Trial Of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green Begins

By MARY ANNE RHVNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A smiling Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green entered a Wake County Superior Court courtroom today for his trial on bribery and conspiracy charges.

Jury selection was the first order of business in the trial, which is expected to last two to four weeks. Jury selection could occupy much of this week.

Green was not seen in the main hall outside the courtroom and apparently entered through a back route.

Meanwhile, aides say Green has received an undisclosed amount of money for his defense, although no funds were solicited, an aide says.

Former state legislator Sneed High of Fayetteville said contributors are, "friends of Green, people who are a little bit incensed about the procedural aspects of the trial." He said he did not know most of the people who have contributed.

Green is the first North Carolina lieutenant governor to stand trial on criminal charges since the post was established in 1888. Only two governors have been charged with crimes since that office was created in the 16th century.

The 62-year-old Green was indicted June 20 for allegedly accepting a $2,000 bribe, consenting to receive a $2,000 bribe, conspiring with Howard F. Watts of Clarkton to receive a bribe and twice consenting to receive bribes of $10,000 a month. He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

Watts is scheduled to make a separate appearance in court today to be arraigned. He is serving a 13-year prison sentence for his role in burning warehouses belonging to state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

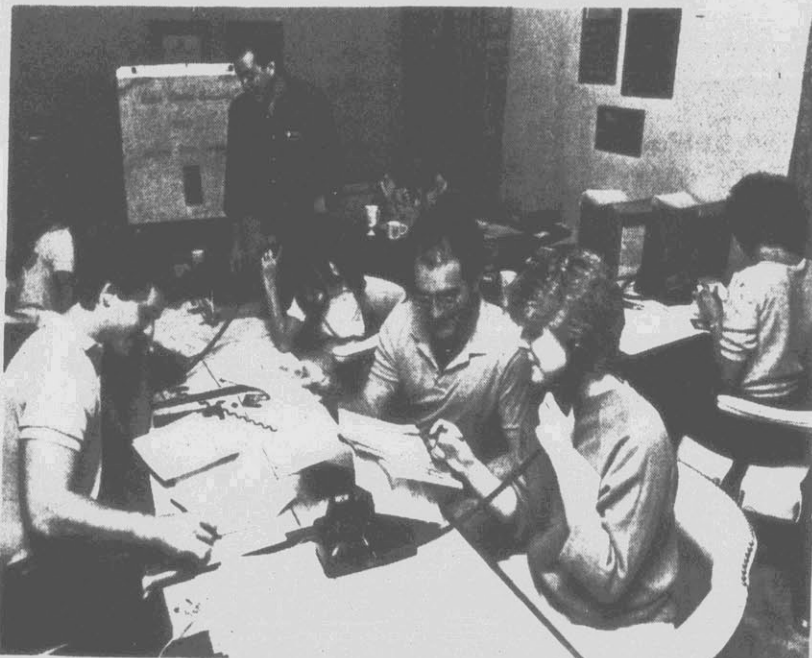

The charges against Green stem from the FBI's Colcor investigation into political corruption in southeastern North Carolina. The probe generated indictments in three states. Only one case involving state Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, has failed to result in a guilty plea or guilty verdict.

The Green trial also will be historic because it is the first North Carolina trial to be filmed by television cameras and photographed by newspaper cameras.

Meanwhile, prosecutors have subpoenaed one television and three newspaper journalists to testify about news accounts involving Green. The reporters are fighting the subpoenas, saying the First and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution allow them to avoid testifying unless there is some compelling need for their account.

Green was expected to run for governor in 1984 but has had to put his plans on hold pending resolution of the case. He argues that January would be soon enough to launch a gubernatorial campaign for someone who has run for statewide office so many times before.

Student Volunteers Aid ECU Funds Campaign

ECU News Bureau
Student volunteers telephoning East Carolina University alumni as far away as Hawaii and California have succeeded in raising $61,750 in pledges to the university's annual fund raising during the 1983 ECU Alumni national telefund campaign.

Led by the university's volunteer student service organization, the ECU ambassadors, more than 225 students placed approximately 16,000 calls to widely-scattered alumni during the month from Sep. 12 through Oct. 15.

Manning banks of telephones in the Taylor/Slaughter Alumni Center, the students worked in teams of 24 volunteers per night on alternate evenings and reached this year's national telefund goal of $50,000 at the end of the third week.

"The success of our national telefund is a reflection of the confidence of our alumni in the quality of this university and the hard work

Bureaucracy 'Burgeoning'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bureaucracy is burgeoning. The United States now hosts 82,341 governments, an increase of 2,428 in the last five years, the Census Bureau reports.

With 6,468, Illinois had the most local governments in the nation. The state with the fewest is Hawaii, with 19.

Nearly all of the nationwide increase occurred in special districts, such as those set up to provide sewer or water service or to protect wetlands. Little change was shown in the number of general purpose governments across the nation, the Census Bureau said Sunday.

of a large number of dedicated and enthusiastic student volunteers," said James L. Lanier, Jr., vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement.

Lenoir said the ECU ambassadors were organized and directed in the effort by Howard Lipman, a political science major from Wilmington. Lipman worked each night of the campaign, helped secure sufficient volunteers and acted as field general for all of the teams, Lanier said.

The ambassadors were helped by other student organizations such as fraternities and honor societies.

In addition to soliciting financial support, the telefund also serves to enable the alumni office to check on the addresses and whereabouts of the university's more than 50,000 alumni, said Cindy Kittrell, alumni field director.

McFarlane Choice Opposed

Rift On Nat'l Security Adviser

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, bucking a strong lobbying campaign by conservative supporters, has decided to bring his special Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, back to the White House full time as the chief national security adviser. White House officials say.

McFarlane would move into the post of assistant to the president for national security affairs, which will be vacated when William P. Clark becomes secretary of the interior.

The officials, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified by name, said Reagan notified the top members of his national security and foreign policy team of his decision over the weekend.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had not made "a final, final decision" about the post.

He also declined to comment on reports that U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who had been one of the candidates for the job, had been angered by the decision.

When he returned from a weekend at Camp David, Md., on Sunday, Reagan replied "nope" to questions about whether he had spoken with McFarlane about the job.

The officials said they could see no snags developing, although Reagan has yet to actually offer the job to McFarlane, who is also Clark's deputy.

"All that remains is the president making it formal," said one official.

Conservative allies of Reagan, both in and out of government, had conducted what White House officials said was a strenuous campaign on behalf of Mrs. Kirkpatrick. One White House official said Mrs. Kirkpatrick was in line for a new foreign policy job in Washington, although the details were not set.

There was also concern that McFarlane, a 45-year-old former Marine lieutenant colonel who has served Republican administrations since 1973, would not have the same access to Reagan as Clark. The current national security assistant has known Reagan for 16 years and is one of his closest advisers in Washington. Clark is leaving the White House to replace James G. Watt, who resigned on Oct. 9.

"The conservatives question whether he'll be a forceful enough advocate for conservative positions," one White House official said Saturday.

However, another White House source said on Sunday: "The foreign policy advisers were told it would be McFarlane and that he'd have the same role in the White House as Clark had."

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Gerard Debreu of the University of California at Berkeley won the 1983 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics today, the sixth consecutive year Americans have received the prize.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said the 62-year-old professor was honored for his work on mathematical models that prove the theory of supply and demand, the basis of capitalist economy.

Americans have won the prize outright since 1978, except for the 1979 prize, which was shared by Briton Sir Arthur Lewis and American Theodore W. Schultz of the University of Chicago.

"I am very pleased," Debreu said in an interview from his home in Oakland, Calif. "It is, as a scientist, the highest recognition he or she can receive. I am also pleased because it is the recognition of the work I have been doing, namely the application of serious mathemadice to economic theory."

Debreu, in explaining his work, said: "An economic system is composed of a very large number of agents, consumers and producers who make their decisions independent of each other. My goal is to explain how those agents make those decisions, how their decisions are compatible with each other and how they form an equilibrium for the economic system. To do that in a rigorous way, one has to build a mathematical theory, which has been the work of many of my colleagues and myself."

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In the past dozen years or so, the Chinese stir-fry technique has greatly influenced American cooks.

This comment is occasioned by the following recipe for Black-eye Peas and Stir-fry Vegetables, to which we were recently introduced.

Up to now, dry black-eye peas were most often used in a traditional way — cooked with rice and pork to make a delicious Southern dish that goes far back in American culinary history. In recent years the peas have been given wider use — in fritters and croquettes; as stuffing for tortillas; in casseroles; and in salads.

But now an enterprising cook has added them to a stir-fry dish of onion, sweet red or green peppers, zucchini and fresh tomato wedges. The combination makes a good vegetarian main dish or a side dish to accompany poultry, fish or meat.

BLACK-EYE PEAS & STIR-FRY VEGETABLES

2 tablespoons full-flavored olive oil

1/4 cup parsley leaves, finely chopped

1 clove garlic, finely chopped

1 medium (4 ounces) onion, thinly sliced (1 loosely packed scant cup)

1 medium (4 ounces) sweet red or green pepper, seeded and thinly sliced (1 loosely packed scant cup)

Two 7-inch long zucchini (each 4 ounces), thinly sliced (1 1/2 to 2 loosely packed cups)

1 large (8 ounces) red-ripe tomato, cored and cut into 16 wedges
1/4 teaspoon crushed dry thyme
16-ounce can cooked dry black-eye peas, drained (1 and 2-3rds cups), see Note
Salt and pepper to taste
In a 10-inch skillet over moderate heat, heat the oil. Add the parsley, garlic, onion, red pepper and zucchini. Cook, stirring often, only until the zucchini is crisp-tender — a matter of minutes.

Stir in tomatoes and thyme and heat, stirring often.
Fold in the black-eye peas and the salt and pepper; heat, stirring carefully once or twice, so as not to break up the peas. Serve at once.

Makes 6 servings.
Note: You may want to cook a batch of dry black-eye peas and use 1 and 2-3rd cups of them for this stir-fry dish — they should be tender but not mushy. One cup of the dry black-eye peas will yield 2 to 2 1/2 cups of cooked peas. The leftover peas not used in this dish will taste good added to rice and such cooked vegetables as spinach or collard greens.

Kids' Tips Lead To Good Payoff

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It all began when I published "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Wife," followed by "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Husband." Then a reader signed "Old-Timer" suggested that I invite the younger generation to submit its "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Kid."

I did, and the response was heartening. (Many elementary school teachers made it a class assignment.)

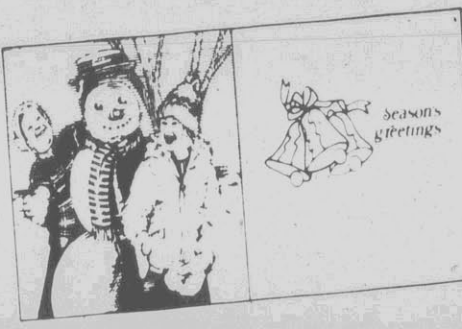

This list, from a 16-year-old Dallas girl, is one of the best:

1. Show appreciation. Most parents give more than they can afford.
2. Take responsibility for your own actions. If you want to be treated like an adult, act like one.
3. Remember, parents are human; they get tired, have their bad days and make mistakes, too, so forgive them like they forgive you.
4. Don't lie and sneak around, then expect your parents to trust you.
5. Do your homework and chores without having to be reminded.
6. If you have a change in plans or know you're going to be late, call and let your parents know.
7. Say "Please," "Thank you" and "Excuse me" at home, and you will do so automatically everywhere else.
8. Be willing to work for what you want.
9. Take pride in the way you look.
10. Let your parents know that you love and appreciate them. Tomorrow may be too late.

10 TIPS ON HOW TO BE A GOOD KID FROM AN 8-YEAR-OLD

1. Help with chores.
2. Say, "Yes, ma'am" and "Yes, sir."

3. Do what your parents say.
 4. If you hurt someone, or hurt their feelings, say you are sorry.
 5. Be nice to guests.
 6. Don't say bad words.
 7. Use good manners everywhere.
 8. Be nice to your brother or sister if you have one.
 9. Say your prayers every night.
 10. Love everybody, especially your parents.
- JEFF PURINTON, PALATKA, FLA.

A COLLECTION FROM OTHER LISTS SUBMITTED

1. Don't swear, drink or smoke. It makes parents wonder where they went wrong.
2. Don't ask your parents if they had lovers before they were married. It's none of your business, and you probably won't get a straight answer anyway.
3. Don't complain when you're served spaghetti three times in a row. It beats going to bed hungry.
4. Always be totally honest in what you say or do, even if it means getting busted.
5. When you're wrong, admit it, and take the consequences.
6. Pick up after yourself. Your mother is not your maid.
7. If your parents' marriage breaks up, don't act like they've ruined your life. They may have improved it.
8. Take good care of the body your parents (and God) gave you.
9. Do your best in school. Your future depends on it.
10. Include your parents in your prayers. You are always in theirs.

Views On Dental Health

TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE

There is a legal phrase: "Time is of the essence", which means there is no fooling around with dates in a contract. If your youngster accidentally gets a tooth knocked out and you'd like to give the dentist half a chance to successfully replant it—"time is also of the essence".

Take the typical case where a child gets his front tooth knocked out at a hockey game. He skates over and hands it to his parents and finishes the game. Later on—probably the next day—they'll go see a dentist. Too late, my friends. No chance for saving that tooth.

The proper reaction would be to take Johnnie-skates and all immediately to the dentist. This is an emergency. A tooth replaced within 30 minutes has a 90% chance of being saved, but in two hours the success rate drops considerably.

To improve the chances of a successful replantation of a knocked-out tooth, rinse it in tap water (don't scrub it), replace it in its socket and have the patient hold it in place with his tongue on the way to the dentist.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Learn how easy pattern stitchery can be as you create these lovely frost flower ornaments for your Christmas tree — or for little "I'm-thinking-of-you" gifts tucked into your Christmas cards. Use them for coasters, too. They are worked on little squares of red or green plastic canvas with no background filling needed.

Just stitch a few fancy stitches on each of two squares of canvas, whip the two together and make a little loop for hanging. They are unbelievably quick and easy to do and, best of all, so easy on the budget!

To obtain stitch charts and full instructions for making the Frost Flower Ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-1147 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-1147 by sending a check or money order for $11 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the instruction leaflet, enough materials to make 24 ornaments and the shipping charges.

The ornament design shown today appeared in this column three years ago and is also one of the 34 patterns featured in my new book, "Pat's Pointers: A Needlepoint Handbook." I am offering the design again as it was one of the most popular of all the designs I have shown over the years. Delighted comments poured in from all corners of this country, and frost flowers adorned many a tree.

Many readers wrote to tell me that they first made one of each of the 12 designs included on the leaflet and then were inspired to design their own originals by trying other pattern stitches on the colored canvas. Nothing pleases me more than to hear that I have been able to stimulate creativity in others!

Those of you who already are familiar with a number of decorative pattern stitches will probably not even need the instruction leaflet. Just buy some of the canvas in Christmas colors and let your imagination run wild.

For the ornaments, I recommend red, green or royal blue canvas stitched in snowy white yarn. You could, however, create delightful trinket boxes using pastel canvas and a rainbow of colored yarns. Oblong rectangles, approximately 3 inches by 6 inches, would make great eyeglass cases and smaller squares with a little tab are perfect for key rings.

Pick a design motif that appeals to you and scatter several repeats over a larger rectangle to create an original tote bag, telephone book cover or a variety of other gift items.

No lining is needed for the ornaments, but you may prefer to line some of the larger items mentioned. If you do, I suggest that you work a row of border stitches around all outside edges.

Then, cut a piece of lining fabric 1 inch wider and FROST FLOWER...ornaments are perfect for a Christmas tree, gifts or coasters. They are worked on colored canvas so no background filling is needed.

1 inch longer than the piece of canvas. Turn under and press in a one-half inch hem all around, mitering the corners. Place the wrong side of the lining fabric to the wrong side of the canvas and whip the lining in place, working through the needlepoint edge stitches.

If, in experimenting, any of you find that you have created an exciting design, send me a photograph and I will consider purchasing design rights from you so that it can be shared with other readers in leaflet and kit form.

Happy stitching! ("Pat's Pointers: The Needlepoint Handbook" by Pat Trexler guides the needleworker from the beginner-basics through more detailed instructions and projects. This 200-page book also includes sections on counted cross-stitch and aids for the handicapped who wish to participate in needlecraft activities. point Handbook, in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Drive, Fairway,

Home Fragrance Products Become Fashionable

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Ancient civilizations burned incense to sweeten the air and concocted aromatic mixtures to perfume the body. The Romans added scent to their public baths.

Later, American colonists placed potpourri, pomander balls and sachets in drawers and closets. In the mid-1950s, the introduction of aerosol air fresheners modernized the methodology. So, scenting the environment is not a new idea.

Indications are, however, that home fragrance products are about to become more important — and more fashionable — than ever before. Those who make and market products such as potpourri, scented candles and pillows, perfumed soaps, sachets and related items say sales are approaching all-time highs.

Furthermore, a number of new products are about to come on the scene that are expected to increase interest in scent as an important adjunct in home decor.

"The 'Flower Children' of the 1960s, may have started the interest in natural floral and herbal scents," says Annette Greene, executive director of the Fragrance Foundation.

The economy which forced people to look to their home and improve the quality of life there, the consequent growth of home entertaining, and even the development of home videocassette players also played a part, according to Barbara Carver. Ms. Carver is vice president of Charles of The Ritz which has developed what some people regard as one of the most interesting new home fragrance products.

This produce is the Aroma Disk. It consists of a small, electric heater which "plays" flat disks that have encapsulated such aromas as a crackling fire, buttered popcorn, the smell of a Christmas tree, roses or an ocean breeze. As the heater gets warmer the aroma is diffused into the room, says Ms. Carver.

The heater will sell for about $20, while individual disks good for up to 30 uses will be $1.50. More heavily-impregnated disks will sell for about $4 and provide up to 150 uses. So far, 40 aromas have been developed, and the company is working toward development of about 100 actual and fantasy aromas.

The new technology allows for total user control without any distortion of scent, according to Ms. Carver. Any fragrance can be reproduced and it takes only two to three minutes for the aroma to permeate the room, after which the heater shuts off. It also takes only a few minutes to replace the old scent with a new one.

As a result, it is possible to match scent to music, a television program or a film, and to change the scent as the action on a screen or recording changes.

The disk is being distributed as a home fragrance product through cosmetic departments in department and other stores. In addition, the company has licensed Remington Shaver Co. to sell it to housewares and hardware outlets. Among retailers slated to carry the product as of were Neiman Marcus, Macy's, Bloomingdale's, Sears, J.C.

Penney, and Montgomery Ward.

Testing indicates a broad market for such a product, including teen-agers, adult males who normally avoid scented products as feminine, and women who are now the largest purchasers of home fragrance products.

While the disk may be the most unusual new home fragrance product, it is not the only one. Recently, Johnson Wax Co. introduced a toilet tissue dispenser with tiny fragrance beads inside its plastic exterior. Each time the dispenser turns, a measure of fragrance is released.

Other relatively new products which dispense scent into the environment include small perfume rings that fit around a lamp and give off fragrance as the lamp heats up, fragrance lamps which work like oil lamps, with a wick, as well as herbal pillows which give off a herbal fragrance that is supposed to soothe away a headache.

In addition, a wider selection of scented drawer liners, potpourri, sachet, scented Christmas and other ornaments is available, than used to be, according to Ms. Greene of the Fragrance Foundation.

"Actually the public was more advanced than manufacturers in its acceptance of and demand for fragrance products," she said, noting it was only when people turned to alternative sources such as mail order outlets and natural and health food stores for these products that manufacturers began to see the potential.

Today, however, lack of supply is hardly the problem. Ann Pelagrine, the owner of Scentsitivity, a New York shop specializing in home fragrance products, says consumers have become more tuned into the delights of home fragrance, so there are more available products.

"People base their choice mainly on the aroma and the packaging. But color plays a role too. Many decorators come in here with a swatch of fabric and ask us to match it exactly in soap," she said.

Help Is Needed

Most people are unaware of the size of the heartbreak and the figures seem unbelievable to those who are aware of such things — but about 150,000 children are reported missing annually in this country.

The agency Child Find, organized in 1981, estimates roughly 50,000 of the missing children cases are never solved.

Some of the missing undoubtedly fled their homes to avoid a tormented life; others may have been victims of parental abuse (of which there is more than one wants to think about); an unknown number may be presumed secreted away from their home by a parent who also left the scene. One never knows how many are involved in such circumstances.

Inevitably there are a considerable number "stolen" by strangers with motives outside the realm of normalcy and in whose hands a child's life hangs by a tenuous thread of uncertainty. In any given year, we recall, there are instances of an infant being taken from a hospital, or a babysitter taking a child "for her own." These things happen in every state. Most such cases are solved.

So the plague of missing children is not new and it would be a good guess it has been one of those facts of life that began when the world was young.

It makes it doubly wondrous that society has not devised remedial measures for coping with one of its older curses. At least two necessary means are today available: identification, and almost instant transmission of information regarding a missing child to any and all parts of the country.

Still absent is a systematized search procedure and mobilization of individuals or organizations. A lot of "legwork" is required.

The public knows too well the dreaded fact that an unknown number of the missing children are tormented and ultimately slain. It makes the heartbreak of afflicted parents almost unendurable.

Bouncing Back

The nation's textile industry is often in the doldrums, but it has a way of springing back as the national economy improves.

That seems to be the case now. North Carolina textile employment rose to its highest level in 15 months. South Carolina textile employment was at a 10 month high.

For many years the domestic textile industry has fought a fierce battle with foreign textile imports. Though careful management, however, the American textile industry seems to survive and, at times, even thrive.

Moderation

NEW YORK (AP) — As it always has been and maybe always will be, moderation is one of the most elusive pursuits of man, an observation that can be demonstrated any day in the markets of business and finance.

Have you ever seen an expansion that didn't get out of hand, or a stock market advance that didn't outrace the realities, or a bureaucracy that didn't grow faster than its task, or a housing recovery that didn't go bust?

It is in that last-named category that the outrageous swings of fortune are perhaps most manifest, with no less than seven distinct up-down cycles having occurred since World War II, as measured by housing starts.

Boom-bust was never more consistent or obvious anywhere in the business world. The changes from high to low in the seven housing cycles have ranged from 35 percent in 1958-1960 to nearly 64 percent in 1973-1975.

And now the industry's fears are rising again, as Harry Pryde, head of the National Association of Home Builders, indicated the other day when he said that a pistol was being held to the temple of the industry.

The pistol, as anyone who has followed housing activities knows, is the federal deficit, which housing people say is keeping interest rates so high that most Americans cannot afford to buy a new house.

High interest rates are the other end of the housing seesaw. When rates fall, housing sales rise. When rates rise, housing is reduced to kindling, builders go bankrupt and real estate agents seek jobs in retail stores.

The NAHB estimates that in 1982, when home mortgage rates were even higher than they today's 13.5 percent, more than one million construction workers were unemployed, accounting for one in 10 of the nation's jobless.

No wonder just about everyone in the industry pines for the days gone by, for the two decades following World War II, when mortgage rates were in the single numbers and didn't fluctuate as they do today.

At 13.5 percent interest, less than 15 percent of American families qualify for a 30-year, $60,000 fixed-rate mortgage, based on the assumption that an owner's expenses shouldn't exceed one-fourth of total income.

Even when you make the assumption that it is safe to allow one-third of income to go into housing expenses — including mortgage, taxes, insurance, heat, utilities and repairs — only 27 percent or thereabouts can qualify.

Compare that situation with the one that would prevail if interest rates were back at 8 percent. At that lower rate, nearly 30 percent of families could afford to buy, based on one-fourth of income going for housing costs. And if one-third of income was allowed for housing, 47 percent would qualify.

It is for reasons such as these that the various housing organizations — in construction, financing and selling — are making such a to-do about the federal deficit. The deficit, they say, is keeping rates too high and too volatile.

An extreme federal deficit, they contend, means extreme interest rates, and volatile ones too. And, as a consequence, a see-saw for an industry that longs for stability but never seems to get it.

Most of the currencies were flabby and breathing hard. The only one that seemed in great shape was the American dollar. Its muscles were bulging and it was shadow boxing in the ring.

Secretary of the Treasury Don Regan, the dollar's manager said, "We have a real slugger now. In the late '70s the dollar was the weakest fighter in the world. Everyone was killing us. But now we have the world champion."

"That's great. Who is that getting in the ring with it?"

RALEIGH — For a time, it looked like the Fair Sentencing Act would never go into effect. Passed by the 1979 General Assembly, the act's effective date was postponed first during the 1980 short session and then again in the 1981 long session. Before Gov. Jim Hunt's lobbyists finally salvaged a July 1, 1981, effective date for the act, talk persisted in the Legislative Building about scrapping the law together.

If ever there was an issue over which reasonable men disagreed, it was this one. Both camps — supporters and opponents — had members from both ends of the political spectrum. There were genuine concerns that the act would jam the court dockets, flood the prisons, open the prison gates and divest judges of their authority.

Well, there's good news. A Governor's Crime Commission study performed by the Institute of Government indicates that the act has been a rousing success. Steve Clarke, author of the study, told the commission this month that none of the dreaded bugaboos developed during the first year that the act was in effect and that Fair Sentencing has, in fact, made sentencing more just.

The act supplies only to felonies. It establishes a wide range of sentences which can be meted out for any particular offense but then states a presumptive standard sentencing for each. For example, felonious larceny can get you anywhere from zero to 10 years but the standard sentence is three years. If the judge wants to give you any more or less than three years, he must report, on the record, his reasons for doing so.

Hunt hoped that the law would reduce the variation in prison terms for similar crimes and make sentences more predictable. Clarke says the act is working in both regards.

Sentence variation was "substantially reduced," Clarke says. The range of sentence length for the most common active prison sentences was compressed by 43 percent. That means that somebody who steals a stereo in Anson County is likely to get about as much time as someone who does the same thing in Yadkin County.

Sentences are also more predictable, Clarke found. In most cases, the median sentence — the point where half the sentences are shorter and half are longer — was the presumptive sentence. That means judges really are using the presumptive sentence. Therefore, district attorneys, defense lawyers and defendants have a better idea, before they go before the judge, how much time the defendant is going to get. This has led to a reduction, rather than a feared increase, in the number of distasteful plea bargains where the district attorney and the defendant agree on a sentence before they go to the judge.

In a development which Clarke described as "rather encouraging," the variations in sentences meted out to white and black defendants shrank considerably. Before the Fair Sentencing Act, blacks averaged 7.8 months longer per felony sentence than similarly charged whites. Now, according to Clarke's study, "the difference (has) virtually disappeared."

While the act apparently accomplished its goals, it did not generate the problems which were foreseen. The backlog on court dockets did not get worse because, while the number of plea bargains to a specific sentence dropped, the number of plea bargains in general rose and the number of jury trials dropped. The prison population did not rise, it dropped. Sentence lengths dropped but defendants found themselves spending a greater percentage of their sentence behind bars.

When Is A Vote Not A Vote?

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Glenn is crying "foul" because Walter Mondale has raised a subject Glenn deems unfit for a presidential campaign.

What has Glenn on edge? Mondale wants to discuss Glenn's voting record — specifically his 1981 votes in the Senate on President Reagan's tax and spending cuts.

Not only did the Ohio Democrat object to Mondale's attacks, he said last week that Mondale may be helping President Reagan win re-election.

"Let's not go back and hack away at each other and just give the president a free ride into office," he told the National Press Club.

"I was very sorry that some of our specific votes were brought up for specific comment or ridicule or criticism," he said. "It has become a campaign technique, not to look to the future... (but) to go back and pick specific votes out of people's past and try and castigate them."

Glenn may be right that Democrats' beating up on each other in the primaries could make it easier for Reagan to win re-election next year — if, of course, the incumbent does run. Primary fights always have that potential.

But on the question of his own Senate votes, Glenn is simply ignoring reality.

If a politician's recorded votes on issues of central importance to the nation are not proper topics for argument in a campaign, what are?

If the voters can't look to a politician's past actions for a guide — admittedly a hazy one — to his future decisions, where can they look?

Surely those votes are far more important indicators of the candidate's views, beliefs and abilities than speeches, promises, campaign staff, polls or straw votes.

Glenn may be a bit upset at Mondale's attacks for another reason. Glenn has a recent voting record that can be examined with political microscopes and Mondale does not. Mondale hasn't had to cast many recorded votes since 1977, when he became Jimmy Carter's vice president.

But Glenn was in the Senate when Reagan's key bills came up. He does have recorded votes, lots of them in the past three years on Reaganomics and Reagan's policies.

One of Glenn's beefs with Mondale revolves around whether Glenn actually "supports" Reaganomics. Here's what the candidates have said:

"Mr. Glenn cast a key vote for Reaganomics... It's remarkable that Mr. Glenn would base his campaign on supporting Reaganomics," Mondale charged.

"That just is not true and he knows it is not true," Glenn replied.

Senate records show that Glenn — and the other three Democratic senators seeking the presidency — voted against the administration's overall budget outline in the first major vote of 1981. But when it came to voting on the actual tax cut and $39 billion package of spending cuts, Glenn voted yes. Not that his vote made any difference — one passed 89-11 and the other 80-15.

"My vote back in 1981 on the final passage of that Reagan proposal was not a vote for Reaganomics as such," the Ohio Democrat said, adding he was voting for a change from the policies of the Carter-Mondale years.

In 1982, Glenn voted against the administration proposals.

Thus, in the common meanings of the words, Glenn supported Reaganomics in the ways that count in 1981. He says he doesn't now.

On the other hand, Mondale is not quite right in saying Glenn's campaign is based on support for Reaganomics. The 1981 votes are valuable targets for Mondale, but Glenn's position is not the same now.

In this flurry of thrust and counterthrust, Mondale and Glenn are drawing more clearly the lines that mark the differences between their views.

Such added clarity might make politicians nervous and it might help Reagan win re-election. But clear issue differences might help Mondale or Glenn win 13 months hence.

Strength For Today

There are all sorts of fears — some are good, some not so good, and some bad. The fear that one would have of poisonous snakes, of a friend with a lying tongue, or a reckless driver, are all real fears.

Fear is an emotion conferred upon us by nature to make us aware of the things that would harm us. Without these fears much of mankind might by now have perished.

There is a fear, also, which might better be termed suspicion, and is best represented,

The Dollar Grows Healthier

"The French franc. It hasn't won a fight since Mitterrand became president."

The bell rang and the two currencies started at each other. The dollar jabbed to the face and when the French franc took a wild swing, the dollar ducked and hit the franc in the stomach, then the head, then a mean right squarely on the jaw. The franc was groggy and almost fell to the canvas.

The French Minister of Finance ran over to Regan and said, "Stop the fight. You're killing my boy."

Regan said, "Let them continue for a little while longer. It's good practice for them."

A few minutes later the franc was being counted out, and the dollar was hardly perspiring.

The next one to step in the ring was the British pound. Its manager, Margaret Thatcher, was rubbing its gloves and giving it instructions. But the British pound could hardly stand on its legs and after playing with it for a round, the dollar knocked it out of the ring.

Mrs. Thatcher said to Regan, "Your president is going to hear about this."

The next contender was the West German mark, who had held the currency championship for years. It was a real grudge match.

Regan said, "The dollar will kill this guy. It took a terrible beating from him during the Seventies and it wants revenge."

The West German head of the Central Bank came over and said, "If you beat us too badly we're not going to buy any goods from America."

Regan told him, "I have no control over the dollar. The only reason it's so strong is that your own people are betting on my boy instead of yours."

The bell rang, the dollar moved in quickly and hit the mark right in the solar plexus. Then it started working on the mark's face. The mark's right eye began to bleed and the Swiss referee stopped the fight.

The West German banker said, "You think you won, but now that we're weak we're going to flood the U.S. with German goods that will underprice anything you can sell."

The last fight was between the dollar and the Japanese yen. At one time the yen had even been stronger than the West German mark. But it also lost a match to the dollar.

The Japanese Minister of Finance said, "You have made us lose face. But we are not worried. Our exports will make up for any money we lost on the fight."

Regan went over and shook hands with the dollar. "Good show," he told it.

Riggs said he notified the police dispatcher to call fire units and he drove directly to the business and found fire coming from a vent in the roof.

Greenville fire-rescue units stayed on the scene until after 4 a.m. combating the blaze.

Riggs said restaurant employees left the building about 2 a.m. He said the building was checked by police about 2:30 a.m. and everything was apparently all right at that time.

Capt. A.G. Whitaker said the blaze apparently started in a storeroom. He said agents of the State Bureau of Investigation are assisting local fire and police officials in trying to determine the cause of the fire.

Picking Jury In Tylenol Trial

CHICAGO (AP) — Publicity about the "horrible details" of seven deaths from cyanide-spiked Tylenol will make it hard to find unbiased jurors for James Lewis's attempted extortion trial starting today, his lawyer says.

Lewis, 37, is accused in a federal indictment of writing a letter demanding $1 million from Johnson & Johnson, parent company of the firm that makes the pain reliever, to "stop the killing."

Police arrested him in a New York City library in December 1982, about two months after seven Chicago-area people died after taking cyanide-tainted capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol.

No one has been charged in the deaths. But Lewis's arrest was the most widely publicized of three made during the investigation.

Lewis's name also made headlines in July, when he was sentenced to 10 years in prison for mail fraud in an unrelated case in Kansas City, Mo.

Defense lawyer Michael Monico said he would seek today to delay the Chicago trial because of the government's request Friday for more handwriting samples. He predicted jury selection would be difficult because of Lewis's notoriety.

"The concern is (that) because of all the pre-trial publicity during the (Tylenol) investigation and all of the attention focused on Mr. Lewis ... people just have a general recollection of his involvement in the case," Monico said.

"Since no other person has been as strongly implicated in the case ... the fear is people will associate Mr. Lewis with the investigation and all of the horrible details associated with it," according to Monico.

Illinois' then-attorney general, Tyrone Fahner, last fall called Lewis a "prime suspect" in the killings after Johnson & Johnson received the letter. Authorities allege Lewis signed the name "Robert Richardson," one of several suspected aliases, on another letter last November to the Chicago Tribune stating that he and his wife were innocent in the deaths.

Lewis "has never been eliminated (as a suspect) because we cannot account for a variety of his actions," said Thomas Schump, head of the Tylenol investigation task force.

Of 10 to 15 suspects, Schump said, "we were able to eliminate most of them, primarily because of their cooperation. Because Lewis has refused to talk to us or even talk to us through his attorney, there still appears to be a number of unknowns (about him)."

In the Kansas City case, Lewis was convicted in a scheme to obtain credit cards by using client information from his tax preparation business in 1981.

Police have described him as a "chameleon" who lived in several states, has used at least 20 aliases and held many jobs, including computer specialist, tax accountant, importer of Indian tapestries, and salesman of jewelry, pharmaceutical machinery and real estate.

In a pending case, Lewis is charged in Kansas City with giving false information to the Internal Revenue Service to obtain a tax refund.

Authorities in Kansas City also say Lewis was indicted, but never charged, in the 1977 murder of an elderly man there. The case was dismissed after a judge ruled that seizure of property from his apartment was illegal.

Eastern District Courts Rating Up

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's Eastern District court system, ranked 75th in the nation in efficiency five years ago, has moved to first place, according to the U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts.

The district had the highest number of cases disposed of per judgeship of any of the 96 national court districts for the period ending June 30.

District Chief Judge Earl Britt, recently named to the post, gave much of the credit to outgoing judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr.

"He's an incessant worker," Britt said. "You come in here any Saturday morning and you'll find him in his office. He gives the government 110 percent."

Britt said Dupree helped fill two vacant judgeships since 1979, bringing the total of full-time judges to three, while adding two court magistrate positions.

Dupree also placed more emphasis on being prepared to bring cases to a speedy trial which encourages out-of-court settlements, Britt said.

Clerk of Court J. Rich Leonard said he works with the judges to keep cases running smoothly. He said if a deadline is not met for filing briefs or a trial date is not promptly set, someone hears about it.

"Cases that do go off track are called to the attention of the appropriate person," Leonard said.

Having a more efficient court system apparently has brought in more cases. A total of 1,211 cases were filed in the year ending June 30, 1978, and 2,347 cases were filed in the year that ended last June.

Farm Scene

By MIRIAM LEWIS
Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

Economic conditions, as they are, make cattlemen wonder whether it will pay to winter cattle. Short, dry pastures and low feeder calf prices have forced many cow-calf producers into selling calves. High feed cost and weak consumer demand for beef had depressing effects on the profitability of finishing cattle.

Stocker operators with feed resources to feed calves should evaluate a stocker enterprise as a means of marketing supplies of home-grown feed. Cow-calf producers should consider wintering their calves, especially lighter calves.

Farmers who had large spring hay crops, harvested corn or silage, or had the opportunity to stockpile fescue should seriously consider wintering calves. Well-designed feeding systems, based on home forages, can produce the weight needed to sell as stockers this spring.

For further information on wintering calves, including suggested rations, contact Miriam Lewis at 752-2934.

Screening Is Planned

Free screening for scoliosis, lateral curvature of the spine, will be offered to all city and county public schools sixth graders within the next few weeks.

Requests for parents' permission are being sent home by students now. Private schools may request screening by public health nurses by calling Ms. Beth Murphy, PHN, 752-4141.

"Last year," Dr. Robert Ehinger, county health director said, "public health nurses screened more than 1,000 children. Forty-nine were referred for further examination. Of these, 18 showed sufficient evidence of scoliosis to require treatment."

He explained that scoliosis tends to run in families and affects more girls than boys. It may appear gradually, he said, often showing up during a child's growth spurt, and may be mistaken for poor posture. It seldom causes pain in a child, but uncontrolled, it can cause pain in later years and adversely affect function of heart and lungs. Correction usually involves bracing and/or surgery. Exercise and physical therapy alone are not sufficient, he said.

Big Prizes In 'Monopoly'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)

— There will be more at stake than Park Place and Reading Railroad at the 1983 World Monopoly Championship — the winner will go on a $10,000 shopping tour.

Twenty contestants from around the world are gathering for the championship round Tuesday night, when Cesare Bernabei of Rome will defend his title.

One of the competitors is 14-year-old James Mallett, who beat his father to win the British championship. "It's time Britain had a win," the teen-ager said. "My father's a very gracious loser."

Bernabei, 30, says he last played Monopoly a month ago, bankrupting his 10-year-old niece. "You have to keep your image in front of those kids," he said, "so you have to win, or they will lose their respect for you."

Parker Brothers, makers of the game, is dishing out $250,000 in real money to sponsor the tournament — and that doesn't include air fare for competitors who live in far-away places like Japan, Peru, Australia and the Netherlands.

First prize is a $10,000 shopping spree on glitzy Worth Avenue.

How to buy group health coverage.

Since the cost of health coverage has been rising much faster than other business costs, business people have to become much more skillful at evaluating competitive health-benefit proposals.

Here are some of the issues you'll want to consider.

Are the rate and cost containment strategies effective?

The cost of coverage is related directly to the cost of health services.

Therefore, does the carrier have effective ways to contain both your group's need for health care and the price of that care?

For example, does the carrier have cost-containment agreements with area hospitals and physicians?

Can the carrier offer your employees built-in incentives to use medical services efficiently?

Can the carrier offer options that reduce both the incidence and severity of illness? Membership, for example, in a health maintenance organization?

Will the plan be affordable? Can you assume variable levels of risk?

Can payments be geared to your cashflows? Are a variety of financing arrangements available?

Will the service be rapid, accurate and trustworthy?

What is the carrier's reputation for prompt, accurate payment? For adequate disclosure of claims paid or denied?

To what extent is the carrier achieving the dream of "paperless" processing? Can claims be filed by computer?

Will your employees appreciate the coverage as a true benefit, the way having our benefit plan is appreciated, or will they take it for granted?

To prevent problems for you down the road, will your carrier make the plan's provisions perfectly clear to them?

Take advantage of us.

All of these questions should enter any evaluation of alternative group-health plans.

The subject is complex, however, so please take advantage of our 50 years of experience. Just call your nearest service office, or write to: Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, Room 558, Post Office Box 2291, Durham, North Carolina 27702.

Why do we want you to become a better-informed customer?

Because the better you understand health coverage, the more you'll prefer ours.

The better you understand health coverage the more you'll prefer ours.

Does your carrier have cost-containment agreements with area providers? We do. And that's only one of the strategies that enabled us to save our subscribers more than $125 million last year.

Helms Prepares One Final Effort On King Holiday

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is set to pass a national holiday honoring Nobel laureate Martin Luther King Jr., but not before conservative Republican Jesse Helms makes one final attempt to block the bill.

While Helms is planning to battle the proposed holiday on the Senate floor and in a federal courtroom, leaders of both parties say when the roll is called Wednesday, approval will be overwhelming.

King's widow, Coretta, who waited 15 years for the moment, plans to attend the Senate session. Similar bills have been introduced each year since the civil rights leader was assassinated on a Memphis, Tenn., hotel balcony April 4, 1968, but until this year, the votes were missing.

The legislation, which breezed through the House 338-90 on Aug. 2, would set the holiday observance for the third Monday in January to honor King's Jan. 15 birthday. The holiday would begin in 1986.

White House spokesmen said President Reagan, who once opposed another paid holiday for federal workers, now is committed to signing the first bill honoring the achievements of a black American with a national holiday.

Congress returns today from a week-long Columbus Day recess.

Helms filibustered against the bill two weeks ago, but dropped the stalling tactics and agreed to a schedule proposed by Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

The North Carolina senator will try Tuesday to send the bill to the Judiciary Committee. If that move fails as expected, Helms and others are likely to introduce amendments that sponsors will oppose.

The proposals could include replacing the King holiday with a "civil rights" day, making Lincoln's birthday a national holiday or celebrating King's birthday on a Sunday.

At the same time, Helms' lawyers have a date in U.S. District Court on Tuesday, where they'll try to convince a judge to unseal tapes and transcripts that came from the FBI's electronic surveillance of King.

Helms said on the Senate floor that King advocated "action-oriented Marxism" and associated with communists. The documents were sealed by U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith in 1977 for 50 years, but Helms contended he and other senators need the information to cast an informed vote.

In the House this week, President Reagan's Central America policies face another test with a vote on efforts to cut off all covert aid to anti-communist rebels in Nicaragua.

The vote will measure whether attitudes toward U.S. support for opponents of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua have changed since Korean Air Lines Flight 007 was shot down by the Soviet Union last month.

Sources said House leaders deliberately held off votes on the funds cutoff until the initial furor over the Korean plane had abated.

In a bitter, emotional battle, reminiscent of the Vietnam War years, the House voted 228-195 on July 27 to cease about $19 million in secret CIA support for an estimated 11,000 "contras" seeking overthrow of the Nicaraguan government.

But that proposal — attached to an intelligence authorization measure for the end of fiscal year 1983 — went nowhere in the Republican-controlled Senate, which may begin work on the cutoff move late this week, but more likely early next week.

Wheat-state interests also will be active in the Senate this week, trying to break a logjam over a plan to curtail grain price supports for the 1984 and 1985 crops.

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., has tried three different times to get a vote on his plan to curb scheduled increases in the so-called target price but has been blocked each time by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont.

Although Agriculture Secretary John Block originally called for complete repeal of those increases, Dole has offered a compromise that provides half the scheduled increase for next year's crop and sweetens the overall federal program for wheat farmers.

On Tuesday, the House is expected to resume floor action on a bill to reapprove U.S. export controls, which are largely aimed at preventing leakage of advanced computers and other sensitive technology to Soviet bloc countries.

And a House-Senate conference will renew attempts to compromise on a supplemental unemployment compensation bill, which provides benefits for Americans who used up their regular jobless checks.

Raises Doubts On Registration

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Up to 100 residents of two Greensboro public housing complexes may have illegally registered to vote last year, according to a statement filed by the president of the housing council.

N.J. Johnson, who is not a voter registrar, said he registered about 100 people last September and October at the request of Herman Gist, who was elected to the state House of Representatives in November.

Since receiving the statement, state Elections Director Alex K. Brock has asked the State Bureau of Investigation to interview residents of the Smith Homes and Hampton complexes who were registered during the Democratic Party drive.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pound birds. 71 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 49.82 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is generally moderate for a good demand. Weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,772,000, compared to 1,461,000 last Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today in a sluggish response to some better-than-expected news on the money supply.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.12 to 1,262.40 by noon.

Losers held a narrow lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Friday the Federal Reserve reported a $1.1 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended Oct. 5.

The figure contrasted with advance estimates calling for an increase of $1 billion or more. Analysts said it provided some fresh support for hopes that the Federal Reserve might encourage interest rates to decline.

That optimism was apparently offset, however, by concern over prospects for the international banking system. On Friday the Philippines announced a 90-day moratorium on principal payments for some of its foreign debt.

American Express led the active list, down 1½ at 36½, following the company's report that its third quarter earnings came to 88 cents a share, against 85 cents in the comparable period a year ago.

The NYSE's composite index lost .03 to 97.97. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .64 at 227.40.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 30.59 million shares at noon, against 34.25 million at the same point Friday.

committee that chooses winners of the economics prize, said Debreu dealt in basic research on equilibrium in a market economy.

Debreu devised "new mathematical methods that are more advanced and yet more simple than previous ones," Lindback said.

He said Debreu's mathematical models led to the findings of both James Tobin of Yale University and George Stigler of the University of Chicago, winners of the 1981 and 1982 economics prizes.

"In the beginning we did not realize the importance of Dr. Debreu's work," Lindback said. "Now we realize its true value."

Born in Calais, France, on July 4, 1921, Debreu became an American citizen in 1975, the same year he became a professor of mathematics at Berkeley. He had taught economics at the California institution since 1962.

The academy's one-paragraph citation said Debreu won "for having incorporated new analytical methods into economic theory and for his rigorous reformulation of the theory of general equilibrium."

"Gerard Debreu's major achievement is his work in proving the existence of equilibrium-creating prices," the academy said in an explanatory statement.

It said "his first fundamental contribution" was in the early 1950s, working with Harvard University Professor Kenneth Arrow, co-winner of the 1972 Nobel economics prize.

Debreu and Arrow designed a mathematical model of a market economy where different producers planned their output of goods and services and thus also their demand for factors of production in such a way that their profit was maximized.

Debreu subsequently has developed and extended the original theories, the academy said.

In addition to a diploma and medal, Debreu earns 1.5 million Swedish kronor — about $190,000 — from the Riksbank, Sweden's central bank, which finances the economics prize.

The presentation will be in Stockholm on Dec. 10, the anniversary of the death of Swedish dynamite inventor Alfred Nobel, in the same ceremony at which the winners of the Nobel science prizes collect their awards from the Nobel Foundation.

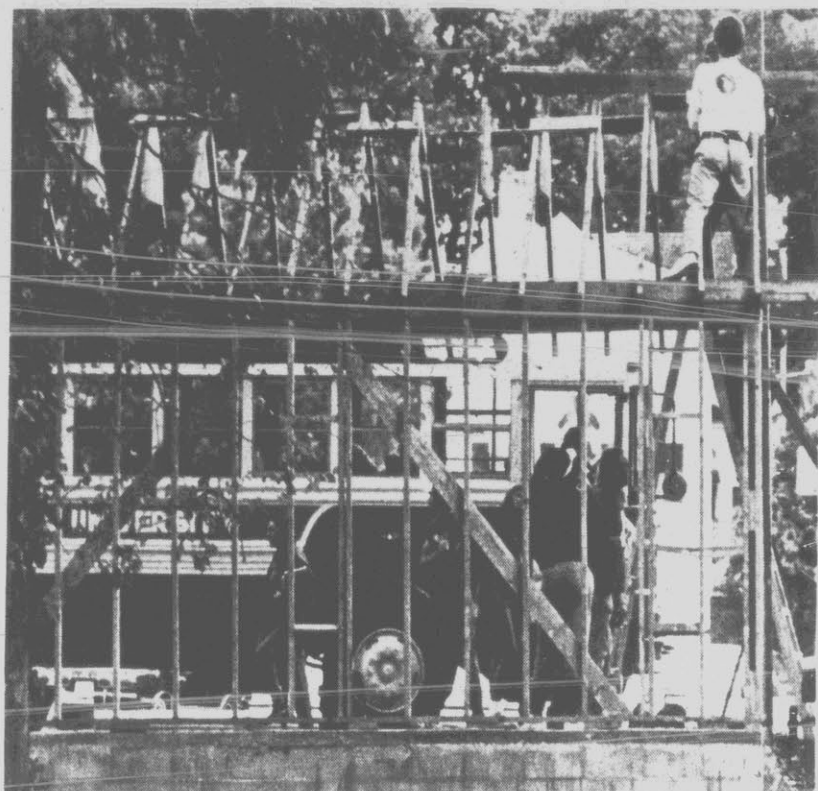

Twelve Americans have won or shared the economics prize, established by the Riksbank in 1968 to mark the bank's 300th anniversary.

Debreu is the second American honored so far in the Nobel series this year. The medicine prize was awarded last week to genetics researcher Barbara McClintock of the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York.

Truck Rams Soviet Vessels Trapped By Ice

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — About two dozen students received minor injuries today when a speeding tractor-trailer truck rammed the rear of a school bus, officials said.

The truck driver, Gregory Chandler, 25, of Rural Retreat, Va., was charged with reckless driving and was being held in the Forsyth County Jail under $1,000 bond, said Winston-Salem police Lt. J.G. Hippert.

The wreck occurred about 7:30 a.m. on U.S. 52 near the Clemmonsville Road exit when the truck, traveling more than 60 mph, hit the bus and knocked it about 300 feet down the highway. Hippert said. About 34 students were on the bus.

Nine students were being taken to Forsyth Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem, most of them with minor neck and head injuries, said hospital spokesman Bob Tannehill.

Fourteen other students were being examined at North Carolina Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. Hospital spokesman Roger Rollman said the students, aged 11 through 15, were in satisfactory condition with minor injuries.

The bus was on its way to Diggins Elementary School and Anderson Junior High School. The bus driver, Richard Culler Jr., 17, was not injured.

MOSCOW (AP) — Huge ice floes have crushed and sunk one Soviet freighter and are threatening about 45 other vessels trapped in rapidly freezing northern seas.

The official news agency Tass said five of 50 trapped ships were freed Sunday, but winds hampered further rescue operations in the Northern Sea Route skirting northeast Siberia near the Bering Strait.

News of the ships' predicament first was reported last week in the government newspaper Izvestia. It said grinding ice already had sunk the freighter Nina Sagaidak, but rescuers from sister ships saved its crew and cargo.

Tass said winds out of the north and northeast were building up the pack ice and tightening its grip on the ships.

It was not clear whether human error was responsible for the crisis. Merchant marine directors may have erred by dispatching the ships from Pevek too late in the season or by failing to take into account an unusually cold summer. Western maritime references say the Northern Sea Route remains ice-free only from mid-July to the end of September.

The ships set out from the port of Pevek during the summer months for the annual voyage to resupply remote Siberian outposts, taking advantage of the few months when the route is relatively ice-free. But the Soviet press says cold weather and shifting winds left the route clogged with ice this summer.

It is highly unusual for the Soviet press to report such a crisis. Foreign observers in Moscow speculated the government preferred to disclose it before Western news agencies found out independently.

Role Players Lead Orioles To Crown

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are a team of role players, a baseball club assembled like an army that comes at you in waves, row after row of fresh troops.

And the Baltimore Orioles are the world champions today because they have mastered platoon baseball, a game that depends on moving players like chess pieces to suit situations.

This is not a team of greats, but it's a great team.

The general in charge of this battalion of spare parts is Joe Altobelli, a soft-spoken man whose club met the enemy at Philadelphia and wiped them out in five games.

"Now," he said, "I can go home and see my grand-kids."

The last time Baltimore was in a World Series was 1979, when the manager was Earl Weaver, a fiery Napoleon type. The Birds led that Series 3-1 — just like they did against Philadelphia. But they let Pittsburgh off the hook that year, losing in seven games, only the fifth time in history a team has blown that kind of edge. This time, with Gen. Altobelli calling the shots and 15 troops from that team still in Baltimore's army, the story had a different ending.

"He's the smartest guy I know," observed Eddie Murray, who battled his way out of a 2-for-16 Series slump with a pair of mammoth home runs and a single in Sunday's 5-0 wrapup victory. "He put the right nine out there every day."

Not the same nine, but the right nine. The difference between Weaver and Altobelli is mainly in style. One was a screamer and the other is not.

"They were both outstanding managers," said Rick Dempsey, the Series Most Valuable Player, who had Baltimore's other two hits Sunday — a double and homer — and batted .385 for the Series with five hits, all for extra bases. "When Joe came in, there was no yelling and screaming."

Gen. Altobelli preferred a low-key approach.

"Obviously, it's quieter in the dugout," said Scott McGregor, whose five-hit shutout finished the Phillies and helped soothe the memories of '79, when he was the seventh-game loser. "I think Joe is just as good a manager as Earl, and maybe it proved we didn't have to be fussed at all the time. But Earl couldn't have done it any other way."

McGregor's shutout gave Baltimore a 1.60 earned run average for the five-game Series, the best in 40 years.

The closest Philadelphia came to a run Sunday was in the eighth inning when Joe Morgan tripled and Pete Rose followed with a long fly to left field. Morgan tagged up but tripped leaving the base, falling to the ground and scrambling back. It was symbolic of the stumbling Phillie offense throughout the Series.

Baltimore lost the opener but swept the next four games, becoming the fourth team to accomplish that. The Orioles were the victims the last time it happened, in 1969 when the New York Mets won the world championship.

Without the designated hitter in this Series, Baltimore lost the use of Ken Singleton, one of its important offensive parts. It hardly disturbed Altobelli, who set a Series record by sending four consecutive pinch hitters to the plate in Saturday's fourth game and made nine lineup changes in one inning.

"I thought that was tremendous," said McGregor. "Watching him, you got the feeling he was bored by the DH."

Not bored, perhaps. But he certainly knew how to survive without it, using Baltimore's interchangeable parts.

"We did quite a few things like this during the course of the season," the general said. "It was just magnified here. This club won 94 games last year. I just wanted to keep us going in the same direction."

His approach was to use all his players. The left field job, for example, was shared by lefty-swinging John Lowenstein and righty Gary Roenicke. The result was a combined 34 home runs and 124 runs batted in, numbers neither was likely to approach playing fulltime.

"The major hurdle is the acceptance on the part of the players," said

Baltimore Hurlers Gain Attention

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After 171 games and a 1.11 postseason earned run average, Baltimore pitching coach Ray Miller thinks the Orioles' staff may finally get the recognition it deserves.

"I couldn't have sat down before the start of the season and planned a better ending than the one we had," Miller said after Scott McGregor pitched a five-hitter and blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0 Sunday to clinch the World Series for the Orioles.

The Baltimore staff allowed just 10 earned runs in nine post season games — two in the American League playoffs to the Chicago White Sox and eight to the Phillies.

It was a fitting windup for a staff that was in danger of collapsing during the season.

"All I heard before the playoffs was how good the Chicago pitchers were, and before the Series all about Steve Carlton and John Denny," Miller said. "But this was the 105th game we won this year."

"And we did it with two Cy Young winners down and with Dennis Martinez having an off year."

Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, was on the disabled list twice during the season and Mike Flanagan, the 1979 winner, once. Dennis Martinez slumped to a 7-16 record, and reliever Tippy Martinez was sidelined with an emergency appendectomy.

But rookie Mike Boddicker, given a chance when Palmer and Flanagan went down, won 16 games and second-year starter Storm Davis won 13. In addition, Alan Ramirez and Bill Swaggerty were called from the minors to make significant contributions in starting roles.

Catcher Rick Dempsey, who was named the Most Valuable Player in the Series, said he was worried about the pitching as late as the final week of the regular season.

"After clinching the division in Milwaukee," Dempsey said, "our pitchers went into a lull. They had no velocity, no breaking balls and I was beginning to become concerned."

But Dempsey added, "We seemed to come alive against the White Sox and in the World Series, everything came together."

The only two games lost in postseason play, the opener of the playoffs and the opener of the Series, were by 2-1 scores with McGregor on the mound.

"That's the way it was late in the season for Scotty," said Miller. "He was knocked out a few times, but I can't remember when he pitched a bad game. Then he pitched a couple of good games in the postseason without winning. If anybody needed some runs, it was Scotty. I don't think we'd scored him any runs since Sept. 15."

The victory brought the Orioles the traditional telephone call from President Reagan. Manager Joe Altobelli reminded the president that they had met at the White House last May when Reagan proclaimed National Amateur Baseball Month, and thanked him for calling "on such a big day for us."

"We really appreciated it," Altobelli told the president. "After we met, I would never miss a Ronald Reagan movie on television."

Reagan noted that Orioles first baseman Eddie Murray, who roared out of a Series slump with two home runs, wore No. 33 — the same number the president wore as a football player.

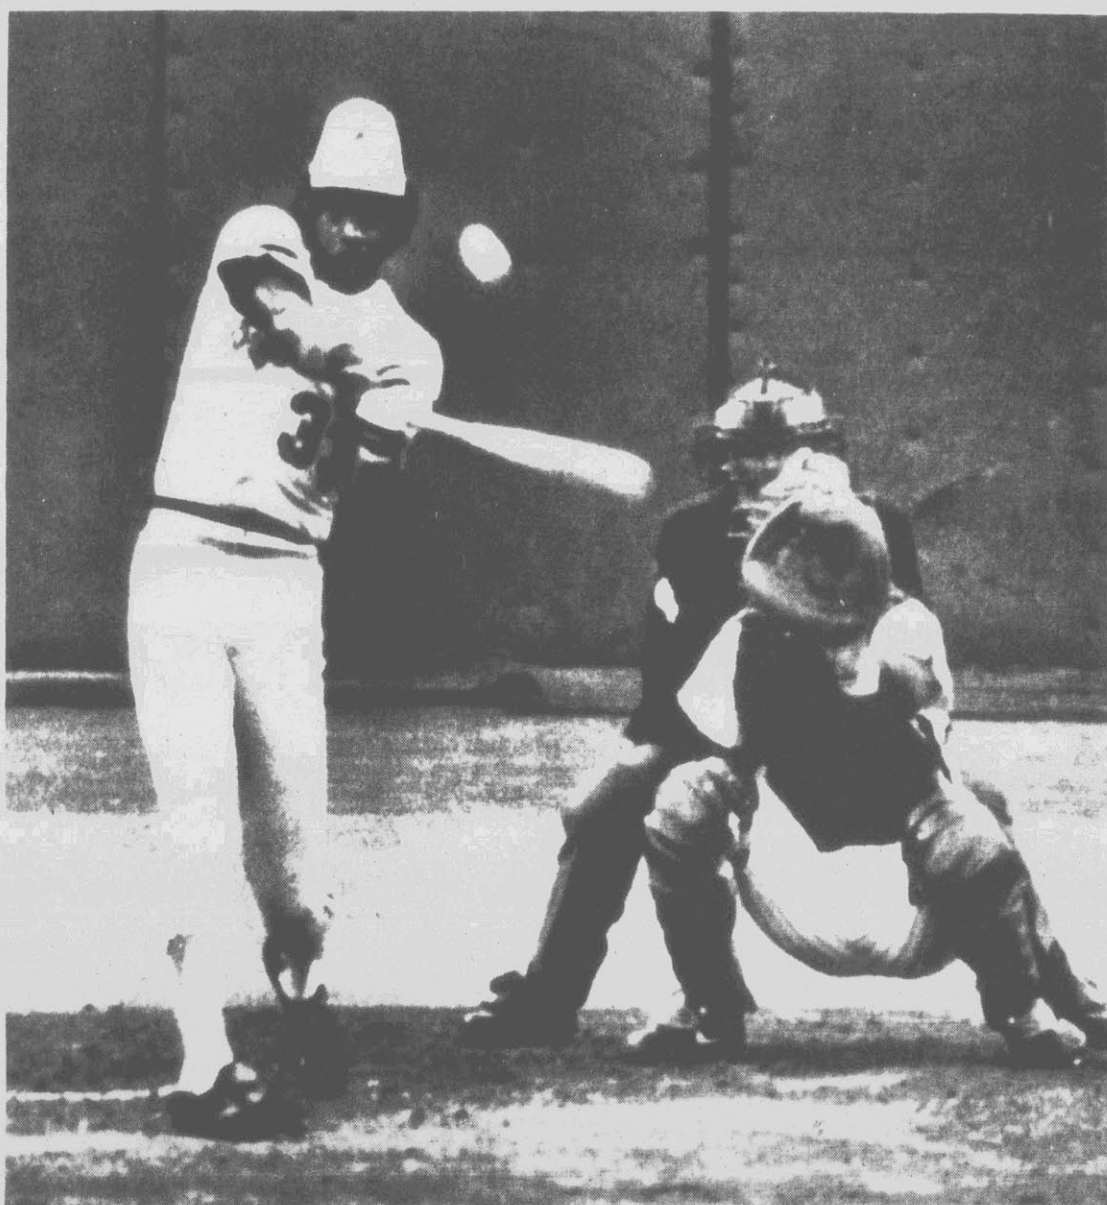

"I just knew it was going to be his day," Reagan said.

Altobelli said the Orioles had a fine scouting report on the Phillies from scout John Stokoe, "and our pitchers did a super job."

"I don't know how it could have been any better," added General Manager Hank Peters. "The starters were great and so was the bullpen."

"I knew we had good pitchers," said Ken Singleton. "They usually carry us, but when they were hurt early, I began to wonder. But I was glad I was on this side, not facing them."

Sammy Stewart, a long reliever who didn't allow a run in 9 1/3 innings, said: "They say good pitching can beat good hitting. We proved that good pitching can beat good pitching."

Wahoos After Respect

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Coach Terry Holland says Virginia's basketball Cavaliers are "interested in proving we're going to be a major factor in the nation without Ralph Sampson" this season.

"It's very important to our players to prove we're good without Ralph," Holland said as the Cavaliers opened practice Saturday. "We still want to win every game we play. Our goals are the same. The only difference is we'll try to accomplish them without a 7-4 center."

This is Holland's 10th season at Virginia but the first in five years without Sampson, the three-time national player of the year. In Sampson's four years at Virginia, the Cavaliers were 24-10, 29-4, 30-4 and 29-5.

Former walk-on Kenton Edelin, a 6-foot-7 senior who averaged 2.1 points and 4.9 rebounds last year while playing about 15 minutes per game, is the likely successor to Sampson at center.

"I have to be a more well-rounded player to make the contribution we really need," said Edelin. "I have to be more offensive-minded, go to the glass hard and play tough defense inside."

Edelin said he's not worried about trying to fill Sampson's shoes.

"There's only one Ralph Sampson," he said. "I don't think people expect me to play like Ralph. What's important is that we play well as a team."

Holland's major problem is replacing the rebounding strength of Sampson and forward Craig Robinson, who also graduated last spring. Between them, they accounted for about 45 percent of Virginia's rebounds last season.

"Obviously, we have a large gap in the middle," said Holland. "What's not so obvious to most people is the absence of Craig Robinson."

He added that "rebounding will be a critical area for us, something we will concentrate on during preseason practice. There are two aspects to rebounding — size and position. We have to concentrate on what we call superior rebounding position."

The Cavaliers lost only Sampson and Robinson from their top 10 players of a year ago, and freshman Tom Sheehy, a forward from Rochester, N.Y., is a promising newcomer.

"Our strength is balance and depth," said Holland. "We don't have a lot of individual stars, but we're an experienced basketball team. I think we'll draw on that experience."

The Cavaliers open the season Nov. 26 against Lafayette in the United Virginia Bank-Cavalier Invitational.

Returning starters include guards Rick Carlisle and Othell Wilson and forward Tim Mullen. Also back are third guard Ricky Stokes and Jim Miller, the Cavaliers' first substitute forward last season.

Auerbach was the winningest coach in the history of the National Basketball Association, posting 938 victories in his 20 seasons as skipper. He had 99 additional victories in playoff games and also was the winning coach in seven All-Star contests.

East Carolina's continuing progress on the football field will get its sternest test of the season this coming Saturday afternoon in Gainesville, Fla., when the Pirates take on the nationally-ranked University of Florida.

This past Saturday, however, the defense carried the Pirates to their fifth straight victory of the year, a 24-11 win over Temple University that was not as close as the score might show. The Pirates muffed a number of scoring opportunities: Jeff Heath missed half-a-dozen field goal tries — something unheard of for the usually accurate kicker.

Temple's touchdown didn't come until the final minute of play and by then, it made no matter whatsoever.

Kevin Walker intercepted three passes against Temple's Dan Riordan, tying a school record, and the Pirates picked off four in all — their best defensive day against the pass this year.

Last week at his press conference, Coach Ed Emory said that he and his staff believed in their defensive plans, but perhaps they were looking at the defense through the wrong set of eyes.

Whether this was true or not, the adjustments made against Temple could not have come at a better time. Over the next few weeks, the Pirates will be playing some of the finest aerialists in the country and it will be up to the secondary to keep those quarterbacks from completing the pass and the front line to provide extra pressure on those same throwers.

It is interesting to note that there was only a sparse crowd of people at the game, played at night at Franklin Field instead of during the day at Veterans Stadium as originally planned.

We still believe it would have made better sense to have moved the game to Greenville. A far better crowd would have attended, we believe, and that would have made both teams better off.

We understand that Temple and East Carolina are working on future agreements and that some of those dates will be in Greenville.

One has to wonder what the open date this past weekend will mean to Florida. Many coaches say they don't like open dates — others say they like to schedule them in the midst of the season. Some say it depends on the kind of season you are having.

If this latter theory holds water, then Florida had its open date at the wrong time. Those coaches who say it depends, want them when things are going bad, when the team is losing and when injuries pile up. Those for whom everything is going right don't want an open date. They want to keep the edge by playing.

Florida is such a team. They've been rolling along with only a tie against Southern California to mar their record.

Certainly they cannot afford to overlook the Pirates even though they stand to be as much as a 20-point favorite for the game in some circles. The week off could have made them a little stagnant, too.

Certainly the Pirates will hope so.

The game may have been picked up for television, too, by the time this is read. Florida has not appeared on a broadcast this year, so they are ripe for it. And with the national attention the Pirates are getting now, it would seem a good time. This would therefore mean another fine paycheck for the Pirates to carry home — to build the program and erase the deficit that appeared over the last few years.

We might note here, too, that although it hasn't been publicized, East Carolina's program was in the black last year for the first time in five or six seasons.

With Sports Illustrated doing a feature on the Pirates this week, the possibility of a television date, Saturday's game takes on added flavor. It really give East Carolina a chance to show its stuff to those who are in charge of the bowls.

Then it will be up to the fans to show their backing by filling Ficklen for the following Saturday's Homecoming game.

McEnroe Suspended With $1,500 Fine

By The Associated Press
Martina Navratilova just keeps rolling along, while the John McEnroe Express will be temporarily derailed.

Navratilova, the Wimbledon and U.S. Open winner, defeated Pam Shriver 6-3, 6-2 Sunday to run away with the championship of the $150,000 Florida Federal tennis tournament at Tarpon Springs, Fla. She also teamed with Shriver to win the doubles title, defeating Bonnie Gadusek and Wendy White 6-0, 6-1.

Meanwhile, McEnroe beat France's Henri Leconte 6-1, 6-4, 7-5 to capture the Australian Indoor championship at Sydney for the fourth straight year, but he was fined $1,500 and suspended 42 days for verbally abusing an official during Sunday's final.

Navratilova, who lost only four points on her service in the second set, now has won 36 straight singles matches since she lost to Kathy Horvath at the French Open last spring.

Navratilova, who won $28,000 for the singles victory, beat Shriver by beating her at the net.

"I can't attack her backhand anymore," Shriver said. "I used to chip it to her backhand and come in but she hits it so hard now. It's a heavy-duty shot now."

Navratilova, who turned 27 Tuesday, said the court helped, too.

"The court is slow and it's easy to hit the top spin," she said. "I never felt threatened by her coming into the net. My backhand is getting better."

The $1,500 fine put McEnroe $800 over the limit of $7,500 per year set by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council. The 42-day suspension could be cut to 21 days if he does not play in any exhibition matches during the penalty period.

McEnroe said if he had known his remarks to let-cord judge Barry Hill would result in his second career suspension, "I would have really let him have it."

Bowl Scouts Watch Heels

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer

There were scouts from the Orange and Sugar bowls watching third-ranked and undefeated North Carolina hang a 42-14 loss on North Carolina State Saturday. That didn't interest Scott Stankavage at all.

Stankavage threw two second-half touchdown passes and ran for a third, while tailback Ethan Horton rushed for 111 yards on 15 carries and two more scores as the Tar Heels took their seventh straight victory and third Atlantic Coast Conference triumph.

In other ACC action, 16th-ranked Maryland rallied for a 36-33 victory over Wake Forest, while No. 5 Auburn erupted in the second half for a 31-13 triumph over Georgia Tech. Clemson survived a fourth-quarter barrage by Duke quarterback Ben Bennett for a 38-31 victory, while Virginia broke a two-game losing streak with a 38-10 whipping of winless VMI.

"As a team, we're four games from the ACC championship," said Stankavage, the nation's third most efficient passer. "The one that stands in our way is in three weeks at Maryland. Third in the country and bowl games are nice. But what really matters is that ACC championship. We'll worry about the ranking on Jan. 3."

Stankavage threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Mark Smith to start the second half, then parlayed a 20-yard punt into a five-play drive and Eddie Colson's 6-yard scoring run with three minutes left.

"I don't think they are that much better than we are," Wolfpack linebacker Vaughan Johnson said. "But they are very consistent and very well coached. On the whole, their consistency was a big thing."

N.C. State dropped to 2-4 and 1-3. Clemson had reached a 38-24 lead when Bennett hit Mike Grayson on a 14-yard scoring play with 3:08 left. The Tigers failed to move the ensuing kickoff and Duke had one more chance.

From the Clemson 37, Duke marched to the 9. After two incompletions and faced with a fourth-and-five, Bennett's pass for Grayson was tipped by 6-foot-5 lineman James Robinson, ending any chance Duke had to avoid its sixth straight loss.

"I'm glad to see Bennett's a senior," Clemson coach Danny Ford said, an obvious reference to all the trouble the quarterback has caused his secondary in three years. "I'm not sure if this isn't the happiest day of my life seeing he's a senior."

Auburn left Grant Field trailing 10-7 at halftime, and mustered a 14-13 edge at the end of three quarters. Then, Bo Jackson scored on a 7-yard run and Randy Campbell passed 47 yards to Chris Woods to put the game out of reach. The Tigers are 5-1, while the Ramblin' Wreck fell to 1-5.

Next week, Georgia Tech must face Tennessee, knocked off No. 11 Alabama 41-34. For the second straight week, Maryland played a less-than-artistic football game, but when Sean Sullivan caught Boomer Esiason's 30-yard scoring pass with 1:15 left, the Terrapins were 5-1, 2-0 in the ACC.

"We played harkiri," Maryland coach Bobby Ross said. "We did everything possible in the terms of penalties, fumbles and mistakes. We came back and it was a real significant game. Perhaps it was better to win this way than any other."

Wake Forest put a scare right back into the Terrapins when they reached the Maryland 30, but a Gary Schofield pass was picked off by Clarence Baldwin with seven seconds left.

Schofield finished with 25 of 46 passes for 365 yards and

Steelers' Defense Shines In Victory

By The Associated Press

It's no longer the Steel Curtain, and Mike Merriweather, Dwayne Woodruff and Greg Best don't roll off the tongue like Mean Joe Greene. But the Pittsburgh Steeler defense is beginning to conjure up memories of the team that won four Super Bowls during the 1970s.

The Steelers ran their record to 5-2 Sunday by routing the Cleveland Browns 44-17 with the defense forcing seven turnovers and scoring two touchdowns to continue to fill the offensive gap left by an injury to Terry Bradshaw. The two scores followed three by the defense in last Monday night's 24-14 victory over Cincinnati.

"We always had one foot in the grave and one on a banana peel," muttered Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano, who watched quarterback Brian Sipe throw the ball to Pittsburgh on his first three possessions.

"I don't know what it is, but I want to keep it going," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll.

Sunday was a day for defensive offense all over the NFL.

There were nine touchdowns scored by the defense in 13 games, seven by interceptions and two by fumbles. Several other turnovers set up important touchdowns.

Seattle forced eight Raider turnovers and beat Los Angeles 38-36 despite Seahawk quarterback Jim Zorn being four for 13 for two net yards. The Miami Dolphins intercepted six passes en route to a 32-14 victory over the New York Jets.

Dwight Hicks' 62-yard interception return for a touchdown capped a 16-point third period spurt to give the San Francisco 49ers a 32-13 triumph over New Orleans in a game in which Ray Werschling kicked six field goals.

Minnesota forced six fumbles to beat Houston 34-14. Rick Sanford raced 26 yards with a fumble to set up the go-ahead touchdown in New England's 37-21 victory over San Diego and Durwood Roquemore's 46-yard interception return was the go-ahead score as Kansas City beat the New York Giants 38-17.

Dallas, meanwhile, continued as the league's only unbeaten team, rolling to a 37-7 rout over Philadelphia to run its record to 7-0.

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 34, Tampa Bay 27; Detroit 31, Chicago 17; Buffalo 30, Baltimore 7; Denver 24, Cincinnati 17, and the Los Angeles Rams 27, Atlanta 21.

Washington plays at Green Bay tonight.

In Pittsburgh, Merriweather's interception return made the score 17-0 after only six minutes and the rout was on as Cleveland lost for the 14th time in as many visits to Three Rivers Stadium.

Cliff Stoudt completed 14 of 18 passes for 194 yards for Pittsburgh, but it was still the defense that won the day.

"Everyone is playing more aggressively," Woodruff, who had two interceptions, said of the Steeler defense. "We're not waiting for things to happen, we're making them happen."

In Seattle, the Seahawks, 4-3, forced five turnovers from Jim Plunkett and eight overall and Paul Johns returned a punt 75 yards for a touchdown to hand the Raiders their second loss in seven games. Linebacker Shelton Robinson picked up a Plunkett fumble and returned it 9 yards for a score.

Dallas' victory over 4-3 Philadelphia gave the Cowboys the best start in their history and was a breeze following narrow escapes against Tampa Bay and New Orleans. "It was our best game this year," said Coach Tom Landry, who watched Danny White throw for 266 yards and two touchdowns in the rout.

In Baltimore, Joe Ferguson threw three touchdown passes and the Bills exploded for 24 points in 17 first-half minutes to take over first place in the AFC East from the Cinderella Colts. Joe Danelo added three field goals.

Houston and Tampa Bay remained winless.

Houston, playing under new Coach Chuck Staley, lost its 14th straight over two years. Neil Elshire, making his first start in three years in the NFL, had three sacks, recovered a fumble and forced a fumble by Oiler quarterback Gifford Nielsen that nose tackle Charlie Johnson of 5-2 Minnesota picked off and ran 50 yards for a touchdown.

Tampa Bay lost to 2-5 St. Louis as Neil Lomax passed for 166 yards and three touchdowns. The Bucs, however, got another of those defensive touchdowns when Hugh Green returned an interception 33 yards.

Rookie quarterback Dan Marino threw three touchdown passes for Miami, 4-3, and burned the 3-4 Jets with a defensive score when Doug Betters deflected a Richard Todd pass to Kim Bokamper, who ran it in from 24 yards out.

Vince Ferragamo's 2-yard touchdown pass to Mike Guman with 17 seconds left ran the Rams' record to 5-2 and left the Falcons at 2-5. The Rams were helped by a 16-yard pass interference call against Atlanta's Ken Johnson that put the ball at the 2.

Blue Pleads Guilty To Cocaine Possession

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Vida Blue, a Cy Young Award winner, pleaded guilty today to a charge of possessing cocaine in a federal drug probe that also produced guilty pleas from three of his former teammates on the Kansas City Royals.

Blue, 34, pleaded guilty to a federal misdemeanor — possessing three grams of cocaine on Feb. 4 — and acknowledged that he had been under treatment for drug addiction.

"Have you recently been under the care of a doctor or psychiatrist or been hospitalized or treated for drug addiction?" U.S. Magistrate J. Milton Sullivan asked before Blue entered his plea.

"Yes, I have," Blue replied.

The former pitcher for the Royals, San Francisco Giants and Oakland A's pleaded guilty to the charge a short time before a federal grand jury went into session today. U.S. Attorney Jim Marquez said last week he expects the grand jury to return "many indictments" in the government's drug investigation.

The charge against Blue carries the same maximum penalty as the charges of attempting to possess cocaine that were filed against three other players — one year in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Blue, who pitched for the world champion Oakland A's in the early to mid-1970s, was released by the Royals on Aug. 5 after his record fell to 0-5. Only two pitchers — Steve Carlton of Philadelphia and Jim Palmer of Baltimore — recorded more than Blue's 158 victories between 1972 and 1982. He won the American League Cy Young Award and Most Valuable Player award in 1971.

Four days after Blue was released by the Royals, Marquez disclosed that a number of Royals had been questioned in a continuing cocaine probe. He did not identify the players but inadvertently named Blue as a former player who had been questioned.

Three other players — 1982 American League batting champion Willie Wilson, first baseman Willie Aikens and outfielder Jerry Martin — pleaded guilty to charges of attempting to possess cocaine. The charge carries a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Sooners Rally After Week Of Adversity

By The Associated Press
For six full days and more than 50 minutes of one football game, last week wasn't a very good one for Coach Barry Switzer and the Oklahoma Sooners.

First, they dropped from eighth place to 15th in the Associated Press poll as a result of a lopsided loss to Texas. Then, star tailback Marcus Dupree disappeared and eventually turned up back home in Mississippi, apparently having decided to drop out of Oklahoma.

Finally, the Sooners were in danger of losing their third game in six tries, trailing 20-3 with just over nine minutes left against Oklahoma State, which had extended top-rated Nebraska a week earlier before losing a 14-10 squeaker. But late Saturday afternoon things suddenly began looking up for Switzer & Co. First, Danny Bradley flipped a screen pass that Derrick Shepard turned into a 73-yard touchdown play and Tim Lashar's extra point made it 20-10.

With 2:50 left, Spencer

Tillman's 5-yard run and a 2-point conversion pass from Bradley to Earl Johnson pulled the Sooners within 20-18. Oklahoma tried an on-side kick and recovered the ball at midfield. The Sooners reached the OSU 28 and Lashar, who had hit only one of three field goal attempts this season, nailed a 46-yarder with 1:15 remaining, lifting Oklahoma to a dramatic 21-20 victory.

"Our team believes in winning," Switzer said. "It was just our time to get some good things happening for us. This is as good a win as I've had in a long time. I haven't had many like this."

Switzer said the Oklahoma players had trouble concentrating earlier in the week because of all the media attention surrounding Dupree's departure. And, indeed, the Sooners lost all six of their fumbles and threw an interception. But they also got 105 rushing yards from Johnson and a 147-yard passing performance from Bradley.

"I don't even want to think about it," Switzer said, referring to Lashar's punt. "If he doesn't want to be here, it's fine with me. I just wish him well."

While Oklahoma was rallying, three members of the Top Twenty lost over the weekend. Illinois, the No. 19 team, remained in a first-place tie with Michigan in the Big Ten by defeating sixth-ranked Ohio State 17-13. No. 9 Arizona was upset by Oregon 19-10 and Tennessee outlasted No. 11 Alabama 41-34 on Johnnie Jones' 66-yard run with three minutes left.

Elsewhere, No. 1 Nebraska whipped Missouri 34-13, runner-up Texas thumped Arkansas 31-3, third-ranked North Carolina downed North Carolina State 42-14, No. 4 West Virginia turned back Virginia Tech 13-0 and fifth-ranked Auburn overpowered Georgia Tech 31-13.

Rounding out the Top Ten, eighth-ranked Georgia held off Vanderbilt 20-13 and No. 10 Miami, Fla. trounced Mississippi State 31-7. Seventh-ranked Florida was not scheduled.

In the Second Ten, it was No. 13 Michigan 35, Northwestern 0; No. 14 Iowa 31, Purdue 14; No. 16 Maryland 36, Wake Forest 33; No. 17 Washington 32, Stanford 15; No. 18 Arizona State 34, Southern California 14 and No. 20 Brigham Young 66, New Mexico 21. Twelfth-ranked Southern Methodist was idle.

While Oklahoma recovered in the nick of time, Southern Cal, another of the nation's traditional powers, continued to slide. The Trojans were held to 130 yards rushing and 146 passing by Arizona State, which got 346 passing yards from Todd Hons and a 253-yard performance (119 on 23 carries, 134 on five receptions) by tailback Darryl Clack, who scored on a 3-yard run and teamed up with Hons on an 80-yard touchdown pass.

"Obviously, we were defeated by a better football team," said Ted Tollner, USC's first-year head coach, whose record dropped to 2-3-1 after the Trojans' worst home setback since 1976. "I don't know how much better, but

Courtroom Drama Snaps And Crackles

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "A Case of Libel," starring Edward Asner and Daniel J. Travanti, is a courtroom drama that snaps and crackles from opening statement to jury verdict, while also making points about an important issue.

Based on attorney Louis Nizer's autobiographical account of Quentin Reynolds' libel suit against conservative columnist Westbrook Pegler, "A Case of Libel," debuting on cable TV's Showtime tonight, demonstrates that freedom of the press doesn't give license to vindictively setting fire to another person's reputation.

The play, written by Henry Denker, was seen on Broadway in 1963, and then on ABC in 1968, with Van Heflin in the Nizer role. Asner, whose character here is named Robert Sloane, does supreme justice to the part in tonight's re-make.

The former star of "Lou Grant," known for his affiliation with many liberal causes, said in an interview that he wasn't appropriate for the Pegler role, "although I would take right-wing roles if (they're) right for me."

In tonight's play, which will have seven more showings in October and November, Sloane reluctantly accepts the case, realizing his career has become financially solvent but morally bankrupt. "Am I dying of success?" he asks.

Yet he knows he and his client will be dragged through the mud. The Pegler character, named Boyd Bendix here, believes his might makes divine right, and he'll use his prose to spray malice at anyone who disagrees with him.

Bendix is sued by the Reynolds' character, Dennis Corcoran (Gordon Pinsent), who has become Bendix' public punching bag. In addition, Corcoran, a heroic World War II correspondent, can't find free-lance work because Pegler and his paper's owners are black-listing him.

Corcoran's mistake was favorably reviewing a book that criticized Bendix, unleashing a string of diatribes from the columnist accusing Corcoran of being immoral, cowardly and a communist.

Daniel J. Travanti is delectably despicable as the snide, smug, self-righteous Bendix who stands ramrod-straight both in print and, literally, in the witness box, attacking anybody he believes has communist leanings.

Before stardom discovered Travanti, in the role of the compassionate Capt. Frank Furillo on "Hill Street Blues," he made his living playing one-shot psychopaths in various series. He sinks his fangs into Bendix, a 180-degree turn from Travanti's recent role as the father of a missing boy in "Adam."

The courtroom sparring between Sloane and Bendix is heavyweight stuff all the way. Because witnesses who could prove Bendix' vendetta have been silenced by fear, Sloane can't prove financial damage to his client's career.

To prove punitive damages, he must show that Bendix acted with malice. How he gets the wary Bendix to cooperate is a terrific twist, made even more remarkable because it's not Hollywood fiction, but the real stuff from Nizer.

Nizer said in an interview that "A Case of Libel" currently is playing in Brussels, the Netherlands and France, where his role is played by President Francois Mitterrand's son-in-law.

O'Brien Funeral Set On Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien, who once joked that if he played one more Irish priest "they will have to ordain me," will be honored Tuesday with a funeral Mass at his neighborhood church.

Msgr. Lawrence O'Leary offered to give the evening eulogy at St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church in Brentwood because "they were friends for years," O'Brien's publicist, Jewel Smith, said Sunday.

A private burial is set for Wednesday at Holy Cross Cemetery in suburban Inglewood.

O'Brien launched his screen career as reporter Hildy Johnson in "The Front Page" (1931) and worked steadily through the 1930s and 1940s. He capped a 110-movie career as a priest in "Ragtime" (1981), which co-starred Cagney.

Marge Zimmerman, who looks after Cagney and his wife, said she could not tell Cagney immediately of O'Brien's death.

"I had to take him to the doctor, who said he was feeling fine," Ms. Zimmerman said. "Then we went for a long ride in the car and I told him that Pat had died. James took it well."

Cagney told her, "I have lost my dearest friend," she said.

Bob Hope said he chatted with O'Brien recently about an upcoming tour.

Says Brigitte In Bad Period

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Brigitte Bardot has resumed her normal activities in St. Tropez after fighting a bout of depression, the latest issue of People magazine reports.

"Lately she has not been in good shape," her sister, Mijanou Bardot, a former actress, told the magazine. "I sense that she is disturbed, tormented and unhappy. I know that she was going through a bad period — that of age and an unhappy love."

Miss Bardot, billed as a "sex kitten" in the mid 1950s and '60s, recently broke off a relationship with Allain Bougrain-duBourgh, 35, a French TV producer. Several newspapers reported she was extremely depressed over the failure of the relationship.

Her agent, Olga Orstig, said the actress hadn't been feeling to well and had checked into a clinic.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ A9852 ♥ Q1063 ♦ A72 ♣ 6
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — Opposite a partner who could make a takeout double, you have a very fine hand — the equivalent of an opening bid. You have a guaranteed eight-card fit in at least one major, but it is not incumbent on you to guess which one. Cue-bid two clubs to ask partner to choose the suit, then raise that major to game. Of course, if partner responds in diamonds, you can then show your spades.

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A. — Bury the book on point count. You have a hand with two aces, one of which is in partner's suit. Now that partner has announced a fit for your six-card suit, anything less than four spades is a gross underbid.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ AQJ98 ♥ 83 ♦ AKQ ♣ Q104
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — You have a very strong hand which has been improved by a fit in partner's suit. A jump bid to show your strength is appealing, but you can't leap to three spades on a five-card suit, nor four clubs with only three-card support. We suggest you temporize by bidding two diamonds — a new suit by opener after a two-over-one response is forcing. Partner's rebid should leave you perfectly placed to decide on the final contract.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ 94 ♥ 63 ♦ Q8762 ♣ AKQ10
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
4 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — You have the values for an opening bid facing a partner who has opened and then jumped in support of your suit. In other words, you are in slam territory. Despite your weak trump suit, you should be happy to investigate slam. Cue-bid five clubs. If partner simply returns to five diamonds, you can then bow out of the auction gracefully.

Q.3 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ AQ104 ♥ 984 ♦ K97 ♣ A85
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A. — If you are looking for game with your balanced 13 points opposite a partner who passed originally, you qualify for an "Optimist of the Year" award. You are in a playable spot and there is no guarantee that you have any better contract. Pass. This might be your last opportunity for a plus score.

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ Q83 ♥ 95 ♦ AQ6 ♣ AJ762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A. — You have the values for game and an almost sure eight-card fit in spades. Nevertheless, we would suggest a jump to three no trump. The spade suit should provide a source of tricks and your minor-suit tenaces could be more valuable at no trump with the lead coming up to your hand.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ 987532 ♥ 82 ♦ AJ3 ♣ A6

No Comment On Illness

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Country music singer Dick Curless, whose hits include "Hard Time Travelin' Man," was in stable condition after being rushed to the hospital for treatment of an abdominal problem.

A spokeswoman at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Pittsburgh on Sunday declined to disclose the exact nature of his illness.

The 51-year-old Curless, whose other hits include "Drag 'Em Off the Interstate and Sock It to 'Em" and "A Tombstone Every Mile," was taken to Wheeling Hospital on Friday night, and from there to Pittsburgh.

Curless had been scheduled to appear at a ceremony dedicating a bronze star in his honor on a sidewalk outside Wheeling radio station WVVA on Saturday, said station spokeswoman Debby Wieser.

Comedian Red Skelton was born in 1913.

FOCUS

A New Holiday?

This week Congress plans to send a bill to the President which would make Martin Luther King's birthday a federal holiday. Contrary to popular belief, the United States has no mandatory "national" holidays. Each state has the authority to decide which holidays it will observe. For example, several Southern States celebrate the birthdays of Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee, while only about 30 states celebrate Lincoln's birthday.

DO YOU KNOW — How many federal holidays has Congress declared so far?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The current national debt is $1,354,037,000,000.

FISHING COARSE
LEIGH, England (AP) — In the sport of coarse fishing, popular in England, maggots are used to catch varieties such as barbel, dace, bream, bleak and roach.

Coarse fish live in murky waters, are mostly tiny and mostly inedible. Last year's coarse fishing championship was won with a catch of 13 roach and one bream that totaled only one pound and 10 ounces.

N.C. Republicans Gear Up To Prove Vote Strength

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While the 1984 races for governor and U.S. Senate are attracting attention, Republicans are gearing up to prove that Democratic congressional victories in 1982 can't be repeated.

Democrats recaptured seats in the 6th and 11th districts in 1982 as public debate focused on President Reagan's economic policies.

State Democratic Chairman David Price said the strategy for 1984 will be to at least maintain the Democrats' nine-to-two advantage in the congressional delegation.

He said the party could move ahead by taking the 9th District seat which incumbent Jim Martin is leaving to run for governor. That seat has been occupied by a Republican for 30 years although Democrats outnumber Republicans in registration almost 3-to-1.

State GOP chairman Dave Flaherty said he's encouraged about Republican chances in 1984 because the economy and support for Reagan seem to be picking up.

"We tend to lose congressional seats in a bad national environment, a bad economic situation," Flaherty said. "In a good economic environment we tend to pick them up."

Some of the races shaping up are:

— Democratic Rep. Walter Jones of Farmville may face his first serious primary challenge in the 1st District from state Rep. John Gillam, D-Bertie.

Gillam, a member of a prominent Eastern North Carolina family, is serving his second term in the House.

Jones, who has been in the House since 1966, has been expected to hold on to his seat and pass it to his son, newly appointed state Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt.

— Freshman Democratic Rep. Tim Valentine in the 2nd District also could face a primary challenge from state Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham. Spaulding has set up a committee to explore the race and raise money. Spaulding, like a great number of district residents, is black.

— Republicans are urging Gerald Hurst, a retired military colonel, to challenge Democratic Rep. Charlie Whitley, who has represented the 3rd District in Congress since 1977.

— In the 4th District, Rep. Ike Andrews could face a Democratic primary challenge from Howard Lee, one of the state's best known black politicians. Meanwhile some Republicans are urging Bill Cobey to try once again to unseat Andrews.

Andrews defeated Cobey in 1982 after a media blitz and in spite of Andrews' drunken driving arrest. This time Cobey also is considering running for governor.

Lee was out of town and could not be reached for comment about his candidacy but Democrats say the former Chapel Hill mayor and secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development has been putting out feelers.

Andrews, apparently anticipating a tough race, is handling his campaign differently this year. He already is organizing the district and raising money.

"I could be, I believe, a better candidate having gone through that tough a race in 1982," Andrews said.

— Republican Bill Hiatt says he may replace Anne

Bagnal as challenger to Rep. Stephen Neal, eight-year incumbent in the 5th District. Mrs. Bagnal mounted a large debt after her second unsuccessful attempt to defeat Neal in 1982.

Hiatt served two terms in the state House. He also is considering running for lieutenant governor.

— Two Republicans are lining up to challenge Britt in the 6th District — state Rep. Howard Coble of Guilford County and former state Sen. Walter Cockerham of Guilford County. Cockerham already has announced his candidacy and Coble says he'll probably make a decision late this month.

Coble said he is encouraged about the race because area residents "tend to vote more conservative than Britt."

— No one has stepped forth yet to challenge Democratic Rep. Charlie Rose in the 7th District. Earlier this year Rose, a 10-year veteran in Congress, considered running for governor but decided against entering the crowded field.

— Republican Harris Blake is expected to challenge Rep. Bill Hefner in the 8th District again next year. Hefner has been in Congress since 1975.

— In the 9th District, Martin's decision to run for governor has left both parties looking for qualified candidates.

State Sen. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, is likely to enter the race next month. Tison, an NCNB National Bank vice president, is serving his first term in the state Senate after five terms in the House.

Other Democrats considering the race are Susan Green, a county commissioner, and attorney David Martin.

Republican Alex McMillan is the only announced candidate. McMillan, former president and board chairman of Harris-Teeter Super Markets Inc., has been a strong Martin supporter.

Charlotte native Carl Horn

III, an attorney in the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, also is considering the race.

— No one has moved to challenge Republican Rep. Jim Broyhill in the 10th District. Broyhill has been virtually unbeatable since he took office in 1963.

— Many Republicans are expecting Hendon to try to regain his seat in the 11th District. Hendon could not be reached for comment but GOP sources said they had no doubt he would run.

Charge Pair With Killing

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A man and his wife were arrested Saturday and charged with killing the woman's former husband in 1978, police said.

Alice Sparrow Gallagher of Jacksonville and Samuel S. Lancaster, 34, of New Bern were charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the Oct. 1, 1978, shooting death of Marine Staff Sgt. Thomas Patrick Gallagher.

Sheriff's reports at the time said the 27-year-old Cherry Point Marine was found nude in the bedroom of the Gallaghers' New Bern home by Mrs. Gallagher and their two daughters. He had been hit over the head with a cast-iron skillet and .38-caliber gunshot wounds had blasted his head and chest.

The case has been under investigation ever since, said Capt. Mike Warren.

"There's not a whole lot of new evidence, but there is some," Warren said. "We felt that we needed to go ahead and bring the case to court."

The murder weapon was never recovered, he said.

After the slaying, the house was sold. Fifty-nine days after the killing, Mrs. Gallagher married Lancaster in Dillon, S.C.

Mrs. Gallagher received a $138,000 settlement for life insurance on her husband, officials said. One policy for $100,000 had been purchased two months before her husband's death.
