Twenty-Six Were Injured In Salisbury Explosions

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Workers mixing chemicals may have set off four sulfuric acid explosions that injured 26 people, destroyed part of their factory and chased about 75 families from their homes, fire officials said.

But a company spokesman said it was too early to tell what caused Wednesday's blasts and fire at Proctor Chemical Co. in downtown Salisbury, 22 miles north of Charlotte.

Witness said one big explosion and three smaller ones blew off a section of the roof and ignited flames that shot 200 feet in the air.

Half a dozen plant workers escaped from a small building flattened by the blast, said Henry Barry, a spokesman for the company which is a division of National Starch and Chemical Co. and makes chemicals for the textile industry.

The company initially said five people were killed, but no bodies were found and authorities concluded none of the 60 employees had died. Firefighters had controlled the late-morning fire by early afternoon but continued pouring foam on the rubble.

State and local officials planned to continue their investigation today, said Tom Lowman, assistant fire chief.

"When we have daylight on our side, we'll be able to learn more," said Lowman early this morning. "We have the area secured and there seems to be no danger of further explosions. Everything seems to be under control."

Four workers were treated at Rowan Memorial Hospital for burns or cuts, while at least 21 firefighters and one police officer were treated for burns, smoke inhalation or chemical irritations, said Mary Davis, hospital patient representative.

Salisbury Fire Chief Fred Shipton said Wednesday he believed employees mixing chemicals had caused the explosion.

But Bill Powell, the company's vice president for domestic manufacturing, said the only certainty so far is "that part of our plant was totally destroyed."

Powell, who flew in from the company's New Jersey headquarters, said a one-story, 50-by-100-foot brick building was demolished. Hundreds of barrels of chemicals had lined the walls, he said.

Russ Edmonston of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said there appeared to have been no

PCMH Vice President For Nursing Suspended

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Mrs. Betty Trought, vice president for nursing at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was suspended from her post Wednesday afternoon. She has headed nursing services at the medical facility for the past four years.

"I'm not sure I understand what happened yesterday," Mrs. Trought said this morning.

"I was called in at 10 (a.m.) and told a decision had been made about the vice president for nursing position and asked for my resignation. I couldn't understand why that was happening," and "asked for some time," and was "given two hours to make a decision," she said.

At a noon meeting, Mrs. Trought said she "refused to give my resignation and was suspended" by PCMH President Jack Richardson.

She said the meetings involved herself, Richardson and Fred Brown, senior vice president at PCMH.

Testimony in the Dwight Parker murder trial began once again this morning after being bogged down for more than a day and a half as lawyers argued on the admissibility of evidence and statements made by Parker after his arrest in New Jersey in February.

Parker is charged with murder in connection with the mid-February deaths of the Rev. Leslie Thorbs, 31, of Grifton and Anthony Ray Herring, 27, of Goldsboro.

Late Wednesday afternoon, presiding Judge David E. Reid cleared the way for the jury to return today and begin hearing evidence as he ruled that the statements of Parker's involvement in the killings were freely and voluntarily made without threat or reward.

As testimony resumed this morning, former Pitt Deputy Sheriff Lee Pascasio read statements made by Parker in which he confessed to the killings.

Copies, one eight pages long and the other a one-paragraph statement, were given to members of the jury.

Tuesday, the jury was removed from the courtroom twice during the morning session while admissibility of testimony and evidence was considered. Jury members returned after the noon recess only to be dismissed for the remainder of the day.

Once again, Wednesday morning, the jury was dismissed due to the length of time needed to continue the hearings.

During the nearly two days of arguments without the jury, former Pitt Deputy Jackie Moye and Pascasio repeatedly stressed that the two signed confessions made by Parker were made without any threats or offers of rewards and that at no time was Parker abused.

In earlier testimony, and again during the hearings Tuesday and Wednesday, Essex County (N.J.) Sheriff's Investigator Santos Madica, told the court that he struck Parker during the arrest as Parker made a move towards a coat about three or four feet away. An eight inch fixed blade knife was later found in a pocket of the coat. Wednesday, Vernon Clash, a New Jersey attorney, testified that the Parker situation was "unusual" and he

Rescheduling Announced By Sunbird Airlines

Sunbird Airlines Tuesday afternoon announced the rescheduling of its Greenville flights, effective Oct. 1, to take advantage of a joint venture with New York Air designed to enhance service at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Hugh Bingham, executive vice president of Sunbird, said the "retiming of service" will allow Greenville area travelers to fly Sunbird to Raleigh-Durham Airport and connect with New York Air flights to cities in the Northeast, such as Washington, D.C., New York, Newark, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

Bingham and Jan Bennett, Sunbird's director of sales, said the joint fare from Greenville would be the same as passengers driving to Raleigh-Durham and taking New York Air flights there would pay. And Ms. Bennett noted that Pitt-Greenville has "free parking."

"In fact," Ms. Bennett said, the joint Sunbird-New York Air fares "are competitive with anything in the area."

Bingham said the new scheduling "will allow business travelers to conduct their business and return" to Greenville on the same day.

John Reggio, New York Air staff vice president of marketing, described "the partnership between New York Air and Sunbird" as a "natural step for better serving both airlines' destinations."

Reggio said the Sunbird-New York Air venture at Pitt-Greenville should "provide a very very beneficial service to the community and to the individual passenger."

Reggio also said Sunbird passengers will be able to enjoy New York Air's Apple Club at Raleigh-Durham, which features a "relaxed setting for passengers in transit."

Bingham and Reggio said another bonus for Sunbird passengers connecting to New York Air flights will be the receipt of 500 miles toward TravelBank — New York Air's Frequent Flyer program. Operated in conjunction with Continental Airlines, the Frequent Flyer program offers passengers an opportunity to earn free flights to various locations, including Fiji and Australia.

For example, Reggio said Sunbird passengers would receive 500 miles credit for the trip to Raleigh, and another 1,000 miles credit for the New York Air flight to their final destination. He noted that the free flight would be available when a passenger accumulates 10,000 miles credit.

Bingham said a program started by Sunbird on Sept. 12 — the Valued Passenger program — allows Sunbird passengers to earn credit toward free Sunbird flights. Passengers, he said, receive one credit for each flight coupon purchased. Twelve flight credits entitles passengers to one free roundtrip ticket anywhere on Sunbird's route system.

Based in Denver, N.C., Sunbird began operations in November 1979, serving four cities with 13 flights daily. The airline started serving Pitt-Greenville Airport with commuter service in August 1980.

It now serves eight cities in North Carolina, two in South

A Water Pistol Is His Alarm Clock

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter signed "Mornings Are Murder" from the wife who couldn't drag her husband out of bed, I had to let you know how I solved the same problem.

For months my husband would go back to sleep after I had awakened him, then he'd get mad at me because I didn't get him up again in time for work. So here's what I did: I shot him — right between the eyes! No, not with a real gun — they make too much noise; besides, it would get my bedspread all bloody. I used a water pistol, confiscated from my young son.

Just one squirt usually did the trick. Sometimes he would cover his head with a pillow, but since he sleeps in the nude, finding another target area was no problem. He never gets angry about being shot — he just wakes up laughing. Perhaps you could pass this along.

My name is Edna, but sign me...
PISTOL PACKIN' MAMA, GRETNA, LA.

DEAR ABBY: This is the second marriage for both of us, and I haven't the courage to face my family and friends and admit that it was a mistake. I feel like I'm just a cook, housekeeper and sex partner whenever my husband is in the mood. I am starved for some real affection. All he wants is a five-minute sex affair with no hugging, kissing or sweet words. When we first met he was very passionate, and insisted on going all the way on our second date. I should have known he wasn't a real lover — that all he wanted was sex.

I am 74 and he is 80, and we've been married for five years. I had been a widow for three years, and he had recently lost his wife before he gave me the grand rush.

I don't need his money and he doesn't need mine — our lawyers drew up a prenuptial agreement. We appear to be an ideal couple. If we were to divorce, our children would be shocked and our pastor would be surprised. Don't recommend a marriage counselor, Abby. This man would never listen to anybody. I just know that I would be so much happier if I didn't have to keep putting on a front. What should I do?

MADE A MISTAKE

DEAR MADE: "All the world's a stage," and this is no dress rehearsal, so don't worry about what your friends, family or pastor will say. Tell your husband where he has disappointed you. If he wants a chance to win you by changing his ways, give him a limited probation period. And if he doesn't shape up — ship him out. Life is too short.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to correct "Old Retired Banker From Dallas," who objected to the phrase "safety deposit box" on the grounds that nouns don't modify nouns. In countless phrases such as "alarm clock," "mountain goat," "baseball bat" and "weather report," nouns do act as modifiers. Imagine saying "alarming clock," "mountainous goat," "baseballish bat" or "weathery report."

If our retired banker insists on saying "safe deposit box," let him also shave with a "safe razor," fasten diapers with "safe pins" and wear a "safe belt" aboard an airliner.

Furthermore, if "safety" cannot modify "deposit," how can "deposit" (also a noun) modify "box"? Should we call it a "safe depositing box"? He may if he chooses, but he will not be speaking English.

LAURENCE SHATKIN, PRINCETON, N.J.

DEAR LAURENCE: Hooray for our side! As Waldo Cohen from Oak Ridge, Tenn., pointed out: "The English language is replete with nouns serving as adjectives. Is not 'Old Retired Banker' a letter writer, and are you not a newspaper columnist?"

SENIOR SPECIALS

NEW YORK (AP) — Reduced air fares and special travel package deals are bringing remote parts of the world within reach of 23 million Americans.

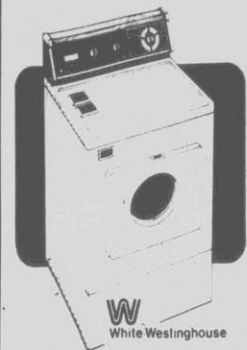

Senior citizen discounts are now available for in-country travel throughout Europe. These discounts go into effect for travelers ranging in age from 60 to 67 and older. In many cases they provide substantial savings of as much as 35 percent to 50 percent.

According to a new book, "Europe '83," by Steve Birnbaum, Switzerland provides the most benefits for the older traveler — with half-fare transportation on rail, motorcoaches and lake steamers and reduced rates at hundreds of hotels.

The teddy bear is believed to have been inspired by President Theodore (Teddy) Roosevelt, who once refused to shoot a young brown bear.

Downtown

"I was shopping downtown at Brody's just the other day, and saw lots of fashion clothes I really love at TERRIFIC Prices!"

"Tell us all about it! You know how we love to shop!"

Well, ladies, if you are looking for style & fashion, Brody's Downtown is the place to go! Anne Klein II is in Greenville and is what everyone is talking about! It is a new line, and Brody's Downtown is one of only 200 stores in the country that has it! It must be one of the most exciting groups I've seen! Now we can be dressed in the smartest fashions designed by one of the world's most famous designers: Anne Klein, an opportunity to really take advantage of!

A dress is always a good investment, and there seems to be much emphasis on career dresses today. I bought a very good-looking dress by Leslie Fay, but the decision was hard to make with other dresses by R & K, Henry Lee, Executive Dress, Patty O'Neil, Etc. It's fun just to browse through the new dresses that are arriving daily downtown and to take your time to try them on. The sales people can be so helpful in helping to pick the right one for you!

Don't forget about the suit, girls! We are finally moving into the man's world of business and success and the look of a well-tailored suit cannot be matched! The selection at Brody's is fantastic, with styles to fit into everyone's lifestyle and budget. If it's a little fashion you want, this Suits Galore is the one, with sizes up to 18! The basic looks of Kirkland Hall and Mort Schrader are for everyone! You can look professional as well as feminine in a suit from Brody's Downtown.

It's time to pick a fall coat, and there is no other place to go! The selection at Brody's has always been good, but this year, it's at its best! I've never seen such styling and designs! The one I picked is a full-length wool by Al in red and black, one of the fall's smartest color combination. (I want to mention that my choice is the country's most popular coat this year. You should see it! It also comes in beige & cocoa, grey and black.) The down and poly-filled coats in short and long lengths are going to be easy to wear and the colors are so good-looking! Mauve, plum, red, silver, etc. I also saw some high fashioned coats that are simply gorgeous!

A last bit of advice, ladies... don't forget about textured and colored hosiery for fall. Hane's Coloralls and Oleg Cassini Thoroughbreds are the perfect finishing touch for the "finished look" you've read so much about. A very smart, pulled together look is yours for fall! The sales clerks at downtown Brody's are the most helpful and can put you into the outfit you need. It's always a pleasure to shop in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere. See you at Downtown Brody's!

Couple Weds In Recent Ceremony

Gloristeen Hooks and William Thomas Wilkes were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony Sept. 9 at 6 p.m. The ceremony was held on the front lawn of the home of Mrs. Annie L. Langley. The Rev. David Godley officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Roger Hooks of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Novella Peterson and John W. Wilkes Sr. of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a street length white dress that featured a pleated front overlay with long sleeves. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath tied with white and yellow streamers.

Pamela Randolph of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, was the honor attendant. Ocalas Randolph of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Langley and Shirley M. Williams of Greenville.

A reception was held at Green Springs Park. After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will live in Greenville.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

When I entertain, I do it with all the charm of a charging rhino.

I do not have time for superfluous conversation like "hello" and "good-bye." The only time I mingle with my guests is when one wanders into the kitchen looking for the bathroom. And my dinner partner remembers me as a blur.

I honestly don't know how other women do it. I do everything they do. Set the table the day before. Chop all morning. Have the dessert in the freezer. The coffee pot ready to plug in. The main casserole draped in foil. The moment the doorbell rings announcing the arrival of the first couple, I panic.

A friend once told me the first recollection she had of meeting me was when she and her husband were invited to our house for dinner. The door swung open and as she extended her hand to me, I turned to my husband and said, "Check the hall bath. Make sure the boys flushed!"

The problem is I am reluctant to let people see how we really live. It's not easy being a phony. I want them to think that we always have fresh flowers from the florist on the dining room table. One afternoon, I picked a bouquet from the yard that made a breathtaking centerpiece. By the time the guests sat down to dinner the blossoms had tightened up into little knobs that looked like bait.

"What kind of flowers are they?" asked one of the guests.

"They're African daisies," I said.

"However, in Africa, they eat before the sun goes down."

I want them to think we always serve soup from a tureen even though the price tag glows like it had a light over it.

I want them to think I always cook in something long and flowing even if it has a tomato seed lodged in the cleavage and a hot mitt tucked in the belt.

I know a lot of women who are as insecure as I am about entertaining. We're the women who put off having a few friends in until we get the sofa covered, the kids are married, the kitchen has new wallpaper, the toilet stops running, the big tree in the front yard blooms, oysters are in season, the annual reports are out at the office, we get our tax refund, we've seen the last of the roaches, or we get 12 iced tea glasses that match.

My husband said the other day, "When are we going to have some people in for dinner?"

"I'm working on a big party with a theme and the timing has to be right," I said.

"What's the occasion?" he asked.

"Halley's Comet in May 1986."

WILLIAM C. WOOD, SPECIALIST PEWTER DESIGNER FOR ONEIDA, LTD. SILVERSMITHS, WILL BE DEMONSTRATING PEWTER SPINNING AT BELK TYLER, GREENVILLE ON

and
Saturday September 24 From 10:00 AM until 2:00 PM
and

Pewter spinning is an art that was developed with the introduction of 'Britannia Metal' around the year 1825. Prior to this time, all pewter was cast of an alloy that contained varying degrees of lead. 'Britannia Metal', a harder, lead-free alloy amenable to spinning, made it possible to produce lighter, completely safe pewter goods in a greater variety of shapes.

In the spinning process, the craftsman places a pewter disc on the lathe and carefully shapes it with special forming tools. Great skill is required to transform the shapeless pewter disc into graceful, useful household objects. Spun pewter goods made it possible for many more people to enjoy the rich, warm look of this metal. Although the use of pewter declined after 1850 with the introduction of inexpensive chinaware, the remarkable intrinsic beauty of pewter assured its recent resurgence in popularity.

Today, Oneida Ltd. manufactures an outstanding collection of pewter inspired by the classic, uncluttered lines of the works of the 18th century master craftsmen of the Hudson Valley area. Each piece bears the Hudson Valley touchmark, a symbol of pride in craftsmanship and design. A former mechanical engineer with Oneida Silversmiths, Mr. Wood is now combining his skills in mechanics with his talent in sculpturing as an apprentice in the pewter design program.

Evidence Being Seen

Gradually some evidence of the construction of the new U.S. 264 freeway from Greenville to Wilson is being seen.

Contracts for the first portion of the work, including the new bypass of Farmville, have been let. The new highway will be dual laned and from Greenville to Farmville it will follow a straighter route than that of the present U.S. 264 which runs by way of Ballards Cross Roads.

The development of the highway is exciting to those of us who make trips to Raleigh and west ... and that is most of us at one time or another. It is also exciting to leaders who are concerned with industrial and business development. It is well known that adequate highways are essential to attracting new industries.

Travelers from Farmville, Greenville and points east are already aware of what the new highway can mean since a freeway has already been constructed from Wilson to a point east of Raleigh. The contrast between that section and the old U.S. 264 east of Wilson is most evident.

We trust additional sections of the freeway from Wilson to Greenville will be put out for bids without delay and in an acceptable time the freeway will be in full use. The completion date will be a great day for eastern North Carolina.

Improvement Needed

The state of education in the nation and North Carolina in particular is constantly being debated.

The National Commission on Excellence in Education warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity."

A spokesman for Gov. Hunt's office, however, said North Carolina's public education is among the best. "We're way ahead of most other states," Mrs. Betty Owen, a Hunt education advisor, said.

She acknowledged, however, that the public education system could be better. That is the key. Certainly there are many areas where improvement can be made in the education of our young people and we must strive for superior schools.

Political Cowboys

WASHINGTON — A political ritual of no small significance is scheduled to take place this weekend in nearby Landover, Md.: The president, his Cabinet and much of official Washington will attend a rodeo.

On Saturday afternoon, courtesy of the Pro-Rodeo Cowboy Association, the president and friends will witness a special exhibition of bull-riding, steer-wrestling and barrel-racing not often seen in these parts. For kicks, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, a Pro-Rodeo Cowboy himself, will even mount up for a special team-roping event.

While a few hours of rough-and-ready recreation may seem an innocent diversion, it brings to mind an important lesson for students of political culture: One can't go too far in electoral politics without a bit of that 'ol cowboy spirit.

This theory rests not on our most recent president's habit of donning tooled boots and a crusty denim jacket. Instead, it derives from a hunch that, more than a century after the cowboy's passing, the cowboy myth all but defines our notion of leadership.

Time was when cowboys held a place in society only slightly higher than that accorded to blacks and women. First sighted in South Texas around 1860, cowpunchers herded cattle north to railheads in Kansas for about $1 a day. They never carried guns, and rarely owned horses. They performed monotonous tasks on the trail and usually worked as dishwashers or bartenders in the off-seasons. Nearly half of all cowboys were black or Mexican; many had to retire prematurely because of malnutrition-related illnesses.

These disillusioning truths are the discoveries of two Library of Congress historians, Lonny Taylor and Ingrid Maar. Authors of a new book, "The American Cowboy," Taylor and Maar say that cowboys were really just pawns in a latter-day multinational game of beef and profit. Hired to rustle other firms' cattle, many were abandoned upon arrest.

How then, did a distinctly questionable character become a national hero of epic proportion? Maar and Taylor say that urbanization, industrialization and immigration of the late 19th century led many Americans to yearn for a simpler America (sound familiar?). Not surprisingly, plenty of myth-makers were happy to oblige.

Owen Wister of Philadelphia was a big help. His 1902 book "The Virginian" was an immediate hit and eventually transposed for stage, screen and television. The book's nameless hero was "a slim, young giant, more beautiful than pictures," whose sense of honor and many daring feats in the name of God, country and Woman were unsurpassed.

Buffalo Bill Cody (and proprietors of some 50 other imitation wild West shows) transformed the cowboy from laborer to entertainer and gave way to such cool hands as Tom Mix and Will Rogers. (Later, Hollywood would come of age via this simple formula, as would Ronald Reagan in such films as "The Santa Fe Trail.") Dime novels and illustrated magazines further chronicled the cowboy's lifestyle and gave young Americans something to dream about. Wrote Larry Chittenden, "the prairie poet":

He is loyal as steel, but demands a square deal

And he hates and despises a coward

Yet the cowboy you'll find unto woman is kind

Though he'll fight till by death overpowered.

It was only a matter of time before politicians cashed in on the cowboy's political currency. Despite his swank Long Island roots, Theodore Roosevelt positioned himself as an outdoorsman's politician, and regularly ventured west for trail rides and hunting trips. He organized the cowboy cavalry, known as the Rough Riders, and was later called the Cowboy President. In less than 40 years the cowboy had completed the journey from rowdy to national leader.

The image has plagued us ever since. Calvin Coolidge filled his closet with Western-style duds; Eisenhower and LBJ each preferred his farm or ranch to the White House. Even German-born Henry Kissinger has said that he regards himself as "a cowboy ... alone astride his horse," who packs a gun but doesn't like to use it. And everybody knows that John Glenn is a space cowboy.

Perhaps that's why Saturday's pilgrimage to the rodeo strikes us as a matter of political necessity. If voters believe that anyone who wears jeans deserves Wrangler's label of "one tough customer," we may be seeing a lot more denim before the long campaign is finished.

Writing Poetry Is No Easy Task

A letter came the other day, bearing the signature of a woman. I inferred from the handwriting that she probably is a very young woman. She wanted my opinion — she emphasized that she wanted my "honest" opinion — of her poetry, and she enclosed several samples for inspection. This was a stanza from "Missing You".

"You're my friend/one of the best/You're nice and kind/and better than the rest."

The other samples were perhaps not so artistically composed. My honest opinion is that (1) by no stretch of the imagination could these lines be termed "poetry"; (2) these quatrains are at best verse; and (3) even as verse, they are dreadful. Yet I applaud the young woman's spunk in trying her hand at a rhymed and metrical composition. At her tender age — 12 or 13, maybe? — she has hit upon one of the best of all disciplines for a writer.

I have told this tale before, but tell it again. Some years ago I was invited to lecture at a Southern school of journalism. I invited the students of editorial writing to send me a sample editorial, and also to write a sonnet on the love affair of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. Only five students, as I recall, took up the challenge to write a sonnet; the others begged off. Four of the efforts were awful, but the fifth was a little jewel. It was the work of a young woman who had her rhyme scheme right and her iambic feet all in step. I made a silent guess that her accompanying editorial would reflect her talent, and so it turned out. Her editorial was a crackerjack.

Even the writing of doggerel teaches us a few tricks of compression and some uses of cadence. Young writers will grow up to be good writers — or at least better writers than they otherwise might have been — if they will try their hand at quatrains in the fashion of Housman, or narrative verse in the fashion of Service, or sonnets or limericks or rondeaux, or anything that has a defined structure of rhyme and meter. Try blank verse if you must, but free verse, no. It was Robert Frost who said that writing free verse is like playing tennis without a net.

I have written some dreadful verse myself, and turned out some marshmallow sonnets of a terrible gooniness, but I know my early essays into prosody have helped my later essays in prose. My young friend in Ohio has a long way to go, but she gets an A for Effort.

Dark days at The Miami Herald: On Sept. 5, this cheerful headline: "Those Drawing a Paycheck on Labor Day are Greatful." On Aug. 31, over a story about the tearing down of a building in Lake Worth: "Lake Worth Orders One Building Be Kais-ed." Well, we all have our bad daze.

Verb of the week, invented by William F. Buckley Jr. — to anachronize. He had written a column about the downed Korean airliner on Sept. 2 for release Sept. 8. "It is possible," he reminded his editors, "that events over the weekend ... would anachronize it." I can't find "anachronize" in any dictionary, but as hostile as I am to most of these "ize" formations, this one seems useful.

Blunder of the week, from Nicholas Ruwe, chief of staff to former President Nixon. He sent a Mailgram to those who had received advance copies of Nixon's new book, "Real Peace," saying that by error "the copywrite notice" was inadvertently omitted. "Please be advised," he said, "that the work is a copywrited work and as such is protected under the copywrite laws of the United States." Copyright on!

Guidelines Eliminate Most Areas

RALEIGH — Reid Meredith thought he had a pretty good idea. Through the Scottthurst Foundation and the Association of Retarded Citizens (ARC), he wanted to build a group home for five mentally retarded adults a few miles outside of Thomasville in Davidson County.

The house wouldn't have been placed in an established neighborhood and, in that respect, Meredith saw an advantage for his home. In many communities, such homes are not welcome. Neighbors complain that they will be physically and financially endangered. Here, Meredith felt he was far enough away from other area residents that they wouldn't mind. Some had said as much.

Also, putting a home for the mentally retarded in a rural area makes sense when the people who'll be living in that home are from rural areas. There'd be plenty of room to take walks and plant a garden.

The federal government didn't like Meredith's idea and in the process they shocked state officials with some blatant prejudices against the establishment of such homes in any rural area. In a predominantly rural state, the federal guidelines essentially eliminate most of North Carolina from a program for building group homes for the mentally retarded.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development finances construction of intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded. Meredith sought such a loan to build its group home but was turned down by HUD's Greensboro office.

Dan McCandless, HUD's chief for multi-family housing, says Meredith's project was rejected because it was not only rural, it was remote. He and Meredith could probably get into a long argument over whether the land and road to it were suitable for such a project. But even if the topography of Meredith's site was perfect, it would have been rejected because it was rural.

McCandless wrote to Meredith saying HUD wouldn't place such a home "too far from the necessities and conveniences of life." He said HUD doesn't finance projects where there are neither sewer lines nor municipal water. In an interview, he said the idea behind the homes is to place the mentally retarded in communities "and let them work in that community." He said that from a financial standpoint, HUD doesn't like septic tanks and wells because they can lead to unexpected expenses and it doesn't like houses in really remote areas because they are difficult to resell in case

Numbers Don't Add Up Sometimes

NEW YORK (AP) — What do you do when two and two equals three, or seven or even 11, except contemplate the mystery — and maybe wait for a revision?

In this day of instant, computer-derived numbers, it seems a lot of statistics don't add up, which isn't at all the way it's supposed to be in a world already sufficiently confusing.

You may recall that when big computers were first employed to track the billions of pieces of data that government uses to build a picture of the economy, it was thought that numbers were hard things that wouldn't bend.

Maybe they don't, but something happens to them that can't always be explained easily, and the consequences add up to more than a mere entertaining riddle. Decisions, big fast ones, are made on the basis of numbers.

There are some obvious explanations. Early reports of retail sales, for example, are subject to revision because of additional data. And data on jobs are subject to seasonal adjustments by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Such things are well understood, however.

Those who follow retail sales know that one month's rise may occur only because the rate for the previous month was simultaneously revised lower.

And those who follow job statistics know that the number of people actually employed can fall, while the seasonally adjusted jobless rate also falls. That is, they know the job picture can weaken while the statistic strengthens.

Rather than dwell upon these eccentricities, which are well understood by professionals, just remember what statistician Albert Sindinger likes to say: that seasonally adjusted, Lake Erie never freezes over.

But what do you do, other than scratch your head, when you are presented with these statistics, as you were during the past month?

—An 8.4 percent rise in August housing starts to the highest level in nearly five years, despite a simultaneous rise in mortgage rates that almost everyone had concluded would bring homebuilding to its knees.

—A sharp increase in the amount of automobile credit outstanding in August at the same time that auto sales declined.

The ubiquitous and often anonymous "analysts," who seem to be quoted all the time these days, are dodging interviews as they seek to determine what to make of these apparently conflicting bits of information.

There is, however, a type of statistics watcher who is accustomed to conflicts and mysteries and who, nevertheless, remains on the battle front. He is the Fed Watcher, the person who each week awaits the Federal Reserve report on the nation's money supply, hoping to find in the numbers some guidance to the economy's direction over the weeks to follow.

That he receives conflicting reports never seems to daunt him, nor does it discourage the millions of people who avidly follow the reports on whether M1 and other symbols of money in circulation have risen or fallen.

It's all done in an attempt to understand — to create order where no order can otherwise be discerned. But when you consider that sometimes the numerical symbols might be wrong, and that some of them will be revised or adjusted, and that some of them also are derived from subjective assumptions, you are entitled to wonder.

To wonder, for example, if the numbers really clarify, or if, perhaps, they might not add to the confusion.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Good music, regardless of type, played by a good band is worth listening to, especially if it's our National Anthem, performed by the incomparable East Carolina University Marching Band.

Therefore, I am puzzled when people continue walking, talking, yelling, laughing and just plain raising sand at ball games, when the best band I've ever heard, plays the best rendition of a song that belongs to all of us.

Strength For Today

The poet, Irene Carlisle, has written:

"Somehow an old road never quite goes back to wilderness or woods or meadow grass."

When once men made a highway through a forest or wilderness, that highway will forever be discernible. It was a mystery for generations how the ancient Druids erected their temple of hugh stones in Britain called Stonehedge. But when airplanes came into existence, the tracks over which these ancient worshippers had dragged the huge rocks were clearly visible from the air.

You and I were put into the world to blaze new highways. They may not be wide, four-lane roads; maybe only narrow little paths. But they will be ours. Perhaps as far as we personally are concerned, the most important roads we make are those which take the form of our habits — good and bad. First a little pathway, then a well-marked road. And, in this connection, "Somehow an old road never quite goes back."

Testimony...

was asked to represent Parker at an extradition hearing three days after Parker's arrest.

Clash said he was told that Parker claimed to have been beaten when taken into custody and he was "terrified to death."

"I told him (Parker) I would do what I could to protect him from further assaults."

Later Wednesday, Parker took the stand and said both Moye and Pascasio kicked and punched him and both pointed their weapons at him and threatened to blow his brains out. He said that at times, they threatened to hang him, throw him out the window, place his hand in a toaster oven, and connect him to an electric socket to simulate a heart attack.

Parker said it was because of the abuse and threats that he had written the two confessions, which he said were dictated by officers.

Marie Watts, a nurse at the Essex County Jail, said Parker mentioned nothing about being beaten or needing medical attention when given a medical check.

George McGrath, an investigator with the Essex County prosecutor's office said Parker told him the statements were "beaten from him," but he said later investigation made by Essex officers found no basis to the allegations.

Parker testified that he did not tell the nurse he was beaten because he didn't know he had any injuries as he had not looked into a mirror.

The motive for the slayings, according to confession statements read at the hearing, was Thorbs' 1980 Cadillac and money. But only $35 in cash and a diamond ring were taken from the bodies of the two men.

In his statement, Parker said "we thought he (Thorbs) would have as much as $150."

Statements read to the court during the absence of the jury said that co-defendant Carolyn Pippins, 20, of Route 4, Greenville, knew of the planned slaying of Thorbs at his Griston home and that she drove Parker there.

The plan had been, according to the confession, to kill and rob Thorbs and burn his home. But the presence of Herring there prompted Parker to have the two drive him to a point near Ms. Pippins home near the Pitt-Greenville Airport, where he shot both men, the Parker statement said.

Later, according to the confession, Parker got Ms. Pippins to help dispose of the bodies by throwing them into the Tar River.

Ms. Pippins is charged with two counts of murder and one count of armed robbery in connection with the case.

Sheriff's officers began a search for Thorbs and Herring after information from Ms. Pippins said the two men had been murdered and their bodies dumped into the river.

No Settlement For Symphony

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Negotiators for the North Carolina Symphony and its musicians failed to reach a settlement on a new contract Wednesday.

Symphony Director Thomas H. McGuire and musician representative Patricia W. Banko declined to comment on the issues still separating the two sides after seven months of bargaining.

The negotiations have led to the cancellation of several performances throughout the state, including two this week.

No more talks are scheduled this week, but negotiators said informal discussions could be held. They said they are still optimistic a settlement can be reached.

'Threw A Fit' Over Computer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Richard Rambeaut, 26, of Johnston County has been charged with damage to public property after punching a computer terminal at the Wake County Courthouse.

"We do have people who get irritated with the computers," said Barbara H. Mobley, assistant to the Clerk of Superior Court. "But this is the first time we ever had somebody throw a fit like that."

Suspended.....

"but I believe I was told the suspension was for 30 days." She said there was no discussion about what her duties would be when she returned to work at the end of the suspension.

Mrs. Trought said she did not know if the action was based on the discord voiced in the community for the past several weeks over changes in the utilization of nursing personnel at the hospital.

Saying she was not provided with specifics, Mrs. Trought said Richardson told her the action was based on her (lack of) "credibility with the medical staff, the board of trustees and other groups."

She noted that if the suspension was "based around the changes (in staffing patterns)," they were changes "I perceived he (Richardson)" approved of and "recommended me to make."

Mrs. Trought said she attended the hospital board meeting Tuesday night as usual, but "I was asked to leave the board meeting" when they went into executive session to discuss "a personnel problem."

She said that later, Brown told her that the situation had been discussed by the board, but the "board made no decision."

Mrs. Trought said "It's unclear to me what my rights are within the situation. We have very strong grievance procedures for employees, which I've always supported." But she said it is less clear "when you get to the administrative level."

For that reason, Mrs. Trought said, she has hired a Chapel Hill attorney to represent her.

Harry Leslie, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees confirmed this morning that questions concerning Mrs. Trought were discussed by the board Tuesday night, but said no action was taken. He declined to say what the discussions involved.

Marcos Is Threatening Martial Law's Return

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos today raised the threat of reimposing martial law and ordered his troops to shoot if necessary to counter anti-government rioting that left 11 dead and 200 wounded.

But he said he was not thinking of reimposing martial law "right now."

The street violence Wednesday — exactly one month after the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino — was the bloodiest in Marcos' 18-year rule.

"I warn the opposition — do not force my hand, do not compel me to extremes that you already know of," Marcos said in a nationally televised address today. The "extremes" were an apparent reference to the imposition of martial law in 1972.

Although Marcos lifted martial law in 1980, strict controls remain.

He said an order he had given to the military to observe "maximum tolerance" with demonstrators, including banning anti-riot troops from carrying guns, was being reversed.

"Henceforth, we will be firm," Marcos said. "... now that the opposition radicals and activists have destroyed, maimed, killed, I am now in the process of consulting with the military establishment regarding this policy. We may have to return the arms of our military personnel and I'm ordering them to defend themselves with these guns."

In a followup TV interview with CBS-News, Marcos was asked if he would try to reimpose martial law. "No, I'm not thinking of that right now," he answered. "What I'm thinking of is the radicals have attempted to exploit and manipulate the peaceful rallies, here in Manila. There are no rallies, demonstrations of any incidents anywhere else."

Asked what might cause him to reimpose martial law, Marcos said, "A rebellion, which I don't see at all. We have only a few hardcore radicals trying to convert a peaceful rally into some kind of violent demonstration. I don't see reason for imposing martial law."

It was the slaying of Aquino Aug. 21 as he returned from three years of self-imposed U.S. exile that spurred the series of anti-government demonstrations in Manila and other Filipino cities.

Aquino's widow, Corazon, who led the main rally

Wednesday in an "oath to freedom, independence and democracy," decried the violence.

"I sincerely hope no more of these tragic occurrences will take place," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Manila Archbishop Jaime L. Sin criticized the Marcos government for what he said are its Nazi-like practices and also faulted demonstrators for resorting to violence.

"As though by magic, all the peaceful intentions of the demonstrators disappeared ...," Sin said in an address today at a local civic club.

Sin, the nation's only Roman Catholic cardinal, referred without elaboration to government "adherence to practices that bring back memories of Mr. Goebbels of Nazi Germany" and said it must share the blame.

Marcos, meanwhile, in his television appearance here, said, "I might at this time announce that the government holds the opposition and its leaders responsible for the unfortunate incidents last night and early this morning."

He then banned civilians from carrying guns outside their homes and said those caught defying the order would be prosecuted.

Marcos said 59 of the injured were government anti-riot personnel and included Brig. Gen. Tomas Dumputit. Marcos said Dumputit was in critical condition after being hit by shrapnel from a grenade.

About 1,000 demonstrators marched to the presidential palace Wednesday after the main rally by an estimated 500,000 people at the post office. Police withdrew behind three buses blocking a street to the palace, then charged the demonstrators after they burned the buses and set off explosives.

Wednesday's rallies, which spread to other major Philippine cities, were held to mark what the opposition called a "Day of National Sorrow" one month after the Aquino slaying. It also was the 11th anniversary of Marcos' declaration of martial law, which lasted eight years — a day the government celebrates as "Thanksgiving Day."

violations of state laws on chemical handling.

"I was lying in the bed and I heard something go 'kaboom,'" said Anthony Wallace, 21, who said he was awakened at his home about two miles from the plant. "I ran out here, looked up at the plant and saw barrels on fire."

A plant employee who asked not to be identified said employees "heard a big boom, then we were told to leave the plant."

"We didn't know what was going on," she said. "We were all scared and we could smell smoke. We got out of there in a hurry."

Police evacuated residents of a five-block area bordering downtown Main Street. All the residents were back home by Wednesday night.

Patty Morgan, supervisor at Rowan Memorial Hospital, said Samuel Howard, 42, and Michael Hill, 27, both of Salisbury, were admitted with second-degree burns. Ronnie Kesler, 29, of Salisbury was treated for cuts and Kenneth Klutts, 38, of Salisbury was treated for first-degree burns.

Annexations Six Mishaps Delay Vote In City's Traffic

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Elizabeth City officials agreed Wednesday to delay the Oct. 11 municipal election pending U.S. Justice Department review of four annexations that some black residents say diluted black voting strength.

Attorneys representing the city and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People agreed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh to postpone the election just before a three-judge panel was to hear arguments on whether the NAACP should be granted a preliminary injunction blocking the election.

Under a consent agreement signed by attorneys for both parties, the election will be delayed indefinitely while the city submits for U.S. Justice Department review the annexations approved by the city council in 1969, 1973, 1974 and 1975.

The NAACP and the Pasquotank County Improvement Association filed suit in an attempt to force the city to revamp its municipal elections. The suit seeks to change the council election from an at-large system to a ward system.

Although Elizabeth City's population is 47 percent black, there is only one black on the eight-member council, and that member was appointed after the death of an elected member.

Courts, Lawmen Brace For New DWI Enforcement

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina court officials and law enforcement agents are bracing for what may be the biggest legal change in a decade — a driving while impaired law that takes effect Oct. 1.

Judges, magistrates, court clerks, police and Highway Patrol troopers are attending special classes on the law enacted earlier this year by the General Assembly.

"This is the biggest educational project the Administrative Office of the Courts has ever undertaken," said Franklin Freeman, AOC director, who calls the new law perhaps the biggest legal change in 10 years.

"The public is going to be looking at the judicial system under a microscope. It is important we be as ready as we can," he said.

Meanwhile, the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety is sending hundreds of thousands of brochures about the law to colleges and universities.

"The public still has no concept of how tough this law is," Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said. "They do not realize or do not want to contemplate the very serious provisions of this law. They better realize if you're going to drink you better get your buddy to drive."

The Safe Roads Act will replace all drunken driving laws with a single driving-while-impaired offense beginning Oct. 1. The law will:

- Raise the drinking age from 18 to 19.
- Eliminate plea bargaining.
- Automatically revoke a driver's license for 10 days for refusing to take a blood-alcohol test.
- Require judges to consider aggravating and mitigating factors that determine one of five levels of punishment ranging from at least 14 days in jail and a fine up to $2,000 to 21 hours in jail, 24 hours of community service, a 30-day loss of driving privileges or a combination of the three.
- Impose a one-year license revocation for underage people who try to buy alcoholic beverages, help someone else to buy alcohol or try to use a fake identification to buy alcoholic beverages.
- Restrict who can obtain limited driving privileges.
- Allow law-enforcement agencies to set up roadblocks to check for impaired drivers.
- Allow magistrates to hold impaired drivers until they are sober or until a sober adult takes responsibility for them.
- Require some people convicted of impaired driving while their license is revoked for an earlier impaired driving offense to forfeit their vehicle.
- Make sellers of alcoholic beverages liable for drinking-related damages caused by underage people to whom they sold alcohol.

The AOC and the Institute of Government have held eight day-long seminars across the state to explain the new law to about 2,000 of the 2,500 court officials who will deal with it.

"The major effect I see is that the law completely takes out discretion," said Buncombe County prosecutor Ron Brown, head of the state district attorneys' organization. "Because of that I tend to believe we will have a great increase in trials. There is no incentive to offer a defendant to plead guilty."

He said District Courts with 100 to 150 cases a day may not be able to stand the added burden of 10 or 20 more drunken-driving cases. Freeman, however, said he does not foresee a long-lasting backlog of cases.

While district attorneys say they may have more paperwork, some law enforcement officials are adopting new methods to build drunken driving cases.

Greensboro police will videotape suspects performing sobriety tests immediately after their arrest. The tapes may be played in court.

Hickory Police Chief Floyd Lucas, president of the N.C. Chiefs of Police Association, said his officers have been experimenting with videotapes for two years.

He said lawyers often ask to see the tape before the case goes to trial and the tapes seldom are needed for a conviction in the courtroom.

Freeman said District Court judges will have to change their whole way of thinking about drunken-driving cases. After finding a person guilty under the new law, the judge must hold a detailed sentencing hearing to consider the aggravating and mitigating factors.

The chief District Court judges also have appointed community service coordinators to match convicted drunken drivers with agencies that need volunteer help. An estimated 50,000 people will do community service work under the law during the next year, say state officials.

The Division of Victim and Justice Services was established in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to train and guide workers in the community service programs.

Anita Munns, an administrative officer in the division, said there are 55 coordinators across the state, at least one per judicial district. She said the uniform system will allow a driver convicted in Charlotte to perform community service in his hometown of Goldsboro, for example.

Freeman said there will be a great deal of added responsibility for magistrates, appointed officials who do everything from set bond to conduct marriages.

It is the magistrates who have authority to detain a person charged with driving while impaired and to revoke a driver's license.

"It is a very heavy decision for anybody to make," Freeman said. "But they are very much aware of it, I think, and are intent on trying to strike the right balance."

Lewis White, Vance County chief magistrate and president of the N.C. Magistrates Association, said the law will not be too complicated to administer once magistrates get used to the new forms.

"I hope the Legislature realizes how much responsibility we've got and makes sure we're compensated for it," he said.

Magistrates earn between $10,000 and $16,200 a year.

Under the new law, beer and wine vendors have more responsibility for damages in an accident caused by an underage person who was sold alcoholic beverages negligently.

The Alcoholic Board of Control licenses stores to sell beer and wine. Tom Zweigart, an ABC Commission hearing officer, said the agency is trying to prevent illegal sales before they take place.

He said ABC representatives have met with deans, dormitory counselors and fraternity advisors of private and public colleges and universities to explain the law.

"We are trying to administer the law in such a way that people understand what their responsibilities are," Zweigart said. "It is our feeling that through preventive training measures we can avoid difficulties."

Russ Edmonston of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said his office has printed 500,000 summaries of the law and is sending them to colleges and high school driver's education teachers.

The higher drinking age, which will affect many college students, will give Alcohol Law Enforcement agents more possible violations to watch, said ALE Director Don Murray. He said publicity surrounding passage of the law already has reduced dramatically the number of drinking-related arrests.

"I know from talking with the agents who conduct surveillance of the (beer and wine) outlets that they are seeing a great deal more carding of young looking people," Murray said. "The industry is taking this seriously and making efforts to correct the problem."

Lt. Col. J.F. Cardwell of the state Highway Patrol said that drunken driving arrests also have declined since the Legislature enacted the law but said no statistics have been compiled to illustrate the trend.

Receive Grant To Buy Land

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has received a grant of $1.25 million to acquire land on the Currituck Outer Banks for the state's estuarine sanctuary system.

The state's proposed sanctuary on Currituck covers about 750 acres of beach, marsh, islands and some 2,000 acres of surrounding water in the Currituck Sound, DNR Secretary Joe Grimsley said Wednesday.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced in August it plans to establish a new wildlife refuge on the Currituck Banks that includes some of the land within the state's sanctuary site.

Sanctuaries are set aside in their natural condition to be used primarily for research and education.

U.S. Warships Shell Druse Batteries

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. warships shelled Druse batteries in the central mountains today and the Druse struck back. One rocket blew up the main ammunition dump of Italian peacekeepers, another wounded four French soldiers and a grenade wounded two more, military spokesmen said.

The Lebanese army, meanwhile, said it repulsed a new attack by the Syrian-backed Druse fighters on the strategic town of Souk el-Gharb. The army said 25 attackers were killed and seven Druse armored vehicles destroyed.

One Druse rocket struck a French position in west Beirut's Kaskas neighborhood on the edge of the French headquarters at the mid-city horse race track, wounding four French soldiers. Two other Frenchmen were wounded in a grenade assault on a truck, according to a French spokesman who declined to be identified.

The U.S. and British contingents of the 5,400-man peacekeeping force said they were untouched by the bombardment.

Italian spokesman Capt. Corrado Cantatori said the Italian compound near Palestinian refugee camps came under rocket fire. He said at least two rockets struck an ammunition dump close to the Christian neighborhood of Hazmieh.

"We lost almost all our stores," Cantatori said. He said no Italians were injured.

The latest American naval barrage was unleashed about 3 a.m. to silence mountaintop Druse batteries that had rained shells overnight around the presidential palace, the Defense Ministry and the nearby U.S. ambassador's residence east of Beirut, the state radio reported.

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart said shells "fell close but not in the compound" at the ambassador's residence. Unlike the previous night, he said, there was no evacuation of the residence.

Nearly five hours later, the capital was shaken by thunderous blasts, and local radio stations said the city's Christian sector was under renewed bombardment from Druse positions in the Syrian-controlled Upper Metn mountains.

The Civil Defense Corps broadcast appeals for people to stay indoors as shells and rockets slammed into the Christian neighborhoods of Ashrafieh, Ein el-Rummaneh, Museum and Tayyouneh. Several fires were reported.

A Lebanese army communiqué said its embattled garrison of the U.S.-trained 8th Brigade repulsed another onslaught by Druse and Palestinian guerrillas on Souk el-Gharb before dawn.

The U.S. destroyers John Rodgers and Arthur Radford sent shells whizzing over Beirut toward the mountains before dawn to try to halt artillery attacks on the suburbs.

A Western military source said about 360 rockets hit the suburbs but there were no reports of the president's or ambassador's residence being hit.

During a similar assault, the John Rodgers and the U.S. cruiser Virginia fired a heavy barrage late Tuesday and early Wednesday. U.S. ships also fired Monday to repel a Druse assault on Lebanese troops in Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the U.S. Marine compound at Beirut's international airport.

The Reagan administration has stressed the importance of the defense of Souk el-Gharb. Officials in Washington said its loss could be a fatal setback to the Lebanese army's attempt to extend its authority outside Beirut and could threaten the Gemayel government.

The Syrian government newspaper Tishrin accused the United States of expanding its involvement in the war and said this could lead to clashes between American and Syrian forces.

In Alep, Druse spokesmen claimed at least 400 Druse had deserted the Lebanese army since early September and that others would like to leave but cannot reach Druse lines.

As the fighting continued, official sources in Damascus said Saudi Arabian mediator Prince Bandar bin Sultan was due in the Syrian capital today to renew efforts to arrange a ceasefire.

U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane flew from Saudi Arabia to Syria on Wednesday with Bandar's chief aide, Rafik Hariri. McFarlane met briefly with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, but no statements were made about the session.

Bandar is proposing a ceasefire policed by U.N. observers, to be followed by a reconciliation dialogue among various Lebanese leaders under King Fahd's auspices in Saudi Arabia.

Official sources in Beirut said all sides have agreed to the ceasefire arrangements but there was disagreement over who would attend the reconciliation talks.

In Washington, two Democrat-dominated committees of the House were at odds over U.S. policy in Lebanon. One threatened to cut off funds for Marines in Beirut and the other was ready to extend their stay by 18 months.

The Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to choke off money for the Marines on Dec. 1 unless President Reagan accepted a 90-day War Powers Act limit on his power to keep troops on a battlefield without congressional approval.

The party-line vote came as members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee predicted easy approval by that panel of a compromise 18-month authorization agreed to by Reagan and most congressional leaders.

New Milestone For State Zoo

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 40-acre interim facility that has housed animals since 1974 will be closed Oct. 3, another milestone in the life of the North Carolina Zoological Park, says zoo director Bob Fry.

The interim zoo, located one mile from the main park, was built to hold animals temporarily while permanent exhibits were constructed. It served as the official state zoo until 1979, when the first sections of the new "Africa" area were opened.

"The interim zoo is so old and rundown. It doesn't even meet the handicapped codes," said Fry. It consists of paddocks, or small pieces of land, cages and exhibit buildings.

Closing the older facility is "part of the growing pains," Fry added. "Those facilities just don't fit into any of our philosophy of not keeping animals in pens and cages. We are building the largest planned natural habitat zoo in the world."

An estimated 400 new animals and 4,000 plants will be brought to the zoo in the next few months in preparation for the opening of the African Pavilion and African Plains, Fry said.

The Pavilion is a 45,000 square foot building covered with an innovative glass fiber roof. It will house 25 different animal species in a series of controlled environment exhibits representing the various regions of Africa.

The Plains, where a variety of hoofed animals will be displayed, will be an outdoor area representing the African tundra.

Some of the interim zoo's paddocks and barns will be used to house the newly-arriving stock until they're moved to "Africa," Fry said. The building that now houses a number of indoor exhibits will be converted into a medical facility. The zoo recently hired its first staff veterinarian.

Animals currently in the interim zoo that don't fit into the African setting will be traded or placed on long-term loan and could go to nature science centers in Greensboro, Durham and Asheville, Fry said.

Among the animals that will be sent away are camels, kangaroos, otters, some snakes and a number of small creatures.

Of special concern is the zoo's lone Siberian tiger, named Tigger. A native of Mongolia, the big female will not be part of the African exhibits. It could be years before the zoo's Asian exhibits are built, Fry said.

Fry said the zoo will keep Tigger until a zoo can be found that will provide her with a comfortable home and a mate.

Also to be closed is the "petting zoo," an area that contained a number of gentle animals such as rabbits and llamas that visitors could touch. The zoo will compensate by setting up several small, mobile exhibits in the African area that will allow close contact with small animals, Fry said.

Phillips Offers Six-Point Plan

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State School Superintendent Craig Phillips today called for a 15 percent salary increase for teachers next school year and additional bonuses for select teachers the following year.

"The time for talk and study is over," Phillips said in prepared remarks delivered at a breakfast with community leaders. "We know what needs to be done, what can be done and what it will take to do the job."

Phillips said the public now has a clearer understanding of the needs of schools and is united in a call for major improvements in education. He said he senses an unprecedented willingness to provide the large amounts of money needed for the schools to succeed.

Phillips outlined a six-point plan for improving the schools. The plan calls on the state to:

— Provide $200 million, or $200 per pupil, in 1984-85 to raise teachers' salaries by about 15 percent to offer base salaries of $16,000 to $27,000.

— Provide $50 million more in 1985-86 to provide salaries of up to $35,000 for about 10 percent to 20 percent of the state's teachers who are willing to assume special roles and who demonstrate excellence.

— Offer about $150 million a year in new resources for school construction and renovation.

— Increase the number of teaching positions to lower student-teacher ratios.

— Invest in on-the-job training for teachers by spending $100 per teacher each year to strengthen their academic background.

— Develop model day-care programs for 3- and 4-year-olds in 16 schools in 1985-86.

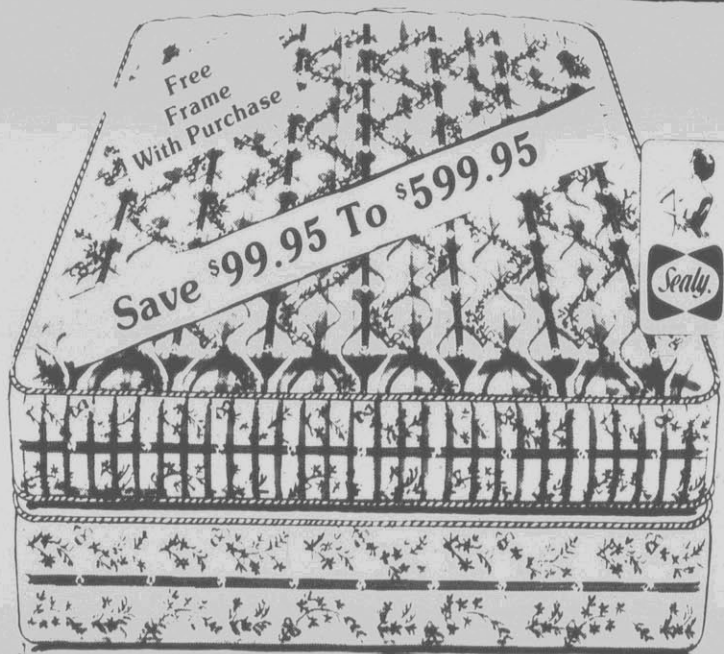

"The proposal comes as a result of long-time concerns and the recent impact of national and state studies calling for dramatic improvement in the quality of education, primarily through significant improvement of performance and recognition of that improved performance of those who educate 1 million students in North Carolina," Phillips said.

Local Telephone Rates To See Increase

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers may be facing increases in their local phone bills, but they also are going to receive a major reduction in interstate long-distance rates, according to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. AT&T announced Wednesday it would file a request on Oct. 3 with the Federal Communications Commission to reduce its long-distance rates by $1.75 billion annually.

If the FCC approves, the rate reductions would be implemented on Jan. 1, the same day AT&T is to be broken apart to comply with an antitrust settlement, the company said.

AT&T declined Wednesday to spell out how calling rates would fall with the $1.75 billion reduction, saying such details would be unveiled later. The company has already informed the commission, however, it expects calling rates to fall between 10 percent and 15 percent and spokesman Pic Wagner said Wednesday's announcement was "consistent with that projection."

Sees Incentive To Seek Care

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Kenneth G. Tomberlin, an orthopedic surgeon, said that medical plans lowering the patient's costs for seeing a physician like one being initiated by Hanes Corp. will be an incentive for patients to seek unnecessary medical care.

"That (the medical plan) has taken away the patients' incentives to try to conserve resources and I think this plan goes further toward this first-dollar type of coverage. For $10 you can get anything."

The Hanes plan, which begins Sept. 30, enables a covered employee or dependent to go to a participating doctor for a flat fee of $10. Eighty-six physicians have contracted with the PPO (the Hanes program) to provide their services and to charge Hanes no more than the median fees among doctors in Winston-Salem.

Tomberlin said the PPOs will limit patients' freedom to choose their physicians and thus disrupt doctor-patient relationships.

CHARGE TORTURE
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Pax Christi, an international Catholic rights group, alleges that El Salvador's security forces tortured and killed Salvadoran rights activist Mariánella García Villas last March.

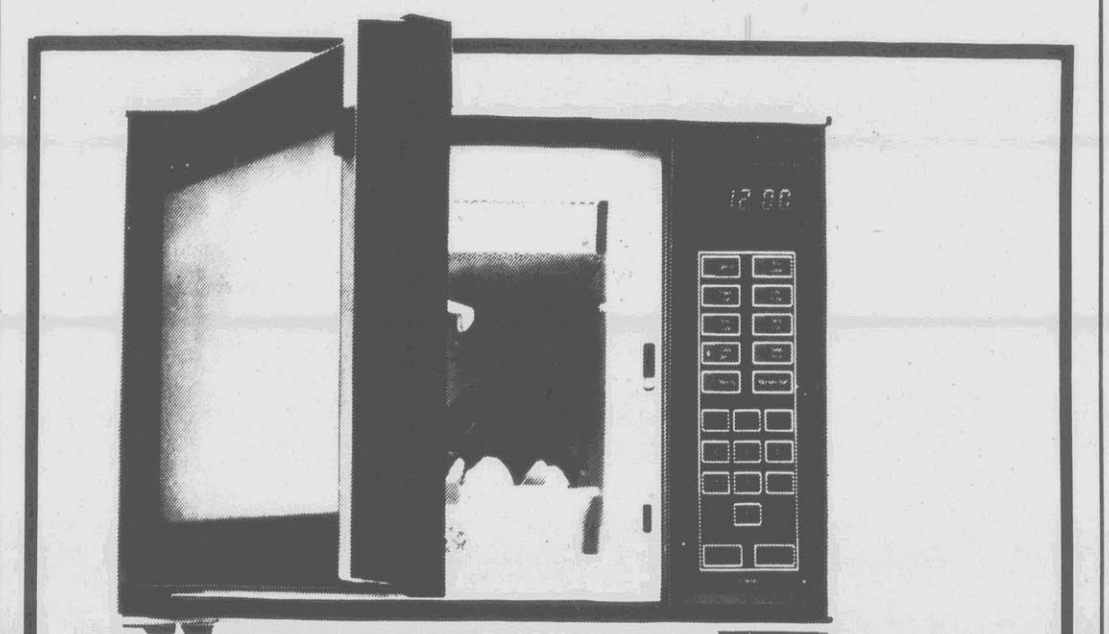

telephone service that is now built into interstate rates. The FCC has projected the subsidy will total $10.7 billion in 1984, and argues more of that amount should be collected directly from all telephone customers instead of through artificially high long-distance rates.

The commission also maintains that with the breakup of AT&T and growing competition, all long-distance phone companies should be placed on an equal footing. That is not the case now, the agency says, because most of the long-distance subsidies are built into AT&T's rates and not those of competitors like MCI Communications.

The new access charges are scheduled to be implemented Jan. 1, but Congress has begun considering legislation that would alter the new regulatory scheme and require the subsidies to remain within long-distance rates.

Wagner acknowledged Wednesday that AT&T decided to release some details of its plans for interstate rate reductions in response to that congressional debate.

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week has been re-evaluated to 44.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is lower and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,800,000, compared to 1,791,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground again today, continuing the retreat it began on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.62 to 1,241.67 in the first half hour.

Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

On Wednesday the government issued an estimate of economic growth at a 7 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, for the third quarter.

That provided evidence that the recovery from the recession was still proceeding at a brisk pace.

But it also helped nudge interest rates higher in the credit markets. And the stock market showed no follow-through to the advance that carried the Dow Jones industrials to a record high on Tuesday.

Today's early prices included General Mills, up 1/4 at 52 1/2; Revlon, unchanged at 31 1/4; and Merrill Lynch, down 1/4 at 39 1/4.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.90 to 1,243.29.

Declines held a small edge on advances at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 91.28 million shares, against 103.05 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 42 to 97.46. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.17 at 236.46.

Female Doctors On Next Flights

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The crews of two space shuttle flights next summer will include female physicians who had babies in 1982 and are married to other astronauts, NASA says.

Dr. M. Rhea Seddon, 35-year-old wife of astronaut Robert Gibson, and Dr. Anna L. Fisher, 34, the wife of Dr. William Fisher, will be mission specialists on flights in June and August, respectively, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Wednesday. Astronaut Judith Resnick was earlier picked to fly early next year.

Sally Ride became the first American woman in space on the seventh shuttle mission.

NASA also announced that a military shuttle mission carrying a secret cargo has been rescheduled for July, instead of this year.

Lost Indian Town Site Believed To Be Found

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Archaeologists say they may have discovered one of the few remaining Indian village sites in North Carolina still untouched by relic hunters.

The site is believed to be that of the Occaneechi village near present-day Hillsborough, described as prosperous in 1701 by explorer and botanist John Lawson. The village had disappeared by the 1750s and the fate of the tribe remains a mystery.

The site has eluded searchers since the 1930s, said Roy S. Dickens, director of the Research Laboratories of Anthropology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"If we haven't found Occaneechi, we are very close, because we have been able to date trade goods found in burial pits at the site to the proper period," Dickens said. "At the very least, we have an outlying settlement."

Revealing artifacts were discovered during a dig on private property near the Eno River this summer, he said. Dickens declined to reveal the exact spot, saying that that relic hunters may pillage the site although the artifacts would bring little money.

"This is an exciting and very unusual find, because the site has never been looted by relic collectors," said Dr. Trawick Ward, senior staff archaeologist at UNC-CH. "It is unique in the Piedmont of North Carolina where treasure hunters have virtually destroyed some sites."

Among the artifacts found this summer are a rum bottle made in England between 1680 and 1700, scissors, copper buckles, a pewter porringer, glass beads, spoons, a rare pewter pipe and lead shot.

The discoveries suggest that the Occaneechi Indians had more contact with whites than was previously believed and were affected by the influx of Europeans into North Carolina, said Dickens.

Stewart Flays Leadership

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former state House Speaker Carl J. Stewart Jr. Tuesday sharply criticized the leadership in the state Senate, over which he wants to preside as lieutenant governor.

"I believe we have come to a time when the leadership in the N.C. Senate has resolved itself into a very small clique of people, the good old boys club — no girls included," Stewart told a forum for Democratic candidates for the lieutenant governor's nomination.

Stewart said if he were elected, he would "decentralize power in the Senate" and open leadership positions to "talented young senators."

Carolina, as well as Atlanta, Richmond and Baltimore/Washington, with 30 flights each day.

New York Air began operations in December 1980, and flies to Orlando, Savannah, Greenville/Spartanburg, and Knoxville, as well as to cities in the Northeast. It's service to Raleigh-Durham, which began in April 1982 with four flights daily, now includes 18 flights.

As part of the Sunbird-New York Air joint venture, Greenville will be listed in New York Air's system timetable. Reggio described New York Air, which is "growing and profitable," as "a businessman's air line." Businessmen are "the most demanding travelers," and "if we can satisfy businessmen, we can satisfy anyone."

Pitt-Greenville Airport Manager Jim Turcotte termed the announcement of the joint venture "very exciting" and said the commuter passenger service offered by Sunbird "links our local citizens to anywhere in the world."

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox expressed thanks to the two airlines for their "foresight" in planning the joint schedule, saying that "this is the place it's happening."

Cox told Reggio that "our biggest drawback has been transportation."

Under the new schedule, Sunbird flights will leave Greenville at 6 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4:45 p.m. Flights will arrive in Greenville at 11:25 a.m., 4:35 p.m. and 8:50 p.m.

Rampants Open Big East Conflicts

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
When the Rose High School Rampants open the 1983 Big East 4-A Conference campaign against Northern Nash Friday, their offensive weaknesses will have to become strengths and their strengths will have to become stronger.

The Rampants, ranked fifth in this week's Associated Press High School Football Poll, have had little success running the football this season, with only 72 of their 281 total yards on the ground against Eastern Wayne last week. Rose quarterback Battle Emory connected on 11 out of 24 passes for 209 yards against the Warriors to lead the Rampants to a 14-7 victory, but he also threw five interceptions.

"A couple of those came when the line didn't hold and he let it go when he should have eaten it," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I felt like our receiving corps played well; we had four different people catch passes against Eastern Wayne. Considering the unsettled situation last week with all the sickness, I thought that we played pretty well."

Emory, senior tight end Billy Michel and linebacker David Lineberry missed practice most of the week with a virus, but all three were ready by Friday. Linebacker Edward Farley and tackles Brian Bridges and Sterling Edwards all missed the game.

Tyrone Smith caught a pair of Emory touchdown passes, one of 16 and the other 54 yards, for three on the night. Michel caught four passes for 66 yards, while Roswell Streeter grabbed three for 53 yards.

Smith continues to lead the Rampants with 10 receptions for a 23.4 yard average. Senior Reggie Smith leads the runners with 227 yards for a 6.5-yard average.

"We've got several guys who can really catch the football," Vincent said. "What really concerns me is our lack of a solid ground game. We've done a lot of work on it this week. But Northern Nash has a pretty good defense. They've been able to shut down the run with and eight-man front."

The Knights were picked to win the Big East title in a pre-season poll of the coaches even with a new head coach. Operating from the information, Northern Nash has posted a 2-1 record through the non-conference portion of the slate, including a 10-0 shutout of cross-county rival Southern Nash.

"Their first three opponents didn't throw the ball very often," Vincent said. "They really have four good linebackers who can cover the field. They're quick on defense. The big ones you can know where they are, but quick players on defense cause problems."

Vincent is also concerned with the Rampants punting game, as Arthur Brown had one blocked by the Warriors. Only a clipping penalty on first down saved the mistake from disaster.

"It was just a missed block on the line," Vincent said.

"We were fortunate they couldn't move the ball. We've worked on our punt protection and coverage this week."

Running back Jarrod Moody

is the Knights' top threat out of the backfield, though he managed just 45 yards on 19 carries against Southern Nash. Moody bolted over from nine yards out to give Northern Nash the lead late in the first half. Kicker Brad Rice added a 37-yard field goal for the final margin.

"Moody is on of the best prospects in the east this year at running back," Vincent said. "He's a good open field runner. They have a sophomore at quarterback, but he's beginning to come around."

The Rampants will have to do without the services of senior guard Butch Haskins (6-0, 180), who is out indefinitely with a dislocated knee.

"We're having to make some adjustments," Vincent said. "This should be a good game. It's the start of our conference schedule — everything counts from here on out."

State's Reed Has Own Frosh Plan

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

They didn't need to form a committee to propose to the NCAA that freshmen be made ineligible for football and basketball — North Carolina State's Tom Reed had a plan all along.

A blue-ribbon committee, known as the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, has suggested to the NCAA that freshmen no longer be allowed to play varsity football and basketball.

It's not an old idea, but it's not a popular one, either.

While some coaches welcome it as necessary in the fight to raise academic standards in the athletic community, there are some who believe it will just bring about greater expenditures to provide sports on a junior varsity level.

They could have asked Reed.

"I think we're foolish to have our freshmen play," said Reed, first-year Wolfpack coach. "I think we are bucking the odds. We are not being intelligent and we are putting the kids in a very difficult situation."

Just how difficult that role is became apparent to Reed when he surveyed the results of two recent freshman reading tests given four weeks apart.

"This includes 400 athletes. The only ones who did not improve are the football players," he said. "That, to me, is an alarming fact. We demand a lot out of them."

Reed's proposal would be to provide, for example, 100 grants to potential collegiate athletes and at the same time allow the football program to keep another 25 people on some sort of partial grant.

Currently, the NCAA allows schools to hand out 30 scholarships annually and a total of 95.

"A young man comes out and he works out with the football team, you give him a room scholarship," Reed said. "Maybe you give him a board scholarship the next semester."

Reed's idea has a stipulation. Before the student can receive a partial grant, he must be enrolled for one full year and take a full class load.

"You would reward your walk-ons, you would increase your numbers and eliminate freshmen playing, which has gotta be done if we're gonna get the sanity back in the game."

University of Virginia athletic director Dick Schultz hasn't fully reviewed the report, but he is not convinced the rule is necessary and doesn't think it will ever pass.

"I haven't seen any data to indicate that the freshman eligibility rule has been detrimental," Schultz said. "The biggest argument for it would be eliminating some pressures of competition for the athlete just starting out."

University of North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith has never been eager to insert freshmen into his starting five, although he's been successful when he's resorted to it. He's convinced the idea of freshman ineligibility is right and that money shouldn't be at the root of the issue.

"We're not talking much money at all," Smith said. "But if it's for the good of the student-athlete, then it's worth it."

Smith said under current conditions, it's hard for the upperclassmen to meet schedules because of the demands on their time. For freshmen it's worse, and the new rule would eliminate that hardship, he says.

"We think the freshman should be aware the reason he's going to college is academic and to spend time adjusting," Smith said. "A lot of thought was given this. With the help of the college presidents, this will pass."

Reed isn't betting on approval by the full NCAA convention, which meets in January. He claims the money that officials say will be lost in additional coaches and other incidentals will be repaid by decreased class time in trying to bring athletes up to academic minimums. But he says as soon as you mention money, the tide changes.

"I say it has a very slim chance," Reed lamented. "Any time people see something as a cost factor, it usually loses."

N.C. State basketball coach Jim Valvano said factors such as scheduling, cost and travel for junior varsity teams would have to be considered. But he added, "If you're strictly speaking of freshman eligibility, then yes, I always have been against it."

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps, in Raleigh for a clinic, said he backed the proposed rule change. But East Carolina football coach Ed Emory said he preferred leaving things as they are.

EC Coaches Want No Change

When it comes to the freshman eligible rule, East Carolina football coach Ed Emory and basketball coach Charlie Harrison would just as soon leave things as they are, thank you.

Emory, who is carrying only three freshmen on the varsity squad this year, doesn't feel that it is fair to legislate freshman out of a role in Division I-A football as a general rule.

"If a kid is ready to play when he comes to college, mentally and physically, then he should be allowed to play," Emory said. "If he's not, then redshirt him for a year and get him ready during that year. I feel like if a kid is mature enough to make a Division I college football team, then he's mature enough to make it through school, too. Why should he have to stand on the sidelines for a year if he's ready to play?"

Emory said that there is no rule that forces coaches to use freshmen right away. "Our freshmen practice only two days a week and (work) light another day. We have no night meetings with them."

"We spend a lot of time trying to get them off to a good start. Every kid we've got has to go to study hall when they have free periods during the day. They report in for up to ten hours of study work with the tutors during the week. Last year's freshman class averaged over 2.0 and we're hoping that this year's class will do even better."

Emory said that in the past, freshman teams worked harder than the varsity in preparing for their games, and coaches have tended to forget that. "Not only that, it will cost a tremendous amount of money and you'll have to raise the scholarship limit."

"It goes back to the kid. If he's ready to take advanced math when he gets to college, he should be allowed to. If he's ready to play football, he should be allowed to also."

Meanwhile, Harrison, who will rely heavily on freshmen players after graduation and a transfer left his team gutted, says he has mixed emotions about the proposed changing of the rule. "It (the change) has good points about it, with the maturing factor and everything else. But I don't think it's fair to tell a kid he can't play just because he's a freshman. In basketball I kid can play a lot easier than he can in football."

Harrison also expressed worry about the financial cost of not allowing freshmen to compete on varsity teams. "I'm sure that the bigger schools will go along with it, but (having freshmen play) is essential for us. If they are good enough to play (as freshmen), that's one of the things that we can do to recruit them."

"I just wish they'd leave it alone. We've actually found that our kids' grades drop when they have idle time, as compared to when they are practicing or traveling. I don't think it's hurt that many kids to have played."

Manning Makes Kansas His Choice

By The Associated Press
LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — High school basketball star Danny Manning is following his father to the University of Kansas, where the elder Manning will coach while his son plays for the Jayhawks.

The 6-foot-11 teen-ager, who has one year of high school left, scheduled a news conference today to make an official announcement.

His father, Ed Manning, moved his family to Lawrence from Greensboro, N.C., last month amid rumors that he would be hired by Head Coach Larry Brown. Ed Manning, who played professional basketball for six years and coached for one year at North Carolina A&T in 1977-78, was named to the Kansas job Tuesday. He most recently was employed as a truck driver in North Carolina.

"It's been between North Carolina, North Carolina State and KU all along," Danny Manning told the Lawrence Journal-World. "I narrowed it to three. Then my family moved here. I always wanted my family to be able to see me play."

Manning averaged more than 18 points a game last year in leading Greensboro Page High School to an undefeated state championship season.

"I like Kansas," young Manning said in an interview in the Jayhawks' field house. "I feel we have a lot of talent here, and the future will be bright. This is a nice arena, and I'll enjoy playing here."

Manning will not be able to sign a letter of intent until Nov. 9 during the second annual early signing period.

Birds Sweep Detroit

By The Associated Press
It was business as usual for the Baltimore Orioles.
Rookie Mike Boddicker calmly quieted the whooping fans at Tiger Stadium with a first-game shutout, and then John Lowenstein blasted a two-out grand slam to cap a six-run rally in the ninth inning of the second game to complete a sweep of Detroit in their Wednesday two-night double-header.
"They go about their jobs so well, it's hard to say where they won it," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson after absorbing 6-0 and 7-3 losses.
Detroit had blasted Baltimore 14-1 Tuesday night to pull within 6½ games of American League East Orioles. The Tigers already faced an uphill battle, and a crowd of 32,198 turned out Wednesday, hoping to see the team continue its climb.
When the night ended, however, Baltimore had reduced its magic number to three and led the second-place Tigers by 8½ games. The Orioles have 11 games remaining. Detroit has 10 left.
"That's a pretty good baseball team over there," Anderson said.
In other AL games, Chicago swept a two-nighter from Minnesota, winning 2-1 and 7-6; Toronto beat Seattle 4-3; Boston downed New York 3-1; Milwaukee clubbed Cleveland 10-7; California blanked Kansas City 3-0, and Texas defeated Oakland 4-2.

Boddicker, 15-7, pitched a five-hitter and struck out a career-high 12, including the side in the ninth. It was his fifth shutout, tops in the AL.
Lowenstein, Eddie Murray and Cal Ripken each homered in the first game to pin the loss on Jack Morris, 19-12.
The second game was going Detroit's way until the ninth inning. Rick Leach's two-run homer had offset Murray's 30th homer and the Tigers led 3-1 before Baltimore loaded the bases against reliever Dave Gumpert, 0-2, on a walk to pinch hitter Jim Dwyer and singles by John Shelby and Dan Ford.
Reliever Aurelio Lopez came in and threw a wild pitch, making it 3-2. Cal Ripken then popped up, Murray was intentionally walked, reloading the bases, and Mike Young fanned for the second out.
But Lowenstein, who had entered the game in the eighth inning as a pinch hitter, blasted an 0-1 pitch into the upper deck in right field, his 14th home run of the season.

and Joe Nolan followed with his fourth homer.
Sammy Stewart, 9-3, went the final three innings for the win.
"We have a decent bench. We have a pretty good platoon system. We like our setup," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli. "I don't think you can get this far without talent — and we do have that."
Said Lowenstein: "When I it, I knew it was over (right fielder) Rick Leach's head. But I didn't think it was over the fence. It was a very pleasant sight to see it disappear."
White Sox 2-7, Twins 1-6
LaMarr Hoyt won his 11th consecutive game in the opener and now leads the majors with 22 victories.
Hoyt, 22-10, allowed seven hits and Chicago won it when Harold Baines ripped an RBI single in the seventh to snap a 1-1 tie.
The nightcap in Chicago was tied 6-6 in the ninth inning when Tom Paciorek walked, took second on Ron Kittle's single and scored on Scott Fletcher's one-out single.
Baines now has a 17-game hitting streak and Paciorek has hit in 16 straight.
Blue Jays 4, Mariners 3
Doyle Alexander, who lost his first eight decisions of the season, continued his resurgence with his fifth consecutive victory. Alexander, 5-8, gave up eight hits and struck out five in pitching his fourth complete game of the season.
Visiting Seattle scored three runs in the first inning on a two-run single by Al Cowens and an RBI single by Dave Henderson before Toronto struck for four runs in the third, keyed by RBI singles by Alfredo Griffin and Jesse Barfield.
Red Sox 3, Yankees 1
Boston led 2-1 when New York loaded the bases with one out in the top of the eighth inning.
Butch Wynegar then flied out to right fielder Reid Nichols, whose throw to the plate nailed Dave Winfield, ending the inning.
Tony Armas belted his 34th home run in the bottom of the eighth, giving him 100 RBI this season.

Bob Ojeda, 11-7, got the win in Boston and Bob Stanley got his 31st save.
Brewers 10, Indians 7
Don Sutton won his first game since July 14 — breaking his eight-game losing string.
Sutton, 8-13, gave up two runs and left with two outs in the seventh inning after pulling a muscle in his left leg while stretching for Jack Perconte's infield hit.
Rookie Randy Ready drove in three runs with a triple and a single as visiting Milwaukee took a 9-2 lead. Cleveland rallied with five runs in the eighth, capped by Alan Bannister's grand slam.
Angels 3, Royals 0
Geoff Zahn pitched a five-hitter for the victory, which broke his six-game losing string. Zahn is 9-11. Gaylord Perry, 7-14, took the loss.
Gary Pettis tripled and scored two of California's runs in Kansas City. Juan Beniquez drove in one run and scored another.
Rangers 4, A's 2
Mike Smithson's five-hitter helped Texas beat Oakland for the 11th time in 13 tries this season. Smithson, 9-14, retired the first 11 A's batters.
Mickey Rivers doubled and scored the Rangers' first run and drove in the second with a groundout.
Bill Stein and Pete O'Brien delivered consecutive sacrifice flies in the sixth to pin the loss on Chris Codiroli, 12-12.

By The Associated Press
A botched suicide squeeze play by the Atlanta Braves may have killed their chances to catch Los Angeles in the National League West pennant race.
The Braves, who already had beaten Cincinnati 9-1 in the first game of the double-header Wednesday, had Dale Murphy on third, Chris Chambliss on first and Rafael Ramirez at the plate with no outs in the eighth inning of the second game with the score tied 3-3.
Ramirez blooped the ball down the first-base line and Reds first baseman Dan Driessen made a diving catch that was disputed by the Braves. Driessen threw to third to easily double off Murphy and kill the threat.
In the top of the ninth, Ron Oester hit a sacrifice fly to give the Reds a 4-3 victory. The split, combined with the Dodgers' 2-1 triumph over Houston, dropped the Braves four games behind.

"When you go at the ball straight on like that, it sometimes is hard to tell if it's trapped or not," Driessen said. "It was very close."
"I swear he trapped it," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "But my decision is not the one that counts. We haven't bunted well lately anyway. It's too late with 12 games left to have extra bunting practice."
In other NL games, Chicago beat Pittsburgh 7-6 to knock the Pirates 2½ games off the pace in the East, San Francisco edged San Diego 5-4, St. Louis clubbed New York 9-3 and Philadelphia at Montreal was rained out. The Expos are two games behind the first-place Phillies in the East.
Cincinnati's Gary Redus led off the ninth of the nightcap with a double off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 9-9. After Dave Concepcion struck out, Driessen and Paul Houserholder walked to load the bases, setting the stage for Oester's fly to left.
The Braves took a 3-1 lead in the second game as pitcher Phil Niekro had a two-run single and Glenn Hubbard a run-scoring double.
But the Reds tied the game in the eighth against reliever Terry Forster on a walk to Driessen, a double by Houserholder and a two-run single by Dann Bilardello.
The Braves won the first game behind the five-hit pitching of Craig McMurtry and the power hitting of Chambliss and Murphy.
Murphy hit his 35th homer, a three-run blast that chased Cincinnati starter Charlie Puleo, 5-11, in the third inning. Chambliss followed with his 19th, against reliever Rich Gale. Chambliss added a three-run homer in the fourth.
"Today we had to win a double-header," said the Braves' Jerry Royster. "You don't know if any one game is the must game until the season's over, and even then you can't always tell. Last year it went down to the last game, and it might again this time."

Dodgers 2, Astros 1
Los Angeles increased its lead over the Braves as Fernando Valenzuela earned his first victory since Aug. 20, snapping a personal four-game losing streak with a six-hitter.
"Yes, I feel very much relieved," said Valenzuela, 14-10. "I couldn't win for a long time, I couldn't finish for a long time."
Bill Russell doubled home Steve Sax with two outs in the seventh to break a 1-1 tie. Sax had two singles, two stolen bases and scored both Dodger runs.
The only run for the Astros, who lost the season series with the Dodgers 12-6, came on a sixth-inning single by Bill Doran, his stolen base and a single by Dickie Thon.
Cubs 7, Pirates 6
Pittsburgh missed a chance to pick up ground on Philadelphia when Chicago scored the tying and winning runs in the seventh inning on Jody Davis' sacrifice fly and Larry Bowa's infield single.

If the Pirates fail to come back and win the East Division flag, they will look at Chicago as the place where they lost it. Wednesday's defeat was their 10th straight loss at Wrigley Field, including eight this season.
Fergie Jenkins, 6-9, posted his 284th career victory with relief help from Lee Smith, who now has 28 saves.
Giants 5, Padres 4
San Francisco won the fifth game in its last six starts when Dave Bergman, a late-inning defensive replacement, belted a two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth.
Bergman connected for his sixth homer of the season

Offensive Changes Have Been Pleasing To Vann

By JIMMY DU PREE
Reflector Sports Writer
He was recruited by one East Carolina University head coach and soon found he would be playing for another.
Three offensive coordinators and two offenses later, Norwood Vann is making noise as the Pirates' veteran tight end.

and Florida showing interest.
"Coach Dye sold me on the program they were building here," Vann said. "I was looking for a place where I could come in and play. He tried to get me to go to Wyoming when he left, but I decided that was too far away."

this state.
"With that loss behind us, we had extra incentive," Vann said. "We wanted to be 1-1. We lost a close one there last year (33-26), but we held on this time."

With his 57 yards receiving Saturday against Murray State, the Magnolia native tallied 663 career yards to move into ninth place ahead of Bob Grant on the ECU list and needs just 60 more to take over eighth.

"With the new coaches coming in, I had some doubts at first. Now I'm glad I stayed."

After two televised games, the latter on Ted Turner's WTBS cable network, the Pirates came back to Greenville to host Division I-AA Murray State in the home opener. Students and supporters worried of a let-down by the Pirates.

But life at tight end was not so glamorous when Vann arrived at ECU. The wishbone offense made his position similar to a down lineman and took away opportunity for glory.

Things were rough in the first two years of the Ed Emory regime. The 1980 ECU squad finished with a 4-7 mark — the first losing record at the school since 1971. A 63-7 trouncing at the hands of nationally-ranked Florida State added insult to injury.

"Against Murray State, we knew we had to keep that same state of mind we had in the first two games," Vann said. "For all we had established, it all would have been down the drain if we'd had a letdown."

The insertion of the option-I under coordinator Larry Beckish and its refinement this year under Art Baker have put Vann at the top of the receiver statistics list.

The 1981 unit improved, but still finished below .500 with a disappointing 5-6 record via a 31-21 loss at Ficklen Stadium to William and Mary in the final game of the season. A 56-0 loss to North Carolina in the final meeting of the two schools marked the first time the Pirates had been shut out since the opening game of the 1971 season.

The Pirates face highly-touted Missouri of the Big Eight Conference and Florida during October, but Vann thinks the schedule will give ECU a better chance of a bowl berth.

"Before, it was basically a blocking position — covering for the option outside," Vann said. "Now it's a skill position. Both (Beckish and Baker) were good coordinators; they both deserve a lot of credit for what this team's done so far."

Last season the Pirates improved to a 7-4 record, winning four of the last five games.

"Coach Baker has helped a lot with good play selection. He's gotten us out of binds a couple of times already by calling the right play when our backs were to the wall."

"To go to a bowl you have to play big-name schools," he said. "I think we have a pretty good chance. Playing in my senior season, I know now what it's like to have to leave. It's all swept by so fast."

Pat Dye, now head coach at Auburn, recruited Vann out of James Kenan High School. Competition for the young quarterback/defensive end was fierce, with most Atlantic Coast Conference schools along with Texas, Pittsburgh

To The Sports Editor:

Weekend after next when the ECU Pirates are playing the University of Missouri some of us will be in Williamsburg at the annual out-of-town planning conference of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. Last year the Chamber had an idea-seeking trip to Missouri built around the game.
The situation this year presents a dilemma to those of us who want to follow the game on radio in Williamsburg. The nearest station on the Pirate network is Chesapeake, Va., 50 miles away, 3,000 watts FM, with a 300-foot tower. In view of this, we proposed the following:
1. Move the conference from Williamsburg to Columbia, Missouri.
2. Take a tractor-trailer truck with us, with a 100-foot tower and FM antenna to receive the station.
3. Tommy Snowden investigated the possibility of running a phone line from Chesapeake to Williamsburg.
4. Take a super-sensitive FM radio and portable antenna to stick out of the window.
We were shot down on numbers one, two and three, but number four is in the making. We wrote the manager of the hotel and told him to put us in his highest room at the end so we could put the antenna out. No answer yet.
As a last resort, we will get in the car and drive toward Chesapeake until we get a signal. Just want to let you know about some avid Pirate fans.

Cavs Test Wolfpack

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
Virginia, off to its best start in 31 years, meets North Carolina State Saturday afternoon to try and get the upper hand in the Atlantic Coast Conference football title chase.

In Chapel Hill, fifth-ranked North Carolina goes for its fourth straight victory Saturday against William & Mary, while Georgia Tech officially opens its ACC competition with Clemson at Death Valley. In other games involving ACC teams, Pittsburgh is at Maryland and Wake Forest goes to Richmond.

Duke, which has lost its first three games, has the weekend off.

The Cavaliers are 3-0 and with an opening-night victory over Duke hold sole possession of first place. A victory against the Wolfpack will give them a half-game lead over the winner of the Yellow Jackets-Tigers showdown.

But Virginia will be without flanker Quentin Walker, who suffered a broken bone in the victory over James Madison last weekend.

"Walker gave us a deep threat and was such a threat on counter plays," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "People feared him."

Walker will be replaced by Nick Merrick, who has caught three passes in a backup role.

Virginia is first in rushing offense at 285.3 yards per game and third in scoring offense at 28.7 points per game.

N.C. State thrashed The Citadel 45-0 last Saturday as tailback Joe McIntosh rushed for two touchdowns and quarterback Tim Esposito passed for two more. Coach Tom Reed is concerned about his defense and its ability to stop a team on a roll.

"They give us a problem I'm not sure we're capable of handling," Reed said. "Virginia's exactly what we don't need right now."

It looks like an easy time for the Tar Heels in Kenan Stadium, but don't tell it to coach Dick Crum, who said a victory for the Indians "can be their season. For that reason, we've got to work and prepare. We will still have the utmost respect for them."

Georgia Tech is still looking for answers in last weekend's 17-14 loss to Division I-AA Furman. Kevin Esval's field goal in the final minute sent the Jackets to an 0-2 start.

"There's no explanation," tight end Ken Whisenhunt said. "We blew it."

"I think everyone is really looking forward to Clemson," added defensive back Jack Westbrook. "We all want to redeem ourselves."

Clemson is looking for a victor, after a loss and a tie and coach Danny Ford said his team's problem right now is "making the big plays."

"We need to break down on the ball quicker and knock down a third-down pass or jar the ball loose," Ford said. "Offensively, we are not getting the big run in the fourth quarter or the big pass completion."

Maryland saw an early 10-0 lead disappear against West Virginia and eventually dropped a 31-21 decision to the Mountaineers. The loss tumbled Maryland from The Associated Press top 20. The last time the Terrapins and the Panthers tangled, Pitt claimed an easy 38-9 victory.

Australia Still In Race

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Resilient Australia II stayed alive in the America's Cup battle thanks to a must-win, comeback victory.

That meant she needed only two more must-win victories.

Still, Aussie skipper John Bertrand, who conquered crippled Liberty in Wednesday's fifth race, says the tide is flowing his way.

"We certainly have momentum now," Bertrand said after Australia II sailed to a one-minute, 47-second victory that cut Liberty's lead in the best-of-seven series to 3-2. "Now, we've got two races to win."

"I think we could win 50 in a row with this yacht," said Australia II syndicate chief Alan Bond, whose boats won just one of 13 races in his three previous Cup campaigns. "The victory today proves we can win in any wind conditions."

Winds in the 10-20 knot range were forecast for today's sixth race.

Australia II was thought to be vulnerable in the fairly strong winds of 16-18 knots and choppy seas on Rhode Island Sound Wednesday. But it charged ahead of Liberty late on the first of six legs and never trailed again.

A victory by Australia II today would send the America's Cup to a seventh race for the first time. A victory by Liberty would make America's 25th defense of the Cup, which it has held since the first competition in 1851, a successful one.

"I won't feel comfortable until we win, but I'd rather be three wins and two losses than two wins and three losses," said Liberty skipper Dennis Conner. "Obviously, Australia II's a very good boat and very strong in all wind conditions."

The pre-series predictions — Australia II's superiority upwind and in light to moderate airs and Liberty's superiority downwind and in stiffer breezes — have not held up. The series has been unpredictable.

So was Wednesday's race.

Australia II, plagued by equipment failures the first two races, seemed to be in control when one of Liberty's two hydraulic jumper struts, V-shaped supports for the mast, bent and collapsed about an hour before the race. Then, as Liberty's crew tried to set its jib to start the first leg, a luff tape on it tore, forcing Conner to use his second choice for the headsail.

But Liberty seized on Bertrand's second consecutive poor start to grab a whopping 37-second advantage.

Finally, good fortune and the winds shifted back to Bertrand, who rode on a directional change in the breeze to a 23-second lead at the first mark.

When the jumper strut collapsed, Liberty crew members Tom Rich and Scott Vogel went up the mast to dismantle it and replace it with another one that had been rushed in from shore. The job was done two minutes before starting maneuvers were to begin. But about three minutes into the race, the replacement collapsed.

"We would have been faster if we had had no problems," Conner said. "Certainly, psychologically it takes a little bit out of you to have the problems we had for a half hour prior to the race."

Soon, however, it was Bertrand who had a psychological letdown. His boat was about two feet across the starting line when the race began, forcing him to circle back and start again.

"We were down three races to one. We went for broke and I got a little too greedy," he said. "Having to return in a yacht race like that is hard to take and, as a result, you have to lift yourself up very quickly."

The lift came soon when Bertrand tacked to the left, and Conner failed to block the Aussies' wind.

"We hooked into a five-degree wind shift on the leeward side and that got us back," Bertrand said. "We were obviously surprised but also delighted that Liberty didn't tack over to cover us."

"We chose not to cover them because we felt that, being crippled, our best chance was to gain some distance on a shift and we thought the wind might go to the right," Conner said. "Instead, it really didn't change and the next time we came back together the boats were basically even."

But not for long.

Australia II's edge stayed at 23 seconds after the second leg, dropped to 18 seconds at the third mark, then grew to 1:11 after the fourth leg, and Liberty was finished — for the day.

Conner bounced back from his other setback, a 3:14 whipping Sunday, to win by 43 seconds Tuesday.

"The competition from Dennis Conner is very tight," said Bond.

"We got off to a good start in an important race, but I never underestimated them," Conner said.

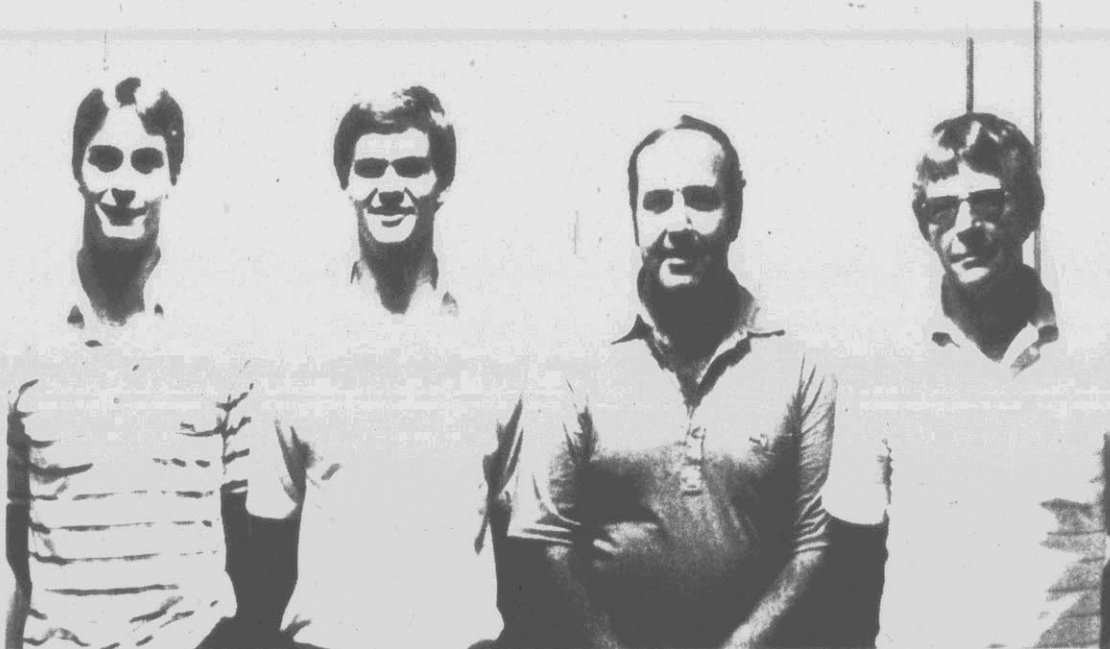

GGO Lost Money

GREENSBORO (AP) — The rain-plagued Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament lost money this year for the first time since 1940, says Art Winstead, president of the sponsoring Greensboro Jaycees.

"We took a beating," Winstead said Wednesday. "We have learned to cry down here."

Nearly every shot of this year's tournament was made in cold, rainy April weather. Rain forced officials to extend the tournament by one day, resulting in a $24,946 loss compared with the $137,024 profit it made in 1982.

Crowds were thinner than usual, as is evidenced by the $80,000 decrease in concession and ticket revenues, said Winstead.

Member-Member Winners

Member tournament last weekend. Finishing second were Nelson Tugwell (right) and Dannie Langston (right center).

All Home Satellite Systems Are Not Created Equal!

A "real deal" isn't always a good bargain!

There's a lot of hallelujah and advertising hype around now days about TV earth stations with claims like, the best, highest quality, lowest price, etc., etc. You also see one company touting their antennas, others, promoting their receivers, and still another pushing bits, parts, and pieces that add on to the in-to make up a satellite receiving system.

If you're getting a bit confused, and who wouldn't be, consider these simple facts about a Birdview System.

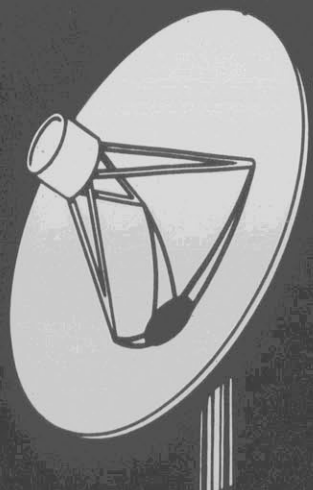

1. It is a highly advanced, but straightforward system, engineered and manufactured from the ground up entirely by Birdview as a totally matched system.
2. The antenna is a one piece, 9' span aluminum dish with a simple, but very unique, polar mount that sets on a single 6" pipe.
3. The use of a dual conversion LNC, with crystal synthesis tuning, comparable in design and construction to commercial quality units and enclosed in a solid weather proof housing.
4. The use of two low noise amplifiers that simplifies tuning and eliminates rotating devices usually found on other systems.
5. A small, compact receiver with 24 channel detente video tuning, variable audio tuning, LED digital readout built-in modulator, and source selection that operates as simply as your television set.

This Satellite Dish will be on display Friday and Saturday. Come by and see for yourself.

Strange Bedfellows Over IMF

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A curious coalition has banded together to fight President Reagan's plan to get $8.4 billion in new funds for an institution that has become a chief manager of the world debt crisis, the International Monetary Fund.

The grouping reflects the colorings of a political rainbow — it includes consumer advocate Ralph Nader, conservative financial adviser Howard Ruff, environmentalists, budget-conscious taxpayer advocacy groups and even representatives from the United Methodist Church.

"It's true, we are a bit bizarre," said John Houston, a lobbyist for Ruff's political action committee, Free The Eagle. "But we have had an effect. We have been able to deliver the votes."

Members of the coalition, in separate interviews, contend their lobbying efforts have been so successful that they not only have been able to help stall, but may yet halt, the controversial legislation in its passage through Congress.

"It's a tough issue to explain," said Nader, "It is very complex, but if you go around the country like we do, you'd be surprised how many people — workers in California or farmers in Oklahoma — know about it. They are drawn to the image of 'Washington bailing out the big banks.'"

Major hurdles still remain for the legislation, even though both the House and the Senate have passed bills authorizing the increase. It passed the House on a razor-thin six vote margin, but still faces a conference committee and money must be appropriated in separate legislation.

The lobbyists, like Nader, are supporting those legislators who argue that the measure is a "big bank bailout."

They maintain that the financially-strapped developing nations, given the IMF funds, will use them to pay back shaky loans obtained from large international banks. They also contend the IMF imposes strict economic conditions upon the nations, which make it difficult for them to import goods that would translate into U.S. jobs.

"This coalition is really is an example of an explosion of grass-roots populism, directing their furor at the old bogeyman, the big banks," said a World Bank official, who has been following the IMF negotiations closely.

The IMF, set up after World War II to help stabilize international finances, is little known to the average citizen. In recent years, however, it has become a major force in keeping developing nations like Mexico from going bankrupt.

As part of its campaign to make the IMF a household word, Free The Eagle in coming weeks plans to let loose about 3 million letters on the legislation, each one pre-addressed so constituents can contact their representatives with relative ease.

Richard Viguerie, the major-domo of mass mailers and a prominent figure in the New Right, has weighed in with a letter-writing campaign, advertisements and radio commercials. He seeks support for IMF opponents in Congress, such as Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., one of those who spearheaded the battle against the bill in the House.

They are bucking President Reagan, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, and the leadership of both parties, all of whom argue that the IMF should be supported because it is helping solve the international debt problem and will bolster U.S. markets abroad by strengthening the international economy.

"Often, our coalition is presented as a bunch of right-wing isolationists, but we're not," said Jeff Stant, of the National Taxpayers Union. "We just believe that this is a question of imprudent international loan practices that ends up placing an unfair burden on the U.S. taxpayer."

Brent Blackwelder, a spokesman for the Environmental Policy Center, said his group opposes the IMF increase because the bank has made loans to nations that have pursued development projects that have proven "disastrous" to the local environment.

Anita Anand, a lobbyist for the United Methodist Church, said she has questions whether the $8.4 billion is really needed and believes that the expansion of funds "benefits primarily the banking interests and ... does not effectively work to eliminate debt or poverty in Third World countries."

Other developments have also hobbled chances for the bill.

One was a Republican-sponsored letter, which quoted freely from Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, accusing about 20 Democrats of supporting communism because they had voted against his amendment to ban IMF loans to communist nations. The reason the Democrats are so angry is that the same amendments were also voted down by many Republicans, such as Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, who are not mentioned in the letter.

"The key thing is, a lot of things are happening that will make passage of this bill less likely," said Nader. "We have a good coalition going."

JA Chairman Named For Pitt

John McConney, general manager at Burroughs-Wellcome Co. here, has been named the 1983-84 fund-raising chairman for Junior Achievement (JA) in Pitt County.

Junior Achievement is the nation's oldest youth economic education organization. JA helps high school students in Pitt County develop an understanding of business fundamentals by setting up their own companies. Under the guidance of advisors, who are volunteers from business and industry, the students produce and market a product or service that they select.

This year's budget of $14,065 includes a one-time cost to relocate and set up a modular office being donated by Burroughs-Wellcome to provide a permanent home for JA. The Pitt County Board of Commissioners has donated the use of land near the county offices for placement of the modular office.

Over 800 letters have been mailed to area businesses and individuals soliciting funds to help meet the 1983-84 budget.

Decision Due

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - The future of N.C. A&T State University's School of Nursing rests on a fraction of a percent.

According to figures released Tuesday by A&T chancellor Edward B. Fort, 69.76 percent of the school's graduates taking licensing exams in the past two years have passed. The N.C. Board of Nursing two years ago promised to cancel A&T's nursing program unless it achieved a 70 percent passing rate. It is scheduled to decide Thursday whether to continue the program.

Fort announced Sept. 8 that the school had achieved an overall 71 percent passing rate during the two years and had met the Nursing Board's mandate. At the time he did not know the one A&T student tested out of state in July had failed, Fort said Tuesday.

Raymond Dawson, vice-president for Academic Affairs for the UNC system, said Tuesday that he is confident A&T will keep its nursing program.

Weekend Services Scheduled

The following worship services will be held at Mills Chapel Free Will Baptist Church this weekend:

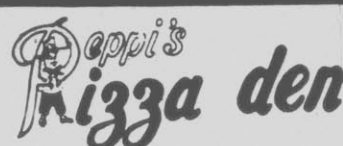

Today, 7:30 p.m., Eldress Cora Cox will be the speaker; Friday, 7:30 p.m., a regular service will be held.

Predictions For The Emmy Awards

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — To paraphrase Humphrey Bogart in "Casablanca," "At least NBC will have Sunday night." That's Emmy-award night, the third-rated network's annual evening of ecstasy.

CBS can crow about being No. 1 in prime time, ABC can boast the most profits, but NBC can be proud that its best programs are, by far, the classiest the industry has to offer.

So, here are some predictions on the glamour awards for the 1982-83 season:

—Outstanding Comedy Series Nominees: "Buffalo Bill" (NBC), "Cheers" (NBC), "M.A.S.H." (CBS), "Newhart" (CBS), "Taxi" (NBC).

"M.A.S.H." will get the sentimental vote for finally ending the war, while keeping its standards high through 11 seasons. But we'll toast "Cheers," the freshest comedy on TV. A barroom comedy can be claustrophobic — just look at "Archie Bunker's Place." Yet "Cheers" never stopped delighting us and shooting knowing glances at our foibles, vulnerabilities and emotions.

—Outstanding Drama Series Nominees: "Cagney & Lacey" (CBS), "Fame" (NBC), "Hill Street Blues" (NBC), "Magnum, P.I." (CBS), "St. Elsewhere" (NBC).

What does it say about television that two of the nominees, "Cagney & Lacey" and "Fame," were canceled? What does it say about ABC's series that the network can't boast a single nominee here, or for best comedy? What does it say about "Hill Street Blues" that we care so deeply about 14 disparate characters, who are turned into the merest of mortals by the most clever writing on TV? "Hill Street" is easily tops for the third straight season.

—Outstanding Limited Series Nominees: "Nicholas Nickleby" (syndicated), "Smiley's People" (syndicated), "The Thorn Birds" (ABC), "To Serve Them All My Days" (PBS), "Winds of War" (ABC).

This is where ABC often shines. Although "Winds of War" was a wooden soldier, "The Thorn Birds" was beautifully filmed and dramatically involving. This ABC miniseries should win, since members of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences are biased toward the commercial networks.

"Nicholas Nickleby" was emotionally effective, but it was a play and not an original TV production. The outstanding limited series for TV was Masterpiece Theatre's "To Serve Them All My Days." The weekly story of a World War I veteran's education as a teacher at an English private school could give soap opera a good name.

—Outstanding Variety, Music or Comedy Program Nominees: "Kennedy Center Honors: A Celebration of the Performing Arts" (CBS), "Motown 25: Yesterday, Today, Forever" (NBC), "SCTV Network" (NBC), "Tonight" (NBC), "Tony Awards" (CBS).

The "Motown" special was a joy and great nostalgia. Michael Jackson was the definitive show-stopper. But "SCTV" gets the nod for sustained excellence, tweaking TV where it deserves to be tweaked: in its brain drain. In the ultimate TV parody, "SCTV" was canceled by NBC for — what else? — low ratings. NBC, which will televise the Emmys, plans to do live promotions throughout the broadcast, touting its winners. Will it be made speechless by an "SCTV" Emmy?

—Outstanding Drama Special Nominees: "Little Gloria ... Happy at Last" (NBC), "M.A.D.D.: The Candy Lightner Story" (NBC), "Scarlet Pimpernel" (CBS), "Special Bulletin" (NBC), "Who Will Love My Children?" (ABC).

There were some good movies here, but only one broke new ground. "Special Bulletin" had the look and feel of a network news broadcast covering events on the run. That its story was about nuclear blackmail made "Special Bulletin" even more timely and gripping. The behind-the-scenes look at network news may have been overly sensational, but it never ceased to be fascinating.

In other awards, Dabney Coleman of "Buffalo Bill" gets our vote for lead actor in a comedy series, over the also-deserving Ted Danson of "Cheers" and Alan Alda of "M.A.S.H." More than the other two, Coleman's despicable Buffalo Bill had to carry that show.

Ed Flanders of "St. Elsewhere" deserves best lead in a dramatic series for conveying dignity, charm and patience. Shelley Long of "Cheers" should win best lead actress in a comedy. She plays the intelligent fish out of water with uncanny intelligence.

Phillips Is Suspended

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Mackenzie Phillips has been "suspended indefinitely" from CBS' "One Day at a Time" because of a health problem that has made her thin and tired, a spokesman for Embassy Television says.

Miss Phillips is suffering from hypoadrenia, a malfunction of the adrenal gland, spokesman Barry Stagg said Tuesday.

Stagg said the 23-year-old actress taped three shows in her role as Julie Cooper Horvath, playing the elder daughter of Bonnie Franklin, before she went on sick leave.

"Mackenzie Phillips has been suspended indefinitely, which is a legal term, but basically she's on sick leave," said Stagg. "We don't need her back until mid-November, when she's due to make her next appearance in an episode."

Prince Makes Appearance

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Prince Claus and his wife Queen Beatrix rolled into Parliament Square in a gold horse-drawn coach flanked by army bands and marching troops to the cheers of onlookers and legislators.

It was the first public appearance of the 57-year-old prince, who suffers recurring depressions, in almost a year.

In an exciting and close final, Brazil edged Argentina in the South American Championships. In so doing, the Brazilians qualified to represent their zone in the World Championships, about to start in Sweden.

On this hand from the final, Argentina had the upper hand. A fairly straightforward auction saw Argentina's South become declarer at a contract of four hearts, which is in jeopardy because of the prospect of losing three spade tricks and a diamond.

West was reluctant to make an aggressive lead for fear that it might cost a trick, so he settled on a trump. Declarer drew all the outstanding trumps, then led a low club. When the king appeared, he took three rounds of clubs and then ruffed a club to set up a long club in dummy. Now he exited with a spade.

If West played a spade honor, he would be forced to return a diamond, and the same position would result as described below. Instead, he opted to play low, and East won the ten of spades.

The best East could do was to cash the ace of diamonds and continue with the queen. But declarer countered neatly by refusing to ruff, instead discarding a spade from his hand. East had nothing left but diamonds, and his forced continuation of that suit permitted declarer to pitch his remaining spade as dummy's jack won the trick. Declarer lost only one spade trick and two diamonds.

FOCUS

SHINE ON...

Tomorrow is the Autumn Equinox. Equinox, which means "equal night," marks the time of year when day and night are the same length at the Equator. Each year the full moon closest to the Autumn Equinox is called the Harvest moon. It is given this name because it often shines so brightly that farmers in the Northern Hemisphere can stay out late at night to take in the fall harvest.

DO YOU KNOW — When does the vernal Equinox occur?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Ice cream is believed to have first appeared in Italy around 1550.

Ingram Orders Reduced Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Comprehensive and collision automobile insurance rates could decrease under a cut ordered by state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, but liability rates wouldn't be affected, say industry officials.

Ingram issued last week an order that would reduce collision insurance rates by 11.4 percent and comprehensive rates by 4 percent.

The lowered rates would be paid by drivers covered through the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, an industry pool that provides coverage to high-risk drivers. Insurance companies wouldn't be voluntarily.

Rates for such drivers could fall 13.7 percent for property damage liability coverage and 9.4 percent for medical payments.

The order would not affect most drivers' liability insurance, which all motorists are required by law to carry.

Paul Mize, general manager of the N.C. Rate Bureau and manager of the reinsurance facility, said owners are not required to carry comprehensive and collision insurance, although most lenders require it for borrowers to qualify for car loans.

Mize said he wouldn't comment on Ingram's order, filed Saturday, until it's reviewed by rate bureau lawyers.

The industry may appeal the order to the N.C. Court of Appeals. If so, existing rates would continue pending a decision, said Mize. In the meantime, industry probably would be required to pay into a special account the difference between current rates and the reduced rates that would result from Ingram's order.

Insurance industry representatives questioned the need for the reductions.

"All of the data that I have seen would tend to indicate that the current rates are not excessive," said Steven Short, operations manager for the eastern regional office of State Farm Insurance Companies.

The reinsurance facility's board of governors will review Ingram's order at its Oct. 12 meeting, said Bernard Parker, chairman of the facility and southeast regional manager for Nationwide Insurance Co.

No Disaster Loans 'Til After Harvest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers shouldn't expect to receive federal drought assistance soon even if the state is declared a disaster area this week, a Farmers Home Administration official says.

Larry W. Godwin said Wednesday that damage assessment reports from all counties in the state will have to be studied and the year's harvest completed before any low-interest loans can be awarded.

Losses will be compared to normal production for each crop. A county must have experienced at least a 30 percent loss to be eligible for disaster aid, said Godwin.

The drought relief issue took on political overtones this week. Gov. Jim Hunt chided the Reagan administration for what he called its slow response to the situation. The next day, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms said he had been told that North Carolina would be declared a disaster area this week and chided Hunt for failing to consult with him before complaining.

Hunt, a Democrat, is expected to seek Republican Helms' seat in next year's election.

Godwin said it would be irresponsible for any official to decide on disaster designation without properly analyzing the county reports.

"This serious situation in our farming community is being exploited, thereby diverting attention from the actual efforts underway in the USDA to make accurate assessments and final decision in accordance with existing laws," he said.

Complaint By Six Women

SCOTLAND NECK, N.C. (AP) — Six female employees of Halifax Hosiery Company have charged that male employees are treated better than women by the company.

The women, who have formed a group called United Women Workers, have filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, charging that men working for the company get vacation pay, holiday pay and raises that are denied to women.

"I'll tell you, I don't feel comfortable. You feel like you hate to go back to that job," said Madeline Battle, 41, of Tarboro. "It's not that you hate to work, it's the environment, how people feel about you."

Mrs. Battle has been a seamer with the company for six years. Another seamer and four knitters have also joined in the discrimination complaint.

Greensboro attorney Michael Kelly, who represents Halifax Hosiery and its owner, Annedeon Hosiery Mills, Inc., would not comment on the complaint.

"That matter is before the commission, and we have no comment," he said.

MacDonald Avers Book Is 'Absurd'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An author who claims Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald killed his pregnant wife and two daughters because he hated women distorted the facts to boost sales of a book about the case, MacDonald says.

In a telephone interview Wednesday from a federal prison in Bastrop, Texas, MacDonald said he had read Joe McGinniss' "Fatal Vision" and found it "totally absurd." MacDonald is serving three consecutive life terms.

"The overriding thing is the book is not based on the facts of the case," he said. "Joe has tended to gloss over the facts and has come up with his own really bizarre theory. It's a theory put together to sell the book."

McGinniss contends that MacDonald was suffering from "pathological narcissism" and that he covered up a deep insecurity over women by being a charmer and macho man.

"This is really asinine," said MacDonald, 39. "Joe didn't even have the courtesy or honesty to interview the women in my life — my mother, sister, my secretary for nine years or any of the women he correctly or incorrectly associates with me romantically."

The book does include quotes and court statements from MacDonald's mother, sister and other women. It also includes testimony from psychiatrists and MacDonald's own taped accounts of his love life.

MacDonald claims that four hippie-like intruders stabbed and bludgeoned his wife, Collette, 26, and their daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, at their Fort Bragg apartment on Feb. 17, 1969.

McGinniss said Wednesday in an interview in Raleigh that MacDonald put on a performance after the slayings and during his trial that convinced many he was innocent.

"He's a very sick man," McGinniss said. "It's a real Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde case."

McGinniss said MacDonald made notes for his attorneys implying that he could have been under the influence of psychosis-inducing diet drugs. But MacDonald said Wednesday he had taken only three to five such pills in the month before the slayings.

When the Supreme Court turned down his latest appeal in January, the former Green Beret doctor said his lawyers would file for a new trial based on new evidence.

But McGinniss said MacDonald and his lawyers have "no chance" of getting a new trial.

"Where's the evidence?" he said. "If they are so sure they have new evidence, why are they putting ads in the paper asking for information?"

"We have a very significant amount of new evidence," MacDonald said, adding that his attorneys would seek a new trial this fall.

He said the motion for a new trial would say that there were about 20 new witnesses, along with additional physical evidence.

"I have to be optimistic," he said. "I'm in prison for something I didn't do. I'm a physician and I deserve to live a decent life."

McGinniss, who lived with MacDonald and his lawyers in a fraternity house in Raleigh during the 1979 trial, said he became convinced during the trial that MacDonald was guilty.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Witnesses Tell
Of Vote-Buying

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Clay County voters willing to cast a straight Democratic ticket could receive $50 to $150, witnesses testified in the vote buying trial of Sheriff Howard Barnard and three others.

Witnesses said was said during the U.S. District Court trial Wednesday that they were paid to vote, while others said an election supervisor marked their ballots for them.

Barnard, Glenn Martin, Harvey Alberry and Frankie Campbell are charged with 31 counts each of vote buying and aiding and abetting vote buying. They also face one count apiece of conspiracy, while Campbell is charged with voting more than once and Barnard is charged with obstruction of justice.

Calvin Hooper of Hayesville, Linda Hooper, Pauline Norton, Judy Norton and Billy Norton testified that they were told by service station owner Edgar Jones to go to the courthouse to vote.

Jones, of Hayesville, has pleaded guilty to 20 counts of vote buying and conspiracy. He testified that he and the defendants bought votes from anyone willing to sell them at "the going price" of $50 to $150.

"I told them that if they'd furnish me the money, I'd furnish them the votes," he said.

Witnesses said Wednesday they were told to ask for Campbell, the Clay County Elections Board supervisor, whom some said accompanied them into the voting booth and marked their ballots.

The five testified that they were given a shoe tack which they were told to take to a shoe store or to a service station outside Hayesville where they would receive $50 to $75 for voting.

Much of the alleged vote buying took place during one-stop voting. The one-stop system allows voters to vote in advance if they know they will be out of town on election day. Jones said he instructed voters to ask for Mrs. Campbell when they went into the Board of Elections office.
