Commissioners Monday scheduled a public hearing for Oct. 6 to receive comments on a proposed halfcent sales tax increase in the

The 1983 General Assembly authorized the local option sales tax hike, and established two methods for instituting the tax. County commissioners may levy the tax by resolution after first holding a public hearing, or county residents may be allowed to vote in a referen-

Pitt commissioners have contacted all municipalities in the county and a number of organizations, seeking their input

After Commissioner Kelly Barnhill said in his opinion, there has been "enough positive response to call for a public hearing," the board scheduled the 7:30 p.m.

The board approved the acceptance of a $147,737. grant offer from the Federal Aviation Administration for improvements at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

The federal money represents 90 percent of the cost of line-of-sight clearing at runway intersections, and the installation of slope indicator lighting at the ends of runways as well as a taxiway lighting system. A state grant of $8,300 and about $8,300 in local money will be needed to complete funding of the $165,000 project.

Sheppard Memorial Library Director Willie Nelms reported to the board on the bookmobile schedule for the fall and winter, and expreessed thanks for the $15,000 set aside in the capitol reserve fund for the purchase of a replacement bookmobile

Nelms also told commissioners the library board is studying the feasibility of

The board discussed briefly the fate of the old county home building. Built in 1916, the facility has been used for storage since the county home was closed more than 15 years ago.

County Manager Reginald Gray said the Pitt County Historical Society had been contacted about preserving the building, but made no suggestions.

Chairman Charles Gaskins said commissioners would welcome any recommendations as to the fate of the building, which is in poor condition

Commissioners also discussed the sale of the county's 38,015 pound tobacco allotment, to be offered at public auction at 10 a.m. Friday

Gray told the board that Dr. John Pyecha will present a report on the school merger study done by the Research Triangle Institute to commissioners and members of the county and city boards of education at 2 p.m., Sept.

Herring last February and throwing their bodies into the Tar River, after a witness Monday told the court that Parker had suggested killing Thorbes for his car

Santos Modica of the Essex County (N.J.) Sheriff's Department, told the jury today how he and other Essex County officers, along with Pitt County sheriff's deputies went to Parker's home and found him lying on a sofa in the basement of the house after a woman who answered the door told the officers that Parker was not at home.

Modica said Parker was taken into custody after Pitt County officers told him they had a witness who was present at the time the bodies were disposed of in the river and an arrest warrant for Parker.

Modica also said when the officers entered the basement, Parker "started to rise," then reached under a cushion.

Modica said he struck Parker on the left side of his face with his fist, then other officers handcuffed him.

No gun was found in the room, Modica said, but the officer said a knife was found in Parker's pocket.

Testimony during a hearing on the validity of the warrant, presented in the absence of the jury, indicated that the warrant was issued on the basis of information obtained from a "confidential and reliable source," later identified as Carolyn Pippins, a co-defendant in the case, who is scheduled for trial at a later date.

On Monday, Robert Weaver, whose daughter, Yvonne, is married to Parker, testified that he found a wallet on Feb. 19, home near the Pitt-Greenville Thorbs' name and phone number on a check. He said his daughter and her child were living in Newark, N.J. Parker had lived at several homes in the area off River Road, including Ms. Pippins' house, he testified

Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Ed Moore testified about the recovery of the two men's bodies by three area rescue squads on Feb. 24 and 25, from the center of the swollen Tar River at the Falkland Bridge on N.C. 222. Both bodies had a cinder block tied to an ankle when pulled from the river, he said

Joe Roach, a truck driver and minister, said he was selling doughnuts in a housing area off River Road on Feb. 19 when he also found a wallet. He said dark brownish stains were on the wallet and he turned it over to the Ayden police.

Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris said Monday that the cause of death for both Thorbes and Herring had been gunshot wounds to the top of the head.

Herring's body had three gunshot wounds and a stab wound, Harris said. "Several turns of a green clothesline material were tied to a cinder block on Herring's ankle and the body had been in the water for several days. In addition to the head wound, there was a gunshot wound on the right side of the neck below the ear, and another on the upper front right shoulder. The stab wound was to the left middle of the body over the collar bone," said Harris

Harris also said "gunpowder indicated a close discharge of

Asked by defense attorney Bob Browning if tests were made for narcotics, Harris replied "No." But he acknowledged that several tests could have been made. There was no alcohol in the blood of either of the men, Harris said.

A packed courtroom audience Monday strained to hear the evidence, and twice, several women left the room crying as state photo exhibits of the victims were shown to the jury

Gilbert Pippins, an East Carolina University housekeeping worker, said he saw Parker and Terry Best around 1:50 a.m. Feb. 19 as he walked home from work. Best, a tobacco company employee, testified that Parker

Best said he asked Parker "would you kill for the car?" and Parker replied "Yeah ... if I have to."

According to Best, Parker then asked him if he had to kill anyone, would Best help him move the bodies. Best said he told Parker "No way.

It was at this point, Best said, that Ms. Pippins drove up in a car with her sister, and Parker left with them Monday, Parker sat between his court appointed attorneys Milton Williamson and Bob Browning, busily making notes on a legal pad. His wife sat behind him. Directing the state's case is District Attorney Tom Haigwood and chief assistant DA Nancy Barnhill Aycock.

Selection of the jury, which includes three men and nine women, took two weeks. Three alternates, including one woman and two men, were also chosen. Investigators testified during earlier hearings that $10 was

"Let's continue to make growth happen. Greenville and Pitt County have such a good mix - agriculture, education, medical, industrial and most important, the small business person - that we have the opportunity to become the business hub of all eastern Carolina. However, our growth must continue to be controlled enough to insure very good quality. The quality of life for ourselves and our children is certainly high priority," he said. 'As a businessman all my life, I have been involved in coordinating the activities of people, learning a long time ago, one must listen to the viewpoints of each person and each group," he added.

Whitley was a charter member of the local Loyal Order of the Moose, a member of Elks Lodge and a past member of the Exchange and Kiwanis Clubs. He served as chairman of the Jobs Fair, Veterans Task Force and served on the Region IV Small Business Administration board for two terms.

He served as president of the Paint and Decorating Contractors of America (PDCA) Carolina Council for two terms, chairman of the National PDCA specifications committee for five years and was the recipient of the PDCA "Year of Outstanding Service" award.

Whitley was founder of the Pamlico-Bath Preservation Foundation, served on the Chowan College Board of Trustees and is presently serving on the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees. He served on the

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor An English friend of mine often serves an hors d'oeuvre at her parties that always makes a hit. She fills pitted prunes with mango chutney, wraps the prunes in bacon, secures the bacon with wooden picks and bakes these "Devils on Horseback" - as they are sometimes called in the British Isles - until the bacon is crisp.

She prepares these prunes ahead, and at the party she or one of her friends sees that batches of them come out of the oven from time to time so the 'devils' may be served warm.

Recently I tried an innovation in my kitchen. We soaked the prunes in brandy and varied the fillings. We stuffed some of the brandied prunes with the traditional mango chutney; others with cocktail onions; and still others with syrup-preserved ginger and walnuts. You may want to try some other fillings of your own devising. But one word from my experience: fill the prunes generously so the de ightful flavor of the filling will be fulsome enough to stand up against the pronounced flavor of the fruit and bacon.

And one caution. The first time we tried this hors d'oeuvre we used thinly sliced narrow bacon from an 8-ounce package. It was so thin and narrow it did not supply enough texture and flavor. The next time around, we used regular wide slices of bacon from a 1-pound package and these served well.

I've probably bought more diet books than any other person alive.

In one year alone, I ate the bindings on five of them. Looking through my extensive library, it occurred to me they have always had one thing in common . . well, two if you count starvation. They have always been big on incentive.

If you lose weight you can look like the chippie on the cover. You can fit into all your old clothes. You can feel better. You can make your mother happy. You can cross your legs in hot weather. You can be more popular. You can have more energy. You can attract the opposite sex. You can raise your self-esteem. You can get rid of guilt. You can attract more than flies at the beach. You can live longer. (Or without whipped cream, it just seems longer.)

One out of every three people in this country is overweight according to someone's chart. Obviously, we need new incentives

UNCG Has Less Students

GREENSBORO -Enrollment at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro has been recorded at 9,924 for the fall semester, a figure which represents a 1.9 percent decrease in the student body size of a year ago.

The figure includes 7,326 undergraduates and 2,598 graduate students.

Registrar Hoyt Price said the decrease in total enrollment amounts to 202 students. He pointed at economic factors as reason for the enrollment decrease, indicating that potential students will postpone graduate studies in an uncertain economy if they already are employed.

Keep It Strong

The Voice of America has three sprawling complexes around Greenville.

The receiving station is located east of the city and there are two transmitting sites, one located to the northeast and the other in southeastern Pitt County.

When the facilities were installed they were an impressive array of broadcasting equipment designed to send Voice of America broadcasts behind the Iron Curtain. Indeed, the many towers at each of the transmitting site still are a sight to Regrettably, however, much of the equipment which carries the broadcasts dates back to the 1960s when it was installed. The Soviets have modernized their jamming equipment to effectively keep the Soviet population from hearing the American broadcasts.

That the equipment needs upgrading was recognized by President Reagan in his weekly radio address. He called for more federal funds to modernize the VOA broadcasting

There are few in Congress who object to the VOA operations but since the broadcast are seldom heard in this country it is difficult to obtain additional appropriations for improving equipment.

It should be done. The Voice of America tells the free world's story in a forthright way, and if it did not matter to the Soviet leaders they would not spend the money that they do to keep their citizens from hearing it.

The United States has a great story to tell to those who live in repressed societies. One of the best ways to tell it is through the Voice of America. Let's keep that voice strong with the latest in broadcasting technology.

Expensive Games

Democratic Party Chairman David Price gave an indication last week of how his party plans to combat Republican efforts to elect candidates in 1984.

Price said the Democrats will rely on their superior grassroots organization within the state to elect candidates.

He noted the "high-tech" campaigns were pioneered by the Republicans and the Congressional Club but said the Democrats would not attempt to meet that on a dollar for "Campaigns have become expensive games of sorts," Price said.

There is no doubt the Democrats do have the registered voters, but it will take extensive organization and rejuvenation at the grass roots level to keep the Democratic votes in line. It will be interesting to watch.

Tough Decision Lies Ahead

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Supreme Court got itself deeply entangled this past term in that part of the First Amendment that forbids an 'establishment of religion.'' If a case now lying dormant in Bristol, Va., should germinate further little cases of its own, the high court one day may have a tough one to call.

A federal district judge in Bristol on July 29 handed down one of those Solomonic decisions that satisfy neither party altogether, but satisfy everyone more or less. The judge held, in brief, that a course in "Bible study" is unconstitutional as it has been taught in the public schools in Bristol. But, said the judge, if the course were taught differently, the Constitution would not be offended.

Judge Jackson Kiser was attempting to draw a line between the Bible as the revealed word of God and the Bible as a great work of literature. For more than 40 years, fourth- and fifth-graders in Bristol have received instruction in the Bible once a week for 45 minutes. The classes, conducted by three teachers who are privately paid, carry no academic credit. Classes are voluntary, but "there exists a certain amount of peer pressure on the student to make an election to enroll." Of 589 fourthand fifth-graders in the Bristol schools last year, only 18 elected not to take the class.

Among the 18 was Kathleen Crockett, who sued through her parents to put a halt to the practice. Judge Kiser listened to a typical class and looked at videotapes of other classes. He found the teachers were reasonably objective, but because of "the strong religious overlay that stems from the conception and management of the program by the sponsors," he found the whole venture in violation of the establishment clause

'But this does not mean that the Bible cannot be taught in the fourth and fifth grades of the Bristol public schools under any circumstances.

Judge Kiser suggested certain guidelines that would make the classes acceptable: The course should be under the exclusive control of the Bristol school board: the course should be taught by certified teachers without regard to their religious beliefs; the course should be offered as an elective; and "the course should be taught in an objective manner with no attempt made to indoctrinate the children as to either the truth or falsity of the biblical materials.

The trial court buttressed its decision with citations from Supreme Court opinions emphasizing the importance of the Bible "for its literary and historical qualities." Judge Kiser quoted at some length from both the Old and the New Testaments to demonstrate "that a basic background in the Bible is essential to fully appreciate and understand both Western culture and current events." Courts must be careful, he said, "not to so encumber our educators with restrictions as to what can be taught that we prevent them from providing our children with the basic learning experience

they need.

It is hard to quarrel with any part of Judge Kiser's opinion. As the course has been taught, under private sponsorship linked to the local ministerial association, it is patently unconstitutional. But if the Bible were taught as Shakespeare is taught, or the tales of Ulysses are taught, or the poems of Longfellow are taught - what then? The value of the Bible as a work of literature cannot be seriously challenged. At least in Western civilization, no person could be styled a literate person if he were ignorant of the Bible. From Genesis to Revelation, the Bible is a rich lode of allusion, example and quotation.

At the moment, Bristol's Bible course has been obediently suspended, but the school superintendent's office says it is probable that the classes will be resumed during the 1983-84 school year according to the court's guidelines. It will demand something close to genius in the classrooms for teachers to bring off the trick successfully.

The line that divides propaganda from instruction is a wavering line drawn on shifting sands. If a teacher breathes one word suggesting that Genesis is "true," the teacher is in trouble with the Civil Liberties Union; if a teacher implies that Adam and Eve and Cain and Abel were apocryphal or symbolic figures, the local fundamentalists will be after the teacher's scalp. Whatever else the Bible may be, the Bible is in fact literature. The trick is to teach it that way

Looking Ahead To '84

EMERALD ISLE — If you're like most voters, you haven't given one lick of thought to who you'll vote for in the 1984 gubernatorial race. You've got a job to worry about, kids to get off to school, a Chevy with a disabled fuel pump. Come next April, you'll read a bit about your party's candidates, watch their TV ads and decide who to support in the May

How is it then that politicians and newspaper writers can talk about one candidate's momentum and another's problems? If 80 percent of the people who are likely to vote aren't even thinking about the candidates, how can we have a campaign under way?

The campaign for governor has been candidates, it doesn't matter much that the voters aren't ready to listen to their pitches. They're not ready for you, either. Come to Emerald Isle, where state ABC Board Chairman Marvin Speight held his barbecue for eastern Democrats earlier this month, and you'll see who the candidates are pursuing. They're after big shots, littler shots and anybody who'll volunteer to help their

'We're going after the opinion leaders and the people in the communities who are involved in politics, business and civic matters," says Bill Pully, campaign manager for Lauch Faircloth. 'They're the only people who are responsive to political messages now.

'All we're trying to to now is line up community leaders" says Charlie Smith, political assistant to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

In political circles, there are several different levels of leaders. Someone like Speight, for example, can really help a candidate. Speight's all for Edmisten and he's probably brought dozens of his friends into the Edmisten camp. At the barbecue, Speight stacked the cards in Edmisten's favor. All the houses around Speight's were covered with Edmisten posters, banners, flags and bumper stickers. Speight can also be expected to raise, among his friends and associates, a lot of money for Edmisten.

No campaign is made up of too many Speights. Most workers are more like the couple from Greenville who are supporting Edmisten and the couple from Warren County who are aupporting Lauch Faircloth. They've got some standing in their communities. They'll talk to dozens, maybe hundreds, of friends and relatives seeking out their votes. They can afford to make a small donation themselves and, from their closest friends, they hope to raise some more. In all, they might raise $2,000 for their candidates.

At this stage in a campaign - eight months before voting - everything is aimed at getting an organized camp of supporters in as many counties as possible. A combination of people like Speight and a lot of smaller people too.

Even when the candidates venture onto the public campaign trail, they're trying to build an organization. Faircloth, Edmisten and Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox have all advertised and made speeches lately. But, in doing so, they hoped to impress the political leaders first that they are viable candidates. They showed they could put an ad together and afford to pay for it. They hope they'll raise just enough in the polls to convince political workers. But then, watch out, because they'll be coming after the rest of us.

More Serious Than Novel

WASHINGTON - When about 100 attorneys here went on strike last week for better pay, this city of lawyers naturally thought the action more novel than

But the strikers were attorneys who represent mostly indigent criminal defendants. They claim that their governmentpaid fees, which haven't been raised in 13 years, are undermining both their livelihoods and the Constitutional rights of their clients. Unfortunately, their complaint reflects a national malaise toward equal protection under law that is reaching crisis proportions.

It was 20 years ago, in Gideon v. Wainwright, that the Supreme Court granted the right of free counsel to all defendants who, charged with a serious crime, couldn't afford an attorney. Since then, the courts have extended that right to numerous other cases, including misdemeanors in which a defendant, once convicted, will probably receive a prison sentence. Since 1972, the Gideon spirit hae helped to add at least six million cases to the load of public defenders and courtappointed attorneys.

Yet the Court has never told state and localgovernments, which have jurisdiction over most crimes, how to pay their mounting indigent defense bills. Instead, they've left that burden with legislatures and city councils, most of which have understandably been more interested in protecting the interests of prosecutors than the rights of indigent criminals.

In 1981, according to an American Bar Association study, spending on indigent defense nationally was less than $436 million, or only 1.5 percent of all state and local criminal justice expenditures. Meanwhile, fees for court-assigned counsel were found to average $20 to $30 per hour — at least $20 less than the rate criminal cases and $40 less than in civil cases. Many states were reported to limit total fees to $1,000, regardless of how many hours worked.

'Funding for indigent criminal defense work is a national humiliation," says Richard J. Wilson of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association. Adds the University of North Carolina's Norman Lefstein, who authored the ABA study: "The concern I have is that this system doesn't protect the innocent.

Anyone familiar with the legal profession today knows why. Despite a glut of attorneys, low compensation rates discourage all but the most idealistic or least experienced lawyers from going to bat for poor defendants. Fiscal constraints hamstring even the best public defenders; meanwhile, to make ends meet, private practitioners must either take on too many cases or cut corners that, particularly where lab tests or other research is involved, can often prove useful to a defendant's cause.

Unfortunately, many states seem uninterested in even a modicum of balance. In the last two years, at least eight states - Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Missouri, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin — have either exhausted funds for assigned attorneys or simply refused to pay up. At the same time, prosecutors have demanded more support, and generally succeeded.

During the last decade, litigation intended to redress such inequities has increased. According to Wilson's group, lawyers in 14 states and the District of Columbia have sought either to raise fees or to restrain judges from forcing them to accept indigent clients involuntarily. Lawsuits have put such states as Missouri on a path blazed by Los Angeles, Philadelphia and other pace-setters.

In Detroit, however, the first fee increase in 16 years will still leave fees for court-assigned work 30-50 percent shy of the increase in consumer prices. That fact alone underscores the distance that the cause of indigent defense must travel before the system's health is assured.

Last week, a state supreme court justice in New York ignored a prosecutor's pleas for more stringent punishment in sentencing John V. Lindsay Jr., son of the former New York City mayor, to "public service" for a cocaine conviction. Lindsay's penalty undoubtedly reflected, in part, the quality of his defense. Would a poor defendant, charged with the same offense, have been so lucky?

Strength For Today

Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, made a plaster statue of Christ for a church in Copenhagen. He molded the statue with the head of Christ raised imperiously as the King of Kings.

But when the plaster dried, the head sank down upon the breast. Thorwaldsen realized that what he would ordinarily have considered a mishap of great consequences turned out really to be a revelation of the true nature of that Christ who had said, "Learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls.'

Jesus also said that the meek shall inherit the earth. How many times has that declaration been verified? Everyone who has tried to own the earth and dominate its people has gone down to defeat.

Those who have served humanity in the humble spirit of Christ are the world's real heroes. Their heads are not held high. They are bowed in humility and submission to Christ.

--- Weather Hinders Search

- Stormy weather curtailed search operations today as the Soviet Union added an intelligence gathering ship to its fleet probing for wreckage from a South Korean airliner shot down over Soviet territory Sept. 1.

U.S., Japanese and South Korean vessels also are taking part in what appears to be an increasingly frenetic search, focusing on the "black box," or flight data recorder, of the 747 jumbo jet shot down by a Soviet fighter plane. The 269 people aboard were killed.

Officials hope the flight recorder would shed light on the incident, perhaps explaining why Flight 007, on a flight from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul, flew into restricted Soviet territory. The jetliner was hit by air to-air missiles and crashed in the Sea of Japan near tiny Moneron Island, off the Soviets' Sakhalin Island.

Moscow claims the plane was on a U.S.-initiated spy mission, a charge denied by the United States. A Soviet air marshal was quoted today by the Communist party newspaper Pravda as saying the Korean pilot was coordinating his movements with a U.S. spy satellite to test Soviet air defense reac-

Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said a storm moved in overnight from the southeast, with strong winds and rain that reduced visibility today from 12 miles to a maximum of three miles, sharply curtailing the movements of search vessels

The ships crisscrossing the gray seas are trying to trace the flight recorder by its "beeper," which emits a pinging noise audible to undersea listening devices.

The Washington Post reported today that U.S. search crews had heard electronic beeps from the black box housing the data recorders. Unidentified sources were quoted as saying the Soviets also detected the beeps but that neither side appeared to have found the recorders.

The sources were quoted as saying "it is almost certain" the wreckage containing the recorders was in international waters, rather than Soviet waters. One official reportedly said: There is one helluva race going on out there" to locate the beeper.

Officials at the White House, Pentagon, State Department and with the U.S. search operation in Japan had no comment on the contains taped records of an aircraft's movements as well as the last 30 minutes of cockpit voice conversations, are built to withstand 48 hours in seawater but can survive as long as several weeks, authorities say.

Nine Soviet and two U.S. Ships were counted today by a Japan Maritime Safety Agency patrol vessel. Nine other vessels showed up on MSA radar in the area, 24 miles north of Moneron island, MSA Rear Adm. Masayoshi Kato said. Japanese officials said they recognized an intelligence gathering ship as the latest addition to the Soviet search fleet. The Soviets also are using three mini-submarines and a diving bell.

On Monday, MSA patrol craft found several pieces of light metal alloy, a lady's boot and a plastic bottle with the Korean Air Lines logo.

In Wakkanai, Japan's northernmost city, 59 relatives of those aboard the downed plane gathered to make a last farewell. They planned to board a chartered ferry Wednesday for at-sea rites south of Moneron.

Almost all wore black ribbons on their chests, and several elderly women cried when they arrived at the fishing port today.

In Moscow, Soviet Air Marshal Pyotr Kirsanov charged in Pravda that the Korean airliner was delayed 40 minutes in Alaska so an orbiting U.S. spy satellite would be in position to monitor the plane's intrusion over Soviet nuclear installations and the Soviet re-

Kirsanov's article amplified Moscow's charge that the Korean airliner was diverted from its course by the United States so details of Soviet air defenses would be revealed.

In Washington, White House spokesman Anson Franklin said the Reagan administration called Kirsanov's claim 'nonsense.

In Paris, a pilots' boycott forced the cancellation of an Air France Paris-Moscow flight today for the second consecutive day.

Union pilots and co-pilots at Air France last week began a 60-day boycott of flights to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the airliner attack. About 80 percent of the 1,400 pilots and co-pilots at Air France are union members.

U.S. Diplomat Tells U.N. It Can Leave If It Desires

UNITED NATIONS (AP) The U.N. General Assembly opens its 38th session today in the wake of a U.S.-Soviet dispute that prompted a U.S. diplomat to say the organization is free to move out if it believes the United States is a poor host.

East Carolina Library Plans Revamp After Computer Gift

ECU News Bureau With the gift of a $56,000 microcomputer, East Carolina University is moving forward with plans to re-vamp some of its library operations, officials announced today Dr. Ruth M. Katz, director of ECU's Joyner Library, and Dr. JoAnn H. Bell. director of the ECU Health Sciences Library, said the system donated by Digital Equipment Corp. of Maynard, Mass., would be a key component in plans to replace card catalog filing systems with computer terminals in ECU's libraries. Library users will no longer have to search through drawers of index cards to find desired publications. Instead, the user will type the name of the book or periodical, author or subject into a computer terminal and information about its location and availability will be retrieved instantly

"That will take place in the second phase of development" of the plan, Dr. Bell said. She estimated a timetable of "within the next two or three years.

Initially, the PDP-11/44 minicomputer will be used to implement an automated circulation program developed for ECU libraries, connecting the Health Sciences Library at the ECU School of Medicine with Joyner Library and its music library branch on the main

"It will enable a library user to look for and check out materials at either of the libraries," Dr. Bell said.

'It also will determine for the user if a book is available for loan and where the book is located in the library," she

The first phase of the system should be operational within the year.

Digital made the gift to ECU under its 1983 Special Equipment grant program which is designed to help colleges and universities strengthen programs in computer science, physical or biological sciences.

Jim Whiteley of Chapel Hill, a Digital representative, said "the opportunity to help in the success of East Carolina University and its medical school was consistent with the goals of the (Digital) program.'

ECU Chancellor John M. Howell said the gift would enable the unversity to utilize the collections of both libraries in better serving students and faculty

Man, Wife, Son Murdered; Tot Escapes Bloody Assault

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP)

After her father, mother and brother were bludgeoned to death, a 2-year-old girl wandered around the home for two days, playing with toys, bleeding from an assault and possibly trying to awaken her dead family, officials said. The victims - a Fort Wayne journalist, his wife and an 11-year-old son were discovered Monday at their home, dead from 'severe head injuries from a blunt instrument such as a said Allen County Coroner Roland Ahlbrand. He called the murders "bizarre" and "at best con-

Police said they recovered "a bloody baseball bat," believed to be a murder weapon, from the toddler's bedroom. They had no suspects or motive in the case.

Dan Osborne, 35, editorial page editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel since April; his wife, Jane; and their 11-year-old son, Ben, were killed Friday night as they slept, Ahlbrand said.

Osborne's daughter, 2year-old Caroline, underwent surgery Monday at an unnamed Fort Wayne hospital to repair damage from a sexual assault and was in serious condition, said a police source who asked not to be identified. Calls today to all four Fort Wayne hospitals showed no patient listed as Caroline Osborne.

Caroline was found in her room playing with toys Monday morning after spending more than 48 hours

The two-story home on the city's southwest side showed no signs of forced entry or robbery, police spokesman Thomas R. Engle said.

'We have every indication that there was nothing stolen," said Engle. Television sets, jewelry and money were visible

"The motive here is what concerns me," Ahlbrand said. "I have three family members brutally slaughtered and a 2-year-old who was left to walk about the house for two days bleeding, with her dead family about her ... "What manner of man was this? Or what manner of men was this?"

The family was found when T. Craig Ladwig, an associate editor of the News-Sentinel, went to the house after Osborne failed to show up for work at 7 a.m.

"When he is an hour late and doesn't call, there was no doubt in my mind that something grave had hap-pened," said Ladwig, who knew Osborne for six years and considered him a calm, steady editor. "He was kind of a man for all seasons.

"I saw both cars in the driveway. I went up and knocked on the door and heard no dog barking. That was enough for me to call police," Ladwig said.

Osborne, dressed in shorts and a T-shirt, was found lying in his blood-stained bed with his dog, who also was Access charges to replace long distance support.

Change. We've been talking about it for a long time. About decisions by the Federal Communications Commission. About growing competition in the telephone industry. About amazing new technology. About how these changes are affecting our business and you.

Here's a quick look at some of the changes which have already taken place and another big change coming in 1984.

Each part pays for itself.

It used to be that you paid a fixed rate each month for basic service. Basic service included a telephone, connection to other local telephones, connection to long distance, part of the costs of installing your telephones, directory assistance

But today, you pay a separate charge for local calling and a separate charge for telephones you rent from us. You also pay for installation work at the time it's done. And you pay separate charges for directory assistance. In other words, each part of your telephone service is beginning to pay for itself.

A separate charge to help pay for access lines.

Beginning January 1, 1984, charges for basic service will be broken down even more. The Federal Communications Commission has ruled that customers will begin paying a separate charge to help pay for their access lines. Access lines connect your telephones to the telephone company's switching equipment. (Our switching equipment actually sends your calls where you want them to go—to another telephone in your local calling area, or to long distance.)

United Telephone System

Here's why.

Access charges replace long distance support.

Traditionally, you have paid less for local telephone service than it has cost us to provide. That's because we have used part of the money we received from interstate long distance calls (calls between states) to help provide local service, including access lines.

But the Federal Communications Commission has decided that interstate long distance money should not be used to support local telephone service. Instead of long distance users paying more than their fair share for access lines, all customers should pay their own costs. In other words, beginning January 1, 1984, monthly access charges will replace that part of interstate long distance money which is now being used to help provide access lines. As a result, the Federal Communications Commission expects rates for interstate long distance to Access charges to be phased in.

To ease the impact on customers, the Federal Communications Commission has said that access charges will be phased in over a six-year period—January 1, 1984 to December 31, 1989. During this six-year period, both customers and long distance companies will pay access charges. The customer access charge will gradually increase each year, while access charges to long distance companies will decrease. At the end of the six-year period, all customers will be sharing equally in the cost of access lines

The Federal Communications Commission has said that during the transition period residential customers will pay a flat charge of $2.00 per line per month in 1984; $3.00 per line per month in 1985; and $4.00 per line per month in 1986. Business subscribers will pay $6.00 per line per month for the first three years of the transition.

In October, our company will file our proposed access charges (which will be called "interstate access charges") with the Federal Communications Commission. And, of course, we will keep you informed.

Critical Mass said its list is based on government assessments of each plant's performance in in such areas as operation, radiological controls, fire protection, security, refueling and quality control. The group obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request a notebook prepared by the NRC's Office of Inspection and Enforcement that rated the nuclear plants. However, Bob Newlin, an NRC spokesman, said the government agency does not rank plants against one another. He said the numbers that Critical Mass used to compile its rankings "had been averaged by a lower-level employee on her own" and were not weighted properly to accurately reflect the performance of each plant. The nuclear industry through its Atomic Industrial Forum, immediately criticized the 34-page Critical Mass report, which listed the NRC's 1982 assessments of each plant's performance in eight to 12 categories.

NRC officials pointed out that, at the commission's direction and because of industry objections, they have quit listing plants as average, above average and below average.

a bad practice because it implied that the performance of some plants was unacsaid Richard ceptable. DeYoung, director of the NRC's inspection and enforcement staff.

"All of the plants are performing above the level of acceptability," he said. "If they weren't, we would shut them down. But we want them to do better. We've led the country to believe that they will perform well.

DeYoung, however, acknowledged that the "Systematic Assessment of Licensee Performance" reports on each plant that provided the basis of the Critical Mass study are used to determine which plants need more scrutiny.

Ranked second worst among operating plants was Arkansas Power & Light Co.'s twin-reactor facility at Russelville. Ranked third was the Tennessee Valley Authority's three-reactor Browns Ferry plant at Athens, Ala.

Among plants still under construction, Louisiana Power & Light Co.'s Waterford reactor at Taft, La., was rated the worst managed, followed by TVA's Watts Bar plant at Spring City, Tenn., and Commonwealth Edison Co.'s twin-reactor Byron plant in Illinois

Navy Hears Black Box

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Navy ship searching for a downed Korean airliner's 'black box' picked up beeps from the flight data recorder for about 90 minutes Monday, but then lost the signal Pentagon sources said today.

The Narragansett, one of four Navy ships searching international waters for the wreckage, heard the sounds on an underwater microphone trailing beneath the ship, said the sources, who declined to be identified.

The sources said the microphone is tuned to the frequency of the sounds emitting from the "black which officials say could yield clues to the final minutes before the Korean Air Lines was shot down by a Soviet missile on Sept. 1, killing 269 people.

The Narragansett picked up the "pings" for about an hour and then lost the signal, the sources said.

Later, the ship heard the beeps for about 30 minutes, but the signal was lost a second time and not recovered, the sources said.

The search is complicated by a large number of sunken ships on the bottom and the large group of ships

Fire In Mountains

SOUK EL-GHARB, Lebanon (AP) — A team of U.S. Marine and U.S. Army forward observers came under shelling in this strategic mountain town today as the Lebanese army fought off another attack by Druse militiamen and their Palestinian allies. U.S. Embassy officials and Lebanese army officers refused to comment on the presence of the Americans in the battle area. One Western military source said the Americans were forward artillery observers in Souk el-Gharb to direct the guns of the U.S. Navy task force off

The U.S. Navy on Monday for the first time opened fire in direct support of Lebanon's army, and today U.S. and French jets streaked over Lebanon.

The team of six or seven Americans, led by an Army colonel whose nametag identified him as Gatanas, was seen by Western reporters getting out of a Lebanese army armored personnel carrier in the center of Souk el-Gharb just an hour before the attack began.

The Americans refused to speak to reporters, and Lebanese army military intelligence officers ordered all the reporters into an armored personnel carrier searching the area, the Navy sources said.

"There's a lot out there and it's easy to pick up false signals," one source said. There were several false alarms Monday before the signal was picked up, the sources said.

Stormy weather curtailed search operations today. In addition to the United States, ships from the Soviet Union, Japan and Korea are also looking for the "black box."

Besides trailing a microphone, the Narragansett is also looking at the seabed with a side-scan sonar which emits radio waves. It is that sonar which has picked up a number of false reports of wreckage, the sources said.

There were unconfirmed reports today that the Soviets had found the "black box." but the Pentagon sources were skeptical

U.S. Observers Under

An hour later, an unknown number of insurgents tried to infiltrate Lebanese army lines about 1.2 miles from the Hotel Hajjar, the local army headquarters, where the Americans apparently were staying. The attempt touched off an hour-long battle in which hundreds of shells and rockets were exchanged around the town.

It could not be determined whether any shells fell very close to the Americans, al though the Druse rockets and artillery pounded the town and Lebanese army tanks returned the fire.

The state radio said French Super Etendard fighter-bombers took off from the carrier Foch on reconnaissance flights around noon. U.S. F-14 Tomcat fighters from the carrier Eisenhower flew similar missions before dawn in what was believed the first nighttime mission by planes from the U.S. task force.

Beirut radio said Druse militiamen trying to move into Souk el-Gharb were beaten back this morning, with six of the attackers killed and several others wounded. The radio said fighting around the strategic town had raged through the night

Meanwhile, the independent Kuwait newspaper Al-Qabas said Soviet officers headed by a Red Army general were in Damascus helping the Syrians monitor the war in Lebanon. Another Kuwait paper, Al Anbaa said the Soviets were prepared to fly 52,000 troops into Syria if Israel attacked Syria. There was no confirmation of the reports, which cited unidentified diplomatic sources.

Lebanese military officials said one of their reconnaissance planes crashed Monday near the Druse mountain town of Aley, "and the fate of the two pilots is still unknown.

On Monday, U.S. Navy ships off the coast opened fire on anti-government positions near Souk el-Gharb. It was the third such shelling since civil warfare broke out Sept. 4, but the first in which the firing was in support of the Lebanese army rather than in response to shelling of the Marines The destroyer John

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart said the nava! gunfire supported "defensive actions" by Lebanese forces which were "vital to the safety of U.S. personnel." "I think we have made clear our concerns about Souk el-Gharb and our intent to assist militarily to see that that does not fall into the shell our Marines," said John Hughes, a State Department spokesman in Washington Another State Department official, who requested anonymity, said control of Souk el-Gharb was "vital" and its loss could spell a major defeat for American policy. The White House said last week that the Marines in Beirut had been authorized to request naval fire support when they and other troops of the multinational force were threatened and when the Lebanese army was in danger of losing a position from which the Marines could be attacked.

Previously U.S. officials ordered retaliatory shelling after the Marine camp or other American installations were shelled.

In Washington, sources said congressional and White House negotiators hammered out a compromise proposal Monday night allowing President Reagan to invoke the 1973 War Powers Act to regulate how long U.S. Marines will remain in Lebanon.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Reagan agreed to a war powers resolution which would state he should have invoked the act once two U.S. Marines were killed in Beirut on Aug.

The War Powers Act sets a 90-day clock running after which U.S. troops in danger of being caught in hostilities aborad must come home unless Congress dtermines otherwise. Another provision of the compromise calls for Congress to approve Reagan's decision to keep 1,200 Marines in the multinational force in Beirut. The tentative agreement gives Reagan 18 months before additional congressional endorsement would be required, sources

Texas Moves Up With Win In Season Debut

Texas made an impressive debut this season by downing fifth-ranked Auburn in its season opener. That victory boosted the Longhorns to second place in The Associated Press college football poll but far behind top-ranked Nebraska.

Nebraska, which routed Minnesota 84-13 was a nearunanimous choice Monday as the nation's top college football team. The Cornhuskers' lopsided victory gave them a 3-0 record and a 184-39 scoring edge on their opponents.

It also gave the Big Eight powerhouse 57 of 59 first-place tes and 1.178 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The two voters who did not rank the Cornhuskers No. 1 had them second, with Texas first.

The Longhorns had 1,112 points and replaced Oklahoma, which dropped from second to eighth after losing to Ohio State 24-14. The Buckeyes' victory vaulted them from sixth to third with 1,038 points. The other members of the top five were Arizona, whose seventh-place ranking last week was its highest ever, and North Carolina. Arizona jumped to fourth with 933 points by trouncing Washington State 45-6. North Carolina belted Miami of Ohio 48-17 and went from 10th to fifth with 847 points.

"For an opening ball game in a totally foreign environment against a highly ranked football team - a first ball game, a first start - I was pleased by the way they kept their poise," said Texas Coach Fred Akers.

"I wouldn't change a thing. How could I be disappointed?" Among the disappointed on Saturday were while Notre

Designer Says Boat's Reputation In A Myth

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) -The man who designed America's Cup challenger Australia II says its reputa-tion as a super light air boat is a myth, and the tactician aboard United States defender Liberty won't argue the point.

"Our boat is a heavyweather boat," said designer Ben Lexcen, adding that he is not concerned with boat speed regardless of wind velocity. "I feel we're better in everything.

Australia II, trailing 2-1 in the best-of-seven series for sailing's most coveted prize, dropped the first two races in moderately heavy winds of 17-18 knots. But both losses came in close races in which the boat experienced equipment problems. "I don't even think we were faster the first two days," Liberty's Tom Whidden said. "It just seemed to me that we were more competitive in heavier wind.

Liberty won the first race by minute, 10 seconds and bettered the margin by another 23 seconds in the second. Then, when the winds subsided to 6-8 knots, Australia II was dominant.

Aussie skipper John Bertrand had his boat in front Saturday by nearly six minutes, only to be denied victory when the winds died and left him two miles short of the finish line as the time limit expired. On Sunday, Australia II romped by 3:14 in the worst licking an American boat has taken in 112 years.

That, coupled with a forecast for light to moderate winds, led Liberty's skipper Dennis Conner to call for a lay day on Monday.

Lexcen says Liberty's loss of so much speed in light winds has been primarily responsible for Australia II's reputation as a light air boat.

Raiders Still Unbeaten Lyle Alzado is a little different, as are his teammates on the Los Angeles Raiders' defense.

The Raiders blanked Miami until the issue was no longer in doubt Monday night as Los Angeles joined the Dallas Cowboys as the National Football League's only unbeaten teams with a decisive 27-14 victory over the Dolphins.

Each of the guys on the defense is a little off-center and there's a great deal of pride," said Alzado, a 34-year-old defensive end. "Your teammates beat you up trying to get to the ball. It's a very overpowering defense.

Indeed, it is. The Raiders have given up only three touchdowns and just 30 points overall in beating Cincinnati, Houston and Miami. All three of those TDs came after Los Angeles had assured itself of

The Dolphins, who had only nine first downs until the final few minutes Monday night, got their touchdowns on a 6-yard pass from rookie quarterback Dan Marino to tight end Joe Rose with :29 remaining and a 2-yard pass from Marino to Mark Duper with 20 seconds left.

Before that, nothing. As a result, the defending American Football Conference champion Dolphins fell to 2-1 and the Raiders improved their incredible Monday night record to 20-2-1 since prime-time football came into being in 1970.

anything written, it's usually what we do of-fensively," said Alzado. "They say offense sells tickets and defense wins championships, and that's basically true. 'How much excitement is there in seeing someone knock the stuffing out of a ballcarrier? For violent people, it might be exciting, but for the average person, it's not.

Probably the key play of the game occurred late in the third quarter. Naturally, it was provided by the Los Angeles defense.

The Raiders led 13-0, but the Dolphins were in a third-and-six situation at the Los Angeles 21-yard line. Miami quarterback David Woodley went back to pass, but was separated from the ball by blitzing linebacker Rod Martin.

Rookie Los Angeles defensive end Greg Townsend scooped the ball up at the Raiders' 34-yard line and dashed 66 yards for a touchdown, making it 20-0 and all but sealing the outcome.

I saw all these black jerseys (his teammates) and the ball and somebody yelled 'Pick it up,' recalled Townsend, a fourth-round draft choice of the Raiders who attended Texas Christian University. "And I did.

'I guess they gave it to me because I run a 4.62 40. All I saw then were the goalposts and I just ran. I want people to know that Townsend is here to stay. This was a cherished moment. I'm still very excited about the whole thing.

The Raiders had taken their 13-0 lead on a 2-yard first quarter and a 14-yard pass from quarterback Jim Plunkett to tight end Todd Christensen with just nine seconds left before halftime

Greg Pruitt's 5-yard scoring run with 5:15 left in the game made it 27-0.

"We couldn't generate anything offensively and our defense couldn't stop them," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "That's about as thorough as you can get beat. The Raiders were a much better team than we were tonight.'

Despite being sacked five times, Plunkett completed 11 of 15 passes for 162 yards and wasn't intercepted. He attempted only one pass in the second half. Los Angeles running back Marcus Allen was the game's leading ground gainer with 105 yards

"It's been a good night," said Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores. "I wish we could get the Commissioner to let us play all of our games on Monday nights.

We knew coming into this game that there were two undefeated teams and one wasn't going to be after the game. They are an excellent team, a class team, but we played a tough football game.

Woodley completed 10 of 18 passes for 144 yards before being replaced by Marino after the final Los Angeles touchdown. Woodley was sacked three times and threw one interception. Marino hit on 11 of 17 passes for 90 yards.

The leading rusher for the Dolphins was fullback Andra Franklin, who was held to 34 yards on 11

Morgan's Homers Rip Cubs

By The Associated Press Joe Morgan is one person who really knows how to celebrate a birthday

Turning 40, the Philadelphia second baseman slugged four hits, including two home runs, and drove in four runs to power the Phillies to a 7-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs Monday night. "I'm sure glad it was his

was like he knew that he would hit a homer.

The victory boosted the Phillies' lead in the National League East to two games over the Pittsburgh Pirates and Montreal Expos. The Pirates dropped a 5-4 decision to the New York Mets in 10 innings and the Expos climbed into a second-place tie with Pittsburgh with a 3-0, 6-3 sweep of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Los Angeles Dodgers,

meanwhile, beat the Houston Astros 9-2 and improved their lead in the West to four games over the idle Atlanta Braves.

Stefero Leads Orioles Rally — Again

Don't tell the Milwaukee Brewers that lightning doesn't strike twice in the same place

After trailing the Brewers 7-0 on Sunday, the Orioles rallied and finally won the game in the ninth inning on a game-winning single by rookie catcher John Stefero.

On Monday night, Stefero, who has played in six major-league games with five hits in 10 at-bats, did it again. He climaxed a two-run rally in the 11th inning with another RBI single, giving the Orioles an 8-7 victory over the Brewers and a 712-game lead over second-place Detroit in the American League East.

"It's kind of a one-in-a-million chance to get to do this," said Stefero, who helped reduce Baltimore's "magic number" to seven. "I want to open some eyes here that I can hit in pressure situations.

Meanwhile, the Orioles' comeback ability is starting to look unreal even to their own players. They have 35 come-frombehind victories this season and have a 33-11 record in games decided in the seventh inning or later. 'I still can't believe it," said Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez. "It's like Fantasy Island. The Orioles have won 10 of their last 11 games and are 23-4 since Aug. 24. They have a chance to wrap up the division this week, starting tonight when they open a four-game series against the Tigers in Detroit. In other AL games, Kansas City swept a doubleheader from California. 8-4 and 7-6: Boston trimmed New York 5-3, Minnesota tripped Chicago 7-5 and Seattle beat Toronto 9-6.

Despite his heroics the last two games and the paucity of his big-league experience. Stefero says the highlight of his career was a two-run double off New York's Goose Gossage to tie a game in New York on June 30.

I'll remember that one for the rest of my life," he said. After Milwaukee took a 7-6 lead in the top of the 11th on Ted

Jordan, Piatek Share Dubious Distinction

Second-seeded Kathy Jordan and unranked Mary Lou Piatek have had somewhat similar experiences in the Central Fidelity Banks International Tennis Tournament - both have lost in the championship match to Martina Navratilova.

Jordan, who upset Chris Evert Lloyd this summer at Wimbledon, went to the finals in 1979 when women's professional tennis returned here after a six-year absence and was beaten by Navratilova. 6-1, 6-3. Piatek, then an amateur, was beaten by Navratilova in the 1980 final,

But there the similarity ended, for Piatek returned as a pro the following year and captured the championship. The same year. Jordan was eliminated in the first round.

Both advanced Monday to the second round of this year's tourney. Jordan trouncing Anne Henricksson, 6-1, 6-3, and Piatek beating Lele Forood, 6-2, 6-1. Piatek could be headed for a quarterfinal meeting with top-seeded Barbara Potter, provided both get that far.

Only two other seeded players were in action Monday. No. 6 Wendy White beat Susan Mascarin, 6-3, 6-3, and 17-year-old seventh-seeded Camille Benjamin turned back Claudia Monteiro of Brazil, 6-2, 7-6 (7-2)

Potter, who inherited the top seed when U.S. Open champion Navratilova withdrew late last week, sees her first action tonight against Elise

Three other seeded players also were scheduled to play today or tonight - No.4 Yvonne Vermaak and No.5 Rosalyn Fairbank, both of South Africa, and No.8 Pam

Beaman Wins Ayden Pro-Lady Tourney

AYDEN - Carl Beaman of Falling Creek Country Club won the second annual Pro-Lady Tournament at the Ayden Golf Tub Monday with a three-under 69.

Henderson golf pro Jimmy Gurkin was second with a 73. while host pro Tim Smith and Buddy Lang of Wildwood Country Club shot a 75.

Top team honors were shared by Gordon Fulp's Greenville Country Club team and the team from Falling Creek. Fulp's team of Janet McLohon, Diana Barwick and Della Dayton tied with Beaman's team of Sandra Morgan, Pat Sargeant and Nancy Anderson with a 13-under 59.

A pig picking sponsored by the Ayden Ladies Association completed the day's activities.

Simmons' single, Cal Ripken singled on a chopper in front of the plate. Eddie Murray flew out, but Gary Roenicke singled, Ken Singleton tied it with another single and Stefero got the game-winning hit off Tom Tellman, 9-4.

The winner was Tim Stoddard, 4-3, who pitched one inning.

Joe Nolan's RBI single and Al Bumbry's two-run single gave Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the second inning, and a single by Ripken made it 4-0 in the third.

Milwaukee pulled to within 4-3 in the fifth when Randy Ready's bases-loaded RBI single got past left fielder Roenicke for an error, clearing the bases.

In the bottom of the fifth, Singleton got the first two of his three RBI with a two-run single for a 6-3 Baltimore lead.

Mark Brouhard cut the deficit with a solo homer in the sixth and the Brewers tied it with two runs in the eighth on an RBI single by Rick Manning and a groundout by Jim Gantner.

Baltimore's four-game sweep of the Brewers mathematically eliminated the defending division champions, who suffered a club record 10th consecutive loss. Twins 7. White Sox 5

Minnesota continued its success over runaway division champion Chicago as Tom Brunansky knocked in four runs, two of them with a homer in the top of the eighth inning. The White Sox, who have already clinched the AL West title and had won 17 consecutive games at home, have now lost five of 11 games to the Twins, who are 24 games behind Chicago. No other West team has beaten the White Sox more

The two-run shot gave rookie Mike Walters, who came on in the fourth, his first major-league win in two decisions.

Brunansky also had a two run-single in the fourth, but the White Sox made it 5-3 in the fifth on rookie Ron Kittle's 33rd homer, a drive of at least 470 feet onto the roof in left field. It was Kittle's second rooftop blast this season.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 3
Bob Stanley earned his 30th save and stifled a home-run hitting contest between Boston and New York with three innings of one-hit pitching.

Before Stanley came in, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Glenn Hoffman belted homers for the Red Sox and Steve Balboni and Roy Smalley connected for the Yankees.

The Boston homers ruined the bid of Ron Guidry, 19-9, to win his 20th game. Stanley saved the victory for John Tudor,

Mariners 9, Blue Jays 6

Seattle snapped a seven-game losing streak with a five-run seventh inning against Toronto highlighted by Darnell Coles'

Al Cowens and Dave Henderson also contributed runscoring singles to the winning rally that made a winner of Matt Young, 11-15.

Buck Martinez hit his 10th homer for the Blue Jays.

Royals 8-7, Angels 4-6

Kansas City had to rally in the late innings of both games to sweep a doubleheader from California.

With the Royals trailing 6-5 in the ninth of the second game, Willie Wilson doubled in the tying run with two outs then raced home when Pat Sheridan hit an infield single

The Royals won the opener as Don Slaught tripled home two runs to key a six-run rally in the eighth. , and Frank White hit a sacrifice fly to make it 5-4 before Slaught tripled and scored on a single by Onix Concepcion.

NCAA Sets Research f Discrimination

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -The NCAA is launching a massive research project to determine if new academic requirements for athletes would discriminate against blacks.

And, at least one official said the controversial academic rules passed at last January's NCAA convention probably will be modified before they go into effect in Gwen Norrell, vice president of the NCAA's Division I. made the prediction during questioning at a news conference Monday in conjunction with a meeting Monday and Tuesday of about 60 college presidents. The chief executive officers were invited by the NCAA to discuss problems in intercollegiate

"My hunch is something may turn out," Norrell, faculty representative from Michigan State, said when asked if the academic rules would be changed. "But I do not know what form that may be. There could be all kinds of proposals. I'm certain the NCAA Council will not move toward modifying them until we have completed the research project.

Researchers will try to determine if charges by black educators are true - that standardized college entrance exams would be racially and culturally discriminatory. As the rule was written by the American Council on Education, athletes would be unable to compete or practice unless they achieved either a 700 score on the SAT test or a 15 on the ACT. "One of the questions being asked is, where is the data to support charges against the standardized test scores.' Norrell said. "On what data did you base your opinion? Most studies that have been done on graduation rates on athletes have been done in doctoral theses by a few individuals. And those studies are not generally well designed statistically. There is no large national data base on athletes. This is a very signiicant piece of research.'

Chief executive officers of every Division I school will be asked to help gather the data, which will be collected and analyzed by Advanced Technology, Inc., of Reston.

John L. Toner, president of the NCAA, has sent a letter to all Division I presidents urging their cooperation.

'It should be emphasized that the data being collected from individual institutions for this research, by contract,

Arliss Roaden, president of Tennessee Tech, also announced a new plan formulated by the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education to give Division I schools more automony in voting on NCAA legislation. Currently, there are 275 schools in Division I, the top fidence," Toner says in the letter. "Publicly released results...will not identify individuals or institutions. One of the reasons Advanced Technology was selected to carry out this project was its capability and experience in handling sensive informadivision. They are divided into Division I-A, with 105 members as the top football schools, 83 schools in Division I-AA, the lesser football problems, 87 schools which either do not sponsor football or sponsor programs below the "Specifically, what the committee has recommended is that I-A institutions, as one group of Division I, and all the rest of Division I schools, both I-AA and the others, be separated as far as voting is concenred on the divided bylaws," Roaden said.

"Already, Division I-A votes separately on football matters. This proposal would extend that right for a divided vote on all matters which might be advanced.'

Roaden said any vote by a segment of the Division members could be rescinded by a majority of the division or by the entire NCAA con-

Chimp Won't Be In Show

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP) - A man whose 135-pound, 4-foot chimpanzee attacked a motorcyclist says he wants to stage a fund-raiser for the chimp's victim.

But Bongo, the chimp who attacked 49-year-old ironworker Gary Morrison of Roseville on Thursday, won't be in the show.

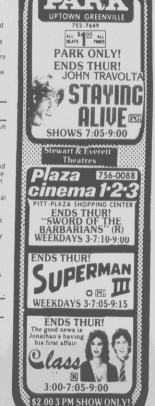

"He's in jail," said owner Jimmy Estep on Monday. The performing chimp, who rides a bike, roller skates and walks on stilts, was quarantined for 21 days after the attack.

"I've got a lot of friends who would help" put on a show for Morrison, said Estep, who lives in Zanesville and Tampa, Fla.

But Morrison said Monday he's not sure he wants a benefit. Insurance should cover his medical bills, he Morrison was riding south of Zanesville when the attack occurred.

"The chimpanzee had wandered into the highway.' said Rick Rose, a deputy with the Muskingum County Sheriff's Department

FUNKY WINKERBEAN

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1983

YOUR DAILY from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's oncoming full Moon finds you in the midst of winding up some conditions that have been confusing to you, so do them in a thorough and thoughtful manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get those duties ahead of you handled well, then confer with an expert about the future, find out where you are headed.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what you desire the most and make plans to gain your aims, but be sure to confide in your loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what it is that bigwigs expect of you, as well as kin, and try to please them all.

Then handle a civic task. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You get ideas that should be whittled down to the practical level and put in motion quickly LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handling business matters well is important now, and you can also get other persons in business to be of assistance to you. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Listen to the ideas of partners as well as express your own and reach a fine accord so that greater success is possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your environment more charming and and add modern mechanisms. Then you can get your work done more easily. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can combine business with pleasure now and get good results. You are able to express your finest talents.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do whatever you can to relieve tensions at home and establish more harmony there. Do not invite guests in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make out the reports that are necessary and be most precise. Then later you can visit others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Deb. 19) Good day to take care of your accounting and make sure you know just how you stand. Consult your accountant. PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good day to think of yourself and your own needs and how to best gain them and how to trend the future. IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who will be capable of getting old-time business working on a more modern level and ideas whittled down to a practical level. This is a secretive nature.

Opening lead: Six of 4 A strong Canadian team won the Epson Invitational Team Championship held recently in Japan. As usual, their effort was spearheaded by Sammy Kehela, one of the world's superstars.

Kehela and his partner reached three no trump after a standard auction. North judged that his good fivecard spade suit made his hand too strong for a one no trump opening bid. The same contract was reached in the other room of the Canada-England match, and a club was led in both rooms.

The British declarer went down quickly. He decided to bank on a 4-4 club division, so he led a diamond at trick two. The defenders quickly reeled off four club tricks in addition to the ace of diamonds.

Kehela decided to run his five spade tricks first. He discarded a heart and three diamonds from his own hand. West let go of three diamonds. (He might have done better to discard a heart, then the four and ten of diamonds in the hope that declarer would misread the Declarer next cashed the ace of hearts, then, after much thought, he exited with a club. West was end played. He could take his four club tricks, but then he was forced to yield the fulfilling trick by leading away from the queen of hearts into declarer's combined ace-jack tenace.

A pretty play. But over the years we have come to expect that sort of thing from Kehela.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259. Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable Newspaperbooks.

Beat The Money Market Mutual Funds; Make More Money In The Stock Market.

Now you can put together a powerful combination with two NCNB services.

First, our Money Market Account rates have been consistently beating Donoghue's average of some 226 money market mutual funds. Which means you'll probably make more money with us.

Second, our Brokerage Service can trim 40%,50%, or even more off commissions when you make your own decisions on trading stocks and bonds. Which means you'll have more to invest.

Finally, when you use our Money Market Account to settle your stock transactions, you can earn high rates while you're considering your next move in the stock market.

So come see us. Get more muscle in your money. Right in your neighborhood.
