TORPEDO RECOVERED ... A Civil War torpedo has been recovered from the Northeast Cape Fear River at the Blossom's Ferry site. An ECU team discovered the relic on the river floor while carrying out research on ferries that formerly operated there. The 300-pound torpedo will be transferred to

ECU Team Finds Civil War Torpedo

By STUART MORGAN
WILMINGTON — A large Confederate torpedo, described as "unique," has been recovered from the Blossom's Ferry site on the Northeast Cape Fear River near Wilmington by staff and students of East Carolina University's Program in Maritime History and Underwater Research.

It will be transported this weekend to Greenville for preservation measures by ECU's Maritime History and Underwater research team. Ironically, the Confederate torpedo will probably undergo wet storage preservation alongside the anchor of the Union forces' ironclad USS Monitor recovered just weeks ago.

The historic torpedo, first lifted to the river's surface last week from the Castle Hayne marl river bottom 20 feet below, was promptly returned to the river's bottom following examination in order to make arrangements for its final recovery and removal to Greenville.

A five-member ECU team, currently surveying two 18th-century vessels at the Blossom's Ferry site in the Cape Fear, discovered the Civil War torpedo while conducting a reconnaissance of the river bottom in the immediate vicinity of the wrecked ferries.

"I had no earthly idea that the torpedo was there," said Gordon Watts, director of Underwater Research in ECU's two-year graduate program. Watts described the Civil War projectile as "a cast-iron, Confederate single frame, one of a kind torpedo."

"Its specifications are exactly those of a Confederate torpedo described in 'The Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies,'" Watts explained. "In fact, an illustration provided in those records, in Volume 16, page 394, matches those of the torpedo we have found."

The bullet-shaped torpedo weighs in excess of 300 pounds, with a height of 24 inches and a diameter of 12 inches.

According to Watts, the torpedo is not armed. "Because the lifting eye ring, instead of a detonator, has been placed in the nose of the torpedo, we feel that it has never been armed," Watts added that precautions would be taken to ensure that the torpedo is inert before its transfer and preservation begins.

"The torpedo has four logs located on its base that were used to attach it to a frame or piling," Watts explained. "To destroy an enemy vessel," he added, "it would be submerged just beneath the water's surface on a frame or piling so that the detonator would come in contact with the hull of the vessel operating in a river or channel."

"Contact with the enemy vessel's hull would smash the detonator and explode the torpedo," Watts said.

Historical records and archaeological evidence indicate that ferry service existed on the Northeast Cape Fear River with virtually no interruption from around 1735 to the establishment of a permanent bridge there in 1925. However, such evidence also suggests that the Confederate Navy may have been assembling framed torpedoes — such as the one found — in the vicinity of Blossom's Ferry during the Civil War. The torpedo, in fact, may have been lost while being transported across the Northeast branch of the river during that war, more than 115 years ago.

August Gain Of 0.4 Percent

Modest Rise In Inflation

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher prices for gasoline and fresh vegetables pushed consumer prices up a moderate 0.4 percent in August, matching the gain of the previous month, the government said today.

So far this year, prices have risen at an annual rate of just 3.4 percent. Over the last 12 months, the gain was

2.6 percent.

As for last month, the Labor Department said, gasoline prices rose a sharp 1.1 percent after a more modest 0.4 percent increase in July. Those prices, however, were still 8.4 percent below their peak of March 1981.

The 5.8 percent rise in fresh vegetable prices reversed a 3.6 percent July decline and boosted food prices overall a small 0.2

percent.

Food prices, which had fallen in the two preceding months, are likely to rise at a steeper clip in the coming months as the effects of this summer's drought and devastating heat become more apparent.

Initially, though, the bad weather is bringing hefty meat price declines as producers sell off their herds rather than pay higher feedgrain prices. Beef and veal prices fell 0.7 percent in August; pork prices tumbled 0.6 percent.

The continued moderation in the overall Consumer Price Index bolstered economists' predictions that inflation this year will better 1982's 3.9 percent clip. Indeed, some expect inflation could dip to roughly 3 percent, which would be the lowest full-year rate since 1967.

Ironically, today's report said prices have tripled since that benchmark year. What cost $10 then cost $30.03 in August.

If last month's 0.4 percent increase held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly advance would be 5.3 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

All the calculations are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all, the CPI stood at 300.3 in August, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $30.03 last month.

A companion index, the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, rose 0.5 percent in August. This index is widely used in calculating cost-of-living increases in collective bargaining contracts and government benefit programs.

In advance of today's new report, economists said inflation has been surprisingly well-behaved so far this year.

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The smell of cotton candy, hot dogs and popcorn wafts its way through the nippy night, tickling and tempting any nose within a half-mile.

The sounds of hobby horse music, barkers and delighted laughter blend with aromas and melt into the crisp night. Animals bleat, grunt, moo and crow, punctuating the darkness with their sounds.

The scene is the annual Pitt County American Legion Agricultural Fair, scheduled for Sept. 26-Oct. 1 at the Pitt County Fairgrounds. In addition to the traditional rides that thrill the kids and the food, vegetable crafts and horticulture exhibits that delight the adults, country singer Ronnie Milsap will be in concert this Sunday and the Fantasy on Wheels Hell Drivers will perform Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

Milsap will perform at the Pitt County Fairgrounds Sept. 25 at 1:30 p.m. Local singer-songwriter Nicky Harris will be a special guest. Advance tickets are $10.50 and gate tickets are $12.50. Milsap's hits include "Only One Love in My Life," "Nobody Likes Sad Songs," and "Smokey Mountain Rain."

The Hell Drivers show will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at 4 p.m. daily. There will be no charge for the show. The show features 28 high-speed events and will last for one hour and 15 minutes. Community College Trustees Endorse Boost For Sales Tax

The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees has endorsed the optional half-cent sales tax for Pitt County.

At its monthly meeting Thursday the board passed a resolution supporting the tax. The resolution cited "the great need for significant capital funds for construction of critically needed facilities in order for PCC to maintain its assigned mission of providing quality technical/vocational education."

The resolution stated that there was a documented need for 149,000 square feet of additional facilities at the college necessary to meet state standards.

Board members elected Clifton Everett Sr. to his sixth term as chairman of the Board of Trustees. Kay Whichard was also reelected as vice chairman and Mary Langston as secretary.

Ephraim Smith, recently appointed to the board by the Pitt County Commissioners for a full eight-year term, and Susan Creech, PCC's elected Student Government Association president and ex officio member of the board, took the oath of office at the meeting.

A special board committee on facility needs chaired by Kay Whichard presented a report on facility needs, which was adopted by the board. The committee and Everett will meet in the future to develop recommendations for implementing the report findings.

A $6.9 million unified budget resolution containing state, county and federal funds, both revenue and appropriations, was approved by the board. Budget transfers of county and state funds were also approved.

The board was informed by the building committee that Greenville Utilities Commission has requested an easement to locate a high voltage transmission line across the south end of the PCC property. The board authorized Everett to develop recommendations regarding an easement that are acceptable to the board.

The board formally approved the following bids and contracts: construction of a respiratory therapy unit by C.A. Lewis, Inc. for $29,000; extension of water and sewer lines by Roger Haddock for $18,275; rock parking lot by E.R. Lewis Construction for $19,582 and land clearing for modular units by E.R. Lewis for $4,400. The total is $71,257.

More Evidence Is Given In Double-Slaying Case

By ROY HARDEE

The State, in the murder trial of Dwight Parker, continued today to introduce evidence found at three Pitt County locations and in Newark, N.J., during investigation of the killing of the Rev. Leslie Thorbs and Anthony Ray Herring in mid-February.

Two confessions signed by

Parker, outlining how the two men were shot and their bodies dumped into the Tar River, were introduced Thursday.

Carolyn Pippins, who faces two murder indictments and an armed robbery charge in connection with the case, was in the courtroom audience Thursday, as she has been during much of the week. She has been free on bond since her arrest.

According to testimony earlier this week, it was her information which led officers to the bodies of Thorbs, 31, and Herring, 27, and later to Parker in New Jersey.

Detective Sgt. Terry Riley of the Essex County (N.J.) sheriff's office said he located Thorbs' 1980 Cadillac in the Ivey Hill area of Newark on Feb. 28, the same day that Parker's extradition hearing was being conducted. He said he looked into the car and saw bloodstained newspapers.

A series of photographs introduced in the trial showed stains in the car, which was impounded and later processed by officers from Pitt County.

SBI Agent Dennis Honeycutt testified that he was called to the Tar River Bridge on N.C. 222 between Falkland and Belvoir on Feb. 22.

He said he found dark colored stains on the roadway and bridge columns on each side of the structure. Several hairs were also found at the bridge.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Unemployment in North Carolina dropped to 7.9 percent in August from 8.6 percent in July, the Employment Security Commission announced today.

"Better economic conditions have had a major influence on the change," said Glenn Jernigan, ESC chairman. "Apparently employers have confidence in solid economic improvement and are beginning to add workers to meet production needs."

Jernigan also announced today that North Carolina ranks first in the nation in finding jobs for unemployed workers. The U.S. Department of Labor determines the productivity ranking by dividing the total individual placements by the number of funded interviewer positions.

The ESC found jobs for more than 84,000 North Carolina workers during the nine-month period that ended June 1983. There were 390 interviewer positions that each averaged placing 227 people in jobs.

North Carolina was followed by Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and Kentucky.

North Carolina's August unemployment rate means that 233.90 people were without jobs in a civilian labor force of 2,952,700. That means 21,000 workers found jobs or were otherwise removed from the jobless ranks since July.

The national unemployment rate was 9.2 percent in August, with more than 10.4 million people without jobs.

Jernigan said average weekly hours for manufacturing workers rose to 40.7 in August from 40.1 in July. That compares with 38.2 hours in August 1982.

The nonmanufacturing division showed employment gains especially in the trade area, which the ESC attributed to seasonal activity in tobacco auction warehouses.

Construction also continued to improve and 1,700 workers were added in that area.

In the manufacturing division, the ESC reported that electrical machinery jobs dropped by 2,600 in response to uncertainties related to labor negotiations.

Average hourly earnings in August were $6.66, a 3 cent drop from hourly earnings in July and a 33 cent increase from earnings in August 1982.

Dear Abby

Mother Ignored By Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow of 70. My husband and I raised all our children with the same amount of love and understanding, but the only one who has shown any love and caring for me is our youngest. If my husband knew how the other children ignore me, he would turn over in his grave.

Abby, the youngest telephones me every evening to chat for at least half an hour and visits me often. The others, I rarely hear from (unless they want something), and if I want to know how they — or their children — are, I have to do the calling. We are on friendly terms, but it is apparent that they couldn't care less if I were dead or alive. Of course if I invite them for dinner, they are all here to put their feet under my table and fill up. But they never invite me.

The big question: Do I treat them all alike in my will? My husband left me everything. I am thinking very strongly of leaving my estate to the one who deserves it.

If I tell the others now, they will probably treat me nicer only for the money, which is as empty as an upside-down bucket. That kind of "love" I don't need. What do you say, Abby?

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Where is it written that children should automatically get what their parents have worked and saved for? Tell your lawyer how you feel. Do exactly as you please, and surprise your heirs.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter wants a big, fancy church wedding, plus a reception, band and everything that goes with it, but we can't afford it. Not only that, but she and her fiancé have been living together as man and wife for two years already. Maybe we're old-fashioned, Abby, but we don't think it's right for a couple who have been living together that way to have that kind of wedding.

Our daughter is very upset with us and thinks we should try to find the money somewhere. Both she and her fiancé work, and his parents are well-off financially. We are not. We love our daughter and want her to be happy. What should we do?

WEDDING WOES

DEAR WOES: If you can't afford to give your daughter the kind of wedding she wants, that should settle it.

Tell your daughter that you love her and want her to be happy, but she will either have to settle for a wedding that's within your means, or she and her fiancé should try to "find the money" somewhere.

DEAR ABBY: My good-looking, 19-year-old son, "John," was encouraged to go to modeling school here in our city.

Upon graduating he was accepted by a well-known modeling agency in New York.

My husband and I have been warned by someone in the fashion industry that most of the men in the modeling profession are homosexual. Since John expects to go to New York in a few months, do you or any of your readers have any advice for him other than to "forget it"? Do you think he can make it in that profession without being compromised or intimidated when he makes it plain that he is heterosexual?

Is a young man's sexual preference formed by this age, or is a man always vulnerable to try anything?

CONCERNED MOM

DEAR MOM: I have no advice for "John," since he has asked for none. But I have some for you, Mom: If your son is heterosexual, you need not worry about the possibility of his being "compromised or intimidated" by homosexuals in the modeling/fashion profession; his sexual orientation — not "preference" — will have been formed by that time.

And whether a man (or woman) is always vulnerable to "try anything" depends on the man or woman.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Following In Their Husband's Footsteps To U.S. Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressman's wife who seeks her husband's job after his death is following a tradition as old as the women's vote. By offering herself as a candidate Wednesday, Kathryn McDonald shouldered "the widow's mandate."

Thirty-two times in the last 60 years, women have been elected to their deceased husband's seats in the House of Representatives. Six times, women were appointed to spouses' unexpired terms in the Senate; once, a woman filled out her father's term in the House, and another became a delegate from Hawaii to replace her husband.

Some stayed in Congress only long enough to wind up a husband's term. But many carved out distinguished political careers.

Margaret Chase Smith, elected from Maine's 2nd Congressional District in 1940 after the death of her husband Clyde, remained in Congress until 1973. She finished her husband's term, then was re-elected for four more terms in the House and went on to four terms in the Senate.

On the other hand, Elizabeth Hawley Gasque of South Carolina was elected, but not sworn or seated, because Congress was not in session between her election in September 1938 and the expiration of her term.

Mrs. McDonald, an enthusiastic partner in her husband's conservatism, talked as though she felt the widow's mandate in her announcement in Marietta, Ga.

"There was but one Larry McDonald," she said, "but I'm the most qualified to carry on his work."

The congressman, who had represented his northwest Georgia district since 1975, died Sept. 1 on the Korean airliner shot down by the Soviet Union. "I feel an obligation to carry Larry's banner," said his widow.

The 19th Amendment to the Constitution giving the right to vote to women was ratified in 1920, but Jeanette Rankin of Montana had been elected as the first congresswoman four years before.

The third woman in the House, Winnifred Huck of Illinois, started the chain of women as fill-ins. She was elected to her father's unexpired term in 1922 — the only one ever to do that.

In the Senate, vacancies are filled by appointment; in the House by election. Congress is most solicitous of widows; it pays them their husband's salary for a year — $69,800 at present — tax-free.

The first woman senator was a substitute, but not for a family member. Rebecca Latimer Felton of Georgia took the oath Nov. 21, 1922 to fill a vacancy. She was given just enough time in the job to take the oath and make a speech on the floor. Then her successor, Walter George, was sworn in.

All but two of the 15 women who have served in the Senate were originally selected by appointment or by special election to fill unexpired terms of senators who resigned or died in office — although less than half were family. In addition to Mrs. Smith, Hattie Caraway, appointed in 1931, was subsequently re-elected, and Maureen Neuberger was elected in 1960 to fill a vacancy and for a full six-year term.

When Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., died of cancer in January 1978, his wife Muriel was appointed for the rest of his term. She did not seek election to her own term in the Senate.

Not until the election of Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas in 1978, had a woman been elected to the Senate without first having filled an unexpired term. Paula Hawkins of Florida made it No. 2 in 1980.

The latest to assume her husband's seat in the House is Sala Burton, widow of Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif. She had 10 opponents in the special election last June, one of whom called her "heir to the ideological coalition." Burton had built in California.

While the record is replete with wives who were truly handed a widow's mandate by the voters and served, however briefly, there are instances where she didn't.

The voters weren't given a choice in Indiana after three-term congressman Adam Benjamin died of a heart attack last year. Benjamin's widow wanted the job, the district Democratic chairman said no, and state senator Katie Hall won.

Some of the more successful widows include Lindy Boggs of Louisiana, who pinch-hit for her husband, Hale, then was re-elected five more times; Frances Payne Bolton of Ohio, who replaced Chester Bolton in 1940 and stayed through 1969; and Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, who succeeded John Jacobs Rogers, then was re-elected 17 times until she herself died in office in 1960.

Any recounting of take-over wives must include the Byrons of Maryland.

Katharine Edgar Byron was elected in 1941 and served out the 1½ years left in the term of her husband, William. Their son, Goodloe Byron, was elected from the same district in 1970. He died while jogging in 1978 and his widow, Beverly, was elected to his place. She still is in the House, serving the western Maryland area.

The congresswoman thus can claim that her father-in-law, mother-in-law and husband all were in Congress.

There are others, though, who kept it in the family. Sen. Howard Baker's mother served out the House term of his father. And his father-in-law was Everett Dirksen,

Worthwhile Labor

It has often been said that the housewife — or sometimes these days househusband — does not work, but rather stays home and keeps the house.

It may be comforting to those who keep house to know that their labors are valued at $7 per hour.

Cornell University researchers have calculated the value of household labor using a method which considers the lowest wage necessary to get a housewife out of the home and into the job market.

The concept of both husband and wife working is well established in our society. Frequently when both work they share the housework or hire outside help to keep the house in order.

Individually families often debate whether it is truly helpful to the family budget for the wife to seek employment rather than keep house and look after the children.

The answer varies with virtually every individual situation. One thing is certain, however. If either partner in a marriage stays home and keeps the house properly it is not a question of being non-productive. The work is worth a good $7 per hour and that is not something to be overlooked.

Optimism Helps

Tragedies have a way of repeating themselves all too often. A year ago this month it was the massacre of more than 460 Palestinians in Lebanon by militiamen who called themselves Christians.

And now, it is the Korean airliner — just as much a massacre, with 269 passengers and crewmen falling victim to a Soviet missile. The Soviets, at least, don't profess Christianity.

One could easily ask, what next? Lebanon, again? Chad? Another airliner?

It truly takes an optimist to survive.

Cleaning Up At Newport

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Flotsam and jetsam found floating in Rhode Island Sound in the wake of the 1983 America's Cup races:

— The ugly old urn bolted to an oak table in the trophy room of the New York Yacht Club (a half mile from the nearest sailable water on W. 44th St. in Manhattan) contains only 134 ounces of silver, but it's got to be the most expensive bit of bric-a-brac in the annals of sports hardware. And that's at yesterday's prices — and not withstanding the fact that in the original race around the Isle of Wight in 1851 it met the trophy requirements for "a cup of 100 guineas" value.

— The schooner America, which gave her name to the cup after beating 15 of Britain's best on that breeze-blessed August day 132 years ago, cost only $20,000. She was modeled after a New York Harbor pilot boat, but being a millionaire's toy was decorated below decks in Chinese white and gold and had a velvet and mahogany sofa in the main cabin. Queen Victoria, watching from aboard the royal yacht in Cowes harbor, was not amused to see the Yankee upstart, which the Illustrated London News had called "a violation of all established ideas of naval architecture," cross the finish line with nothing else in sight.

"Which boat is second?" she asked the weathered old quartermaster peering off into the nothingness through long binoculars.

"There is no second, Your Majesty," he glumly replied. The nearest competitor from the Royal Yacht Squadron was seven and a half miles, or more than an hour, astern.

— After that, prices kind of got out of hand, what with keen chaps like Cornelius Vanderbilt, J. Pierpont Morgan, Lord Dunraven, Sir Thomas Lipton, who made bundles from tea bags, and aircraft designer Thomas O. Sopwith of Sopwith Camel fame forming syndicates to build bigger and faster boats. Today's sleek Cup sloops carry only an 11-man crew, but a century or so ago, when 20 men crawled out on the bowsprit just to haul in the jib topsail and aboard Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie III in 1895, it took 30

British tars to raise a half acre of mainsail. The British contender Galatea in 1886 was elegantly fitted out with heavy damask draperies, oriental rugs, a large dining room table and a fireplace. Besides the crew, she sailed with a monkey, a cat and several dogs aboard. Today's boats don't even have a head.

— Sir Thomas Lipton, who spent millions upon millions in five losing attempts at "lifting the auld mug," was not much of a sailor, despite the natty nautical cap he sports on supermarket tea cartons. He usually watched the races from aboard his luxury steam yacht "Erin."

— After the original regatta off the coast of England, the Cup races were held off the Atlantic Highlands, at the entrance to New York harbor. Near the turn of the century, huge spectator fleets of fishing smacks and charter boats came out to follow the millionaires at play. Passenger steamers like the Gen. Slocum, which later carried hundreds to their deaths in a fiery disaster, the City of Lowell and the Old Dominion Line's Yorktown charged boat race fans $2 to $5 to "go out with the swells" (as Jackie Gleason's Ralph Cramden always promised Alice.) Soon the skippers, especially the losing ones, began to complain of a phenomenon called "spectator chop." In 1930 the races were moved to the waters off Newport, R.I., with the Coast Guard officially on hand to keep anyone from getting close enough to watch. This year the Coast Guard budgeted $150,000 to fend off spectator chop.

— When Wall Street crashed in 1929, the tycoons braving the deep had to cut back to more economical toys and began drag racing their 120-foot long J-boats, which only cost in the neighborhood of $5 million to design, build and equip.

Soon the great mansions on the cliffs (known as "cottages" in the Gilded Age) were shuttered and taken over by the preservation societies, and it could no longer be said, as J.P. Morgan once did, that "a man with a million dollars was as well off as if he were rich." Today's trim 12-meter yachts, which don't measure a dozen meters in any direction but conform to a complicated formula taking in the square root of this, that and a few other things, are only half as long as the magnificent J-boats but cost considerably more than half as much.

— How much does it cost now to enter this mildewed marathon off Newport? Figure about $4 million per boat answering the committee boat gun. This covers design, building and outfitting the 12-meter yacht, boatyard bills, docking fees, hiring a tow boat to haul her to the starting line and a power cruiser to follow behind with the tool kit, the champagne and the box lunches, renting a "cottage" to house and feed the team, shakedown cruises for the taming of the crew, etc.

— Liberty, this year's America's Cup defender, wasn't always a popular name for a boat around this town. Back in 1769, four years before the Boston Tea Party (which had nothing to do with Sir Thomas Lipton), local rebels protesting King George III's taxes, boarded and burned H.M.S. Liberty, a British man-of-war anchored in Newport harbor.

— The Associated Press made communications history in the 1899 America's Cup series when it hired Guglielmo Marconi and his newly invented wireless to relay puff by puff details of the victory of J.P. Morgan's Columbia over Lipton's Shamrock. The copy flowed, despite heavy mists and fog, which as the New York Herald reported "baffled land observers, signal balloons and carrier pigeons alike."

Schools Segregated By Computers Introduction

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — As American educators target deficiencies of public schools, some voices are warning that the availability of schoolroom computers might economically segregate those schools. In affluent school districts, money will be available to buy computers to teach computer science. In poorer districts, that money won't be available. The result: The children of the affluent will be better prepared to meet the job market of the next decades.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green spoke of that segregation at the September meeting of the state Board of Education. He sees it as a real possibility for North Carolina and he wants the General Assembly to make sure it doesn't happen.

Green challenged the state board to begin lobbying right now for a special line item in the state budget for school computers. The Advisory Budget commission, which is already formulating a supplemental budget for 1984-85, should put money aside solely for the purchase of instructional computers.

"Hardly a day goes by that I don't talk to someone in business or industry who tells me that every child has to have an opportunity to become computer literate," Green told the board. "Every time I mention that around here I'm told that we're already doing that — in Mecklenburg and Wake and Guilford. Well, some schools have computers, those are in affluent areas. But, a lot of them don't. The schools which don't have the computers, he said, are in poor and rural areas.

Green, a conservative spender who rarely recommends rapid fire spending to solve a problem, said it's obvious that his suggestion would take millions of dollars to implement and that the computer purchases would have to be made over several years. A legislative committee is scheduled to study the need for computer education in our schools and report to the 1984 short session in June. The board, he says, should quickly determine how many computers are already in state schools and how many North Carolina students are already computer literate.

Before the legislative committee reports, the ABC should be told to put aside money to buy computers for our students.

Green said the state should have started purchasing computers this year but the tight budget eliminated the possibility. Next year, he says, "We're going to have some money." How much? He won't predict. But, some figures floating around say the state might have as much as $200 million surplus in June. With the attention that public education is getting now and the 1984 elections, there's a good chance much of that money will go into teachers' salaries and other help for the schools.

Green's proposal drew instant criticism from Jan Holem of the N.C. School Boards Association. She said a specific line item for computer purchases would not be wise, that it would keep local school officials from spending money on what they feel are the greatest needs.

"Any money in education would be welcome," she said. "But, this is another case of trying to tie the hands of local school boards. There are a lot of things local systems need more than computers. Some need them. But, some have already spent local money to buy computers and this is an area where businesses are making donations. So, some school districts wouldn't be able to use this money."

But Jimmy Green thinks every child in the state should be studying computer science whether or not his school has the money, or the interest, to buy the computers. In the Legislature, Green usually gets his way.

The White House Spare Parts Garage Sale

The Pentagon was having a spare parts garage sale the other day, and I went over to see if I could pick up any bargains. There were spare parts spread all over the parking lot.

I picked up a Phillips screwdriver, and a colonel came over and warned me, "If you break it you pay for it."

"How much is it?"

The colonel looked in a book. "I'll let you have it for $760."

"Seven hundred and sixty dollars for a screwdriver?"

"We paid $990 for it. It's a heckuva bargain. This is not an ordinary screwdriver. It was made to screw bolts in F-16s."

"Let me think it over. What else have you got?"

"Here's a chief petty officer's flashlight that you can't pass up. It's yours for $230, without batteries."

"How much are the batteries?"

The colonel referred to his book. "We paid $140 for two. I'll throw in the batteries for $50 if you take the flashlight for $220."

"You'll be losing a lot of money on the deal."

"This is a garage sale, and we've been told to get rid of our spare parts before Congress finds out how much we've been paying for them," the colonel said.

"What are these little black squares?"

"They're silicon chips for our night fighters. The aviation company who made the fighters sold them to us for $1,500 apiece. But you can have a dozen for $999."

"You can buy these chips in any Radio Shack for $4.95," I said.

"We just found that out," he replied. "That's why we're selling them so cheap."

"What are these tires over here?"

"They're for mobile missile launchers. They're a steal. The defense contractor charged us $1,200 for each tire, but we've reduced them to $600."

"How can you afford a 50 percent markdown?"

"We're suing the contractor for overcharging us $900 a tire, and if we win we'll come out ahead."

"And if you lose?"

"It doesn't matter because every time we fire a missile all the tires on the launcher blow out."

"I really don't need any tires."

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

It is surprising that Jesus left the world without providing much of an organization to continue his work and teachings. To be sure, he left the twelve apostles. They were to be the nucleus about which all future effort was to be carried on.

But what perhaps makes up for this lack of formal organization was contained in his last statement to the disciples, "Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

While this witnessing went on during the first three Christian centuries the Church had a vigor and a rich faith greater than it has ever had since. Neighbors witnessed to neighbors, merchants to fellow merchants, travelers to other travelers. The word grew and multiplied through witnessing.

The Church is highly organized today, but it is not the witnessing body it should be. We serve the Lord best by being witnessing followers of his wherever we are.

When Statistics Just Don't Add Up

NEW YORK (AP) — What do you do when two and two equals three, or seven or even 11, except contemplate the mystery — and maybe wait for a revision?

In this day of instant, computer-derived numbers, it seems a lot of statistics don't add up, which isn't at all the way it's supposed to be in a world already sufficiently confusing.

You may recall that when big computers were first employed to track the billions of pieces of data that government uses to build a picture of the economy, it was thought that numbers were hard things that wouldn't bend.

Maybe they don't, but something happens to them that can't always be explained easily, and the consequences add up to more than a mere entertaining riddle. Decisions, big fast ones, are made on the basis of numbers.

There are some obvious explanations.

Early reports of retail sales, for example, are subject to revision because of additional data. And data on jobs are subject to seasonal adjustments by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Such things are well understood, however.

Those who follow retail sales know that one month's rise may occur only because the rate for the previous month was simultaneously revised lower.

And those who follow job statistics know that the number of people actually employed can fall, while the seasonally adjusted jobless rate also falls. That is, they know the job picture can weaken while the statistic strengthens.

Rather than dwell upon these eccentricities, which are well understood by professionals, just remember what statistician Albert Sindinger likes to say: that seasonally adjusted, Lake Erie never freezes over.

But what do you do, other than scratch your head, when you are presented with these statistics, as you were during the past month?

—An 8.4 percent rise in August housing starts to the highest level in nearly five years, despite a simultaneous rise in mortgage rates that almost everyone had concluded would bring homebuilding to its knees.

—A sharp increase in the amount of automobile credit outstanding in August at the same time that auto sales declined.

The ubiquitous and often anonymous "analysts," who seem to be quoted all the time these days, are dodging interviews as they seek to determine what to make of these apparently conflicting bits of information.

There is, however, a type of statistic watcher who is accustomed to conflicts and mysteries and who, nevertheless, remains on the battle front. He is the Fed

"If you want a good buy you ought to take one of these M-1 tank transmissions. We paid $400,000 for each one, but we're letting them go for $50,000."

"Do they work?"

"If they worked do you think we'd be selling them for $50,000?"

"Are those Army pup tents over there?"

"You better believe it. They've never been used. The list price was $6,000 for each one, but because it's General Patton's birthday, we're giving them away for $4,000 today. You'll never get to buy a pup tent at that price again."

"I've been to garage sales before," I said, "but this one beats them all."

The colonel said, "The way we look at it is the taxpayer paid for these things, so he should get first crack at buying them at a discount. It's our way of thanking him for supporting the military buildup."

"There are so many bargains, I'd like to buy everything in the parking lot."

"I wish you would. It would get me off the hook."

"Why?"

"I was the chief purchasing officer for the Pentagon until they found out this $5,000 walkie-talkie could be bought at Sears Roebuck for $18.95."

Senate Votes Slash United Nations Contribution

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advocates of slashing U.S. payments to the United Nations by nearly half claim the Senate's passage of the dramatic cutback reflects national frustration with the international organization. But GOP leaders are fighting to keep the action from ever becoming law, calling it a threat to world stability.

The 66-23 vote Thursday night, which enjoyed wide bipartisan support in the Republican-run chamber despite Reagan administration objections, would chop this nation's monetary contribution to the United Nations by nearly $500 million over the next four years. The United States now contributes about 25 percent of the total U.N. budget.

It would reduce the U.S. payments by 21 percent in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, then by another 10 percent in each of the next three years. By 1987, the U.S. payment would fall to $200 million — compared to the $363 million this nation is scheduled to contribute to the United Nations in 1984.

"I think it was an unfortunate vote. But I'm sure it's not the last word we'll hear on the subject," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today the administration hoped the money would be restored in later votes. When asked whether the vote would damage President Reagan when he visits the UN on Monday, Speakes pointed out the "action is not final."

But backers of the move asserted it was high time the United States reviewed its commitment to the United Nations, which has had its headquarters in New York City since its creation in 1945.

"Spending at the United Nations is out of control," said Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., author of the fund-cutting amendment.

Thirty-nine Republicans and 27 Democrats supported her proposal, tacking it onto a bill authorizing a variety of State Department programs.

The Senate was expected to give its approval to the overall bill later today, sending it to a House-Senate conference committee. The House version of the State Department legislation does not contain the U.N. cutback.

Baker and other opponents of the move indicated they were hopeful the amendment could be killed in the conference panel.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who voted for the cut, said he did so out of frustration "by the fact that a lot of members of the U.N. seem to think that the U.S. can do no right and the Soviet Union can do no wrong ... We get criticized by everyone. Let somebody else pick up the tab."

But Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate

Foreign Relations Committee, said the vote sent the worst possible signal to the world in this time of heightened U.S.-Soviet tension.

"This is a mistake. We are undercutting the very agency on which we depend to maintain peace and stability in the world," Percy said.

Mrs. Kassebaum conceded that "this is a difficult time to raise this."

But, she told the Senate, "It means that the U.N. will have to look to its budget just as we are struggling with our budget."

"The U.N. budget has become bloated," she said later in a session with reporters. "We have international bureaucrats that we're financing that are 25 percent above the salaries we pay our own bureaucrats ... (But) We have lost a sense of voice and participation in the United Nations, yet we pay an inordinate amount of money (to finance it)."

Of the Democratic presidential candidates in the Senate, only Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina voted, casting his ballot against the measure. Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado all missed the late-evening vote.

Another SBI agent, Jim Taub, said field tests indicated that the dark stains were blood.

The bodies of both Thorbs and Herring were thrown from the bridge into the rain-swollen river, their bodies weighted down by cinder blocks. The block attached to Thorbs' body weighed 87 pounds, according to testimony.

Honeycutt said blood stains were also found in a trash barrel behind Ms. Pippins home, in a car belonging to Ms. Pippins' sister, and at the end of a dirt path near Ms. Pippins home. Officers say the two men were slain there and their bodies transferred from Thorbs' car to Ms. Pippins' sisters car.

The SBI agent said he and Pitt Deputy Billy Tripp processed Thorbs' car in Newark. He said numerous blood stains and newspapers — including a copy of The Daily Reflector dated Feb. 18, and a copy of the Newark Star-Ledger dated Feb. 19 — were found in the car.

This morning expert witnesses from the SBI testified that blood stains found on the bridge, in the two cars and from the dirt path near Ms. Pippins' home were from blood typing groups A and O. Earlier testimony showed that Thorbs had type O blood, while Herring had type A.

SBI experts also said the bullets found in the two bodies were fired from a .38 caliber pistol.

Parker, in his confession, said he used a stolen .38 caliber pistol to shoot Thorbs and Herring and that he threw the pistol into the river.

Court observers said today that unless there is a surprise development, the trial will take most of next week, and some think even longer.

It took two weeks to seat the jury.

Pianist Aiding Polish Relief

LONDON (AP) — Australian pianist Alan Kogosowski, who refused to let a broken hand wreck his career, is helping raise funds for SOS Poland, an organization that sends provision to Poland in the winter.

The 30-year-old Kogosowski, who was in an auto accident when he was 21 and smashed all the bones of his right hand, gave an all-Chopin concert in a London church Thursday night.

The son of Polish migrants who went to Australia after World War II, Kogosowski performed before a full house at St. Peter's in west London's Hammersmith district.

The pianist, known to American audiences from "The Ed Sullivan Show," told The Associated Press that after specialists saved his hand he exercised it to make it stronger than it had ever been.

$55,000 Grant Is Announced

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded a $55,000 grant to state preservationists to help support the compiling of a major study of the state's historic buildings.

Tentatively titled "The Buildings of North Carolina," the book is a joint project of the Federation of North Carolina Historical Societies, the National Society of Architectural Historians and the Survey and Planning Branch of the Archaeology and Historic Preservation Section, a unit of the state Department of Cultural Resources' Division of Archives and History.

The book is a pilot state project in a national series initiated by SAH entitled "The Buildings of the United States."

Flooded After Canal 'Broke'

ANDERSON, Calif. (AP) — City officials declared a state of emergency after a 70-foot hole in an irrigation canal's earthen walls sent water surging through streets, flooding 40 homes.

The hole grew in two hours to 200 feet, under the pressure of heavy rain, before the canal intake was shut off at about 5 a.m. Thursday, said police Officer Tim York.

By nightfall the water had receded enough to let residents go home and a four-block area be reopened. York said officials did not know the cause of the break. The irrigation system serves farms, ranches and small communities in southern Shasta County.

Losing Jobs Due To Exam Grades

Eighteen or more registered nurse applicants — spring graduates of two- or four-year programs — who did not pass the state nursing examination in July, will lose their jobs at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the near future.

PCMH Senior Vice President Fred Brown said Thursday that those "who did not pass the boards will not be kept on the payroll.

"It was a tough decision to make," Brown said, "but in light of budget restrictions" and changes in the Medicare and third-party reimbursement systems, "those people cannot function as registered nurses. Unfortunately, we don't have positions for them in a lesser capacity."

The employees being terminated were among a group of 100 or more registered nurse candidates hired in May, June and early July, before the state exam was given.

Brown said "at last count" there were 18 persons affected by what he described as "a management decision."

Other sources at the hospital said the number of persons losing their jobs could be higher because documentation had not been received earlier in the week, for seven or eight others who took the examination.

Brown said the decision to terminate those who did not pass the exam in July will not affect the status of those persons — about 25 — who graduated and were hired after the exam was given.

That group of registered nurse applicants will take the exam in February.

Brown said "we're working with the hospital's human resources (department) to work out a severance arrangement," and to help them find other positions.

Advised Avoid Any Comments

In a brief statement Thursday afternoon, Pitt County Memorial Hospital President Jack Richardson said he had been advised by attorneys not to make any comment about the suspension of Betty Trought as vice president for nursing services at the hospital.

Reading from a prepared statement, Richardson said "I'm in the process of reorganizing senior management responsibilities in nursing services and am advised by legal council that no other statements are appropriate at this time."

"At a future date, an announcement will be made about this reorganization."

Asked if he would confirm that Mrs. Trought had, in fact, been suspended, Richardson said "I can not do that," and declined to make any other comments.

Mrs. Trought said Thursday morning that she had been placed on suspension Wednesday afternoon. She has headed nursing services at the hospital for the past four years.

"I'm not sure I understand what happened," Mrs. Trought said Thursday morning. "I was called in at 10

(a.m.) and told a decision had been made about the vice president for nursing position and asked for my resignation. I couldn't understand why that was happening," and "asked for some time." She said she was "given two hours to make a decision."

Mrs. Trought said she refused to resign at a noon meeting and was "suspended" by Richardson.

She said the meetings involved herself, Richardson and Fred Brown, senior vice president at PCMH.

Saying she was not provided with specifics, Mrs. Trought said Richardson told her the action involved problems with her "credibility with the medical staff, the board of trustees and other groups."

Harry Leslie, PCMH board chairman said Thursday that questions concerning Mrs. Trought were discussed by the board, in an executive session, Tuesday night, but said no action was taken. He would not say what the discussions involved.

Robber, Lawyer Are Arraigned

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — Convicted armed robber William T. Kirk and the female lawyer charged with helping him flee sat silent as their lawyers entered innocent pleas for them on charges of escape, aggravated kidnapping and armed robbery.

Kirk, 36, and his former lawyer, 26-year-old Mary Evans, ignored each other Thursday as they were arraigned on charges stemming from their alleged escape from a psychologist's office. Authorities say they spent 139 days on the run in Florida and North Carolina.

Experience Teaches Us That 'Life Is Not Fair'

By GAIL MICHAELS
Zachary's two favorite expressions are "it's too hard" and "it's not fair." Phillip and I are cruel parents; having heard it all before, we don't give much credence to his complaints. But this doesn't keep Zachary from applying them with increasing infrequency to every situation which excites within him the least bit of revulsion.

When applicable, "it's too hard" is usually his first line of defense against unreasonable demands. It is, for example, too hard to transfer the Loc-Blocs from his carpet to their bucket. (It was not, of course, particularly difficult to dump them out in the first place.)

It's no harder for him to pick them up than for me, I tell him. But he has an answer to this, too. "Your hands are bigger," he explains.

Naturally, because of this enormous advantage on my part, my refusal to participate in the clean-up is decidedly "not fair."

So is my insistence that he feed himself his vegetables. For some reason, peas are excruciatingly difficult to eat. Ice cream, on the other hand, is not hard at all. He has no trouble picking up a utensil meant for anything made with sugar. It must be the vitamins, then, that make those same utensils slip from his fingers and clatter to the floor when confronted with squash, okra or spinach.

My unfairness is compounded by my inclusion of him in distasteful activities that should have nothing to do with him at all. Going to the bank is one such activity. Going shopping for anything besides trucks, cars or candy is another. In these instances, I often pay dearly for my unsporting behavior.

Particularly galling to him is my determination to drag him along on my morning walks. Neither of my children has any use for exercise per se. They may find swinging on the chandelier or jumping on the bed great fun, but anything more strenuous or less free-form than these activities is unacceptable.

Now although I can understand this attitude, mainly because I shared it for the first 31 years of my life, I have recently discovered that in order to breathe, I must get some regular exercise. Walking seemed the less objectionable alternative, so another displaced North Carolinian and I, both of the opinion that talking makes exertion almost bearable, together began a daily round of the neighborhood.

Zachary, however, has gained no solace from our conversations. "I hate to walk," he tells me each morning.

"Then you don't have to. You can ride in your stroller."

But Heaven forbid that he humiliate himself at the advanced age of three by submitting to such a conveyance. Instead, he drags along behind me moaning, "It's too hard," during half the walk and begging, "Pick me up," during the other half.

"For the last time, no," I told him yesterday. "You're too big and heavy."

"But I'm just a little boy."

"If you're too big to ride in a stroller, you're certainly too big for me to carry."

"I don't feel too big."

"Well you are."

He stamped his foot. "But it's not fair!"

I had my pat answer ready. "Life is not always fair. As you get older you have to learn to accept some things you don't like."

A big tear rolled down his cheek. "I don't like getting older. It's too hard."

I know what he means.

Learned To Kick Boots

CHICAGO (AP) — A few residents apparently have learned how to kick off the "Denver Boot," a device city workers attach to a wheel of a car if the owner owes parking fines.

In the week since Chicago adopted the boot as a solution to a multi-million dollar problem of unpaid parking tickets, two of the devices have been illegally removed, police say.

The boot, locked to the wheel to keep the vehicle from being moved, was introduced in Chicago with fanfare Sept. 13.

City officials said a boot could be removed only by a city worker with a key. They also said the worker would not remove the boot until the parking fine was paid.

That was the theory.

The first boot was missing last week — along with the Jeep to which it was attached. The mangled boot was found a day later in the rear of the Jeep, which the owner said had been stolen.

The second boot was clamped onto a station wagon in the downtown area. The owner said he had paid his $260 in parking tickets and the $35-debating fee, but when he arrived Thursday with a city worker to have the device removed, the boot was already gone.

Streets and Sanitation workers said they didn't remove it. That boot is still missing.

FOUND GUILTY — Dr. Edward F. Jackson stands impassively in an Akron, Ohio courtroom as a jury found him guilty of 60 felonies, including 21 rapes. The Columbus internist could receive a total of 1,370 years in prison if the maximum penalties for the crimes are imposed. (AP Laserphoto)

Ruling Delayed On Jurors Opposed To Death Penalty

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Four convicted murderers are challenging North Carolina's practice of not letting death penalty opponents sit on juries that might be asked

Will Probe Allegations

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Fred Hensley says he welcomes an investigation of allegations that he received loans from a gambler and will take a lie-detector test if asked. District Attorney Ronald Brown said Thursday he would ask the State Bureau of Investigation to probe the allegations. Brown said he reached the decision after hearing a tape recording supplied by a city council member. "I listened to the tape," Brown said. "Although its credibility is highly questionable, in view of the news coverage and furor it has created, I have asked the SBI to look into the allegations of corruption."

Pless produced the tape Wednesday, saying it was given to him by former Asheville police officers Miles Goforth and Bobby Medford who resigned about a month ago after serving 12 years apiece on the force.

The 20-minute tape has an interview between a man identified only as a "well-known gambler" and Goforth, Medford and a third unidentified police officer, Brown said.

The "gambler" says he occasionally would heed requests of Hensley and other high-ranking police officers for loans until payday. The reputed gambler says on the tape he feared arrest if he asked to be paid back.

Brown said that the SBI investigation will focus only on the corruption allegations, not on department policies.

Hensley said Wednesday the allegations were "sour grapes" on the part of Goforth and Medford.

Fuel Oils Fall As Heat Source

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fuel oils have fallen in popularity as a home heating source in North Carolina while electrically-heated houses have grown rapidly, according to a recently released U.S. Census report.

While four out of 10 homes continue to use fuel oils for home heating, the number of homes using fuel oils has actually dropped from 930,000 in 1970 to 820,000 in 1980. Meanwhile, homes headed by electricity have grown from 160,000 to 600,000.

The pattern of energy use in North Carolina is markedly different now than 30 years ago, the report said. In 1950, the leading fuel source in the state was wood, followed by coal or coke and fuel oils.

The percentage of wood use dropped from 36 percent in 1950 to 4 percent in 1970, but by 1980 that figure had increased to 8 percent. In 1970, 61 percent of all households in the state used fuel oils as their primary heating source but that figure had dropped substantially by 1980.

to impose capital punishment.

U.S. District Judge James McMillan delayed indefinitely Wednesday a ruling on arguments by attorneys for the convicts that the practice violates defendants' constitutional right to a fair and impartial jury.

Deputy Attorney General Richard League, representing the state, responded that death penalty opponents might have such strong beliefs that they'd acquit defendants they believed were guilty just to ensure they won't get the death sentence.

Wednesday's hearing was the first challenge to the practice heard in federal court in North Carolina. State appellate courts have ruled against the convicts fighting the practice.

The U.S. Supreme Court has yet to rule on the issue. John Spenkelink, a Florida prisoner, raised a similar challenge, but the court refused to rule on it and allowed his 1979 execution with the question still unanswered.

The North Carolina cases involve the Mecklenburg County murder convictions of Charles Keeten in 1976 and Bernard Avery in 1978, and the Gaston County convictions of Ted Carter in 1975 and Larry Williams in 1980. Williams has been sentenced to death.

If McMillan rules for the prisoners and is upheld on appeal, the convicts would get new trials. Trial procedures of all death penalty cases would have to be changed, possibly to require separate sentencing juries.

Currently, prospective jurors who say they never could impose a death sentence are not allowed to serve in death-penalty murder cases.

In capital murder cases, a jury first must determine guilt or innocence and then decide on the punishment after a separate hearing. Attorneys for the prisoners acknowledge that anti-death penalty jurors could not fairly determine the issue of life or death, but they contend such jurors should be allowed participate in the first part of the trial.

Sam Gross, lawyer and Stanford University law professor, outlined the case for the prisoners. He presented studies concluding that jurors opposed to the death penalty are less likely to convict prisoners than jurors with other beliefs.

Gross said the exclusion of death penalty opponents deprives defendants of a jury that represents a true cross-section of community beliefs.

But League argued that staunch death-penalty opponents would be likely to "nullify" the law by acquitting a guilty defendant to avoid the chance that another jury would sentence him to death.

"Hard-core (anti-death-penalty) jurors, although they say they can convict on sufficient evidence, are really lying about it," he said.

McMillan asked: "How do you know when (jurors) lie? Could you possibly determine that the accused was just innocent rather than being acquitted by a hard-core nullifier?"

PRESENT CHECK — North Carolina House members, Walter Jones Jr. and Ed Warren (far right) present a $10,000 check from the state, to Kay Warren, executive director of the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and the festival's president, Gene Akins, Thursday. According to Rep. Warren, the money, appropriated by the 1983 General Assembly, will be matched by the tobacco festival to promote the annual event. The festival is held each year to promote the sale and use of tobacco in North Carolina. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Town Pays For Skunks

THERMOPOLIS, Wyo. (AP) — After a summer of unwelcome company, officials have found a professional to take care of their problem. And it hasn't been easy. It costs $35 for each dead skunk.

Cal King, a retired game and fish biologist, has been hired by the town to get rid of skunks. A spokeswoman at the police department said the program started in mid-August after officials were deluged with complaints from residents about hundreds of the bushy-tailed mammals.

The varmints are live-trapped and then disposed of, the spokeswoman said, adding that it was hard tracking down a professional who "does skunks."

Sandy Downs at the town clerk's office said at last count 51 skunks have been caught, but an estimated 200 skunks remain in the town.

Eleven animals were taken from just one building that was being torn down, she said.

Thermopolis is paying King $35 a skunk, and police say the effort apparently is paying off. They've had fewer complaints since the program has been in force. It is due to run until Oct. 1.

Extension Of Benefits To Jobless Advancing

WASHINGTON (AP) — People in states with unemployment rates of 5 percent or more could get a maximum 12 weeks of federal supplemental compensation.

Program Is Accredited

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Nursing Board's decision to accredit N.C. A&T State University's nursing program is "a magnificent moment for this institution," says its chancellor.

The nursing board decided Thursday to give full accreditation to the program, which officials have struggled to upgrade because so few of its graduates passed the state nursing exam. At one point, the rate fell below 30 percent.

A&T officials learned last week that the overall passing rate for the last two years was 69.76 percent — just shy of the 70 percent the board said was needed to continue the university's nursing program. July's passing rate was nearly 80 percent.

The board's decision "signals the reality that the master plan which we began in 1981 is working," said A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort at a news conference Thursday.

"We have labored tirelessly in vineyard of preparation ... to achieve the reality of this moment," Fort said. "The university family can be proud of that which has now been accomplished, and we fully intend to continue with this forward-moving program in the semesters and years ahead."

tion payments under a bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The committee agreed Thursday to an 18-month extension of the program, which expires Sept. 30 unless Congress takes action.

Under the current program, there is a 14-week maximum period of payments for people who have exhausted their other benefits and live in states with at least 6 percent insured unemployment rates. The Senate bill would provide 12 weeks in states with a rate of 5 percent or more.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved a 45-day extension of the program and increased the maximum period of benefits to 16 weeks. Its version also contains a so-called reachback provision supplying benefits for some who have exhausted supplemental payments, a provision strongly opposed by the Reagan administration.

The Senate version, which does not contain a reachback provision, is supported by the administration. However, some members of the committee said they would attempt to add such a provision when the bill gets to the floor.

The reason the House version is for such a short period is that leaders hope to use a future extension bill for the popular program as a vehicle for a tax-increase measure.

The Senate bill provides 10 weeks of benefits in states with an insured unemployment rate ranging from 4 percent to 5 percent; eight weeks in states with a rate from 3 percent to 4 percent and six weeks in all other states.

The Labor Department estimates that the supplemental program will pay some $5.6 billion in benefits to over 5 million people from Sept. 12, 1982, through Sept. 30, 1983. The 18-month extension is estimated to cost $3.75 billion.

The insured unemployment rate is determined by the number of people in a state claiming regular benefits divided by the number of people in jobs covered by the state's unemployment insurance law.

The committee also approved extending for one year a provision of the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act authorizing federal matching for payments made on behalf of children voluntarily placed in foster care.

No Resolution To Budget Deficits Appears Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite dire warnings from the White House, another congressional budget deadline is passing with little apparent movement toward reducing record federal deficits.

Various legislative panels were to turn over to the House and Senate Budget Committees today their outlines of how they would translate into law the general spending cuts and tax increases mandated by the Budget Resolution both houses approved earlier this year.

But the House wasn't even in session, and the deadline appeared to be passing as quietly as an earlier one had last July.

The problem, by most accounts, is the same as it has been for months: An unwillingness by congressmen to take bold budget-cutting stands while the president and Democratic congressional leaders are stalemated in disagreement over tax increases.

On Thursday, President Reagan's chief economist had said Congress had only a few weeks to move decisively toward cutting the deficits in order to avoid a sour future including more years of red ink and a permanent loss of money needed to keep the economy healthy.

Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said in a speech in Indianapolis that failure to cut the deficit from this year's expected $200 billion would cause economic weakness that could make later cutting even more difficult and costly.

"We may have reached an impasse in the budget process," he said. "But the deficit problem is so critical that I sincerely hope that that is false and that Congress will recognize the need for immediate action."

"If the stalemate persists, the budget deficit will only get worse. And as the national debt accumulates, the government will inevitably have to raise future taxes even more just to pay the interest on the extra debt," he said.

Feldstein said Reagan has shown he is willing to accept tax increases along with spending cuts.

"The president believes that the next step is up to Congress and that they must be prepared to accept spending cuts as well as tax increases," he said.

However, the Reagan tax increases he referred to were those in a contingency program that was part of the president's budget recommendations sent to Capitol Hill last winter. Those increases would not begin taking effect until two years from now — and then only if big spending cuts had also been voted.

That proposal is given virtually no chance of passage — especially in light of the fact that Feldstein is the only administration official who has even been mentioning it for months.

Meanwhile, the Budget Resolution calls for $73 billion in tax increases over the next three years, including $12 billion in fiscal 1984.

Reagan indicated again on Thursday that he opposes that idea, saying simply, "Rather than moan and weep about my stubborn refusal to raise taxes, I urge all of those of good will to work with me."

In the meantime, while that disagreement simmers, legislators themselves have shown little enthusiasm for translating the tax-increasing generalities of their own Budget Resolution into specifics either.

The House Appropriations Committee has seemed to be making better headway than some had expected in holding spending plans down for the fiscal year that begins in one week. But no one is predicting those efforts will significantly reduce deficits that are projected at $180 billion or more for fiscal 1984.

Congressional budget leaders have also expressed concern about the stalemate, and the Congressional Budget Office has said that if no substantial action is taken the deficits could continue in the $200 billion range for years to come — the same prediction Feldstein has made.

It is widely agreed that if Congress fails to take substantial budget action by the end of the current term, there will be little deficit-trimming before 1985 since legislators are reluctant to cut programs or raise taxes in an election year.

But Feldstein said such delay could make things worse. "If nothing is done legislatively before 1985, the economy is likely to be too weak in 1985 to accept the impact of a significant immediate tax increase," he said.

O'Neill Putting A Choke Hold On Move To Increase IMF Support

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill is putting a choke hold on President Reagan's plan to increase support for the International Monetary Fund in retaliation for a Republican campaign letter accusing 20 House Democrats of "supporting communism."

"Unless the president apologizes for the letter from the Republican Campaign Committee, O'Neill will not appoint conferees to work out differences in the House and Senate versions or schedule a vote for final approval of the bill," Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., told reporters Thursday.

Mrs. Boxer, president of the House Democrats' freshmen caucus, asked O'Neill to take the step, which effectively freezes action on the bill.

The move to delay the bill authorizing an $8.5 billion shot-in-the-arm for the international lending agency comes as top financial officials from around the world gather in Washington for the IMF's annual meeting.

A key issue at the bankers' and economists' sessions will be the Reagan administration's failure to get its IMF legislation through Congress.

Also, the Fund reportedly has been forced for the first time in its 38-year history to cut back on some existing loan commitments and delay any new talks on helping poor countries because its loan sources are overcommitted.

The IMF's 146 members agreed last year to bolster the bank's lending pools by adding $32 billion. The United States' decision on its share is key, since it is one of the largest contributors.

The administration has backed the IMF increase as a means of helping stave off international financial chaos, because the international lending agency has become a major impetus in helping manage the mammoth debt accumulated by developing nations like Brazil and Mexico.

Although the administration got the Senate and House to pass the IMF legislation, it ran up against fierce opposition from those who regard it as a bail-out of international banks that have made imprudent loans to the heavily indebted Third World nations.

But the letter, sent earlier this summer, angered numerous House members on both sides of the aisle.

Mrs. Boxer said her group of 60 Democrats was "outraged" by the "red-baiting tactics" of the Republican Congressional Committee.

They met with O'Neill and issued a letter warning that an attack on their patriotism had been made, "resurrecting the policies of the shameful era of McCarthyism."

The Republican letter, sent to 20 Democrats' home districts, accused them of "supporting communism" because during consideration of the measure, they voted against an amendment that would bar IMF loans to communist-ruled nations.

It accused them of showing "total disrespect for freedom," and quoted from Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, as saying, "What gives them the right to vote to support communism?" Gramm sponsored the amendment, which was carried on a 242-185 vote.

Several administrations have backed IMF loans in the past to nations such as Hungary, Romania, and Yugoslavia as a means of retrieving them from the Soviet orbit.

The Reagan administration opposed the Gramm amendment, and even top Republican leaders as Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois had joined the Democrats in voting against it. But only Democrats were the focus of the letter.

Mrs. Boxer said the Democrats are demanding a written apology from Reagan, a full disclosure of the names and organizations that received the letter and that a retraction be sent to all who originally received the letter, at the cost of the Republican Committee.

Other more senior House members that were targeted by the letter have made similar demands, but received no response. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., threatened last week to kill the IMF bill because of the letter, while Reps. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., and Jerry Patterson, D-Calif., wrote Reagan twice, telling him a "public apology is long overdue."

N.C. Woman Is Set For Quints

TABERNACLE, N.C. (AP) — A Tabernacle man whose wife is expecting the state's first quintuplets on record says doctors will decide Saturday whether to admit his wife to a High Point hospital.

Tim Small said Thursday he and his wife Kathy already have five cribs waiting for the babies. Mrs. Small was due to deliver the infants Sept. 14.

"We're just waiting now," said Small, 28. "We're just trying to take every day as it comes and be calm."

Mrs. Small will undergo a regular weekly check-up Saturday at High Point Memorial Hospital, Small said. Doctors will decide then whether to admit her and induce labor.

Until last week, Mrs. Small 32, believed she was going to have triplets. But her weight had soared from 100 pounds to 212, and doctors administered an ultra-sound test. The test showed Mrs. Small was carrying quintuplets — believed to be three boys and two girls.

Doctors say they expect the infants to weigh 4 to 5 pounds apiece.

Mrs. Small, who took no fertility drugs, has three sons from a previous marriage. She underwent surgery several years ago and had been told she couldn't have any more children.

The quintuplets will be the first born in North Carolina since the state began keeping records 35 years ago.

Escapee Caught 6 Hours Later

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old inmate was caught some six hours after locking up two jailers and escaping from the Surry County jail early Thursday morning, authorities said.

James Keith Ledford was captured about 10:45 a.m. at a house where he had stopped to make a telephone call, Surry County Sheriff Bill Hall said.

"He had called somebody and they gave us a tip," Hall said late Thursday afternoon in a telephone interview.

Hall said Ledford escaped about 4:30 a.m. by crawling through a vent and then taking the guns of two jailers and locking them in a cell.

Ledford has been charged with two counts of second-degree kidnapping and one count each of escape and possession of a dangerous weapon by an inmate, Hall said.

Ledford was originally being held on armed robbery and breaking and entering, Hall said.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHAT CAUSED JUDAH TO BECOME GREAT?

THE TRIBE OF JUDAH HAD NO STAMP OF GREATNESS ON IT UNTIL DAVID BECAME KING. KING SAUL HAD BEEN A BENJAMINITE AND WITH HIS DEATH AT THE HANDS OF THE PHILISTINE ARMY DAVID TOOK OVER THE HELM OF LEADERSHIP AND ALSO THE THRONE OF ISRAEL. THE TRIBE OF JUDAH WAS ONLY TOO GLAD TO ACCEPT DAVID AS ITS NEW KING, REMOVING THEM FROM THE SUBSERVIENT OF THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN. BUT ALL OF THE TRIBES WERE HAPPY TO PLEDGE THEIR ALLEGIANCE TO THIS HERO WHO HAD, AMONG OTHER THINGS, DOWNED THE CHAMPION PHILISTINE GOLIATH! AND WHAT A PICTURE HE MADE, WITH HIS HANDSOME FEATURES, AND RUDDY COMPLEXION AND ATHLETIC PHYSIQUE! AND HOW THE PEOPLE CHEERED WHEN HE STARTED HIS REIGN. A STORYBOOK HERO IF EVER THERE WAS ONE!

FOOD STAMP REPORT Will Be Required
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some 20,000 North Carolina families will soon be required by federal law to complete monthly reports to receive food stamps, state officials say.
The law is expected to affect about 10 percent of the state's food stamp families. The reports will be evaluated by the local county departments of social services to determine whether the families are eligible to continue receiving public assistance, said Larry Goolsby, chief of food stamp operations for the North Carolina Department of Human Resources' Division of Social Services.
The new monthly reporting procedure, which goes into effect Oct. 1, was established by Congress in an effort to reduce errors and fraud in the nation's food stamp program.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
In classical Christian thought, the woes of the world and of the people in it stem from a single, pervasive and underlying condition — an ailment called "sin".
The word isn't fashionable these days, despite the steady tromp of wrongdoings stamped in the headlines, and it's often been muffled, even in the churches. But it's getting sharpened attention.
That deep-rooted blight, with all its ramifications, mystery and counter-forces to it, is the focus for extensive deliberations, starting at the Vatican Sept. 29, of representatives of the world's Roman Catholic bishops.

"The fundamental cause of all divisions in men's souls and their societies is sin, or the evil that man does freely before God," says a 49-page study document for the sixth general Synod of Bishops.
It has met every three years since being established in 1965 at the close of the Second Vatican Council to advise the pope.
The onset of sin, as portrayed in the Book of Genesis, was when the first man, Adam, sought to seize full control, be God himself, decide his own rules.
That egocentric, domineering impulse — to regard self as the utmost — is seen at the core of every tyranny, every heedless oppression, cruelty, conflict, crime and greed, every selfish injustice and deprivation, both in social systems and personal strife.

While various explanations — psychological, sociological, economic and political — are given for the "hostilities, disorders and unjust structures," the "root cause is sinfulness," says Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, a U.S. delegate to the synod.
Other U.S. delegates are Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, president of the U.S. bishops' conference; Archbishop Patrick F. Flores of San Antonio and Auxiliary Bishop Austin B. Vaughan of New York.
"It may be popular to pooh-pooh sin," Bernardin writes, "but deep down we know better — we know we are weak and sinful."
"If we deny this, we create problems for ourselves and begin to suffer from nameless anxieties and guilty feelings which we cannot remove because we refuse to acknowledge their source in sin."

Encouraging and helping people to respond to it, he adds, is the church's mission.
But an obstacle to it cited by Bernardin and by numerous other church scholars, as well as by some psychiatrists, is that many people have lost any sense of sin.
As noted psychiatrist Karl Minninger puts it in his book "Whatever Happened to Sin?" the term has virtually disappeared, but he says it remains a fact of the human condition and must be recognized to cope with it.
He says reaffirmation of the concept of "sin" and of personal involvement and responsibility in it is "the only hopeful view," since it implies the possibility of repenting and correcting wrongdoing.

Pope John Paul II, talking earlier about the synod, said reconciliation of humanity with God necessitates reviving a greater "sense of God" and his commandments and standards for life.
This means, he added, "reviving a sense of sin among our people."
If it's not acknowledged by individuals or the societies they form, church thinkers point out there's no inclination to repent, accept God's pardon, be reconciled to him and seek a better way.

Roman Catholicism teaches that personal confession, now called the "Rite of Reconciliation," is necessary for people who have committed grave sin, but the practice has fallen off drastically.
This is another problem being tackled by the synod, which is expected to last through most of October and involve about 200 bishops from around the world, most of them elected by their national conferences.
"Ultimately it is sin and its consequences which separate us from God and disorder us as individuals and as society," he adds in a column for the weekly Chicago Catholic.
"If we are honest with ourselves, we know this to be true."
"And we therefore know our need for repentance and forgiveness. We crave to be made whole again. We want to be reconciled with God and one another. The good news of the gospel is that God offers us reconciliation in Christ Jesus."

Stage Set For Historic Race

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The stage is set for "the most significant yacht race in history."

Australia II, the spunky, speedy challenger, and Liberty, the steady, unspectacular defender, clash in the final battle for the America's Cup, sailing's most prestigious prize.

It happens Saturday on Rhode Island Sound. A vast armada of spectator craft is expected for the ultimate race in a sport hardly noted for its mass appeal. This time, it's different.

Australia II made it so. She whipped Liberty by a record 3 minutes, 25 seconds Thursday and tied their best-of-seven series, 3-3. One more victory and the never-say-die Aussies will put an end to sports' longest winning streak.

"It's going to be very exciting to be involved in the race of the century," Liberty skipper Dennis Conner, in danger of becoming the first American helmsman to lose the grand prize the United States has held since 1851, said Thursday. "We have a very courageous crew and, somehow, I think we'll pull it out Saturday."

"I'm confident that we'll win," said helmsman John Bertrand after pulling Australia II back from a 3-1 deficit with consecutive must-win victories. "But it's going to be a tough race and it's a great finale to a summer."

Bill Ficker, who skipped Intrepid to the 1970 America's Cup over Gretel II, another Australian hopeful, saw it as something much more.

"We're all going to see the most significant yacht race in history," he said.

There was an anxious calm today before Saturday's showdown. Australia II called a lay day to make sure the crew and craft are at their peak for the final thrust at the only international sports trophy never to change hands.

Alan Bond, the Australian syndicate head nearing fulfillment after three Cup campaigns in which his boats won just one race, said he wanted the day off "to allow us to check our boat from stem to stern ... and to give our crew relaxation. They've had two very testing days."

Conner said shortly after Thursday's race that he hadn't talked with his crew to determine today's activities.

"But I'm sure we'll find something to do," he said.

One thing he may try is lightening his boat, he said.

Australia II, 3½ tons lighter than Liberty and using an innovative winged keel, is more maneuverable than the U.S. yacht.

Conner has been reluctant to engage Australia II in tacking duels because Bertrand's boat is much better at those zig-zag maneuvers into the wind.

That hurt Liberty Wednesday, when she lost the fifth race by 1:47, and Thursday, when she absorbed the worst beating ever by an undamaged America's Cup defender.

Conner won his fifth consecutive start Thursday, crossing the line seven seconds ahead of Bertrand. But midway up the first leg, Australia II caught up when she picked up a wind shift to the left as Conner failed to cover Bertrand's tacking.

Australia II breezed to a massive advantage of 2:29 at the first rounding and led comfortably for the remainder of the 24.3-mile race.

"We tried to cover. When they tacked we tacked on them until they were ahead. Then they covered us," Conner said. "Australia II is a bit peculiar from the standpoint of normal 12 meters inasmuch as she can tack very quickly."

"We made mistakes, but I think that relative to the potential of our yacht, we've gotten a fair bit out of it in this series and we're pleased."

But the tide that was flowing for Conner when he took a 3-1 lead with a 43-second victory Tuesday has now reversed.

The momentum, Bertrand said, is "very important. We've developed a lot of confidence in the way we're sailing Australia II and I believe that we will be improving."

"I also believe we've learned how to sail against Liberty and, as a result, I'm confident about continuing the success that we've had the last two days."

If that happens, his next stop will be the Manhattan mansion of the New York Yacht Club, where the silver pitcher at stake Saturday is displayed.

Robert W. McCullough, chairman of the NYCC's America's Cup Committee, said if Australia II wins, a presentation will be made Monday or Tuesday at the club.

He said the Aussies would have to sign a document promising to abide by the deed under which the NYCC has held the Cup before it can be transferred.

McCullough said whether the Aussies could change the Cup's name "is a good legal question ... I guess they could change it but I don't know why they'd want to."

Australia II Executive Director Warren Jones has said that if his boat wins, the competition would continue to be named the America's Cup after America, the schooner that won the first race in 1851.

Australia II already has won as many races as the eight other challengers combined in the 12-meter era that began in 1958.

No other Cup series ever has gone to a decisive seventh race. The only other time the series came down to a final race was in 1920 when it was a best-of-five competition. That year, the defending boat Resolute came back from an 0-2 deficit to win the last three races against Shamrock IV of Northern Ireland.

Bond thinks this year's series will end with another three-race winning streak.

Phils Strengthen Grip With Sweep Of Expos

By The Associated Press

With the Montreal Expos poised to strike, the stalked Philadelphia Phillies quickly changed into the stalkers.

Veterans Joe Morgan and Mike Schmidt led a first-game power display, and then rookie Charles Hudson fired a four-hitter in the nightcap as the Phillies swept the Expos in a double-header Thursday night.

The 9-7 and 7-1 victories in Montreal put the National League East-leading Phillies four games ahead of the Expos, who dropped into third place. Pittsburgh beat Chicago 8-2 to move into second, three games behind the Phillies.

All three contenders have nine games remaining.

"Two victories, that's just sweet!" exclaimed Phillies Manager Paul Owens during the postgame celebration in the Philadelphia lockerroom, which was closed for a short time after the second game ended.

"It was bedlam," he said. "The players were rushing around shaking each other's hands and rubbing heads. I felt it was best to keep everyone out for a while until they had cooled down."

Philadelphia has now won seven straight games and travels to St. Louis to begin a three-game series tonight.

The Expos, who play host to Pittsburgh for a three-game series this weekend, realize they dealt their pennant chances a severe blow by losing their last two games of the season against Philadelphia.

"It's very tough to win when you're four back with nine to play," said Expos Manager Bill Virdon. "You've got to get a lot of help and you can't afford to lose any."

In other NL games, Cincinnati stopped Atlanta 6-4 and St. Louis beat New York 3-2.

The Phillies won the opener as Morgan — who has 13 hits in his last 18 at-bats — doubled three times. Schmidt belted his 38th home run of the season, while Ivan DeJesus and Ozzie Virgil also homered.

But the big blows were a bases-loaded triple by Joe Lefebvre in the fourth inning, which gave Philadelphia a 5-1 lead, and Len Matuszek's two-run single in the seventh that made it 7-4.

John Denny, 17-6, got relief help from Al Holland, who earned his 23rd save. Charlie Lea, 15-10, took the loss for Montreal, which got home runs from Tim Lincecum and Chris Speier.

In the nightcap, Hudson, 8-7, outpitched Steve Rogers, 17-11.

Singles by Greg Gross, Bo Diaz and DeJesus made it 1-0 in the fifth inning and the Phillies added four runs in the seventh on RBI singles by Matuszek, Schmidt and Gary Matthews and a throwing error by center fielder Andre Dawson.

"We played hard, we battled hard and probably we tried too hard," said Montreal's Gary Carter, who went 0-for-8 in the double-header and hit the ball out of the infield only once.

"Look, I'm human; I'm not a machine. I just had a bad night."

Pirates 8, Cubs 2

Johnny Ray tripled, doubled and added two singles to help Pittsburgh end its 10-game losing streak in Chicago. Eight of those losses came this season.

Rookie Lee Tunnell, 10-5, pitched a six-hitter to beat Rick Reuschel, 1-1.

Larry Bowa's RBI single gave the Cubs 1-0 lead in the second before the Pirates struck for four runs in the fifth.

With one out, Marvell Wynne doubled and scored on Ray's triple. Walks to Dave Parker and Jason Thompson loaded the bases and another run scored on Mike Easler's forceout.

Tony Pena and Richie Hebner then delivered run-scoring singles.

Ron Cey hit an inside-the-park home run in the ninth inning to account for the Cubs' other run. Cey's 23rd homer came when Parker crashed into the right field wall while chasing the wind-blown fly ball.

Reds 6, Braves 1

Slumping Atlanta missed another chance to gain ground in the NL West as Dan Driessen's two-run homer, his 12th, put visiting Cincinnati ahead 5-4 in the sixth. The Reds stayed in front and reliever Tom Hume pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Second-place Atlanta, which has won only two of its last nine games, now trails the Los Angeles Dodgers by 4½ games. The Braves, who have 11 games remaining, and Los Angeles, with 10 left, begin a three-game series tonight in Atlanta.

Rampants Kick Vikes

Rose High School's soccer team continued to roll along yesterday, downing Kinston, 3-2, in a game not nearly as close as the score indicated.

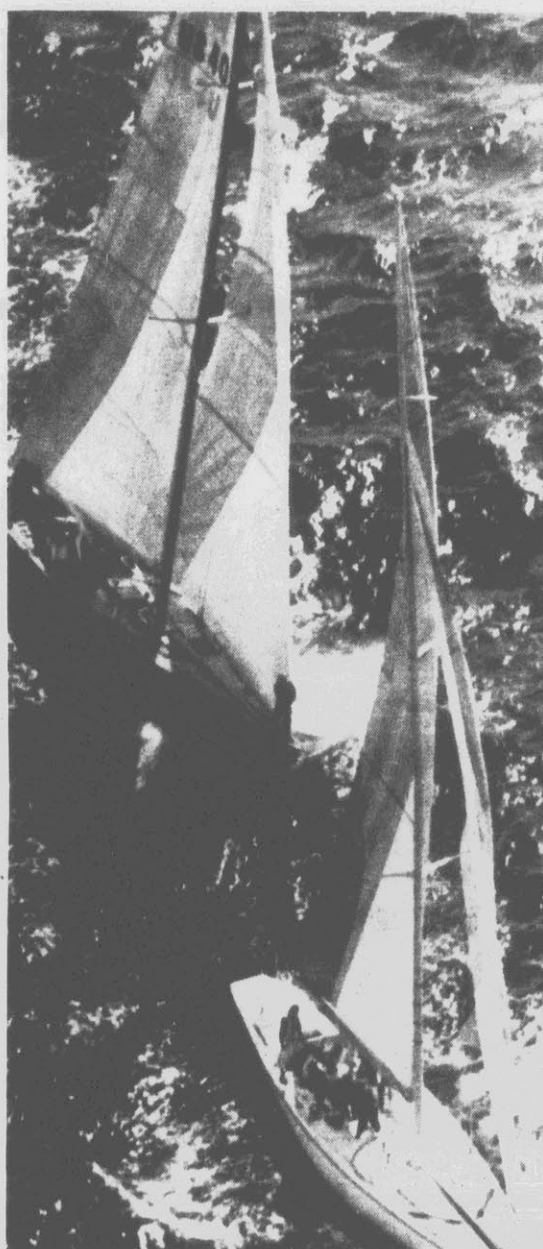

The Rampants took the lead 18 minutes into the first half when Pedro Gener scored from the left wing. Rose then added a second goal with four minutes left in the half, when Derek Leupen scored off an assist by David Ely.

Rose extended the lead to 3-0 25 minutes into the second half as Jim Benedict scored with Ely again assisting.

Kinston then came on with a flurry in the final four minutes of the game, scoring the first time on a Gordon Hill shot, and getting the second with 1:10 left on a penalty kick by Rick Rogers.

Rose outshot Kinston 33-9 in the contest, and Coach Will Wiberg cited the play of Greg Savage and Clark Stallings.

Now 4-1 overall and 4-0 in league play, the Rampants travel to Wilson Fike on Tuesday.

Other offensive standouts for the Jaguars included Lee Miller, Steve Peele, Walt Pollock and Rodney Harris.

Melvin Jenkins, Devin Gatlin, Anthony Chavis, Chris Throckmorton, Terry Warren, Robbie McDonald and Jeffrey Green excelled on defense for Aycock.

The Jaguars travel to Rocky Mount next Thursday.

while Mills added six points. Barrett had five effective hits and two kills, while Darby Fulford and Rhonda Jackson each had one effective hit.

Once again, there are a group of men hanging their heads in shame this week. When it comes to football knowledge, long standing traditions, ERA notwithstanding, say men are supposed to know the answers and women are supposed to ask, "What's going on? I don't understand."

Well, Vickie Spivey, our woman on the panel has struck a blow for equality. She's currently leading the pack, with a 22-12 record. After an 8-3-1 week last time out, however, the guests and this writer have pulled up into a tie with Joe Jenkins for second place, 21-13. Our guest from last week, ECU marketing director Dave Hart, has used his 8-3-1 record to take over first place among the guests. The best guest, of course, comes back at the end of the year to join in the bowl selections.

Tom Baines, after a dismal 5-6-1 week, has dropped into a tie for fifth with Jimmy Dupree, both at 19-15.

Tom promises to do better this week, but Vickie is sure she's going to remain at the top of the heap.

Our guest this week, by the way, is Farmville's Al Hamm, a golfing buddy of Joe and Tom who's been asking for some time to join us in some picks. The fact that he also dates the daughter of one member of the panel, who shall remain nameless, has nothing to do with it. Al is a pharmacy student at UNC.

At any rate, a look at the high school picks first. Our record last week of 4-2-1, brought our record for the year to 20-5-2.

North Pitt's Panthers, still looking for their first touchdown of the year, play host to Greene Central after an open date. The Panthers hope the time away from the schedule gave them some time to regroup and get things going. We have hopes, and predict a score for the Panthers, but the Rams will win it, 20-7.

Farmville Central, after winning its first game last week, travels to West Craven this week, out to even the record at 2-2. West Craven is also coming off its first win, but the Jaguars should have no trouble in this one. We look for a 27-0 Farmville win.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Southern Nash. The Firebirds won their opener, but have lost the last two. Southern was expected to be stronger this year, but that remains to be seen. The Chargers meanwhile, a 2-1, after losing their opener, and have come on strong. This is another chance for them, as we see a 21-6 win for Ayden-Grifton.

In other area games, it'll be Chocowinity over Columbia, Jamesville over Creswell, Roanoke over Plymouth, Washington over Edenton, and Bertie over Williamston.

With the Pirates off, there's only one area game that the panel looks at, the Rose-Northern Nash high school contest.

The Rampants are 3-0 and ranked fifth among 4-A schools by the AP. Northern lost its opener to 3-A Warren County, but has since beaten Vance and Southern Nash. The Knights appear to be a big play team, and they have a good defense. The Rampants are still trying to find a running game to go with their passing attack. The panel likes the Rampant chances, however, giving the Rampants a 6-0 edge.

Our other consensus picks: Pittsburgh over Maryland; N.C. State over Virginia; Miami, Fla., over Notre Dame; Auburn over Tennessee; Ohio State over Iowa; Clemson over Georgia Tech; North Carolina over William & Mary; Wake Forest over Richmond; Michigan State over Illinois; Texas A&M over Oklahoma State; and Florida over Mississippi State.

Rose JVs Top N. Nash

RED OAK — Rose High School's junior varsity scored on the opening kickoff of the second half and gained a 21-18 win over Northern Nash last night in the first Big East Conference game of the year for the Rampant Cubs.

Dwight Smith raced 75 yards with the second half kickoff to run the Rampants into a 21-12 lead, and they hung on the rest of the way to pull out the victory.

Rose took the initial lead in the second quarter on a five-yard pass from Ervin Best to Tyrone Jones. Kendall Phillips then kicked the first of three extra points. Northern cut it back to 7-6 before Rose scored again. That came on a one-yard run by Best after he had set up the score with a 40 yard pass to Smith.

Northern scored again before the half ended for a 14-12 deficit at halftime. Rose then pushed back out with Smith's run, and Northern closed it to 21-18 before the period ended.

Todd Morris, Brian Walsh, William Ward, Wayland Moore and L.C. Atkins were cited for defensive play, while Mike Wooten, Darryl Perkins and Mark Ebrom led the offense.

Rose, now 3-1, plays host to Rocky Mount on Thursday.

Six Schools Eye New Football Conference

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Six Division I-AA colleges in the East will continue discussions this fall toward the possible formation of a new football conference to be named the Colonial League.

"It is hoped that the formation of a new competitive Division I-AA football league will be approved by the relevant institutional governing boards and announced in the late fall," said a Thursday announcement released by William & Mary.

The new conference, which the announcement said would be associated with the Ivy League, would include Bucknell, Colgate, Holy Cross, Lafayette, Lehigh and William & Mary.

Formation of such a league would include inter-league agreements with the Ivy League on football scheduling, the announcement said.

Excluded from discussions on the new league, which included the presidents of the six schools involved, were James Madison and Richmond, which had been linked at one time with William & Mary in proposals for a new conference. All play in the ECAC Southern Division in basketball.

"The purpose of the new league would be to bring together a group of institutions of higher learning which enjoy comparable academic standards of admission and achievement, as well as historically long commitments to intercollegiate athletics," the announcement said.

It added that discussions so far "have been conducted at the policy level primarily by the presidents of the colleges within the proposed new league and the Ivy League."

Brown President Howard Swearer, chairman of the Ivy League, said presidents of that group "welcome the prospective formation of the new league by colleges which share our philosophy of sports and our view of the role of athletics in higher education.

"We believe it is a constructive step for them to create a new league in which they may adopt policies and procedures to safeguard and further their common athletic perspective and goals.

More TV Premieres Slated Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The best adult comedy of the new season is also the best kiddie show of the new season. It's NBC's "Mr. Smith," about a talking orangutan with a 256 I.Q., who becomes a consultant to the U.S. government.

The series debuts tonight with a one-hour episode, and "Mr. Smith" will wear even better in its regular 30-minute form. Children will get a kick out of the primate doing his thing, and parents will enjoy his sense of humor and satirical swipes at Washington.

Mr. Smith is played by C.J., the best performer in Clint Eastwood's "Every Which Way You Can." Leonard Frey plays Mr. Smith's personal secretary. Nifty special effects give the illusion of Mr. Smith talking. The voice comes courtesy of Ed. Weinberger, co-executive producer.

Weinberger and Stan Daniels also were behind "Taxi" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." "Mr. Smith" won't let down fans of those shows.

Through a scientific accident, Mr. Smith becomes a superhuman intellect in ape's clothing. "I can read Hebrew, but I can't throw a frisbee. Go figure," he says.

It's amusing to see Mr. Smith converse, shake hands and walk around in formal attire, but that would get old quickly — if the lines didn't work.

"Bare feet with formal attire isn't done in Washington, even during the Carter administration," Mr. Smith is told after balking at wearing shoes.

One of his bosses says patriotic duty calls Mr. Smith to the capital because: "You have the best brains in Washington ... A dubious distinction, perhaps."

The best brains in TV-land are not wasted here. This is one gimmicky show about a creature that is, at last, creative.

Weekly TV series can enlarge a theatrical film's focus, allowing familiar characters to grow from episode to episode, while raising issues that weren't covered by the original movie. "M-A-S-H" did that, and so might NBC's new series, "For Love and Honor."

"An Officer and a Gentleman" only touched the surface of the emotional and psychological frailties of young men training for careers in the military. "For Love and Honor," which debuts tonight with a two-hour pilot, looks as though it can go further.

"For Love and Honor" has the realistic texture of what life is like for men and, yes, women, training to be paratroopers in peacetime. These are, basically, kids, getting on-the-job maturity. Some are leaving the cocoon for the first time, others are running away from themselves.

The program will explore their friendships, problems and comparative abilities to cope with the preliminary stages of military life.

Cliff Potts, who was Billie Newman's baseball-playing lover on "Lou Grant," is the soothing division leader. He's the mother hen, who tells war stories to comfort his trainees, acts as a buffer against the bigoted, sadistic captain (Gary Grubbs) and even has time for a secret dalliance with the division's medic (Shelley Smith).

"What should I bring?" she asks of their rendezvous.

"A pillow," he says.

In NBC's on-air promotions, this relationship is given brazen play, but that's misleading. "For Love and Honor" is more than another follow-the-bouncing-bed soap.

Although sex certainly is on the minds of the young, robust trainees (and the older officers, too), their passions fit the stories and situations. They're not mere contrivances thrown in whenever the action slows.

Sexual tension among co-ed trainees living in close quarters, under heavy stress, is a reality. So is the conflict between the old guard and the new wave on the issue of women in the military.

The issue is raised in the character of Grace Pavlik, the only female recruit in the barracks. Rachel Ticotin, who was Paul Newman's girlfriend in "Fort Apache,

Natalie Fined, On Probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Natalie Cole was put on two years' probation and fined $300 after pleading guilty to a reckless driving charge, the district attorney's office said.

The Grammy Award-winning daughter of the late singer Nat King Cole had been charged with driving under the influence of drugs. But prosecutors allowed her to plead guilty to a lesser charge, and a Beverly Hills judge imposed the sentence Sept. 13. District Attorney's spokesman Al Albergate said Thursday.

Bob Hope Plays Only 9 Holes

LONDON (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope, known for his love of hitting a golf ball as well as tickling a funny bone, called it quits after completing only half the 18-hole course at the British golf tournament named after him.

"Bob is feeling very tired," explained tournament organizer John Spurling after the 80-year-old Hope dropped out Thursday after playing nine holes in par.

The tournament raises thousands of dollars for charity.

More than 100 retired Voice of American Foreign Service staff members began arriving in Greenville today for a weekend reunion. The retirees are coming from as far away as Washington state, California, Texas, Florida, Virginia, Indiana and other states. One is flying in from the African country of Liberia.

Four retirees currently living in Greenville, along with their wives, are coordinating and hosting the reunion — Mr. and Mrs. James W. Alley, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin T. Jepson, Mr. and Mrs. Cleon McKnight, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tate.

Essentially, the reunion is a fellowship gathering devoted to renewing old acquaintances and enjoying a weekend in the autumn sunshine of eastern North Carolina.

A welcome party is being held tonight from 7-10 at the Greenville Woman's Club. On Saturday, a session of bridge playing at Ramada Inn will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 3 p.m., with a group dinner at Ramada from 8-10 p.m. Those who play golf will have an opportunity to play at Greenville Country Club beginning at 9:45 a.m.

On Sunday, the retirees have been invited to an outdoor barbecue to be held at the Bayview-on-the-Pamlico summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Alley.

One of the couples in Greenville for the reunion is Mr. and Mrs. Betty Casey of Kerrville, Texas. When they were residents of Greenville, Mrs. Casey, along with Mrs. Helen Parks, founded the Greenville Writers Club. She is the author of two books on dancing published by Doubleday and of a television play produced by the University of Texas, Houston.

COLLISION INJURES TWO — Two Grifton men were injured Thursday night when their small truck collided with a Seaboard Coastline train near Grifton. According to Trooper Ray Early, a truck driven by Ronnie Graham, of Route 3, Grifton, was headed east on rural paved 1802 when the collision occurred with the southbound train. The engine of the two-car train struck the rear of the truck, knocking it into a utility pole, causing a brief power outage. A passenger in the truck was listed as Ronald Corey, also of Grifton. Both men were transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment. The truck, according to Early, was a total loss. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Brown, according to Capt. John Briley, allegedly shot Cleveland Sherman of Greenville in the stomach. The incident occurred on Pitt Street near the Bonner's Lane intersection.

Blood Drive Exceeds Quota

A Bloodmobile visit Thursday at Tyler Dorm at East Carolina University resulted in the collection of 175 pints of blood with 14 deferrals, according to Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said the collection total exceeded the quota of 150 set for the dorm visit.

A general blood drive is scheduled for Monday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Moose Lodge here, Mrs. Taylor said.

The reading is the opening event of the 1983-84 season of readings and seminars sponsored by the Poetry Center Southeast, Inc. of Guilford College.

Few Letters Sent Congressmen

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen say most of their mail on Lebanon is opposed to U.S. Marine presence there, but they add quickly that they aren't getting many letters on the subject.

Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., the chief deputy whip for House Democrats, said he's not surprised at the scarcity of letters. He hasn't received any, even though the subject has become a burning issue in Congress.

"The American people are waiting for the president to tell them why the Marines are there. He has not articulated a policy, so the American people can't agree or disagree with that policy," he said.

Americans wrote their congressmen about the Korean airliner shot down by the Soviets because "the situation was a clear statement" by the Soviet government, Alexander added. He received 126 letters on the president's Central America policy.

Rep. Clarence D. Long, D-Md., who has received 120 pieces of mail, said he expects the correspondence to increase "if you start wasting a large number of Marines who are sitting ducks. Then you're going to get people really upset."

Long has proposed a cutoff of funds for the Marines as of Dec. 1 — unless the president has by then invoked the 90-day timetable in the War Powers Act, for their continued presence without congressional action.

The congressman said 87 percent of his own constituents and 80 percent of those who wrote from outside his district "want an immediate withdrawal."

"Most people don'tulations aimed at wiping out prejudice against the handicapped."

"We want attitudes to change," said council Chairman J.S. Dusenbury, commissioner of the South Carolina Vocational Rehabilitation Department.

Dusenbury said the thrust of the policy, which has been turned over to the president, "is to make disabled people independent lives."

Unemployment among the disabled is more than 50 percent, Dusenbury said. "Everyone has a right to a job if he wants it. Every disabled person has the right not to be a liability to this country," he said.

Vice-Chairman Justin Dart Jr., a disabled Texas businessman, said "We hope the policy will focus the consciousness of the nation on disabled people and on the fact that there are solutions."

Dart, who was stricken with polio in 1948 and is confined to a wheelchair, traveled to all 50 states and met with 2,000 handicapped people to get their comments for the policy.

The policy says the nation's 35 million disabled, who suffer from handicaps ranging from blindness to total paralysis, have a right to free public education, jobs and the ability to navigate without physical barriers in their communities.

The report also calls for a nationwide health education campaign to prevent handicaps and elimination of government benefits that make it more profitable for the disabled not to work.

It also points out that the disabled have a responsibility to solve their own problems and meet their potential.

"Disabled people are human. They have certain basic rights," said Dusenbury. "The federal government has a positive place and responsibility in this process."

The council compiled the policy as part of its mandated responsibility to direct national policy on the handicapped.

Dusenbury said before the report was drawn up, "disabled people everywhere felt programs were really disjointed. Every group with a special disability was pushing for themselves. There was a lot of crossfire among the disabled."

Dusenbury said the report will eventually be turned over to Congress. He said he hopes Reagan and future presidents will adopt the policy.

The policy also calls for: —Tax incentives, loan guarantees and other subsidies to entice private industry and business to hire and educate the handicapped; —More volunteers to work with the disabled; —Making help available to disabled people living in rural areas.

Four Are Found Guilty In Election Fraud Case

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Clay County Sheriff Howard Barnard and three others were scheduled for sentencing next Tuesday after a federal jury convicted them of election fraud.

The jury deliberated about four hours Thursday night before returning guilty verdicts against Barnard, Magistrate Gene S. "Harvey" Auberry, local businessman Glenn Martin and county election registrar Frankie Campbell.

The charges stem from an FBI investigation into election corruption in western North Carolina, focused on Clay County.

All defendants were convicted on 30 counts of vote buying and aiding and abetting vote buying in the November 1982 election. Each also was found guilty of one count of conspiracy.

Additionally, Barnard was convicted of obstruction of justice, while Mrs. Campbell was found innocent of voting more than once. One further count of vote buying and aiding and abetting vote buying against each defendant was dismissed because a witness was unavailable.

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow W. Jones released all four defendants on $2,500 bond until sentencing.

Five witnesses had testified that the defendants offered $50 to $150 to anyone agreeing to vote a straight Democratic ticket.

The government witnesses said they were told to ask for Mrs. Campbell when they went to vote. Some said she accompanied them into the voting booth and marked their ballots.

The five testified that they were given a shoe tack which they were told to take to a shoe store or a service station outside Hayesville, where they were paid.

During defense testimony Thursday, however, Barnard said he had never seen or participated in vote buying but had "heard rumors" that it occurred. Auberry said he had never discussed or seen vote buying.

Both said the money given to government witnesses was to help people having a hard time and wasn't connected to voting.

Attorneys for Mrs. Campbell, 72, and Martin, 76, said their clients wouldn't testify because of their age and physical condition.

Barnard testified he had known Edgar Eugene Jones, 34, the government's prime witness, for four years. Jones, a Hayesville service station owner, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy and 20 counts of vote buying in connection with the FBI probe.

Jones testified Tuesday that he had received money from Barnard to buy votes and was promised a job as a deputy if Barnard was elected sheriff.

Barnard said he had never "given Jones a penny" and said he didn't hire Jones because he had a bad reputation.

Barnard said Jones attempted to bribe him by offering him $100 a month if "I'd let him sell drugs and trade at his station."

Scientist Seeking Transplant Answer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — When reacting to transplanted organs, the body's immune system tends to do its job too well, says a Duke University Medical Center scientist.

Dr. Randy Bollinger, assistant professor of surgery and immunology, is among several scientists trying to make the body less resistant to donated organs and thus make transplants more successful.

Drugs can suppress the immune response of transplant patients, but by lowering the body's defenses, the chances of infection are increased, Bollinger said.

Cyclosporine, which recently gained tentative approval from the Food and Drug Administration, is expected to reduce the likelihood of organ rejection somewhat.

"Cyclosporine is more specific than the drugs previously available, and we welcome it as a significant improvement," he said. "But what's really needed is a way to manipulate only that part of the immune system that affects the transplanted organ, leaving the body's resistance to bacteria and other infectious agents intact."

The Duke study will focus on kidney and high-risk corneal transplants, Bollinger said. The project involves 18 scientists from the surgery, immunology, medicine, pathology and ophthalmology departments at the hospital.

Scientists hope that certain antibodies can be cloned that will allow the grafted organ time to establish itself without otherwise disrupting the immune system, Bollinger said.

Man Charged In Girl's Murder

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Rutherford County man has been charged with murder in the stabbing death of a 12-year-old girl earlier this month.

Shepherd allegedly stabbed Cindy Sue Wilson to death at her home on her aunt, Janice Dyer, 23, on Sept. 4.

Shepherd is in Rutherford County Jail. No bond has been set.

Life In China Is Changed By Consumer Revolution

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) —
"Madame, can you truly afford not to buy a White Orchid washing machine? Just a small down payment..."

"Get six blank tapes free when you buy one Peony cassette recorder..."

"Three-year warranty on Snowflake refrigerators. If we can't fix it, we'll replace it. Be the first in your unit. Hurry, they're going fast..."

Such come-ons have become the rallying cries of China's consumer revolution, and they bear the Communist Party's emphatic approval.

After years of egalitarian poverty under Chairman Mao Tse-tung, the new consumer revolution is dramatically raising the standard of living and profoundly changing values.

China has struck off on its own capitalist road paved with consumer goods that once were considered luxuries for party officials or movie stars: avocado-colored refrigerators, washing machines, private telephones, motorcycles, color TV sets, tape recorders, stereo systems, cameras, air conditioners, gold trinkets and fancy clothes.

And there may be no turning back.

Madame Li Shuying, a prosperous suburban pig farmer, couldn't afford not to buy a $143 White Orchid washing machine with a spin drier.

The wife of a busy Peking veterinarian and mother of two active children, she raised 52 pigs last year and earned $2,700. After a hard day on the pig farm, the 37-year-old peasant woman still must feed her family, do the cleaning and washing, check the accounts and try to relax in front of the TV.

"I just love my washing machine, it's so convenient," she said. "Now I have more time for my family and my work. Many rural families like us want washing machines since they spend so much time on production."

Last year her family bought a television set and an electric fan — this year the washing machine.

"Next year we're going to buy a refrigerator," she said.

This rampant, unabashed consumerism would have been denounced as bourgeois decadence a few years ago. And still today critics say that expectations of material well-being are rising dangerously high and fast — beyond China's ability to meet them.

China, they fear, is departing from the socialist road and spiritual values and opening a Pandora's box of insatiable materialism, growing gaps between the haves and have-nots, inequalities, envy, greed and frustration.

During the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, people who had refrigerators often covered them with a cloth or board. Shops delivered them at night to avoid spiteful neighbors who would turn the buyers in.

"We had the money to buy a refrigerator long ago, but we didn't want to be different from other people," said Gao Xijin, 63, vice president of the Peking Mechanical Institute. "We did not want to appear special."

But Gao and thousands now line up happily to be among Peking's 30,000 proud owners of refrigerators.

Under the policies set down by China's current leader, Deng Xiaoping, people are encouraged to work hard, earn more and live well. Since 1979 China has shifted its economy from heavy industry to light industry. Defense plants that once turned out tanks are switching to sewing machines, electric fans, radios and bicycles.

Last year China produced 2.5 million washing machines and 3 million cassette recorders — double the 1981 output. It turned out 99,900 refrigerators — an 80 percent increase, 5.2 million TV sets — a 90 percent increase, and 24.2 million bicycles, up 38 percent. This year's production will be higher and China announced it will produce 700,000 color televisions in 1985.

Still it can't keep up with the demand of 1.1 billion people. Neon signs, shop windows, TV commercials, billboards and the neighbor's latest acquisition all fuel the desire for more.

There is a proliferation of competing brands, consumer awareness, and comparison shopping. Discriminating shoppers are so conscious of status brands that counterfeit bicycles and trademarks are cropping up in some places.

For the first time consumers can choose. Shall it be the Phoenix brand — the Cadillac of Chinese bicycles — for 260 yuan $130? Or the Flying Pigeon for $95? The double Wild Goose washer from Chengdu for $117 or the Hundred Flowers brand from Hefei for $108? The White Cloud refrigerator for $101 or the Long River for $118?

The revolution is based on rising purchasing power. The average worker earned about $400 in 1982, but an average worker at the Peking Refrigerator Factory earns about $500.

Private entrepreneurs and restaurant owners, once banned as capitalist exploiters, now can make thousands of dollars a year. Although the average peasant income was $135 last year, many earn more and face criticism from the less well-off.

Some peasant families earned the equivalent of more than $20,000 through various undertakings in one year. The 160 families in Xingshisi Brigade in Heilongjiang all live in new houses, earned $500 per person and all own color televisions.

Credit buying and the installment plan, once banned as usury, now mean the good things of life are not beyond the reach of an average family and modern young marrieds.

College students pool their money to buy washing machines so they can have more time to play and study.

He Sumei and her husband are Peking factory workers, together earning only $50 a month. But they recently spent almost three times that much on a top-line washer.

"Sure it's expensive for us, but furnishing your room with one like this gives you a sense of modernity and fashion, and we like that," Madame He said.

In bygone days, brides used to be content with the "three things that go around and the one that ticks" — sewing machine, bicycle, fan and wristwatch. Or they wanted the modest "24 legs" — the total number of legs on furniture considered essential.

Now they aspire to no fewer than "the 52 legs."

Nie Chung Bie, a 25-year-old army doctor planning to marry next year, frantically is trying to scrape together enough money to satisfy his sweetheart's demands.

"Not only does she expect the things that everyone else has, like a washing machine, refrigerator and sewing machine," he said, "now she is asking for a stereophonic recorder with four speakers and a motorbike."

Hopeful News in Medicine

An interesting contribution has recently been made to patients with asthma. Dr. Prem Kumar, of the Louisiana State University Medical Center in New Orleans, made an interesting observation.

In a study he found that a good number of persons with asthma or nasal allergies are sensitive to molds that grow in their own automobile air conditioning systems. "Many of these patients experienced a worsening of symptoms when exposed to these molds," Dr. Kumar said.

He noted that nine out of 10 asthmatics and four out of five patients with allergies of the nose had worse symptoms when riding in a car with the air conditioning in operation. He found, too, that there was a distinct diminution of the respiratory function of these patients.

Dr. Kumar and his associates did an excellent study of these patients and molds that were cultured from the outflow ducts of the air conditioners.

It is a fascinating observation and should be considered by asthmatics and sufferers of severe allergies.

A new drug, baclofen, is sometimes used to treat patients with multiple sclerosis. It is an antispastic drug that has been found to reduce severe muscular low back pain.

Dr. Francis Dates recently reported an interesting study at the Annual Meeting of the American Society for Clinical Pharmacology. A large series of patients with "acute low back syndrome with muscle spasms and functional disability of less than two weeks were treated with this drug."

Patients with moderate pain improved only slightly. Dramatic improvement occurred in patients with more severe pain. In addition to the drug, heat therapy and bed rest were also prescribed.

The side effects were minimal. The preliminary studies certainly suggest that it may turn out to be a valuable drug. Doctors will probably soon be trying the drug and carefully evaluating its potential.

Controlling the diet, especially the salt intake, can be a most effective treatment in a majority of cases of patients with high blood pressure. This important statement was made by Dr. Joseph M. Pitone, of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Dr. Pitone said, "About 85 percent of patients with high blood pressure are salt-sensitive. There may be too much salt and calcium in the cells of these individuals leading to the water logging of blood vessel cells resulting in swelling and constriction."

If this regime alone is not effective in controlling the hypertension (or high blood pressure), then many of the new and important drugs that are now available can be introduced to supplement the control of this serious disease of mankind.

Deregulation Plans Outlined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole has sent draft legislation to the White House outlining proposals to fully deregulate the interstate trucking industry.

Mrs. Dole told the Senate Commerce Committee that the proposal was being "discussed and debated" in the Office of Management and Budget. But she indicated that the Reagan administration may hold off sending the proposal to Capitol Hill until more support has developed within the trucking industry for partial deregulation steps already implemented.

Mrs. Dole acknowledged the trucking industry had "the worst year in 1982 that they've had since the '30s."

NARROW STREETS? — David Davis, 3, of Roanoke (Va.), found himself a narrow maze of streets — or it would seem that way, as he explored old Roanoke city street signs that were for sale at a recent neighborhood park festival. Money from the sale of the signs, which had been recently replaced with more modern ones, was to go to a mini-grant program of the Roanoke Neighborhood Partnership. Davis' dad, Joe, was nearby with his camera recording his explorations. (AP Laserphoto)

CONSTITUTIONAL CONFLICT

Approved in 1973, the War Powers Act requires the President to consult with Congress before sending troops abroad. In the case of hostilities, he must bring them home within 90 days unless Congress declares war or permits him to let the troops fight. The Act grew out of a power struggle rooted in the Constitution. That document gives Congress the right to declare war, while establishing the President as Commander-in-Chief.

DO YOU KNOW — What President vetoed the War Powers Act? THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The vernal equinox occurs each year about March 20.

Uncle Sam Has Corrected Abby

WASHINGTON (AP) — Columnist Abigail Van Buren, heading advice from Uncle Sam, is correcting erroneous information she published that prompted a flood of letters and calls to Congress and the Social Security Administration.

The whole thing started when the syndicated Dear Abby column alerted newspaper readers to what was called an "inequity" in Social Security retirement benefits for people born from 1917 to 1921.

Social Security officials said Wednesday they had sent their own letter to Abby, asking her to correct her column on the so-called "notch" that ran Sept. 5.

In that column, someone who signed herself "Notch Your Baby" complained that people born from 1917 to 1921 would get lower Social Security benefits than those born before and after those years.

Abby urged readers of her column, which is run by 900 newspapers, to write to their congressmen protesting "this inequity."

In fact, due to a foul-up in a Social Security benefit formula that Congress wrote in 1972, those born in 1916 do get over-generous benefits from Social Security. A retiree who turned 65 in 1981 can get as much as $110 a month more than a co-worker who paid the same taxes but was born in 1917.

But that old benefit formula was driving the system into bankruptcy and Congress voted in 1977 to correct its error and phase out the formula.

It left the formula intact for those born in 1916 — who would first be eligible at age 62 for early retirement benefits in 1978 — and it provided a less generous, transitional benefit for those born between 1917 to 1921.

That group will get less than the 1916 babies, but their retirement benefits will still be somewhat more generous than for those born in 1922 or later.

Jim Brown, a spokesman for Social Security, said Social Security offices and congressional offices were inundated with thousands of calls about the notch since Abby's advice appeared.

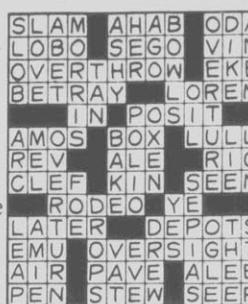

The notch has been widely reported previously and an attempt by some lawmakers to raise the retirement benefits for those in the transitional group failed last year. Social Security says it would cost billions of dollars to give everyone the same level of benefits as those born in 1916 are getting.

Alan McDermott, managing editor of the Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes Dear Abby, said the new column was sent out for use Sept. 26.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — HUGE DEER HUNTER NEEDS "HINDSIGHT."

Today's Cryptquip clue: B equals D.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

There are times when you cannot avoid losing a trick in a certain suit. But you might still be able to control your fate by losing that trick when it suits you, rather than the opponents.

There is no "right" way to treat South's hand after East opens the bidding with one diamond. South's decision to barge into four spades was as good as any.

West's lead of the two of diamonds was a marked singleton. Declarer was faced with five losers in the red suits. One of those would go on the ace of clubs. The other would have to be ruffed.

The thoughtless declarer would pay no heed to the opening lead. He would win the queen of diamonds and attempt to cash the ace. West would ruff and shift to a trump, and declarer would have to concede down one.

The correct technique is not difficult to spot. Declarer should win the first trick as cheaply as possible and, instead of trying to cash the ace, concede a diamond trick immediately. The defenders have no counter.

The best they can do is win the diamond, cash two heart tricks and shift to a trump. Declarer wins in hand and gets to dummy by ruffing a diamond with the ten of trumps. Now he discards his remaining diamond loser on the ace of clubs and returns to his hand with a club ruff to

Rain Helps Wash Away Potentially Risky Residue

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — A rainstorm helped the environment around National Starch and Chemical Co. "dodge a bullet," washing away potentially dangerous residue from a series of explosions, a state official says.

Cleanup began Thursday at the Salisbury plant, part of which was reduced to twisted rubble the previous day in the explosions and fire that injured 26 people and forced temporary evacuation of 75 families. Authorities said the blast occurred as employees mixed chemicals.

The four explosions late Wednesday morning ignited flames that shot 200 feet in the air and blew off part of the building's roof. Firefighters brought the blaze under control by early afternoon.

State officials said some chemicals were spilled, but there was no serious environmental damage because most of the debris was washed into a nearby lake and harmlessly dispersed.

"We dodged the bullet on it," said Jim Sheppard, spokesman for the state Division of Environmental Management. "It could have been real bad. There are a lot of chemicals at that plant."

Two dams were set up to prevent chemicals from escaping, Sheppard said. However, a heavy storm Wednesday afternoon washed most of the spilled chemicals into a nearby creek and on into High Rock Lake.

Sheppard said investigators found traces of ethyl acetate and methyl isobutyl ketone, both solvents.

The company agreed to take responsibility for the cleanup, he added.

Plant spokesman Henry Barry said there were no remaining chemicals and that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had given the plant "a clean bill of health."

"I don't think there is anything left to take to a hazardous waste dump," Barry added.

Ronnie Kesler, injured in the explosion, said in a telephone interview that the blast may have started in one of the company's reactors or mixing kettles.

"I'm not exactly sure what they were doing," he said. "I was working on the other end of the room and I heard a kind of whistle, a kind of hissing-like. I looked around and saw flames coming out and I ran out of the building."

Kesler said about six employees were inside that section, including three of the four injured workers.

Samuel Howard, 42, of Salisbury, and Michael Hill, 27, of China Grove, were listed in satisfactory condition with second-degree burns at Rowan Memorial Hospital. Kesler, 29, of Gold Hill, was treated for cuts.

Also injured was Kenneth Klutz, 33, of Salisbury, who was treated for burns and released.

Barry said the workers were mixing an intermediate chemical used by the company to make other products when the vat began hissing and workers started running. The explosion followed.

The hissing "meant there was something going on that shouldn't have been going on," said Barry. "This product was made here under the same condition for over 10 years, and we never had any trouble."

Barry estimated it would cost $2 million to $3 million to replace the plant. He said the facility is still operational and the company is continuing to supply its customers.

Soviet Finishes Pipeline; Need Only Compressors

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has finished the controversial Siberian natural gas pipeline at a cost of nearly $18 billion, but has not yet completed the pumping stations needed to operate the line independently, officials said today.

Oil and Gas Minister Boris Shcherbina insisted 17 compressor stations would be finished by the end of the year and that even without them, the Soviets can deliver 9 billion cubic meters of gas a year — 4 billion more than initial obligations to Western Europe.

Shcherbina said the Soviet Union can use compressor stations built for two parallel pipelines to pump gas through the 2,759 miles of pipe laid between the Urengoi gas fields in northwestern Siberia and the Uzhgorod terminal on the Soviet-Czechoslovak border.

"We are ready to fulfill our contract obligations starting from today," Shcherbina told Soviet and foreign journalists.

He said gas is being pumped through the Siberian pipeline to storage chambers and other internal systems using compressor stations on the lines that serve Moscow and the city of Petrovsk.

Shcherbina said the start of service to Western Europe next January would not mean "any reductions at all" on other lines.

Shcherbina also provided the first official price tag for the project — the equivalent of $18 billion for equipment, design and installation.

The pipeline, keystone of an ambitious development scheme involving five other major lines across the center of the Soviet Union, was the target of U.S. embargos after the declaration of martial law in Poland.

President Reagan tried to stop delivery of American-made turbines and turbine parts for compressor stations, but European firms and governments refused to cooperate and the sanctions were lifted late last year.

Shcherbina said the laying of the pipe through swamps and mountains and under rivers and lakes was completed six months early and pronounced the embargo a failure. But it apparently succeeded in hindering construction of compressor stations.

The minister did not say any compressor stations were completed along the line.

He said one was nearly operational — the central station at Pomary that was built by an Italian firm using 25-megawatt general electric turbines. He said two other stations had been "erected" and were to be operated with Soviet-built 16-megawatt turbines.

But when pressed for specifics on how far the project had come along, Shcherbina would say only that 17 stations were scheduled for completion by the end of the year. He did not say whether any were to use the 25-megawatt turbines the Soviet Union rushed into production to counter the U.S. embargo.

Forty compressor stations are planned for the pipeline, and Western experts believe the Soviets need 20 of them to meet their obligation to deliver 5 billion cubic meters of gas per year to West Germany, France, Switzerland and perhaps Italy next January.

Western estimates say the pipeline at peak delivery, about 20 billion cubic meters, could bring the Soviets between $2.5 billion and $3.3 billion of badly needed hard currency per year.

But the gas market has been "soft" in the face of declining world prices and West Germany — the Soviets' single biggest customer at a peak of 10.5 billion cubic meters per year — has a built-in option to reduce purchases by 20 percent a year.

Oil Money Threatened By Helms' Amendment

By The Associated Press
U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms is trying once again to win Senate approval of an anti-abortion measure, this time attaching it to a bill that would give coastal states a share of federal oil drilling revenues.

Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, have co-sponsored an amendment to the Senate companion of a House bill sponsored by Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C. Jones' bill passed the House last week, 301-93.

The bill would give coastal states some of the $300 million collected annually from federal leasing of offshore oil drilling rights. North Carolina would get an estimated $7.5 million for coastal programs.

Helms' amendment would prohibit federal funding and federal insurance coverage of abortions unless the mother's life is in danger, bar the United States from promoting abortion abroad, and prevent any institution receiving federal funds from denying medical treatment to a newborn with birth defects.

Spokesmen for Jones and other bill supporters say the amendment could kill the bill. An aide acknowledged that Helms chose to tack the amendment to this particular bill because one of its chief supporters is Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon, who helped scuttle Helms' last attempt to get anti-abortion legislation through the Senate.

"Anything strongly supported by an anti-prayer, pro-abortion senator is going to be a likely target" for such an amendment, said Helms aide Tom Ashcraft.

Packwood last year led a month-long Senate filibuster against a Helms bill to prohibit federal funding and federal insurance coverage of abortions. The Senate eventually voted 47-46 to table the bill.

Deb Sterling, an aide to Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said supporters of the coastal drilling bill would try to persuade Helms and Jepsen to withdraw the amendment. "Otherwise we'll spend weeks debating abortion, not the bill," said Ms. Sterling.

Helms has not decided on the merits of the bill, although he is leaning against it, said aide David Craft. The Reagan administration opposes it because it would increase the federal deficit.

About $13 million was bid earlier this year on potential drilling sites off the North Carolina coast, and the figure nationwide runs into the billions. The bonuses collected by the federal government last year totaled $8.3 billion.

Jones argues that the federal government shares with states the revenue from similar projects on interior federal lands and should do so with the offshore sites.

Craft said Helms is concerned most about "the staggering deficit, and he's said this just doesn't make sense, particularly since California, Louisiana and Alaska would get most of the money."

Gov. Jim Hunt this week wrote Helms and Sen. John East, R-N.C., asking them to support the bill. A spokesman for East said he has not decided his stance.

Back Jetties

By The Associated Press
A U.S. House committee has approved construction of two mile-long stone jetties off the state's Outer Banks, despite opposition from the Reagan administration and environmentalists.

The jetties are needed to keep sand from filling Oregon Inlet, said Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., the measure's chief sponsor. Oregon Inlet connects Pamlico Sound with the Atlantic Ocean and is the only access to the sea for local fishermen.

But the U.S. Department of Interior and environmental groups say the project will cause severe erosion at the Cape Hatteras National Seashore north of the inlet and the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge to the south.

Jones said that the environmental concerns were "totally unfounded," adding that building jetties "is going to do much less damage than not building the jetties."

Interior Secretary James Watt has refused to grant construction permits for the jetties, which would be anchored on 150 acres of federal land.

NRC Insisting On Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has refused to back down on subpoenas ordering 47 former and current Three Mile Island workers to testify about alleged falsification of reactor leak rates.

The Commission has determined that the public health and safety require it to complete its investigation into those allegations without further delay, the panel said in a memorandum and order.

The allegations were first made in May 1979 by Harold Hartman, a control room operator at the TMI's Unit 2 reactor, about tests conducted during the months before the serious March 1979 accident that crippled the reactor. Hartman said the tests were routinely doctored and repeated because of abnormal leaks of the coolant that keeps the radioactive core from melting, but the problem was never reflected in reports to the NRC.
