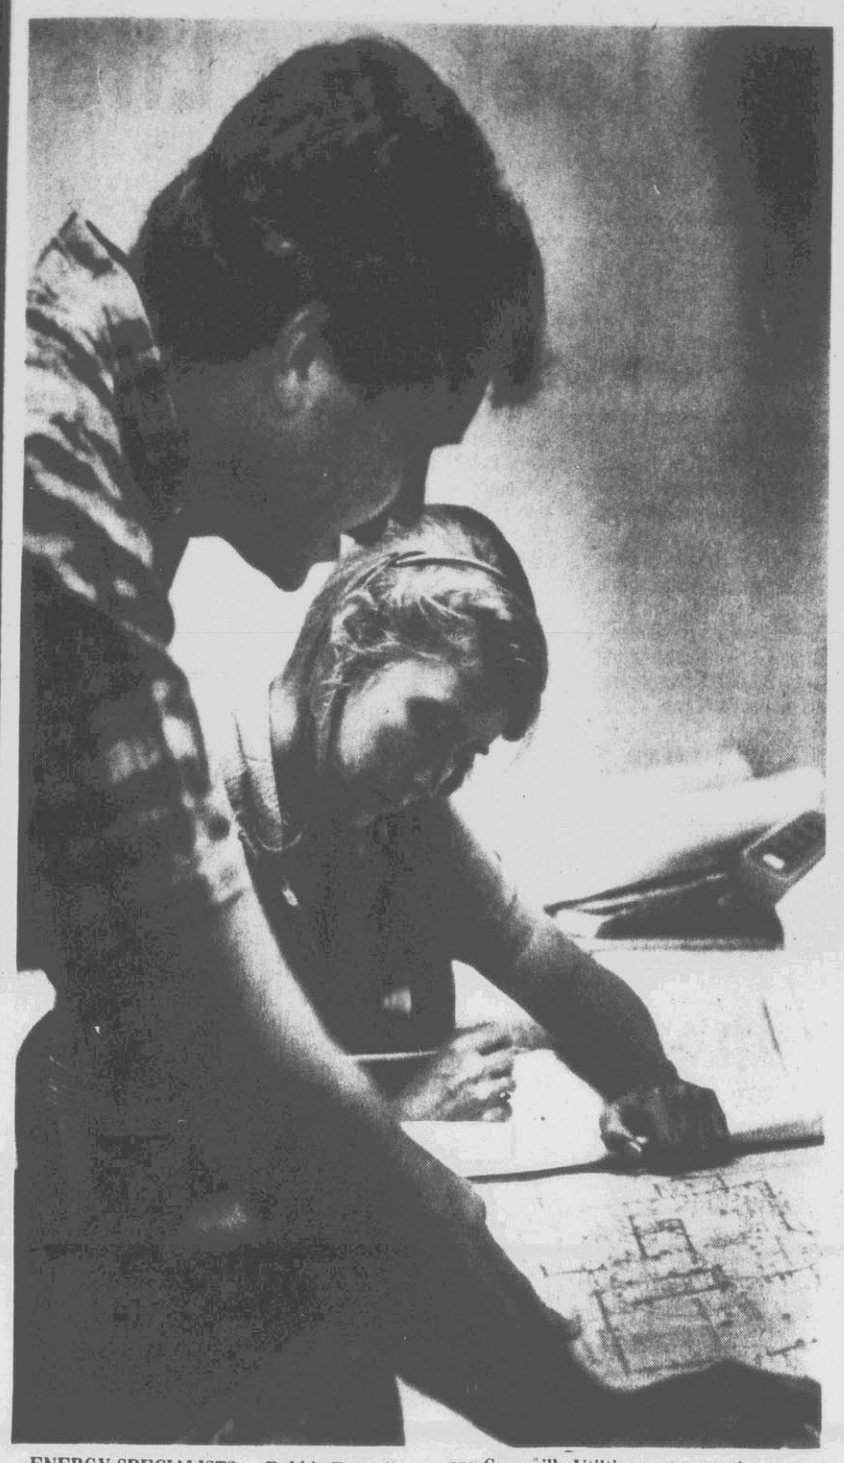
Test Can Cut Costs



ENERGY SPECIALISTS — Robbie Tugwell (left) and Kris Boggess look over a set of blueprints to see if they can determine the source of energy loss in this particular home. Their services are available, free of charge, to any Greenville Utilties customer who wants to know how to conserve energy or has a problem with unusually high bills that could be attributed to a break-down or inefficient electrical system. No amount of air conditioning could cool Harold Jones off after he received his last utility bill — $255, more than double his August 1982 bill.

"I didn't know what to do," the Greenville resident said. "I knew it had been unusually hot, but this was ridiculous."

Jones called Greenville Utilities and was put in touch with Robbie Tugwell, a GUC state certified residential auditor, who visited the Jones' household to search for problems that might have contributed to the astronomical bill.

Tugwell checked the meter, appliances, water heater, insulation and air conditioning, and discovered that a malfunctioning heat coil was causing the heating and cooling systems to run simultaneously. So, while the churning air conditioner waged a losing battle against rising inside and outside temperatures, Jones' budget was caught in the crossfire.

"I didn't even know Greenville Utilities offered a free service like that. I was able to call a repairman, tell him the problem and have it fixed," said a considerably cooler Jones.

After five years on the job for GUC's Energy Services Department, Tugwell has visited hundred of customers like Jones.

"It's my job to help the customer understand where his energy is going," Tugwell said. "We try to help customers lower that bill and stop throwing their dollars away."

He and his assistant, Kris Boggess, visit an average of 20 customers a month — all who have a variety of energy-related problems.

"Some people are concerned about unusually high bills, others are considering remodeling or installing insulation and want a more extensive audit," Tugwell said.

Whatever the problem, the energy services officers start with a computer printout of 15 months' energy usage at the dwelling. Then Tugwell and Boggess sit down with the customer, explain the computer printout, GUC billing procedure and kilowatt hours. There is usually a quick lesson on meter reading.

"You can tell so much from the meter," Tugwell said. "There's a lot of information there. When people get a high bill, they immediately think something is wrong with the meter. That's rarely the case though."

People who think a meter looks like something that belongs inside a cockpit needn't feel alone. According to Tugwell, in five years only one customer he's visited has known how to read a meter; she worked for a utility company.

"I try to educate the customer. I try to help them see how their lifestyle affects their energy usage and what they can do about it," he said.

An energy audit on an older home is a bit more complicated. Areas of the house are measured to compute energy and inspections of the heating system, caulking and overall tightness of the house are made. Tugwell offers recommendations and shows how dollars can be saved.

"I enjoy the job," he said. "I have the satisfaction of helping someone understand basic electrical usage. You can tell right off when the customer grasps what you're saying. That's a good feeling."

GM Marks 75th Year With New Look On Life

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — A flamboyant millionaire named William Crapo Durant took a fancy to horseless carriages just after the turn of the century and hitched his fortune to one of the thousands of tiny auto firms then springing to life.

Durant ended up working in a Flint, Mich., bowling alley. The car company, first known as Buick, ended up as General Motors Corp., the world's largest automaker.

On Sept. 16, 1908, when GM was born through an obscure filing of incorporation papers in New Jersey, no one took much notice. Things change when you're on top of the heap.

Critics still blast the corporation for not anticipating a need for fuel-efficient autos in the 1970s. GM started an aggressive quality program only after consumers had turned to assorted Hondas, Toyotas and Datsuns.

In 1980, GM lost money for the first time in 61 years. The $763 million loss came as GM started laying off 16.7 percent of its salaried workers and 41.6 percent of its autoworkers in response to the worst U.S. auto market since the Depression.

As GM approaches its 75th birthday, sales are improving but problems still loom. Japanese competition remains strong, and autoworkers are looking for big pay raises in contract talks next year.

Industry observers say GM's credibility in Washington has been hurt by past claims that it couldn't comply with emission and fuel economy standards, which it later managed to meet.

Also, GM's smugness about being No. 1 — shaken over the past three years of the sales slump — could return and choke off innovation, they add.

"They were smug and fat ... General Motors knew it all — that attitude is gone now," says David Lewis, a former assistant to earlier GM presidents and now president of the Society of Automotive Historians.

"We're here out of 2,000 other companies (that started in the early 1900s) and we've come out No.1," Smith boasted in an interview.

GM got its start when Durant, energetic owner of a Flint carriage maker, bought Buick and parlayed it into the nucleus of a collection of auto component and manufacturing companies that included Oldsmobile, Chevrolet and Hyatt Roller Bearing.

Along the way, wheeler-dealer Durant twice lost control of "his baby" because of money woes, the second time for good, in 1920.

GM went on to produce more than 238.7 million cars and trucks and expand into refrigerator, locomotive and robot production, auto financing and radio.

But the car business continues to be GM's heart.

— A $40 billion, four-year car and truck modernization program under way through 1984.

— Company surveys that point to improved vehicle quality. GM would not release details.

— More cooperative labor-management relations and auto plants where workers can stop the production lines if things go wrong.

— Growing European sales, with an improvement of almost 25 percent in the first six months of this year compared with early 1982.

"This is not a race where you ever sit down; we're just on the threshold of what we can do," Smith says.

The 58-year-old chairman, who has been with GM since college, took over in one of the company's darkest hours — after the 1980 loss — and is largely credited with streamlining operations and plant efficiencies.

Under his direction, GM earned $1.7 billion on sales of $36.1 billion in the first half of this year, as against a $688.3 million profit on sales of $31.9 billion in the 1982 period. That's a 147.1 percent earnings gain on just a 13.2 percent boost in revenues.

GM's bloodletting over the past three years included laying off 25,000 white-collar workers and 209,000 autoworkers, closing or planning to close 11 plants and parts of two others, and worker and supplier concessions.

Auto analyst John Hammond of Data Resources Inc: of Lexington, Mass., says despite the commendable gains, GM must "continue to squeeze costs and be lean. The Japanese have virtually no debt burden and can maintain their advantages."

Japanese carmakers can build and ship their cars for $1,500 to $2,000 less than American automakers can build theirs. The advantage prompted GM to enter an unprecedented 12-year venture with Toyota Motor Corp. in February to build a Japanese-designed subcompact at an idle GM plant in Fremont, Calif.

Smith says the venture, under review by the Federal Trade Commission, will give GM time to study the Toyota process and develop a profitable way to build small cars.

Whatever the new approach, it will stress the use of robots, which GM has been implementing increasingly over several years. Robots should improve quality, too, analysts say.

"Quality was never much of an issue in much of the (U.S.) auto industry until the Japanese came," Hammond says. "But the trend toward automation is only going to increase the quality."

But consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who has been a GM critic since the 1960s when he wrote a book on Chevrolet Corvair safety problems, contests the company's quality claims.

In early August, the Justice Department sued GM to force the recall of 1.1 million 1980-model X-cars because of brakes ohat could seize and send the vehicles into spins. The suit also seeks a $4 million penalty against the company for allegedly covering up a design flaw.

Problems Simmering For U.S. Rice Growers

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

ALTA LOMA, Texas (AP) — Combines are stripping fields along the Texas coastal plain in a modern version of a ritual older than the written word — the harvesting of rice.

By the time fall arrives, more than 2 billion pounds of rice worth about $200 million will have come out of the Texas fields, headed for the world's dinner tables.

More than half of the U.S. rice crop — grown only in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri and California — is exported, providing about 25 percent of the world's supply.

But U.S. rice growers are being threatened by rising costs and low profit.

"Rice farmers in Texas are in critical economic condition now," said Art Gerlow, an economist for the Texas A&M Extension Service. "We are in trouble."

Rice is one of the most expensive crops, with production costs rising rapidly, and one of the most risky as the world market for U.S. rice has been depressed recently, he said.

A typical Texas rice farmer spends $300 to $400 an acre, compared to $175 to $200 an acre for cotton or feed grains. Land must be flooded, and fertilizer has to be applied by airplane.

Texas farmers harvest 4,000 to 5,000 pounds of rice per acre and sell it for $10 to $11 per hundred pounds. A farmer will usually break even. A good year may bring a slight profit, but more and more frequently he will lose money, Gerlow said.

Profits go in cycles, Gerlow said. Farmers will have a series of bad years, going deeply into debt, and then seasons of plenty when crops are good and the market price is high and they can get out of debt.

But since 1967, he said, the poor times have been more frequent than the good.

"For the first time, we're losing more than our cash costs," he said. "When the good times come, they are neither as good or as long as they were once. We're slowly losing ground."

As a result, rice farmers are going to other crops or getting out of agriculture altogether. Some are simply going broke. Fewer young farmers find they can go into rice growing or even want to, and those who do find the going tough.

David LaCompte, 31, son of a rice farmer, is one who says he likes the life well enough to put up with the risks and the hard work.

He says it is one of the last areas in which a person suceeds or fails according to his own labor and decisions.

"I've had jobs," LaCompte said. "With a job, it doesn't make any difference how much you put out. You get the same.

"But with rice farming, you're your own boss. The more you put in, the more you get out of it."

In 1973, his first year as an independent farmer, LaCompte worked rented land and got a rude initiation. His crop failed. There was a second failure in 1974. LaCompte and his wife both had to find jobs and learned "to live cheap."

The turnaround came with a good crop in 1977, he says, and "after that it got better and better and this year looks better than ever."

LaCompte has to "make do" to suceed, buying used farm machinery and performing his own maintenance. He has taken out loans that would make most people blanch.

He, his wife and their four daughters have had to wait to put a house on four acres they own near Alta Loma. And when they do get a house, LaCompte said, "I'll have to build it myself."

Workers' Comp Rates To Decline

By CRAIG WEBB

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Workers' compensation insurance rates will drop another 13.1 percent on Jan. 1, a drop that Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram credits to competition but an industry spokesmen attributes to safer workers.

Ingram announced Friday he was permitting the rate reduction affecting all insurance companies.

The cut comes on top of a 10.6 percent reduction in workers' compensation rates that took effect this January.

In addition, the industry rates have become only the top limit that can be charged. The General Assembly passed a law earlier this year permitting individual companies to "deviate" — charge lower rates.

By Sept. 1, 76 insurance companies had filed requests seeking rate cuts ranging from 8 percent to 27.5 percent, Ingram said.

Workers' compensation insurance cost North Carolina businesses $257.3 million last year, according to the state Rate Bureau, which collects information and maks rate requests for the industry. The insurance pays some of the salaries lost by workers who became disabled through job-related injuries.

Ingram said the newly allowed individual rate cuts played a big part in causing the upcoming 13.1 percent rate drop.

"The tremendous pressure of competition, because of the deviations I have approved, would make any proposal to increase workers' compensation insurance absurd," he said.

But Paul Mize, general manager of the North Carolina Rate Bureau, said the 13.1 percent reduction it attributable solely to the reduced amount of workers' compensation insurance being paid out. He added that the 13.1 percent figure was reached by examining the industry's income and payouts in 1982 — before individual rate cuts were allowed.

"I've discussed this with some knowledgeable folks and the only answer I can get is that the experience has improved, and the rate-making procedures we have automatically create the need to seek a rate reduction," he said.

Mize did agree, however, that competition is spurring companies to seek lower individual rates.

"There has been within the last two-three years substantially more competititon, not only in North Carolina but country wide, particularly for commercial insurance business of all sorts," he said.

"There just has been a great deal more competititon in the commercial insurance field throughout the country than before. This (rate-cutting in North Carolini) is probably a manifestation of that finding its way to North Carolina after the Legislature passed the deviation law."

Candlelight Wedding Vows Solemnized On Saturday

In a candlelight ceremony Saturday afternoon at four o'clock, Vanessa Dixon Murphy became the bride of Michael West Hardy in the Rainbow United Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Murphy Jr. of Snow Hill. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. William Murphy Hardy of Snow Hill and the late Mr. Hardy.

The Rev. Hyder Crawley officiated the double ring ceremony. Mrs. James Ham of Snow Hill was organist and Lynn Sugg of Snow Hill sang "Theme From Ice Castles," "One Hand, One Heart" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a traditional gown of satin embroidered alencon lace with a chapel train. The fitted satin bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, full length tapered sleeves and a natural waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace encrusted with seed pearls outlined the neckline and appliqued the bodice and sleeves. Satin bridal buttons fastened the sleeves at the wrist and the back of the gown. Re-embroidered alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls appliqued the skirt and train and a border of scalloped alencon lace bordered the gown hemline. She wore a cathedral length mantilla of imported illusion bordered with beaded scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace accented with lace motifs that flowed from an alencon lace caplet, etched with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of tube roses, white roses and ivy surrounding white phalaenopsis orchids.

MRS. MICHAEL WEST HARDY

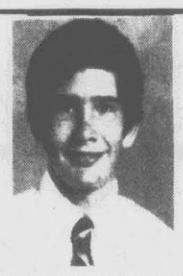
On The Young Side



By CLAY DEANHARDT

Clubs are an important part of the extracurricular activities at Rose and the fall push for membership is on. The Future Business Leaders of America, the Spanish Club, Anchor Club, Drama Club, Minority Affairs Club, Health Careers Club and the Fellowship for Christian Atheletes have all held organizational meetings and are beginning to recruit new members.

The Student Government Association has started working with the election of homeroom representatives and its first meeting was held Wednesday. They also sponsored an orientation for students new to the Greenville City Schools Thursday. The new students received refreshments and were given a chance to meet club presidents, class officers and SGA officers.

This year SGA officers are: Derek Dickens, president; Hunter Bost, vice president; Karie Seykora, secretary; and Cissy Taft, treasurer.

The school store, sponsored by the FBLA, is now in operation. It's open from 8:15-8:45 each morning and carries most school supplies needed by students. The FBLA has also elected officers for the upcoming school year including: Kathy Nobles, president; Debby Loupen, vice president; Vanessa Barnes and Kathy O'Neal, secretaries; John Ward and Jennifer Smith, treasurers.

Parking stickers are on sale in the mornings for a $1.00. These stickers are required to park in school lots and will cost $2.00 after the first two weeks they are on sale.

The guidance department is acception applications from seniors for the Century III leaders program. The program offers up to a $10,000 scholarship for the national winner and a chance to meet with leaders in business, education and government. Applications must be turned in to Mrs. Creech by Sept. 22 and the current events test will be given Oct. 21 at 8 a.m.

One other important deadline is coming up fast and that is Sept. 23, registration for the Oct. 15 SAT. Other dates to remember: Oct. 4-6, competency tests; Oct. 22, PSAT; Nov. 3, Post-Secondary Opportunity Day; and Nov. 30, the armed services test or ASBAV.

Wedding Vows Solemnized On Saturday

MRS. JOHN IRVIN JAMES

BETHEL — The wedding ceremony of Linda Carol Manning and John Irvin James was solemnized Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Bethel Baptist Church. The Rev. Norman Joyner performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Manning and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Lee James, all of Route 2, Robersonville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Angela Ballard of Bethel was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Debra Perkinson of Greensboro and Bonita Edwards of Greenville, sisters of the bride, Mahlonie Leggett and LuAnne Keel, both of Bethel. Jennifer Hollis of Route 2, Robersonville was the honorary bridesmaid.

Julie Perkinson of Greensboro, niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was T.J. James of Route 2, Robersonville, nephew of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Wallace James Jr. of Route 2, Robersonville, Jeffrey James of Hamilton, brothers of the bridegroom, Dale Manning of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Oscar Glaze of Columbia, S.C., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Bobby Hollis of Route 1, Robersonville.

Susan Byers was organist and Mary Ann Harris sang "Beloved it is Morn" and Donald Green sang "Wedding Prayer" and the "Wedding Song" was a duet.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped clipped chantilly lace beaded with clusters of pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in imported French chantilly that extended over the waistline encircled with white satin ribbon finished with a double Dior bow with back streamers. The long fitted lace sleeves were trimmed at the wrist with a ruffle of embroidered schiffli lace. Schiffli and clipped chantilly lace enhanced the chapel length train and modified A-line skirt. Lace appliques were scattered over the skirt front. She wore a fingertip illusion mantilla edged in lace matching her gown. It was attached to a Juliet headpiece trimmed in lace and pearls. She carried a cascade of white roses, daisies and orchids.

The honor attendant wore a maize voile over taffeta floor length gown styled with a sleeveless bodice with a yoke neckline outlined with a white voile double flounce. The natural waistline was encircled with a sash. She carried a colonial nosegay of miniature daisies, cymbidium and white rosebuds accented with baby's breath and yellow streamers.

The bridesmaids' flowers and dresses were identical. The flower girl wore a maize eyelet floor length gown identical to that of the bridesmaids and carried a basket of miniature daisies.

The mother of the bride wore an aqua formal gown of chiffon with long sleeves and a white cymbidium orchid. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of royal blue polyester and a white cymbidium orchid. White carnations corsages were given to the grandmothers.

A reception was held on the church lawn after the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Whichard greeted guests and presided at the guest book. Hope Wynn poured punch and Shirley Edmondson served cake.

The couple will live near Robersonville after a trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and graduated from Pitt Community. She works at Parker's Barbecue. The bridegroom graduated from Martin Academy and is employed by FCX.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained members of the wedding party and friends at a pig picking Friday at the Robersonville Country Club. A dance followed and was given by friends of the bride.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Isn't it time we all smartened up about hospital care?

Where else in the world do we check into a facility with a bed next to someone we have never seen before, put up with a steady stream of strangers who take our blood and our urine and are never seen again, and pay $200 a day for the privilege?

At those prices, you'd think we'd get to talk to the chef instead of a nutritionist.

Most of the beds in hospitals are occupied by people recuperating. The crisis is over and they are just getting their strength back. My proposal is simple.

The best hotel in Los Angeles cost me $130 a day. For this, I get a room with a television and bathroom to myself. No one coughing in the middle of the night. No one watching the ballgame when I want to watch "Masterpiece Theatre." None of their relatives who come and spend the day and use "our" bathroom.

The hotel room comes with a continental breakfast and a newspaper. It also comes with a fluffy bathrobe that covers my ENTIRE body.

There is valet parking for people who come to visit me. (How many of you have had people visit you in the hospital who had to circle around until the new parking garage was finished?)

There are deck chairs and a swimming pool and when I don't eat everything on my plate, no one cares.

I can read until I go to sleep and no one wakes me out of a sound slumber in the middle of the night to ask if I need a sleeping pill.

If my vital signs are up to it, I could walk to Rodeo Drive and read price tags. Or, if I am lonely, I could sit in the lobby and watch people argue over their bill.

If I have a burning desire to see my doctor, there is a putting green nearby where we could meet and maybe have something cold to drink while I tell him what "Reader's Digest" says about my condition.

I've been thinking about this for a long time. It has a few bugs to work out, but by and large you have to admit if you're lucky enough to recuperate in the summer months, you could get some real bargains at Palm Springs or the ski slopes at Vail.

Not convinced? what if I told you that for the price of a ride in an ambulance you could fly first-class Pan Am from New York to London?

Author Says Early Training Can Boost Children's IQ

By SHARON RUTENBERG

CHICAGO (UPI) — Parents can help raise their children's intelligence level permanently by using early learning techniques with 3- and 4-year-olds, says author Joan Beck.

This may involve teaching toddlers a second language or reading skills at home.

Mrs. Beck, a Chicago Tribune editorial writer and best-selling author of "How to Raise a Brighter Child," points the way in her recently published "Best Beginnings: Giving Your Child a Head Start in Life." (Putnam, $14.95).

"It was the thing that was missing when I had my own children — because I saw in them an eagerness to learn which is not generally acknowledged in books for parents," the author said in an interview.

She said studies show the Japanese have raised their IQ levels 11 points since World War II.

"A tremendous amount of attention is paid to early learning in Japan," she said. "If they're building better brains in their people, this is really serious and we really need to pay enormous attention to these ideas."

Parents are a child's first and most influential teacher.

"They're a loving dimension. We've often confused learning with sitting still in a classroom.

"Children sort of have an innate, built-in desire to please their parents. So they're also more receptive to learning parents provide than they would be from somebody else."

"Instead of seeing themselves as someone who changes diapers and spooning cereal, (parents) see themselves as really a guide to child development. And the response they get — a real excited, interested feedback from a child when they do these things — makes parenting more rewarding."

Language learning is an example.

"Children really do it at an incredibly young age (between three and four). And they do it primarily with the parents' help.

"In pre-school years, they could learn a second language without an accent."

"It is interesting that in our society we have postponed learning a second language, almost uniformly, to high school years. There's an enormous amount of evidence that shows the brain does not acquire a second language (later) as easily — or permanently."

Mrs. Beck said children must also be given many things to manipulate.

"These don't have to be toys," she said. They can be household items a child can handle freely around the home without danger, such as cooking utensils and sturdy adult tools.

Planning for substitute care is important for working parents, Mrs. Beck added.

"It's very important to find a caretaker who is interested in language stimulation and finding ways to provide it. It is important to train a babysitter in early learning techniques.

"... I am aware of lots of babies who are left with caretakers who aren't as interested and certainly aren't as well educated as parents themselves. I think it's a great hazard.

She said some mothers leave their children with non-English speaking women or women who turn to child care because they cannot get other jobs.

"I've seen in some of the franchised day centers that the caliber of staffs is quite poor."

Parents working 10 hours a day — five days a week — do not have enough time with young children, she said, but she sees very little risk for mothers who want to work or keep on their career track with part-time, 20 hour work weeks.

"I think it's good for everybody because 24-hour-a-day child care is awfully hard for parents," she said.

As women become more important in the workforce, Mrs. Beck said, they should insist on changes making it easier to fulfill other obligations and interests.

"I just don't see any reason why everybody has to work 9 to 5 just because it was set up for men who have a wife at home to take care of everybody else. Only 30 percent consist of married men with a wife at home. Work is organized for the convenience of these people."

Some new patterns are shared jobs and flextime.

"Computers open up a lot of interesting jobs for work that can be done at home. So women who work at home don't have to address envelopes or knit ski caps. They can do some high-level work on the computer."

Mrs. Beck believes children should be spaced out about every three years — with additional pregnancies beginning about two years after the previous baby was born.

"There's a lot of statistics that show the first child in a family does better," she said. "This is especially true if children are closer in age." "The mother's body may not have been able to give optimal nourishment to a second pregnancy until her body has completely recovered after her first pregnancy.

"Parents have more time and interest in their first child or child who is separated from another child by a couple of years.

A Hazardous Materials Team has been organized within the Fire-Rescue Department in order that officers may be better prepared to respond to chemical fires and disasters. For information, call 752-4137.

Dear Abby

Husband's Office Buddies Have Wife All Worked Up

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please print this very important message to "The Bachelors in the Office":

I know that you have chosen to remain unmarried, to be free from responsibility. There is no one in your life to whom you must answer or consider in your decisions. But my husband has a wife and family to consider. His wife needs his companionship and his children need a father's influence and love. So, please, stop inviting him to all your drinking parties and "men only" expeditions.

Don't twist his arm to stay for "one more beer." And if he says no, don't make fun of him and accuse him of being "henpecked."

I know he needs his recreation, but three or four nights a week is a bit much. You are welcome in our home anytime, but please, don't involve my husband in activities that keep him from his family. While he is out having fun with you, his wife and kids are alone, and we miss him.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The bachelors in the office are not responsible for your husband's decisions. He is. Some arms twist more easily than others. Your message translates: "Don't offer candy to my baby." Better to direct your message to your husband.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A casual acquaintance, after losing his wife, started calling me and coming to my home. He has never taken me out. (I give him tea, cake, etc.)

He told me he would like to have sex relations. I told him without a license it does not go. He still comes around, hoping to be a winner.

What is your advice to me about him?

FOREST HILLS, N.Y.

DEAR FOREST: He bluntly told you what he had in mind, and you clearly told him "no rice, no dice." If you enjoy his company, bring out the tea and cake, but hold back the "etc." or he will be the winner.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Today my 22-year-old son put two 15-cent stamps on a letter that could have gone for 20 cents, because all he had were 15-cent stamps. Well, his father hit the roof! I am not talking about just being upset, I am talking about violence! He called our son every four-letter name in the book, interspersed with stupid, lazy, no good, etc. Our son is neither stupid nor lazy. He is a good kid who works with his father putting in 9-10 hours a day to earn his college fees.

This goes on all the time with all four of our sons. They are never allowed to defend themselves or talk back to him because that would be "disrespectful," so they just take his bullying.

I say he is abusing the boys verbally; he says he is trying to make "men" of them. Please comment.

THE BULLY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: They're your sons, too. Writing to me about your husband's abusive behavior won't improve the situation. Why don't you take the bull(y) by the horns and point out the fact that he's confusing "respect" with fear?

I hope he wakes up to reality soon, or he will have a lonely and loveless old age.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from wives who complain because their husbands have retired and are now "underfoot."

Abby, retired husbands do not have to be "underfoot." I know. Mine retired after 30 years, and we moved from a big city to a small town. I have my housework and he has his gardening and workshop. Whenever I need him for something, I call him with a loud bicycle horn and he comes running.

NO PROBLEMS IN TEXAS

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I are both 21 and want to get married, but we can't find a minister who will marry us because neither one of us belongs to a church.

I know we could go down to the city hall and get married by a judge or a justice of the peace, but we are both Christians and want a religious ceremony.

We can't afford to join a church just yet. Can you please help us?

THELMA AND FRANK

DEAR T. AND F.: Yes. Go to the Salvation Army and tell the people there what you've told me. Every commissioned officer of the Salvation Army is an ordained Christian minister, authorized to perform marriage ceremonies that will be legal and binding in every state in the United States. Good luck and God bless.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO CONSIDERING BREAST AUGMENTATION: Most women wrote that they had not been warned that their implants would "harden." Some said they return to their doctors periodically to have their breasts "popped" or "cracked" to keep them soft. Two said they had theirs removed, but the majority kept theirs, saying they preferred "grapefruits to raisins."

Return To Sender

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) – In a neat twist, a California homeowner will be sending energy to the local utility company.

When completed, the panels are expected to generate 3,185 watts an hour during peak collecting hours, enough to start the electric meter spinning backward and send the surplus energy back to the utility company.

Former Cattle Herder Gifted Musician

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

BETHLEHEM, South Africa (AP) — Nine years ago, Andrew Morosi played an African harp as he herded cattle in the lonely highlands.

Today, he plays rippling baroque arpeggios on his silver and ebony oboe and enters the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto this month.

"I am walking on cloud nine," he says. "It's what I have wanted for so long. Music is my life."

Like many rural African children, Morosi had been left in the care of his grandmother while his parents sought jobs. Turton, charmed by the boy when he met him in 1972, informally adopted him, and took the boy to his farm south of this Orange Free State Province town in 1974.

Two years later, as Turton was playing a Beethoven sonata on a grand piano in his farmhouse on a cold wintry night, the herdboy said: "Can I have a try?"

Turton recalled: "I took it as a joke. Anyone who has tried bringing someone to the piano knows that he's quite likely to find he has a block of wood on his hands."

But that night, Morosi played the first bar of the Pathetique Sonata. The next day, he played two more. In the days that followed, he memorized the music, playing by ear.

"It was the most extraordinary thing to see," Turton said. "He put his hands gently on the piano keys and did everything right. He got absolutely lost in the joy of it."

Until then, says Morosi, "I had played on a sekhankula, a traditional one-string violin. That night, I played Beethoven. It was amazing. Now I live for nothing else."

Morosi focused on the oboe because he had begun his training too late to specialize on the piano. He has studied for five years under Gerrit Bon, head of the music department at the University of Natal in South Africa.

A tape recording of Morosi playing the oboe was sent to the Toronto conservatory. Although Morosi does not meet academic qualifications, he was accepted on the basis of his performing ability.

Turton says the secret of Morosi's success is that "when he listens, his face starts to shine. He is almost transported to another realm. An extraordinary excitement comes through when he plays. His whole body shakes like a leaf ... If he can put that across to his audiences — and I think he probably will — I predict he'll be one of the great musicians."

Bon says Morosi has developed a "keen sense of hearing.

"Previously, he could happily play out of tune," he said. "His aural perception was almost non-existent, but it has improved tremendously. With proper care, he will become a very fine player. Obviously, at this stage, he has a long way to go, but he has made tremendous strides in the past year."

Though Morosi has played works by composers who include Bach, Telemann, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven and Schumann, Bon says he hasn't yet chosen a favorite "because it is still so new to him."

But the music professor adds, "he is already a very useful player."

Conservator Works To Prolong Life Of Rare Old Manuscripts

By DAVID LAWSKY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frank Mowery wants his work — and Shakespeare's — to last at least 400 years, give or take a century.

Mowery, conservator at the Folger Shakespeare Library, uses a combination of centuries-old crafts and modern technology to lengthen the life of the library's 79 copies of the 1623 First Folio, plus other books and pictures dating back to the 14th century.

The folios, leather-bound books bigger than telephone directories that were printed seven years after Shakespeare's death, provide the earliest and most accurate record of many of the Bard's plays.

Standing in the Folger vault next to the library's collection of First Folios, the largest such collection in the world, Mowery showed what happens if someone makes a serious error in handling rare old books, as someone did about 100 years ago by soaking a First Folio in bleach.

"The bleaching process was new and they didn't know anything about it," says Mowery. "They just knew it whitened the paper."

It also disintegrated the paper.

In the 1940s, a Folger curator put away the folio with a note that it was so delicate it must not be touched.

"When I got the package, nobody knew what was inside," Mowery said. He opened it to find nothing but disintegrating pages, mashed together. His tests showed the pages had an incredibly acidic pH of 2.5.

Mowery and his associate, Karen Garlick, carefully soaked out the acid page by page and fragment by fragment.

"The paper was so fragile that if you wer3mnot carejuiand ran your finger across the paper it would dissolve as if it were mud," he said. "It had no consistency of paper at all."

They added an alkaline buffing material to protect the pages from future acid attacks and dried them.

At that point, the folio was in bits and pieces. Over a period of seemingly endless hours, the bits were reassembled like a jigsaw puzzle, then encapsulated in mylar.

But many pieces are still missing, making it difficult to read the folio. Nonetheless, because each copy of the First Folio contains minor differences — because its printers disocovered typographical errors and corrected them as they went along — it may be useful to researchers trying to find the most accurate text of Shakespeare's plays.

For the performance of such a conservation job, Mowery, 29, whose father ran a university library and mother worked at a high school library, trained for years in Europe.

He built and bought a laboratory of sophisticated restoration equipment for the Folger. Even the water that comes into the laboratory is specially treated to strip it of harmful chemicals and minerals.

But the day of restorations that damage rare books is not over, Mowery says, even at well-known institutions. He says one of the three remaining Gutenberg Bibles on vellum, worth millions upon millions of dollars, was rebound with cheap, acidic leather that is dangerous to the Bible, instead of a more expensive leather manufactured specifically for binding rare books.

Mowery complained to the library director involved.

Mowery takes a longer view.

"Next year we could have a an atomic attack and it's all for nought, although I think our vaults are going to be there unless there's a direct hit," he says. The library is only one block from the Capitol.

He says of the books he restores:

"They've lasted 400 years so far. They should easily last at least that much longer before anybody else needs to do more work."

Mowery studied bookbinding in Hamburg with one teacher, book restoration with another and paper restoration in Vienna. He worked in Florence in the mid-1970s to help restore books damaged by the flood of 1966.

Now Mowery teaches his techniques to a few students. The Library of Congress also offers training and, in recent years, Columbia University and the University of Texas Humanities Research Center have started doing so.

The needs of the Folger are unique. A private library, it has at least one copy of 16,000 of the 26,000 different books known to have been printed in English between 1475 and 1640.

Its block-long vault, maintained at 50 percent humidity at 70 degrees Fahrenheit, contains more than 125,000 rare books.

Some of the more exotic are fascinating for their construction or binding. A small book on hunting is bound in deerhide and decorated with a solid silver deer and four silver Tudor roses.

Others are important for their historical content. A hand-written manuscript by Richard Stonley has a 1593 record of the purchase of "Venus and Adonis," the first recorded purchase of a Shakespeare work.

The heart of the collection is Shakespeare. In addition to First Folios, and the later Second and Third folios, the library has even rarer Quarto editions of some of Shakespeare's plays printed during his lifetime.

When he was hired in 1977, Mowery found the laboratory antiquated, so he built and bought sophisticated equipment after starting a fund to help pay for it.

One tool, built by Mowery as a simplified version of machines he saw in Munich and Hamburg, repairs holes in book pages.

The page being repaired sits on a screen, submerged in water that contains paper pulp. The water is sucked through the screen but the paper pulp cannot go through and fills the holes.

The machine is a vast improvement over repairing pages by hand. Mowery fixed the pages of a 150-page book in 90 minutes, instead of the 10 days it otherwise would have taken.

Once the pages are fixed the book is sewn together by hand on simple wooden frames similar to those that were in use hundreds of years ago.

Some pages are so delicate they must be enclosed in protective material. In some cases, acidic, hand-mixed ink used by printers or writers hundreds of years ago has eaten through the paper.

Mowery uses coverings of mylar that have lasted through artificial aging of 500 years.

Final Touches

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Several years ago, Sybille Pearson, once an actress and now a playwright, got a call from her agent. "She said, 'Sybille, two gentlemen just called and asked if you'd like to write a musical.'

"I said, 'Absolutely not, Audrey, I'm just learning. I don't know anything about musicals,'" Miss Pearson recalls. She was revising her first play then, "Sally and Marsha," a comedy about two Manhattan housewives.

Three months later, the same agent posed the same question. It got the same answer from this veritable beginner, who'd written only one other stage piece, a drama entitled "A Little Going Away Party."

A theater friend seemed stunned at her behavior. "He said, 'Why'd you say no to Maltby and Shire? And twice?' I said, 'Who?' I was a little stunned myself."

The Maltby was Richard Maltby Jr., Tony-winning director of Broadway's "Ain't Misbehavin.'" The Shire was David Shire, Hollywood composer and Oscar-winner for the theme song of "Norma Rae."

Things have since been sorted out. And all three are now putting final touches on that new musical, now in rehearsal. It's scheduled to start previews Oct. 15 and to premiere Nov. 6. On Broadway, no less.

"Baby" is the show, a production budgeted at $2.7 million. Miss Pearson wrote its book, with Shire contributing the music and Maltby the lyrics and direction.

"Baby," she says, concerns the impact of impending parenthoood on three couples — a pair of unmarried college kids who didn't plan on having a baby, a married couple in their 30s who've been trying to have a baby, and another married couple in their late 40s, with three kids grown and gone, who thought they were all through having children.

"It's not a diaper-and-pins musical," emphasizes Miss Pearson, a short, plain-spoken woman with close-cropped brown hair. "It'll be a theatrical experience that's grounded in moments we all know.

"But hopefully it'll soar above them, because life does soar. It'll examine the fear and exhilaration of change."

Her play had a first staged reading in 1980 at the O'Neill Theater Center's prestigious national playwright's conference in Waterford, Conn. Then came a production of it at Yale Rep.

Colored Lights Project Art At Times Square

By ELIZABETH BIBB

NEW YORK (UPI) — With more than a million people a day passing through Times Square, it is a prime spot for anyone with a message, from street corner evangelists to soap box politicians.

Now the "crossroads of the world" has become a place for visual artists to get their own messages to the public — via 800 square feet of colored light bulbs on a computerized billboard.

Through the "Message to the Public" project, a different artist each month gets a chance see his work up in lights on Broadway.

So far, 20 artists have had their "messages" animated on the 20-by-40-foot electronic billboard owned by Spectacolor Inc.

The pieces run during the last two weeks of every month, for about 35 seconds every 20 minutes, sandwiched between advertisements for things like Broadway shows, restaurants or soft drinks.

"It gives an artist the potential for a really big audience," said artist Jane Dickson, who helped inspire the project when she worked as a computer programmer at Spectacolor.

Ms. Dickson said her former boss at Spectacolor, George Stombley, an art enthusiast, orginated the idea to use the board for something other than advertising. He told Ms. Dickson that if she could arrange it, he would donate his billboard at Times Square for use by visual artists.

The Public Art Fund offered to sponsor the project. The non-profit organization has coordinated 20 other projects for art in public places throughout New York.

"This is the first time we've had our public art on private property," said Jessica Cusick, project director of the fund.

Spectacolor also agreed to contribute the services of a computer programmer to the project. That offer, along with board time, was valued at more than $40,000 a year, said Ms. Cusick.

The artists are chosen by invitational competition. They come from all round the country and each receives $250 if his or her work is chosen.

Ms. Dickson acts as the link between abstract artist and high-tech programmer. She said the transition from graphics to lightbulbs isn't always easy.

"I, as an artist, tend to think relatively rather than absolutely. But with computers it's either on or off," she said, so rapport with the programmer is essential.

Programmer Curtis King, who has worked with most of the artists involved in the project since it began in 1982, "has been wonderful," Ms. Dickson said. "There are lots of options available the artist might not know about. Curtis makes it easy for artists to find out about them."

Ms. Dickson herself chose a computer game theme to transmit her own anti-war message that ran last December. She used the phrase "Let them eat cake, the pie's all gone," to describe the escalating defense budget.

Computer game characters shot off the letters of the phrase, one by one, ending up in a giant explosion, she said.

Animating things like explosions, which are popular with the artists, is a little tricky, said Tom Gemignani, a computer artist at Spectacolor.

"There are four basic colors of bulbs — white, blue, green and red. They come in clusters of four. We mix them to get the colors we need, but sometimes we don't get exactly the colors the artists want," Gemignani said.

Almost anything goes for designs, but Spectacolor has the final word.

The only complaint about subject matter came from a woman who was upset that a subway graffiti artist had been selected to display his wares electronically, Ms. Cusick said.

Cultural Funds Granted By General Assembly

By CHANCY KAPP
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

"A remarkable recognition of the importance of cultural activities to the people of North Carolina." That's how Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources characterizes recent action by the N. C. General Assembly to appropriate new funds for public libraries, the N. C. Museum of History, and the North Carolina Symphony.

In the budget recently passed, members of the General Assembly included in appropriations for Cultura Resources a $3 million annual increase in the State Aid to Public Libraries program administered by the Division of the State Library; $1 million to assist in moving the N. C. Museum of History into new quarters formerly occupied by the N. C. Museum of Art in downtown Raleigh; and $400,000 to assist the North Carolina Symphony in building a permanent endowment fund.

The $3 million additional appropriation for State Aid to Public Libraries bring the total annual budget for the statewide program to almost $7.8 million.

Funds from the program help support library programs and services in regional, county and municipal libraries. The State Library distributes funds to eligible libraries through a State Aid formula.

The $1 million appropriated for the N.C. Museum of History will go toward the $3.5 million needed for the museum's planned move into space vacated by the N. C. Museum of Art on East Morgan Street in downtown Raleigh. The appropriation requires that the remaining $2.5 million be raised from private sources.

Plans call for the renovation of the old building and construction of an annex. The project will double the museum's exhibition space and triple its classroom area at a fraction of the cost of new construction.

The North Carolina Symphony will apply the additional $400,000 to its efforts to build a permanent endowment fund. The appropriation requires that the symphony match each state dollar with three dollars of new private money.

For details about the programs and budgets of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, interested persons or organizations are to contact the Communications Office, Department of Cultural Resources, 109 East Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, telephone 733-5722.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LOUISE WILKERSON PERRY

Although popular "best seller lists" provide readers with titles they won't want to miss, there are many other current books which will not make the lists but which are sure to provide hours of engrossing and entertaining reading. The following novels in that category have recently been added to the collection of Sheppard's East Branch, located at 2000 Cedar Lane, in the Recreation and Parks Department/Branch Library complex near Jaycee Park.

East Branch Library is open from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Noel Barker's newest book, "Farewell to France," is a novel of star-crossed lovers torn apart by duty to a cause and devotion to others. Sonia Riccardi, impetuous and sensual, was a woman no man could resist. And Larry Astell, heir to a champagne fortune, knew their passion was the most important part of his life — until war placed in jeopardy all they held dear — love, family and country. From the Left Bank of the 1930s to Nazi-occupied Paris, "A Farewelll to France" is a rich sweeping novel guaranteed to entertain.

In "Blood and Orchids" by Norman Kathov, the year is 1930 and the setting is the peaceful island of Hawaii before Pearl Harbor, ruled by five families and the last of the Hawaiian royalty, Princess Luahine. When a young society woman is found brutally beaten on the beach, her accusation of four local boys outrages both mainlanders and natives. What follows is a confrontation that will decide the fate of many, and which makes for a first-rate novel of suspense as well as a fascinating historical view of Hawaii before World War II.

"Advances" by Samantha Joseph is a contemporary novel dealing with the glamorous and competitive world of big-money publishing. It is the story of Angela Vaccaro, a beautiful and intelligent young woman who transforms herself from an unhappy Queens housewife into a celebrated bestselling author. Along the way, she experiences marriage to an Italian heir, involvement in a murder plot, and rejection by her socially prominent in-laws. When she turns her paintful experiences into a novel, she is astonished to find herself an instanat success, not equipped to handle the glittering world of the rich and famous but yearning for a deeper commitment toward life and love.

From the dirt-floored cottages of post-famine Ireland to the glittering mansions along New York's Fifth Avenue, "So Many Partings" by Cathy Cash Spellman is an engrossing novel by a first-rate storyteller. At its center is Thomas Dalton, the son of an Irish housemaid and an Anglo-Irish aristocrat, whose dreams will lead him to success, betrayal, and ultimate triumph. Above all, it is about the women who shape his world — the mother who abandoned him, the mistress who loves him, the wife whose ill-fated love is the catalyst for all he becomes, and the granddaughter who is the inheritor of his legacy.

"Paintings in Blue" could very well be the title of David Curtis Smith's exhibit of paintings now on view in the hallway and north gallery at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

Smith, currently visting artist at Central Carolina Technical College, received his BFA degree from UNC-Greensboro. This past summer he won a fellowship to study with Richard Anuskiewicz.

A realist who states that his search "is for a fleeting or particularly elusive imagery, one to draw the viewer into a new situation — one in which the viewer must employ his own ability to see and to perceive," Smith's show at GMA will very likely be well received. It's a handsome show, with clean, realistic images of the kind that many viewers will respond to positively.

Several facets of imagery are easily discernable in these works by Smith. One is the artist's preference for the color blue. The backgrounds against which workers are shown in construction paintings, the calm flow of water in paintings of water and piers, and the foreground French doors in an interior painting are all dominated by blues, ranging from silvery water blues to cobalt and prussian blues.

Another noticeable imagery factor is the uncluttered patterning of these paintings. Three paintings of construction workers are void of accessory clutter that would detract from the "elusive imagery" of men caught in the act of expending energy. Smith pinpoints the precise moment of a particular movement in work in these paintings. The muscular strength of workers is there, but in understated gestures. These paintings gain in imagery through the sharply delineated contrast of blue wood, white work clothes, and sunburned bronze of flesh.

A couple of paintings depict close-up views of military vehicles in gray and khaki colors of rusting metal. In two small paintings of fuse box arrangements, Smith expands his spectrum of color to a more brilliant palette.

With these metallic exceptions, Smith's work involves extensive use of wood as subject matter — blue painted wood in the construction paintings; gray and faded red wood in the piles and planks of the water and pier scenes; and the highly polished wood areas in the single painting of a house interior of French doors and beyond, a hallway and stairs bathed in a golden glow.

The interior painting, "Into The Foyer," conveys an architectural poetry akin to Hobson Pittman's well known paintings of interiors of homes — but without the impressionistic softness with which Pittman endowed his work.

Realism in a variety of stylistic approaches is again very much in favor in painting today. This small show (about a dozen works mostly on a large scale) is a positive verification that realism does not have to equate to photographic imitation in art.

Three Art Shows Opening On Campus

Three art shows will open in the Gray Art Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Centrer, East Carolina University, on Thursday. A reception for the public and the artists will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The three shows to go on view are: "Clay Tapestries" by Rinda Metz; Bette Bates' "MFA Thesis Works in Printmaking"; and "Works in Progress" pieces by ECU graduate students.

Ms. Metz, currently a faculty member at Ohio Wesylan University, taught ceramics and directed the art gallery at Chowan College in Murfreesboro from 1979 to 1982. Originally from New Haven, Conn., she holds a degree in biology from Indiana University and the M.F.A. degree in ceramics from Tulane University. The artist is a person of diversified interests — symphonic music, horse riding, canoeing and ornithology. She is a member of the Tri-State Sculptors, and has been active in advancing the status of women artists in the South.

Her "Tapestries" are created by weaving hand-rolled colored coils of clay into a chicken wire grid. The pieces are displayed by being suspenced in space.

•Bette Bates, an M.F.A. candidates at the ECU School of Art, is currently living in northern California, where her husband, Robert Dick, is professor of painting at Humbolt State University, Arcata. Her work consists of seven color lithographs, and reflects the theme of "transformation," the positive/negative effect of image reversal and juxtoposition.

"Works in Progress" is a selection from the current work of several ECU graduate art students. Chosen from a variety of media, this show will give the public an idea of current trends and methods being employed by ECU graduate students. (For information about sale of art work, students may be approached individually by telephone).

Symphony Concert Cancelled

The previously scheduled performance by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra for 8 p.m. Tuesday in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus has been cancelled.

Cancellation has been necessitated by the failure of negotiations for musicians contracts.

At this time there is no indication that the performance will be rescheduled for a later performance date.

The French explorer Jacques Cartier reached Canada in 1534. Seeking a northern passage to the Spice Islands, Cartier and his crew sailed through the Strait of Belle Isle and explored the Gulf of St. Lawrence. By following the coasts of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, he made his way to Gaspe.

The Friends of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will inaugurate the 1983-84 season with a gala evening of music on the grounds surrounding the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Flanagan Jr. on Oct. 2.

As a supporter of the school of music, members may attend the outdoor pops concert, a special evening of the Madrigal Dinner, a Progressive Scholarship Dinner with the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra, a "sneak-preview" of the Spring Concert Choir Tour and a spring reception at the home of Chancellor and Mrs. John Howell.

$100,000 Grant Made To Roanoke Arts Center

MANTEO — A grant for $100,000 has been presented as "seed money" for the early planning stages of a proposed Roanoke Island Center for the Arts.

Presentation of the check for the grant was made recently at Manteo by state Sen. J.J. (Monk) Harrington. The $100,000 appropriation stems from a bill introduced by Harrington and approved by both the state Senate and House of Representatives.

The planned center will be under the direction of the Roanoke Island Historical Association, the agency that coordinates production of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama. It will be located adjacent to the Waterside Theater where "The Lost Colony" has been presented since 1937.

In addition to housing administrative offices for the outdoor drama, the center will also boast a state-of-the-art 600-seat prescenium theater, a smaller studio theater, scene and costume shops, rehearsal space and an art gallery.

"I think the Roanoke Island Center for the Arts will be a major cultural addition to our stte," Harrington commented. "In addition to its generating strong nationwide publicity for North Carolina, Outer Banks tourism will also benefit greatly from the center's year-round activities. It's a magnificant dream that deserves to be a reality."

Harrington said he foresees a second $100,000 being made available in 1984. Then, beginning in 1985, the "real push" will come up for a campaign to raise at least $2 million in funds for construction of the facility.

Like A Homecoming

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cybill Shepherd says going to Texas to film the pilot for her first television series, "The Yellow Rose," was like a homecoming.

In the new NBC series, she plays the steely widow of a Texas pioneer so legendary it would have taken John Wayne to play him. She has three stepsons, all older than she, and her own 8-year-old daughter.

"I loved being in Texas again," she says. "It was the first time I'd worked in Texas since I did 'The Last Picture Show' there. We did that at Archer City."

The 1971 movie was her first and the beginning of her professional and personal relationship with director Peter Bogdanovich. Their association is over, although she says they're still friends.

"The Yellow Rose," the name of the 200,000-acre cattle ranch on which the show is set, was filmed in the vicinity of Del Rio, along the Rio Grande and the border with Mexico.

Miss Shepherd may not see Texas again for a while. The series will be filmed in the desert northeast of Los Angeles. A second unit goes to Texas for establishing scenes, but no actor will make the trip.

She stars as Colleen Champion, the widow of Wade Champion. She was 19 and he was 65 when they married. Sam Elliott is Chance, a hitherto unknown illegitimate son who appears in the first show after seven years in prison. David Soul is Roy, the son who runs the day-to-day business of the ranch. Edward Albert is Quisto, the son who runs the ranch's legal affairs. The show also stars Susan Anspach, Noah Berry and Ken Curtis.

Miss Shepherd is a native of Memphis and a one-time beauty queen whose good looks made her one of the world's top models. From that she began to star in such movies as "The Last Picture Show," "The Heartbreak Kid," "Daisy Miller" and "Taxi Driver."

Then her feature film career came to a halt. In the last three years she starred only in a TV movie and an episode of "Fantasy Island."

"I'd always told my agent I didn't want to do television," she says. "Then I told my new agent I was interested in TV. I spent the last three years writing and ing regional theater singing in night clubs i York and Philadelphi Chicago."

After she broke up with Bogdanovich she married David Ford, who lives in Memphis, where she still has a home. They are now divorced.

"I loved the character of Colleen Champion. I knew I was perfect for the role. I almost had a nervous breakdown doing all the reading for the network. I knew I was perfect for the part, so why did I have to go through that? I only seem to read well for the parts I'm right for. I read well for 'The Heartbreak Kid' and for 'Yellow Rose.'

"Colleen is very independent and a very strong character," she says. "That's what attracted me. She's very athletic. She's a good horsewoman. She's down to earth. You have to be down to earth if you're a horsewoman."

Eurythmics Get Favorable Response With 'Sweet Dreams'

EURYTHMICS . . . Annie Lennox, a girl who studied the classics at London's Royal Academy of Music, and David Stewart, who ran off with a band at age 14 and has played everything from medieval to African rhythms, are Eurythmics. The duo has taken the world by storm with a dream hit call "Sweet Dreams Are Made Of This. (AP Laserphoto by Reed Saxon)

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — She studied the classics at London's Royal Academy of Music, and he ran off with a band at age 14 and went on to play every kind of music from African to medieval.

But together, as the Eurythmics, Annie Lennox and David Stewart have taken the world by storm with the hit, "Sweet Dreams Are Made of This." They also have a surprising stage show that sizzles with some of the best blue-eyed soul to cross the Atlantic in recent memory.

Make that green-eyed soul. With her huge emerald eyes, iridescent orange crew cut and masculine attire, Miss Lennox looks like a technicolor Grace Jones. But her "get-down" song stylings are reminiscent of Aretha Franklin.

So, how does a nice girl from Aberdeen, Scotland, learn to sing like that?

"When I was 15 and starting to go out with boys, I used to sneak out to dances when I could," she says in a pleasant Scottish burr during a recent tour stop in Los Angeles. "Although I didn't realize it, the music was all Motown — people like Otis Redding, the Supremes. I think I was more influenced by that than by the Beatles."

But it was not until she was past her teens that she seriously took up singing. She spent three years studying flute and piano at the Royal Academy.

"It was a mistake," she says.

Still, her classical training gave her a strong sense of rhythm and harmony which she has put to use with the Eurythmics along with her flute playing.

Compared to Miss Lennox, Stewart had been leading a wild existence. He learned to play guitar at 13 after he was laid up with a knee injury, and at 14 decided it was time to leave his hometown in the north of England.

"I climbed into the back of a van, with all the equipment, after a gig," he says.

From then on, he says, "I was into all sorts of concoctions of music and people and drugs and everything — almost near death sometimes; was twice in the hospital. Got married when I was 17, ran off with this all-girl group when I was 22."

In 1976, after Stewart broke up with a member of the all-girl band, a mutual friend introduced him to Miss Lennox, who was a waitress at the time. Within a year, they were living together and, with another musician, had formed a band called the Tourists.

The Tourists enjoyed modest success in England. But after three years, Stewart and Miss Lennox called it quits. They feared their management was taking advantage of them and they also didn't like performing the tunes written by their partner in what Stewart described as "a very particular kind of 1960s Byrds style."

So they decided to take their affairs — both creative and business — into their own hands.

"We made a manifesto to ourselves about what we were going to do, which was form our own company, own our own studio, get rid of that management company no matter how much it cost and live apart," Stewart said.

The Eurythmics, he said, is actually a "project" of their company, D & A Limited, which operates out of their very own 16th century deconsecrated church within walking distance from their separate north London apartments. They are no longer romantically involved.

The Eurythmics' first album earned them enough money to set up their own studio in a warehouse, and they immediately used it to record a second LP, even though it only had eight-track capacity and most professional studios have at least 16 and sometimes 24 or even 48 tracks.

"Everybody said, 'You're mad, the record company will never accept this,'" Stewart said. "And we said, 'We won't tell them what we're doing it for.' Of course, that studio became really well known amongst musicians for a hangout. In fact, Blondie made their last recording together at that studio.

"And (the Eurythmics recordings) turned into the 'Sweet Dreams' album, which up to now has sold 2½ million singles and a million and a half albums."

And, they say, it only cost about $450 to make it.

'HEE-HAW' HONORED

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Hee-Haw," consigned by critics to the bottom rung of TV's cultural scale, has survived sophisticated broadsides for 15 years and now has been honored in the Congressional Record.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., addressed the Senate saying, "I would like to offer a hearty salute on the 15th anniversary of television's most successful syndicated show, 'Hee-Haw.'

"For 15 years, the residents of Cornfield County have brought laughter and song into the homes of millions of Americans."

Baker singled out the homespun humor of Archie Campbell, Minnie Pearl, Grandpa Jones, Buck Owens and Roy Clark.

Undergoing Preservation At East Carolina University

Text By Stuart Morgan

Photos By Stuart Morgan, Dina Hill, Angela Lingerfelt

The USS Monitor foundered in a storm 16 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras on Dec. 31, 1862, while being towed to Beaufort to join the blockade of the Confederacy.

Although the world's first ironclad warship still rests upside down beneath 36 fathoms of water off Cape Hatteras, its claw-like iron anchor reached its Beaufort destination recently — 120 years, eight months and one day behind schedule.

Arrived Sept. 1

The 1,450-pound, four-fluked anchor with six feet of chain attached arrived in Beaufort at 6 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 1, aboard the Research Vessel Johnson, a converted 1927 U.S. Coast Guard cutter used in this year's Monitor expedition from Aug. 21 to Aug. 29.

As soon as the anchor was hoisted aboard the Johnson from the deep Monitor site off Cape Hatteras, it was thoroughly rinsed in salt water and then packed in water absorbent material. During the sea trip to Beaufort, a perforated rubber hose entwined the gauze-like material covering the artifact, which equally distributed salt water throughout the material enclosing the anchor. In addition, dark plastic material covered the wet package, to prevent leakage while a metal, pyramid-shaped structure (the base of which was attached to a wooden tray) supported the anchor in an upright position.

By Truck To Greenville

On Friday morning, Sept. 2, the protected anchor was off-loaded from the research vessel onto a truck and taken, at a slow speed, on the 85-mile trip to East Carolina University in Greenville.

After its arrival in Greenville, the anchor was weighed, then immediately unwrapped, lifted from the truck and maneuvered inside the garage door of the powerplant at ECU. Once its brace was removed, the anchor was carefully hoisted once more, then lowered into a large empty tank inside the plant which was quickly filled with fresh water.

"We're going to impose an electrical current on the anchor while it rests in the tank, and with the anchor acting as a cathode, a negative pole from which electrons and hydrogen gas flow," Curtiss Peterson explained, "this will break-down corrosion products and stabilize them."

Peterson, one of two conservators of the Monitor Technical Advisory Committee, said that the electrolytic reduction process would remove salt from the anchor, and added that preservation of the artifact would be completed in 18 to 24 months.

"The anchor would fall apart and turn to junk if it did not go through this process," Peterson commented.

Navy Official Curator

According to Dina Hill, research coordinator for East Carolina University's Maritime History and Underwater Research Program, the U.S. Navy is the official curator of all artifacts removed from the Monitor site. However, she added that other agencies and institutions usually assume responsibility for artifacts until the preservation process is completed.

"The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has overall responsibility for the Monitor sanctuary, and any and all research taking place there," Hill emphasized. "Curtiss Peterson, who currently works as a conservator for the Institute of Archaeology and Anthropology at the University of South Carolina, will supervise or oversee the preservation of the anchor while it's in Greenville."

Meanwhile, ECU's Maritime History and Underwater Research Program is currently developing conservation facilities on campus that will be capable of conserving artifacts from the USS Monitor and other wrecks.

New York Construction Site

According to Gordon Watts, director of underwater research for ECU's two-year graduate program, the anchor was probably constructed by Novelty Iron Works in New York sometime between October 1861 and January 1862.

"The anchor is very unusual in terms of traditional American anchors in that it has four flukes, flared ends used for digging in," Watts said. "Since it does not have any kind of stock, the anchor looks more like a grapnel."

The anchor is more than just an historic artifact, however. According to Watts, scientists and underwater archaeologists plan to learn vital information from the anchor itself.

"First, the anchor will tell us about the deterioration of large metal objects at the Monitor site. So, we'll be able to use information about the anchor to make generalizations about the condition of the turret," he explained. Recovery of the anchor may, in fact, be but a prelude to raising the "cheese box" gun turret which now rests beneath the overturned stern section of the vessel.

Good Design Records

"Second, since we have good engineering records about the design of the anchor, and as we now have the anchor itself, we can determine the accuracy and reliability of the historical source material pertaining to the construction of the Monitor," Watts remarked.

John Ericsson, the ironclad's engineer, provided detailed specifications to contractors who produced material for the vessel. By comparing the engineering record with the actual anchor itself, researchers will learn how strictly contractors of the period were required to adhere to Ericsson's specifications.

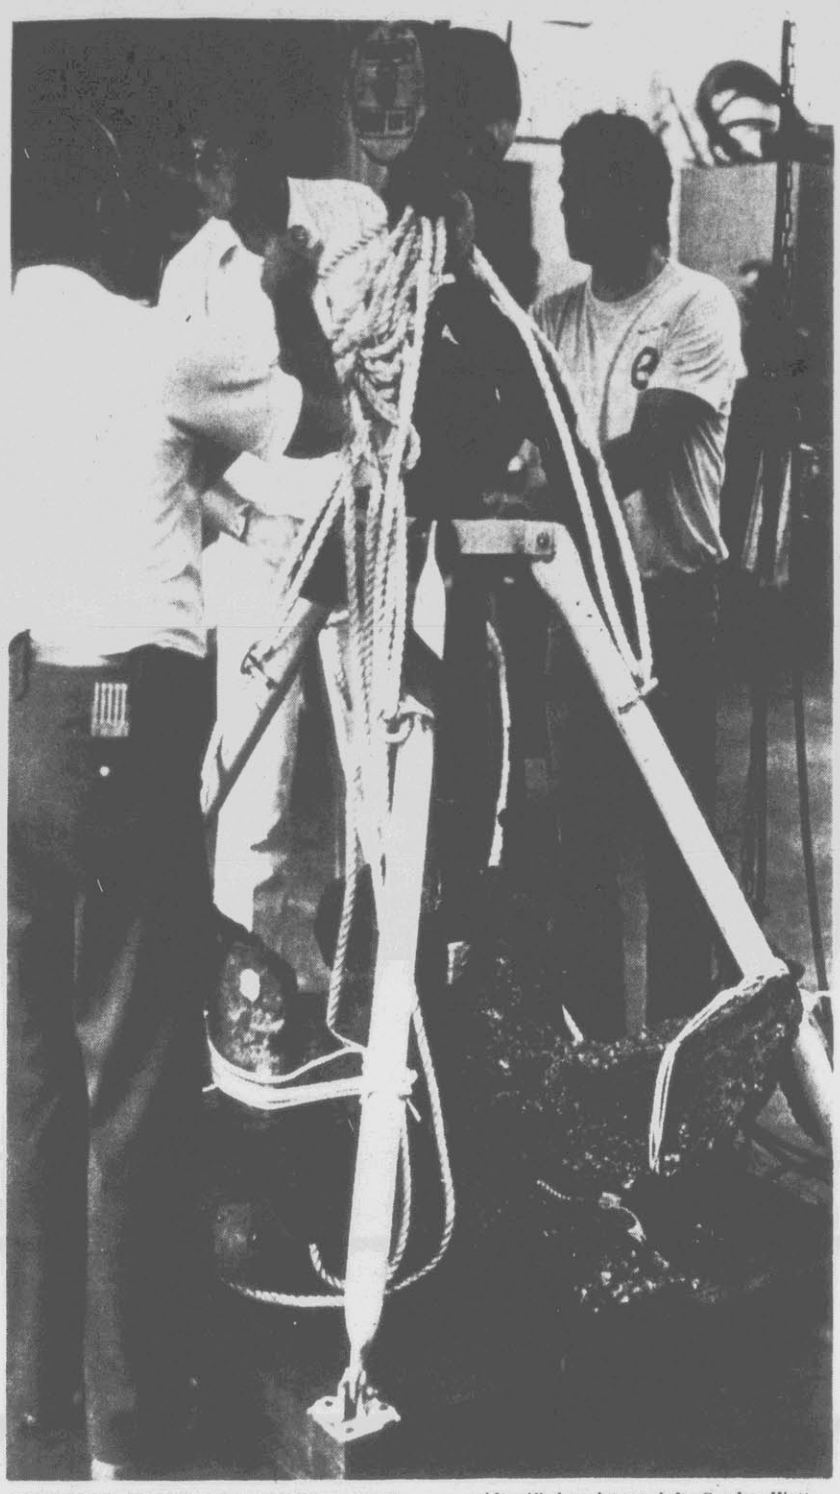
Watts pointed out that "material previously recovered from the Monitor wreck has generated so much interest in the site, that the anchor will be utilized in displays designed to provide access to the remains of the ship."

Logical Display Site

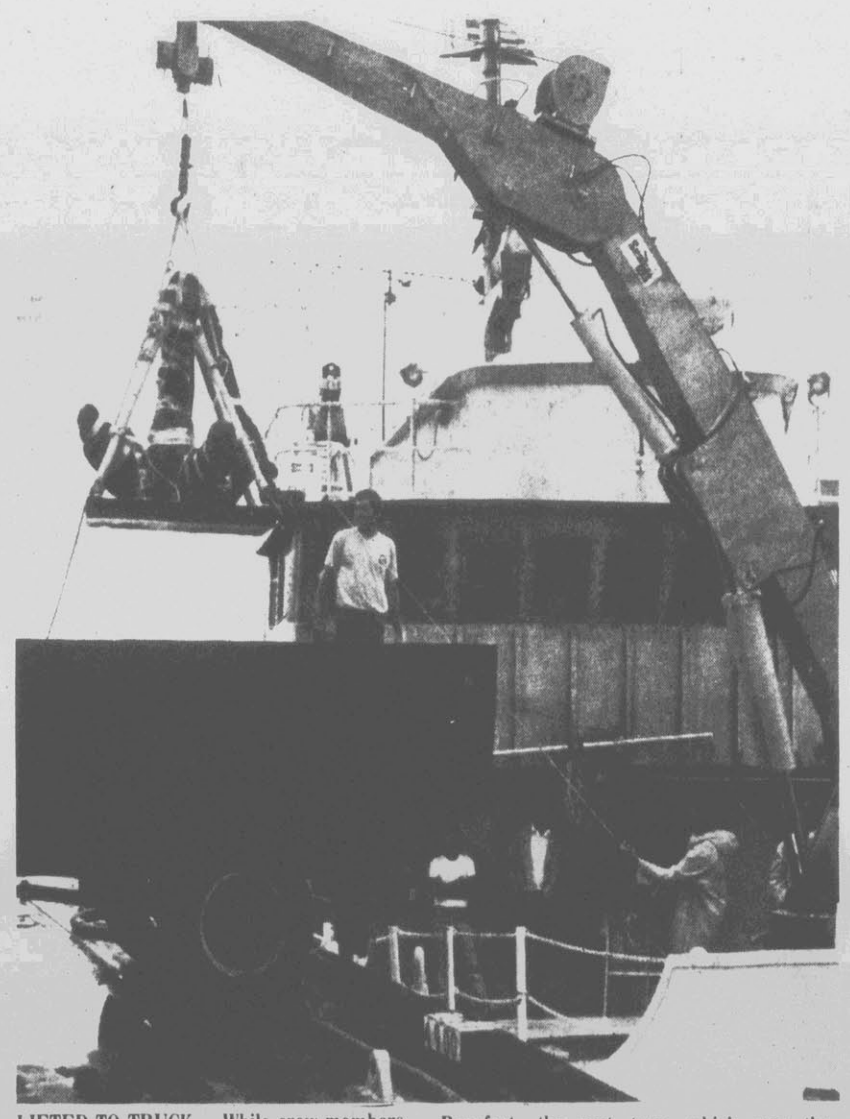
Dr. William N. Still, maritime historian for the same ECU program, believes the Hampton Roads area in Virginia — Norfolk, Newport News, Hampton — would be the logical site to display the anchor once the preservation process is completed in Greenville.

"That area is the logical site because of its proximity to the scene of the USS Monitor's famous battle against the CSS Virginia, also known as the Merrimack, at Hampton Roads on March 9, 1962," Still explained.

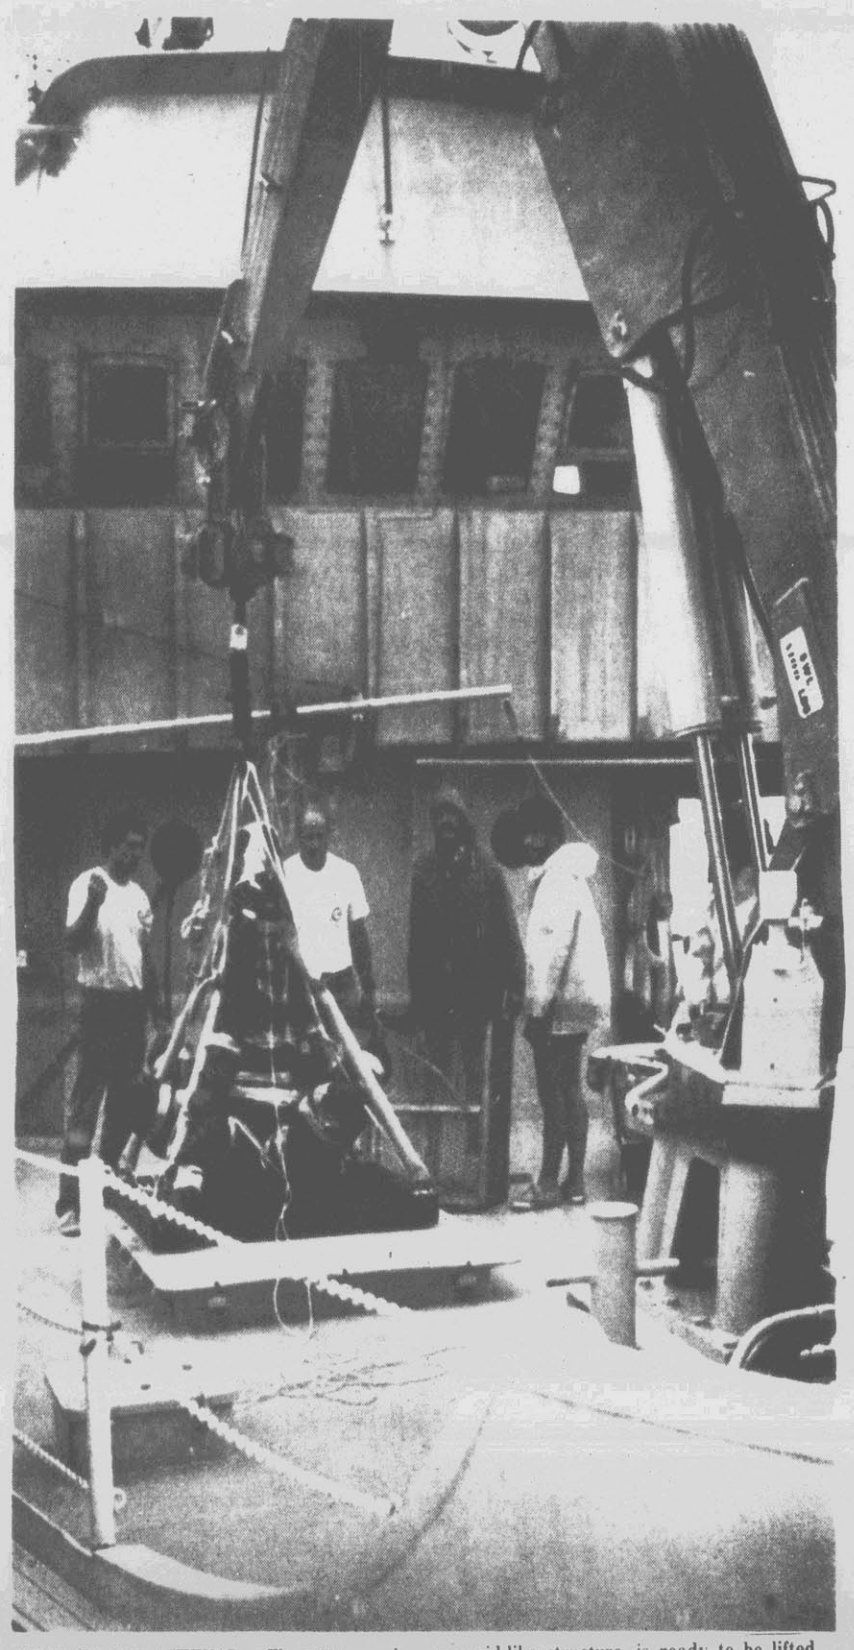
Meanwhile, for at least the duration of the preservation process, the anchor will remain in landlocked Greenville.



UNLOADED INSIDE THE POWER PLANT ... Photographers, reporters and television crews witnessed the final preparations of the anchor for transfer to the preservation tank as an unidentified assistant, left, Gordon Watts, center, and Wes Hall position the anchor beneath the crane's hook. (Reflector Photo by Angela Lingerfelt)

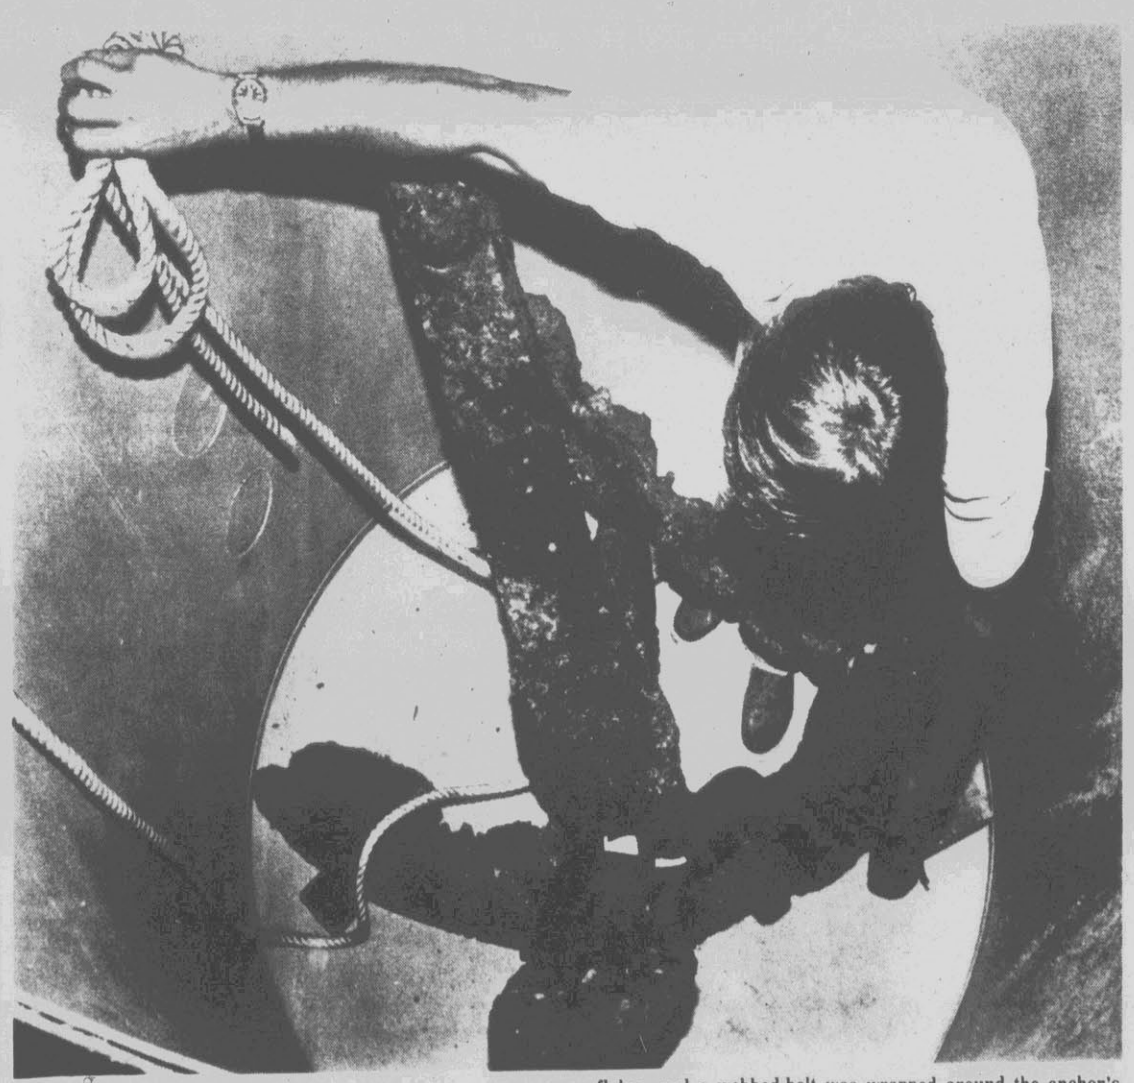


LIFTED TO TRUCK ... While crew members assist, a powerful crane lifts the historic Civil War anchor of the Monitor from the deck of the research vessel to a truck at a dock in Beaufort, the port town which was the destination of the ironclad when it sank on Dec. 31, 1862.



READIED FOR LIFTING ... The 1,600-pound, claw-like Monitor anchor, wrapped with wet towels and plastic and braced within a pyramid-like structure, is ready to be lifted from the fore deck of the Research Vessel Johnson.

ON ARRIVAL IN GREENVILLE . . . the anchor, still on the truck bed, is sprayed down with fresh water by Gordon Watts immediately after it was unwrapped from its protective covering of wet towels and plastic. The anchor at that time remained in its pyramid-shaped support structure. (Photo by Dina Hill).



FINAL PRESERVATION STEPS ... Gordon Watts unties the rope used in hoisting the anchor into a tank and makes final adjustments to insure the proper positioning of the anchor. Wooden blocks were placed beneath three of the anchor's four flukes, and a webbed-belt was wrapped around the anchor's crown to protect it during the 18-24 months period of electrolytic reduction.

Public Officials To Have Roles In Conventions

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Almost banished from the convention floor in recent years, elected public officials will have more of a say in North Carolina's delegations to both the Democratic and Republican national conventions next year.

The increase in the number of seats for elected party officials at the 1984 Democratic convention results from recommendations of a national commission headed by Gov. Jim Hunt, who maintains the move was needed to make sure the party remains in touch with mainstream Democratic voters.

At the Republican convention, Sen. John East, R-N.C., will be on the floor under a rule that reserves a seat for the most recently elected senator and the delegation is again expected to be headed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The Democratic convention will be held July 16-19 in San Francisco and the Republicans will meet Aug. 20-23 in Dallas.

The North Carolina delegation to the Democratic convention will consist of 88 delegates and 29 alternates. Twenty of the delegate seats will be reserved for party leaders and elected officials.

State Party Chairman David E. Price noted the size of the state's delegation has increased under a national formula that took into account the showing of the Carter-Mondale ticket in 1980.

A person who wants to become a delegate must file a notice of candidacy between Feb. 1 and May 17. Delegates will be selected by congressional district or at the state convention.

The proportion of delegates for each presidential candidate will be decided in the May 8 presidential primary.

"We are not a state where the number of supporters that show up at a precinct meeting determines who the delegation will support," Price said. "Our delegates will be apportioned out to the candidates according to the primary outcome."

Under a new national party rule, the delegates will not be bound to vote for their declared candidate. In past conventions, delegates were bound at least for the first ballot.

Price said he doesn't believe the rules change will have any major effect.

"We still anticipate lots of reasons that delegates will remain true to the pledge preference," he said. "We don't anticipate this will make a big difference."

In addition to more elected officials, the Democratic delegation must be equally divided between men and women and reflect the ratio of minority groups in the general electorate.

Price said blacks and Indians make up about 22 percent of the North Carolina electorate.

"We do not impose a strict quota," he said. "The rules, in fact, forbid an exact numerical quota, but we will certainly make an effort to have a delegation that mirrors the Democratic electorate of the state," Price said.

The North Carolina delegation to the Republican convention will consist of 53 delegates and 53 alternates.

State Party Chairman David Flaherty said 33 delegates will be picked from the congressional districts, 19 delegates will be selected at the state convention and East will take the remaining seat.

Flaherty said a person wanting to be a delegate to the national convention must participate at every level of the selection process — precinct, county, congressional district and state.

"You have got to be at every meeting if you want to be a delegate," he said. "You can't have someone voting for you in absential."

Thus far, there has been little campaign activity in the state although several of the major Democratic candidates have made swings into North Carolina. Price said he believes the most visible candidates have been former Vice President Walter Modndale and Sen. John Glenn, with "a lot of political leaders" working with South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings.

"There has not been the kind of the intense activity you find in the early states," Price said. "We come fairly late in the primary season. They realize this is a key state but it is a state that comes a little bit later in the process.

Flaherty said he believes President Reagan will run again.

"I don't think there is any question about that," he said.

Flaherty said the importance of the delegates will not be lessened just because the party's nominee will be known going into the convention.

"No matter how solid everybody is behind President Reagan, there is still a possibility, God forbid, that something might happen to him," Flaherty said. There is also the platform and other issues to work on.

"The most important issue is the opportunity to go to a convention and participate."

Florida Governor Wants Publishers To Improve Textbooks

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Worried that textbooks are too simple, Florida Gov. Bob Graham and the state Cabinet have called on publishers to produce more challenging texts if they want business in Florida.

For years, many teachers had complained that textbooks were too difficult, causing publishers to make them easier.

Now, Florida and other states want that trend reversed as part of a national campaign to upgrade academic standards.

"We want to give a clear signal to publishers to upgrade standards," says Florida Insurance Commissioner and Cabinet member Bill Gunter. The governor and Cabinet serve as the State Board of Education.

Graham, who is part of national movement to improve textbooks, noted that some older texts were more rigorous than newer ones.

Meanwhile, the governor and Cabinet have taken action on two other fronts in education.

First, the state leaders approved plans to create a new statewide college-placement test to be implemented next fall.

The standardized exam won't be used to keep freshmen out of colleges and universities, said Shelley S. Boone of the state Department of Education.

Boone said the test would be used for counseling and placement.

Now, Florida's community colleges and public universities rely on a mishmash of placement exams. One motive for developing a new statewide test is uniformity, he said.

State officials estimate that the test will cost $900,000, based on $10 a test given to 90,000 students. The Department of Education plans to ask the 1984 Legislature for test funds.

Secondly, the state plans to make greater use of national college entrance test scores to determine where Florida ranks compared to other states.

Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington wants all 305 public high schools in the state to set goals for producing more high achievers on the Scholastic Aptitude Test — SAT — and American College Testing exam — ACT.

The governor and members of the Cabinet have agreed to visit high schools to help set test goals, Turlington said. University and community college presidents are expected to join in the high school visits.

In 1981, Graham and the Cabinet adopted the five-year goal of boosting Florida's public education system into the upper 25 percent in America, or top 12 states.

Defense Lawyer Won Fame As 'Springman'

By JAMES LILKE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — For more than half a century, lawyer Luis Kutner has been "The Springman" of prelates and poets, the poor and the powerful jailed on the whims of misguided justice.

He earned a fortune — and the nickname — in his first year as a lawyer, an inventive 22-year-old who found profit during the Depression in his life's obsession, the writ of habeas corpus.

Two Chicago detectives had been fabricating evidence to put suspects behind bars. Kutner learned of it and filed writs through the mail demanding freedom for every one of the wrongly accused.

If the prisoner walked, he paid $2,000. If not, no charge.

"I had altogether 4,000 file. ... won 123 on those two (detectives) alone," Kutner recalls. "I made enough to do whatever I wanted."

What he wanted was justice, anywhere for anyone held illegally.

In 1930 Kutner founded World Habeus Corpus — an international tribunal to which all nations would subscribe, and to whose judgments all nations would acquiesce.

The idea has been regarded as both noble and naive.

Most noble perhaps to those whose freedom has been won with Kutner's aid, people like the late Cardinal Josef Mindszenty of Hungary, or those whose life hung on Kutner's persuasive powers, like the late Moise Tshombe, deposed president of the Congo.

Kutner entered the University of Chicago at age 15, clerked for Clarence Darrow and completed law school at 21. In 1952 he was judged among the 15 foremost U.S. poets and is an accomplished painter whose works have been shown at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

But, ultimately, it is his savvy and his legal strategies on which Kutner's reputation rests.

At 76, Kutner pores over pleas for help in his dark, wainscoted office, an aging crusader struggling to keep man at arm's length from his own worst self. Each day he sifts through packages and pictures pleading for aid: For the tortured Baha'is in Iran, for prisoners in the Soviet gulags, for people on death row in the United States.

Kutner's attributes made him the man to call in times of crisis:

— When Cardinal Mindszenty was imprisoned in Hungary in 1949 after being convicted of treason, Pope Pius XII retained Kutner, who won him a habitable cell and respite from relentless interrogations.

— When Tshombe fled the Congo in 1967 and was kidnapped en route to Spain and a promise of political asylum, his wife enlisted Kutner. In an 11th-hour plea, Kutner persuaded Algerian President Houari Boumedienne to reverse himself and block extradition to the Congo, where Tshombe faced execution on a charge of high treason.

Now, in the autumn of his career, Kutner girds for a final test: He hopes to force the Soviet Union to reveal the fate of Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat credited with saving more than 375,000 Hungarian Jews and gentiles during World War II.

He disappeared after the Soviets captured Budapest in 1945. The Soviet Union insist that Wallenberg died of a heart attack in a Soviet prison, but some insist that he has been seen alive.

Kutner believes the Soviets will comply if an international body orders an accounting. He has appealed personally to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to set the U.N. machinery in motion.

He also hopes to build on public clamor over the case, boosted when President Reagan made the Swede an honorary U.S. citizen recently.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a good Sunday to get a good rest and to build up your physical, mental and spiritual resources and well being and not to extend your present interests by any expansion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your hunches may not be good at all today so be alert and use only your good judgment. Study the situation around you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't take up any moot points with others or big trouble could result. Look up that good friend who can bring you happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A day for rest and relaxation and to plan your coming week's activities most wisely. Pay more attention to a family tie.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Stick to your finest principles and don't run off on any silly tangent that could be depressing. A good friend wants you to visit.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Seek out a practical person who can give you excellent advice, but don't put any new plan to work just as yet.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to think straight if you are to keep out of trouble today so don't arrive at any stupid decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to think over all those practical plans that are in your mind and know how best to put them in operation another day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may have some personal wish today but do nothing about it since later on you may change your mind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may have annoyances, but rise above them and don't lose your temper, and you can handle them wisely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be careful of your actions so that you do not irritate others, and lose good friends. You can garner data from a newcomer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan how to improve your status and make notes so that you won't forget ideas later on. The one you love is in a fine mood.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be with that wise person today instead of running off here and there without much purpose in mind.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those delightful young people who will be full of energy which should be channelled in right direction otherwise your progeny could easily get in with the wrong crowd and ruin an otherwise promising life.

Professor Says 'Scarlett' Image Is Only Myth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scarlett O'Hara was not born in 1845. She was created in 1936 when Margaret Mitchell published "Gone with the Wind."

Jean Friedman says she was once fired as a consultant to the Atlanta Historical Society for pointing out the difference.

Even in her finest green velvet dress, Scarlett "had no place in a historical exhibit," Ms. Friedman told society members who were trying to make the fictional heroine the center of a display on Southern women. "She is a myth."

And the Scarlett O'Hara myth — Southern women as coquettish, manipulative belles — has been perpetuated not only in the South but all over the country, said Ms. Friedman, now a history professor at the University of Georgia.

When her niece at a New Jersey school was outshone by three visiting Southern girls, the niece "was furious that these 'Southern women with their curly hair' could come and take all the boys. I tried to tell her that new girls are always the subject of attention. But the myth is alive and well," Ms. Friedman said in a speech earlier this month at Meredith College.

Church and family influenced Southern women much more than moonlight and magnolias, she told the young women.

"Forget Tara. 'Gone With the Wind' is just a Harlequin romance when you analyze it," she said.

"It's a destructive myth, extremely destructive to Southern women. It says they're manipulative, that they gain power through seduction.

"Harlequin romances always have the dark brooding lover who puts the woman down. Rhett Butler does that. And there's that famous love scene where he sweeps here up the stairs. That's actually a rape," she said.

She said the Freudian interpretation of such a woman is that she's a masochist. "All that is basically harmful," she said.

She has written a book, "The Enclosed Garden: Women in the Evangelical South, 1825-1885" to be published by the University of North Carolina Press, that is a history of the Southern community and its effect on women's roles.

She says the evidence shows that these women dreamed about community.

And who made up the community? Kinfolks, of course. Southerners' sense of a family was a stronger influence on Southern lifestyles than slavery ever pretended to be, Ms. Friedman said. Slaves were viewed as property that, like any other type of material objects, merely enhanced the family's position.

For these families, the center of the community was the church. That was where they found out whose crops were doing well and which cousins were doing what.

Unlike Northern women, Southern women had very little chance to talk over their problems with other women. One reason was that the South was a more rural society, and other people, let alone other women, were not easy to find.

The sense of community still exists in the South, Ms. Friedman said.

She says she has learned to feel at home in Watkinsville, Ga., about nine miles from Athens.

New Miss America To Be Crowned Saturday

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — She must possess the personality of the girl next door, the forensic abilities of a member of Congress and the shape of a high fashion model.

She will be demure, yet opinionated. Pretty, but not overly glamorous.

And, if she knows what's good for her, she will personify the all-American imagery of apple pie and Mom.

One woman will become famous next Saturday night, and an entire nation will probably forget her name by the next day.

There she is. Miss America.

Millions of Americans who tune their television sets Saturday to watch two hours of talent, swimsuit and evening gown competition among the 50 contestants will hear a new pageant song and see as many as 30 former Miss Americas on stage.

There will be four black women — no previous pageant has had more than two — and one Hispanic entrant. In talent contests, 33 will sing and 10 will dance. Some will do both. Five will play piano, one the violin, one the trumpet. And there is a lone baton twirler.

The contestants who have reached the nationally televised finals, chosen in local, county and state contests from among 80,000 women ranging in age from 17 to 26, follow more than half a century of women to the Boardwalk.

Dreamed up in 1921 to lure tourists to the Atlantic City beach, the first pageant was little more than a seaside review of eight women clad in swimsuits. A local newspaper reporter thought "Miss America" would be an appropriate title for such an epitome of U.S. womanhood, and the name stuck.

"In those days I could only attribute its success to the fact that Americans love a pretty girl and a competition, and they always have," said Albert A. Marks Jr., executive director of the pageant.

Basically a publicity gimmick gone wild, the pageant has nevertheless survived three wars, labor strikes, the Depression, feminist protests, casino gambling and the losses of former emcee Bert Perks and the song "There She Is, Miss America."

Some of the women who have used the Atlantic City Boardwalk as a springboard to fame include actress Lee Meriwether, Miss America 1955; television sportscaster Phyllis George, Miss America 1971 and wife of Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown; and Mary Ann Mobley, Miss America 1959, wife of pageant emcee, Gary Collins.

Today, when the idea of women parading in swimsuits before judges (this year's panel includes poet Rod McKuen, singer Jerry Vale and Miss America 1957, Marian McKnight Conway) seems somehow out of sync with the times, the pageant owes much of its continued popularity to its scholarship money, Marks said.

The scholarship program — initiated in 1945 and first won by Bess Myerson, now New York City Commissioner of Cultural Affairs — is "the biggest scholarship foundation in the world for young women," said Joan Jones, executive director of the Miss New York Pageant.

The national pageant has a $3 million budget, with $120,000 of that going directly to scholarships, and the local and state contests award scholarships worth $2.5 million around the country.

This year's Miss America will receive a $25,000 scholarship, $5,000 higher than last year's grant.

"The Miss America Pageant is still relevant in today's society with the women's movement and equal rights," said Miss Kentucky, Lynn Whitney Thompson, 24, of Lexington, Ky.

"The scholarship money is probably why it keeps lasting," she said, noting that the prizes in local and state pageants had helped her pay student loans she used to get her degree in telecommunications at the University of Kentucky.

The new Miss America will also earn more than $100,000 as she tours the nation for the year of her reign.

When Miss America 1983, 27-year-old Debra Sue Maffett of Anaheim, Calif., surrenders her crown next Saturday, she will have earned $105,000, not including the $20,000 scholarship.

The 50 contestants will all be registered at pageant headquarters in Convention Hall by Sunday.

Whoever wins will be the first to parade along the 134-foot runway next Saturday night to the tune of 'Look At Her," a rewritten version of a secondary song that has been a pageant fixture since 1968. It could not be used last year because of a claim of copyright infringement by a New York music company.

Up to 30 former Miss Americas will be back for the show, including Miss America 1933, Marian Bergeron McKnight, who will serve as grand marshal of Tuesday night's Boardwalk parade, traditionally the first time the contestants appear in public.

Preliminary competitions will take place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings to choose 10 semifinalists who will compete with a clean slate on Saturday night.

NO FAT ALLOWED — Donna Axum, 41, stands beside a portrat of herself as Miss American 1964. Misses America Past: A Little Bit Special

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

Once chosen America's miss, they are mothers and grandmothers, singers and songwriters, actresses and authors.

One runs a fashion boutique in Palm Beach. Another has ventured into the jungles of Vietnam to film a documentary. A third gives pep talks to stroke victims — because she's one herself.

They all share one title that changed their lives.

Each wore the Miss America crown.

"Once a Miss America, always a Miss America. You're just a little bit special all the time," said Miss America 1933 — Marian Bergeron McKnight, 65.

That title still carries special responsibility for Mrs. McKnight, even after 50 years, three children and five grandchildren.

"There are times when you don't feel like getting dressed up," she said. "But then this little thing says, 'Hey, you represent Miss America,' and you say, 'All right, I can't take the trash out in my nightgown.'"

"Miss Americas are not allowed to get fat and flabby," said Miss America 1964 — Donna Axum, 41, author of "The Outer You — The Inner You" and a mother of two in Little Rock, Ark.

The Miss America alumnae list includes Bess Myerson, 1945, now New York City commissioner of cultural affairs, and Lee Ann Meriwether, 1955, who co-starred in TV's long-running drama "Barnaby Jones."

Mary Ann Mobley, Miss America 1959, led film crews into Cambodia and Vietnam last fall and this spring for a syndicated documentary about children in Communist-held lands.

The first college student to win the pageant, Jean Bartel, Miss America 1943, now runs an international travel consulting business and hosts a syndicated television series, "It's a Woman's World," from Los Angeles.

Jane Jayroe Robinson, Miss America 1967, chose the news side of television; she anchors the 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. news at station KXAS in Dallas-Fort Worth.

Maria Beale Fletcher of Brentwood, Tenn., was an $85-a-week Rockette at Radio City Music Hall when she won the pageant in 1962. Her paycheck blossomed to $1,500 a week during her reign. She recently recorded an album of inspirational songs that she and her gynecologist husband wrote.

Several others have become Christian performers. Vonda Van Dyke Scoates, 1965, has recorded four albums of Christian music and written five books. She and her husband, David Scoates, a minister, have one child and live in Evanston, Ill.

Cheryl Prewitt Blackwood, 1980, of Nashville is singing professionally, running a Christian charm school and has written an autobiography, "A Bright Shining Place."

Kylene Barker Brandon, a gymnast and Miss America 1979, used her pageant earnings — about $100,000 — to open a fashion boutique, "d. Kylene," on Worth Avenue in Palm Beach, Fla. Now 27 and married, she recently released an album for exercising and is writing "My Miss America Fitness, Fashion and Beauty Book."

Miss America 1957, Marian McKnight Conway, is also a fitness buff — she runs six to 12 miles a day. Mrs. Conway, 46, is building a dinner-theater complex in California. She and her husband, actor Gary Conway, have two children.

Special

Alabama Town Plans Special Promotion: A 'Casket Carry'

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

GOODWATER, Ala. (AP) — Townspeople have become accustomed to the coffin leaning against a service station but people traveling through do a double take and some of them pull over.

"They say, 'What are you doing with that thing sitting there?'" said one of the station owners, Ray Hornsby.

"I just tell them that business is dead and we're getting ready to bury it."

While business is not what it has been in this Coosa County town of about 2,000 people where making caskets once was a major industry, it isn't dead either.

The casket, with a flier pinned to it, stands alongside the main street to promote the town's first "casket carry," one of the events planned for its Fall Festival Oct. 8.

As Hornsby talks about the festival, friends drop in and he challenges them to get teams together for the casket carry.

Each team will consist of seven people — six to tote the casket and one to ride inside, holding a glass of water and trying not to spill any. The "rider" must weigh at least 100 pounds and the team members must be at least 16 years old.

"We're going to have a slalom casket carry," said Jan Dunsieth, a member of the Pride and Action Committee sponsoring the festival. "They'll have to run through a little water and between saw-horses. The course will be about 50 yards long."

The committee "was trying to think about something to promote industry and the town itself. It is slowly deteriorating, like a lot of small towns. One of the former former casket companies now makes shelving, but we couldn't have a shelf toss."

Terri Thompson, wife of the Methodist minister, suggested the casket carry and a casket company volunteered to provide some out-of-date wood coffins for the race.

Mayor Dan Crew said no one has complained about the casket sitting on one of the town's busiest corners. "What have they got to object to?" he asked. "The purpose is to tie in with one of the oldest industries we've got."

Will he take part in the race?

"I might help carry a casket, but I'd rather be in the tobacco-spittin' contest," he said. "There is no way I'm going to get inside that casket."

One of his major concerns, Crew said, is that the town sits about halfway between Sylacauga and Talladega "and many of our people go to those places to shop. Their tax money goes other places and then they come home and expect Goodwater to have enough money to pay for all the services they want.

"We're trying to attract more people to live and trade here. We've got more industry than people now."

At Astral Industries Inc., Bill Talton manages a plant where 10 people assemble metal caskets. His crew, he said, can produce a casket in 41 minutes.

"Half the time when I tell people where I work, they think I'm saying 'gasket' instead of 'casket,'" Talton said. "I think the casket carry is a great idea. It will be a sporting event, enjoyable, involve people and bring the kind of fellowship that stimulates community feeling."

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Several weeks ago I read an article on raising responsible children. It was not the first such article I read; I even have a book on the subject. I suppose I keep hoping that if I read enough about responsibility, I will eventually stumble over the method I should use for my own children.

But so far the books and articles have all made the same point. Each of the authors states that the one surefire way of making kids responsible is to let them partcipate in the household chores in order to make them realize their own value to the family.

The key word here is "let." I have let my kids do housework ever since they could toddle. Meg once mopped my linoleum with such zeal that it turned two shades lighter; we had to skate around the kitchen on towels for two days because the floor had absorbed so much moisture.

And Zachary is just as helpful. He can add half an economy-sized bottle of Soft Scrub to a bathtub ring as fast as I can shriek, "That's enough!"

The problem is that once they really learn to do a chore, they aren't interested any more. Then it's not a question of letting. It's a question of coercion. Zachary has been known to sit on the floor for an hour while putting the same block into the toybox over and over. Threats are the only means of getting him to progress to block No. 2.

I don't like to threaten, and screaming gives me headaches, but I find each a handy, if not particularly effective method for venting frustration. Thus, I was quite proud of myself when I resorted to neither after Meg left her shoes out in the rain for the third time in so many weeks.

"Do you realize that you would need over 40 allowances to pay for that one pair of shoes?" I asked calmly. "That's almost a year's worth of allowances. Do you want to forgo your spending money for that long?"

Meg's eyes widened. "No."

"Well, I don't want you to either, but I have to find some way of making you remember to bring those shoes inside."

"I'll remember, Mommy, I promise."

"That's what you told me the last time before that and the time before that. You've been telling me that all summer. But even missing the movie last week because you couldn't wear wet shoes didn't make you remember. So I think I'll have to ground you."

"Until Monday."

"Until Monday!" she howled. "But that means I'll miss Ben's birthday party on Sunday."

"That's right."

"That's not fair!"

"Yes, it is fair. It isn't pleasant, but it's fair."

"Can't you think of anything else?"

"No. Can you?"

"Yes," she said slowly. "Why don't you ground me through Saturday, and I'll clean all the bathrooms and all the bedrooms and the den, and I can go to the party on Sunday."

"That sounds like a good compromise."

She set about her tasks immediately. And amazingly enough, she did a good job. She even managed to get about two-thirds of the ring off the bathtub. I was so impressed that, after reading the article on responsible children, I sat down with her and explained that because Daddy and I thought she was old enough to take on more responsibility, she was now in charge of cleaning the hall bathroom so that I would have more time to take her to all her extracurricular activities.

Believe it or not, her face did not light up with joy at the prospect of increasing her contribution to family life. "I am not a maid."

"Neither am I, and it's time the rest of the family started helping me out."

She sighed. "I'm a real dummy. I should never have let you know that I could do it."

Housing Industry Still Concerned

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Home loan rates may be heading lower again but that isn't likely to assuage the worries of those in the industry, more and more of whom seem to feel they are destined to be victimized.

It is understandable. If there is one thing that drives the industry, it is the level of interest rates since home sales customarily are made on loans of 80 percent or more of the purchase price.

The National Association of Home Builders last year estimated that a rate rise to 18 percent from 13 percent reduces the number of possible buyers by more than 7 million families, leaving only 17.2 million families able to buy.

Even though home mortgage rates have fallen slightly in recent weeks, to just under 14 percent, they remain well above the levels of last spring, when the average was around 12.5. That's a loss of 3 million potential buyers.

"The slowing of resale activity is a direct response to the rise in mortgage interest rates over the past 90 days," says Jack Carlson, the chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors.

Concerned about the future of interest rates, Carlson has been outspoken in denouncing the big federal budget deficits, which he believes will, unless corrected, inevitably put long-term pressure on borrowing costs.

Not everyone is as concerned about the industry. Critics argue that housing has been given such favored tax treatment over the years that it has come to be viewed as an investment as well as shelter.

That contention is quickly countered by developers and owners who point out that high interest rates, real estate taxes, fuel bills and repairs have all but eliminated operating profit or cash flow from many operations.

"Debt service is taking too many rentroll dollars, and the risk is growing that highly leveraged programs will exhibit zero or negative cash flows," says Daniel Fruitbine, chairman of D.B.G. Property Corp., a syndicator.

As he sees it, syndicators will have to place larger downpayments on their properties in order to avoid the consequences of high interest rates, losing in the process the advantages of leveraging and the protection of tax dollars.

There are critics also who argue that the United States no longer is underhoused, if it ever was, and that in fact there might be a housing surplus. They maintain that smaller houses and apartments could suffice for many people, and that vast amounts of useable housing have been abandoned in big cities.

Countering such assertions, the various housing industry groups have argued that good housing is the underpinning of many institutions and that it is a requirement of such basic goals as good mental and physical health.

They seldom hesitate to use this defense, especially in shooting down the trial balloons of those who would limit housing's tax benefits in order to help reduce the federal budget deficit.

That irony — that housing should be sacrificed, as they see it, so that government can get its house in order — is not one they are likely to abide.

Not, at least, so long as they seek to blame government officials for getting themselves and housing into the current predicament. That is, into the interest rate mess.

If you fall down in or near your home, the chances are you will be a casualty. It may be hard to believe, but nearly 13,000 Americans were killed last year from falls around the house, while about 2 million others were incapacitated for short or long periods of time.

Since the dictionary defines an accident as "an unfortunate event resulting from carelessness, unawareness, ignorance or unavoidable causes," it can be assumed a large percentage of these casualties could have been averted by intelligent attention to principles of safety.

Many accidents, for instance, occur in the home workshop, with only a comparatively small number due to the misuse of tools, power or otherwise. The greatest number are caused when somebody slips or trips over something on the floor. Home do-it-yourselfers can hardly avoid spilling something on the floor once in a while.

The important safety rule in this case is to stop what you are doing at once — instantly, not a few minutes later when you have finished what you were doing. If it's a liquid, wipe it up. If a non-liquid, pick it up. You can slip on a small piece of paper as easily as you can trip over a screwdriver.

Falls in the shower take place for a number of reasons, but the most common is because of the absence of adhesive strips or suction mats on the floor. There should be bars at two or three locations which a person can hang on to when changing positions. When there are elderly persons in the house — and perhaps even when there aren't — a non-slip sitdown area should be provided, especially if the shower is over a bathtub.

If you are standing on a ladder you are fishing for trouble if you reach out to use a screwdriver, hammer, paint brush, or roller. Every ladder carries a warning on which is the highest step you can use safely. It's usually one or two steps from the top, more if it's a long outside ladder.

Why do people overreach? Simply because they don't want to be bothered getting down and moving the ladder a little. Also, be sure the ladder is solidly set before you get on it and that it is far enough away from the house. An extension ladder should be one-fourth as far from the house foundation as the total length of the ladder. Thus, if you are using a 20-foot ladder, its bottom should be 5 feet from the foundation.

Back in the home workshop, another troublemaker is the failure to concentrate, especially if somebody comes into the area while you are operating a power machine. If you are sawing or sanding or grinding or anything else and somebody comes in, turn off the machine immediately, then look up and reply. Be certain you disengage the plug from the electric outlet before you make any adjustment to the machine. It is a matter of record that accidents with power tools occur more often when you are familiar with a machine than when you first use it. Familiarity often breeds carelessness.

If you have a project which calls for repeated operations of the same task, don't do them all at once. Vary the type of work you are doing every so often. Monotonous chores cause boredom, which causes carelessness. If you feel the least bit tired, stop and rest a while or quit for the day. Fatigue not only can get you into an accident, it can cause you to do poor work.

So many products necessary to home maintenance have chemicals in them that you are wise always to work where there is plenty of ventilation and no open lights. Do this even when you are sure there is no danger of fire or an explosion and you will get into a habit that may save your life someday when you make an error of judgement.

Fortunately, many manufacturers whose products once were dangerous are now making them without flammable and volatile formulas. Read the labels carefully, but no matter what they say, play it safe.

Some other safety measures include not wearing loose clothing in the workshop: not smoking; wearing goggles when grinding or performing any tasks when particles might fly; not using a file without a handle; checking hammer heads before using; locking up acids, solvents, etc., in cabinets so they won't be accessible to children, and not using dull tools, which cause more accidents than sharp ones. ——

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Garden Clinic

Q. Can you give me some information on growing garlic? (J.P., Hickory)

A. Fertility and cultural practices for garlic are similar to those for onions. Garlic produces a group of cloves encased in a sheath, rather than in a single bulb. Seperate garlic into single cloves for planting. Garlic from the gocery store is suitable for planting. The larger, outer cloves produce the best garlic. Plant them one to two inches deep in a well-fertilized garden, in rows 12 to 24 inches apart, with the cloves five to six inches apart. Plant garlic from the fall through January. Garlic can also be planted as early as possible in the spring. Delaying planting reduces yields. Harvest garlic when the top dies. Garlic may be stored under a wide range of temperatures, but does best under dry conditions between 40 and 60 degrees farenheit. Garlic can be treated as an annual by harvesting it each year. Garlic is hardy, however, and if left over the winter will sprout in the spring. For this reason, you may want to choose a corner in your vegetable or flower garden where you can let the garlic grow and harvest as you need it.

Q. What is meant by 'naturalizing' bulbs? (R.J., Walstonburg)

A. 'Naturalizing' bulbs means planting them in an area to give the impression that the bulbs had been planted there by nature. This effect can be achieved by randomly scattering bulbs over the site. Lightly-wooded areas or meadows are appropriate areas for naturalizing. Jonquils or daffodils are favorites for naturalizing because they are hardy and will multiply, which helps give the illusion that they are wild or native. Crocus, muscari, scilla and alliums also naturalize. Tulips are better suited for formal planting such as beds, borders and mass plantings because they do not return each year or multiply the way the other bulbs mentioned do.

French Styling To Set Trends

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With a large department store chain planning a month-long tribute to French products and several major introductions of new French furniture appearing on retail sales floors, home furnishings authorities are predicting the 1983-1984 selling season will go down as "the year of the French" in decorating trends and product direction.

But Howard Kaplan, an architect, designer and importer of French antiques and home furnishings, says the French revolution happened here some time ago.

Kaplan whose "French Country Store" in New York's Greenwich Village is full of French things, says he realized he was "sitting on a gold mine" several years ago.

At the time, he noticed the small store was taking in several million dollars a year and that customers came from every one of the 50 states, including Hawaii.

"We got letters from people all over the country, who would see something of ours in a magazine as a prop, asking where they could buy it," he said.

Then, he offered a mail order catalog for $2.50 in one of the home decorating magazines. "It brought 4,000 requests in 10 days," he says.

Kaplan says just the words "country French" are magic. "People come to me and say they love 'country French.' I ask them what they love about it and they can't come up with a single concrete detail. They don't know what it is, but they love it, anyway."

The graduate of Parsons School of Design says people are responding to a romantic fantasy — their idea of a simpler, more rural and more romantic time of innocence.

Since he saw the American appetite for things French could not be satisfied with the number of actual French antiques that exist, Kaplan recently put together a collection of made-in-America and moderate-priced French-style home furnishings designed to appeal to all lovers of the "country French" decorating style.

The collection, which includes more than 400 items designed by Kaplan as well as some imports from France, was introduced to retailers recently during the New York Gift Market. It will become available to consumers this winter.

Boutiques designed to look like Kaplan's store will open at Marshall Field in Chicago and at Hutzler's in Towson, Md., this November. Other stores are also expected to participate.

The merchandise will be available individually at many stores across the country, he said. Some items will be on sale at Bloomingdale's in New York when the store begins its salute to French products and culture Sept. 13.

What type of products say "France" to Americans?

Kaplan enumerated some of them: straw baskets, dishes with French provincial patterns, table linens and bed linens with small figured prints and cheerful colors, ceramic figurines, ashtrays, and bowls and bottles with words describing their contents in French.

Umbrellas, luggage, walking sticks, stationery, desk accessories, woodenware, pots and pans, placemats and napkins and doilies edged in tatting are a few of the additional products that will bear the "French Country Store" label.

First reaction from retailers is apparently very positive. According to a trade publication, many have beat a path to Kaplan's design studio to see the merchandise.

The positive attitude displayed by the general public and retailers towards the French style is also found in the press. According to Kaplan, many of the nation's magazines and newspapers are planning to feature articles and pictures of the merchandise.

Asked to account for the appeal of the country French style, Kaplan said "other countries come and go in the taste of the public, but France never goes out of style, because it embodies every one's most romantic fantasy of what life would or should be."

Here's the Answer

Q. — I plan to put down resilient floor tiles in two rooms. I did one room a few years ago and it came out well. Recently, I sent for and received your booklet on the installation of such tiles. Now I have run into a problem. There are three tile dealers in our area and not one of them carries tiles that are put down with adhesive. Don't they make them any more? One of the dealers said he just doesn't get them any more from the manufacturer. I did so well with the adhesive tiles the last time that I would like to use them again. Besides, the self-adhesive tiles cost more.

A. — A check was made with four dealers. Two of them had both types of tiles, two of them had only the self-sticking tiles. Inquiries brought the information that the tiles that are installed with adhesive can be purchased on order. Go back to one of the dealers and tell them you understand he can get the adhesive tiles merely by ordering them. If this produces no results, get the names of a couple of manufacturers and ask if the tiles you want can be delivered, either directly to you or through a dealer.

Q. — We have been searching for a brick home for some time. We finally found one, but it is 3,200 square feet and far too large for us. Everything else about it is just what we want. The house has been been empty for three years and hasn't sold because of its size. Nobody wants that large a house these days because the taxes are high and it costs more to heat. If people can remodel to make a house larger, there surely must be some literature available that shows how to remodel a house to make it smaller and suitable for a family of two. Can you make a suggestion?

A. — Yes, but it may not be to your liking. When a house has been for sale for three years, there is a possibility it is overpriced, size or no size. But even if it is priced fairly and assuming it could be reduced in size, a questionable project at best, it would be very expensive. Even if you did not resize it and you decided to close off some rooms to save on heating costs, you would have very little chance of getting taxes reduced. This may be your dream house, but be sure it doesn't become an economic nightmare. In any case, while there may be some kind of book or other literature on making a house smaller, it is not known to us. If any publisher or reader knows of one, contact me at AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020.

(The technique of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Cocaine Growers Ship Via Amazon

TABATINGA, Brazil (AP) — An increasing amount of cocaine now is making its way to the United States and Europe through the wilderness of Brazil's Amazon jungles and waterways. It is loaded onto small planes at clandestine airstrips, shipped along rivers or carried by commercial airline passengers.

U.S and Brazilian drug enforcement officers say Brazil's coca-leaf growing neighbors — Colombia, Peru and Bolivia — are taking advantage of the huge wilderness to smuggle cocaine into Brazil and off to such cities as Miami, New York, Paris or Rome.

Much of it passes through this small Amazon River town on the borders of Colombia and Peru.

The United States has taken an interest in Brazil's use as a trans-shipment point and producer of a jungle variety of coca called ipadu. The U.S. government this year gave Brazil four patrol boats to be used along the Amazon River and its tributaries and 10 trucks for finding traffickers leaving and entering along the rugged southwestern borders with Argentina and Paraguay.

Federal police figures show that 800 pounds of cocaine were seized in Brazil in 1982. Three hundred pounds of that total were confiscated in the Amazon. In all of 1981, 330 pounds of the illegal drug were found by police.

Several years ago Brazilian officials discovered that local Indians were cultivating and selling ipadu, the Amazon variety of the coca leaf, from which cocaine is processed.

"It has been growing there for 2,000 years and is exactly the same as the coca they have in the Andes," said a drug enforcement officer in Brazil's capital, Brasilia.

During raids in July and August in the jungle, federal police patrols pulled out and burned 5,000 ipadu plants, said Renato Surette, head of the federal police in Amazonas state.

Sales

As a Membership Sales Representative of The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, your "prospect list" includes every owner and manager of every business in the United States not already a member—right down to the one-person owner of the smallest business you can imagine on Main Street, USA!

Because from its Washington headquarters, literally across the street from the White House, the Chamber actively pursues the vital interests of the owners and managers of all businesses, large and small.

As a Membership Sales Representative, you can walk into any business and enjoy immediate recognition, present your "product" (which has NO competition), and explain your membership pricing structure which makes it possible to "close" on the first interview--no matter how large or small the business may be!

Simply by following the Chamber's well proven sales procedures (which you will learn during a three week training period on salary), you ought to be earning close to $25,000 in draw and commissions your first year, and $35,000 or higher in years three to five.

Territories now open include: Eastern North Carolina and vicinity. To learn more, and arrange a local interview, forward your resume in confidence to Mr. Art Wise.

NEA Leaders Chart Path To Moderation And Classroom Issues

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Education Association has never been short of critics since it shed its coffee club image in the late 1960s, started backing teacher strikes and began a relentless march into liberal politics.

So in the current atmosphere of educational controversy, it shouldn't be surprising to hear sharply worded ridicule like this: "NEA is promulgating a 1980s agenda based upon 1960s policies and rhetoric."

Except that the words come from the new executive director of the NEA.

The National Education Association, after a decade of battle against standardized testing and impassioned advocacy of such causes as a nuclear freeze, is getting a facelift. Its new leaders are charting a more moderate course and are concentrating on classroom issues.

The 1.6 million-member union is not expected to retreat from the political arena and its courtship of political candidates — usually Democrats — who share its enthusiasm for federal school aid.

But both Don Cameron, the new executive director, and Mary Hatwood Futrell, who replaced Willard H. McGuire as president on Sept. 1, say it is time for the NEA to devote more of its energy to school problems and how to improve the teaching profession.

The union has been thrust onto the defensive in the current national debate over how to improve the public schools by its hostility toward merit pay, which President Reagan has championed as "the American way.

"Until NEA supports badly needed reforms in salary, promotion and tenure policies, the improvements we so desperately need will only be delayed," the president said in May.

The union's politics and its pedagogy both took on a liberal cast, as it lobbied for a Cabinet-level Department of Education and more federal school aid, championed civil rights and the Equal Rights Amendment and waged war on standardized testing. Conservatives long ago pronounced anathema on the union.

Scott D. Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, feels the NEA's militance on pocketbook issues has hurt teachers' reputations and undermined public support for the schools. He believes the union should "stop chasing every rainbow that comes down the pike," such as nuclear disarmament.

Reagan, in a July 5 speech to the rival, much smaller American Federation of Teachers, accused the NEA of promoting "curriculum guides that seem to be more aimed at frightening and brainwashing American schoolchildren than in fostering learning and stimulating balanced, intelligent debate."

Reagan did not elaborate, but left little doubt he was referring to controversial NEA courses on the nuclear arms race and the Ku Klux Klan. The leading critic of both has been AFT President Albert Shanker, who complained that the NEA's arms guide minimized the Soviet threat and its KKK course labeled America a racist society.

Cameron and Ms. Futrell defend both courses, but Cameron told the NEA's 7,200 delegates at their recent convention in Philadelphia that the union should get out of the course-writing business and concentrate on developing positive stands on education issues.

After warning that "NEA is promulgating a 1980s agenda based upon 1960s policies and rhetoric," Cameron told the delegates it is time "for an open-minded reappraisal of many of those policies."

The NEA and the AFT, which seriously considered a merger in the early 1970s, have drifted further apart in recent years.

The independent NEA and its AFL-CIO rival have long-standing quarrels over testing, bilingual education and use of racial quotas in schools, jobs and union leadership.

Ms. Futrell says Shanker is "reaching for straws and trying to dredge up stuff that happened 10 years ago."

"We came out against testing in the 1970s because we felt that the tests were being used and abused to track kids...." she said. "As a result of our efforts, much of the bias and much of the discrimination is gone."

The delegates at the NEA convention quietly jettisoned the last remnants of the antitesting rhetoric that had been on the NEA's books since 1973. The union had sought a moratorium from 1973 to 1978 on all standardized student tests and in recent years had objected to using any test that was "potentially damaging to a student's self-concept" or otherwise objectionable.

The delegates scrapped a litany of conditions under which tests should not be used and instead adopted a resolution that recognizes the need for periodic testing and outlines ways the results can be put to best use.

But the NEA opposes using the National Teachers Exam or any other existing standardized test in making decisions about which teachers to hire. Shanker, favors making new teachers pass competency tests.

NEA leaders say that apart from merit pay, they endorse nearly every recommendation that the National Commission on Excellence in Education made to improve U.S. schools.

"No one denies that the standards were lowered. No one denies that we were permissive," said Ms. Futrell, 43, a veteran of 20 years as a business teacher in nearby Alexandria, Va. "Now it's time for us to put in a more rigorous program and have more rigorous standards."

Cameron, a former deputy director, replaced Terry Herndon, who steered the union's course for 10 years and spurred its heavy involvement ic the nuclear freeze movement in June.

Also moving into NEA's laadership suite were a new vice president, Keith Geiger of East Lansing, Mich., and secretary-treasurer, Roxanne E. Bradshaw of Colorado Springs, Colo. None of the new leaders is talking about curtailing the NEA's political activities.

The NEA is amassing a warchest of at least $3 million for the 1984 elections. Last fall it inaugurated a program that allows it to flood Congress with postcards from 132,000 members who have given the union their proxy on certain issues; it has budgeted $300,000 for its "lobby-by-mail" efforts this year.

The NEA is expected to throw its political support this fall to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale. He was among five Democratic presidential candidates who courted NEA delegates in Philadelphia.

Terence Reese of London is among the great player-writers of the game. He held the East cards on this hand from the Great Britain-Switzerland match at the 1964 World Team Olympiad. At the time, the Swiss were leading in the qualifying stage of the event.

In one room, the British had stopped in three no trump and made 11 tricks. The Swiss were more ambitious, and reached six diamonds after a limit raise and a cue-bidding sequence.

The match was being displayed on the huge Bridgerama board in front of a capacity audience. The final contract was not the world's best. Declarer's best chance was to draw trumps, ruff out hearts and cash his winners in the black suits. If he succeeded in stripping the cards in a defender's hand in one suit, he could perhaps engineer a throw-in in the other suit to force a ruff and sluff, and so lose only one black suit trick.

To the audience, it looked as if the slam was a shoo-in. When East followed to the second spade with the queen, the only hope for an end play would be in the club suit, and that would work as the cards lie. But a strange thing happened on the way to fulfillment.

Declarer won the opening lead, and duly ruffed out the hearts and drew trumps. He cashed the king of spades, and East dropped the queen. Suddenly, declarer had another line of play available.

If the queen of spades were indeed a singleton, declarer could claim his slam by simply playing three rounds of clubs now. If East won the third club, he would be forced to yield a ruff-sluff. If West won, he would either have to yield a ruff-sluff or else lead away from the jack of spades into declarer's combined ace-ten tenace.

The declarer opted for this line. Reese won the third club, but he still had a spade with which to exit safely, and declarer was down one.

Gary Collins Names Miss America

By Jay Bobbin

It's time, once again, for the annual Miss America Pageant.

The legendary beauty competition will be telecast live from Atlantic City, N.J. by NBC on Saturday, Sept. 17. Reigning titleholder Debra Sue Maffett will be turning her crown over to her successor, but the event will be especially noteworthy since it marks the 30th consecutive live broadcast of the pageant; many former Miss Americas will be on hand for the occasion.

It's also a special event for the emcee, "Hour Magazine" host Gary Collins, who fills the role for the second time. Not only is his wife (actress Mary Ann Mobley) a former Miss America herself, but he's pleased to have a second chance at hosting; his predecessor, actor Ron Ely, had only one outing after the firing of pageant veteran Bert Parks.

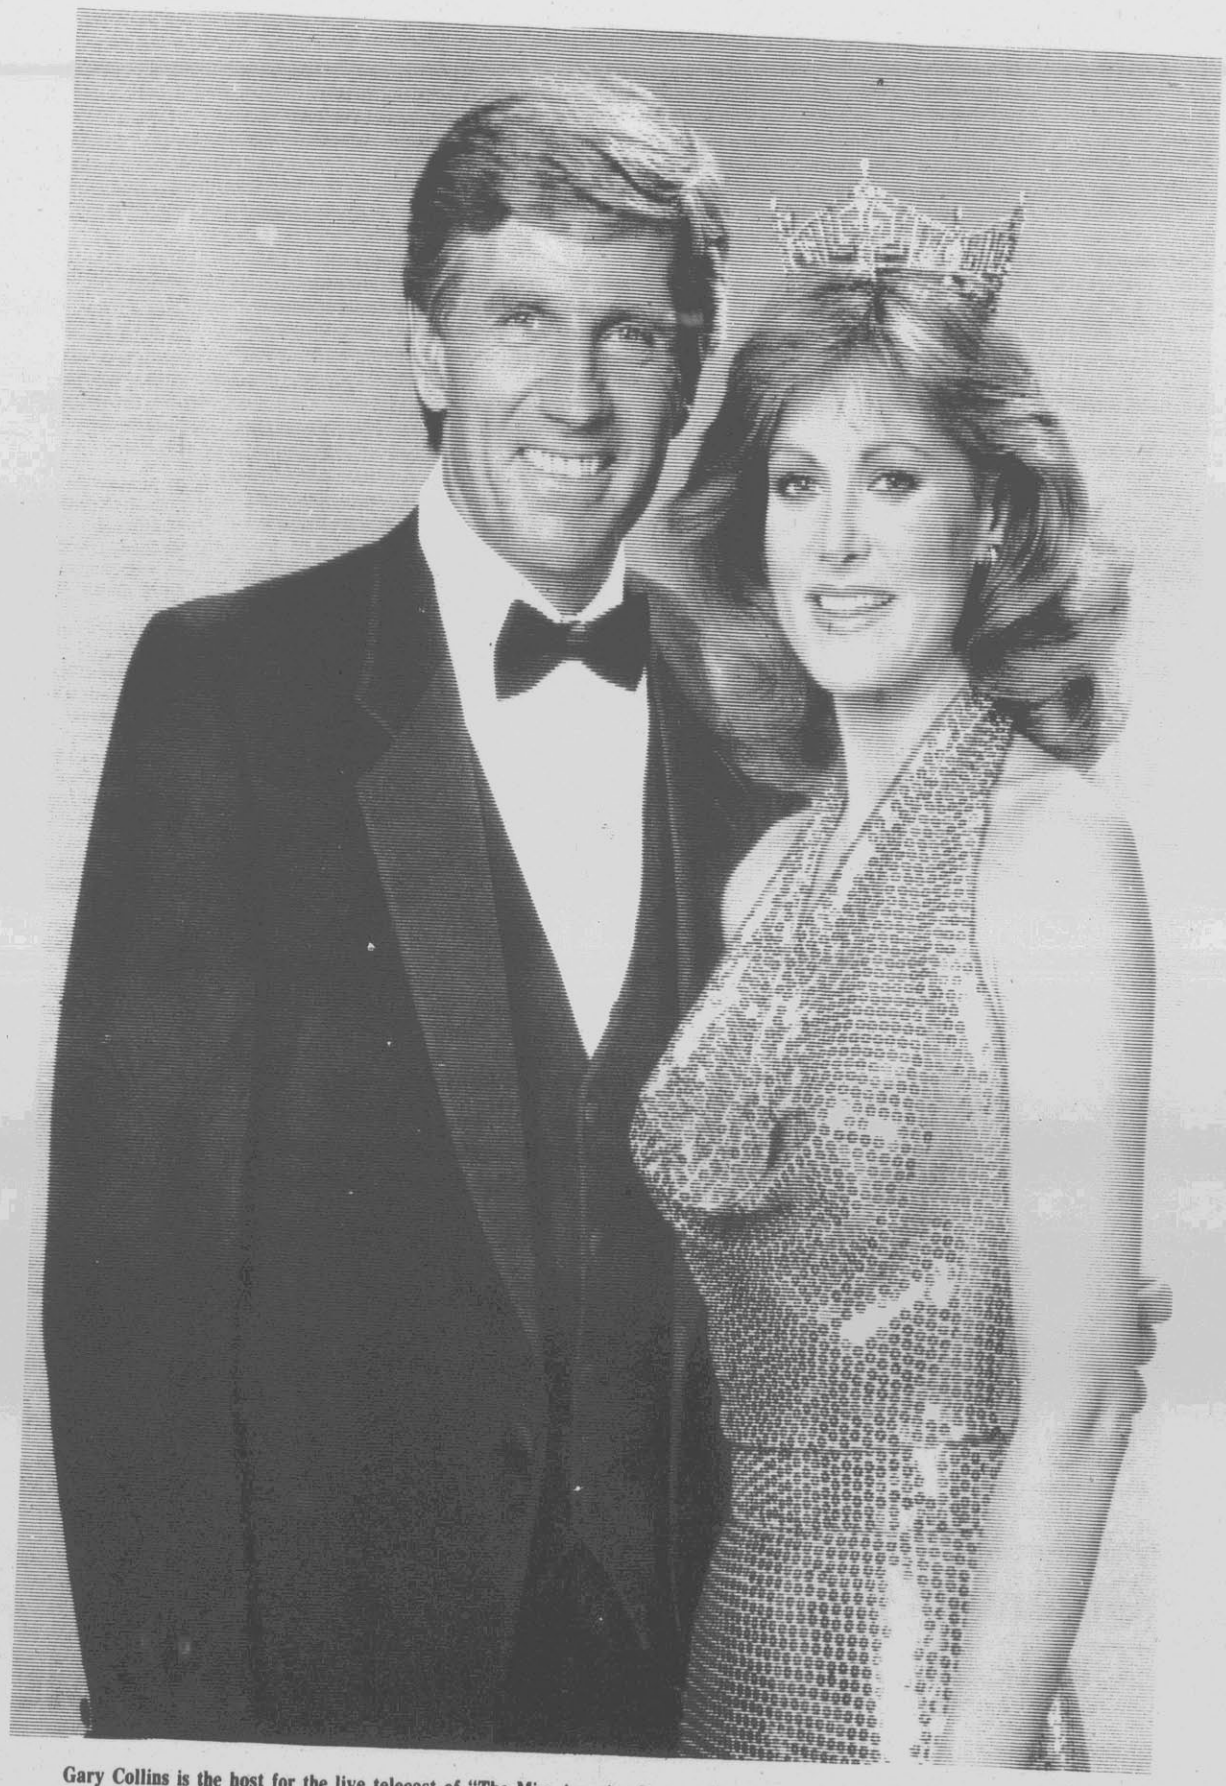
"Everything went so well last year," says Collins, "that I really feel comfortable going into it again. I was surprised, I must say, that I was as relaxed as I was while we were actually on the air; it must be doing 'Hour Magazine' that has taken most of that stage fright away."

When Parks was unceremoniously dismissed several years ago, public reaction was swift and strong; even Johnny Carson wore a "Bring Back Bert" T-shirt on "The Tonight Show." Collins has no illusions about being associated as closely with the pageant as Parks was... for now, anyway.

"I think it would take quite a few years to become as synonymous with the role as Bert was. I do feel that I've been well-accepted, though. Contractually, I have the same situation both Bert and Ron did; it's the option of the producers every year, and they can choose either to use or not to use me.

"I've had a long and fond relationship with these people," Collins continues, "because of Mary Ann's involvement in the Miss America program. Now that I've got the job, I've learned that they were thinking about me for it way back when. Ron and I and a number of other people were contacted about becoming the emcee when Bert left; it seemed to be a very unpopular job at the time, though, and I was also just getting 'Hour Magazine' started. It would have been a real dilemma for me if I had taken it then."

With that "dilemma" no longer a hazard, Collins is more than ready to name the new Miss America on Sept. 17.



Gary Collins is the host for the live telecast of "The Miss America Pageant," to air Saturday, Sept. 17 on NBC. He will be assisted by the reigning titleholder Debra Sue Maffett of California.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I think Jameson Parker on "Simon & Simon" is great. I would like some information about him and an address where I can write to him. K. S. SHIFLETT, CAREY, N.C.

TO K.S. SHIFLETT IN CAREY: Jameson Parker was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on November 18. His father was a career foreign service officer and Jameson spent most of his childhood overseas. His father eventually left his government job to become curator of the museum at Mount Vernon, Virginia, and Jameson divided his time between there and Vermont, where his mother lived. In 1972, Jameson moved to New York, where he eventually obtained work in TV commercials, off-Broadway productions, and was later cast as Dale Robinson in the daytime series "Somerset," followed by the role of Brad Vernon on "One Life to Live." Karate is his principal hobby and he works out five days a week working towards his second-degree black belt. He and his wife, Bonnie, an actress and photographer, live in Los Angeles with their two sons, four-year-old Francis Jameson (Jamie) Parker III and Christian Buchanan their newest addition to the family. Fans may write to Jameson in c/o "Simon & Simon," CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca., 90036.

DEAR MICHELE: I am a very big fan of Bill Murray, who starred in "Stripes." Please give me some information about him. AMY MAQUET, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO AMY IN FAYETTEVILLE: Bill Murray is a native of Evanston, Illinois, born on September 21. Like many of the 'Not Ready for Prime Time Players,' Murray is an alumnus of the Second City improvisational theater group. He joined the cast of "Saturday Night Live" in its second season, following Chevy Chase's departure. So solid were Murray's credentials, in fact, that he joined Dan Aykroyd and the late John Belushi as full-fledged writer-performers on the show. Bill's success has continued following his departure from 'SNL.' Fans continue to flock to his feature films. The 6'1", 175-pound Murray has brown hair and hazel eyes.

DEAR MICHELE: Could I please have some information on Lee Majors, who plays Colt Seavers on "The Fall Guy"? CRAIG B. MELIN, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

TO CRAIG IN FAYETTEVILLE: Although Majors is physically active and in great shape, he does not perform all his own stunts. When the work is dangerous, Lee's stuntman, Mickey Gilbert, takes his place. At age 42, you may ask how Majors stays fit? Name almost any sport and it seems he has played or competed in it. He is currently putting in hours for a helicopter pilot's license. He hunts, fishes, and plays golf, tennis, racquetball and basketball. Lee has also played on a flag football team for the past 12 years. "I even played semi-pro ball up until a year ago," he says. Majors is also an experienced race car driver. He attended the Bondurant Driving School for Formula Ones, and is a veteran of the Ontario 500 Celebrity Races. In addition, he has competed in off-road (dune buggy) races. Fans may write to Lee in c/o "The Fall Guy," ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, Ca., 90067.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Living up to its name — the latest "Fame" album has topped the 400,000 mark in England, bringing the worldwide total to over four 1/2 million. The "Fame" cast is planning a European tour to coincide with the series' premiere in syndication. (With such 'fame' isn't it strange that NBC could not attract enough viewers to keep it on the network.)

It could only happen in Hollywood — CONNIE STEVENS received a surprise birthday gift while staying at the Cedars-Sinai Hospital, where her young son and daughter underwent tonsillectomies. The surprise — disguised as a doctor — was a male stripper. (I hope the kids were sleeping!)

Two top musical stars have been signed to star in this season's "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island" musical specials. BEN VEREEN will star in the "Dream Boat" two-hour episode of "The Love Boat," and not to be outdone, "Fantasy Island" signed CYD CHARISSE for its "Big Show" episode.

JULIO IGLESIAS has been selected by THE GUINNESS BOOK OF WORLD RECORDS to receive its Diamond Disc Award (the first of its kind). JULIO, according to the records, is the current top-selling artist who records in six languages. More than 100 million of his albums have been sold world-wide, accumulating 350 Gold and 100 Platinum records to his credit. The award will be presented during a gala reception in his honor in Paris.

It was trauma time for LOU FERRIGNO (the 'Hulk') when he saw a truck rolling down his driveway towards his two-year-old daughter, SHANNA. He stopped the truck but required surgery for his ruptured right bicep. It is expected that he will be wearing a cast for six weeks, however, scripts for his new series "Trauma Center" are being altered in order that he may continue filming. LOU will be starring as a paramedic, but I have no fear that, even with one arm, he will have any situation well in hand.

"Josephine, the lady plumber," as played by JANE WITHERS, is returning to the commercials she made famous. JANE, the child actress who made SHIRLEY TEMPLE's life miserable in the movies, stopped working seven years ago when her mother became ill. Now that her mom has passed away, she is ready to resume working again. Commercials with JANE in them will be a welcome sight again.

Two events will occur on television this week that you may not want to miss — One is the premiere of HBO's "Between Friends," Sunday evening, starring ELIZABETH TAYLOR and CAROL BURNETT. Though, I must admit, the casting of top names does not always assure an award-winning production — the teaming of these two personalities alone is worth watching.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Big Apple soapers begin a baby boom

By Kimberly Redmond

There's a baby boom going on among New York soap actresses. At a recent "Guiding Light" fan club gathering, Lisa Brown, who is married to Tom Nielsen (Floyd Parker on "GL"), announced she's expecting her first bundle of joy in mid-March, 1984. Two other March ladies-in-waiting are Laura Malone (Blaine Cory) and Terry Davis (Stacey Winthrop), both of "Another World." Also expecting is Lisa Loring (Cricket Montgomery) of "As the World Turns."

A good time was had by all recently when "Guiding Light" star John Wesley Shipp (Kelly Nelson) threw a "welcome to New York" bash for his new co-star, Susan Pratt (Claire Ramsey). If all goes as projected, the two are slated to become a hot on-screen romantic duo very soon.

"As the World Turns" seems to have found an excellent replacement for the popular role of Margo Hughes in actress Hillary Bailey (ex-Kit McCormack on "The Doctors"). Margaret Colin abandoned the role to pursue other acting outlets, and the "ATWT" audience quickly accepted Miss Bailey, who bears a physical resemblance to her predecessor.

Elaine Princi

Recent "ATWT" celebrity guest stints included comedian Nipsey Russell and singer Deniece Williams, who sang at the show's new floating nightclub, The Anemone. Soon to be dropped from the "ATWT" cast is Elaine Princi (Miranda Hughes), whose contract wasn't renewed.

Good news for "Days of Our Lives" fans! Gloria Loring has re-signed with the soap for three years. Miss Loring's lucrative contract with Columbia Pictures Television also provides a guaranteed star billing in two motion pictures for television and guest-starring appearances on at least five prime-time shows. Miss Loring will also be given time off from her role of Liz Chandler on "DOOL" in order to make personal appearances and to fulfill upcoming nightclub commitments.

Meanwhile, as Liz has been serving time in the slammer, Miss Loring took advantage of her time off to tape a Juvenile Diabetes Foundation fund-raising concert in Cleveland, Ohio, and to appear on a Bob Hope Special in Canada. Recently, she also concluded a week-long sold-out nightclub engagement at Atlantic City's Claridge Hotel and Casino. This weekend she'll return to the East Coast gambling capital to entertain at a private JDF party.

Could this be love? Or is it just Sam's jealousy showing? Sam (Ted Danson) and Diane (Shelley Long) share a moment on part one of "Showdown" on NBC's "Cheers." The rebroadcast airs Thursday, Sept. 15.

Former Athletes Now Broadcast Action

Old football greats never fade away — instead they sign contracts as network sportscasters for the NFL season. Nowadays, our football favorites trade in their cleats and gridiron wizardry for a few timely comments from the press box.

HBO has resigned Nick Buoniconti for a fifth season as co-host of "Inside the NFL," with another football great, Len Dawson. Their straightforward reporting and analysis of the game have made "Inside the NFL" HBO's longest-running and most popular sports series.

Following his college football career at Notre Dame, Buoniconti signed with the Boston Patriots of the then-new American Football League. But it was with the Miami Dolphins that Buoniconti achieved fame as the spark plug of the Dolphins' infamous "no name" defense. Along with such greats as Jim Kiick, Larry Csonka and Paul Warfield, he led Miami to the only undefeated season in NFL history and to consecutive Super Bowl victories in 1973 and 1974.

NBC has taken the mania for signing retired athletes to a new high by making room for former wide receivers Ahmad Rashad, Reggie Rucker and Bob Chandler in its NFL broadcast team. For good measure, NBC threw in newly retired Kansas City Chiefs head coach Marv Levy.

NBC already has former players Merlin Olsen, John Brodie and Bob Griese in the booth, so the new recruits will be in familiar company.

Rashad, who as a Minnesota Viking became one of the leading pass catchers in the history of the NFL, joined NBC in January, and saw duty as a reporter during the playoffs and the Super Bowl.

Rucker, who joined the Dallas Cowboys as a free agent in 1969, was traded to the Cleveland Browns six years later, where he became one of the three players to catch 300 passes during a Browns' career. Besides his NBC broadcasting duties, Rucker will be the color analyst for the Cleveland Indians.

Chandler — the NFL's leading receiver for the four seasons from 1975-78 — first became involved in broadcasting when he did a morning radio talk show in San Francisco.

While NBC drew its talent from the aerial corps, ABC went to the ground game by signing O.J. Simpson to join "Monday Night Football." Simpson, one of the most spectacular running backs in NFL history, will join Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell for seven regular-season games. As in the past, Don Meredith will be the third man in the booth for the other 14 telecasts.

Mackovic Concentrates On Chiefs' Offense

In the second game of last season, the Kansas City Chiefs upended the San Diego Chargers 19-12 and showed promise of things to come. However, those "things" never materialized as the Chiefs slipped to a 3-6 record, and the Chargers earned a playoff berth for the fourth consecutive year.

The Chiefs will have another shot at the Chargers when these two AFC Western division teams meet on ABC's Monday Night Football, Sept. 12 (9 p.m.-conclusion).

Kansas City is in the hands of first-year head coach John Mackovic, who last year served as quarterback coach for the Dallas Cowboys. An offensive-oriented coach, Mackovic believes that the Chiefs will have to develop their passing game to be a consistent winner.

"The key to pro football today is the passing game," he says. "Not that you pass the ball more than you run it, or that you are overbalanced, but the key is to have a successful passing game because everybody gets behind sooner or later.

"Every passing game better be geared toward ball control. Anyone who says it isn't is leading a very precarious life in the league. If you pass the ball and don't control it, then your offense will stop itself cold."

A Cowboy Again

Rory Calhoun, who stars on the daytime drama "Capitol," has just completed a feature film entitled "Angel." He plays an ex-movie cowboy named Kit Carson, who relives his glorious years by patrolling Hollywood Boulevard as if it were Dodge City, handing out autographed pictures of himself.

Rory has appeared in more than 70 films, a number of them Westerns in which he wore cowboy attire, complete with 10-gallon hat, fringed coat and blazing six-guns.

Scott (C. Thomas Howell) has a difficult time deciding whether to leave his mother for his father on "Two Marriages," airing Wednesday, Sept. 14 on ABC.

KUSH COMES TO SHOVE

The Softer Side of Football's Toughest Coach

Robert Ward

BALTIMORE COLTS COACH FRANK KUSH

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send your question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 1515 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

ANGELA LANSBURY

star of Broadway's Mame

You've been in a revival of Gypsy and now a remake of Mame. Is it tougher the second time around? —P.J., Utica, N.Y.

I frankly don't care for the word "revival," at least not in terms of the theater. For instance, we don't call works by people like Shakespeare and Shaw revivals — we call them classics. As for whether there's a challenge in undertaking a role that is not new, I again refer to Shakespeare and Shaw. Their great works sometimes get mediocre reviews. You never know what's going to happen when you confront an audience. Every time you step out on a stage, it's as though you're doing it for the first time.

RODNEY DANGERFIELD

star of the movie Easy Money

Nobody can be as dumb as you pretend to be sometimes. Just how bad were you in school? —M.O., Aurora, Ill.

Well, I wanna tell you. Easy Money starts off with a shot of my school report card. But it's not mine really. Truth is, my school — Richmond High School in Queens, N.Y. — would not release mine. I guess they didn't want any smear on their academic reputation. That's O.K. I didn't consider this getting no respect.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITORS

LOS ANGELES — Guess who's not coming to your local theater? Sidney Poitier, 56, who last appeared in 1977's A Piece of the Action, says he may never act in pictures again (directing is another matter). "I am proud of my work," he says, "but what I do in the future must cast a favorable reflection on that work, or I don't work. I am just too old to work for work's sake."...Former Saturday Night Live comedian Bill Murray swears he's serious with his remake of the 1946 classic The Razor's Edge. He's co-written the script (based on the W. Somerset Maugham novel) and will star as Larry Darrell, a young American in Paris after World War I. "I've promised to do a comedy if I mess this up," says Murray....Steven Spielberg's 1971 TV-movie classic, Duel, was tested as a feature film recently in Kansas City and Detroit. The thriller, Spielberg's most acclaimed work pre-Jaws, starred Dennis Weaver as a motorist hunted by a mysterious truck driver. The results of the test were "disappointing," according to a Universal spokesperson, adding, "It was a sales decision not to take it to any other market."...Because of a prior title registration (never mind the 1934 version with Carole Lombard, George Raft, Sally Rand and Ray Milland), Bo and John Derek's Bolero film, now floundering in Spain, must undergo a title change. The production was stopped for a few weeks while co-star Andrea Occhipinti (who replaced Fabio Testi) underwent a crash muscle buildup before filming his revealing scenes with Ms. Derek. Cannon Films chairman Menahem Golan reports that he and Mr. Derek, the director, "didn't kill each other yet." Golan also reveals the movie's new title: BO-lero.

—Robert Windeler

NEW YORK — Jackie Onassis, looking smashing in a paper-thin blue minidress, says she keeps in shape by doing yoga at home....George Burns, 87, readily admits he can't resist flirting, but confesses the best he can offer a woman these days is a wink. "And even that takes longer than it did 20 years ago."...Superman-ager Jay Bernstein, who's turned blonde ambition into stardom for Farrah Fawcett, Suzanne Somers, Linda Evans and Donna Mills, tells why he never made any of them his wife: "The women I loved enough to marry, I could not get along with enough; and the women I got along with well enough, I did not love enough."...When Sophia Loren turned 30, she lamented, "I feel like a national institution, crumbling at the edges." Now approaching 50 (she turns 49 on Sept. 20), she says, "I feel younger as the years go by. I'm surprised when women my age moan they feel old."...Love Boat mixologist Ted Lange, recently named America's most famous bartender, admits he didn't know vermouth from Vermont before landing the part. He took a course but learned the most important rule of bartending while making the rounds observing the pros: "I watched, got lots of advice — but not one free drink."

—Anita Summer

Mama mia! Creeping up on 50, Sophia's surely not crumbling

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart and his wife, Lee, appear to be firmly back together after their separation last year. About their reconciliation in January she says, "Some people say it's so amazing how many divorces there are in public life, and I say it's amazing there aren't more. I'm sure we would never have gotten back together had I not enjoyed politics."...Rita Lavelle is finding there is life after scandal. The recently indicted former E.P.A. administrator has signed with New Line Presentations to hit the lecture circuit. The New York firm is teaming her for debates with environmentalist Lewis Regenstein, author of America the Poisoned and vice president of The Fund for Animals. It's a match made in marketing heaven, and colleges are responding like mad....The Washington Post will be getting some new competition soon. A trio of wealthy publishing hotshots with conspicuous Democratic ties is bankrolling a new weekly paper for Washington. The three are Mortimer Zuckerman, New York-based real-estate tycoon and owner of The Atlantic, Martin Peretz, editor in chief and president of The New Republic, and Joan Bingham, widow of Worth Bingham, former owner of the Louisville Times and the Louisville Courier-Journal. Despite their Democratic leanings, the trio insists the paper will not be political. "It will cast a skeptic's eye on life in Washington," says Peretz. The paper is scheduled to hit the streets in November.

KUSH COMES TO SHOVE

The Softer Side of Football's Toughest Coach

By Robert Ward

Rough, tough Baltimore Colts Coach Frank Kush is walking around the pressroom, moving herky jerky, Jimmy Cagney-like, his blue eyes twinkling, his talk punctuated with Barry Fitzgerald-like winks. Three Baltimore newspapermen and I are sitting watching as he circles in back of us, weaves back in front of us, disappears from view. What's he going to do back there, we wonder? Come up fast and spear us or something?

"Hell, they've said everything about me," he begins. "Everything. They've written it all. Sometimes I just have to laugh at the things they say. They call me the martinet, the killer, they made me sound like Hitler . . . but it's crazy, because I've been the same goofy guy since I was a little kid. I'm no different now than then. When I was a little kid living in Windber, Pa., you had to be tough, because things weren't ever easy. We had 15 kids in my family, and my father worked in a mine. When he died from black lung at 50, I was 14 years old. And those coal mines weren't easy . . . we're talking the company store: 'Hey, your father's dead, that's too bad — but we won't be able to extend you any credit for food. I mean, he ain't working here anymore.'

"That's how it was and how it still is for a lot of people. I went to work as a gandy dancer on the railroad two weeks after his death, still made class president and played baseball three nights a week, even though I was so tired I could have dropped. They say I'm tough, that I'm hard . . . . Well, if you weren't, you were dead. All I did was stay alive, survive, but it made me appreciate life. I want to tell you that. It got me through a lot of other things later. You guys know what I'm talking about."

The press guys drop their heads a little. No one knows whether Frank Kush will talk about the 1978 incident while he was head coach at Arizona State University, the time he allegedly punched a player named Kevin Rutledge and found himself in the middle of a $2.2 million lawsuit, the center of an avalanche of media coverage and, finally in 1979, kicked out of the job he loved.

But Kush seems to want to talk about it today. He's pacing, sweat dripping off of him as the Colts' air conditioner breaks down.

"That kid, what he did to me — it hurt, I'll tell you. I don't want to say anything about him because I'll find myself in the middle of another lawsuit, but what hurt me, what really hurt me was the way everybody turned on me. Hey, for years they have billboards all over town saying, 'Win with Arizona State and Frank Kush.' I'm the most popular guy around. Everybody wants to be my friend, and I guess I was just naïve enough, even after my background, to really think they meant it. But the day I'm accused of hitting that kid, I walked out of my office, and even though I had the same clothes on, I was a different guy. People would turn away from me and my family on the street. It was horrible, horrible.

"All that got me through it was remembering my past, saying, 'You survived the mines, you kept your family alive when you were a kid, and you'll survive this.' That and jogging. I'd go in there [the courtroom] and hear all these allegations and then I'd get so upset, I'd just run and run until I was so physically exhausted that I'd drop into bed and fall asleep. If I didn't, I was up all night. And one other thing: meditation. Yeah, when the trial was going on, I didn't go to lunch with the lawyers, I went to a club, got a mat and sat on the floor and worked on my breathing for 45 minutes. I got so I could blank it all out."

The press guys are all giving each other these little looks, nods, raised eyebrows. Frank Kush meditating? What was his mantra, for Godsakes? Win Win Win? HIT HIT HIT?

In 1981, after a three-month trial, a jury cleared Kush of the charges, although Rutledge's appeal is still pending. Kush, meanwhile, after being dismissed by Arizona State, sued the school for $40 million in October 1979 and settled for $200,000 soon after.

"They call me the martinet, the killer, they made me sound like Hitler. But I've been the same goofy guy since I was a kid."

Kush faced his latest controversy this past June when Stanford quarterback John Elway — the sport's most prized prospect in years and the Colts' No. 1 draft choice — publicly balked at playing for the Colts and forced them to trade him to the Denver Broncos. (In a delicious coincidence, the Broncos play the Colts in Baltimore on Sunday.) Some say Kush's reputation as a tyrant scared Elway away; some contend it was the unrelenting ineptitude of Colts owner Robert Irsay, the air conditioning-and-construction king from Chicago, who drove former Colts quarterback Bert Jones half mad by calling plays from the owner's box. The same Robert Irsay announced recently that his players were going to "get Elway" for dumping the Colts and choosing to go with Denver.

Someone now asks Kush about Irsay.

He looks down at the guy who asked the question and suddenly the eyes get steely, killer cobalt blue, and he shakes his head and runs his finger up and down over his lips. "No comment there. You have to control what you can, and cut the rest away."

Then he winks and shakes his head again. "Hey, any of you guys want to jog five miles?"

Kush buttons up his nylon jacket before going out into the 105-degree heat of the Colts preseason camp at Goucher College (Towson, Md.) It's the height of the day, 2 P.M., and the coach is going to go for a nice little five-mile jog.

"See you later, guys. Try and write something nice about me."

That would be a switch. Since Kush was fired from Arizona State, whole forests have been leveled to provide sports pundits with lines like: "He looks like an old gunfighter, still the baddest hombre around!"

After 22 seasons at Arizona State, after building the program up from the bottom to one of the most successful in N.C.A.A. history (Kush's .765 winning percentage was the second best among active coaches at the time of his departure), Frank Kush found himself working on an assembly line making metal detectors. And the only place he could get a football job was in Hamilton, Ontario, home of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League — the Elba of pro football coaching.

But Kush hung in and last season took over the Baltimore Colts to a fanfare unprecedented since George C. Scott pretended he was Patton. Kush's rigid, grueling preseason schedule (two workouts a day, mandatory weight training) left many of the older, softer Colts literally lying on the grass. Veterans Bert Jones, Roger Carr, John Dutton and Greg Landry all left the team (though Jones left mainly because of his conflicts with Irsay). Kush pushed his young players hard, promised them they'd see results, but by the end of the strike-torn season they had a record of 0-8-1. Critics (and in Baltimore everybody is a critic) said Kush's methods were old-fashioned, out of date, that today's high-priced, more intelligent athlete couldn't relate to his Gung-Ho-WWII-gimme-110-percent-win-one-for-the-Gipper philosophy.

Or that he was a brute, insensitive, overrated. Frank Kush is right about one thing: He has been called everything in the book. And yet, when one meets the man in person, spends time with him, it's obvious that things have changed — mentally and physically — in the Colt camp. Watching the rookies go through their drills, I never once saw anybody complain or gripe. I never once saw Kush scream at his players, though Colts Mike Pagel and Gary Padjen, who both played for him at Arizona State, say that this is a relatively new development.

"Coach used to scream all the time," quarterback Pagel says, "but it was just his way of reminding you that you weren't putting out, you weren't giving it all you had. It's no big thing. These people who say his methods are old-fashioned are wrong. Football is an old-fashioned game. It's physical, and you have to be in shape."

"I love the man like I love my own father. He drives us all hard, sure, but he really doesn't ask you to do anything he wouldn't do. Let me tell you a story. When I was at Arizona State, I cut class. The coach had another coach drive both me and him out to the desert 15 miles away from school. Then he told me we were going to run back. I stayed with him until we got to a mountain. The coach just ran right up it. I fell out. He was yelling for me to come on up, but I was dead out. Then he looked at me and said, 'Go to class. Or we do this again.'"

As Padjen tells this he smiles and shakes his head. "Those things that have been written and said about him — forget it. He's a man with character who really acts on his beliefs. At Arizona the coach's last game [after being fired] was against Washington. Before the game, Coach Kush came into the locker room and said he wanted to talk to us all. He said, 'They've taken away what I love. They've taken away the football team, you guys whom I love. I just wanted you to know it's meant everything to me to coach you.' Then he cried like hell. Do you know what that did to us? We went out and beat Washington 12-7, even though they were heavily favored. Then we carried the coach off on our shoulders. I'll never forget it."

As one walks through the Colt camp, one hears it everywhere — and not just from Kushophiles from Arizona State. This year is going to be different. For instance, listen to Derrick Hatchett, the talented cornerback who almost walked off the team last year in preseason. "But I was wrong," he says now. "You see, the coach has a lot of strength tests. Leg presses and upper-body strength and fat-percentage tests, and last year when we took them, man, everybody was feeling lousy. I had to run ten 40-yard dashes and you had to do it until you got eight out of ten in 4.6 seconds. Well, last year I couldn't do any of them in that time, but this year, after working according to Coach Kush's weight and running program, I did them all in 4.6. I know that's going to mean I don't get beat as often, because I have that little extra burst of speed that I never had last year. I know it's going to mean I can tackle harder. I know I'm not going to wear out in the fourth quarter. Everybody on our team is stronger, and we feel great."

It's dark on the Goucher campus. It's 11 at night and Frank Kush has been up since 5:30 A.M.

We're walking along the horse path, the coach moving in the same brisk pace as always.

"I don't know what it is, I wake up every day at 5:30 no matter what time I go to bed. Some nights I can't sleep at all. I get to thinking about the team, new moves we could make, new plays, new ideas. You know, football is a mental game. You have to stay sharp. I'm 54 years old, but I still love it as much as ever."

"How did you feel about losing John Elway?"

"Lousy, of course. But that's the way it goes. [From Denver] we got [offensive tackle] Chris Hinton, and I think he could be a great player. And [quarterback] Mark Herrmann; he's never had a chance to play. I like him a lot."

UPI

"They say I'm tough, that I'm hard. . . . Well, if you weren't, you were dead."

It seems like disaster follows Kush around. Elway won't come aboard, and then Colts quarterback Art Schlichter is indefinitely suspended from the N.F.L. after he admits to gambling away $389,000. I ask Kush if he had any inkling of Schlichter's gambling.

"God no," he says. "He wouldn't have been on the team for one minute if I had known. You see, it's all part of what's going on in the country now. The belief that you can have things without paying for them. In India if you rob a man, they cut off your hand. Now that's your extreme example, and I don't endorse it, but I do believe in swift and justifiable punishment. For example, let's say you've gone all over a play with your backs, and the guy messes up. I say we call the play right away again. Let the guy get really hit a couple of times, then he'll remember. But once I've disciplined someone, it's over. I don't carry a grudge. With Art, though, it won't hit him until 10 years from now."

"Why not?" I ask as we enter a dark grove of trees.

"Because," Kush answers, "he doesn't have to pay any price. O.K., he was suspended for a while, but he still has Mom and Dad helping him through it all. I don't think he has any idea of the magnitude of what he did. That's the real problem, that he didn't have the values to begin with. I don't know whom you blame for that, but partly it's our society. Everything's free...you feel bad — don't work harder, take drugs. You need money — don't try harder, gamble.... It's all easy, get it now, don't wait. If it's old-fashioned to think that that kind of public relations-advertising consciousness is killing America, then I'm old-fashioned."

"Let me tell you something that bothers me to this day, that still gets to me," Kush says. "When I was at Michigan [as an all-American defensive guard] we got two free tickets to the game and we could give them to anyone we wanted. I had a friend who wanted a seat — and, you know, I didn't have much money — and one day greed got the best of me. My friend asked me if I could get him a ticket and I said in this greedy voice, 'Yeah, and how much will you give me for it?' That still bothers me, that I could have been that greedy.

"People think things are easy for me because I'm head coach of a pro football team, but they don't know what I went through. When I got to Arizona State we had no program to speak of. I couldn't really recruit people, so I'd spend a couple months every year driving all over the country in my old car. We couldn't even afford brochures, so what I did was paste some old postcards of Arizona, you know, 'scenic Arizona,' in a scrapbook and show the players those. Now, that's not very glamorous, but it's what makes things happen. It's real."

Real. Kush seems both real — as in old-fashioned, hard working — and at the same time cut from wholecloth fiction. Kush's life is like something straight out of Frank Capra. But nevertheless, it's a real story, real for millions of Americans. Nothing short of the American Dream.

Of Schlichter's betting, Kush says, "It's our society. You feel bad — take drugs. You need money — gamble."

"It's beautiful here. Reminds me of this past winter. I went to my high school 30-year reunion, and when I was back there in Windber I decided to look up my cousin Bill Kush. I hadn't seen him in years, and so I went out over the Pennsylvania hills and I finally found his place. We recognized each other right away. So he takes me up on the top of this beautiful hill, and he looks down on his 180-acre farm, a red barn, a great farmhouse, and tells me how he bought it years and years ago for $5,000. He just managed to scrape together a $500 down payment. Now, though, he's put it all together, built barns, silos, has sons who work it, and he's done it. He works his butt off, but it's all his. This man is a real man and a real success. As for the ones who have talent and throw it away, who believe there's an easy route to go, I just feel sorry for them. Bill Kush and the people like him — they're the real America to me." FW

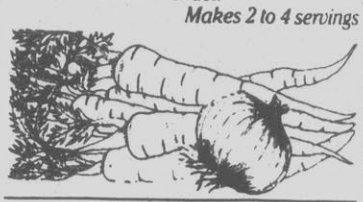
2 chicken breasts, boned and split
2 red onions, sliced
3 teaspoons anise-flavored liqueur
¼ teaspoon salt or to taste
Several twists freshly ground black pepper

1. Preheat oven to 450°. Break up the creamed spinach and arrange in shallow oven-to-table baking dish. Place chicken breasts on top of spinach skin-side up. Place onion slices here and there; cut several slices in half and place round-side up in scallop fashion around edge of dish. 2. Sprinkle liqueur, salt and pepper over all. Cover loosely with foil and bake 10 minutes. Remove foil and bake 10 minutes longer, or until chicken breasts are lightly browned and fork tender.

Makes 2 to 4 servings



GOLDEN RICE

2 cups water
½ teaspoon salt or to taste
1 cup converted white rice
1 tablespoon unsalted butter or margarine
½ cup coarsely grated carrots

1. In a medium-size saucepan, bring water and salt to boiling. Add rice, return to boiling, cover and cook for 20 minutes, or until rice is tender and water has been absorbed. 2. In a small skillet, melt butter, add carrots and cook, stirring just until heated through. Add to rice and mix lightly with fork.

½ cup virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon coarse salt or to taste
Several twists freshly ground black pepper

1. On individual salad plates or in a medium-sized salad bowl, place Bibb lettuce halves and watercress. Top with julienne-cut hearts of palm. 2. In a small bowl or jar, place oil, vinegar, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Blend with fork, or cover jar securely and shake to mix. Pour dressing over salad.

Makes 2 to 4 servings

*Hearts of palm are bought canned and are an exotic addition to a simple salad. If not available, cut tender ribs of celery into julienne strips, making about ½ cup.

PEOPLE QUIZ

CAN WEALTH INSURE GOOD HEALTH?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your chances of becoming ill or injured are likely to be increased by a lack of money.
2. Your attitude toward your work affects blood pressure.
3. There's nothing you can do about the pain or discomfort you encounter during a medical or dental visit.

ANSWERS

1. True. A National Institute of Mental Health study of more than 6,000 men and women showed that people who experience job troubles or financial setbacks are nearly twice as likely to be ill or injured and more than twice as likely to report psychological symptoms as those not experiencing such troubles or setbacks.
2. True. In almost every office there's a person who thinks his or her job is pure pressure — and another person, doing the same job, who doesn't feel any pressure, according to Purdue University studies. Much of our stress, the researchers indicated, is a result of our subjective perceptions. What's a "piece of cake" for you may be difficult for someone else. To reduce the amount of stress you encounter on the job, you should change your attitude about control: If you feel you have no control, you'll have high stress. People who feel they're in control have less susceptibility to stress, high blood pressure and chronic diseases.
3. False. According to a team of behavioral scientists at the Université Laval in Canada, if a person understands the procedures a doctor uses to examine or treat him, he will be more tolerant of any pain and discomfort that may be involved. So if you have your doctor or dentist explain a given procedure, it will help you be a better patient and perhaps make your visit a more pleasant one. FW

Let's talk about MONEY...
YOUR MONEY...

You can save 10 years of monthly payments and as much as $58,000 on the financing of a $35,000 home. IT'S A FACT!!!

Yes, let's talk facts about building your new home ... and let's talk facts about saving your money ... LOTS of your money!!! To begin with, when you plan to build a new home and finance it, even a difference of only 1%, 2%, or 3% in the financing rate can, over the term of the mortgage, mean the savings of many, many thousands of your hard-earned dollars. This is where Jim Walter Homes can help you.

For example, would you believe that you can save more than $58,000 when you finance a $35,000 home with Jim Walter? IT'S TRUE ... WE CAN PROVE IT!!! First, while other financing rates are as much as 11%, 12%, or 13%, Jim Walter's annual percentage rate is still ONLY 10%. Secondly, your home can be paid for in only 20, rather than 30 long, long years. And third, when you compare 13% financing of a $35,000, 30-year mortgage with Jim Walter's 20-year financing of this same amount, you'll not only save more than $58,000, your monthly payment will be nearly $50.00 less, and you'll make only 240, not 360 payments. That's only 20 years, not 30 years of mortgage payments. (A glance at the chart in this ad will show you comparisons.) Furthermore, there are no "points" or closing cost ad-ons to increase what you will pay.

Jim Walter financing can be arranged FAST ... in a matter of days, rather than weeks and weeks. Then, construction of your new home can begin almost immediately, almost anywhere that you own property. We'll complete the outside and, if you like, stop right there so that you can finish the interior to suit yourself at tremendous savings. Or, we'll finish the inside, up to 90% complete. Do as much or as little as you like, but the more of the work you do for yourself ... the more sale-priced interior finishing material you can buy ... the more money you'll save. And, the more home you'll have for your money.

PUTTING SLEEP PROBLEMS TO REST

By Marcia Hibsch

Do you sleep for eight hours only to wake up tired? The problem may stem from the quality of your sleep rather than the length of time you spend sleeping.

One physiological disorder that can disrupt your sleep is nocturnal myoclonus, or periodic movements during sleep (P.M.S.), in which a sleeping person's legs kick or jerk hundreds of times during the night. Some of the kicking and jerking is easily noticed, especially by the sufferer's bed partner, who often complains of being kicked all night. Other times movements made are more subtle, but are just disturbing enough to rouse someone from a deep sleep to a lighter level, thereby robbing him of necessary sound sleep.

Although doctors wrote about the problem as early as 1685, serious research on P.M.S. did not begin until the late 1960's. Researchers have not yet been able to identify the causes of this disorder. One theory about P.M.S.: It's the failure of some inner mechanism that, when working, controls most people's movements during sleep. The fact that the disorder seems to become more common as people grow older supports this theory, doctors believe.

"Thirty percent of older people have the symptoms of P.M.S.," says Dr. Sonia Ancoli-Israel, assistant director of the Sleep Disorders Clinic of the University of California at San Diego. "So, it could be that we have a clock [a neural pacemaker] that inhibits us for most of our lives, and that the clock simply stops working for some people as they grow older."

There are drugs available to stop leg jerks, but even the best are not always helpful. "We sometimes prescribe clonazepam or baclofen to our patients," says Dr. Ancoli-Israel. We also try to counsel them on relaxation techniques. But, unfortunately, we just can't offer a permanent solution."

Another common problem that can disturb your night's rest is nocturnal leg cramping. This frustrating malady seems to wait until the sleeper is relaxed and warm before striking the calf or the sole of the foot with shooting pain that results from knotted muscles.

Overexertion and salt depletion or dehydration are common causes of cramps. So those who recently began exercise or who are taking diuretics may suffer from cramps.

There are several steps victims can take to help prevent leg cramps. The exerciser should increase fluid and salt intake to replace that lost in sweating. People on diuretics can find some relief by taking nightly doses of quinine, or occasionally, Benadryl, an antihistamine.

Pregnant women often suffer leg cramps, however, quinine is not recommended during pregnancy. For them, and for others with no alternative, one of a host of time-tested home remedies, including hot baths, wearing socks to bed and taking calcium tablets, may help.

Once the leg cramps, stretching the contracting muscle in the opposite direction of the cramp can often bring some relief. So if the sole of your foot cramps, causing the toes to curl under, stretch the toes upward. Walking helps, too.

Because the disorder is more annoying than dangerous, little current research exists, so nearly anything that solves the problem without endangering one's health is acceptable.

"Many people think that the body goes to sleep when the mind does, but it does not turn off," comments Dr. Richard Coleman, a psychologist at the Stanford University Medical Center Sleep Disorders Clinic in California. "As time goes on and we learn more about sleep, we may find many more causes for disturbed sleep. We do know one thing now, however," he concludes, "there are a lot of things happening while we think we are sleeping." FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

MISS UNIVERSE

THE WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN SPEAKS HER MIND

Only a year ago, Lorraine Elizabeth Downes was an unknown model from Auckland, New Zealand — but the night of July 11, 1983 made a whole world of difference in her life. Before a television audience of 700 million, the blond, hazel-eyed 19-year-old from Down Under was chosen over 79 other contestants as the new Miss Universe. She accepted her responsibilities (and more than $150,000 in cash and prizes) with patriotic zeal, but her crowning achievement doesn't seem to have gone to her head. Downes spoke to FAMILY WEEKLY*'s Mary Ellin Bruns with modesty and good humor about pageant jitters, padded swimsuits, and the pressures and pleasures of overnight success.*

Miss Universe: Before I went on I was nervous. But as soon as the show started, I was so happy that I had a real inner peace. . . . When I won, I thought, "Neat — New Zealand has done it," because we're a small country and we've never won anything like that.

Q: Behind the scenes, is there friction between contestants?
Miss Universe: During the last days of the competition there is a little friction, tempers start to weaken. But overall there is a genuine friendship.

Q: Were you tempted to pad your swimsuit?
Miss Universe: If I want to win something I want to win it on my natural merits, not by being false.

Q: Does anything scare you about your new job?
Miss Universe: It is scary. I'll probably make mistakes. But you're only going to learn by your mistakes, aren't you?

Q: Feminists have criticized beauty contests for presenting women as sex objects. How do you feel about those objections?
Miss Universe: Everyone's entitled to an opinion. We're all given qualities and abilities, and I think beauty is one that should be displayed.

Q: You've said you want to spread peace. How will you do this?
Miss Universe: If I can make people happy by signing an autograph or speaking to them, I will feel I'm doing something positive. It may sound like a little contribution, but it's a beginning. FW

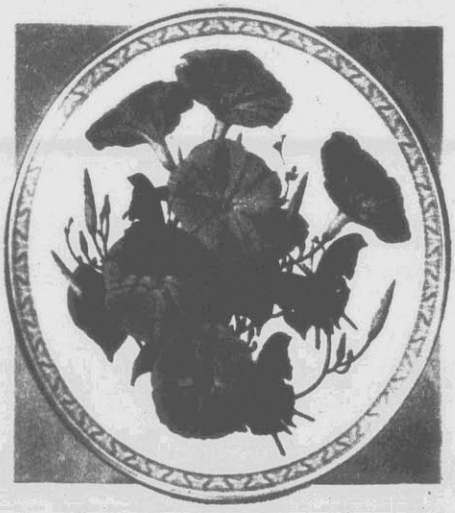
His richly detailed paintings have been widely exhibited and won him numerous awards, including the coveted Grenfell Medal, and no fewer than five Gold and two Silver Medals from the Royal Horticultural Society.

Wilkinson has been honored as well with one-man shows at the Sladmore Gallery, the Cooling Gallery and Liberty's in London. In addition, he created all of the original paintings for two definitive nature books.

Now this celebrated artist has created his first series of porcelain collector's plates—The Butterflies of the World. A collection depicting twelve beautiful, dramatically different species of butterflies—with a very special charm and sensitivity.

In each case, the artist captures them in their full glory among the brightly colored flowers of their native lands. And each delightful scene is bordered in an elegant butterfly motif.

Every one of these fine imported plates is a work of pure enchantment, filled with light and color—a source of joy to own and display. Together, they form a spectacular collection certain to enhance the decor of any home.



THE BUTTERFLY PLATES. Each plate will be crafted of fine white porcelain, the perfect background for the radiant colors and sweeping lines of Wilkinson's art.

And each will be large in size—a full 9 inches in diameter—to preserve all the remarkable detail that is a hallmark of his work.

The shimmering beauty of the butterflies' wings ... their graceful shapes and delicate markings ... the jewel-like tones of the leaves and flowers ... all will be captured exactly.

Indeed, Franklin Porcelain has devoted more than two years to meticulous preparation for the issuance of these plates, and every detail will be of the highest quality. For example, each plate will be hand-decorated with a band of pure 24 karat gold. And each plate will incorporate as many as 20 ceramic colors.

Wilkinson's very lovely and accurate works of art—created especially for this issue and available only on these fine porcelain plates—make this a collection that will be enjoyed and prized by all who love the beauty of butterflies, of art and of porcelain.

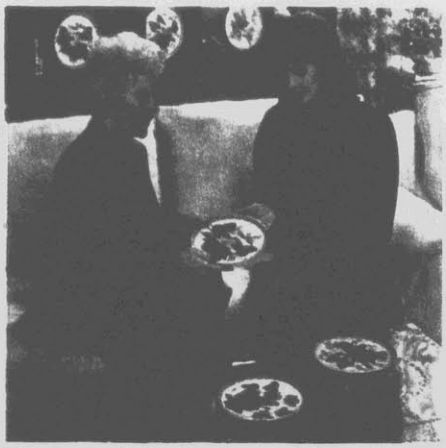
THE LIMITED SIGNATURE EDITION. In keeping with its significance, the base of each plate in the first edition of this superb collection will bear the signature of John Wilkinson, set within a special butterfly remarque designed for that particular plate.

This limited Signature Edition will be available only to those individual collectors who enter their subscriptions before the end of 1984. A further limit of one set per subscriber will be enforced without exception. So once this edition is closed, no collector will be able to obtain these signed plates except from their original owners.

ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTION DEADLINE: SEPTEMBER 30, 1983. The collection will be issued at the convenient rate of one plate every other month. And the issue price of only $55 per plate will be payable in two convenient monthly installments of $27.50 each. Every plate will be accompanied by a specially written reference folder discussing the species it represents. A Certificate of Authenticity will also accompany the collection.

Advance subscriptions are being accepted now and will be considered only until September 30, 1983. The enclosed subscription form must be postmarked by that deadline to be valid. So please be certain to return it to Franklin Porcelain before this date. For collections as beautiful as The Butterflies of the World are rare indeed.



Whether you display these fine porcelain butterfly plates separately, in small groups or as a single spectacular collection, they are certain to draw the admiration of all who see them and enhance the beauty of your home.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Marion Long

Bob Scott

MITCH RYDES AGAIN

Detroit was America's musical center back in the 1960's, and some of the best sounds came from Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels. Their high energy, rock 'n' roll records — like "Jenny Take a Ride" and "Devil with a Blue Dress On" — established Ryder as that rarity, a genuine white soul singer. By 1968, however, the band had broken up, and though he's performed regularly in Europe, Ryder stopped playing in the U.S.

But now, good golly Miss Molly, Mitch Ryder is back. He's socking it to them on tour and has a hot new album, Never Kick a Sleeping Dog, produced for him by America's young gravel-voiced heartthrob, John Cougar. Cougar says he owes much of his own style to Ryder's music, as does another streetwise serenader, Bruce Springsteen, who often closes his concerts with a medley of Ryder tunes.

"What Springsteen's been doing makes sense," Ryder told us, "because you always save the best for last."

Ryder, 38, praises Cougar's cleverness both in what he added to the album—"He took my voice right up to screech heaven"—and in what he took away. "I have this dark side to me. It's a view of the world that's not only angry, it's simply morbid. I'm absolutely convinced that's the way life is, but I'm glad we kept it in the background."

SOFTWARE BRIEFING

Computers are getting more humanlike every day, and Russian scientists thought they discovered one that actually practiced sex discrimination. It seems the machine worked just fine when there were men around, but as soon as a woman walked into the room, it started spouting gibberish.

Well, according to Video magazine, it turned out that synthetic fibers in the women's underwear were disrupting the system. The women programmers have now switched to woolen undies, and things seem to be humming along just fine.

GENERATION CELEBRATION

Today is National Grandparent's Day, but sadly, the occasion finds that many grandparents and grandchildren are little more than strangers. As some grandparents put it: "We call the grandkids and ask, 'How's everything?' They say, 'Fine.' We say, 'Well, what's new?' They say, 'Nothin'.' The conversation lasts about a minute, and we're left with a very hollow feeling."

But it doesn't have to be that way, says George Newman, co-author of The Grandparenting Book. "Grandparents and grandchildren can do a lot to make each other happy — it just takes some work and doing." Newman's book offers 101 ways for grandparents to strengthen the ties that bind. There are games to play over the phone, club memberships to share and tips on making those cards and letters count.

"The key to communication with the children is interests, interests and interests," Newman says. "Once you learn that your grandchildren love a particular TV program or are crazy about their computer, familiarize yourself with it. Then sit back and watch your phone bills soar."

The Grandparenting Book is available by mail only. Send a check or money order for $6.95 to Blossom Valley Press, P.O. Box 4044, Blossom Valley Station, Dept. FW, Mountain View, Calif. 94040.

UNCOVERING THE SHROUD

What began as a scientific report has turned out to be one of the most exciting thrillers of the year. Dr. John Heller's Report on the Shroud of Turin chronicles the four-year study by 40 American scientists on the Shroud of Turin — the 14 by 3½-foot linen sheet that carries in astonishing fashion the image of a crucified man of Semitic features and has been thought for centuries to be the burial shroud of Jesus Christ.

The details of what the team found are not new: It concluded that the Shroud could not possibly be a forgery but that how the image got there remains a mystery.

On this photographic negative, the features on the Shroud come to life.

Heller, a Yale biophysicist and team member, tells the amazing story behind the research. The courageous men and women — six agnostics, two Mormons, three Jews, four Catholics and the rest Protestants — gladly gave up their free time and their own funds for the project. Many were ordered by their employers to stop working on it; a few were even threatened.

Heller spins a nonstop suspense yarn of "fortuitous circumstances" that surrounded the team. As he says, "In the Marines, an odd event occurring once is random chance; twice, a coincidence; three times is enemy action. If the Marines had been involved in the Shroud project, the prevalence of coincidence would have convinced them our galaxy was being invaded."

Heller told us he wrote his book "not so much for the faithful, who don't need it, or for the faithless, who won't read it, as for all the people in between."

STAR DREK

Maybe the junk floating in outer space between Earth and Mars isn't quite as much of an eyesore as the parking lot of your local McDonald's, but some 3,400 pieces of litter are now orbiting the Earth, ranging from spent rocket boosters to broken solar panels.

About 500 pieces of man-made junk fall to Earth each year, but most just burn up on re-entry. The United Nations recently declared that the country launching the litter must take responsibility for any that manages to survive re-entry and crashes to earth. There were 42 claims filed against the United States when Skylab crashed in 1979, but none was compensated. The claims ranged all the way from $10 million for mental anguish to a few dollars for a lamp shade broken during a Skylab-inspired nightmare.

FIND HIDDEN MESSAGE

Starting with the letter W and moving from adjacent letter to adjacent letter in any direction, see if you can spell out a message that relates to a kind of puzzle that often appears right here in Junior Whirl.

The hidden message contains five words. Letters of these words appear in the diagram in such a way that if you draw a line tracing out the message, each and every letter shown will be traversed.
