Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said this morning that the city has had a good police department in the past, but 'times are changing' and the department "will have to change" to meet the challenges of the future.

Holmes' comments came after he met with supervisors to review results of a questionnaire he asked members of the department to respond to before he assumed the duties of percent of the department's employees, morale is fair to low, primarily because of low pay, and the lack of a cost of living raise since the 1981-1982 fiscal year.

The survey also showed that employees feel there has been a failure on the part of department managers to be innovative or change with the times, and that influences from outside the department have interfered with department operations.

The majority of those responding to the survey said there is not enough opportunity for advancement within the departfor officers and better management training for supervisors.

The effectiveness of the department was rated as fair to good. Improved public relations and improved training were listed as ways to improve the effectiveness.

Employees also expressed the need for better communications between members of the department, improved equipment (particularly radios and vehicles), and additional

Ross' Trial Continues During Hospital Stay

Ross of Route 3, Greenville, a Highway Patrol sergeant on trial in Beaufort County Superior Court on arson and conspiracy to commit arson charges, was listed in stable condition this morning in an intensive care unit at the Beaufort County Hospital.

Ross, charged in connection with the Oct. 6, 1982, burning of two mobile homes in Beaufort County was admitted to the hospital Wednesday morning after complaining of chest pains.

However, Ross waived further appearances in his trial Wednesday afternoon and the trial continued this morning, with District At-torney William Griffin announcing that the state would put on no more evidence in

Earlier this week, witnesses testified that Ross offered to pay Jasper Earl Grimes of Winterville to burn

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY Last December I married a man who told me that he had been married once before. (It was my second marriage.) We had a small wedding with only family members from both sides.

While he was courting me, several of my friends told me that he was still married, and when I asked him about it, he denied it emphatically

Three weeks ago. I learned quite by accident that my husband had been married three times before he married ne - also that his divorce from his third wife was not final until two months after he married me! When I con fronted him with the evidence, he admitted it, and said he didn't realize that his divorce was not final until after he received his divorce papers in the mail. When I asked him why he didn't tell me as soon as he found out, he said he had been waiting for the right moment. This was months ago, and he had never found the "right moment." I have caught him in several other lies, but none was as important as this one.

Now he wants to marry me again to make it legal. Should I marry him again? I don't think I can trust him. How does one go about rebuilding trust?

DEAR ABBY My husband and I are expecting our first child in three months, and my problem is that we have both kept our own last names (which are rather lengthy) and now we don't know which surname to give our child. Both my husband and my in-laws think he should have his father's name, but that doesn't seem right. Nor does it seem fair to give our child my surname. (I have had amniocentesis, so we know the child is male.)

We've considered combining our names, but that would

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of anything so rude as people who will attend a beautiful, expensive, formal wedding and sit-down dinner, and send no wedding gift? I am shocked and cannot believe that people who are supposed to be good friends can be so cheap or thoughtless, whichever the case may be.

Our wedding took place last December, so they have had plenty of time to send a gift. I have not spoken to these people since the wedding and have no intention of ever doing so again. So what do I have to lose by writing them a note telling them how rude I think they are? I am just dying to get this off my chest.

MAD IN OHIO

DEAR MAD: To write an angry letter telling your former "good friends" that you think they are rude or thoughtless for failing to send you a wedding gift would show poor judgment, and worse manners.

Telling Truth About Med History Can Prevent Anesthesia Tragedies

By PATRICIA MCORMACK UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)-For twenty million patients every vear an anesthetic is suc cessful. But sometimes a surgical team records what doctors refer to as "untoward effects" - fatal or non-fatal allergic reactions. or patients plunged into Patients can help the surgical team avert such dangers by informing the anesthetist about their medical history or any drugs they were taking before they are sent into dreamland.

Where children are concerned, the responsibility falls on parents, says Patrick Downey, president of the American Association of Nurse Anesthetists. The organization of 23,000 certified registered nurse anesthetists conducted a seminar at Columbia Medical College.

'The general public needs to know more about the anesthesia process so they understand that when they come to us as patients, they can provide us with all the necessary information to make their anesthetic experience as safe as possible, Downey said.

Sometimes the patient may think the information is too personal.

No matter how confidential or personal, patients must pass on vital information to the anesthetist.

Each year nurse anesthetists are responsible for administering over 50 percent of the 20 million successful anesthetics given in the United States and we want

-The elderly. Many take all kinds of prescription drugs for heart disorders, arthritis and other agerelated problems.

-The closet alcoholic. Concealing information about alcohol addiction can cause anesthesia to interact, making a life-threatening situation.

-People who take over-the-counter drugs and fail to mention the fact because they do not think of such medication as drugs. Downey's general recom-

Cooperative Effort

Often we hear concern voiced about so called foreign competition in various industries, the fear being that products made overseas will cost American jobs.

It is, in fact, only realistic to recognize that industry is now international and will continue to be in the future. Products made in Europe and the Orient will be marketed here just as our products are sold elsewhere. Indeed, there are international corporations which have manufacturing facilities in the United States and in other nations.

Japan is North Carolina's largest customer for tobacco and Japanese industrial interests have chosen sites in North Carolina for manufacturing plants.

Last week the ambassador from Japan, Yoshio Okawara, was invited to Greenville for a meeting attended by Gov. Hunt and sponsored by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Okawara cited the "unique interdependence that has grown up over the past few decades between the Japanese and American economies." It is based not on interdependence or similarities of economic structure. "Rather, we are each other's largest and most valuable overseas trading partners, and each other's most dynamic competitors, because we share the same entrepreneurial drive and innovative spirit.

He said there is a two-way flow of technology managerial science "as Japanese technology and managerial methods are helping revitalize America's automotive, steel, machine-tool and computer-aided industries.

The competition of foreign made productions has been disturbing to some domestic industries, but it is not going to go away. Instead we will see more cooperative efforts between domestic and foreign industries and the end result should be better products for us all.

Reckless Talk

Sen Jesse Helms might see it as good politics as he faces a race for his seat with Gov. Jim Hunt next year, but he has certainly done North Carolina no good with his attacks on Martin Luther King in the U.S. Senate this week,

The senator's erforts at a filibuster amounted to nothing more than a smear of a man held in high esteem by much of the nation. He had little facts to back up his comments and his reckless talk will do much to shape the nation's image of

Money May Be The Crux Of '84 Race

RALEIGH - Rufus Edmisten is not running against Jim Hunt in 1984. Nor are Eddie Knox. Lauch Faircloth, Harold Hardison. Dick Barnes or any of the other Democrats who've announced for statewide office. But, according to conventional wisdom, they are running up against Jim Hunt as they try to get their campaigns ready for the spring primary.

Money is the fuel of a campaign and it is generally accepted that in 1984. Senate candidate Hunt wull suck dry the traditional Democratic contributors - thus impoverishing gubernatorial candidates as he seeks to unseat Jesse Helms.

But if you talk to the people running Hunt's exploratory fund-raising committee, it is Hunt who must worry about raising money. "Money is going to be tight. All you have to do is look at all the gubernatorial candidates, two or three lieutenant governor candidates, several active Council of State candidates. It doesn't take a genius to figure out that there's a limited pot out there." says committee director Mike Davis.

There's good reasoning behind both views. Hunt is planning to raise $4 to $5 million, a sum that far exceeds anything state Democrats have ever produced before. He's shown before that he can raise a lot of money and he's held together his political network. Add to that the burning desire that many active Democrats have for the scalp of Jesse

But folks are pragmatic, too. A U.S. senator can't get jobs for 1,000 campaign workers as can a governor. He can't pave the road in front of your house. People who contribute to a quid pro quo have to get behind a gubernatorial candidate.

Folks who believe Hunt will dry up all the money also engage in the speculation that former Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth will emerge as a strong contender in the governor's race. That speculation is not based on Faircloth's campaigning to date, nor on the fiery crash of his airplane. It's based on his money. In a year when all the candidates will be low on money, they figure that the wealthy Faircloth can just keep digging into his own very deep wallet.

Hunt's committee is playing it safe. figuring they can't count on everyone who gave in 1980. "We've got to distiguish between the gubernatorial givers and the federal givers." one Hunt source

John Bennett. Hunt's finance officer. says, the 'committee's fund-raisers are pursuing new contributors. "We're looking to bring people in who've never contributed before. We're trying to spread it out, get to people not normally involved in politics. This is necessary. in part, because Hunt must raise twice as much money as in 1980, because federal contribution limits are lower and because some old friends are concentrating on Bennet said $50 a head fundraising parties are scheduled for 35 counties. For each fund-raiser, a local manager is being appointed. This person, Bennett said, will not be someone with political experience. They'd prefer a civic activist who'll find contributors who haven't been active politically before. That's money which otherwise wouldn't be expected to go to a gubernatorial candidate.

Hunt is also going out of state to avoid conflicting with gubernatorial candidates. He's sent fundraising letters out of state, he's held dinners and he's soliciting from political action commit-

When you add it all up. Hunt and Helms collectively spending maybe $20 million for a Senate seat, three Republicans and seven Democrats spending half as much for the governor's office. plus all the other races, a lot of money's going to be spent this year and next.

Security

NEW YORK (AP) - Since Congress took action last spring to resolve some of Social Security's pressing problems, the subject has largely dropped out of the headlines

But it will be back again in the future, experts in employee-benefits and tax matters say.

And they add that people who take the present structure of Social Security for granted in planning for their long-term financial futures are almost certainly

This year's changes are 'no panacea,' says the Tax Foundation, a Washington-based research organization. "Congressional action on the Social Security system this spring, welcome though it is, falls far short of solving the problem of overall federal deficits in the foreseeable future.

We have simply gained a brief respite that will be followed by even greater turmoil than that of the past few years." adds William M. Mercer Inc., a consulting firm specializing in employee benefit and compensation matters.

The plan Congress put together seemed to have a lot going for it. In return for settling at least the short-term future of what has been called the country's most successful social program, everybody involved conceded a little.

It calls for people now working, and their employers, to increase their contributions by stages; gradual increases in the standard retirement age, starting a couple of decades from now; and taxes. for the first time, on some benefits received by upper-income recipients.

All present recipients, in addition, were subject to a six-month delay in cost-ofliving adjustment of their benefits.

But after studying official projections for the system's future. Mercer concluded in a recently published analysis that the cost of Social Security, now about 14 percent of the taxable payroll in this country, still could be near 40 percent by the year 2035.

"It should be clear." the firm said, that Social Security cannot keep its benefit promises without tax increases that are substantially higher than the public has been told about thus far - tax increases the public is unlikely to be willing and able to pay For younger individuals now paying into the system. Mercer said, it is reasonable to expect "some kind of Social Security benefit at some future date. But it would be foolhardy to count heavily on receiving benefits of the same type and level now being paid." For one thing, the firm noted, it is sensible to assume that the standard retirement age will sooner or later be raised to 70, or even higher.

In a recent "Letter to the Editor" from Mr. James A. Register, Route 2, Box 403. Grifton, it sounded as if he was referring to the Greenville Utilities Commission. Actually, he must have been referring to the North Carolina Utilities Commission because they recently granted a rate increase to Carolina Power & Light Co. As I remember reading in the paper, the N.C. Utilities Commission granted CP&L a rate increase, approximately half of what they had requested, and it was based primarily on the addition into their rate base of the newly completed Mayo coal-fired plant

The Greenville Utilities Commission is not currently planning any electric rate increase, although electric rate increases down the road may be necessary as our cost of power continues to climb Mr. Register's concern has been expressed of our own customers and, quite frankly, we have no answer to the question. The government reported this week that for the first time in 20 years, the number of divorces in the United States fell last year.

What do the figures mean? That marriages are more stable? That couples can't afford to get divorced? Or is it simply that there are fewer married couples to get divorced? The experts say it was probably a little of each.

The new figures, compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics, show that 1.2 million couples ended their marriage in 1982, 3 percent fewer than in 1981.

It was the first drop in the 1962 - and it was nationwide. Of the 49 states that reported 1982 divorce statistics, 38 showed a drop in the divorce rate from the previous year.

'For so many states to drop is impressive to me.' said Barbara Wilson, a demographer in the health center's marriage and divorce branch. "This is no fluke. The divorce rate really dropped.

Social scientists insist there is no easy answer to why the number of divorces dropped. Most say they are unsure whether it reflects a changing attitude about divorce or a statistical reflection of an aging popula-"One of the influences on the divorce rate is the size of the generation," said Richard Easterlin, a professor of economics at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. "When a generation is numerous as it was in recent years, it aggravates economic problems for voung people. There's lots of competition in the labor market. We are starting to move into a period of decreasing generation size.'

Other experts say the divorce rate declined because more young couples live together before making a decision about marriage and that their break-ups are not reflected in divorce statistics.

"A lot of divorces take place early on in marriages." said James Mc-Carthy, a demographer at

Some social scientists say the divorce rate has dropped because today's couples are older when they marry and more mature when they marry, that the Post World War II "baby boom" generation has passed the ages when divorce is most prevalent, that couples are less likely to divorce in a period of economic uncertainty.

"It's tempting to relate (the recent decline) to the recession of 1982," said James A. Weed, chief of the Census Bureau's marriage and the family branch. "During the Great De pression, divorces dropped noticeably. There may be a tendency to postpone separation or divorce because of job uncertainty and the difficulty of maintaining another resi

Weed said one statistical reason why the number of divorces dropped is that a few years ago, there were fewer marriages. Government figures show that between 1974 and 1975, the number of marriages dropped 5 percent from 10.5 per 1,000 population to 10.0.

"A few years back we had fewer marriages, so it's obvious that we would have fewer divorces," Weed said. Others speculate that Americans are beginning to adjust to the social changes of the 1970s, that the period of social upheaval so disruptive to many marriages has passed and that the 1980s will be a more stable period.

"The 1970s were a period of change, which included changing lifestyles that contributed to marital disillusionment,"said Arthur J Norton, another Census Bureau specialist in marriage statistics. "Now we're coming to grips with the changes and adjusting.

Kristin A. Moore, a social psychologist in Washington, said people's attitudes about marriage and divorce are becoming more conservative.

"There may be a slight turning of the tide, that they pause before turning to divorce." said Ms. Moore, who works with Child Trends, Inc. a non-profit research organization focusing on children and families older when they marry than they were a few years ago which means they are less likely to divorce. So it's possible that's beginning to have an effect. Norton cautioned, however, that there are still high levels of divorce.

The 440-mile Susquehanna, the "mother river" of the bay, stretches from New York's Finger Lakes through central Pennsylvania to the head of the Chesapeake. It accounts for 40 percent of the nitrogen nutrients in the bay and discharges three times as many pounds per day of copper, nickel, lead, zinc and other heavy metals as its nearest competitor, the James River. "We are initially looking at nutrient problems," said Bill Cook, special assistant to Pennsylvania's environmental secretary. "We do not feel that we are creating toxics problem in the Chesapeake Bay.

The nutrients cause overgrowth of plankton and other aquatic life that block sunlight, helping to kill plants and create what scientists call a near-desert on the bottom of the Chesapeake affecting the crab harvest in

Cook said Pennsylvania is well ahead of Maryland and Virginia in requiring phosphorus removal from sewage, and said pretreatment programs re-commended by EPA are still in discussion stages at the

He said the voluntary soil conservation plan will work because farmers in Lancaster County and other agricultural areas along the Susquehanna lose $2,200 per acre or $90 million a year by allowing fertilizer and manure to run off their fields.

"Farmers are becoming more and more aware of the economic benefits to them to save the soil on their land. We feel we'll have a cooperative farm com munity," Cook said, adding the state will use EPA money for education.

Askedabout Pennsylvania's relatively narrow focus, which will involve few if any state dollars, he replied, "Look at where the Bay is in relation to Pennsylvania. It's downstream.

He said Gov. Dick Thornburgh is cooperating because he is "a good neighbor" and because reducing nutrient flow into the Susquehanna will help Pennsylvania agriculture, 'our number one industry.'

Torrey Brown, Maryland's natural resources secretary, said his state is drafting a plan that will cost "many millions over many years."

Major initiatives in the Maryland package, to be presented at a December summit meeting of the three governors, include upgrading sewage treatment plants to remove phosphorus and dechlorinate waste, and improving pretreatment of industrial waste, heavy metals and chemicals.

Other parts of the plan include aid to farmers to implement ssoil conservation techniques; stopping shore ity; a rockfish and shad hatchery; public education; and forest preservation. Many programs would utilize state funds.

Virginia's Chesapeake plan, one of Gov. Charles Robb's priorities when the state legislature returns in January, contains a number of pilot programs that will be expanded in the eight-year plan if they work, Roland

He said other monies would be used to improve monitoring of kepone and other pollutants, replant aquatic grasses, develop a fisheries management pro-gram for oysters and blue crabs and repair sewer lines to prevent overflow.

The longer-term plan would earmark $94 million to upgrade sewage treatment plants and $15 million for pretreatment programs at municipal plants receiving industrial waste, Roland

Writing Province Encyclopedia

Associated Press Writer

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) - At the age of 83, former Premier Joseph R. Smallwood, who led Newfoundland's entry into the Canadian confederation in 1949, is at work on a five-volume encyclopedia on the province.
"Of course the question arises at once...Why an encyclopedia of Newfoundland?" Smallwood said, leaning back in a reclining chair during an interview in his office overlooking St. John's harbor.

"Why not one of Ontario or British Columbia, Alberta, Quebec, which are much bigger, richer and so on?

And the reason is that we are incomparably richer than they are, any of them, either of them, all of them put together! - in history, in tradition," he said, beginning an answer to his own question that continued for 15 minutes until a telephone call interrupted.

"It was here in this harbor that the mightiest empire which man has known was born in 14)7 ghen John Cabot came in here," Smallwood continued.

"We have the richest history, historical tradition to be found anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, not just North America, but the Western Hemisphere. It's Even before Newfoundland became Britain's first overseas colony, Lief Ericson is believed to have established, around the year 1000, a settlement at L'Anse aux Meadows, at the northern tip of the island.

Smallwood is sometimes referred to around here simply as "O.L.F.," which stands for "Only Living Father" of the Canadian confederation. The other "fathers" did their work in 1867 when the confederation was Newfoundland was administerered by a joint commission of Newfoundlanders and the British before becoming Canada's 10th province under Smallwood's leadership in

After setting the historical context, Smallwood outlined in the interview the desirable qualifications for the job of editor of the Newfoundland Encyclopedia, which he hopes to have completed by

"He (the editor) should have had youth, I didn't. He should have had capital, I didn't. He should have had tremendous energy, I did. I had that qualification. He should have tremendous knowledge of his own personal knowledge - of Newfoundland. He ought to have read every printed word that's ever been written or published about Newfoundland - and I have. "I lacked the right age, although I have not found that to be an impediment, at

Volume One, covering topics from A through E, was published two years ago. The second volume, F-J, is coming in December.

When sales of the first book lagged last year, Smallwood become its promoter and door-to-door salesman, going into fishing villages around the Newfoundland coast to hawk authographed copies.

Now about 9,000 copies have been sold, and Smallwood expects publication of Volume Two to stimulate enough sales to merit a second run of 10,000 for the

When not working on the encyclopedia, Smallwood is eager to defend his 23-year record as premier, which ended in an election defeat in 1972. The current premier, Brian Peckford, has accused Smallwood of selling out the province's natural resources in what he calls a short sighted scramble for shortlived jobs

Smallwood rejects the charge, saying that only "a fool ... can say that is a scores into Newfoundland, plzaded with them to come in, offered them attractive terms to come in and develop our resources," he said.

Both academics and Smallwood's former opponents say he has not made his encyclopedia a political document, or a defense of his

'There is not a word or a syllable in the encyclopedia in the least of a partisan nature," Smallwood said.

"I knew people would be watching for that. I knew they'd pounce on me if that happened, and I was too devoted to the whole idea of publishing a book by which I would be remembered and remembered favorably to fall into that trap.

Jim Graham Feels Pitt Watt's Future Growing

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) With Senate support for Interior Secretary James Watt eroding and a no-confidence vote a growing possibility, the White House said today it would welcome an expression of Senate sentiment on his future, but would not feel bound by it.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Watt had not been asked to resign. But leading Senate Republicans say support for Watt has become so weak that a noconfidence vote may be inevitable unless he resigns soon.

For his part, President Reagan said Watt's controversial "stupid remark" isn't grounds for his dismiss-

Speakes refused today to say whether Watt is now an effective Cabinet member, and at one point replied, jokingly, "He's on vacation

Asked whedheb the president would ask for Watt's resignation if the Senate no-confdence vote passes, Speakes said "the president would certainly welcome a Senate expression of its views on anything, but it would not be binding.

He said the White House had received no signals that Watt intended to resign, and that in a breakfast meeting Watt held with presidential counselor Edwin Meese III on Wednesday, no resignation was offered and none was requested.

He said the two discussed the controversy surrounding

New rumors that Watt might be on the verge of quitting were fueled Wednesday by reports that he had lost more ground among Senate Republicans than had been previously believed by leaders of the GOP-run chamber.

Meanwhile, Reagan, in a question-and-answer session with The Associated Press board of directors, defended Watt anew, saying he "has done a fine job.

The president said Watt made "a stupid remark" two weeks ago when he referred to an advisory panel on coal leasing as "a black ... a woman, two Jews and a cripple.

"I recognize that a mistake

plans and continues to believe he is an asset to the administration.

But, according to The Washington Times, both Meese and White House chief of staff James A. Baker III met with Watt as the interior secretary was preparing a letter of resignation. They convinced Watt to leave town for a week to reconsider his plan to quit, the Times quoted unidentified sources

Thomas J. Barrack, a horse rancher in California's Santa Ynez Valley, said that Watt and his wife were staying at his ranch for an indefinite period of time and that Watt was not granting interviews.

Senate sources said Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., realizing that he doesn't have the votes to block a Democraticsponsored vote on a "sense of the Senate" resolution calling for Watt's ouster, had privately appealed to Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to hold off on the measure until after Congress returns on Oct. 18 from its week-long Columbus Day

That would give Watt more time to consider increasing calls for his resignation, suggested one Senate leadership source, who did not wish to be identified by name

Byrd indicated he would be willing to delay action on the anti-Watt resolution - if it appeared that a resignation was forthcoming.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A convicted criminal's attempt to set off a "devastating" explosion in the Cumberland County Courthouse failed when a homemade bomb smuggled inside didn't detonate, authorities said.

Harold Little, spokesman for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department, said Wednesday that 27-year-old Mark A. Spears had strapped the bomb to his body. Spears was was given a 10-year prison sentence Wednesday for assault.

A baliff found the bomb as Spears waited in a holding cell behind the courtroom.

"He tried to activate this thing while he was in the holding cell," said Little. He said the bomb failed to go off because a larger wire spliced into the detonating mechanism "absorbed some of the intensity of the heat."

Sheriff Ottis Jones said the bomb, consisting of four pieces of C-4 military plastic explosives attached to a nine-volt battery, was "an amateur job." But officials said there would have been heavy damage had the bomb gone off.

The blast would have been devastating," Little said. Explosives experts tell me it would have demolished anything within 30 feet and maybe up to 50 feet. Certainly, anyone in that area would have been killed.

The bomb was found around noon. The courthouse was evacuated and a team from Fort Bragg Army Base was called to handle the explosives, Jones said.

Spears had been charged with two counts of kidnapping. two counts of rape and one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill or inflict serious injury, Little said. He was acquitted of the kidnapping and rape charges and convicted of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious

Judy Gibson, 30, and Cathy Williams, 23, formerly of Fayetteville, testified Spears pulled a gun on them in a wooded area and forced them to lie on the ground. They said he fondled Ms. Gibson, attempted to make them disrobe, then shot Ms. Gibson as the women fled.

Spears claimed the women tried to rob him as they smoked marijuana. He said Ms. Gibson pulled a gun and knife on him and that he struck her in the head to subdue her

Elected To College Bd.

Rev. Melvin Williamson

The Rev. Melvin Ray Williamson, pastor of Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville, has been elected to a six-year term on the Mount Olive College Board of Trustees.

The Rev. Williamson attended Tarboro High School, Martin Community College and Mount Olive College. He graduated with honors from North Carolina State University and received his master's degree from East Carolina University.

The Rev. Williamson has served as a 4-H and youth agent for the Agricultural Extension Service and as a youth minister to the Enfield Baptist Church.

The new trustee has served on the Free Will Baptist Eastern Conference Mission Board and is presently a member of the Central Conference Ordaining Council. He was ordained into the ministry in 1978.

The Rev. Williamson, his wife and two children live in the Belvoir Community.

The Pirates host Southwestern Louisiana Saturday and travel to Temple and Florida the following weeks. Further along on the schedule, ECU visits nationally-ranked Miami before closing out the season on the road against Southern Mississippi.

"I really haven't looked as far ahead as Temple or Florida, yet," Hamilton said. 'We want to win every ballgame. I'd like to see us go to a bowl game. I think our schedule, being as tough as it is, definately helps our program - it gets us attention when we play well.

White Sox Take

Chicago White Sox can't escape their "winning ugly" stigma, even after taking a major step in quest of their first World Series appearance

Manager Tony LaRussa bristled at the suggestion after faulty Baltimore fielding helped Chicago score a 2-1 victory in Wednesday's opening game of the American League Championship Series.

Texas Manager Doug Rader hung the "ugly" tag on the White Sox during the regular season because they sometimes won when they did not play well.

'There's no such thing as an ugly win," LaRussa insisted, even though the White Sox wasted numerous scoring and needed help from the Orioles. "I think we earned every bit of that game.

The Orioles, who had never lost an opener in six previous playoffs and five World Series, saw it differently.

"We made mistakes," said catcher Rick Dempsey. "We gave them two runs. When you give a game away, that's an ugly loss.

'Certainly it's not the way the Orioles usually play," said loser Scott McGregor. "We broke tradition. We're sorry.

In true "ugly" style, the White Sox advanced 11 runners into scoring position without getting them across.

at the plate and another was forced at third on a bunt.

Chicago, which lost the season series to the Orioles 7-5, broke a scoreless tie in the third on three consecutive two-out singles by Rudy Law, Carlton Fisk and Tom Paciorek

The RBI hit by Paciorek went threw the legs of third baseman Todd Cruz, a converted shortstop who failed to get into position to block the

In the sixth, the White Sox made it 2-0 when Paciorek walked, moved to third on a fielding error by first baseman Eddie Murray on a twisting grounder by Greg Luzinski, and scored as Ron Kittle grounded into a double

The stage was set for the Orioles, who scored 36 comefrom-behind victories during the regular season.

But Murray, who hit 33 homers and drove in 111 runs in 1983, bounced back through the middle on the first pitch and forced Ripken to end the

"To see Eddie Murray standing up there was pretty frightening," said Pacoriek Fortunately we got out of it.'

We figure LaMarr Hoyt is the best pitcher in baseball," said Paciorek. "We know if we can get him a few runs, he'll shut the other team down.

'Everybody talked about experience — about how the Orioles had it and we didn't," said Pacoriek. "Now we have a game under our belts, and it's a win. I think we have a little more confidence now.

back from two losses. I think of California winning the first two last year and then losing three (to Milwaukee). History has proven it can be done. The task won't be any easier for the Orioles in tonight's game, when they must face left-hander Floyd Bannister, 16-10, who has won 13 of his last 14 decisions. Pitching for the Orioles will be Mike Boddicker, a rookie who posted a 16-8 record after being recalled from the minor leagues when former Cy Young Award winners Jim Palmer and Mike Flannigan went on the disabled list. Boddicker, who like Bannister scored two victories in the season series between the two teams, upset some of the White Sox power hitters because of his soft, breaking-ball repertoire. "I think it will be a wellpitched ballgame again," said Altobelli. "That's what got both of us here, and I think you'll see that all the way.

RALEIGH (AP) - If North the split end position to Carolina State defeats Georgia Tech for its second consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference football victory, it will be in spite of a rash of crippling mid-season injuries.

Head coach Tom Reed said Wednesday that wide receiver Ricky Wall is probably lost for Saturday's clash with the Yellow Jackets. Wall landed awkwardly after making a a catch and twisted a knee

Wall, a 5-foot-9, 170 pound junior, has caught 16 passes for 243 yards and two touchdowns.

"Someone has to come through," Reed said. "Ricky may come back, but it doesn't look good right now. That hampers our play quite a bit.'

Sophomore Chris Cook is a backup to Wall and is expected to move into the slot. Reed said either sophomore Stanley Davis will move from awful performance.

The Wolfpack, 2-2 after running to a 38-15 victory over Wake Forest last weekend, is also down to six defensive backs. Jeff Byrd suffered a leg injury in pre-season, and last week Ken Loney was sidelined with a neck injury.

"A couple more injuries and I don't know what we're going to do," Reed said. "We could play with three people and line up with a stronger front. Or put in some freshmen who aren't ready to play right

Despite the convincing victory, Reed found several problems with his team's effort in Winston-Salem.

"Offensively, we had 19 missed assignments and critical errors," he said. "We did not have the concentration Phil Brothers or senior to get it done. It was just an

LaRussa Doesn't Buy Excuse That Orioles Playing Flat

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles may have been guilty of some unusual defensive lapses in the first game of the American League playoffs, but Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa is not buying the idea that the Eastern Division champions were just flat.

"Anytime a pitcher pitches a good game and guys go up to the plate and back to the bench, you think a team is flat," said LaRussa. "That isn't so. (LaMarr) Hoyt pitched a great game and he has a sense for pitching. Hoyt, who compiled a 24-10 record over the regular season, hurled a five-hitter to give the White Sox a 2-1 victory Wednesay over the Orioles at Memorial Stadium. What made Hoyt so effective?

'We just didn't hit the ball," said Orioles third baseman Todd Cruz, who let a hard grounder get by him in the third inning, allowing the White Sox to score their first run. "That was the main thing.

Orioles pitcher Scott McGregor was more generous in his

Eddie Murray, who also had a tough time at the plate, going 0-for-4. Murray, who had 33 home runs and 111 runs batted in during the regular season, hit into a force play to end the

"He made a lot of nice plays," McGregor said of Cruz, who set an ALCS record with three assists in the fifth inning. "You can't magnify one ball off his glove. Like the rest of his teammates, Hoyt reacted to the victory on Oriole turf with more restraint than one would expect. "I feel our chances are real good now to win the whole thing," he said after going the distance.

Hoyt, in his first post-season appearance, made his strategy for winning sound simple. Basically I know where the hitters want to hit when they step into the box and I try to throw something they can't hit. I just go with my best stuff against them after that. LaRussa said the White Sox were not overly jubilant because they know they still have more work to do. "This series is not over. We have to win two more. For that same reason, McGregor said Orioles fans should not feel all is lost.

"If this wasn't the type of team like it is that can bounce back, we'd be out fishing," he said.

JOHANNESBURG. South Africa (AP) -Police are asking the public for information about $230,000 in jewels and cash left in the trunk of a businessman's car.

The businessman, who opened his trunk Monday to find a vellow plastic garbage bag containing the booty, said "Maybe someone mistook my car for someone else's." He said he always kept his trunk unlocked.

Boston and Terence Cooke of New York and the impending retirement of two other U.S. cardinals is presenting Pope John Paul II with a rare opportunity to reshape the leadership of the American church.

Given this opportunity to name four new cardinals. "the pope now has it in his power to change the picture of the entire U.S. hierarchy," according to Monsignor John Tracy Ellis, dean of U.S. church historians.

Cardinal Timothy Manning of Los Angeles reaches the mandatory retirement age of 75 next year, and Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia will be 75 in 1985.

Krol. 73. received his red cap 16 years ago and is the senior active American member in the College of Cardinals. He oversees 1.5 million Catholics in the 175-year-old Philadelphia Archdiocese.

"As a bishop, I have to be absolutely conservative in doctrine." Krol said in a recent interview. But on nuclear arms, he supported the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, in its condemnation of the arms race.

'Nuclear war is a crime against God and man and merits unequivocal condemnation." Krol said.

Medeiros, who died Sept 17 at age 67, also spoke out against the nuclear arms race and used his position as spiritual leader of the nation's third-largest diocese to condemn drug abuse and racial conflict. He had been leader of Boston's 2 million Roman Catholics for 13

Charged With Killing Doctor

AURORA, Colo. (AP) - A 57-year-old widower has been charged with first-degree murder in the shooting of a doctor who had done exploratory brain surgery on the man's wife, police say.

Allen Payton Richardson was arrested Wednesday on a warrant issued in Fort Myers, Fla., where 37-yearold neurosurgeon Thomas R. Connelly died Tuesday of wounds sustained Sept. 30 when he was shot outside his Florida police said Richardson's wife, who had a brain tumor, died a day after Connelly operated on her on April 6, 1982. Months later, police said. Connelly received a greeting card signed by Richardson and bearing the message, "Vengeance is mine, sayeth the Lord.

Mail To Russians Appears Deliberately Withheld

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) -Soviet authorities try to isolate citizens by making sure they cannot get mail from outside their country, a House investigation has

Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman, D-N.Y., said Tuesday, "There is a regular pattern of interference and this interference appears to be something much more serious than another 'crackdown." He said the goal of the Soviets appears to be "isolating people in their own communities.

Gilman said the evidence he has obtained shows such interference as:

-Regular obstruction of mail coming into Sovietcontrolled countries.

-Return of U.S. mail to senders without adequate explanation for non-delivery. -Excessive surcharges on parcels returned to U.S. senders.

He charged that the Soviets violate the international postal convention, the spirit of the Helsinki accords and sia's own constitution

"There is a great deal of evidence that mail is missing and stolen," Gilman said. Appearing before Gilman's

Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee, the head of the Ukrainian Human Rights Committee said the victims usually are families without any political involvement.

Ulana Bauch Mazurevich, chairwoman of the committee, said many people in the Soviet Union "are denied their basic right, freedom of communication.

She told the panel, "The fragile lifeline between U.S. citizens who wish to correspond with friends or relatives in the Soviet Union is very tenuous because of the Soviet policy of isolating individuals from the outside world through the nondelivery of mail.

Olaf Tammark, chairman of the Estonian American National Council, told of a receipt that was sent to the sender of a letter in the West as though the letter had been received. "The intended recipient had in fact died three years before the Soviets stamped and receipted the letter, he said. Walter E. Duka, assistant postmaster general for international postal affairs, said the U.S. Postal Service frequently receives inquiries or complaints, most frequently about mail reported by the Soviet Union as delivered. "The mailer questions the delivery claim of the Soviet postal official or the authenticity of the addressee's signature," he said.

More complaints are about mail returned by the Soviet

United States, which the sender believes should have been delivered, Duka said. He said most of the mail sent to the Soviet Union is sent as unregistered mail, which the Postal Service has little ability to track.

In meetings with U.S. officials in May, Soviet officials promised to send a prompt response, Duka said. No reply has been received, he said.

Olgerts R. Pavlovskis, president of the World Federation of Free Latvians, told of phony receipts.

During his 15 years of imprisonment in Soviet jails and labor camps, a great number of letters, both regular and registered, were sent to Latvian dissident Gunars Rode from the United States and other parts of the free world. After his release, Gunars Rode unequivocally stated that he had not received, nor had he signed for, any foreign mail, even though the Soviet government had returned numerous 'signed' returnreceipts to senders.

"I took time off just to enjoy living." Jill said. "I worked once a year so my name wouldn't be forgotten. And I launched my Smith-St. John sweater company. I made some investments and I traveled all over.

'The six-year respite was good for me. I love skiing, hiking and rafting, but it got to be too much of a good thing. I began to lose touch with show business. I don't even get television reception at my house. I read books.

"Can you believe this? I agreed to appear in an episode of 'Magnum, P.I.,' and I had never seen the show. When I arrived in Hawaii I had never laid eyes on Tom Selleck.

When I returned to Aspen I realized that I missed acting and decided to go for a full-time career again. I wanted to make a commitment to acting.

Jill rented an apartment in Beverly Hills two years ago and let producers, networks and studios know she was available. It wasn't long before she plunged back into the television swim with guest roles on several hit shows

She also starred in a movie. "The Concrete Jungle," in which, unbelievably, she played a warden in a woman's prison.

"How could I pass up a role like that?" Jill asked. laughing. Jill had neveroject nine town commissioners Tuesday. A run-off, if necessary. will be on Nov. 8

Ms. Hardee said the deadline for unregistered cit.zens to get their names on the books in order to be eligible to vote on Nov. 8 is Monday at 5 p.m.

Under North Carolina election law, she explained, a person registers once for all elections. New residents who have not registered, as well as people who have moved from their precinct within the county, should make sure they are properly registered, she said

Special registrations hours will be observed by the elections board today and Friday, with the Greenville office at 201 E. Second Street remaining open until 7 p.m. both days

Mrs. Hardee said residents of other county municipalities should call their town halls to determine registration hours.

No absentee ballots are ed for any Pitt n unicipal election except Greenville, she said.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — TO CALL ANY OPERA HOUSE YOU DEPEND ON THEIR ARIA CODES. Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

order in which you tackle those suits can be crucial. hand. South's jump to two no Although it loses to the trump showed a hand of 11 12 queen, declarer doesn't mind points. North had ample diamond, and declarer took and a club,

Neither vulnerable. South time out to decide how he wanted to play the hand. If he wanted to go after heart first, it would be right to win the first trick in his own hand. But since he needed tricks in both major suits, a better, line was to tackle spades first, for the finesse would be taken into the safe hand.

> Therefore, declarer went up with the queen of diamonds on the first trick. When that held, he ran the jack of spades. West won the queen, but he could make no damaging return. He exited with a heart.

A careless player might take the heart finesse, and then find that, after it loses he cannot make the contract There are hands in which if West had started with both you have to develop two suits missing spade honors. The to fulfill your contract. When thoughtful declarer wins the faced with that task, the king of hearts and repeats the spade finesse. After clearing spades, declarer Since he was a passed finesses the ten of hearts.

- he is already assured of values for his raise to game. nine tricks: three spades, West led his fourth-best three hearts, two diamonds
