Tropical Storm Broke Up On Hitting Virginia Coast

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

Tropical Storm Dean, pushed by 60 mph winds that whipped waves and eroded North Carolina beaches, washed up against Virginia's Eastern Shore today and quickly broke apart without causing major damage.

Forecasters had predicted local flooding and up to 4 inches of rain as Dean bore northwestward across Chesapeake Bay and inland Virginia. But by 8 a.m., the rain in Norfolk had turned into drizzle and the winds dropped to 40 mph.

"It's sort of broken up," said Jack Main, weather forecaster in Norfolk. "It's dissipating rapidly. I can't even see it on the radar."

Meanwhile, an off-again on-again tropical storm in the Pacific named Narda was expected to pass well south of the Hawaiian Islands.

Preceded by squalls with near hurricane-force winds, Dean hit land at 7:15 a.m. EDT between Cape Charles and Onancock, on the peninsula that hangs from the lower end of Maryland and forms Virginia's Eastern Shore.

At 9 a.m., it was in the northern Chesapeake Bay, moving northwest at 10 mph and weakening. Norfolk received one-half inch of rain and Richmond received 1.29 inches.

The storm had meandered up the Eastern seaboard most of Thursday, slowing considerably by midnight, and hit land farther north than expected.

Storm preparations in Tidewater Virginia cities were, for the most part, unnecessary. The storm caused a little street flooding in low-lying areas and blew some sand along the beach, but otherwise little damage was reported.

"We of course had erosion and there were a couple of areas on the beach where the water came up pretty high," said

Paulette Vaughan, a Sandbridge resident. "... But it's unbelievably calm down here this morning."

As Dean passed along the North Carolina coast, more than 100 campers were urged to leave Ocracoke Island and Cape Hatteras after State Route 12 was flooded. The road runs along the spine of North Carolina's Outer Banks, linking Nags Head with Ocracoke.

Some campers remained, however, despite 35 mph winds that yanked stoplights taut, swept sea foam into the air and caused minor property damage. And a few people threw parties on the beaches.

"We're not really worried," said Buster Greene of Lenoir, N.C., vowing not to halt his annual fishing trip to Oregon Inlet even as howling winds rocked his camper. "Maybe we won't sleep as much tonight as we wanted to, but it's not so awful bad. We hope to be back out there (fishing) tomorrow."

Clark Running For 3rd Term

Louis Clark, who will complete his second term on the City Council in December, announced that he will be a candidate for a third two-year tenure in the Nov. 8 local elections.

The incumbent, a native of Greenville, was first elected to the council in 1979 and ran third in an 11-candidate field two years ago as he retained his seat on the board.

"For the past year, Dick McKee and I have co-chaired the Comprehensive Plan Committee and as of this week, we have formed an economic development corporation to implement the revitalization of the heart of our city," Clark said. "My primary interest is seeing that the City Council continues to support this effort."

Clark graduated from Greenville High School in 1950 and received his pre-law degree in 1955 from East Carolina University, majoring in social studies and economics and minoring in business.

He worked with his father

Nancy's Weight Loss Said Due To Worry

NEW YORK (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, usually a size 6, is down to size 2 — the smallest regular size for women's clothes — but says her weight loss has been caused by worry and not by illness, a columnist reported today.

Mrs. Reagan, in a telephone interview Thursday with syndicated society columnist "Suzy," writing in the New York Daily News, said she was in bed with the first cold she'd had "in years."

"I know that people are saying that there is something really wrong with me, but there isn't," Mrs. Reagan was quoted as saying.

She said her weight loss began "when Ronnie was shot. Then my father, whom I loved dearly, died after being sick for six months. I had to tell my mother he was dead, which was one of the hardest things I ever had to do."

In addition, she said, her mother has been sick in Phoenix and "I can't see her as often as I want to."

"When some people worry, they run for food and eat and eat. I eat, I always have, but no matter what I do, I lose. This has happened to me before. But I'm trying," Mrs. Reagan said.

She said she has cookies by her bed, and "I plan to keep nibbling cookies until I'm my normal size 6 again."

"My doctor has given me a complete clean bill of health.

I just called him and told him I was drinking a milkshake. He said, 'Now that wasn't so hard, was it?'"

"I think people believe that when one occupies this position, life is all roses and glamour and there are no worries. How I wish I were one of those people who never lets anything show on her face. Everything shows on mine," she said.

Leading Indicators Decline 0.1 Percent

By PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic strength fell 0.1 percent last month, the Commerce Department said today. It was the first decline in a year and another sign of future slowing in the economy. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the slide was "no cause for concern," adding that a few monthly declines are a normal part of the transition from the quick growth in the first stages of a recovery.

The forecasting gauge, the department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of a dozen forward-pointing statistics covering manufacturing, employment, prices and other areas.

In a recent report on the gross national product, the government estimated that the economy in the third quarter was slowing to a still-strong 7 percent annual growth rate after racing at a heated 9.7 percent rate in the April-June period.

And since the leading index is designed to show economic changes that will occur in future months, today's report appeared to be another signal that growth will slacken for the remainder of the year and into next year.

The department also revised July's index to show a 0.8 percent advance instead of the previously reported 0.3 percent gain. Still, July's showing was much weaker than earlier this year, when strong gains of 3.1 percent in January, 1.7 percent in February and 2 percent in March foreshadowed the vigorous economic growth in the second and third quarter of the year.

Private and government economists have welcomed the economic slowdown as further insurance against a heat-up in inflation and interest rates, which could dampen the recovery.

Today's decline was the first since the 0.1 slide in August 1982 and worse than Baldrige had predicted. He said last month that future months would likely show increases of 0.5 percent to 1 percent — figures he said would be "consistent with the sustained economic recovery we would like to see."

Today's report said four of the 10 available indicators declined in August, with formation of new businesses contributing the most to the drop. An increase in average weekly initial claims for unemployment also pulled it down, as did declines in building permits and stock prices.

Components which improved during the month were the length of the workweek, manufacturers' new orders for goods and materials, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, the price of sensitive materials, the money supply and the speed with which vendors deliver goods.

Two components were not available, changes in inventories on hand and changes in consumer and business borrowing.

Dear Abby

Make, Dress Bed: Small Need To Discuss

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I are having a difference of opinion. Does a person "make a bed" or "dress a bed"? Please settle it.

FOR ACCURACY IN SPEECH

DEAR FOR ACCURACY: Speech is a method of communicating a thought or idea. Speech at its best is communicating simply and clearly.

When someone says, "I'll make the bed," I understand what the person means. "I'll dress the bed" sounds pretentious. (One dresses himself, a doll or a chicken.)

The word "make" is used in any number of ways: to make believe, make do, make good, make book, make fun, make eyes, make sport, make hay, make love, make waves, and to make a mountain out of a molehill, of which this is a dandy example.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've never seen in your column. "Bobby" and I have lived together (happily) for three years. He's a beautiful, caring man, and I know he loves me, but he won't marry me for a reason you're not going to believe. He's afraid of the blood test.

Ever since he was a young boy he's been terrified of needles — so much that he hasn't been to a doctor for 10 years.

I'm pregnant now, and Bobby is delighted. Our child will have his name, but I won't. I hate the thought of being an unwed mother, but we can't get married unless Bobby takes a blood test, and he has flat-out refused.

What should I do? Don't suggest that Bobby see a shrink. He's been seeing one for five months about another problem, but he refuses to tell his shrink about his fear of needles.

NO MRS. IN MANHATTAN

DEAR NO MRS.: An ultimatum is in order. Tell Bobby that if he doesn't tell his "shrink" about his needle phobia and how it is affecting his life and yours, you will. Has that "beautiful, caring man" ever considered hypnosis for a painless blood test? Suggest it.

DEAR ABBY: Help! I, too, need to "get out of the closet." My secret? My sin? I hate dogs! I must confess, I despise dogs! All kinds. When I see a dog lick the hands or face of a child, I get ill just thinking about where that dog's nose has been. And when I see a grown person walking a dog, then stop and stand there while the dog deposits a filthy mess — always on someone else's property — I wonder how that person can look in a mirror.

I could never hurt an animal, but I would gladly sterilize every dog in this world. Just imagine, a world free of dog filth, free of barking, yelping, growling — free of the stench of dog urine! Our children could play on the grass without stepping into a foul mess.

And please don't tell me that a dog is man's best friend, Abby. Is that the best man can do?

DOG-TIRED

DEAR DOG-TIRED: There's not enough space on this page to report how much pleasure, companionship, comfort, safety and service dogs have given man over the years.

If a dog is a nuisance for any reason — blame the owner, not the dog!

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Where have all the children gone?

I don't mean the battery-driven ones who spend their days and nights propped up before TVs and computer terminals. Or the 35-year-old minds in children's bodies who operate a microwave oven and have their own door key before they are six. Or the ones who log 10,000 jet miles a year visiting two sets of parents.

I'm talking about the children who used to enjoy a couple of years of doing nothing but discovering things around them, exploring their curiosity, easing into a family and being loved. It had a name. It was called childhood.

It was an important time in which a child could only guess what was across the street, behind the fence, or on the other side of the traffic light. For the moment, he had to know what his home was all about and how safe he felt and that no matter what, it would always be there and feel the same way.

Where have the children gone? They've passed Childhood and proceeded directly to Adulthood. Realistically, that's where all the action is today anyway.

Who wants to be a child anymore? There isn't a day goes by that kids aren't blamed for interfering with jobs, marriage and life. There isn't a day goes by that you don't see a sign on an apartment that says, "No Children or Pets Allowed." Children cost more to raise than a condo in Palm Beach. Their worth as an income tax deduction has dropped within the last 10 years. Child care centers are near the bottom of priorities in this country.

Indeed, their very right to be born is in jeopardy.

Small children... more than any other single

Coventure Has Grant From Duke Endowment

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's Nurse Transition Program, known as Coventure, has received a grant from The Duke Endowment for $50,250 for the coming year.

The grant represents the first part of a three-year commitment by The Duke Endowment for the initiation of the program. The Endowment has earmarked $49,500 to the program in 1984 and $47,500 in 1985, provided funds are available. Applications for similar grants to two other institutions are pending.

The only program of its kind in North Carolina, Coventure originated two years ago as a collaborative effort of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Eastern Area Health Education Center, and the local schools of nursing at East Carolina University and Pitt Community College.

"The program was designed to orient new nurses to the highly acute, fast-paced hospital environment," Virginia Tate, nursing education coordinator at PCMH and director of the Coventure Project, said. "Nursing schools prepare nurses to be generalists. We have to prepare them to work in specialty areas in a very short period of time." Young nurse graduates frequently find that their educational experience did not adequately prepare them for the realities of hospital experience," Tate said. "As a result, we lost a number of new nurses who cannot cope with what we call 'reality shock'."

Initial research conducted by the Coventure group during 1980-81 showed that 103 nurses resigned from PCMH during that year. Through exit interviews and surveys, it was found that 40 percent of those who voluntarily ended their employment would have been potential targets for retention efforts.

In addition to the retention problem, Pitt Memorial's rapid growth over the last several years has necessitated increased recruitment of nurses to fill jobs created by hospital expansion. The need to recruit and retain nurses prompted the four agencies to propose a model nurse retention program which could then be duplicated throughout the state.

A 6-month pilot program was initiated in 1982 through funding by Eastern AHEC and the hospital. Coventure offered 117 new nurses an orientation program which focused on developing clinical competency, assisting the adjustment to the staff nurse role, and teaching the new nurse the workings of the hospital system.

Clinical competency is developed through self-directed testing in learning laboratories and later in the clinical setting under the direction of clinical instructors, according to Tate.

"We have had a very positive response from the nurses who participated in the pilot program," she said. "We are already seeing improvement in our recruitment and retention."

The funding from The Duke Endowment will enable the group to purchase equipment and expand and develop educational programs, she said. "The grant will allow us to expand the program from six months to one year," she added. "We have been operating only a skeleton of the full program. Now we will be able to develop the total concept."

Coventure reaches beyond PCMH. The hospital hopes to share what has been learned here with other hospitals in Eastern North Carolina and eventually throughout the state. The educational methods used in the transition program will be disseminated by Eastern AHEC to hospitals in this area. In addition, research findings concerning how nurses acquire skills and adjust to the hospital environment may assist area nursing schools evaluate and revise their curricula."

Salads Vary Throughout Country

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer
Our forebears sprinkled salt on fresh greens and called it salad. Today most versions of this dish are a good deal more complicated. Over the years, cooks have added a wide variety of ingredients including fruits, vegetables, herbs, meat, cheese and fish, cooked or raw. But simple lettuce salad is still popular. Cookbooks offer everything from a mixture of lettuce, salt and lemon to a chef's salad, filled with bits of ham, tongue, cheese, turkey, anchovies and hard-boiled eggs.

Depending on their ingredients, salads range from appetizer to main course. But in different regions, cooks serve them at different points in the meal. On the West Coast, the simpler salads lead off the meal, but in many other parts of the country, they are often served with or after the main course.

Whether they be a main course, a shimmering jellied creation, a succulent side dish, or cold fruit mixture, salads are usually topped off with any of a wide selection of dressings, from a vinegar and oil mixture to combinations of sour cream, bacon bits, pureed avocado and a host of other ingredients, some flavored with wine.

One of the tastiest creations, in my opinion, is that combination of croutons, anchovy bits and greens known as Caesar Salad. Many chefs and restaurant owners have claimed to be the originators of this salad, and perhaps some contributed to its perfection over the years. But it is generally agreed that the salad was created in Tijuana, Mexico, in the 1920s at a restaurant called Caesar's.

Here's a recipe for the salad.

- 1 garlic clove
- 3/4 cup olive oil
- 2 cups croutons made from stale bread
- 12 romaine leaves
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 egg yolk
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 8 anchovy filets, chopped into bits, or teaspoon anchovy paste
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Mary Todd Lincoln May Have Had PMS

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mary Todd Lincoln, Lizzie Borden and Joan Crawford are among famous women who may have suffered from premenstrual syndrome, a psychiatrist speculates in a new book.

Dr. Ronald Norris, who opened the nation's first PMS clinic in Boston in 1981 and this year started clinics in Chapel Hill and Houston, says he authored "PMS" because so little is known about the disorder.

"This book is a celebration of women," said the Chapel Hill resident in an interview. "It is also a book about pain."

Many women carry on in the home and workplace despite their agony, he said. "And that's why we decided to do this because that's the story that wasn't being told."

Norris and former New York Times reporter Colleen Sullivan collaborated on the book, which says PMS is a biological disorder that can cause mental and physical problems during the premenstrual phase.

Crying spells, fatigue, weakness, migraine headaches, abdominal bloating, craving for sweet and salty foods and many other symptoms are common to PMS sufferers, Norris said.

"Some women will feel very depressed and very suicidal during that period," he said. "Some women just can't concentrate." Still others say they experience surges of energy and strength.

Nearly seven million American women or 5 to 10 percent of all women suffer from the disorder. They may range in age from 13 to 45.

Norris said his interest in the problem is heightened by the fact that his wife, Judy, has it.

About nine years ago, Norris began noticing the mood changes, unexplained weight gain and other problems his wife encountered each month about a week before her menstrual cycle began.

Mrs. Norris, a nurse, managed to keep her problems from interfering with her work but instead unleased temper tantrums and verbal abuse on her family.

"I coped, but I felt badly inside," she said. "Women with PMS don't always see it. It's sort of a hidden illness."

Norris, 43, had studied about PMS in the late 1960s when he was a fellow at the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology in Massachusetts, where the birth control pill was developed. But Norris said he didn't know the significance of the disorder then.

Mrs. Norris acknowledged she had PMS only after she and her daughter were injured in a four-car pileup that occurred when she couldn't focus and lost control.

Prompted by his personal experiences and his belief that little treatment was offered to PMS sufferers, Norris opened his clinics with help from his wife. Shortly thereafter, a publisher asked him to write his book.

"PMS still doesn't have much credibility in physicians' eyes — they want others to deal with it," said Mrs. Norris.

Mrs. Norris said she suspects her grandmother, who chased people with heavy railroad ties just before her periods, suffered from PMS.

She said many women won't admit they might have PMS for fear "they're going to be tagged as crazy," while those who seek help encounter obstacles.

There's no scientifically accepted treatment, although progesterone has been found to be effective in relieving PMS symptoms for some women, Norris said. For women with less severe symptoms, a change in lifestyle such as altering the diet, taking vitamins or exercise may help greatly, he said.

The cause of the disorder has not been determined, although "the most elegant theory" is that a bad connection between parts of the brain that govern voluntary and involuntary functions is responsible, Norris said.

"The best researchers — the real critical thinkers — are now starting to get involved in PMS," he said, adding that money for research is a problem.

Puberty, pregnancy and tubal ligations sometimes appear to trigger PMS, while most women find their symptoms stop with menopause.

Norris is trying to increase public awareness of PMS so more women will seek help.

Women with PMS often have been misdiagnosed or ignored, and some people view the disorder as simply "the nature of the creature," he said.

"It's going to take a long time before PMS sits in the mainstream of American medicine," Mrs. Norris said. "PMS is not a disorder for malingerers — women want treatment, not more excuses."

Matter Of Fact

What is happening in the airline industry?

Many of the major airlines seem to be drowning in a sea of red ink and Continental Airlines began reorganizing under federal bankruptcy laws recently. It laid off two thirds of its workers, cut salaries and reduced its routes.

Eastern Airlines, one of the oldest and best known in the nation, may follow if its workers do not agree to a 15 percent pay cut.

Some of the airline unions are maintaining the drastic action is only a way of whipping unionized workers in line. Certainly there is general unhappiness with taking pay cuts.

What has happened is that airlines have been allowed to become competitive in their ticket pricing. Newer airlines often have lower labor costs than do the more familiar names of the air lanes. It is simple arithmetic that with competitive pricing for air fares the airline with the lower labor cost is the one that will be more profitable.

Where will it all lead? Clearly no one knows at this point. Obviously, there is great public demand for air travel. Some surviving airlines will provide that service. It is simply a stark fact that employees of some airlines with higher salary ranges will have to share in bringing down overall costs or risk losing their jobs through shutdowns.

Heartstopper Ahead

On the whole, if someone else was to win the America's cup, it is rather satisfying to many people that the team from Australia took the trophy.

As a people, the Aussies have a lot of traits Americans like to think they still possess, and their love for sports is as strong as that of any NFL rooster, or baseball fan — or even the U.S. tennis addict. Sportsmanship, the old-fashioned kind, is another quality we know about on this side of the world and which is commonly practiced Down Under.

Maybe the America's Cup was retained by the New York Yacht Club too long. Its retention became almost an obsession, and over the years there has been talk some races were won as much on dry land as in the waters off Newport.

Be that as it may, American pride and Australian pride will be on the line when they compete again a few years from now in Perth. That should be a heartstopper.

Second Term

WASHINGTON — The remote prospect that Ronald Reagan will not seek a second term stems not from his own state of mind and body but from his wife Nancy's, in the opinion of insiders.

One of the president's important political advisers sets the probability of a second term bid at 99.5 percent and attributes the 0.5 percent doubt factor solely to the first lady. "I think the president is in better shape today than he was before he was shot," the adviser told us. "It's Mrs. Reagan who concerns me."

Of specific concern is the fact the slim first lady has lost so much weight. Insiders say she has had a less pleasant time in the White House than the president. Her three years there have been grievously marked by two events: the assassination attempt on her husband and the death of her father.

In private talk with his top staff, Secretary of State George Shultz insists that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko never had any intention of attending the United Nations General Assembly session where he would confront worldwide anti-Soviet reaction over the Korean airliner shootdown.

The decisions by Govs. Mario Cuomo of New York and Thomas Kean of New Jersey to forbid Gromyko's landing at commercial airports in their states gave the veteran Soviet diplomat an easy pretext for his boycott decision. Shultz wishes the two governors had kept out of it, but insists privately that they had nothing to do with Gromyko's decision.

Shultz believes that Gromyko would have cited a "threat" of anti-Soviet riots in Manhattan if he had shown his face at the U.N. But the real reason, according to the secretary of state, would have been his embarrassment over Soviet isolation that would be apparent in the U.N. debate.

Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt is not pleased by the pressure to pin down New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo as the 1984 Democratic National Convention keynoter, and is spreading the word that it is still an open decision.

Operatives close to Manatt say a better national image for the party might come from Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, who, like Cuomo, is a fiery orator, as keynoter. Biden has been wowing party events around the country, most recently New Jersey's state convention. There is also talk at Democratic national headquarters about finding "a strong Southerner" to keynote.

The talk about an alternative to Cuomo has less to do with animosity toward him from Manatt than with the desire for an orderly selection process without being crowded into a quick pick of the New Yorker. Manatt operatives blame the Cuomo-keynoter boom on pollster Pat Caddell (who also counts Biden among his clients).

Financial contributions from the American Jewish community have been pouring into the presidential campaign treasury of Sen. John Glenn ever since his Sept. 13 speech praising Israel to the Foreign Policy Association in New York.

Glenn, running just behind Walter Mondale (a staunch Israeli backer), insists that he said nothing in his speech that he had not said before. According to the senator, pro-Israeli Democrats were simply unaware of his strong record of support for Israel. Nevertheless, eyebrows were raised by his speech, particularly his statement that a U.S. policy of "even-handedness" toward Israel and the Arabs "has all too often meant a tilt against Israel."

Glenn's speech is being mailed to Jewish groups and contributors across the country following what aides called the "spontaneous" pro-Glenn reaction in New York City. However, Democratic political operatives believe the senator's new posture on Israel undercuts his ability to ultimately attract Mondale for pandering to special interests.

Central Intelligence Agency Director William Casey has become second only to national security director William Clark as President Reagan's favored adviser, partly because of Casey's silence at large meetings and his meticulous preparation for his private talks with Reagan.

Casey is known as Mr. Mumble for his performance at National Security Council sessions.

RALEIGH — Earlier this month, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was talking about several education programs he hopes the 1984 General assembly will fund when he was asked the inevitable question: "Is there going to be a big surplus in June?"

Green smiled in a way that said yes but which didn't put him on the record as saying so. Asked again, he conceded, "We'll have a good surplus."

Green isn't the only person in Raleigh who is watching the revenue reports every month. After two reports in the 1983-84 fiscal year, people are beginning to whisper about a good healthy surplus in June that the Legislature could use for new education programs and for raises for teachers and state employees.

But go down to Gov. Jim Hunt's offices and the mood is one of caution. Sure the figures look a lot better than they did last year, Hunt's people say. But they can be misleading.

For the record, state revenues are running 12.73 percent ahead of their pace during the first two months of last year. That's a mighty impressive figure when compared to some of the reports last winter that showed only a percentage or two of growth.

John A. Williams Jr., state budget officer, says we have to keep a couple of things in mind when we look at those figures. First, they're not really very much above the projected growth that the budget is based upon. Second, there are a number of economists who're predicting that the federal deficit is about to kill the economic recovery, which, in turn, would kill state revenues.

"At this pace, we'll break even" at the end of the year, Williams said. "We must do better to have more money for new programs."

The Legislature balanced this year's budget by predicting that revenues would grow by 8.2 percent and by raising taxes by $90 million which is equal to growth of 3 percent. So, if revenues increase by 11.2 percent annually, Williams says, the budget will be balanced. But, to really balance the budget, the state has to collect another $30 million — now we're up to 12.2 percent of revenue growth — or else a Senate-sponsored deficit financing program is implemented.

That leads Williams to say, "I don't see a great windfall coming in at this time." No big surplus this year to pay for new programs next year.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary, adds more pessimism: "Don't forget the drought." It's taken $430 million out of farm income and that will have reverberations throughout the economy — including state revenues.

Politically, it is the duty of the governor's people to urge caution. If they let expectations get too high, Hunt would suffer if a large surplus doesn't materialize.

Despite the official gloom, there are reasons to expect a surplus next June and money for legislators to spend. First, Hunt has cut allocations to all departments by 5 percent. Williams calculates that that move will save $120 million. Second, the 1984-85 budget is based on revenue growth of only 5 percent. No doubt the Legislature in June will jack up that projection and create instant money to spend.

So, even if revenues increase this year's budget, legislators next summer would have some big money to play with. There'll be the $120 million Hunt didn't spend. And for each point they'd be willing to increase the 1984-85 revenue projection, another $30 million.

Jimmy Green had some reason to smile. Williams will probably smile, too, if the recovery continues.

"OH, NO! HE'S RUN OUT OF TREES!!"

—James Kilpatrick—

Watt Will Be Jettisoned

for arousing antagonism. In this event he won all the blue ribbons. At the merest mention of his name, the Audubon Society raised all its hackles. Watt has added years to the life of Gaylord Nelson, chairman of the Wilderness Society; one word from Watt and Nelson's adrenals start pumping. It is sad to reflect on how sorely the professional conservationists will miss Jim Watt. Who will they have to kick around now?

President Reagan will miss him also. Watt has provided a sturdy bridge to a Western constituency of great importance to the Reagan administration. He has been a loyal lieutenant, obedient to the president's spoken and unspoken wishes. Such aides are hard to come by. They cannot be abandoned without sorrow, as Jimmy Carter discovered with Bert Lance and Richard Nixon discovered with John Ehrlichman and Bob Haldeman.

But good executives learn in their cradles that affection and sentiment have their limits. Watt crossed beyond these limits in his recent unfunny description of an ideally balanced commission on coal leasing: "We have every kind of mix you can have. I have a black, I have a woman, two Jews, and a cripple." The television cameras showed Watt giggling at what he supposed was wit. In the White House, we may imagine the president breathing a prayer that dates from the time of Louis XIV: "May God protect me from my friends. I can take care of my enemies myself."

It was the last straw. Watt repeatedly has embarrassed his president over the past two years. It is not so much a matter of what he has done; it is more a matter of political insensitivity that reaches mountainous proportions. In the privacy of an unbugged hotel room, politicians historically have talked of religious and ethnic balances on their tickets and public commissions. Some of the sanctimonious denunciations of Watt's remark carry the sulphurous whiff of hypocrisy at its most noisome degree. But never have I heard of ticket-balancing in terms of "a cripple." This was beyond explanation or excuse; it cannot be retrieved by apology.

And this is the unfortunate thing: Foot-in-mouth disease, once severely contracted, is almost incurable. Here in Washington, the general assumption is that Ronald Reagan will seek re-election. Let us suppose, to be supposing, that it was not in September of 1983 but rather in September of 1984 that Reagan's good friend, the secretary of the interior, appeared at a public affair covered by network television. "We have every kind of mix you can have. I have a black, I have a woman..."

The metaphor of the loose cannon comes from the days of sailing ships, when a ton of iron, loosed from its shackles, could smash a bulkhead to splinters. In the same fashion, Watt's reckless and uncontrolled tongue could cause damage beyond repair. So long, Jim, it's been good to know you.

Strength For Today

There are all sorts of fears — some are good, some not so good, and some bad. The fear that one would have of poisonous snakes, of a friend with a lying tongue, or a reckless driver, are all real fears.

Fear is an emotion conferred upon us by nature to make us aware of the things that would harm us. Without these fears, much of mankind might by now have perished.

There is a fear, also, which might better be termed suspicion, and is best represented, perhaps, by the statement we so often hear, "These people have it in for me."

But the worst type of fear is morbid fear, often stemming from unfortunate childhood experiences. This is the brooding type of fear which causes one to lie awake at night thinking about things which will probably never happen — incurable diseases, accident and disaster to loved ones.

We should train our emotions as we train our minds, and learn to reject as inconsequential such morbid fears.

Saving Will Be Easier

a bank or other institution can offer any interest rate it wants on any size account that runs for 31 days or more.

Up until now, the government set a minimum size for these accounts, and specified the rules under which interest rates on the accounts were determined. You bought, say, a six-month certificate with a $2,500 minimum, even if you really would have rather had a one-year certificate in a smaller amount.

With deregulation, that deal you would have preferred should now be available. In fact, at some institutions it's quite possible that you will be able to tailor the package to your precise needs.

"Some institutions may allow savers to specify the term they desire — and then the institution will respond with the rate it will pay for that term," says the U.S. League of Savings Institutions. "In this manner, savers could have accounts mature when major expenses come due — a tuition or tax payment, the down payment on a house or car, or any other purpose."

The change is mandated by the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee or DIDC, a group of government regulatory officials organized under a 1980 law to oversee the step-by-step deregulation of banking.

In practice, the transformation of time accounts will likely take a while to accomplish, and just how far it goes will be determined by financial institutions' marketing departments as they compete for your business.

A key provision of the change is the softening of the legendary "substantial penalty for early withdrawal." In the past, an institution was required to charge a penalty of three months' interest if a saver withdrew money early from a certificate maturing in a year or less, and six months' interest on those with maturities of a year or more.

Now the minimum penalties are reduced to one month's interest, for maturities of a year or less, and three months' interest for maturities of a year

Tennessee Cave Holds Pre-History Footprints

PALL MALL, Tenn. (AP) — Moist clay and a constant 55-degree temperature are believed responsible for preserving footprints of prehistoric humans for some 4,500 years in a Tennessee cave, scientists say.

The footprints were found along with the remains of several extinct animals in the mammoth Blowing Cave near this Cumberland Plateau town.

Although the discovery was made several years ago, scientists discouraged publicity for fear vandals might destroy valuable archeological data.

Information about the find was only recently released in a report by Dr. Patty Jo Watson of Washington University in St. Louis, Louise Robbins of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and Ronald Wilson of the University of Louisville.

A total of 269 individual prints have been mapped in the eight miles of underground cavern already explored, the report says.

The scientists found "skeletal remains of several extinct, nonhuman mammalian species, as well as the unique record of a cave trip made 4,500 years ago by nine human explorers," the report says.

Scattered bits of charcoal believed to be from torches used by the early explorers were dated at 2500 B.C., the report says.

At least five men, two women and a child were in the group, which apparently was seeking mineral salts to use for medicines, the scientists believe.

Some wore moccasins and others were barefoot as they explored the cave, apparently using the same entrance and passages as the scientists, the report says.

According to radiocarbon dating at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, non-human vertebrae remains found in the cave are from 10,000 to 35,000 years old, it says.

Skeletal remains of at least two jaguars, which compare favorably with remains of other fossil jaguars found in Tennessee, have been found.

The remains of the larger jaguar, believed to be a male, have been given to the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh. It and a smaller female skeleton were found in 1976.

The cave is in Pickett County, located about 70 miles northwest of Knoxville along the Tennessee-Kentucky line, near the home of legendary World War I hero Sgt. Alvin York.

Have 'Suspect' For Terrorism

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A woman whose family has been terrorized by two firebombings, assaults in their home and the burning of a pet dog believes her 16-year-old daughter's ex-boyfriend is responsible.

"He says if he can't have Sherry Teresa, ain't nobody gonna have her," Canary Dedeaux, 36, said of the unidentified 22-year-old who broke up with her daughter a year ago.

Police Lt. Robert Delano said Thursday several warrants have been issued for the man since the violence began Sept. 13. Ms. Dedeaux and her common-law husband have sent Sherry and her sister away for their safety, and at least one person stays up each night to watch for the attacker, she said.

Japan Cuts Back Debris Search

By JILL HENDRICKSON
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Japan today abandoned the search for wreckage from the downed South Korean jetliner along Japan's northern coast, but its vessels kept up the effort near the Soviet island of Sakhalin — where U.S. and Soviet ships also still were searching.

"We haven't recovered anything for the past six days and we believe no more aircraft debris or victims' belongings will be found along the coast," said Marine Safety Agency spokesman Hidenobu Yukisada.

He said there was no progress in the search for the flight recorders from the airliner, but that 37 boats from the Soviet Union, the United States and Japan continued the search in the Sea of Japan, off tiny Moneron island near Sakhalin.

Yukisada said 574 items, including parts of five bodies, were recovered by the 210 ships, 109 helicopters and lanes and hundreds of police and volunteers on the shore in the month-long search.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry said three members of the International Civil Aviation Organization are scheduled to arrive in Japan on Tuesday to pursue an investigation of the attack on Korean Air Lines Flight 007.

The aircraft, en route from New York to Seoul with a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska, was shot down Sept. 1 with 269 people aboard while flying in Soviet airspace over Sakhalin Island, north of Japan.

The ICAO decided at its recent meeting in Montreal to carry out its own investigation of the air disaster. Among other matters, the team will examine all radio transmissions relating to the flight, and will investigate the plane's course as it was tracked by Japanese radar, the ministry said.

ICAO officials have also visited U.S. search vessels off Sakhalin to observe efforts to locate the plane's wreckage and the flight data and cockpit voice recorders that might explain the Korean aircraft's errant path.

A statement issued by U.S. forces in Japan said today the 7th Fleet vessels continued to search "possible wreckage areas with side-scanning sonar and towed locators." It said the high winds and heavy seas which had impeded the search in recent days have abated, but did not indicate any progress in the search.

The flight recorders emit electronic signals for about 30 days, and Saturday will mark one month since the jetliner was shot down. As the signal grows weaker, the chances of recovering the recorders will decrease.

Lt. Gary Shrout, U.S. Forces Command spokesman, said it was unclear what immediate effect the dying signals will have on the search.

"I don't know the duration of the search at this time," he said. "I have asked for more specific information."

On Saturday, 334 items thought to belong to the passengers will be put on display for families of the victims in Sapporo, the prefectural capital of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, a spokesman for the prefectural government said.

The items, including 18 handed over by the Soviet Union, will be on view for relatives during the next six months, he said. Relatives will be able to claim items belonging to loved ones.

Expelled As Soviet Spy

LONDON (AP) — The British government has ordered the expulsion of Soviet trade delegate Vasily Ionov — the ninth Soviet official to be expelled in two years.

Soviet Ambassador Viktor I. Popov was summoned to the Foreign Office and "informed that Mr. Ionov had been found to have engaged in activities incompatible with his position," a Foreign Office statement Thursday said. The phrase is diplomatic language for spying.

Officials refused to say if there was any connection between Ionov and Michael John Bettaney, a 33-year-old officer in the British intelligence-gathering agency M15, who was charged 10 days ago with preparing to betray official secrets.

Three weeks ago the Irish government expelled three Soviet officials, including two diplomats, and government sources in Dublin said they had been linked to espionage in Britain and other countries outside Ireland.

See 'Brilliant' Colors For Fall

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
Despite the unusually dry summer weather that baked the state from the coast to the mountains, Blue Ridge Parkway officials say they expect leaf color in the mountains to be brilliant this fall.

U.S. Forest Service biologists say the rainfall and cool nights of the past few weeks should keep leaves on the trees until they change color.

"It was a very dry summer and then all of a sudden, it started raining almost every day," said Forest Service spokesman Wally Culbertson. "We're hoping that late moisture will be enough to carry the leaves through."

"We think it's really going to be a good fall," he added. "Already the maples in the higher elevations are brilliant."

The leaves are expected to hit their colorful peak the second or third weekend in October.

The Blue Ridge Parkway, which runs 469 miles from Wadesboro, Va., to near Cherokee, attracted about 18 million visitors last year. Parkway officials say they expect even more sightseers this year if the colors are bright.

Two months ago, forest officials predicted that the drought that wilted North Carolina crops in the fields also would hamper leaf color. They said the leaves might be so dry they would fall off the trees before turning.

Glenda McDevitt of the parkway office in Asheville said the combination of cool nights, sunny days and a steady amount of rainfall in the mountains has improved the fall color forecast.

"In fact, we're expecting one of the best falls ever," she said. "We're starting to get reports that the color is already starting up high and that it looks really good."

Culbertson said the Forest Service will begin receiving color reports from its stations throughout the mountains this week.

Party Loyalties Decide 'War Powers'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won congressional authority to keep 1,600 U.S. Marines in strife-torn Lebanon for 18 months on a close Senate vote that turned on party loyalty.

The Senate voted 54-46 Thursday to approve the War Powers compromise, a day after the House passed the measure by a wider margin. Several Republicans, including Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, reluctantly voted for the measure out of party loyalty.

"Unfortunately, it became a partisan issue," said Quayle, who added that told Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., "I don't want my vote construed as an endorsement of the president's policies."

Two other Republicans, Mark Andrews of North Dakota and Charles McC Mathias Jr. of Maryland, voted for the measure despite personal reservations. But three others, Mark Hatfield of Oregon, Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and William Roth of Delaware voted against it.

The outcome was in doubt until the end because several Democrats who had indicated they would support the measure voted no, according to Republican sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

In other action, the Senate gave approval on a voice vote to the so-called continuing resolution that will finance the operation of some government agencies until Nov. 10 while Congress works to enact annual appropriations.

Congress has approved only six of the 13 appropriation bills for the 1984 fiscal year, which begins tonight at midnight. Congressional leaders were working today to resolve differences in versions passed by the House and Senate.

A House-Senate conference committee, voted Thursday night to impose new restrictions on the ability of Interior Secretary James Watt to sell offshore oil drilling rights along the nation's outer continental shelf. The panel also voted to prevent Watt from selling coal leases until 90 days after a special commission completes its report on the Interior Department's mineral leasing policies.

A conservative Republican congressman, meanwhile, called on Reagan to fire Watt for last week's remark when he referred to the coal commission members as "a black... a woman, two Jews and a cripple." Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia warned Reagan that the House and Senate are likely to pass no-confidence resolutions against Watt.

"Mr. Watt's sick joke is a slur on millions of Americans," Gingrich said in his letter. "Retaining him in office clearly implies an indifference to or insensitivity about fundamental human decency."

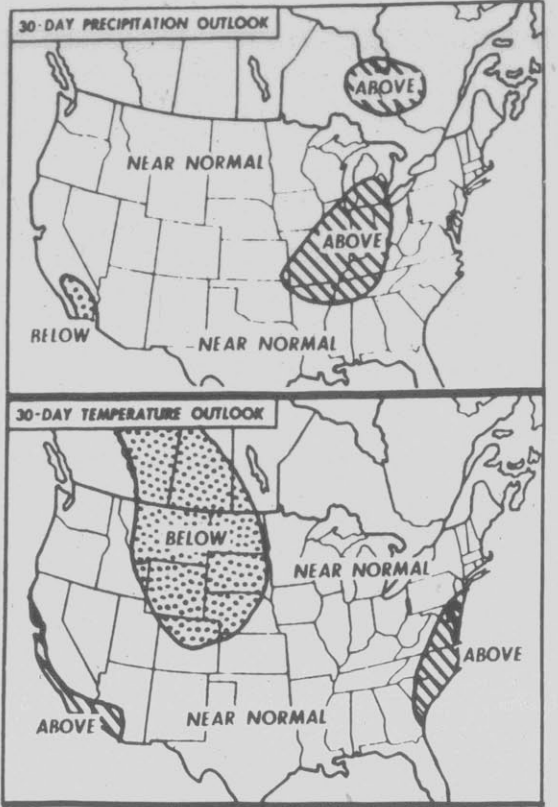

The House, meanwhile, voted 327-92 to extend for 45 days the supplemental unemployment benefits program for nearly 650,000 jobless Americans. Under the extension, idled workers could receive between eight and 16 weeks of supplemental benefits when their state jobless pay runs out. With a different version pending in the Senate, Congress must act by midnight tonight to keep the program alive.

In other action, the House gave final congressional approval to a bill to set up a government radio station to broadcast news to Cuba. On a vote of 301-109, the House approved creation of Radio Marti and authorized $14 million for the 1984 fiscal year and $11 million in the 1985 fiscal year.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, meanwhile, passed a bill extending the requirement that President Reagan certify every six months that El Salvador's rightist government is improving efforts to respect human rights. The certification is needed for continuation of U.S. military aid to the Salvadoran army, which is fighting leftist guerrillas.

A bill making it a federal crime to tamper with consumer products passed the House and was sent to the Senate for final congressional action. The legislation was drafted after seven Chicago-area residents were killed a year ago after taking Tylenol pain-relief medicine laced with cyanide.

Outline Studies For Legislators

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Setting the agenda for the 1983 General Assembly, the Legislative Research Commission has agreed to fund studies of 27 topics ranging from animal pounds to women's needs to hazardous wastes.

The studies, selected Thursday, will be assigned to 25 committees, each consisting of five House and five Senate members.

Traditionally, study committee reports result in a stack of bills that dominate the legislative session at which they're introduced.

The LRC, an interim study group that includes five House and five Senate members, oversees the committees' work to make sure they meet, discuss the required subjects and complete their work on time.

The LRC is led by House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg.

Bills enacted during the legislative session this year authorized the LRC to study up to 47 different subjects and to spend up to $140,000 on the studies.

Fourteen subjects were eliminated because no lawmakers wanted to serve on panels to study them. Four other studies were given to agencies outside the LRC's supervision.

The studies approved and their subject areas are:

— Agriculture: animal pounds and meat mining.

— Education: computer literacy and higher education regulation.

— Environment: hazardous substances, pollution control, water quality and resources.

— Finance: banks and savings and loan and biotechnology.

— Government: incorporations of towns, confidential legislative communications and women's needs.

— Human Resources: aging, public health facilities and day care.

— Insurance: laws.

— Law: district attorneys, statutory liens, farm products securities interest and worthless checks.

— Revenue: laws, state rental housing, user fees at state facilities.

— Transportation: motor vehicle inspection.

Data Indicates Lost Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey sponsored by the Democratic Party shows 28 percent of the nation's voters would cast their ballots to re-elect President Reagan, while 59 percent are willing to consider someone else or replace him.

The survey, done by Democratic pollster Peter D. Hart, also said 42 percent of those responding claimed their taxes had increased during the period, 34 percent said they had "stayed the same" and 18 percent said they had gone down.

FOUND DEAD — Roy Cleveland Sullivan, 71, a retired forest ranger who was listed in the Guinness Book of World Records because he had been hit by lightning seven times, was found dead at his home in Waynesboro, Va., apparently after he shot himself Wednesday, a newspaper said. (AP Laserphoto)

Proposed Airline Pilot Strike 'Last Ditch' Step

By MICHAEL L. GRACYK
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — A proposed nationwide pilots' walkout would be a "last resort" to point up the need for government fare regulation, a pilots leader said, as Continental Airlines pledged to keep flying despite a separate strike called for Saturday.

The executive board of the Air Line Pilots Association gave permission Thursday for its president, Henry

Duffy, to ask pilots if they would support a nationwide shutdown of air transportation. Duffy would determine the timing and length of the shutdown.

Duffy said the walkout would be geared to focus attention on the difficulties airlines have felt since routes and fares were deregulated five years ago. He said it would take several weeks to explain the board's decision to ALPA members and for a vote to be taken.

Once armed with pilots' approval, Duffy said he would ask a congressional committee to set minimum fares for airlines. If Washington ignores the plea, Duffy said he would call a shutdown as a "last resort."

In addition to Continental's filing for reorganization under bankruptcy court protection, Eastern Airlines has said it needs 15 percent wage concessions from workers or it too will seek to reorganize. And Trans World Corp. said it was considering shedding its money-losing Trans World Airlines subsidiary.

Industry officials and workers alike have blamed the red ink in part on the cutthroat competition that followed the government's deregulation of airlines in 1978.

The ALPA board's action closely followed Continental's unions call for a walkout at 3 a.m. CDT Saturday. The airline has cut its work force by two-thirds and slashed the pay of the remaining workers by about 50 percent.

A resolution adopted by Continental's pilots charged the airline with implementing unsafe emergency work rules and engaging in "surface bargaining in a blatant attempt to union bust."

The executive board of the pilots association voted to collect $130 or $140 a month from each of its members to establish a fund for striking Continental employees.

"There's never been a strike benefit like this one in the history of the association," said Larry Baxter, who represented Continental pilots at that meeting.

"There's never been a response like this because there's never been a problem like this."

Flight attendants left the door open for a settlement, said Marilyn Wade, spokeswoman for the Union of Flight Attendants in Los Angeles.

"We are willing to negotiate at any time," Ms. Wade said, adding that the union was willing to grant concessions "that will allow the company to remain profitable and still maintain basic safety, health and seniority guarantees."

Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said the airline's service will be unaffected by the strike. He said the carrier only needs to retain 350 of its 1,435 pilots to keep its planes in the air.

"Many more than enough ... have affirmed to us their willingness to continue flying despite such a call by the union," he said, adding that the airline received similar assurances from flight attendants, although he could provide no figures.

Meanwhile, in Miami, Eastern said Thursday it has agreed to get a second opinion on whether the carrier will have to go to bankruptcy court if employees refuse the pay cut it is urging.

The analysis by the New York banking investment firm of Lazard Freres & Co. was recommended by William J. Usery, Eastern's new labor consultant, who said that while he is convinced Eastern needs an immediate influx of cash, the unions aren't.

"They're (Lazard Freres) going to conduct their own private analysis of our financial projections, our operating results, our numbers," said Eastern spokesman Richard McGraw. "They'll have total access to our books and they will provide their opinion as to the accuracy of our projections for 1983 and 1984," McGraw said.

He said the study would begin immediately and take three to four days.

Eastern says it has lost $106 million in the first seven months of this year, on top of a 1982 loss of $75 million.

A machinists union spokesman today said his group is not convinced Eastern's money woes are genuine and made public what the union says is an internal company document that shows claims of losses to be part of a repeated ploy to gain labor concessions.

Al Hanson, a spokesman for District 100 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, released copies of a purported memo addressed to chairman Frank Borman, dated May 7, 1976, from William R. Howard, then senior vice president.

The memo, entitled "Wage and salary program for 1977

-- and beyond," outlined a variable wage program for Eastern employees based on profits.

"The 1976 program was announced in October of 1975 ...," the memo said. "Any announcement of a new program at about that same time of year would almost timely then, in my opinion, than any announcement at this time (May) on the heels of four months of excellent profits."

Eastern spokesman James Ashlock denied the union's claims. "It's certainly not true there's been any pattern to Eastern's request for assistance to employees," he said.

Life As It's Lived

A Non-Assuring Start For Day

By GAIL MICHAELS

"The 3s are even worse than the 2s," Zachary's preschool teacher asserted.

This was hardly reassuring as I stood there this morning with my puffy-eyed 3-year-old, who was inconsolable because he had to wear a sweater to school in 50-degree weather.

"I hate sweaters!" he had screamed as I was dressing him. "I hate sweaters and teddy bears!" And he gave a vicious tug at the precious appliqued overalls hand-picked by his adoring grandfather.

Never mind that Zachary's adjustment to the change in the weather has been grudging at best and that he still strips to his underwear at every opportunity. That's not the real problem. The real problem is that Zachary has no taste.

I have encountered this problem before although I still don't understand why I have been doubly cursed. There are, after all, some 3-year-olds who enjoy looking presentable. And there are others who, if not innately stylish, at least yield occasionally to their mother's wishes.

But not my incredibly vocal children. Meg at age 3 also had a closet full of beautiful appliqued clothes courtesy of grandparents. And what was her favorite outfit? A threadbare pair of corduroy Big Bird pants handed down through three cousins. Not only was she partial to this garment, but she wanted to wear it everyday.

Zachary is attached to another hand-me-down, a hooded Superman sweatshirt. It's the one piece of heavy clothing he likes to wear. Once it's on, he will not take it off, even if the temperature soars past 80. Yesterday the mercury climbed to 75, but the mere suggestion that he not wear the hood made him surly. Of course, he didn't want to wear anything else, but as I've said, I'm used to that.

What I cannot get used to is the idea that his new fall wardrobe may never be worn at all, that the piped, cotton shirts and dancing bears and lambs will be replaced with Yoda and Darth Vader glow-in-the-dark T-shirts.

I know that I'm not the only mother who suffers. The kid down the street has been wearing flannel shirts and cowboy boots year-round for the past two years. Still, this morning as my intractable son rooted through the dirty clothes in search of his peanut-butter, sand-encrusted superhero, I was depressed to say the least.

"Why don't you tell him that those teddy bears are Ewoks?" Meg asked.

"I tried that."

"Well," she mused, "I bet that if you make him a pair of overalls yourself and sew the Incredible Hulk on the front, he'd wear them."

It's a thought.

FBI Asked To Probe Leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI has been asked to investigate leaks of economic statistics that are issued by the Commerce Department and considered sensitive by financial markets.

The department's request follows several instances in which information from Commerce reports was known before the official government release time, and one case where specific details not released by the government became known.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

BENEVOLENCE TO THE STRANGER

THERE WERE CERTAIN CUSTOMS REGARDING STRANGERS AMONG THE HEBREWS THAT WERE CONSIDERED UNWRITTEN LAW IN REGARD TO THEIR SAFETY AND WELL BEING. A MAN IN A STRANGE TOWN, NEEDING LODGING FOR THE NIGHT, WOULD, BY CUSTOM, SEAT HIMSELF ON THE GROUND OF THE MARKETPLACE OR THE MAIN THOROUGHFARE AND WAIT FOR ONE OF THE NATIVES TO ISSUE AN INVITATION TO STAY THE NIGHT. THIS WAS INVARIABLY DONE SO THAT THE STRANGER WOULD NOT BECOME PREY FOR THIEVES. AN ILLUSTRATION OF THIS IS TO BE FOUND IN GEN. 24, WHERE ABRAHAM'S STEWARD IS SENT TO FIND A BRIDE FOR ABRAHAM'S SON, ISAAC, AND IS GREETED BY LABAN WHO EXCLAIMS, "COME IN THOU BLESSED OF THE LORD; WHEREFOR STANDEST THOU WITHOUT? FOR I HAVE PREPARED THE HOUSE, AND ROOM FOR THE CAMELS."

Fell Afoul Of Wildlife Laws

CEDAR KEY, Fla. (AP) — An artist who included a pelican skull in a collage unwittingly fell afoul of wildlife law and now faces a misdemeanor charge carrying a possible six-month jail sentence.

Kevin Hipe is charged with illegally possessing the remains of a bird protected by law.

He found the pelican skull on a beach and used it and a banded bird leg he had found — possession of which also is illegal — into a "mixed-media" piece he dubbed "Ace."

No-Show On Bingo Operators See End Of Line

FORKS, Wash. — James Watt Appreciation Day in this small logging town isn't going to be short-circuited just because the guest of honor isn't coming, organizers say.

"We're still going on with our celebration, with or without him," jeweler Lloyd George said Thursday. "We realize he is busy. We want to honor him."

A clamor for Watt's firing arose last week following comments he made about members of a coal leasing commission. But that merely served to ignite support for the outspoken Interior secretary in Forks, population 3,000, in the Olympic Peninsula.

"Out here, if you say you're against James Watt, you're down," George said. Watt was invited to attend the Oct. 15 celebration, organized in part to acknowledge work by the Interior Department on the west side of the peninsula, where portions of the Olympic National Park are located.

Watt received the invitation but has a scheduling conflict and won't be able to attend, Phil Million, an Interior Department spokesman in Washington, D.C., said Thursday. "He will send his warmest personal thanks to the community."

NEW SPEED RECORD

PARIS (AP) — A 21-year-old speed record was broken recently when a business jet flew from Gander, Newfoundland, to Le Bourget Airport in Paris in 5 hours, 13 minutes.

The plane averaged 495 miles per hour. The previous record was 5 hours, 26 minutes. Newfoundland is off the Quebec-Labrador coast.

Cosmologist Chapter 24 will meet at the home of Bessie Simpson, 1201 Battle St., at 3 p.m. Monday.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Strict regulation of charity bingo and raffles takes effect Saturday, but operators say the law is so far-reaching that there won't be many games to regulate.

The law, aimed at shifting control of bingo from professional operators to the charities it's supposed to benefit, requires that the games be operated only by tax-exempt, non-profit groups that obtain state licenses.

Last spring, bingo operators and law enforcement officials estimated that 1,000 bingo parlors were operating in North Carolina. As of Thursday, about 50 organizations had obtained licenses from the N.C. Department of Revenue.

"I'm going out of business," said Edward Hedgepeth of Raleigh, owner of six bingo parlors from Winston-Salem to Jacksonville.

Earl Davis, part-owner of DD&W Investment Inc., said the company was trying to sell its bingo equipment to five of the 13 non-profit groups that previously sponsored its games in Wake County.

James R. Hamilton Jr., president of the Wake County Association for Retarded Citizens, said his group plans to give up bingo as a money source. He said the association counted on bingo for $6,000 a year, or 20 percent of its revenue, but could not run the games itself.

The law requires that groups operate bingo in a building "actually occupied and used by that organization on a regular basis for purposes other than bingo for at least six months before the game."

Hamilton said he agreed with the law's intent — channeling more of the proceeds from bingo to the sponsoring charities. During testimony before legislative committees this year, witnesses said that sometimes only about 4 percent of the profits went to the charities.

But, said Hamilton, "Any law that could have ensured continuity of our desperately needed income would have been better for us."

Pirates Are Tested In Tigers' Den

"Missouri looks like 100,000 pounds of dynamite, waiting to explode," East Carolina football coach Ed Emory claims. He's hopeful that no one will light the fuse to the Tigers this weekend.

The Pirates and Tigers clash in Columbia, Mo., Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. (EDT), with both teams seeking their third win in four outings.

Missouri opened the season with a 28-18 victory over Illinois — which last week beat Michigan State. The Tigers then fell to Wisconsin, 21-20, in a heartbreaker, and downed Utah State, 17-10, this past weekend.

East Carolina, which comes off an open date this past Saturday, lost to Florida State, 47-46, in the opening game, then downed N.C. State, 22-16, and Murray State, 50-25, in succeeding games.

The two wins brought Emory's record at East Carolina to 18-18 — giving the Pirates a chance to go over 500 for their coach for the first time since the first game of his career at ECU when the Pirates beat Duke, 35-10.

Last year, the two met at Faurot Field in Columbia, with Missouri coming away with a late 28-9 victory. Early in the final period, the Tigers led only 14-9, but scored twice in the last 15 minutes to put the game away.

"They're a better team this year than last," Emory said. "Their offensive line is awesome coming off the football. They are big and mobile."

Emory praised Missouri as having outstanding receivers in Greg Kahl (6-4, 234, Sr.) and Tony Davis (6-5, 238, Jr.) at tight end. Kahl has caught four passes for 57 yards, while Davis has one for 11.

"They have three outstanding quarterbacks in Marlon Adler (6-0, 183, Jr.), Warren Seitz (6-4, 220, So.) and Brad Perry (6-2, 211, Sr.). Adler, who is listed as the starter, injured ribs last week and sat out the second half while Seitz came on to lead the Tigers to the victory. Adler has hit on 20 of 36 passes for 305 yards and three touchdowns. He's been picked off twice. He's also rushed 29 times for 93 yards. Seitz has only thrown five passes, but completed four for 38 yards. He's rushed 12 times for 47 yards.

"Fullback Eric Drain (6-2, 207, So.) concerns us," Emory said. Drain is the leading Tiger rusher with 260 yards on 53 carries, a respectable 4.9 average. "He's probably the best fullback in terms of running the ball we've seen all year."

Another concern will be tailback Santos Barbosa (6-0, 203, So.) who led the rushing against the Pirates last year. This year, he's number two for the Tigers with 149 yards on 39 carries.

"They'll be a big challenge to us on defense to stop them," Emory said.

Missouri's defense, too, will get a good test. The Tigers are ranked third in the NCAA in rushing defense, allowing only 50 yards a game. "That's our bread and butter, so it's going to be our strength against their strength. We didn't move the ball last year like we needed to to win," Emory singled out the play of end Bobby Bell (6-3, 214, Sr.), tackle Robert Curry (6-3, 264, Jr.), linebackers Jay Wilson

(6-33, 215, Sr.) and Tracey Mack (6-0, 222, Jr.), and free safety Reco Hawkins (6-2, 190, Jr.) as the leaders for the Tigers.

Missouri opponents have rushed only 94 times, however, while passing 86 times. The Tiger defense has recorded ten sacks, led by safety Jerome Caver, Bell, and nose guard Steve Leshe with two each.

"There are three keys to our having a chance to win," Emory said. "We have to be great in the specialty games, both in coverage and protection."

"We have to make them punt a number of times, be aggressive on defense, since I anticipate a low scoring game."

"We cannot let them have the big defensive play, something we didn't prevent last year. We can't let them come up with a play that make us have to go for third and long yardage. We didn't contain the safety blitz last year and we can't afford to let them do it this year. They do a great job of disguising it, so we'll have to be very alert."

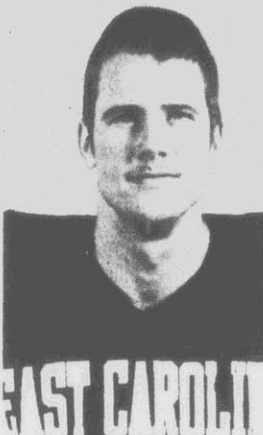

Emory doesn't feel that the Pirates will be awed by the 45,000 to 50,000 attending the game in Missouri's fine facilities. "We've been there before."

"And we're going for one thing — to win. We're not looking for credibility or anything else — just a win. If we play to our capabilities, we can win it."

Warren Hurls No-Hitter

By The Associated Press
Two rookie pitchers came close to making the Hall of Fame this season.

Oakland's Mike Warren made it.

Warren, a 22-year-old right-hander who began the season in Class AA, became the first rookie to pitch a no-hitter in more than a decade Thursday night when he shut down the American League West champion Chicago White Sox 3-0.

"All of sudden I thought, 'Hey, I haven't given up any hits all night,'" said Warren, who couldn't recall when he first realized he had a no-hitter in progress. "Then I just tried to keep it going by getting three outs at a time."

Twice this season rookies had gotten close — Pittsburgh's Jose DeLeon came within one out and Philadelphia's Charlie Hudson got within two outs.

Warren's gem, which will result in a game ball being sent to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., made him the first rookie to pitch a no-hitter since Texas' Jim Bibby did it against Oakland on July 30, 1973. He's the 13th rookie to accomplish the feat since 1900.

It was also the first no-hitter for Oakland since Vida Blue,

Glenn Abbott, Paul Lindblad and Rollie Fingers combined on one in 1975. The game marked the first time Chicago had been no-hit since Boston's Bill Monbouquette mastered the White Sox in 1962.

And, it was the second no-hitter in the major leagues within a week. St. Louis' Bob Forsch no-hit Montreal 3-0 on Monday. New York's Dave Righetti no-hit Boston on July 4 this season.

Only once did the White Sox come close to getting a hit as Warren, 5-3, relied on his curveball and changeup. With two outs in the eighth inning, pinch hitter Mike Squires belted a long drive to right field that Mike Davis — inserted into the game that inning as a defensive replacement — caught at the wall.

"I thought for sure it was off the wall," said A's catcher Mike Heath.

Said Davis: "I was playing shallow at the time. When he hit it, I thought it might have a chance to go out. I got to it shaky-like. I was prepared to do anything to catch that ball."

Warren ran halfway to the mound to start his warmups in the ninth as the crowd of 9,058 cheered on the cold and windy night in Oakland.

The first batter in the ninth was pinch hitter Jerry Hairston, who had broken up a perfect game bid by Detroit's Milt Wilcox with two outs in the ninth inning earlier this year. Hairston walked on a full-count pitch, Warren's third walk of the game.

Pinch hitter Greg Walker flied out and Rudy Law struck out swinging on an 0-2 pitch, Warren's fifth strikeout of the night.

That brought up Carlton Fisk, who had struck out twice and flied out in his previous three at-bats. Earlier this season, Fisk blasted a three-run homer off Warren.

Rampettes Unbeaten

Rose High School's girls' cross-country team remained unbeaten yesterday, downing Wilson Hunt, 19-39 at the River Park North's 3.1 mile course.

Becky Thompson of Rose took first place in the meet with a time of 23:11, while teammate Carol Moore was second in 23:14.

Hunt's Patsy King broke into the top five with a 23:25 time, good enough for third. Rose's Cissy Taft, at 23:32, and Amy Moore, 23:58, rounded out the top five.

The second five included Hunt's Cheryl Watson, 25:48, Rose's Gina Branch, 26:51, and Cathryn Spencer, 26:56, and Hunt's Kim Alston, 27:14 and Brenda Jackson, 27:29.

The only other Rose finisher was Emily McDonald, who finished 12th in 27:56.

Rose is now 4-0 on the season and travels to Northeastern on Tuesday.

This time, on Warren's 112th pitch of the night on a 2-1 count, Fisk hit a lazy fly ball that left fielder Rickey Henderson caught for the final out.

"For a split-second, I was thinking about what would happen if I dropped it," Henderson said. "But there was no way."

"The last pitch was a good one," Fisk said. "I'm happy for him."

Warren, who spent last year in Class A and began this season with Albany, N.Y., of the Eastern League, was called up to the majors on June 12 and made his debut on June 12, against Chicago. His first pitch in the big leagues was a wild pitch with the bases loaded.

"I think I'm even now," said Warren, who accepted congratulations from White Sox owner Eddie Einhorn in the Oakland clubhouse.

Warren, who faced 29 men, two over the minimum, was sent down to Class AAA Tacoma in June, but was recalled by Oakland on Aug. 8.

"My wife's out there waiting for me," Warren said after the game. "I'm going to hug her like crazy."

In other AL games, it was Minnesota 2, Texas 0; Detroit 9, Baltimore 4; New York 4, Boston 3; Cleveland 4, Milwaukee 2; and Seattle 5, Kansas City 4.

Tigers 9, Orioles 4

Enos Cabell smacked a three-run homer during a five-run first inning to help Detroit complete a three-game sweep in Baltimore. Cabell's fifth homer came as the Tigers erupted against Mike Flanagan, 12-4.

Rick Leach belted a two-run homer in the ninth off

Baltimore reliever Tim Lincecum.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 3

Don Mattingly slapped an RBI single past a drawn-in infield with one out in the bottom of the ninth, capping a two-run rally that lifted New York.

Winner Ron Guidry, 21-9, pitched a seven-hitter. One of those hits was Jim Rice's 38th homer. Dave Winfield belted his 32nd home run for host New York.

Indians 4, Brewers 2

Rick Sutcliffe got the win despite allowing 14 hits. Sutcliffe, 17-11, struck out six and walked one.

Gorman Thomas had three hits, including his 22nd homer, a solo shot that gave visiting Cleveland a 3-0 lead in the fifth.

Twins 2, Blue Jays 0

Ken Schrom, 15-8, pitched a seven-hitter for his first shut-out of the season. Rookie Tim Lincecum belted a solo home run in the first inning off loser Dave Stewart, 5-2.

Mariners 5, Royals 4

Ken Phelps' home run helped Seattle avoid becoming the first team in the majors to lose 100 games this season. Phelps' blast, his sixth of the season, triggered a four-run seventh that enabled the host Mariners to overcome a 3-1 deficit.

Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians pitched a no-hitter on the opening day of the 1940 season, beating the Chicago White Sox, 1-0. It was the only time a no-hitter was pitched on opening day.

Best Leads Rose Cubs To 21-6 JV Victory

Ervin Best passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in gaining a 21-6 victory over previously unbeaten Rocky Mount in a junior varsity football game yesterday.

Rocky Mount gained the initial lead with its only score coming in the first period.

Rose came back with two scores in the second quarter to take a 14-6 halftime lead. Best passed 12 yards to Tyrone Jones for the first score, then ran eight yards for the other.

The third Rampant Cub score came in the third period, when Best and Jones hooked up for a 23-yard TD aerial. Kendall Phillips kicked the PAT following each touchdown.

Rose's defense was led by Wayland Moore, L.C. Atkins, Brian Walsh, Charles Hill and Brent Langley. The offense was paced by Best, Jones, Rick Wooten, Wilbert Brown, Mark Elmore, Greg Vacek, Fletcher Phillips and Darrell Perkins.

Rose, now 4-1, travels to Wilson Beddingfield on Wednesday for its next outing.

The game's only score came in the first period when Ricky Ziemba passed 18 yards to Tim Briley.

Conley later reached the AG two and missed a field goal attempt.

The Ziemba-Briley combination accounted for 95 yards during the game while Martin Anderson rushed for 139 yards on 24 carries for the Viking JVs. The Conley defense was led by Shane Adams and Lee Hardee. Hardee and Guy Mobley both recovered fumbles for the Vikes, while Adams had an interception.

Ayden-Grifton is now 3-2, while Conley is 3-2. Conley plays its Coastal Conference opener, hosting White Oak. Ayden-Grifton travels to SouthWest Edgecombe for a Big East game.

The loud sounds you heard last Friday and Saturday were this writer and several other members of the picker-panel falling on their faces as the results of weekend games came in.

Continued upsets over the weekend caught a number of us unawares, and as a result the panel began to spread out a little. Vickie Spivey continues to lead the way with a 29-17 record, while Joe Jenkins has a 28-18 mark. The guests come next at 27-19, followed by this writer at 26-20.

Jimmy DuPree is fifth with a 26-21 record, while Tom Baines, who says that never before has he ever been in the cellar, resides right at 25-22.

Our guest of last week, UNC pharmacy student Al Hamm, turned in a 6-6 record for the week, but didn't pass ECU marketing director Dave Hart, who continues to lead our guests with an 8-3 mark.

Visiting this week is Rick Miller of Miller and Davis, who is a member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission. Miller likes to tease Jenkins and said that it would only be a matter of time before Joe starts his slide to the bottom.

Could that be this week? No way, says Joe. The only way he's going is up, Jenkins claims.

Last week's high school results saw us take a 3-5 battering which lowered the season average to 23-10-2. Hopefully, we can do better this week.

North Pitt travels to Southern Nash in an Eastern Carolina Conference game. The Panthers got their first victory of the year last weekend, and will be chasing number two this time out. Southern has been up and down, losing its league opener to Ayden-Grifton after taking an early lead. This could be quite a game, but we've still got to go with the Firebirds, 14-7.

Farmville Central, after evening its record, opens league play by hosting SouthWest Edgecombe. The Cougars destroyed C.B. Aycock last weekend, 63-0, and are sharpening their claws for a solo run at the title this season after two tri-championships. We'll have to go with SouthWest in this one, 28-7.

In a cross-county non-conference matchup, Conley visits Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers are still having some problems, according to Dixon Sauls, but not that many. Conley has had two weeks to prepare for the game — but is that enough? We don't think so: Ayden-Grifton by 21-6.

In other area games, it's Creswell over Chocowinity; Jamesville over Bath; Greene Central over C.B. Aycock; Ahoskie over Roanoke; Washington over Plymouth; and Tarboro over Williamston.

Turning to the panel, we find Rose, after losing to Northern Nash last weekend, taking on arch-rival Rocky Mount in a road game. As usual, records go out the window, and this one should be quite a tussle. Our own prediction is Rose 21, Rocky Mount 19. The panel sees it 5-1 for the Rampants, Baines going for the Gryphons.

The Pirates of East Carolina travel to Missouri looking for more national prestige. This could be a big game for the Pirates should they win it, and we like them, say by 24-20. The panel is just a little more split, giving the Pirates the nod, 4-2. Again Baines goes agin' the Pirates, joined by Spivey.

Our other concensus picks: Miami over Duke; Maryland over Virginia; Houston over Baylor; Florida over Louisiana State; Tulane and Vanderbilt, a toss-up; North Carolina over Georgia Tech; Wake Forest and N.C. State, a toss-up; Iowa over Illinois; Virginia Tech over Louisville; and West Virginia over Pittsburgh. The full poll:

Florida Gets Tough Test

By The Associated Press

The state of Florida, sitting pretty with Miami, Florida and Florida State each in the college football Top 20, gets a severe test of that status Saturday when all three teams go on the road.

No. 12 Florida will be at Baton Rouge, La., to face 16th-ranked Louisiana State. No. 17 Florida State is at No. 10 Auburn and No. 15 Miami will be in Durham, N.C., to meet Duke.

Florida, with only a tie against Southern Cal marring its record in four games, has outscored all of its opponents so far this season while still maintaining an efficient passing game led by quarterback Wayne Peace, who has completed 61.1 percent of his passes.

The Gators may be hard-pressed to beat LSU on the ground, however.

LSU has an explosive offense with those two great runners, Dalton Hilliard and Gary James, and a double-threat quarterback in Jeff Wickersham, who can run and throw. Florida Coach Charley Pell said, "Defensively, they bring a pressure defense against you and take pride in physically intimidating an offense."

The Tigers are coming off an impressive 40-14 thrashing of nationally ranked Washington last Saturday. Their only loss in three games was to Florida State.

The Seminoles, 2-1, who were upset by Tulane after the 40-35 triumph over LSU, have averaged 38.8 points per game, one of the highest in the nation, but have given up the same number. So Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden is most concerned with the rock-ribbed defense of Auburn, also 2-1, and his own defenders.

"We haven't been able to stop anybody all year," Bowden said. "We won our first game 47-46. There wasn't a punt in the game. If our defense would ever improve, we could have a pretty good football team."

Since Auburn Coach Pat Dye runs a Wishbone offense featuring running backs Bo James and Lionel Jackson, Bowden said, "You're going to see a contrast in styles out there Saturday... Pat believes in ball control. We believe in striking and striking quickly."

Miami, 3-1, appears to have less of a challenge than its intrastate rivals in Duke, which is 0-3.

The Hurricanes have won three straight, including a 20-0 thrashing of Notre Dame, after their opening loss to Florida.

Cobb Leads EBA, 36-14

ROCKY MOUNT — Anthony Cobb continued to pace E.B. Aycock's ground attack as he led the Jaguars to a 36-14 win over Rocky Mount yesterday in a junior high school football game.

Cobb scored four times, on runs on one, two, two and three yards and also added a PAT. Tom Moye ran for one PAT and passed to Alex Smith for another to account for the Aycock scoring.

Rocky Mount's scoring all came in the second half on two big plays, an 84-yard run and an 88-yard pass.

Cobb finished the game with 198 yards rushing and five yards in pass receptions. Coach Wilson McDowell cited the play of Lee Miller, Walt Pollard, Steve Peele, Stacey Best, Rodney Harris, Moye and Tim Clark, along with Cobb on offense. On defense, standouts were Robert McDonald, Berwin Swindell, Lee Rogers, Bardell Brown and Terry Warren.

Now 2-0, the Jaguars play host to Wilson Beddingfield on Wednesday.

Stadler In Lead

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Although there are three rounds to go, Fuzzy Zoeller said he and the rest of the field have their work cut out for them in an effort to overtake Craig Stadler.

"It's about time he got his tail moving. He's a quality player. It'll take a very low number to beat him," Zoeller predicted Thursday after Stadler jumped two strokes in front of the pack with a spectacular, 8-under-par 62 in the first round of the $300,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Stadler's effort, in ideal playing conditions — mild temperatures and just the hint of a breeze — included nine birdies, matched the competitive record on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course and was within one shot of the low round on the PGA Tour this season.

"That was a lot of fun. And I haven't really enjoyed it for quite a while," said Stadler, who took the Masters and three other titles last year and led the Tour in money-winnings.

"I haven't won this year, and it's been a little frustrating," he said.

"It's been four years since I went through a season without winning. And I sure didn't expect it this year."

"It's getting down to the end and only three more official events remain on the tour schedule," but I haven't yet written the year off.

"I've played pretty well at times, but I've been shooting a lot of 73s and 74s and 75s in the first round and just taking myself out of it."

"I'm not saying I'll win this week," cautioned the man known to his fellow pros as "The Walrus." He paused and smiled.

"But I'd love to. I'd absolutely love to."

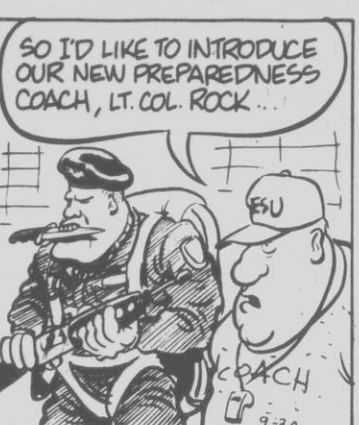

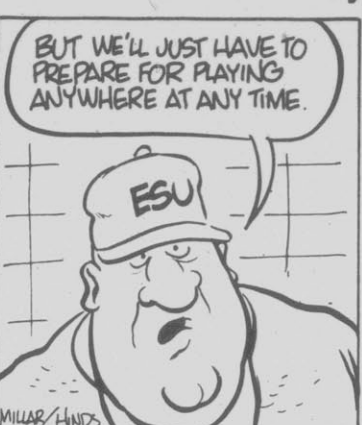

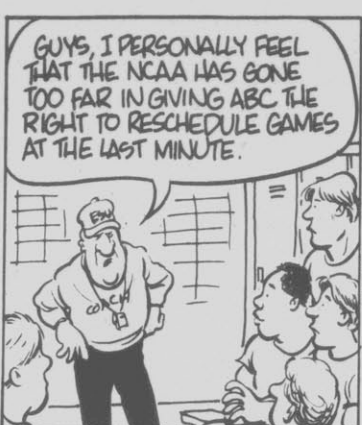

Stadler one-putted 10 times and saved his best until the last, a 35-footer on the final hole that gave him the two-shot lead over Fred Couples and Lance Ten Broeck, who had 64s.

Former Texas Open champ Ron Streck, Larry Mize and Brent Buckman at 65.

Zoeller, who needs to finish sixth or better this week to regain the money-winning lead, and Rex Caldwell, a winner in Abilene last week, led the big group at 66.

Also at that figure were Tom Kite, Bill Rogers, Jim Colbert, Bill Murchison, Dale Douglass, Tom Jenkins, Wally Armstrong, George Cadie, Allen Miller, Roger Maltbie and Steve Hart.

'Chorus Line' Observes Record Run

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With a lavish, spectacular, top-hat finish featuring 330 gold-costumed performers from all over the world, "A Chorus Line" has sung and danced into history as the longest-running show ever to play Broadway.

It happened Thursday night at the jam-packed Shubert Theater, where Michael Bennett's hit musical celebrated its 3,389th performance in a special, dazzling, occasionally multi-lingual version certain to be talked about for years to come.

During the show, members of the marathon cast — the current Broadway company, the original Broadway company and performers who've been in the show's other U.S. and foreign companies — all took turns in their respective roles.

Then, clad in their gold lame show costumes, they performed their crowd-pleasing finale — singing and dancing the closing number, "One," on stage, in the aisles and in the balconies.

As the celebrity-filled, black-tie audience packed into the 1,469-seat Shubert stood and erupted in thunderous applause, the super-troupe assembled on stage in 13 rows to take its final bows, bowing one row at a time.

The applause continued as a beaming Bennett took his bow, jokingly fell to his knees, then salaamed members of his based-on-life musical about the high hopes and hard lives of chorus dancers auditioning for a Broadway musical.

So it went at this memorable edition of "A Chorus Line," which after more than eight years, nine Tony awards, one Pulitzer Prize and $260 million in gross income, officially passed the previous long-run record-holder, "Grease," the 50s musical that closed in 1980 after 3,388 performances.

As the cheers died down, Marvin Hamlisch, the show's composer, grinned and warned the audience that "A Chorus Line," which opened on Broadway on July 25, 1975, unfortunately will close — "in about 30, 40 years."

But he predicted the final show will top Thursday night's in one respect: Bennett, he said, told him "he'll be inviting everyone who's ever seen 'A Chorus Line.'"

Informal estimates put that figure at about 22.3 million worldwide, including the 14 million who've seen the show on Broadway.

The start of its record-breaking performance was delayed until 10:30 p.m. to allow "Chorus Line" graduates now in other Broadway shows to dash over after their shows and re-appear in Broadway's really big one Thursday.

Original "Chorus" members reprising their roles Thursday included Tony-winners Sammy Williams and Donna McKechnie, with Miss McKechnie's Cassie simultaneously recreated on stage at one point by no less than 10 singer-dancers who've played the role.

Also during the evening, former members of the show's international company all spoke and sang their parts in their native languages, including French, German, Italian and Japanese.

One of them was a British actor who, philosophizing about a dancer's life, remarked in Cockney, "nothing runs forever, right?"

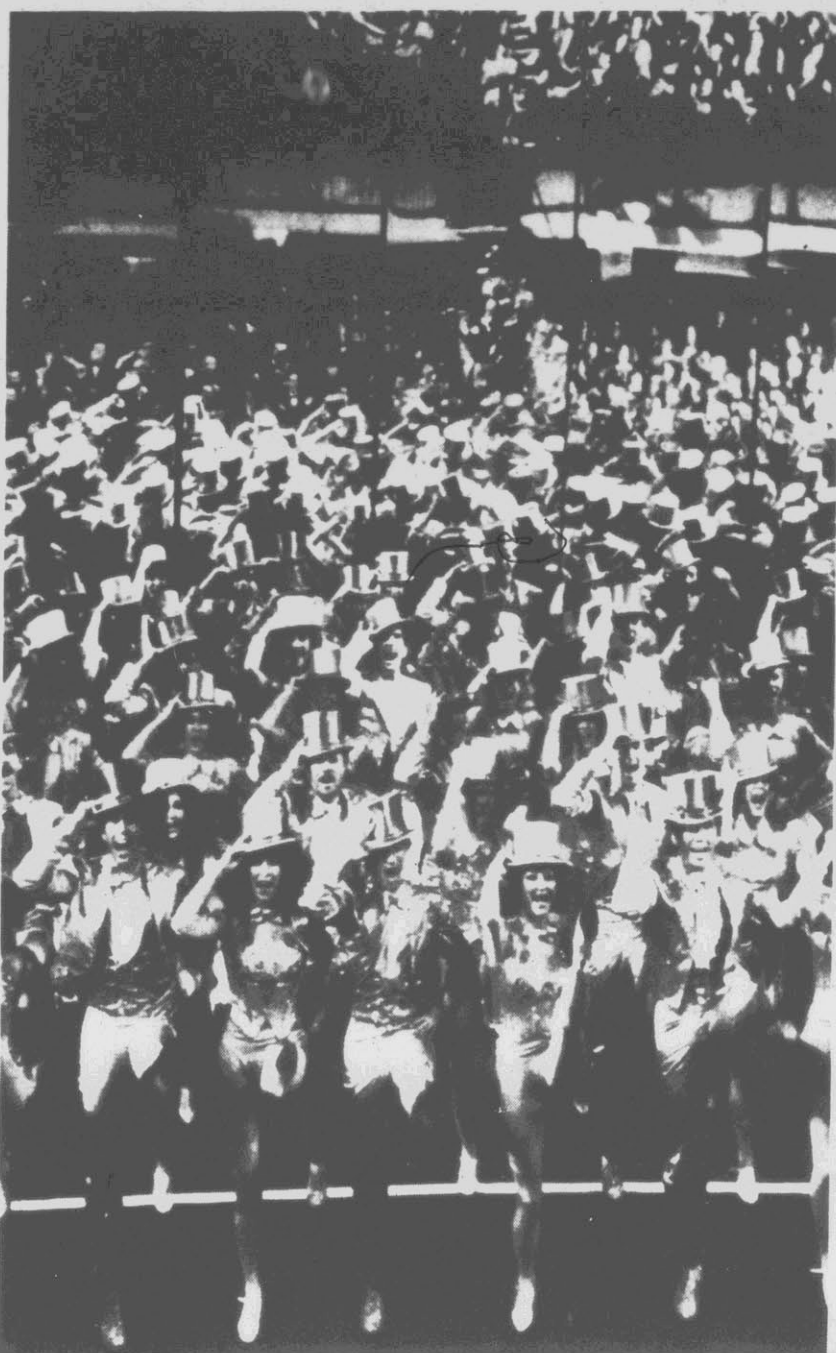

The audience chuckled, aware that "A Chorus Line" could well be the exception.

Conceived, directed and choreographed by Bennett, himself a former chorus "gypsy," the show began off-Broadway as a $450,000 workshop production downtown at Joseph Papp's non-profit New York Shakespear Festival.

With a score by Hamlisch and Ed Kleban and a book by James Kirkwood and Nicholas Dante, it opened at Papp's Public Theater in April 1975, moving to Broadway in July. Its formal opening was delayed by a musicians strike.

But when it finally premiered Oct. 19, it got raves from critics and the public alike. It made its creators wealthy men and, in the view of Papp, the show's producer with Broadway's Shubert Organization, its success saved his financially strapped festival from having to post a closing notice.

Parton Thinks Of 'Dollyland'

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. AP — Entertainer Dolly Parton is thinking about returning to the Great Smoky Mountains she calls home to build "Dollywood," a 400-acre theme park.

"It's in the planning stages," Don Warden, the singer's uncle and road manager, said recently of the park. "Right now it's just a plan with a lot of potential."

Warden said Miss Parton and her family have discussed the idea for more than a year. Preliminary plans include a museum to house some of her mementos.

No project cost has been disclosed, but, by comparison, the country music theme park Opryland in Nashville cost $28 million when it opened on 369 acres a decade ago.

"She has had an agent up there looking around, but I think they may already have the land they'd want to put this on," Warden said. "She and her husband are always looking for property."

Warden said Miss Parton and her husband, Carl Dean, bought a farm in Sevier County last year.

Tourism already is the main industry in the east Tennessee county, which includes much of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Pigeon Forge and nearby Gatlinburg have several smaller theme parks and are filled with tourist-oriented shops, restaurants and motels.

"It's all been pretty hush-hush up here," said Russell Treadway, city administrator in Sevierville, the county seat. "It's difficult to assemble that amount of property up here because if you go public with the plan the prices tend to go up."

Rural land in the county now sells for between $1,500 and $3,000 an acre, according to Ruby Fox, director of the Sevierville Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Parton is in Hollywood working on "Rhinestone," a musical comedy film co-starring Sylvester Stallone. She visited Gatlinburg last weekend to help start a hospital fund-raising drive named in memory of the country doctor who delivered her.

"Dollywood" would add Miss Parton to a growing list of country musicians who have used their fame to cash in on the Tennessee tourist trade.

Conway Twitty owns Twitty City, a tourist attraction in the Nashville suburb of Hendersonville that houses his home, offices, a museum and gift shop.

Across the road is the House of Cash, where Johnny Cash has a museum and the offices of his music publishing company.

Loretta Lynn owns a chain of Western clothing stores and a dude ranch near Waverly, Tenn., that bear her name. And a museum honoring the late Jim Reeves recently opened in Nashville filled with his mementos.

Thatcher Speaks, Heads Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is returning home after accusing the leaders of the Soviet Union of trying to sidetrack genuine arms control with "ridiculous" and unrealistic demands.

Mrs. Thatcher used virtually every appearance here, including television interviews, a news conference, a speech, and remarks after a two-hour meeting with President Reagan to bolster the U.S. arms control position. She declared that Soviet intransigence in arms control talks will be met with Western resolve and newly deployed weapons.

She raised at the White House meeting the Soviet demand that British and French nuclear weapons systems be included in any arms deal curbing the size of the Soviet intermediate-range weapons aimed at European targets.

"It's sidetracking, and we must not be sidetracked," she said at a British Embassy news conference.

Mrs. Thatcher said that if the Soviet union ever permits radical cuts in its arsenal of long-range, strategic nuclear weapons, Britain might re-examine its options regarding its own forces.

But in the meantime, she said Britain's nuclear deterrent represents only about 2.5 percent of the Soviet force and that demands it be placed on the bargaining table now are "absolutely ridiculous."

Later, at an embassy dinner, Mrs. Thatcher accepted the Winston Churchill award, named for one of her most famous predecessors, and further escalated her anti-Soviet rhetoric.

She said it is "disappointing and discouraging" that Soviet President Yuri Andropov chose to "pre-emptively reject" conciliatory gestures made by Reagan last week.

And she contended that in shooting down a South Korean airliner three weeks ago, Soviet leaders showed their true colors, committing an "act of atrocity" and displaying a "profound contempt for their fellow human beings."

She characterized the Soviet Union as a military giant "which has consistently used force against her neighbors, which wields the threat of force as a weapon, and which is bent on subverting and destroying the confidence and stability of the Western world."

"Their creed is barren of conscience, immune to the promptings of good and evil," she said.

The Soviets have used arms control negotiations to maintain or gain numerical advantage in weaponry and have appeared flexible only to "beguile public opinion, not to make progress by genuine negotiation," Mrs. Thatcher said.

But she added that "although some may recoil at the thought of negotiating with men whose theories and actions have been responsible for so much suffering," the character of modern weapons "obliges us to do so."

While the prime minister made clear her support for Reagan policy on strategic issues, she also emphasized areas of U.S.-British disagreement in the economic field.

She told Reagan that despite the apparent vigor of economic recovery in the United States, high U.S. budget deficits are sapping economic strength elsewhere in the world, including Britain, by triggering higher interest rates.

She told the news conference that although she voiced her complaints in meetings with Reagan and his chief economic advisers, she received no immediate satisfaction.

"I'm not assured at all (that) action will be taken to reduce the deficits," she said.

She said her government believes spending must be matched with adequate tax revenues if high interest rates are to be avoided.

"A different view is taken over here," she said.

New 'Perspective' Series Will Begin

Dr. James Mathis, professor and chairman of the department of psychiatry at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, will launch the second year of the "Perspectives" lecture series by giving a talk entitled, "Traditional Medicines in Tibet," Monday from 12:30-1:30 p.m.

Dr. Mathis has spent some time in Tibet discussing the concepts, diagnosis techniques and treatments with practitioners of this medicine.

Entering its second year, the Perspectives series' fall schedule will also include the following speakers and topics:

•Oct. 31 — Donald Van de Veer, department of philosophy at North Carolina State University, on "Morality of Using Animals in Research."

•Nov. 14 — "The History of Blood Transfusion," Caroline Hannaway, editor of the Bulletin of the History of Medicine at Johns Hopkins Institute of the History of Medicine in Baltimore.

•Nov. 28 — Dr. Robert

Bolande, ECU School of Medicine Pathology Department, on "The Evolution of the Practice of Circumcision," an analysis of ritualistic surgery in Western culture.

The Perspectives series is funded in part by a grant from the Charles E. Culpeper Foundation of New York. For more information on the series or to be included on the humanities mailing list, call the medical humanities program at 757-2618.

The program will be held in the upstairs conference room adjacent to the cafeteria at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Lower Standards Seen For Teacher-Training

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina public school teachers' performance on a nationwide test plummeted between 1973 and 1980, indicating that the schools and the state's teacher-training institutions are lowering their standards, a researcher says.

The study, reported today in the journal Phi Delta Kappan, was not designed to explain the reason behind the decline in the National Teachers Exam scores. But Dr. Phillip C. Schlechty said teaching institutions and public schools were at fault.

"Those colleges that used to be selective about the students they enrolled apparently can't be (because of declining enrollments)," Schlechty, a professor of education at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said Thursday in a telephone interview.

"At the same time, public schools are not hiring on a selective basis. They may not be paying any attention to those kinds of things (academic rankings) or the high scoring kids may not be looking for jobs."

Slechty analyzed all of the graduates of 44 North Carolina institutions who started teaching in state public schools between 1973 and 1980. Results were tabulated based on exam scores and the institution from which each graduated.

Teachers were divided into five groups ranging from the lowest 20 percent of test scores to the highest and institutions were similarly divided into five categories designed to reflect their ability to place graduates in public schools.

Slechty said institutions that maintained high standards suffered the greatest loss in placing teachers in schools, while those institutions that lowered standards had proportionately increasing placement success. Colleges with consistently low standards suffered only slight losses in placement.

Another problem is too much emphasis on "brand-name recognition," he said.

"If you can't get a high-scoring kid from a good institution, you take a lower scoring kid from a good institution," he said.

Because North Carolina has more black institutions and more black teachers than the national average, Schlechty analyzed each race separately.

"There was not as much of a decline in the number of black students going into teaching as white students," he said. "The basic difference was that the high-scoring black kids were beginning to go to the white colleges."

"That helped offset declining enrollment in light of the desegregation ruling. White colleges are apparently able to recruit some of the more able black students that are going into teaching."

Despite the racial differences, Schlechty said the data could be extended to other states.

"I reported this to educators in Tennessee and California and their response was, 'That is exactly what is going on here,'" he said, adding that "in earlier studies, North Carolina data has been consistent with the national pattern."

Slechty said he plans to do a follow-up study interviewing teachers to pinpoint the reason for the declining scores. But he said he was confident that all three factors were involved.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THESE MATHEMATICIANS' CAGEY IDEA: AN "ADD AGENCY."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: O equals T.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Navy Scraps Its Drug Test Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy says it will clear the records of about 3,000 Navy personnel disciplined for drug use because laboratory results had to be thrown out.

The Navy reported the testing errors at the Oakland, Calif., testing center included improper record-keeping and failure to have a second person confirm the results of some tests.

For the past two years, the Navy has employed a urinalysis drug-testing program after a study found that 48 percent of Navy personnel were abusing drugs. Last fiscal year, the Navy tested 650,000 personnel for drug use.

U. S. Deficit Is Close To $1.36 Trillion

By PAULINE JELINEK

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

After he'd been president for about nine months, George Washington's treasury secretary figured the public debt at $54.124.464.56.

As fiscal year 1983 ends today, it is close to $1.36 trillion.

That's the upshot of years and years of government deficit spending — a practice that reached a new height in the last 12 months.

Interest alone on the borrowing the Treasury Department does to finance the debt this year is expected to total about $128 billion.

The Reagan administration officially is predicting that when the 1983 fiscal year ends tonight, the government will have spent $209.8 billion more than it took in, though Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said last week that it could be $200 billion "or less."

Treasury spokesman Robert D. Levine said Thursday that is because the government has been spending less in the last couple of months than earlier projected and the economic recovery is increasing tax receipts "to a slight extent."

Edwin L. Dale, assistant public affairs manager of the Office of Management and Budget, said that based on August figures, government spending may total less than $800 billion, compared with the most recent estimate of $809.8 billion in July.

Receipts have been coming in close to the $599.9 billion estimated at that time, he said, though final numbers won't be tallied until late next month.

Dale said there has been slower-than-expected spending for defense and certain agriculture programs.

Part of the defense slowdown, he said, might be caused by a lower inflation rate, which means the Defense Department has to pay out less for food, fuel, clothing and other goods.

Moreover, he said, it appears that drought-stricken farmers are participating at a slower rate in the Commodity Credit Corp. loan program, reducing its spending.

Spending on two other programs — foreign military credit sales and unemployment compensation — also has been running below earlier estimates, Dale said.

And Levine said the lowering of the unemployment rate has decreased payments the government makes to the jobless.

As of the end of August, the deficit for the year was $197.3 billion. But the final figure will of course include September, when there normally is a surplus because companies pay quarterly installments on corporate income taxes.

Even with the lower projection, presidential economic adviser Martin Feldstein said last week, the deficit "is still horrendous."

Many private economists have called it — and heavy government borrowing to finance it — the No. 1 culprit behind high interest rates, and therefore a threat to economic recovery.

Some administration officials, including Regan, contend there is no evidence linking deficits and higher interest rates. But many foreign leaders also believe there is.

And they have complained repeatedly that the high interest rates are raising the value of the U.S. dollar against their currencies, threatening recoveries just getting underway overseas.

At the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank on Thursday, Gerhard Stoltenberg, West Germany's finance chief, called U.S. deficits "an international concern."

As a candidate in 1980, President Reagan had promised to do away with deficits and balance the federal budget by 1983. He blames the ever-flowing red ink on Congress' failure to cut spending.

Congressional critics disagree, blaming Reagan's economic program of cutting taxes while increasing military spending.

One thing that gets widespread agreement, though, is that the deficit for fiscal 1984 starting Saturday will be another large one. The OMB has said it could be about $179.7 billion.

And it is uncertain when action might be taken to cut the deficits significantly.

Indeed, since early 1979 when the first treasury secretary, Alexander Hamilton, counted up the debt for George Washington, the government has posted many annual deficits.

In this century, there have been deficits more often than not. The government has operated in the black only eight times in the last 50 years. And in the last 20 years, only once, in 1969.

In a final briefing with reporters last week before leaving government for private business, Commerce Undersecretary Robert Dederick noted that the longer the government waits to deal with the deficits, the more the public debt mounts and the more it takes to pay interest on the debt.

Every bid and every play tells a story. If you can learn to read them, you will become a very good bridge player.

There are those who would jarrel with South's decision to introduce his diamonds freely and then invite game, but he felt he had compensating distributional values. North, who had not opened one no trump because he had no stopper in either minor, was happy to cooperate.

West led the two of clubs, East won the queen and tried to cash the ace, and with that the defenders lost their only chance to defeat the contract. Declarer ruffed and forced out the ace of trumps. After regaining the lead, declarer drew the outstanding trumps, discarded two hearts on dummy's spades and claimed his contract.

East fell asleep at the wheel. Partner's lead of the two of clubs, after raising the suit, guaranteed a four-card suit, since the lead could not be from an honor — East could see all five club honors in his hand and dummy. Therefore, the second club could not go through.

Since declarer had to have both the king and queen of diamonds for his bid he had little enough as it was, the only place that the setting trick could come from was the heart suit. And that suit had to be attacked early, for it was painfully obvious that declarer could get discards on dummy's spades.

Despite the menacing heart honors on the board, East should have shifted to a low heart. Now there would have been no way for declarer to avoid losing a trick in each suit except spades — down one.

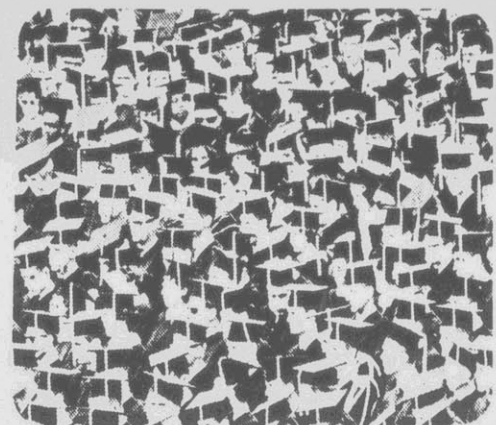

Satellite Sale Said Offensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sale of U.S. earth-mapping satellites to private industry would be seen as a "hostile action" by Third World nations, the director of the congressional Office of Technology Assessment says.

OTA Director John H. Gibbons told a House committee that much of the profit a private firm could reap from operating the satellites would come from selling advance or exclusive data.

"Advance information about the location of resources, the migration of fish or the yield of an agricultural area could be worth a fortune. It would command premium prices," Gibbons said.

Modern Winery At The Biltmore Estate

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A new $6.5 million winery at Biltmore Estate will use the latest technology and produce "the finest wine the world has ever known," says state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

The winery was announced Thursday during a news conference in one of the vineyards overlooking Biltmore House. Biltmore Co. President William A. V. Cecil said it's the result of a decade of dreaming, planning, planting, tasting and testing.

The estate's former main dairy barn, long unused, will be rebuilt to house the winery as planned by Biltmore House architect Richard Morris Hunt, Cecil said.

"Although the architecture of Biltmore Estate Winery will reflect that of a century ago, the equipment it houses will not," he said. The wine-making and storage facilities will represent "state-of-the-art technology designed to save as much of the grapes' flower as possible."

Cecil said Biltmore Estate will conduct research into developing grapes that will make the finest wines in the world under the direction of Philippe Jourdain, the estate's wine-maker.

When the research is advanced, Cecil said, "We will turn loose in Western North Carolina's agricultural community our research findings, and hope that we will have the privilege of processing the grapes that are produced."

Graham praised the new venture and predicted that one day thousands of acres of North Carolina hillside will be planted in wine grapes with farmers growing for Biltmore Estate under contract.

"I'm confident that here we can make the finest wine the world has ever known," he said.

Lebanon Then And Now

A Battlefield Seventeen Centuries Before Christ

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —
Seventeen centuries before Christ, Lebanon was a battlefield.

Today, Israeli and Syrian soldiers, only yards apart, face each other in the Bekaa Valley. And Christian forces, with new arms from the Israelis, oppose the Syrian-backed Druse and their Palestinian allies, for control of what is left of their war-tattered country.

Not much has changed since 1700 B.C. when a people known as the Hyksos conquered Lebanon and surrounding lands by introducing the horse into warfare.

The Hyksos were toppled 150 years later. Ever since,
Lebanon has been a center of conflict with Egyptians, Persians, Arabs, Turks and others, ancient and modern,
trying to control its valuable coastline.

Along the coast from Tripoli and Byblos — which gave the Bible its name — to Beirut, Sidon and Tyre, the Phoenicians built a trade empire unrivaled in the ancient world.

What is now Lebanon was occupied by the Egyptians,

the Greeks, the Romans.
Lebanon's cedar wood built the palaces of Egyptian kings. Byblos exported papyrus rolls to Greece. To Rome, went olive oil, wine, linen and flour.

Europe also left its mark on Lebanon, most notably from the Crusaders who tried to recapture the area for Christianity in the Middle Ages. Then the Ottoman
Turks ruled Lebanon for four centuries.

Lebanon was part of the Middle East battlefield in World War I and, after 20 years of French rule, mandated by the League of Nations, again was part of the battlefield in World War II.

Independence came in 1943, and, in 1946, the departure of the last French troops.

Now there was time for Beirut to grow into a major world capital. Its trade was in oil and banking between the increasingly rich Arab states and the oil-hungry West.

It was a tourist center, too, known as the "Paris of the Middle East."

Americans and Europeans

came to see Lebanon's ancient ruins, remnants of the Greek and Roman eras. Arab sheiks came to do business, to deposit wives and families in elaborate villas in the hills overlooking Beirut, and to gamble and play in the city's casinos and hotels.

But not far from the beautiful beaches, the conflicts that led to today's war were always present.

Maronite Catholics and Druse, members of a sect that split from Islam in the 11th century, had both settled in the central Lebanese mountains to escape persecution. A struggle for power was inevitable, and in the 1860s, thousands of Christians were massacred in the mountains. It was those massacres that first brought the French to Lebanon.

In 1943, at the end of France's mandate, the Maronites took over most of the political power from their French allies. Next in line were the Sunni
Moslems. Then came Shiite Moslems and the Druse. As the mostly poor Shiites grew in number, they demanded more power. So did the Druse.

Add to this the foreign influences that always existed in Lebanon. In the 1950s, it was the pan-Arabism of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser that fed local Arab unrest and, on the Christian side, the fear they would be swallowed up in a totally Arab and Moslem state.

Politics was involved, as well as religion. The Maronites were right-wing, the Druse leftist.

All this bubbled together in the first Lebanese civil war in 1958. Riots, strikes and other disturbances grew until President Camille Chamoun called on the United States for help. President
Eisenhower sent in 10,000
Marines.

They stayed for several months and saw no action.
But the "civil war" of 1958 was only a precursor of what was to come in 1975 and after.

The 1975-76 conflict lasted 19 months, again pitting leftist Moslems against right-wing Christians. It turned stately French colonial buildings and modern skyscrapers into shell-pocked, bombed-out hulks. It shattered

Beirut.

The Palestinians were added to the mix. Thrown out of Jordan, the Palestinian Liberation Organization settled in Lebanon, becoming a state within a state, and Lebanon became a target of Israel.

Now the Syrians, who disagreed with the French mandate that split Lebanon from Syria in 1920, were called in as peacekeepers and stayed.

The war that began in 1975 has not yet ended. The Christians allied with Israel, the leftist Moslems with the Palestinians and Syria.

Israel's 1982 invasion
further devastated Beirut.
The massacre of hundreds in the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla, as Israeli troops ringed the camp, added to the animosity.

In the midst of today's conflict are the multinational forces — American, French, Italian and British — backing President Amin Gemayel, a Maronite, and his army, which has done more fighting against the Druse than the right-wing Christian Phalange has.

Now, with the Syrians willing to try the negotiating table instead of the battlefield, there is a tenuous cease-fire. As a price for the cease-fire, Gemayel has agreed to major changes in the political structure of his government and a "national reconciliation conference" with his political and sectarian opponents.

No one is certain it will work. Newspapers here say there have been 179 cease-fires in Lebanon in the last 10 years.

IN LEBANON AGAIN — A squad of U.S. paratroopers walk from an Air Force transport after arriving in Beirut, Lebanon in 1958 when President Camille Chamoun requested U.S. support from President Eisenhower. They did not see any action and left within a few months, but trouble in Lebanon continues today and the United States has sent back the marines. (AP Laserphoto)

Army Cancels
Viper Bazooka

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Army plans to cancel contracts for the Viper anti-tank bazooka after the off-criticized weapon was outshout in competition by a Swedish-built weapon.

The Army said Wednesday
it would terminate contracts with General Dynamics, makers of the Viper.

The shootout competition at the Army's Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland was ordered by Congress.

The weapon's chief critic,
Sen. Warren Rudman,
R-N.H., said after the announcement: "In the final analysis, this means that American soldiers will not be going into battle with a weapon that is unable to kill tanks. The American taxpayers won't be paying for an inferior weapon."

The Viper was originally conceived in 1973 as a shoulder-fired antitank weapon that could be carried into battle by infantrymen against Soviet tanks.

The International Typographical Union, representing 75,000 members, is

1.8 million-member International Brotherhood of

The announcement of "substantive merger discussions" was made by ITU president Joseph Bingel. He said Teamster president Jackie Presser last month invited the ITU to merge.

Bingel said any merger would have to be approved by the ITU's rank-and-file.
