Commerce Dept. Reports Rapid Economic Growth

By PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that the economy grew at a brisk 7.9 percent annual rate in the third quarter, following through on the rapid spring quarter with a greater strength than earlier estimated.

The Commerce Department said in its preliminary estimate for the July-September quarter that the growth came from the building of inventories by businesses and from final sales, which covers buying by consumers and government and net exports.

Commenting on the new report, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker said the economy continues to be "in a period of testing" and added that, in his view, similar apparent recoveries have "deteriorated into accelerating inflation and stagnating real activity."

Last month, before the quarter ended, the department predicted in its unofficial "flash" estimate that there would be 7 percent growth, as measured by the inflation-adjusted gross national product.

Today's revised figure follows an annualized 2.6 percent growth rate in the first three months of the year and a heady 9.7 percent advance in the April-June quarter. Economists had said that rate was certain to moderate.

Although the spring spurt in activity was welcomed as the economy pulled away from the 1981-82 recession, many economists have said that growth at such a clip was unsustainable — and undesirable because of the threat such a pace could rekindle inflation.

Today's report said inflation, as measured by the GNP-linked, fixed-weighted price index, is running at 4.1 percent, compared with 4.3 percent in the second quarter. The third quarter figure had previously been estimated at 3.8 percent.

Adjusting for inflation, the department said the economy grew to an annual rate of $1.554 trillion from $1.525 trillion in the second quarter.

Before such adjustment, it was estimated as growing to an annual rate of $3.363 trillion compared with $3.272 trillion of the second quarter, the report said.

It gave these details for the third quarter:

—Real, or inflation-adjusted, GNP increased $29.3 billion.

—Real final sales increased 5.1 percent, or $19.1 billion, compared with 6.8 percent in the second quarter. There were gains in all major categories except

Utilities Commission Reviews Water-Sewer Cost-Of Service Study

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Wednesday night took their first look at the final draft of a water-sewer cost-of-service rate study designed to set rates for water and sewer customers on the basis of what it actually costs to serve various classes of customers.

The study, by the engineering and management consultant firm of Camp Dresser and McKee of Raleigh, took into account the cost of basic facilities needed to supply water to customers, the volume of water needed and the cost of providing fire protection (hydrants and sprinkler systems) in recommending new water rates for the GUC.

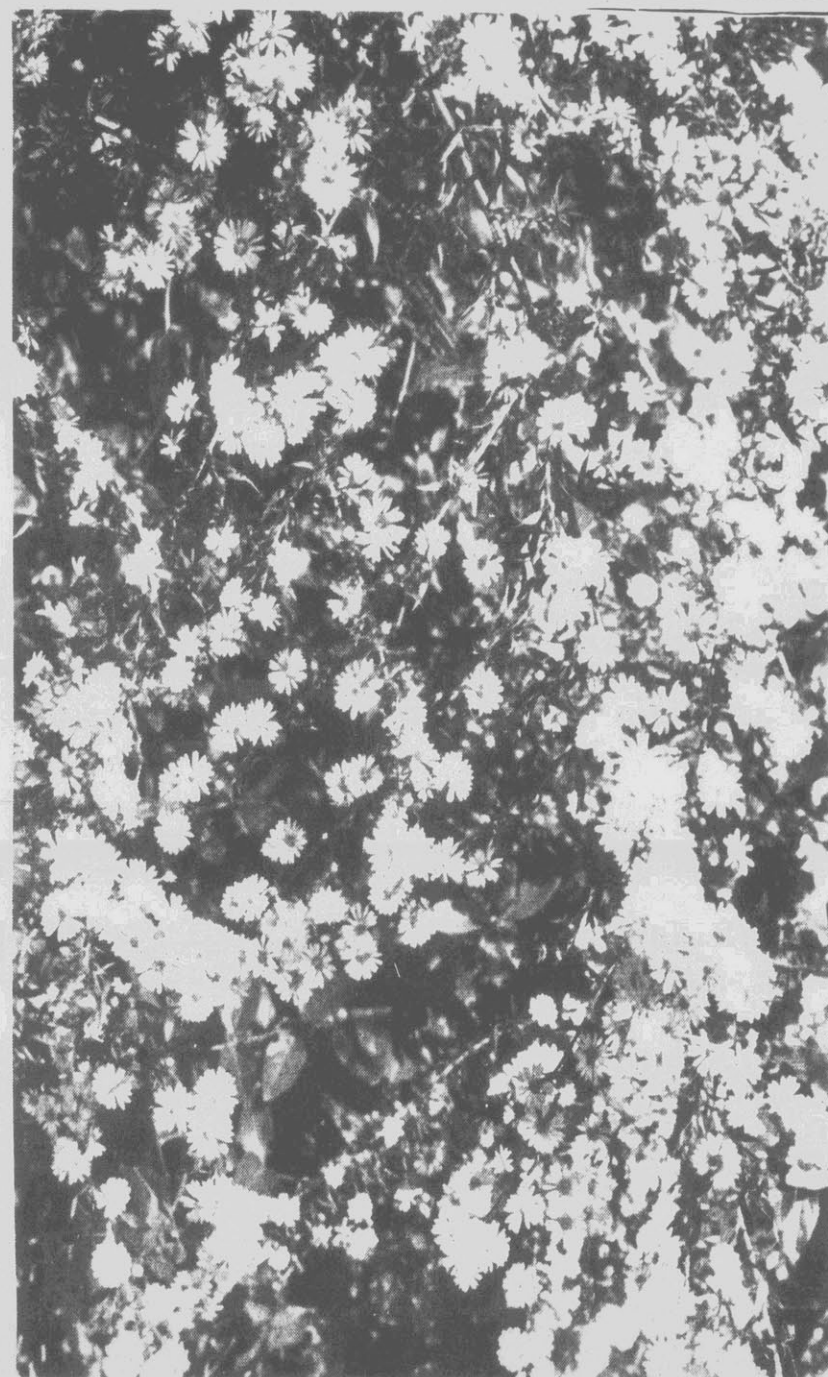

The volume of waste water, the cost of facilities, sewer availability and the cost of treating high-strength wastes were taken into account in the CDM recommendations for sewer service rates.

Basically the study recommended increasing charges for city residential water customers and reducing the charge for out-of-city residential customers, based strictly on cost of service.

While the study suggested little change in sewer service rates, CDM did suggest that a "sewer availability charge" ranging from $2.39 per month in 1984 to $3.42 a month in 1986 be made for the 230 GUC customers who are not connected to the sewer system but have access to sewer service.

The study indicated that residential water customers account for more peak demands on the water distribution system than do industrial customers. Therefore, residential customers, the study says, should pay a larger share of the cost of storage and other facilities needed to supply water at peak times.

The commission will give further study to the report and hold a public hearing before adopting cost-of-service water and sewer rates.

AUTUMN WHITE — White flowering wild asters, one of the showiest of eastern Carolina autumn wildflowers, are now blooming in profusion throughout the rural countryside. Most, like those shown here, are white. Less common in our area is the purple aster. An old legend has it they are foolish virgin flowers, blossoming so late that often the first frost of the season kills them in full flower. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

IS CHASE ONLY WAY?

I just read in the paper of a police chase that has injured one person and killed one. This occurred in Dunn, but has happened several times around Greenville. I do not understand why so many lives have to be taken this way. Why can't the Highway Patrol or police either take the license number when it becomes apparent that a driver cannot be caught without risking his, the officer's and other people's lives? V.B.

A spokesman for the North Carolina Highway Patrol said, as he understands Highway Patrol policy, any pursuit situation becomes a challenge to the pursuing officer to exercise his best judgment as to whether a chase best serves the public he's trying to protect or whether it creates more of a hazard than a protective situation. By law (G.S. 2156 and G.S. 2145), enforcement officers are exempted from speed limits and the yielding of rights of way in emergency and chase situations. However, the law clearly states that the officer is not exempt from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons and is not protected from the consequence of any accident which might occur as a result of his or her situational exemption from the speed and right of way laws.

Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said his department is in the process of developing a pursuit policy. This policy would state clearly under what circumstances an officer should pursue a speeding vehicle and when the chase should be terminated in the interest of safety. A limit on the number of cars to be involved will be included in the policy statement, he said.

The Highway Patrol spokesman and Holmes both made the point that the nature of the offense of the person being pursued must have a lot to do with the officer's decision as to whether to pursue and whether to continue a pursuit that begins to look dangerous. "Someone who's committed a murder or a bank robbery is a lot more desperate and a lot more in need of being caught than someone who's committed a relatively minor traffic offense," Holmes said. "Another difficulty," he said, "is when a person is leading an officer on a chase and the officer doesn't know why he's trying to elude him. Judgments at times like that are harder to make."

Road conditions, volume of traffic and other related factors must also be taken into account by the officer in making a pursuit decision, they pointed out.

All in all, pursuit, even with the best of pursuit driving training, becomes one of the biggest challenges an officer has, the Highway Patrol spokesman said. Holmes agreed, saying that challenges like pursuit are one reason only the most responsible of persons must be chosen as law enforcement officers.

Reagan Will Sign King Holiday Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the country will have to wait to learn whether slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was a communist sympathizer. Meanwhile, Reagan says he will sign legislation creating a holiday honoring King.

Reagan, speaking at a televised news conference hours after the Senate approved the bill 78-22, made it clear he would have preferred something less than a formal national holiday. But he said he believes "the symbolism of the day is important enough that I will sign that legislation."

Reagan's comments touched on a bitter Senate debate in which conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had claimed King was a communist sympathizer and sought to delay action on the bill until secret FBI files were released.

Asked whether he he agreed with Helms about King's alleged communist links, Reagan said, "We'll know in about 35 years, won't we?"

Actually, the FBI files won't be opened until 2027, 50 years after a federal judge sealed the files, which dealt with wiretaps of King's telephone conversations. The files were sealed after King's family sued the FBI over its activities.

Reagan added he doesn't fault Helms' "sincerity with regards to wanting the records opened up."

But at the same time, the president said there is "no way" the records can be unsealed because "an agreement was reached between the family and the government" to keep them secret another 35 years.

Reagan's commitment to sign the bill caps a 15-year struggle in Congress to honor King, who was assassinated on April 4, 1968. The final act was played out before a hushed gallery, with King's widow, Coretta Scott King, looking on.

Although King's birth date was Jan. 15, the holiday will be observed the third Monday in January beginning in 1986.

After the vote Mrs. King appeared at a news conference that resembled a locker room victory party, with dozens of cheering supporters and nearly as many television cameras crowded into a small room near the Senate chamber.

Surrounded by her son Martin III, King's sister

Christine, singer Stevie Wonder, civil rights leaders and congressional backers. Mrs. King said: "We want his birthday to be more than a day of fun and games. It must be a time when all Americans and peace loving peoples all over the world reflect on the man and his principles, which ring as true today as ever."

House Prepares 'Covert' Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan says covert actions are "part of governments' responsibilities," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. wants the United States to "oppose aggression in any form" by halting undercover aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

O'Neill's remarks came as the House prepared to vote today for the second time in three months on a bill to terminate CIA aid to the rebels. An earlier House-passed cut-off bill died when the Republican-controlled Senate did not consider it before the start of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Reagan, in a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, refused to comment specifically on reports that the CIA was involved in attacks on Nicaraguan oil installations.

But he added that "I think covert actions have been a part of government and a part of governments' responsibilities for as long as there has been government."

"I'm not going to comment on what, if any, connection such activities might have had with what has been going on or with some of the specific operations down there" in Central America, he continued. "But I do believe in the right of a country, when it believes its interests are best served, to practice covert activity."

Arguments Begin In Trial Of Green

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Prosecutor Jim Blackburn said today tape recordings from an FBI undercover investigation will show that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green intended to break the law, but not get caught.

Blackburn made the statements in opening arguments of Green's bribery and conspiracy trial. He advised jurors to listen closely to the tapes in the case because they will provide "little windows into the mind and thoughts of Mr. Green. They will show what his intent was."

"The evidence will show the intent to do wrong, the corrupt intent to do wrong, but not get caught," Blackburn said. Blackburn emphasized that Green is the second highest elected official in the state and "only a heartbeat away from the governor's office."

He said the evidence will show Green is "guilty of the sale of his office, guilty of the sale of himself and, most tragically of all, guilty of the sale of you and me."

Blackburn acknowledged that jurors will hear conversations in which Green said no to the undercover agents, but he said evidence will also show that Green did receive a cash gift.

Blackburn recounted the events on which the indictment was based as Green occasionally leaned forward to hear from the defense table.

Blackburn earlier said it may take the state between one and two weeks to present its evidence.

Blackburn declined to say who would be his first witness. He said it would not be FBI undercover agent Robert Drdak who posed as "Doc" Ryan in the Coleor investigation into political corruption in southeastern North Carolina.

That investigation led to the June 20 indictment of Green, 62, for allegedly accepting a $2,000 bribe, consenting to receive a $2,000 bribe, conspiring with Howard F. Watts to receive a bribe and twice consenting to receive bribes of $10,000 a month. He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

If convicted, he faces a maximum of 23 years in prison and an unspecified fine. The state constitution prohibits a convicted felon from holding statewide public office.

Green is the state's first lieutenant governor to face criminal charges.

"I think both sides got a fair jury," Blackburn said at the end of three days of jury selection Wednesday.

"It's a good jury," said defense attorney Wade (Please turn to Page 10)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There are a couple of cliches about riding a bicycle that deserve to be challenged, especially if you've been suckered into buying a two-wheeler during your mid-life crisis by those ads showing a man and his wife pedalling along, waving to their neighbors and having their skin break out with excitement.

You never notice any traffic in those pictures, do you? There is no dog with his teeth firmly planted in your thigh. There are no chuckholes to fall into and disappear forever. They must take those pictures in a studio somewhere.

But I'm getting off the subject of cliches, the first being, "The couple that plays together stays together." FALSE.

My husband and I knew we needed some kind of recreation we could do together. When we played golf, he hooked and I sliced and we never saw one another until we got back to the car. In tennis, he is lefthanded and for 20 years I thought I was hitting to his backhand when it was his forehand, and it seemed too much trouble to figure it out, so bicycling seemed to be the answer. We decided to take the bikes where there wasn't so much traffic, so we loaded them on top of the car using 200 feet of pink plastic clothesline. It took two hours to tie them down, but they were secure.

We then discovered the bikes couldn't clear the garage door, so we had to untie them and do it all over again. It was the worst argument in the history of our marriage.

Everyone has heard the cliché that learning to ride a bicycle is something you never forget. No matter how long it has been since you've ridden one, it always comes back. FALSE.

Bicycles are not designed nowadays to accommodate anything that walks on two legs and doesn't have fur around the ankles. The seats are two inches higher than the tops of your legs, your chest rests on the handlebars, and the white clenched hands are the same hands that control the brakes and gears. It's like being over 30 and having a baby. We'd all have to be retrained.

And who hasn't found solace in the adage that riding a bicycle keeps you healthy and three miles of riding is equal to jogging a mile. FALSE. They don't mention that you have to stay on the bicycle all the time. Spinning your wheels in a weird gear doesn't count. Neither does dragging your leg from under it, or resting every 35 yards.

I think there's one philosophical bonbon that even says if you fall off a bicycle, it's better if you get right back on again. Or is that a horse? Same thing. Both of them take away your desire to sit again — ever!

Dear Abby

Uncle Jack Is Making Problem

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a 15-year-old boy, bigger than most grown men, who still sleeps with a security blanket? The boy happens to be my nephew. I've threatened to steal the darn thing and burn it. Except for this, he is a normal, well-adjusted kid.

My sister (the boy's mother) tells me it is nothing to worry about and it will pass in time. I say it should have passed years ago.

Does Dear Abby see a problem here or not?

UNCLE JACK

DEAR UNCLE: The only problem I see is the one you are making by calling attention to it. If he is a normal, well-adjusted 15-year-old boy, skip it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 45 and have three children in college. My boyfriend is 50 and all his children are grown and married. We've been sleeping together for over a year, during which time we've spent more time in bed together than my ex-husband and I did in the 20 years we were married.

The other night, I told my boyfriend I was beginning to feel "immoral" and I refused to go to bed with him. He left in a huff and I later learned that he returned a diamond engagement ring to the jeweler.

My problem: He has asked me to go to Canada with him on his two-week vacation. Should I go? I hate to lose this wonderful guy.

LITTLE RED IN MIDDLETOWN, USA

DEAR LITTLE RED: I can't blame your boyfriend for leaving in a huff; after sleeping with him for over a year, you suddenly change the rules. Obviously he had marriage in mind, and still has if he's asked you to accompany him on his vacation.

A mature person takes responsibility for his/her actions, so don't ask permission from me or anyone else to go to bed or go to Canada. If you want to go to Canada, but not to bed until you're married to this wonderful guy, tell him so.

DEAR ABBY: Women who experience frequent bedtime "headaches" should know about this sure cure. My doctor-husband suggested it, and it works like a charm.

Relax and enjoy your husband's undivided attention. Lovemaking will make your headache go away. Of course, this applies only to women who really want to be cured.

NO MORE HEADACHES

DEAR NO MORE HEADACHES: That "cure" was discovered a long time ago. The theory (and it works) is that if you behave as though you are well, happy and OK, your attitude can change your physical condition, and you will be that way.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Fat, Female and Feeling Fantastic," you wrote: "One of our most cherished rights is the right to be ourselves, so congratulations. There's nothing wrong with being heavy as long as you're healthy."

That must have been sweet music to a lot of fat people, Abby, but the fact of the matter is, the chances for an excessively overweight person's being healthy are slim.

Words Fall Short

North Carolina traditionally has prided itself as a state that is interested in public education. Gov. Jim Hunt, in the last seven years, publicly has given education his top priority.

But one must doubt the validity of those tenets when students go without textbooks, teachers use their own money to buy class supplies and students do their work with make-do material.

As in other systems throughout North Carolina, Greenville and Pitt County public school officials say they are experiencing a shortage of textbooks, either because of a lack of funds or because of an inadequate funding process that delays the shipment of books until the school year is well under way. Either way, the student suffers.

The hue and cry continues for an improved education process, quality teaching, longer class days and more of them. To use the vernacular, baloney! And if the reader happens to be a student whose speller or dictionary hasn't arrived yet, that means "pretentious nonsense."

We have the makings for a good public school system that can supply quality education on a level with anyone. All it needs is the support and guidance to let it work as it should.

A student without a textbook is no student at all. A teacher who isn't teaching isn't a teacher. A state that can — but will not — correct either isn't much of a state.

As for the textbooks, money can and must be found. Waste of time now for these students means a lifetime ahead of trying to catch up.

Update Elections

After some confusion, it appears that electronic vote tabulating equipment will not be used in the Nov. 8 Greenville municipal election.

Officials had hoped that the equipment could be used on a trial basis in preparation for the elections of 1984.

The change represents a set back in planning for electronic voting equipment, however it does not change the need for moving in that direction.

The equipment currently being considered would cost the county a total of $101,350. The studies of equipment available should continue, with a goal of having the equipment installed for the primary elections of 1984. We must modernize our voting methods.

Tallying The Sales

NEW YORK AP — The small computer business may be in turmoil, but Americans are still buying a lot of the celebrated machines.

By the time the last sales slips are tallied, it's estimated that more than $2 billion worth of home computers will have been shipped this year.

And when many new owners sit down at their keyboards during the next few months to figure their taxes, experts in personal finance say they should be aware that a new tax writeoff could be right at their fingertips.

The Tax Court recently ruled that home computers are eligible for various kinds of tax breaks as long as their users can establish that the machines are employed for substantial business or investment purposes.

Obviously, playing video games on the computer isn't likely to qualify as "business and investment" use. Neither will keeping family food and entertainment budget records or doing homework projects for school.

Even occasional use for such matters as preparing resumes doesn't meet the standard of substantial business use, says Prentice-Hall, an Englewood Cliffs, N.J., co-publisher of tax information.

But if you put the machine to extensive use in your business, or in planning, tracking and evaluating investments, Prentice-Hall editors note that's another story.

For the sake of illustration, assume you buy a $1,000 machine and put it into operation any time this year. On your 1983 tax return, you can claim a 10 percent investment tax credit — in this example, $100 — and start the process of depreciating the computer over the next five years.

In calculating depreciation, half of the investment credit must be subtracted first. That leaves you with $950 to write off as a cost of using the computer, to be spread over five years — the standard period for depreciation of business equipment.

An alternative approach is available to people who use a home computer in a trade or business, although not for those employing it strictly for their investments. It allows them to "expense" the computer, taking the entire purchase price as a cost in the year they buy it, just as they would for postage stamps or paper clips.

The tax laws specify a $5,000 maximum deduction of this kind this year, rising to $7,500 in 1984.

That's more than enough to cover any but the most elaborate of home or personal computer systems. And as Prentice-Hall editors point out, if you spend more than the limit on your computer, you can still charge off $5,000 as an expense and take the investment credit and depreciation on the balance of your total outlay.

The precise boundary line between what constitutes only "incidental" business use of a home computer, and what qualifies as "substantial" use, hasn't yet been drawn by the tax authorities, Prentice-Hall editors acknowledge.

But if you use the machine, say, half the time for business and half the time for personal purposes, you apparently have met the "substantial" test and can allocate half your cost of the machine to tax writeoffs.

In cases of mixed use like this, they observe, record-keeping is essential. They recommend maintaining an hour-by-hour log of when the computer is used, and for what purpose.

This may sound like a laborious process. But perhaps the log could be kept and stored in the computer itself, simplifying the job.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — This may be the "Year of the Public School," but the past 10 years or so have comprised a decade for the private school. While the public schools have come under increased criticism for failing to teach Johnny to read, write, add and subtract, parents have been turning increasingly to private schools.

A Washington-based conservative education analyst thinks private schools may be on the verge of getting another big shot in the arm. In the next 10 or 20 years, says Denis Doyle of the American Enterprise Institute, look for public aid to begin finding its way to private education — most likely in the form of educational vouchers.

An education voucher is a government

WASHINGTON — Soon after national security adviser William P. Clark telephoned President Reagan at Camp David Oct. 8 for a Saturday morning briefing on troubled Lebanon, Reagan turned the talk to his burning concern about James Watt and the Interior Department — a change of subject that would shortly cause alarm for the president's foreign allies and domestic supporters.

"Almost as one," an insider told us, Reagan and his closest friend came to an answer. Nailed down six days later in an Oval Office chat, Clark replaced the fallen Watt, but at high cost. The second turnover of national security advisers in 21 months exhibits presidential disregard not only for the role Clark fulfilled so well but for foreign policy in general.

Reagan's private advice to Clark to "start wearing your Stetson again, Bill" resulted from no conspiratorial power play by Secretary of State George Shultz in his struggle with Clark, though Shultz surely was pleased. Nor did it climax quietly acrimonious relations between Clark and White House chief of staff James Baker III, who actually opposed the move as a bad idea.

Instead, it revealed a presidential mindset that bewilders and worries U.S. allies. Their emissaries here were astonished that the point man of Reagan's national security policy could so quickly be sent to a post that, by contrast, is inconsequential.

But the alarm of America's allies was nothing compared to the consternation of Reagan's conservative friends, particularly in the Senate. Still agonized by the Watt affair, such conservatives now perceive a new supremacy for Shultz's State Department, working in league with Baker's West Wingers on arms control and other efforts to soften East-West tensions before the 1984 election.

They are not alone. From the United Nations, U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick quietly passed along concerns that without Clark at the NSC helm, Reagan's tough positions on arms control, Soviet relations and Central America will be submerged under a resurgent Foggy Bottom. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Central Intelligence Director William Casey both registered similar fears with the White House.

Kirkpatrick's concern is ironic. She sent a note to Clark several weeks ago containing an eyebrow-raising suggestion: With Robert McFarlane, Clark's deputy on an opened assignment in the Middle East, she might serve the administration better if she left the U.N. and became Clark's deputy. Kirkpatrick's move was quietly in the works when the Watt affair triggered its national security chain reaction.

Republican conservatives mounted an eleventh-hour campaign for Kirkpatrick as Clark's replacement. Clark's sponsorship could have installed Kirkpatrick in the White House, but he decided not to choose between two of his closest associates these past two years.

Kirkpatrick's feisty idiom and trenchant policy positions, though admired enough by Clark to want her as his deputy if not successor, are a source of fear in the State Department and West Wing. Shultz, Baker and White House deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver were determined to follow the regular order with McFarlane's succession. They want no part of another strong figure at the NSC who would guarantee more of the disorder that has dogged the administration national security apparatus from the start.

All this could mean faster unraveling of Reagan's once rock-like foreign policy following Clark's departure from the White House basement. A special presidential directive keeps Clark in the national security loop, but that can never substitute for the lack of his physical presence. As Shultz once remarked privately, "When the president and Bill are in the same room, it's not necessary for them to say many words."

To fix a problem at Interior, Reagan has given up more than he knows. Quiet-spoken Bill Clark is telling his friends that "I've gone wherever he's pointed me ever since '66." But despite his own fatigue and frustration, his trip to Interior is one time he should have flashed a caution light to his chief.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Greenville City School Board, Superintendent Blinson, the administrative staff and the principals deserve recognition and particular thanks for their willingness to support the emerging orchestra program by the recent appointment of a full-time orchestra teacher for the Middle School, Aycock Junior High and Rose High.

The expansion of the orchestra position from part time to full time occurred following the opening of school and was cause for increased administrative and financial burden. However, this wise decision will more than compensate for any inconvenience by the benefits which will come to the community, the schools, and most important of all, to the children.

You have turned adversity into advantage.

Political Forecast

WASHINGTON — That was a nice little exchange of artillery fire the other day between John Glenn and Walter Mondale. From an odd quarter it provided a forecast of how the winds will be blowing next spring.

In case you missed these few rounds of shrapnel, Mondale started things by rebuking Senator Glenn for voting in 1981 for the Reagan tax cuts. Glenn returned the fire from the former vice president by denouncing the "failed, disastrous policies" of the Carter administration.

Glenn pressed his point. Mondale, he reminded the whole wide world, was "part of the administration that gave us 21 percent interest rates and 17 percent inflation rates." The only available avenue for abandoning the Carter-Mondale policies, said Glenn, was to accept the change that "was absolutely necessary." Four of every five Democratic senators in 1981 accepted the Reagan alternative. They wanted to get away from the very policies that Mondale "apparently would like to go back to."

Well, well, well! The story almost qualifies as news in the category of man-bites-dog. It is to be expected that Republicans will attack the Carter-Mondale policies — the misery index, and all that — but it is downright refreshing to see a leading Democratic candidate doing the job as well. These are the games men play, and in saddling Mondale with the record of the Carter administration, Glenn is laying some shrewd bets. The weight of Jimmy Carter adds up to lead in the saddlebags of Walter Mondale. In this horse race, it could make a significant difference.

It is interesting to reflect on the role that will be played next year by an actor no longer on the stage. If Mondale becomes the Democratic nominee, as Glenn's attack makes clear, the specter of Jimmy Carter will be hanging around as persistently as a cold in the head. Mondale cannot put too great a distance between himself and his former principal without appearing disloyal. His problem is to dissociate himself from the Carter policies without absolutely repudiating them. This is a nice trick, requiring the most delicate balance, and Mondale may have a tough time bringing it off.

But the departed Jimmy Carter also would affect the fortunes of Ronald Reagan, and unless I misjudge the situation, here the effects could be both for good and ill. Over most of the nation, Reagan benefited enormously in 1980 from the fact that Carter was his opponent. Let us weep with nostalgia. Carter was such a lovely lump to kick around — the prime rate, the soaring inflation, the hostages, the malaise, the tree house he built for his nuclear expert, the whole maliciously wicked business of Dogpatch on the Avenue. Carter was to Reagan what Hoover was to Roosevelt. It was brutally unfair to blame Carter for all the things that went wrong, but whoever said life is fair? In the eyes of the GOP, Carter was a beautiful target to assail.

If Reagan runs for re-election in 1984, he will not have Jimmy Carter to assist him. He thus will have lost one of his greatest assets from the campaign of 1980, but there may be an offsetting gain: Reagan could do better in the Southern states precisely because Carter will not be on the ballot next year.

On this point I speak as a Southern boy. Carter was the first true-blue, Old South Southerner to win the presidency since Zachary Taylor in 1848. Wilson qualified as a Southerner only by accident of birth in Virginia, and Lyndon Johnson's identification with Texas took him out of the old moss-hung Confederacy. As such, Carter was an object of regional pride. He carried 10 of the 11 Southern states in 1976, winning 101 electoral votes, and these were crucial to his defeat of Gerald Ford.

In 1980, Carter continued to benefit from this same Southern chauvinism. To many Southerners, he may have been a nerd, but he was OUR nerd. Carter lost all of the South save Georgia, but he won a substantial vote all the same. In 1984, a Mondale from Minnesota would have no such head start in Dixie.

The evil that men do lives after them, said Antony. The good is oft interred with the bones. So let it be with Carter. He's gone, but in 1984 he won't be forgotten.

School Vouchers May Be The Coming Thing

grant made directly to a student who can then use it on any accredited education program he wishes to pursue. He could use it to pay for all or part of his tuition to a private or religious school, or he could use it to pay for some extra programs offered by the public schools.

Vouchers, like tuition tax credits, are politically controversial both in Washington and in state legislatures around the country. Doyle, in speaking to a seminar sponsored by the Southern Growth Policies Board here, said that almost every education lobby — with the exception of the Catholic schools — opposes them. Still, he sees indications that public pressure will eventually lead to the establishment of voucher programs.

The first indicator, he says, is a performance of private schools. Doyle says recent research shows that private schools are doing a good job of educating students and of fulfilling their social responsibility to integrate along racial and economic lines.

Another indicator, he says, is public support. A recent Gallup poll showed that 51 percent of the voting public supports educational vouchers. A poll of Michigan public school teachers showed that 20 percent had children in private schools — a proportion far higher than that of the general population.

Doyle says the government already operates voucher programs for other services. Food stamps, Medicaid, Medicare and day care tuition credits are forms of vouchers and test programs have shown that educational vouchers are working administratively.

But there are strong lobbies ready to work against vouchers. The public schools fear that voucher programs would drain needed money away, thus creating a dual system of education. The rich would use the vouchers to attend private schools and the poor would be stuck with weakened public schools. Even private schools oppose vouchers, fearing that they come with regulatory strings attached.

Doyle doesn't expect traditional lobbying groups to push for voucher systems. Instead, he sees the parents of private school children and of those who'd like to send their children to private schools leading the charge. These people, he notes, aren't always wealthy. More likely, they're college educated, politically astute professional people. Both mom and dad work to be able to afford the private school tuition. These people can create a lot of pressure in legislative races, at school board meetings, almost anywhere at the local level.

Don't count on a federal system of educational vouchers, he says. Rather, if this kind of change is to come, it is much more likely to come either in state legislatures or in local school districts.

With vouchers, he says, students would have their choice of schools and competition is certain to push the public schools to better themselves.

Plan 'Hotline' As Alternative

MIAMI (AP) — Officials are trying to set up a telephone hotline as an alternative to hijacking for homesick Cuban refugees desperate to return home, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman says.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said Wednesday that Cubans have resorted to hijacking because there is no legal way for them to return to Havana. Several agencies are working on setting up a 24-hour, toll-free hotline to listen to such people's problems, he said.

Meanwhile, a grand jury indicted 23 people, all believed to be in Cuba, in nine hijackings to Havana. The indictments will allow the defendants, 21 of whom came to Florida during the 1980 boatlift, to be prosecuted if they return to the United States, officials said.

Charged With Inmate Assault

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Two Mecklenburg County sheriff's deputies and two Charlotte police officers have been charged with assault following an SBI probe of alleged beatings at the county jail.

The deputies were suspended without pay pending the outcome of their case. Charlotte Police Chief Mack Vines said he would await resolution of the charges before taking action against the two police officers.

The investigation began last August after The

Congress Shying Away From A Major Tax Increase

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON AP — The House Ways and Means Committee is about to demonstrate publicly that Congress will not pass a major tax increase this year despite record federal deficits.

The committee, directed by Congress to raise taxes by $73 billion over the next three years in order to reduce the deficit, indicated Wednesday that a tax boost of less than $10 billion is about as high as it can go.

There is no consensus for a major revenue increase, Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the committee, told reporters.

"We tried to do what's doable," added the chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., in explaining why the committee's proposed tax increase will fall far short of the $73 billion mandated by Congress when it approved a 1984 budget.

Before putting the finishing touches on the bill today, the committee planned to debate whether the House should be given the opportunity to vote for proposals that would raise perhaps $25 billion and another totaling the toll $73 billion. Some freshman Democrats and the liberal-oriented Democratic Study Group are pushing for such votes because they ran for election in 1982 on pledges to cut the deficit.

It's not just the Ways and Means Committee that is reluctant to raise taxes so soon after last year's $100 billion boost. Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has found so little support that he has delayed asking the panel to consider a tax bill. And President Reagan has emphasized several times his opposition to a general tax increase — although he has never made clear just what kind of tax bill he would accept.

Rostenkowski and Conable emphasized the bipartisan nature of the tax increase already put together by Ways and Means. Aides said each of the 12 Republicans on the panel would probably oppose any further increase and indicated there would be less than unanimous support from Democrats.

Most of the money in the tax package tentatively approved by the committee would come from wealthy investors and the life insurance industry. The only part affecting typical taxpayers would guarantee a tax exemption for most employee fringe benefits, ranging from free parking to retail merchandise discounts, financed by employers. The change would have virtually no effect on revenues.

The biggest money raiser is intended to halt cities and counties, colleges and other non-profit institutions from selling their property to private investors and then leasing it back, a process that produces a big tax break for the investors and cash for the institution. The change would save $3.4 billion over the next three years.

Life insurance companies would have to pay as much as $2.5 billion in new taxes over the period. Another part of the package, producing about $1.5 billion, would simplify a host of tax rules on businesses and individuals.

The most hotly disputed section of the bill would crack down on the use of tax-exempt bonds to finance such private projects as shopping centers, fast-food restaurants and casinos. The change would not affect such traditional uses of these industrial development bonds as school and sewer construction.

The change, which is opposed by state and local governments, high-income investors and the bond industry, generally would limit each state to issuing only $150 a year in industrial development bonds for each person in the state.

The bill would extend for another five years the tax exemption on bonds issued by state and local governments to finance the purchase of a home by lower-income people. The Reagan administration wants Congress to let this program die on grounds it gives far more benefit to investors and other middlemen than to homebuyers.

Committee aides said the two bond provisions would raise government revenues by as much as $500 million to $1 billion over the next three years.

The committee is counting as part of its revenue increase a measure, already enacted by Congress, that raised taxes and cut benefits under the railroad-retirement program to bring that program in line with similar changes in the Social Security system.

Submarine Pilot Is Rescued By Divers

ABERDEEN, Scotland AP — The pilot of a one-man submarine working in Britain's North Sea oilfield was rescued today after being trapped in his craft on the sea floor for eight hours, the Amoco Oil Co. reported.

An Amoco spokesman said the rescue effort began Wednesday night when a cable connecting the submarine to an oil rig became tangled beneath the water about 100 miles east of Aberdeen.

He said the diving support vessel Mersk Defender was dispatched to the rig, which Amoco operates, and lowered a diving bell with three divers in it down to the submarine 300 feet below the surface while an emergency vessel, the Iolair, stood by.

Once on the seabed, the divers in the bell entered the water and were able to free the submarine's cable, which the rig then used to winch the craft, known as a Mantis, to the surface.

The cable serves as a winching wire and also carries power and communications systems to the submarine, both of which were cut off from the craft because of the tangled cable.

The pilot then emerged and was examined by doctors on the rig.

"I have been told that the pilot is 100 percent well. We are very grateful that the rescue operation went so well," said Barry Lloyd-Jones, operations manager for the contractors who own and operate the submarine.

The Amoco spokesman said it was not immediately known why the cable became tangled. The pilot of the submarine was not immediately identified.

Darting Through History

The World Cup Darts Championship begins today in Scotland. The game of darts, most likely originated in England in the Middle Ages. Legend has it that rain, weather-tormented archers and spearthrowers indoors in winter, where they kept in practice by throwing short end spears at wine casks. The flat sides of tree trunk sections were also used. It is widely assumed that the corks on the face of a tree trunk gave rise to the modern dart board.

Beep Box In Car Started Search

SHREWSBURY, Mass. (AP) — A "black box" got bumped, the satellites got the beep and a mechanic got a rude awakening in the middle of the night after authorities went on a misguided chase for a missing plane that ended in a Massachusetts driveway.

The box, an Emergency Locator Transmitter that helps locate downed aircraft, was supposed to be installed in the University of Massachusetts Medical Center's New England Life Flight emergency helicopter.

But when Donald Dearie, 26, a mechanic for the center in Worcester, didn't have time to install it Monday and didn't want to leave it unattended, he put it in the back of his car and drove home, said Sara Patten, a center spokeswoman.

Authorities tracked the device to Dearie's driveway early Tuesday, then woke him up and told him to turn it off.

Ms. Patten said Dearie was "a little embarrassed by the whole thing. But he told me, 'At least we know the thing works.'"

At about 10 p.m. Monday, two Soviet satellites and a U.S. satellite picked up a beeping radio alert while circling the Earth, said Senior Airman Carol Hackney of the Air Rescue Center at Scott Air Force Base near Belleville, Ill.

"Usually, when there are no missing aircraft, they wait for several passes," said Thomas Dimilla, the statewide deputy commander for operations for the Civil Air Patrol. About midnight, after the beeping was picked up again, the search began.

The computer at Scott indicated the box was in south central Massachusetts, and two airplanes were dispatched from Hanscom Air Force Base to get a better fix, Dimilla said.

The airplanes' homing devices directed them to Shrewsbury, where Earl Caldbeck and his Civil Air Patrol squadron began a ground search with an electronic homing device.

At 4:49 a.m., Paul Moore and Gregory Combs found the box in the trunk of the car on Main Street, Dimilla said.

"It was in the back of a car with a hatchback," Moore said. "We wiped off the window, and we could see it."

Green Case Conversation Published Today

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Howard F. Watts told FBI undercover agents that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green volunteered to "do whatever you (Watts) want me to do," according to a copyright story published Thursday by The Fayetteville Times.

The Times story contains excerpts of what it calls a secretly taped conversation between Watts and agents Robert Drdak and Brad Hoferkamp in which Watts describes an earlier discussion between himself and Green.

According to the newspaper, the conversation corroborates a document the FBI filed this week in Wake County Superior Court, where Green is on trial on five bribery counts. Jury selection was finished Wednesday and opening arguments were scheduled for Thursday.

The Times reported that the conversation was taped on Jan. 4, 1982. Watts told the agents that his talk with Green had occurred a few days earlier in a grove of pecan trees near Green's home.

According to the Times, the transcript quotes Watts as saying he asked Green whether he would be "interested in dealing." Watts says Green asked if he was referring to "people who deal in big stuff" and later added, "Whatever you want me to do, you let me know."

"There wasn't any monkeyin' around or anything," Watts is quoted as saying. "He (Green) says, 'If you're talking about what I think you're talking about, just let me know.'"

But Watts then quotes Green as saying, "I'm not gonna be dealing with anyone else. I can't get touched because I'm in a position now to go on to be governor. ... If I get caught with anybody, anywhere or any time seen or suspected, then they'll zap it to me."

Watts later quotes Green as saying he provided "a lot of things free." But Watts also allegedly says that Green refused to meet the agents and said he would deal only with Watts in order to avoid being caught by authorities.

"That way if they touch you (the agents) they can't touch him (Green)," Watts is quoted as saying. "I'm just telling you like he and I was talking there. He (Green) said, 'What do you want me to do now?' I said, 'Not anything. ... I haven't been instructed for anything except to find out if you would be interested and if you would help us.' He (Green) said, 'Well, you got it.'"

The newspaper quotes Hoferkamp as asking, "Did he (Green) mention anything about how much money he'd be interested in?"

Watts replies, "No. He said, 'Is it anybody local?' I said no. He said, 'You're talking about out-of-state people?' I said yeah. He said, 'Well, that's fine. ... Well, I assume you're talking about people who handle a lot of money. ... Well, knowing people like that, they reward you well for services rendered.' And that's all he (Green) said."

According to the Times, Watts and the agents then discuss ways to contact Green. Drdak tells Watts he may want to talk to Green directly "because of the money involved," and Watts agrees.

The newspaper says Watts, Drdak and Hoferkamp met in a Raleigh motel on Jan. 7, 1982. Drdak and Watts then met with Green in his office for about 45 minutes, the Times says.

Watts, who has been charged with conspiring with Green for Green to receive bribes, has pleaded innocent and no trial date has been set. Watts this week claimed in a Wake Superior Court affidavit that he never conspired with Green to do anything illegal and that he lied to the agents about his talks with Green, hoping to impress them.

However, the Times says the FBI document filed this week claims that Watts, of Clarkton, knew "the activities of (Drdak and Hoferkamp) were not on the up and up" when he asked Green to meet with them.

The FBI document says Watts told Green that the two men, whom Watts thought were Detroit businessmen with underworld connections, planned to open a nightclub in Bolton. The document says Watts told Green that the two men had "a lot of money" and that "if Green would help them, they would be interested in helping him," the Times says.

Green, 62, was indicted June 20 on charges of accepting a $2,000 bribe, consenting to receive a $2,000 bribe, conspiring with Watts to receive a bribe and twice consenting to receive bribes of $10,000 a month. He has pleaded innocent to all charges.

If convicted, he faces a maximum of 23 years in prison and an unspecified fine. The state constitution prohibits a convicted felon from holding statewide public office.

Tempts Fate With Taboo

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Call it coincidence — or, as Karen Olson now does, call it the "Curse of the Brown Tray."

The Midland Luther College sophomore had heard since she arrived at the college of the bad luck that befalls those who use the dining hall's brown trays. Instead of the red, green, blue and pink ones.

As a reporter for the campus newspaper, she recently researched the taboo — finding that it dates to a time when the college basketball team lost after players used the trays. She also found that women students avoided brown trays more scrupulously than men.

But for the ultimate test, she tempted fate herself, picking up one of the treacherous trays.

In quick succession, she says, she lost her car keys and her date to the homecoming dance — the latter when her boyfriend had to undergo surgery after breaking his jaw in a pickup football game.

As it weren't enough proof of the jinx, she also pulled a muscle and nearly flunked a sociology test.

"It sure convinced me. There's no way I would take a brown tray now," she vowed. "Never. Ever."

Suspect Deaths Due Exposure

QUARTZSITE, Ariz. (AP) — Autopsies are expected to show that four youths who apparently became stranded in the desert during "the hottest-ever August around here" died of exposure, authorities said.

The bodies, believed to be those of four youths aged 15 through 20 who were reported missing in August, were found Sunday and Monday near an abandoned truck in a remote area of the Army's Yuma Proving Ground. A statewide search in August failed to find them.

Sheriff Rayburn Evans of La Paz County said the youths must have walked away from the truck after it broke down about five miles from the nearest road in rough, mountainous terrain. Summer temperatures in the area can reach 115 degrees or more.

Drought Aid Approved By Committee

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid complaints the government is being chintzy on drought aid, the House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill requiring the Agriculture Department to provide up to $500 million in emergency feed grain assistance to drought-smitten ranchers and farmers.

"I for one am clearly convinced that not enough has been done, or is going to be done, unless Congress demands it," Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said Wednesday as the committee voted 24-10 to send the measure to the full House.

In addition to providing feed aid, the bill would require the department to make disaster loans available to farmers and ranchers whether or not they live in counties which have been declared disaster areas by Agriculture Secretary John Block.

The vote came after nearly four hours of wrangling over amendments and debate over costs.

At the end, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, the committee chairman, told department representatives that if Block would make such assistance available on his own "all this would be averted. It would save a lot of pain and agony."

Block has consistently refused to make government-held feed grain available to farmers and ranchers suffering from the drought. A spokesman for Block said recently that there was not enough grain to help everyone who needed it.

The measure approved by the committee would require Block to sell the government-held grain at 75 percent of the government price floor for the grain.

Where use of government-held grain would not be practical, the department would be required to help farmers and ranchers pay the cost of buying such grain from private sources.

The assistance would go to ranchers and farmers who suffered substantial losses in feed production because of this year's drought, who do not have enough feed to cover the emergency and who would have to buy more feed than normal.

The assistance would be available only to help them maintain breeding herds or flocks and their offspring.

The measure sets a lid of $500 million in such aid, both in cash and commodity assistance.

The bill's disaster loan provision would do away with the department's current practice of granting such loans only to farmers and ranchers in counties that have been declared disaster areas by the agriculture secretary.

Killed By Shotgun Blast

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 44-year-old woman was killed by a shotgun blast as she drove along a city street Wednesday, and her estranged husband was charged with murder, police said.

The victim was identified as Margaret Nelson Bullard of Rt. 5, Greensboro. She was a supervisor at the Telephone Answering Service of Greensboro at 412 W. Market St., and was apparently en route to her job when slain.

Police said Mrs. Bullard had just driven through the Laurel Street intersection in the far right of three lanes when the car went out of control.

The car careened out of control, crossed the road and struck a utility pole on East Market Street near North Carolina A&T State University, said Capt. B.L. Thomas of the Greensboro Police Department.

reimports.

Inventories swung from decreases of $15.4 billion and $5.4 billion in the first and second quarters, respectively, to a $4.8 billion increase in the third.

Today's report on GNP covers the entire economy, attempting to measure or estimate the nation's third-quarter output of goods and services and comparing it to the second quarter.

Other, narrower reports showed a slackening in the economy earlier in the summer, including those showing July declines in factory orders and home sales and others showing that in August retail sales fell and industrial output rose by the smallest amount since February.

But factory orders regained some strength in August. And September figures showed consumer buying bouncing back and business firms adding to inventories at the fastest pace in more than three years.

Economists have said that although consumers are not continuing the buying spree that contributed so strongly to growth in the spring quarter, the growth now is continuing on gains in production, rehiring and business buying needed for inventory rebuilding.

The Reagan administration is officially predicting real GNP growth of 5.5 percent from the fourth quarter of last year to the fourth quarter of this year, but some top administration officials reportedly have been predicting that it could be over 6 percent.

Presidential adviser Martin Feldstein has said he expects growth in the second half of the year to be between 6 percent and 7 percent.

Volcker, testifying before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, said that, "on the whole, I believe that the data indicate that the economy remains firmly on the path of expansion."

But he added that "we are in a period of testing."

He cautioned that much of the recent economic news does not differ dramatically "from the early phases of some earlier business cycles that also began with strong growth and improved price performance — but later deteriorated into accelerating inflation and stagnating real activity."

Volcker said it was important that further progress be made in holding down labor costs in order to sustain gains made against inflation.

He added that he was concerned that the sense of urgency in Congress about combating growing budget deficits appears to have dissipated.

"Instead, with the economy growing again, there may be a temptation to try to live with historically unprecedented peacetime deficits," Volcker said. "That course implies great hazards."

Chemotherapy Test Planned

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)

Doctors will try next week to gauge if court-ordered chemotherapy has shrunk a huge cancer tumor in a 12-year-old girl whose family opposes the treatment on religious grounds, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Pamela Hamilton, whose father is a pastor in the Church of God of the Union Assembly, began a third eight-day round of court-ordered chemotherapy Wednesday at East Tennessee Children's Hospital.

said spokeswoman Pat Kelly.

The family's lawyer, James A.H. Bell, said Wednesday he may sue for medical records he says are crucial to a decision on appealing the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Steroids Are Confiscated

State Bureau of Investigation agents confiscated about 10,000 dosage units of anabolic steroids from the Nautilus health club at 1002 S. Evans St. Wednesday afternoon.

According to an affidavit attached to the search warrant, filed with the clerk of court, the steroids were shipped to Mike Harrington at the Nautilus from R&B Pharmaceutical Co. of Spartanburg, S.C., on Oct. 10, and that $2,223 was paid for the prescription pharmaceuticals on delivery.

The affidavit also said that, according to the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, neither Harrington nor Nautilus is "licensed to possess, wholesale or retail" prescription drugs.

A spokesman for the SBI said this morning that no charges have been filed in connection with the case.

Anabolic steroids are used by some persons to help build muscle mass and improve athletic performance, and the drugs confiscated Wednesday at the Nautilus included both tablets and injectable steroid compounds.

Gay Israel, director of the human performance laboratory at East Carolina University, said this morning that research has shown that steroids don't necessarily help build muscle mass and long-term use can be harmful to both sexes.

Israel said a recent American College of Sports Medicine report on the use and abuse of anabolic-androgenic steroids in sports, indicate that there is "no hard scientific evidence that you can improve athletic performance by use of steroids."

While there are "many useful uses of steroids" in medicine, Israel said improper use can cause abnormal liver function and the development of secondary male characteristics in females, and have harmful effects on the reproductive systems of both sexes.

"I'm a firm believer in drug free fitness," Israel said.

The search and confiscation of the drugs at Nautilus was initiated by agents assigned to the SBI's special diversion investigative unit.

Seek To Guard Contracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight union leaders want Congress to pass legislation preventing airlines from using the bankruptcy laws to break their contracts with labor.

Pilots and other union employees of Continental Airlines struck after the carrier filed for protection under the bankruptcy laws and refused to honor existing labor contracts.

Lawyer Says He Believes Alleged Spy Would Help

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A globe-trotting American accused of selling defense secrets to Polish agents feels he "did a great wrong" and wants to help investigators ferret out more espionage in high technology, his lawyer says.

"He wants to set it straight," attorney William Dougherty said Wednesday of his client, engineer and computer consultant James Durward Harper Jr.

Harper, 49, is hoping for a reduced sentence in return for helping federal investigators find other espionage in California's high technology region known as the Silicon Valley, Dougherty said.

U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff denied bail Wednesday, saying Harper's life had been "a mobile one ... and there is an awful lot of money involved." He told Harper there were "no terms or conditions which assure the court of your presence should you be released on bail."

The FBI alleges Harper put secrets about U.S. missiles and plans for America's survival in a nuclear war into Soviet hands through the Polish intelligence service. In one transaction, he received $1 million, according to investigators.

The complaint under which Harper was arrested Saturday said that during a seven-year period, the consultant flew frequently to Switzerland, Austria, Mexico and Poland for the transactions. Since 1981 he had tried unsuccessfully, using Dougherty as a go-between, to surrender in return for immunity.

"He felt he did a great wrong to his country," Dougherty said at a news conference Wednesday. He said Harper "is cooperating with the government so the effects of his activities can be assessed."

Meanwhile, federal sources in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said they were making good progress in the espionage investigation and expected to make more arrests soon.

Dougherty, asked if Harper would plead guilty, noted that no charges had yet been made. Charges must be filed within 30 days to ensure his right to a speedy trial.

Woodruff said.

Woodruff scheduled a preliminary meeting on Nov. 10 after Dougherty asked to continue discussions with U.S. Attorney John Gibbons.

Dougherty rejected the phrase "plea bargaining," adding, "Let's say we will be negotiating a sentence."

He also said the sentence "will depend upon the quality of cooperation. There would be major benefits to cooperate or I wouldn't have recommended it," Dougherty said.

Dougherty said Harper also told him he is "in danger from foreign agents and from other people."

The lawyer said he didn't know why Harper wasn't arrested sooner, but suggested authorities had been monitoring the situation. "I had the feeling the government didn't want to burn him. Then the sting ran out," He said the affidavit indicated the government knew Harper's identity since March.

Bulgarian Held On Spy Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bulgarian charged with buying U.S. nuclear secrets must remain in jail while awaiting trial because "any country that is an enemy of the United States is a possible haven" should he flee, a federal judge has ruled.

Penyu Kostadinov, 41, who has been in prison since his arrest Sept. 23, was denied bail Wednesday by U.S. District Judge David Edelstein, who wrote that "a spy would undoubtedly have access to many exit routes and to places which would afford him sanctuary as a hero and not a criminal."

The New York-based Bulgarian trade counselor allegedly bought a classified report on nuclear weapons security from an FBI decoy. He was indicted Oct. 6 on charges of conspiring and attempting to send defense information to a foreign government.

Kostadinov's lawyer, Martin Popper, argued that defendants in similar cases often have been released on bail before their trials and did not flee.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ruth Glushien Wedgwood argued that Kostadinov would have reason to flee because of the severity of penalties for espionage, including any prison term or execution. The constitutionality of the federal death penalty is unclear.

Edelstein ruled against bail despite a letter from the Bulgarian ambassador to the United States that offered assurance that Kostadinov would appear in court.

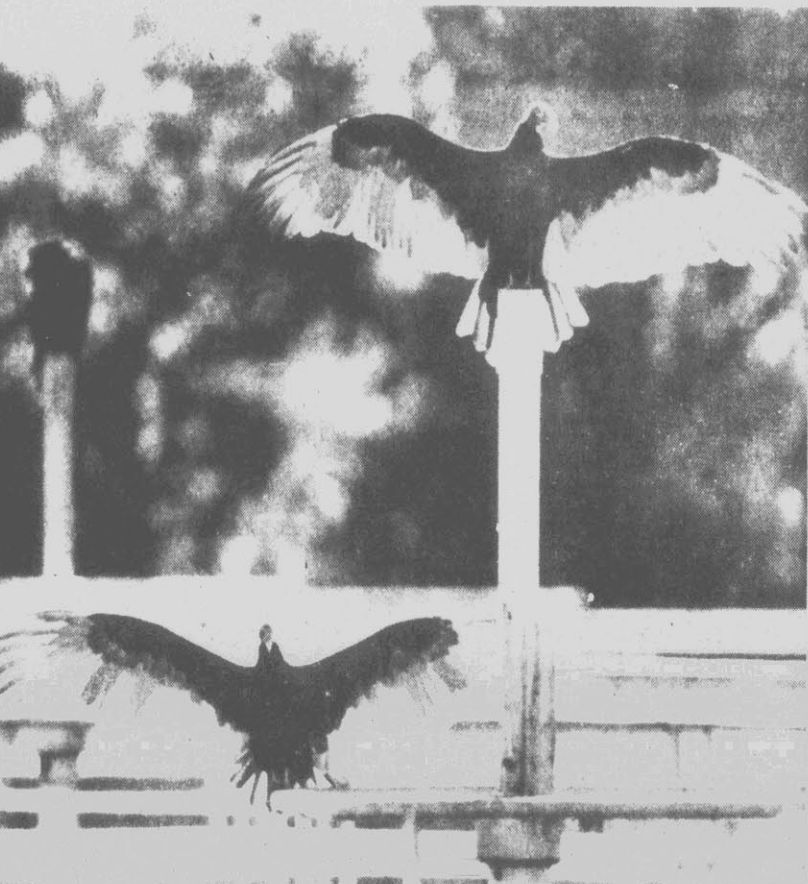

The judge said he had the "utmost honor and respect" for the ambassador's word, but added that the Bulgarian government "has every incentive to do whatever is necessary, including the removal of its ambassador, to protect defendant Kostadinov."

Massacre?

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet troops bayoneted women and children during a massacre of 126 Afghans in two villages in southeastern Afghanistan last week, according to a former Afghan diplomat who quoted survivors.

The account Wednesday, among the more gruesome to emerge from Afghanistan since war broke out five years ago, could not be confirmed independently. However, the former diplomat, Habibullah Karzai, has proved accurate in past reports from the area surrounding Kandahar, Afghanistan's second-largest city.

Karzai based his report on accounts of survivors reaching the southwestern Pakistan city of Quetta, where he lives. According to the report, the alleged atrocities took place October 13 in the villages of Moshkizai and Kolchabad as a reprisal for a guerrilla attack the day before on a troop convoy in which seven tanks were destroyed.

THE PERSON
HIS THOUGHTS

This reminds me of June, 1949, when we established our business in Greenville. We asked the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County to give us a chance to prove ourselves. The citizens readily gave us the opportunity and we will always be thankful for their acceptance. Greenville and Pitt County citizens have been good to A.B. Whitley and I love Greenville as you do. It would be my special pleasure to be able, in some small way, to repay some of the debts we owe to Greenville and Pitt County; therefore, after 34 years, I again ask the citizens to allow me to contribute my business talents in our city government.

Let's continue to MAKE GROWTH HAPPEN. Greenville and Pitt County have such a good mix-agriculture, education, medical, industrial and, most important, the small business person. We have the opportunity to become the business hub of all Eastern Carolina. Our growth must continue to be controlled enough to Insure Very Good Quality. The quality of life for ourselves and our children is certainly a high priority.

Greenville government, it's Boards and Commissions need to continue to expand the base of citizen participation.

As a businessman all my life, I have been involved in coordinating the activities of people, learning a long time ago, one must listen to the view points of each person and each group. However, after the vital input, decisions must be made.

To be a "People's Mayor" would be the Utopia. Therefore, my administration would definitely be an open door policy and all your phone calls shall be returned.

In the following days prior to election day, Tuesday, November 8th, I shall state my thoughts, addressing many ISSUES beginning today on page 20.

Edmisten's Priority Is Drugs

PITT COUNTY VISIT ... Attorney General Rufus Edmisten (second from right), a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, talks with friends at a local business Wednesday afternoon.

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Rufus Edmisten told Pitt County listeners Wednesday he would continue to give enforcement of drug laws his top priority if elected as the state's chief executive.

Hunt Seeks To Ensure Growth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's economy is recovering slowly from recession, but a "new strategy" is needed to ensure continued growth and employment, Gov. Jim Hunt says.

Addressing the Governor's Economic Development Conference, Hunt said Wednesday that government and business should work together to strengthen the state's three major industries — tobacco, textiles and furniture — while recruiting high-technology industry and promoting small business.

"The headlines may speak of recovery, but our people are worried about the economy, about their jobs, about their future employment, about the cost of living, about their kids and whether they are getting the education that will prepare them for tomorrow's world," he said.

The City of Greenville has a Citizen Concern System to help citizens with their questions, needs and concerns. If you need assistance, call Nadine Bown, Coordinator for the Citizen Concern System, at 732-4137.

"Drugs are my No. 1 priority as attorney general and will be No. 1 as governor," Edmisten said during a rushed campaign tour of the county that took him to Grifton, Winterville, Ayden, Greenville and Farmville.

He spoke Wednesday night to a regional meeting of the National Association of Accountants in Greenville.

Edmisten, responding to questions about his views on drugs, said in Winterville that he "formed the first statewide drug squad, and we have the toughest drug laws. If I'm elected as governor, I will ask the general assembly to devote more funds for enforcement of drug laws."

Edmisten, a native of western North Carolina, pledged his support to "the economic growth of eastern North Carolina."

Approves Vietnam Medal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has put its unanimous stamp of approval on a bill which would honor American soldiers who served in Vietnam with medals designed by the Treasury and sold at cost.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the coinage subcommittee, noted that public thanks for the service of some 2.7 million Vietnam veterans has been long in coming. Under the bill, which has been sent to the Senate, the design of the gold, silver, and bronze medals would be chosen in consultation with organizations representing Vietnam veterans.

Village With Long Name Up For Sale

WLLGWYNGYLL, Wales (AP) — A Welsh village railroad station complete with its 36-foot platform sign giving the longest place name in Britain — all 58 letters of it — is up for sale.

Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwlllantysiliogogoch station became a tourist center nine years ago after state-owned British Rail stopped running trains for lack of passengers.

A price tag of 170,000 pounds ($253,300) has been put on the center, which has a restaurant, parking lot and souvenir shop that sells 10-inch-long train tickets with the name of the railroad station and instructions how to say the name without becoming breathless.

The Welsh language name means in English: St. Mary's Church by the pool of the white hazel trees, near the rapid whirlpool, by the red cave of the Church of St. Tysilio.

The name of the railway station was concocted by villagers who combined the name of their village and the twin village of Llan-tysiliogogoch. Welsh words were sandwiched in bedgeline to make the name sound poetic.

The tongue-tangling name helps attract some 200,000 visitors a year.

"Foreigners make a detour just to have their photographs taken by the station nameplate," said Brian Wood, a director of the consortium that leases the station from British Rail.

"But it needs more investment to provide extra amenities to encourage people to stay, once they have seen the name and tried to say it," he said.

The Guinness Book of Records lists the longest place name currently in use in the world as the 85-letter Taumatawhakatangihangakoauauotamateaturipukakapikimaungahoronukupokaiwhenuakitanatahu, a hill on North Island, New Zealand. It means in the Maori language: The hill whereon was played the flute of Tamatea.

Possible AIDS Bridge Found

BOSTON (AP) — AIDS strikes rich and poor alike in Haiti, but few victims in the Caribbean nation appear to be homosexuals or drug addicts — the major risk groups in the United States, according to a study published today.

The study also said it had verified sexual contact between Haitian men and American homosexuals in an area of the island known for prostitution, providing a possible bridge for the disease between the two countries.

The research also found that the illness probably did not exist in Haiti before 1978, and that the epidemic erupted there and in the United States at about the same time.

"No segment of Haitian society appears to be free of opportunistic infections or Kaposi's sarcoma," two major forms of AIDS, the researchers wrote in today's New England Journal of Medicine. "These diseases have been diagnosed in the indigent and the wealthy, the illiterate and the educated, and in people with diverse occupations."

Haitian doctors who conducted the study did not draw a conclusion on how the disease was transmitted among people.

"The most probable theory is the sexual route, but this is only speculation," Dr. Bernard Liautaud, one of the researchers, said in an interview.

The study was directed by Dr. Jean W. Pape of the Haitian Study Group on Kaposi's Sarcoma and Opportunistic Infection in Port-au-Prince.

Most of the 2,400 reported victims in the United States have been male homosexuals or drug abusers, but about 5 percent have been Haitian immigrants who fell into neither of the other categories. Some Haitians bitterly object to the decision of the federal Centers for

Real Estate Agent New Champion Of Monopoly

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Little green houses and little red hotels are prime property for real estate agent Greg Jacobs, an Australian who won the 1983 World Monopoly Championship and then invested half his $10,000 prize in the company that made it possible.

Jacobs, whose real-life occupation mirrors his Monopoly mania, went on a restrained shopping spree Wednesday afternoon along posh Worth Avenue — buying a scarf for his wife, books for his son and stocks and silver for himself — after the two-day tournament ended.

With Monopoly money in hand and dozens of reporters and spectators in tow, it took Jacobs about 2½ hours to spend the loot. Contest rules required it be spent by midnight.

At a local stockbroker's office, the 32-year-old Jacobs bought $5,000 worth of stock in General Mills, the parent company to Parker Brothers, which makes the Monopoly game. He also spent $4,700 on silver investments.

He bought the stock because "General Mills has been very good to me," he said. As for the silver, "I had a hunch that precious metals would go up in the medium term."

Jacobs' victory Tuesday dethroned reigning champ Cesare Bernabei of Italy and earned the $10,000 shopping spree.

Jacob's first stop was Gucci. With a hole in his left sock, he tried on a few pairs of leather loafers, but was unhappy with the fit.

He passed up expensive leather wallets, but laid out $125 for a silver and blue silk scarf for his wife Joan. She remained at the couple's home in Perth, Australia.

Then it was on to FAO Schwarz. He spent $31.24 there on five children's books for his 2½-year-old son, Martin, who's "very keen on books." To quench his thirst shortly after, he stopped at an Italian restaurant for a quick beer.

In the Worth Avenue office of Smith-Barney, Jacobs wished for "a long and successful relationship" as he shook hands with his broker.

A trade of Connecticut and Virginia avenues for the prized Boardwalk helped Jacobs win the two-day Monopoly tournament, beating out 19 international contestants.

Runner-up was law student Jose Vasquez of Arequipa, Peru, 24. Third was James Mallett, 14, of Gloucester, England. Fourth, Luis Antonio Auyanet Farias, 17, of Caracas, Venezuela, and fifth, Austrian Helmut Pfeifenberger, 22, of Vienna.

'Peace Prize' To Joan Baez

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Protest singer and activist Joan Baez accepted a peace prize from the SANE Education Fund on a day she said held special significance.

The award has "meaning for me in that it points to a new future for peace and non-violent social change on the day that Congress recognized Martin Luther King's birthday as a national holiday," she said Wednesday night after accepting the organization's Peace Award before 400 people at a dinner.

Ms. Baez worked with King until his assassination in 1968. The SANE Education Fund said it was recognizing Ms. Baez's efforts to "heighten public awareness about nuclear disarmament and the importance of non-violence in building a more ... just world."

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Wednesday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 57. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 57 percent of your hot water needs.

Minor Injuries In Bus Mishap

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Eight elementary school children were slightly injured Wednesday when a tractor trailer knocked some windows out of the school bus they were riding.

The children were treated at Rex Hospital for bruises and cuts and released.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — NCDA — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is generally moderate for a good demand. Weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,732,000, compared to 1,782,000 last Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks turned mostly higher in morning trading today as the market tried to recover from two sessions of broad losses. Lending support was the government's report today that the U.S. economy expanded at an inflation-adjusted annual rate of 7.9 percent in the third quarter, up from an earlier estimate of 7 percent.

Auto, retail, drug and airline stocks paced the gainers, but some computer companies continued to slide. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, having lost 21.95 points over the past two days, rose 2.13 to 1,248.88 after two hours of trading today.

Advances held a 7.5 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index was up 0.09 to 96.25.

The broad declines Tuesday and Wednesday followed news that Digital Equipment's earnings for the quarter ended Oct. 1 were well short of expectations, and American Telephone & Telegraph's report of a 28 percent drop in third-quarter profit and its need to take a divestiture-related charge of $5.2 billion against income this year.

Digital was off 4 to 68 1/2 today, after losing 27 1/2 over the previous two days. Among other computer makers, Hewlett-Packard fell 1 1/2 to 38 1/2, and International Business Machines lost 1 1/2 to 130.

AT&T, down 1 1/2, Wednesday fell another 1 1/2 to 62 1/2, today and led the NYSE's most-active list.

Big Board volume totaled 7 1/2 million shares at noon EDT, compared with 44.75 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped 0.03 to 220.73.

Rose Hopes To Blunt Fike Hopes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

While Rose High School's Rampants no longer have a realistic shot at making the 1983 state playoffs, they do have a chance to have a voice in which of their rivals makes that scene over the next two weeks, playing two of the remaining contenders, Wilson's Fike and Hunt high schools.

The first comes up Friday night when the Rampants travel to Wilson to tackle the Golden Demons of Fike in an 8 p.m. contest.

Fike lost its first game of the season two weeks ago in a cross-county battle with Hunt, 28-14, while the Warriors were then beaten this past week by Rocky Mount, 7-0. Hunt, Fike and Rocky Mount are tied for the Big East lead going into this weekend's games, each with one league loss.

Rose, meanwhile, broke a three-game losing streak in the league last Friday night, downing winless Kinston, 13-7. The Rampant defense led the way in that game, holding the Vikings to about 30 yards in total offense until late in the contest. Kinston's only score came in the final period and an on-side kick attempt by the Vikes failed, giving them no further chance to win it.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent was quite pleased to have won the ball game against Kinston, but admitted that it should have been by a much larger margin. "We stopped ourselves too many times," Vincent said. "We made a lot of silly mistakes in the game."

However, Vincent was quite pleased with the improvement in the blocking of the offensive line.

"The defense played a superb game," the coach lauded. "We put them in a bad situation several times. We were much more aggressive than we've been in the past few weeks."

Singled out for his impressive performance was outside linebacker Amos Edwards. "He played as well as you could ask anyone to play," Vincent said. "Bill Zadeits did a good job on both sides of the football in the line, going both ways," he added.

Vincent went almost equally with quarterbacks Battle Emory and Todd Martin, and said that this was a planned thing. Emory is still fighting off the effects of an ankle injury against Rocky Mount three weeks ago.

As to which will see the most action this week, Vincent said that what happens in the game would determine that.

He was also pleased with the running of Reggie Smith, who gave the Rampants their first 100-yard rushing game since the second game of the season. Smith finished with 22 carries for 102 yards.

"He got a little blocking for a change and got through the line of scrimmage. He ran hard from there," Vincent said.

The coach said that there has been a good deal of change in the team's attitude following the win. "They've been working hard this week. They're much looser. I think they had really been tense because of the losses. But now we realize that we can be a factor in the league race."

Being a factor in the Big East could come about Friday if the Rampants can upset the Demons. But it won't come easy, Vincent thinks.

"Fike is probably the best offensive team we've played this year. They run the ball extremely well and they can throw it too. They try to control the ball on offense."

Fike runs out of the seldom seen T offense, and Vincent said that they have great execution in it.

Vincent likes the way quarterback Brian Harris runs the team, and notes he is a good passer. "Bernard Smith runs the ball very well for them. He had over 200 yards rushing against Beddingfield last week. Their other running backs are very good too."

"Their whole offensive line is aggressive and big. They block well and come off the ball well. Their defense is noted for their aggressiveness and they are solid there."

Vincent said.

Fike opened the season with five straight wins, beating Goldsboro, 21-15, in the opener, then taking winless Athens Drive, 45-7, before beating another Cap-Eight member, Garner, 28-6.

The Golden Demons then downed Northeastern, 21-6, and Kinston, 26-6, before bowing to Hunt last week. The Demons nipped Beddingfield, 24-17, in overtime. Beddingfield earlier topped the Rampants, 33-7.

"There's no doubt that we are going to have to play our best game of the year to have a chance to win," Vincent said. "We have to control the ball and play awfully good defense. We can't afford turnovers and mental mistakes."

The Rampants return home next Thursday night to host Hunt, then travel to Elizabeth City on November 4 to close out the year against North-eastern.

Rose Girls Are Loop Champs

STANTONSBURG — Rose High School's girls' cross-country team, unbeaten during dual meet competition, added the Big East championship to their accomplishments yesterday, beating out Northern Nash for the title.

Northern Nash took the top two positions in the meet, but Rose came on with a strong finish in third, fifth, sixth and seventh to have enough to gain the win.

Carol Moore of Rose finished third in the event, while Amy Moore came in fifth and Becky Thompson was sixth. Malin Forsberg took seventh place, while Cissy Taft was 12th. Jennifer Byrd finished 14th and Layne King was 19th.

The finish enabled the Rampettes to put together the low score of 33 points in the meet, well ahead of Northern, which finished with 53.

Fike took third place with 56 points, well ahead of Hunt, which was fourth with 111. Northeastern finished with 124, while Rocky Mount had 135. Kinston does not field a girls' cross-country team and Beddingfield does not field the needed five for team competition.

"To have seven girls finish in the top twenty is an outstanding performance," Coach Stephen Thomas said. "I feel that they are right on track for the sectionals."

Those will be held at Smithfield-Selma High School on Friday, Oct. 28.

Rampants Are Fourth

STANTONSBURG — Rose High School's boys' cross-country team finished a distant fourth in the Big East Conference meet held yesterday at Beddingfield High School.

Wilson Fike took first place with a meet record 22 points, smashing the rest of the league. Northern Nash was second with 55, while Northeastern took third with 72.

Rose finished fourth with 102, followed by Hunt with 109 and Beddingfield with 167. Rocky Mount only had four runners finished, therefore had no team total. Kinston does not field a team.

Rose's Paul Bolen finished sixth in a time of 17:48, and thus made the league's all-conference team. No other runner finished in the Top 14, which constitutes the all-conference unit.

Placing and times of other Rose runners was not made available.

GAC Hosting R-Ball Tourney

The Second Annual Down-East Racquetball Tournament will get underway Friday at 4 p.m. at the Greenville Athletic Club.

Events are planned in 13 different divisions, including seven men's singles, two men's doubles, three women's singles and one women's doubles championships.

A total of 120 people have entered the tournament, but oddly enough the defending champions in both the men's and women's open division — the top championship events — are not returning. Jim Bailey of Havelock, who took the men's championship last year, has moved from the area, while Malia Kama'hoahoa, also of Havelock, has turned professional, and is ineligible.

However, the top-ranked male from North Carolina, Bobby Little of Rocky Mount, will be in the field, along with four others among the top-ranked 15 in the state.

Play in the tournament will continue Friday evening and night, all day Saturday, with the finals scheduled on Sunday. The men's open championship, which highlights the finals, is expected to be played at approximately 2 p.m.

Contestants are vying for a total of about $1,500 in prizes to be offered in the tournament.

Reed: Tigers Like Carolina

RALEIGH (AP) — Playing Clemson Saturday will almost be like playing No. 3 North Carolina two weeks in a row, North Carolina State football coach Tom Reed said Wednesday.

N.C. State, which fell to 2-4 last week after a 42-14 drubbing from the Tar Heels, may find similarities in the Tigers' offense and defense. But Reed said he hopes the outcome will be different.

"The two offenses are very, very similar," he said. "It's almost a mirror of Carolina. Defensively, Clemson is much larger than Carolina. Both teams play the same game, conceptually. They are just as quick, if not quicker, than Carolina. It will be a much more difficult team to run the ball on and we did not run the ball well against Carolina."

While the Tigers have been scoring 32 points per game, the defense has also allowed an average of 20 points en route to their 4-1 record. But Reed said the Tigers might suffer from overconfidence.

"They have a young football team. As soon as things go well with a young, inexperienced football team, they relax," Reed said. "You'll find that the majority of points against Clemson have come when they've been far ahead. Those young kids don't realize that in today's college football, you've got to go 60 minutes."

The kicking game may be N.C. State's Achilles heel, however, as punter Marty Martinussen had a pair of 20-yard boots against the Tar Heels and the Wolfpack's injury-ridden punt returning corps is last in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 4.7-yard average.

"There's absolutely no excuse for a Division I-A football team to have a punting game like that. That is my responsibility and that is my fault," Reed said, noting that he coaches the punters. "I don't want to get down on Marty, but it's got to get better. We'd have competition, but we don't have any other kickers."

Hagler-Duran To Be Shown Here

The Green Leaf will be the site of a closed-circuit telecast of Thursday, November 10th's middleweight championship bout between Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Roberto Durahn.

The fight will be held at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, with no live home radio or television coverage.

Hagler is the current undisputed middleweight champion, while Duran is the World Boxing Association's Junior Middleweight titleholder. The bout is scheduled for 15 rounds with Hagler's title up for grabs. More than 15,000 spectators are expected to fill the Caesar's Palace grounds for the fight, while millions more watch over closed circuit television.

The local presentation is the first ever for Greenville and one of two being held for this fight in the East — the first time ever east of Raleigh. The other showing will be at Trask Coliseum on the UNC-Wilmington campus.

Rose Released; Will Seek New Team

PHILADELPHIA AP — Pete Rose took his unconditional release by the Philadelphia Phillies with his usual homespun philosophy, but made it clear he intends to remain in the majors.

"It's the best thing for the Phillies for me to hit the road, and the best thing for me, then hit the road," said Rose, 42, who was dropped Wednesday after refusing to accept the status as a parttime player.

"I don't like to play parttime," said the player who is among the top five in almost every major league offensive category.

"I've been an everyday player for so many years it is hard for me to play three days a week. I'm sure there are some teams out there who want me."

Rose turned down the role the Phillies offered because he wants to break Ty Cobb's all-time career major league hit record. He has 3,990, just 201 short of Cobb's mark of 4,191. He needs just 10 to become the second player in major league history to record 4,000 hits.

He said he had not talked with any other clubs, debunking a report that he had agreed to play for the Atlanta Braves who have a spot in the outfield. There also have been reports he would return to his native Cincinnati, where he played 16 years for the Reds, to finish his career.

Rose's agent, Reuben Katz, who attended the news conference disclosing Rose's unconditional release, said: "Any rumors are false rumors. We haven't had any conversations with anyone. We didn't know until an hour ago what the Phillies had in mind."

Rose added: "It's against the rules to talk to anybody when you're under contract."

He said he would be willing to switch to the American League and perhaps play parttime as a designated hitter and parttime in the field.

"It's major league baseball," he said. "It's a lot easier to play a three or four days a week and DH a couple of days a week."

"We'll just go back to Cincinnati and take the phone calls. Make sure the phone is on the hook every 10 minutes."

Where would he like to play?

"I don't know. I'd like to play anywhere. I'd like to play on a good ballclub. I'd play on a ballclub that has a chance to go to the World Series and the playoffs."

Phillies' President Bill Giles announced the parting of the ways with Rose.

"Pete and his agent and I decided a few minutes ago that it would be best for everybody if Pete was let go. He will be free to sign with any club. Pete wants to play everyday and we could not assure him that he would."

Giles thanked Rose for his part in getting the Phillies to two World Series and one championship in his five years.

normalcy," Wall said Wednesday.

English bases his argument on a literal reading of the NCAA rule, which says an athlete must sit out a year after transferring from his "first" four-year school, and which also says that an athlete may combine his terms in two or more junior colleges to satisfy "residence" requirements of the transfer rule.

The NCAA argued that everyone knows the rules were intended to prevent exactly what English has done, despite the literal reading.

The NCAA argued that it is common knowledge that "first" was intended to mean "last" and "residence" was intended to mean "semester hours" or "grades."

The state courts, with various judges dissenting, rejected English's appeals on grounds that the NCAA is a private organization and that English did not show that it applied the rules in an arbitrary manner.

English played as a freshman at Michigan State, left and enrolled at Allegheny Junior College for a year, then played two years at Iowa State. He left Iowa State last winter, spent a semester and summer at Delgado Junior College in New Orleans, then enrolled at Tulane, his third four-year school.

"You never know what might happen here," the 19-year-old said shortly after he enrolled Wednesday. "There's always the possibility of going to court."

NCAA rules require an athlete who transfers to sit out one calendar year before he can compete again.

Dupree, who abruptly left the Oklahoma Sooners last week because, he said, he wanted to be closer to his Philadelphia, Miss., home, appeared a little annoyed at the attention his registration at Southern Mississippi had caused.

"I would say I admire him more than anybody who has ever been in the uniform," Giles said.

Rose said that his greatest memory of his stay in Philadelphia was the 1980 championship parade down Broad Street. He expressed regret that the 1983 team didn't achieve its goal of winning the Series.

"But we came close," said Rose, who signed a four year contract with the Phillies in December, 1978, at an estimated $3.3 million.

He signed a one year contract last winter, which gave the Phillies an option to renew by Nov. 15, 1983. The contract also called for $300,000 buy out, which Rose described as a "nice going away present."

Rose said he wasn't concerned about money but wouldn't take a drastic cut in pay.

"I'm going after Ty Cobb's record and they're another team) going to cash in on that reward too," Rose declared.

He said he would accept a one year contract.

"When you're 42, you take one year at a time."

The Phillies released Rose, who hit only .245 with 17 extra base hits in 1983, because they plan to go with young Len Matuszek next season. Rose, who hit .375 in the National League playoff and .313 in the World Series, played in the postseason competition because Matuszek was brought up from the minors too late to be eligible.

Rose Has Long List Of Accomplishments

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Some of Pete Rose's accomplishments as a major leaguer:

In the National League he's No. 1 in games played, at bats, hits, singles, and doubles and fourth in total bases.

He led the NL in hitting three times, games played six, at-bats three, runs five, hits eight and doubles five.

On the all time list, he is third in games played, first in at-bats, fifth in runs scored, second in hits and singles, fourth in doubles, seventh in total bases and second in hits plus walks.

He's the only player to have played in over 500 games at five different positions, has missed just 92 games (12 this year) in 21 years. He collected his 3,631st hit to break Stan Musial's NL record in 1981 off Mark Littell of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rose was rookie of the year in 1963, and NL Most Valuable Player in 1973. He was the World Series MVP in 1975. He also holds the NL record of hitting in 44 consecutive games, second only to Joe DiMaggio's 56 in 1941. He has been selected to 16 All-Star teams and played in 15 of the games, the only player to start at five different positions.

He had a consecutive game streak that ended this season at 745 games, 10th on the all-time list. He is the only player ever to have two streaks of 600 or more.

Duo Sparks Pass Defense

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Although the East Carolina University Pirates had won four of their first five games, the defensive secondary was rated as suspect after giving up 1,148 yards passing on 97 completions.

The Pirates had managed just three interceptions out of 160 attempted passes.

But all that changed in Saturday's 24-11 victory over Temple in Philadelphia's Franklin Field, as sophomore cornerback Kevin Walker grabbed three Tim Rordan passes and senior safety Clint Harris came off the bench to return an interception 74 yards for a touchdown in the second quarter.

The Pirate defense has shown improvement through the past four games, but Harris and Walker were confident the chance to show their talents would come.

"Temple's offense is designed for the defense we were in," Walker said. "From watching the films, we were in the right place. We knew everything they were going to try, but containing the quarterback is a big part of defense."

"I knew our defense can play up to the level of our offense."

Picking up those tendencies, along with a little help from Harris, enabled Walker to knot the single-game ECU interception record.

"They ran a bunch of post-corner plays all night," Harris said. "As the game went on, I watched what their receivers were doing, and I was able to pick up on their patterns."

"I came up and forced the receiver out of the route, and Kevin came up with the ball three times — it was the same play each time."

Walker agreed.

"I was playing kind of a free safety," Walker said, "and he punched the receiver to me. Their quarterback throws to the hole where the receiver is supposed to be. When he left the route, the ball was up for grabs."

The Owls came out passing from the start and ran their first 10 plays from the shotgun formation without a huddle. The play had been used successfully by Cincinnati a week before when the Owls lost their fourth game of the season, and it again worked against them when the Pirates adjusted quickly and stopped the opening drive at the ECU 36.

"We knew they were going to try and throw everything at us early," Harris said. "But they were getting worn down worse than we were. Our conditioning showed."

"I think their receivers were a little intimidated, too. The first hit is always important, and we really popped them early. After that, I think they were hearing footsteps."

"When I got around the corner," Harris said of his touchdown return, "I knew there was no one who could catch me from behind. I got around the last one that was close enough to stop me, and Kenny Phillips blocked the only one who had an angle."

The Pirates face their stiffest test of the season this Saturday when they travel to Gainesville to take on the sixth-ranked Florida Gators. Senior quarterback Wayne Peace ranks 20th in passing efficiency, so the ECU secondary will have to maintain its level of improvement.

"He's a great passer, but they have to have a great line to give him time to read the coverage," Harris said. "They run a lot of intermediate patterns, going 3-5 steps and coming back for the pass. At the same time, we can't afford to get beat deep."

Walker has his own idea of how to spoil the Gators' Homecoming day festivities.

"I've heard how good he is," Walker said. "If I could intercept a few of his passes, it would be a big boost for us. We've got to keep the pressure on."

Harris is listed as a starter for the Florida game, but even an All-America candidate has to hold up his end of the defense. After grading just 72 percent after a 21-18 win over Southwestern Louisiana, Harris was benched for the opening play against Temple.

"I had actually graded myself lower than the coaches did," Harris said. "I knew the job I was supposed to be doing. I just wasn't getting it done."

"But I graded out at 91 percent against Temple. I was concentrating on taking care of my job first and then covering other areas."

"Now with the type of defense we've got, we're able to execute; we did what we're supposed to. It just took us a little while to get adjusted — we know it will work."

Federal Judge To Decide English's Fate

NEW ORLEANS AP — A federal district judge will decide whether to send in Tulane quarterback Jon English to play football for the rest of the season.

Judge Patrick Carr took the case under advisement Wednesday after an hour-long conference with attorneys for English and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

English' lawsuit against the NCAA demands $900,000 in damages and $150,000 in attorney's fees.

He accuses the NCAA of an illegal restraint of trade in making monopolistic regulations "in the conduct of the major college football industry."

It was the fourth court to which English has taken his case challenging the association's transfer rule.

English, son of first-year Tulane Coach Wally English, was declared ineligible by the NCAA when he transferred to Tulane and tried to play without sitting out a season.

The one-year layoff is required by the association's transfer rule, and English lost three previous challenges of it in state courts.

He played in six games under court order while judges considered his arguments.

After the state Supreme Court rejected his appeal last Thursday, English watched from the sidelines as Tulane defeated Southwestern Louisiana.

The Green Wave plays Southern Mississippi this Saturday in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Tulane Athletic Director Hindman Wall said he had not read the suit and was not sure whether a ruling in English's favor could force the university to let him play.

"I personally would recommend to our president that he not play. I had hoped this matter would end. I don't question Jon's right to pursue it, but I had hoped we would get back to some degree of normalcy," Wall said Wednesday.

English bases his argument on a literal reading of the NCAA rule, which says an athlete must sit out a year after transferring from his "first" four-year school, and which also says that an athlete may combine his terms in two or more junior colleges to satisfy "residence" requirements of the transfer rule.

The NCAA argued that everyone knows the rules were intended to prevent exactly what English has done, despite the literal reading.

The NCAA argued that it is common knowledge that "first" was intended to mean "last" and "residence" was intended to mean "semester hours" or "grades."

The state courts, with various judges dissenting, rejected English's appeals on grounds that the NCAA is a private organization and that English did not show that it applied the rules in an arbitrary manner.

English played as a freshman at Michigan State, left and enrolled at Allegheny Junior College for a year, then played two years at Iowa State. He left Iowa State last winter, spent a semester and summer at Delgado Junior College in New Orleans, then enrolled at Tulane, his third four-year school.

"You never know what might happen here," the 19-year-old said shortly after he enrolled Wednesday. "There's always the possibility of going to court."

NCAA rules require an athlete who transfers to sit out one calendar year before he can compete again.

Dupree, who abruptly left the Oklahoma Sooners last week because, he said, he wanted to be closer to his Philadelphia, Miss., home, appeared a little annoyed at the attention his registration at Southern Mississippi had caused.

Little 'Super' For Deacons So Far

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Wake Forest may have scheduled "Six Super Saturdays" for Groves Stadium, but if the Demon Deacons look at their Atlantic Coast Conference schedule, there hasn't been a super Saturday there in four seasons.

While there's been plenty of post-game excitement with fireworks, Bob Hope and the Four Tops and the Temptations, Wake Forest has gone into a tailspin, having lost its last three games after winning three of its first four. In addition, the Demon Deacons haven't won a conference game in their last 12 outings. The two streaks are on the line this weekend when Wake Forest meets Virginia. In other ACC games, North Carolina State travels to Clemson and No. 14 Maryland hosts winless Duke. In the lone non-conference game, Georgia Tech goes to Tennessee. Third-ranked and unbeaten North Carolina has the weekend off; the Tar Heels will play the Terrapins in College Park one week from Saturday.

Not even a change into all-black uniforms could keep Wake Forest from suffering a 36-33 loss to the Terrapins at home.

"This was a loss that hurt deeply," Demon Deacon coach Al Groh said. "We have played well against two of the major teams. We stayed with them and we have faith in ourselves."

The Cavaliers ended a two-game losing streak at home with a 38-10 victory over VMI, but coach George Welsh is worried that he is about to face the best passing team in the ACC.

"I think Wake Forest has a better passing attack than Duke or Maryland because overall Wake has better, faster receivers," Welsh said. "At least, they look faster on film."

Demon Deacon quarterback Gary Schofield has passed for 1,337 yards and 10 touchdowns, second to Duke's Ben Bennett in yardage and three behind North Carolina's Scott Stankavage in scoring tosses.

Clemson has a 4-1-1 record, but after escaping with a 38-31 victory over the Blue Devils, coach Danny Ford found some things to smile about.

"We did not have a lack of effort last week and we had a bunch of improvement," Ford said. "Our defense changed the momentum after we had lost it. We played 29 minutes of the second half before we changed the momentum, but we did change it."

James Robinson batted down a Bennett pass deep in Clemson territory to preserve the Tiger victory and send Duke to its sixth straight loss.

N.C. State was in a 14-14 tie with the Tar Heels at halftime before North Carolina exploded and pulled away for the convincing victory. Coach Tom Reed said Clemson possesses a lot of qualities he saw in North Carolina last weekend.

"The two offenses are very, very similar," Reed said. "Defensively, Clemson is much larger than Carolina. They are just as quick, if not quicker, than Carolina. It will be a much more difficult team to run the ball on and we did not run the ball well against Carolina."

Maryland squeaked past the Demon Deacons on a last-minute scoring pass from Boomer Esiason to Sean Sullivan. So far, the fourth quarter seems to be Maryland's most productive.

Will Sue McEnroe

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A high school teacher, claiming John McEnroe verbally abused him and then threw sawdust in his face at the U.S. Open, has filed a $6 million lawsuit against the tennis star.

Chris Schneider, a teacher and also a high school varsity basketball coach, said he had a court-side seat at the August match and was supporting McEnroe's opponent, Trey Wiltke.

"I was cheering and applauding for Trey Wiltke and only at the appropriate times and not when John was serving," Schneider said by telephone Wednesday. "He said to me, 'Are you going to cheer for my opponent all afternoon?' and I said, 'I'm working on it.'"

Schneider, in his suit filed Monday in state Supreme Court in Nassau County, said McEnroe responded with an epithet during the first-round match and "it escalated from there," Schneider said. McEnroe challenged him to fight and then threw sawdust in his face.

They have outscored opponents 67-20 in the period, while giving up a 41-17 edge in the third period.

Esiason has already set Maryland records for touchdown responsibility and total offensive plays. He is a 54 percent passer, with a high of 293 yards against Pittsburgh earlier this season.

Duke has not beaten Maryland since a 20-14 triumph in 1972 and coach Steve Sloan is worried about his chances this week because of Esiason.

"He's real big and strong," Sloan said. "And he has a great arm. He can run, maneuver and he is very dangerous scrambling and he can make big plays."

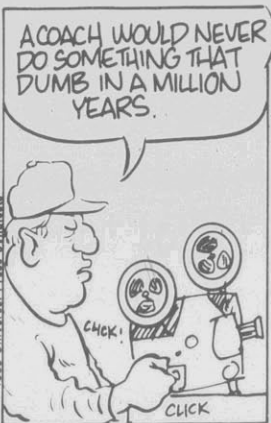

Last week, Georgia Tech had fifth-ranked Auburn on the ropes before faltering in the fourth period and losing 31-14 for its fifth loss in six games. The Volunteers sent Alabama tumbling to the 20th position in the college football poll after pulling off the 41-34 upset in Birmingham.

Australia's Vietnam War Veterans Also Neglected

By ARLENE LEVINSON
Associated Press Writer
SYDNEY, Australia AP — On a desolate patch of ground in the gray and dusty suburb of Granville stands a reminder of Australia's contribution to the Vietnam War.

There, behind a veterans' hall, a rough granite boulder bears a simple inscription on a tarnished metal plaque — "To those who died and those who suffered as a result of the Vietnam War 1962-1972."

It is a lonely memorial to the 47,000 Australian troops and military personnel who served in Vietnam. Nearly 500 died and 2,398 were wounded, fighting alongside Americans who lost 58,655 killed and 155,149 wounded.

For almost 10 years, no one wanted to hear from the bitterly confused young men who had fought there. Now that has changed, partly because of a rock band called Redgum and its hit single, "I Was Only Nineteen."

The mournful folk-rock anthem to Australians who fought in Vietnam topped the music charts earlier this year. Written by Redgum member John Schumann, it goes:

"And can you tell me, doctor, why I still can't get to sleep."

"And nighttime's just a jungle dark and a barking mob."

"And what's this rash that comes and goes, can you tell me what it means?"

"God help me, I was only nineteen."

"We've got guys whose wives were demonstrating against the war while they were fighting it," said Phill Thompson, national president of the 9,000-member Vietnam Veterans' Association of Australia. "We have one bloke whose father hasn't spoken to him since."

Some of their problems are similar to the problems of American Vietnam veterans — depression, insomnia, alienation and fear about possible health damage from exposure to chemical herbicides and defoliants such as Agent Orange.

But there was one crucial difference, veterans say.

"The Australians have suffered almost from a lack of identity," said former U.S. Marine and Vietnam veteran Phil Bacon of Shelburne, Vt., who now lives in Sydney with his Australian wife. "It was not really their war. They were never given the real credit they should have gotten."

Australia entered the war in 1965 when Prime Minister Robert Menzies announced he would send combat troops to Vietnam at the request of the South Vietnamese government. Yet the public long suspected that the United States had pressured its loyal ally into the conflict.

A decade later, while going through U.S. documents, Australian journalist Evan Whitton, an assistant editor of the National Times, wrote that he found the reverse was true.

"The weight of the evi-

VIETNAM VETS — Australian soldiers are shown boarding a ship bound for Vietnam in 1966. Nearly 500 Australians died and 2,398 were wounded fighting beside Americans during the war and for many years no one wanted to hear from the confused young men who had fought there. (AP Laserphoto)

dence, Whitton said, "indicates that Menzies judged the U.S. and Australia should go into war and had no intention of being impeded by any discussion to the contrary." Staunch defenders of Menzies, who died in 1978, accused Whitton of bias but there was no denial or dispute with his assertion that the Australian public had been fooled. But even public reaction was muted. By 1975, most Australians wanted to put the war behind them.

The country's role in the conflict actually began in 1962 when it sent 30 military advisers to train South Vietnamese forces. It ended 10 years later when newly elected Prime Minister Gough Whitlam fulfilled a campaign pledge and brought the last Australians home.

For many men it was too late.

Before he was a soldier, Bob Gibson was a sheep shearer in the outback. Fourth-generation Australian, grandson of two World War I veterans, Gibson scarcely flinched when he was drafted in 1967 at the age of 20.

"I'd watched it on TV. I thought, well, you know, it's fighting communism. What I imagined and what it was like, was like chalk and cheese," he said.

When his 12-month tour ended, Gibson eagerly returned to his country town and his shears. But after six months he abandoned both. The sweat and stress of the work made his skin break out in strange rashes, he said. Burning blisters left scars.

"I did something I thought I'd never do — move to the city to survive," he said. At 37, Gibson is a property researcher for the government.

Jim Papandreas, 33, welcomed his call up in 1970. Born to Cypriot immigrants, he thought the war was his chance to negate the racial taunts of his childhood. "I had this thing about proving I was a real Australian."

Papandreas came home in turmoil. When he sought a physician's referral to get psychiatric help, he was told "You don't have problems. You're an angry man."

A turnabout in public understanding began in 1979 with the founding of the Vietnam Veterans' Association of Australia.

The organization induced the government to investigate purported effects of exposure to Agent Orange — an inquiry is under way — and spurred establishment of the federal Vietnam Veterans' Counseling Service in 1982. "I Was Only Nineteen" is the group's official song.

Gibson helped found the association. Last year he toured the United States, visiting American veterans of the war.

In Westbury, N.Y., he was on hand for a parade honoring Vietnam veterans. The town's outpouring of affection awed him.

"I've never seen guys so proud in all my life," he said. "I hope someday we can have something like that here."

Rare Find

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — An Austrian beachcomber found a well-preserved human skull between 150,000 and 300,000 years old along the shore of Lake Turkana in northern Kenya, a top paleontologist says.

Richard E. Leakey, director of the National Museums of Kenya and an expert on human origins, said Tuesday the skull is one of the few fossils of man's ancestors found from the period.

Condo On Little Sugar Mountain Greet First Tenants

BANNER, E.K. N.C. AP

The condominium complex that triggered North Carolina's new ridge law has sold all of its finished units, thanks in part to its position as the only in-story development above the skyline.

As owners of many of the Sugar Top units on Little Sugar Mountain moved in Wednesday, developers said they had no hard feelings about the law to limit high-rise construction on mountain ridges.

"We're not bitter about it," said Don Tomlin of Columbia, S.C., president of U.S. Capital Corp. "People perceive value where there will be only one."

The units, priced originally at around $70,000 each, are selling for $140,000. Resort Investment Corp. sales manager Byron Rosbrugh cited construction cost increases for some of the markup, but acknowledged that the complex's unique status boosted the price.

All of the completed 240 units have been sold, mostly to out-of-state investors, as have a fourth of the 80 units still on the drawing board, Rosbrugh said.

U.S. Capital Corp. of Columbia announced plans to construct all 320 units well before the battle for a statewide ridgetop development regulation began in the Legislature last winter. Therefore it is exempt from the law's provisions.

Beside the Ridge Law movement, the complex has met several other hurdles between drawing board and drapes. Original plans called for a five-story wood-and-steel building. Because of weather conditions atop the mountain — hurricane-force winds included — the plans were changed to build a 10-story concrete high-rise.

S&W Construction Co., the original contractor, began construction on Sugar Top early in 1982, but folded this year. Fireman's Fund Bonding Co. paid off outstanding debts and brought in L.T. Cox Construction Co. of Sanford, who hired new subcontractors to finish the job.

Avery County residents continue to object to the structure, although the property tax revenues and jobs it will generate should become a visible boost to the county.

Besides the obvious intrusion on the landscape, the complex is a hazard, say local people. It is two miles from the main highway — N.C. 194 — and the last several hundred yards of its road are on a steep grade. Emergency vehicles, as well as residents' cars, may have difficulty reaching the building in unpredictable mountain weather, they say. Fire, especially, worries local officials, who note that none of the county's fire departments are equipped to fight fires in a building that tall.

"It is completely fireproof," Rosbrugh said of the building Wednesday, noting that concrete and steel will not burn.

The building is equipped with a sprinkler system, alarm system and emergency public address system.

Avery County Board of Commissioners, acting on the recommendation of 100 irate citizens at a public hearing, passed a moratorium in March on all high-rise construction in the county in anticipation of a state Ridge Law. The moratorium has been extended until January, pending state guidelines on enforcement of the Ridge Law and the actions of neighboring Watauga County, which may permanently restrict all high-rise construction.

Ask Resignation By School Board

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. AP

Polk County residents have asked the county board of education to ask school board members to resign because they backed an experiment to extend the school year.

When you campaigned, each one of you stated that you campaigned on a platform to eliminate politics from a non-partisan board — and the biggest thing each and every one of you ran on was to strengthen communications with the people. Norman Morgan, spokesman for the Students Defense League, told the board Tuesday. "We feel like the way you handled extended year extended day, you failed to meet the platform you were elected on."

The experimental program in Polk and Halifax counties is designed to improve student performances by adding 20 minutes to each school day and 20 days to the school year.

"I hope that you will take them, the petitions, home and go over them name by name and recognize your friends, your neighbors, your fellow church members, your families and so forth that have signed these petitions," Morgansaid.

Neither Superintendent James Benfield nor the five Polk County Board of Education members have any intention of resigning. And board member Phyllis Crain said a dispute over one administrative decision is not sufficient to warrant such action.

"I don't think anyone can doubt the tremendous progress that has been made by this board over the last three years in education in Polk County," she said.

"We're having a fight in the family right now, and I think the schools are the ones that are losing," said board member Kenneth Williams. "One of the biggest gripes I've heard is that people feel like they're not being represented, so we're going to have to be more careful about that. But still, we as representatives have to do the best we can for the schools. It's a hard road to travel."

'Missing' Art Works Found

CHICAGO, AP

Mayor Harold Washington sent out the alarm: $10,000 worth of lithographs were missing Nov. 11 of the art works have been discovered in a most unusual place — former Mayor Jane Byrne's apartment building.

Jim McMullen, husband of the former mayor, said he was rummaging around the couple's storage vault Tuesday looking for his winter clothes when he ran across 11 of the 31 missing lithographs.

Real estate tycoon Arthur Rubloff said he paid $1,000 each for the turn-of-the-century scenes before giving them to the city as a gift.

Mrs. Byrne has said the lithographs were given to her as a personal gift, but said Tuesday she was relinquishing all claim.

My taste in art doesn't run along those lines, anyway, she said.

Mrs. Byrne, who lost February's Democratic primary to the 61-year-old Washington, said the lithographs must have been put in the box by movers who transferred her belongings from City Hall to the apartment building.

The Recreation and Parks Department has a variety of arts and crafts activities planned for the Fall. Call 752-4137 for more information.

Israeli-Formed Shiite Militias Concerning Lebanon

By EILEEN ALT POWELL,
Associated Press Writer

JOUAYA, Lebanon (AP) — With help from Israel, Haidar Dayekh has expanded his role in this small Shiite Moslem village from gas station owner to commander of its latest militia, what the Israelis call a "home guard."

Dayekh, who likes to call himself by the code name Abu Hassan, insists his men will bring security to this town of several thousand in the ragged hills of south-central Lebanon.

"When the Lebanese government can't provide protection for this area, when the United Nations can't protect us, we are here to protect our people," he said in an interview at his base camp.

But, in fact, the new "home guards" look very much like the militias that have been operating in southern Lebanon for years, setting up checkpoints to stop cars and levy "taxes," and in general, raising fears among citizens that the wrong word of deed can lead to trouble.

In many cases, even the characters are the same, men who have been in various militias over the years. Dayekh, for instance, had fought before with three other militias, including one backed by the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Lebanon's Maronite Christians are worried that the Israelis are creating a new army of Shiite Moslems, the largest religious sect in Lebanon.

The recognized Shiite religious leader is Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran. Some Lebanese Shiites are pro-Khomeini but others opposed him. The issue, however, is not one of great magnitude in Lebanon and Khomeini appears not to have any great influence.

Israeli officials estimate they've recruited 1,200 Shiites into home guards in about 100 villages south of the Israeli army's defense line along the Awali River. They say they want the network to become a buffer, enabling Israel's army eventually to withdraw from Lebanon.

The Israelis said in a recent statement they are helping the guard units "on a carefully controlled basis." The guards' purpose, the statement added, is "to maintain law and order and to prevent terrorists re-infiltrating."

Sources in southern Lebanon who asked not to be named said that on the basis of the eight new militias they've spotted in and around the port city of Tyre, many of the men are, like Kayekh, veterans of other militias and other alliances.

Some of the groups are made up of only eight or 10 men, the sources said.

Dayekh, whose base camp on the outskirts of Jouaya sits in the shadow of an Israeli headquarters building, denies that there are plans for a new Moslem army.

"This is not a religious revolution," he said. "We work under the Lebanese flag."

Dayekh added that fears the PLO guerrillas "and other terrorists and infiltrators" may return prompted formation of his guard unit.

He said the villagers initially had accepted Palestinians who fled Israeli-occupied territory as friends.

"But they turned on us," Dayekh said, pointing to the scars of five bullet wounds he said were inflicted by PLO gunmen. "They killed five men here, in this village."

The unit's first effort at self-protection has been to post a checkpoint on the road into town. Motorists are stopped and asked their itinerary before being allowed passage.

Dayekh said his men are "volunteers," supporting themselves with civilian jobs. However, sources who declined to be identified said that most militiamen were earning about 1,600 Lebanese pounds ($320) a month for home guard activities.

At least one unit is using its checkpoint to raise money. Trucks passing through a militia roadblock near Ras al-Bayyada on the coastal highway south of Tyre are being "taxed" 50 to 700 Lebanese pounds ($10 to $140) for carrying food, beverages, and various other commodities.

There also have been reports that special "duties" are being levied at the ports in nearby Tyre and Sidon to cover militia expenses.

Concern over the presence of the home guard units extends beyond the Christians.

Nabih Berri, leader of the dominant Shiite Moslem militia Amal and a long-time foe of Israel, and Maj. Saad Haddad, Israel's militia-leader ally in southern Lebanon, both have complained about the new units.

They are a thorny problem, too, for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, made up of soldiers of 10 countries sent to southern Lebanon in 1978 to end a three-month Israeli invasion and e of armed forces, the U.N. force has flanked the new home guard checkpoints with checkpoints of its own. At Jouaya, a French Interim Force contingent prohibits the guard unit from moving outside the checkpoint with their weapons.

Armed militiamen are, however, permitted to travel for training or other maneuvers in the company of the Israeli army forces that occupy the area.

Timur Goksel, chief U.N. spokesman in Lebanon, said Israel argues that militias are the precursor of the regional security force that Lebanon promised to provide as part of the May 17 troop withdrawal agreement with Israel.

Beware the Vitamin Bores

My family are all pill and vitamin takers. They say that the vitamins pick them up and give them energy. They also feel that vitamins are the answer to everybody's medical problems.

So far I have been able to resist their pressure. Sitting down to dinner with them is a whole ritual and discussion about vitamins.

I won't let them capture me but I want to know how you feel about this. I am 22 years old. — Miss P.G., W.Va. Dear Miss G.:

I, too, have met vitamin bores whose lives are dominated by the frequency, the number and the amounts of vitamins they take. I had dinner recently and heard one such vitamin expert expound on the vitamin deficiencies in the food he was served and prompted him to supplement it with vitamins at the dinner table.

The world, its violence, its confusion, nuclear energy, atomic warheads, book reviews and the opera were all swept aside by the active discussion of vitamins. Truly a bore.

I know many people who insist that they cannot get through a day's work without an injection of vitamin B-12. There are others who are certain that their stamina is depleted when they do not maintain a constant intake of a wide variety of vitamins.

Personally I have found in my years of medical practice that the only way I can maintain my own energy level is by not getting involved in vitamin discussions with patients who take the vitamin concept to an extreme.

A well-balanced meal can supply enough nourishment, vitamins and minerals to supply the body's needs. Only in instances where it has been definitely established that there is a specific vitamin deficiency in the diet is there a need for massive supplementary vitamins. This may occur in the elderly, the infirm, the undernourished and in those who have specific diseases such as pernicious anemia.

I do allow that for those who are in good health and are eating well-balanced meals, a simple all purpose vitamin pill taken daily can do no harm and in fact may do some good.

For those who make a fetish of vitamins, they might be interested in a survey made by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The study pointed out that:

1. Three-quarters of the public that was studied falsely believed that vitamin pills provided more pep and energy.

2. Twenty-six percent used expensive nutritional supplements without a physician's advice.

3. Although their disorders were never diagnosed by a physician, 12 percent of those interviewed reported that they were taking vitamins for arthritis, hemorrhoids, heart trouble, and high blood pressure that may never have existed.

Vitamins are excellent as a supplement. Vitamins are purposeful when used for a specific condition. Vitamins should be taken to supplement a diet when a deficiency exists.

But vitamins are not the total answer to all of man's ills. The numerous "schools" that suggest enormous dosages of vitamins must be viewed with skepticism. For many of the vitamins in such massive doses are dangerous rather than beneficial.

THE OLD WAY — A majority of farmers today bale peanut hay in large circular rolls. Some farmers, however, prefer the smaller, rectangular bales long in use. Frank Savage, a farmer in the Martin County village of

HOW ABOUT SOME HELP? — A record rainstorm hit West Texas with 6.1 inches of rain in the last twenty-four hours in Lubbock. Here Chuck Harrington uses the resources available to him to phone for help after Jesse Jackson May Announce In 'N. C.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a graduate of North Carolina A&T State University, says he may choose North Carolina as the place to officially announce as the first black to seek the Democratic nomination for president.

"My roots are here and North Carolina typifies what I think is going on in this country," he told N.C. A&T students Wednesday. "If we don't make the initial announcement here, it certainly would be one of our first steps."

Jackson urged about 1,000 students to get involved in the 1984 campaign, saying racism still finds its way into public policy, but in more subtle ways than before the civil rights legislation of the 1960s.

"They now use gerrymandering," he said. "They now use annexation — we come to bat, they move the fence back. They use at-large elections."

Jackson said blacks should go to court to fight the second-primary system in North Carolina and other Southern states. The General Assembly this year rejected efforts to revise or eliminate second primaries.

In an address Tuesday night at North Carolina Central University in Durham, Jackson said he wanted to be sure there was enough money to run a campaign before announcing for president.

He said he would have an announcement by the end of this month.

"It's sort of an amber color, not quite a green light yet," Jackson said when asked which way he was leaning. "We still have a few more things to check out, but we are definitely in the last stages of the decision-making process."

Although the Democratic field is already crowded with seven candidates, including front runners Walter Mondale and John Glenn, Jackson said he believes he can win.

"If we can get everything together, I'm convinced that we have the numbers to win," he said.

Confession Comes Late

POULTNEY, Vt. (AP) — Mary North Kimball's father was right when he said he could swipe an iron bellstriker and get away with it, as long as no one squealed.

But, 131 years after the crime, his 90-year-old daughter has fessed up.

"I think it's terrific. It's honesty and integrity and all those kinds of things winning out," said Glenn Munson, public relations director for Green Mountain College, which lost the foot-long, 10-pound bell clapper before the Civil War and got it back from Mrs. Kimball on Wednesday.

In a note to the college, Mrs. Kimball explained: "Seeing I am the last survivor, I thought it only appropriate to return the clapper to its original home."

She said her father stole the bell clapper in 1852 to prove a theory that "if you do something or take something and not reveal it you will never be discovered."

Mrs. Kimball, of Hudson Falls, N.Y., said her father was about 19 at the time of the theft. She said he climbed a tower on the campus, then called the Troy Conference Academy, and removed the clapper from a huge bell.

Munson said the clapper may wind up in a display case — because the sound of bells that ring across the campus is now created by electronic speakers.

Brazil Rules Out Austerity

By BRYNA BRENNAN Associated Press Writer
BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Joao Figueiredo invoked emergency powers in the capital shortly before a defiant Congress rejected unpopular austerity legislation intended to help rescue Brazil from a $90 billion foreign debt.

The emergency measures, imposed Wednesday night and set to last for 60 days, allow for house searches and arrests without warrants, suspension of freedom of assembly, and control over state-run companies.

Police patrols were placed on alert and public gatherings were banned, but the streets of Brasilia, a modern inland city, were quiet early today.

A presidential decree said the emergency measures were adopted to prevent "outside agitators" from intimidating members of the House of Representatives during their deliberations. The military regime said the "agitators" had been recruited from all over Brazil but did not identify them.

The opposition and some defectors from the governing Social Democratic Party apparently were undaunted by the measures and voted down government-sponsored bills to cut wages and reduce public spending.

Both pieces of legislation were tied to the release of billions of dollars in much needed loans from the international banking community. Brazil has virtually no hard currency in its treasury and its foreign debt is the largest in the developing world.

The House veto coincided with Brazilian Central Bank President Affonso Pastore's trip to Europe where he is seeking more loans.

The first bill to be rejected would have cut salaries and benefits for employees working for the hundreds of state-run companies, whose responsibilities range from telephones to ports.

The second bill would have reduced salaries to 80 percent of the cost of living index, which runs more than 30 percentage points under the record high 175 percent annual inflation rate.

Two-thirds of the workers in this country of 131 million people earn less than $150 a month.

Scores of people protesting the salary cuts were staked out on the grassy lawns in front of the Congress. About 200 women from Sao Paulo made the 17-hour bus trip to the capital to sit in during the vote.

Presidential press spokesman Carlos Atila said the government was preparing new economic decrees that also would be subject to Congressional approval.

Cheers and applause accompanied the House decision, where the final vote was 260 against and 3 in favor. The military-backed government party walked out of the chamber before the vote because it was clear that the four-party opposition would defeat the measure.

The government party holds 235 seats in the 479-member House. The House vote means the bill will not go to the Senate, where the government party has a large majority.

The government appealed to the International Monetary Fund late last year for a $4.9 billion loan over three years. Brazil promised the fund it would reduce inflation and cut public spending.

Hundreds of private international bankers linked their loans to approval by the IMF that Brazil was following tight fiscal policies.

In September, U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan called congressional approval of the wage bill essential, adding, "I fear for Brazil's future if it is rejected." He said a defeat would make it harder for Brazil to get overseas financial support.

Figueiredo, the fifth former army general to be installed as president since a 1964 military coup, has promised a return to civilian rule in Latin America's largest country. The move to restrict personal freedoms came as a surprise to many political analysts.

One, who asked not to be identified, laughed and said, "And they say we already have a democracy. Funny, isn't it?"

Questions Posed In PBS Show

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis and Tricia Gay, of Somewhere, U.S.A., have to choose between taking a trip to the Grand Canyon or buying a personal computer.

"The Grand Canyon will always be there," Tricia reasons, suggesting there was really no decision to be made.

"I think the computer can enhance family interaction if it's used in the right way," she adds, indicating she's read the literature that accompanied the electronic machine.

Other members of the family seem as happy with the flickering screen and space-age keyboard as Mom. "It's not like the teachers I'm stuck with," says the couple's older son, Casey. "The computer will just be calm."

This entertaining tableau is played out in the first edition of "The New Tech Times" tonight on public TV. It's never clear whether the Gays are for real, or merely actors representing those of us who find ourselves confused and disoriented in the Computer Age.

But the effect is the same, and the weekly, half-hour series promising to be a whole new bewildering world "will at best raise the right questions, and at best answer some of them."

"Will all the new tech fill our minds," asks our host, Nicholas Johnson, "or just empty our pockets?" Johnson, as a member of the Federal Communications Commission from 1966 to 1973, was a noisy critic of the broadcast industry and widely recognized as a consumer advocate. His 1970 book, "How to Talk Back to Your Television Set," outlined the public's rights in dealing with broadcasters.

He currently writes a weekly syndicated newspaper column called "Communications Watch: Reflections on Life in the Information Age," and is an assuring presence on "The New Tech Times." He wants to know, too.

The approach is magazine-style — an increasingly common vehicle for programs designed to convey news and information — and the segments are short, colorful and generally informative.

In the first show, for instance, "The New Tech Times" talks about how to buy a personal computer, what's good and bad about those videotape exercise classes, and what to look for in video games. Edwin Newman, the NBC News commentator and self-appointed watchdog of English usage, has something to say, too.

"The spread of computer language beyond its own borders ought to be restricted," Newman grumbles.

The most entertaining segment features Don Bluth, an animator who created the "Dragon's Lair" arcade game. He talks about the recently forged relationship between the Hollywood artist and the computer engineer.

"That's art and science getting involved together, and that is a very unusual idea," Bluth says, promising another animated game, called "Space Ace," sometime soon.

Don't expect too much from "The New Tech Times." The program is not going to tell you how to pay for a personal computer, or where to get a good one cheap. "How do you buy a personal computer? Well," says author Peter McWilliams, Johnson's first guest, "you buy a personal computer very carefully."

McWilliams does have some good advice: "If you want to balance your checkbook, there's no reason to buy more than a $5 calculator." But he's got some bad news, too: "Sorry, you will probably buy several computers in your lifetime, like you buy several cars."

Johnny Slips In 'Catty' Remark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson slipped a catty retort into his "Tonight Show" monologue after his estranged wife's request for $220,000 in monthly support payments was made public.

"I heard from my cat's lawyer.... My cat wants $12,000 a week for Tender Vittles," Carson said Wednesday during his stand-up routine at the beginning of the NBC-TV late-night variety-talk show.

Lawyers for Joanna Carson filed court documents in July seeking the support payments pending the outcome of the couple's divorce proceeding. The sworn statements made public Tuesday claim Carson brought in more than $6 million in gross income from his television show, investments and holdings in the first three months of 1983.

His gross income in 1982 exceeded $15 million, the attorneys claim.

In the documents, Mrs. Carson said she is asking for the $220,000 a month "in order that I can maintain (the) standard of living which I have enjoyed during the past several years."

Her monthly jewelry and fur expenses last year were $37,065, her monthly grocery bill averaged $1,400 and she required $4,945 a month for household help, the court documents stated.

Other expenses include nearly $10,000 for upkeep of two New York apartments, $2,700 a month for travel and $5,000 for monthly department store bills.

Mrs. Carson filed for dissolution of the 10-year, three-month marriage March 9, five days after the couple separated. Carson has since been dividing his time between their home in Malibu and an apartment at the Beverly Hills Hotel, she said.

A Superior Court hearing is set Friday. Arthur J. Crowley, Mrs. Carson's attorney, said the divorce case would probably take more than six months to come to trial.

Grannies Enjoy The Recognition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At 94, Merle Earle still gets a thrill when fans recognize her from TV commercials and shows such as "Whiz Kids," "The Tonight Show" and "The Waltons."

"Most of the letters I get are from young boys," she says. "They tell me how beautiful I am.... I guess they have a grandma complex."

Mrs. Earle is part of a new breed of television grannies, whose late-blooming ranks also include Bartine Zane, 85, Theodora Goodrich, 79, is an elderly Hollywood neophyte who hopes to get into the talk show circuit.

All three women started acting on television when they were at least 75.

Mrs. Earle and Mrs. Zane entered show biz as widows. Mrs. Goodrich got the TV bug after her divorce. All were prodded by friends with show business connections, all were accepted by the first agents they sought out.

Their TV earnings average about $12,000 a year, a nice supplement to Social Security but hardly in Hollywood's big leagues.

While it's tough for middle-aged women to break into show business, older women "don't have problems getting started because there are so few people in the upper age group doing it," says Dennis Gallegos, a casting director who's "always looking for the new older person."

Older women have an advantage over older men "because women are just so darn cute," says Shelly Schoenberger of Tepper-Gallegos Casting. "You get a lot of grannies, and you don't have grandpas."

As a teen-ager, Mrs. Zane appeared as Buster Keaton's first leading lady. She worked with other greats of the silent screen era, then opened a dressmaking business. When she got married, she quit working for 50 years.

Her recent commercials included one for Boone's Farm wines that required her to learn how to ride a motorcycle.

"I learned to start it, and rev it up, but they'd catch me on the other side," Mrs. Zane says.

She also plays a mother in several local telephone company commercials, and, like Mrs. Earle, has appeared on "The Tonight Show." But she decided to get out of TV series after an appearance in "Benson."

"They came for me at 8 o'clock in the morning and got me home at midnight."

she recalls. "I'm not as crazy about being famous as I might be."

But Mrs. Earle and Mrs. Goodrich are committed to building their careers.

Mrs. Goodrich sees stardom as a remote possibility, but "I keep picturing myself on a talk show."

MTM Picks Up License

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore has picked up a marriage license to wed cardiologist Dr. S. Robert Levine after the city kept its license bureau open late for their convenience.

Miss Moore, 45, got the license at the city clerk's office Tuesday night after asking it to stay open late to accommodate the schedule of Miss Moore's intended, a busy heart specialist, city clerk David Dinkins said.

The actress has been married twice before, most recently to Grant Tinker, with whom she founded MTM Enterprises, which produced the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." They were divorced last year.

Levine is a heart specialist at Mount Sinai Hospital and at the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital. Dinkins said he and Miss Moore could marry within 24 hours of getting the license.

An aide to Levine's mother at the North Shore Child Guidance Association said Wednesday the two may have already wed privately, the New York Daily News reported today.

A Backyard Bonanza In Natural Gas

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A backyard boom in natural gas wells has hit Erie County, where homeowners, pizza shops, funeral homes, churches, florists, and schools are drilling to tap into a potential bonanza.

"People are finding out that there's gas just about everywhere you drill," said driller Ron Oberlander, who is backlogged with 19 orders for wells and has a six-week waiting list.

"Drilling for gas isn't a gamble anymore. It's cheaper than a new car, and you can get your investment back in six to eight years. How can you go wrong?" he added as a rotary drill bore through a yard.

But some utilities and gas producers warn of trouble. "It's a backyard Trojan horse that could cause havoc in the future," said Tim Merrill, executive director of the Pennsylvania Natural Gas Associates, a trade group. "Gas is an explosive commodity. I know how dangerous gas can be."

The gas rush, fueled by a desire to reduce or eliminate soaring utility bills, really hit last year when Pennsylvania issued 789 drilling permits for Erie County and 382 wells were drilled, triple the number in 1979.

Those numbers should be eclipsed this year, state officials say, and most of the action involves shallow wells drawing gas from a shale formation 300 feet to 1,100 feet beneath the surface.

Geologists say the shale formations, which date to glacial times and extend into New York and Ohio, have been producing natural gas in Erie County for 120 years.

Near Lake Erie, the shales are closer to the surface than anywhere else. They have no commercial value because the wells produce small amounts of gas, but people are sinking $7,000 to $15,000 into the ground in hopes of finding a gas supply to heat their homes or run their businesses for 20 to 30 years.

"They are low-volume but long-life wells. The gas bleeds from the shale. There are no guarantees, but a well can last for the life of a home," said John Harper, a geologist with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources.

"Nobody's going to become a millionaire. But for domestic needs, for small businesses and municipalities, I think they're ideal. As long as you have a reputable driller and plumber, I heartily recommend it," he added.

Nevin Wintrod of Girard spent $8,800 for a 1,000-foot shale well because his yearly gas bill, now $1,600, has doubled in the past five years.

"It's an investment, a hedge against inflation," said Wintrod, a teacher of traffic and industrial safety at Edinboro University. "If it produces enough for us to heat our home, we can recoup the expenses in five years."

In Wesleyville, John Barbato manages a pizza shop that houses two apartments and will soon have a shale well, which can be dug within a week.

"We think it will save us a lot of money," he said. "If gas prices were reasonable, I don't think we'd be drilling."

Natural Fuel Gas Corp., the utility that serves 85,000 customers in Erie County and pipes most of its gas from the South, was granted a 28 percent rate increase 13 months ago. Its rate of $4.80 per million cubic feet is the second cheapest among the six largest gas companies in Pennsylvania, but because Erie winters can be harsh, its average monthly residential bill is $58.66, the second highest.

"Our major concern is safety. When you start punching holes in the ground all over the place with no regulations, there is cause for concern," said NFG vice president William Hill.

Last May in Millcreek Township, a discharge pipe from a drilling operation was placed between two houses but a spark turned the pipe into a blowtorch. The fire caused $65,000 damage to one house and scorched the other home.

De Lorean Lie Test Said Rigged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean has failed an FBI lie detector test one year after his arrest on cocaine trafficking charges, prosecutors say, but the automaker's attorney blasted the examination as "rigged and fixed."

With De Lorean's trial on charges of conspiring to distribute $24 million in cocaine less than two weeks away, the government announced its test results Wednesday, showing the auto executive was "a knowing and willing participant in a narcotics transaction."

De Lorean, who took the polygraph test at FBI headquarters in Los Angeles on Tuesday, received news of the results at his attorney's office on the first anniversary of his arrest.

"He's really upset," attorney Howard Weitzman said. "He really thought he had a chance of passing the test, although I told him he didn't. It was rigged and fixed."

Weitzman last month submitted to U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi the results of another lie detector test in which De Lorean gave "unusually strong and clear" indications that he was truthful in denying any role in setting up an alleged cocaine deal.

In that test, commissioned by De Lorean's defense team, polygraph examiner David C. Raskin of Salt Lake City said De Lorean had passed the test with the highest score possible for truthfulness.

Takasugi has scheduled a hearing for Friday on the question of whether lie detector results should be admitted in evidence when De Lorean's trial begins Nov. 1.

The results released Wednesday raised the possibility that the two tests and testimony of the polygraph experts might cancel each other out if admitted at the trial.

Also on Wednesday, Weitzman filed papers with the judge protesting the change of a question during the FBI polygraph examination by Paul K. Minor, the agency's polygraph program coordinator.

The question concerned alleged discussions of a purported narcotics transaction between De Lorean and a government informant, James Timothy Hoffman. Before questions were asked, they were shown to Weitzman for approval. But one question, he said, was changed.

It was on that question and two others that Minor said De Lorean "exhibited strong and definite indications of deception" on the polygraph.

The three questions all concerned De Lorean's contacts with Hoffman and whether they discussed narcotics transactions.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Layn Phillips, who filed the test results with the judge, noted there was a dispute during the testing over one question and that De Lorean demanded to see his lawyer before he answered.

"De Lorean was told that he could terminate the examination if he chose," Phillips said, but he was not allowed to consult with his lawyer who was waiting outside.

It was on the disputed question, Phillips said, that De Lorean "indicated the strongest indications of deception."

Meanwhile, Weitzman said the 58-year-old De Lorean, once a glamorous success story of the auto industry, has suffered irreparable harm to his career in the past year.

"From Oct. 19 last year to Oct. 19 this year has been an absolute nightmare," Weitzman said Wednesday. "This has all but destroyed John's life, professionally and from a personal viewpoint."

He said that even the bankruptcy of De Lorean's Northern Ireland car company and the litigation which followed would not have hurt him as much if he was not facing the cocaine charges.

The auto plant, at which De Lorean produced futuristic sports cars bearing his name, was closed down by the British government on the same day De Lorean was arrested at a Los Angeles airport hotel on the cocaine charges.
