Nobel Committee's Choice

Peace Prize For Walesa

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
OSLO, Norway (AP) — Lech Walesa, founder of the now-outlawed Solidarity labor union, today won the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize for his struggle on behalf of workers' rights in Communist-ruled Poland.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee said it honored Walesa "as an exponent of the active longing for peace and freedom which exists, in spite of unequal conditions, unconquered in all the peoples of the world."

Walesa, the first Pole to win the coveted prize, was chosen for his "contribution, made with considerable personal sacrifice, to ensure the workers' right to establish their own organizations," the committee said.

It said the 40-year-old former head of Solidarity, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc, had worked with "a determination to solve his country's problems through negotiation and cooperation without resorting to violence."

Walesa had left his apartment this morning to hunt for mushrooms in the woods and was not at home when the prize was announced, said his wife Danuta.

"Oh god, I am very happy, very, very happy," she said when reached by telephone at their home in the Baltic port of Gdansk, where Walesa helped create Solidarity at the Lenin shipyard.

Walesa entered the international spotlight in August 1980 when, after a summer of strikes and labor turmoil, Solidarity forced Poland's government to allow the right to strike and organize independent unions.
Those gains were negated later by the banning of Solidarity and the imposition of martial law.

The Nobel Committee, in a statement explaining its award, said Walesa "has attempted to establish a dialogue between the organization he represents — Solidarity — and the authorities."

The statement, read by Nobel Committee chairman Egil Aarvik, did not speculate on whether Walesa will travel to Oslo to receive his award and Nobel Prize check on Dec. 10.

The awards always are given on that date, the anniversary of the death in 1896 of Swedish dynamite inventor Alfred Nobel, whose will established the Nobel Prizes. This year's stipend for each winner is a record 1.5 million Swedish kronor — almost $190,000.

Walesa is only the second peace prize winner from the Soviet bloc, and his selection likely will prompt a similar response there as the 1975 award to Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov. East bloc governments claimed the award to Sakharov was motivated by politics, despite the Nobel Committee's avowed apolitical goals.

Jakob Sverdrup, the Nobel Committee's secretary and head of the Norwegian Nobel Institute, said Walesa's name was proposed by several groups of parliamentarians, including West Germans, French and Norwegians.

Between August 1980 and December 1981, when Polish authorities suspended Solidarity by declaring martial law, Walesa was transformed from an unemployed electrician into one of the world's most familiar faces.

Even after the military crackdown, Walesa remained the leading symbol of the struggle for workers' rights in Poland, a cause to which he had dedicated himself more than a decade.

'Computer Art' Grant To Schools Of Pitt County

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County schools has received a grant from the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction for the development of computer art, county officials have announced.

Associate Superintendent John McKnight told county Board of Education members Tuesday at the regular meeting that the grant, valued at $2,000, designated Pitt County as a model site for a computer art pilot program.

McKnight said the program's objectives include the following:

- Utilizing a computer within the art program on a regular basis
- Demonstrating that the computer is a "creative tool."
- Showing that the computer offers a new art form.

McKnight reported that the county's computer art program will be incorporated into a movie to be shown throughout the state.

The board also recommended the appointment of Kay
Whichard to serve another term on the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees. Ms. Whichard has served previous terms on the PCC board and presently is vice chairman. PCC board members passed a motion at a recent meeting requesting that the city and county school boards reappoint her.

In other business:

•The following persons were appointed to a county-wide vocational advisory council: Cecil Gaskins, Anne McGaughey, Cary Reaves, Jim Hudson, Bill Little, Thomas Atkins, Dave Speir, John Corey, Kelly Barnhill and Jim Hannon.

•The board granted Virginia Electric and Power Co. a utilities easement on the North Pitt High School property.

•Superintendent Eddie West reported in a financial update that revenue from fines and forfeitures is below the anticipated level for the year. In September the schools received $15,785 in fines and forfeitures, $2,548 less than the $18,333 projected in the 1983-84 budget. Dr. West reported that for the fiscal year, revenue from this source is currently $11,356 below the projections.

Winterville Man Testifies He Was Offered Sum For Arson

WASHINGTON — Jasper Earl Grimes of Winterville, testified Tuesday that Kenneth Ross offered him money to burn down two mobile homes in Beaufort County.

Ross, 42, a Highway Patrol sergeant stationed in Pitt County, is on trial in Beaufort County Superior Court on charges of arson and conspiracy to commit arson in connection with the burning of two mobile homes on Oct. 6, 1982.

The house trailers were located on property owned by Harvey H. Dixon Sr., just east of the Pitt County line off U.S. 264.

Grimes, 35, and two other Pitt County residents, Nellie

K. Peterson, 26 of Winterville, and Jesse R. Davis, 24 of Greenville, were charged with two counts of arson in connection with the fires.

However, charges against
Ms. Peterson were dropped Monday, and plea bargains were allowed for Grimes and Davis, in exchange for their testimony.

Both Grimes and Davis were allowed to plead guilty to one count of arson. The other charge against them was dismissed by Judge Michael Bruce, who said he expected their "truthful testimonies."

Both men admitted setting fire to the smaller of the two trailers.

Grimes told the court Tuesday that Ross, suspended without pay after his arrest on June 8, drove him and Grimes' wife Barbara to the trailers two weeks before the fire.

Grimes said Ross told him he wanted the trailers burned while Ross was attending a patrol radar school in Raleigh. He also testified that Ross said he wanted the trailers burned for the insurance money.

Grimes, when asked by District Attorney William Griffin how much Ross offered to pay him for burning the trailers, said "I think he said $200." But Grimes said,

"all I got was $50."

Mrs. Grimes, who testified Tuesday, also said Ross told Grimes that he wanted the trailers burned when Ross drove them to the site.

Greenville attorney Charles M. Vincent and Washington attorney James
R. Vosburg are defending Ross.

Under cross examination
by the defense attorneys, Grimes testified that he had been convicted of assaulting his wife.

Mrs. Grimes, who said she was forced to go with Ross and her husband to the trailers by Grimes, who pointed a gun at her head, said she had been convicted of stabbing her husband on Feb. 19.

Davis was expected to testify for the state as testimony continued today.

'Tax Shelters' Invite An Audit

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Internal Revenue Service is warning high-income investors that putting their money into "abusive" tax shelters will guarantee an audit of their tax returns.

With the IRS facing a mounting backlog of court cases and a revenue loss of $1 billion, IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger said Tuesday that abusive shelters have increased from 400 cases under IRS investigation 10 years ago to more than 325,000 today.

Arms Control Proposal Seen Boosting Chance For Approval Of MX

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Reagan had an eye on Capitol Hill when he called on the Soviet Union to join the United States in a mutual pledge to destroy at least 5 percent of their strategic nuclear warheads a year.

There, Reagan is trying to nail down a $2.6 billion appropriation to buy 27 MX missiles — the first of 100 he wants to see deployed at Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming.

By embracing the idea of a weapons "build-down" — destroying a certain number of weapons before new ones can be deployed — Reagan apparently improved the outlook for the MX program.

But in the House, where Democrats outnumber Republicans by 267 to 167, a White House victory is not considered a cinch.

Nor is it clear if Reagan's move will help break the deadlock in the negotiations with the Soviet Union, which resume Thursday in Geneva, Switzerland.

"It would be stunning if there were anything but a very cold reaction," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., one of the key arms control moderates won over by Reagan.

The proposed build-down calls for "variable ratios" in the various categories of long-range nuclear weapons.
If the Soviets accept it, two warheads might be scrapped for each new one that is deployed, a senior U.S. official explained Tuesday.

Similarly, he said, three submarine missiles might be destroyed for every two added to the U.S. and Soviet fleets.

Reagan and other administration officials did not spell out how many years Soviet and American strategic warhead totals would be sliced by 5 percent if the president's proposal was adopted.

However, the administration is known to be aiming at a treaty that would run for about eight years. A 5 percent annual reduction in the 7,900 warheads now in the Soviet arsenal would reduce the total to slightly less than 5,000 over that span.

Setting a ceiling of 5,000 on U.S. and Soviet strategic warheads remains a central U.S. goal. The United States has about 7,200 warheads.

Unquestionably, the president has made headway with a group of House members that includes Aspin and Rep.
Albert Gore, D-Tenn., a leading arms control theoretician.

"That's exactly what those of us who switched to supporting the MX were trying to do," Aspin said. "We were using the MX as a bargaining chip to encourage a serious approach to arms control. It worked."

In the Senate, the build-down idea was backed by 45 senators. The three principal sponsors, Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republicans William Cohen of Maine and Charles Percy of Illinois, are pleased with Reagan's new stand.

"I think the president is dealing in good faith," Nunn told reporters Tuesday after hearing Reagan outline his stand. "I feel that very strong."

TRAPPERS' IDENTITIES WITHHELD?

I am appalled to learn by having read a letter to the editor you published last week that the city of Greenville will loan citizens traps to capture their neighbor's cats and then will refuse to give the identity of the trapper to his/her neighbors.
This sounds like aiding and abetting thievery to me, especially since there is no leash law for cats in Greenville, D.S.

The information given out recently about city policy not allowing the giving out of the names of citizens borrowing traps from the Greenville Animal Shelter was in error, Assistant City Attorney Mac MacCarley said. "It's always been a matter of public record," he said. He added that the decision was reached last week that the city is no longer lending traps.

That was yesterday. This morning, MacCarley called back to say that he has met with officers of the Pitt County Humane Society today and has been asked by them to draft an ordinance that would enable the city to continue to loan out traps, but only with strong restrictions and guidelines. "The Humane Society," he said, "has pointed out the need for continued use of traps to humanely capture wild cats and, at the same time, to seek to prevent use of traps to capture other people's domestic cats. This will be the intent of the proposed ordinance that I will submit."

Greenville Ranked Seventh In Bldg. Permits

Greenville ranked seventh among the state's largest cities in the value of building permits issued during July with over $6.5 million recorded, according to state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

Construction authorized here during the month amounted to $6,586,518, Brooks said, as permits increased from $3.9 million in June.

Brooks said Greenville was one of seven North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population to top $6 million in July permits.

The Greenville figure included $1,081,691 for 30 single-family units; $4,594,830 for 213 multifamily units; $550,062 for 10 non-residential structures; and $359,935 for 37 additions and alterations. Brooks said 290 units were authorized here in July.

Permits valued at $6,719,353, including Greenville's total, were issued in Pitt County during the month. The county figure included $1,166,691 for 32 single-family units; $4,594,830 for 213 multifamily dwellings, $573,612 for 14 non-residential units; and $384,220 for 40 additions and alterations.

In North Carolina, the 44 reporting cities authorized 3,987 new units during July, up 29.3 percent from 3,083 last July, but down 5 percent from June's 4,197.

Estimated value of the units, at $128,675,347, rose 61.2 percent from last July's total of $79,809,592, but dropped 15.8 percent from $152,793,737 recorded in June.

Compared to last July, the average construction cost for a single-family home rose 4.9 percent to $41,886 from $39,918. The average declined 1.1 percent from June's $42,360.

Brooks said building activity in the 44 cities gained 31.3 percent during the first seven months of 1983 when compared to the same period last year.

Building values for July in several eastern towns included: Elizabeth City, $321,852; Goldsboro, $759,000; Jacksonville, $2,691,293; Kinston, $1,351,000; New Bern, $699,450;
Roanoke Rapids, 305,730; Rocky Mount,
$1,269,432; Tarboro, $1,250,100; and Wilson,

The 125th Anniversary of YWCA Is Being Celebrated With New Directions

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Young Women's Christian Association, begun in the United States as a circle of prayer for 35 lonely women far from their homes and working for poverty wages in sweat shops during the last century, marks 125 years of action this year.

There will be cake-cuttings, contests, carnivals, clean-ups, song-fests, seminars, speak-outs, Frisbee tournaments, feasts, quilting parties — and maybe even a prayer or two to continue the tradition.

Among groundbreaking social achievements of the YW's 125-year history are:

- The first day nursery in the United States, 1864, Philadelphia.
- The first free typewriting instruction for women, 1880, New York.
- The nation's first public cafeteria, 1891, Kansas City.
- The first Native American girls' clubs on reservations, 1892, Oklahoma.
- The first interracial conference in the South, 1915, Louisville.
- The first international conference of women physicians, to consider the physical and emotional needs of women, 1919, New York.

The YWCA has grown from its tiny beginnings to 2.5 million members linked to 450 community and student associations operating at more than 4,000 locations nationwide. While most certainly mainly for women, it is not for women only.

Boys and men swim in some of the YW pools, sign up for courses and otherwise participate where invited.

Facilities range from large buildings to historic houses, storefronts and mobile vans. Education programs run the gamut and include computers, welding and plumbing. Most are light years removed from the first typing class.

Activities, tending to center on education and personal development, are popular for three reasons: they are begun in response to need; they are offered at convenient locations; the charge is affordable, if not free.

There are special programs for teenagers as well as for seniors, refugees, the handicapped and disadvantaged, and other groups with special needs.

The circle of prayer, per se, is no more, but the tradition of 13 decades of meeting needs of girls and women, from the job market to the supermarket, in the nursery and neighborhood streets, continues, says Sara-Alice P. Wright, executive director of the national organization based in New York.

Is the Y still "Christian" specially since the circle of prayer fell by?

"Yes, we still have a Christian purpose," Mrs. Wright said. "We examine the lifestyle of Jesus to see if we still are on target. We recognize his concern for the downtrodden. Early in his ministry he gave attention to ministry to women.

"Jesus was not above the masses, you know. He was with the masses. We are a movement rooted in the Christian faith."

The World Week of Prayer for the YWCA and YMCA, an annual event, provides the opportunity for Ys to examine programs, determining if they are on target. The theme for the 1983 week of prayer is, "In Solidarity With Christ."

Each YW in the United States will check up on how it stands in the struggle for peace and justice, freedom and dignity for all people.

They ask how well they are meeting the needs of the hungry, the imprisoned, those who have left their homes, who live in fear, are poor or suffer oppression or are disabled.

Mrs. Wright, whose first exposure to the YW was at the Phyllis Wheatley Branch in Harrisburg, Pa., in the 1920s, said what has happened at the Ys since she started at the age of 5 has been exciting, including desegregation.

Her Y was for black girls and women; segregation prevailed.

Mrs. Wright said desegregation went into effect as a result of convention action in 1946.

Desegregating years before the big civil rights movement in America is just one more example of the YW anticipating and making changes, Mrs. Wright said, noting one imperative of the YWCA of the USA is elimination of racism.

"Diversity, community service and a robust responsiveness to the tempo of the times key all YWCA work focusing on women's changing roles," Mrs. Wright said.

YWCA priorities for the 1980s include:

- Empowerment of women through legislation and legislative support systems.
- Promotion of a national policy of full and fair employment.
- Prevention of teenage pregnancy.
- Protection of the vulnerable from violence.
- Establishment of a child care services network.

The American YWCA, prompted by the needs of young women in newly industrialized cities, traces its origins to New York City in 1858, three years after a similar organization was founded in England. The world organization followed in 1894 and a U.S. national organization in 1906.

Mrs. Jewel F. Graham, president of the YWCA of the United States, said, "Our anniversary theme, 'YWCA — Still Pioneering' ... links our past with our future. Since its founding ... the YWCA has enabled women and girls to face the succeeding decades of challenge and change by offering them programs, services and policies addressed to major aspects of their lives."

The national birthday party will be marked at each YW next April 26.

A closer key anniversary event will be the Oct. 16 dedication of the new national YWCA Leadership Development Center in Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Wright said the center will provide indoor and outdoor areas for training, leadership, development, study, contemplation and group learning.

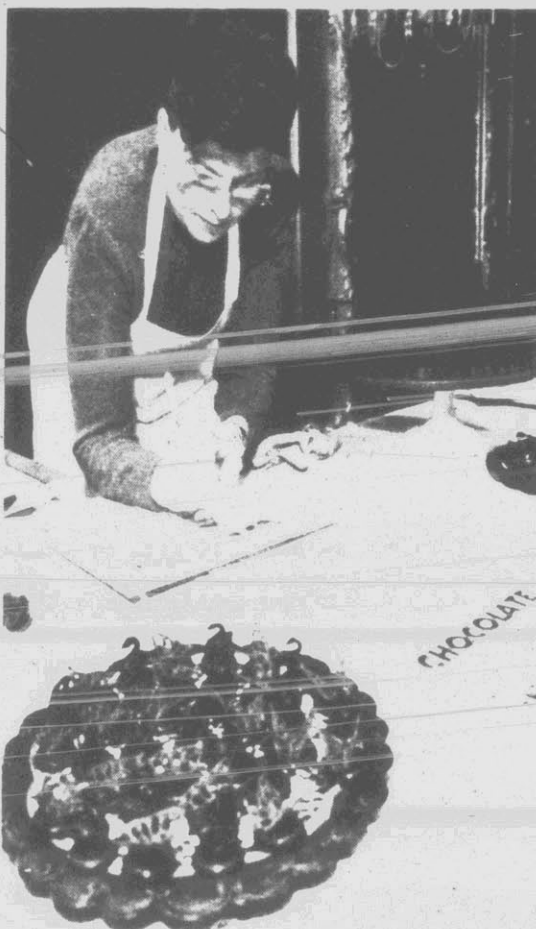

The YWCA is funded through United Way allocations, membership dues, individual contributions and program fees.

Mrs. Wright, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and University of Pennsylvania and named a "Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania" in 1975, is the wife of the Rev. Emmett F. Wright, pastor of Christ Memorial Baptist Church in St. Albans, N.Y.

A lifelong social worker executive with a distinguished national reputation, Mrs. Wright is a member of the National Advisory Committee for the White House Commission on Aging.

Mom, Husband Need Help, But Wife Must Help Herself

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago when I found out that my husband was having an affair with my mother, I practically went into shock! My husband said he loved me and wanted another chance. We'd been married for eight years and had three children, so I forgave him and my mother, too. Things were better for a little while, then a week ago he confessed that he had never stopped seeing my mother. I told my two sisters about it, and they both said Mom had slept with their husbands, too. (Our father doesn't know this, but he's caught her with other men.)

I want to leave my husband, but I hate to break up my family. My parents come over often and my mom flirts openly with my husband, which tears me apart. (She says if she acts "cold" to him, Dad would wonder why.)

I think I'm losing my mind, Abby. I'm so depressed, I cry all the time. Please help me. I don't want to be a 26-year-old divorced mother of three.

GOING TO PIECES

DEAR GOING: There are worse things than being a 26-year-old divorced mother of three. And living as you are is one of them.

Run, do not walk, to the nearest shelter for abused women in your area. You need emotional support and counseling in order to get your head together, bolster your self-esteem and learn how to make it on your own. Your husband desperately needs counseling — and so does your mother — but for the moment, look out for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I am a student on a limited budget. What should I say when a stranger accosts me on the street and asks for money? I am entirely dependent on my parents for financial support, and I simply cannot afford to give away money.

Instead of just walking away and feeling guilty, would it be all right to say, "I'm sorry I have no money to spare, but I will say a prayer for you"?

VANCOUVER, B.C.

DEAR VAN: I wouldn't recommend apologizing, explaining or offering to say a prayer for a stranger who accosts you on the street and asks for money. Just say "No" and keep walking. And if you want to pray for him, go ahead and pray. You don't need a person's permission to pray for him.

DEAR ABBY: Please remind your readers to get up and walk about at least every two hours to prevent problems with blood circulation while traveling. Muscle-flexing exercises are also helpful, but walking is better.

Recently, in a medical staff meeting, I heard of a 28-year-old woman who developed a blood clot in her leg, apparently as a consequence of a long car ride without a break. She developed severe complications that nearly cost her her life.

Long airplane rides can cause this condition when a considerate passenger is too reluctant to disturb another passenger.

FRIENDLY PHYSICIAN

DEAR FRIENDLY: Thanks for an excellent suggestion, to which I want to add: When sitting for long periods, refrain from crossing your legs. It inhibits normal circulation.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ZELDA: Try sheep's milk. It's wonderful once you get ewes to it.

Computer As Kids' Party Theme?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Theme parties are always popular with children, says Mary Micucci, a professional party planner, who suggests that a "computer party" would make a special hit these days.

Today's children are fascinated by computers, notes Ms. Micucci, who serves as a consultant to Mattel Toys in addition to running a personalized catering and party-planning service.

"In planning a party, create a theme that is fun and colorful, one that is filled with fantasy and birthday magic," she advises. "A theme such as computers, which complements today's lifestyle, can be an exciting approach."

"Taking this latest craze and incorporating it to produce a computer birthday party makes for fun and an educational experience," she adds. "The party can feature computer-related invitations, food, party favors and games."

The birthday boy or girl can make his or her own high-tech invitations with slick poster board and metallic ink, using computer terminology.

Instead of the standard two-layer round cake, Ms. Micucci recommends making "a computer you can eat" by baking the cake in square pans, frosting as usual, and using candies to form a screen and keys. "Happy Birthday" can be written on the screen.

The decorations can include computer print-out paper as wall and party table coverings. A cigar box decorated like a computer and filled with a miniature abacus, compass, kaleidoscope and other science-related objects makes a perfect party favor, she points out.

Rather than the traditional Pin the Tail on the Donkey, try Pin the Floppy on Freddy, aiming simulated floppy disks at a hand-drawn computer poster, Ms. Micucci suggests.

And if the birthday child is lucky enough to have a computer, or gets one as a birthday gift, she adds, the guests can enjoy playing games on it.

Welcome Back

The North Carolina Symphony seems at last ready to begin its season after a delay while contract negotiations with the musicians were under way.

A three-year contract was ratified last week by the N.C. Symphony Society, but there was concern about making up the revenues lost because of canceled concerts.

A fund-raising campaign will soon be under way to meet the increased costs and restore the revenues which were not received because of the delays. There is concern about the public's interpretation of the negotiations and the delay of the season.

The musicians were granted a 4 percent increase in salaries this year, but pay raises will have to be negotiated for 1984-85 and 1985-86.

At any rate the North Carolina Symphony, a true institution, has begun practicing for this year's appearance and it is welcome, indeed. The orchestra plays an important role in the cultural uplifting of our state and it must continue to be a part of North Carolina life.

Change In Problems

The economy is picking up and that almost surely means better times for the North Carolina treasury.

For several years the increase in revenues has been disappointing and created difficulties in providing salary increases for state employees and teachers, as well as for carrying out capital improvements projects.

Raleigh correspondent Paul O'Conner speculates that things will be better next June, although the administration will be cautious in predicting a big surplus. There will be many demands on the surplus. Universities and other state institutions have a back log of capital improvements projects and salary increases will be high priority.

The problem, however, will be how to split up the additional funds rather than what to cut out of the proposed budget. That is an improvement under any circumstances.

Spreading The Word

WASHINGTON — The other day we received a phone call from an attorney in Newport Beach, Calif. A 28-year-old client, he said, had undergone an abortion at a local hospital. While the procedure had gone smoothly, the aftermath had proved more traumatic than normal.

As many women her age have done, our friend's client had terminated a pregnancy to prevent a disruption in her career. She'd received proper medical counsel as well as support from friends. She'd not told her parents.

Within two days, however, the first of three letters arrived at the Cleveland home of her parents, informing them in pejorative terms about their daughter's decision. Subsequent letters appealed for contributions to the anti-abortion cause. As a result of the disclosure, parents and daughter aren't on speaking terms. That some anti-abortionists employ such postal terrorism hardly shocks Jane Gruenbaum of the National Abortion Federation, a group that monitors harassment of abortion clinics. "Some of these people deliberately copy down the license plate numbers of cars parked outside abortion clinics and then harass their owners with phone calls and mail," Gruenbaum says. "Other groups go so far as to physically block the doorway, adding to the stress of women who are undergoing the operation."

To their credit, some anti-abortion organizations, including the National Right to Life Committee, Inc., the largest such group in America, say they oppose any tactics that violate an individual's privacy.

Unfortunately, they often have trouble influencing their compatriots. "It's a difficult situation for us," admits Dan Donehey of the Right to Life Committee. "No one organization can control an entire grass roots movement."

Meanwhile, the California attorney says his client intends to sue the hospital for damages stemming from invasion of her privacy. But there may be no legal recourse to zealotry.

Would it play in Burbank? In guidelines recently issued to its television programmers and news editors, the British Broadcasting Corp. has discouraged violence on the air, including footage of dead bodies and grieving people taken at close range. "Television may be a window on the world, but there are few real windows out of which an ordinary person will actually see an execution or a wife being beaten," says a pamphlet containing the new guidelines, adding, "... any attempt to make violence an essential characteristic of manliness should be avoided."

Since 1965, the average life expectancy among men in the Soviet Union has dropped from 66.2 years to 61.9 years, or more than four years, according to a report released last week by the Paris-based National Institute of Demographic Studies.

Habla Espanol much? Katherine D. Ortega, who is replacing Angela Bay Buchanan as U.S. treasurer, is President Reagan's most prominent Hispanic appointment of late. Yet members of Hispanic groups who gathered one afternoon recently to congratulate Ortega say that she refused to converse with well-wishers in Spanish. For the record, Ortega's office contends that the former bank executive speaks Spanish fluently.

Copyright 1983 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Almost every time President Reagan gives a speech he makes reference to a letter he received from some student backing him on the particular issue he's trying to push at the moment. It has always made me wonder if the president ever gets mail from kids who don't agree with him.

Well, it turns out he does. Sen. Orrin Hatch angrily brought it up in the Senate a few weeks ago. In an emotional speech he revealed the White House averages 100 letters a day from school children voicing their fears about nuclear war.

Hatch maintained that these letters were inspired by teachers who belonged to the National Education Association, and cited a book NEA had published titled, "Choices: A Unit on Conflict and Nuclear War." The book encourages pupils to write to the president and world leaders to express their fears.

The senator from Utah said he was outraged by the anti-president bias in the letters, which he described as "pervasive evidence of political propaganda."

The NEA denied their book was responsible for the anti-nuclear mail because only 3,000 had been sold. (With a title like that I believe them.)

My first reaction to Sen. Hatch's speech was that I was happy to learn there were 100 students a day who could still write letters. This shows the country's educational situation is not as bad as it has been painted.

The second was that the letters had somehow been read by top aides in the White House and had gotten under their skins.

But then, I had to come down on the side of Sen. Hatch and here is why. School children do not have the intellectual capacity to express themselves on something as serious as nuclear war. They don't understand it and never will. All they are doing are mouthing the biases of their parents and teachers who have been influenced by the liberal anti-Reagan media.

No child has ever seen a "window of vulnerability" close up, nor does he or she understand the importance of hardened MX missile silos, multi-warheads, first-strike capabilities and all the other little things that go into maintaining a superior deterrent arsenal. All the kids seem to worry about is getting killed.

Playing on this gut emotion, teachers tend to point out the negative side of the nuclear arms buildup, and never mention the fallout from the pluses. Is it any wonder President Reagan is getting so much mail from school children telling him that they are afraid of nuclear war?

Sen. Hatch doesn't like it and neither does the white House. Pupils are supposed to write to the president telling him how much they love him, and how much they pray for him, and how happy they are his policies are working to get us out of a recession. Those kind of letters written from the heart are passed all around the White House to make everyone on the staff feel good.

The ones instigated by pro-freeze teachers have no place on the president's desk. He hears from Congress and from misguided grown-up doves all day long. He doesn't want to be told the same thing by a bunch of scared school kids.

There is no law you can't write to a president disagreeing with him on what he is doing. But sending pervasive political propaganda to the White House goes beyond the boundaries of good manners. To paraphrase Sen. Hatch, "If a student doesn't have anything good to say about the nuclear arms race — he shouldn't say anything at all."

Who's Heading Off The Soviets?

WASHINGTON — Restiveness on Capitol Hill over sole reliance on Israel to head off the Soviet Union's penetration into the Middle East has been signaled to the White House privately by Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, a conservative Republican senator with a pro-Israel record, deriding the image of Syria as "an intransigent Soviet puppet."

Even more surprising than Hatch's confidential letter to national security adviser William P. Clark is strong backing for it from Sen. Ed Zorinsky of Nebraska, who is Democratic and Jewish. The two senators returned early in September from a Mideast tour highlighted by an unusually frank conversation with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam.

Hatch's report to the White House on that 90-minute talk contradicts claims by Israel, pressed by friends in Congress, that Syria is a creature of Moscow and therefore a danger to U.S. diplomacy. His letter criticizes U.S. policy for "focusing too narrowly" on Lebanon at the expense of Syria and "the broader strategic picture" of Mideast peace. Coming from the vice chairman of the Steering Committee (the informal caucus of conservative Senate Republicans), it signals potential trouble from the right for President Reagan's current Mideast policy as the stalemate with Syria indefinitely pins down U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

Hatch is coming to grips with an enduring political dispute here: whether Israel ought to be sole guardian of U.S. interests in the Mideast or whether closer U.S. ties with Syria and other Arab states could weaken Soviet influence in the Arab world.

He now believes the latter is true, without criticizing Israel or suggesting diminution of the U.S.-Israeli alliance.

With Zorinsky concurring, Hatch's letter could signal an important trend among traditional pro-Israel senators: growing belief that to prevent further Soviet incursions into the once solidly pro-Western Arab world, the U.S. must do more than make new strategic arrangements with Israel.

Not only is it hard to discern Syria as Moscow's "puppet," Hatch wrote Clark, but he and Zorinsky were persuaded by Khaddam that Syria's independence today from the Russians is indisputable. In Damascus Hatch was given a fascinating piece of history. When the Kremlin angrily complained about Syria's menacing gestures against Jordan in 1980, the Soviet ambassador was told: "You don't consult us about Poland, and we don't consult you about Jordan." Whatever else they may be, the Syrians are not Soviet puppets.

Hatch listed four specific Syrian objections — none of which he disputed — to the agreement Israel compelled Lebanon to accept as the price of its eventual troop withdrawal: prohibition of Lebanese air defense; putting Lebanon's economy and security at the "mercy" of Israel; requiring Lebanon to cease relations with any Arab state "in conflict" with Israel; giving Israel a security zone inside Lebanon only 23 kilometers from Damascus.

According to Hatch's letter, the Syrian foreign minister agreed to a United Nations force along the Israeli-Lebanese border that might include troops from Spain, Greece, Canada, Denmark and other NATO countries. Had the U.S. known this, it might well have been able to break the Lebanese deadlock long ago. Thus, Hatch went on to imply to Clark that Secretary of State George Shultz was shortsighted in ignoring Syria for months last winter during non-stop efforts to wring an agreement out of Lebanon on withdrawing Israel's troops.

Hatch's intrusion into this delicate area of foreign policy came neither hastily nor easily. Except for voting to send AWACS radar aircraft to Saudi Arabia, his pro-Israel slate in the Senate has been clean until now. He and Zorinsky first signed the 1981 round-robin Senate letter opposing the AWACS deal, but both changed their minds and voted for the sale.

Since the AWACS fight, Hatch has immersed himself in the Mideast quicksands. He dispatched Dr. Michael Pillsbury, the Steering Committee's foreign policy staff chief, on four unpublicized trips to the region before going there himself in early September.

In an era when senatorial voices on the Middle East are usually passionate in support of Israel, Orrin Hatch's letter is unique. It prods the White House to consider whether the barricade to Soviet penetration lies in new connections with the most powerful Arab states, specifically Syria. Since ample protections remain available for assuring the security and independence of Israel, this is anything but a call to abandon the principal U.S. ally in the Mideast. That is indisputable from the fact that this call for a fresh look at Syria is written by one senatorial friend of Israel and endorsed by another.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The black and white cat Mrs. Alice Yarbrough referred to in her letter to The Daily Reflector (Sept. 29) is mine. Thanks to Mrs. Yarbrough's letter, I was able to retrieve my cat from the animal shelter before she was destroyed. The cat is 13 years old.

About five weeks ago, another cat belonging to my family disappeared. I was very glad to learn Friday (Sept. 30) at the animal shelter that she had not been destroyed, that someone had "adopted" her. This was heartwarming news, because we felt sure she was dead — it never occurred to us that anyone, except our family, would want a 12-year-old plain tabby with one eye.

My three children (the youngest is now 20) grew up with these two cats. They have been a part of our family life almost every day for more than a decade. They are very docile and gentle; they stayed very close to our home.

I am very angry. Someone deliberately trapped my cats with a baited cage, apparently for the purpose of having them destroyed. Someone deliberately appropriated my personal property without the due process of law.

Beyond anger, I'm disillusioned. This experience has been nightmarish — to think that there is a human being in my neighborhood who wants to take something that has meant so much to me and my family — something of no value to anyone else, but so precious to us.

Changing Times

NEW YORK (AP) — The rules of executive success are changing, and it's going to be a lot tougher for aspirants to crack the top ranks than it was during the fast-track, upwardly mobile days of the 1960s.

The change, says Eugene Jennings, who makes that assessment, will have a profound affect on the lives and careers of those who had expected to follow the earlier patterns of quick success.

Old patterns, says the professor, are returning. Experience over youth, company over career loyalty, steadiness rather than quickness of judgment, and a view of one's job as a career rather than as a stepping stone.

Jennings, who teaches management at Michigan State University and advises corporate boards and chairmen on executive development, sums up the changes as a return to the time-tested practice of leavening.

The first time he heard the term, said Jennings, was in an interview with Charles E. Wilson, who headed General Motors Corp. from 1941 to 1953.

Then just beginning his studies of executive mobility, Jennings asked Wilson, "What's the key to making great leaders at GM?" He said Wilson replied tersely, "Leavening, young man, leavening."

Wilson explained: "You add just a little yeast to cause talent to rise slowly, but not too much to make it bloat up and cave in."

It was, says Jennings, a dictate of the times.

That small increments of authority, status and power would produce gradual but permanent modification of executive talent; that you could not hurry the process along, and that too much too soon would spoil the bread.

Little did Wilson foresee of what would happen — that the wild growth of the 1960s would allow leavening to be dismissed as archaic, and encourage young executives to stress career management, or the art of making successful moves.

Notions developed that to stay in a job "too" long was to be like a fly waiting to be swatted; that you must move and keep ahead of the mess you made so that you wouldn't be discovered; that in the first two years on a job you learned more than you could ever learn in the last two; and that in order to keep growing you should report to larger, more fertile ground every few years.

Jennings, whose books, among them "The Mobile Manager" and "Routes To The Executive Suite," were perhaps the major factor in identifying and explaining such notions, now believes they are becoming passé.

"Americans are managing companies intensively again," he said

Strength For Today

Many years ago a stalwart Scotch miner was talking to his young son who, with the passing years, was to become one of the outstanding preachers and church leaders of America. "Jack," said the old man, "when I want to find out whether a stick is straight or not, I take another stick that I know by measurement and experience is absolutely straight and lay it alongside the first stick."

Christianity is based upon the contention that there are values in the moral universe which do not change with the passing years.

There are straight measuring sticks by which justice, honesty and purity can be measured. They are found pre-eminently, of course, in the teachings of the Bible, and if a person wants to know whether or not a certain opinion, custom, or action is right, let him lay the straight measuring stick of God's eternal values alongside the matter in question.

It is the ultimate standard, by which all other standards are measured.

Helms Abandons His Filibuster

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With Senate leaders poised to crush his filibuster, Sen. Jesse Helms is dropping his stall, and permitting an Oct. 18 vote that is expected to be overwhelmingly in favor of a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr.

Tom Griscom, chief spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., confirmed that Helms, R-N.C., told Baker Tuesday he would drop the filibuster.

The spokesman added that Baker, on Helms' request, agreed to have the Senate consider this week an agriculture bill that includes target price supports for crops, including North Carolina's main crop of tobacco.

Griscom said Helms has been "asking us for two weeks" to bring up the bill, but the spokesman said Baker did not consider the two issues a tradeoff.

"He wanted the agriculture bill before the recess," Griscom said, referring to the week-long Columbus Day break that begins Monday.

The Baker aide said he did not know whether the two issues were linked by Helms, who was not available for comment.

If Helms had not agreed to drop the tactics that prevented a vote on the King holiday, senators were prepared to vote today on a cloture petition to limit debate.

The resolution had bipartisan sponsorship including Baker, Minority Leader Robert Byrd, and Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Robert Dole, R-Kan. Griscom predicted it would have received the required 60 votes.

Both Baker and Dole have said they expect the vote to establish the holiday to pass by a wide margin.

The agreement came as supporters began a 24-hour vigil Tuesday outside the Capitol to pressure the Senate to pass the bill, and colleagues of the North Carolina senator rose in waves to attack him. They spoke at the vigil, on the House floor, in interviews and news conferences.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., speaking at the vigil, called Helms one of "the spokesmen for racial hate and intolerance."

Helms' comments that King preached "action-oriented Marxism" prompted Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to say in an interview, "The remarks were ugly, a throwback to an era that I certainly thought we outlived. It has to be an embarrassment to the president who endorsed the legislation."

He said he was referring to the early 1950s, when former Sen. Joseph McCarthy went on an anti-communist crusade, smearing innocent Americans.

Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, told reporters he thought Helms' remarks "tend to poison the well for legitimate debate."

The bill would observe the holiday on the third Monday of January, beginning in 1986 if the measure becomes law this year. King's birthday was Jan. 15.

President Reagan said this week he would sign the bill, which already passed the House 338-90 two months ago. The president originally said he supported a day to honor King, but not a national holiday that would give federal workers another paid day off.

Word of the agreement came suddenly when Baker took the microphone on the floor Tuesday night and said he was circulating a "unanimous consent" resolution that would stop the cloture vote and allow consideration of the bill.

Byrd then said he was trying to get Democrats to agree. If one senator objects the agreement could fall through, but that was thought unlikely to happen.

"You can be assured it was worked out with Helms. Sen. Baker consulted with Helms and I do not expect him to object," Griscom said.

Just after Baker announced his plans, he said the agriculture bill would be considered. Helms is chairman of the Agriculture Committee, but Baker decides when legislation reaches the floor.

One Senate source close to the arrangement, who spoke on condition he would not be named, said Helms may believe "he made his point on the King bill, and faced the reality it was going to pass."

"So if there are other things he wants to do, isn't it better to get those things brought up while maintaining his position (against the King bill) on the floor?"

WINS REPRIEVE — Convicted killer James David Autry lay strapped to a death house gurney in Huntsville, Texas with a needle in his arm early today when he was told — four minutes after his execution was to have started, that Supreme Court Justice Byron White had granted him a reprieve. The 29-year-old drifter, condemned for killing a store clerk in 1980 over a six-pack of beer, showed neither joy nor sadness at the ruling the prolonged his life, officials said. (AP Laserphoto)

Arrested In Drug Probe

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Seven more people have been charged with conspiracy to traffic cocaine in what one state law enforcement official called an "international, multi-state organization."

The organization set up a distribution point in the Wilmington and Wrightsville Beach area, New Hanover County District Attorney Jerry Spivey said.

Twelve people have now been arrested on charges of conspiracy to traffic cocaine in connection with the alleged organization — five last week and seven this week.

The arrests follow the seizure last week of 40 pounds of cocaine from a Wrightsville Beach residence and 99 pounds in Palmetto, Fla., authorities said.

"This is pre-cut cocaine," Spivey said. "It tested out at about 88 percent pure. They would take a cutting agent and mix with it. It would probably be cut two or three times before it hit the street."

Those charged so far in the investigation are former Brunswick County sheriff's deputy Tylon Owen Williams of Leland; Malcolm Lewis Campbell of Charlotte; Marvin Walker Guyton of North Port, N.Y.; Harrison Thomas Smith of Atlantic Beach; Joseph Lloyd Garner and Bobby Garner, both of Asheboro and Larry Jordan and Betty Jean Jordan, both of Texas.

All but Larry Jordan, Betty Jean Jordan and Chaney have been arrested, Spivey said.

Image Problem: The City Stinks

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Image problems for cities come in all shapes and kinds — from crime rates to smog. But in Jacksonville the complaint is that, well, the city stinks.

"Jacksonville is not alone when it comes to odors, but it is probably the city in the state with the most types of smells," said Steve Smallwood, chief of air quality management for the state Department of Environmental Regulation.

Last year, the city received 622 air-pollution complaints and 418 were related to odors, said Wayne Tutt, an engineer with Jacksonville's Bio-Environmental Services Division.

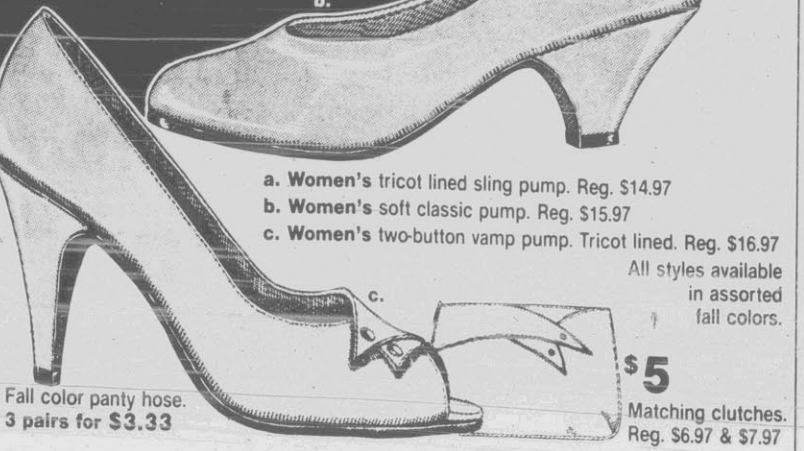

What's making the stink? The local paper industry and spinoff firms release a variety of sulfurous smells, Tutt said. There's also a large organic chemical plant. And a sewage treatment facility has had its problems.

Tutt was quoted Tuesday as saying there now are fewer bad smells than in 1979. A Maxwell House plant provides an occasional pleasant waft of roasting coffee.

Farmville Board Plans Public Hearing November 1

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — The Farmville Commissioners Tuesday night heard comments from citizens about fire protection, police protection, community development needs and misbehavior in city parks, especially Bennett Park on South Main Street.

"People stand around over there till all hours and talk loud and vulgar," Danny Ruth Gay, who lives adjacent to the park, said. "They keep me awake. I don't like to hear it. There isn't any curfew. No curfew is enforced. If one was enforced, they'd go somewhere else to carry on like they do."

The commissioners asked that citizens come forth during a public hearing set for their Nov. 1, 7:30 p.m. meeting to let their suggestions about public park use be known.

They tabled a request for repair of a fence at Bennett Park. About $3,000 worth of repairs appear to be needed to undo damage done by vandals, officials said.

There was discussion of how fire service could be provided south of the railroad, which runs through the town, when the tracks are blocked. Authorities said fuller participation in volunteer fire work by those who live and work south of the railroad is needed. Fire Chief H.P. Norman said the department will gladly take applications for new volunteers.

Several citizens expressed their views that policemen need to be more in evidence at night. They also recommended that another black policeman be hired.

Several talked about the need for the occupants of several houses outside the designated community development area to be assisted with weatherization and repair. Three elderly Farmville residents were mentioned and Mayor John Turner Walston promised that those situations will be investigated immediately.

A lot on Fields Street between Pargas Co. and a lot next to the railroad where Pargas stores tanks was rezoned. This lot is the property of Parker Oil Co. and its owners request for rezoning from light industrial to highway business was granted.

Whether to add curbing to the back parking lot of the new Community Building was discussed. It was rejected, at least for now, but "undercutting" earth work on the site was approved.

Edwin Kins Day Care Center Inc.'s lease for use of the Southside Center here was renewed.

Chief Ron Cooper was asked to look at sites suggested for a handicapped parking place on the north end of the central business district. Citizen Ray Bailey was present making the request for an additional space.

After discussion of W.A. Allen's request for sewer service for three houses on U.S. 264 West, the board was asked for a motion and none was made. "I've been turned down by the town fathers," Allen commented. "But I'll be back."

Approval was given for taking of bids by the Rescue Squad for a new rescue vehicle. The town has $27,849 in capital reserve for this purpose and the squad has additional funds, it was pointed out.

Refund checks for electrical service — covering refunds made to the city by the Carolina Power & Light Co. — will be mailed before the end of this month, the board was told. The commissioners adopted a budget amendment to cover the expenses of the refund.

Approval was given for the repair of the roof of the J.Y. Monk Center. East Carolina

Roofing and Siding was the low bidder with a price of $2,975.

The board asked for a recommendation from the recreation committee and the recreation advisory board as to whether the old agriculture building on the Walter B. Jones Town Commons should be torn down.

Authorization was given for the sale of surplus town property, including several trucks, at public auction Nov. 5 at 10 a.m. on the Town Commons.

Action on the taking of bids for the remodeling of the town administrative offices was tabled.

Approval was given for the purchase of a $1,451 electronic typewriter for the town office.

The mayor was authorized to sign an agreement to pay employer special annuity contributions and to adopt a resolution agreeing to pay employer special annuity contributions to the Law Enforcement Officers Retirement System.

Considered of a deferred compensation plan for town employees was tabled.

Approval was given for Harold Flanagan to allow livestock to graze on a small portion of pastureland on the north end of Farmville that is inside the corporate limits.

Interim Vote-Counting Method Under Attack

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge may be asked to determine this month how North Carolina will count cross-over votes on straight-party ballots, state officials say.

The Board of Elections has outlined an interim method for counting the votes that drew heavy criticism Tuesday from state Republican Party Chairman Dave Flaherty.

"They are trying to slip through something that thwarts the will of the people," Flaherty said at a news conference.

But Jim Wallace of the state attorney general's office said the board's directions won't make any difference because attorneys on both sides may go to court this month and let a judge determine how the state should count such votes.

The elections board decided last month that when a person votes a straight party ticket and crosses over to vote for a candidate of the other party, neither vote will count in that particular race.

The directions will be in effect until June 1, 1984, or until the General Assembly enacts a law on the issue, whichever comes first.

The existing state law was judged unconstitutional by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. That law requires that only the straight-party vote be counted, which Republicans contend helps the Democrats.

Former Republican Rep. William Hendon challenged the law after Democrat James M. Clarke won his 11th District congressional seat in 1982. Hendon said the existing North Carolina law may have cost him the election.

He lost by 1,324 of the more than 171,000 votes cast.

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow W. Jones dismissed the case and Hendon appealed to the 4th Circuit Court. Wallace said the appeals court told the state it has two options — count the cross-over vote instead of the straight-party vote or count neither vote.

He said state law gives the Board of Elections authority to adopt rules pending resolution of the matter.

Elections Director Alex Brock said the board felt it must give some direction to the 18 municipalities that hold partisan elections this fall.

"If they can get away with this now they're going to do it in 1984," Flaherty said.

He said that party experts estimate the cross-over votes may be worth as much as 5 percent of the vote for GOP candidates.

Thirty-Three Candidates Fight For Jackson's Seat

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.

Wednesday, October 5, 1983 7

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer
OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The battle for the Senate seat of Sen. Henry M. Jackson has turned out to be a frontier-style political shootout with one big gun — Dan Evans, the man who now has the seat by appointment.

A record 33 candidates are vying for the top spot in the Oct. 11 primary, with both Republicans and Democrats saying control of the U.S. Senate after the 1984 elections could hinge on what Washington voters decide this fall.

Some political observers are even calling the election an early referendum on President Reagan's performance with the Democratic front-runners spending more time castigating Reagan and Interior Secretary James Watt than the Republican candidates.

"This is the first election of 1984," says Pierce County Democratic Chairman Ron Culpepper.

Evans, a popular former three-term Republican governor who has the financial support of such major local industries as Boeing and Weyerhaeuser, is considered a good bet to win the five years remaining of Democrat Jackson's term. Jackson died Sept. 1.

"Scoop Jackson's shoes will be mighty hard to fill, but I hope to do my best," Evans said. "I will run my own campaign, on my own record and not really try to fill those same shoes."

When the state attorney general ruled that the vacancy would have to be filled this fall, not 1984 as most observers had expected, the state Legislature met in emergency session to create a primary on Oct. 11.

In Washington, voters do not register by party and may vote for any candidate on the ballot. One Democrat and one Republican will advance to the finals. If the Socialist Worker candidate gets 1 percent of the primary vote, he, too, will be on the Nov. 8 ballot.

Evans faces his strongest Republican opposition from Lloyd Cooney, a conservative former TV commentator and executive. Two liberals, Seattle Mayor Charles Royer and U.S. Rep. Mike Lowry, also of Seattle, are considered Democratic front-runners.

Evans, 57, served as governor from 1965 to 1977. After deciding not to seek reelection, he became president of The Evergreen State College here.

A statewide poll of 600 voters by Consumer Opinion Research for KIRO-TV in mid-September said Evans was the choice of 58 percent of the respondents. Royer was second at 18 percent and Lowry trailed at 11 percent. Cooney had 6 percent.

Evans regarded former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller as his political mentor and frequently criticized Reagan when both were governors. Evans backed President Ford against Reagan in 1976 and was frozen out of the state's national convention delegation as a result. Evans backed George Bush for the GOP nomination in 1980.

"There are three liberals running and one conservative," said Cooney, 60. "I'm the only candidate who embraces what Scoop Jackson did in terms of warning about the dangers of the Soviet Union and supporting the president and his national defense efforts."

Evans was a big spender as governor and pushed for a state income tax. Cooney says. He calls Evans soft on the Soviets because of his questioning of the defense budget.

Jackson, who easily won reelection to a sixth term last year, left no heir-apparent and neither of the Democratic front-runners shares his strong positions on national defense and the Soviet Union.

Royer often invokes the names of Jackson and former Sen. Warren G. Magnuson. He rips Reagan and tells audiences it's important to elect a Democrat to the Senate position.

"This is Scoop's seat. It's Scoop's seat for five more years. If the Republicans keep the Senate, you're looking at Jesse Helms, Strom Thurmond, the whole gang, and the policies of Ronald Reagan and James Watt," he said.

Royer, 44, an ally of presidential candidate Walter Mondale, is president of the National League of Cities. He also has the support of many of Jackson's former campaign staffers.

Lowry, 43, the most liberal member of the state's congressional delegation, has amassed the larger campaign war chest, particularly from political action committees that know he'll be in Congress regardless of the outcome.

Lowry, who boasts a 100 percent pro-labor voting record, has picked up the endorsement of the Washington State Labor Council and is backed by a number of environmental groups.

He's an outspoken advocate of a nuclear arms freeze and big cuts in defense spending and wants American troops out of Lebanon and the Central Intelligence Agency out of Nicaragua.

Of the other 29 candidates, only one has much of a following. Larry Penberthy, a wealthy Seattle businessman, was a strong second in the GOP Senate primary last year. But he's campaigning little this fall and says his main goal is running for Lowry's congressional seat next year.

Filipino Throngs Cheer Reagan Action

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Throngs of cheering people rallied in Manila's financial district today to thank President Reagan for canceling his November trip to the Philippines.

"Bases can stay, Marcos must go," read a 15-foot banner carried through the streets of Makati by a crowd of young people as confetti floated down from high-rise buildings in the modern suburb.

A few hundred demonstrators marched through the streets, but an estimated 20,000 people, clogging intersections, waving from office buildings or cruising the streets in ribbon-bedecked cars, were caught up in the spectacle.

The pro-American sentiment marked a dramatic shift from earlier demonstrations which had accused the United States of bolstering President Ferdinand E. Marcos in his 18-year rule. It was the fifth tiki-tape rally in the business district since the Aug. 21 assassination of chief opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

The slaying touched off a series of anti-Marcos demonstrations and calls for his resignation.

While a festive atmosphere prevailed in the financial district, more than 200 police, armed with truncheons, riot shields and some pistols, moved into the square in front of the Central Post Office, and Manila Police Superintendent Narciso Cabrera said a planned demonstration there would be dispersed because protesters had not been granted a permit.

The opposition group "Justice for Aquino, Justice for All" called off its protest, saying it would hold another demonstration soon whether a permit was secured or not.

Police said the permit was denied because of "persistent intelligence reports" the demonstration would be infiltrated by criminals and communists.

Marcos announced earlier this week he would allow demonstrations in Makati without permits and said police would not interfere. Not even traffic police were seen in the financial district today.

Signs carried through the crowded streets read, "Thank you Mr. Reagan for supporting Democracy" and "Mr. Reagan, we love your adherence to democratic principles," the latter a takeoff on Vice President George Bush's praise of Marcos during a 1981 visit.

A teller from one bank carried a placard reading "One dollar equals 14 pesos," a reference to a 21.4 percent currency devaluation announced by the Central Bank today.

It was the second devaluation of the peso in three months by the government which is saddled with a $1.3 billion balance of payments deficit. The bank set the new

"guiding rate" at 14-to-1. The earlier rate was 11-to-1.

The pro-American reaction in Makati came a day after Reagan announced he was canceling the Philippines, Thailand and Indonesia from his November Asian tour. He said he still would go to Japan and Korea.

While Reagan gave pressing congressional business as his reason, the cancellation was widely interpreted here as a signal that Washington was apprehensive about recent events in the Philippines.

Central Bank Senior Deputy Governor Gabriel C. Singson officially announced the peso devaluation, saying it was necessary in the face of the balance of payments deficit.

"The continued strength of the dollar, increased speculation against the peso and the need to prevent further erosion in international reserves" were other reasons given.

Since January, the peso has depreciated by about 34 percent including the present adjustment, Singson said.

The government had warned Filipinos of possible "stiff economic measures" because of negotiation with the International Monetary Fund for new loans.

Such measures were necessary to convince the IMF that the country "is willing and strong enough to undergo financial discipline," the government statement said. It said measures could include further credit curbs, higher interest rates and restrictions on imports, travel and other "dollar-draining activities."

N.C. Feeling Auto Slump

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's contribution to the automobile industry seems small compared with that of some states, but it's still a sizable chunk of this state's economy, industry officials say.

Textile plants, battery makers and North Carolina suppliers of other auto parts felt the recession and slump in sales of domestic cars almost as acutely as Detroit, analysts say.

North Carolina ranks 28th nationally in the manufacture of transportation equipment, according to the U.S. Bureau of the Census. Production of auto supplies in the state accounts for only about 4 percent of the national total, but the 225 plants in North Carolina employ about 43,000 people, and 18 plants employ more than 500 each.

While small in comparison to textiles, the state's largest industry the auto-supply industry shipped $832 million in products in 1980 — making it 14th largest in the state in terms of value of products shipped.

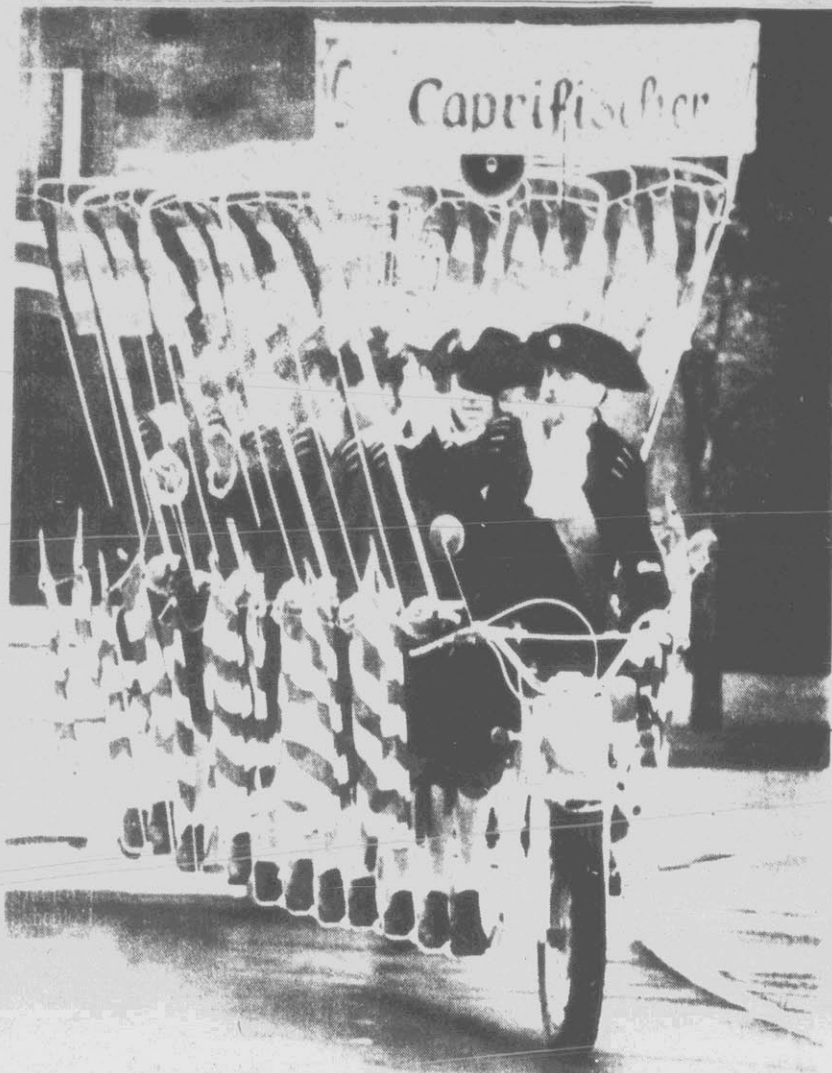

Among the auto-related products made in the state are tires, truck bodies, batteries, car upholstery and other parts and accessories.

Most of the plants are clustered around the state's urban areas, especially Charlotte. There is also a high concentration in Wilson County, according to a state Department of Commerce study.

Many of the North Carolina plants are newer and therefore more productive than older plants in the Midwest, said Michael G. Rakouskas, who worked out his study as chief of research for the department's Economic Development Division.

"We were certainly not impacted as heavily by the recession as Detroit was," he said.

Senate Weighs Pentagon Hike

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department would get a 4 percent boost in spending after inflation under a proposed $251.4 billion military spending bill being drafted by a Senate panel.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee, presented his suggestions Tuesday at the opening drafting session for the measure, which would cover Pentagon spending in the fiscal year that began last Saturday.

Because both houses of Congress are still working on a variety of appropriations bills, the Pentagon and many other agencies are operating under a stopgap money measure that expires Nov. 10.

Most members attending Tuesday's session seemed amenable to Stevens' suggestions, but the chairman said he expected a fight today when the panel took up whether to allocate money so that B-1B strategic bombers can be purchased under multiyear, rather than annual, contracts.

Congress endorsed multiyear procurement in the defense authorization bill it approved last month, but Stevens' Republican-dominated subcommittee split along party lines when the issue came before it earlier in the year.

Democrats who question the need for the B-1B are concerned that they would lose the chance to kill or reduce the program in future years if the multiyear approach is followed.

Although Stevens' proposed bill is $9.5 billion smaller than President Reagan requested for the 1984 fiscal year, additions were made in some accounts.

For instance, the chairman proposed to add $239 million to the Navy's ship overhaul account so that 57 instead of 49 vessels can be placed in dry dock for refurbishing.

Stevens said the backlog of ships needing overhauls has increased, in part because the Navy had devoted hundreds of millions of dollars to bring the World War II battleships New Jersey and Iowa out of mothballs.

He proposed a one-year postponement in bringing another battleship, the USS Missouri, back to active duty. But Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., whose state includes the shipyard where the Iowa is being overhauled, said he would offer an amendment to restore $57 million for the program.

Stevens did go along with a suggestion by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., that the Navy be given $88.6 million for continued research and development work on a new vertical takeoff plane, dubbed the JTV, instead of the $70 million earmarked for the project originally.

The House defense appropriations subcommittee has reported out a $246 billion version of the bill. But unlike Stevens' version, it makes no provision for a pay raise for the Defense Department's 3.1 million uniformed and civilian employees — an item that is estimated to cost upwards of $2 billion.

There is still uncertainty as to whether the pay boost, of 4 percent for those in uniform and either 3.5 percent or 4 percent for civilians, will take effect next Jan. 1 or April 1.

Discuss Traffic In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Discussions on ways to improve the traffic flow at the intersection of Main and Haughton streets were held during the meeting of the Williamston Town Board of Commissioners Monday.

One of the major problems is that of large trucks having to turn right onto Main Street because of one-way traffic on Washington Street.

Department of Transportation officials have expressed a willingness to make improvements at the intersection by widening the radius of the turn, if the town will purchase the right-of-way and pay for metal poles needed for lighting.

The board made a decision to meet again with DOT officials in an attempt to get two-way traffic authorized on Washington.

Approval was given to rezone a tract of land on U.S. 17 bypass from mixed manufacturing to highway commercial.

A report given by Public Works Superintendent Willie Long Jr. indicates the town continues to have problems with the Church Street and Carolina Avenue wells. Some $22,000 has already been spent in attempting to keep these wells operable.

Station Wagon Among Safest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The old reliable station wagon, even the compact models, performed most safely in a study done by the insurance industry. On the other end of the scale, the study says small, two-door cars have the worst accident records.

The comparison by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety showed, generally, that the larger the car, the less likely a person in it will be injured and killed. The vehicle will be damaged. Four-door models came out with a significant advantage over 2-door versions.

The study showed the cars with the best record in both the collision and injury categories are the 4-door Mercury Marquis, the Oldsmobile Cutlass station wagon, the 4-door Buick Le Sabre and the 4-door Oldsmobile Delta 88.

Cars with the worst overall injury record were the Datsun 200 SXs, Subaru DL, Plymouth Sapporo and Dodge Challenger, all 2-door models. The Chevrolet Corvette, the BMW 320i and the Datsun 280ZX, all in a sports-specialty category, had the worst collision loss record, followed by the Volkswagen Scirocco, a small 2-door.

The study, released Tuesday, rated 133 passenger cars on the frequency of collision and personal injury claims.

Acknowledging that driving habits play a major role in the frequency of accidents, the insurance institute said the ranking was "adjusted ... to eliminate possible distortions due to ... operator age" and other factors. In other words, one model shouldn't rank better than another just because it is preferred by more conservative drivers.

Among small cars only the 4-door Honda Accord and Mercury Lynx station wagon reported "better than average" injury and collision losses.

The category with the worst loss statistics were 2-door cars. Of 39 small and medium 2-door models only the American Eagle 50 Liftback had an injury loss record of "better than average."

The safest categories were station wagons and medium and large sized 4-door models. Of 18 station wagons, including nine in the "small car" category, none had injury ratings of below average. Only the Subaru DL 4-wheel drive model had a collision rating of "substantially worse than average" among the station wagons.

Auto Pollution Tests Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has upheld auto exhaust pollution tests now used in 16 states and under consideration in another 12 states.

A three-judge panel of the court ruled Tuesday that Douglas M. Costle, then administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, met the intent of Congress when in 1980 he laid down rules for state auto emission tests.

The Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association contended the brief tests didn't meet a congressional mandate because they cannot measure at least one major pollutant — nitrogen — that a two-day test can. The short tests do measure carbon monoxide and unburnt fuel, the other pollutants limited by federal standards.

Airline Pilots Union Will Lobby For Fare Controls

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association, pushing Congress and the Reagan administration to "restore some sanity" to the troubled commercial aviation industry, is lobbying for new controls on passenger fares.

Association President Henry Duffy, who has been coordinating his union's efforts with other AFL-CIO unions at the federation's convention here, told reporters Tuesday that "we think it (the airline industry) needs a minimum fix, but we sure think it needs fixing."

Duffy announced that AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland will head a group of airline union representatives planning to meet with congressional leaders to discuss the situation.

He also said he plans to meet soon with Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

A major problem stemming from the 1978 deregulation of the industry, Duffy maintained, is the intense competition between carriers trying to match one another's fare cuts or discount plans.

"What we're asking for is a minimum of re-regulation," he said. "We think that the managements have shown that they are unable to control their yields — in other words, get their return from the sale of their seats in order to turn a profit."

"What we're actually proposing is a standard industry fare level, with a zone of reasonableness so that there is room for competition, a swing up or a swing down," he said. "We think the short- and medium-haul passenger has suffered grievously. He's in fact paying a lot more than inflation has raised the cost of tickets, and we say he's actually subsidizing the long-haul traveler that benefits from the $99 fare."

Duffy maintained that airline unions have granted more than a billion dollars in wage concessions in the last year, "and that's enough. We have a bottom line just like everybody else."

He said he wouldn't be surprised if other carriers file for reorganization under the federal bankruptcy act as Continental Airlines has done.

ALPA members struck Continental Airlines last Saturday, and unionized employees at Eastern Airlines are resisting demands for a 15 percent pay cut.

Duffy, who has threatened to pull pilots from the cockpits of commercial jets if the union gets no response from the government, reiterated that he has set no timetable for such a strike.

"We've been very careful not to set a date because I'm going to go up there (to Washington) presuming that our government is going to listen to us, and we want to be reasonable," he said.

Linda Puchala, president of the Association of Flight Attendants, echoed Duffy's statement that unionized airline employees would be reluctant to call a nationwide strike.

"I think that decision will come in time," she said. "Obviously, as Capt. Duffy said, that is not our best option. We would not want to go to such a dramatic length."

But she also lamented "the frustration of dealing with Congress. There doesn't seem to be quick action."

Find Insect Parts In Meat Samples

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of 12 meat samples from shipments that been destined for the school lunch program were found to contain pieces of insects, the Agriculture Department said.

A spokesman, John McClung, said Tuesday that the insect fragments "represent no health threat, but they are, nonetheless, contaminants."

In one sample taken from meat stored in Spokane, Wash., 10 insect fragments were detected, which McClung said could have come from one insect.

The other four contained one insect fragment each. Those were taken from meat stored in Versailles, Ky.; Long Beach, Calif.; Charlotte, N.C.; and Seattle, Wash.

McClung said the other seven samples were from Aurora, Colo.; Lebanon, Tenn.; and Tulsa, Okla., each with two samples, and one from Spokane, Wash.

The samples were from frozen ground beef which had been sold to USDA for distribution to school districts across the country. The meat was bought from two plants — Cattle King of Denver and Nebraska Beef Inc. of Gering, Neb.

Department officials impounded an estimated 6.5 million pounds of meat from the two plants last month following reports that some of it may have been processed under unsanitary conditions. The companies have denied the allegations.

McClung said that laboratory tests now have been performed on 46 samples from the impounded meat, including the dozen announced Tuesday. The five with insect fragments were the first to be found contaminated.

Threw Pennies In Bank Protest

HOMESTEAD, Pa. (AP) — Angry steelworkers "shut Mellon Bank down pretty good" with a penny-throwing protest over the bank's overseas investments, an organizer said.

Two men were arrested during Tuesday's protest at a Mellon branch office. About 120 people asked bank tellers to exchange $5 bills for pennies and made the tellers count the coins. The protesters then "threw the pennies on the floor to slow down business," said organizer Ron Weisen, president of United Steelworkers Local 137.

The steelworkers say Mellon has invested 26 percent of its funds abroad and has not sufficiently supported businesses in the Monongahela valley, where steel mills and other plants have closed.

Paid The Boss To Leave Work

NEW YORK (AP) — A city supervisor has been charged with grand larceny in the "pathetic" case of a subordinate who paid the boss to let him leave work and play the horses, authorities say.

Victor Guidotti, 32, was charged Tuesday with taking thousands of dollars — in amounts of $20 to $50 at a time — from Joel Shapiro, a 37-year-old worker in the Employees Retirement System office, said investigation commissioner Patrick McGinley. The total was not known.

Shapiro, described by McGinley as a "victim" addicted to gambling in a "pathetic case," has not been charged.

Border-Crossing Brings An Exchange Of Charges

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaragua, responding to Costa Rican charges of unprovoked aggression, is demanding a halt to "the criminal activities" of Nicaraguan anti-government rebels operating from Costa Rica.

The two countries traded charges Tuesday during a special meeting of the Organization of American States permanent council that was called by Costa Rica after the Sandinista Army shelled areas across the Costa Rican border a week ago.

Costa Rican Foreign Minister Fernando Volio said the Nicaraguan attacks were especially serious in view of Costa Rica's policy of neutrality in the Nicaraguan civil conflict and the huge military advantage Nicaragua has over its neighbor.

In an impassioned reply, Nicaraguan Ambassador Edgar Parrales noted that Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries have been using Costa Rican territory for attacks into Nicaragua with the complicity of some Costa Rican officials.

"How can any one accuse us of aggression?" Parrales asked, staring at the Costa Rican envoy as the two sat across from each other at the horseshoe-shaped table in the main OAS conference room.

U.S. Ambassador J. William Middendorf suggested that, if the Nicaraguan attacks continued, Costa Rica would be within its right to seek redress through OAS collective defense mechanisms.

Underscoring the power imbalance, Middendorf noted that Costa Rica has no standing army and its security forces are limited to a 4,000-member civil guard. In contrast, he said, Nicaragua's armed forces total 25,000 with an additional 50,000 in the militia.

Nicaragua is confronting attacks from anti-communist rebel forces based in both Honduras and Costa Rica, a two-front conflict that U.S. officials, speaking privately, say they hope will give the Sandinista leadership the incentive to moderate its policies.

For the time being, the officials say there is little prospect that the rebel activities can overthrow the Sandinista government.

While assailing Costa Rica's policies, Parrales held the United States principally responsible for the turmoil in the region, alluding to Washington's backing of the Nicaraguan rebels and the expansion of U.S. military exercises and force levels in the region in recent months.

He described the U.S. presence in the area as a "crushing, humiliating boot."

Over the past generation, Costa Rica has been one of the few Latin American countries that has had uninterrupted democratic rule, a subject which Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge touched on in a speech Tuesday to the AFL-CIO convention in Hollywood, Fla.

Monge said the people of Latin America are tired of having to face a choice of living under a "military-oligarchic dictatorship or communism."

He said the United States on occasion has supported right-wing military despotism, an accusation that he said "is insistently preached by communism to deepen the breach between the United States and Latin America."

Declaring that dictatorships of the left or the right are unacceptable to the people of Latin America, Monge said, "We must present the proper and true alternative: pluralistic and participatory democracy in the face of dictatorships of any ideological sign."

Spent Fuel Cell On The Road

WEST VALLEY, N.Y. (AP) — One of 750 spent but highly radioactive nuclear fuel cells stored in south-western New York since 1972 is being trucked to Wisconsin, in the start of a court-ordered project to clear out its original storage site.

A 25-ton cask containing the cell was placed Tuesday on an 18-wheel truck which began the trip over Interstate 90 to Point Beach, Wis., the site of a Wisconsin Electric Power Co. storage facility.

A federal judge earlier this year ordered the cells removed from the West Valley Demonstration Project so that West Valley Nuclear Services could use the storage area to convert more than 560,000 gallons of radioactive liquid waste into glass-like logs.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing after a modest rally on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 31 to 1,236.38 in the first half hour. Gainers held a 5-4 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's advance Tuesday appeared to be largely "technical," with buyers moving in after a five-session decline.

Traders apparently remained optimistic about the likely trend of third-quarter earnings reports due in the next few weeks.

But brokers said their enthusiasm was muted by uncertainty over how much the pace of the economic recovery might slow in early 1984.

Today's early prices included GTE, up 1/4 at 45; Georgia-Pacific, up 1/4 at 25 1/4; International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 129 1/4; and Armco, unchanged at 20 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.39 to 1,236.69.

Advances outpaced declines by almost 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 90.27 million shares, against 77.23 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained .25 to 96.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .69 at 229.41.

Publisher Says Reagan Bowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Right publisher Richard Viguerie says President Reagan bowed to "appeasers" in the State Department and White House by not taking stronger action against the Soviet Union after a Korean jetliner was shot down.

"I have seen my country cower before the sword of the Soviet Army," Viguerie wrote in the October issue of "Conservative Digest."

Autopsy

The medical examiner's office was conducting an autopsy today on the body of a 16-year-old youth who died Tuesday night in what Sheriff Ralph Tyson said was a possible suicide.

Dr. Stan Harris, area medical examiner, was unavailable this morning for a ruling on the death.

Tyson, who declined to identify the youth pending the autopsy results, said the Route 1, Grimesland, resident was found dead by his mother. The youth had suffered a gunshot wound to the right side of his head, according to Tyson, who said a .38 caliber pistol was found on the bed beside the body.

The Sheriff's Department was notified at 9:45 p.m., Tyson said. The Eastern Pines rescue squad responded to the call.

Hunt Criticizes Waste Disposal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The federal government has no justification for considering North Carolina as a site for high-level nuclear waste disposal, Gov. Jim Hunt says.

Hunt, in a letter to U.S. Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, criticized department guidelines for selection of a nuclear waste dump. Sites in North Carolina and 16 other Eastern states are being considered.

"In his letter sent Tuesday, Hunt said 'no potentially acceptable sites' have been identified in North Carolina. However, 'it is clear from your geologic data that North Carolina has by no means been eliminated from consideration,' Hunt wrote.

"Our people deserve the most complete information available and firm assurances that the procedures to be used in implementing this act are of the highest standard."

Hunt complained that Energy Department guidelines lack documentation and detail and hadn't gotten states' approval.

The department has so severely compressed the schedule established by Congress for implementing the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 "that it will certainly result in poor decision making," Hunt said.

He called on the department to adopt a new timetable under which draft Regional Characterization Reports, which provide data for site consideration, would be reissued after site selection guidelines have been agreed upon by the states.

The 12 North Carolina sites being studied for possible disposal of high-level nuclear waste are the Henderson Gneiss in parts of Transylvania, Henderson, Buncombe and McDowell counties; Churchland in Davidson County; Mooresville-Mount Mourne in Iredell County; Landis in Rowan County and Cherryville and High Shoals in Gaston County.

Also being considered are Butterwood Creek in Halifax County, Toxaway in Transylvania County, Castalia in Nash County, Wise in Northern Warren County, Rocky Mount in Nash and Edgecombe counties and Rolesville in Wake County.

Accidents Investigated

An estimated $2,200 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 9:21 a.m. collision on Greene Street, 200 feet north of the Mumford Road intersection, involving trucks driven by Terry Wayne Glisson of Langston Park Apartments and Brien Lee Sweers of Milton, Fla.

Sweers was charged by police with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, and damage was estimated at $500 to the Glisson truck and $900 to the Sweers vehicle.

Cars driven by Charles Fredrick Switzer of Route 5, Greenville, and Grover Lee Boyd Jr. of Route 3, Washington, collided about 5:20 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 10th Street, causing $300 damage to the Boyd car and $500 damage to the Switzer car.

Martin Bd. Sets Policies

WILLIAMSTON — At the October meeting of the Martin County Board of Education, approval was given to policies on perfect attendance, on promotion and non-promotion in elementary schools, and bids were approved for the school system's insurance program.

To qualify for the perfect attendance certification, a student must attend all 180 school days, not be tardy or leave early any day during the year.

The promotion and non-promotion policy raises the levels which students must achieve for promotion. Factors involved are ones of mastery of tests in reading and math, score above the 35th percentile on the California Achievement Test, and recommendation by the teacher. A student must meet two of these criteria and attend at least 160 days in order to be promoted.

Bids approved for insurance are: Vehicle insurance, Everitt Insurance Agency; property damage, Harrison-Crawford Insurance Agency; comprehensive general liability, Harrison-Crawford, and workers compensation, Hall Risk Management Company.

Superintendent Eugene Rogers told the board that plans for the Williamston field house are now being revised by the architect and should be ready for bids by mid-November. Plans for multipurpose rooms at Edna Andrews and Williamston Primary Schools are also in the process of being completed.

Rescue Sub Is Tested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy says a specially-designed submarine "rescued" 40 sailors from a British sub 400 feet down in a Scottish bay after a simulated accident.

The rescue submarine Avalon and its 22 crewmen and supporting specialists were flown to Scotland from San Diego recently to carry out the mock rescue, the Navy said Tuesday.

The Avalon is one of two Deep Submergence Rescue Vehicles built by the Navy following the loss of the nuclear powered submarine Thresher off the New England coast More than 20 years ago.

Rose Seeks Answers To Problems

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

What seems to be the problem with the Rose High School Rampants?

That's what coach Ronald Vincent would like to know.

Two weeks ago, the Rampants were riding high on a three-game winning streak. They were ranked fourth in the state and appeared ready to make a bid for higher honors. They had beaten Jacksonville — a team that through five games so far this year — has not been scored on except by Rose.

Things couldn't have looked "Rose-ier."

But then, the bottom fell out. Northern Nash came to town and in the brief span of one quarter put 21 points on the board. Rose struggled back to score seven and appeared headed in for 14 when an interception was run back 98 yards to break the back of the Rampants as the Knights took a 28-7 win.

Then, last week against Rocky Mount, the Rampants sputtered and stalled as the Gryphons pulled out a controversial 14-7 triumph.

And even Vincent admits

Charles Vines

that despite some questionable calls in the contest's final minutes, the Rampants didn't play well enough to win.

"It was a tough loss for us to take," Vincent said. "Our offensive and defensive lines didn't perform well in the game. We just got beat off the line."

The Rampants must, however, recover quickly if they are to have any sort of future during the 1983 season. They have only a couple of days to prepare for Wilson Beddingfield, which visits Ficklen Stadium on Thursday night for a 7:30 p.m. contest.

The game is being played on Thursday night under the agreement with East Carolina not to use the stadium when the Pirates have a home afternoon game on Saturday.

Beddingfield brings a 4-1 record into the contest, having lost only to 3-A power Southwest Edgecombe. The Bruins breezed past Greene Central in their opener, 46-0, before bowing to SouthWest, 30-7.

But they then bounced back against Southern Wayne, 10-7, before topping Rocky Mount, 16-14, and Northern Nash, 28-13. Both of those Big East Conference teams hold wins over the Rampants.

Vincent said that circumstances Friday caused Rose to have to use a couple of inexperienced players in the offensive line due to sickness and injury. Mike Walsh missed the game with sickness, and Churchill Thomas was used only on defense because of an ankle injury.

To top that off, quarterback Battle Emory was sidelined after the second series of the contest with an ankle injury. He did come back late in the contest for one series, throwing a touchdown pass — which was called back for holding.

"But we just didn't block. You can tell that as we only got 32 yards on 26 carries. You can't win with stuff like that," Vincent said.

Vincent said that the twin losses have made the Rampants doubt themselves. "I'm looking for answers, too. It looks like we're just not opening holes and when we do, the backs aren't running to them. We're just in a slump."

The Rampant injury situation doesn't look any better either. Emory is still questionable for the Thursday night game, and Bobby Casey, an offensive lineman, is hobbled by a ankle injury. Thomas is still not expected back in the offensive line.

Two other starters, lineman

Butch Haskins and wide receiver Maurice Smith, have already been lost for the season with injuries.

"We're going to have to make some changes in the offensive line," Vincent said. He plans to move Sterling Edwards from the defensive line to an offensive guard slot, while Marc Gatlin and Bill Zadeits will take over at tackles, also moving over from defense. Neither Edwards nor Gatlin have played in the offensive line in high school. They will also continue to play some on defense.

"The ironic thing about it all is the play of Robert Joyner," Vincent said. He noted that the Rampant center was one of the most effective blockers on the team so far. "If they were all blocking like him, we wouldn't be having any problems at all. That's what makes it so frustrating."

Vincent also praised the punting of Arthur Brown in the game. On six kicks, Brown averaged 42.2 yards.

Beddingfield entered the 1983 season as one of the favorites in the league. A coaches' pre-season poll picked them to finish in third place in the Big East, and so far they've lived up to their reputation.

"This is by far the best team they've had," Vincent said. "Ricky Barnes (6-1, 230) is a three-year starter at tailback-fullback (playing either one) and they have a solid defense."

"They've already beaten two teams that have beaten us, so they've got to believe that they can beat us. They run out of the I formation and they mix it up pretty good, although they tend to run more than they pass."

Last week against Northern Nash, they rolled up over 200 yards on the ground. In comparison, Rose rushed for only 89 yards against the Knights.

"This is an important game for us," Vincent said. "If we are going to have a chance to get into the playoffs, we've got to snap back."

Leaders Hold Position On Prep AP Poll

By RICK SCOPPE

Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Despite a close call last week, Randleman remains comfortably atop the combined 2-A and 1-A class in the latest Associated Press high school football poll.

Meantime, 4-A Greensboro Page and 3-A Southern Durham used strong showings to maintain the No. 1 spots in their respective classes as the football season reached the halfway point.

Randleman, 5-0, overcame five turnovers to slide by Southwest Guilford 6-2 Saturday. Halfback Tony Goss, who had rushed for close to 500 yards and scored nine touchdowns in his last two games, gained 138 yards but failed to get into the end zone for the first time since 1981.

Randleman captured 17 first-place votes and 177 points overall to edge out Sylva-Webster, 6-0, which had one first-place vote and 165 points.

Fuquay-Varina, 5-0, remained No. 3 followed by F.T. Ford, which was upset by Bunker Hill 38-20 Monday, and West Montgomery, 5-0. The F.T. Ford defeat was after this week's votes were tabulated.

The second five consists of Wallace-Rose Hill, which jumped from No. 8 to No. 6, Franklinton, Maiden and Robbinsville, with Albemarle and Charlotte Catholic tied for 10th.

Greensboro Page upped its record to 5-0 with a 35-3 victory over cross-town rival Grimsley, while No. 2 Fayetteville Byrd handed Lee County its first loss 28-13.

The Eagles, 5-0, were led by Steve Salley, who gained 127 yards and scored one touchdown. Salley has now rushed for 774 yards and seven TDs in five games this season.

Page received 12 first-place votes and 174 points in all to edge out Byrd, which had five first-place votes and 166 points total.

Roxboro Person and North Durham, both 5-0, exchanged places as Person fell to No. 4 although neither team played Friday. Wilson Fike, 5-0, remained No. 5 after beating Kinston 26-6.

Wilson Hunt, which meets arch-rival Fike Friday in an important Big East Conference game, heads up the second five.

Defending 4-A state champ Jacksonville is sixth, followed East Forsyth, New Hanover and Myers Park.

Jacksonville held previously undefeated Wilmington Hoggard to 109 yards on offense — including 24 in the second half — en route to a 10-0 win that left the Cardinals at 4-1.

Southern Durham, 6-0, downed East Wake 26-6 behind fullback Darryl McGill, who gained 239 yards and scored two touchdowns. McGill has now rushed for 956 yards this season.

The Spartans were named No. 1 on 12 ballots and received 169 points in all while Kannapolis, 6-0, received three first-place votes and 156 points overall. Kannapolis blanked Northwest Cabarrus 28-0 and has now given up just 33 points in six games.

Asheville Reynolds, 5-0, was ranked third followed by Thomasville, 5-0, at No. 4 and Clinton, 5-0, at No. 5.

Lennie Faison rushed for 215 yards on nine carries and scored two touchdowns to spark the Dark Horses to a 32-7 victory over West Carteret. Faison had 210 yards in the first half and sat out most of the second half.

West Henderson is ranked sixth followed by East Randolph, Shelby Crest and Southwest Edgecombe.

Burlington Cummings, 4-1, handed East Randolph its first loss 20-16 Monday night.

Reflector Prep Poll Returns

The Daily Reflector's High School Football Rankings make their return for the 1983 season this week.

As in the collegiate rankings, points are awarded for each victory a team records, with additional points for each game its victim's win. Points are also weighted as to classification.

The rankings reflect, therefore, strength of schedule to this point of the season. As the year progresses, the rankings become more and more accurate.

In the 4-A ranks, Douglas Byrd of Fayetteville rules the roost with a 5-0 record and a total of 36 points, ahead of Greensboro Page, second with 31½.

Area teams ranked in 4-A include Wilson Hunt, fifth with 29 and Wilson Fike, seventh with 27.

Southern Durham tops the 3-A listing with 33½ points, just ahead of Thomasville at 32.

SouthWest Edgecombe ranks fourth with 29 points, while Williamston is eighth with 26.

Sylva-Webster leads the 2-A listings with 28 points, while Wallace-Rose Hill is second with 26½. Randleman, the AP poll leader, is fourth with 24 points.

Emory Likes Support

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ed Emory, coach of the East Carolina Pirates, liked the way his parade home was led Saturday night after the Bucs returned from a 13-6 victory over Big Eight Conference team Missouri. A big Purple and Gold cement mixer led the team back to Greenville from the Kinston Airport, where a tumultuous greeting was given the Pirates. Another awaited them on campus.

"Some football teams could play three games on the road and never get the reception we've gotten after each of those trips. It's just been great. That's the type of support we need to build a tradition at East Carolina," Emory told the media at his weekly press conference yesterday. "You build a program on that type of enthusiasm."

But that greeting was perhaps not nearly so gratifying as the reception he received at a number of high schools Monday as he spent the day recruiting. "When you are out trying to recruit players, a victory over a team like Missouri certainly gets their attention. They know that we have the type of program that they should look into. In the 15 schools I visited (Monday) everyone told us that we'd done a great job. A number of people, some of them Carolina and State fans, told me that we'd made the whole state of North Carolina proud of us."

Emory said the victory over the Big Eight team was the "biggest of his coaching career," but whether it would go down as the greatest ever for East Carolina would be told over the next seven weeks.

"How big it will be down the road will be determined by how much progress we make in these next weeks. If we continue to win, it will go down as one of the biggest ever for us. Last year, if we had beaten them and gone 8-3, we probably would have gotten a bowl bid. So this year it gives us a chance to really do something."

Emory pointed out that prior to the game, he had said that the Pirates would have to win on the kicking game and defense, and not get beat on offense. "This was a true statement at Missouri," he said. "Except for that last kickoff (when Missouri got good yardage off a reverse), we covered them well. Jeff (Heath, the kicker) had to make the tackle on that play and he got some bruised ribs from it. We don't like for him to have to make tackles."

And Emory was very proud of the defensive effort. "This was the most totally dominant game we've played since I've been here and one of the most totally dominant I've been around. Our staff spent hours in scouting them, and I think they had us scouted well too.

They may even have had our offensive signals. I know that our offense got better when we started using messengers to run the plays in instead of signals. We'll be changing them for this week's game since we were going to change them anyway next week (for Temple, where former ECU aide Spencer Prescott is now coaching)."

Emory said the win was especially gratifying when one considers "all the elements" in the game. "They were at their own field, with their own crowd and with their great tradition. Then, too, they are the only Division I-A school in the state, so they have the entire state to themselves in recruiting. Suppose East Carolina or Carolina had all of North Carolina to itself. Can you imagine what kind of football team it could field? To go up against all that and win is just more than I can express."

"It's just short of a miracle that we could go out there and win."

Emory said that the defense of the Pirates played with much greater confidence. "The only play they got a lot of yardage on us was that first pass play. And we were just half a step away from getting them for a big loss then. If they hadn't gotten that, our defensive stats would have really been awesome." Missouri finished with 86 yards rushing and 137, 56 of which came on that one play. Without that, Missouri had only 167 total yards.

Emory said he felt the Pirate defensive line played its best game of the year, and that the linebackers, P.J. Jordan and Mike Grant, were "just superb." He also felt the secondary did a much better job.

"I felt at the half that one touchdown would win the game," Emory said, "although I was disappointed when we got down there on the two and didn't score (in the first half)."

The coach said that when Missouri had a touchdown pass called back — the quarterback was beyond the line of scrimmage when he threw — and then missed a field goal, he felt the Pirates had the game in hand. "Our offensive line really came off the ball in the fourth quarter. They just blew them away."

He also made another play for Terry Long's Outland Trophy bid. "Anybody who has watched Terry over the four games so far cannot doubt that he is a legitimate Outland Trophy candidate. He's just been awesome."

Emory said the felt the victory should help the Pirates when it comes to scheduling in the future. "People can see from what we've done so far this year that we have a growing program, one they can be proud to play against. And this is the type of competition we want to play against."

Emory said the Pirates came out of the game in good shape physically. Kenny Phillips is nursing a hamstring strain. Steve Hamilton is still recovering from an ankle injury and Earnest Byner missed practice early in the week with a sore back, along with Heath's bruised ribs. However, all are expected to be ready to play Saturday night.

Saturday night's foe in Ficklen Stadium will be Southwestern Louisiana, a team that has twice come to Greenville and twice gone away with upset victories.

The Ragin' Cajuns, who are coming off a 7-3-1 season, are 6-3 so far this year, however, but Emory pointed out that they have been favored in all three games, losing one because of fumbles, one when they fell behind on offensive mistakes, and one on a two-point conversion at the end of the game.

"They are a dangerous team much better than their record," he said.

Game time in Ficklen Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

Schmidt Blasts Reuss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Schmidt says the opening game of the 1983 National League Championships is merely history now, but the Philadelphia Phillies slugger played the major role in its making.

"The game means nothing now except that guys will write about it for tomorrow and we'll think about it for a couple of hours before starting to think about the next one," Schmidt said Tuesday night after he homered in the first inning for the only run in Philadelphia's 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I remember we won the first game against the Dodgers in the 1977 Championship Series, but they came back to win the next three," he said. "Of course, being up by one game is more fun than being down by one."

"I know the Dodgers are a great ball club, and there's going to be some hitting before this series is through."

There was little hitting in the first game of the best-of-five series, which resumes tonight in Dodger Stadium with Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela, 15-10 during the regular season, going against Philadelphia's John Denny, 19-6.

Steve Carlton blanked the Dodgers on seven hits for 7-2-3 innings before giving way to ace reliever Al Holland with the bases loaded and two away in the bottom of the eighth. Holland got Mike Marshall to fly out to right to end the Dodgers' strongest threat of the game.

Jerry Reuss was the loser in the pitchers' duel, allowing five hits before going out for a pinch-hitter in the bottom of the eighth. His performance was flawed only by the fastball in the first inning that he threw in Schmidt's preferred hitting area, low and across the plate.

"The game was one pitch the way it turned out," said Reuss. "It was a good pitch to a good hitter."

Schmidt said he wasn't certain the ball was going to clear the centerfield fence.

"He had thrown me a couple high and inside and I was just trying to find the ball to tell the truth," recalled Schmidt, who led the majors with 40 homers this season but never before had hit one in the league championships. "It just so happened the pitch was down and over the plate ... I just sort of threw the bat at it."

"I thought it had a chance to go out, but when (Ken) Landreaux kept his arm up in the air at the fence, I thought he'd caught it."

Both the winners and the losers agreed it was a well-played contest.

"Carlton pitched a super game," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "We had our chances to score a couple of times and we didn't. Who would have thought that Schmidt's home run in the first inning would have been all they needed to win."

"Reuss pitched a great game, but just came up short," Lasorda continued. "We hope our turn comes tomorrow."

"That homer didn't look like much in the first inning, but it looked monumental by the fifth or sixth," said Phillies Manager Paul Owens. "It was a classic game."

"I thought there would be good pitching and not a lot of hitting," he said. "In fact, we were going to play for a run early. It was a tough game for the Dodgers to lose and a good game for us to win."

After Holland turned the Dodgers away in the eighth, they had one final chance for a comeback, when Derrel Thomas reached first as Schmidt booted his grounder with two away in the bottom of the ninth. Thomas stole second, but Holland then got Greg Brock to ground out and end it.

Although Schmidt and many of the players on each side predicted heavy hitting in the games ahead, Owens said, "With the pitchers the two clubs have, there could be more games like this coming up."

Game 2 could provide another such pitchers' showcase, considering the talents of the opposing hurlers.

Valenzuela has not been as consistent as in the past, including his 1981 Cy Young and Rookie of the Year campaign, but he has pitched brilliantly at times. Denny, with the league's best record and second-best earned run average (2.37), is the leading candidate for this year's Cy Young Award.

One playoff veteran, Philadelphia second baseman Joe Morgan, sees the second game as the potential clincher for the Phillies.

"If we win it, with our pitching there's no way they're going back to Philadelphia and sweep us in three games," said Morgan, a longtime Dodger nemesis. "Of course, beating them in Game 2 isn't going to be easy."

Valkyries Sweep Volleyball Pair

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's volleyball Valkyries swept past two more opponents yesterday, downing arch-rival West Carteret and North Lenoir.

In the opening match, Conley took a 15-13, 15-12 win over the Lady Patriots. They followed that up with a 15-4, 15-5 win over North Lenoir.

In the opening match, Karen Barrett and Michelle Waters led service with five and four straight points, respectively. Barrett had eight effective hits, of which five were kills.

"This was the toughest and most exciting match of the year," Coach Martha McCaskill said. "At one point in the second game we were down 6-0, but came back to win."

Against North Lenoir, it was an easier time. Trellaney Boyd led all servers with eight straight. Barrett had three hits, two of them kills.

Conley is now 14-0 and travels to White Oak on Thursday for a tri-match with West Carteret.

SNOW HILL — SouthWest Edgecombe outgated Greene Central and clinched at least a tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball standings yesterday.

The hosting Lady Rams downed Southern Nash, 12-15, 15-7, 16-14, in the first match of the afternoon to keep their title hopes alive. However, after SouthWest disposed of Southern, the Lady Cougars took a 16-14, 8-15, 15-8 victory over Greene Central to ice the title tie.

In Greene Central's opening match with the Ladybirds, Sharon Wilkes had nine straight service points, while Cindi Hicks had five hits. Kim Rogers added five assists and seven service points.

Against SouthWest, Hicks had five hits, as did Antonette Wilkes. Rogers had seven assists while Allison Battle added eight.

"It was a great match even though we lost," Ram Coach Tim Corbett said. "It was probably the best match ever played by a Greene Central team."

The loss drops the Rams to 11-2 overall and 6-2 in Eastern Carolina play. They close out the regular season on Thursday at North Pitt.

NP-FC-AG

FARMVILLE — North Pitt won a pair of volleyball matches yesterday from Ayden-Grifton and hosting Farmville Central as the Eastern Carolina Conference season moved toward a close.

North Pitt gained the opening win by downing Ayden-Grifton, 15-2, 10-15, 15-9. The Pant-HERS then downed Farmville, 15-2, 15-4. Farmville followed with a 15-8, 16-18, 15-8 victory over Ayden-Grifton.

In the opening match, North Pitt was led by Sherri Bradley with 15 service points. In the Farmville match, North Pitt was led by Peggy Purvis with eight and Martha Rollins had six.

GCA Booters Kick Bethel

Mike Griner scored three goals and paced Greenville Christian to an 8-2 soccer victory over Bethel Christian yesterday.

The Knights were in charge all the way, scoring four goals in the first half, and holding Bethel scoreless until the second half.

Griner got things going in the first half with a goal nine minutes into the game, assisted by Darrin O'Brian. Chris Harris followed three minutes later off an assist by Mike Bragg. Joseph Martin scored the third goal, 19 minutes into the half with an assist by Paul Hollingsworth. Griner then closed out the half at the 27 minute mark, with an assist by Brian House.

Bethel opened the second half with Ken Pike scoring an unassisted goal two minutes into play. Tom Warburton then scored for GCA, assisted by Martin, and Hollingsworth followed, assisted by Harris. Pike again hit for Bethel, while Harris followed for GCA. Griner then closed out the scoring with a goal at the 39 minute mark, off an assist by Hollingsworth.

"We dominated play," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We saw some things we've been working on and I was happy that nearly all our goals came by assists rather than one-on-one situations."

Thatcher praised Kerry House for his play in the game, saying he helped GCA control the game.

Now 4-5, the Knights play host to Goldsboro Christian on Friday.

ROSE 0
ELIZABETH CITY — Northeastern High School handed Rose High School its third straight shutout loss yesterday, taking a 2-0 victory over the Ramettes.

The loss dropped the Ramettes to 4-4 on the season. They return to action on Thursday, traveling to Goldsboro.

Details of the match were not made available.

PLAY IT SAFE

NEW YORK (AP) — Never take anything for granted in golf. That old line was driven home as a painful lesson to both Hale Irwin and Andy Bean this year.

Irwin managed to miss a 2-inch putt in the British open by playing it too casually and missed a playoff by one stroke. A couple of weeks later, Bean, in the Canadian Open, knocked in a very short putt with the handle of his putter. That was against the rules and Bean drew a two-stroke penalty, which cost him a chance at the title.

Hoyt's Confidence Eases Chisox Manager's Decision For Opener

BALTIMORE (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt has a way about him, an air of confidence that is not only unshakable but permeates the diamond when he's on the mound.

That's one of the reasons Manager Tony LaRussa named the chunky right-hander to start today for the Chicago White Sox against Baltimore in the first game of the American League Championship series.

The other is "Hoyt keeps us in a game better than anyone on the staff" and if the series does go five games "I want him to pitch again."

Hoyt, 24-10, has won his last 13 decisions.

The 28-year-old Hoyt was in the bullpen in 1981 when he won his last five decisions. Last year he became a starter and won his first nine. When that 14-game string was broken, Hoyt shrugged his broad shoulders and said "I'll do it again. I'm a streak pitcher."

Hoyt laughed Tuesday when he was reminded of his boast.

"This time it's better," he said. "That streak was over two seasons and some of the games were as a relief pitcher. This one means a lot more to me."

While Scott McGregor, who will pitch the opener for Baltimore, admitted he was pumped up and would have trouble sleeping, Hoyt expected to sleep soundly.

"Not at all," he said when asked if he thought he might be nervous. "You want to win and you want to do your best but even if I lose it doesn't mean much. The people I have coming behind me are capable of winning three in a row and that takes all the pressure off me."

That fact is quite obvious when checking White Sox pitching statistics. Since the All-Star break, Hoyt, Richard Dotson and Floyd Bannister have a combined record of 42-5.

The real importance of winning the first game is that you can then win the second," said Hoyt, "and if we do that all we have to do is go home and win one there. We play pretty good at home."

The White Sox were 55-26 in Comiskey Park.

Hoyt's forte is his amazing control, but it pitching in the strike zone has resulted in 27 home runs. In the 260 2-3 innings he issued only 31 walks, four of which were intentional.

"I've always had good control, never thought much about it," said Hoyt. "Home runs don't mean a thing when you win the games."

The Hoyt-LaRussa relationship began in 1977 when Hoyt was acquired from the New York Yankees. He went to Knoxville where Manager LaRussa put him in the bullpen, saying it would be the fastest route to the majors.

Hoyt made it to the White Sox late in 1979 and again in 1980 where LaRussa was managing. Two years later, LaRussa again made a starter of Hoyt, a move he has not regretted.

Northeastern Passes Rose

ELIZABETH CITY — Northeastern posted 28 points to defeat Rose High School and Manteo Tuesday in high school cross country action. Rose had 36, while Manteo trailed with 68.

"This is the first time in my six years that Northeastern has beaten us," Rose coach Ron Hochmuth said. "We don't have a lot of numbers, while Northeastern had 17 runners. That puts a lot of pressure on our five people."

"It's a big disappointment to see no more participation than that from the student body after seeing where the program has been. The five that we have are working hard, but they can't afford to have a bad race because there's no one to take up the slack."

Rose is now 6-2 on the season and will run Tuesday at River Park North against Manteo, Conley and Northern Nash.

1. Paul Bowen (R) 17:29 2. Jeff Simpson (N) 17:32 3. Steve Strother (R) 17:51 4. Claude Nixon (N) 18:11 5. Taton McDowell (N) 18:21 6. Todd Crouch (R) 18:31 7. Ed Hartman (M) 18:35 8. Larry Richardson (N) 18:57 9. Peter Curtis (N) 19:01 10. Randy Gomez (N) 19:02

Other Rose runners: 13. Clay Jackson 19:24 15. John Evans 19:30

Rampettes Win Cross Country

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's girls' cross-country team added two more victories to its growing list yesterday, downing hosting Northeastern High School, 17-44, and non-conference foe Manteo, 19-38.

The Rampettes are now 6-0 on the year going into their final regular season match against Northern Nash in Greenville on Tuesday.

Most of the girls' improved on their times in the match as they begin moving toward peaks for the sections and state meets.

Carol Moore of Rose led three of her teammates across the line in first place. Moore finished in 22:40 followed by Becky Thompson in 22:57. Amy Moore was third in 22:58, while Cissy Taft finished fourth in 23:10.

Manteo broke the Rose string with a fifth place finish by Lori Overman in 24:11, followed by Northeastern's Denise Dashiell in 24:24. Manteo's Karen Johnson and Lauren Johnson were next in 25:00 and 25:21, respectively. Northeastern's Heather Jensen was ninth in 25:40, followed by Manteo's Jennifer Dixon in 25:49.

Other Rose finishers included: Layne King, 11th in 26:02; Stacy Thompson, 12th in 26:17; Michele Connolly, 13th in 26:18; Kathryn Spencer, 14th in 27:19; and Gina Branch, 16th in 27:52.

Fast Sox Put Dempsey On Spot

BALTIMORE (AP) — He does one heck of a Carlton Fisk imitation, but at this stage of his career, he might be just as happy to be Rick Dempsey.

Dempsey, catcher for the Baltimore Orioles, was a man on the spot as the American League playoffs began. Considered one of baseball's best-throwing catchers, Dempsey will have to contend with the fleet feet of the Chicago White Sox.

As a team this season, the White Sox stole 165 bases, 77 by Rudy Law and 57 by Julio Cruz.

The way Dempsey was talking on Tuesday, he was relishing the limelight. He's never been too shy.

Over the last several seasons, Orioles fans have gotten used to Dempsey's antics, especially during rain delays when he comes onto the tarp and imitates, among others, former Manager Earl Weaver, his teammates and, most memorably, Fisk. The object of Dempsey's Fisk caricature was the 1975 World Series when, as the Boston catcher, Fisk homered to win the sixth game against Cincinnati. Fisk's homer was down the left-field line, and, as he danced sideways toward first, Fisk waved the ball into fair territory.

Now, Dempsey and Fisk are opposing catchers in the AL playoffs, which begin today. Fisk, signed by the White Sox as a free agent in 1981, probably won't have to worry too much about Orioles baserunners. They stole only 61 bases this season.

But Dempsey already has taken note of the White Sox's baserunning threat.

"Sure they're going to try to run — with guys like Cruz and Law," Dempsey said. "They're going to try to run us off the field, but we're ready."

Left-hander Scott McGregor, 18-7, and 1-0 this season against Chicago, was picked by Manager Joe Altobelli to start the opener, who were favored 13-10 to win the playoffs by Nevada oddsmakers.

"You don't want to pay so much attention to Cruz or Law that the guy up at the plate hits one off the clock,"

McGregor said after Tuesday's workout. "I've seen that happen so many times. You try a couple of trick moves to first, and then you throw one right down the middle."

"If they get on base, to tell you the truth, I'd just as soon let them steal second, third and home, take the run and go sit down in the dugout," McGregor said.

McGregor will be followed in the playoff rotation by rookie right-hander Mike Boddicker, 16-8, left-hander Mike Flanagan, 12-4, and right-hander Storm Davis, 13-7. Jim Palmer will be in the bullpen.

The winningest pitcher in baseball this year, right-hander LaMarr Hoyt, 24-10, was Manager Tony LaRussa's choice to start for Chicago. Following Hoyt, who was 2-1 against Baltimore, will be left-hander Floyd Bannister, 16-10, right-hander Rich Dotson, 22-7, and left-hander Britt Burns, 10-11. Since the All-Star break, Chicago's first three starters have a combined record of 42-5.

"So much has been said about Chicago's hitting," Dempsey said. "But I don't think any team can put up three starters like Chicago. I don't fear their hitting like their pitching. Over a short series when you can throw Hoyt, Dotson and Bannister, you have, more or less, three legitimate 20-game winners."

Between the two clubs, they should come away with their share of postseason awards. Hoyt and Dotson both are Cy Young candidates. Ron Kittle of the White Sox, with 35 homers, 100 RBI and a .254 average, is a Rookie of the Year contender. Baltimore has two Most Valuable Player candidates in Eddie Murray, 33 homers and 111 RBI, and Cal Ripken Jr., 27 homers, 102 RBI and a .318 batting average. And the White Sox would be disappointed if Fisk — 26 homers and 86 RBI — were overlooked entirely in the MVP vote.

"Figure-wise, we're the top two teams in the league," Kittle said. "They beat us seven out of 12 times, but in three of those losses, we played them neck-and-neck. We have the power pitchers, and they have the finesse pitchers."

Besides speed, pitching offered another vast difference between the two clubs, although both came away with considerable success.

McGregor was the perfect example of the difference. He had only 86 strikeouts to Hoyt's 148, but McGregor's earned run average was 3.18 to Hoyt's 3.66.

"He gets the ball over the plate, he changes speeds, and he changes rhythm," Dempsey said of McGregor. "And, he's knowledgeable, he knows the hitters. He tries to make them hit the ball where it will do the least harm, to take away their strengths."

Much also has been made of the Orioles' edge in experience. Besides Fisk, designated hitter Greg Luzinski was the only other White Sox player in the starting lineup with World Series experience. Luzinski was with the 1980 World Series champion Philadelphia Phillies. On the other hand, the Orioles have many returning players from their 1979 World Series club, including McGregor.

"Four years later, four years older and wiser, maybe there is a little less pressure," McGregor said, "but I'm still excited."

LaRussa did not want to downplay the importance of experience, but he refused to concede the edge to the Orioles because of it.

"Experience is a benefit. I never underestimate it, except we have guys with experience. As a team, they have more, but it didn't bother us in the pennant race," LaRussa said. "And, what about his own inexperience in championship play?"

"It's been our strategy all year long," LaRussa said, "that we get so far ahead I can't mess it up."

Pirate Coach Misses Bus, Thumbs A Ride

Michigan Stadium. Seats 101,701. Largest college-owned structure of its kind designed solely for football. No posts or other obstructions.

Sounds great... except for the visiting team's dressing room.

"It's a pig sty," Indiana Coach Sam Wyche griped after Saturday's game. "It's a disgrace for a big-time football team to put the visiting team in a facility like that. The defense had two nails, the offense one and the coaches none. All they had were rusted chairs."

If you're planning a dinner, don't seat Memphis State Coach Rex Dockery next to Alabama's Ray Perkins or Stanford's Paul Wiggin next to Arizona State's Darryl Rogers.

Alabama trounced Memphis State 44-13 and Dockery was miffed that Bama quarterback Walter Lewis took every snap and that Van Tiffin kicked a 51-yard field goal late in the fourth quarter.

"Lewis is a great player," Dockery said. "It looks like Coach Perkins tried to use him to make sure he could do well. I hope they got enough points. As I say, there'll be other days down the road. They've got to come to Memphis in two years."

Meanwhile, Arizona State's Luis Zendejas kicked five field goals, one short of the NCAA single-game record, in a 29-11 victory over Stanford. But he missed two relative chip-shots from 25 and 37 yards out in the final 11 seconds.

"I'm sorry he didn't get it, but at the same time I apologize to Stanford," said Rogers. "But I shouldn't worry about what everybody else thinks or wants."

Said Wiggin, "If he is proud of it, then so be it."

Missouri fans greeted East Carolina last weekend with buttons reading, "Where in the hell is East Carolina?" They found out when East Carolina upset Mizzou 13-6.

"It's a great win for us," said Coach Ed Emory. "It will help us down the road and those people won't have to wear buttons that say, 'Where the hell is East Carolina?' They know now. To go into Big Eight country and play the only Division I-A team in the state of Missouri and come out a winner speaks for the program. The win means so much in terms of recruiting because it gets the players' attention. We weren't intimidated by coming into the Big Eight. Little old East Carolina has a pretty good team."

The Pirates are 3-1, their only setback a 47-46 loss to Florida State, which was ranked seventh in the nation at the time. When they returned from Missouri, they were met at the Kinston, N.C., airport by several hundred fans.

"The crowd was tremendous," said Emory. "The only problem was that our team buses left without me. Luckily, someone took me home. It's a good thing we won or I'd still be walking."

Colorado's defense has gone to the dogs. Lou Tepper, the new defensive coordinator, nicknamed the Buffs' defense "The Dog Patrol." Individually, there are "Sly Dog" (DB Victor Scott), "Shy Dog" (DB Jeff Donaldson), "Red Dog" (DB Tony Rettig), "Dirty Dog" (DB Kent Davis), "Bad Dog" (DT George Smith), "razy Dog" (MG Chuck Hill), "Junkyard Dog" (LB Sandy Armstrong), "Law Dog" (DB Clyde Riggins, because he maintains law and order in the secondary), "Bogie Dog" (LB Terry Irvin), "Ram Dog" (LB Barry Remington), "Mad Dog" (DT Vince Rafferty) and "Vicious Dog" (MG Don Muncie).

St. John's (N.Y.) Coach Bob Ricca tried to impress his players last week on how important it was to be on time for Friday's bus to Altoona, Pa., where the Redmen were to play St. Francis.

"I told them if anyone was late, the bus would leave without them," Ricca said.

Guess who was an hour late?

In rainy weather and rush-hour traffic, it took Ricca almost three hours to make the normal one-hour drive from his home to St. John's on the Long Island Expressway, known by those who use it as the world's longest parking lot. And four blocks from his destination, he got a flat tire. The team bus, however, did not leave without him.

TCU placekicker Ken Ozee flirted with tragedy during his summer job as a mine worker. Ozee was blindsided in the face by the end of a free-swinging boom chain, which missed his left eye by less than an inch. Quick medical attention resulted in plastic surgery and a few days in the hospital.

Teammate Bill Harp, an offensive lineman, saw his weight drop from 270 to 248 pounds last fall. So during the summer, Harp worked at a Fort Worth eatery and downed four medium-sized pizzas daily. He reported back at 282 pounds.

Tony Pena, Pittsburgh Pirate catcher, says he learned how to play baseball from his mother, an outstanding softball player in the Dominican Republic.

During his career with the Pittsburgh Pirates, relief pitcher Elroy Face worked in 802 games, a club record.

Carlton Won When It Counted—In Playoffs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers beat Philadelphia's silent southpaw Steve Carlton twice in as many decisions during the regular season, only to find him in top form in the opener of the National League Championship Series.

Only 14-13 lifetime against Los Angeles, Carlton scattered seven hits to beat Dodgers left-hander Jerry Reuss 1-0 thanks to Mike Schmidt's first-inning homer.

Following his custom of the past few years, the veteran Carlton, baseball's all-time strikeout leader and a 300-game winner, refused to discuss his performance with the media.

Others took over the speech-making.

Pete Rose, the long-time star first baseman, said, "He pitched an excellent game. I've watched him pitch before when I was at first base, in the dugout, and from home plate and he's something. He never changes when he has his back to the wall, that's when his talent really shows."

"He's the best, and I'm not saying that just because of the way he pitched this game. I've always said that."

Manager Paul Owens added, "He had great control. Usually he'll average 135 pitches a game because that's the way most strikeout pitchers throw. But he had thrown just 78 pitches by the seventh inning and ended up with about 98."

"I don't think he was tired when I took him out, but he was getting behind on some hitters."

Carlton was relieved by Al Holland in the eighth with two outs and the bases full, and the man from the bullpen preserved the shutout.

Said Holland of Carlton, "He pitched a great game. He didn't let Dusty Baker, Pedro Guerrero or the others hurt us."

The Dodgers, needing a victory tonight to go back to Philadelphia even in the best-of-five series, had their caps figuratively off to Carlton, who allowed only them only seven scattered hits.

"He pitched an overpowering game," said Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda. "I said before the game that Carlton will go down as one of the great pitchers in history. Reuss pitched a fantastic game, but we came up short."

In the battle of left-handers, Reuss allowed only five hits, two of them by Schmidt, his homer and an eighth-inning single.

When the Dodgers had two on and two out in the second, Carlton promptly struck out Mike Marshall on three pitches.

"He surprised me with a fastball," admitted Marshall of the third strike.

It was also Marshall, in his first year with the Dodgers, who flew out to right field against Holland to end the eighth when the Dodgers had the bases loaded.

"Holland threw me all fast balls and I got a pretty good slice of it, but the right fielder was able to get to it," Marshall said.

Dodgers catcher Steve Yeager, sitting disconsolately in front of his clubhouse cubicle, commented, "Carlton pitched a good game, but so did Jerry."

The opener was only the second 1-0 outcome in the annals of the NL playoffs dating back to 1969. In 1980, Houston beat Philadelphia 1-0 in 11 innings but the Phillies captured the series.

Of the opener in Dodger

Stadium, Owens said, "It was a classic game. I thought there would be good pitching and not a lot of hitting. In fact, we were going to play for a run early."

Schmidt provided it on one big swing.

The most controversial play of the opener was a throw from Carlton that picked Dodger leadoff batter Steve Sax off first base in the opening inning.

Television replays indicated that Sax had been safe and the Dodger second baseman said, "It's obvious I was safe. Sometimes the umpire doesn't make the right call. My hand was right in the middle of the bag."

But Sax added quickly, "Carlton is one of the best pitchers I've ever seen. And his pickoff throw is one of the best I have seen."

Guerrero, the Dodgers' home run and RBI leader during the season, had a chance to drive in a run with runners on first and third in the eighth. Carlton walked him on four straight pitches, not giving him anything to hit with Sax on third base in scoring position.

"He's won 300 games because he's smart," commented the Dodgers' third baseman.

Upper Decks Found Okay

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It's normal for structures like the 17,000-seat upper deck at the University of South Carolina stadium to move some when filled with fans, but adjustments will be made in the seating to lessen the sensation, a university official says.

David Rinker, systems vice president for the university, made the comments Tuesday in response to fan complaints that the new deck swayed during a football game Saturday.

Rinker said design engineers inspected the deck Monday and pronounced it structurally sound.

R.L. Whitaker, spokesman for Wilbur Smith Associates, who designed the deck, told Rinker in a letter that deflection attenuating devices were installed in the stands when they were built, said Rinker.

The devices, Rinker said, "help dampen the feeling of movement."

Whitaker wrote that "a small percentage" of the attenuators are not working and will be replaced.

Rinker said the fans felt up-and-down movement and some lateral movement because of the weight on the structure.

In a news conference called after news reports of the fans' complaints, Rinker said, "Engineers of Wilbur Smith and Associates have looked at every inch of that structure and they found no indication of any stress in the structure."

Rinker likened the deck to a branch on a tree.

"It has a tremendous amount of strength but it does flex when necessary."

Rinker said similar complaints had been made in previous years about the west deck, and inspections had shown it to be structurally sound as well. He said regular inspections are made at Williams-Brice Stadium.

Whitaker's letter also said, "We wish to express our full and complete reassurance that the stadium structure has been conservatively designed in accordance with applicable regulations."

"Furthermore, based on careful and extensive re-examination of the east stands upper deck and supporting members, we wish to affirm that this facility is performing satisfactorily and in accordance with expectations."

Whitaker told Rinker "it is well known and normal that a structure of this type will exhibit some deflections and vibrations."

A capacity crowd of 74,200 watched Saturday's football game. The university media guide said the stadium is built to hold 72,400.

The stadium's first portion was built in 1934.

Answer Question

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina proved it could come from behind and still post an impressive victory, head football coach Dick Crum said of the Tar Heels' 38-21 triumph over Georgia Tech.

The game "answered the question of what we would do when we got behind," Crum said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. The fourth-ranked Tar Heels trailed 21-7 in the second quarter before rallying.

Quarterback Scott Stankavage "kept his poise when he could have been shaken up by the dropped passes and two pass interceptions in the first half," Crum said.

"He did a good job of taking the team down the field 90 yards for a field goal just as the half ended. Scott operated the clock well and the receivers knew where they were on the field. The defense settled down and didn't give up a score in the second half."

Crum said injuries should not be a problem in Saturday's clash with Wake Forest.

"Mark Smith suffered a turf toe and Greg Naron had a sprained ankle," he said. "Neither is serious and Arnold Franklin should be back after suffering a blow to the head."

Wake Forest will present a "totally different" team than the Demon Deacon squad North Carolina faced last year, Crum said.

"They are playing very good defense even though they gave up 38 points last week," he said, adding that the Deacons are "much improved overall" and should challenge the Tar Heels in the Atlantic Coast Conference game on Saturday.

"Their offense is not just passing," said Crum. "They have a good running attack. Michael Ramseur is an excellent running back. He gives them good diversification."

George Brett, hitting star of the Kansas City Royals who batted .390 in 1980, failed to hit as high as .300 in four minor-league seasons.

This could be the last life insurance policy you ever need to buy.

INTRODUCING ALLSTATE UNIVERSAL LIFE.
IT'S THE ONE-TIME, LIFETIME POLICY THAT CAN CHANGE AS YOUR LIFE CHANGES.

Now you don't need to buy a new life insurance policy just because there is something new in your life. Allstate Universal Life Insurance is so flexible, so comprehensive, so adaptable, it could be the answer to all your life insurance needs.

How can just one policy keep me covered for a lifetime?

The key is flexibility. Allstate Universal Life is more flexible than you ever thought life insurance could be. As long as you qualify, you can change your coverage amounts and even your premiums—within limits—to adapt to your changing goals and needs. Instead of a policy that becomes outdated every time your life changes, you buy Allstate Universal Life once—and only once—and rearrange it, revise it, reshape it along life's way.

As your family grows, so can the protection provided by Allstate Universal Life. So it can be suited to your needs, as your needs change.

Can I really earn competitive interest rates on life insurance?

Maybe you thought life insurance couldn't compete with a high-yield investment. But Universal Life is a totally new concept in Allstate Life Insurance. Cash values are now accumulating at competitive interest rates. Although these are not guaranteed, the fact is, you're always guaranteed earnings of at least 4 1/2%—no matter how the economy changes. Plus, you get the insurance benefit and protection that C.D.'s or Money Market Funds can't provide. And, your Allstate agent can tell you about possible tax advantages!

Can Allstate Universal Life meet my needs 25 years from now?

protection. When your budget is limited, you know you need insurance protection, but you also want to save what you can. So most of your premium pays for your insurance costs, with the remainder going to build cash value. As your salary increases, you can elect to raise your premiums. And, you can direct those higher premium payments into savings while you maintain your coverage. That way you build even greater cash value, which comes in handy when expenses like college tuition pop up or you decide to expand your retirement plans. And, if you like, you can apply for increased protection, yet lower your premiums—or skip them altogether—by shifting built-up cash value into insurance coverage. It's up to you. To suit your needs.

How can I find out if Allstate Universal Life can serve my needs?

All it takes is one simple phone call to an Allstate agent. A personal consultation could open your eyes to benefits you may be missing now. No matter what your current coverage or stage of life, we think you'll benefit from this extraordinary new insurance idea.

Pick up the phone and call us today.

Don't miss out on this opportunity. Check below for the number of the Allstate agent nearest you. And call us, the Good Hands people. Fusion Power Advocate Now Says It Won't Work

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)

fusion is the ideal power of the 21st century — safe, clean and limitless. But a veteran of the multibillion-dollar program to create it has arrived at an unsettling conclusion: Fusion simply won't work.

Professor Lawrence M. Lidsky of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is an unlikely gadfly. He is associate director of MIT's Plasma Fusion Center and editor of the Journal of Fusion Energy. He began studying fusion technology in 1959 and has worked on it ever since.

"There's nothing I'd rather do than build a fusion reactor," he said.

But about five years ago, he decided that the technological problems were insurmountable. A reactor fueled by the fusion of deuterium and tritium would be too big, too complex, too expensive and too unreliable. Quietly, he warned his colleagues in the government and at universities.

"I couldn't get an internal discussion going," he said. "Some didn't care, and some didn't want to know."

So Lidsky went public. In the October issue of MIT's Technology Review, a magazine with a circulation of 75,000, Lidsky makes his case against fusion.

In stark, half-inch-high letters, the cover of the magazine carries the core of his message: "Even if the fusion program produces a reactor, no one will want it."

Fusion is the energy that makes the sun shine. Theoretically it holds many advantages over the fission reactors that generate electricity today.

These fission reactors produce heat by splitting atoms apart; fusion joins them.

Fusion reactors might produce 3,000 times less radioactivity than their fission counterparts. A meltdown, the potential worst catastrophe of a fission reactor, could not happen with fusion. And fusion would be fueled with deuterium, a hydrogen isotope found in endless quantities in seawater.

The outlook for fusion seems so promising that the federal Department of Energy is spending about $450 million a year to develop it. The goal is a process that could make commercial electricity within 30 years.

When an experimental fusion reactor was dedicated last May at Princeton, N.J., President Reagan sent along a letter that called fusion "the ultimate supply of energy for our planet."

Defenders of the fusion program argue that neither Lidsky nor anyone else can predict what technological breakthroughs will be made decades from now.

"I think he's overdramatizing what are otherwise legitimate concerns," says Stephen Dean, president of Fusion Power Associates, a trade group. "We must keep these problems in mind as the development goes on. The program is still at least 20 years from having to compete in the marketplace. To say we can't solve them is premature."

But Lidsky is adamant. "In my opinion," he said, "it's a dead end as far as producing power." The major difficulty, he said, is trying to build a reactor that runs on deuterium. In the center of the reactor, deuterium and another hydrogen isotope, tritium, would be heated to several times the temperature of the sun. Their nuclei fuse and release neutrons.

This gas-like mixture, called a plasma, would be surrounded by a metal wall, and it would take a tremendous beating from the fast-moving neutrons. In fact, Lidsky said, each atom in the wall would be dislodged about 30 times a year.

"From the point of view of the day-to-day operation of the plant, the key limiting problem is the neutron bombardment and the damage to the materials," he said. The metal becomes brittle and breaks.

The plasma would be further contained by superconducting magnets cooled by liquid helium to within a few degrees of absolute zero. So temperatures in the reactor would range from the highest on Earth to nearly the lowest.

The fusion plant would also be far more complicated than a fission reactor. This complexity, along with the stresses produced by neutrons and temperature extremes, will mean that it will break down a lot, Lidsky said.

Even though radioactivity in the reactor will be relatively modest, it will still be too high for workers to get inside and make repairs.

And a fusion plant would probably have to be bigger than a fission reactor to make as much power. Lidsky said that this, along with its unreliability, would make fusion extremely expensive so that no utility would want it.

Philip Stone, chief of the Energy Department's Reactor Systems Branch, said much progress has been made on these engineering problems over the past five years.

"When you look at the long-term inexhaustible energy sources, fusion is one of a small number," Stone said. "It's very hard to say what cost will be acceptable 25 years from now and what problems you will be able to handle."

It's far too soon to give up, he said. "These are problems that have to be worked on, but they are not insolvable."

However, Lidsky sees parallels with the development of nuclear fission. The decision to use deuterium fuel was made early in the fusion program because it seemed to be the fastest way to produce results. Fuels that might make neutron-free fusion were abandoned too soon.

"Most of my colleagues work on fission reactors," Lidsky said. "I see them looking at a program that's falling apart around them, and in some ways it's history repeating itself."

Water Spaniel Is Official Dog

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Some legislators thought the Assembly was making up the wrong tree and when the sponsor called for a dog to designate an official state dog "something to laugh about."

Still, without debate, legislators on Tuesday designated the American water spaniel as Wisconsin's state dog.

Rep. Francis Byers.

sponsor of the bill called it a change of pace from more weighty legislative issues. "We do need something to laugh about," he said after the vote, "but when introduced later, it says."

Byers wanted to speak from the floor on the measure but was persuaded to remain in his seat to speed the bill to the Senate. "I was going to recite some doggerel," he said.

Opening lead: Two of

We would like a 1 percent override on all the money that is blown each year by hasty play to the first trick.

Given this edge, we would never have to work another day in our lives.

North did not have quite enough to jump to three spades over his partner's one spade opening bid. So he temporized with two clubs and then raised spades at his next turn. South had more than enough to proceed to game.

South decided to get the hand over quickly — much to the defenders' delight. He won the ace of hearts, drew trumps in two rounds and then took the club finesse.

East won the king, got to his partner by leading a low heart to the queen, and West had no difficulty in finding the diamond shift. Two tricks to the defense in that suit spelled down one.

The winning line is simple

— it merely requires that declarer take a moment to study the hand before playing to the first trick. Obviously,

East is a strong candidate to hold both the ace and queen of diamonds, because of his vulnerable two-level

overall. However, the contract is safe as long as West can be kept off lead.

If West has the king of clubs, that card can be neutralized by successive club finessses. His only other possible entry is the queen of hearts, and he may well have that card in view of East's play of the king to the first trick. To assure his contract, declarer simply must allow

East to hold the first trick.

Declarer can win any return, draw trumps and take the club finesse. Now

East has to cash the ace of diamonds to hold declarer to his contract; otherwise declarer will make an overtrick by stuffing two diamonds on dummy's long clubs.

Sunken Ferries Being Examined

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) —

A professor and four graduate students must don gear and dive into the Cape

Fear River to study two ferries, one from the 18th

19th.

Leaving the boats submerged in their watery grave, the East Carolina

University researchers say,

is the only way to keep them from disintegrating.

Since Sept. 15, Gordon

Watts and his team have spent hours in the river,

mapping architectural and construction details of the colonial ferries and charting them on a master grid.

The divers work in teams,

one person holding an underwater light while the other examines the boats'

remains.

Watts, ECU's director of underwater research, says

the ferries are a part of history. But raising them would prove costly because only through extensive preservation could the boats stay together.

"You couldn't just recover them and expect them to survive," Watts said.

The wood's cell structure has deteriorated, and without proper reinforcement, the wood would shrink and decay rapidly on land. Parts of the boats have the consistency of cardboard, Watts said.

"The most important thing is the recording of the details which in fact does preserve the boats in the historical sense," he said. "The real value of the ferries is in their historic value, not their intrinsic value."

The boats are located about half a mile east of U.S.

117, along the south shore of the Northeast Cape Fear

River.

The ferries were found in 1981 by Wes Hall, one of the divers, as he explored the river bottom. The site was a well-used river crossing for a series of bridges and ferries

from around 1735 to 1914,

when a highway bridge —

now demolished — was built about half a mile to the west of the present bridge.

The wrecks lie along the slope of the river bank under 11 to 24 feet of water. The earlier ferry is 36 feet long;

the later boat, 40 feet.

"There are a lot of indications the use of the early ferry may have led to the construction of the later one.

For instance, they may have discerned a two-foot

freeboard was all that was necessary," Watts said.

Why the boats sank and when they were used is still unknown. The earlier boat is thought to be from around

1750 while its newer counterpart may have been built between 1800 and 1820.

One theory is they were deliberately sunk. During the Revolutionary War, as Brit-

tain's General Cornwallis neared Wilmington, several boats are known to have been sunk to prevent supplies from falling into British hands.

Artifacts that may help

date the vessels have been found nearby, Watt said.

Big Protest

Historian Studies Dog-Venerating Cult

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Guinefort, healer of children, became a martyr and a saint by mistake.

A model of humility, he slept on the floor, ate scraps and obeyed orders with a cheerful wag of his tail.

He was murdered by his master, who mistakenly thought Guinefort had killed his child. The saintly cult was the error of French peasants, who saw nothing unorthodox in praying to a greyhound.

To an inquisitor, however, it was heresy, and his 13th-century report is the starting point for "The Holy Greyhound" by French historian Jean-Claude Schmitt, who discovered that the cult survived into our own century.

Schmitt's study was published this spring in English by Cambridge University Press.

Europe was well past the Dark Ages when the cult of St. Guinefort arose, and the learned citizens of the 13th century included St. Francis of Assisi, Thomas Aquinas, Dante and Marco Polo.

The century saw the founding of the Dominican order — the "Domini Canes" or "hounds of God" — who became the shock troops of the Inquisition. And it was one of Dominic's order, Stephen of Bourbon, who encountered the cult of Guinefort in Dombes, about 25 miles north of Lyon.

The dog, the peasants told Stephen, belonged to the Lord of Villars. One day, the lord and his lady had gone out, leaving their infant in the care of the dog. A huge serpent entered the house and slithered toward the cradle, but was killed by the faithful Guinefort.

The lord, returning to find the cradle overturned and the dog covered in blood, drew his sword and killed the dog. Stricken with regret when the child was found safe, the lord buried the dog with honor. Yet the manor was destroyed and the estates laid waste, the peasants said, by divine will.

Stephen learned that peasant women would bring sick children to the woods surrounding Guinefort's grave. They would make offerings of precious salt; they would hang children's clothing in the bushes; they would pass naked babies nine times between the trunks of two trees; they would plunge sick children nine times into the fast-flowing waters of the nearby river.

Stephen reports that he had the dog disinterred and the sacred woods cut down and burned. But when Stephen's report was re-discovered in the 19th century, folklorists found that peasants remembered the dog, and were still visiting the regrown woods to pray for sick children. Later reports said the cult persisted until 1940.

What fascinates Schmitt about the tale is the voice of the peasantry. In a society divided among those who prayed, those who fought and those who toiled, the toilers were mute before history unless they caught the attention of the literate. In many cases, that meant being hauled before an inquisition.

"Efficiency and precision in the instruments of repression go together, which, as I would be the first to admit, presents a golden opportunity for the historian," Schmitt writes.

Italian historian Carlo Ginzburg likewise dipped into the careful records of the Roman Inquisition to write of Domenico Scandella, who was burned at the stake in the 16th century. In "The Cheese and the Worms," Ginzburg explored how a common man's acquaintance with the first printed books spawned his odd revision of Genesis: "All was chaos, that is earth, air, water and fire were mixed together; and out of that bulk a mass formed — just as cheese is made out of milk — and worms appeared in it, and these were the angels."

An inquisition in southern France in the early 14th century was the basis for Emmanuel Le Roy Ladurie's

"Montaillou, The Promised Land of Error," an extensive survey of peasant life in one village late in the Middle Ages.

And it was only because Jean d'Arc was brought before an Inquisition that we know, in her own words, of the voices that told her to fight for France and its timorous king.

In the story of Guinefort, Schmitt detects a long-running class struggle.

"Stephen of Bourbon was a representative of a church that was as powerful on the spiritual as on the temporal plane, and yet he failed," Schmitt writes. "He thought that he had suppressed the pilgrimage to St. Guinefort's wood, but this was not the case...."

"The cult was quite impervious to such attacks, and in fact lasted as long as the folk culture itself...."

"The clerical and folk culture thus disappeared together... God had just died. The 'free thinkers' and the folklorists took the place of the priests, but there was nothing left for them to do but administer the last rites to the cult of St. Guinefort."

Tower Hints He Spoke Too Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, says his decision to retire might have been different if Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., had died before he made up his mind.

"I must say that I thought when Scoop Jackson passed away that if he had passed away before I announced my decision, it might have influenced my decision somewhat," Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, remarked.

Tower announced on Aug. 23 that he would not run for a fifth term next year. Jackson, like Tower a leading Senate proponent of a strong national defense, died on Sept. 1 of a burst blood vessel at the age of 71.

NO EVIDENCE

ROME (AP) — A court reviewing the assassination of former Premier Aldo Moro says no evidence has been found to support theories that high-level officials conspired to kill him, according to Italian news agencies.

Admits Truth Of Allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, an actor turned politician, admits "there is some truth" to allegations that movies and television often stereotype minorities.

In remarks at a White House ceremony attended by minority business people, the president noted there are hundreds of thousands of minority business people in the nation. "Why can't the casting directors more often assign parts as shop owners or business people to minorities?" he asked.

Reagan also criticized the House for not acting on his proposal to establish minority enterprise zones in neighborhoods with high unemployment. Under the plan, businesses would get federal tax incentives to locate in such neighborhoods.

Want Firm To Help Pay Cost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says Shell Oil should help pay the $1.84 billion cost of cleaning up environmental damage at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal near Denver.

The claim was filed under a 1980 law that requires reimbursement of costs to repair environmental damage.

For 30 years, Shell has leased part of the Army's arsenal land for a small pesticide-producing operation that closed late last year. Some of the chemicals used to make the pesticides have apparently leaked into underground water tables.

Television Fare For Children Ignoring Education

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial television stations are devoting more than twice as much time to cartoons as to educational programs for children, according to a congressional survey being released today.

As a result, legislation was to be introduced in Congress today that would force every commercial TV station in the country to air at least one hour per week of "programming designed to enhance the education of children."

The survey, being released by Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., the chairman of the House communications subcommittee, concludes commercial TV stations are providing an average of 61 minutes of educational programming per week, less than half the amount of cartoons they air.

Wirth confirmed his intentions Tuesday night to introduce the bill, but declined to discuss the specific results of the new survey. A copy obtained by The Associated Press, however, shows the subcommittee has learned:

—On average, a commercial TV station airs 61 minutes of educational or informational programming per week, 152 minutes of cartoons per week, and 52 minutes of "other" children's programming, defined as non-cartoon entertainment, talk or religious shows.

—Affiliates of ABC, CBS and NBC, however, tend to air much less children's programming than independent stations, even though they are generally more profitable. In fact, independent stations outpace network affiliates by a 2-to-1 margin.

—The total of 61 minutes per week of educational or informational programming translates to less than 1 percent — 0.77 percent — of total commercial TV air time each week.

The survey was based on responses from 326 commercial TV stations out of 850 polled. It was prepared with the aid of the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress and the House Information System.

"Broadcasters, under the law as upheld by the Supreme Court, have a public interest responsibility," Wirth said Tuesday. "And given this track record, the free market obviously is not responding to that responsibility as it relates to children."

"Television has enormous potential to help solve our educational problems and it's not doing it," he added. "And if the problem is not being addressed by the free market, then obviously it becomes a concern of government."

Wirth intended to unveil the survey results at a hearing called to examine "television's potential role as a positive factor in educating children."

The survey, however, is part of a much broader study being conducted by Wirth's subcommittee on various proposals to deregulate broadcasting. Most of the bills would make it easier for broadcasters to retain their licenses, something Wirth argues should not be done unless standards are set for minimum amounts of certain programming, such as news and public affairs.

By adding children's programming to that list, Wirth is moving Congress into a debate that has so far been fought at the Federal Communications Commission. The FCC during the Carter administration considered a mandatory rule on children's programming, but failed to take any action. The current chairman, Mark S. Fowler, contends such a rule is unnecessary and improper.

Fowler maintains such a requirement would violate the First Amendment rights of broadcasters; that studies of commercial broadcasters fail to take account of the programming available to children through other outlets such as cable television; and that public TV stations should be provided with additional money if more educational programming is needed.

Wirth countered Tuesday his bill would not infringe on the First Amendment, because it would provide broadcasters discretion to determine when they aired children's programming during the day, as well as to determine the content of the educational or informational program itself.

Failing Farms For Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of failing farms acquired by the government's farm credit agency nearly doubled during the first eight months of 1983 amid what some call the worst rural economic crisis since the Great Depression.

And while the Reagan administration says it is doing all it can to keep U.S. producers in business, the mounting farm inventory of the Farmers Home Administration may revitalize chances for congressional passage of credit-relief legislation, according to the chairman of the House Agriculture credit subcommittee.

"It seems extremely ironic to me that the agency originally created to assist Depression-stricken family farmers in the 1930s now finds itself so deliberately involved in selling them off at the auction block," Rep. Ed. Jones, D-Tenn., the subcommittee chairman, said in a letter to other House members. He engineered House passage of the FmHA credit-relief bill in May.

The farms, used a collateral for direct or guaranteed farm loans from FmHA, are either acquired through foreclosure by the government or voluntary conveyance farmer for any number of reasons including insolvency, said FmHA spokesman Marlon Aycock.

The agency, which is the Agriculture Department's credit arm, has not been able to dispose of the farm properties as fast as it is acquiring them despite a directive to FmHA officials to dispose of the land as quickly as possible, Aycock said.

At the end of August, the most recent month for which figures were available, FmHA's inventory stood at 1,027 farm properties, Aycock said. That compares to just 538 properties under FmHA ownership at the end of 1982 and only 223 at the close of 1981. Aycock emphasized that the agency acquires farms all the time because even in a good economic climate "there are some farmers who go broke."

No cumulative figures are maintained on the number of farm properties FmHA disposes of each year, he said. Based on 1982 USDA statistics, FmHA acquired 1,470 farms through the year and ended the year with 538 still under its ownership.

Aycock said the agency attempts to find other qualified FmHA borrowers to buy the acquired properties. But failing to do that, he said, it is forced to turn to the open market to dispose of the land for the best price possible.

FmHA provides about 12 percent of all farm credit, serving the riskiest 270,000 of the nation's 2.4 million farmers. Commercial lenders and the investor-owned Farm Credit System provide the rest of the country's farm credit.

The increasing federal farm inventory, Jones said in his letter, only bolsters his determination to win final congressional approval of the credit bill that would require USDA to defer FmHA loan repayment requirements for any borrower proving that without the help he'd be forced out of business, even though he has the prospect of regaining solvency once the economy rebounds.

The bill, opposed by the Reagan administration, has been stalled in the Senate all summer. Agriculture Secretary John Block contends FmHA is doing everything possible to keep farmers in business.

Aycock, reiterating Block's position, pointed out that several years usually elapse between the time an FmHA lender gets into repayment trouble and the time the agency actually acquires the farm.

Jones says past economic problems are just compounded by the drought that is costing producers in 28 states as much as $10 billion this year and will force many of them to increase their already heavy debt burden.

He has said that only 50,000 to 100,000 producers are actually in dire financial shape.

More Vying For Tourist Dollars

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina communities are stepping up efforts to promote themselves so they can grab a bigger chunk of the state's $100 million annual convention industry, tourism officials say.

Some cities, like Charlotte, plan to use funds from a newly established hotel room tax to finance national advertising. Other areas are looking at increasing the number of hotel and motel rooms and space available for conventions.

Conventions are big business that's attractive to every city and town in the state, said Charles Heatherly, director of the N.C. Travel and Tourism Office in Raleigh. Officials in just about every city in North Carolina are studying ways to attract more conventions.

Nationwide, conventions pump more than $17 billion into the economy every year, according to the International Association of Convention and Visitor Bureaus. The association predicts that at least $17.5 billion will be spent on conventions by the end of this year.

Heatherly said North Carolina's campaign to attract major national conventions is due to growth in the state's hotel and motel industry and expansion of existing convention facilities from the coast to the mountains.

"Until five or 10 years ago, the main problem North Carolina faced as far as attracting conventions was that we simply didn't have the facilities," Heatherly said. "We just couldn't compete with other states. But with construction of some large convention centers throughout the state, we're now in a position to go after a bigger share of the market."

Major convention centers in the state include the Four Seasons Holiday Inn convention center in Greensboro, the McKimmon Center in Raleigh, Winston-Salem's new convention and civic center and Charlotte's combination of facilities.

Convention areas are being expanded all over the state. The historic Grove Park Inn in Asheville is adding a new 450-room convention center, scheduled to open in April 1984. In Greensboro, the new Four Seasons opened last year and a new 300-room Marriott recently opened at the Greensboro regional airport. At least six new hotels with an additional 1,450 rooms are planned for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County area.

Charlotte also is expected to get a boost from its new hotel-motel tax, which took effect Oct. 1.

The 3 percent levy, approved by the Legislature in June, allows Mecklenburg and several other counties to tax hotel room receipts with proceeds promoting conventions and tourism.

The tax is expected to add $1.5 million to Charlotte's economy by next June 30.

Charlotte Chamber of Commerce officials had pushed for approval of the tax, saying they couldn't fill the area's motel and hotel rooms under construction without additional promotion.

Marie Earley, manager of the Charlotte Conventions and Visitors Bureau, said her office is trying to decide how to spend the money.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 22-28.

House
LEBANON — By a vote of 270 for and 161 against, the House gave President Reagan authority under the War Powers Act to keep up to 1,600 Marines in Lebanon for an additional 18 months.

He must get congressional approval before sending more Marines there. But the measure HJ Res 364 stopped short of requiring Reagan to explain in detail the military and foreign policy purposes of the deployment.

The Senate passed a companion measure below, marking the first application of the War Powers Act since Congress enacted it 10 years ago after being frozen out of early Vietnam War decision-making.

Opponent Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., called the resolution "a political figleaf" covering the "blunder" of sending Marines to Lebanon and added "Pride goeth before the unnecessary fall of many more Marines."

Members voting yes supported keeping Marines in Lebanon until March 1985, as part of a four-nation peacekeeping force.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Brophy, R-10, and James Clarke, D-11.

Voting No: Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5.

COAL — The House defeated, 182 for and 235 against, a bill (HR 1010) to spur construction of slurry pipelines, which would compete with the railroads for coal-hauling business.

The vote denied federal eminent domain powers essential to laying the cross-continental underground lines. It protected the railroads, which ship nearly all of the 600 million tons of coal produced annually in the U.S.

Supporter Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said eminent domain should be granted coal slurry pipelines just as Congress has given it to builders of railroads, gas pipelines and electrical transmission lines.

Opponent Bud Shuster, R-Pa., said "what we see here are big coal companies, big pipelines, big oil, big utilities attempting to get a stranglehold, a hammerlock of the movement of coal."

Members voting no wanted railroads to continue to dominate coal-hauling.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentines, Ike Andrews, Neal Britt, Rose, James Martin, Brophy and Clarke.

Voting no: Whitley and Hefner.

ABORTION — The House adopted, 231 for and 184 against, an amendment prohibiting the use of Medicare funds and other money in HR 912 to be used for an abortion, even if the mother's life is at stake.

HR 912 is the $96.5 billion fiscal 1984 appropriations bill for the departments of labor, education and health and human services. It was sent to the Senate.

Although this was the strictest anti-abortion language ever approved by the House, it stood little chance of surviving the House-Senate conference on HR 913.

Supporter William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said the abortion issue had "fiscal consequences" in view of the nation's declining fertility rate and rising debt, because "if we are going to pay off this debt, somebody has got to be born to pay the taxes to pay it off."

Opponent Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., said she was "shocked to hear that American women are meant to be breeder reactors to sustain civilization and pay off the deficit."

Members voting yes opposed any federal funding of abortions.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Brophy and Clarke.

Senate

LEBANON — By a vote of 54 for and 46 against, the Senate approved a resolution (SJ Res 159) empowering President Reagan to keep U.S. Marines in Lebanon as part of a multi-national peacekeeping force for up to 18 additional months.

The House earlier granted the same authority under the War Powers Act above, and the measure was sent to Reagan for his signature.

Supporter Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said giving the president a free hand with the Marines for 18 months is essential because "history shows that it is dangerous for Congress to intervene in military command decisions."

Opponent Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said: "Some say that Lebanon is not another Vietnam. But I reply, we must not give the president the power to turn it into one."

Senators voting yes supported keeping Marines in Lebanon for as many as 18 more months.

John East, R., and Jesse Helms, R., voted yes.

EXPLAIN — By a vote of 55 for and 45 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to SJ Res 159 (above) requiring President Reagan to explain to the satisfaction of Congress why U.S. Marines should remain in Lebanon for a lengthy period.

Drafted by Democrats as an alternative to an 18-months deployment, the amendment called for bringing the Marines home after 60 days unless the president had by then justified the military action of Congress.

Supporter Clairborne Pell, D-R.I., said it was necessary "to review soon the crucial questions surrounding the American involvement in Lebanon."

Opponent Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said "this is a time for statesmanship, not partisanship, in Congress."

Senators voting no wanted the president to justify his decision to keep Marines in Lebanon.

East and Helms voted yes.

THE U.N. — The Senate adopted, 66 for and 23 against, an amendment to cut the U.S. contribution to the United Nations and some of its agencies by $500 million over the next four years.

In fiscal 1984, this would reduce American support by 21 percent below the administration's budget request. The cut would be softer but still deep between 1985-87.

The amendment was attached to the State Department authorization bill (S 1342), which later was sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kans., said she was "a firm believer" in the U.N. but felt it would work better with a thinner staff that was less politicized and less bureaucratized.

Opponent Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the U.N. "is not run with the efficiency we would like to see, but neither is the Senate and neither is the House."

Senators voting yes wanted to significantly cut U.S. support of the U.N. budget.

East and Helms voted yes.

Shutdown At Aquarium

BALTIMORE AP — For the second time in its 2-year history, the $21 million National Aquarium in Baltimore will temporarily close for repairs; aquarium officials say.

William S. Flynn, acting director of the Inner Harbor tourist attraction visited by hundreds of thousands of people, says, however, the three-week closing scheduled for next month does not stem from major structural problems.

Rather, he said, the closing involves correcting extreme condensation in the upper areas of the building related to a tropical rain forest exhibit.

"It's not a major problem," he said. "But it's a problem that makes sense to fix now, rather than later, when it would become a bigger problem."

In addition to the restoration of the building's water-soaked insulation and repair of some ceiling tiles and floor mats damaged by the retention of condensation, aquarium officials will use the three-week period to repaint the dolphin pool.

Aquarium officials hope the repairs will be completed by Thanksgiving.

Even so, it is estimated that 50,000 visitors will have to be turned away from the aquarium, meaning a loss of about $250,000 in revenue.

The repairs are estimated to cost more than $100,000, with $10,000 coming from the city.

Assert Tighter Curbs Unneeded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials say Congress doesn't need to tighten controls on an often-abused drug, methaqualone, better known by the brand name of Quaalude.

The proposed legislation would change the designation of the central nervous system depressant as a Schedule II drug under the Controlled Substances Act to a Schedule I substance. Schedule II is the most restrictive schedule for drugs with an accepted medical use. Schedule I removes a drug from the legitimate market.

Despite testimony to a House committee about abuse of the drug, Food and Drug Administration acting commissioner Mark Novitch said the legislation isn't necessary because "methaqualone continues to have a legitimate medical use, that the scope of abuse appears to be declining rapidly, and that there are further administrative actions that can be taken."

'Promoting' Benefits Of Space Role

By KURT GREENBAUM
Lancaster New Era
ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa.
(AP) — Houston, maybe. Or perhaps some city on the Florida coast.

But the rolling countryside of Lancaster County is not the place one might expect to find something called the United States Space Education Association (USSEA).

But there it is, stuffed into what used to be a barbershop — in a small, three-room white house in Elizabethtown.

Inside, there are walls of books on the American space program.

And artifacts, such as a chunk of old launch pad, models of the space shuttle and a piece of space shuttle heat tile.

Finally, there is the tiny, cramped office of Stephen M. Coughlin, a space travel aficionado and the founder and president of what has become an internationally known amateur space education organization.

Coughlin and six other local board members — also space program enthusiasts — work for the organization in their spare time.

What does a space education association do and what is it doing in Lancaster County? This one collects and disseminates information to thousands of people and institutions annually — at their request — through its news magazine, the Space Age Times.

Lancaster County happens to be the place where the people who began the group live. Coughlin and several friends founded the organization 10 years ago — July 20, 1973 — on the anniversary of Neil Armstrong's "giant leap for mankind" on the 1969 Apollo 11 moon landing.

The magazine is published bimonthly and sent to people and institutions in most of the 50 states, as well as 10 other countries, including England, Australia, France and West Germany. It has a circulation of about 2,000.

The organization also answers requests for information, according to Coughlin. He receives several hundred pieces of mail weekly from people asking questions, requesting literature and craving research assistance.

Coughlin and his assistants answer some of the mail based on their personal knowledge and research. For questions that require more research, he enlists the aid of experts in the field.

More than 1,000 people are members of the organization and many more lay people and specialists receive the magazine. Most members of the United States House and Senate space program committees receive the news magazine, Coughlin said.

All public relations offices of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration receive the magazine, as well as Hugh Harris, NASA's launch commentator.

All this is to fulfill Coughlin's hope for the space education organization: "To stimulate the public awareness of the benefits to mankind that will accrue from a viable and expanded space program," according to the organization's constitution.

"Some people said, 'Well, why do we really need a space program?' We felt if the space program was really to get public support, we were going to have to tell people not only what the space program was doing, but why," he said.

The group has tried to meet this challenge by reporting on every manned space flight since 1975. Coughlin has more than two dozen volunteers on his staff, reporters who have received press credentials from both NASA and the USSEA.

The reporters — ranging from professional journalists to people who only write for pleasure — share an interest in the space program and spend their free time in an effort to elevate public awareness.

Turks Learn Diploma No Goldmine

By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer
ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Omer Cift, 33, runs a thriving video cassette lending business in the glittering new Kuguu shopping mall in this capital city.

A year ago he quit his job as a pharmacist in the city Social Security Hospital and has not looked back since. "I feel sorry for the five years I wasted in university to get my diploma," he says with a sad shake of his head.

Next door to Cift's video shop is a children's boutique owned by Turgay Ucaner, a 35-year-old lawyer. Another neighbor is Ilker Atalay, an economist selling women's clothing. Cift's chief rival in the video business is another economist. Across the hall, a woman architect and her city planner husband run one of Ankara's most popular gift shops.

"More than half the shopkeepers in this mall have university educations, as do the manufacturers they buy from," Cift explained. "Notice the improved quality of toys and even window dressing. Education does make a difference."

Cift and his friends are part of a growing army of university-educated Turks who have chucked their diplomas to seek a better living elsewhere.

Thousands trained as architects, mathematicians, geologists, archeologists or economists are selling lottery tickets, running hamburger joints or working as garage mechanics.

They are the result of an educational system marked by its complete failure to project and adjust to the future demands of the job market and the needs of the economy.

There are few vocational schools in this land of 47 million. Most youngsters go through a college preparatory course in high school and then line up in front of crowded universities that can offer scarce admissions.

Applications to universities were swollen from 41,000 in 1966 to a peak of 467,000 in 1980. To cope with the stampede, successive governments opened new universities in remote provinces. The numbers jumped from four universities three decades ago to the current 27.

In the hurry to boost admissions by any means, quality of teaching staff had to be ignored. Through a central placement system, people who wanted to be doctors were sent to agro-economy schools, those aspiring to be electrical engineers ended up as anthropologists.

Large departments were set up in fields without sufficient demand in the job market but requiring less investment.

Only 4 percent of Turkey's adult population, 540,000 people, boast university diplomas.

In a country striving for rapid industrialization, the need for highly educated people is still great, company executives say. But they complain that they are coming out of the schools in the wrong fields or they are so poorly trained that the diploma is meaningless.

The good ones are grabbed by the large holding companies soon after graduation. The rest remain jobless or end up working in positions outside their fields.

Others leave their jobs because salaries at this time of wage restraint hardly meet the grocery bill.

This preference for a small business instead of a white collar job is the sign of significantly altered social values as well. Turks have always valued education highly as the surest way to climb up the social ladder. The prospective groom's educational level was a significant factor to be considered when he sought a bride.

Not so any more. Applications to universities have declined by 9 percent in the past year.

Patient Fighting Back After Long Nightmare As Therapist's Slave

By LISALEVITT
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —

Desperate for help, Laura Sullivan-Bennett took her emotional problems to her psychology professor. Instead of receiving therapy, she became a "sex slave," trapped in a sadomasochistic nightmare of whips, chains and humiliation. A $10 million lawsuit alleges.

For more than two years, the San Diego Superior Court case says, Mrs. Sullivan-Bennett was used and abused by psychologist William Latta "under the guise of therapy."

She's not alone. A hidden number of women, most silenced by ignorance and fear of social stigma, have fallen prey to unethical therapists who often are as troubled as their patients.

Confused, angry and consumed by guilt, the exploited patients often wait years — if ever — to step forward with their charges. And the experience, the experts say, compounds the emotional instability of already disturbed people and alienates them, often permanently, from the specialists who could help them.

"We're talking about psychological abuse," said San Diego psychiatrist Gary Shephard, who has treated a number of patients after therapists exploited their emotional weakness. "There are people who like to feel powerful, to control other people who get pleasure out of controlling other people."

According to the lawsuit, which was filed Monday, Latta "whipped, Ms. Sullivan-Bennett, took her to pornographic movies, bound her during sex, and 'saturated' her with tales of women who became slaves to him and to become 'Real Women'."

The lawsuit filed Monday by Mrs. Jean Johnson, 40, alleged that clinical psychologist Avner M. Freed "seduced her into sexual acts with him, and 'told her such sexual relations were part of necessary therapy' when she sought help in 1975. The San Diego Superior court seeks a $10 million in damages."

Freed said he would have no comment until he saw the complaint and talked with his lawyer. Phone calls to Latta's office were not returned.

A 1977 survey of 1,000 therapists by Dr. Jean Holroyd of the University of California-Los Angeles showed that 5.5 percent to 19 percent of the nation's male therapists have had sexual intercourse with their patients, and 30 percent of those were intimate with more than one patient. Both of those are conservative estimates, she said.

"Sexual attraction occurs often enough in a therapy relationship to be considered an occupational hazard," Ms. Holroyd said. She added that abusive therapists often have recently gone through their own emotional trauma.

"But most therapists are prepared to handle it and not to act on it, not to get involved, just as they are prepared to handle other kinds of emotions," she added.

San Francisco attorney Marvin E. Lewis, who filed the Sullivan-Bennett and Johnson suits, won a $4.66 million judgment in 1981 for Evelyn Walker, who went to psychiatrist Zane Parzen seeking relief from bouts of mild depression.

The 1979 malpractice lawsuit says Parzen seduced Mrs. Walker, "telling her that by his love and affection he would cure her and be supportive of her, and that she should look to him solely for support, care and affection."

Mrs. Walker fell in love with the psychiatrist. When she wasn't with him, she'd sit in her bedroom thinking about him, the lawsuit said.

The patients may have had stars in their eyes and thought the therapist was in love with them when he just wanted a sexual relationship and not even much of an affair, Dr. Holroyd said.

Mrs. Walker eventually divorced her husband to be with Parzen, gave up her rights to her property and children, became dependent on drugs he gave her and tried to commit suicide, Lewis said.

Parzen "kicked her out, and she ended up a waitress in a fast-food Chinese restaurant, suicidal, on drugs, her life wasted," the attorney said.

After her case, Mrs. Walker began writing a book about her experience, gave speeches about it and formed a non-profit organization called Advocates Against Psychiatric Abuse, a support group aimed at educating the public about seduction in the name of therapy. Similar groups have been formed in Minneapolis and Fort Worth, Texas.

"The women who are involved are not really aware of what is ethical or unethical in a treatment relationship," said Shephard, a friend and neighbor of Mrs. Walker.

Parzen, named in another Lewis lawsuit, lost his license in the Walker case. But although such behavior may break professional codes, there are few, if any, laws making it a criminal offense.

"It's a field where there aren't many laws," Shephard said. "Some lawmakers are beginning to become aware that maybe there should be. Some actions are not really malpractice but criminal."

Efforts by 41 states to limit who may practice therapy by defining the practice of psychology often have been opposed by mental health care professionals themselves, who fear the scope of their duties would be limited.

A person can become dependent on a therapist and believe they are being helped or loved and that's not true," said Shephard. "When they then come to find that out, they feel abandoned and deceived, and the person engaged in psychotherapy has problems finding someone they can trust. It makes it difficult for them to get any more treatment in the future."

"When it goes on red I think it's stupid," said his classmate Amy Bowser. "The poor fourth graders

A Home For Nocturnal Animals

TAMPA, Fla. — While most of us sip morning coffee and scan the daily news, night is just falling in a corner of The Dark Continent — the Busch Gardens

African-themed park in Florida.

The trick requires no time zone changes, just a simple, yet ingenious, lighting system which exists in "Nocturnal Mountain," a home for night-loving creatures at the 300-acre family park.

Normally these sun-shy animals, including bristly porcupines, hairy tree sloths and pert marmosets, nestle into resting places and sleep during daylight hours.

"It's perfectly natural for owl monkeys, for instance, to hide in tree trunks to avoid the sunlight," according to Ron Reynolds, curator of small animals at The Dark Continent. "But we'd rather not find our guests staring into a display that looks empty."

Concerned that park visitors would miss these reclusive creatures altogether, zookeepers began looking for alternate plans.

"Basically, we decided to build a rock-like mountain, wind a tunnel through it, line it with displays, and equip it with a lighting system that reverses the animals' sleeping habits. We convince them that day is night and night is day," Reynolds said.

Now, as day breaks outside the cool recesses of the mountain, frisky foxes within begin to scurry across darkening desert sands, chattering fruit bats cloak and uncloak furry bodies with leathery wings, wide-eyed bushbabies leap from twig to branch.

Their "day" is just beginning, too. But it begins in the glow of specially colored lights their sensitive eyes cannot detect.

The deceptive darkness is part of a three-tiered lighting system illuminating each of the 13 separate display areas. During regular daylight hours, the displays are washed with red or blue lights which human eyes register but those of the mountain's residents do not.

At night the displays are bathed in full white light, simulating sunshine, Reynolds said. Warm white

ON THE PROWL — This kittenish-looking margay is actually full grown and is about twice the size of an average house cat. Margays are newcomers to The Dark Continent, Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla., where

The result is a negative image of the cycle occurring outside, and the animals seem blissfully unaware of the difference.

Even when the mountain was brand new, they had no real problems adjusting to their new cycle," Reynolds remembers. Now the topsy-turvy timekeeping is normal to them. Some animals, born in the mountain, have never known anything different.

"We've had quite a few births here, from a number of different species," Reynolds explained. He has recorded the arrivals of baby fruit bats, douroucoulis, marmosets, cervals, lynxes and pacas.

Also residing in the mountain, but allowed a more customary lighting schedule, are a 14-foot Burmese python, seven-foot eastern indigo snakes, and a pair of eight-foot boa constrictors.

Adolescent Nile crocodiles, endangered in the wild, are on display alongside a four-foot Nile monitor, a South African reptile looking for all the world like a baby dinosaur.

Reynolds said the exhibits continually change as new animals are added to the park's extensive collection.

Recent additions to the Nocturnal Mountain collection are golden marmosets, monkey-like creatures with bushy ear tufts, and margays, wild cats once widely hunted for their beautiful pelts.

"The concept behind Nocturnal Mountain is so functional and simple it's been a lasting one," Reynolds commented.

Don't Pay the Penalty of Fear

Man is overwhelmed by the disease of fear. It is not a disease caused by a virus or bacteria. It is not a disease brought on by dietary indiscretion and by overwork.

The disease of fear is transmitted from man to man either unwittingly, occasionally intentionally, and sometimes, unfortunately, purposefully.

For many years doctors in all fields of medicine have noted with concern the increasing number of patients who consult their offices overwhelmed by fear. These fears are usually completely out of proportion to the severity of the actual illness that brought them to their doctor.

For many of these patients, fear is far more destructive than the disease itself. Yet fear of disease often becomes so deeply ingrained that long after the illness is entirely cured the patient still pays the penalty of fear.

There is no age, no sex, no racial or cultural group that is free from fear in this, the age of anxiety. Fear of cancer, fear of heart disease, fear of strokes, fear of AIDS, fear of destruction by nuclear bombs and fear of economic upheaval constantly bombard our inner security.

There are no universal causes for all fears. Some are recognized easily. Many more are not as easily uncovered. For example, the fears induced by the professional distributors of mortality statistics who in their well-meaning drive to support research to combat a particular disease, have led us half to death. These campaigns should be directed to our intelligence rather than aimed at our insecurity.

Fear thrives on ignorance. Fear weaves its snare slowly and deliberately until suddenly the patient is caught in the web of confusion.

This generation of overt anxiety seems to be tottering on the brink of destruction. Yet every generation has wanted to claim this strange distinction.

How paradoxical it really is. We are living in the era of mankind's greatest medical and scientific accomplishment. Diseases one by one are falling alongside one another as remnants of an age gone by.

The discovery of new vaccines, new antibiotics, new surgical techniques and greater safety of anesthesia bring hope to all of us who are fortunate to live at a period of unlimited medical progress.

And yet fear flourishes unreasonably in this world so filled with scientific achievement.

There is an answer to fear. That answer lies in open discussion with the doctor, with the psychiatrist, with the psychologist, with the social worker and with the spiritual leader. There is no greater stigma in seeking relief from fear than there is in seeking help for any acute or chronic illness.

Fear thrives in the hidden corners of darkness. Fear cannot survive the scrutiny of open inspection. Face fear frankly and it melts away. Fear, like all other diseases, is vulnerable and yields to the miracle drugs of hope and courage and education.

Book Store Welcomes 'Browsers'

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Some of Phil Zimmerman's customers have been known to crawl around on the floor, peer into corners and under shelves.

"They think I've hidden the good stuff and are looking for it. They're wrong, of course. Everything I have is on display," he said, and then grinned.

By display, he means that more than 20,000 hardcovers and paperbacks are scattered around the huge room. There are stacks upon stacks of mysteries, science fiction thrillers, romances and classics — but nothing is cataloged.

"This is a place where you can browse in every sense of the word. I enjoy meeting and talking with people," said Zimmerman, owner of the oldest used-book store in Louisville.

It was opened by his father, Abraham, in 1905. "I had just arrived on earth, so there was a double celebration."

Zimmerman's childhood was spent in the store, learning the tricks of the trade. He obtained a degree from the University of Louisville and did graduate work at the University of Kentucky.

"But I got my most expensive education in this business. It's easy to make a mistake when you come across a rare book."

He recalled the time a woman paid $35 for a volume of poems published in Oregon in 1838 before it gained statehood. She took the book down the street and sold it to another dealer for $75. He let it go a week later for $500.

"Much later, I saw the item listed in a rare-books catalog. It was valued at $3,000."

When he's in doubt about what to charge, Zimmerman can consult the guide published specifically for booksellers.

"Like all other commodities, books go up and down in price," he said. "I've learned that a well-informed collector often will buy books instead of stocks. They feel it's safer."

Sales have been slow recently, and Zimmerman attributes this to the recession. "I'm still making a living and this is the best way to make a living I can think of," he said.

He will, when pressed, agree to search for an out-of-print novel after first warning the customer: "If the novel's been off the shelves for a long, long time, then I'm going to have to chase it down. And that costs money."

Away from the store, Zimmerman relaxes by shooting a game of pool or reading. "In a busy, tight world, there is pressure on you all the time. I escape with poetry, particularly that of John Keats. I can quote him from memory."

With his bookish background, Zimmerman naturally had a yen to write but "soon discovered I didn't have sufficient genius."

At 78, he has reached what he calls the "philosophical age."

He also has made plans for the future: "I'll be here selling books as long as books are published."

'Rewarded' By PBS Directors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Directors of the Public Broadcasting Service say they gave PBS president Lawrence K. Grossman a $125,000, interest-free home loan last year.

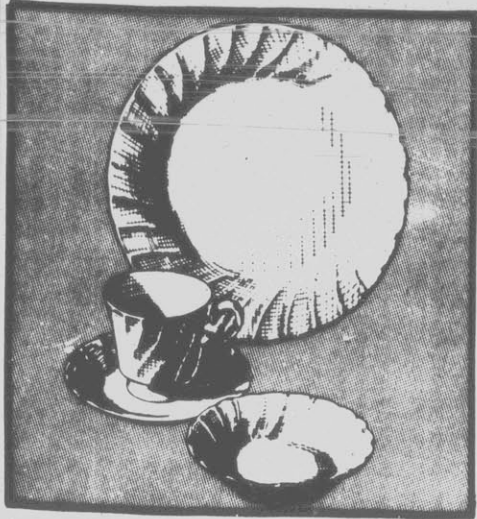

The loan "was an appropriate way to recognize and reward... (his) outstanding leadership and skillful direction of PBS over the preceding seven years," Dallin H. Oaks, the chairman of the PBS board and a state Supreme Court justice in Utah, said.

The loan to Grossman, who assumed the presidency of PBS in February 1976, was disclosed Monday in a report by the trade publication Communications Daily. Grossman's annual salary is $80,000.
