Extra Time For Robbery

Parker Given Two Life Terms

By ROY HARDEE

A Pitt County jury Wednesday sent Dwight Parker to prison for at least 54 years for the execution-style murder and robbery of two men last February.

The jury of nine women and three men set two consecutive life sentences for murder plus a 28-year sentence for robbery as punishment for Parker, a 24-year-old New Jersey resident convicted earlier this week in the deaths of the Rev. Leslie L. Thorbs, 31, of Grifton and Ray Anthony Herring, 41, of Goldsboro.

Bringing to an end one of Pitt County's longest criminal trials in recent years, the sentencing imposed after the jury debated one hour and 47 minutes provides that Parker will not be eligible for parole consideration until he is 78 years old.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood had argued that the jury should sentence Parker to death, saying that Parker had no regard for human life. He described the deaths as "execution-style killing."

Haigwood told the jury that "these are senseless murders and not an easy decision for you."

Defense attorney Bob Browning, in closing arguments, pointed out that Parker could receive 80 years on the two armed robbery charges alone. "This is a jury with feelings and understanding," Browning said.

"Where is Carolyn Pippins? She is out on bond. Is that justice? Does it indicate she will get what she deserves?" he asked.

Ms. Pippins, a co-defendant, is charged with two counts of murder and one armed robbery charge. No date has been set for her trial, and she did not testify in the Parker trial. Although she had been in the courtroom for much of the trial, Ms. Pippins has not been present this week.

When court resumed early Wednesday, Judge David Reid said one juror had reported being disturbed by a remark made from the audience during Browning's speech to the jury Thursday. He warned against any outburst and said if it occurred again, the spectator would be held in contempt of court and removed from the courtroom.

During final arguments and the judge's charge to the jury, sheriff's deputies blocked the entrances to and from the courtroom except at recesses, on orders of the judge.

Milton Williamson, the second member of the court-appointed defense team, outlined to the jury what would happen to his client if he received the death penalty and was to die, either in the gas chamber or by lethal injection as is now provided for under North Carolina law. He also said that a life sentence would mean that Parker would spend the rest of his life in a cell 12-feet square.

"Unless God will forgive him, he will go to hell for that car," Williamson said of Parker. Testimony had indicated the robbery-murder stemmed from Parker's interest in Thorbs' 1980 Cadillac.

There was no outcry from the audience when the verdict was read, nor did Parker display any emotion. He remained as he had during the entire court proceedings — seemingly unemotional.

An automatic appeal to the state Supreme Court is provided for under law, and the defendant was given 90 days to prepare the appeal. The state was given an additional 30 days to reply.

Parker's attorneys told the court that they did not desire to be appointed for the appeal process and Reid named the public defender's office to handle the appeal.

Leslie Thorbs, father of one of the slain men, was in constant attendance at the trial. After the verdict, he said, "I am satisfied. He (Parker) will never get out."

James Porter, who lived with Thorbs at his Grifton home, said he was "pleased" but had been concerned about the possibility of parole. "I personally did not want him to get death," Porter said.

"Justice has been served," Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

Williamson said he had informed Parker's wife and mother that Parker "would

Beirut Airport Is Opened To Traffic

By FAROUK NASSAR

Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen detained two U.S. Army technicians for about two hours near Beirut airport today after Lebanon's cease-fire committee agreed to reopen the airport.

The first flight, a Middle East Airlines jetliner from Jidda, Saudi Arabia, was scheduled to land today. The committee said it could guarantee the safety of all roads leading to the airport terminal.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said the two Army technicians were attached to the Marine peacekeeping force and made a wrong turn in their jeep into a Shiite neighborhood on Beirut's southern edge at about 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EDT).

The technicians, one officer and one enlisted man, were detained for approximately two hours and then returned to their unit at the airport unharmed, Jordan said. Their names were not given.

Jordan issued his statement after Beirut radio stations said two U.S. Marines were "kidnapped" by militiamen from Amal, the dominant paramilitary organization among Lebanon's Shiite community.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said the "kidnappers" freed the two Americans only when Amal leader Nabih Berri issued personal orders to release them.

The airport has been closed for more than a month in a renewal of Lebanon's civil war, and its reopening would be evidence that the cease-fire is working.

The statement from the cease-fire committee, made up of representatives of Lebanon's army and Christian, Druse and Shiite militias, came after original plans to reopen the airport were shelved because of a Druse threat to shell the terminal. What compromises were reached were not immediately known.

President Amin Gemayel earlier today called off the scheduled reopening of the airport, where 1,600 U.S. Marines of the multinational peacekeeping force are based.

The airport, Lebanon's only international airfield and one of the busiest in the Middle East, has been closed by civil warfare pitting Druse and Shites against the army and Christian militiamen.

Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party, the standard bearer of the 200,000-member Druse community, warned in a statement Wednesday the airport would be shelled if it was reopened before a "comprehensive security agreement" is reached.

Jumblatt's party claimed the government turned the airport into a "military position from which the regime used its warplanes which attacked innocent civilians in the mountains."

"Orders have been issued to all the forces and military units to respond immediately to such an attempt (to reopen the airport to traffic)," it added.

A government spokesman denied the airport was used as an airbase during the civil war. He said the government was asking Saudi Arabia to use its influence with the Druse's Syrian backers to get the threat lifted.

Jumblatt, meanwhile, said the Druse would resume fighting if the Moslem-Christian reconciliation conference promised by the cease-fire agreement did not give his sect, Lebanon's fourth largest, a bigger place in the political and social system, which is dominated by the Maronite Christians and Sunni Moslems.

The Gemayel government had asked U.S. special envoy Robert C. McFarlane to stay on in Beirut to help stabilize the cease-fire, mediated by the United States and Saudi Arabia. McFarlane agreed to delay a trip to Washington, presidential palace sources said.

The independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar said McFarlane was trying to clear the way for the reconciliation conference.

An-Nahar, whose publisher Ghassan Tueni is Gemayel's political adviser, said today the first session of the conference tentatively was set for next Wednesday or Thursday in the Red Sea port of Jidda in Saudi Arabia. But it said the date and site have yet to be made final.

The meeting is designed to start a dialogue on drafting a new power-sharing formula for Moslem-Christian coexistence.

Gemayel's government has asked that a 600-man foreign observation force police the cease-fire in the central mountains pending the outcome of the conference.

At the United Nations, Syria told the United States, Britain, France and Italy they should withdraw their peacekeeping troops from Lebanon because they are "posing a grave threat to security and peace" in the Middle East.

N. C. Counts Sharp Drop Of Jobless

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate dropped sharply in August, falling below 8 percent for the first time since 1981, the Employment Security Commission announced today.

The statewide unemployment rate was 7.9 percent, down significantly from 8.6 percent in July, according to Richard Johnson of the ESC.

The last time the rate was below 8 percent was in December 1981, when the rate was 6.8 percent, the ESC said.

"Unemployment rates have dropped in more than 85 percent of the state's counties in response to continuing improved economic conditions. This recovery is expected to be sustained for the balance of 1983 and unemployment rates should be well below 1982 levels," said Glenn Jernigan, chairman of the ESC.

Franklin County had the highest rate, still in double digits at 18 percent. The lowest unemployment rate was in Dare County, with 2.3 percent.

Brent Hackney, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt, called the unemployment figures welcome news.

"We're happy about it. It would seem to be an indication of continued recovery. It sort of parallels the steady increase we have seen in revenue and tax collections," Hackney said.

Hackney said the decrease in unemployment was due in part to young people going back to school, but he also credited the state's efforts to bring in new jobs.

"I think we are getting a stronger economy in North Carolina, and that is causing part of the decline in unemployment, certainly," he said.

"The economy looks good. If the past several months are any indication, we seem to be in a period of gradual, steady growth," Hackney said.

A New Park Is Dedicated

"What we have here is a beautiful facility that did not cost a lot of money," Mayor Percy Cox commented Wednesday at the formal dedication of River Park North. "This park is a credit to Greenville. That Boyd Lee has taken a property the way it was when we first got it and turned it into this lovely place is something of a miracle."

Cox, in his brief remarks, recalled that Lee had been persistent "back in 1975 to get the city to appropriate the city's $37,500 share of the $75,000 cost to buy the 380 acres from the (East Carolina) University. The city didn't have much money, but Lee won out. Today we know the purchase has been a real bargain."

Cox added that "we can look forward to bigger and better things to come for all the community because of this park."

Anyone who saw a collision of two automobiles at the intersection of East 10th Street and College Hill Drive Wednesday, Sept. 21, about 10:30 a.m. is asked to call 752-8856 after 2 p.m. or 758-4700 days.

FOSTER HOMES, PET ITEMS NEEDED

The Pitt County Humane Society is appeal for the donation of items needed to continue its foster home program and for other foster homes in the county.

Anyone wishing to provide temporary shelter for animals taken in by the Humane Society is asked to call Bobbie Parsons at 756-1268, or Barbara Haddock, 752-9922.

For its foster homes, the society needs holding cages, dog houses, collars, leashes and pet food. Grocers are especially asked to note that rather than throw away damaged packages of pet food and other pet items, they can donate them to the Humane Society tax-deductibly. Mrs. Parsons and Mrs. Haddock are taking calls for these donations, also.

Readers are also reminded that the Humane Society always needs funds for providing shots, deworming and spaying. Memorials may be made in this fashion, Humane Society volunteers reminded.

Get-Acquainted Visit By Lt. Gov. Candidate

State Sen. Bob Jordan stopped briefly in Greenville Wednesday on a get-acquainted tour of the east after his announcement earlier this week he is seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

The Greenville stop was one of 17 the Montgomery County businessman is making across the state in an effort to gain recognition by voters. He planned other stops Wednesday and today in Washington, New Bern and Wilmington.

In an interview, Jordan said traveling to hear what the people of North Carolina have to say has been a policy of his for two years.

"I've talked with people in western North Carolina who are concerned about high unemployment, who believe they are not getting their share of the new industry coming into the state. I've talked with tobacco farmers in eastern North Carolina who are concerned about the economic future of their crop, who are worried they may not be able to continue farming. I've talked with citizens in the Piedmont who are concerned that their children are not adequately prepared in school to get good paying jobs, who are anxious that they themselves may be put out of a job because of changing technology," he said.

Norell And Blass Originals Featured In Fashion Show

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor
Hal Oakley was working intensely Wednesday afternoon. He was assigning Norell and Blass originals to Greenville models for the Great Designer Fashion Shows today.

With comments like "a perfect size six," "wear no underwear tomorrow," "do something with her hair," Oakley carried on with the fittings. He had a personal comment for almost each woman as he chose the right model for the right gown or dress.

He is director of special promotional events for Ultima II Fine Fragrances. In this capacity, he travels around the country doing special events, setting up promotions and appearing on radio, television and meeting the press.

In explaining his position, Oakley said, "I was a performer and model when Charles Revson, chairman of Revlon Board, saw an ad I was doing. He was putting together a men's line and told the board that he wanted me to be spokesman and model for the line called Braggi."

"I left show business then — my wife was glad to see a regular paycheck coming in. When I got into the cosmetic business, I wanted to do it for just two years because I wanted to go back into show business. Then it showed that I never left show business because cosmetics is really show business, I get the chance to do the same thing a performer does — to reach out and touch people and make them feel better about themselves."

"Again, cosmetics is doing just that. People come to the cosmetic department because they want help. They want to be educated in the products — not only do they come for the latest shades but they have gotten into treatment now like the European woman."

"Good skin is no accident. You are born with it — then environment takes over. Between diet, air conditioning, heating and lifestyle — that good skin starts to go. So everyone should start on a good skin regimen. That means proper cleansing, toning and moisturizing."

In commenting about the Norell collection, Oakley said, "gimmicky designs" never interested him. Many of his designs remain classics even today: the chemise, the button-down shirtwaist dress, the flannel blazer and, of course, the sequined sheath.

"Norell designed for the rich and famous. In the collection were gowns once owned by Marilyn Monroe, Constance Bennett, Lauren Bacall, Billie Holiday and Dinah Shore," Oakley said.

"Norell's trademark was a big pussybow which was used over and over again in daytime wear and as an added touch to a strapless evening gown."

Among the priceless pieces were a handsewn gown of velvet accented with bugle beads, a 1931 sailor dress, a Loretta Young gown with yards and yards of material, an organdy gown complete with umbrella influenced by Scarlet O'Hara, his first wedding gown of white silk and lace.

"To keep up with the times, Norell designed pantsuits but they were made only for the home, never to be seen in public," Oakley said.

"His evening gowns were created with bare shoulders and bare back which he considered women's best feature."

After Norell's death, the late Revson was determined to keep Norell's name alive and so created the Norell fragrances, said Oakley.

The shows were held today at the Greenville Country Club and were sponsored by the women of the club and Belk Tyler at Carolina East Mall. Bet Scoopmire, president of the women's group, gave the welcome and introduced Gail Blanton and Barbara Hall, co-chairmen of the fashion show.

Committee members included: models, Mrs. Blanton; decorations, Gail Moore, Linda Harrington and Jef Glenn; special events, Brenda Walden and Linda Thomas; publicity, Mrs. Blanton and Mrs. Hall; tickets, Jackie Taylor, Terry Bryant, Barbara Tipton and Ruggy MacKenzie; treasurer, Jean DaVango; posters, Phyllis Wooten, Sue Cannon and Marcy Byrd.

Oakley gave the commentary for the fashion presentations.

Suggest Family As Child's Godparents

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is a very touchy situation. A nice young couple we hardly know (socially) are expecting a baby soon and they have asked us to be their child's godparents. (We did not accept. We told them we would let them know.) Then they informed us that if the baby is a boy they will name him after my husband, and if it's a girl, they will name her after me.

Abby, the young father-to-be only recently went to work for my husband. We are already godparents to as many children as we care to be, and we really do not care to have their child named after one of us.

How can we decline these honors without hurting their feelings?

SMALLTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR SMALLTOWN: You may not be able to, but if you must hurt their feelings to avoid being drawn into a commitment with which you are uncomfortable (and being godparents is a lifelong commitment), you will have to risk it. Decline as tactfully as possible, saying you think that such honors should go to family members or closer friends.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has not worked for over a year, and we are just barely making ends meet. Is there a tactful way to stop exchanging Christmas presents? We can't afford to send any, and we don't want any gifts, so how can this be handled?

IN DEBT IN DULUTH

DEAR IN: As I've suggested before, around Thanksgiving, send cards to those on your Christmas gift list saying, "We are thankful for folks with whom we can be frank. We are not a position to send Christmas gifts this year, and we don't expect gifts, but please accept our love and sincere good wishes for a healthy, happy, blessed holiday."

Romanian Housewives 'Go Hunting'

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent
BUCHAREST, Romania
(AP) — It is late summer, time of relative plenty, so Ana S. spends less than half her waking hours shopping for her family. Her mother, with more spare time, buys the meat.

Ana (not her real name) typifies Romanian housewives who speak of "going hunting," not "going shopping" when they set out in the morning with string bags to see what they can find.

With some of the richest agricultural land in Europe, Romania is desperately short of food. Authorities export as much as possible to pay the foreign debt. Imported items are rare.

Family shelves are stocked by elaborate systems, requiring help from relatives, foreign friends and barter with neighbors. Payment is in Romanian lei and the country's parallel currency: Kent cigarettes.

"On the four days a week I don't work, I spend almost every moment shopping or cooking," Ana told a reporter. "On the other days, my husband takes time off his job to help."

She works in a village 20 miles from Bucharest, leaving home at 9 a.m. and coming home 12 hours later. Fuel is also scarce, so she waits up to two hours for her bus.

"I'm so tired when I get home I just eat something I made the day before and fall into bed," she said. "Then the next day, I shop and cook. But I have to sleep late. That is my only luxury."

But sleeping late is a problem. Milkmen start deliveries to shops at 5 a.m., leaving bottles on the sidewalks because there is little refrigeration. By 7 a.m., milk is usually sold out.

Greens, eggplant and tomatoes go on sale at dawn to shoppers already in line. When supplies run out, Ana makes the rounds seeking fresh deliveries — or a vendor who will sell under the table for up to double the official price.

Meat lines can run to 10 hours, and in Bucharest each buyer is limited to five pounds of meat and four chickens per turn. Cheese is so scarce that offices empty in minutes when word arrives that a nearby store has fresh stock.

Ana's particular leverage is her village job. She can sometimes buy food directly from farmers, enabling her to trade for items or services with neighbors whose leverage extends elsewhere.

When her daughter was born, she got diapers from a friend in Greece.

"I honestly cannot say what I would have done without that," she said. "There were none here."

When her daughter needs special medical care, it is obtained the same way the family car gets a mechanic's attention: with a few packs of Kents.

Ana works half-time and makes 1,100 lei a month. Her husband, with an above-average salary, brings their monthly earnings to about 4,000 lei. At the official rate of 7.5 U.S. cents to one lei, that is $300. But the figures are misleading.

A carton of Kents costs 800 lei on the black market. Italian spray deodorant is 200 lei, or 20 percent of Ana's monthly wage. Dollar gas coupons, to avoid eight-hour gas lines, cost 140 lei a gallon.

Few Romanians have direct access to foreign goods. Unlike other East Europeans, they are not allowed to own hard currency to buy in the special stores for foreigners.

Locally made goods and regulated services cost much less, when available, but they are not cheap.

A chicken costs 200 lei, and an egg is four lei, unless short supply adds a black market supplement. Beef averages about 25 lei a pound.

A tailored dress costs 1,000 lei, and a shoddy ready-to-wear dress is about half that. A man's suit, at 2,300 lei, equals an average month's wages. Baby clothes are scarce and expensive.

A new car costs about 100,000 lei, or 43 months of an average worker's wage.

Ana watches for the rare moments when authorities import syrup for the Pepsi-Cola plant, but finding the drink is not enough. Full bottles are sold only if purchasers have empty return bottles, and shoppers can lug around bottles fruitlessly for months at a time.

MOCHA DATE WHIP

Little sugar is called for — dates add sweetness.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin

1 1/2 cups water

1/4 cup sugar

1 tablespoon instant coffee

1 tablespoon cocoa

1 teaspoon vanilla

1/2 cup heavy cream

2/3 cup pitted dates, thinly sliced crosswise

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over 1/2 cup of the water and let soften — about 5 minutes.

In a small saucepan stir together the sugar, coffee and cocoa; add remaining 1 cup water and heat, stirring constantly, until boiling; add to the gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin dissolves. Stir in vanilla. Chill until slightly thickened. With an electric beater at medium speed, beat until fluffy and doubled in bulk. Without washing beater, whip cream until stiff; fold into gelatin mixture. Refrigerate for 1 minutes, then fold in dates. Turn into 6- to 8-ounce dessert bowls; refrigerate until serving time.

What Lies Ahead?

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox, who has served six terms as a councilman and three as mayor, has announced that he will not seek re-election.

Mayor Cox said he felt he was leaving city government "in the best condition it's ever been in."

He said he believed there were "two fine candidates" in the running for mayor.

He indicated, however, that he could be a candidate for some other political office in the future. "I feel like after over 17 years of city politics it's time for me to take a break and maybe later on try something else," he said.

That was tantalizing. Would Cox, ever a popular candidate, be hinting at a run for another elective office? The state Legislature, county commissioners or something else? He would not comment on any future plans. Instead he said he and his wife, Janice, plan to take some time off for traveling.

Mayor Cox raised eyebrows when he last ran for mayor because his home was located well outside the city limits. He said, however, that he maintained an apartment within the city which he considered his legal residence. There are other offices where county residence would not be a factor. It would not be surprising to see Percy Cox seeking elective office again in the future.

Fleeting Dream

President Reagan looked at a dream this week which has long eluded mankind — that is, some type of world forum which could be effective in eliminating war, territorial disputes and other international problems.

In a speech to the United Nations, President Reagan asked, "What has happened to the dreams of the U.N.'s founders? What has happened to the spirit which created the U.N.?"

It is obvious the body has lost its spirit and the answer is that it is an organization which is as strong as its member nations want it to be. There are enough nations which want the U.N. to be ineffective so that it is.

Until the world matures enough to understand that an effective world forum is necessary to our survival, then the United Nations, or any other such organization, will not be worth anything.

Blissful Innocence

WASHINGTON Benjamin J. Stein, let it be acknowledged at the outset, is not an educational statistician. He is a Hollywood producer and writer whose work gives him unusual access to the world of California's teenagers. His article in the current issue of Public Opinion does not pretend to be a reliable survey based on a reliable random sample. But his observations, I suspect, carry the bell-like ring of truth.

Stein finds the teenagers of Southern California astoundingly ignorant and wonderfully innocent. He spent two years collecting a mass of data on their knowledge and their attitudes. "No amount of preparation could possibly cushion the blows of unawareness of even the most elementary current events, history, politics, economics, or just what goes on each day in the world outside of Los Angeles which lurks in the cheerful minds of these children."

The teenagers were ignorant of wars. During one of the seminars he conducts at high schools in the Los Angeles area, Stein asked about World War II. Not a single student could say when the war was fought. None could place the Civil War or World War I. At the University of Southern California, a 19-year-old junior was genuinely shocked to learn that the United States was fighting Japanese troops in the Pacific. "Who won?" she asked.

Another student at USC — a journalism student, sad to say — confused Japan's bombing of Pearl Harbor in 1941 with our bombing of Hiroshima in 1945. She was not sure which side Russia was on in World War II, and could not say whether Germany was our enemy or our ally.

The teenagers of Stein's informal survey knew little or nothing of politics. A few knew that California had two U.S. senators, though only one student could name both of them. Informed that Nevada and Oregon also had two senators, the teen-agers were amazed. "Really? Even though they're so small?" None could guess within 40 million the population of the United States.

Elementary geography somehow had eluded them. Only two could tell Stein where Chicago is. A junior at UCLA thought Toronto probably was in Italy. "None had even the vaguest idea of where New England is, and several had never heard of Vermont or Connecticut and could not identify them as states of the union."

Of much greater concern, Stein comments, is the pervasive ignorance of free and totalitarian societies that he found among the teen-agers. He was watching some scenes on TV of martial law in Poland. Civilians were being herded into a penlike enclosure. His young companion was mystified: Why didn't the civilians just leave and come to L.A.? Stein explained gently that in totalitarian states, people are not free to emigrate. "They can't?" inquired the incredulous student. "Since when?"

The young woman was amazed to learn that the Soviets control a ring of satellite countries. ("Why doesn't Reagan make them stop?") In Russia, she was told, dissidents may be exiled or imprisoned. ("What a burnt idea.") None of the teen-agers of Stein's acquaintance could identify Lenin. ("Was he the drummer with the Beatles before Ringo Starr?") One student hazarded a guess that Stalin was the American president just before Roosevelt. As for NATO: "Aren't they the ones who put up the space shuttle and all those things?"

Now, it may be that the teen-aged subjects of Stein's inquiry were exceptionally featherbrained and barmy; we know from other, statistically valid studies that our country is blessed with millions of teen-agers who can indeed identify the Declaration of Independence and name at least some of the constitutional amendments that make up the Bill of Rights.

WASHINGTON — Only brief hours after the shooting down of Korean Air Lines Flight 007, U.S. intelligence picked up decisive information from Soviet ground controllers that the pilot of the Sukoi 15 had identified 007 as "a commercial passenger" plane and that Moscow had been informed — before the attack.

That vital piece of information, U.S. military officials told us, was immediately transmitted to the Reagan administration. It contradicts official Soviet word, repeated many times since the tragedy, that the Soviet military could not and did not know that the plane was a commercial airliner.

Sources who told us about the intercepts refused to say how they

Trapper Snares Neighborhood Cats

To the editor:

Beware! In my neighborhood — Oakmont/Drexelbrook, more precisely Sherwood Drive — there is an unknown person who is trapping cats. These are not stray cats but our very own family pets. It seems as if our cats are going into his yard.

Our cats have been trapped in cages owned by the city of Greenville and in theory the cats have then been turned over to the city pound where some have been adopted to other homes and others destroyed. This has been occurring since Aug. 8, 1983.

Even though we have missed our cats, we have just this week learned about "the trapper." At this time, the city will not disclose the name of "the trapper" even though he is using city property to trap the pets and even though our cats have violated no leash law.

If you are missing a cat, do check the city pound immediately because the pound can hold a cat for three days only. At the moment, there is a beautiful black and white one there which came from this neighborhood. He/she is wearing a yellow collar with a bell.

If our cats had been such a nuisance, it would appear that calling the owners would have been a more appropriate action than luring our family pets into a cage and sending them off to the pound for an unknown fate.

To the editor:

The following is the text of a letter which I sent to the mayors of two different cities and the governors of two different states, including North Carolina:

As a 1983 East Carolina University graduate and North Carolina resident, I have a deep admiration for North Carolina and its people. It is my hope that you, having lived through the experience of being a new college graduate seeking professional employment without job experience at one time in your life, can identify with me. The problem is that I have been unemployed since December of 1981.

The peculiar thing about my situation that makes it different from others, I think, is that I have a bachelor's and a master's degree. I decided to write you because I want to live in North Carolina, it being my home state. Since I have applied with the state personnel offices, state employment offices in two states (Alabama and North Carolina), various hospitals, banks and health care industries in the past two years, finding no professional positions, I decided to contact you as a last resort. It is my sincere intention to work for anyone who will give me a chance.

I'm handicapped and it seems that no one is willing to give a person like me a chance without experience. I even wrote to President Reagan about my experience and he referred my query to the U.S. Office of Personnel Management. Although it was a response, I don't expect anyone to happen. I have tried to get positions through the same office before and have been on the state register for as long as two years with no job offers, even though I had a perfect score on some exams. The job search is so discouraging at times, but I am sending you a resume in the hope that you can do something for me.

Any entry-level professional position will do in personnel, administration or where my credentials will do the most good; the professional experience means more to me at this stage in my career. Please respond to this letter. I want to be a productive citizen of society.

To the editor:

Unless I am sadly mistaken, there is a purge occurring at East Carolina University. Orchestrated in a quietly efficient manner, it has claimed as its victims many outstanding educators and professionals. One of these, Eugenia M. Zallen, Ph.D., R.D., recently "resigned" her position as Dean and Professor of the School of Home Economics and is a person I have come to admire since she came to Greenville.

As a nationally known teacher, researcher and author, Dr. Zallen brought to East Carolina and her department energetic, competent leadership with an orientation towards her students that is vital in higher education today. An administrator committed to excellence, she encouraged innovation and creativity throughout her department. Her loyalty to East Carolina is unquestioned. She is also one of a small but growing membership of faculty and staff personnel in the Pirate Club.

Why has the administration of East Carolina University allowed her to resign?

Why is it that since August, 1982, every academic dean at ECU is either new or has announced his or her resignation, except Dean Thiele of the School of Allied Health?

How can my university plan to build and grow into a vital institution of higher learning with such a constant turnover of leadership?

It's time we got some answers.

Good Health Is Elusive Goal

The biggest epidemic children face is the accident. Be it in a car, a boat or just around the house, the accident is the leading cause of death and disability for North Carolina children. During 1982, 22,639 persons 19 years of age or younger were injured in automobile accidents in North Carolina. Of those, 295 died. Other accidents that year claimed the lives of another 252 North Carolina youths.

Teen-age pregnancies managed to hurt two children in one swipe. The mother, still a child, isn't physically and emotionally ready to give birth and the newborn is often below the proper weight. In 1981, there were 25,199 pregnancies to women 19 years of age and under in North Carolina. Of that group, 9,813 had abortions and 15,164 gave birth. A great percentage of these births were illegitimate and many came after the mother had received only minimal prenatal care.

For the very young teens — 14 and under — there were 772 pregnancies in 1981. Babies born to the very young are of low birth weight at a rate double that of babies carried by adult mothers.

In 1980, the state counted 65,000 heavy "escape drinkers" of alcohol who were between the ages of 13 and 19 and the state calculated that 60 percent of all the people seeking treatment for drug abuse were in this age bracket.

Child abuse may be waning, some social scientists tell us. But, in fiscal year 1981-82, there were almost 27,000 cases of abuse reported in North Carolina — about 4 percent of those cases were sexual abuse.

The divorce rate has spiraled in recent years and that is also adversely affecting children's health. Psychosocial studies have shown that, five years after a divorce, children are suffering emotionally and psychologically. Also, some research now shows that children of divorce are more likely than other children to suffer from asthma, diabetes, chronic headaches and abdominal pain. "Divorce is often an important factor in cases of violence, alcohol, drug abuse and teenage pregnancy," the board reports.

In an age of poverty, divorce, drug abuse, early sexual experimentation and all these other health problems, is it any wonder that children also suffer from depression? The actual number of children suffering from depression is unknown. But, in 1981, we do know that 54 North Carolina children committed suicide.

Medical science has come a long way from the day when half the children in a family might die from an infectious disease before they reached their first birthday. But the goals and policy board recognizes that good health for our children is still something we're looking forward to. We have not yet accomplished it.

Debate Needed On Phone 'Sex' than the Cleveland Indians do in a season.

Secretaries do it. White House aides do it. Not surprisingly, kids do it, too. And that's why an assortment of federal, state and local officials say they want to curb the skin magazine publishers, independent services and telephone companies that are panting all the way to the bank.

Rep. Thomas J. Bliley Jr. of Virginia is the principled force behind congressional efforts to end America's affair with what he calls "dial-a-porn." A former funeral home owner and Richmond mayor who came to Washington on Ronald Reagan's coattails, Bliley first sensed trouble last winter, when a constituent complained that her 10-year-old daughter had dialed into an orgy, in this case courtesy of High Society magazine. After some inquiries around town, the pipe-smoking Bliley says, he was incensed to find that neither the Federal Communications Commission nor Justice Department had the courage to throw cold water on the hot new commodity. Later, he even wrote the president about his concern.

Bliley's remedy, an amendment to the FCC authorization bill pending

House action this week, would subject phone sex services to federal obscenity prohibitions. Like similar legislation introduced in the Senate, it would assess phone sex purveyors with a $50,000 fine for every day of operation.

Of course, for those who've graduated from "Dial-a-Joke" to "Dial-a-Porn," there could be reward in the event of a crackdown by Washington.

But in a country that champions free enterprise, the best remedy may be self-control, or none at all.

Strength For Today

We have all read about the dangers of radiation from atomic reactors. And it is said that the harmful effects produced upon people will be transmitted to their descendants. As for the initial victim of radiation, he will probably never know that anything is happening to him until the effects of radiation are too pervasive to be cured.

This reminds us of the encroachments which evil is constantly making on human life. Its most dangerous advances are made in the midst of quiet domestic situations — in home, business and social life. It is not the falling of an atomic bomb of trouble or frustration which most often precipitates people into evil, but the gradual penetration of their lives by evil influences which have about them much of the subtlety of atomic radiation.

Silent, penetrating, devastating — thus by the radiation of evil, the victim finds himself destroyed and his loved ones with him.

British Publication Discloses New Weapons' Development

LONDON (AP) — Souped-up shotguns resembling the Thompson submachine gun and modern microchip grenades are among the weapons soldiers may carry into future battles, reports the 1983-84 issue of Jane's Infantry Weapons published here today.

The authoritative manual of weaponry also said a new, vastly more powerful type of 15mm machine gun, capable of knocking out light armored vehicles and armored helicopters, is being developed by Fabrique Nationale of Belgium.

Jane's editor Ian Hogg said the United States and South Africa are among the nations developing new models of the shotgun, with South Africa leading with a 12-gauge version that can fire 12 shells in four seconds and can be reloaded in 25 seconds.

"The past decade has seen a resurgence of interest in the shotgun as a security force weapon," Hogg writes in the introduction. "This is largely due to the need for a short-range, fast-response gun with a high hit probability."

The military use of the shotgun dates from World War I. It made a comeback during the Vietnam War when U.S. troops modified the weapon for anti-ambush operations in dense jungles.

Many military men, Hogg said in an interview, "regard the shotgun with contempt, in much the same manner as the submachine gun was dismissed as a gangster weapon in the 1930s."

Jane's said the U.S. Naval Weapons Center is developing one such shotgun, and four manufacturers have expressed interest. But it said by publication time, only Keckler and Koch Co. of West Germany had shown a prototype.

The new South African shotgun was developed by the Armsel company of Johannesburg for use against black insurgents in the bush and on crowded city streets. It is expected to go into production soon.

It is not listed in the new Jane's publication, but Jane's Defense Review magazine published a photograph of it this month. With its 12-shot drum magazine, it resembles the Thompson submachine gun.

Jane's said Western troops may soon carry microchip grenades which would explode when an electric charge stored on a computer chip is triggered by releasing the grenade's handle. The charge is held for a few seconds before it ignites the explosives, allowing for a time delay.

Jane's said microchip fuses, used in artillery shells for some time, make grenades safer for the soldiers who throw them.

The machine gun is being upgraded to fire more powerful bullets because of the need for a multi-purpose weapon that can take on tanks and aircraft as well as troops, Jane's said.

Hogg said most general-purpose machine guns "make a satisfactory noise and fill the air with flying tracer — but do little serious damage."

"It would give infantrymen something which which to attack armored helicopters, a weapons carrier that is going to assume greater significance in the future."

Simpson's Mayor Seeks Council Seat

SIMPSON — Galloway C. Thompson, incumbent mayor of Simpson, filed Wednesday as a candidate for the three-member Village Council in the Nov. 8 elections.

Following the elections, the new council will choose one of its members to serve as mayor.

Thompson, a Simpson native, has been a member of the council since 1977 and has served as mayor since August 1980 when Mayor John McDonald died. Thompson, who had been mayor pro-tem during McDonald's tenure, was then re-elected to the council in 1981 and subsequently chosen as mayor.

The candidate, who operates Thompson's Convenient Mart here, is a member of Phillippi Baptist Church where he serves on the trustee board. He is a member of the advisory boards at G.R. Whitfield School and D.H. Conley High School and serves on the Eastern Pines Water Corp. board.

Thompson and his wife, the former Clara Hamilton of Sumter, S.C., have six children.

The mayor said Simpson applied for and was awarded in August its second community development grant amounting to over $714,000. "I have been involved in community development work and I would like to continue to carry on that work in our area," he said.

Senate May Urge Dismissal Of Watt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a White House pronouncement that President Reagan considers the matter of Interior Secretary James Watt's latest gaffe "closed," the Republican-run Senate may be on the verge of approving a resolution urging his dismissal.

And House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, claiming Watt's remarks have been an embarrassment to the administration, says he believes a resignation by Watt "would not be all that far off the mark."

Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, said Wednesday that Watt intends to stay on as secretary of the interior, despite the cries of protest raised by his characterization last week of an advisory panel as "a black a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

"The president considers the matter closed. It's behind us," Speakes said.

However, Republican sources said a survey conducted privately by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., suggested considerably more opposition to Watt within his own party than registered publicly by the 13 GOP senators who have either called for his dismissal or suggested he consider resigning.

At the same time, Senate Democrats in a party caucus voted without dissent to support the resolution by Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., stating it was the "sense of the Senate" that Reagan should request Watt's resignation "without delay."

Byrd indicated he would seek a Senate vote on the measure, which brands Watt's remarks "totally unbecoming a senior Cabinet member, within the next few days Assistant Majority Leader Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, an ardent Watt supporter, has said he may filibuster the resolution in hopes of blocking its passage.

But given the strong Democratic support and mixed GOP backing for such a resolution, Senate Republicans concede it seems likely to prevail in the Senate by a comfortable margin. Republicans hold a 55-45 majority in the chamber.

"And there are some Republicans who might not vote for it as a Democratic initiative but still think Watt should resign," said a Senate GOP official, who requested anonymity.

The official suggested the matter is not yet closed, and a strong Senate vote calling for Watt to resign would be a hard signal for the interior secretary to ignore.

Michel seemed to echo this contention, telling reporters after a congressional leadership meeting with the president on Wednesday that no official "is an indispensable person."

Michel said: "Sometimes some of us have to ... do things to help our president that is easier for some people to do maybe than the president himself."

Asked if he thought Watt should resign, the House GOP leader replied, "That may not be all that far from the mark."

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Watt prepared a letter of resignation last Saturday, but decided not to submit it after becoming convinced neither the president or the White House staff would pressure him to quit.

Interior Department officials and White House aides contacted Wednesday night were unable to confirm the report.

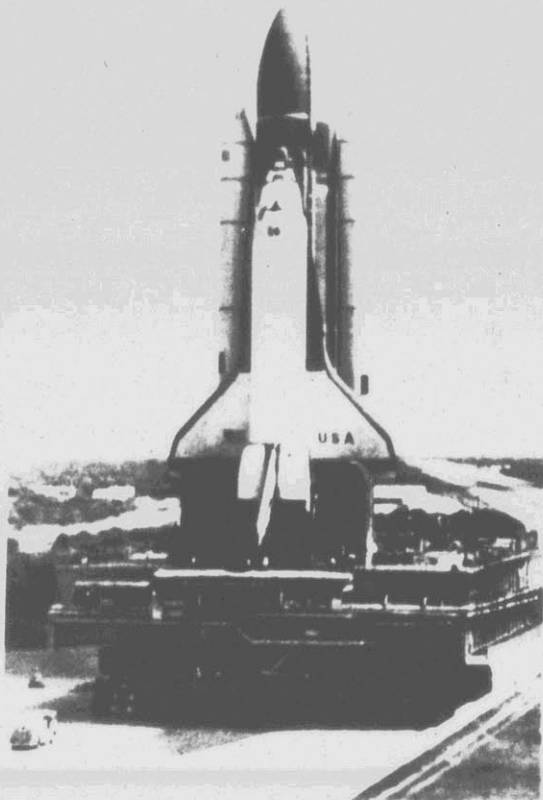

At least one Republican senator who earlier said Watt should consider resigning, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said Wednesday he now will oppose such a call.

"I have said that Watt should apologize profusely or resign. I believe that he has apologized profusely," Pressler said.

The senator said anyone nominated by Reagan to replace Watt "would have the same philosophy anyway. And it would take four to six months to get a new team in place."

Citing Pressler's announcement, Baker told reporters on Wednesday that

GOP opposition to Watt appeared to have crested in the Senate, saying the interior secretary was "a little better off today than he was a few days ago."

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1983

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until 10:30 A.M. you are apt to be likely to put whatever ideas you have into practical execution but the remainder of the day and evening find most persons overly sensitive.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get home matters in order early and don't have any pet peeves and look on the brighter side of life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make those calls that are important and then study statements for possible errors. You have been overspending lately.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find the best way to handle some important practical affair in the morning, then you can save money and be happier.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan how to gain your personal desires but don't take any action as yet. This requires very careful thought.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan the future more intelligently now and go over every item in your plan to be sure. You person a magnetism is at a peak today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Experts can tell you how to attain terms of value that are close to your heart. Then get busy at regular work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you agree with what a big expectations of you everything will be fine. Curb those rebellious feelings you're experiencing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Decide on that new arrangement then go after the added information that you need and get it. Be prepared for surprises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get that business deal handled early and then figure out how you stand with other responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get the information you need from a partner early, otherwise later he may not be forthcoming with it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get an early start on tasks ahead of you, then take a little rest later so that you can carry on with them and not feel tired.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Creativity is high in the morning, so get those ideas working cogently and efficiently, and then get busy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY: He or she will be one of those charming young persons who will always be aware of the needs of others and often neglect his, or her own in order to please them. So early teach that charity begins at home and save your progeny many a hurt.

Aluminum Industry Recycling Mounts

NEW YORK (AP) — As much as half of all the raw materials used by American industry to manufacture new aluminum products could come from recycled scrap during the 1980s, a recycling executive predicts.

"The general state of the economy will, of course, dictate the specific future use patterns for recycled aluminum as raw material," says M.J. Mighdoll, executive vice president of the National Association of Recycling Industries (NARI).

"But," he adds, "there is every indication that its use will continue to expand, and it could very well reach a total of 50 percent of the nation's raw material supply before the end of this decade."

Mighdoll attributes recycled aluminum's growing importance to the "unprecedented growth in the recovery of aluminum beverage cans and the tremendous energy-saving values of aluminum scrap."

"The use of recycled aluminum in the manufacturing process has been largely stimulated by the major aluminum producers who realize energy savings as high as 96 percent over the use of energy-intensive ore," he says.

More than 2 million short tons of scrap aluminum are processed and recycled each year by the nation's recyclers, Mighdoll notes. Almost half of the 50 billion aluminum beverage cans manufactured annually are now recycled, he says, and they make up 25 percent of all the aluminum scrap used as raw material by U.S. industry.

In 1980 recycled aluminum made up 24.7 percent of all raw materials supplied to U.S. industry, Mighdoll reports.

Accident Death Rate Dropped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's death rate from accidents dropped 6 percent in 1982, compared with 1981, making it the lowest death rate on record. A newsletter from the American Council of Life Insurance said the '82 rate was an estimated 40.8 per 100,000 population.

CRYPTOQUIP

PQJUU RCPQJRCPKXCFU' KCWJM

XGJC: CF "CGG CWJFKM."

Yesterday's Cryptquip — NIMBLE SEASIDE GAMBLER DID BET ON A SHORE THING.

Today's Cryptquip clue: C equals A.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Would Change Refugee Quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration plans to allow no more than 72,000 refugees into the United States next year. Attorney General William French Smith says.

Testifying before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on immigration and refugee policy, Smith called the proposed refugee numbers "ceilings, not quotas."

The administration's refugee program calls for the following numbers of refugees: Africa 3,000; East Asia 50,000; Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, Latin America and Caribbean 1,000; and Near East and South Asia 6,000.

THE NIGHT LIFE AT THE FAIR — Fair-goers line up at a concession Wednesday night at the Pitt County Fair as a ride twirls in the background. The smell of popcorn, peanuts and candy dominated the air as the sound of the merry-go-round filled the fairgrounds. The fair will run through Saturday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Several Injured In 4 Collisions

Several persons were reported injured and an estimated $14,300 damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated Wednesday by Greenville police.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 9:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of 10th and

Lawrence streets, involving cars driven by Laura Rose Lancaster of Route 1, Vanceboro, Robert Morris of Ahoskie, and Billy Jackson of 1500 Dickinson Ave.

Police, who said all three drivers as well as passengers in the Morris and Jackson cars were injured, charged Ms. Lancaster with failing to stop for a stop sign.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $5,000 to the Lancaster car, $2,000 to the Morris car and $1,000 to the Jackson vehicle.

Harry Derain Davis of Valley Ridge Trailer Park was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 9:55 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets.

Officers said the Davis car collided with a car driven by Michael Leon Hogan of 1608 Canterbury Road, causing $1,800 damage to the Hogan car and $800 damage to the Davis auto.

A 10:15 a.m. collision at the intersection of Hooker Road and Sylvan Drive involved cars driven by Barney Clayton Brown of 2007 Larchmont Drive and Janice Louise Short of 1801B W. Third St.

Police, who charged Brown with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $1,500 to the Brown car and $1,000 to the Short vehicle.

A car driven by William Melvin Sutton of Route 1, Winterville, and a truck operated by William Ray Saunders Jr. of Route 4, Clinton, collided about 8:20 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Airport Road, causing $200 damage to the truck and $1,000 damage to the car.

Police charged Sutton, who was injured, with driving under the influence.

Secret To A Big Pumpkin

GLASTONBURY, Conn. (AP) — If Charlie Brown wants a great pumpkin for Halloween, he should see Henry Casella.

Casella, in fact, has great pumpkin twins — each weighing in at 580 pounds.

The secret, he says, is using raw, whole milk as fertilizer.

Every night from July 1 until this week's harvest, Casella poured a quart of raw milk onto the stem of his Atlantic variety pumpkins — a total of 85 quarts, he said.

On Tuesday, the retired United Technologies Corp. foreman plopped his pumpkins on an oil company's weigh station to find out if he'd topped his previous heaviest pumpkin, a 420-pounder in 1981.

He said he'll enter the pumpkins in the town's Apple Festival parade the weekend of Oct. 15, but is not sure what he'll do with them after that.

Casella, 68, said he learned about feeding milk to pumpkins from his father, a farmer who used to throw leftover milk on the family's pumpkin patch.

Next year, Casella said, he's going to collect elephant manure when the circus comes to town. He has heard it does wonders for pumpkins.

"I'm going to try for 1,000 pounds next year. ... Oh, won't the wife go crazy when she hears," he said.

BAR MEMORIALS

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Magistrates have banned memorial services for South African exile and lifetime foe of apartheid, Dr. Yusuf Dadoo, who died last week in London.

Accuse Couple Of Trying Carry Gun

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — An Oct. 7 hearing date has been set for a Cuban citizen and a woman companion accused of trying to smuggle a gun aboard a Piedmont airliner bound for Charlotte, N.C.

Tri-State Airport security officers detained the pair about 1 p.m. Tuesday after an X-ray screening device detected the .357 Magnum pistol inside a piece of luggage, said airport manager Larry Salyers.

Juan Rodriguez, 40, a resident of Islamorada, Fla., was being held Wednesday in lieu of $10,000 bond in the Cabell County jail. He was charged with attempting to board an aircraft with a firearm, and possessing a firearm after having been convicted of a felony, said Jennifer Honaker, secretary to U.S. Magistrate Maurice G. Taylor Jr.

A check of police records indicated that Rodriguez had been convicted previously of breaking and entering in Florida, Mrs. Honaker said.

Rodriguez' companion, Devonna Patrick, 33, also of Islamorada, was charged with "having on her person or property a concealed deadly or dangerous weapon which could have been accessible in flight," Mrs. Honaker said.

Rodriguez is a Cuban citizen and Ms. Patrick is a Lincoln County native, said U.S. Attorney Ben Bryant.

The couple was attempting to board Piedmont flight 386 from Huntington to Charlotte, where their tickets indicated a connecting flight would take them to Miami, he said.

Writing Contest Entries Sought

GREENSBORO — The North Carolina English Teachers Association is seeking entries for its 36th annual good writing contest from high school sophomores, juniors and seniors throughout the state.

The deadline is Dec. 15, 1983, for the submission of short stories and prose, not to exceed 750 words, and poetry, not to exceed 30 lines.

All entries must be accompanied by a completed entry form, which may be obtained from Dr. James Nicholl, English Department, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, N.C. 28723.

Manuscripts with completed entry blanks should be mailed to the chairman of the contest, Dr. Amy M. Charles, Department of English, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Greensboro, N.C. 27412-5001.

How They Were Recorded On Roll Call Votes

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 15-21.

HOUSE

MILITARY By a vote of 266 for and 152 against, the House passed and sent to the White House the conference report on the $187.5 billion military authorization bill for fiscal 1984 (S 675).

Although the measure raises defense spending by $18.9 billion over current levels, it drew opposition mainly because it funded production of weapons such as nerve gas, the MX missile and the B-1 bomber.

The House in June rejected nerve gas production by a 95-vote margin, but with this vote endorsed the weapon.

Supporter Jim Courter, R-N.J., said to opponents of nerve gas and the MX: "Do not kill the entire bill because you disagree with a small section of it."

Opponent John Porter, R-Ill., said Congress should "show the world the clear difference between our society and (the Soviets) by publicly rejecting...these horrible, cruel and inhuman weapons of death."

Members voting yes supported the defense bill.

North Carolina Voting yes: Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: None.

Not voting: Walter Jones, D-1.

JOBS The House passed, 246 for and 178 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1036) to spend $3.5 billion in hopes of putting 500,000 persons to work nationwide repairing schools, roads and other community facilities.

Most of the jobs would go to individuals out of work for 15-to-20 weeks who have exhausted unemployment benefits.

Because the bill has little chance of clearing both the GOP-led Senate and the White House, Republicans said Democrats were pushing it for 1984 campaign purposes.

Supporter Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., called the bill "a humane response to the suffering of millions of unemployed Americans."

Opponent Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said any added employment "will be more than offset by the economic drag created by redistributing the dollars from the private to the public sector."

Members voting yes wanted to spend $3.5 billion to create public service jobs.

NORTH CAROLINA voting yes: Walter Jones, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Valentine, Britt, James Martin, Broyhill.

Not voting: None.

DEFECIT By a vote of 166 for and 258 against, the House rejected an amendment to the jobs bill (above) that would have blocked the $3.5 billion expenditure if it deepened the federal deficit.

Sponsor George Gekas, R-Pa., called his amendment "a pay-as-you-go plan, the best form of economics."

Opponent Jim Wright, D-Tex., said that because no such prohibition applies to any other program it would unfairly "single out the jobless as the least worthy of our attention."

Members voting yes wanted any spending to create public jobs to be offset by an identical increase in revenue.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Valentine, Britt, James Martin, Broyhill.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

SENATE

FLIGHT 007 By a vote of 49 for and 45 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to respond to the Korean Air Lines massacre by requiring hundreds of Soviet diplomats to leave the U.S.

The amendment sought to cut the number of Soviet diplomats here from about 1,000 to 300, the size of the U.S. diplomatic corps in the Soviet Union.

Had Enough Of Political Role

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Hamilton Jordan, who was White House chief of staff under President Jimmy Carter, says those four years on the political scene were enough — and he's thinking about switching to a white smock and a stethoscope.

Jordan, 38, who after leaving the White House wrote a book about the Carter presidency, told students during a talk at Shepherd College on Tuesday that he has been toying with the idea of applying to medical school.

No matter what he does, he said, his days in politics are over.

SACRED COW

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Police arrested three people as they slaughtered a cow in Basantur village southwest of the capital, and charged them with killing a holy animal.

It was offered to a resolution condemning the Soviets for "criminal destruction" in shooting down KAL Flight 007 and killing all 269 passengers and crew. The measure (HJ Res 353) was unanimously approved by both houses.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., who voted to table the amendment, said the overall resolution was "already adequate because 'for the first time in the history of the Senate (we) have declared the behavior of another government to be a crime.'"

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said sending 700 Soviet diplomats home would be "an effective, responsible protest" because it would express U.S. revulsion without endangering the superpowers' arms control talks.

Senators voting no favored a tougher congressional response to the downing of Flight 007.

NORTH CAROLINA: John East, R, voted no. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

COAL BY a vote of 63 for and 33 against, the Senate adopted an amendment to suspend for at least several months the Interior Department's leasing of federal coal reserves, which are located in the West.

The moratorium, which would last until 90 days after a new commission on federal coal leasing completes its work, was attached to an Interior Department appropriations bill (HR 3363) later sent to conference with the House.

Supporter Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said preventive action was necessary "before (Interior Secretary James) Watt gives away billions of more tons of coal at bargain basement prices."

Opponent James McClure, R-Idaho, said "there are those within this country who are out to get Jim Watt."

Senators voting yes favored the moratorium on the leasing of U.S. coal reserves.

NORTH CAROLINA: East voted no. Helms voted no.

REVENUE SHARING The Senate rejected, 30 for and 64 against, an amendment to spend an extra $450 million annually in revenue sharing outlays to some 40,000 local governments.

The Senate thus refused to match a higher spending level approved earlier by the House. Instead, it approved "sharing" $4.6 billion in U.S. tax receipts with local governments for each of the next three years.

The vote occurred during debate on HR 2780, later sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the real-dollar value of revenue sharing payments has declined by 40 percent since 1976.

Opponent John Heintz, R-Pa., said the size of the national debt suggests "maybe we should share deficits" instead of revenue.

Senators voting yes wanted to spend more on the revenue sharing program.

NORTH CAROLINA: East voted no, Helms voted no.

SLASHED PELICANS — Monterey Humane investigator Trisha Aljoe sneaks behind pelican with slashed pouch at Monterey Bay Wharf #2. The brown pelican was taken to a nearby veterinary hospital where 1 1/2 hours was spent stitching the bird's pouch. This bird is doing well. The count now stands at 7 brown pelicans cut like this during the past week; three died. (AP Laserphoto)

New Park...

Several special guests from Raleigh were on hand for the dedication — Alice Garland-Swink, Harold Moses, Howard Pullen and Steve Moler, all of the N. C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. The first three are with the parks and recreation division of the department.

Ms. Garland-Swink, a deputy secretary for policy coordination for natural resources in North Carolina, said "parks are an important part in developing resources across the state. The concept of partnership between recreation and city parks is crucial. Town and city parks do a great deal to take the stress of overuse off state parks."

Referring to the achievements made in a short period of time and the broad scope of programs at River Park North, Ms. Garland-Swink said "all of us would like to see other programs in other parts of the state equal to what you have here."

In a brief history of River Park North, Superintendent of Parks Walter Stasavich traced its history from "the spring of 1971 when the A.K. Barrus family of Kinston donated the land to the East Carolina University Foundation." A study made by ECU revealed the site was not feasible for general use by the university. One of the recommendations for suitable use was that of a park of natural features.

Stasavich noted that "Phil Carroll, working quietly behind the scenes, brought the university and city together to consider the city's purchase of the land for recreational purposes. As a result, the city, with the assistance of federal and state grants, voted to pay the university $75,000 for the site."

For years, the area of the park has been given as approximately 363 or 368 acres. A recent accurate survey reveals the park has an area of 380 acres.

Recreation and Parks executive director Boyd Lee explained that funds provided by the Youth Conservation Corps and other agencies have been a significant factor in getting the park cleared of garbage, excessive undergrowth and in shaping up the park into a usable and accessible site.

One of the projects labeled by Lee as "rewarding and promising" is that of the ECU nature education program at the site headed by Dr. Robert Wendling. The nature center is completed and is already being used by school children. This is a valuable and exciting program, one with a great future," Lee added.

Lee also praised the dedicated work of members of the Recreation and Parks Department, and introduced the men and women of all ranks within the department whom he said "are the hard workers, the ones really responsible for making the park work."

Recreation and Parks Commission chairman Dr. Al King was master of ceremonies for the dedication ceremony, and a former member, the Rev. Dan Earnhardt, gave the invocation. The ribbon-cutting ceremony at the conclusion of the dedication program was carried out by Lee, Mayor Cox, Ms. Garland-Swink and Dr. King.

Guests attending the outdoor ceremony near one of the park's ponds included a class of school children, members of the Greenville City Council, university officials, and people from the Meadowbrook neighborhood near the park.

Now open on a seven-day basis during daylight hours, River Park North affords a wide spectrum of activities for the community. Among these are nature walks, displays in the nature center, fishing, paddle-boat rides, picnic areas, and camping for groups from churches and civic type clubs. Howard Vainright is director of the park.

Stopgap Money Bill Making Progress

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A stopgap money bill necessary to avert a shutdown of most government operations at midnight Friday is making ing steady progress through Congress as legislators, under pressure from Democratic and Republican leaders, curb their cravings for spending provisions.

The House moved quickly Wednesday evening to approve the measure 261-160. The Senate was set to consider its version of the measure today.

House leaders brought up the measure, which will provide money through Nov. 15, under rules that barred amendments.

Earlier Wednesday, the Senate version of the measure cleared an important hurdle when the Senate Appropriations Committee, by a voice vote, approved the bill — without major amendments — for action by the full Senate.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, delivered what he described as "a sermonette" to his panel Wednesday, pleading with them to "refrain from offering amendments."

The 29 members of the panel complied, noting they had been given assurances that they may try to attach their amendments to other legislation that will be considered later this year.

Afterwards, Hatfield indicated that the Appropriations Committee members who had to forgo amendments would not look favorably on other senators who might try to attach pet amendments on the Senate floor.

"Any member who raises his head from the brush out there (on the Senate floor to offer an amendment) is going to get shot at from 29 different directions," Hatfield said.

After the Senate vote, congressional negotiators will meet to work out a compromise between the measures passed by each house.

The measure is necessary because only five of the 13 annual appropriations bills that are supposed to be in place on the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year have been approved by both houses of Congress.

Acquainted...

"These conversations and others have convinced me that 1984 will be more than just an election year. 1984 will be a time that we in North Carolina must make some important decisions about our future," he said.

Jordan, a four-term legislator, said he feels the focus in education should be placed on primary and secondary schools because "that is what the public is interested in."

"We need to raise the base pay level of teachers so bright young people now turning up their noses will consider the profession economically worthwhile. We also need to devise a way to reward the educators so they will stay in the system," he said.

The job scene could be improved, Jordan said, by stimulating the business climate and making it more beneficial for existing industries to stay in the state when considering expansion and encouraging new industries to develop here.

"I also have been and will continue to be a leader in promoting research and development in the field of bio-technology in order that our agriculture community may have new product opportunities," he said.

By the year 2000, one out of every eight people will be elderly, Jordan said. "We need to make sure these people will be able to stay in their homes as long as possible and see to utilizing their talents. Most of the wisdom and accumulated know-how will come from these people," he said.

Jordan said he decided to run for lieutenant governor because he feels it is the best place for him. "I want to take an active part in this process. And I believe as the next lieutenant governor of North Carolina I can provide strong progressive leadership," he said.

Jordan's wife, Sarah, said she wholeheartedly supports her husband's decision to run for office. "Now is the best time for him to do this," she said. "All of our children are out of the home either at college or on their own."

Although Mrs. Jordan said she will accompany her husband on most campaign visits, she said she will also continue working with youth and children through the Methodist Church.

Jordan, president of Jordan Lumber and Supply Co., and his wife live in Mount Gilead. Their two youngest children, Robert and Janie, are students at North Carolina State University, and the oldest, Betsy, is helping with the campaign.

HOSTAGES FREED
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Angolan rebels fighting their country's Marxist government have freed 21 Portuguese hostages, including five children, after the Red Cross interceded.

Thatcher Hopes Soviet To Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today renewed her support for U.S. deployment of advanced Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe this year unless an agreement is reached with the Soviets on cutting their Eastern European arsenal of intermediate-range missiles.

But Mrs. Thatcher, emerging from a closed breakfast meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said she still hoped for progress in the arms reduction talks between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"We in the West want to continue disarmament talks on a genuine basis," Mrs. Thatcher told reporters.

Earlier, however, she said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that "we can't talk unless they (the Soviets) will talk."

Later, Mrs. Thatcher was meeting with President Reagan.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., the foreign relations committee chairman, said the prime minister was "eminently clear" in her support for the U.S. position on the missile issue.

While praising the administration's arms negotiating strategy, however, Mrs. Thatcher has voiced concern about the effect of U.S. budget deficits on worldwide economic recovery. She was said to be worried that U.S. budget deficits will boost interest rates and stifle the still-fragile economic upturn worldwide.

Interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show this morning, Mrs. Thatcher said she feels it is "very harmful, coming out of a recession, to have a high interest rate. It stops expansion, ... and, of course, if you don't get expansion, you do not get the national income."

U.S. officials say Reagan believes that the stronger economic recovery in the United States will generate new tax revenue, thus reducing federal deficits and easing the threat of higher interest rates.

The Reagan-Thatcher summit was first scheduled last May but was postponed while the prime minister waged a successful reelection campaign.

Immediately following her meeting with Reagan in the Oval Office at the White House, Mrs. Thatcher was to put on view the British copy of the 200-year-old Treaty of Paris which ended the Revolutionary War and recognized the United States.

Driver Charged In Bus Mishap

MIAMI (AP) — The driver of an "extremely dangerous" school bus has been charged with operating unsafe equipment after the vehicle blew a tire and rolled over, injuring 37 youngsters aboard, one seriously, troopers say.

Sarita Taylor, 55, was charged Wednesday after the privately owned bus she was driving overturned on a rain-slicked highway west of Miami, troopers said. Four of six tires on the bus were bald and it had no state inspection sticker, according to Florida Highway Patrol Sgt. J.D. Johnson. One student was hospitalized with a possible skull fracture, while the others were treated and released, officials said.

The children were mostly first- and second-graders.

Readers of this column know all about the Rabbi — the kibitzer who, after the fact, would pontificate on the result of a hand. Among his more famous dicta is: "If the king is singleton, play the ace." He would have been proud of this hand.

North-South reached their optimum contract in quick time. South needed no more than a sign of life from his partner to leap to game in no trump.

West led his fourth-best spade. East won the ace and returned the suit to his partner's king, and West played a third round to remove declarer's stopper. That proved to be the last trick for the defense. Declarer banged down the ace of clubs to pick up West's bare king, and claimed the rest of the tricks.

Now we're sure that there are cynics among you who might think that the result of this hand is a tribute to South's peripheral vision, rather than to his bridge skill, and you would suggest that West hold his cards

Black Colleges See Hope For More Aid

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Reagan administration's plan to boost aid to predominantly black colleges by 11.5 percent will be close to his chest. Nothing could be further from the truth. There is a sound bridge reason for South's play.

After winning the third trick, declarer does not need the entire club suit to land his game. He does not mind if East gains the lead, since East can do him no harm. Therefore, if the club finesse is destined to win, it is unnecessary! The danger to the contract lies in West gaining the lead. If West has the king of clubs and it is guarded, declarer is doomed. The only hope if West has the monarch is that it is singleton. Hence the play of the ace of clubs at trick four caters to that possibility.

"wonderful" if it goes through, says the chancellor of North Carolina A&T State University.

But Edward B. Fort said he would withhold judgment until the administration gets a chance to follow through on promises it made during a meeting with 75 black college presidents in Washington, D.C.

Fort said Secretary of Education Terrel Bell and Samuel R. Pierce Jr. of Housing and Urban Development promised the increased aid during the meeting Monday.

"If that materializes it will be wonderful," Fort said. "We got a 3 percent increase in 1982-83 over what we got in 1981-82, so an increase of 11.5 percent would be very substantial."

But Fort added, "If the increase comes through, then what they told us is good news; if it doesn't, then it's just more rhetoric."

University officials at the meeting presented Bell, Pierce and finally Vice President George Bush with a list of nine aid requests — including a plea that financial aid to students "not be reduced one dollar."

"It's absolutely critical that the level of financial aid for traditionally black universities — indeed for all universities — not be decreased," Fort said.

Attribute Fire To Fuel Leak

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Leaking fuel from a firetruck may have caused the explosion that destroyed a volunteer fire department and five emergency vehicles Wednesday. Cleveland County Fire Marshal Delane Davis said.

One fireman, asleep at the No. 3 fire department when the blast occurred around 8:30 a.m., drove one firetruck from the flames, but officials estimated the damages at $500,000.

Communications Supervisor Lee Clary said there were no injuries.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 42.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Weights heavier. Estimated slaughter in North Carolina Thursday was 1,785,000, compared to 1,786,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, steadying after a two-session decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 18.80 points Tuesday and Wednesday, recovered 41 to 1,242.38 by noon Thursday.

But losers held a 6-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trans World Corp. dropped 1/2 to 29 1/2, and Trans World Airlines fell 1/2 to 8 1/2 in active trading. On Wednesday Trans World said it was considering spinning off its 81 percent interest in the airline.

LTV, which plans to acquire Republic Steel, fell 1 1/2 to 16 1/2, and Republic Steel was up 1/2 at 27 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index lost .14 to 97.11. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .80 at 232.87.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 31.65 million shares at noon, against 31.03 million at the same point Wednesday.

never get out of prison. They just don't commute first-degree sentences," he said.

Parker's mother and wife, and Patricia Herring, wife of other slain man, were seated in the courtroom, as were other relatives of the two victims, when Parker was sentenced.

The jury selection process for the trial took two weeks. Another eight days was needed to hear testimony and questions of law, which often sent the jury out of the courtroom.

The bodies of Thorbs and Herring were pulled from the rain-swollen Tar River near Falkland in mid-February after their weighted bodies were dumped there by Parker and Ms. Pippins, according to confessions signed by Parker after his arrest in New Jersey on Feb. 26. Both men died of a gunshot wound to the top of the head. Herring also had been stabbed.

In his confession, Parker said he killed the two men because he wanted Thorbs' car and his money. He said he planned the murder and robbery and thought Thorbs "would have at least $150." A total of $35, a diamond ring, which Parker threw away, and the car were taken. Half the money, Parker said, was given to Ms. Pippins.

Officers were tipped that two men had been murdered and their bodies dumped into the river several days after Thorbs and Herring had been reported missing. The tip touched off a search which led to the discovery of blood and hair on the Falkland bridge. The bodies were then recovered over a two-day period by area rescue squads.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Wednesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 60. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 60 percent of your hot water needs.

Longshoremen Facing Action

BOSTON (AP) — Longshoremen protesting the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet with 269 people aboard will be asked why they should not be held in contempt for defying a judge's order to unload a Soviet ship.

The Soviet vessel, the Novomirod, sailed Wednesday for Canada with most of the 2,700 tons of plywood destined for the port of Boston still aboard, an official said. Dockworkers stopped unloading the ship Monday, prompting U.S. District Judge Walter J. Skinner to order them to comply with their contract.

Rose Seeks First League Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School, after suffering its first loss of the season last Friday night, seeks to bounce back onto the winning side of the ledger in its first Big East road game this weekend.

The Rampants travel to Rocky Mount for their annual meeting with the Gryphons Friday night at 8 p.m., and Coach Ronald Vincent is looking for a better effort than was put forth against Northern Nash last Friday.

In that game, the Knights of Northern Nash scored the first three times they got the ball, rolling up a 21-0 score. Rose came back to score on its next possession and was on the verge of scoring again to cut it to 21-14 when Jarrod Moody intercepted a Battle Emory pass at the two and carried it all the way back for a back-breaking touchdown that made it 28-7. Neither team scored again although Rose dominated play for the final three periods of the game.

"That first quarter, we played about as bad as we ever have," Vincent said. "They just put it to us in the first quarter. We didn't get the effort from several key people that we need to have in a game like that one," he added.

And while Vincent felt that the play in the final three quarters was much better, the Rampants just weren't able to get the ball into the end zone and that was the difference in the game.

"That interception was the difference in the game. It just drove the nail in the coffin — a 14 point turnaround. But the guys did continue to play hard."

Vincent also questioned the interception, saying that it appeared, on film, to have been interference by Moody on the play.

The interception was one of eight over the past two games on Emory, and Vincent says that this concerns him. "We've got to cut down on our turnovers. Two of those interceptions were in the end zone and that really hurt."

On the more positive side — maybe — the Rampants were penalized only once for six yards. "I don't know whether that's good or not," Vincent said. "It could be just an indication of the lack of aggressiveness we had in the game."

Vincent was pleased with the play of Tyrone Smith and Billy Michel, who caught over 200 yards of pass receptions in the game between them. "Roswell Streeter and Tony Johnson played well on defense," the coach added.

"Overall, Northern was quicker than we had anticipated, but we still should have been ready to play. I think the outcome really shocked us. Now we'll find out if we've been shocked enough."

Rocky Mount brings only a 1-3 record into the contest, the lone victory a 9-7 win over 3-A Tarboro. The Gryphons have lost to Eastern Wayne, Goldsboro and Beddingfield, the latter in their Big East opener last week, 16-14.

"They've been improving every week," Vincent said. "They have some skilled people, and you know when Greenville and Rocky Mount get together, records go out the window."

Rocky Mount's offense is the slot 1, but Vincent notes that to date they haven't passed as much as they have in past years. "They still mix it up well."

Nolan Corpening is the leading rusher for the Gryphons, while Roney Harris handles the quarterbacking duties. "He has thrown the ball well at times," Vincent said.

In last week's game against Beddingfield, Rocky Mount took a 14-10 lead into the final quarter only to lose after fumbling twice and also failing on a couple of fourth down plays in Bruin territory during the last 12 minutes.

"They'll probably have those things worked out this week," Vincent said. "They do a good job on offense. They will throw, run the reverse, throw the halfback pass, so we have to be alert for anything from them."

On defense, the Gryphons run a number of alignments. "They run the 5-2, the 4-4, the 6-1, whatever. They do a lot of blitzing, so we'll have to pick that up to keep our passing game alive."

Vincent is even more anxious to get a running game going. Except for the first game, the Rampants have shown little ability to move the ball on the ground. "It's been a combination of the running backs and the offensive line. I really thought that we'd be able to do a better job at this. But we hope to try a few things this week that will work."

Getting those things to work will be the key. Rose will have to move the ball well against the Gryphons to win. And Vincent feels that the Rampants cannot afford another loss if they are to stay in the race for the Big East championship.

Good Start For Pegues

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

When Jeff Pegues came to East Carolina University in 1980 he expected to see little playing time as a freshman and to have time to adjust to college life.

A rash of injuries that year forced the young defensive end into action against such opponents as Florida State, North Carolina and the University of Miami — admittedly before he was ready for the test. But Pegues responded with 37 tackles that year as the Pirates slumped to 4-7 on the season.

"I expected to play a little when I first came here — maybe on specialty teams," Pegues said. "But at 6-2, 185 pounds, I got my chance to play major college football."

Now, three letters and 50 pounds later, Pegues is off to his best start with 11 tackles, including four quarterback sacks for 28 yards last. Things are a lot different at ECU now than the way he remembers when he first came to Greenville.

"When Coach (Ed) Emory came here (in 1980), most of the players were still those recruited by Pat Dye," Pegues said.

"The schemes have changed a lot because there have been so many coaching changes on defense. Back then when we were told to do something, the seniors would say, 'Pat Dye would do it this way, or that way.'"

"Now everybody has the same loyalty."

The 1980 version of the Pirates suffered a 63-7 loss at Florida State in the third game of the season after opening with a 35-10 win over Duke. The Seminoles rolled up a lot of points again this year, but the 1983 Pirates narrowly missed upsetting FSU with a 47-46 loss.

Seminole quarterback Kelly Lowrey completed 28 out of 35 passes for 322 yards and three touchdowns; the FSU ground game accounted for 256 more yards. The Pirates upset N.C. State 22-16 the following week, but the Wolfpack managed 398 yards total offense.

"The days of the shutout are gone," Pegues said. "With so many great receivers and the passing advanced to where it is today, the offense is going to score. This year our strategy is to keep it easy — keep it simple so you're not thinking, just reacting."

"At N.C. State when they fumbled and then our offense fumbled it back on the second play, our defense went in and had to stop them. We held when it counted. We've had some breakdowns, but our defense will come around. There's a lot more that can go wrong on defense."

"If our offense can continue to move the football, the defense will take care of itself."

The offense will have another stern test this Saturday when the Pirates take on the Missouri Tigers of the Big Eight Conference. The Tigers are third in the nation in rush defense, allowing just 50 yards per game, and fifth in total offense allowed with 228.7 yards.

"We're going to try to establish the running game on offense," Pegues said. "Defensively, we need to try to stop their running game; they're not that good passing the ball. If they pass, we're ready to defend against the pass; if they run, we'll have to defend that as well."

Fine Home Slate Is Lady Pirate Highlight

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates boast the finest home schedule ever as they announce their 1983-84 schedule today.

In addition to 13 single home games, the Lady Pirates will also host the third annual Lady Pirate Classic in February, and the first-ever ECAC-South women's basketball tournament on March 2-4.

That latter tournament will include teams from James Madison, George Mason, William & Mary, Richmond and ECU. Only Navy, which plays Division II women's basketball, will not compete.

"The inception of this tournament is tremendous for the future of the ECAC-South," Lady Pirate coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We're very excited about the steps being made in making this one of the finest women's basketball conferences in the country."

The Lady Pirate Classic will include defending champion and nationally ranked Cheyney State, along with Fairfield and Marshall in addition to the hosting Pirates.

Other outstanding home games include Notre Dame on January 5, Cincinnati on December 17, Georgia Tech on February 5, and South Carolina on February 25.

In addition to their 10-game road slate, the Lady Pirates will also appear in the City of Dogwood Classic in Fayetteville, playing N.C. State and North Carolina.

The Pirates will field a young team, with only four veterans back from last year's team. 5-9 swingman Sylvia Bragg; 6-2 front court Darlene Hedges; 5-4 guard Delphine Mabry and 5-9 forward Lisa Squirewell.

Point guard Loraine Foster, who suffered a knee injury last year, has elected not to play this year.

The full schedule:

Nov. 20 George Washington; 26 at St. Peter's; 27 at Iowa
Dec. 1 at Fayetteville State; 4 UNC Charlotte; 10 James Madison; 17 Cincinnati; 19 Appalachian State; 30 vs N.C. State in City of Dogwood Classic; 31 vs North Carolina in City of Dogwood Classic

Jan. 5 Notre Dame; 8 Fairleigh Dickinson; 15 George Mason; 18 UNC-Wilmington; 22 at UNC Charlotte; 23 at Appalachian State; 28 at South Carolina

Feb. 1 at William & Mary; 4 East Tennessee State; 5 Georgia Tech; 9 at Old Dominion; 11 at American; 12 at George Mason; 17-18 Lady Pirate Classic; 21 Richmond; 25 South Carolina

Phillies Clinch NL's Eastern Title

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Schmidt refused to call it symbolic, but he had to have a big hand in Philadelphia's clinching of the National League East title Wednesday, despite the fact Bo Diaz went 5-for-5 and Joe Morgan 4-for-4.

Schmidt contributed his major-league leading 40th homer and a triple to the Phillies' 19-hit attack in a 13-6 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

But all of that was secondary as far as Schmidt was concerned. With champagne dripping down his forehead, the two-time National League Most Valuable Player had a bigger role in what turned the Phillies around.

"Yes, I'll take some credit," said Schmidt, who had a bitter exchange with interim manager Paul Owens early in the month before the Phillies started their title drive.

Amidst a lot of grumbling within the ranks, Schmidt at the time said the team didn't know who the manager was and that "the lineup was decided by committee (Owens and the coaches)."

Owens, who had stepped in for Pat Corrales in July, told Schmidt not to worry about the managing and to concentrate on playing to his potential.

"We went 19-3 after that," said Schmidt. "I think that's what turned us around. If we had gone 3-19, I could have hung up my spikes. They would have said I was the reason the team had failed and that I had caused the dissension."

"But a lot of the guys agreed and told me so," said

Schmidt. "It's going to have to change, we decided, and it did. I'm a Christian and believe that maybe it was something that was supposed to happen."

"I stood behind what I said, we had a set lineup and got to where we had to get," said Schmidt. "I've never seen a team turn on the switch and keep it on until now, as this team did."

"There's not a guy in this clubhouse that didn't do something. Every guy is drinking champagne and deserves it."

Schmidt said he wasn't sure if the drive would carry over to the playoffs and he wouldn't compare this team to the 1980 team which won it all, including the World Series.

"In '80, we had to go to Montreal to win two of three. We were world champs. This team still has a lot to prove, but we have the potential to be as good as the '80 team."

What was symbolic of the clincher was that Schmidt led off the fourth inning with a homer to break a 3-3 tie and put the Phillies ahead to stay with his 12th game-winning run batted in.

The homer was his 39th in Wrigley Field and his 59th against the Cubs, but the crux of the victory that brought the Phillies their fifth divisional title in eight years was the hitting of Diaz and Morgan. Diaz homered in his first two trips, giving him 15 for the season, and finished with three straight singles.

Morgan, the 40-year-old marvel who was 0-for-35 at one time but has been going strong during September, had a double, three singles and walked twice.

"I'm just trying to win and very happy with the job I did," said Diaz, who was enjoying the greatest game of his career.

"I had two home runs and two doubles in a game last year, but we lost," said Diaz. "I don't go for average or home runs, I just want to win. We stayed together and we won."

Morgan was asked if he'd like to be 23 again.

"No," said Morgan, who played on two championship teams at Cincinnati. "I've seen a lot of guys who are 23 who never make it. I know when I'm healthy I can do the job."

"I'm the type of guy who never lost confidence in Joe Morgan, and I'm just happy I could contribute."

Bill Giles, president of the Phillies, had his arms around Owens, who was general manager of the club before relieving Corrales.

"Great, Paul, just great," said Giles, as the two shared a bottle of champagne.

Asked what turned the team around, Owens said: "They came together and realized they are as good as I thought they were. They played great ball against good clubs. They're professionals and they'll show it again before it's all finished."

Game Almost Was On TV

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — If officials of the Turner Broadcasting System had acted a bit sooner, the Missouri Tigers might have hosted East Carolina under the lights instead of under the sun Saturday at Faurot Field.

"We already have been contacted by Turner officials about their interest in televising our game with East Carolina as a night contest here," Missouri Athletic Director Dave Hart said in a news release issued Wednesday as the Tigers practiced for the East Carolina game.

"However, time was too short to enable us to make the switch without inconveniencing many of our fans, both in state and out of state."

Hart said there still was a possibility that a night game would be played at Missouri and televised by the Atlanta-based cable operation in the near future, perhaps even this season. Faurot Field, which never has been the site of a night game, already has been surveyed for the use of a portable lighting system.

"Some night games can be scheduled well in advance, but others might involve less than a week's notice to the competing teams," Hart said. "Quickly checking with universities who schedule night games, we've found that the pluses outnumber the minuses about five to one."

Braces Could Save Knees

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Football teams at Atlantic Coast Conference schools and East Carolina are experimenting with a knee brace that trainers say could prevent knee injuries or at least reduce their severity.

"The brace could be a career saver, not just a practice or game saver," Wake Forest head trainer Steve Yates said.

But trainers are not yet ready to call the braces a cure-all for knee injuries.

"It'll take a year or two to get a true picture of what we are looking at," North Carolina head trainer John Lacey said. "The safest statement that can be made about the brace is that if it can decrease or lessen the severity of the injury, it's working," Yates said.

North Carolina State head trainer Craig Sink agreed, saying knee injuries "cause a panic in the athletic community."

"Why not go ahead and protect the knee?" Sink said. "We can adequately tape the ankle, and we have helmets to protect the head and shoulder pads to protect the shoulders."

The braces are being used by a number of National Football League teams. Southern California and UCLA were among the first college teams to use them.

There are two basic types of braces: the McDavid and the Anderson. Seven of the eight ACC teams use one or both.

"We do not use them," Virginia head trainer Joe Gieck said. "We don't even tape. We feel if we have to use tape they shouldn't be playing."

The Anderson brace is a metal brace with two hinges, while the McDavid is made of plastic with a single hinge and is in a sleeve. The actual brace in each case is on the outside of the knee. The braces cost about $30 to $40 apiece.

Use of the braces ranges from entire teams at North Carolina and Wake Forest to less than a dozen players at Maryland. Some 50 to 60 players are outfitted with the braces at N.C. State and Georgia Tech while 45 to 50 wear them at Duke and about 18 at Clemson.

Director of Sports Medicine Rod Compton estimated about 65 players wear the braces at East Carolina.

The braces are used mainly by lineman, linebackers and players who have suffered knee injuries.

"Surgical knees used to be a running back's injury, but when you analyze it, it's more of a lineman's injury," Compton said.

"That's where you get a lot of people falling on top of each other," Sink added. "That is where there are a lot of bodies."

Unlike most other ACC teams, Duke restricts the use of the braces to only lineman and linebackers, trainer Dave Engelhardt said.

"I think we've got 'em on the right people," he said. "They're the ones in the congested areas. I really don't see a need to put them on running backs or defensive backs."

Georgia Tech Director of Sports Medicine Bill McDonald remains skeptical about the braces.

"We're in the experimental stage right now," McDonald said. "Hopefully, they'll help prevent injuries without causing other problems."

Knee surgery can cost from $500 to several thousand dollars, depending on severity. Given a rash of knee injuries, a college team can quickly run up a hefty medical bill.

"When you consider the initial cost, if the (braces) save one, two, three players from knee surgery they've paid for themselves," Sink said.

Compton said the braces will help prevent "minor knee sprains, but they won't stop dislocations."

"The guys it really saves are those who happen to be doing their job and have someone fall on their knee," Compton said.

Knee braces like the Anderson or McDavid have been used sparingly in the past, but last spring they became more popular among area schools.

"Last spring we had all our lineman use them and we had three minor knee injuries," Sink said. "We felt pretty sure that if they had not been wearing the brace the injuries would have been very serious."

Lacey said the Tar Heels started using the braces during spring practice because North Carolina coaches "thought it was another mode of protection for the knee."

"We've only had one boy injured wearing the brace who required surgery," he said. "But it's hard to tell either pro or con on it yet, but it seems to be helping."

Compton said East Carolina has already had at least one knee injury during practice that if the player "hadn't been wearing the brace he sure would have had surgery."

But the braces were not readily accepted by players — at least not at first. Some complained that they slipped and others said they were too hot.

"We got a lot of complaints," Engelhardt said. "Some were worried that they'd slow them down or hurt their ability, but they've adjusted to them real well."

Sink also heard complaints.

"At first I think the ones who had never had a knee injury were skeptical. They said, 'Why do I need it? I've never had a knee injury.' But the players who had had knee injuries said, 'Gosh, if I had had this (the injury might not) have happened.'"

Sink said during fall drills he had "one player walk off the field after practice and look down and the brace was bent. He said he didn't remember being hit, but the brace was bent into a 'U' shape."

"We don't have to sell the brace anymore," he said. "Now we can't take them away from them."

EC Golfers Are Eighth

RALEIGH — East Carolina University's golf team slipped from fifth place to an eighth place finish on the final day of the N.C. State Wolfpack Invitational Tournament Wednesday.

The Pirates closed out the 54-hole tournament with a 309 score for a 923 total.

Wake Forest took an easy 20-stroke victory in the tournament, carding an 886 for the three-day tournament. N.C. State's Red team finished second at 906, while the NCSU White team was third at 912. Virginia took fourth place with a 917 while Campbell was fifth at 919.

Guilford finished sixth with a 920, followed by Duke at 922. After the Pirates came William & Mary at 930, Old Dominion at 931 and UNC Charlotte at 947.

Mark Thaxton of Wake Forest won the individual title with a 211, five under par. The highest ranked Pirate was Mike Bradley, who finished eighth with a 225 total. Other Pirates were David Dooley at 228, Don Sweeting, 233; John Faidley, 239, and Mike Helms, 243.

Former Farmville Central player Gary Hobgood, now a freshman at Campbell, finished in a tie for third place with a 221.

East Carolina returns to action on Friday, traveling to Harrisonburg, Va., to take part in the James Madison Invitational.

Bethel In Two Wins

BETHEL — Bethel Junior High School gained a pair of volleyball victories from Ayden and Grifton yesterday.

Bethel downed Grifton in the first match, 15-6, 15-2, then came back with a 15-0, 15-6 win over Ayden.

Jackie Ross led Bethel with 11 service points while Gwen Manning added nine.

Juniors In Second Win

GOLDSBORO — The junior girls' tennis team, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, won its second match of the season yesterday, downing Wayne County Day, 15-0.

Things Brightened For Twins In '83 Season

By The Associated Press
Last year, the Minnesota Twins lost 102 games in compiling the worst record in baseball.

This season, the Twins still are having their troubles. But things are looking a little brighter, if Wednesday's 3-0 victory over the Texas Rangers is any indication.

In other AL games, Chicago downed Oakland 5-3, Detroit bopped Baltimore 9-5, Boston nipped New York 3-2, Milwaukee rallied past Cleveland 6-4, Toronto beat California 5-3 and Kansas City clubbed Seattle 11-8.

With the victory, the Twins are now 68-90 and in fifth place in the American League West, one-half game ahead of the California Angels.

And, for Minnesota, there were other bright spots, both on the hitting and pitching sides, in evidence Wednesday.

Pete Filson, celebrating his 25th birthday, pitched 7 1-3 innings and allowed six hits. He's now 4-1 this season. Reliever Ron Davis went the final 1 2-3 innings for his 30th save.

"I didn't have anything," Davis said. "I had no velocity whatsoever. I got lucky. But for a team that has won only 68 games, 30 saves is a pretty good year."

Kent Hrbek doubled twice and gave the Twins 274 two-base hits this year, setting a team record for a season. Tom Brunansky belted his 28th home run, tying three others for the most home runs by a Minnesota hitter since Harmon Killebrew blasted 41 in 1970.

Filson said he was somewhat pleased by his performance.

"I'm happy, but I'm not real happy," Filson said. "I want the team to win, and some of these teams are going to get better before next year."

Hrbek doubled in the fourth off Danny Darwin, 8-13, and scored when center fielder Mickey Hatcher misplayed the ball for a two-base error.

Brunansky's homer came in the seventh.

White Sox 5, A's 3
Greg Luzinski drilled his 31st home run — tying the AL record for homers by a designated hitter in a season — and Rich Dotson upped his record to 21-7.

Luzinski's two-run blast snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning in Oakland. The home run tied a record set by Jim Rice in 1977 and matched by Rico Carty in 1978 and Andre Thornton in 1982.

Dotson went five innings and got relief help from Jerry Koonsman and Dennis Lamp, who got his 14th save.

Tigers 9, Orioles 5
Last week, Detroit got 10 consecutive hits in a game against Baltimore and routed the Orioles 14-1.

On Wednesday, the visiting Tigers rapped seven straight hits during an eight-run second inning to again bounce Baltimore.

Larry Herndon's two-run homer, his 20th, and Alan Trammell's two-run double highlighted the big inning. Dan Petry, 19-10, got the win, while Mike Boddicker, 15-8, took the loss.

Brewers 6, Indians 4
Robin Yount's two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning tied the score and Ben Oglivie then belted a two-run homer with two outs to lift Milwaukee to victory.

The Brewers trailed 4-2 going into the ninth before Jamie Easterly, 4-3, yielded Yount's 16th homer and Oglivie's 13th. Jim Slaton, 14-6, who relieved Don Sutton in the ninth, got the victory.

Red Sox 3, Yankees 2
Bob Ojeda won his sixth straight game in September with relief help from Bob Stanley, who got his 33rd save.

Ojeda, 12-7, gave up two runs in 6 1-3 innings. Gary Allenson drove in one run and scored another for Boston.

Shane Rawley, 14-13, took the loss for New York.

Royals 11, Mariners 8
Willie Aikens drove in five runs with two home runs and George Brett knocked in four runs, including a three-run homer.

Aikens belted a three-run homer in the first inning off Gene Nelson, 0-3. His two-run homer in the seventh went into the third deck in right field at Seattle's Kingdome, making him the first player to hit a ball there this season and the 11th all-time.

Aikens now has 22 homers this year. Brett, who also had a sacrifice fly, has 24 home runs.

Seattle's Pat Putnam had four hits, including his 19th homer — a career high, and two doubles.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 3
In California, Dave Collins drove in three runs to help Jim Clancy up his record to 15-10.

Clancy gave up three hits and two runs in the first inning and left in the ninth with the bases loaded and one out.

Roy Lee Jackson allowed Ron Jackson's RBI groundout before getting his seventh save.

Nixon Says Central America Needs Marshall Plan

AFTER TESTIFYING — Former President Nixon and Henry Kissinger speak with reporters after Nixon testified before the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America. The commission is chaired by Kissinger. (AP Laserphoto)

Asbestos Said Best Untouched

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Intact asbestos products in the home are best left undisturbed, unless you want to pay a professional to come in and remove them, says Stan

Worth, a housing technology specialist at Cornell University Cooperative Extension. "In general, there's a low risk factor for asbestos in the household unless it's deteriorating or disturbed in some way," Worth said.

MOUNTAIN CATS
ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — More than 100 Jaguar cars from throughout the United States roared into town recently for the first national gathering of the Jaguar Club of North America. Cars ranged from the original Jaguar model to today's XJ-S sports coupe. Bob Alder, a bank vice president, organized the event.

He said asbestos removal should be done by trained personnel using special equipment such as respirators, protective gloves and hats. Never try to vacuum asbestos on the floor, he said, because the fibers are so tiny they can easily pass through the filters of ordinary vacuum cleaners and be dispersed in the air.

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon says Central America will achieve democratic stability only through a program even more ambitious than the $13.3 billion Marshall Plan that helped Europe recover from the devastation of World War II. Nixon, summing up for reporters his closed-door testimony Wednesday before the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, also said a massive U.S. economic aid program for the region must be coupled with continued military aid. "It is not possible to have progress without having security and it is not possible to have security without having progress," Nixon said, with commission chairman Henry A. Kissinger standing at his side. The scene in the State Department lobby was reminiscent of the 1970s: Nixon and his one-time foreign policy partner standing before microphones talking about a sensitive foreign policy issue. Except for a slight limp, Nixon, 70, seemed in good health. Kissinger thanked Nixon for a "very comprehensive and extraordinarily thought-provoking presentation." So impressive was Nixon, Kissinger said, that Nixon would be capable of writing the commission report for President Reagan by himself. The 12-member commission, formed in July, expects to have its policy recommendations completed by February. Kissinger was expected to announce today plans for a commission trip to Central America next month. In his remarks, Nixon stressed the same anti-communist stance that has been a hallmark of his long public career, warning that a Marxist victory in El Salvador would mean "another Soviet base in the Americas" and endorsing U.S.-backed military operations against Nicaragua's leftist government. If the leftist guerrillas triumph in El Salvador, "the impact on the surrounding countries and on Mexico eventually could be enormous," he said. But he said it would be a mistake for the United States to become obsessed with Marxism.

"The communists talk about problems. Too often we just talk about communists," Nixon said. He suggested the U.S.-sponsored postwar European recovery effort was far simpler than the task required in Central America. "The problem in Latin America is not recovery," he said. "The problem is getting started." Whereas the United States was able to help 15 Western European countries get back on their feet in four years, a Central America development program would require at least a decade, he said. Nixon appeared to be recommending a program costing tens of billions of dollars. Because of inflation, the $13.3 billion in Marshall Plan loans and grants would be worth several times that amount in 1983 dollars. The former president said, however, that not all of the cost would come from the government; some would be in private investment. Although Central America was not a major issue during his presidency, Nixon made his detailed presentation before the commission without notes. Nixon has averaged about one trip a year to Washington since resigning the presidency nine years ago. He traveled here from New York Wednesday aboard a commercial jet. With Nixon's presentation, the commission has now heard recommendations on Central America policy from all three living former presidents. All former secretaries of state still alive also have testified except Edmund S. Muskie.

Jewel Hunt

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish police have reopened their investigation of the 1907 theft of Ireland's crown jewels — reportedly because an elderly woman no longer felt bound by a two-generation vow of silence about the gems' hiding place. The collection of diamonds, rubies and emeralds said to be worth millions of dollars were stolen from a tower of Dublin Castle shortly before a visit to Ireland by King Edward VII in 1907, when Ireland was ruled by Britain. Ireland gained independence in 1922. Dublin police said Wednesday they had received new information on the theft and confirmed they had started a search.

ICE IS NOT COOL
NEW YORK (AP) — Though a popular source of refreshment, chewing on ice cubes may be hazardous. Chomping down on ice can crack teeth and loosen fillings. "Teeth, as strong as they are, are also like fine china. If you hit them the wrong way, they crack," says a dentist, who sees many cases of broken teeth caused by the habit.

FOCUS

Calling Scotland Yard

The name "Scotland Yard" is most often used to refer to the Criminal Investigation Department of the London Metropolitan Police Force. The name of the Force actually derives from its original location. At the time of its establishment on this date in 1829, the London police's headquarters was partially situated where a 12th century castle, used for visiting Scottish royalty, once stood.

Do You Know — What is the slang term used to refer to London Police officers?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Whale sharks, which may grow to 60 feet long, are the largest kind of shark.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO CONSIDER

LEVY OF 1/2 % SUPPLEMENTAL LOCAL GOVERNMENT SALES AND USE TAX

NOTICE is hereby given that the Board of Commissioners of Pitt County will hold a public hearing to consider the levy of one-half percent (1/2 %) supplemental local government sales and use tax, at the following time, date and place:

TIME 7:30 o'clock P.M.

DATE October 6, 1983

PLACE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ROOM
Second Floor
County Office Building

Cathy Jessen, president of the chapter, and Louise Moore, treasurer, attended the anniversary.

For information about epilepsy and the association's local activities, call 752-3769 and leave a message or call 800-642-0500.

Restitution Totals $171,600

Gov. Jim Hunt announced today that in the first six months of 1983 the courts ordered $171,634 in restitution for crimes committed in Pitt County. During the same period, $75,396 was disbursed to victims of crimes.

"I want to commend the judicial system," Hunt said, "for making good use of restitution as a punishment for crime. I also want to thank Pitt County Clerk of Court Sandra E. Gaskins for collecting and disbursing the restitution funds in a timely manner."

Statewide for the first six months of 1983, the 84 counties participating in the system reported that the courts ordered $5,567,376 in restitution. $2,366,295 was collected and $2,231,617 was disbursed.

The data on restitution was made available by the Criminal Justice Analysis Center of the Governor's Crime Commission. The clerks of court who participate in the system send in quarterly reports on restitution.

Police Looking For Robber

Greenville police today were looking for a man who held up the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant at 2905 E. Fifth St. Wednesday night.

Capt. John Briley said the man entered an unlocked rear door, held employees and customers at gunpoint, and ordered employees to give him all the cash from the register and a safe.

Briley, who said an undetermined amount of cash was taken, said the incident occurred about 9:38 p.m.

Two Departments Cite Senior

Heidi Kay Sydow of Jackson, Ohio, has been named the recipient of the annual Outstanding Senior Award in two departments of ECU's College of Arts and Sciences.

"This is a most unusual feat, considering that a double major isn't all that common and that it was taken in two extremely demanding fields," Dr. Eugene Ryan, acting dean of arts and sciences, said.

Ms. Sydow received her bachelor's degree cum laude last July with a double major in geology and anthropology. Her overall grade point average at ECU was 3.693.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hall J. Sydow of Jackson, Ohio, Ms. Sydow has enrolled in cognate courses at ECU this semester and is working as a graduate assistant to geology Professor Scott Snyder.

Jolly Elected To Committee

Brantley T. Jolly Jr. of Greenville has been elected to the Committee of Medical Education at Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest University.

A first-year student, Jolly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hayes and the late Brantley Jolly, who graduated from Wake Forest University. Jolly earned his B.S. degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he majored in chemistry and history.

Guilty Plea To Faking Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A man who says he was "fed up" because he couldn't get worker's compensation for job-related injuries faces up to 15 years in prison and $8,000 in fines after pleading guilty to federal fraud charges for faking his death at sea.

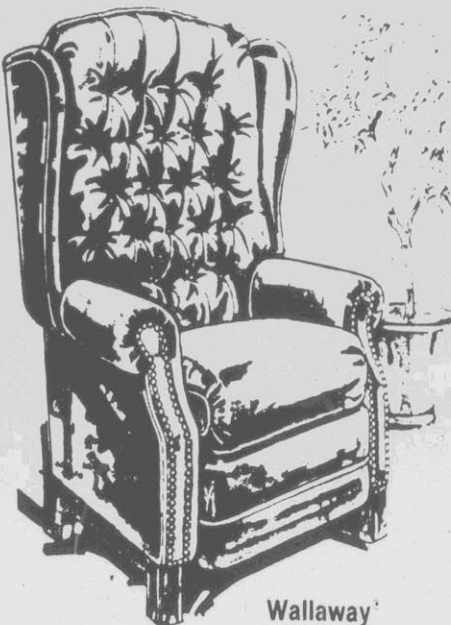

Robert Granberg, 51, admitted to a judge Wednesday that he dived from a fishing boat off New Jersey in 1981 and swam to shore, leaving his wife and two friends to vouch for his death.

Granberg's wife, Judith Brent, could be sentenced to a maximum 10 years in prison and $6,000 in fines after admitting she collected $200,000 in insurance claims after having him declared legally dead. Most of the money has been recovered, officials said.

Greenville Citizen Participated In Ironclads' Battle

By ROGER KAMMERER AND STUART MORGAN

Greenville has a small claim to fame in the historic battle between the USS Monitor and CSS Virginia, better known as the Merrimac, which was fought on March 9, 1862, off Hampton Roads, Virginia.

A. J. Griffin, who lived in Greenville from 1882 until his death here on Feb. 1, 1914, was one of the last survivors of that historic naval engagement.

What was his connection with that famous event? It was as a participant. He fought aboard the Confederate ironclad, the CSS Virginia, against the USS Monitor in that winter's day battle 121 years ago in the Virginia waters.

Born in Feb. 1842, in Connecticut, the son of an English immigrant, Griffin apparently moved with his parents to Baltimore, where he was apprenticed in the jeweler's trade.

On March 1, 1862, the 20-year-old Griffin enlisted in Company H, 32nd Regiment of Virginia State Troops of the Confederate forces at Norfolk, just days before the encounter between the two ironclads.

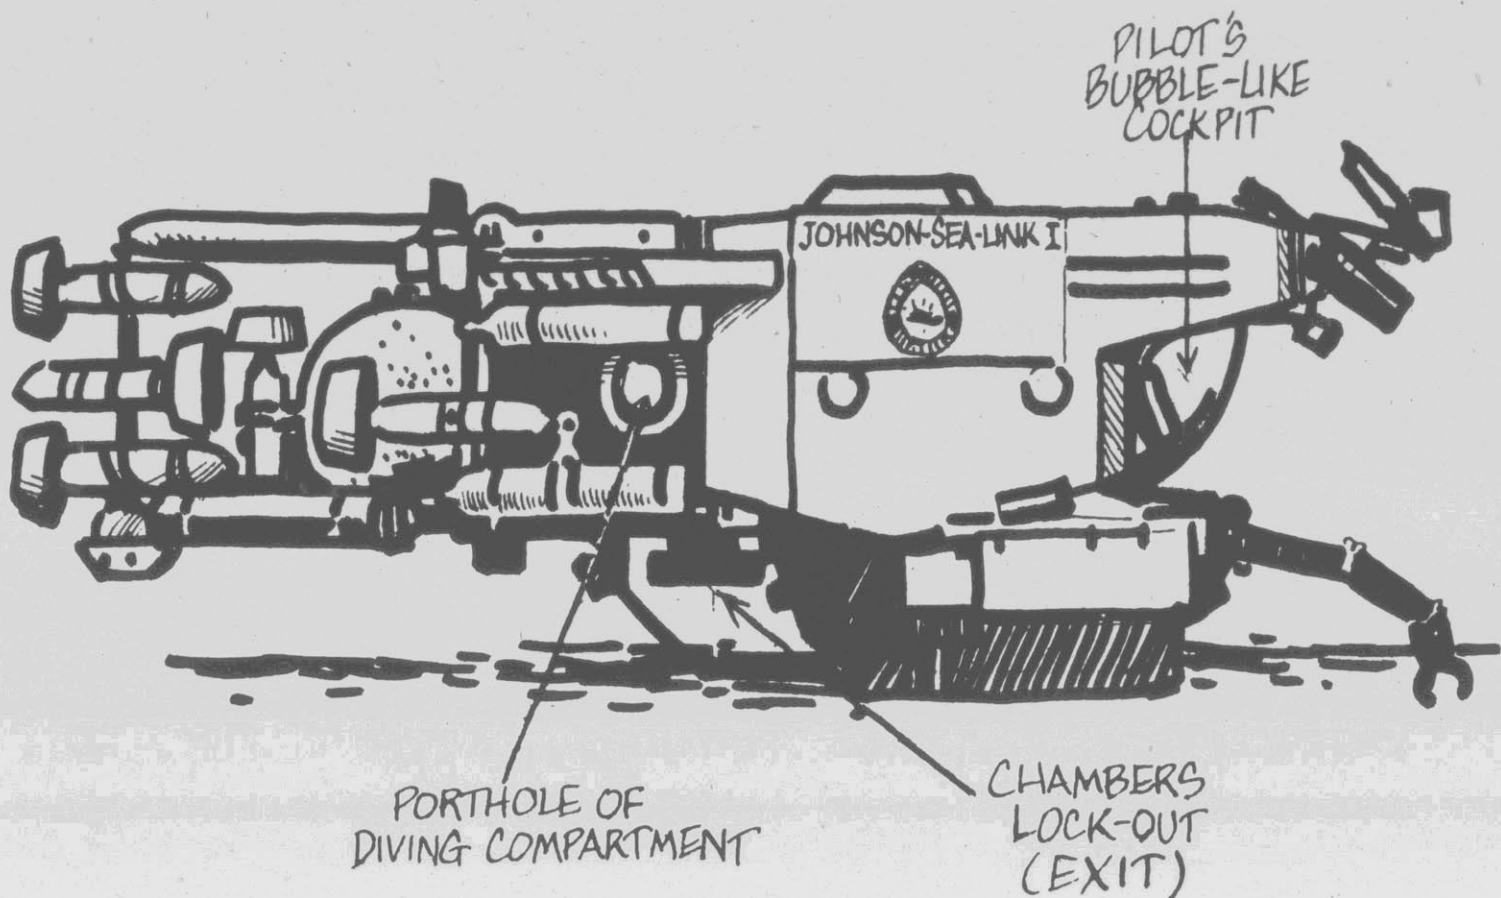

Nearly two decades later, in 1883, a year after moving to Greenville, Griffin organized the Greenville Hook and Ladder Company, the first volunteer fire fighting organization here and served as its chief for many years.

In 1887, Griffin married Elizabeth Campbell, who started a millinery shop in Greenville. An Episcopalian and a Mason, Griffin died in Greenville at the age of 73 and was buried in Cherry Hill Cemetery with Masonic honors.

ECU's Maritime History And Underwater Research Program had a vital role in the intricate planning and work involved in the recovery of the Monitor's anchor from the Atlantic on Monday, Aug. 29, 1983.

The Johnson Sea-Link I, A Proven Submersible Diver

THE JOHNSON SEA-LINK I . . . Making her 1,000th dive in January, 1981, this submersible is the first of two deep-diving mini-submarines to use welded aluminum as pressure hulls for diver lock-out and decompression. The 66-inch diameter pilot's sphere is constructed of four-inch thick transparent acrylic plastic, giving the pilot and a scientist/observer good visibility.

It also enables divers to lock-out at depths up to 350 feet. The Harbor Branch submersible is equipped with manipulator arms and sampling devices as well as television and still cameras. The submarine's crew can communicate directly with the surface support vessel, the Research Vessel Johnson.

An Account Of Recovering The Monitor's Anchor

A four-member scientific team, supported by four Harbor Branch divers, was responsible for recovering the USS Monitor's historic anchor and inspecting, photographing and performing many other tests at the ironclad's wreck site off Cape Hatteras from August 21 to 29.

Gordon P. Watts, director of underwater research for East Carolina University's Maritime History and Underwater Research program, and Wes Hall, a second-year graduate student in ECU's two-year program, were members of that scientific team.

Ed Miller, senior engineer with General Physics Corporation in Columbia, Md., and John Broadwater, archaeologist with the Virginia Historic Landmarks Committee in Yorktown, Va., were also members of the scientific party.

Pre-Project Training
Before this year's Monitor Expedition began, however, the four underwater archaeologists attended pre-project training from May 30 to June 2 at Harbor Branch's facilities in Fort

Pierce, Fla., where they became familiar with the mini-submarine's operations, practiced diving and emergency procedures (including bail-outs or escapes) and lock-outs (exits) from the submarine dive chamber.

Since the USS Monitor lies submerged in 230 feet of water, well beyond the safe limits of normal SCUBA diving, the underwater archaeologists were also required to undergo extensive physical examinations several weeks before participating in the expedition's deep-sea dives off the coast.

Viewed From Portholes
"On Sunday afternoon, when the wreck was located," Hall said, "I viewed it for approximately one hour." With visibility at about 10 feet, the ECU graduate student said he viewed the historic wreck from portholes on either side of the submersible's dive compartment during Sunday's second dive when the anchor was first spotted.

Miller, who sat in the submersible's bubble-like cockpit during the same dive, said the four-member crew — with two Harbor Branch divers, one the pilot — video-taped the sunken ironclad and investigated the anchor well in the Monitor's upside-down bow section from their positions inside. "We saw the anchor chain hanging out of the anchor wall," Miller said, "but it disappeared into the sand below."

Located By Information
"The anchor was located by using historical information and estimations made by Ed Miller and Gordon Watts," Hall explained. "When we spotted the anchor, it was located approximately 450 feet south southwest from the wreck, and the 750-foot chain leading from the Monitor was buried in 8 to 12 inches of sediment."

"As we expected, the grapnel-like anchor was positioned with two flukes (flared ends used for digging in) exposed about a foot from the ocean's floor when we found it," Hall added. "The anchor was located by the sub's sonar, but it was difficult to locate."

Originally, the submarine, the Johnson Sea-Link I, had to track two targets; the first, however, was found to be only a modern, five-gallon metal bucket. The second target was discovered to be the sought-after anchor.

"We expected to find the anchor in wind-in-seas or in the direction of the prevailing winds," Miller explained, "and we were aware that the captain of the Monitor tried to bring his bow into the wind-seas to facilitate taking his crew off the vessel while it was sinking."

Meanwhile, Hall commented that "the anchor was found entwined with modern, one-half inch line." He added that "the sub's suction dredge was used to remove some sediments from the anchor and afterwards," Hall said, "the anchor was partially cleared by the forward manipulators for video-taping, identification and subsequent verification at the surface."

Monday Dive
Around 4:30 p.m. Monday, the expedition's second day, Broadwater was locked-out of the Johnson Sea-Link to work on the anchor for about 30 minutes. The dive began late because of preparations involved in making the deep dive, including the mounting of a special thruster on the submarine by Harbor Branch that would be used in the anchor's excavation. When Broadwater finally made his dive and exited the submersible's dive chamber down near the wreck, he said "the whole place surrounding the sub was lit-up."

"The submarine had plenty of lighting for the color video cameras," he explained, "so that the night dive lights on board were able to bring out the colors surrounding the underwater craft."

Wearing a blue wet suit with a bright orange band mask attached to a rubber hood with microphone and earphones, a bright orange bail-out emergency tank harnessed to his back, and an umbilical cord — a hose supplying a mixture of helium and 12½ percent oxygen connecting him to the submarine, Broadwater was quite colorful himself.

In fact, television commentators were as interested in the colors worn by the underwater archaeologist as Broadwater was in the colors surrounding him in the 36-fathom depths of the Monitor site.

Procedures Explained
After exiting from beneath the submersible's dive chamber, located behind the submarine's cockpit, Broadwater said he "jumped on top of the sub, about 10 feet up because I didn't have enough weight weighing me down."

About 12 feet from the submersible's front, meanwhile, the 4,000 pound lift bag that was used in the first unsuccessful attempt to drive the anchor to the surface was located in back of the lock-out chamber where Broadwater was positioned. From that location, he could look over the front of the submarine and see the anchor, located about five feet in front of the submarine's cockpit.

"The water was extremely clear," Broadwater commented, "and the sub was positioned for video coverage. It was also prepared to keep in close contact with me."

"Following standard exiting procedures, I jumped over the sub's port side with the lift bag, and moved forward in the direction of the anchor," Broadwater explained. According to the underwater archaeologist, two-thirds of the anchor, exposed down to its lower shank, and five feet of the chain was visible after it was cleared by the submarine's powerful thruster just minutes before he exited the vessel.

"I quickly viewed the anchor, and then cleared the modern line that was wrapped around it," Broadwater said. "Then, I went to the back side of the anchor, with the shank of the anchor facing towards the sub and Monitor."

Rigs Lift Bag

He then wrapped a nylon lifting strap around the exposed flukes and around the shank of the anchor.

When fastened, he attached the strap to the lift bag's hook. With the lift bag rigged, and the anchor ready for hoisting to the surface 230 feet above, Broadwater moved back to the port bow area of the submarine near the cockpit where a high-pressure coiled-up tube was located. He grasped the tube and returned to the lift bag where he attached it.

Once that was completed, the submarine's pilot inflated the bag with just enough air to uncoil its lines and raise it gently above the anchor. No attempt, however, was made to lift the anchor during the dive.

First, Broadwater had to return to the rear of the submarine to get a small sledge hammer in the dive compartment. Upon returning to the anchor with the hammer, he measured about five feet of the anchor's chain and hammered concrete away from one of its links.

"The anchor was in exceedingly good shape," Broadwater said. "I took the concrete away from the anchor's chain link for the conservators to study, and also to prepare the chain for cutting." Finally, after examining the anchor and chain again, he returned to the dive chamber.

The following day, Tuesday, a Harbor Branch diver would use an underwater the elusive anchor in its new location.

"The anchor was not recovered during this dive because the weather was deteriorating, and the sub's batteries were low," Watts explained. The weather would also prevent its recovery the following day, Thursday.

Additional Day
Fortunately, Watts said, an additional day, Monday, was obtained by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration from the National Marine Fisheries to make another attempt to retrieve the anchor.

"The Research Vessel Johnson was to be working in the vicinity of the Monitor on a fisheries project," Watts commented, "and the principal investigator of that project agreed to let us use a portion of the day on Monday to try to recover the anchor."

Located again Monday morning, the anchor was finally lifted to the surface by 1,000 and 2,000 lift bags and was maneuvered to the deck of the R/V Johnson waiting nearby.

After 120 years on the bottom of the ocean, the unique grapnel-like anchor of the historic USS Monitor, the world's first ironclad, had achieved its first leg of a journey which would finally result in its being placed at East Carolina University in Greenville for preservation measures.

. . . the Monitor's anchor will receive preservation treatment at ECU for the next 18-24 months.

torch to cut the chain, leaving about five feet of it attached to the anchor.

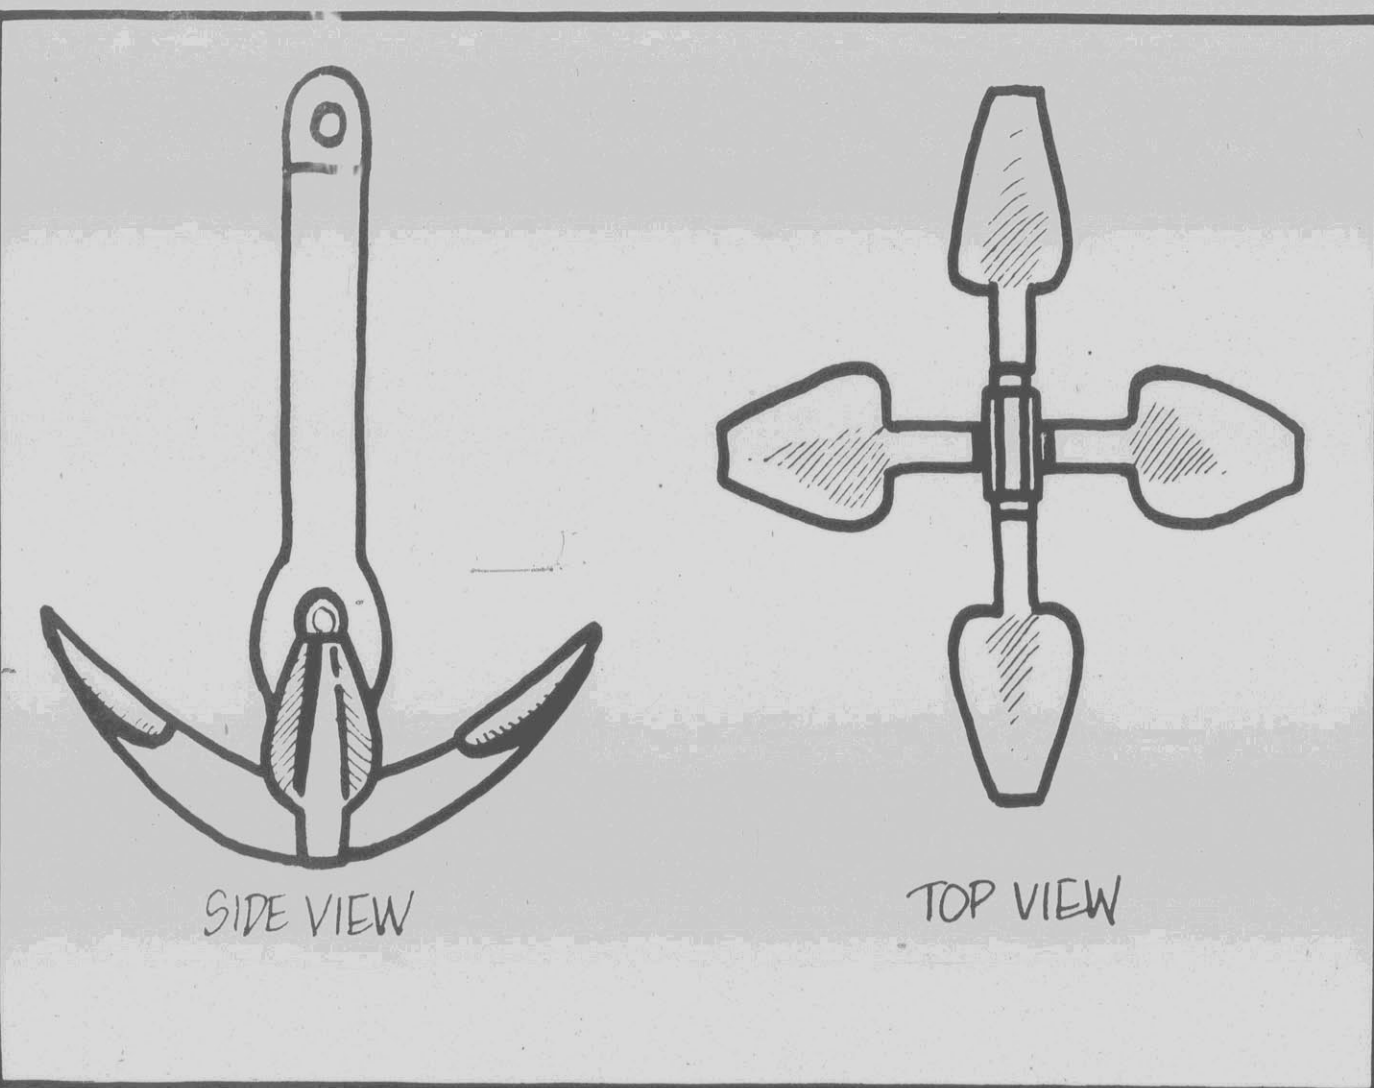

First Attempt Failed
On Wednesday, an attempt was made to raise the anchor. Unfortunately, the lift bag hoisting the anchor to the surface burst, dropping the 1,450 pound anchor off its former site. Hall, riding in the diving chamber when the anchor was lost, said the submarine's crew searched for and found the sonar's "pinger" which had separated from the anchor and lift bag. With visibility of only about five feet, the submarine's sonar had to be used.

Watts, riding in the submarine's forward cockpit during the same dive, said they were able to identify the wreck and two more targets from the sonar's sub; but after 35 minutes tracking the sonar's readings, the first target was discovered again to be the same modern five-gallon container they had found earlier. Fifteen minutes later, after following another reading, they found

"Although we had to plan this expedition expecting the possibility of weather deteriorating, it was frustrating not to be able to accomplish the project's most important objectives," Watts explained. "While the anchor will provide historical, conservation and engineering information, the data to be generated by other proposed research activities was critical to the formulation of recovery plans of the Monitor's turret."

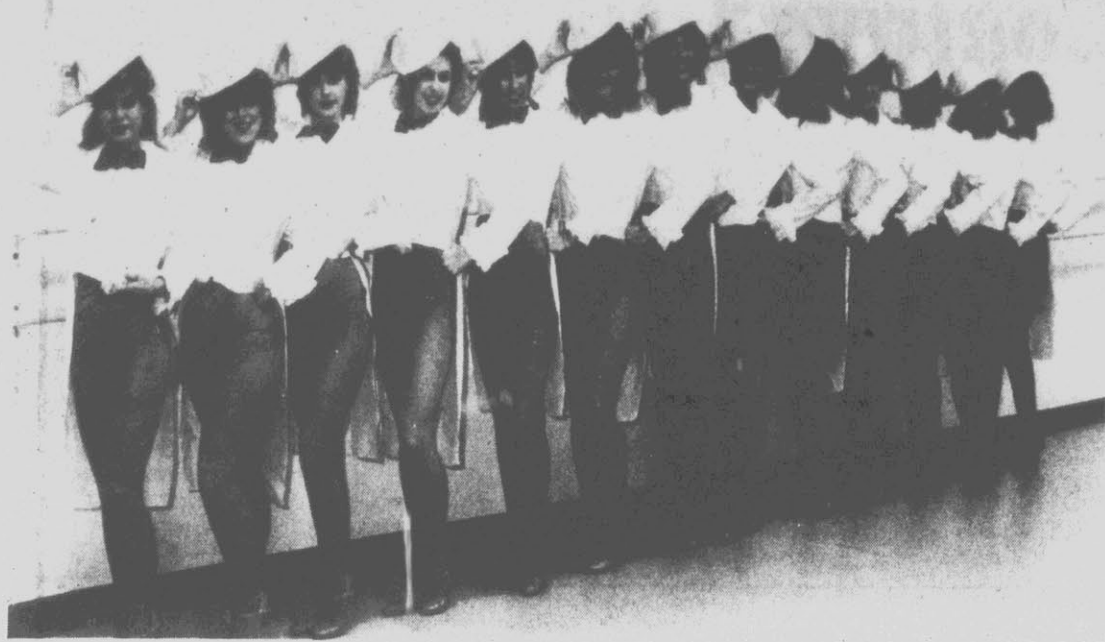

According to Watts, consideration is being given to the possibility of a project in 1984 to accomplish objectives frustrated this year by poor weather.

Good Support
"All of the folks at ECU deserve lots of credit and support for their direction and participation in the project," Miller said. "ECU's Maritime History and Underwater Research Program is unique, and it's going to get better and bigger as a result of this year's Monitor Expedition."

THE RETRIEVED MONITOR ANCHOR . . . without the chain, is shown from two angles in this drawing by Roger Kammerer. The historic ironclad's 1,450 pound grapnel-like iron anchor was probably constructed by Novelty Iron Works in New York between October 1861 and January 1862. The unique anchor is undergoing an electrolytic preservation process at the power plant at ECU which will be carried out during the next 18 to 24 months.

THE PEPSI DANCERS will perform Saturday at Carolina East Mall during the Pitt County United Way's "Fun Day" from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Displays will be set up by each agency supported by United Way to explain purposes and distribute informative literature. There will be games, clowns, balloons, and entertainment for all. Entertainers will include the Pepsi Dancers, the Greenville Barbershop Chorus, the Curtain Players, David and His Puppets, the Rose High Jazz Band, Joey Swazey and Jay Holley-guitarist, the BSU Trio, and the BSU Chipmunks.

Andropov Attacks Reagan Arms Move But No Outright Rejection

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov says President Reagan's latest proposal to limit nuclear arms in Europe is an attempt to build NATO strength while disarming Moscow, but he did not reject the plan outright.

Andropov said the Soviets were committed to "peace on Earth" and termed Reagan's offer a "so-called new move" that did not significantly alter the U.S. stand at Geneva talks on limiting medium-range missiles.

The Soviet president and Communist Party chief accused the United States of "unwillingness to conduct serious talks of any kind on arms control." His statement was carried Wednesday by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

"In brief, we are proposed to talk on how to help the NATO bloc to upset to its advantage the balance of medium-range nuclear systems in the European zone. And this move is presented brazen-facedly as something new," he said.

On Monday, in a speech at the United Nations, Reagan offered to halt deployment of an unspecified number of the 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles on the continent if the Soviets dismantle some of their SS-20 missile force aimed at Western Europe. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to start deploying the U.S. missiles in December.

The State Department said Wednesday the world would be "disappointed" in Andropov's response to Reagan's initiative.

It said the response was "a threatening restatement of their long-standing position that the Soviets will maintain their monopoly of intermediate range missiles in Europe. For our part, we will continue to work in Geneva for a negotiated settlement that strengthens international peace and security."

But unlike past instances, Andropov did not attack Reagan's so-called zero option and interim proposal offers to withdraw or reduce medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe. Nor did he mention the inclusion of British and French nuclear missiles at the Geneva talks, which has been a key Soviet demand.

Moscow has objected consistently to NATO's deployment of any new nuclear missiles in Western Europe. It claims that the 162 missiles already deployed by France and Britain are enough protection.

Vice President George Bush said Wednesday in Washington that "there has to be an answer found for the British and French missiles" if the United States and Soviets want to conclude a missile-reduction pact in Europe.

President Francois Mitterrand of France, in an address to the U.N. General Assembly on Wednesday, rejected the Soviet proposal to include his country's nuclear arsenal in a super-power deal to reduce intermediate-range missiles.

"It is unacceptable to include the central defense system on which the independence and survival of my country rest with the intermediate-range nuclear forces of the two superpowers, which in their case merely complement their formidable strategic arsenals," Mitterrand said.

Andropov reiterated that the Soviet Union is willing to reach accord on limiting nuclear arms in Europe but also that the East bloc will not allow the West to undermine what the Soviets consider their security needs.

"It would not be advisable to anyone to stage a trial of strength," he said. "On our part, we do not seek such a trial of strength. The very thought of this is alien to us."

He said the Kremlin values equally "the well-being of our people...and security of other peoples, other countries."

"One should not look at the world in the nuclear age through the narrow prism of one's selfish egoistic interests. Responsible statesmen have only one choice — to do everything possible to prevent nuclear catastrophe."

"Any other position is short-sighted, the more so, it is suicidal."

Avoiding Rules Across Border

CHOKIO, Minn. (AP) — A barber all in a lather because of a state inspection law requiring him to operate from a fixed location is crossing the border into South Dakota to shortcut regulations.

Bob Anderson, 39, who put his shop on wheels to service several Minnesota towns without barbers, said recently he now is cutting hair while parked near a cornfield about eight feet inside South Dakota.

Adam Mikrot, executive secretary of the Minnesota examining board, said a barber shop must be in one place for "inspection procedures." Despite the rule, business is "pretty good," said Anderson, who wants the Minnesota law amended when legislators meet next year.

'Manimal' And 'Cutter', 2 Contrived TV Themes

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ah, to have been a fly on the wall when NBC's executives were telling one another what they really thought of "Manimal," an embarrassing and worthless program about a man who transforms himself into animals to solve crimes.

The new series debuts Friday night.
Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, seemed close to candor when he offered an apology for "Manimal," which competes directly against CBS' snake, J.R. Ewing. "We have to try a guy who turns into an animal against 'Dallas,'" he said.

Call this the sacrificial-lamb rationale for "Manimal."

Grant Tinker, chairman of NBC, may have been providing insight into his thinking when he said that producers, who made hits for NBC, were being rewarded with new shows. Glen Larson's "Knight Rider" made a dent in the "Dallas" ratings last season, so he was asked to do it again with "Manimal."

This reasoning brings to mind the way a trained dolphin is fed fish as a reward for performing stunts.

And Larson himself inadvertently summed up the way this show should be perceived when he asked rhetorically: "Do we want him to become a skunk?"

Call this the truth. "Manimal" is the most ludicrous idea of the new season, and it's not even well-executed. This supposed fantasy-adventure could only work if it were done with a light hand, perhaps with a campy charm in the manner of the reluctant, misdirected caped crusader in "The Greatest American Hero."

But that seems beyond Larson's scope. "Manimal" tries to be another crime-fighting show, which takes itself much too seriously, amid a blur of surrealistic and supernatural, yet transparent-looking, special effects.

Another negative is the pompous Simon MacCorkindale as Jonathan Chase, a professor of criminology, who can change into his own Bronx Zoo. MacCorkindale tries to be another James Bond, but merely comes across as condescending and conterfeit.

"I was tired of all shows looking the same on both sides of the Atlantic," said MacCorkindale, an Englishman, trying to explain why he took the role.

In Friday's episode, Chase changes into a panther, an eagle and a cat, the last animal slipping inside Ursula Andress' bathrobe. "I was a real pussycat," Chase says with a wink.

As contrived themes go, CBS' "Cutter to Houston" could have been a bit better than run of the mill. Three doctors — one from Chicago, one a rural home-grown product and one an angry young woman — are thrown together in a small-town hospital in Texas, a helicopter ride from Houston.

The new series debuts Saturday night, with Alec Baldwin as the city slicker, Jim Metzler as the Texan and Shelley Hack as Beth.

The program could have explored culture clash, but "Cutter to Houston" took a suicidal wrong turn with its swirling helicopters, melodramatic outbursts, offensive characterizations and hard-to-swallow situations.

The picture painted of this Texas town is insulting. The citizens practice frontier justice with guns and fists, they go to any extreme to keep their kinfolk from associating with outsiders and act ornery and nasty whenever the urge strikes.

Beth has to amputate a workman's arm to save his life. The worker is so angry that he forbids the hospital from taking care of his pregnant wife. When the wife gets treatment anyway, he tries to hijack the operating room.

How's this for melodrama? "I'm gonna save your baby," Beth tells the worker. "If you don't like that idea, just go ahead and shoot me."
Baldwin is the transplanted Chicagoan, Hal, who wants to date the town bully's sister. The redneck, who's shown his stuff in one saloon brawl, threatens to beat up Hal. Hal proposes, instead, a mano-a-mano settlement, a one-on-one baseball game. "If I strike you out, you leave your sister alone," Hal says.
Strike three.

Filmmaker Sues Studio Execs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Filmmaker Blake Edwards has sued MGM-UA for $180 million, claiming studio executives conspired to destroy commercial prospects of his latest movie, "The Curse of the Pink Panther."

The suit, filed Tuesday in Superior Court, contends executives of MGM-UA, which distributed the picture, were angry at Edwards because he supported ousted MGM-UA chief executive David Begelman at an arbitration hearing in July.

The studio is accused of booking the film into inappropriate theaters and running no advertising during the last two or three weeks of its run as a main feature.
Edwards, 61, seeks $70 million in compensatory damages and $110 million in punitive damages.

An MGM spokesman who asked not to be identified by name said Wednesday that the studio's policy was not to comment on pending litigation.

O'Toole Signed For TV Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Peter O'Toole has been signed to play the lama in a three-hour television film of Rudyard Kipling's "Kim" for CBS.

Ravi Sheth of Bombay, India, will play the title role of the sun-tanned Irish lad who is mistaken for an Indian.

Producer Mark Shelmerdine announced extensive sets will be built in India, including castles, Russian camps, a Shalgh village, inns, bazaars, palaces, railroad stations and barracks.

Sound Studio's Rafter Shaken

LYNDEN, Wash. (AP) — In a bucolic northwestern Washington setting, cows graze, tall trees wave in the breeze — and the heavy metal sound of the thundering rock group Bachman Turner Overdrive has been shaking the rafters of a barn.
BTO, which has sold 13 million records since 1973, is knocking out a new album amid the quiet farmlands and woods north of Lynden.
Now in their late 30s, Randy Bachman, his brother Tim, Fred Turner and Barry Peterson, the original Guess Who drummer, are working in a sound studio built in a barn on about 30 new songs written by Randy Bachman and Turner over the past few years.

Ritter Honored With A Star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian-actor John Ritter has become the 1,768th entertainment celebrity to be honored on Hollywood's Walk of Fame, with a star next to the one dedicated to his late father, singing cowboy Tex Ritter.

About 250 fans crowded around Hollywood Boulevard near Cherokee for ceremonies emceed Wednesday by honorary Hollywood mayor Johnny Grant and Hollywood Chamber of Commerce president Bill Welsh.

Ritter, 35, his actress wife Nancy Morgan and their children Jason and Carly were also on hand for the dedication, as was Richard Klein from the set of "Three's Company," on which Ritter has been a regular for eight years.

N.C. Symphony Musicians Approve Contract Terms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ending eight months of negotiations, North Carolina Symphony musicians and management agreed on a new three-year contract and said they were ready to return "to the business of making music." The 66-member orchestra voted Wednesday to accept the contract hammered out by negotiators hours earlier. Symphony trustees were expected today to ratify the pact, under which musicians would get a 4 percent pay increase.

"Both sides have worked long and hard to arrive at this resolution," Executive Director Thomas H. McGuire Jr. said Wednesday after the agreement was announced.

"We believe the contract we have molded reflects the interests of musicians, management and the people of North Carolina. We now look forward to returning to the business of making music."

Officials announced that rehearsals would begin immediately. The 1983-84 season, delayed by the impasse, will start Saturday with a pops concert in Southern Pines. Educational concerts in Edgecombe County and evening performances in Manteo are scheduled for next week.

Musicians and management had met through Tuesday night in an attempt to settle the dispute. After a bargaining session ended early Wednesday morning, the musicians' six-member negotiating committee voted to accept management's offer.

"I'm very relieved that the organization is on its feet again," said Terry W. Mizesko, a musician representative. "It, of course, is not what either side wanted. There's going to be a huge element of trust on our part."

Talks on the new pact had been stalled by differences in four areas: pay, work and travel arrangements, job security and the selection process for the symphony's conductor.

The two sides agreed on a 4 percent pay hike after management initially sought a wage freeze and musicians asked for a 10 percent raise.

Other compromises set a more flexible work and travel schedule.

An appeals committee of 13 musicians will still be able to make a recommendation after the symphony conductor decides to fire a player for "musical reasons."

However, the appeals panel will not make the final decision as in the past. Instead, an arbitration committee will rule when the conductor and appeals group cannot agree.

Under the contract, the decision on hiring the conductor will be made by a committee of three symphony board members, two musicians and two outside parties.

One issue that remained unsettled was the orchestra's size, as management refused to commit itself to specific increases in the number of musicians. Also unresolved were minor issues such as a pension plan and personnel manager.

Pay Cable Networks Reduce Film Choice

NEW YORK (UPI) — Like economist Milton Friedman, HBO President Frank Biondi believes We the People are happiest when we are free to choose.

So how come programmers last July began duplicating programs on HBO Inc.'s two pay cable networks, Home Box Office and Cinemax?

"Ultimately, the goal of the viewer is the automat approach to TV," Biondi said, referring to those emporiums of the past where all varieties of food were available at the drop of a coin. "But it's technically not possible today."

In the past decade, however, pay TV began to look like the answer. It gave people more control over what they would be watching, the 38-year-old cable executive told a recent breakfast gathering of TV writers.

"And the more control you can build into a household, the happier they are."

"Why do video cassette rentals do very well in multi-pay service homes?" Biondi asked.

"Because they have more money to spend on entertainment," someone ventured, ignoring the rhetorical tone of the question.

"Well, there's that," Biondi said, but he noted that movie cassettes can be rented for just a couple extra dollars — equipment costs aside.

People want to be free to choose.

Then why the duplication, when Time, Inc., parent of HBO, Inc., obviously wants people to buy both HBO and Cinemax?

Biondi first explained that the people who set up the Cinemax schedule also schedule HBO. "They know what's on (at any given time). If you put a comedy on one, you put a drama on the other."

"If you put an action movie against an action movie, you hope it's 2:45 in the morning."

Biondi said the 3-year-old Cinemax and 11-year-old HBO might duplicate two movies a month, at the most.

Of course there was "Star Wars." Everyone jumped at it.

"During the month of February, if you lived in a multi-pay home you probably had the feeling the only thing on was 'Star Wars,'" Biondi admitted.

Turning to the repeated showing of movies on pay TV, Biondi said he believes HBO's 12.5 million viewers and Cinemax' 2.5 million viewers want it that way.

"Certain movies have an enormous ability to allow consumers to drop in and out," he said, citing "Young Doctors in Love," "Rocky III" and "Grease II."

"Chariots of Fire" would be difficult to stop watching after the first half hour, he said, but the others could be watched in segments, allowing viewers to work late, go to that PTA meeting, whatever.

A couple of elements that set Cinemax apart from its sister network is its tendency to use foreign films (HBO, he said, may use six a year while Cinemax might use two a month) and its R-rated shows, Biondi said.

"It (Cinemax) has a late night component which HBO doesn't, although I don't think it will be stepped up."

A new Cinemax program Biondi thinks people clearly will be interested in is "Eros America," which probably will be launched in November.

"It's terrific. The first one is a segment about a topless dancer in a Florida bar. She's also a housewife and mother."

Of course, there will be plenty of footage of the woman dancing, Biondi said. But there also will be voice-overs of her talking about raising children, about how she can make so much more money as a topless dancer than she could as a secretary — lifestyle stuff.

"It's different from what Playboy (cable channel) does," Biondi said.

The second segment follows a fireman who dances at a strip club for women and another features a prostitute.

"This woman could have her own talkshow," Biondi said. "She has some lines ... and I don't think any of it's scripted for her."

At this point, Biondi said, he thinks the show is too long — 47 minutes.

"Some of it makes you feel uncomfortable. You think, 'People don't talk about that too much.' But that's what TV is about."

Biondi said he believes TV audiences have shown they are ready for some of the heavier stuff — language and sex — that is not seen on commercial television.

Self-Repair In Brain Found

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Aged brains may be able to repair themselves, according to Drs. John Sladek and Carol Phelps of the Department of Anatomy at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

They found that severed axons can regrow across scar tissue. Axons are nerve fibers that carry communications between the brain cells. When axons are cut, communications are lost. The Sladek-Phelps research shows that it may be possible to restore communications.

Sladek says, "If we find the factor that stimulates re-growth, perhaps we'll be able one day to produce re-growth of brain tissue at will. The implications for helping the aged are great."

McNamara Speaking His Mind After Long Silence

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — He has no title, no full-time job, no official position. But after 13 years of biting his tongue, Robert McNamara is now "totally unconstrained" and speaking his mind.

It has been two years since McNamara stepped down as president of the World Bank. At 67, he still has that preppy look — tanned, fit, rimless glasses and tailored suit.

"For 13 years at the (World) bank, I bit my tongue time and time again," he said during an interview. "I would like to have made statements with respect to national and international affairs ... but it was quite inappropriate for an international civil servant to be speaking on anything other than his responsibility."

McNamara — secretary of defense and president of Ford Motor Co. before his tenure at the World Bank — was used to managing thousands of people. Today, his only employee is a secretary who sits near his replica of the Albert Einstein Peace Prize, which McNamara received in 1982.

He is a one-man band, beating the drums for those policies he supports and attacking those he opposes. As McNamara puts it, he is "interested in stimulating debate in ways that will lead to changes in policies that I believe should be changed."

His issues: nuclear weapons, developing nations, defense spending.

In recent months, McNamara has spoken out often, holding press conferences and writing articles. Most recently, he addressed nuclear arms in an article published in the fall issue of the influential magazine Foreign Affairs.

He urged the North American Treaty Organization to renounce its current reliance on the threat to use nuclear weapons, which he says are "totally useless."

He said he knew the article would be controversial, which is why he wrote it. Nuclear strategy, he said, has been a "great concern" of his for two decades.

In one day he received requests for 18 radio and television interviews.

"I guess the visibility in part is a function of the fact that I am interested in and have been discussing publicly issues that are of national and international concern," he said.

He was one of the authors of a recent commission report which called for more aid to the Third World, but said those countries must accept "primary responsibility" for their own development.

McNamara opposes President Reagan's defense spending policies and said he has no official contact with the Republican administration.

During the years McNamara headed the Defense Department, some called him the human computer, the dispassionate technocrat with a Harvard MBA who mapped out plans to win the Vietnam War with numbers, charts and objectives.

McNamara, the chief "whiz kid" with a penchant for math and economics, still relies on numbers when he talks. But he likes to stress the human element. He urges compassion in dealing with the Third World, pleading for the developed countries to give more assistance to the world's poorest people. He talks not just of how many nuclear weapons the Americans and the Soviets possess, but of their potentially devastating effect on the world.

And he is sentimental about his wife, Margaret, who died 2½ years ago, calling her one of "God's loveliest creatures." McNamara described how he hiked last summer to a remote campsite in the Colorado Rockies where he had scattered her ashes.

But 15 years after leaving the Pentagon, McNamara has maintained his silence on the Vietnam War. He served as defense secretary between 1961-68 during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

McNamara agreed in advance to be interviewed only on topical subjects, and besides the Vietnam War, he is, for instance, reluctant to give his views on Ford or Detroit's problems.

He said, though, that he's cautiously optimistic about the future of American automakers, and he still drives a Ford — a 1975 Pinto.

McNamara sits on boards of several companies, including Royal Dutch Petroleum and the Washington Post Co. He is associated with the California Institute of Technology, the Brookings Institution, a liberal think-tank, and the Trilateral Commission, a private group of North American, Japanese and West European leaders.

While he doesn't have any one employer, McNamara is keeping busy. In one eight-week period, he said he visited Europe five times, jetting back and forth on the Concorde.

Would he like another big job, another position of power?

"For approximately 40 years I was a CEO (chief executive officer) or the equivalent, and I have no desire at this time to return to that type of activity ... I am not interested in power per se."

Gene Mutation Appears Factor In Lung Cancer

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers at the National Cancer Institute have identified a specific genetic mutation in a lung cancer patient that appears to be a contributing cause of the cancer, but they say that the mutation alone may not be enough to transform normal cells into cancer cells.

Some other genetic alteration appears to be required along with the newly discovered mutation, researchers said this week.

The mutation was found only in the patient's tumor cells, not in normal lung tissue — compelling evidence that it is involved in the cancer process, the researchers said.

Previous studies in the laboratory had suggested that the mutation might cause cancer, but this is believed to be the first confirmation of those results in a patient, the scientists said.

"The fact that normal cells from a patient don't have the mutation is an important point," Stewart Aaronson of the cancer institute said.

He is one of the researchers who studied the mutation in the laboratory. The studies with the patient were done by Mariano Barbacid, also of the cancer institute.

"In my opinion, I think it validates all the work that has been done in cancer genetics" until now," Barbacid said in a telephone interview.

There are several reasons why the mutation alone might not change normal cells into cancer cells.

For one thing, Aaronson said, the odds are that such a mutation occurs hundreds of times in the first year of an infant's life. If cancer appeared every time the mutation did, no one would survive into adulthood.

Robert Weinberg at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who first discovered the mutation in the laboratory, said some other predisposing factor could be inherited. "Many people smoke, but only some get cancer," he said.

Weinberg has also done laboratory studies that show that at least two genetic alterations are needed to cause cancer.

Barbacid announced his discovery at a recent scientific meeting at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York. Because it has not yet appeared in a scientific journal, he declined to discuss it beyond repeating what he said at the meeting.

Researchers caution that it will be years before the discovery leads to a new lung cancer treatment.

The mutation occurs in what is known as a cancer gene or oncogene, a bit of genetic material related to the development of cancer. Some two dozen of these genes have been identified.

The genes are found in all animals and in humans in a dormant form. Some scientists refer to the dormant forms as "proto-oncogenes." They can be triggered to cause cancer either by a rearrangement of their position relative to other genes or, as in this case, by a mutation.

The cancer gene found in the lung cancer patient is called the H-ras gene. Like all genes, it consists of a long chain of thousands of molecules strung together. The mutation that activates the H-ras gene to cause cancer involves a change in just one of those thousands of molecules.

The change can occur at either of two specific points, two "hot spots" on the genes. When it is found in a tumor it occurs in virtually every cell in the tumor, Aaronson said.

"That mutation must have been important in the process (of cancer formation) or else all tumor cells wouldn't have had it," Aaronson said.

The finding that the mutation does not exist in the patient's normal tissue also indicates that the mutation was not inherited, but that it occurred during the patient's lifetime, Aaronson said.

The mutation itself might have been caused by radiation exposure or by a chemical carcinogen, he said. Both radiation and carcinogens are known to disrupt genetic material.

Public Comment To Be Invited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department has decided to seek public comment on a broad range of proposals concerning automobile safety, rather than focus on specific options such as mandatory automatic seat belts or air bags in all new cars.

The government has been told by the U.S. Supreme Court to re-examine the so-called passive restraint rule, which would require automatic seat belts or air bags. A lower court said the department's 1981 attempt to scrap the rule was illegal.

Transportation officials say the rule planned for next month will include a broad range of options and not focus on any particular way to deal with the controversial passive restraint issue.

Blasts Suit Over Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Author Kitty Kelley is drawing comparisons between the Pentagon Papers case and a $2 million lawsuit filed against her by a company representing singer Frank Sinatra.

Camden Enterprises, a Nevada company that is the proprietor of Sinatra's name, is seeking to prevent Ms. Kelley from putting out a book on the life of the 67-year-old entertainer, Ms. Kelley says.

The suit, filed last week in Santa Monica Superior Court, contends Ms. Kelley falsely claimed that her project had Sinatra's approval.

It seeks $2 million punitive damages and an injunction preventing her from "making false or misleading statements" to obtain interviews for the book.

"The whole idea is prior restraint," said Ms. Kelley in a telephone from her Washington, D.C. office. "The last time someone tried this was when (former) President Nixon tried to get an injunction versus the New York Times and the Washington Post for the Pentagon Papers."

"This is what they do to writers in Russia," she said. The suit contends publicity surrounding Ms. Kelley's unauthorized book would reduce the value of a planned authorized biography.
