Community Handgun Ban Left Intact By High Court

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) The Supreme Court today left intact rulings that there is no constitutional right to keep a handgun in your home, pleasing gun control advocates and possibly opening the way for more local gun laws.

The justices, without comment, rejected challenges to a Morton Grove, Ill., ordinance outlawing the possession of handguns.

The ban imposed by the small Chicago suburb in 1981, and the enormous controversy it generated, has become a focal point in the emotion-packed confrontation between "gun control" and "right to bear arms" forces.

A federal trial judge, later supported by the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled that the Morton Grove ban on "any handgun unless the same has been rendered permanently inoperative" does not violate the Con-

Those rulings sparked similar gun-control proposals across the nation — in cities such as San Francisco. Chicago and Miami and in state legislatures in Massachusetts and Maryland.

'Challenges have now been rejected by the highest court in the land, and this should put an end to it," Morton Grove Mayor Richard Flickinger said in response to today's ruling.

'We think that smaller towns across the country have been waiting for such a ruling and they now will start work on bans of their own, he said

Charles Orasin, executive vice president of Handgun Control, a major gun control organization, called the court's decision "a legal hammer blow" to gun rights groups, especially the National Rifle Association In its first "wrongful birth" case, the court refused to let parents of a child born after an unsuccessful sterilization recover the cost of rearing the child.

The court, without comment, turned away the appeal of a couple who filed a negligence lawsuit in Illinois.

State courts threw out the claim for rearing costs, but said the couple is entitled to be paid medical and other expenses related to childbirth and pregnancy if there was negligence.

The court also agreed to day to take its first look into government control of cable television content, saying it will decide whether Oklahoma may ban wine commercials from cable

The justices voted to hear arguments that the Oklahoma law violates constitutionally protected free-speech rights.

Although the sale of alcoholic beverages has been legal in Oklahoma since 1959, state law still makes it a crime for "any person, firm any alcoholic beverages or the sale of the same" except for one sign at each retail store. The law specifically defines wine as an alcoholic beverage, but exempts beer.

Greenville's New Chief Of Police Assumes Duties

Floyd H "Ted" Holmes assumed his duties as Greenville's new chief of police today, replacing Glenn Cannon who retired August 31.

Holmes, 45, is a California native and a graduate of California State University at Sacramento, with a degree in public administration with a law enforcement orientation.

His professional experience includes eight years as a police officer in Berkley, Calif., two years as chief of the Vail, Colo., police department, two years as a police management consultant with the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and a management position with the National Governor's Conference. He has also served a year with the U.S. State Department as an advisor to the Vietnamese National Police

For the past 10 years. Holmes has been employed as a police management specialist by Arthur Young & Co. of Austin, Texas, a nationally recognized management firm.

Holmes reported for work about 7:15 a.m. today, and said manager, with Capt. John Briley. who has been acting chief for the past month, and with others.

In a meeting with members of the department on Sept. 1 Holmes said that, in addition to honesty, integrity, a lack of corruption and a lack of brutality, a good police department must have "a service orientation." and "an openness." and must be cost effective.

He said a police department should serve the community as well as police the community, and emphasized a lack of openness results in lack of community support

Holmes said, "Wwe can't clear all cases" and "can't catch all the bad guys. But we can conduct ourselves to show the citizens we are concerned. That's the key to success

The new chief said "I'm here to stay." Although selected as the new chief by the city, "I also selected Greenville," he said, as a place to raise his family

Another Truce Violation Alerts Marine Peacekeepers In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Mortar and small arms fire struck Lebanese army positions near Beirut airport today, sending U.S. Marines bunkers and toxnoles for the first time since a ceasefire halted Lebanon's civil war a week ago.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, a Marine spokesman, said about 30 Marines of the 1,600-man U.S. contingent of the multinational force in Beirut went to "condition one" - the highest alert for 30 minutes at midmorning while Lebanese army positions at the nearby Khalde highway intersection were under attack. It was not clear who was doing the shooting.

No shells or bullets strayed into the Marine compound at the airport and the Marines emerged from bunkers and foxholes when the firing tapered off, Rowe said.

Arizona Flood Leaves Ten Dead Or Missing

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Floodwaters that left 10 people dead or missing surged through normally bone-dry land today, forcing thousands from their homes, washing out bridges, roads and power and turning a slice of the desert Southwest into "a raging river."

Rivers swollen to record levels burst their banks amid heavy rains Sunday, swallowing buildings and bridges and causing millions of dollars in damage across a 200 mile swath of Arizona, officials said.

Business districts and thousands of houses in Tucson, Clifton, Safford, Nogales and Marana were under several feet of water as rain continued to fall today, and emergency shelters were set up in the few dry structures.

The only thing we could salvage was our kids." said Fred Ramone. 24, who left his flooded home in Rillito for Marana, then had to be evacuated again from Marana to Tucson. 'My family got out - that's the main thing,' he said, adding that he lost his home, car and farm animals to the floods.

A 4-foot-high wall of water hit Tucson on Sunday night as the Santa Cruz River crested. closing all but one of the city's bridges and knocking out major power lines to more than 20,000 homes and businesses.

AT&T Unveils Big Cut In Long Distance Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) -The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. unveiled a $1.75-billion reduction in long-distance rates today. saying the new fees would cut the cost of a regular long-distance call by an average of 10.5 percent.

The proposed reduction was disclosed in a filing with the Federal Communications Commission, which must approve the changes before they can take effect Jan. 1.

While the new rate schedule, or tariff, will allow telephone users to save money on the cost of long-distance calls dialed on AT&T's network, the company is proposing to increase certain.other fees, particularly for business customers. The proposal, for example, would increase AT&T's rates for business private lines by an average 15.3 percent, and would also impose a 75-cent charge for the first time for longdistance directory assistance

The company also said its rates for toll-free WATS service would fall an average 6.9 percent, although rates for incoming WATS calls using "800" numbers would increase an average of 1.3 percent.

calls

The change in customer rates and WATS fees will save users approximately $2 billion a year, the company added, but that will be partially offset by the increase in private-line rates and the fee for long-distance information, bringing the total reduction overall to $1.75 billion.

AT&T said it would maintain its existing evening and night-weekend discounts of 40 percent and 60 percent respectively, but would reduce its base long-distance rates.

WEATHER

Fair tonight with low in mid-50s. Mostly sunny Tuesday with high in mid to upper 80s.

Looking Ahead

Partly cloudy and warm Wednesday through Friday with chance of showers across the state on Thursday. Highs will be mostly in 80s and lows in mid-50s. Fair and cooler Friday with highs mostly in 70s and lows near 60.

Powell Bill Allocations Made

is based 75 percent on population and 25 percent on local street mileage that is not state-maintained. While Charlotte received the most money this year with a check of $5,239,350. Falkland was mailed the smallest check,

$1,644, the secretary reported. Other Pitt municipalities receiving allocations included: Farmville, $82,410; Ayden, $82,308; Grifton, $38,592; Winterville, $34,748; Bethel, $34,197; Fountain, $8,691;

Security Is Missing

The Soviet leadership's delayed response to President Reagan's limited missile deployment offer is disappointing but expectable.

Yuri Andropov's reply mirrored a determination to maintain his numerical missile superiority in any agreement between East and West.

The statement included appropriate words for propaganda purposes; but the lack of comment on what had long been thought to be key elements of any missile agreement provided more interesting fare ... such as silence on including British and French missiles at the Geneva talks, and no mention of the "zero option" concept.

It makes one wonder if the Kremlin is so unsure of the strength of its conventional military forces that it finds the only sense of security within reach is tied to a constant threat of mutual nuclear destruction.

That would be a switch.

It seems only yesterday the West's nuclear umbrella was believed to be the "cheaper way" to safeguarding the Free World from the might of the Red Army.

The march of events erased that, and the West had to rebuild its neglected conventional air, ground and sea forces.

Somehow, the atmosphere of assured security is missing in the world of nations just as it is absent in the lives of individuals. There just ain't no such thing.

Cheering News

The continuing decline ... indeed, the sharp decline ... of unemployment in North Carolina during the month of August is cheering news.

With the rate now below 8 percent for the state as a whole, one can envision many good things for the coming year.

Aside from more jobs for more people and a reduced drain on governmental funds, it also signals a rising market for consumer goods. There is also a hope for increased state revenues, which can go to schools, roads and construction projects that have had to wait for the tide to turn.

Best of all, the feeling of depression is lifting from the minds of many families and people. They can smile again.

Snack Bar Goes Down The Drain

RALEIGH - The state is back in the business of losing money at the Legislative Cafeteria.

In January, the Legislative Service Commission decided to give the contract for operating the cafeteria to a private businessman. During the previous fiscal year that a long session had been held, the state had lost $17,000 by running the cafeteria by itself. The commission decided that private enterprise might be able to do better than the state and bids were sought. Only one came in.

Ron Faison, a Raleigh fast-food restauranteur and a friend of Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Macklenburg, the Senate's president pro tem, sought and received a pretty swell deal. Faison got a contract o operate the cafeteria and the snack bar. He paid no rent and the state provided him with all his utilities and a

At the time the deal was struck. Faison said he might be able to make money where the state couldn't. He could hire part-time help and pay them considerably less than the state employees would receive. Members of the commission said they thought Faison was getting a good deal from the state and they were sure he'd make out quite well. Some privately griped that he should be made to pay his utilities, at the least.

Well, Faison has not made out so well. At least that's what he's saying. The contract contained an escape clause and, on May 19, Faison was telling the Legislature that he was ready to pack it in. He'd lost $7,900 to that -point. At Lawing's suggestion, the commission decided to give Faison $6,000 in state funds to keep the cafeteria open until the end of the session. In the official minutes of that meeting, the money is described as a subsidy.

Faison was back before the commission in September. He wants another subsidy to keep the snack bar open and Lawing's lobbying to get it for him. He says he's losing money. No doubt he is. There's hardly anyone eating in the snack bar. But members of the commission are stymied as to why Faison wouldn't have made money with the cafeteria during the long session.

Faison's prices were no lower than those of local restaurants. They may have been a bit higher. The cafeteria which has a large dining room - was jammed every day at lunch and did some breakfast business. And remember, he didn't have to pay rent or utilities. like other restauranteurs. "It appears to me that he ought to be able to operate it and make money," sais House Speaker Liston Ramsey, co-chairman of the commission with Lawing.

But no one has ever made money running the cafeteria. Other Raleigh restaurants have tried and failed. The state made a real mess of it. At least Faison's food is good. One legislative staffer speculated that a cafeteria which serves only eight meals a week can't cover its labor costs. Another said Faison put too much effort into the cafeteria, neglected the snack bar, and thus lost the walk-in trade that the snack bar used to get. (It was famous for its hot dogs.)

The commission has decided to give Faison a chance to prove his point. If he'll let State Auditor Ed Renfrow Iook at his books, and if Renfrow finds that Faison has in fact been losing money, the commission might give him another subsidy, Ramsey said. But it won't be another $6,000, he said. Maybe $1,000.

George Hall, director of legislative services, says the subsidy is well worth it. He figures the state cut its losses significantly with Faison running the cafeteria. Instead of losing $17,000, the state lost only $6,000.

Strength For Today

The French historian, Ernest Renan, once wrote, "When people complain of life, it is almost always because they have asked impossible things from it." This statement expresses a great truth that many people never realize, namely that happiness based upon unreasonable desires

Most of us like to think we would be perfectly happy if only we could get enough of whatever we want most: money, power popularity, fame, or some other such glittering objective. Yet common sense should tell us that

If happiness will not come from the fulfillment of great desires, then how should we seek it? One way is to shun the pursuit of the unattainable. As John Stuart Mill, the English philosopher put it, "I have learned to seek my happiness by limiting my desires, rather than says Eugene Jennings, an adviser to corporate chairmen. Would-be directors inspect and hesitate and only cautiously alight if they do so at all, he says.

Selectivity is more important than ever to such people because, says Heidrick, a director today might have to attend a half-dozen or more meetings each year, with each one demanding an additional day of preparation.

Some company chairmen and presidents, such as Thomas Murphy when he headed General Motors, and Reginald Jones when he led General Electric. declined to serve on any other boards, although permitting lesser executives to

On the other hand, Heidrick's job is made less difficult by the willingness of some top executives to consider the offers he carries to them, their goal being to gain additional breadth and management experience.

Generally speaking, says Heidrick, the corporation in search of a director will insist that the person bring to the board some specific skills, and that he or she be a person of high visibility - that is,

What we seek, he said, is someone who can look down the road and see the twists and turns, and who can apply strategic planning to the situation

Nissan Plant May Set Pace

SMYRNA, Tenn. - Whether a 26-year-old paint shop robot teohnician named Teresa Harding stays happy once the new Nissan truck plant here goes into full production has profound significance for how labor relations will affect the automotive industry in the U.S. She carried a union card (United Rubber Workers) in a past job, and wants no part of one now. "Why do we need the UAW?" Harding asked us. "As long as the company treats us like they do now. I don't want the UAW digging into my paycheck. I can use the money myself." This is the prevailing sentiment among some 1,700 workers at the first U.S. subsidiary of the giant Japanese automaker, and it is unchallenged even by the United Auto workers. But UAW organizer Jim Turner in nearby Nashville is confident that the non-union utopia at Smyrna will not survive the tumult in mid-1984 when 2,000 workers roll out 500 trucks daily, compared with the current 120. Wait until a truck is slipping off the line every 45 seconds, and we'll see how happy they are without a union." he told us. He is betting that generous Nissan salaries and fringe benefits will not suffice. Nissan deals with unions in its Japanese plants, but they neither strike nor submit grievances.

Much is at stake here for the cafeterias, park their cars in environment.

Democratic-endorsed local-content legislation, which would require partial American fabrication of Japanese cars, is implicitly based on the premise that all auto plants in this country eventually will be organized by the UAW. But so far the workers here like the non-union Indeed, the atmosphere at Smyrna does not in the least resemble Detroit but is a reasonable facsimile of what we saw a few months ago at Nissan's Zama auto plant near Tokyo. Although executives deny that this all-American factory copies the Japanese model, the impact of sending key employees to Japan for several weeks is obvious. The morning mood — workers arriving early to play pingpong, widespread participation in voluntary calisthenics before work and management-labor group meetings starting the day - is peculiarly Japanese. This transplant, some 7,000 miles away into Middle Tennessee, manned from top to bottom with Americans, is made possible not only by the absence of UAW shop stewards but by a vastly different style of management.

Egalitarianism is the watchword. Executives and workers (called "technicians") eat in the same together. "Marvin!" one worker with suggestion shouted at Nissan U.S.A. President Marvin T. Runyon the other day. Runyon, 59, a tall, white-haired Texan with a somewhat forbidding presence, was seldom approached that way during 37 years at Ford. Familiarity is encouraged by the fact that he, like everybody, wears the same blue uniform with the first name written over the

That is cited by 26-year-old technician Terry Williams as a major reason for easy communication with management: "We all wear the same uniform. We all look alike. Bob Drake, director of quality and assurance, conceded to us that "it was a little hard to get used to" but that he now prefers it to the threepiece suits he wore as a senior executive at General Motors.

Executives and foremen with experience in Detroit cannot get over the difference in mood. "I used to hate to get up and come to work in the morning," said Don Counsell, a Chrysler veteran who came here from Michigan to be a supervisor. Joe Jordan, a 35-year-old Tennessean working in the same plant told us: "we all get along so well together I've never worked in a place where people felt that way.

Bob Drake is one Nissan executive who feels this mood derives from bet: ter management, especially greater empathy toward the workers, that would not be altered by union representation. But other executives here see the UAW as the serpent in the Garden of Eden.

They point out that a worker and his foreman can work out a production snag without calling in a shop steward. "It's a problem when you always have to check through a third " says Joe Kieltyka, compar ing life at the trim and chassis plant he manages here with his previous Ford management post in Dearborn.

When we asked Runyon whether the mood created here could continue with the UAW as that third party," he replied flatly the union would not win certification. In response, the UAW's Turner told us: "It won't be up to whether Jim Turner wants it or Mar! vin Runyon doesn't want it. It'll be up to the workers.

So, the UAW is waiting for assembly-line stress to combine with the American temperament in an un-Japanese plea for "third-party" help. If that call does not come next summer when trucks are really rolling, the impact of Smyrna on the future of American industry will be felt deeply.

NEW YORK AP - When you spoke about the corporate board in the old days it was understood that you referred to the gentlemen who set company policy. But with a litle twist of spelling, the term often suggested something else.

N.C. Ranking In Farm Production Said Unchanged

Late spring frosts and a hot, dry summer may make North Carolina's flue-cured tobacco harvest the smallest since 1943, but state officials say the state's national ranking in farm production is not threatened.

"This is going to be one of the most difficult years for tobacco farmers, and other farmers as well, I might add," said John H. Cyrus, director of tobacco affairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

However, since most of the crops damaged were hurt by similar conditions in other states, North Carolina should hold its own, said Jim Knight of the Agriculture Department. He said the only exception this year may be corn, normally North Carolina's fifth largest crop. That commodity was the hardest hit by the summer drought and follows a record $280 million harvest last year.

Agriculture is a $4 billion annual industry in North Carolina, with about a fourth of the receipts, or $1.2 billion, coming from tobacco. North Carolina is ranked first nationally in flue-cured tobacco production, with 665 million pounds, and first in total tobacco production, with 693 million pounds.

An estimated 799 million pounds of tobacco will be sold in 1983, compared to more than 1 billion last year. Nationwide, the tobacco crop is expected to be the smallest since 1941.

A 10 percent reduction in the federal quota - the amount of tobacco farmers are allowed to grow - reduced the crop before the season began. And bad weather added to the reduc-

Officials estimate about 100 million pounds of tobacco was lost because of the

"Quite a few farmers will need to apply for federal disaster loans," Cyrus said.

The smaller crop helped spark more competitive prices this year, with 100 pounds going for an average of $180.65 this year, compared to $178.42 in 1982.

More competition has also meant that less leaf has gone to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stablization Corp., Cyrus

With about 80 percent of the crop sold, about 99.5 million pounds - 14.7 percent - has gone into

North Carolina also ranks No. 1 in turkey production, although the birds rank seventh as a money maker within the state.

North Carolina with $422 million last year, hogs third with $365 million, soybeans fourth with $320 million, corn fifth with $280 million and dairy products sixth at $246

North Carolina took over the lead in turkey production from Minnesota in 1981, and solidified its lead last year with the production of 27 million birds. Turkey production this year is expected to approach 30 million birds.

The state ranked third nationally in peanut production last vear, behind Georgia and Alabama, with 415 million pounds, and fourth in burley tobacco, behind Kentucky. Tennessee and Virginia, with 28 million pounds. Tar Heel farmers are also fourth in commercial broiler production. behind Arkansas. Georgia and Alabama, at 419 million

The 1983 North Carolina Peanut Crop has had a difficult summer. Heat, drought and disease problems will likely mean that yields will be nearly as low as 1980. There are hundreds of acres of peanuts in Halifax, Northampton and Hertford counties that are likely not to produce a single mature peanut

Pitt County has fared somewhat better than many peanut-growing counties although 1983 will be a fair year at best. Maturity of peanut fields will be a particularly difficult task this year. The excessive heat during July and August caused peanuts to slow down their growth and development. As a result, there are a few peanuts around the taproot and more immature peanuts forming on the limbs of the peanuts. In seasons where there are high yields peanuts flower heavily in early season and consistently through the remainder of the season. This means that there are always a few overmature and immature peanuts at harvest time. The ck in digging peanuts is to dig when 60-75 percent of the peanuts are showing signs of maturity. Another problem of many peanut growers this year is the appearance of black root rot or CBR, caused by the fungus "Cylindrocladium." This disease can cause growers to dig the field before peanuts are fully mature. The disease causes the peanut taproot to rot and de-compose. The pegs, which can be considered an umbilical cord connecting the peanut pod with the peanut plant can also be disintegrated. As a net result, peanuts are difficult to dig and harvest

Opposition in Assembly To Pay Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -North Carolina teachers and state employees may be in line for a cost-of-living raise. but a proposal to increase teacher salaries by 15 percent has generated opposition in the General Assembly, officials say:

Gov. Jim Hunt and administration officials are looking at equal cost-of-living raises for all state workers, Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press secretary, said

"Beyond that, we are looking at adjusting the teacher salary schedule, which could very well result in additional pay increases for teachers, but we just don't know yet, he said, adding that Hunt is considering pay raises for special categories of state employees that have not been determined yet.

Meanwhile, state House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said there was "no way" the Legislature would approve a plan proposed by state Schools Super-intendent Craig Phillips to pump $200 million into teacher salaries.

Ramsey said a 15 percent raise would be far too expensive, although Phillips claims it is needed to keep teachers from being lured away by private industry.

"We do not believe that the Legislature is going to give one group of (public) employees a higher raise than another group," said Emmett W. Burden, executive director of the N.C. State Employees Association. which represents 28,000 state

- State officials still don't know what killed thousands of fish near Lexington Sept.

Samples of the water, sediment and dead fish from Abbott's Creek. Rich Fork Creek and Hamby's Creek are still being analyzed, said R. Paul Wilms, assistant director of the state Division of Environmental Management in Raleigh

He said a red color in the water could be a dye from one or more textile mills in the area, but is unrelated to the fish kill.

What was causing the color wasn't toxic." Wilms said

Another difficulty in determining the cause is that not all fish species in the creeks are dying, he said. Catfish and other fish that feed on the creek bottoms are particularly affected, as are crappies that feed on smaller fish and plants near the surface. But bass have not been killed

Says Animated Feature Movie Production Is 'Dead'

Associated Press Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) There's little life left in the production of animated feature movies, which have had a troubled history since Walt Disney invented the art

'It's dead," Ralph Bakshi proclaimed recently as he announced he was switching to live-action movies.

Bakshi is the filmmaker who brought vigor and controversy to the field of animation with such films as 'Fritz the Cat," "Heavy Traffic" and "Lord of the

"I tried to create an adult animation market, and it proved too difficult," said Bakshi, who is planning a film with real actors for Paramount Pictures. No producer of animation — the trade doesn't like to call them cartoons - can compete with Disney, he added, citing the recent failures of The Secret of NIMH. "Heidi's Song." "Twice Upon a Time" and his own American Pop.

Warner Bros. has also released compilations of old Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck cartoons to scant return. Bakshi spoke just before the 'Fire and Ice," which has failed to catch on in a limited release by 20th Century-Fox.

Ever since Walt Disney made "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in 1937, rival producers have tried to match his success. It has never happened. Film makers claim they can make features of equal quality, but they lack the power of the Disney name and the company's marketing skill.

None of the major studios knows how to sell animated features," said Don Bluth, the Disney defector who produced "The Secret of NIMH." "If you give your film to a major, you're certain to fail.

'I have believed for the past five years that the animated art form was dyDisney, there hasn't been a commercial success in the

He added that he believed "NIMH" would eventually turn a profit — "After all, 'Pinocchio,' 'Bambi' and 'Fantasia' lost money on their first releases."

Although his company has two feature in story development, Bluth has turned his energies to a new area: video games featuring animated displays. He created the hit "Dragon's Lair," which he described as a $3-million investment that has already grossed $40 million. He plans to make four or five games a year - 22-minute films at $100,000 per minute.

"Animated features have a place, especially with the coming of cassettes and other markets," said Joe Barbera of the Hanna-Barbera studio, which produced "Huckleberry Hound," "Yogi Bear" and

"The Flintstones. "The main problem is that they take too long (to make) and cost too much. When you're in production for five-six-seven years, the interest keeps piling up, Barbera said.

Walt Disney Productions maintains its confidence in the animated feature and has trained a new generation of animators to replace retired veterans and those who left with Bluth three years ago.

'We're half-way through the rough animation of 'The Black Cauldron," said Ed Hansen, head of the Disney animation department, "and we're aiming for release in

The sword-and-sorcery adventure has been in production since May 1981 and is expected to cost $20 million.

Disney also has a 30minute film "Mickey's Christmas Carol," using all of the studio's old-time characters, which will accompany the re-release of The Rescuers' this Christmas. Hansen reported that "Basil of Baker Street,"

'It's more in the style of the cartoons and we hope it could be done for $13-15 million," he said.

Regan Urges 'Line Item' Veto Power

By ROBERT FURLOW Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said today that Congress should give President Reagan authority for "lineitem vetoes" - which would approve specific parts of spending bills while rejecting other parts — if the House and Senate are unwilling to make budget cuts requested by the president.

Such authority would enable the president to whittle record deficits that threaten the nation's economic expansion. Regan said in a speech to the National Alliance of Business. Regan noted that many governors have the authority to choose among details of spending legislation, and the president himself has said he was pleased with the way such a setup worked while he was governor of California. While Reagan has said he would like the same option as president, there has been no concerted effort to win it.

"I'll be pushing for it," the Treasury secretary said to reporters after his speech. But he said he was speaking only for himself and not necessarily for the administration as a whole.

The Constitution allows the president two options when presented with legislation appropriating money: He can accept the legislation even if it contains sections he doesn't like or he can veto it even if that means turning down sections he badly

Regan said today he would welcome a constitutional amendment to change that. Or, he said, Congress could accomplish the same aim "in part' simply by passing a bill. He did not say how.

Earlier presidents have also chafed under the allor-nothing veto setup, and former President Nixon got into a fight with Congress by simply refusing to spend money that Congress had appropriated.

That led to the 1974 passage of the Budget Control and Impoundment Act which bars such presidential action except with further congressional approval. Conceivably, congressional repeal of all or part of that act could allow Reagan to impound money for various programs The administration has repeatedly asked Congress to trim a number of domestic programs while increasing military spending over the last three years. During that time, the federal deficit has risen from about $60 billion in fiscal 1981 to an estimated $200 billion in fiscal 1983. which ended Friday.

Administration officials have put the blame on Congress - particularly Democratic congressmen - while Reagan's critics have said the main reasons include the huge administration-pushed tax cuts that ate into federal revenue. Another main cause, by all accounts, was the 1981-82 recession.

Green Bay Uses Quick Punch For Win

By The Associated Press

The Green Bay Packers went for the quick knockout - and got it in record

Meanwhile, two other National Football League heavyweights, the Los Angeles Raiders and Washington Redskins, went to the closing seconds of their battle before the Super Bowl champion Redskins capped a stunning comeback

And the NFL's only unbeaten power, the Dallas Cowboys, again took the storm-from-behind route Sunday on a wild day which featured almost a dozen long, dramatic scoring plays.

The Packers got two of those, a 90-yard punt return by Phillip Epps and a 75-yard pass from Lynn Dickey to Jessie Clark on the way to a record 49-point first half.

Green Bay ended up mauling the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers 55-14.

The Redskins rallied from a 35-20 deficit in the final 7:31, knocking the Raiders from the undefeated ranks on Joe Theismann's 6-yard scoring toss to Joe Washington with 33 seconds remain-

That, combined with the Cowboys' 37-24 decision over Minnesota, left Dallas as the only 5-0 team in the league. Dallas trailed 24-10 late in the first half but dominated the final 30 minutes, holding the Vikings without a first down until the final minutes of the second half.

Elsewhere Sunday, it was San Diego 41, the New York Giants 34; New Orleans 17, Miami 7; Baltimore 34, Cincinnati 31; Philadelphia 28, Atlanta 24; Los Angeles Louis 14; Seattle 24, Cleveland 9; San Francisco 33, New England 13; Pittsburgh 17, Houston 10 and Chicago 31, Denver 14

The Packers scored 45 on Nov. 12, 1967 against Cleveland.

The Packers amassed 519 vards - 355 through the air and 164 on the ground. Stenerud also had two field goals for 13 points to move into second place past Jim touchdowns for his best day ever in the Turner on the all-time scoring list. NFL. He hit Charlie Brown with an

ECU Beats The Odds As Defense Rallies

Reflector Sports Writer

COLUMBIA, MO - Oddsmakers gave the Missouri Tigers a three- to four-point edge over the Pirates of East Carolina in Saturday's contest — the "official" Las Vegas tally was reportedly 11 points in favor of the Big Eight Conference representatives.

The problem was, no one had told the ECU football players they were supposed to lose the game, and the Pirates went onto Faurot Field and took a 13-6 victory to improve their record to 3-1 in the season.

The Pirates narrowly missed upsetting the nationally-ranked Florida State Seminoles in their season opener, then rebounded for a 22-16 victory over rival N.C. State on the road the next weekend. A 50-25 trouncing of Murray State in the Pirates' home opener followed.

"They did exactly what we expected," senior defensive end Jeff Pegues said. "I've been saying all week they couldn't throw the ball that well — we knew it all along. We got a few sacks when it counted.

"Having the success we've had so far has certainly helped our confidence. I feel like we can play with anybody in the nation.

The Pirate defense spent much of the afternoon trying to stop the Tigers on crucial third down plays, with ECU benefitting on most. The Tigers managed to convert on just three of 15 third-down attempts, and rushed for just 86 yards on 43 running plays.

The Pirates snared their second interception of the season when safety Clint Harris tipped a Marlon Adler pass into Kenny Phillips' hands to set up a 39-yard field goal by Jeff-Heath to knot the score at 6-6.

"The quarterback was rolling around, and I saw the tight end coming on a cross pattern." Harris said after the game. "I knew what was happening from studying the films. I got a hand on it, and Kenny came up with it.

an All-Americ finished the game with four solo tackles and nine overall, was also important in putting pressure on the Tiger backfield.

"I think I got to (Adler) once, and then another time just missed when I dove in. We may give up some short yardage, but when we need to, we can shut down the offense.

Redshirted freshman tackle Randy Watts and senior linebacker P.J. Jordan sacked Adler for losses of eight and 10 yards on the Tigers final two possessions of the game, and along with senior tackle Hal Stephens, the trio combined for 19 of the Pirates' 57 tackles on

"We knew that they were going to try to run the ball," Stephens said. "We wanted to make them try to pass, and then put pressure on the quarterback. We just like to improve every

The ECU offense rolled up 331 yards compared to 223 for the Tigers. The Pirates managed 196 yards rushing against the Missouri defense which had averaged giving up just 50 per game for fifth place among NCAA Division I schools.

Quraterback Kevin Ingram connected on 10 of 17 passes for 135 yards, while junior flanker Ricky Nichols gathered in three of those for 51 yards. Earnest Byner rushed for 95 yards on

'They gave us a lot of different looks with their defense," Ingram said. "They stopped us a little, but it was mostly little mistakes we made on offense that hurt us.

In a game full of "big" plays for the Pirates, one of the early mistakes could have been costly. On second down of the Pirates' second possession of the game, Byner fumbled and Jerome Caver recovered for the Tigers. Byner also fumbled late in the victory over N.C. State before the ECU defense shut down the Wolfpack, but Missouri increased its lead to 6-0 with the first-quarter turnover.

"I wasn't thinking about (the fumble at State) after I fumbled," Byner said. "I had thought about it before the game. When I fumbled at State, I was the last one off the field — I just felt sick.

'Today, I was the first one off; I knew our defense was ready, and we had the rest of the game to make something happen. I knew they had a good defense; it just took us a little time to get organized."

Senior tight end Norwood Vann's three over eighth place on the all-time ECU receiving list, and he credited the Pirate defense for the victory "We had a great defensive effort out there today," Vann said. "The defense played a tremendous game. They came up with the big plays, and gave us some opportunities.

The previously unbeaten Raiders, whose defense had allowed only 37 points this season, trailed 17-7 at the half.

Playing giveaway in the first half, the Raiders contributed to their own demise by coughing up the ball four times. They had turned it over only seven times in the previous four

The only sign of life from the Raiders in the half was a 99-yard Jim Plunkett to Cliff Branch touchdown pass.

The Raider line, which had allowed Plunkett to be sacked four times in the opening half, stiffened after intermission, opening holes for Frank Hawkins on the ground and allowing Plunkett to complete 11 of 14 in the second half, including three more touchdown passes.

Down 20-7, Plunkett hit Calvin Muhammad on touchdown strikes of 35 and 22 yards as the Raiders moved ahead for the first time, 21-20, with two minutes remaining in the third

After Plunkett's fourth touchdown pass, a 2-varder to Todd Christensen, made it 28-20, Greg Pruitt returned a punt 97 yards for a score and the Raiders' 15-point lead.

ECU Golfers 10th In JMU Tourney

Pirates of East Carolina University finished the final round of the James Madison Invitational Golf Tournament Sunday with round of 309 to tie Methodist College for 10th place on the Olde Mill Golf Course.

After the Pirates opened with a first-round total of 316, they posted the second best total of the final round to move from 20th to 10th place. Elon College won the tourney by 10 strokes with a

Last Saturday afternoon, Missouri fans recycled some buttons that had been prominant a year ago: "Where the hell is East Carolina?"

Now you know those folks in Missouri. They have to be shown. A year ago, although the Pirates gave the Tigers a good game, bowing only to a couple of late scores, they were back at

"Show me!" they cried.

Well, show 'em the Pirates did, putting forth one of the top defensive efforts in a long time. They stifled Missouri's running game, holding it to less than 100 yards, and did a good job with the pass defense, too, although Missouri is really not known for its passing.

At the same time, the Pirates were able finally — to open up its offense and rushed for nearly 200 yards - almost four times what Missouri had allowed in its first three games. It might be noted too that one of the Missouri victories was over Illinois, which flattened number four ranked Iowa, 33-0, Saturday after-

There is no question that the victory was a big one in the history of East Carolina. While to some fans it might not go up there with wins over North Carolina and N.C. State, it could possibly be the most significant of all times. It was against a team that has "clout." a name that has been a power for years. And while Missouri's days of being a national championship contender are in the past, there certainly is a tradition there of "big time football," the kind that East Carolina is now battling to be recognized for.

While defeating N.C. State is great in the state of North Carolina, the win over Missouri will bring the Pirates national attention, the kind that could never have been received with a win over an in-state power.

Coach Ed Emory, his staff and his players deserve a lot of credit.

And they also deserve a lot of support. The chance for eastern North Carolina to show that support will come Saturday afternoon when the Pirates host Southwestern Louisiana.

It might be pointed out that while Southwestern - the only Division I-A team to come to Ficklen this year - has been unsuccessful this year, the Pirates have not beaten them in their two previous visits here. SWL downed the Pirates in 1977 by a 9-7 score then took a 27-21 victory over the Bucs in 1980.

This year, the Pirates will be solid favorites to win the game, but the Ragin' Cajuns will be trying to live up to their nickname and cause the Pirates to do a little raging of their own. It's a game that could cause fireworks.

And that support will be necessary down the line if the Pirates continue to be successful. Should they be considered for a bowl bid come November, one of the things looked at will be fan support.

Waltrip Closing Gap With Holly Farms Win

- The gap is closing slowly, but Darrell Waltrip remains confident he can catch Bobby Allison for the third straight year.

The two-time defending Winston Cup champion nipped away at Allison's lead Sunday by winning the Holly Farms 400 Grand National stock car

His sixth short track victory of the season and sixth straight triumph on North Wilkesboro Speedway's 5-8mile oval moved him 15 points closer to Allison, cutting the margin to 91 points with four races remaining

Dale Earnhardt finished second, 2.7 seconds behind Waltrip's Pepsi-sponsored Chevrolet Monte Carlo. And Allison was just behind Earnhardt.

The only other driver on the same lap at the end was fourth-place Bill Elliott.

"We gotta establish the fact that they (Allison and his DiGard-Miller High Life Team) can't outrun us,' Waltrip explained. "We can't let them go conservative on us. We gotta make them

In the past three races, Allison had won twice and finished second in the other, extending a lead that had shrunk to 41 points back to 106 going into Sunday's race.

"That's why this race was so important," Waltrip said. "We had to get the points down a little bit. Now what we need is some help from everybody else.

"It seems like guys come up there and race early in the races, but they're not there at the end. That's hurting us. But the black and white of it is that we've got to win and he's got to lose. I think it'll go right to the end.

Allison, who said he never right all day, added, "I feel right now. We would have liked to have finished ahead of Darrell , but it could have been a lot worse. Waltrip dominated Sunday's race, starting from the pole and leading until he pitted on lap 154. Earnhardt was strong in the middle of the 400-lap, 250-mile race, but Waltrip passed him to regain the lead on lap 302 and held it to the end, except for one lap during a late pit stop. Waltrip, who won $34,800, averaged 100.716 mph, breaking the old track record of 98.479 set in April of 1971 by Richard Petty.

The only caution flag of the quick race came 22 laps from the end when Dick Brooks spun harmlessly between turns one and two.

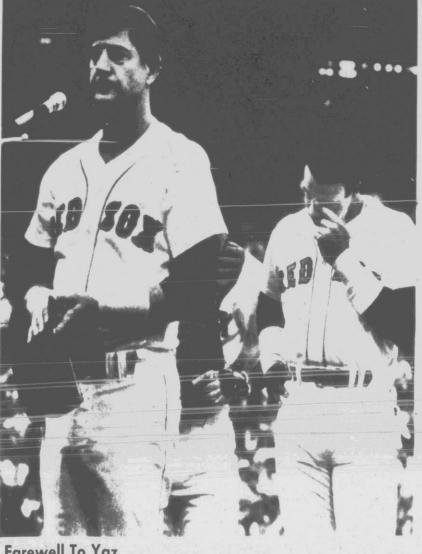

The yellow flag brought Waltrip and Earnhardt into the pits for tires, but Allison stayed out one more lap and led for the only time all day, picking up the five-point bonus for leading the race.

"I was hoping it wouldn't go caution," Waltrip said with a shake of his head. "Then the yellow came out and, zap, there everybody is. I thought, 'What if somebody does something tricky?' "But the car really handled well all day and I was able to move away from then when the green came out.

When the green did come out, Waltrip quickly pulled away from Earnhardt, who had his hands full the rest of the way holding off the determined Allison.

The next Grand National event is next Sunday at Charlotte, N.C., a 1.5-mile superspeedway.

Waltrip, who has not won on a superspeedway - a track got the handling in his Buick one-mile or longer - this season, isn't worried.

Phillies, Dodgers Only Remaining N.L. Teams

By The Associated Press For all but two of the teams in the National League, it's time to go home for the

And for the Philadelphia Phillies and the Los Angeles Dodgers, it's time to heat up for some serious business.

The NL East champion Phillies and NL West winning Dodgers, both substituting freely, each lost their final regular season games Sunday. Los Angeles, which fell to San Francisco 4-3, finished at 91-71 while the Phillies, 4-0 losers to Pittsburgh, wound up 90-72.

On Tuesday night in Los Angeles, the Dodgers and Phillies begin their best-offive NL championship series. The two teams met in the playoffs in 1977 and 1978, with Los Angeles winning three games-to-one each season.

This year, the number everyone is looking at is the Angeles beat Philadelphia 11 out of 12 times, inclduing all six at Dodger Stadium.

"Everytime we played them we were flat," Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens said just after his team was shut out by Pittsburgh's Lee Tunnell. They'd catch us cold. But they'll see a different ballclub

The Phillies won their division with an 18-3 burst in September that included an 11-game winning streak. The Dodgers, meanwhile, were 14-17 in Septmeber.

'They're going to be the same team we faced all year. the same guys," said the Dodgers' Pedro Guerrero. 'But they will be fired up for the playoffs.

'I'm sure we're not going to go out and beat them like we did during the year, but I still expect to beat them.

Pinch hitter Rusty Staub doubled home two runs with two outs in the ninth inning of the second game to lift New York. The hit gave Staub 25 runs batted in as a pinch hitter this season, tying a major league record held by Joe Cronin and Jerry Lynch

Kuenn, Howard Head 'Axed' Manager List

By The Associated Press The final day of the 1983 baseball season also was the last day as manager for Milwaukee's Harvey Kuenn, Charlie Fox of the Chicago Cubs and Frank Howard of the New York Mets.

Howard was fired, Kuenn said he was fired and Fox decided to move back into the front office.

Though the Brewers did not announce Kuenn's firing on Sunday — a news conference was scheduled for 10 a.m. EDT today in Milwaukee the man who led the team within one game of winning the World Series last year claimed he had been dis-

"As we all know, you are eventually going to get fired in this business," said Kuenn. "I would be lying to you if I said this wasn't tough, but it happened and I have to accept it.

The leading contender to succeed Kuenn, who replaced Buck Rodgers 47 games into the 1982 season and guided the Brewers to their first American League pennant, appeared to be Rene Lachemann. Lachemann was fired by Seattle earlier this

"It was disappointing," Kuenn said of Milwaukee's 1983 season, during which the Brewers were fifth in the AL East at 87-75, 11 games behind division winner Baltimore. 'We were in a position to be a lot closer and then went into one of those tailspins. I've never seen nine guys go into a slump all at once like that."

The Mets' hitters slumped most of the year, as did the pitchers as the team finished last in the National League East at 68-94, the second-worst record in the majors. Howard, who took over as manager when George Bamberger quit on June 3, guided the Mets to a 52-64 mark

In light of the record, I don't know that I could have made much of a pitch (for the said Howard, who managed the San Diego Padres in 1981.

"In the first half of the season, we were hopeless. In the second half, we were hopeful," said Mets General Manager Frank Cashen. "For that, we can credit Howard. But ... we made a decision to go in another direction. If Cashen elects to stay in the organization for a successor, he might name coach Bobby Valentine or Tidewater Manager Dave Johnson, who led the Tides to the Triple A World Series title.

Fox moved back to the dugout on Aug. 22 when Lee Elia was fired by GM Dallas Green. Now. Fox returns to his duties as Green's special assistant.

"I know I can still manage, said Fox, who previously handled the Giants and Expos. "But for the good of the organization and overall picture. I've decided to up to the front office.

Heels Rely On Teamwork; Hurricanes Set Records

AP Sports Writer

Years ago, they might have called on Amos Lawrence. More recently, North Carolina might have relied on Kelvin converting three turnovers Tech this weekend, it was truly a team effort.

The fifth-ranked Tar Heels had their backs to the wall in Grant Field, trailing 21-7 in the second quarter. Then, Scott Stankavage unlimbered his right arm, while tailbacks Ethan Horton and Tyrone Anthony ran around and through the Yellow Jacket defense. When it ended, North Carolina had captured a 38-21 victory in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

Virginia's unbeaten string came to an end as No. 19 Maryland posted 10 points late in the fourth quarter to secure a 23-3 victory. North Carolina State took advantage of Wake Forest mistakes and rolled to a 38-15 victory, its first conference triumph

No. 15 Miami of Florida set a total offense record as well as a passing yardage record in 56-17 trouncing of Duke. Clemson had the weekend off.

"We could not say any one individual won the game for us." Tar Heel coach Dick Crum said. "We had II guys offensively and 11 guys defensively who did the job. Stankavage passed for a school-record 271 yards on 17 completions in 31 attempts. He hit Larry Griffin on a 28-yard scoring pass to cut an 11-point halftime deficit to 21-17. Earl Winfield took in a 30-yard scoring strike to give the Tar Heels their first lead. Anthony scored on a 28-yard run and Horton added a 52yard touchdown gallop to help raise North Carolina's record to 5-0. Georgia Tech is winless in four tries.

One of those turnovers was a 37-yard interception return by linebacker Frank Bush.

'That turned everything around," Wolfpack wide receiver Ricky Wall said. "It seemed at that point that the defense was dying and the offense wasn't doing the job. It just seemed like that got everybody up. It even got the hair on my leg up.

It also raised Reed's spirit and hopes for a battle for the ACC title.

"Our team did a lot of soul searching this week," Reed said. "We took a firm stand mentally and this win was a lot of positive reinforcement. Coming back and getting stronger in the final quarter means a lot to us."

Maryland has always held the advantage over Virginia, winning 30 of 47 games be-tween the two. Saturday's battle was one of the closest.

They were just a better - today," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "Maybe next week the game would be closer. When the score is 23-3, it usually means that you just weren't good enough

Miami scored the first three times it had the football. Duke managed to whittle the lead to 21-10 at halftime, but the Hurricanes cranked up again in the second half. Duke had not surrendered that many points since its 59-34 loss to North Carolina in 1970, and the margin of defeat was the worst since a 52-0 thrashing at the hands of Michigan.

In the battle of Missouri, host Kansas City got a 37-yard TD run with a fumble by Charles Jackson to down the Cardinals, who were forced to use third-string QB Rusty Lisch when Jim Hart aggravated a rib injury. There were 15 turnovers in the game eight by St. Louis - two short of the NFL record of 17.

"When you commit that many turnovers, the game becomes a travesty," said Cardinals Coach Jim Hanifan.

Seahawks 24, Browns 9 Visiting Seattle capitalized on three turnovers by Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe and got two short scoring runs by rookie Curt Warner The Seahawks' two secondhalf touchdown drives began at the Cleveland 11 (following an interception) and 15 (after a Sipe fumble).

"We'd gone about six periods without forcing a turnover." said Seattle Coach Chuck Knox, "but we were able to get them today.

San Francisco won its fourth consecutive game as Ray Wersching kicked four field goals and Joe Montana led the 49ers on six straight scoring drives in Foxboro.

"We felt we could control the ball," said Montana, the NFL's leading passer, who hit 25 of 38 for 288 yards and a pair of touchdowns. "It's hard to stop our passing game when we're on.

The Steelers won their first home game in three tries but struggled against winless Houston. Cliff Stoudt hit Walter Abercrombie on a 51-yard TD pass to boost the Steelers to victory

The touchdown was a busted play, 'said Abercrombie. "We were fortunate enough we were able to turn a mistake into a touchdown.

Credit Porpoises With Finding Drowned Man

COROLLA, N.C. (AP) - A school of porpoises have been credited with finding the body of a 17-year-old Chesapeake, Va., man who drowned this weekend off the Currituck Outer Banks.

The body of Kevin Marshall Cherry washed ashore Saturday almost at the feet of his father. Marshall Cherry, 39, who earlier had made a desperate attempt to save his son.

'There were three big porpoises right in the shallow water, right behind the body." said Gene Austin, a Currituck County deputy sheriff who was at the scene.

"I wouldn't go so far as to say they pushed the body ashore." Austin said, "but they were part of a school of about 15 porpoises, and they had been circling around just off the beach where the boy disappeared. We all saw them and commented on it.

"It was a very strange sight, the way those three porpoises worked themselves right up to the beach behind the body. I have lived here all my life, and I always heard that a porpoise will push a dead man to shore Makes you wonder.

Barry Nelms, a Currituck County commissioner and marine biologist who lives in Corolla, said several people on the beach saw the unusual actions of the porpoises during the search for the boy's

"It is not common, but neither is it unusual for porpoises to act this way. said Nelms, a leader of the Corolla Rescue Squad that took Cherry's body to the Wright Clinic in Jarvisburg.

where he was pronounced dead.

"There are many documented cases where porpoises seemed to have deliberately helped distressed humans."

Austin seed the boy's father was standing by a fourwheel drive vehicle on the beach with Jack Bennett, a partner of Nelms' in an Outer Banks business, when the men noticed something in the surf.

The time was just before 5 p.m., about four hours after young Cherry disappeared. Then both men saw that the porpoises appeared to be nudging the youth's body onto the beach.

When rescuers hurried to the spot, the porpoises rejoined the rest of the porpoise school just offshore and disappeared, witnesses

The younger Cherry, a high school honors student. had paddled through the breakers in a small raft a few minutes after 1 p.m. Saturday to go body surfing, Austin said.

He said the boy's stepmother heard him call and wave for help some distance out from the surf line. He was out of the raft, she said, but she did not know whether he had jumped or fallen overboard.

The stepmother summoned the elder Cherry, who launched a surfboard through the breakers and paddled out to help his son.

"He was through the surf and 50 feet away when his son went down; he just disappeared," Austin said.

two state employee groups hope their merger to a single association will help them speak a language legislators understand - voting 23 Fits of pique 25 Above the clouds 26 To cudgel

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

"Legislators, all being elected officials, respect numbers, groups that have strength, blocs of voters. said Emmett Burden, executive director of the N.C. State Employees Association and lobbyist in the Legislature.

Burden's group of 28,000 workers voted recently to merge with the 13,000 policies stemmed from religious beliefs.

member N.C. State Government Employees Association after 36 years of coexistence. The new State Employees of North Carolina Inc. will officially begin operation July 1, 1984.

N.C. Employees Eye Voting Strength

The new group will be the nation's second largest state employee association next to California's state employee association. Its 41,000 members will be only slightly fewer than the approximately 45,000 members of the North Carolina Association of Educators. Burden said there are 75,000 potential members for the group.

Some members within the groups have sought merger for about two decades. Burden says it may have been the "scrap for the taxpayer's dollar" that convinced state workers they need more clout

The General Assembly ended a one-year salary freeze in July, when state workers were granted a 5 percent pay raise but it continued the freeze on merit pay. The workers had sought a 12 percent raise.

"More people are after the money," Burden said. "Our job has become tougher.

Gov. Jim Hunt, a member of both groups, supported the merger, saying it would give state workers more clout.

The unity of the groups may be tested before the merger actually takes place. The General Assembly will meet in June and Hunt already has promised to invest any surplus revenues in the public schools, perhaps giving teachers a higher raise than other state workers.

Burden notes that the

Sen. East Eyes Changed Image

By The Associated Press

U.S. Sen. John East says his desire to change his public image is not an attempt to distance himself from fellow North Carolina Republican Sen. Jesse

"I am a great admirer of his." East said of Helms. "He may have some equals." but he has no superiors in his knowledge of the parliamentary rules. ... We are different personalities and have different styles in furthering the same goals

East told the Winston-Salem Journal last week that he was uncomfortable with his image as "impulsive and somewhat of a high roller.

"I feel that to the extent I have conveyed to the public the idea that I am by nature a contentious and shallow person I have done a disservice to myself," he said.

East, as chairman of the Separation of Powers Subcommittee, has held widely publicized hearings on abortion and contended that life begins with conception. Opponents said he gave them little time at the hearings to argue against that position.

Earlier this year, he revived one of his biggest campaign issues when he held a day-long hearing on the legality of the Panama Canal treaties.

"He realized after he got here that he was being perceived as wrongheaded. and he wants to change that," a Senate staffer who has worked with East told the Journal.

During the past few weeks, East has avoided expressing a strong position on issues such as expanded wilderness areas for North Carolina and revenue sharing for coastal states from offshore drilling leases.

"There are limits to what you can accomplish in the legislative process when you try to involve yourself in every issue that comes down the pike," he said. "So I've become less concerned about that and more concerned, as a senator, about using this forum I have to discuss these for education have been divided in the past. He said superintendents, principals and teachers have seen their roles as different and often in "The worker in the Revenue Department does not look at his work as a single activity," Burden said. "The state employees are all under one administration and the state personnel act. Our cohesiveness is as good or better than any other organization our size.

But he acknowledges there are theories about why the groups remained separate so long. One is that workers considered one group white collar and the other blue collar.

The NCSGEA represents Department of Transportation and Department of Correction workers while the other group is a mixture of employees from other departments

Burden said the major issues now - salaries and retirement benefits - will bring the two sides together.

He said the organizatoin will make the work easier for him and his counterpart. Arch Laney of NCSGEA, to cover all the bases at the Legislature instead of duplicating efforts.

Both men suffered heart problems after the session ended this year. Laney underwent open heart surgery last week

This week committees will meet to map the strategy for merging the groups. The NCSGEA staff will move from rented headquarters into permanent offices of NCSEA on Jan. 1, 1984.

The SENC will elect a board of directors at its first convention next September. The group then will choose a new executive director.

IRS Awaiting Challenge

By The Associated Press Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. is expected to lead a campaign aimed at curbing the power of the Internal Revenue Service in the wake of court decisions that may force church-affiliated schools to recruit black students and faculty

Helms is preparing a budget amendment that would eliminate funds for any new enforcement efforts by the IRS against private and church schools that might discriminate against blacks. The amendment would block court orders putting private schools' tax exemptions at risk unless they can prove they don't discriminate

A court order has been issued in Mississippi affecting private and church schools that were established or expanded during the period public schools were being desegregated. Under the threat of losing their tax-exempt status, the schools must demonstrate to the IRS they don't discrimi-

The case has implications for similar schools elsewhere because of a companion case before the U.S. Supreme Court. In that case, the court will decide the right of black parents with children in public schools to sue the IRS to force revocation of the tax-exempt status of allegedly discriminatory schools in other states.

Helms's attempt, similar to one defeated last December by a 61-29 vote, is expected to draw stiff op-position from civil rights organizations. "We will oppose it." said Althea T.L. Simmons. Washington lobbyist for the NAACP. "We call them segregationist academies.

However, Jack K. Clayton. Washington lobbyist for the American Association of Christian Schools, Helms amendment would stop the greatest assault on the free exercise of religion this country has ever seen

The impending battle over the amendment follows a Supreme Court decision in May upholding the IRS's authority to deny tax-exampt status to church-affiliated schools with discriminatory policies. The schools involved were Bob Jones University in South Carolina and Goldsboro Christian School. School officials maintained
