School Systems Merger Recommended

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Research Triangle Institute study on the feasibility of consolidating the Pitt County and Greenville school systems recommends that the two systems be merged into a single consolidated district.

The results of the study, funded by the Board of County Commissioners earlier this year, were announced at a noon press conference today by John Pyecha, director of the RTI study.

Pyecha was scheduled to review the study's findings and recommendations with the board of county commissioners and the two school boards at a joint session at 2 p.m.

The RTI study outlines five major needs of the two systems, including: the need for maintaining a high level of educational effectiveness in both the Pitt County and Greenville city systems in the face of reduced funding due to declining pupil population in the Greenville school system; the need for maintaining a reasonable racial balance in the face of changing pupil population patterns; the need for providing adequate facilities; the need for optimum utilization of present school facilities; and the need for a consistent school system organizational pattern based on sound educational principles.

According to the report, the five needs "are symptoms of an economic crises that, if not resolved, will limit the school systems' ability to meet their goal of maintaining an enhancing high-quality education for ... all students," in the county.

The report also suggests that the imbalance in the pupil populations and the small size of the two systems "precludes the effective utilization of existing school facilities." The problems associated with economy of size, according to the study, "likely will be reflected in the near future in some decline in the excellence of the instructional programs, particularly in the Greenville city system, and in the lack of funds to provide adequate educational facilities to house current programs and permit school/grade level organizations based upon sound educational principles."

Four basic options are outlined in the report to address the needs of the two school systems.

One of the four options is the recommendation to consolidate into one county-wide school system.

According to the report, by merging the two systems, the problems with declining enrollment in the city system would be "largely alleviated," school system organization and racial balance would be "easier to achieve," planning for adequate facilities would be "simplified," and optimum utilization of present facilities would be "enhanced."

Additionally, the report said "should the two districts be consolidated ... friction between two competing systems would be alleviated, long-range planning for the total system could be more effective and efficient, and a number of economies of scale could be achieved."

However, the report said if the systems are consolidated the problems of governance, system loyalties, and other differences would have to be resolved.

Another of the four options would be to maintain the status quo, which would be "extremely limited" in dealing with the most pressing problems facing the school systems.

The major advantages of the status quo option, the report said, would be to maintain the identity of both school systems, preserve the existing loyalties, and no substantial change would be required. The disadvantages of the option would be that additional funding would be required, especially for the city school system, "economies of scale" would not be realized, and flexibility in dealing with other school problems would be limited.

A third option would be to maintain the two systems, but change the district boundary lines.

The report suggests that by making the Greenville district coterminous with the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction boundary, the city system would gain about 1,200 students, which would address the problem of declining pupil population in the city system. The change would also reduce transportation costs, relieve some overcrowding and make better short-term use of facilities.

But the boundary-change would create some new problems, including the loss of students, and thus revenue and teachers, by the county school system.

The fourth option would be to change funding procedures through a supplemental tax/weighted formula system to increase the amount of revenue for the city schools. The only realistic way to provide more money for the Greenville schools, if the boundaries were not changed, would be to levy a supplementary tax.

While increased funding for the city system would provide adequate facilities and maintain a high level of education effectiveness, it would have a "relatively insignificant impact" on the other major needs, according to the RTI report.

Pyecha said the final decision regarding a consolidation of the school systems lies with the two boards of education, the board of county commissioners, and the citizens of the county. He also recommended that the board of commissioners "devise and implement procedures for studying the report and reaching agreement locally as to which of the four options holds the most promise," for the "maintenance and enhancement of high-quality education," for all school students in the county.

If there is agreement with the RTI recommendation that the two systems should be consolidated, Pyecha said "a decision must then be reached as to which of the two basic methods for effecting the merger" should be used.

The two districts could be merged by the General Assembly, which may or may not specify that the merger is contingent upon the approval of the voters in the two school districts.

A second method of consolidating the systems would be for the two boards of education to develop a written plan of merger, which would require approval by the board of county commissioners and the State Board of Education.

Gemayel's Cabinet Resigns

Cease-Fire For Lebanon Taking Effect

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and his Cabinet resigned today, hours after a cease-fire arranged by the United States and Saudi Arabia halted Lebanon's civil war.

Wazzan, a Sunni Moslem, told reporters after a meeting with President Amin Gemayel that he and the 10-member Cabinet tendered their resignations to clear the way for the "formation of a national unity Cabinet to undertake the rebuilding of the homeland."

Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, said later in a statement that he needed time to decide whether to accept the resignations and asked the Wazzan government to remain in office "until the features of the new era crystalize and the arrangements to usher it in are completed."

Syria and Lebanese Druse leader Walid Jumblatt had demanded the resignation of Wazzan as a condition for a cease-fire in the civil war, which pitted Syrian-backed Druse militias and their leftist Lebanese allies against Christian militias and the Lebanese army.

The prime minister announced he was stepping down hours after the cease-fire went into effect, silencing the guns around Beirut and opening the way for a national unity conference between the feuding factions.

"It marks the convening of

Reagan Offers Reduce Missiles

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Reagan, declaring "a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought," today offered to reduce the number of new missiles the United States plans to deploy in Europe if the Soviets accept his challenge to cut global nuclear stockpiles.

"The door to an agreement is open," he said. "It is time for the Soviet Union to walk through it."

The president made his remarks in a speech prepared for delivery before the 38th annual session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Reagan used the speech, his first to the General Assembly, to castigate the Soviets for striking down a Korean Air Lines jetliner. But he also held out the carrot of arms control agreements, stressing the need for a peaceful solution to global disputes and employing less harsh language than in recent remarks on the airplane catastrophe.

At the same time, he affirmed "our unwavering support" for the United Nations' peacekeeping missions — at a time of when efforts are being made to cut the U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget — and decried "the emergence of blocs and the polarization of the U.N."

The centerpiece of the president's arms control proposal was an offer to cut, by an unspecified figure, the number of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to begin deploying in Western Europe in December.

While U.S. and Soviet negotiators confer in Geneva, Switzerland, on reducing the

Shinn To Seek Second Term

Incumbent City Councilman Stuart Shinn has announced that he will seek his second term on the local governing board in the Nov. 8 municipal balloting.

Shinn, president of Stuart Shinn Inc., an electrical and plumbing business here, was successful in his first bid for one of the six council seats decided in the 1981 Greenville elections.

"There have been some significant and far reaching changes made in the city in the past two years," said Shinn. "There are some things I would like to finish that I started my first term."

Shinn, who has resided in Greenville for the past 29 years, is a native of Clarksburg, W.Va. He has operated his contracting business for 28 years.

The candidate is a member of the Elks Lodge, Moose Lodge, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Tar River Neighborhood Association, and the International Association of Electrical Inspectors.

He is a past president of the Pitt County Electrical Association and a past director of the N.C. Plumbing & Heating Association.

He is also a former president of the Coastal Plains Apprenticeship Association and a past director of the Greenville Jaycees. Shinn formerly served with the Greenville volunteer fire and rescue units and was a member of the mayor's advisory committee.

A Korean War veteran with the Marines, Shinn attended East Carolina University. He is married to the former Lorraine Green of Kinston and they have two daughters, Kimberly and Gena.

Final Arguments Heard Today In Trial Of Parker

By ROY HARDEE

District Attorney Tom Haigwood, in his final arguments to the Pitt County Superior Court jury hearing the Dwight Parker murder case this morning, said the killing of the Rev. Leslie Thorbs and Anthony Ray Herring, "was a cold-blooded murder which makes your hair stand on end — it was like a hog killing in that car."

Testimony in the case ended Friday, with the defense choosing not to present any evidence. Attorney Milton Williamson waived the opening argument for the defense this morning, choosing instead to save any remarks he or attorney Bob Browning would make until after the state concluded its arguments.

Recapping the evidence, Haigwood reminded the jurors how Parker signed a statement outlining how he shot Thorbs and Herring in mid-February, and how their bodies were dumped into the Tar River.

Referring to pictures of the two bodies which were introduced as evidence, Haigwood told the jury, "you can close your eyes and still see the photographs. None of us deserve to die that way."

And reminding the jury of a witness who said Parker suggested killing Thorbs for his car, the district attorney said, "it's a wonder what some people will do for a car."

Judge David Reid planned to charge the jury following the defense's closing argument today, and the jury was expected to begin deliberations after receiving the judge's instructions.

The trial began three weeks ago. Jury selection took two weeks, while last week was taken up by the presentation of evidence by the State.

North Carolina's ESC Rated No. One In Nation

RALEIGH — North Carolina's Employment Security Commission (ESC) has taken the lead nationally in the placement of unemployed people. The state was advised of the achievement by the regional office of the U. S. Department of Labor, which reported that North Carolina ranks number one in productivity.

"This is a moment of great pride for our agency and our state," said Glenn Jernigan, chairman of the state's ESC.

"We're proud to share this good news which shows we're working hard to keep people in North Carolina working," Jernigan added. "Our team of placement interviewers in the 84 local offices across the state are the ones who really deserve the credit for being the most productive in the U.S."

Based on the formula for determining the rate of job placements, the state ESC found jobs for more than 84,000 North Carolinians during the nine month period ending June, 1983. The number one ranking was accomplished by 390 placement personnel, each of which averaged placing 227 persons.

On the national basis, North Carolina was followed by a ranking tie between Georgia and Louisiana. South Carolina ranked fourth and Kentucky was fifth. Of the top ten most productive states, six were in the southeastern region of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Conservatively estimated at $3.92 per hour earnings, the placement of 84,000 individuals would annually return nearly $685 million to the North Carolina economy, the ESC reported.

Notch-Year Babies: Their Saga Continues

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: On Sept. 5, a letter signed "Notch-Year Baby" appeared in my column. It read in part:

"If you are drawing Social Security and were born in 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 or 1921 (called 'the notch years'), you are being unjustly penalized by receiving lower benefits than those born prior to and after the above-mentioned years. For example, if you worked until you were 65 before starting to draw Social Security, you are receiving about $100 less in your monthly check than those born before 1917, or after 1921."

Before publishing this, I checked with a Social Security expert who verified that the above was accurate, so I recommended that my readers write to their representatives in Congress to protest this inequity.

I have since been besieged by members of Congress and officials with Social Security, many insisting that I misunderstood.

In order to understand this very complex situation, we must go back to 1972, when Congress under President Nixon passed a law increasing Social Security benefits in order to keep pace with inflation. This seemed fair and reasonable.

However, the law was overly generous because it accidentally compensated retirees twice, once for the increase in wage levels, and again for the increase in the cost of living.

It soon became apparent that if that law remained unchanged, within a few years the Social Security system would be bankrupt. In addition, by the turn of the century, most retirees would receive more from Social Security benefits than they were earning before they retired!

Consequently, the 1977 Congress, under President Carter, established a new formula for calculating Social Security benefits in an attempt to keep the Social Security system from going bankrupt, as well as to correct the overcompensation error.

Rather than introduce the new formula overnight, it was decided that there should be a five-year transition period to cushion the blow. So Congress selected as this transition group those born from 1917 through 1921 — later called "notch-year babies." (Unfortunately this caught most veterans of World War II, a group that had already sacrificed much on behalf of their country.)

It was suggested that I consult Dr. Robert J. Myers, who was with the Social Security Administration from 1934 to 1970 and who also served as executive director of the National Commission on Social Security Reform from 1982-83. Dr. Myers, former chief actuary for Social Security, told me that when the notch-year procedure was suggested in Congress, he argued against it, saying all retirees should receive equal treatment, but the Social Security Administration, because of problems with antiquated computers, disagreed with him. The Social Security Administration prevailed.

Paul B. Simmons, deputy commissioner of Social Security for Programs and Policy, advised me, as did Rep. Hal Daub, R-Neb., and Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., that "Those born between 1917-1921 will not receive lower benefits than all of those born later — that an individual born in the years 1917-1921 will receive lower benefits than persons born before those years, but higher benefits than persons born after those years. They will also have an advantage because their benefits are computed by two different methods, and whichever pays more is chosen for them." Those born in 1922 and later will not have that advantage.

The notch-year confusion is not new. In an effort to explain it, on Aug. 31, 1981, a teletype message was dispatched from the Social Security central office to each of its field offices. It read in part:

"Two workers born only days apart, one on Dec.

Couple Marries Sunday In Arlington Ceremony

MRS. H. DAVID SOBLE

ARLINGTON, Va. — Nancy Louise Snowden and H. David Soble were united in marriage at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Georgetown Ballroom of the Key Bridge Marriott Hotel here. Rabbi Jay Heymann officiated at the single ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Ralph Snowden of Greenville and the late Mr. Snowden. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Soble of Rochester, N.Y.

Escorted by her brother, Terence Ralph Snowden of Huddleston, Va., the bride wore a Paula Varsalona gown of candlelight silk organza over peau de soie. It featured a V-neckline worn off the shoulders. The bodice was covered with alencon lace with a baroque waist. Matching lace enhanced the skirt which was bordered in a scalloped pattern which extended into a cathedral train. The two tiered full length silk illusion veil by Lilliane was appliqued with alencon lace and was attached to a Camelot cap covered with white pearls and sequins. The bride carried a long cascade of white roses and stephanotis.

LuAnn Snowden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Judith Soble, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, matron of honor, wore identical floor length gowns of 31, 1916, and the other on Jan. 2, 1917, and who both retire in January 1982, will receive monthly benefits that can differ as much as $110, even though their earnings have been the same in every year."

So, Dear Readers, I leave it to you: Are those born before 1917 being unjustly overcompensated by the old computation? Or are those born after 1916 being unjustly penalized because of the new computation?

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, divorced (I was married quite young for nine months), and I consider myself outgoing, friendly and attractive. I am a nurse and am well-liked by my patients and co-workers. Here's the problem: I've been fixed up with a few friends of friends of mine, but they are all after one thing — sex. I am just not into that with someone I hardly know.

When they discover I won't "put out," I never hear from them again. I'm so discouraged I'm beginning to think there are no decent guys out there. I am not against sex, but certainly not on the first date. I mean, really! I want to meet a man, fall in love and then make love. But all the guys I've met want to go to bed the first night, then they tell you they don't want any serious relationships.

I don't want to get married right now. I just want a nice guy I can go out with for dinner, dancing or a movie.

I don't want to go to bars. Where are the nice men? Church is out because that's where I met my ex-husband, and he was no better than the rest. Please help me.

SICK OF WEEKENDS

DEAR SICK: I know I sound like a broken record, but I assure you there are some decent men out there. Keep saying no to guys who try to rush you into bed. Be fussy and stay clean. You'll be glad you did... for the "right man" somewhere out there.

If you want to pay less for surgical care you'll find surgeon's fees lower in smaller communities, higher in major cities. The Health Insurance Association of America says an analysis of some surgeons' charges across the nation shows the highest average rates in and around larger cities, such as New York, Los Angeles and Washington. Some of the lowest surgical fees are in rural communities in Alabama, Maine, West Virginia and South Dakota.

romance blue organza. The bodices featured a V-neckline accented with ruffle, short puffed sleeves and a cummerbund at the waist. Each wore a halo of yellow and white roses with blue silk baby's breath in her hair and carried a loosely tied lace nosegay of yellow miniature carnations, yellow and white sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom's niece, Alexandra Soble of Washington, D.C. was flower girl and wore a blue organza gown which featured a scoop necked bodice with a full ruffled bertha collar and the long skirt had a ruffled bustle. She wore a wreath of blue and white baby's breath and carried a white basket of rose petals.

The brother of the bridegroom, Stephen Soble, was best man and Ralph Nurnburger was groomsman.

The bride's mother wore a deep pink floor length gown with a V-neckline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a peach dress with matching overlay cape. Both wore white orchids.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held in the View Lounge of the hotel followed by dinner and dancing in the Potomac Ballroom.

Parents of the bridegroom entertained the bridal party at dinner Saturday evening following the rehearsal.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and received her B.A. degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She is employed in Washington with the Secret Service of the U.S. Treasury Department. The bridegroom received his B.A. degree from Syracuse University in New York and a J.D. from the University of Chicago. He is president of Tax Consultants, Inc., president of Tax Shelters, Inc. and engaged in the private practice of law in Alexandria, Va.

After a wedding trip to Paradise Island, the Bahamas, the couple will live in Alexandria, Va.

Malinda E. Chapman Weds Michael R. Harrington

GOLDSBORO — On Sunday at 2:30 in the afternoon in Saint Paul United Methodist Church, Malinda Elizabeth Chapman and Michael Ray Harrington exchanged their wedding vows. Dr. J. Paul Edwards officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. William Walker Chapman of Goldsboro are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ray Harrington of Kinston.

A program of wedding music was presented by Roger Searles, organist. Marilyn Phelps of Warsaw sang "The Song of Ruth," "Oh Perfect Love" and "Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of Hertz dull face satin trimmed with sequins and pearls and embroidered with chantilly lace on the bodice. The scalloped waistline and gathered skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a chapel length mantilla of ivory illusion edged with matching lace. She carried a cascading bouquet of silk pink and white miniature roses, forget me nots and lilacs accented with blue gypsophila.

Amy Chapman, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and bridesmaids included Lynn Beamon of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, Catherine Bracey of Charlotte, cousin of the bride, and Carolyn Pearson of Goldsboro. Fayetta Powers of Providence Forge, Va., cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The attendants were each dressed in a formal taffeta gown in light blue styled with a scooped neckline accented with a ruffle. They wore silk flowers in their hair and their bouquets were similar to that of the bride.

Stanley Ray Harrington was his son's best man. Ushers were Tim Beamon of Kinston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Bob and Bill Styres of Lenoir, cousins of the bride, and Lance Sollars and Tim Sollars, both of Goldsboro.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. Mary Wilson Sugg of Greenville.

After a wedding trip the couple will live in Goldsboro. The bride attended N.C. State University in Raleigh and East Carolina University in Greenville. She graduated from the nursing program at Wayne Community College and is continuing her education in nursing at Johnston Technical College. The bridegroom is employed by Dixon Food Services. He is a graduate of Greene Central High School.

Following the ceremony the parents entertained at a reception at the Goldsboro County Club and guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Krentz.

After the couple cut the first slice of the five tiered wedding cake, it was served by Mrs. Robert Styres of Lenoir, Mrs. Jerry Powers, Mrs. Richard Mountcastle and Mrs. Drew Maddox, aunts of the bride. Mrs. Arnold Leder, Mrs. Paul

MRS. MICHAEL RAY HARRINGTON

Nunn and Mrs. William R. Hooks assisted in service. Piano selections were presented by the bride's grandmother.

Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. W. Dortch Langston Jr.

Parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and out-of-town family members at a dinner at the Goldsboro Country Club.

The wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained at a wedding breakfast at the Walnut Creek Country Club Sunday morning. It was given by relatives of the bride. A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday at the Village Green Tea House given by relatives of the bride.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

Keep a set of candy cane table accessories handy all during the holidays to add a cheery note whenever family or friends gather. Beginner-stitches on 7-mesh white plastic canvas let you finish the set in a minimum of time. The entire set consists of six coasters in a matching box, four place mats and a candy cane centerpiece.

To obtain directions for making the Candy Cane Set, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-0925 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-0925 by sending a check or money order for $13.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and sufficient canvas and yarn for the complete set.

I have written before about techniques of securing loose ends of your needlepoint yarn, but, to continue last week's column on beginner-basics, I'll go into this briefly again, followed with a discussion on washing plastic canvas items.

You should always secure loose ends under previously worked stitches, snipping off the excess yarn as you do so to prevent tangling, knotting and snarling of these ends on the wrong side of your work.

When you start a new piece, however, there won't be any previous stitches, so you need to find a way to start with the yarn secured. Some will run the yarn through a few holes on the margin and then go back and secure this end later. The "waste-knot" technique, however, allows you to take care of the loose end as you stitch and so is, to me, the preferred method.

Make a knot in the end of your yarn and take the needle down (from right to wrong side) in a hole a couple of inches away from where you will start, placing it in the direction in which you will be stitching. In other words, if you are to be stitching from left to right, place it to the right of your starting point. The knot will be on the top of the canvas and the yarn will be on the wrong side running from the knot to the first stitch, so that you will be stitching over it for the first few stitches. When you come close to the knot, just snip it away and you will find your yarn end neatly secured.

From this point on, when you finish with one strand, run your needle under the last few stitches and then snip off the yarn close to your work. To start the next strand, run the threaded needle under any adjacent stitches before starting over again. Never let the ends just dangle and never (except when starting with a waste knot) make a knot in your yarn.

With plastic canvas and synthetic yarns, any item you make is obviously washable but do be gentle when you wash such items.

One of my early plastic canvas projects a few years ago was a tote bag that I simply tossed into the washing machine. When I removed it, I found the handle broken in two places, probably caused by the rough agitation in the washer. Since then, I have soaked any such piece in mild suds and rinsed thoroughly, using the spray attachment on my sink.

The heat of the dryer can warp the plastic canvas, so just let it dry naturally. You can dry your needlepoint projects outdoors in a very shady spot, but do avoid direct sunlight as this could fade your yarns. (Even your white yarns tend to yellow when exposed to direct sunlight.)

CANDY CANE...table accessories consist of six coasters in a matching box, four place mats and a centerpiece — all made on seven-mesh white plastic canvas.

No Easy Way

On the surface, finding a way to help foreign victims of oppression or injustices sounds simple. It just hasn't worked out that way.

The only recourse the United States seemed to have in the invasion of South Korea was to wage a "police action" that was plain and simply a war.

Same thing happened in Vietnam, and the results are still fresh in our memory.

When it was Afghanistan's turn, our government (and others) looked in vain for an effective deterrent or a way to help the victims. There was no workable solution, and the victims bled.

Nor could our best minds conceive a way to help the Polish people. Sanctions proved costly and ineffective. The bullies just ignored public outrage and knew from experience they were safe.

How can this country possibly bring pressure to help, not hurt, the people on whose behalf we make so much unconvincing, short-lived noise?

It is time more thought be given on how we can effectively help those people whose rights are trampled ... something short of war, but painful to transgressors. We need answers, because the tides of oppression are moving ever closer.

Point Of Humor

Congressional attempts to stop the smoking of cigarettes, if they weren't so serious and so costly, have reached the point of humor. A House Commerce Health subcommittee has approved a bill requiring cigarette manufacturers to rotate three health warning labels on their products and in their advertisements.

One warns that smoking "causes lung cancer and emphysema; is a major cause of heart disease; (and is) addictive and may result in death." The second warning says: "Cigarette smoking by pregnant women may result in: — Miscarriage, premature birth or birth weight deficiencies."

The third, which no one will challenge, says: "Smokers: No matter how long you have smoked, quitting now greatly reduces the risks to your health."

The warnings would be displayed in boxes on cigarette products, with an arrow pointing to them.

How pray tell can these be any more effective in stopping smoking than the old warning carried on cigarette packages and advertising for years. That only resulted in the bad jokes about "the surgeon general has been determined to be dangerous to your health."

The Gender Gap

WASHINGTON — Democratic Party Chairman Charles Manatt would have to admit that the gender gap has been this year's best news. So long as the disparity between men and women in their opinion of Ronald Reagan continues, the Democrats could avoid embarrassing defeat next year by billing themselves as the women's party.

Yet Manatt and other Democratic leaders may not deserve the "Great Emancipator" label. As two aspiring female candidates for the 1984 Democratic vice presidential nomination have discovered, women are welcome only up to a point.

Seeking the No. 2 slot are Rep. Lindy Boggs, a five-term Democrat from Louisiana and widow of the late Democratic powerhouse Hale Boggs, and Barbara Marx Hubbard, a private citizen. Boggs thinks that the current Democratic contenders are boring. Unless the party balances the ticket with a woman, she contends, Democrats will only put the electorate to sleep next year. Opposition to the use of federal funds for abortions shouldn't make her too controversial for the nod, says Boggs, who hasn't officially announced her candidacy.

Meanwhile, Hubbard has undertaken a more issue-oriented campaign. A resident of Washington, D.C., she's already registered her campaign with the Federal Election Commission and organized supporters in different states. Hubbard has even encouraged some of her supporters to become delegates at next summer's national convention in San Francisco. This fact has upset some Democratic officials, who already complain that Hubbard, an heiress to the Marx toy fortune, refuses to work with the party.

Manatt would prefer that Boggs, Hubbard or any other potential woman VP candidate put her aspirations on hold. He worries that a gender-balanced ticket might be too controversial and could spoil the unified image he's seeking.

Yet Manatt's reservations may have been best explained by an aide: "Chuck doesn't understand why a woman would be doing this after all the Democrats have done for them."

Why is George McGovern running for president? According to political associates, the former senator from South Dakota first discussed the idea last October with Michael Harpster, his former college lecture agent. The idea then, as it is today, was to conduct a progressive campaign to keep McGovern before the public eye. McGovern and Harpster reasoned that such an effort would ultimately pay off in more college lecture dates and bigger fees.

A flair for public relations? Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, who, for the sake of publicity, recently outraged members of Congress by sending them lifetime subscriptions, is giving serious consideration to running for the 1984 Republican presidential nomination — again, for the publicity.

Only hours before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted last Tuesday to recommend defeat for a nuclear freeze resolution, freeze movement leaders huddled in a downtown Quaker meeting house to plot future strategy. There was little agreement among the participants, however. In one camp are those activists who insist on moving cautiously (engaging, for example, in such efforts as a walkathon Oct. 1). The other faction favors confrontation, in the style of some European activists, and is likely to prevail.

Despite criticism for having bolstered AIDS research funds with money diverted from other health projects, the White House receives good marks for its response to the epidemic, congressional sources say. In particular, they credit Health and Human Resources Assistant Secretary Edward Brandt, a sometimes controversial figure, with encouraging White House compromises and meetings with homosexual groups.

N.C. Puts Focus On The Weakness In Math

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — When the state Board of Education met in Raleigh this month, top on its agenda was a strengthened program of mathematics instruction in the public schools. By day's end, the board had approved a report which called for 62 changes in math instruction in elementary, middle and secondary schools. The recommendations all aim at a set of six formal goals. The board said that it is time for students to attain a higher level of math competence through instruction better aimed at today's needs from teachers better qualified to teach math.

That math instruction in our public schools isn't everything we want it to be should come as no surprise. For months now, education has been one of the hottest political issues as one commission after another warns that our economy and national security could suffer from our inability to properly educate our young.

But if anyone needs further convincing that math instruction in the state needs a boost, he need only read the background report which accompanied the state board's recommendations. Nationwide, six major problems have been found in math education and the board found that we've got all six of them right here.

We're not producing new, qualified, math teachers. Nationally, the number of college math education majors preparing for high school teaching careers has dropped 77 percent, by 79 percent in North Carolina, in the last decade. And, of these students, fewer are taking teaching jobs. The reason is simple. A first-year math teacher earns about 75 percent of what private business pays recent math graduates.

So we end up with people teaching math who aren't really qualified to do so. In the 1981-82 school year, more than a quarter of high school — and almost half of all North Carolina middle school — math classes were taught by inappropriately certified teachers.

Math teachers have stopped studying math. In North Carolina, the typical math teacher has been on the job for 11 years but few have received any additional math instruction since they left college. To renew their teaching certificates, the board reported, they have participated in local staff development activities "which rarely contain any mathematical content."

Math education is improperly designed. Reforms made after the Sputnik scare of the late 1950s helped math education greatly. But, the board reports, math curricula and books written then and still used are skewed towards those who seek engineering and science careers. American schools must improve the math education available to students who do not plan to pursue careers in these fields. All students need math education because science and technology are becoming increasingly important in our everyday lives.

Math education now requires more than chalk and a blackboard. Calculators and computers are needed. They cost money but the money has not yet been appropriated by either Congress or the Legislature.

Finally, students are showing less interest in math. Only about one-sixth of high school students take junior- and senior-level courses and most of those intend to pursue math-related fields. For most of our children, their math education ends at age 16. This is especially true for young women and minorities.

The board sees several reasons for the lack of interest. Students don't do well in math, so they opt out. Students know that college entrance requirements are minimal. Others find math irrelevant. The math they're taught isn't tied to technology and the vocations they intent to pursue.

More Work And No Pay Is Involved

I never believe government figures when it comes to how the nation's economy is doing. I talk to people. In the past months I discovered, while orders are up in the building business, payments are slowing down.

A painter told me, I can get all the work I want right now. The only problem I have is collecting for it after I do the job.

"Why don't you ask for the money up front?" I asked.

"If I do that I can't get the job. I have this building contractor I work for and he couldn't sell his condos until they were painted. So he came to me and said, 'I'll give you $25,000 to paint my apartments.' I said, 'When will I get paid?' And he said, 'As soon as you finish the job.' Then I said, 'Where do I get the money now to pay for the paint and my workers?' And he said, 'The same place I get mine, from the bank. Look, just tell me if you don't want the contract. I can always get somebody else.'"

"So what did you do?" I asked.

"A job's a job, so I painted his condos. When I finished I gave him my bill. He said he'd send me a check in the morning. A week later I called to find out where the check was, and his secretary said the contractor was racing in a sailboat to Bermuda."

"Three weeks later I bumped into him coming out of a fancy restaurant with a bunch of friends, and he introduced me as the best painter in Washington. He said it was lucky he ran into me because he was going to call me in the morning to ask me if I could paint a second group of condos he just finished in the same development.

"I said, 'I'd love to do it but I haven't been paid for the other condos yet.' He said he couldn't pay me for the first condos until he sold the second ones. I said, 'Why is that?' And he said because the bank wouldn't lend him any money to finish the new condominiums until he paid back his loan on the ones I painted. I said, 'It doesn't solve my problem because the same bank wants me to pay back the $25,000 plus interest. I borrowed to paint the first condos.'"

"He said I should never borrow more than I can afford to pay back. He wanted to know if I would do the painting job on the new development or not.

"I had to say okay. If I didn't paint the second ones I had no chance of getting my money back on the first ones. But I was tough about it. I demanded a deposit before I picked up a paintbrush."

"As a down payment for the second job?" "No, as partial payment for the first one. How could I ask him for money for the second job when he still owed me for the other?"

"And he agreed to do it?" "He said it was only fair. The next morning he sent over a small check with a nice note saying as soon as I finished the condos of the second development I would be paid in full for both jobs."

"So you painted the second condos, and then what happened?"

"I didn't hear from him for three months. I was about to turn it over to a lawyer when I got a call from him asking me if I was interested in painting an old office building he had just bought in downtown Washington. I said, 'Where's my money for the other two paint jobs?'"

"He said he used it as a down payment on the old building he wanted me to paint. Once it was fixed up he planned to sell it at a large profit, and he had me down for a $5,000 bonus."

"I said I wasn't born yesterday and if I agreed to do the job it would cost him $90,000 plus a $15,000 bonus."

"What did he say to that?"

"He said, 'What choice do I have? Workmen always have contractors over a barrel.'"

Organized Labor's Gamble On Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — From its headquarters across Lafayette Park from the White House, organized labor is poised for a historic effort to make Walter Mondale the Democratic presidential nominee and then help him defeat President Reagan.

"We're not getting into this race to lose," said John Perkins, director of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE). "We're very serious about it."

This unprecedented commitment by labor could establish the federation as a powerful force in politics. But it also carries a number of risks, including the possibility that labor will end up backing a loser. If that is the case, despite Perkins' determination, labor could have a lot to lose in 1984.

The AFL-CIO will complete the process of officially endorsing Mondale when it meets starting this weekend in Hollywood, Fla. And the odds are that AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland will succeed in keeping member unions united behind the endorsed candidate.

And it is likely that just before the AFL-CIO acts, the National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher's union, also will formally endorse Mondale.

The teachers are a potent force within the Democratic Party. In the last two nominating campaigns, the 1.5-million-member NEA played a far more important role, as backed by Jimmy Carter, than did the 13.7-million-member AFL-CIO.

Perkins is well aware of that. In 1976, he recalled "we got dumped on by everyone. Labor is nothing but a paper tiger. They can't deliver their members. It hurt. It smarted. There are a lot of us who remember those things."

And there are a lot of people who remember 1980, when Ronald Reagan cut deeply into the normally Democratic blue-collar vote.

Kirkland gets testy when asked about those defections to Reagan among labor rank and file.

Perkins readily concedes that between 40 and 45 percent of the labor vote went to Reagan in 1980. But he also contends the depressed economy brought union votes back to the Democrats in 1982.

Will the current good economic news send labor votes back to Reagan next year, assuming he is a candidate for re-election?

"I don't think anybody, including our members, are giving Reagan any credit for controlling inflation," said Perkins. "There's a lot of apprehension out there whether it's a real recovery. Our people don't play the stock market."

What if Mondale is knocked out of the race, despite labor's backing? What does the federation do then?

"I don't think it's going to happen," said Perkins, who insisted on framing the question in terms of "labor's candidate" rather than Mondale because he didn't want to be seen as jumping the gun on the October convention.

But what if it does happen?

"I think our options are all open," he said.

Then came what could be bad news for Alan Cranston. The California senator hopes his pro-labor record would make him the AFL-CIO's natural choice if Mondale drops out of the race.

If the question were decided only on a candidate's labor record, said Perkins, "We wouldn't need an endorsement. We'd look at the COPE voting record and say, there's our candidate. But there are other factors, the recognition, the electability, and how our rank and file members perceive him."

Electability, of course, is a key word in Sen. John Glenn's campaign pitch. Perkins wasn't about to suggest that labor would jump on a Glenn bandwagon if Mondale dropped out. But, he said:

"We not only want to win the nomination. We want to win the election."

Singer Refused To Do Concert

Country music entertainer Ronnie Milsap, in Greenville Sunday for a concert, refused to go on stage. So there was no concert, even though the audience was already present.

Doug Thurston, president of Sonic Productions which was sponsoring the event, said Milsap's refusal to appear was part of a contract dispute. Musician Nicky Harris, also scheduled to perform, also did not appear. Thurston refused to explain what the dispute was about.

Thurston and Brad Walls, president of the Greenville Jaycees, who were assisting with ushering, parking cars, and other concert activities, apologized to "all the people who purchased tickets."

Thurston promised a refund of the price of admission to each person who sends a self-addressed stamped envelope and a ticket or ticket stub to Sonic Productions, P.O. Box 33, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Farm Scene

By MITCH SMITH
Agricultural Extension Agent

As fall approaches and the harvest of corn engages in high gear, farmers are encouraged to take advantage of a procedure known as weed mapping. Farmers who sit in the seat of a combine during harvest are in an ideal spot for weed mapping since a farmer makes note of various weeds present on his particular farm. Later during the season, this map may dictate the crop to be grown on the following year due to the fact that some weeds are controlled better in some crops than others.

One problem which many growers are observing in their fields is johnsongrass. Johnsongrass is a weed of the sorghum genus found in numerous places within Pitt County. This pest spreads by two means, seed and rhizomes. Its seed has a deep purplish color in the shape of a teardrop. The fact that johnsongrass spreads by rhizomes makes it even tougher to control. Rhizomes are underground stems which grow parallel with the surface of the soil. Nodes develop while it grows, producing new shoots emerging from the soil.

Johnsongrass is controlled by two methods. The first is usually recommended early in September with the harvest of corn. This method requires that a particular infested field be mowed immediately after harvest. After three to four weeks, Johnsongrass will regrow reaching the boot stage, at which time two quarts per acre of Roundup should be applied. In the following spring a herbicide should be selected to control seedling johnsongrass. In corn use Sutan plus or Eradicane. For soybeans use Treflan or Treflan plus Vernam.

The second method for johnsongrass control requires repeated disking during the fall and winter. At least three or four cuttings at intervals of four-six weeks are recommended. The use of a moldboard or chisel plow in combination with the disk is suggested. Disking or plowing cuts rhizomes into small pieces brings them to the soil surface where they are exposed to the winter weather. According to observations, Sutan plus and Eradicane are more effective in suppressing small pieces. Herbicide application in the spring should be delayed until the soil thoroughly warms up for more effective control.

A twilight tour of the Pitt County peanut variety test plot will be held on Wednesday at 4 p.m. at the Ronald Smith and Ken Manning farm.

According to Extension Agent Sam Uzzell, the variety test has six peanut varieties and is located two miles east of N.C. 11 on N.C. 30. An Agricultural Extension test plot sign is in front of the site.

Uzzell said the tour will provide participants with the opportunity to examine the varieties and look at the yield potential and maturity difference. The workshop will last approximately one hour.

'Upsetting' To Vanessa

VANESSA

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Vanessa Williams, the new Miss America, says it makes her furious to think some people figure she won the pageant because she "really doesn't look black."

"I know people said I won because I had straight hair and light skin," the 20-year-old New Yorker told a news conference Saturday as she rounded out her first week wearing the crown. "It makes me furious to think some people believe that."

"I have a triple role: I'm Miss America; I'm representing black women and I'm representing all black people," said the first black woman to win the contest.

Russians Turn Over Debris From Korean Airliner

KAL JET ITEMS — Soviet sailors carry a cardboard box containing items from a South Korean airliner shot down by Soviet fighter planes, to Japanese and American officials at the port city of Nevelisk, on Sakhalin. The Soviet Union turned over 76 items from the KAL jet, but Japanese officials said bodies were not included. (AP Laserphoto)

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — A Japanese patrol boat returned to northern Japan today after a trip to Sakhalin Island to receive debris and clothing recovered by Soviet search teams from a South Korean airliner downed by a Soviet fighter plane.

It was the first time the Soviet Union has handed over items from the plane, which was shot down by Soviet heat-seeking missiles on Sept. 1.

The 76 items included wreckage from the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet and several articles of clothing from the 269 people aboard. There were no bodies and the Soviets did not turn over the Boeing 747's flight data and voice recorders, which could explain why the plane strayed off course and which are believed still at the bottom of the sea off Sakhalin.

A delegation of four Japanese, three Americans and one Swede was aboard the 3,218-ton patrol boat Tsugaru. The Swede, Karl Oskar Nordlander, represents the Montreal-based International Civil Aviation Organization.

After discussions lasting more than four hours, Soviet sailors carried five wooden boxes containing the items to the ship, which belongs to Japan's Maritime Safety Agency.

The boxes contained fragments of the aircraft, a tattered orange and red life boat, seat cushions, oxygen cylinders, seven pairs of pants, a suit coat, two jackets and other pieces of cloth.

The Tsugaru arrived in Nevelisk after a 15-hour journey from the northern Japan port of Otaru.

The Soviet Union had demanded that all radio transmissions to and from the patrol boat be halted and that its 40mm cannon be removed before it entered Soviet waters.

The Soviet Union, which claims the downed plane was on a U.S. spy mission, Sunday accused President Reagan of lying about the plane incident when he made a speech broadcast from the Voice of America headquarters in Washington on Saturday.

"The gist of the president's statement, the atmosphere of secrecy during the arrival of the president to the 'Voice of America' radio station for delivering his speech, and the fact that it was broadcast in 42 languages show that all has been conceived as a propaganda performance on an international scale," the official news agency Tass said.

Soviet citizens denounced Reagan in letters published Sunday by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, indicating an interest in defending the government against bitter international criticism stemming from the airliner incident.

"It is none other than the U.S. president in person who has launched a barrage of malicious slander in a bid to discredit the peaceful aspirations of the Soviet leadership and the whole of our people," wrote Konstantin Vysoitsky, 35, a researcher at the Moscow Agricultural Academy.

In Wakkanai, Japan's northernmost port on the island of Hokkaido, MSA officials said 16 Soviet and six American vessels were spotted today near Moneron in the area where the Korean plane is believed to have crashed.

The extent of the search operations indicated that vital parts of the plane, including the recorders or "black box" which could reveal why the plane strayed into Soviet airspace, still were missing, the officials said.

Master Gunnery Sgt. Ed Evans, spokesman for U.S.

Forces in Japan, said there was "nothing new" to report.

He said the Navy ocean tug Narragansett and the salvage vessel Conserver continued to search for remains of the plane with "towed locaters, side-scan sonar and remote-controlled deep sea drones."

MSA officials said their agency and Hokkaido of-officials will examine the collected items and personal belongings brought back aboard the Tsugaru.

Relatives of victims will be able to inspect the thousands of items recovered by Japanese searchers and any personal belongings handed over by the Soviets starting Oct. 1 in Hokkaido's capital, Sapporo. They will be allowed to claim items belonging to their family members, officials said.

The U.S. officials aboard the patrol boat were Lynn Pascoe, a State Department official in charge of Soviet affairs, Dennis Wilham, Federal Aviation Administration representative at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo, and U.S. Navy Capt. Bert Terry.

How to buy group health coverage.

Since the cost of health coverage has been rising much faster than other business costs, business people have to become much more skillful at evaluating competitive health-benefit proposals.

Here are some of the issues you'll want to consider.

Are the rate and cost containment strategies effective?

The cost of coverage is related directly to the cost of health services.

Therefore, does the carrier have effective ways to contain both your group's need for health care and the price of that care?

For example, does the carrier have cost-containment agreements with area hospitals and physicians?

Can the carrier offer your employees built-in incentives to use medical services efficiently?

What is the carrier's reputation for prompt, accurate payment? For adequate disclosure of claims paid or denied?

To what extent is the carrier achieving the dream of "paperless" processing? Can claims be filed by computer?

Will your employees appreciate the coverage as a true benefit, the way having our benefit plan is appreciated, or will they take it for granted?

To prevent problems for you down the road, will your carrier

Does your carrier have cost-containment agreements with area providers? We do. And that's only one of the strategies that enabled us to save our subscribers more than $125 million last year.

Will the plan be affordable? Can you assume variable levels of risk?

Can payments be geared to your cashflows? Are a variety of financing arrangements available?

Will the service be rapid, accurate and trustworthy?

All of these questions should enter any evaluation of alternative group-health plans.

Cast Doubts On DUI School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 4-year-old program which has sent more than 100,000 convicted drunken drivers to a special school isn't working, according to a study by the Highway Safety Research Center of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The study shows that graduates of the Alcohol and Drug Education Traffic Schools are more likely to be convicted again than convicted drunken drivers who didn't attend the schools.

The study showed that 8.35 percent of the DUI schools' graduates were convicted again of drunken driving or careless and reckless driving after drinking within 12 to 27 months of their graduation.

Of the non-students who had been convicted of DUI, 5.07 percent were convicted again within 12 to 27 months of DUI or the related charge.

In addition, graduates of the schools had more accidents, more alcohol-related accidents and more nighttime crashes after their graduation than first offenders who did not attend.

Drivers convicted of DUI normally lose their license for a year, but by going to the schools they can get their license back in six months. Also, first offenders generally have been required to attend the schools as a condition of getting a limited driving privilege.

John H. Lacey, program manager for alcohol studies who directed the study, said an apparent reason for the high reconviction rate of the school graduates is that they did not lose their licenses for as long as drivers who were convicted of the same offense but did not attend school.

"As far as we know, of the countermeasures for DUI, it seems like license revocation is the most effective one," he said.

Lacey said the main lesson of the study is that school attendance should be required in addition to, rather than instead of, license revocation.

Steven L. Hicks, deputy director of the Division of Mental Health's alcoholism and drugs section, said the study results surprised him.

"I still don't have the answers," Hicks said. "When we get that full report, we're going to want to study it and analyze it as carefully as we can."

Apple Time

Autumn is traditionally apple time. France and the United States are the world's largest apple-growing nations. In the U.S. more than half the apples grown will be eaten fresh. But more than three-quarters of the French apples will find their way into alcoholic cider. According to legend, apple-growing spread in this country through the efforts of John Chapman, better known as "Johnny Applesseed", who was purportedly born on this day in 1774.

A Triumph For Dowser

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — An 80-year-old Ashe County dowser armed with a peach tree twig found water in Jefferson, where professional well drillers with $350,000 worth of equipment came up empty.

Officials at Gates Rubber Company called in a professional engineer from Denver when they learned two weeks ago that leaks in the town's water system threatened to drain the plant's water supply. But it was a call to Don Witherspoon, a retired stonemason and 38-year veteran dowser, that brought results.

Witherspoon stalked the company grounds until the Y-shaped branch began tugging and pointing toward the ground. The company is now drawing up to 70 gallons a minute from two wells Witherspoon and his peach twig found, almost eliminating its need for water from the town's ailing system.

"It may be witching, but it apparently works," said Richard Thurston, Gates plant manager. "All I know is we've got water, and we're thankful."

Meanwhile, the town continues to search for water with the help of professional drilling companies, as stipulated by state laws governing municipal wells.

QB Sack Helps Cowboys Trim Saints

By The Associated Press

Dallas linebacker Anthony Dickerson watched a little television before heading out to Texas Stadium where the Cowboys were to play the New Orleans Saints. Later, in the waning moments of the National Football League game, the TV played a big part in Dallas' victory.

New Orleans had a 20-19 lead but Dallas was driving late in the fourth period Sunday. Then, Saints linebacker Dennis Winston intercepted a Danny White pass in the end zone and ran the ball out to the four.

Veteran quarterback Kenny Stabler, hoping to catch the Dallas secondary asleep, dropped back into the end zone to throw a pass.

"I got up early this morning and watched the Game of the Week on television and saw the Saints did the same thing last week against the Green Bay Packers," Dickerson said.

Instead of being caught asleep, Dickerson blitzed, sacking Stabler in the end zone for a safety and giving the Cowboys a 21-20 victory.

In other NFL games Sunday, it was Minnesota 20, Detroit 17; St. Louis 14, Philadelphia 11; Buffalo 30, Houston 13; Miami 14, Kansas City 6; Cincinnati 23, Tampa Bay 17; New England 28, Pittsburgh 23; Baltimore 22, Chicago 19 in overtime; Cleveland 30, San Diego 24 in overtime; Washington 27, Seattle 17; San Francisco 24, Atlanta 20; Los Angeles Raiders 22, Denver 7; and New York Jets 27, Los Angeles Rams 24 in overtime.

Tonight, the Green Bay Packers are at the New York Giants.

Cowboys 21, Saints 20

"I don't know what happened out there myself," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "We were very lucky to win."

Asked about the Saints' play-calling, Landry said: "That wasn't very smart, but we had some mental errors, too. We're 4-0 and I'll take it."

"New Orleans was just great (but) we found a way to win just like we have in the other three games."

The Saints sacked White seven times and intercepted three of his passes. And, New Orleans appeared to have wrapped up the victory when Tyrone Young blocked an extra point attempt by Rafael Septien with 7:05 left in the game.

The winning safety came with 1:58 remaining in the game.

Colts 22, Bears 19

Rookie Raul Allegre, who missed a 45-yard field goal attempt with three seconds left in regulation time, kicked a 33-yarder 4:51 into overtime to lift Baltimore to its victory.

The Bears missed a chance to wrap it the victory in regulation when place-kicker Bob Thomas missed an extra point attempt following the Bears' first touchdown.

49ers 24, Falcons 20

Joe Montana passed for three touchdowns and the San Francisco defense sacked Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski eight times as the 49ers ended a six-game, home losing streak. The 49ers, however, lost running back Wendell

Rudd Wins Race, Allison Still Leads

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP)

— Even though Ricky Rudd made a runaway of the Goody's 500 Grand National stock car race, Winston Cup point leader Bobby Allison achieved his goal.

"We've got to run hard, but we've got to be around at the end, too," Allison said after his sixth second-place finish Sunday at Martinsville Speedway, the only Grand National track on which he's never won.

"We ran hard, as hard as we could, really."

That was hard enough to finish one spot ahead of two-time point champion Darrell Waltrip, who has come from behind the last two years to beat out Allison. As a result, Allison gained 5 points on Waltrip, upping his lead to 106 points with five races to go.

Dale Earnhardt was fourth and Geoff Bodine fifth, both one lap down.

But Rudd, who was second in the Wrangler 400 at Richmond two weeks ago to Allison in the middle of the latter's three-race winning streak, was the whole story Sunday.

"It was a great race with a great field of cars," said Rudd, who has won only one other Grand National race in his career. "When you can win on a track as tough as Martinsville, you can really say you've accomplished something."

Rudd, who averaged 76.134 mph on the .525-mile track in a race slowed six times by caution flags for 37 laps, started on the outside pole opposite Waltrip, who had won three of the last four races here.

Five drivers exchanged the lead five times before Rudd went ahead for good on the 171st lap. He stayed there with Allison and Waltrip unable to catch him the rest of the way.

"The car was a little bit looser in the turns than I would have liked, but it didn't seem to matter," Rudd said. "We knew the car was about two-tenths of a second faster than anyone else and we didn't want to go monkeying around with it."

Tyler, who suffered a dislocated shoulder, indefinitely.

Atlanta also suffered a big loss as wide receiver Alfred Jackson broke his left collarbone.

Jets 27, Rams 24

Pat Leahy kicked a 26-yard field goal at 8:22 in overtime as the Jets scored a wild, fight-punctuated victory over the Los Angeles Rams. Jets quarterback Richard Todd had one of his best NFL games, completing 37 of 50 passes for 446 yards.

The Rams had sent the game into overtime by scoring a touchdown with 32 seconds left in regulation.

Bills 30, Oilers 13

Joe Cribbs outrushed Earl Campbell to lead Buffalo past Houston. Cribbs finished with 166 yards, his best single-game NFL performance, while Campbell rushed for 142 yards.

Patriots 28, Steelers 23

Quarterback Steve Grogan and rookie Stephen Starring hooked up on a 76-yard scoring pass play with 3:59 remaining as New England upset Pittsburgh. The loss spoiled Franco Harris' run into the NFL record books.

Harris passed O.J. Simpson to become the NFL's No. 2 career rusher behind Jim Brown. Harris rushed 25 times for 106 yards against the Pats and now has 11,309 career yards on a record 2,689 carries. He trails Brown by 1,003 yards.

Redskins 27, Seahawks 17

Three touchdown passes by Joe Theismann powered the Washington Redskins over Seattle. It was Washington's ninth consecutive road victory.

The Redskins defense shackled Seattle rookie running back Curt Warner, who went into the game as the NFL's leading rusher. Warner picked up just 34 yards on 15 carries.

Vikings 20, Lions 17

Benny Ricardo booted his second field goal of the game midway through the fourth quarter and Minnesota held on to nip Detroit. After Ricardo's field goal, the Vikings intercepted Detroit quarterback Eric Hipple for the fifth time in the game.

Bengals 23, Bucs 17

Ken Riley sprinted 34 yards with an interception for a touchdown and Cincinnati went on to win its first game of the season, beating winless Tampa Bay. The Bengals stopped a late threat when Robert Jackson picked off another Tampa Bay pass in the end zone.

"We threw two passes we shouldn't have," Bucs Coach John McKay said after the game. "Mistakes are killing the Bucs."

Browns 30, Chargers 24

Quarterback Brian Sipe and tight end Harry Holt teamed up for a 48-yard touchdown pass just 1:53 into overtime to give Cleveland its victory over San Diego.

The Browns had tied the game when Chris Bahr kicked a 32-yard field goal with just 18 seconds remaining in regulation.

Raiders 22, Broncos 7

Two touchdown passes from Jim Plunkett to Cliff Branch powered the Los Angeles Raiders to its fourth consecutive victory. Denver scored in the closing moments to avert a shutout, which would have been the Broncos' first ever at home.

John Elway, Denver's rookie quarterback, suffered a slight concussion late in the first half and didn't see any more action during the game.

Cardinals 14, Eagles 11

St. Louis posted its first victory of the season when veteran quarterback Jim Hart threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to Roy Green with 29 seconds remaining in the game. Hart, a 19-year NFL veteran, played in place of the injured Neil Lomax and completed 12 of 19 passes for 123 yards and two touchdowns.

Dolphins 14, Chiefs 6

Miami survived a mistake-marred first half to beat Kansas City as quarterback David Woodley hit rookie tight end Dan Johnson for one touchdown and fullback Andra Franklin bulled over from the 1 for the other.

Kansas City's only scoring came on field goals of 45 and 46 yards by Nick Lowery.

Brewers Watch As Orioles Celebrate

By The Associated Press

Last season, in Baltimore, the Orioles watched helplessly as the Milwaukee Brewers celebrated winning the American League East title.

On Sunday, in Milwaukee, it was the Orioles' turn to whoop it up.

Jim Dwyer and Joe Nolan each homered and Storm Davis and Tippy Martinez combined on a six-hitter as the Orioles clinched the AL East crown by downing the Brewers 5-1.

Baltimore began the day needing either one victory or a loss by second-place Detroit to wrap up the division. When Detroit beat Boston 3-2 earlier in the day, it was up to the Orioles to finish things off.

"It looked like the timing was right for us all season long," said Baltimore's first-year manager, Joe Altobelli, who presided over the team's first season without Earl Weaver at the helm.

The Orioles won their seventh division title by beating the defending AL champion Brewers for the 11th time in 13 meetings this season.

"I would have rather sent them out to Baltimore and made them win it at home," said Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenn, whose team won the division last year by beating the Orioles 10-2 in Baltimore in the final game of the season.

This season, Milwaukee led the division as late as Aug. 25, then went into a severe tailspin, losing 18 of 24 games while the Orioles were winning 25 of 29.

"Last year, it went down to the wire," said Eddie Murray of the Orioles. "This time, we've got a week to go. It just doesn't compare."

This year, though, the Orioles came out on top. They'll finish the regular season with three games against Detroit and four against New York, all at home.

Baltimore will then play host to the AL West champion Chicago White Sox for the first two games of the best-of-five championship series, which begins Oct. 5.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 2

Kirk Gibson drilled a solo home run and three Detroit pitchers combined on an eight-hitter.

Glenn Abbott started for the host Tigers but left after one inning because of tenderness in his right shoulder. Doug Bair, 7-3, went the next four innings and Dave Gumpert finished up for his second save.

Gibson's 15th homer came in the second off Dennis Boyd, 4-7.

White Sox 8, Angels 5

LaMarr Hoyt, tuning up for a start in the AL championship series, won his 12th consecutive game for his major league-leading 23rd victory.

Hoyt, 23-10, allowed three hits in six innings in California. His 12th straight victory set a team record previously held by John Rigney (1939) and Gary Peters (1963).

Jerry Dybzinski drove in three runs and Tom Paciorek knocked in two with three hits, including a solo home run.

Tommy John, 11-13, took the loss.

Yankees 6, Indians 4

John Montefusco remained unbeaten in the AL with his fourth victory since being acquired by New York.

Montefusco, who was 9-3 before being dealt away by San Diego on Aug. 26, gave up seven hits in 7 2/3 innings.

Roy Smalley drove in three runs for host New York. Dave Winfield of the Yankees left the game after being hit in the helmet by a line drive off the bat of Don Baylor on a hit-and-run play, but X-rays were negative.

Twins 7, Royals 1

Tom Brunansky drove in three runs with an inside-the-park homer and a double.

His two-run double during a three-run fourth gave visiting Minnesota a 4-0 lead. His 27th home run made it 5-0 in the sixth.

Ken Schrom pitched a six-hitter to raise his record to 14-8.

Mariners 2, Rangers 1

Bob Stoddard, 9-16, took a shutout into the ninth and had retired 15 consecutive batters before running into trouble. Bill Caudill got the final two outs for his 25th save.

Loser Charlie Hough, 15-13, pitched a complete game, giving up five hits and striking out a career-high nine.

Seattle scored in the second with the help of a passed ball and an error by Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien. The visiting Mariners scored their second run on an error by Rangers second baseman Wayne Tolleson.

Blue Jays 8, A's 6

Rance Mulliniks lined a three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning to spark Toronto.

Oakland took a 6-3 lead into the eighth, but the A's bullpen was unable to hold the margin as the visiting Blue Jays scored twice in the eighth and then rallied in the ninth.

Mulliniks' 10th homer came off Keith Atherton, 2-5, who had walked Tony Hernandez. Reliever Dave Beard had walked Alfredo Griffin to start the inning.

Throckmorton To Address Club

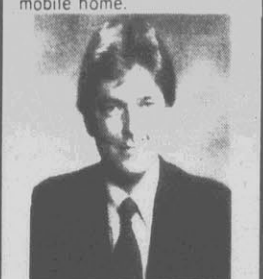

Tom Throckmorton, defensive coordinator for the East Carolina University football team, will be the guest speaker of the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at noon at the Ramada Inn.

This past weekend has been an experience for me, if I may delve into a few personal matters. Things got off to a unique start when my son Scott's wife, Debbie, delivered a fine 7-pound, 3½-pound daughter, Lauren Ashley, at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The experience of holding one's first grandchild — and I'm not really that old — is something that can only be experienced, not described.

Mother and child are doing well, thanks. Pop and grandpa are both still up in the clouds.

With Saturday's open date for the Pirates, I was able to take a rare Saturday off during football season and what did I do? Go to a football game of course. It was the first time in 20 years that I have attended a college football game as a spectator.

The last time I was a spectator was when my alma mater Wake Forest played in the dedication game of Ficklen Stadium with East Carolina — a school that in just a few months I was to come to be very familiar with. That was back in September of 1963, and in January of 1964, I took over as sports editor of The Daily Reflector.

Since then, the only football games I've seen as a spectator, aside from television, have been a few junior high school games this year and last as my youngest son, Steve, has taken up that sport. In the past 20 years, I would estimate that I've covered somewhere in the neighborhood of 425 games — high school and college.

Saturday afternoon, however, it worked out that I could attend the North Carolina-William & Mary game as a guest of my daughter, Susan, who is a senior at Chapel Hill.

Those of you who know me know well that the Tar Heels are not exactly my favorites — after all I went to Wake and I follow the Pirates. Still, it was an experience.

First of all, I found out that we were in the card section, and part of my duties, in addition to just sitting and watching, would be holding up cards during the halftime show. And I thought I was going to get out of the weekend without working.

To top it off, I haven't the slightest idea what all those cards formed to show. Susan said that they would hold up a drawing just before we held our cards up to show us what we were forming, but they never held it up until after we raised our cards, and they had taken it down before we lowered ours.

Then, there was the constant up-and-down, up-and-down as students around us jumped to to follow some plays, then gradually inched back down.

We just don't have that in the press box. While we frantically keep notes on the progress of the game, we still don't have to jump up to see what's happening. Twenty years of that can be habit forming.

Cheering is also not allowed in the press box, and that's another habit that I found tough to break out of.

I did get a chance to see William & Mary, an upcoming foe of the Pirates. And the Indians, let me say, have an outstanding passing game. Their quarterback, Stan Yagiello is an outstanding passer, and he has a corps of receivers who run outstanding patterns.

Those of you who saw the Indians two years ago will recognize the same hand — that of coach Jimmie Laycock — when this year's Tribe visits Ficklen in November.

My wife, Linda, enjoyed having me sit with her — again for the first time in 20 years.

At any rate, while it was fun to a certain extent, I'd just as soon sit in the pressbox and do my work. Maybe it wouldn't be so bad to have my wife sitting with me in the pressbox, but things just don't work out that way.

Nevertheless, maybe I'll do it again sometime. Say maybe in 20 years when granddaughter Lauren is in college and the Pirates have an appropriate open date.

Lofton's Stats Worry New York Coaches

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells says Green Bay Packers wide receiver James Lofton is "really a pleasure to watch." But playing against Lofton is another story.

"I think Lofton is the best receiver in the league. Who else averages 24 yards a catch?" said Parcells, who will get a close-up view of Lofton tonight when the Giants, 1-2, face the Packers, 2-1, at Giants Stadium.

"As an athlete, I don't know anybody who is superior to Lofton. He's fast and strong. He can leap. He's so graceful," Parcells added.

Parcells also says he hasn't forgotten Lofton's ability to turn a game around. Lofton led the Packers to 27-19 comeback victory over the Giants last year in a Monday night meeting that was the final game before the strike. He raced 83 yards on an end-around as the Packers rallied from a 12-0 deficit.

This year Lofton has caught 16 passes, is averaging 23.8-yard per catch and leads the NFL with four touchdown receptions.

Lofton also gets quite a bit of help. John Jefferson, the Packers' other starter at wide receiver, has 13 receptions and three touchdowns. Tight end Paul Coffman has 11 receptions and fullback Gerry Ellis has caught 13 passes.

Lynn Dickey, a 13-year veteran, ignites the Packers' explosive offense. He's the NFL's top-rated quarterback, with 63 completions in 87 attempts for 911 yards and nine touchdowns.

"What we've got to do is cover their receivers long enough so our defensive people can get in Dickey's face," Parcells said. "We have to get him moving so we can sack him. He's not mobile."

"He goes back and slings it. If we make him hold the ball a little we've got a chance to get some sacks," Parcells added.

Meanwhile, Giants quarterback Scott Brunner says the best way to stop the Packers' explosive offense will be to keep it off the field.

Yachts Prepare For Finale

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The longest-running drama in America's Cup history sailed toward its belated climax, apparently having avoided a stormy controversy.

The American defenders of yachting's most prestigious prize decided to make no further changes in the weight and sail configuration of Liberty, a slower and heavier boat than Australia II, her formidable foe.

Alan Bond, chief of the Aussie syndicate, angered by another possible change in Liberty, pledged Saturday that Australia II would protest the seventh race at the start.

But Warren Jones, executive director of the Australia II syndicate, said Sunday, "We're pleased to learn that the configuration isn't being changed" and added that the decision to protest was being reconsidered.

U.S. skipper Dennis Conner used Sunday's final lay day of the 14-day old competition — equaling the duration record set in 1970 — to check weather reports and consider putting back some of the 924 pounds of lead that were removed from his boat's red hull last week.

Today's forecast called for light and shifty winds at the scheduled 12:10 p.m. EDT starting time for the seventh and decisive race. That convinced Conner to make no further alterations beyond those made Friday in anticipation of the next day's race.

Because of wind conditions similar to those forecast for today, Cup officials put off the race Saturday, giving Conner more time to wonder if there was something else he could do to Liberty.

With the sleek 12-meter having been towed 25 miles to Cove Haven Marina in Barrington, R.I., where the work would have been done, Conner decided against fattening the boat, a move which would have helped in stronger winds.

"They just wasted a day towing the boat upriver while we were out training," said Jones.

Bond, whose boats had won just one of 13 races in his previous campaigns in 1974, 1977 and 1980, had claimed that the anticipated changes would have made Liberty a different 12-meter and would have violated the spirit of an International Yacht Racing Union rule requiring a boat to compete under a valid certificate.

Conner holds three certificates for Liberty — for light, medium and heavy weights — and said, "The conditions speak for themselves."

Liberty navigator Halsey Herreshoff said that if today's race were postponed, Conner might reconsider his boat's configuration again.

"If there ever was a loophole, then it was never the intent of the rules we signed to race under," Bond charged. "If we had known they could do this, we never would have signed them."

Conner is reeling from two consecutive defeats — by one minute, 47 seconds last Wednesday and by 3:25 Thursday — that evened the best-of-seven series at 3-3. He hoped the lightweight Liberty would provide the winning edge and keep him from becoming the American skipper at the helm of the first U.S. failure in the competition's 132 years.

But Bond thinks Conner, who retained the Cup in 1980 aboard Freedom, is riding a loser this time.

"We found that her improvements were non-existent" in the short time the boats duelled before Saturday's start was delayed about three minutes before the opening gun, Bond said.

He remained confident Sunday about Australia II, which already has won as many races as all eight previous challengers combined in the 12-meter era that began in 1958.

"We'll win it, no question about it," he said.

If he's right, he said he plans to send a messenger to pick up the Cup at the New York Yacht Club because the crew is committed to a filming session Tuesday.

He also said Sunday that Australia II's innovative winged keel, which has been draped in plastic when out of the water, would be unveiled Wednesday.

At least two attempts have been made to examine or photograph the keel. Pictures published today in the Toronto Globe and Mail showed what the newspaper said was the Australia II's keel with wings on either side of it — with a total span of about 6½ feet. The photos reportedly were taken by a member of the Canadian syndicate who escaped detection when a fellow Canadian was caught trying to take pictures of the keel last July.

Rose Leads Phils Closer To Title

By The Associated Press

Pete Rose is used to leading off rallies. This time, he capped one and moved the Philadelphia Phillies one game closer to the National League East title.

The 21-year veteran and National League's all-time hit leader hasn't been playing much lately as the Phillies have taken charge in the East. When called upon to pinch hit Sunday, Rose, as always, was ready. He delivered a bases-loaded single to snap a 4-4 tie in the 10th inning at St. Louis and the Phillies grabbed a 6-5 victory, their 10th straight.

Philadelphia leads Pittsburgh, a 5-3 loser at Montreal, by four games and has a magic number of three.

In the West, Atlanta beat Los Angeles 7-1 to move within 3½ games of the first-place Dodgers, who have a magic number of five.

Also, it was Chicago 11, New York 7; Cincinnati 5, San Diego 2; and San Francisco 3, Houston 0.

"I've come to the ballpark early and taken extra batting practice," said the 42-year-old Rose. "It's paid off. I feel like I'm ready when I'm called."

Rose's hit through the right side of the infield scored Von Hayes, who led off the inning with a walk and moved up on bunts by Sixto Lezcano and Garry Maddox. Lezcano, who reached base when Cards reliever Jeff Lahti fielded his sacrifice bunt and threw too late to second base, scored an insurance run on Joe Morgan's groundout.

Rose, ever-aware of his totals, knew it was the 3,989th hit of his career.

"It was my second game-winner as a pinch-hitter. I'm 8-for-21," Rose said proudly. "I like the situation I was in today. Usually, I suppose because I've always been a leadoff hitter, they use me to start a rally."

Expos 5, Pirates 3

Gary Carter's sacrifice fly and a two-run single by Al Oliver lifted the Expos to victory and kept them barely alive in the East. If they lose once more or the Phillies win once more this season, Montreal will be eliminated.

It was a costly defeat for the Pirates, who travel to Philadelphia for three games to conclude the season.

"We have to be able to control our own destiny when we face them, so we simply can't drop back any further," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

"This is a tough one for us," said Pirates catcher Tony Pena. "We needed it badly. Now it's going to be really hard for us."

Braves 7, Dodgers 1

Atlanta started quickly when Brett Butler led off the first with a home run.

Glenn Hubbard and Claudell Washington each singled in the third and eventually scored on Rafael Ramirez's two-run single.

In the fifth, Hubbard singled with the bases full for two more runs.

"It's not an easy road, but we're in the race," said Braves center fielder Dale Murphy. "We definitely do have a chance. We just need to win. We can't worry about them."

"You just can't afford to lose," Braves Manager Joe Torre said. "I'd much rather be on the other side right now, but a club is capable of a winning streak and a club is capable of a losing streak."

"After Friday we were five out (loss column) with 10 to play. Now it's three out, eight to play. That's two giant steps."

"Our team hasn't lost its confidence," Dodger second baseman Steve Sax said. "This (Sunday's loss) didn't shake us."

Cubs 11, Mets 7

Reggie Patterson won his first major league game and Larry Bowa had four singles to pace Chicago's 15-hit attack. The Mets, who clinched last place in the NL East with the loss, committed five errors. Seven of the Cubs' 11 runs were unearned.

The host Cubs scored six runs in the second inning, two on a two-base error by left fielder George Foster, who dropped a fly ball off the bat of Bill Buckner, and another pair on a double by Keith Moreland.

Foster homered twice and Gary Rajsich also homered for the Mets.

Reds 5, Padres 2

Rookie Dann Bilardello drove in three runs with a homer and a bases-loaded double at Cincinnati. Bilardello rapped his eighth homer of the season in the second inning Sunday, then snapped a 2-2 tie with a two-run double in the sixth.

San Diego's Alan Wiggins stole two bases, giving him 62 for the season, a club record.

Giants 3, Astros 0

Rookie Scott Garrelts hurled his first major-league complete game, five-hitting the Astros in Houston. He struck out five and walked five.

Iowa, Kansas Join Gridiron Elite

By The Associated Press

Iowa and Kansas, a couple of schools from the heartland of America out where the wheat and corn grow tall, have taught some city slickers a football lesson.

Third-ranked Ohio State journeyed from Columbus to Iowa City and ran afoul of the seventh-ranked Iowa Hawkeyes, who beat the Buckeyes 20-14 in an early-season Big Ten showdown.

Meanwhile, the unheralded Kansas Jayhawks found themselves in Los Angeles and wrote a script which Hollywood would have found too melodramatic — a 26-20 triumph over 10th-ranked Southern California engineered by Frank Seurer, a one-time local high school star.

Besides Iowa-Ohio State, the only other pairing of Associated Press Top Twenty teams saw No. 12 West Virginia defeat No. 19 Boston College 27-17.

Three other members of the Top Twenty lost to unranked teams. LSU whipped ninth-ranked Washington 40-14, Miami dealt No. 13 Notre Dame its first shutout since the 1978 opener 20-0 and Maryland, playing without injured quarterback Boomer Esiason, defeated No. 16 Pitt 13-7.

Meanwhile, Nebraska's Tom Osborne and Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, who began their head coaching careers in 1973, both achieved their 100th victories. No. 1-rated Nebraska overcame a 10-0 second-period deficit to defeat UCLA 42-10, while eighth-ranked Oklahoma opened a 28-0 halftime lead and held on for a 28-18 triumph over Tulsa.

Switzer's record is 100-18-3 to Osborne's 100-24-2.

Elsewhere, second-ranked Texas rallied from a 6-2 halftime deficit to turn back North Texas State 26-6, No. 4 Arizona trounced Fullerton State 31-10, No. 5 North Carolina crushed William & Mary 51-20 and sixth-rated Alabama beat Vanderbilt 44-24.

In the Second Ten, it was No. 11 Auburn 37, Tennessee 14; No. 14 Georgia 31, South Carolina 13; No. 15 Florida 35, Mississippi State 12; No. 17 Michigan 38, Wisconsin 17 and No. 18 Southern Methodist 21, Texas Christian 17. Florida State, the No. 20 team, was idle.

Iowa trailed Ohio State 7-3 at halftime, but took the lead for good on Chuck Long's 16-yard pass to Mike Hufford in the third quarter. Tom Nichol added a 47-yard field goal later in the period and Long teamed with Dave Moritz for a 73-yard touchdown pass play with 4:25 left to play for a 20-7 advantage.

"That was one of the few times that Moritz wasn't double-covered," said Iowa Coach Hayden Fry. "Moritz is a phenomenal player. He's not fast, but he's a great one-on-one player. He's real nifty and he runs scared."

Ohio State's Earle Bruce said Long "really knocked us out with that long touchdown pass. He engineered an excellent drive in the first half to set up a score and eat up a lot of time on the clock."

"Yes, we were blitzing on that long touchdown pass. It was just a tremendous play and I think Iowa is a tremendous team."

Nine-Year PGA Wait Pays Off For Caldwell

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Rex Caldwell readily admitted he was starting to wonder about his future on the PGA Tour.

"I was beginning to think that I never would win out here," Caldwell said, then flashed a broad smile. "But I put that thought to rest."

"It took me nine years — almost nine full years — but I finally won."

The victory, after countless disappointments that included two playoff losses and four runner-up finishes this season, was achieved by a single stroke over Lee Trevino in the final round Sunday at the LaJeta Coors Classic.

It came on the strength of a closing, 6-under-par 66 by Caldwell and a late 3-putt by Trevino.

Caldwell, who played 40 minutes in front of Trevino, didn't get a share of the lead until he hit a 3-wood second shot to the par-5 18th and 2-putted for birdie.

Trevino, trying to snap a 2-year victory drought, was playing the 15th at that time, and missed the 3-foot second putt only moments after Caldwell had finished.

"I posted my score early, and that seems to work a lot out here," Caldwell said. "Then he missed that little putt and all of a sudden I'm the leader."

Trevino, now in the position of attempting to match Caldwell's 6-under-par total of 282, gave himself a chance with birdie putts of 8 and 15 feet on the 17th and 18th.

Both missed and Caldwell, 33, now a resident of Abilene, became a first time winner.

"The thrill of a life," he said. "I did everything I had to do. That's probably the best round I've ever played. Shooting six under to go get somebody. With that kind of pressure. Probably the best I've ever played."

The victory was worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000 and boosted Caldwell's earnings for the season to $279,851, almost three times his previous high.

Third-Rated NBC Big Emmy Award Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's programs are so superior to the rival networks that even NBC's canceled shows win major Emmy awards.

at the awards presentation Sunday night, including one for Judd Hirsch as best actor in a comedy series. "Doesn't anybody know we've been canceled?" he cracked.

In a rambling, sometimes seemingly bitter acceptance speech, Hirsch attacked NBC for canceling "Taxi" following last season. He even singled out for criticism Grant Tinker, NBC's chairman of the board.

But Hirsch lambasted the wrong network.

He should have been asking why ABC and CBS didn't make better programs, not why NBC, with most of TV's watchable shows, canceled one of those good programs.

He should have asked why, in the overall Emmy count, NBC won 33 awards to ABC's 14 and CBS's 11, yet NBC is the third-rated network.

He should have asked how it was possible that CBS is No. 1 in prime time, ABC makes the most profit, while NBC is recognized by peers for excellence.

"SCTV," the late-night comedy series which harpoons commercial television, couldn't have created a more unbelievable scenario than Sunday's Emmy awards broadcast. "SCTV" won the Emmy for best writing in a variety or music program. But, alas, "SCTV," a victim of low ratings, will not be on NBC this season.

Pay cable's Cinemax, a small subsidiary of Home Box Office, has picked up "SCTV" this fall.

"A Cinemax representative is in the lobby," joked Eugene Levy, a member of "SCTV's" comedy troupe during his acceptance speech.

Despite these cancellations, NBC should be commended for sticking with other programs that had not achieved initial commercial success. One network executive tells how Tinker, in helping select this season's NBC schedule, was given a list of reasons why "St. Elsewhere" should be canceled.

His response to each reason was to repeat, "St. Elsewhere" will not be canceled. It is too good."

Tinker had promised the most creative producers in Hollywood that NBC would be a home for high-standard television, and the welcome mat was not being lifted just because the public hadn't caught on yet.

As Les Charles, co-executive producer of "Cheers" said Sunday night: "We could have no better relationship with a network."

The history of commercial TV suggests repeatedly that programs with heart and intellect take time to build an audience. "The Dick Van Dyke Show" was about to be canceled until viewers found it in summer reruns. "All in the Family" was an initial disaster. And "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" didn't soar right away.

Last season "The A-Team" was NBC's only immediate hit. The more sophisticated "St. Elsewhere" and "Cheers" never were successful in the Nielsen ratings and were two of the lowest-rated series ever to be renewed.

NBC's faith was rewarded Sunday night when "Cheers" won four Emmys, including best comedy and Shelley Long for best actress, and "St. Elsewhere" won three Emmys, including Ed Flanders for best actor.

One shudders to think about the TV void without "Hill Street Blues," which was named best dramatic series for the third consecutive season and picked up three other Emmys Sunday night. Yet "Hill Street Blues" was a whisker away from cancellation because of dismal ratings after its first season.

No, Judd, don't point your finger at NBC. NBC is doing more than its share of quality television.

Maybe you should ask CBS why its only Emmy on Sunday night went to Tyne Daly for best actress in "Cagney and Lacey," a canceled show.

Maybe you should ask ABC why its series programs didn't win a single award Sunday night.

Joan Rivers Upset Television Viewers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a good thing comedian Joan Rivers didn't ask her trademark question "Can we talk?" while co-hosting the 35th annual Emmy awards for NBC.

Many angry television viewers would have yelled "No!"

Telephone calls started coming into NBC network affiliates from New York to Los Angeles on Sunday after Miss Rivers, opening the nationally televised ceremonies, made satirical reference to a controversial comment by Interior Secretary James G. Watt and called Watt "an idiot."

Bantering with co-host Eddie Murphy during the Emmy telecast, Miss Rivers broke a television taboo on profanity by saying "god-damn," made light of a sexy television character played by actress Joan Collins and kidded about herpes, prostitutes and homosexuals.

Miss Rivers' barbed, tongue-in-cheek style has helped earn her a job as Johnny Carson's regular guest host on NBC's "The Tonight Show."

Early on, Miss Rivers noted that Murphy is a black Catholic, while she is a white, Jewish woman.

She joked that "if you had a limp we could be the committee appointed by James Watt. Is he an idiot?"

Watt has been denounced for his remark last Wednesday to a business group that an advisory committee formed to review his coal-leasing program contained "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

Later, Miss Rivers introduced Miss Collins, one of the Emmy presenters, who plays the beautiful, conniving Alexis Carrington on ABC's "Dynasty."

"Alexis has had more hands up her dress than the Muppets," Miss Rivers quipped.

A unidentified spokeswoman at KNBC in Burbank said the station received more than 100 calls objecting to the comment.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KJ865 ♥742 ♦K6 ♠A4
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—The answer is obvious if you understand what type of hand partner shows by his jump shift. North either has a strong hand with a very good suit of his own or a spade fit. You don't want to rebid a weakish five-card suit and you can't bid no trump with one suit unstopped. So the solution becomes obvious—raise to four diamonds. A high honor doubleton is sufficient for this action. Partner's next bid will clarify which type of hand he holds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦K8753 ♥Q ♦Q9842 ♠103
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You did not have the values for three spades at your first turn, nor could you jump to four spades, for that would deny the second round control in hearts that you hold. Now you certainly don't want to play no trump, but to take a mere preference to four spades doesn't come close to doing justice to your hand. Jump to five spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KJ74 ♥98 ♦Q63 ♠8762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
2 ♥ 2 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a conventional bid that describes your hand exactly—double. That shows a hand with values in the opponents' suit but little or nothing outside. Partner can judge from his hand whether he wants to play for penalties or whether his hand is better suited for offense, either in his own suit or in no trump.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KJ765 ♦KQ73 ♠QJ83
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Dble Rdbld ?

What action do you take?
A.—It sounds as if someone is fooling around, but you have no reason to suspect that it is your partner, especially at this vulnerability. Even if partner is a bit light, you have enough for game. Jump to four spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ873 ♥Q1052 ♦A6 ♠K3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—There is no reason why you should not bid your hand naturally. You have a two-suited hand, and your second suit is a major at that. Bid two hearts—it is more important to tell partner about your hearts than it is to confirm that you have five spades.

NOTICE CONCERNING CERTAIN ANCIENT MINERAL CLAIMS
PITTS COUNTY
Pursuant to House Bill 443,

PUBLIC NOTICES

Chapter 502 of the 1983 Session Laws of the General Assembly of North Carolina, and more particularly pursuant to Section 142.9 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Pitt County hereby give notice that the portions of the Section of said G.S. 142.9 as follows:

ANCIENT MINERAL CLAIMS

(a) Where an oil or gas lease or public records that the fee simple title to any oil, gas or mineral interests in an area of land has been severed and separated from the surface fee simple ownership of such land and such interest is not in actual possession of being mined, drilled, worked or operated, and the fee simple title to the same is not in the actual possession of another, and that the record titleholder of any such land or mineral interest has not listed the same for ad valorem tax purposes in the County of Pitt where the said land is located for a period of five (5) years prior to January 1, 1983, any person having the legal capacity to own land in this State, prior to September 1, 1983, an unbroken chain of title of record to the surface estate of the area of land for at least thirty (30) years, and provided the surface estate is not in the adverse possession of another, shall be deemed to have a marketable title to the fee simple estate as provided in the succeeding subsections of G.S. 142.9, subject to the interests and defects as are inherent in the provisions and limitations contained in the muniments of title forming the chain of record title is formed.

(b) This marketable title shall be held by such person and shall be taken by his successors in interest free and clear of any fee simple oil, gas or mineral interests in the area of land founded upon any reservation of interest contained in an instrument conveying the surface estate in fee simple that was executed or recorded at least thirty (30) years prior to September 1, 1983, and such oil, gas or mineral interests are hereby declared to be null and void and of no effect, whatever law, or equity. Provided, however, that any fee simple oil, gas or mineral interest may be preserved and kept effective by recording within two (2) years after September 1, 1983, a notice in writing duly sworn to and subscribed to by the person or persons authorized to take probate by G.S. 47.1, which sets forth the nature of the oil, gas or mineral interest and the book and page where the same is recorded. This notice shall be provided as required for registration of deeds in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County wherein the area of land, or any part thereof, lies, and in the book therein kept, and provided under the terms of G.S. 142.9 for the purpose of recording certain severances of surface and subsurface interests, and shall contain either such a description of the land as the landowner and to make the property readily located thereby or a description of the surface fee simple ownership of such land, and the recorded instrument containing the reservation or exception of such oil, gas or mineral interest. The notice may be recorded by the claimant or by any other person acting on behalf of any claimant who is either under a disability, or is an infant, or is a minor, or is a person who is a class by whose identity cannot be established by the State, and the time of filing such notice of claim for record.

The oil, gas or mineral claims, hereby extinguished shall include those of persons, whether within or without the State, and whether natural or corporate, but shall exclude governmental claims, State or Federal, and claims by persons claiming such claims by reason of unexpired oil, gas or mineral leases.

(d) Within two (2) years from September 1, 1983, any oil, gas or mineral interests in land severed or separated from the surface fee simple ownership and forfeitable under the terms of G.S. 142.9, must be listed for ad valorem taxes, and notice of this interest must be filed in writing in the manner provided by G.S. 42.9(b) and recorded in the local registry in the book provided by G.S. 142.9 to be effective against the surface fee simple owner or creditors, purchasers, heirs or assigns of such owner. Subsurface oil, gas and mineral interests shall be assessed for ad valorem taxes as real property and such taxes shall be collected and paid in the manner authorized by Chapter 105 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

Revolutionary Activity In America's Front Yard

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

SESORI, El Salvador (AP) — Away from the noonday sun, townspeople sit listless in the shadows, watchful for the arrival of "los muchachos" — the "boys," the guerrillas who come and go almost daily in Sessori.

A storekeeper, gray, nearsighted, grows talkative. "We're in another Vietnam here," he assures an American visitor. "Without the United States, we're lost."

Across the gritty plaza, near an abandoned, bullet-chipped militia post, a young woman tells a different story.

"Some people help the 'muchachos,'" she says, "and these people" — she insists she is not one — "say that if the United States stops helping the government, then all this could end."

Sessori, dead end on a long, rocky road 80 miles east of San Salvador, is not on the itinerary of Henry A. Kissinger's commission on U.S. policy in Central America. But even in this bleak little hill town, lost in the eye of the political hurricane shaking Central America, ordinary people know their future may rest on American policy, and would like to be heard.

What is the U.S. stake in Central America?

The Salvadoran guerrillas define American interests in stark terms: Their manifesto opens with a vow to end "the exploitation of our people by Yankee imperialism."

President Reagan describes the U.S. position in Central America just as starkly: "If we cannot defend ourselves there the safety of our homeland would be put at jeopardy."

A Salvadoran official, Interior Minister Manuel Lopez Sermeno, is bluntly sardonic: "I think Americans are only interested in hamburgers and Coca-Cola. They don't realize that these revolutionary movements are directed at them."

The American roots in Central America — "our front yard," as Reagan calls it — are deep and complex:

— At least 55,000 Americans now reside in the five Central American republics and Panama, State Department statistics show. They include missionaries and mercenaries, businessmen, soldiers and Marxist revolutionaries, engineers upgrading El Salvador's electrical system, economists fine-tuning leftist Nicaragua's land reform, specialists rewriting Panama's labor code.

— Americans have at least $4 billion — probably much more — in direct investments in the region, including banks and banana plantations, factories and food processing plants, even the Salvadoran airline.

— Washington is pouring $740 million in economic and military aid into the region this year.

— By December, at least 18,000 U.S. soldiers, sailors and airmen will be in the area, many taking part in extended military exercises close to Central America's flashpoints.

The U.S. government says it seeks economic development and democracy for Central America, behind a military shield that guards against subversion by the "Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan axis."

"With a timely investment now, we can save freedom in Central America," Reagan says.

But the path to development and democracy is difficult.

The region has been economically crippled by the worldwide recession. Probably half the labor force is idle most of the time.

The long-dominant military is only grudgingly making way for civilian democracies. Honduras elected a civilian president in 1981, though the military remains powerful. The general who governs Guatemala says there will be assembly elections in 1984. Military-dominated Panama has a presidential vote scheduled for next year. Costa Rica clings to a civilian democratic tradition.

The U.S. effort focuses most sharply, however, on El Salvador, a tiny, overcrowded land of 4.5 million people where generations of leftist insurgency that has dragged on for four years.

Washington, which says the guerrillas are supplied by Cuba and Nicaragua, has provided some $150 million in direct military aid to El Salvador in the past three years. About 50 U.S. advisers are training Salvadoran army battalions.

But the buildup has won the U.S.-backed right-wing government little more than a military stale September by assaulting the eastern city of San Miguel.

American economic assistance to El Salvador also has gained the government time, but little else. This year's $290 million in U.S. economic aid goes largely toward keeping El Salvador from falling hopelessly into debt.

The Reagan administration is deeply involved here in other ways as well, often at the insistence of the U.S. Congress.

It is pressuring the Salvadoran government to break up the secret, right-wing "death squads" blamed for most of the more than 40,000 killings in four years of left-right civil strife. It is pressing for early new elections to strengthen democratic institutions. And it is pushing the Salvadoran leadership into tentative peace talks with the rebels.

But death-squad killings continue, the election timetable remains uncertain, and the peace contacts are faltering.

The Salvadoran right wing, chafing under the heavy U.S.

hand, complains openly of "foreign interference." But, ironically, the guerrilla left looks to U.S. intervention to help it achieve its end.

An underground leader of the rebel Revolutionary Democratic Front, meeting secretly with a reporter, insisted the Reagan administration is "not really sincere" in the negotiations and "is committing itself to a military victory." But the rebels find their talks with special Reagan envoy Richard B. Stone to be convenient: They allow the insurgents to portray the United States as their true foe and negotiating adversary, the real enemy of the Salvadoran people.

On this day in Sessori, a grimly quiet town of 2,000, the "muchachos" — camped in the hills 10 miles from here — do not arrive.

Sessori has been a "no-go" zone for the Salvadoran military since July, when six national guardsmen were killed in an ambush down the road.

Those mornings when the guerrillas do come to town, in groups of 10 or 20, they pick up provisions — paying for them, townspeople say — collect "donations," and recruit among the locals.

"They gather everyone in the plaza," a resident recounts, "and tell them that when the people of Sessori and other towns give them their support, and when the United States cuts off its aid to the government, then 'the people' will be victorious."

Quiet Politics Among Baptists

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Five potential candidates for president of the N.C. Baptist State Convention say they are not seeking the post, but Baptist leaders say supporters are already lining up support for a race that will pit conservatives against moderates in the denomination.

Considered potential candidates for the convention post are J. Morse Grant, former editor of the "Political Recorder," U.S. Attorney Samuel T. Currin, Henderson, Belk, first vice president of the convention, Albert S. Lineberry, second vice president and Dr. William H. Wagoner, retired director of the Baptist Children's Homes of North Carolina.

Grant is identified with Lineberry of Greensboro and Thomasville's Wagoner as a "moderate." Belk, of Charlotte, and Currin, of Raleigh, are considered conservatives. Dr. Frank R. Campbell, the outgoing president, is considered a moderate.

All five men say they are not seeking to replace Campbell, who will be replaced at the state convention Nov. 15 after his second one-year term. Convention rules require him to step down.

"I have no comment," said Belk. "It's up to the Lord to decide."

"I'm not running for anything," Lineberry said. "But I'm available, if that's what the convention wants."

"I think a lot of Al Lineberry," said Grant. "I wouldn't let my name be presented against his."

"Right now, it's the farthest thing from my mind," said Currin. "I can't imagine a movement from the floor to draft me for anything."

"I hadn't thought of it," said Wagoner.

"It's par for the course in Baptist life that you disclaim any desire for leadership position," said Dr. R.G. Puckett, editor of The Biblical Recorder. "But there's deadly politics going on. People are busy putting systems together and campaigning."

Moderates and conservatives have traditionally differed only on the concept of innerrancy — the conservative notion that every word in the Bible is inspired by God. But this year the differences have overstepped secular boundaries. The Rev. Robert M. Tenery of Morganton, a conservative leader, has said that Grant is an "operative for Gov. Hunt," while Puckett maintains Currin is "looked at as an instrument of Jesse Helms."

Growth Stifled By Communism

NEW YORK (AP) — Massive military spending by Communist nations is stifling their civilian economies, a new conference board study says.

The report, released Sunday, is based on analyses of 20 Communist countries, such as China, one-third of these countries are involved in ongoing war efforts, including Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Communist nations need to increase exports and cut down on imports.

KITE ACCIDENT — Steve Edieken of Venice, Calif., is shown dancing from the control ropes of a kite launched Saturday on Long Beach near the town of Long Beach — moments before he fell to his death.
