Begin Quits Post

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin resigned today after a tumultuous six-year term as Israel's leader. In seclusion and reported to be ill, Begin sent his resignation to President Chaim Herzog.

Begin was to stay on as caretaker premier until a new government was formed, said Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor.

The likeliest successor was Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, assuming that Herzog would designate him as the man with the best chance of mustering a parliamentary majority.

Begin's term, which saw Israel through peace with Egypt and war in Lebanon, ended in a low-key ceremony in which Meridor handed the prime minister's letter of resignation to Herzog.

Herzog said he would soon begin talks with Parliamentary leaders to determine a successor. Begin had announced his decision to resign 17 days ago, but delayed formally handing in the letter to allow Shamir time to arrange a governing coalition.

In his statement to reporters, Herzog wished Begin "a speedy recovery and a life of good health." The president paid tribute to Begin's "great efforts over the years on behalf of the people of Israel."

"This is not the occasion to detail his historic actions. They are indelibly inscribed in the pages of our national history," Herzog said.

Begin, 70, remained secluded in his Jerusalem residence.

"The prime minister asked me to convey to the president of the state his letter of resignation. The prime minister wanted to do so himself but since he was still obliged to stay in his home he asked me to carry out this mission for him," said Meridor as he handed the letter to Herzog in a ceremony in Herzog's study.

Begin stayed at home nursing what his spokesman Uri Porat called a "skin sensitivity." The daily newspapers Yedioth Ahronoth and Maariv had reported today that Begin was suffering from a skin ailment which obliged him to stop shaving.

Begin, who has always been meticulous about his appearance, apparently departed from the tradition of personally tendering his resignation, rather than appear unshaven in public.

But a respected newspaper, Haaretz, said in its editions today that Begin, secluded in his official residence for eight days, doesn't shave, barely eats and has stopped caring about his health.

Begin's resignation came after reports that he was depressed by the death of his wife Aliza in November and the protracted involvement of Israeli forces in Lebanon. Persistent feuding in the Cabinet and disagreement over Israel's growing economic problems were also said to weigh heavily on Begin.

Begin informed the Cabinet of his resignation plans Aug. 28, but he agreed to delay handing in his resignation so that his Herut Party could have time to choose a new leader and open talks on forming a new coalition government.

However, three of the factions also have been holding what their spokesmen describe as "exchanges of views" with the opposition Labor Party, and Labor still hopes it will be able to persuade them to defect.

Record $9 Billion Loss Foreign Trade Shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The broadest measure of U.S. foreign trade showed a record deficit of $9.7 billion for the second quarter of the year, government figures indicated today.

The Commerce Department report said the huge shortfall was mainly due to a widening in the deficit for trade in merchandise, as exports declined and the United States stepped up imports of a "broad range of commodities."

Today's report on the nation's balance of payments includes trade in services and the balance on a variety of other financial transactions as well as trade in oil, manufactured goods, farm produce and other merchandise.

The merchandise deficit alone widened to $14.7 billion in the second quarter from $8.8 billion in the first, the report said.

The department said there also was a decrease in capital accounts — claims on foreigners reported by U.S. banks — partly because of the "recession in many countries, the related slowdown in international trade and foreign exchange constraints in a number of developing countries."

The previous record for a quarterly deficit was the $6.62 billion in the fourth quarter of last year. For the first three months of this year, the deficit was revised to $3.6 billion from a previously reported $3 billion, the department said.

Officials have said they expect a record deficit of as much as $20 billion for all of this year. Last year's deficit was $11.2 billion, compared with the 1978 yearly record of $14.8 billion.

Government officials and private economists have said the balance-of-payments deficit is widening this year for a variety of reasons.

The main two are the continuing strength of the U.S. dollar, which makes it more expensive for foreigners to buy American goods, and the fact that the U.S. economy is recovering faster than those of many of its trading partners, giving U.S. companies greater ability to buy foreign goods.

Empire Brushes Promotes Gantz

Empire Brushes announced the promotion of Joseph Gantz to president and chief operating officer of the Greenville headquartered company, effective today.

Gantz, who joined Empire in 1974, served as sales manager of the maintenance supply division, general manager of Empire's manufacturing facility in Greenville, and most recently as executive vice president.

Empire said the new president's father, Jack, who formerly served as president of the company, will assume the newly created position of chairman of the board and chief executive officer. The firm was founded by Jack Gantz's father, Joseph Gantz, in 1909.

"I have served as president of Empire for 38 years and it was time for a changing of the corporate guard," Jack Gantz said. "My son, Joe, who has served in leadership roles in all aspects of the corporation, is well qualified to assume his new duties."

Joe Gantz, the third generation of his family to occupy the president's post, is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and received his master's degree from Columbia University.

Lebanese Planes Make First Buzz Run Over Druse Posts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese air force jets today buzzed hilltop positions of Druse militiamen for the first time in the 12-day civil war, and the Israeli army suffered its first fatality since its troops redeployed in southern Lebanon.

State and privately owned radio stations in Beirut said the six air force jets flew low over the city and insurgent positions on the overlooking hills but did not bomb or strafe the Syrian-backed Druse fighters. Druse gunners had shelled Lebanese army positions in the Chouf Mountains and near the U.S. Marine base on Beirut's southern edge overnight.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said one soldier was killed and seven wounded in a bazooka attack in southern Lebanon. The fatality was the first among Israeli troops since the army pulled out of the central mountains 11 days ago and deployed behind lines closer to Israel in hopes of reducing casualties.

The command said the soldiers' position was hit just after midnight by several bazooka shells fired at toward a village seven miles east of Tyre. The identity of the attackers was not immediately known.

In Beirut, there were no reports of any new injuries among the 1,200 Marines. Four Marines have been killed and more than two dozen others injured by artillery shells landing in their sector at the Beirut International Airport.

"You can say it was the first day without shells in 15 days for the Marines," said Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan, of Shenandoah, Ga.

At daybreak, a formation of five gray warplanes with the Lebanese green, red and white emblem painted on their tails roared in to stage four low passes over Beirut and combat areas in the surrounding hills. Midway through the 30-minute runs, a sixth camouflaged-painted jet joined the other aircraft.

Army spokesman Capt. Youssef Atrissi said the British-made Hawker Hunters took off from the military zone of the airport opposite the Marine headquarters.

"We now feel it is safe to fly them," Atrissi said. "The airport was being shelled before."

The airport and the military zone have been closed since the war erupted between the Druse Moslems and right-wing Christian Phalange party militiamen after the Israeli army withdrew from the central mountains to south Lebanon on Sept. 4.

The 1983 operation of the Greenville Municipal Pool ended with a deficit of 56 percent of the total operation cost, or $12,093, according to pool director Jim Parker. Parker submitted his annual report to the Recreation and Parks Commission Wednesday night.

The pool this past summer opened on the weekend of June 4, began seven-day-a-week operations on June 8, and closed Aug. 21.

Total attendance for the season was 13,757, bringing in revenues of $9,273. The most substantial revenue came from the daily individual public swim fees, $6,573. Expenditures totaled $21,366, of which $12,927 was for salaries for the director and nine other personnel — life guards, instructors, attendants.

Parker noted that attendance was higher this year than for the past two years, and that revenues were greater than ever before. The cost of utilities this year, $4,729, far exceeded any previous year of operation.

Commissioners approved two statements of receipts and disbursements made by the Greenville Little League — one for the league's permanent account, the other for the league's all-star account.

For the Little League year which ended Sept. 7, the permanent account tally shows total cash receipts of $24,384.60, with total disbursements of $21,528.97, for a seasonal profit of $2,855.63. This profit, added to the cash balance on hand of $10,668.48, gives a current cash balance of $13,524.11 in the permanent account category.

For the all-star account, receipts were $4,765.73; disbursements were $3,081.26, for a profit of $1,684.47 and a cash balance on hand of $3,166.32.

Executive Director Boyd Lee explained that the Recreation and Parks Department provides playing facilities, pays utilities, and provides maintenance without any cost to the league. The Little League funds are a separate entity from the recreation budget.

In a report on the 1983 schedule of fall activities, Recreation Director Charles Vincent told commissioners of several recent additions to the department's programs. Three local groups, the Greenville Choral Society, the Boys Choir and Sweet Adelines have been taken under the department's umbrella, with the administrative office acting as a contact point for membership information in these groups.

Vincent also reported that the concept of providing a drama program for young people on a year round basis rather than only on a summer basis is being considered, with assistance to be sought from East Carolina University and other sources within the community.

A recently appointed commission member, Leslie Starr, attended her first meeting Wednesday night and was introduced to the board. A native of Baltimore, and a line manager at Procter & Gamble, Miss Starr has lived in Greenville for the past year and a half.

Commission members asked Janice Buck, the City Council's representative to the Recreation Commission, to get a determination from the City Council on the status of Recreation Commission member Henry Dunn. A city ordinance stipulates that a member of any commission missing three or more consecutive meetings no longer qualifies to serve. Dunn, currently acting in the capacity of a troubleshooter with the U. S. Postal Service, is now in Gaffney, S. C., and is expected to be there through the end of the year — which means he will miss the September-through-December meetings.

New Guide Tells Job Rights

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International
Meditations for the nation's record 48 million working women are between the covers of the U.S. Women's Bureau's biggest hit "A Working Woman's Guide to Her Job Rights."
... many women are still unaware of protections and services provided under federal law," Mrs. Lenora Cole Alexander, Women's Bureau director, says in the foreword of the updated fourth edition of the booklet.
She said women now make up 43 percent of the labor force but that women's average earnings are only 59 percent of men's.

"It is our hope that by providing information about their legal job rights we will help women gain full equal opportunity in access to jobs, promotions, pay and retirement benefits," Mrs. Alexander said.
More than 300,000 copies of the working woman's guide have been sold, making the $4.50 booklet the bureau's all-time best seller.
The Women's Bureau said about a million women joined the American labor force last year. During the past 10 years, the number of women going to work grew by 14 million. Today, 53 percent of all women 16 and over are employed — another record. That compares with 43 percent a decade ago.

The march of greater numbers of women to work has been credited, in part, to the need for money in a time of high inflation and, recently, in an era of recession that resulted in job loss for thousands of male breadwinners. Most studies over the past 15 years show that most women who are working do so out of economic need, according to Bureau reports.
The women's liberation movement and changes in women's legal job rights at the state and federal level also are among forces behind the female flight from hearth to workplace.
Both influences have made it possible for women not just to have job entitlements but also to take on exciting positions once mainly the domain of males. Younger women especially now are employed as firemen, policemen, astronauts and commercial airline pilots.
Mrs. Alexander, in a Labor Day pledge to the nation's working women, also said:
"Although women are making inroads into the non-traditional and high paying occupations, the majority still are in traditional and low-paying clerical and service jobs.
"As women make greater advances into jobs that are personally satisfying and economically rewarding, including jobs created by new technology, they will make even greater contributions to their families and the American economy."
"The Women's Bureau will continue to work towards that goal."
In the jobs rights booklet, Mrs. Alexander notes federal laws that protect employment rights apply to both women and men. But there existed a need for a pamphlet for women only, she said.
"This leaflet is directed specifically to women because women's legal rights related to jobs and jobseeking have changed considerably ... and many women are still unaware of protections and services provided under Federal law," she said. ghts when they are seeking a job, while on the job, and when they retire.
"Many states offer similar and sometimes broader protections or wider coverage than the federal law, and some areas of employment are governed exclusively by state law."

The booklet, prepared by bureau specialists Ruth Robinson and Jane Walstedt, tells women how to assert their job rights and how to get a job.
It also gives directions for filing a complaint or charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission — "if you think you have been treated unfairly in an employment situation and the reason for the action was your sex, race, color, religion or national origin."
A sample complaint form is one exhibit in the booklet. Another is a copy of the form to be used by a worker requesting the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health to make a "health hazard evaluation" of the workplace.
There are sections on sexual harassment, maternity leave and pregnancy discrimination, social security, unemployment insurance, federal protections for jobseekers, occupational safety and health.
An aide in Mrs. Alexander's office, asked why the U.S. Department of Labor does not have a Men's Bureau, said:
"Very often that question comes up as a put down to women and I always say, 'All the other federal agencies belong to the men — that's why!'"
The aide asked not to be identified.
"A Working Woman's Guide to Her Job Rights," ($4.50 per copy including postage) may be ordered from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 130-L, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Man's Good-Will Gesture Could Bequeath Problems

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a businessman with grown children and young grandchildren.
Recently I learned that my son's former girlfriend gave birth to a child conceived while they were living together. Neither of them has mentioned this to me, so if the child is his, apparently they have agreed not to acknowledge it. I am quite certain that he is not providing any financial support.
My estate will not be large, but it seems only fair that this new child, if indeed it is my grandchild, should share in what there is. Yet I cannot find out more without meddling in my adult son's affairs.
My attorney suggests I leave my will as it is, providing in general terms for my children and grandchildren. But I fear my son would face a messy situation should the child's mother claim a share of the estate.
My son would be furious — and justifiably so — were I to approach the girl to "negotiate" at this time. If I questioned him, he'd probably deny paternity and refuse to discuss it further.
I don't want to be a meddler, but a grandchild is a grandchild. What do you think?
CONCERNED FATHER

DEAR CONCERNED: You come across as a kindly, generous, farsighted man, but you'll get no medals for meddling, so listen to your attorney. Your son is a big boy now. Let him paddle his own canoe.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but I need help. I don't know if there's a word for what I have, but I have a fear of telephones.
In my job I have to use the phone a lot, and it's making a nervous wreck of me. When I talk on the phone, my throat closes up, I run out of breath and my voice changes. I can't seem to get the words out. I have no trouble talking to people in person, but when I talk on the phone, I fall apart.
Do other people have this problem? Or is it just me? If you have a solution, let's hear it, please. Think up a name, but don't use mine.
PHONAPHOBIC

DEAR PHONAPHOBIC: You are certainly not alone. Make one more phone call — to someone who practices behavior modification therapy. If your physician can't recommend one, consult your local mental health facility.

DEAR ABBY: I went on vacation for three weeks a couple of months ago and fell in love with a man in Portugal. It was love at first sight for both of us. I've been in love before, Abby, but never like this.
The problem: We want to get married and he wants to live in the United States, but I need to find a job for him first. There are no jobs here, and it's worse in Portugal.
I love him so much, Abby, I don't know what to do. Please help me. If I don't find a job for him, I will lose him!
IN LOVE AND CRYING

DEAR CRYING: I can't help you find a job for your new love. But I can give you something far more valuable — some advice: If you will lose this man unless you find a job for him, what you think is "love" is just a summer romance.
Go slowly. If he is unable to come here and find his own job, your marriage doesn't have a chance.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I saved it until the table was cleared and we were having coffee.
"The kids are coming home for the weekend," I said. "All three of them for our anniversary."
My husband and I savored the moment. It would be nice to be a family again, sitting around rekindling memories listening to their ideas, seeing the legacy we created ... the monument, so to speak, to our own immortality.
We had missed them more than either of us were willing to admit.
They arrived on three different flights, but the shuttle to and from the airport gave us time to talk.
"Why are you bringing a surfboard to Arizona?"
"My apartment's too small to store it."
"Who was the girl who got off the plane with you?"
"Just met her. Gave me her number. Wants to share an apartment."
"This is wonderful having you home. What shall we do first?"
"My laundry. Everything in the suitcase is dirty."
One hung on the phone the entire weekend laughing and saying, "Really."
The other two got into a heated discussion on our foreign policy in Central America, making Cain and Abel look like Jimmy and Donny Osmond.
They used five towels per shower: one for the right arm and one for the left, one for each leg and one to throw around their neck when they shaved.
When we watched TV, the one with the remote control changed channels so fast I thought Alistair Cooke was giving advice on irregularity. The problems they so flippantly dismissed but were to keep me awake for the next several months included a car that had died, a rent increase, a job that was shaky, an accident in litigation, and an ugly creditor. All three slept until the crack of noon.
They left the way they came. Barely making the flights, the bathroom steaming, the refrigerator door ajar, a flip-top cap pressed into a decorative candle, the gas gauge in the car on E.

We returned from the last trip to the airport exhausted. For a long time, we savored the silence. Then my husband said, "we've raised three wonderful, vital, worthwhile human beings who are capable of driving a sane person nuts!"
I nodded. "Do you know what they said about us?" They said, "what in the world do you two talk about after 34 years? Your life seems so boring with all of us gone."
"Boring's good," said my husband.
I smiled. "I've always liked boring."

Football Widow, Say Hello To The Computer Widow

By PATRICIA WALSH
PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — It used to be divorced women were called grass widows. Football widows now mourn all year instead of just the fall.

I'm coining a new phrase — computer widow.

Ever since Bob toted a baby computer home, it's been bye-bye Pat.

Oh, I know all the answers. Develop my own interests, find somebody else who plays racquetball and hits the ball easy for me, read articles about the growing phenomenon of computer neglect. Right up to, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." Nothing helps. When he sits down in front of that blinking blue eye and seductive keyboard, he might as well be in Australia and I'm in the cold.

Inevitably I remember something to ask him after he enters computerland, but the response is silence or snarls of frustration.

Now my key phrase is, "Let me know when you reach a breaking point."

Thus he knows I have something on my mind and usually his curiosity wins out.

Now HIS key phrase is, "Why didn't you think of that before I got started?"

We have nightly discussions about my feelings of neglect. He points out I used to complain he watched too much television. Out of the boob tube and into byte fright.

Now he watches television an hour a night — and that after I pressured him into an agreement to spend time with me.

He is learning the meaning of time. Once a carefree soul who ignored clocks as much as possible, he has learned to check the hour before he shuts down for the night. He knows I'll ask in the morning.

He hasn't yet agreed with me that since he spends at least 40 5chr i 8v 5o ' m59,shot ' 5c' 5 gnol i p5 8n' 5ot iol .inl g5h n9 0' vo58rt 94 5pmn. nr 5 'nr aby off my turf.

In the beginning we played together. We started on an adventure game in which the object is to find treasures like jeweled eggs and crystal sceptres. I was pretty good at that. I was the one who figured out how to go up the chimney to get back to the starting point. Heck, I was the one who woke up in the middle of the night with the solution for opening the floodgates of the dam.

Then, the adventure got old, and Bob got more interested in programming a game and getting it to work right than actually playing it. His warehouse of perfectly programmed, unplayed games is growing rapidly.

He squints at pages of microscopic lettering, pecking away with two fingers for hours, cursing when something doesn't work right.

I helped with programming for awhile, reading aloud things like "ifa-0$'b-0$then(2c-3c)l(1-3)am$1023going(z-x)crazy."

While Bob continues his computer affair, I keep seeking a solution to feeling like the old shoe. Meanwhile, I have made a vow to take advantage of his obsession and learn about computers, wave of the future and all that.

I am going to learn. I am. Just as soon as I finish my letter to Dear Abby.

"Tips on Fall Gardening" was the program for the meeting of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club held Tuesday at the home of Pat Dubber.

Speaker Ruth O'Dell reminded members that trees and shrubs are the air conditioning system of nature. She was assisting hostess for the meeting.

Good Resolution

We would call attention to what's happening at Aycock Junior High, where students are attempting to raise $10,000 during their annual magazine sale.

The money will go for needed materials, equipment and such basics as are lacking simply because their budget did not permit them.

Other schools have money-raising projects, too; and it behooves us all to keep eyes and ears alert for them.

The benefits are obvious in terms of meeting needs of the school plant and in providing means for better education of today's students and tomorrow's students.

The less obvious benefits include an early appreciation of just how hard it is to earn $10,000; and there is the matter of learning to respect the value of equipment and material on hand ... with resultant (we hope) less wear and tear.

Last, but not least, the school campaigners are creating a legacy for those who come after them; so there is more to these campaigns than the acquiring of books, equipment, campus improvements, etc.

Parents and neighbors may groan at the suggestion, but we hope their patience, good humor, tolerance and encouragement pays dividends for the young people and the schools they represent.

Patrons do get something in exchange for their generosity. So make a "good resolution".

Decision Near

No one can blame the U.S. Marines for wanting air strikes in Lebanon, nor is there any great quarrel with the president for authorizing them.

The relatively small contingent of Marines is there under difficult circumstances to help keep the peace. Now they are being shot at and having to fight back.

The problem with it all, however, is that the United States once again is being drawn steadily into an ever widening war ... one that could call for still further use of our military forces.

Our mission in Lebanon was noble, but the time will soon come when we must decide whether to become further engaged in the continual warring there or pull out our forces.

Monetary Policy

WASHINGTON — Just before the administration adjourned to California for its summer vacation, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan briefed President Reagan on the economy and delivered this warning: Continuation of present Federal Reserve Board policy threatens significant weakening of the economy.

The political implications are obvious and ominous. More than U.S.-Soviet relations and far more than belated efforts at wooing blacks, Hispanics and feminists, Reagan's re-election prospects depend on the state of the economy in 1984. The Treasury's economic analysis, on which the secretary based his briefing, strongly suggests that state will be sour indeed unless newly-reappointed Chairman Paul Volcker changes policy at the Fed.

The government went on automatic pilot soon after that mid-August briefing, and has been preoccupied by the KAL 007 crisis since its shortened vacation. But the time is coming when the president must face up to what he wants to do about monetary policy, with far-ranging political implications for his and the Republican Party's future.

The dour view of the Wall Street bond trader abhorring too rapid an economic recovery has its advocates in the administration. Chief economic adviser Martin Feldstein and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige make no secret of their desire for a gentler growth rate. That surely is not the view of White House chief of staff James Baker, much less most working Republican politicians.

But the point man so far in warning Reagan of the peril to him of slow growth has been Don Regan. The August economic briefing of the president by the longtime head of Merrill Lynch was based on professional staff analysis markedly different from wall street's present conventional wisdom.

What the secretary told the president stems from this Treasury economic assessment as of early August: Because of the Fed's springtime decisions to tighten up, the monetary base — bank reserves and currency — did not grow at all during June and July. That raised what Treasury economists consider "serious consequences" if nothing is changed.

Regan's briefing of the president pointed out that the Fed's restraint of the monetary base was disturbingly similar to the central banks' performance in 1981, which Treasury analysts believe triggered the disastrous recession. This, not the budget deficits as Feldstein claims, is blamed by Regan for the recovery-thwarting rise of interest rates. Continuation of this policy, the Treasury warns, will so weaken the economy that Regan could not point with pride to economic revival in the fall of 1984.

In blaming rising interest rates on the Fed, the Treasury analysis breaks sharply with Wall Street's deficitphobia. It dismisses the notion that federal deficits combine with rapid economic recovery to build a demand for money that pushes up interest rates, arguing instead that recovery reduces the need for corporate borrowing.

Since the president's briefing, there has been no sign of Federal Reserve relaxation. Indeed, some Treasury economists believe a serious economic slowdown — beginning in the fourth quarter of '83 or first quarter of '84 — is now inescapable. That may be desirable to Feldstein, Baldrige and much of wall Street, but it guarantees an unemployment rate close to 10 percent right up to Election Day.

Quite apart from its human cost, the political consequences of chronically-high unemployment are profound for Regan. If the Treasury warnings prove correct, he will be forced to base his 1984 campaign not on economic growth but on the virtues of economic austerity (lower inflation at the Phillips Curve price of high unemployment). That proved a winning formula for Margaret Thatcher in Britain, but it could be fatal for Regan.

Beyond the 1984 election, chronic high unemployment means irresistible congressional demands for open-ended unemployment benefits on the British style. Such a work disincentive runs exactly opposite to the original goals of the Reagan Revolution.

WASHINGTON — As an example of the orator's art, flawless. He had all his stage business just right; the taped recordings of the Soviet pilot added a fine dramatic touch. Given striped pants, a top hat and a star-spangled vest, the president could have modeled for Uncle Sam in the posters saying, "I want you."

But once the forensic form has been admired, the literal substance remains to be examined, and of substance there was pathetically little. The president's sense of outrage was evident in his rhetoric. The Soviets' action in shooting down a defenseless civilian airliner was a "massacre." It was a "crime against humanity." Such a crime "must never be forgotten." It was an atrocity, an act of barbarism.

And what response did the president recommend? He proposed a joint resolution from Congress, condemning the Soviet Union and demanding reparations.

Well, the saints preserve us. Within the Kremlin walls, such cornflake resolutions have no impact. The Soviets eat them for breakfast. Mr.

Reagan wanted the U.N. Security Council to express itself, but a resolution from the United Nations — if it survived a Soviet veto — would be as ephemeral. The president had a further thought, that the flow of "military and strategic items" should be curtailed, but if any such "flow" now is going from the United States to the Soviet Union, we have an unprinted front-page story crying out for publication.

This is the bitter truth, and it is galling to accept it: The president's feeble response was the best that could be made. There is a child's jingle that might have been chanted in the Kremlin: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words can never hurt me." Mr. Reagan had no sticks to wield, no stones to throw. He had fewer options than President Carter had at the time the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, and Mr. Carter's options were nothing to strike terror into the communist heart.

The only effective response would have been a multilateral response. After all, the 269 victims of the doomed airliner came from 13 countries.

—James Kilpatrick—

No Sticks To Wield, No Stones To Throw

The Soviets' savage defense of their own airspace must cause international concern among pilots and passengers who fly global routes. Yet three days of intense pressure from the White House could produce no massive sanctions against the Soviet Union, no mass cancellation of air traffic, not even a symbolic recall of ambassadors. Canada suspended Aeroflot rights for 60 days. It was the moral equivalent of requiring Billy Martin to sit out a Sunday doubleheader.

To have canceled the grain deal would have accomplished precisely nothing — nothing, that is, except to impose further hardship on American farmers who are suffering one of the most disastrous years in recent history. The Soviets would have turned to alternative sources or, more likely, simply tightened everyone's belt by one more hole.

Without concerted support within the Western world, Mr. Reagan could have taken no punitive action on the shipment of high-technology items. The president was badly burned some months ago in the matter of the European pipeline. Our allies want to do business with the Soviet Union. Toward that end, they are entirely willing to extend credits and to make other favorable arrangements for trade.

The long and short of it is that the Soviets have gotten away quite literally with murder. There will be no apology, no reparations, no compensation to the families of the dead. But the childish jingle falls short of absolute truth. Words do hurt; the resolutions of condemnation may not hurt the Kremlin leaders themselves, but the incident and its aftermath add to the record. They provide one more chapter in the book.

To be sure, not many Western leaders are inclined to read the book. Until Afghanistan came along, Jimmy Carter had refused to read it. But page by page, the volume swells and the record of Soviet brutality grows longer. All we can do now, in a mood of national frustration, is to keep coiling a rope of history on which the Soviets one day may hang themselves.

Merit Pay Is Hot Issue

RALEIGH — Merit pay for teachers is about the hottest idea floating around in the midst of those who are trying to fix the public schools. Over the next nine months, merit pay is also likely to be the most studied proposition in North Carolina.

Before the General Assembly reconvenes in June 1984, no less than three commissions — public and private — are set to issue reports and a group of educators are trying to put together a fourth study.

Gov. Jim Hunt plans formation of a state study on education for economic growth. It will follow up on the heels of the study which the Education Commission of the States conducted nationally and which Hunt chaired.

Roy Forbes, Hunt's liaison with the economic growth study, says merit pay is likely to be one of the most important topics that group studies. It is widely felt, he said, that the teaching profession is not currently attracting the best possible people. The theory behind merit pay, he says, is to give the teaching profession a capacity to reward outstanding performance. This, it is hoped, will provide teachers with more money and with greater personal and professional fulfillment.

The assembly approved legislation this year to establish a 47-member Educational Policy Council which will be responsible for reporting to both the 1984 short session and the 1985 full session on a wide range of educational issues. This council is widely seen as an extension of the special Select Committee on Education which issued a highly controversial set of education recommendations about a year ago, one of which was merit pay.

The N.C. Association of Educators, which has long opposed merit pay, started a study on the topic this month. NCAE's 10-person study committee heard about the plans being tried in other states and will now meet weekly for the next two or three months. They hope to have some recommendations ready by Christmas.

"Our opposition to merit pay comes from our distrust of the evaluation systems that have been used," said John Dorman, NCAE executive director. The group fears that favoritism and politics could determine who gets raises and who doesn't. But, NCAE also recognizes the mood of the country. "It appears 99 percent sure that there'll be some form of merit pay proposal by the governor or the Legislature and that it will have a good chance of passage. We need to at least be a part of the group making the decision."

NCAE and two other education groups are trying to pull together a fourth study. Dorman and leaders of the Association of School Administrators and the N.C. Association of College Teachers of Education have asked three other education groups if they'd meet to discuss the possibility of a joint conference on merit pay. All involved would be practicing educators. The idea would be to find those points upon which all these practicing educators could agree.

If these study committees decide that the concept of merit pay is worth pursuing, they have four basic merit pay alternatives to consider.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools are experimenting with a career ladder system under which teachers pursue different professional tracks all of which are separated by status and salary. In Tennessee, a master teacher plan is being tried under which teachers can seek to move into higher paying classifications as they gain experience. Another plan would grant salary differentials to teachers in disciplines like math and science where there is a shortage of teachers. Finally, there are merit plans where teachers are evaluated and those who come out the best get paid more.

Strength For Today

A bereaved widow who had recently lost her husband wrote to her minister as follows: "We know that all that is best and loveliest and most precious shall be gathered together at last, not here but within God's perfect love, where there can be no ending, only life in its perfections of fulfillment."

The best thing about life is its eternity. It is not something made to exist a few brief years and then be wiped out forever. It is something which, as this devoted Christian woman wrote, is gathered together at last "within God's perfect love."

We should be sustained every day with the realization that the life which we live is a special type, a precious gift from God possessed only by God's children. In this respect, it differs from life as an aspect of nature which we see about us. And what God has given he will preserve in transcendent form within his perfect love.

Academia Worried Over Approach

WASHINGTON — Last September, Father William Byron looked around his campus at Catholic University, a 7,000-student institution here, for a project worthy of federal government support.

Byron eventually set his sights on Catholic's Vitreous State Laboratory. Scattered among three buildings, the lab is home to 50 scientists whose work on fiber optics and other "materials research" has been widely recognized. Hoping to house the lab in a single new building constructed at government expense, Byron said, he "began to package (the lab's) strengths and match them with national policy."

A year — and many trips to Capitol Hill — later, Byron's dream has come true. Late in July, Catholic received a congressional promise for $5 million, payable on or after Oct. 1, the beginning of a new fiscal year. An additional $8.9 million will probably follow next year. Already, Byron has begun to select a site and talk with architects.

Yet many of Byron's colleagues, impressed with his enterprise, take exception to his methods. There is widespread agreement in academia and in government that, by hiring lobbyists and ignoring traditional channels for research projects, Byron has set an unprecedented — and questionable — example for other schools to follow. In time, many worry, lawmakers could dish out cash to colleges just as they roll the pork barrel for other interest groups.

Adding to such fears is New York's Columbia University, which also received $5 million during the summer for a $20 million chemistry center — again, with aid from lobbyists and some unorthodox shortcuts.

According to Dr. Jim Kane, deputy director of the Energy Department's research office, a university hoping to garner federal support for a research project traditionally makes a formal proposal to the appropriate federal agency. Federal officials, in turn, seek the advice of experts in the field, asking questions about each proposal's efficacy, potential and merit. While "peer review" methods vary and are rarely part of an agency's official policy, they routinely determine whether a school's proposal is included in budgets sent to Congress.

Officials at Catholic and Columbia, however, preferred a more direct approach.

At issue, of course, is not the merit of the research at either Catholic or Columbia (though peer review would have tackled those issues). The chief concern, instead, is that more schools will try to solve their financial problems by appealing directly to Congress. Such a prospect is almost inevitable; Even as state and federal appropriations to higher education decline, Uncle Sam is expected to continue to shoulder 80 percent of all university research costs. It may only seem increasingly natural that every institution deserves a slice of the pie. In fact, many Energy Department officials are already preparing for Byron-like maneuvers next year.

Yet, if colleges and university labs are the crucibles of its future economic strength, the nation can't afford to leave scientific decisions in political hands. Big schools with sizeable resources would quickly outgun the smaller institutions; as the connections between large research institutions and corporate America grow, lawmakers would yield as they have to business interests. As the Energy Department's Kane put it: "If this process gets politicized, it's going to be pure chaos."

Airline Urges Employees To Take Over Ownership In Effort To Survive

By The Associated Press
Continental Airlines could become the world's largest employee-owned airline if a company-proposed stock ownership plan is approved by company workers, officials said.

The air carrier, the country's eighth largest, announced the plan Wednesday. Continental, which lost $84 million in the last six months, also said it plans to reduce costs by $150 million through layoffs and cuts in salaries and benefits.

Meanwhile, in Kansas City, Mo., Trans World Airlines Inc. announced plans to cut some 12 percent of its work force, which totals about 29,500 people worldwide, by the end of the year.

Continental's cost reduction plan includes layoffs for some pilots and flight attendants, said airline spokesman Bruce Hicks. He added he did not know how many employees would be affected.

Under the stock plan, Continental and its parent company, Texas Air, would release 12 million shares to the benefit of employees. Four million would be granted as stock bonuses.

The other 8 million would be available as stock options. Employees could buy the stocks at 85 percent of the market value and then pay for them through payroll deductions over a two-year period. The value would be established on the date the plan goes into effect.

The 12 million shares of stock going into the employee ownership plan is 35 percent of the total and could make Continental the world's largest employee-owned airline. Texas Air would continue to hold 11.5 million shares of the airline's stock.

Continental chairman Frank Lorenzo said the plan "will dramatically change the cost structure of the company and put its costs more reasonably in line with marketplace labor costs."

Texas Air currently holds 90 percent interest in Continental.

The agent, clerical, reservations and management group has already voted to accept the new plan. This group represents about half of the airline's 12,000 employees.

The cost reduction plan calls for a $150 million cut in costs distributed through employee groups, including $20 million from mechanics now in the fifth week of a strike over wages and work rules.

TAW said Wednesday that 3,500 employees, or about one out of every eight, would be affected by the cutback. The reductions will be achieved through furloughs, unpaid leaves and attrition.

Included in the TWA cuts will be 2,250 ground employees and 1,250 flight attendants, the airline said. No reduction in the number of pilots was scheduled.

Spokesmen for the airline said a large part of the cuts were part of seasonal layoffs. Airlines usually trim their employment rolls in the fall in anticipation of low passenger loads during the winter.

In July the airline said its recent poor financial performance might prompt larger-than-usual cuts in the work force. A loss of $108.9 million was reported by TWA for the first half of 1983, compared to a loss of $84.7 million during the same period a year ago.

During the first six months of this year, TWA made a pretax profit of $66 million in its international operations, up from $18.6 million during the period in 1982. The airline took a $174.9 million loss before taxes on domestic operations in the first half of 1983, an increase from the $103.2 million it lost last year in the same period.

Court Rules Out Forced Surgery

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Prosecutors who want a bullet removed from a suspect's chest for evidence cannot force the man to undergo surgery because his privacy would be violated, an appeals court has ruled.

The Richmond prosecutor's office wants the bullet for its case against Rudolph Lee Jr., who police said exchanged fire with a grocer during a robbery attempt. Lee contends he was shot by two men who robbed him.

In a 2-1 decision Wednesday, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the proposed surgery "is too intrusive and presents too great a risk — to this defendant and to the privacy interests of a free society" to be condoned as a police practice.

"Viewed starkly, the state proposes to drug this citizen — not yet convicted of a criminal offense — with narcotics and barbiturates into a state of unconsciousness, then surgically to open his chest and there to explore for a bullet that may or may not be probative in the trial" the court said.

Theft Reported At School

Greenville police are investigating a break-in and larceny incident reported early today at Sadie Saulter School that resulted in the theft of a quantity of meats.

Capt. John Briley said an office and storage freezer at the school were entered and two 14-pound rolls of ground beef were taken, along with an undetermined amount of chickens.

Briley said entrance to the school was apparently gained after a window on the east side of the facility was pried open. Damage to the school property was estimated at $500, he said.

The break-in was reported at 1:35 a.m.

NATO Boycott Of Soviet Flights Takes Effect

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

The official NATO boycott of flights to and from Moscow took effect today in much of Western Europe to protest the Soviets' downing of the South Korean airliner, and the Kremlin responded with blistering anti-American articles in the state-run press.

The newspaper of the Communist Party Central Committee repeated charges that the Korean jumbo jetliner was on a U.S. spy mission and compared the U.S. "provocation" to an attack by Adolf Hitler's soldiers on Poland in 1939.

The paper, Sovietskaya Rossiya, failed to mention that Soviet forces invaded Poland from the east 16 days after the Nazis attacked. It called the airliner incident a "dirty and cynical intelligence operation."

Off the coast of northern Japan, where the airliner is believed to have crashed, two U.S. Navy vessels searched today for the plane's "black box" — the flight recordings which investigators hope will shed more light on the Sept. 1 attack.

In many Western European countries, including most of the NATO nations that fly to Moscow, government-imposed two-week bans took effect suspending landing rights for the Soviet airline Aeroflot for two weeks and suspending national flights to Moscow. Austria, a neutral nation, did not join the boycott; nor did France, which belongs only to the non-military organizations of NATO.

Several non-NATO nations, such as Ireland, Switzerland and Japan, joined the boycott.

In addition, many pilots' associations have declared a 60-day boycott of flights to Moscow to protest the Soviet attack that killed all 269 people aboard Korean Air Lines Flight 007.

Aeroflot, meanwhile, stopped accepting tickets written by U.S. airlines, complicating travel arrangements for people unable to fly on their pre-arranged schedules.

In London, British aviation officials theorized that the jumbo jet mistakenly strayed over Soviet airspace because a switch was in the wrong position.

Britain's Civil Aviation Authority said the Seoul-bound plane probably was off course from the time it left its refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska because of a crew navigation error, the British Broadcasting Corp. said Wednesday night.

Reporter Paul Barry of the BBC-TV news program "Newsnight" said the CAA worked through about 20 theories before it decided a switch affecting the plane's auto-pilot was in the wrong position.

The CAA believed the pilot took off from Anchorage with the switch turned to follow radio beacons or a compass heading, failing to turn it correctly later to link up with the computerized navigation system into which the flight program already had been entered, BBC said.

Master Gunner Sgt. Ed Evans, a spokesman for U.S. Forces Japan, said in Tokyo that two Navy vessels would search the northern seas off Japan for the destroyed airliner's black box. The salvage ships were equipped with sophisticated sonar and remote controlled deepwater drone vehicles "capable of retrieving small objects from great depths," he said.

Waters off Moneron, a tiny island west of Sakhalin where the jetliner is thought to have gone down, are 600 to 900 feet deep.

Japanese search efforts have turned up four badly mutilated bodies, three pieces of human flesh and hundreds of fragments believed to have come from the downed jumbo jet.

Tapes Studied Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. translation of a Soviet pilot's words in the minutes before he shot down Korean Air Line Flight 007 relied in one key instance on an American interpretation of Soviet military jargon, not on the literal meaning of the Russian word used.

Two Russian language experts were asked by The Associated Press to review the transcript of the radio transmissions. They said the SU-15 fighter jet pilot told Soviet ground controllers that the Korean plane was not responding to an unspecified "inquiry" made 13 minutes before the plane carrying 269 people was shot down.

But the White House provided an English language translation of the pilot's air-to-ground transmissions quoting the pilot as saying, "the target isn't responding to IFF," standing for "Identify: Friend or Foe."

Administration officials have described IFF as an electronic code that can only be read by other Soviet planes and have cited the quote as evidence that the Soviets did not use an international distress frequency to warn the South Korean plane that it had intruded into Soviet air space.

Two Russian linguists — Irene Thompson, a language professor at George Washington University, and Kyrill Borissov, a language instructor at the State Department's Foreign Service Institute — said the literal translation of the sentence is "the target is not responding to the inquiry." The Russian word "zapros," or "inquiry," is used, not the letters "IFF," they said.

State Department spokesman Robert Williams defended the administration's translation, saying it was "based on a specific jargon used by Soviet fighter pilots" in which the word "inquiry" means "IFF."

"This is the authoritative translation," Williams said. "I have every confidence in the (U.S. intelligence) agencies that did this translation."

Another administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said other intelligence information backs up the U.S. translation, but he refused to disclose what it is.

Soviets, U.S. Ships Join Hunt

WAKKANAI, Japan (AP) — U.S. and Soviet flotillas hunting for the downed South Korean jumbo jet faced off in international waters near Moneron Island today. The Soviets sent down a minisubmarine and marked an area with orange and red-striped buoys, Japanese officials reported.

The Soviets had 24 ships in an area 20 miles north of Moneron, including the guided missile cruiser Petropavlovsk. The Americans had five vessels in an area 18 miles northeast of Moneron, including the destroyer Elliot, the frigate Badger, the cutter Monroe and the special search vessels Narragansett and Conveyer, the officials said.

They said the Soviet rescue ship Georgi Kozumin lowered a minisub in the area, then retrieved it and put out two marker buoys as darkness set in.

"It is clear that they (the Soviets) are carrying out some kind of undersea operation, possibly the search for the airliner," Rear Adm. Masayoshi Kato of Japan's Maritime Safety Agency told reporters in Wakkanai.

The 2,400-ton Narragansett and the 1,530-ton Conveyer carry "pinger" locator systems, sophisticated sonar and remote-controlled deep drone vehicles "capable of retrieving small objects from great depths," said Master Gunner Sgt. Ed Evans, a spokesman for U.S. Forces Japan, said in Tokyo.

They are searching for flight recorders of the South Korean airliner shot down in Soviet airspace Sept. 1 with the loss of 269 lives, including 61 Americans.

Waters are 600 feet to 900 feet deep off Moneron, a tiny island west of Sakhalin near where the Boeing 747 is thought to have gone down.

No major sections of the plane or its flight recorders, whose records might help tell what happened in the aircraft's last minutes, have been found and it is not known whether they survived the crash.

A "black box" — actually painted orange for high visibility — emits a pinging signal that can be heard by equipment on the salvage vessels.

Evans said the pinger locator and "side-looking sonar" would be towed submerged by the surface ship, and the drone would be dispatched from either the Narragansett or the Conveyer if wreckage is spotted.

The safety agency said 20 Japanese vessels and 16 aircraft were crisscrossing the Sea of Japan waters off Sakhalin and the Sea of Okhotsk north of Hokkaido to hunt for debris and bodies from the Korean aircraft.

Currents in the Sea of Okhotsk have moved bits and pieces of the jet south since it was shot down. About 1,000 Japanese police and volunteers have been searching the 240-mile northern shore of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island.

The search has turned up four badly mutilated bodies, three pieces of human flesh and hundreds of fragments believed to have come from the airliner.

Computer Whiz Asks For Court's Protection

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Adam Osborne was one of the gurus of the computer industry in the 1970s, an entrepreneurial genius who pioneered the portable market and lectured his competitors on what they were doing wrong.

So when Osborne Computer Corp. filed for Chapter 11 protection under federal bankruptcy laws and then received temporary financing from three banks Wednesday, it was an occasion for both snickering and sadness among his competitors.

Osborne's magazine column, "From the Fountainhead," made him enemies and admirers, but everyone in the computer business was aware of his influence.

"I know some people will take a measure of satisfaction in seeing him fall, but we really have to feel a little sad about what's happened to him," said George Morrow, chairman of Morrow Designs of San Leandro, Calif.

"If he hadn't been there, most of us in the small and portable computer business wouldn't be here today."

The decline of Osborne Computer has been described widely as part of a major shakeout in the low-priced computer industry. Other companies believed to be having difficulty have been Texas Instruments, Atari Inc. and Dot Computers.

Osborne, the first company in a highly competitive field of makers of briefcase-sized computers, filed for Chapter 11 protection in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Oakland on Tuesday, which shields the company from creditors' lawsuits while it arranges to pay off its debts.

Testology Inc. and PH Components Inc., two San Jose companies, charged in a suit Monday that Osborne owes them more than $4.5 million for circuit boards and other parts.

James Lopes, attorney for Osborne, said Security Pacific Bank, Chemical Bank and National Bank of North America have agreed to lend the company $600,000 "to keep us afloat."

Osborne, known as a marketing whiz with a feel for future trends, perhaps let his company slip by failing to introduce a new product when he needed to, a competitor said.

Using $250,000 of his own money, the British-born Osborne built his success on the Osborne I portable, a $1,795 machine weighing only 24 pounds and small enough to fit under an airline seat. But the next major product, the Executive, a portable priced at $2,495, was not introduced until April.

"Osborne should have had a product out last November," said Morrow, who also is considered an industry leader. "If he had a product out last November, he'd still be in business."

Osborne then shook up his company by stepping down as president and turning the job over to Robert Jaunich, president of Consolidated Foods in Chicago.

Osborne reported sales for the year ended November 1982 at about $100 million, far below predicted sales of $250 million. The plan to go public was scuttled and in May the company yielded to competitive pressure by cutting the price of the Osborne I to $1,295. Last month, the company closed its New Jersey plant and laid off 200 workers at its Hayward headquarters. A week ago, 80 percent of its remaining 350 employees were furloughed.

"My feeling is that you will see a real fire-sale price for the company as the investors quickly try to sell off the company to get a little money back," said Jean Yates, president of a Los Altos microcomputer market research firm.

Lee Felsenstein, a research fellow at Osborne, echoed that feeling.

"Fewer people are expecting someone to ride out of the horizon on a white horse and save us,"

Felsenstein said.

But not everyone at Osborne was as pessimistic.

"We are surprisingly upbeat," said one employee who asked not to be named.

"We all think we still have the chance to be rich."

"I don't think this is the end of Adam Osborne," said

Morrow. "I think you'll see him again. He's very definitely an entrepreneur. Once you get this in your blood, it's very difficult to get it out."

Sheriff Convicted In Jail Torture Case

HOUSTON (AP) — Water torture used by a former sheriff and two deputies to force confessions was part of a conspiracy involving a "marijuana trap" in an east Texas county, says the prosecutor who won convictions against the ex-officers.

After the guilty verdicts Wednesday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward raised the possibility of more indictments.

James C. "Humpy" Parker, 47, the former San Jacinto County sheriff, and former deputies John Glover, 65, and Carl Lee, 63, were convicted of conspiring to violate the civil rights of prisoners by subjecting them to water torture.

Witnesses testified that they were handcuffed and their faces wrapped with a towel. Water would be poured on the towel, and the prisoners would kick their feet when they wanted to talk.

The three defendants were also found guilty on multiple charges of torturing inmates to deprive them of liberty without due process of law. Lee was acquitted on one of those charges.

Among those charges were accusations that Parker took $30,000 in kickbacks from a bail bondsman and operated a "marijuana trap" on U.S. Highway 59, about 70 miles north of Houston. The government contended motorists, primarily young people and blacks, were searched without consent and equipment on their cars was altered to make it appear the original stop was valid.

"I think you will find that's one big conspiracy," Woodward said. "It would be improper for me to say who might be indicted. We have been investigating that throughout and even in the course of this trial."

Additional indictments could come soon, he said.

The six-man, six-woman jury deliberated about five hours before returning their verdict. The defendants showed no emotion as the clerk read the decision, although Glover's wife sobbed quietly.

The conspiracy conviction carries a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine and 10 years in prison. Each of the other counts of which they were convicted — Parker two, Glover three and Lee three — could result in a year in prison and $1,000 fine.

None of the defendants had any comment. Bert Moser, Glover's attorney, said, "I'm just very disappointed."

Woodward said if asked by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, he would urge the maximum penalty and that each of the convicted men undergo psychiatric examinations.

"I think what they did to people was inhuman and sadistic," Woodward said.

For Woodward, 34, trying his first case, victory was bittersweet.

"I'm pleased we were able to convict," he said. "But it's rather sobering that we have to admit that the guardians of the law have tortured people as late as 1980."

Sentencing was set for Oct. 18. The defendants remained free on $10,000 personal recognizance bond although DeAnda ordered them to return to court today to review the bond and report to authorities for pre-sentencing investigations.

The trial began Aug. 30 with four defendants. But on Tuesday, DeAnda granted a mistrial for Floyd Baker because his defense was damaging to the overall defense.

Baker will get a new trial Oct. 17. He was the lone defendant to acknowledge the torture took place at the San Jacinto County Jail.

The government's case included victims, all with criminal histories, who told of incidents between 1976 and 1980 and described how they were handcuffed to a table or chair and their faces wrapped tightly with a towel.

According to testimony, the prisoner's head then would be pulled back and water poured over the towel. The prisoner, faced with suffocation, would kick with his feet when he was willing to talk about alleged crimes. Two of the victims testified they wrongly confessed to crimes because of the torture.

Candidates Seek Hispanics

By DONALD ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A political tug-of-war for support of Hispanic voters in 1984 is intensifying, with President Reagan praising their "traditional values" and Democratic leaders ready to attack Republican policies as the cause of economic hardship felt by many Hispanics.

Reagan held center stage Wednesday night with a speech to Hispanic Republicans in which he said, "America needs the values of our Hispanic citizens. We need those values to be expressed at the polls and through our political system."

The president also cited lower interest and inflation rates and his cuts in taxes and domestic spending and told his partisan audience that "federal tax money cannot buy happiness. It cannot buy our citizens real jobs and real opportunity."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., was certain to offer a far different view in a speech today to the annual dinner of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus.

Also ready to dispute the president's claim that his policies have benefitted Hispanics were six Democratic officeholders of Hispanic descent — Gov. Toney Anaya of New Mexico and Reps. Robert Garcia of New York, Bill Richardson of New Mexico, and Matthew Martinez, Edward Roybal and Esteban Torres, all of California.

They were to appear at a news conference with Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt and party vice chairwoman Polly Baca Barragan.

The Hispanic Caucus consists of 10 Democratic congressmen and one Republican — Rep. Manuel Lujan of New Mexico, who sat a few seats from Reagan at the head table of the GOP dinner.

At one point, when the president cited his efforts to cut federal spending, he said "and if the Congress acts responsibly, we can bring it further under control. I only wish the majority of that illustrious body were as responsible as Manny Lujan."

A Hispanic Caucus aide said Lujan would attend the dinner at which O'Neill was scheduled to speak.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale also accepted an invitation to the caucus dinner as did Mrs. John Glenn. Sen. Gary Hart planned to appear at a pre-dinner reception. Mondale, Glenn and Hart are among the seven declared candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The backdrop for much of the political activity was Hispanic Heritage Week.

Reagan's schedule for the week included several events directed at the Hispanic community, including an interview granted Wednesday with a group including several reporters for Hispanic publications.

"I want you to know," he said, "that my concern is not something new or some grand campaign strategy, as some have indicated. Since my days as governor of California, I've been aware of the rich contributions that Americans of Hispanic descent have made and are making to our country."

Tirso del Junco, a Cuban refugee who is heading the Republican Party's Viva 84 program designed to raise $1 million for use in the Hispanic community, has said the Hispanic vote could be decisive in such major states as California, New York, Texas and Florida.

A heavy Hispanic turnout in Texas in 1982 is cited as major factor in the upset defeat of Republican Gov. William Clements.

EVANGELIST — Self-styled evangelist Richard Rife preaches as he reads out of a Bible to the public in San Francisco. Rife preaches that women are sinners and should repent. An aggravated San Francisco woman, Mary Golden, made a citizen's arrest after hearing Rife preach. (AP Laserphoto)

Street Evangelist Upsets Woman, Who Arrests Him

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Self-styled evangelist Richard Rife spent his lunch hours preaching to the public that liberated women are sinners who should repent. Aggravated citizen Mary Golden wanted him to see the error of his ways — so she arrested him.

"I wouldn't do anything to interfere with this guy's right to preach on the streets, but he's gone beyond that by nearly accosting people," said Ms. Golden, 39, who made her citizen's arrest at the suggestion of police.

Rife goes on trial Oct. 4 on a charge of disturbing the peace, the offense upon which Ms. Golden, a Quaker and a paralegal in the city attorney's office, based her arrest.

She said Rife humiliated her by followed her and shouting, "Women are whores!" four times in a two-week period in May.

After filing a complaint with police, who said there was little they could do and suggested the citizen's arrest, Ms. Golden said she returned to Civic Center and approached Rife and told him she was offended by his statement that "Women are whores."

In a letter to District Attorney Arlo Smith, Ms. Golden said Rife replied, "Not all women are whores."

"I said, 'You came up to me not 20 minutes ago and shouted, "Liberated women are whores!"'

"Well, they are," he yelled. "Liberated women are whores."

"I stated, 'I am a liberated woman, and I am not a whore,'" Ms. Golden recalled. "He again shouted, directly in my face, 'Liberated women are whores!'"

Rife, who described himself as a born-again Christian "saved" six years ago, recently said, "I preached on the average woman of San Francisco. Not all women are sexually immoral in the city, but many or most are."

Ms. Golden made her citizen's arrest in front of two police officers, who booked Rife for disturbing the peace. Municipal Court Judge George Choppelas later ordered Rife to stop singling out people for epithets and derogatory statements.

Rife, whose wife is expecting their first child in January, said he quit his Civic Center preaching after his encounter with the law.

But he said he forgives Ms. Golden for taking action against him, adding, "If this kind of reaction doesn't come forth, I would know I wasn't doing my duty."

Flying Condo Service Slated

MIAMI (AP) — A company is negotiating with Eastern Airlines to buy two jumbo jets and turn them into flying condominiums between New York and Los Angeles, complete with sleeping compartments, dining rooms and conference areas.

Bicoastal Services Inc., of Connecticut, in an application filed this month with the Civil Aeronautics Board, said it would replace the seats on two L-1011s with 98 first-class seats, all to be pre-sold by contract.

Henry Rogers, a spokesman in Beverly Hills, Calif., for the company, said seats would be sold for $167,000, probably to "companies who have a lot of traffic between New York and Los Angeles."

Bicoastal planned "an official announcement" of the project within three weeks, he said.

An Eastern spokesman, Richard McGraw, confirmed that "We are negotiating with Bicoastal for the sale of two L-1011s." However, he would not reveal the purchase price, saying the deal "is not closed."

For a corporate customer that "uses the seats it buys, or sells the seats elsewhere, the cost would be substantially less than the first-class fare," said Rogers.

'Baby Doe' Proposal Decribed As 'Foolish'

BOSTON (AP) — The government's proposal to require doctors to try to save all newborn babies, no matter how badly deformed or retarded, "is both arrogant and foolish," a medical journal editor argued today.

Dr. Marcia Angell, deputy editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, wrote that the Reagan administration's proposed "Baby Doe rules" are based on the idea that "all life, no matter how miserable, should be maintained if technically possible."

Currently, parents decide whether doctors should struggle to save their handicapped babies when chances of a normal life are slim.

"For the government to think that it can do better with a set of general rules, which are of necessity insensitive and vague when applied to a particular patient, is both arrogant and foolish," she wrote in an editorial.

The administration proposed the rules after the highly publicized case of a retarded infant, dubbed "Baby Doe." The child was born on April 9, 1982, in Bloomington, Ind., with Down's syndrome and a food pipe defect that prevented him from swallowing milk. His parents decided to withhold corrective surgery and intravenous feeding, and the baby died six days later despite a prosecutor's efforts to require treatment.

The rules would require every handicapped infant to receive all possible treatment unless death is inevitable or the risk of treatment is prohibitive. Hospitals that defy the regulations could be denied federal funds.

In her editorial, Ms. Angell conceded that leaving life-and-death decisions to parents is not a perfect system.

"There could certainly have been instances of poor judgment by physicians and parents," she wrote. "The case of Baby Doe may be one example; surely the idea of death by starvation is disquieting."

However, Dr. John E. Pless, who conducted the baby's autopsy, found that the boy died of chemical pneumonia brought on by his birth defects.

"That's all wrong," he said of Ms. Angell's comment. "I'm shocked that she would continue the myth that was perpetuated by the media."

Pless, writing in the same issue of the journal, said the baby developed pneumonia when stomach acid was drawn into his lungs, and this could have happened before birth.

The baby weighed 6 pounds at birth, and this had dropped to 4½ pounds when he died. Although the baby was malnourished and dehydrated, Pless said, "I did not feel that the child would have died from those things alone."

Dr. Robert F. Weir of Oklahoma State University noted in another journal report that the proposed federal rules would give parents and doctors far less leeway in deciding how to treat defective newborns.

"The result is that pediatricians practicing defensive medicine will, to save their careers, be persuaded to give aggressive treatment to virtually all handicapped neonates (newborns)," he wrote, "regardless of the handicap, the effectiveness of the treatment or the harm done to the relatively few neonates who would be better off without life-prolonging treatment."

The administration's first Baby Doe rules were struck down last April by a federal judge. New rules were proposed July 5, but they have not gone into effect yet.

Report Says Students Should Do Outside Work For Graduation

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — High schools should be re-structured so students are not categorized by vocational, academic or general education courses and are required to do community service work to graduate, says a report unveiled today by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Rather than making science and math courses top priority, educators should emphasize English as "the first and most essential goal of education," the 363-page study says.

U.S. high schools are "surviving, but not thriving," said the report.

"For a small percentage of students — 10 to 15 percent perhaps — the American high school provides an outstanding education, perhaps the finest in the world," it said.

For the 20 percent to 30 percent of students who "mark time or drop out" it is an academic failure, the report added.

The study, "High School: A Report on Secondary Education in America," was written by Carnegie president Ernest L. Boyer, a former U.S. commissioner of education.

It contrasts with the grim verdict reached last April by the National Commission on Excellence in Education which derided American public education as mediocre.

The Carnegie study said: "A report card on public education is a report card on the nation. Schools can rise no higher than the communities that support them. And to blame schools for the 'rising tide of mediocrity' is to confuse symptoms with the disease."

The foundation spent three years and nearly $1 million on its study. It convened a panel of education experts and prominent citizens, and sent other teams of educators into 15 high schools for four-week visits.

It looked only at the 16,000 public high schools that more than 13 million students attend.

Among the highlights of its recommendations:

—Make high schools' first priority not science or math but teaching language, "the capacity to think critically and communicate effectively through the written and spoken word."

"The mastery of English is the first and most essential goal of education," the report said. It urged schools to give English teachers the time to critique student papers, with no more than two classes of 20 students each.

—Establish a core curriculum of required courses in literature, the arts, foreign language, history, civics, science, mathematics, technology and health that every student would take; streamline electives so that two-thirds, instead of half, of the courses required for graduation would be mandatory.

—Abolish the widespread practice of tracking students into academic, vocational or general courses. "Putting students into boxes can no longer be defended..." Boyer wrote. A core education should be supplemented with electives, keeping options open for both work and further education.

The report questions the value of traditional vocational education, although it says some courses are worthwhile.

—Replace the Scholastic Aptitude Test with a new "Student Achievement and Advisement Test" that would measure what students learn in the core curriculum and help them make more intelligent decisions about college and career choices.

—Establish federal scholarships for a new National Teacher Service of students in the top third of their classes who agree to teach for at least three years.

—Admit only students with B averages and strong recommendations from two professors into teacher education programs. Prospective teachers should major in an academic discipline, not education, and spend a fifth year taking professional courses and in classroom internships.

—Provide more school counselors.

—Raise average teachers' pay at least 25 percent beyond the rate of inflation over three years. Also, give teachers at least an hour of time daily for class preparation and record-keeping.

U.S. Says Arms Going To Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, voicing concern about an apparent arms buildup in Cuba, is accusing the Soviet Union of exporting offensive weapons to that island in violation of the 1962 US-Soviet agreement that ended the Cuban missile crisis.

"I have to tell you, as far as I am concerned, that agreement has been abrogated many times by the Soviet Union and Cuba in the bringing in of what can only be considered offensive weapons, not defensive, there," Reagan said while answering questions of Hispanic, labor and religious press on Wednesday.

A Cuba expert maintained it was the first time any administration had ever charged that the Soviets violated the agreement made during the presidency of John F. Kennedy.

Later, an administration official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified by name, said Reagan was definitely not accusing the Soviets of installing missiles in Cuba that could hit the United States.

The agreement provided that the United States would not invade Cuba or permit an invasion of Cuba from U.S. soil and would lift its naval blockade of Cuba if the Soviets would withdraw the offensive weapons systems which were there at the time.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, asked whether Reagan still feels bound by the agreement, said there were no plans for the United States to invade Cuba.

When pressed further, he said impatiently, "What I am trying to indicate to you and I don't know why you can't understand, the matter has not come up. Nobody's said, 'Hey, are you going to go into Cuba?' We're not planning on going into Cuba. So, cool it."

The administration official who requested anonymity said Reagan was talking about such things as Soviet arms shipments to Cuba and advanced MiG jets "that could be converted to carry offensive weapons."

This official said that in 1981, for instance, the Soviets shipped 66,000 tons of weapons to Cuba, much of which were then sent on to Central America. He said in general, since 1975, the Soviets have been building up the Cuban armed forces.

"He (Reagan) was speaking of the history of the 1962 understanding that should have left Cuba without the capability to bring force to bear in this hemisphere in a way that would affect us," said the official. "That understanding has clearly been violated. What they have there now is an offensive capability."

In his remarks, Reagan said he's been concerned about the matter but "with all the things that are going on, we haven't been able to talk as much as we should about it."

The president said the United States "did try to open some talks when there seemed to be an indication coming from Cuba that there was a willingness for that. They got nowhere. So we are going to carry on with what we are doing." He did not elaborate.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is weak and the live supply is moderate for a light to moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,791,000, compared to 1,801,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today amid renewed doubts about the interest-rate outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.25 to 1,226.22 in the first half hour. Gainers held a 5.4 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders' mood was dominated by concern that the Federal Reserve's weekly report on the money supply, due out late Friday, would show a large increase.

Such a rise could dampen recent hopes that slowing monetary growth would encourage the Fed to pursue a less stringent credit policy.

Meanwhile, the government reported this morning that industrial production rose 0.9 percent last month, for its smallest gain since last February. That was taken as further evidence that the pace of the economic recovery was slackening.

Merrill Lynch led the active list in early trading, unchanged at 36 3/4. A 152,600-share block changed hands at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 5.38 to 1,229.47.

Advances held a narrow edge on declines at the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 73.37 million shares, against 73.97 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .29 to 95.70. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .31 at 232.74.

McNamara Says N.C. Crash Nearly Set Off Nuclear Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear bomb came close to exploding accidentally when a B-52 bomber crashed in North Carolina in 1961, according to former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

He said only a single safety switch prevented the explosion of the 24-megaton bomb.

McNamara revealed the incident earlier this week while talking about his proposal for NATO to renounce the first use of nuclear weapons. He said such a policy would mean that a number of nuclear weapons could be destroyed, thus reducing the chances of an accident.

He then recounted the North Carolina incident, which occurred Jan. 24, 1961 while McNamara was Pentagon chief during the Kennedy administration.

A B-52 bomber on a training mission was carrying live bombs when it crashed.

"The bomb's arming mechanism had six or seven steps to through to detonate, and it went through all but one, we discovered later," he said.

There has never been an accidental detonation of a nuclear weapon, and B-52s no longer carry live bombs during training missions because of the possibility of an accident.

McNamara gave no further details, but the Pentagon says there have been 32 accidents involving nuclear weapons since 1950.

The 1961 crash occurred near Goldsboro, N.C., about 15 miles north of Johnson Air Force Base. Three of the eight crew members were killed after the bomber's right wing broke off.

As the plane fell, two 24-megaton bombs were jettisoned. One broke apart when it hit the ground, releasing relatively minor amounts of radiation, according to the Pentagon's unclassified version of the incident.

The second bomb floated down when its parachute deployed. It was that weapon that nearly detonated, said Pentagon officials who declined to be named.

Autopsy Tests Still Awaited

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today his office is still awaiting word on tests conducted on evidence gathered during an autopsy on the body of Shelton Lavin Farrell, 33, who died Monday.

Farrell's unclothed body was discovered by his roommate at their home on the outskirts of Ayden early Tuesday. An autopsy conducted by Dr. Stan Harris, a medical examiner, indicated that drowning was the cause of Farrell's death.

Tyson said that authorities are investigating to determine whether or not Farrell's death was accidental.

Parker Trial Nears Start

Twelve jurors and one alternate had been chosen by late this morning as the jury selection process for the murder trial of Dwight Parker continued in Superior Court.

Two alternates remained to be chosen before testimony in the trial begins.

Parker, 23, of Newark, N.J., is charged with murder in the deaths last February of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbes of Grifton and Anthony Ray Herring of Goldsboro. Their bodies, weighted with concrete blocks, were found in the Tar River, several days after they had been reported missing.

Hudson Named To Committee

RESTON, Va. — Keith C. Hudson, professor of education, East Carolina University, has been appointed to a three-year term on the National Association of Secondary School Principals Committee of Professors of Secondary School Administration and Supervision.

Hudson will represent the association's Region 3, which includes North Carolina and nine other southern states. The association, headquartered in Reston, has a membership of 34,000.

A graduate of East Carolina University, Hudson received his doctorate degree from Florida State University.

France Unveils Austere Budget

PARIS (AP) — The Socialist government, continuing its austerity program, has unveiled a 1984 budget that includes a new income surtax and the lowest increase in government spending since it took office three years ago.

Middle- and upper-income groups, those with an income tax bill of 20,000 francs ($2,500) and up, will be hit with a supplementary tax ranging from 5 to 8 percent of the tax.

In a sharp cutback in the Socialists' earlier free-spending policies, the 937.8-billion-franc ($117.2 billion) package is only 6.2 percent bigger than this year's budget. The anticipated deficit is 125.8 billion francs ($15.7 billion), 6.8 percent more than the expected 1983 shortfall of 117.7 billion francs ($14.7 billion).

Industrial Yield Rises But Growth Falls Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production in the nation's factories and mines rose 0.9 percent in August, the ninth straight month in a row, but the smallest amount since February, government figures indicated today.

Gains were widespread among materials and products, as "sharp gains continued" in the output of home goods and construction supplies, the Federal Reserve Board report said.

The increase in August followed advances of a revised 2 percent in July, 1.3 percent in June and May. It was the smallest since the 0.5 percent of February.

Some economists had predicted the report would show a slowdown in production during August because of other signs the economy has been shifting to a more moderate pace following the rapid growth during the second quarter of the year. Economists also said August output might be lower because of a number of labor strikes during the month.

Even with the smaller gain during the month, the Fed said August output was 8.7 percent higher than the same month last year.

It said autos were assembled at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.5 million units, rising "moderately after their large July advances." But the Fed noted that the industry's schedules call for further increases this month.

Auto assembly during July had been at a rate of 7.4 million units.

The report said production of home goods "continued to increase rapidly, led by a further increase in household appliance output."

Production of business equipment changed little last month but that of industrial equipment rose rapidly. Commercial equipment declined because of a strike in the telephone industry, the Fed said.

Other details of the report said:

— Production of consumer goods rose 0.6 percent in August following a 1.7 percent gain the previous month.

— Business equipment was up 0.1 percent after rising 1.3 percent in July.

— There was a 1.3 percent gain for defense and space goods, following a 2.1 percent gain in July.

— Output of construction supplies rose 1.7 percent after gaining 2.2 percent in July.

The government's industrial production index rose in August to 150.5 percent of its 1967 base, bringing it 11.6 percent above November last year during the trough of the recession.

Rate Hike OK'd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Southern Bell will appeal a state agency's approval of a rate increase that will boost the average customer's bill by 3.5 percent, instead of the 60 percent requested, company officials say.

Jere A. Drummond, Southern Bell vice president in charge of North Carolina operations said Wednesday he was "totally dismayed" by the N.C. Utilities Commission's decision. He said the company would appeal the order in court and immediately seek another rate increase.

The ruling "does not allow us to offer a fair rate of return to our investors," added Ron Stamey, district manager. "Although I can't pinpoint a date, I would think that we would be back before the commission pretty soon with another rate hike request."

The commission Wednesday approved 29.9 percent of a $122 million rate boost.

Sickness Troubles Rose Grid Camp

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With a 2-0 record against two strong 4-A teams and a seventh place ranking in the Associated Press High School poll, one might think that there is only joy in the Rose High School football camp this week.

One would be a long way from being right if one did think that.

Instead, there is — well, you can't call it panic — but you can call it a situation that involves quite a bit of concern.

With Friday night's game — at 7:30 p.m. instead of the usual 8 p.m. — at Eastern Wayne just over the horizon, Rose High School's football team looks more like a casting call for "Trapper John, M.D." with players falling like flies to some type of virus.

At last count, some seven starters had been sidelined by the bug — including both starting quarterback Battle

Emory and his backup Todd Martin.

Joining them on the sidelines may be defensive end Edward Farley, inside linebacker David Lineberry, tight end Billy Michel, placekicker Brian Bridges, and inside linebacker Sterling Edwards.

At least two of them, Emory and Farley have spent time in the hospital this week from the nausea that accompanied the bug, and most have missed the major part of the week's drills.

"Right now," Coach Ronald Vincent said, "I'd have to call them all uncertain. We won't know until late Thursday whether any of them will be able to play, and we are having new people turn up sick each day. Even if they do return for the game, I don't anticipate them being very strong."

So — that leaves Vincent in a quandry. He has to come up with a patch-work lineup, one right now that may include a sophomore quarterback who has not dressed for a previous varsity game, Ervin Best, who has been playing on the junior varsity for the past two games.

Vincent had planned on Wednesday to bring Martin up to the number one position at quarterback for the game, but he showed up among the missing at Wednesday's practice, along with Edwards. Other changes would move Tyrone Vines into the defensive end position, James Matthews at inside linebacker, and Maurice Smith to tight end (where he has alternated with Michel). Vincent was unsure this morning how he would handle Edwards' absence, and said,

"I don't really know what we'll do about Bridges being out. I'm just hopeful that he'll be well enough to kick extra points — assuming we score."

Eastern Wayne comes into the game with a pair of shutouts behind it — one on the positive side and one on the negative. The Warriors opened the season with a 17-0 victory over Rocky Mount, then, after a week off, fell to Wilson Hunt, 28-0.

"I don't know what happened to them against Hunt," Vincent said. "They were expecting to have the best team they've had in years. They looked pretty good against Rocky Mount."

Penalties and turnovers hurt the Warriors against Hunt, and the Warrior defense was unable to stop the Hunt running game.

The Warriors are paced by Bobby Best, who rushed for 81 yards in the opener, and Anthony Neely, both seniors. Best is a 5-9, 179-pounder, while Neely is 5-9, 172.

Anthony Russo is the quarterback for the team and is rated as a good thrower, but his timing has been off due to his play with the American Legion baseball team that went to the state semifinals causing him to miss the early part of practice.

Defensively, James Bryant, a 6-1, 250-pound tackle, leads the way, along with Selwyn Jones, a 6-2, 193-pound linebacker, and William Super, a 5-8, 178-pound linebacker.

"I think we'll really find out how good we are," Vincent said. "The replacements for these guys are adequate, but they just need game experience."

Vincent was pleased with the play of the Rampants against New Bern last week, and thought that the quick turnaround time between the Jacksonville game on Monday and the one with the Bears on Friday caused some problems.

Rose was unable to move the ball on the ground against the big Bears until the fourth period when Reggie Smith broke away on a 92-yard touchdown run and that finally opened up that part of the attack. In the meanwhile, Emory had been hitting receivers for 167 yards through the air, scoring one touchdown and setting up two others.

"We got shut down early, but we kept going at it. We showed that we can throw the ball as much as we need to throw it, both to control it and to move it."

Vincent said he thought the defense played well most of the time — despite giving up two fourth period touchdowns. "I think we really got tired at the end," Vincent said. "They were out there most of the time, and playing two games in such a short time didn't give us much time to condition in between."

"Actually, I was amazed that our guys were so ready after just having played on Monday. They had only three days to prepare for New Bern, and I think our offensive line play improved right on through the game."

Vincent was still unhappy about the number of penalties handed the Rampants during the game, several of them on personal fouls. "We can't have this," he said. "And we hope to improve on this this week."

The big question remains, however, as to how many of the players the Rampants count on will be available — and, if available, how effective they will be.

Byner Joyful After Hit

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

The ball "slipped out" of his hands and Frank Bush fell on it to give North Carolina State a final attempt to score from the East Carolina University 18-yard line with 2:09 left in the game and the Pirates leading 22-16.

Earnest Byner felt sick. After gaining 97 yards on 17 carries for the Pirates and scoring the go-ahead touchdown with 7:10 on the clock, Byner wanted to crawl into a hole and hide.

"I just can't explain the feeling I had at the time," Byner said. "I felt low; I didn't want to be around anybody. I just went to the end of the bench and stared at the field."

But just as quickly as his fortune had dwindled, the senior fullback again had reason to celebrate. On fourth and two from the Pirates' 10-yard line, ECU cornerback Calvin Adams wrestled down NCSU's Vince Evans for a loss of seven yards — and the game.

Earnest Byner was vindicated.

"I was out on the field jumping up-and-down before he had hit the ground," Byner said. "I could see what was going to happen, but I couldn't believe it. I was just glad the referees didn't see me out there, or they might have called a penalty."

The Pirates' victory over the Wolfpack gave credibility to a program which was abandoned as hopeless by some after posting losing records in its first two seasons under Ed Emory. But Byner, touted as the "second-best back out of Georgia in 1980" behind Herschel Walker, now of the USFL New Jersey Generals, saw a program which he could grow with and waited for the recognition ECU has received this year.

"My high school coach thought I was just as good (as Walker)," Byner said. "But he got all the publicity."

Several colleges, including

Georgia Tech and Florida State, were interested in Byner, but a twisted ankle while playing defense his senior year at Baldwin High School caused him to miss three games and sent the recruiters looking elsewhere. ECU eventually signed Byner, and he responded by winning the starting berth in his second season.

Although he has been hampered by injuries, Byner has amassed 1,187 yards rushing on 204 carries for a 5.8 average in three years in the purple and gold. Through the first two games of 1983, Byner has posted 147 yards rushing for a 4.7 average with a pair of touchdowns.

"I have proven I can come back from injuries," he said. "I'm hoping to improve on what I've started this season; I'm not satisfied yet."

The Pirates started turning heads in their season opener, a heart-breaking 47-46 loss to nationally seventh-ranked Florida State. Byner's one-yard blast with 12:02 left in the game put ECU ahead 46-41 before the Seminoles rallied for the victory.

"We knew what we were capable of doing when we went down there this year," Byner said. "When I went home for the summer I was trying to talk my friends and family into going to the game; I told them it would be a good one."

"In 1980 (when the Pirates lost 63-7), we weren't really in their league. Last year (a 56-17 ECU loss), we didn't know what we could do. Now we have come together as a team. The offensive line is a total turnaround from what it was when I came here. They believe in me and my ability to get through the holes they create, and I trust them with my life every time I run the ball."

"Kevin (Ingram) and I work together very well, also. We complement each other. If they try to stop me up the middle, they can't stop him outside. If they keep him from getting outside, they can't stop me up the middle."

"This time when we went to Florida State, it was an unreal feeling; no one was nervous. We knew we had a chance to beat them. When they came out right before the kickoff and threw the spear in the middle of the field, we were right out there and used it to pump ourselves up even more."

"We were really upset over losing the game, but we had to get ready for State."

Now the Pirates have to get ready for Saturday's home opener against Murray State, and the ECU coaches have the job of preparing the team mentally for a different type of challenge. Eastern Kentucky was the last member of NCAA Division I-AA Ohio Valley Conference ECU played, and the Pirates came out on the short end of a 28-16 score in the 1980 contest.

"We've got to practice like we would for FSU or N.C. State," Byner said. "If we let down, then anyone can come in here and upset us. We're looking for a big home crowd to help get us charged up before the game. We're used to a lot of people yelling now."

The only difference now is that the people are yelling for Earnest Byner and the Pirates rather than at them.

Liberty Takes First Cup Race

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Skipper Dennis Conner was generous in victory.

The opening race of the 1983 America's Cup challenge Wednesday had been one of the yachting series' tightest in years, and Conner's Liberty defeated Australia II by one minute and 10 seconds — a positive start in the best-of-seven competition.

"The breaks went our way and we won, but it could've easily have been something else," the American skipper said of the race that began the United States' 25th defense of yachting's most prized trophy.

"It's nice to get the first win under our belts."

It was a see-saw battle that began the long-awaited showdown until Conner got a break when the Australian yacht's steering gear broke on the fifth leg.

Right after the win, Conner took his red-hulled yacht gleefully into the traffic jam of hundreds of spectator boats, waving and grinning as he drew the cheers and horn-blasts of partisans.

And before the start in 18-knot winds and lumpy seas in Rhode Island Sound, Conner took a similar slant, knifing Liberty into the nearby fleet to applause and a few tool salutes.

For John Bertrand, master of Australia II, the race brought a hard lesson. He had nearly caught Liberty on the running leg when his boat lost its steering gear on a move to get an edge at the mark.

"As I was correcting the helm to peel around Liberty's stern, one of the steering pulleys collapsed and we broached," he said. "It was a scary after that."

"The crew did a fantastic job doing a repair with a block and tackle below decks to get her back on the steering in those few minutes," said Aussie syndicate chief Alan Bond, who is making his fourth try for the Cup.

The skipper said he sailed on the trim tab, a device on the back of the keel to aid control, for 10 minutes on the final beat of 24.3 mile-course before the temporary repair was made.

But by then there was no catching Liberty.

Bond said Australia II would be fixed and ready for race No. 2 today when winds were expected to be 10-20 knots with more choppy and sloppy seas.

The race was the first hook-up of Conner, who successfully defended the Cup in 1980, and Bertrand, whose boat has a secret new-finned keel which the crew has kept hidden all summer.

The start was virtually even but Liberty took an early lead on the first tacking leg only to lose it to Australia II which drove through in winds that shifted 5 to 10 degrees.

The Aussie yacht had an eight-second edge rounding the first mark and upped that to 10 seconds at the next turn. But on the third leg, a reach with the wind coming over the side of the boat, Liberty eased into the lead, in part, Conner said, because Bertrand didn't protect himself.

"We were going a little bit faster, and his bearing kept slipping aft and finally we got on his wind. And that was that," he added.

"It certainly was a mistake to let him get by so easily," Bertrand said. "It certainly won't happen again."

Liberty turned the advantage into a 16-second edge at the next mark and raised that

Brewers Suffer With Power Shortage

By The Associated Press
The Milwaukee Brewers soared to the top of the American League last year on the strength of their hefty hitters. Now, they are plummeting in the AL East because of a severe power shortage.

The Brewers, who came within one game of winning the 1982 World Series, hit 216 home runs last season while leading the league in runs and total bases. But their vaunted attack has sputtered in the second half of the season — only 44 homers in 71 games — and, in the last week, they've scored a total of nine runs in seven games, the last six of which they've lost.

Milwaukee fell 4-1 to the New York Yankees Wednesday night and stands 10½ games behind first-place Baltimore in the East. The Brewers' pitching has been solid recently and their hurlers surrendered only seven runs in three games with New York, yet lost all three.

"Good pitching and no hitting," lamented Manager Harvey Kuenn. "It's one repeat performance after the other. One wasted pitching effort after the other. We've not hit so many nights in a row, it's tiresome. Maybe we're trying too hard."

"We're running out of alternatives. I've tried extra batting practice. I've tried no BP, I've tried shaking up the lineup. I've tried everything. I'm open to suggestions."

Elsewhere in the AL, it Baltimore defeated Boston 5-0,

Detroit edged Cleveland 5-0, Kansas City topped California 1-0 in 14 innings, Minnesota trimmed Chicago 1-0, Texas downed Oakland 4-2 and Toronto beat Seattle 4-3.

Ron Guidry threw a five-hitter and Ken Griffey homered to pace the Yankees. Guidry is tied with Detroit's Jack Morris for the AL lead in complete games with 18 and has won six straight.

"I haven't been overpowering," said Guidry, who credited his teammates for his fine record. "They give me a chance to win and I give them a chance to win. Most of the games I've pitched, we haven't been out of it at any time."

Orioles 5, Red Sox 0

As if the Orioles didn't have enough going for them with an eight-game winning streak — Baltimore has won 19 of its last 22 and has a 5½-game lead over Detroit in the East — they apparently have one of their former aces back on track.

Dennis Martinez hadn't started since Aug. 6 or pitched in nearly a month. But he combined with Sammy Stewart for a six-hitter and Gary Roenicke smacked a two-run homer to lead Baltimore.

Martinez entered the game with a 5.31 ERA. In his previous 14 starts, he was 2-9 with a 6.59 ERA.

"I felt we needed to get him out of the rotation quick," said Altobelli. "It seems like a long time away."

"This was my chance tonight to prove I can still do well," said Martinez.

As a team, the Orioles couldn't do much better.

"We're just going out there loose every day and the runs are coming and the pitching is there and the defense is mostly there," said Eddie

Murray. "We're playing so good right now, everything is clicking."

Up, Over, Out

Matuszek Finds Home

By The Associated Press
Len Matuszek was recently recalled by the Philadelphia Phillies from the minor leagues. He doesn't want to go back, and made some points for himself against the Montreal Expos.

"It's got to make you feel good when they run you out there in September in the heat of a pennant race," said Matuszek, a key figure in Wednesday night's 9-5 and 5-0 doubleheader sweep of Montreal.

Matuszek had two hits in the first game and a three-run homer in the second as the Phillies moved into first place by one game over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who beat the Chicago Cubs 6-3. The Expos fell into third place, 1½ games behind the Phillies.

Matuszek, called up from Portland of the Pacific Coast League, says he has been shuttled between the majors and minors more times than he cares to count. "I saw a lot of players going up a lot quicker than me," said Matuszek, who says he had become discouraged over the last five years.

But this year he made up his mind to maintain a "right mental attitude" and show what he could do. "I felt if the Phillies didn't want me, some other team would," noted the first baseman.

In other NL action, Houston beat Los Angeles 4-2, Cincinnati stopped Atlanta 6-4, St. Louis edged New York 2-1 and San Diego whipped San Francisco 7-4.

Mike Schmidt hit a two-run homer in each game, giving him an NL-leading 36 for the season. His first round-tripper came in the fourth inning of the opener after a two-run blast by Joe Morgan, easing Steve Carlton to his 29th career victory.

Carlton notched No. 298 on his sixth attempt and boosted his season record to 13-15. The all-time major-league strike-out leader with 3,683, Carlton fanned eight and walked four in eight innings before getting last-inning relief help from Al Holland.

In the second game, Schmidt hit a two-run shot in the first inning and Matuszek slammed a three-run homer in the third for his first in the major leagues. Both came off loser Ray Burris, 4-7.

Marty Bystrom, 6-9, in his first start since returning from the 21-day disabled list, pitched a five-hitter for the Phillies.

"I changed a lot of things in my delivery to take strain off my arm," said Bystrom, who suffers from a strained elbow. "I got my mechanics straightened out, which is the key to control. The layoff gave me time to work things out. I felt strong the whole time."

Pirates 6, Cubs 3
In Pittsburgh, Jim Morrison had three hits, including a two-run double, as the Pirates beat Chicago.

John Candelaria, 14-8, blanked the Cubs on six hits through six innings before leaving with stomach cramps. Cecilio Guante and Kent Tekulve finished up for the Pirates.

Candelaria, who has completed only two of his 31 starts this season, now has a 15-4 lifetime record against the Cubs, including an 11-1 mark at Three Rivers Stadium and a 3-0 record this season.

"He pitched very well, considering he hasn't been feeling well," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner of Candelaria. "He's had something like ulcers, and he's been taking some stuff for it."

Astros 4, Dodgers 2

In Houston, Phil Garner slammed a two-run homer in the seventh inning to lift the Astros over Los Angeles.

Loser Bob Welch, 14-12, walked Jose Cruz to open the seventh. After Ray Knight struck out, Garner lofted Welch's 2-1 pitch over the left-field wall for his 14th home run of the year.

Despite the loss, the Dodgers held their four-game lead in the NL West over Atlanta. Houston pulled within 7½ games of the Dodgers.

"I was glad to see Phil get the key blow. He's a little overdue," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis. "It was a must game for us."

Reds 6, Braves 4

In Cincinnati, Nick Esasky hit a grand slam off reliever Steve Bedrosian to highlight a five-run seventh-inning rally that carried the Reds over the Braves.

Dale Murphy slugged a pair of two-run homers for all the Braves' offense.

"I was looking for some-

"Every night, we have pretty much a different hero and that's good. It keeps pressure off guys knowing they don't have to do it every day. There's no reason for that eighth man not to knock in that winning run some night."

Twins 1, White Sox 0

Minnesota rookie Tim Teufel, who was called up from Toledo on Sept. 1, singled to knock in the only run with none out and the bases loaded in the ninth. The hit snapped a string of 17 scoreless innings by White Sox hurler Britt Burns.

"We were all guessing out there," said Teufel. "They were trying to figure me out and I was trying to figure them out."

Tigers 3, Indians 0

The Tigers have won six straight but can't gain ground on the Orioles. Glenn Abbott, acquired on waivers from Seattle on Aug. 23, befuddled the Indians with an assortment of offspeed pitches, throwing a four-hitter. Alan Trammell scored three times for Detroit.

"From the first time that I walked in here, I felt like I had a job to do," Abbott said. "This is the kind of situation a pitcher dreams about, especially coming from a team like Seattle. Every game's a pressure game here."

Royals 1, Angels 0
Pinch-hitter Don Slaught singled in Hal McRae, who had tripled with one out in the 14th. Tommy John, 40, blanked the Royals over the opening 13 innings in the longest outing of his 21-year career.

"After the 13th (Manager John) McNamara asked me if I'd had enough, and I had," said John, who earlier this season lost a 2-1, 12-inning decision to Oakland. "I didn't have much left at the end, but my fastball was still moving. In fact, I don't think I threw a breaking ball from the ninth inning on."

Rangers 4, A's 2

Charlie Hough saw his consecutive-scoreless inning streak end at 36. But Larry Parrish provided all the runs Hough needed with a three-run double and a solo homer.

"Oh, I'm certainly not going to shut out team's forever, that's for sure," said Hough. "But I enjoyed it. It was fun."

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 3

Lloyd Moseby pinch-hit a double in a two-run seventh inning as Toronto won its fourth in a row. Reliever Doyle Alexander allowed four hits over the final six innings to pick up his fourth straight victory.

In the ninth, Seattle's John Moses was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Jesse Barfield on Tony Bernazard's double for the final out.

PEERLESS PAUL

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Minor, a scout for the New York Mets and a man with a long memory, was telling a group of younger men about Paul Waner, a long-time star for the Pittsburgh Pirates and a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Waner only weighed 139 pounds, but he was a great hitter with a quick bat. He led the National League in hitting three times, going as high as .380 in 1927.

to 28 seconds after the next tacking leg. Despite the loss of steering, Australia II was behind by only 35 seconds at the leeward mark.

Bond said he believed his yacht would do better today, especially after the takeover on the first leg of the opener.

"That was something," he said. "Those who saw the first leg will have something to remember for a long time."

Nazis Question Government's Key Witness

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Six American Nazis accused of conspiring to firebomb parts of Greensboro attacked the credibility of the government's key witness, questioning his motives for investigating Nazi activities. Five of the defendants, who are representing themselves in their U.S. District Court trial, spent most of Wednesday cross-examining Michael Sweat, formerly an agent with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Sweat has said during nearly three days of testimony before the jury that he investigated the self-proclaimed Nazis for possible firearms violations in 1980 by posing as Maj. Mike Swain, a Soldier of Fortune. "Did you really believe we were going to bomb Greensboro?" defendant Joseph Gorrell Pierce asked Sweat. "I never believed that you and your brother were going to go down there and light the fuse," Sweat said. "I believed you would hire someone to do it." The jury was expected to begin listening to wiretapped telephone conversations between the defendants when court reconvened today. ATF agent Tommy Chapman, who ordered the wiretaps, was expected to testify. The Nazis are charged with conspiring to bomb parts of Greensboro in 1980 while six other Nazis and Klux Klan members were on trial in Greensboro facing state charges of killing five communists at an anti-Klan rally in November 1979. Prosecutors say the Nazis canceled their plans after the defendants in the 1980 trial were acquitted. The current trial in Asheville is the third for the six Nazis. The first trial in July 1981 ended in a mistrial when jurors were unable to reach a unanimous verdict. The six were convicted in a second trial in September 1981. However, in April the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the conviction and ordered a new trial, saying the indigent defendants had not been provided with a free transcript of the first trial. The Nazis convicted in 1981 while Frank Lee Braswell 49, and his wife Patsy Keeter Braswell, 33, both of Penland; Raeford Melano Caudle, 40, of Winston-Salem; James Christopher Talbert, 32, of Walnut Cove and Joseph Pierce, 30, and his brother Roger Allen Pierce, 27, both of Walnut Cove. Braswell, Joseph Pierce and Caudle were sentenced to five years in prison and a $40,000 fine apiece. They have remained free pending appeal. Mrs. Braswell, Roger Pierce, and Talbert received suspended sentences. The jury spent most of the first two days of the trial listening to more than 6 1/2 hours of secretly recorded conversations in which they discussed making napalm bombs to explode in three areas in downtown Greensboro. The conversation was recorded by Sweat in his meetings with the Nazis. Sweat testified Wednesday that he began investigating the Braswells in late 1979. He said he talked with the Braswells about 25 times during his investigation. During cross-examination by attorney Bill Parker, who is representing Caudle, Sweat said he believed the Nazis intended to bomb Greensboro. "I believe they were going to contact someone to do it," Sweat said. "They were planning it." However, Sweat acknowledged he didn't believe the defendants could carry out their scheme. "They would have if they could get it together," Sweat said. "I didn't think they could."

Sweat, who testified that he has resigned from the ATF and has filed a lawsuit against the agency, said he had been criticized by his supervisors for his handling of the Nazi investigation. The defendants questioned Sweat about his military record and accused him of lying about his current rank. Sweat testified earlier that he was a major in the U.S. Army Special Forces Group and now holds the rank of major in an army reserve unit based in St. Louis, Mo. Braswell demanded to see Sweat's military identification card and Joseph Pierce asked for his Social Security card.

Hunt Receives AFL-CIO Nod

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has yet to declare his candidacy for the U.S. Senate, but that didn't stop the state AFL-CIO from endorsing him.

Four hundred delegates of the labor federation, meeting Wednesday in Asheville, voted "unanimously but one" to endorse Hunt's expected challenge of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said AFL-CIO spokesman Charlie Hughes.

The endorsement came with Hunt's consent, Hughes said.

"The governor, of course, is not a candidate yet, but we welcome their support," said Stephanie Bass, spokeswoman for Hunt's exploratory campaign committee. "The governor doesn't agree with everything the AFL-CIO believes ... but we feel they believe what the governor has done for the state's economy has been good."

Helms could not be reached for comment and did not return telephone calls.

"The feeling of the convention and the labor movement was that they're so determined to make a change in the Senate, and with Sen. Helms ... that the time to do it is early and the feeling is strong," Hughes said.

State AFL-CIO president E.A. Britt said, "I'm sure that Jesse Helms will rant and rave" because of the endorsement, but that the convention preferred to do it now because "if we had waited, he still would have been raising hell in the middle of the campaign."

The delegates represent about 300 AFL-CIO local unions and some 150,000 union members, Hughes said.

Society Seeks Benefits For Ex-Military Wives

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — In March 1980, a dozen women divorced or separated from their servicemen husbands met in a northern Virginia restaurant, agreed they were angry and decided to do something about it.

They had followed their husbands from base to base, hampering any chance for them to develop their own careers. The military promised that their loyalty would be rewarded by hefty pensions and lifetime medical coverage.

But that promise ended with their marriages, the women said.

"We felt we were part of a team," said Nancy Abell, whose 23-year marriage to an Air Force colonel ended in divorce. "They (the military) depended on the women to take care of the home and the children so that these men were free to follow their military mission. We feel that those (benefits) are ours," she said. "Certainly we have earned them rather than the people that the man has married after he is retired."

The dozen women organized EX-POSE, Ex-Partners of Servicemen for Equality, and made Mrs. Abell their first president. The nationwide group now claims about 5,000 active members, nearly all of them women.

The Alexandria-based organization is among the most vocal of several groups prominent in the battle over who gets what when a military marriage goes sour.

Aligned against them are some military retiree organizations that believe the person who served should reap the benefits, especially the pensions.

Each side has its stories — the ex-wives tell of women and children forced onto welfare after being abandoned by their military husbands; the military retirees talk of former prisoners of war whose wives spent their money lavishly while the men were in captivity and then asked for a divorce upon their return.

Vic Wintriss, a former Navy commander who chairs the San Diego-based American Retirees Association, said retirement pay should not be considered community property in divorce settlements.

"There are some hard-working, diligent women who stood by their husbands and then were dumped on," he said. "There are some cases where the women did not support, did not help, did not contribute."

"It should be decided on a case-by-case basis," Wintriss added.

In 1981, the Supreme Court ruled that military pension benefits may not become part of a property settlement in a divorce.

But last year, after lobbying by EX-POSE and other groups, Congress reversed that ruling by passing legislation that allows judges to consider military pensions in divorce settlements.

Even with that victory, some EX-POSE members feel the legislation doesn't go far enough. Judges don't have to consider the pension, and many don't, they contend.

But Wintriss said military pensions are divided in community property states such as California, where marital property is split equally between husband and wife.

Because dividing military pensions is so controversial, EX-POSE leaders are directing their efforts toward getting more medical benefits for ex-military wives.

Shirley Taft, EX-POSE national president, said she found it nearly impossible to get health insurance after she was divorced, at the age of 61, from a retired Army lieutenant colonel.

She was no longer eligible for the medical benefits she had during her marriage, and private insurance companies weren't anxious to insure a woman in her 60s.

Besides changing the law on military pensions, the 1982 Uniformed Services Former Spouses Protection Act allowed ex-spouses to have medical benefits if they had been married for 20 years to a serviceman on active duty.

Sen. Paul S. Trible, R-Va., and Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., have introduced bills which would reduce from 20 to 10 the number of years an ex-spouse must be married while a service member is on active duty.

EX-POSE also is tackling state divorce laws it considers unfair and urging better enforcement of child support statutes.

Virginia and Florida, states with several major military installations, are known as "dumping grounds" for military men who want to divorce their wives, said Ruth Rogers, president of the Virginia Beach EX-POSE chapter.

"The federal government passes these laws, but if the states don't allow them to be enforced, you're no better off than before," she said.

EX-POSE would like to see more community property states — there are eight now — and a uniform divorce law that could be followed in all states.

Its leaders say many of their members are in their 50s and were married in a time when working wives were frowned upon, especially in the military.

These women "were caught in this crunch" when they divorced after spending years as a homemaker, mother and military wife, said Mrs. Abell. "It comes down to a question of fairness and who's entitled to the benefits."

Seattle Airport Honors Jackson

SEATTLE (AP) — Port commissioners have renamed Seattle-Tacoma International airport the Henry M. Jackson International Airport, to honor the late senator.

"It is only fitting that we rename the airport the Henry M. Jackson International Airport," commission president Paul S. Friedlander said in a prepared statement.

He called the late senator "truly an international man."

Jackson, the veteran Washington Democrat, died Sept. 1 when a coronary artery burst. He was 71.

Workers have started tearing down "Sea-Tac" signs at the airport to put up the new name, a task expected to cost about $15,000, said Seattle Executive Dick Ford.

The senator's widow, Helen Jackson, thanked the commissioners in a prepared statement.

"On behalf of the Jackson family, may I say how pleased Anna Marie, Peter and I were to learn of the port commission decision to name Seattle-Tacoma International Airport for my husband."

"On our many travels around the country we often compared other airports to Sea-Tac and found them all wanting," she said.

"I think in fact (Jackson) loved the airport because when he arrived there he knew he was home," Mrs. Jackson said.

good start by leading a club, which assured the contract's defeat. But this hand is from duplicate bridge, and a second undertrick would guarantee the defenders an excellent result.

East's ten of clubs lost to the king, and declarer tried a low diamond from hand. West rose with the ace of diamonds and reverted to clubs. East took his two tricks in that suit and then led his 13th club. Declarer ruffed with the nine and West smoothly overruffed with the king!

As far as declarer was concerned, that marked East with the jack of hearts. So when West exited with a diamond to dummy's king, declarer ran the seven of hearts. West took his jack gleefully, to register the magic 200 set.

It might seem that West would have made his king even if he overruffed with the jack, for declarer might finesse. But declarer would use his diamond entry to dummy to lead a spade to his hand, and when he discovers that East probably has the ace of spades in addition to the ace of clubs, he would surely play West for the king of trumps for his overcall.

There is a demand nowadays for the man who can make wrong appear right," wrote Publius Terentius Afer, also known as Terence, more than 2,000 years ago. West would have been a man after Terence's heart.

North's jump to three hearts is not a misprint — North-South were using jump raises in competition as a preemptive measure. East's decision to pass is unusually conservative, but it proved to be right.

Helms Wants Churches To Fight U.S. Hunger

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The conservative chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee says it's up to the nation's churches and private organizations, not the government, to make sure Americans don't go hungry.
Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who has fought for major spending reductions in federal food assistance programs, claims most churches are not doing all they can to end hunger which officials say is on the rise as a result of the economic recession.

"Most churches have a far greater capacity to help their neighbors than they have been willing to assume," Helms said Wednesday as his committee reviewed private aid initiatives.
While acknowledging that many churches and organizations are rising to meet the needs of the poor, Helms added, "A Thanksgiving basket for a poor family once a year is better than no effort, to be sure, but more really can and should be done on a regular basis."

"It is crucial for more churches and other private organizations (to) recognize the importance of establishing ongoing food assistance programs," the senator added.
Citing the $18 billion a year the government now spends on aid programs like food stamps, Helms said it's wrong to believe "the sole source of food assistance for the poor in the United States is, or should be, provided by the federal government."
"Regardless of the future of specific federal programs," he said, "the goal of having an adequately fed population depends on the private sector. In my view, this is where the ultimate responsibility rests."

His position, however, runs somewhat counter to claims by Democrats that private efforts are being taxed beyond limits and the government must increase its commitment against hunger in America. The House on Tuesday voted to restore some of the nutrition program cuts enacted during the initial months of President Reagan's term.
During the hearing officials from 11 churches and private organizations told the committee of their expanding efforts to help their neighbors hard hit by unemployment and the recession. Those programs ranged from community housing projects, vegetable garden plots, soup kitchens and free food and commodity distribution by farmers, processors, wholesalers and retailers.

Robert Knorr, whose North Dakota Wheat Producers Association members donated 6,000 bushels of wheat for processing into macaroni that was distributed to 1.7 million people, said: "We felt that in some small way we could feed some of these hungry people and at the same time make the point that we are all in this together."

Astronaut Expects Quick Results

The North Carolinian who recently became America's oldest-ever space voyager says he hopes his research into space sickness will begin to show results soon.
"I would hope that before the next year is over that we would see significant progress," said Dr. William Thornton, 54, a Faison, N.C. native and one of five crewmen on the space shuttle Challenger's six-day flight that began Aug. 30. He was interviewed this week by telephone from the Johnson Space Center in Houston.
The North Carolinian who recently became America's oldest-ever space voyager says he hopes his research into space sickness will begin to show results soon.
"I would hope that before the next year is over that we would see significant progress," said Dr. William Thornton, 54, a Faison, N.C. native and one of five crewmen on the space shuttle Challenger's six-day flight that began Aug. 30. He was interviewed this week by telephone from the Johnson Space Center in Houston.
While cruising about the earth in a 140-mile-high orbit, Thornton conducted experiments to learn more about weightlessness and its effects on the body.
The experiments were designed to learn why at least nine of 21 space shuttle astronauts have experienced space sickness, or what NASA describes as "space adaptation syndrome."

Thornton used his knowledge in physics and electrical engineering to design much of the equipment in his shuttle "doctor's office," an air lock about 6 feet in diameter and 8 feet high.
Thornton, who holds 35 patents including 15 for space equipment inventions, tested "eye motions and the electrical signals from the eyes, compared to where the head was."
Space center regulations prohibit discussing specific test results on the astronauts, Thornton said.
He added that the experiments were designed to evaluate whether space sickness is "a functional thing — is the body faced with a totally new environment that confuses the nervous system; or is the body being affected in total — are each of the senses themselves being affected?"
Gravity's effects on the cardiovascular and muscular skeleton systems are so drastic that an astronaut who stays in space for an extended period without proper and regular conditioning would return to earth a physical wreck, he added.

"He's going to be in very bad shape and have to enter a very long period of rehabilitation," Thornton said. One of his inventions, the shuttle treadmill, is intended to provide the necessary heart, muscle and bone conditioning.
Thornton said he was eager to return to visit his native

Faison, a small Duplin County town that's planning a huge homecoming party for him.
The date of his arrival is "in the hands of Washington," he said. "They've promised to let us know (when we'll get time off) in the next few days."

Kennedy Son Seeks Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr. has committed himself to a private hospital for treatment of a drug problem after South Dakota authorities began an investigation of the former New York City assistant district attorney.
It was not known where Kennedy, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, was undergoing treatment.
"With the best medical help I can find, I am determined to beat this problem," the 29-year-old Kennedy said in a statement issued Wednesday through the office of his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

His statement follows an announcement in Pennington County, S.D., on Tuesday that there is an "ongoing investigation involving Bobby Kennedy, Jr."
Rod Lefholz, state's attorney, said he could not characterize the probe as a drug investigation, but police secured a search warrant for "contraband and controlled substances" in Kennedy's luggage after he became ill Sunday night on a flight to Rapid City. As of Wednesday, Kennedy had not been charged with a crime.

"I deeply regret the pain which this situation will bring to my family and to so many Americans who admire my parents and the Kennedy family," he said in the brief statement. "I am grateful for the support of my wife Emily, the other members of my family and my friends during this very difficult time."

Navy Medical Chief Retires

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The chief of the Navy's medical command for Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina has been denied promotion to rear admiral after two investigations criticized his administrative abilities.
President Reagan, at the recommendation of the secretaries of the Navy and of defense, signed an order Aug. 31 disallowing the promotion for Capt. Norman V. Cooley Jr., the commander of the Norfolk-based Naval Medical Command, Mid-Atlantic Region.
Cooley, who had been promoted temporarily, had worn the gold braid and two stars of a rear admiral since arriving at the Portsmouth medical facility in July 1981.
The decision to deny him the higher permanent rank rests with Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr., said Cooley's wife, Martha.

Viewers Pick Reruns Over New TV Shows

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The noble off-season experiment of providing new reruns this summer failed.

Viewers preferred reruns to the networks' original programs. Only two of the eight original series performed better than repeats of the old reliables.

Part of the failure is that the programs were mostly old formats in new packages. Little of what was new was novel. "Many of the shows put on this summer were not different enough, so there was no urgency to watch them," says Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

Dave Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research, says only ABC's "Two Marriages" and NBC's "Buffalo Bill" performed better than the network's average prime-time rating this summer. "Two Marriages" had a 13.5 rating (the percent of all TV homes watching) and "Buffalo Bill" drew a 12.4. The three-network average, from June through August, was a 12.3.

Incidentally, "Buffalo Bill" and "Two Marriages" also received the most critical praise. "I guess we learned that, ultimately, if a show isn't any good, it won't be held up by reruns or soft competition," says Tartikoff. "Buffalo Bill" and "The News Is the News" were NBC's first-run series. "Buffalo Bill" was renewed, the only summer original definitely given a second life. "The News Is the News," a parody of the news, was so bad that NBC canceled it after two weeks of its scheduled four-week run.

ABC had five new entertainment series: "Two Marriages," "The Hamptons," "Eye on Hollywood," "The 1/2-Hour Comedy Hour" and "Reggie." "Two Marriages" may have been unique because it was a warm-hearted program about two families NOT bickering, cheating or killing each other.

ABC's other originals were formats seen too many times before. "The Hamptons" was a wooden love-and-lust soap, "Eye on Hollywood" was another glitzy insider's look into show biz and "Reggie" was another juvenile program about a man obsessed with sex.

John Severino, president of ABC Television, says the experiment "was a worthwhile, though expensive, endeavor." Although only "Two Marriages" has a possible future, ABC found two talented comedians in Thom Sharp and Arsenio Hall of "The 1/2-Hour Comedy Hour."

"We also proved to Hollywood's production community that shows could be done at a price considerably less than normal network projects," Severino says.

Severino refers to the fact that "The Hamptons" was done on tape, which is cheaper than film, and that "Eye on Hollywood" was produced locally by ABC's station in Los Angeles. "That can be a valuable source for network programming in the future," Severino says.

CBS didn't have any new entertainment shows. The network was fooled last summer by the artificially high ratings of "Filthy Rich," which quickly bombed as a fall series.

This summer, CBS did have two top-notch news broadcasts: "On the Road with Charles Kuralt" and "Our Times with Bill Moyers," which both won higher ratings than previous CBS shows in the time slot and outperformed some of this summer's entertainment originals.

Another goal of the networks this summer was combating pay cable, which has been absorbing network audiences each rerun season. Last year, HBO's slogan was: "This summer, make it first run instead of rerun."

ABC Takes Top Spot In Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC was the big winner of the Dallas Cowboys-Washington Redskins football game last week — under the A.C. Nielsen Co. scoring system.

With the highest rating of the week ended Sept. 11, the Monday night game helped lift ABC out of its previous third-place in the Nielsen ratings, over CBS and NBC.

For the record, Dallas downed Washington 31-30 in the return of National League Football to nighttime TV.

The only other non-rerun among the top 10 shows was the premiere of the NBC comedy, "We've Got It Made," which came in second. The show, from former NBC president Fred Silverman, is about two young bachelors who hire a beautiful young blonde as a live-in maid.

ABC also introduced a show from its new fall lineup. "Lottery," about people who win millions of dollars in a lottery, was in 14th place.

ABC was on top with a network average of 15.1 in the Nielsen survey. CBS, in second, had an average of 14.1 and third-place NBC had 11.7. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 15.1 percent of the television homes were tuned to ABC.

"The CBS Evening News" was the highest-rated network evening news show with a rating of 11.3. ABC was second with 9.3 and NBC was a close third with 9.1.

Here are the week's Top 20 programs:

1. NFL Football, Dallas vs. Washington, ABC, a rating of 22.2 or 16.6 million households.
2. "We've Got It Made," NBC, 19.5 or 16.3 million.
3. Movie—"In Love With an Older Woman," CBS, 19.2 or 16.0 million.
4. "Knight Rider," NBC, 18.2 or 15.2 million.
5. "The Love Boat," ABC, 17.7 or 14.8 million.
6. "The Jeffersons," CBS, 17.6 or 14.7 million.
7. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 17.3 or 14.4 million.
8. "Cheers," NBC, 17.1 or 14.3 million.
9. "One Day at a Time," CBS, 17.0 or 14.2 million.
10. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 16.6 or 13.9 million.
11. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 16.5 or 13.8 million.
12. "Three's Company," ABC, 16.5 or 13.8 million.

14. "Lottery," ABC, 15.7 or 13.1 million.
15. "Private Benjamin," CBS, 15.5 or 12.9 million.
16. "Hart to Hart," ABC, 15.4 or 12.9 million.
17. "Facts of Life," NBC, 15.1 or 12.6 million.
18. "Goodnight, Beantown," CBS, 15.1 or 12.6 million.

20. Tie—"Newhart," CBS, 15.0 or 12.5 million.

Zappa Sues Warner Brothers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock star Frank Zappa, best known recently for "Valley Girl," the oddball hit he recorded with his teen-age daughter Moon, is suing Warner Bros. Records Inc. for $6 million, his lawyer says.

Attorney Christina Jacobs says the suit filed Monday in Superior Court charges that Warner Bros. failed to account properly for sales under the 42-year-old entertainer's two record labels, Bizarre Records Inc. and Discreet Records Inc., and seeks $3 million in compensatory damages and another $3 million in punitive damages.

The complaint also alleges that Warner Brothers had a position of trust and confidence with Mr. Zappa, and that Warner Brothers breached that trust and confidence, Ms. Jacobs said.

Phones calls to the Warner Bros. West Coast legal and press offices were unanswered Tuesday evening.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer T.G. Shepard made a surprise appearance at St. Mary's Medical Center to visit a 15-year-old fan who couldn't attend his concert at the Tennessee Valley Fair.

The 39-year-old country music singer, whose hits have included "I Loved 'Em Everyone" and "You Feel Good All Over," spent a half hour Monday night with James "Chucky" Weeden of Knoxville.

Coveted Cup

This week the U.S. and Australia are competing for yachting's most coveted prize: the America's Cup. Originally called the Hundred-Guinea Cup, the prize was renamed after the U.S. schooner America defeated a British yacht in the first race around the Isle of Wight. Since that first victory in 1851, no other country has ever won the America's Cup.

President May Veto Oil Plan

By The Associated Press

A proposal to let North Carolina and other coastal states sell offshore leases for oil and gas drilling has passed the U.S. House, but could face a presidential veto because it would increase the federal budget deficit.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., won House approval Wednesday by a 301-93 vote. The bill could provide North Carolina $7.74 million a year for coastal programs. Senate action on a similar bill is expected soon.

President Reagan has threatened to veto the measure if approved by Congress, claiming it would add $3 billion to the federal deficit over the next 10 years.

Most of the money would go to restore federal grant programs for coastal management, planning, fishery research and other coastal projects either cut by Reagan budgets or proposed for elimination by the administration.

According to state budget officials, North Carolina over the last two years has seen the money it gets for coastal management programs cut to $400,000 a year from about $2 million a year.

Unlike oil and gas leases sold for federal lands where revenues are shared with the states, the federal treasury is the sole beneficiary for the sale of the offshore leases.

The Jones bill would earmark 10 percent of projected increases in the revenues for grants to the states. The amount returned to 30 states and five American territories could not exceed $300 million annually.

The Senate version sponsored by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, would set aside about $400 million a year for the states, with about $7.5 million earmarked for North Carolina.

Jones won House passage of a similar bill in 1982, but it died in the Senate. In an interview after the House vote, Jones said he was more confident of the bill's passage this year because Stevens had lined up 21 Senate sponsors.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. John East, R-N.C., have not yet taken positions on the bills, according to aides. However, Helms has attached an anti-abortion rider to Stevens' bill, meaning he might try to add the controversial amendment when the bill goes before the Senate.

ing to help re-elect President Reagan. He was co-chairman of Reagan's statewide campaign in 1980.

Ballenger said he also would continue his efforts to elect more Republicans to the General Assembly through the North Carolina Legislative Elections Committee. He said he'd keep pressing to open more government meetings to the media, which had been part of his gubernatorial campaign platform.

Ballenger acknowledged that he and Martin shared many of the same philosophies, but said he probably wouldn't endorse a GOP candidate in the primary.

Ballenger said he had been considering withdrawing for a week and made up his mind after meeting Monday with Martin in Charlotte.

"With a guy you've been friends with for 20 years, you can't go out and knock somebody like that. His (Martin's) announcement took some of the joy out of (campaigning) for me."

A letter was mailed Tuesday to key Ballenger supporters notifying them of the decision. Spokesman Max Veale said Ballenger already had raised up to $60,000 and spent as much as $100,000 in the campaign.

Ballenger Says Will Quit Race

Some Republicans immediately began worrying about a clash between Cobey and either Martin or Ballenger could open old political wounds. Should Cobey enter the race, observers said, he'd be helped if his opponents were divided between Ballenger and Martin.

Ballenger said Wednesday he will seek another Senate term next year while work-

State's Quality Of Education Stirs Debate Among Tar Heels

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
Back-to-school time is here again, and with it the annual proliferation of signs and bumper stickers imploring drivers to "watch that child."

That's precisely what Americans are doing. Elementary and secondary schools, teachers and pupils are under perhaps unprecedented scrutiny by a nation suddenly convinced that the quality of public education has deteriorated dangerously.

But while the National Commission on Excellence in Education's warning of a "rising tide of mediocrity" has been echoed in North Carolina, there are claims that the situation isn't nearly as dire here as elsewhere.

In its May 9 issue, Newsweek magazine told readers that public education is "working in North Carolina." Citing such innovations as the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics, the magazine said: "With leadership, commitment and vision, the Tar Heel State leads the way back to quality in education."

Gov. Jim Hunt's administration glowed at the report, but critics scoffed. One newspaper editor wrote that the Newsweek story "tells us where we should be in education, not where we are."

Politicians, education experts, teachers, administrators, students and parents are embroiled in debate over education quality in North Carolina. At issue is not only how good or bad things are, but also how best to improve.

Betty Owen, Hunt's top education adviser, acknowledges that the state's public education system could be better. But she insisted in an interview that it's among the nation's best.

"We're way ahead of most other states," said Ms. Owen.

But Ellis Page, a Duke University professor of educational psychology and research, disagrees. Calling Newsweek's description "a joke," he said North Carolina hadn't done enough to strengthen curricula and student workloads.

"The idea that we're a national leader and have solved all these problems that are plaguing other states is posturing," said Page. "I don't see us as being more out of the woods than other states."

Ms. Owen bases her assessment on a number of programs started in recent years, including:

— Intensive reading instruction in primary grades, with a guarantee that each class will consist of no more than 26 pupils and have both a teacher and an aide.

— "The best program in the nation" for gifted and talented students, including the science and math school in Durham, the N.C. School of the Arts and two Governor's Schools that provide exceptional students with summer instruction.

— Achievement testing in the first, second, third, sixth, ninth and 11th grades, plus competency testing of potential high school graduates to ensure they've mastered basic skills.

North Carolina students have scored higher than students of most other states on nationwide achievement tests since 1978, says Bill Brown, a N.C. Department of Public Instruction statistician.

Third-graders in North Carolina on the average do better than 64 percent of the participants nationwide. They outscore 63 percent of their counterparts in the sixth grade and 57 percent in the ninth grade, Brown said.

Additionally, Ms. Owen points to North Carolina's policy of absorbing most of the cost of public elementary and secondary education at the state level, the vocational training available at most high schools which may be offered to seventh- and eighth-graders, and a "renewed emphasis on quality assurance" in science, math and reading throughout the 12 grades.

The state has begun an experiment influenced by the national commission's finding that American students don't spend nearly as much time in school as pupils of other nations. Two school systems are lengthening the school year from 180 to 200 days and adding an extra hour to the typical six-hour day.

The State Board of Education on Wednesday directed officials to implement 62 recommendations put forth by a committee studying math instruction. The proposals range from higher pay for math teachers to increased math requirements for high school graduation.

North Carolina is one of nine states requiring 20 or more units for high school graduation. And this year, for the first time, the competency test will include a writing section.

"I think we're coming the full circle in terms of our attitude toward education," said Ms. Owen, a former teacher. "I see a new feeling that an education stressing the basics is a child's best hope for getting a good job and being successful. People should have realized this all along but sometimes you wonder."

Page, the Duke professor, says he's not convinced.

"These new programs are encouraging, but the heart of the matter remains what's going on in the classroom and we've got a long way to go there," he said.

Education quality won't increase markedly until students are forced to take more math, science and English courses and fewer electives, said Page. Also, they should be assigned far more homework and realistic grading should be "rediscovered," he said.

"Keep the student writing. That's the most important thing," he said. "Right now, the grading system is Mickey Mouse. Students can get by with anywhere from 10 minutes to half an hour of homework a night, then get A's and B's." In fact, he said, studies have shown that many students who do no homework have high C or low B averages.

Another point of contention is the monetary cost of improving education. Page says it should be minimal, but state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips says a massive infusion of funds is needed to improve teacher pay, reduce class sizes, upgrade facilities and buy materials.

During the General Assembly session earlier this year, Phillips bitterly complained that the public schools' funding requests were being slighted in favor of the state's 16-campus university system.

The public schools' top priorities remain increasing teacher pay and reducing class sizes, which means hiring more teachers. Although the ratio is an ideal one teacher and one aide per 26 pupils in kindergarten through the third grade, it slips to one teacher per 30 students in grades 4-6 and one per 31 in grades 7-12, Phillips said.

"Meanwhile, in the community colleges they average one teacher per 22 students," he said. "For us to achieve that, we'd need several hundred million dollars. Maybe we can't do it overnight but we need to get started."

A task force is expected to present Hunt with a proposed legislative agenda before the 1984 short General Assembly session. Ms. Owen said the suggestions could deal with many of the topics Page stresses, such as curricula.

But Phillips said the biggest favors Hunt could do public schools would be pushing legislators to give them more money while lifting the freeze on state employee pay.

"It's clear as a bell that we haven't reached the expectations of the commission," said Phillips. "To do so we must keep doing better, but also the public must realize that you've got to pay for what you want. North Carolina is getting more for its education dollars than any place I know."

Two Arrested In Hijack Try

MIAMI (AP) — Two Hispanic men in custody today in a suspected hijacking attempt were carrying a toy handgun and containers of a suspicious liquid as they tried to board a Tampa-bound airliner, authorities said.

The arrests Wednesday came almost four weeks after the 10th successful jetliner hijacking on South Florida routes since May 1, and followed the announcement of tougher airport security measures.

"It sounds like an attempted hijacking," said Jack Barker, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta.

Elio Bacaro, 35, of Yonkers, N.Y., and Antonio Nigil-Montez, 25, of Brooklyn, N.Y., were taken into custody after attempting to board a Piedmont Airlines flight to Tampa, said Metro-Dade police spokesman John Jones.
